COALITION INFORMATION CENTER

11/21/2001

Today's Schedule

4:00a EST	British Foreign Secretary Jack Straw to host a media briefing on political and humanitarian events related to Afghanistan.
12:00p EST	President Bush shares a pre-Thanksgiving meal with troops at Fort Campbell in Kentucky.
12:30p EST	State Department's daily press briefing with Spokesman Richard Boucher.
2:35p EST	Secretary Rumsfeld visits the Military Intelligence Center at Fort Bragg North Carolina for a demonstration of U.S. Special Forces.

In Case You Missed It...

- "A 16-year old Afghan girl fronted Kabul Television's return to the airwaves yesterday, after a five-year TV blackout under the Taliban." (James Plamer; The Independent [U.K.], 11/19/01)

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "In the past few days, we have witnessed…the pure joy and relief expressed by Afghan civilians in cities that the Taliban lost or abandoned." (John Donvan; ABC's "Nightline," 11/19/01)
- The first leaflets, containing reward information for the capture of al Qaeda leaders, were dropped over Afghanistan during the last 24 hours.
- "Four journalists were forced out of their cars at gunpoint yesterday and shot dead by Taliban diehards…The gunmen then stole satellite phones, cameras and the journalists' belongings." (Philip Smucker; The Daily Telegraph [U.K.], 11/20/01)
- A meeting of various Afghan groups and representatives is scheduled for the week of November 26 in Germany. The meeting will be brokered by the U.N. and is the first step towards the establishment of a broad-based representative government in Afghanistan.

Message

- U.S. troops are deployed far from home, in a war against terror and evil. Our Nation and the world are counting on them. They are making us secure, and they are making us proud.
- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens. They seek to overthrow friendly governments. They seek weapons of mass destruction. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.
- We fight the terrorists – and all those who give them aid. America has a message for the nations of the world: If you harbor a terrorist, you are a terrorist. If you feed a terrorist or fund a terrorist, you are a terrorist. And you will be held accountable.
- The Taliban know that by now. Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

Facts of the Day

- The State Department's Bureau for Population, Refugees and Migration recently provided an additional $4 million to support humanitarian relief in Central Asia. Of that, $2 million went to the Red Cross/Red Crescent and $2 million went to UNICEF's emergency relief initiatives in Afghanistan.
- On November 20, USAID's Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance confirmed that a shipment of 5 medical kits arrived in Turkmenistan for distribution in Afghanistan. This brings the total number of kits to 10, each of which provides basic medical supplies and medicines for 10,000 people for three months.
- To date, the U.S. Department of Defense has airdropped 1,725,840 Humanitarian Daily Rations, totaling approximately $120 million, into Afghanistan.
- According to the U.N., since November 1 nearly 12,000 refugees have spontaneously returned to Afghanistan from refugee camps in Iran.

11/21/2001

Today's Schedule

12:00p EST	President Bush shares a pre-Thanksgiving meal with troops at Fort Campbell in Kentucky.
12:30p EST	State Department's daily press briefing with Spokesman Richard Boucher.

In Case You Missed It...

- "A 16-year old Afghan girl fronted Kabul Television's return to the airwaves yesterday, after a five-year TV blackout under the Taliban." (James Plamer; The Independent [U.K.], 11/19/01)

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "In the past few days, we have witnessed...the pure joy and relief expressed by Afghan civilians in cities that the Taliban lost or abandoned." (John Donvan; ABC's "Nightline," 11/19/01)
- The first leaflets, containing reward information for the capture of al Qaeda leaders, were dropped over Afghanistan during the last 24 hours.
- "Four journalists were forced out of their cars at gunpoint yesterday and shot dead by Taliban diehards...The gunmen then stole satellite phones, cameras and the journalists' belongings." (Philip Smucker; The Daily Telegraph [U.K.], 11/20/01)
- A meeting of various Afghan groups and representatives is scheduled for the week of November 26 in Germany. The meeting will be brokered by the U.N. and is the first step towards the establishment of a broad-based representative government in Afghanistan.

Message

- U.S. troops are deployed far from home, in a war against terror and evil. Our Nation and the world are counting on them. They are making us secure, and they are making us proud.
- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens. They seek to overthrow friendly governments. They seek weapons of mass destruction. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.
- We fight the terrorists – and all those who give them aid. America has a message for the nations of the world: If you harbor a terrorist, you are a terrorist. If you feed a terrorist or fund a terrorist, you are a terrorist. And you will be held accountable.
- The Taliban know that by now. Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

Facts of the Day

- The State Department's Bureau for Population, Refugees and Migration recently provided an additional $4 million to support humanitarian relief in Central Asia. Of that, $2 million went to the Red Cross/Red Crescent and $2 million went to UNICEF's emergency relief initiatives in Afghanistan.
- On November 20, USAID's Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance confirmed that a shipment of 5 medical kits arrived in Turkmenistan for distribution in Afghanistan. This brings the total number of kits to 10, each of which provides basic medical supplies and medicines for 10,000 people for three months.
- To date, the U.S. Department of Defense has airdropped 1,725,840 Humanitarian Daily Rations, totaling approximately $120 million, into Afghanistan.
- According to the U.N., since November 1 nearly 12,000 refugees have spontaneously returned to Afghanistan from refugee camps in Iran.

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

REV_00080565

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

THE AL QAEDA & TALIBAN CATALOGUE OF ATROCITIES

Al Qaeda & the Taliban told us at their press conference yesterday that it is time to "forget" their murder of thousands of innocent people from more than 80 countries on September 11.

As President George W. Bush has said, "We will never forget all the innocent people killed by the hatred of a few."

Presumably Al Qaeda and the Taliban would also like the world to "forget" about their other atrocities against the innocent. Below are a few examples from their growing catalogue of terrorist atrocities.

EXAMPLES OF RECENT AL QAEDA & TALIBAN ATROCITIES

ATROCITY

"Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The Taliban is jailing children as young as 10 in Kabul to root out dissent, it is claimed today. According to French journalist Michel Peyrard, who was held by the Taliban for 25 days, the biggest threat to the extremist regime is its own paranoia. He said his fellow detainees included several children. On one occasion the nephews of an escaped political prisoner - aged 10, 13 and 19 - were rounded up. The eldest was tortured and subjected to a mock execution. The Taliban also jails leaders and military commanders for being traitors on only the flimsiest evidence." (Source: The Evening Standard (London), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"One day they came, and ordered everyone to go into the bazaar and protest against the bombings, and chant: 'Death to America'," said Salahuddin. "I was in my house and I had to go outside. When we refused to protest against America, they got angry." Another man who fled the village said he saw the Taliban drag a man called Lash Boi from his house to the mosque and beat him to death when he refused to protest. Lash Boi's three sons are on the front line now, fighting to avenge their father's death, he said." (Source: The Independent (U.K.), 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"When the family returned six hours later they found that Abdul's right femur had been shattered by repeated blows from a Kalashnikov, the stock of the rifle leaving a clear imprint on the floor of the family's home. Doctors gave Nurala a couple of packets of paracetamol and bluntly told him that his son would never walk again. 'He was in so much pain for a long time, and it changed his mind as well,' Nurala said. 'I don't understand how anyone can do such a thing to a small child. I have spoken to many people about this and nobody understands it.' There are many others in Taloqan who have similar stories of children being beaten in front of their parents because their fathers were unable to hand over a weapon to the Taleban, of men who had a hand amputated when they were accused of stealing the bread that they carried home to their families, and of women who were raped after their husbands were taken away and imprisoned in Kandahar or Mazar-i Sharif." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

ATROCITY

"'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"One said a doctor was shot dead for not treating a wounded Taliban soldier quickly enough, while others said a group of eight teenage boys were killed for laughing at Taliban soldiers." (Source: The Herald (Scotland), 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers, who have gathered in Kunduz for what appears to be a last stand, have gunned down more than 400 Afghan Taliban soldiers trying to defect to the Northern Alliance, the refugees and the alliance soldiers said. The 400 were killed in mass shootings late last week, refugees said, and were prompted in part by the defection of a local Taliban commander to the Northern Alliance. According to the reports, Arab and Pakistani soldiers with the Taliban have also begun shooting young civilian men of the Uzbek and Tajik ethnic groups suspected of trying to escape to territory controlled by the Northern Alliance. 'The foreigners came into the village and shot all the men,' said Muhammadullah, a 21-year-old man who crossed into Northern Alliance territory today. 'I saw this with my own eyes.'" (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"Foreign Taliban soldiers also killed dozens of Afghan Taliban soldiers on Friday at the village of Musazai near the Kunduz airport, refugees and Northern Alliance soldiers said. Refugees fleeing Kunduz said foreign Taliban soldiers had gunned down 125 Afghan Taliban soldiers who had been stopped on their way to the front lines. The foreign Taliban soldiers seem to have decided that the local Taliban were trying to defect. When they tried to stop them, a fight began and the foreign Taliban opened fire, the refugees said." (Source: The New York Times, 11/19/01)

ATROCITY

"The BBC has confirmed that the central Afghan town of Bamiyan was totally destroyed by the Taleban before they fled over the weekend. Evidence has also emerged of Bosnian-style ethnic cleansing in the region involving the execution of hundreds of local ethnic Hazara men." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

"Our correspondent said every building, shop and house had been destroyed before the town fell on Sunday after a two-hour gun battle." (Source: BBC News, 11/13/01)

ATROCITY

September 1996 -- Upon capturing Kabul the Taliban castrated President Najibullah, dragged his body behind a jeep for several rounds of the Palace and then shot him dead. His brother was similarly tortured and then throttled to death. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

January 1998 -- In the Western province of Faryab, the Taliban massacred approximately 600 Uzbek villageres. Western aid workers who later investigated the incident said civilians were dragged from their homes, lined up and gunned down. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 1998 -- The Taliban entered Mazar-I-Sharif and went on a frenzy killing shop owners, cart pullers, women and children shoppers. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

August 2000 -- Taliban execute POWs in the streets of Heart as a lesson to the local population. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

June 2001 -- Taliban bombed the administrative center of Yakaolang, including the district hospital and an aid agency office. (Source: Department of Defense)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Yakaolang -- Taliban forces committed a massacre in Yakaolang in January 2001. The victims were primarily Hazaras. The massacre began on January 8, 2001, and continued for four days. The Taliban detained about 300 civilian adult males, including staff members of local humanitarian organizations. The men were herded to assembly points, and then shot by firing squad in public view. According to Human Rights Watch, about 170 men are confirmed to have been killed. According to Amnesty International, eyewitnesses reported the deliberate killing of dozens of civilians hiding in a mosque: Taliban soldiers fired rockets into a mosque where some 73 women, children and elderly men had taken shelter. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre at Robatak Pass -- The May 2000 massacre took place near the Robatak pass. 31 bodies were found one site, of these, 26 were positively identified as civilians. The victims were Hazara Shi'as. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Bamiyan -- When the Taliban recaptured Bamiyan in 1999, there were reports that Taliban forces carried out summary executions upon entering the city. According to Amnesty International, hundreds of men, and some instances women and children, were separated from their families, taken away, and killed. Human Rights Watch reports that besides executing civilians, the Taliban burned homes and used detainees for forced labor. (Source: State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in the Shomaili Plains -- July 1999 Human Rights Watch reports that a Taliban offensive here was marked by summary executions, the abduction and disappearance of women, the burning of homes, destruction of property, and the cutting down of fruit trees. According to a report by the U.N. Secretary General on November 16, 1999, "The Taliban forces, who allegedly carried out these acts, essentially treated the civilian population with hostility and made no distinction between combatants and non-combatants." (Source: U.S. State Department)

ATROCITY

Massacre in Mazar-I-Sharif -- In August 1998, the Taliban captured Mazar-I-Sharif. There were reports that between 2,000 and 5,000 men, women and children -- mostly ethnic Hazara civilians -- were massacred by the Taliban after the takeover of Mazar-I-Sharif. During the massacre, the Taliban forces carried out a systematic search for male members for the ethnic Hazara, Tajik, and Uzbek communities in the city. Human Rights Watch estimates that scores, perhaps hundreds, of Hazara men and boys were summarily executed. There were also reports that women and girls were raped and abducted during the Taliban takeover of the city. (Source: State Department)

Tim is looking for a Time magazine that came out last week even though it is dated today. Bin Laden is on the cover and the picture is shot through a night vision lens (green tint). If anyone has this issue (it was in the West Wing last week), please let me know so I can get this to Tim as soon as possible.

Subject: Excerpting News Media for hardcopy internal WH distribution

Brett,

OSI is working on a document that will quote various media sources. This document is not intended for electronic distribution in any form, so Alicia Peterson Clark and I would like to make sure the following are permissible since most of what we've discussed in the past involved electronically distributed information:
excerpting articles in part excerpting articles in part, writing a brief introduction or headline describing the article reprinting an entire article reprinting an entire article, writing a brief introduction or headline describing the article writing a summary of an article or news item using some excerpts from that article reprinting or excerpting "best seller" lists

The document is tentatively described as "a snapshot of trend lines in American demographics and pop culture." The document is intended only for internal White House distribution in hardcopy form. We plan to distribute this type of document on a, as yet determined, regular basis.

Thanks in advance for your help. I'll be out of town tomorrow through Sunday, so please include Alicia in your response.

Terror attacks take toll on insurance industry

LONDON (CNN) - Axa, Europe's biggest insurer, has canceled all its big-risk commercial insurance policies because of increased risk since the September 11 terror attacks.

The company said it can no longer shoulder the uncertainty of insuring against terrorist attacks without help from the French government, the Wall Street Journal reported on Monday.

Axa confirmed to CNN on Monday that it is in urgent discussions with the French government about getting state aid to help it cover corporate clients. Insurers normally spread the weight of risky cover onto reinsurers - but unlike primary insurers, re-insurers can refuse to underwrite that risk.

Insurance companies say outright cancellation of policies is commercially undesirable.

While the insurance industry is used to handling massive claims, such as those arising from earthquakes and hurricanes, it says terrorism is too unpredictable for it to cover on its own.

French insurance companies have a legal obligation to provide terrorist coverage. Insurance groups say that since reinsurers now refuse to cover acts of terrorism, they can no longer comply with the rules

"We need to know if the state will step in and define the rules in terms of reinsurance," said Christophe Dufraux, Axa spokesman in Paris told the WSJ.

Axa announced last month it was canceling its coverage of the World Cup soccer tournament next year because of the increased risk of terrorist attacks.

Axa's new policy, which other insurance firms in France are expected to follow, could leave French companies without adequate insurance coverage at the end of the year when most insurance contracts expire.

"We are in a situation where it is almost too late to cover all the risks in time for January 1," said Philippe Detrez, president of the French risk managers' association and head of risk management at PSA Peugeot Citroen .

"The government needs to take a decision in the next couple of days."

BRINGING TERRORISTS TO JUSTICE

- The terrorist attacks of September 11 were acts of war. The perpetrators should be treated not as violators of the law, but as war criminals, and the Military Order signed by President Bush reflects the unique nature of our present situation.

- The Military Order gives President Bush an additional tool in fighting the war against terrorism and another option to bring justice to foreign terrorists. The President's order states that military commissions will only be used in extraordinary instances in which the direct safety of the American people is at risk.

- As Commander in Chief, the President has the authority to establish military commissions. That authority is strengthened by statutes first passed by Congress during World War I and the Supreme Court has reviewed and upheld the practice in 1942 and again in 1946..

- Trial by military commission is a tested method for bringing individuals to justice during times of war while also protecting sensitive information. President Roosevelt ordered the trial of Nazi saboteurs by military commission in 1942 during World War II and the Supreme Court upheld the procedure. Military commissions have been used throughout American history – during the Mexican War, the Indian Wars, the Civil War, and the Revolutionary War.

- President Bush's requires certain protections that are consistent with American values: the right to counsel and a full and fair trial; they will not be discriminated against because of their race, gender or status; they may freely exercise their religion and will receive food, shelter and medical treatment.

- President Bush has said on many occasions that this war is not about one person, but about rooting out global terrorist networks. Disclosing classified information in a civilian trial of a foreign terrorist would jeopardize the ongoing war against terrorism and threaten American lives at home and abroad.

- When classified evidence must be used in civilian trials, the government is forced to choose between compromising sensitive intelligence information and letting criminals go free – the World Trade Center bombing trial resulted in the disclosure of sensitive classified information. After the attack on September 11, President Bush finds this choice to be unacceptable.

- Civilian courts would also place judges, juries, prosecutors and the press at risk from threats of reprisals, and the security of the courtroom facility would be a concern. Military commissions provide a safe alternative.

BRINGING TERRORISTS TO JUSTICE

- The terrorist attacks of September 11 were acts of war. The perpetrators should be treated not as violators of the law, but as war criminals, and the Military Order signed by President Bush reflects the unique nature of our present situation.

- The Military Order gives President Bush an additional tool in fighting the war against terrorism and another option to bring justice to foreign terrorists. The President's order states that military commissions will only be used in extraordinary instances in which the direct safety of the American people is at risk.

- As Commander in Chief, the President has the authority to establish military commissions. That authority is strengthened by statutes first passed by Congress during World War I and the Supreme Court has reviewed and upheld the practice in 1942 and again in 1946..

- Trial by military commission is a tested method for bringing individuals to justice during times of war while also protecting sensitive information. President Roosevelt ordered the trial of Nazi saboteurs by military commission in 1942 during World War II and the Supreme Court upheld the procedure. Military commissions have been used throughout American history – during the Mexican War, the Indian Wars, the Civil War, and the Revolutionary War.

- President Bush's requires certain protections that are consistent with American values: the right to counsel and a full and fair trial; they will not be discriminated against because of their race, gender or status; they may freely exercise their religion and will receive food, shelter and medical treatment.

- President Bush has said on many occasions that this war is not about one person, but about rooting out global terrorist networks. Disclosing classified information in a civilian trial of a foreign terrorist would jeopardize the ongoing war against terrorism and threaten American lives at home and abroad.

- When classified evidence must be used in civilian trials, the government is forced to choose between compromising sensitive intelligence information and letting criminals go free – the World Trade Center bombing trial resulted in the disclosure of sensitive classified information. After the attack on September 11, President Bush finds this choice to be unacceptable.

- Civilian courts would also place judges, juries, prosecutors and the press at risk from threats of reprisals, and the security of the courtroom facility would be a concern. Military commissions provide a safe alternative.

BRINGING TERRORISTS TO JUSTICE

- The terrorist attacks of September 11 were acts of war. The perpetrators should be treated not as violators of the law, but as war criminals, and the Military Order signed by President Bush reflects the unique nature of our present situation.

- The Military Order gives President Bush an additional tool in fighting the war against terrorism and another option to bring justice to foreign terrorists. The President's order states that military commissions will only be used in extraordinary instances in which the direct safety of the American people is at risk.

- As Commander in Chief, the President has the authority to establish military commissions. That authority is strengthened by statutes first passed by Congress during World War I and the Supreme Court has reviewed and upheld the practice in 1942 and again in 1946..

- Trial by military commission is a tested method for bringing individuals to justice during times of war while also protecting sensitive information. President Roosevelt ordered the trial of Nazi saboteurs by military commission in 1942 during World War II and the Supreme Court upheld the procedure. Military commissions have been used throughout American history – during the Mexican War, the Indian Wars, the Civil War, and the Revolutionary War.

- President Bush's requires certain protections that are consistent with American values: the right to counsel and a full and fair trial; they will not be discriminated against because of their race, gender or status; they may freely exercise their religion and will receive food, shelter and medical treatment.

- President Bush has said on many occasions that this war is not about one person, but about rooting out global terrorist networks. Disclosing classified information in a civilian trial of a foreign terrorist would jeopardize the ongoing war against terrorism and threaten American lives at home and abroad.

- When classified evidence must be used in civilian trials, the government is forced to choose between compromising sensitive intelligence information and letting criminals go free – the World Trade Center bombing trial resulted in the disclosure of sensitive classified information. After the attack on September 11, President Bush finds this choice to be unacceptable.

- Civilian courts would also place judges, juries, prosecutors and the press at risk from threats of reprisals, and the security of the courtroom facility would be a concern. Military commissions provide a safe alternative.

BRINGING TERRORISTS TO JUSTICE

- The terrorist attacks of September 11 were acts of war. The perpetrators should be treated not as violators of the law, but as war criminals, and the Military Order signed by President Bush reflects the unique nature of our present situation.

- The Military Order gives President Bush an additional tool in fighting the war against terrorism and another option to bring justice to foreign terrorists. The President's order states that military commissions will only be used in extraordinary instances in which the direct safety of the American people is at risk.

- As Commander in Chief, the President has the authority to establish military commissions. That authority is strengthened by statutes first passed by Congress during World War I and the Supreme Court has reviewed and upheld the practice in 1942 and again in 1946..

- Trial by military commission is a tested method for bringing individuals to justice during times of war while also protecting sensitive information. President Roosevelt ordered the trial of Nazi saboteurs by military commission in 1942 during World War II and the Supreme Court upheld the procedure. Military commissions have been used throughout American history – during the Mexican War, the Indian Wars, the Civil War, and the Revolutionary War.

- President Bush's requires certain protections that are consistent with American values: the right to counsel and a full and fair trial; they will not be discriminated against because of their race, gender or status; they may freely exercise their religion and will receive food, shelter and medical treatment.

- President Bush has said on many occasions that this war is not about one person, but about rooting out global terrorist networks. Disclosing classified information in a civilian trial of a foreign terrorist would jeopardize the ongoing war against terrorism and threaten American lives at home and abroad.

- When classified evidence must be used in civilian trials, the government is forced to choose between compromising sensitive intelligence information and letting criminals go free – the World Trade Center bombing trial resulted in the disclosure of sensitive classified information. After the attack on September 11, President Bush finds this choice to be unacceptable.

- Civilian courts would also place judges, juries, prosecutors and the press at risk from threats of reprisals, and the security of the courtroom facility would be a concern. Military commissions provide a safe alternative.

Other Events

- World leaders and representatives from Afghan groups meet today in Bonn, Germany, to discuss the future post-Taliban government in Afghanistan.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "It is hard to find a woman in Kabul now who does not remember a beating at the hands of the Taliban." (Time, 12/03/01)
- "...a suicide attack...took place on Saturday, as 500 foreign Taliban surrendered...In that incident, a foreign Taliban soldier blew himself up with a grenade, killing two Taliban comrades, badly injuring a senior alliance commander and leaving Andrea Catherwood, an ITN reporter, with shrapnel wounds in her leg." (Daily Telegraph [U.K.], 11/26/01)
- "It is believed foreign Taliban slaughtered moderates who wanted to surrender Kunduz." (Jeremy Armstrong; Daily Mirror [U.K.], 11/26/01)
- "The assessment that can be made after seven weeks of operations is astounding.... In the U.S., the necessity to crush Al Qaida and to liberate Afghanistan by the same means from a medieval regime was disputed by almost no one...." (Le Monde, 11/23)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.
- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

Facts of the Day

- Since October 1, 2001, the U.S. Government has provided $246,761,996 in Humanitarian assistance to the people of Afghanistan.
- As of November 26, 2001, the Department of Defense had airdropped 1,883,100 humanitarian daily rations into Afghanistan.
- Since Mid-October, the U.N.'s World Food Program – through U.S. assistance – has delivered enough food into Afghanistan to feed 6 million hungry Afghans for one month.
- On November 23, for the first time, food aid was airlifted into Afghanistan from Tajikistan. 17 metric tons of wheat flour – enough for almost 275,000 people – was delivered to provide food aid to remote locations in northeastern Afghanistan.
- A ship carrying 10,000 metric tons of food aid for Afghans left Port Lake Charles, Louisiana, on November 20.

Other Events

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "It is hard to find a woman in Kabul now who does not remember a beating at the hands of the Taliban." (Time, 12/03/01)
- "...a suicide attack...took place on Saturday, as 500 foreign Taliban surrendered...In that incident, a foreign Taliban soldier blew himself up with a grenade, killing two Taliban comrades, badly injuring a senior alliance commander and leaving Andrea Catherwood, an ITN reporter, with shrapnel wounds in her leg." (Daily Telegraph [U.K.], 11/26/01)
- "It is believed foreign Taliban slaughtered moderates who wanted to surrender Kunduz." (Jeremy Armstrong; Daily Mirror [U.K.], 11/26/01)
- "The assessment that can be made after seven weeks of operations is astounding.... In the U.S., the necessity to crush Al Qaida and to liberate Afghanistan by the same means from a medieval regime was disputed by almost no one...." (Le Monde, 11/23)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.
- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

Facts of the Day

- Since October 1, 2001, the U.S. Government has provided $246,761,996 in Humanitarian assistance to the people of Afghanistan.
- As of November 26, 2001, the Department of Defense had airdropped 1,883,100 humanitarian daily rations into Afghanistan.
- Since Mid-October, the U.N.'s World Food Program – through U.S. assistance – has delivered enough food into Afghanistan to feed 6 million hungry Afghans for one month.
- On November 23, for the first time, food aid was airlifted into Afghanistan from Tajikistan. 17 metric tons of wheat flour – enough for almost 275,000 people – was delivered to provide food aid to remote locations in northeastern Afghanistan.
- A ship carrying 10,000 metric tons of food aid for Afghans left Port Lake Charles, Louisiana, on November 20.

We are restocked with water for this month. The bill for this month (it really includes last month as well since he did not leave an invoice last time) is $10/person. Like last time, I'll write one large check to mail to the water company.

- "The assessment that can be made after seven weeks of operations is astounding.... In the U.S., the necessity to crush Al Qaida and to liberate Afghanistan by the same means from a medieval regime was disputed by almost no one...." (Le Monde, 11/23)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.
- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

Facts of the Day

- Since October 1, 2001, the U.S. Government has provided $246,761,996 in Humanitarian assistance to the people of Afghanistan.
- As of November 26, 2001, the Department of Defense had airdropped 1,883,100 humanitarian daily rations into Afghanistan.
- Since Mid-October, the U.N.'s World Food Program – through U.S. assistance – has delivered enough food into Afghanistan to feed 6 million hungry Afghans for one month.
- On November 23, for the first time, food aid was airlifted into Afghanistan from Tajikistan. 17 metric tons of wheat flour – enough for almost 275,000 people – was delivered to provide food aid to remote locations in northeastern Afghanistan.
- A ship carrying 10,000 metric tons of food aid for Afghans left Port Lake Charles, Louisiana, on November 20.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "It is hard to find a woman in Kabul now who does not remember a beating at the hands of the Taliban." (Time, 12/03/01)
- "...a suicide attack...took place on Saturday, as 500 foreign Taliban surrendered...In that incident, a foreign Taliban soldier blew himself up with a grenade, killing two Taliban comrades, badly injuring a senior alliance commander and leaving Andrea Catherwood, an ITN reporter, with shrapnel wounds in her leg." (Daily Telegraph [U.K.], 11/26/01)
- "It is believed foreign Taliban slaughtered moderates who wanted to surrender Kunduz." (Jeremy Armstrong; Daily Mirror [U.K.], 11/26/01)
- "The assessment that can be made after seven weeks of operations is astounding.... In the U.S., the necessity to crush Al Qaida and to liberate Afghanistan by the same means from a medieval regime was disputed by almost no one...." (Le Monde, 11/23)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.
- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Since Mid-October, the U.N.'s World Food Program – through U.S. assistance – has delivered enough food into Afghanistan to feed 6 million hungry Afghans for one month.

- "...a suicide attack...took place on Saturday, as 500 foreign Taliban surrendered...In that incident, a foreign Taliban soldier blew himself up with a grenade, killing two Taliban comrades, badly injuring a senior alliance commander and leaving Andrea Catherwood, an ITN reporter, with shrapnel wounds in her leg." (Daily Telegraph [U.K.], 11/26/01)
- "It is believed foreign Taliban slaughtered moderates who wanted to surrender Kunduz." (Jeremy Armstrong; Daily Mirror [U.K.], 11/26/01)
- "The assessment that can be made after seven weeks of operations is astounding.... In the U.S., the necessity to crush Al Qaida and to liberate Afghanistan by the same means from a medieval regime was disputed by almost no one...." (Le Monde, 11/23)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.
- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

Subject: NOT ANOTHER TURKEY!

U R G E N T !

On Wednesday, the House Rules Committee will be considering the Terrorism Risk Protection (i.e., insurance) Bill reported by the Financial Services Committee.
As reported, the bill is H.R. 3210, however, we have learned that a comprehensive Manager's Amendment will be offered which is very likely to include across-the-board tort reform which would limit the rights of victims and their families in the event of a future terrorist attack.

This will NOT be a simple matter of the government protecting insurance companies from having to insure against punitive damages in future terrorism cases, or making sure that taxpayer money isn't used to reimburse insurers for an insured's willful, wanton, or reckless misconduct. Instead, this is clearly a cynical attempt by some to irresponsibly use the terrorism insurance bill as a vehicle to advance their long-standing tort reform agenda.

Among the items we understand may be included in the Manager's Amendment are:

* Complete elimination of punitive damages in terrorism cases, protection not just for the insurer or the government but for the wrongdoer as well; also limits on non-economic damage awards--either a cap on non-economic damages, or the elimination of joint liability for non-economic damages, or both. Punitive damages are very rarely awarded. They are reserved for those cases where a defendants misconduct is not merely negligent or careless, but willfully reckless. For example, if a security firm protecting a gas pipeline knowingly hired an illegal alien it knew had a criminal record, that conduct would be protected under this proposal. Non-economic damages are REAL damages. The loss of a limb, eyesight, or the ability to have children and the loss of a loved one are real, life-altering losses. Limiting them would discriminate against children, the elderly and homemaking moms. And capping them would harm the most severely injured.

* Limits on attorneys' fees. This may be the most cynical proposal of all. For one thing, this is a proposal to limit only plaintiffs' attorneys fees; there are no limits on what defendants would be allowed to pay their attorneys. This is nothing more than a political agenda that would have the effect of penalizing families who seek legal representation. The likely proposal is a limit on contingent fees. The tort reformers know that the contingent fee system is the key to the court house for average Americans. The contingent fee system is the only way for average Americans to take on large corporations and powerful interests, and compete on a level playing field. And remember, under the contingent fee system, the plaintiff pays his or her attorney absolutely nothing unless he or she prevails in the courtroom. What has any of this to do with preserving the market for terrorism risk insurance?

This is only a sampling of what we hear may be in the Manager's Amendment. Congress needs to focus on the real issue, which is a responsible role for the federal government in working with insurers to extend terrorism risk protection beyond December 31st. Congress should turn its back on this unrelated tort reform agenda.

Oppose the Manager's Amendment; support genuine terrrorism risk protection.

As we learn more about the Manager's Amendment, and the possible development of an alternative (perhaps an alternative offered as a substitute), we will be in touch with you. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to get in touch with us at PRA 6.

Subject: NOT ANOTHER TURKEY!

U R G E N T !

On Wednesday, the House Rules Committee will be considering the Terrorism Risk Protection (i.e., insurance) Bill reported by the Financial Services Committee. As reported, the bill is H.R. 3210, however, we have learned that a comprehensive Manager's Amendment will be offered which is ver y likely to include across-the-board tort reform which would limit the rights of victims and their families in the event of a future terrorist attack.

This will NOT be a simple matter of the government protecting insurance companies from having to insure against punitive damages in future terrorism cases, or making sure that taxpayer money isn't used to reimburse insurers for an insured's willful, wanton, or reckless misconduct. Instead, thi s is clearly a cynical attempt by some to irresponsibly use the terrorism insurance bill as a vehicle to advanc e their long-standing tort reform agenda.

Among the items we understand may be included in the Manager's Amendment are:

* Complete elimination of punitive damages in terrorism cases, protection not just for the insurer or the government but for the wrongdoer as well; also limits on non-economic damage awards--either a cap on non-economi c damages, or the elimination of joint liability for non-economic damages, or both. Punitive damages are very rarely awarded. They are reserved for those cases where a defendants misconduct is not merely negligent or careless, but willfully reckless. For example, if a security firm protecting a gas pipeline knowingly hired an illegal alien it knew had a criminal record, that conduct would be protected under this proposal. Non-economic damages are REAL damages. The loss of a limb, eyesight, or the ability to have children and the loss of a loved one are real, life-altering losses. Limiting them would discriminate against children, the elderly and homemaking moms. And capping them would harm the most severely injured.

* Limits on attorneys' fees. This may be the most cynical proposal of all. For one thing, this is a proposa l to limit only plaintiffs' attorneys fees; there are no limits on what defendants would be allowed to pay their attorneys. This is nothing more than a political agenda that would have the effect of penalizing families who seek legal representation. The likely proposal is a limit on contingent fees. The tort reformers know that the contingent fee system is the key to the court house for average Americans. The contingent fee system is the only way for average Americans to take on large corporations and powerful interests, and compete on a level playing field. And remember, under the contingent fee system, the plaintif f pays his or her attorney absolutely nothing unless he o r she prevails in the courtroom. What has any of this to do with preserving the market for terrorism risk insurance?

This is only a sampling of what we hear may be in the Manager's Amendment. Congress needs to focus on the real issue, which is a responsible role for the federal government in working with insurers to extend terrorism risk protection beyond December 31st. Congress should turn its back on this unrelated tort reform agenda.

Oppose the Manager's Amendment; support genuine terrrorism risk protection.

As we learn more about the Manager's Amendment, and the possibl e development of an alternative (perhaps an alternative offered as a substitute), we will be in touch with you. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to get in touch with us at PRA 6

Message

- The humanitarian situation in Afghanistan is dire. Years of civil war, compounded by the cruel and selfish rule of the Taliban and the worst drought in living memory, have made matters worse.

- Millions face the threat of starvation. 70% of the Afghan people are malnourished. Only 13% of the Afghan people have access to clean water. One in four Afghan children will not make it to their fifth birthday. According to U.N. estimates, there were over a million displaced people in Afghanistan prior to September 11. And before September 11 there were over 3.5 million Afghan refugees.

- For years the U.S. has been the largest humanitarian aid donor to the people of Afghanistan. And the U.S. and its coalition allies are working around the clock to help get food, blankets, medicine and other important humanitarian aid to the Afghan people before their harsh winter sets in.

- The Al Qaeda and Taliban contribution to the Afghan people has been a deliberate and systematic campaign to disrupt the efforts of international relief agencies to deliver desperately needed food and medical supplies to the Afghan people. Among other things, the Taliban have seized and looted humanitarian supplies for themselves and have harassed and beaten Afghan and international aid workers.

- The Taliban are clearly more interested in protecting the Al Qaeda terrorist network than feeding the starving innocent people of Afghanistan.

Facts of the Day

- According to new figures, since October 1 the U.S. government has provided $164,381,033 in humanitarian assistance to the people of Afghanistan.

- Since September 11, the U.N. World Food Program – with U.S. assistance -- has delivered 70,000 tons of food into Afghanistan.

- In November, so far, the World Food Program – with U.S. assistance -- has delivered enough food commodities to cover the needs of 4.3 million people.

AL QAEDA & THE TALIBAN: THE MAKING OF A HUMANITARIAN DISASTER

The humanitarian situation in Afghanistan is dire. Years of civil war -- compounded by the cruel and selfish rule of the Taliban and the worst drought in living memory – have made matters worse.

Al Qaeda and the Taliban have not only failed to provide security, food, and shelter for the Afghan people, but they have disrupted the efforts of international relief agencies to deliver desperately needed food and medical supplies to the Afghan people. Among other things, the Taliban have seized and looted humanitarian supplies for themselves and have harassed and beaten Afghan and international aid workers.

The U.S. has long been the largest humanitarian aid donor to the people of Afghanistan.

AFGHANISTAN BEFORE SEPTEMBER 11

Afghanistan has suffered two decades of war, the worst drought in living memory, and the collapse of government infrastructure and access to basic social services. As Al Qaeda and the Taliban directed national resources toward war and imposed severe restrictions on its people, including a restriction on women working outside the home, the situation of the Afghan people worsened. The statistics are alarming:

- Millions face the threat of starvation.
- 70% of the Afghan people are malnourished.
- Only 13% of the Afghan people have access to clean water.
- One in four Afghan children will not make it to their fifth birthday.
- One in three Afghan children is an orphan.
- One in two Afghan children is malnourished.
- Afghanistan has the world's fourth worst child mortality rate.
- Afghanistan ranks number one worldwide in maternal mortality.
- According to U.N. estimates, there were over a million displaced people in Afghanistan prior to September 11.
- Before September 11 there were over 3.5 million Afghan refugees
- Six million people in Afghanistan and 1.5 million Afghan refugees depend on international relief programs for food.
- As many as 50,000 widows lost husbands and other male relatives in the course of Afghanistan's long civil war.
- The average life expectancy in Afghanistan is 46 years.

THE HARSH AFGHAN WINTER

Afghanistan is a mountainous country in a dry part of the world which experiences extremes of climate and weather. Afghanistan experiences extreme winter weather, with heavy snow in the mountains and the high plateaus. Even low-lying areas like Kabul can have up to 25 inches of snow on the ground in late winter.

The Afghan winters are harsh. Whole families of refugees live in tents no more than 3.5 feet square. They sleep on the ground with no blankets or protection from the brutal winters. Last winter, desperate parents dug holes in the ground, placed their children in the holes, and laid on top of them to give their children a slight respite from frigid temperatures.

Countless Afghans find themselves with no protection whatsoever against the harsh Afghan winter. For example, the U.N. Coordinator for Afghanistan reported that over 110 displaced persons taking shelter in camps in Herat died from extreme cold on the night of January 29, 2001. Children, the elderly, and women were among the main victims of the cold snap, which saw temperatures as low as –25 degrees centigrade.

THE TERRORIST CONTRIBUTION TO THE SUFFERING AFGHAN PEOPLE

The U.S. and its coalition partners work around the clock to help get food and other aid to the Afghan people.

The Al Qaeda and Taliban contribution to the Afghan people has been a deliberate and systematic campaign to disrupt the efforts of international relief agencies to deliver desperately needed food and medical supplies to the Afghan people.

Among other things, the Taliban have seized and looted humanitarian supplies for themselves and have harassed and beaten Afghan and international aid workers.

The Taliban and Al Qaeda are clearly more interested in protecting Al Qaeda than feeding the starving people of Afghanistan.

The following specific examples of Taliban disruptions are contained in the November 6 State Department Fact Sheet: The Taliban's Betrayal of the Afghan People:

- October 16: The Taliban seized control of two U.N. World Food Program (WFP) warehouses, one in Kabul, and one in Kandahar, containing more than half the World Food Program's wheat supply for Afghanistan. The WFP in Kandahar had been feeding 150,000 Afghans a month before the Taliban seizure. The WFP reports that 1,600 tons of food and several vehicles have since disappeared from the Kandahar WFP warehouse. (Source: World Food Program)

- The Taliban are actually hijacking humanitarian convoys for military purposes. The November 6 Washington Post reports, "A truck in a convoy purportedly on a humanitarian mission to deliver food tipped over, and crates of tank and mortar shells could be seen spilling to the ground underneath a thin layer of flour."

- "UNICEF lost all its properties and had its offices looted when the Taliban took control in north Afghanistan in 1997, and U.N. operations were suspended." (Source: UNICEF)

- November 6: The UN refugee agency (UNHCR) says the Taliban is hindering humanitarian efforts inside Afghanistan… Speaking on behalf of the UNHCR, Peter Kessler said the Taliban was failing to cooperate: "The UNHCR and our partner agencies have had our vehicles stolen, our offices taken over and our staff beaten." (Source: BBC)

- October 31: The UN Refugee Agency (UNHCR) offices in Spin Boldak were taken over by Taliban soldiers. (Source: UNHCR)

- October 18: Taliban soldiers seized the Mercy Corps International Office in Kandahar, and remain in possession of the office and MCI vehicles. (Source: Mercy Corps)

- October 17: The Taliban occupied the Kunduz office and warehouse of the International Organization for Migration (IOM). The warehouse had been stocked with winter clothing, shoes and blankets to be distributed to internally displaced persons in the region. (Source: IOM)

- October 16: The Swedish Committee for Afghanistan reported that its compound in Taliban-controlled Mazar-I-Sharif was seized on October 16, with fuel stores set ablaze by the Taliban. (Source: Human Rights Watch)

- October 16: The UN Security Council demanded that the Taliban cease obstructing aid destined for the Afghan people.

- October 8: Armed Taliban entered the compound of a demining NGO in Kandahar and demanded vehicles. Staff who resisted were beaten. The Taliban left with several ambulances, seven pick-up trucks, and six cargo trucks from the compound. (Source: Human Rights Watch)

THE U.S. COMMITMENT TO FEEDING & PROTECTING THE AFGHAN PEOPLE

The United States has long been the leading donor of humanitarian assistance to Afghanistan:

- The U.S. has supplied more than 80 percent of all food aid to vulnerable Afghans through the United Nations' World Food Program (WFP). Since September 11th, WFP has delivered about 70,000 tons of food into Afghanistan. In November so far, WFP has delivered enough food commodities to cover the needs of 4.3 million people.

- Last year, the U.S. Government provided over $178 million in humanitarian aid to the Afghan people.

- The U.S. Government has provided over $164 million in aid to Afghanistan thus far since October 1.

- With U.S. support, WFP delivered over 30,000 metric tons of food into Afghanistan in the first half of November, exceeding records for food delivery into the country. The more than 29,000 metric tons that WFP moved in October had been the most food ever moved in a whole month in Afghanistan.

- The U.S. airlifted 20,000 wool blankets, 100 rolls of plastic sheeting, 200 metric tons of High Energy Biscuits, and one metric ton of sugar to Turkmenistan for distribution in Afghanistan.

- The U.S. purchased 15,000 metric tons of wheat in Kazakstan, which is moving by railway to Turkmenabad. The first rail car of wheat arrived on November 23 carrying 1,500 metric tons of wheat.

- The U.S. Department of Defense has airdropped nearly 2 million Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan. Each ration is enough to sustain a person with a day's worth of calories.

- On November 20, a ship departed Port Lake Charles, Louisiana with 10,000 metric tons of U.S.-donated food for the people of Afghanistan.

- A shipment of five large USAID-funded medical shipments arrived in Turkmenistan on November 12 for distribution by UNICEF. Each shipment provides basic medical supplies and medicines for 10,000 people for three months. USAID has provided a total of 10 kits for Afghanistan.

- On November 21, 65,000 metric tons of food provided by USAID arrived in Iran for transfer to WFP regional hubs in Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan, Iran, Tajikistan, and Kyrgyzstan for delivery into Afghanistan.

- On November 24, USAID airlifted 350,000 wheat bags to Turkmenabad for WFP to use to package and distribute WFP wheat supplies.

- USAID airlifted 1,000 rolls of plastic sheeting to Turkmenistan for emergency shelter use in Afghanistan.

- USAID transported 20,400 blankets from its stockpiles on October 23, and an additional 15,000 blankets on October 25, to Pakistan for the UN High Commissioner for Refugees to use in the event of a refugee influx.

FIRST NO SMOKE, NOW NO SANTA: MARYLAND TOWN TELLS JOLLY 'OLE NICK TO STAY HOME

A Maryland town in the very same county that tried banning cigarette smoking in homes, has now told Santa Claus to stay away from a public Christmas tree lighting!

The Montgomery County community of Kensington has banned the jolly old man from its annual tree lighting ceremony this Sunday. "Because two families in our town felt that they would be uncomfortable with Santa Claus being a part of our event," Mayor Lynn Raufaste said.

The Town Council banned Santa after the complaints.

In years past, Santa would arrive on a fire truck and light the tree with the mayor. But on Sunday, the mayor will do the honors herself.

"This is a part of the American life, and I just think it's a shame that we can't have one in our town this year," Raufaste said.

Montgomery County lawmakers recently passed legislation that would have regulated smoking in the privacy of people's homes.

The county reversed course this week after a rash of worldwide attention and a public opinion backlash.

"At least now Santa can stay at home and smoke, if nothing else, since he is now banned from the tree lighting," mocked one Montgomery County lawmaker on Wednesday. "We have become a national embarrassment."

Merrill,

Here's more info on cell phones. The WHO cell phone bills were being checked by FMD for, and for those who were over the monthly set amount - their bills were forwarded to them for reveiw and subsequent payment. However, if bills did not exceed the threshold, nothing was forwarded. Then..... since the RDS mail situation, all Verizon invoices are being faxed, with the cover page only that gives the bottom line dollar amount, so we don't have a full listing of the individual's calls. Obviously, too many pages to fax. So, for now you can tell COS that if they do not receive a bill, this means their o.k. and don't owe money.

Nevertheless, I'm meeting with Verizon (I've asked Ellis to join me) and I'm setting up foolproof billing so there's no more guess work.

Sandy

Houston Chronicle
EDITORIAL
Nov. 28, 2001

Terrorism Insurance: An investment in economic health, not a bailout

It's essential for America's economic health that Congress enact a terrorism insurance bill within the next few weeks. Without a properly designed government safety net, one written to last only temporarily, insurance companies will be unable to insure properties against future terrorist attacks, and without such insurance, banks will be unlikely to make loans on such properties.

The fact is that the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks knocked the insurance industry against the ropes. It might not be able to survive without temporary government help. And without insurance in America, buildings don't get built and goods don't get delivered. Basically, business doesn't get done. The case cannot be overstated.

The attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon will cost the insurance industry between $45 billion and $70 billion in claims, according to most experts, claims the insurance companies can manage to swallow because they had themselves bought insurance from reinsurance companies to cover such huge losses.

But with more terrorist attacks in the United States a real possibility, reinsurance companies, the insurers of insurance companies, are unlikely to include terrorism coverage on policies they renew beginning Jan. 1.

So, what is needed is a backup plan in which the federal government -- the taxpayers -- would cover losses over a certain amount due to terrorism. The plan should be similar to the safety net the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. provides banks.

A proposed House bill would have insurance companies pay claims up to $1 billion. Claims above that would be paid by the government, up to $100 billion. The government -- taxpayers, that is -- eventually would get its money back from the insurance companies through surcharges on the premiums of commercial policies and other means. In the final analysis, at least in theory, the insurance companies would not keep a penny of taxpayers' subsidies.

Plans similar to this could work, but must be written in ways to make them only temporary, perhaps for several years, until the insurance industry can build a private financial backup system and can better understand the risks.

Important within this legislation is the necessity to limit or deny punitive damages, the favored spigot of plaintiff lawyers, in cases of terrorism.

Taxpayers' dollars shouldn't go into the pockets of plaintiff lawyers. Why punish the American taxpayer when insured airliners or buildings are attacked?

Unfortunately, Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., sat on a bipartisan Senate compromise that limited punitive damages. The reason was purely partisan. The American Trial Lawyers Association is even more influential with the Democratic Party than the bosses of organized labor, and the trial lawyers don't intend to stand for any legislation placing limitations on liability, including a cap on punitive damages.

Backing up the insurance industry is as important to America's economy as giving the airlines an economic boost.

It's time to forget partisan politics and punitive damages assessed against insured businesses in this situation. Saving the insurance industry will mean saving the U.S. economy.

Hispanics Target Menendez Bid Roll Call
By Ethan Wallison
Roll Call; November 29, 2001
Panicked by the specter of losing a key voice in leadership, national Hispanic leaders are warning Democrats that the party could face a sharp backlash among Latino voters if Rep. Bob Menendez (N.J.) fails next year in his bid to become Caucus chairman.
The level of concern is such that several prominent Latinos have discussed whether to demand that Minority Leader Richard Gephardt (Mo.) break with custom and endorse Menendez in the race.

And some suggest privately that Gephardt should go a step further and ask Menendez's opponent, Rep. Rosa DeLauro (Conn.), to bow out for the sake of the party's relationship with Hispanics - a highly improbable move, to be sure.
"I think this race is a test of whether Democrats in the House are really going to respect the Hispanic community or not," said former Rep. Bill Richardson (D-N.M.), once the highest-ranked Latino in Congress.
Richardson pointed to the recent mayoral election in New York City as an example of where a rift was beginning to appear in relations between Democrats and their traditional Latino constituency.
Hispanic voters, he said, fled to the (ultimately victorious) Republican candidate after Democrats mobilized in their primary to "defeat" a Hispanic contender, Fernando Ferrer. Now Democrats need to be "reminded" of the importance of their Latino constituency, Richardson said.
"This is not an internal [Caucus] matter," he said. "This is a national race."
Other prominent Hispanic leaders were quick to echo Richardson.
"It's huge. [The contest is] absolutely huge," said Arturo Vargas, president of the National Association of Latino Elected Officials.
Vargas, for one, suggested that relations between Democrats and the Hispanic community have become "stagnant."
Citing the Bush administration's active courtship of Latinos in the past year, Vargas added that Democrats are now at a point where they are in danger of "squandering gains" made over the course of a decade.
"It would be a horrible, horrible missed opportunity if Democrats don't take advantage of this," Vargas said, referring to the prospect of elevating Menendez to chairman from his current position as vice chairman. "Window dressing doesn't work anymore."
The chairmanship race is unfolding against the backdrop of a series of letdowns and perceived indignities that have all been assiduously cataloged by Latino leaders.
The Ferrer defeat was something of a tipping point in the trend. But Hispanic leaders also note "betrayals" in matters such as the Texas and California redistrictings, where Democratic officials muscled through incumbent-protection maps despite pleas for new Hispanic districts.
And they point to legislative disappointments as well, mentioning that Gephardt and Senate Majority Leader Thomas Daschle (D-S.D.) failed to eliminate citizenship requirements in the recent aviation security bill that were anathema to Hispanic groups.
The Latino leaders contrast those developments with Hispanic outreach efforts at the White House, citing President Bush's appointment of Hispanics to head up the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Small Business Administration and the White House Counsel's office.
The GOP is making "real serious inroads" with Hispanics, Vargas said.
Even the internal dynamics of the Democratic leadership structure have come under scrutiny, with some Hispanic leaders suggesting that Gephardt has shown favoritism toward DeLauro, who, as Assistant to the Minority Leader, runs the party's message operation.
The job gives DeLauro a share of Gephardt's leadership budget and a complement of leadership staff, perks not available to Menendez, even though he technically ranks above her in the elected leadership.
"The first step is to make sure there is a level playing field," said Raul Yzaguirre, the president of the National Council of La Raza, the nation's largest Hispanic group. "Certainly we expect that leader Gephardt will remain strictly and scrupulously neutral."
Gephardt aides dismiss such concerns, noting that the top House Democrat would suffer politically within the Caucus if he ever expressed support for one leadership candidate over another.
House Democrats, who have shown themselves to be highly quota conscious when it comes to leadership personnel, generally downplay the notion that a contest for the party's No. 3 position in the House could resonate among Hispanics nationally.
Nevertheless, a current of unease runs beneath the surface. Rep. Gene Green (D-Texas), who has a majority-Hispanic district, said he believes the Menendez bid will only have an impact if the New Jersey lawmaker ultimately wins, thus making him a prominent and visible leader in the party.

On the other hand, Green said, "You have to reach out [to Hispanics]. And the way you reach out is by having people in leadership."

If Menendez doesn't prevail, he added, "I hope there is some other way the Caucus can show it's diverse and sensitive to this fastest-growing population in this country."

In emphasizing the importance of "diversity" in the leadership - not to mention the historic significance of electing a Hispanic as caucus chairman - the Menendez campaign model is similar to the one used by Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.), who built from a base in the Women's Caucus to become party Whip-in-waiting.

The Menendez camp believes Pelosi's election will neutralize the gender issue in the chairmanship race. But DeLauro, for her part, has in turn neutralized what might have been a regional advantage for Menendez in the Northeast, removing a critical element of Pelosi's winning model.

In an interview DeLauro suggested it would be a mistake to believe that external pressures could have a significant impact on the chairmanship contest.

"It's an intensely personal, Member-to-Member activity," DeLauro said of campaigning inside the Caucus. "It's about convincing, it's about your relationships, it's about your record of service."

Menendez, however, hearkened back to Pelosi's recent victory, which was hailed as a milestone by women's groups, as an example of how Caucus leadership races can reverberate nationally.

"It's neither unprecedented nor unexpected that when you have people who break barriers in running for leadership, it draws national attention," Menendez said in an interview.

The Latino community will be paying close attention to the chairmanship race and will be sensitive to the outcome, he suggested.

"If at a time when there is this explosion in the population of [the Hispanic] community we were to move backwards, I think the Hispanic community would say, '[Democrats] are not moving forward with us, they're moving backwards,'" Menendez said.

Alluding then to the steps taken by the GOP to court Hispanics, he added, "The point is, we're to be contested for the hearts, minds [and] votes of this community."

As barriers to strong ethnic-regional coalitions have appeared before Menendez, Hispanic leaders have differed sharply on how to proceed, with some recommending direct intervention and others cautioning that leadership contests are very personal, internal affairs.

Gephardt aides were among those recommending that Hispanic groups should think twice before interfering in the chairmanship race, suggesting that this move could "backfire" if Members feel they are being strong-armed on a decision they consider to be personal. And one aide chastised Latino leaders for warning of dire consequences for the party if Menendez loses."The focus ought to be on how you win, not what will happen if you lose," the aide said.

early May? It only takes a couple of hours for each half-dozen nominees, yet six months have elapsed with no action. How can it be bipartisan to allow more than 100 vacancies to exist, scores of which need to be urgently filled?

Judicial Profiling

The Wall Street Journal
Tuesday, November 27, 2001

It's too bad Miguel Estrada never thought of doing a reverse Geraldo Rivera (formerly Rivers) and renamed himself Mike Smith. He'd probably be sitting on the federal bench right now. But Mr. Estrada, who was one of President Bush's first judicial nominations, can't even get a hearing from Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy.

The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority in the U.S. Senate.

The 40-year-old Mr. Estrada is an American success story, a Honduran immigrant who taught himself English and went on to Harvard Law, where he was editor of the law review. He clerked for Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy and worked as a deputy in Bill Clinton's Justice Department, where he argued cases before the Supreme Court. Seth Waxman, Mr. Clinton's Solicitor General, has only the highest praise for him.

But in Pat Leahy's Senate, such credentials are a liability. They're so sterling they'd make it impossible for Senate Democrats to stand up and oppose Mr. Estrada if he ever did get a hearing. And that would mean confirming him to a seat on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, the same court that has produced Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia. And the last thing Democrats want to confront is an able conservative Hispanic nominated for the High Court by a Republican President.

Mr. Leahy's spokesman says Mr. Estrada's hearing is being delayed because of the judge's "rigid ideological background." But if that's true, why not hold a hearing and then have an up or down vote? Mr. Leahy answered this question himself some years ago when GOP Senators were holding up Clinton nominee Sonia Sotomayor.

"What they are saying is that they have a brilliant judge who also happens to be a woman and Hispanic, and they haven't the guts to stand up and argue publicly against her on the floor," Mr. Leahy told the New York Times at the time. "They just want to hide in their cloakrooms and do her in quietly." Ms. Sotomayor was later confirmed with little opposition, but Mr. Leahy must have secretly admired Republican tactics.

Meanwhile, the D.C. Circuit is the court that will hear a majority of the habeas corpus petitions resulting from the war on terrorism. It is now down to eight active judges, but needs 10 to carry its workload. Chief Judge Douglas Ginsberg wrote Mr. Leahy in August that if two new judges weren't confirmed by Sept. 30, "the court will likely find it necessary to delay until next term hearing cases that would otherwise be argued and decided this winter and spring."

Mr. Leahy has since done nothing to advance the nominations of either Mr. Estrada or John Roberts, another Bush nominee to the D.C. Circuit. Mr. Roberts, who is white, is enduring his own form of judicial profiling. Democrats don't want to be seen confirming a white judge ahead of an Hispanic one. So the entire D.C. Circuit suffers.

This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton all had at least 88% of their judicial nominees confirmed by the Senate. With only days to go before the Senate adjourns for the year, only 28% of George W. Bush's nominees have been confirmed.

In 1998, when there were even fewer vacancies, Mr. Leahy said that any week in which the Senate "does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." But now Mr. Leahy gets to screen the ethnicity and credentials of nominees, and on the evidence he'd rather keep a vital court understaffed than allow a qualified Hispanic on the bench.

EXCERPT

HUME: You've got a number of judicial nominees pending up there, and one that is of particular interest, is Miguel Estrada who, like you, is of Hispanic origin. This is a man who has quite a picturesque story. A Honduran immigrant, made it through Harvard, is very highly regarded by people who have served with him in the government. His nomination has yet to receive a hearing on Capitol Hill. What about that? What do you sense is going on there?

GONZALES: Well, we, of course, are a little bit disappointed at the pace of the confirmations within the judiciary committee. We don't believe that a sufficient number of the president's nominees have received a hearing. Miguel Estrada is a wonderfully qualified, gifted individual who was nominated by the president on May 9th, over six months ago, along with 11 other qualified nominees.

And, you know, again, we're disappointed at the pace. And we would urge the judiciary to focus more on judicial nominations. We understand there's a lot going on. Chairman Leahy has been distracted by other responsibilities, as chairman of the judiciary committee, but we would urge that he focus on the president's nominations, because we have too many vacancies that exist on the federal courts around this country. And it's very important that those vacancies be filled as quickly as possible.

HUME: I want to try the same question again on this matter. Do you not sense politics here? Last question.

GONZALES: Well, I guess one might say that there's politics in everything that goes on here in Washington. Obviously, again, I would just simply leave it on the basis that we would hope that the judiciary committee would do its job.

HUME: All right, Judge Al Gonzales, thanks very much for being with us. We have to take a quick break for other headlines. When we come back, find out where in the U.S. Santa Claus has become persona non grata. That story, after a break.

GOP Charges 'Profiling' of Hispanic Nominee

REV_00082652

By Audrey Hudson & Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Tuesday, November 29, 2001

Senate Republicans yesterday accused Democrats of "racial profiling" in holding up President Bush's nomination of a Hispanic candidate to a high-profile federal appeals court seat.

"Liberal Democrats don't want an Hispanic-American appointed to this significant court because they understand he could be one of the president's first nominees . . . on the U.S. Supreme Court," said Sen. Jon Kyl, Arizona Republican and a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "They are literally racially profiling this nomination."

Mr. Bush in May nominated Miguel Estrada, whom Hispanics view as a prime example of the American dream, to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The appeals court is one step below the Supreme Court. Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, said the profiling includes ideology.

"Democrats on the committee seem to love minorities, as long as they are liberal," Mr. Hatch said. "Miguel Estrada deserves to be on the court regardless of ideology."

The Democrat-led Judiciary Committee has yet to hold a hearing for Mr. Estrada, 40, who served four years in the Clinton administration as an assistant to the solicitor general.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, denied through a spokesman that he is blocking the Estrada nomination out of racial bias.

"Can you even ask that with a straight face?" Leahy spokesman David Carle said. "It's a ridiculous assertion."

Another senior Republican senator said privately that he believes Mr. Estrada is being held back because of race. And the Traditional Values Coalition in Washington has called on Mr. Leahy "to stop playing racial politics with this nomination."

The larger issue, Republicans say, is that Democrats have confirmed only 28 percent of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees this year, compared with 57 percent in the first year of the Clinton presidency and 62 percent in the first year of the elder President Bush's administration.

Mr. Carle said the committee has acted first on nominations "where there is consensus." Mr. Leahy said earlier through his spokesman that he was holding up the Estrada nomination because of Mr. Estrada's "rigid ideological background."

Some Hispanics, who are being aggressively courted by both parties for the 2004 presidential race, scoff at the accusation that Mr. Estrada is not qualified.

"For Senator Leahy to call Miguel Estrada controversial is simply preposterous," said Robert Deposada, president of the Washington-based Latino Coalition. "The only controversy here is that Mr. Estrada is of Hispanic descent. We call on Senator Leahy to do what's fair and allow an up or down vote on this extremely qualified judicial nominee."

Mr. Estrada was born in Honduras and emigrated to the United States at age 17, speaking almost no English. He earned a degree from Harvard Law School and is a partner at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher in Washington.

Mr. Kyl said Mr. Bush "would like to be known as the president who appointed the first Hispanic to the Supreme Court."

"Mr. Estrada is eminently qualified for that position, and the liberal Democrats know that," Mr. Kyl said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat and a Judiciary Committee member, said Mr. Leahy's reputation for advancing minorities is beyond reproach.

"It's so preposterous to make that accusation against Senator Leahy, he doesn't deserve it," Mr. Kennedy said. "He has demonstrated over a very distinguished career that he is one of the leaders in knocking down the walls of discrimination."

Mr. Kennedy said there are "serious policy issues" with Mr. Estrada's nomination.

Mr. Bush submitted his first batch of judicial nominations May 9, when Republicans held the majority in the Senate by a single vote. But the following month, before the Republicans had acted on any judicial nominations, Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont threw control of the Senate to the Democrats by quitting the Republican Party to become an independent.

Since Democrats gained control, they have confirmed 18 of the 64 judicial candidates submitted by Mr.
Bush. Democrats say that's already better than the 15 judicial nominees approved in the first year of the elder Bush's presidency.

"We're actually going to be ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year, even though we only started in July," said Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat.

But the elder Mr. Bush submitted only 24 judicial nominations in his first year because there were fewer court vacancies.

Mr. Daschle said of Senate Republicans, "They're responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years."

Sen. Jeff Sessions, Alabama Republican and a member of the Judiciary Committee, said he does not think Mr. Estrada is a victim of racial bias but believes the Democrats are "deliberately going slower" on Bush nominations.

"We haven't even had hearings on some stellar nominees," Mr. Sessions said. "I think with the vacancy rate we've got, we've got to pick up the pace. Are the Bush nominees receiving the same treatment as the Clinton nominees? To date, they have not."

Republican leaders initially tried to block spending bills this fall to force Democrats to bring up more judicial nominations. But they abandoned the strategy when Mr. Daschle refused to be hurried.

Bush Throws Out Teamwork in New Judge Selection

By Joel Connelly
The Seattle Post-Intelligencer
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

The presence of a strong bench, filled with versatile people who can perform under pressure, is as vital in a U.S. Courthouse as it is down at Safeco Field.

Due to the position's importance, then, the three-way political struggle over filling the seat of retiring
Tacoma-based U.S. District Court Judge Robert Bryan has become as sensitive as a three-way baseball trade.

It also shows how the Bush administration is playing hardball while preaching harmony.

The White House legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, says President Bush will nominate a replacement for Bryan by January. Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., will block Senate action unless they get a voice in selecting the nominee. GOP Sen. Slade Gorton did the same thing with Bill Clinton in the White House. Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., the Bush administration's patronage overseer in the state, offered the senators half the membership on a bipartisan judicial screening commission.

But the offer was on the condition that Murray and Cantwell "agree in advance" to support Bush's nominee if it is a name recommended by the panel. It denied them any voice in picking nominees to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, in which Gorton was intimately involved.

Political infighting usually interests mainly political insiders.

But this scrap deserves a wider audience, precisely because we have had a talented bench.

Federal judges have helped shape life in the Northwest, from Indian fishing-rights cases to the ongoing debate over the legality of assisted suicide to the U.S. Forest Service's failure to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

The job requires no small amount of intellect, and not inconsiderable presence.

In the early 1980s, prosecutors brought bid-rigging charges against contractors who made a mint off the Washington Public Power Supply System's ill-fated nuclear program.

New York and Washington, D.C., defense lawyers descended on Helena, Mont., where the trial was moved due to WPPSS' bad image. "I once wrote a law review article on this issue of admissibility," one self-impressed barrister intoned.

"I taught this issue of admissibility in law school," U.S. District Judge Jack Coughenour coolly replied. Seeing Coughenour control the high-priced talent before him, in a long complex trial, reminded me of nothing so much as, when I was a kid, watching circus lion trainer Clyde Beatty.

The challenge to Washington's initiative imposing term limits for members of Congress found U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer presiding at a hearing that pitted one-time Attorney General Griffin Bell against former White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler. Dwyer's meticulous, witty ruling, tossing out the initiative, was reflected in a later majority opinion by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other judges have been more controversial. American Lawyer magazine once scored the courtroom demeanor and rulings of U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner.

In 1997, with a Democratic administration, Gorton threatened to block nominees to the U.S. District Court and the 9th Circuit unless given "an equal voice" in picking judges.

Gorton insisted he was "trying to follow the Constitution" which provides for the Senate giving both advice and consent, saying: "It seems to me the people of the United States have called for cooperation, and we will end up having cooperation."

He got his wish. White House Counsel Charles Ruff paid a visit to Gorton's office, and worked out an agreement.

A bipartisan committee screened candidates for court vacancies. Gorton and Murray interviewed

finalists. They jointly recommended, Clinton nominated and the Senate confirmed U.S. District Court Judges Robert Lasnik and Marsha Pechman.

The Bush administration is taking a much harder line.

Last week, in an icy letter, Gonzales told the senators: "A bipartisan commission process is neither part of the constitutional design nor reflective of the traditional practice."

"It's interesting to hear a Republican White House undo everything Slade Gorton fought so hard to get,
assuring senators a meaningful role in this," Murray said yesterday.

The White House is also insisting on at least three candidates to fill Bryan's judgeship. "The president wants to make the choice," Dunn said.

Dunn has given the White House a list of four candidates. Bush intends to make a nomination, Gonzales informed the senators. "I think we are going to go ahead with the process," Dunn added.

The gesture may be meaningless. Democrats control the Senate, and Cantwell is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee that passes on judicial nominations.

"I want a process," Murray said. "I want us to work with the White House, but I am unwilling to hand them my vote. Unless there is cooperation I am not prepared to put their nominees in place."

Gorton said exactly the same thing. Cooperation yielded first-rate candidates, and Senate confirmation of Northwest judges followed while other nominations languished.

Yesterday, Murray and Cantwell asked for a meeting with Gonzales to try to work things out.

To the White House counsel goes this question: Is this an example of the new spirit of cooperation that candidate Bush promised he would bring to Washington?

Leahy's Jihad

By Greg Pierce
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

"Although most Republican lawmakers approve of Bush administration policies, they also believe the Justice Department's actions in the war on terrorism are a legitimate area for congressional oversight. However, the sheer number of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, plus the involvement of a coalition of liberal interest groups that attacked John Ashcroft at his confirmation hearings early this year, suggests, at least to the GOP, that Democrats are also interested in inflicting political damage on the attorney general," Byron York writes at www.nationalreview.com.

"Republicans believe committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy and other Democrats have chosen to concentrate their fire on Ashcroft as a way of scoring points against the Bush administration without appearing to attack the president, who enjoys high job-approval ratings. For example, Republicans point out that the issue of military tribunals was a Bush executive order that will be carried out by the Defense Department. Why not go after the White House instead of focusing on Ashcroft? . . . "Finally, some in the GOP believe another name for the flurry of Judiciary Committee activity might be 'What We're Doing Instead of Confirming Judges.' There has been little if any progress on the issue of judges since the failure of a GOP plan to block appropriations bills as a way of forcing Democrats to consider more of the president's judicial nominations. Now, with no pressure to act, Leahy is virtually ignoring the issue. Will Republicans renew a push for more confirmations before the end of the year? 'There's no point in it,' says one frustrated aide."

Leahy's Ethnic Bias

Senator Pushes for Hearing on 10th Circuit Nominee from Wyoming

The Associated Press
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

U.S. Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo., has asked the Senate Judiciary Committee's chairman to schedule a hearing as soon as possible on the nomination of Terrence O'Brien of Gillette to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

O'Brien was nominated Aug. 2 to the appellate court, which covers Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah. He is one of four 10th Circuit nominees.

In a letter dated Tuesday to the committee chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., Thomas said time is running out for a hearing this year. Besides being important to Wyoming, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has a 33 percent vacancy rate, Thomas wrote.

O'Brien, a district judge in the 6th Judicial District Court of Wyoming from 1980 to 2000, is now a legal consultant to Kennecott Energy.

The committee has all the documents pertaining to O'Brien's nomination, Thomas wrote.

Op/Eds

Judicial Nominees Have Waited Long Enough, Senator

By Senators Hatch, Kyl, Thurmond, Brownback, Grassley, DeWine, Specter, McConnell & Sessions
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

The Nov. 26 letter to the editor from Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, "Judicial confirmations going faster than ever," compels a more complete and factual account of the current state of the judicial confirmation process.

Mr. Leahy seeks to rebut growing criticism that his Judiciary Committee is blocking qualified judicial nominees selected by President Bush. The criticism is warranted, and the issue is of extreme importance. The Senate's inexcusable inaction on dozens of qualified judicial nominees threatens to further clog already overburdened courtrooms, delay justice for millions of Americans and, even more alarming, make it harder for federal law enforcement officials to get judicial assistance in their efforts to track and monitor suspected terrorists and other criminals. In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy tries to use statistics and numbers to create the illusion that his committee is moving at a pace "faster" than the last two administrations on Senate judiciary nominees, but his arguments are misleading.

In fact, the first Bush administration saw 15 of its 24 first-year nominees confirmed by the Senate - a 62 percent confirmation rate. Similarly, in his first year, President Clinton had 27 of his 47 nominees confirmed - a 57 percent rate.

Today, with the Senate nearing completion of its business for the year, the president has had just 18 of his 64 nominees confirmed by the Senate - or just 28 percent.

Mr. Leahy seeks to justify his inaction on the grounds that some nominees have only recently been ready for Senate action. That is no excuse for not acting on all of those candidates nominated before August. As to those pre-August nominees, the Senate's performance has been downright disgraceful, particularly when comparing the president's nominees to those of his last three predecessors. With only one exception, 100 percent of the pre-August nominees of Presidents Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Clinton were confirmed in their first year of office. By contrast, the Senate has managed to confirm an anemic 40 percent of George W. Bush's pre-August nominees, with the Senate only a couple of weeks away from its recess.

Mr. Leahy was not nearly so patient when the nominees were liberal Democrats and the Senate was under Republican control. At that time, Mr. Leahy urged us to redouble our efforts to fill "an alarming vacancy rate" on the federal courts - nearly 70 seats. Today the vacancies exceed 100.

Again, when Republicans controlled the Senate, Mr. Leahy remarked that "every week in which the Senate does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." Yet at the current confirmation pace controlled by Mr. Leahy, this Senate has confirmed an average of only three judges a month. The Judiciary Committee is moving at a tortoise's pace, especially regarding circuit court nominees: Just five have been confirmed all year. (Judicial nominees are not the only ones suffering from these dilatory tactics; to date, the president's entire Cabinet is still not in place because the Senate has yet to confirm John Walters as the national drug czar.)

The fact that many nominees have not been confirmed is not an accident. Liberal Democrats simply don't want judges with whom they disagree seated on the federal courts. There is no other explanation for the Judiciary Committee's failure to hold a hearing on more than two-thirds of the first 11 persons nominated by the president - back in early May. The Judiciary Committee stalls, even though the American Bar Association has rated a number of the nominees "well-qualified" to serve on the federal bench.

In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy wrote that he and his committee are striving for "bipartisanship." In Washington, this term is wielded more often than it is applied. How can it be bipartisan for the majority to refuse even to hold hearings on qualified candidates nominated by the president in

Judicial Profiling

Tuesday, November 27, 2001

It's too bad Miguel Estrada never thought of doing a reverse Geraldo Rivera (formerly Rivers) and renamed himself Mike Smith. He'd probably be sitting on the federal bench right now. But Mr. Estrada, who was one of President Bush's first judicial nominations, can't even get a hearing from Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy.

The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority in the U.S. Senate.

The 40-year-old Mr. Estrada is an American success story, a Honduran immigrant who taught himself English and went on to Harvard Law, where he was editor of the law review. He clerked for Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy and worked as a deputy in Bill Clinton's Justice Department, where he argued cases before the Supreme Court. Seth Waxman, Mr. Clinton's Solicitor General, has only the highest praise for him.

But in Pat Leahy's Senate, such credentials are a liability. They're so sterling they'd make it impossible for Senate Democrats to stand up and oppose Mr. Estrada if he ever did get a hearing. And that would mean confirming him to a seat on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, the same court that has produced Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia. And the last thing Democrats want to confront is an able conservative Hispanic nominated for the High Court by a Republican President.

Mr. Leahy's spokesman says Mr. Estrada's hearing is being delayed because of the judge's "rigid ideological background." But if that's true, why not hold a hearing and then have an up or down vote? Mr. Leahy answered this question himself some years ago when GOP Senators were holding up Clinton nominee Sonia Sotomayor.

"What they are saying is that they have a brilliant judge who also happens to be a woman and Hispanic, and they haven't the guts to stand up and argue publicly against her on the floor," Mr. Leahy told the New York Times at the time. "They just want to hide in their cloakrooms and do her in quietly." Ms. Sotomayor was later confirmed with little opposition, but Mr. Leahy must have secretly admired Republican tactics.

Meanwhile, the D.C. Circuit is the court that will hear a majority of the habeas corpus petitions resulting from the war on terrorism. It is now down to eight active judges, but needs 10 to carry its workload. Chief Judge Douglas Ginsberg wrote Mr. Leahy in August that if two new judges weren't confirmed by Sept. 30, "the court will likely find it necessary to delay until next term hearing cases that would otherwise be argued and decided this winter and spring."

Mr. Leahy has since done nothing to advance the nominations of either Mr. Estrada or John Roberts, another Bush nominee to the D.C. Circuit. Mr. Roberts, who is white, is enduring his own form of judicial profiling. Democrats don't want to be seen confirming a white judge ahead of an Hispanic one. So the entire D.C. Circuit suffers.

This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton all had at least 88% of their judicial nominees confirmed by the Senate. With only days to go before the Senate adjourns for the year, only 28% of George W. Bush's nominees have been confirmed.

In 1998, when there were even fewer vacancies, Mr. Leahy said that any week in which the Senate "does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." But now Mr. Leahy gets to screen the ethnicity and credentials of nominees, and on the evidence he'd rather keep a vital court understaffed than allow a qualified Hispanic on the bench.

EXCERPT

HUME: You've got a number of judicial nominees pending up there, and one that is of particular interest, is Miguel Estrada who, like you, is of Hispanic origin. This is a man who has quite a picturesque story. A Honduran immigrant, made it through Harvard, is very highly regarded by people who have served with him in the government. His nomination has yet to receive a hearing on Capitol Hill. What about that? What do you sense is going on there?

GONZALES: Well, we, of course, are a little bit disappointed at the pace of the confirmations within the judiciary committee. We don't believe that a sufficient number of the president's nominees have received a hearing. Miguel Estrada is a wonderfully qualified, gifted individual who was nominated by the president on May 9th, over six months ago, along with 11 other qualified nominees.

And, you know, again, we're disappointed at the pace. And we would urge the judiciary to focus more on judicial nominations. We understand there's a lot going on. Chairman Leahy has been distracted by other responsibilities, as chairman of the judiciary committee, but we would urge that he focus on the president's nominations, because we have too many vacancies that exist on the federal courts around this country. And it's very important that those vacancies be filled as quickly as possible.

HUME: I want to try the same question again on this matter. Do you not sense politics here? Last question.

GONZALES: Well, I guess one might say that there's politics in everything that goes on here in Washington. Obviously, again, I would just simply leave it on the basis that we would hope that the judiciary committee would do its job.

HUME: All right, Judge Al Gonzales, thanks very much for being with us. We have to take a quick break for other headlines. When we come back, find out where in the U.S. Santa Claus has become persona non grata. That story, after a break.

GOP Charges 'Profiling' of Hispanic Nominee

REV_00082666

By Audrey Hudson & Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Tuesday, November 29, 2001

Senate Republicans yesterday accused Democrats of "racial profiling" in holding up President Bush's nomination of a Hispanic candidate to a high-profile federal appeals court seat.

"Liberal Democrats don't want an Hispanic-American appointed to this significant court because they understand he could be one of the president's first nominees . . . on the U.S. Supreme Court," said Sen. Jon Kyl, Arizona Republican and a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "They are literally racially profiling this nomination."

Mr. Bush in May nominated Miguel Estrada, whom Hispanics view as a prime example of the American dream, to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The appeals court is one step below the Supreme Court. Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, said the profiling includes ideology.

"Democrats on the committee seem to love minorities, as long as they are liberal," Mr. Hatch said. "Miguel Estrada deserves to be on the court regardless of ideology."

The Democrat-led Judiciary Committee has yet to hold a hearing for Mr. Estrada, 40, who served four years in the Clinton administration as an assistant to the solicitor general.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, denied through a spokesman that he is blocking the Estrada nomination out of racial bias.

"Can you even ask that with a straight face?" Leahy spokesman David Carle said. "It's a ridiculous assertion."

Another senior Republican senator said privately that he believes Mr. Estrada is being held back because of race. And the Traditional Values Coalition in Washington has called on Mr. Leahy "to stop playing racial politics with this nomination."

The larger issue, Republicans say, is that Democrats have confirmed only 28 percent of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees this year, compared with 57 percent in the first year of the Clinton presidency and 62 percent in the first year of the elder President Bush's administration.

Mr. Carle said the committee has acted first on nominations "where there is consensus." Mr. Leahy said earlier through his spokesman that he was holding up the Estrada nomination because of Mr. Estrada's "rigid ideological background."

REV_00082667

Some Hispanics, who are being aggressively courted by both parties for the 2004 presidential race, scoff at the accusation that Mr. Estrada is not qualified.

"For Senator Leahy to call Miguel Estrada controversial is simply preposterous," said Robert Deposada, president of the Washington-based Latino Coalition. "The only controversy here is that Mr. Estrada is of Hispanic descent. We call on Senator Leahy to do what's fair and allow an up or down vote on this extremely qualified judicial nominee."

Mr. Estrada was born in Honduras and emigrated to the United States at age 17, speaking almost no English. He earned a degree from Harvard Law School and is a partner at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher in Washington.

Mr. Kyl said Mr. Bush "would like to be known as the president who appointed the first Hispanic to the Supreme Court."

"Mr. Estrada is eminently qualified for that position, and the liberal Democrats know that," Mr. Kyl said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat and a Judiciary Committee member, said Mr. Leahy's reputation for advancing minorities is beyond reproach.

"It's so preposterous to make that accusation against Senator Leahy, he doesn't deserve it," Mr. Kennedy said. "He has demonstrated over a very distinguished career that he is one of the leaders in knocking down the walls of discrimination."

Mr. Kennedy said there are "serious policy issues" with Mr. Estrada's nomination.

Mr. Bush submitted his first batch of judicial nominations May 9, when Republicans held the majority in the Senate by a single vote. But the following month, before the Republicans had acted on any judicial nominations, Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont threw control of the Senate to the Democrats by quitting the Republican Party to become an independent.

Since Democrats gained control, they have confirmed 18 of the 64 judicial candidates submitted by Mr.
Bush. Democrats say that's already better than the 15 judicial nominees approved in the first year of the elder Bush's presidency.

"We're actually going to be ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year, even though we only started in July," said Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat.

But the elder Mr. Bush submitted only 24 judicial nominations in his first year because there were fewer court vacancies.

Mr. Daschle said of Senate Republicans, "They're responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years."

Sen. Jeff Sessions, Alabama Republican and a member of the Judiciary Committee, said he does not think Mr. Estrada is a victim of racial bias but believes the Democrats are "deliberately going slower" on Bush nominations.

"We haven't even had hearings on some stellar nominees," Mr. Sessions said. "I think with the vacancy rate we've got, we've got to pick up the pace. Are the Bush nominees receiving the same treatment as the Clinton nominees? To date, they have not."

Republican leaders initially tried to block spending bills this fall to force Democrats to bring up more judicial nominations. But they abandoned the strategy when Mr. Daschle refused to be hurried.

Bush Throws Out Teamwork in New Judge Selection

By Joel Connelly
The Seattle Post-Intelligencer
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

The presence of a strong bench, filled with versatile people who can perform under pressure, is as vital in a U.S. Courthouse as it is down at Safeco Field.

Due to the position's importance, then, the three-way political struggle over filling the seat of retiring
Tacoma-based U.S. District Court Judge Robert Bryan has become as sensitive as a three-way baseball trade.

It also shows how the Bush administration is playing hardball while preaching harmony.

The White House legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, says President Bush will nominate a replacement for Bryan by January. Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., will block Senate action unless they get a voice in selecting the nominee. GOP Sen. Slade Gorton did the same thing with Bill Clinton in the White House. Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., the Bush administration's patronage overseer in the state, offered the senators half the membership on a bipartisan judicial screening commission.

But the offer was on the condition that Murray and Cantwell "agree in advance" to support Bush's nominee if it is a name recommended by the panel. It denied them any voice in picking nominees to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, in which Gorton was intimately involved.

Political infighting usually interests mainly political insiders.

But this scrap deserves a wider audience, precisely because we have had a talented bench.

Federal judges have helped shape life in the Northwest, from Indian fishing-rights cases to the ongoing debate over the legality of assisted suicide to the U.S. Forest Service's failure to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

The job requires no small amount of intellect, and not inconsiderable presence.

In the early 1980s, prosecutors brought bid-rigging charges against contractors who made a mint off the Washington Public Power Supply System's ill-fated nuclear program.

New York and Washington, D.C., defense lawyers descended on Helena, Mont., where the trial was moved due to WPPSS' bad image. "I once wrote a law review article on this issue of admissibility," one self-impressed barrister intoned.

"I taught this issue of admissibility in law school," U.S. District Judge Jack Coughenour coolly replied. Seeing Coughenour control the high-priced talent before him, in a long complex trial, reminded me of nothing so much as, when I was a kid, watching circus lion trainer Clyde Beatty.

The challenge to Washington's initiative imposing term limits for members of Congress found U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer presiding at a hearing that pitted one-time Attorney General Griffin Bell against former White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler. Dwyer's meticulous, witty ruling, tossing out the initiative, was reflected in a later majority opinion by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other judges have been more controversial. American Lawyer magazine once scored the courtroom
demeanor and rulings of U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner.

In 1997, with a Democratic administration, Gorton threatened to block nominees to the U.S. District Court and the 9th Circuit unless given "an equal voice" in picking judges.

Gorton insisted he was "trying to follow the Constitution" which provides for the Senate giving both advice and consent, saying: "It seems to me the people of the United States have called for cooperation, and we will end up having cooperation."

He got his wish. White House Counsel Charles Ruff paid a visit to Gorton's office, and worked out an agreement.

A bipartisan committee screened candidates for court vacancies. Gorton and Murray interviewed

finalists. They jointly recommended, Clinton nominated and the Senate confirmed U.S. District Court Judges Robert Lasnik and Marsha Pechman.

The Bush administration is taking a much harder line.

Last week, in an icy letter, Gonzales told the senators: "A bipartisan commission process is neither part of the constitutional design nor reflective of the traditional practice."

"It's interesting to hear a Republican White House undo everything Slade Gorton fought so hard to get,
assuring senators a meaningful role in this," Murray said yesterday.

The White House is also insisting on at least three candidates to fill Bryan's judgeship. "The president wants to make the choice," Dunn said.

Dunn has given the White House a list of four candidates. Bush intends to make a nomination, Gonzales informed the senators. "I think we are going to go ahead with the process," Dunn added.

The gesture may be meaningless. Democrats control the Senate, and Cantwell is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee that passes on judicial nominations.

"I want a process," Murray said. "I want us to work with the White House, but I am unwilling to hand them my vote. Unless there is cooperation I am not prepared to put their nominees in place."

Gorton said exactly the same thing. Cooperation yielded first-rate candidates, and Senate confirmation of Northwest judges followed while other nominations languished.

Yesterday, Murray and Cantwell asked for a meeting with Gonzales to try to work things out.

To the White House counsel goes this question: Is this an example of the new spirit of cooperation that candidate Bush promised he would bring to Washington?

Leahy's Jihad

By Greg Pierce
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

"Although most Republican lawmakers approve of Bush administration policies, they also believe the Justice Department's actions in the war on terrorism are a legitimate area for congressional oversight. However, the sheer number of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, plus the involvement of a coalition of liberal interest groups that attacked John Ashcroft at his confirmation hearings early this year, suggests, at least to the GOP, that Democrats are also interested in inflicting political damage on the attorney general," Byron York writes at www.nationalreview.com.

"Republicans believe committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy and other Democrats have chosen to concentrate their fire on Ashcroft as a way of scoring points against the Bush administration without appearing to attack the president, who enjoys high job-approval ratings. For example, Republicans point out that the issue of military tribunals was a Bush executive order that will be carried out by the Defense Department. Why not go after the White House instead of focusing on Ashcroft? . . . "Finally, some in the GOP believe another name for the flurry of Judiciary Committee activity might be 'What We're Doing Instead of Confirming Judges.' There has been little if any progress on the issue of judges since the failure of a GOP plan to block appropriations bills as a way of forcing Democrats to consider more of the president's judicial nominations. Now, with no pressure to act, Leahy is virtually ignoring the issue. Will Republicans renew a push for more confirmations before the end of the year? 'There's no point in it,' says one frustrated aide."

Leahy's Ethnic Bias

By Greg Pierce

"This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Senator Pushes for Hearing on 10th Circuit Nominee from Wyoming

The Associated Press
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

U.S. Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo., has asked the Senate Judiciary Committee's chairman to schedule a hearing as soon as possible on the nomination of Terrence O'Brien of Gillette to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

O'Brien was nominated Aug. 2 to the appellate court, which covers Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah. He is one of four 10th Circuit nominees.

In a letter dated Tuesday to the committee chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., Thomas said time is running out for a hearing this year. Besides being important to Wyoming, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has a 33 percent vacancy rate, Thomas wrote.

O'Brien, a district judge in the 6th Judicial District Court of Wyoming from 1980 to 2000, is now a legal consultant to Kennecott Energy.

The committee has all the documents pertaining to O'Brien's nomination, Thomas wrote.

Judicial Nominees Have Waited Long Enough, Senator

By Senators Hatch, Kyl, Thurmond, Brownback, Grassley, DeWine, Specter, McConnell & Sessions
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

The Nov. 26 letter to the editor from Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, "Judicial confirmations going faster than ever," compels a more complete and factual account of the current state of the judicial confirmation process.

Mr. Leahy seeks to rebut growing criticism that his Judiciary Committee is blocking qualified judicial nominees selected by President Bush. The criticism is warranted, and the issue is of extreme importance. The Senate's inexcusable inaction on dozens of qualified judicial nominees threatens to further clog already overburdened courtrooms, delay justice for millions of Americans and, even more alarming, make it harder for federal law enforcement officials to get judicial assistance in their efforts to track and monitor suspected terrorists and other criminals. In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy tries to use statistics and numbers to create the illusion that his committee is moving at a pace "faster" than the last two administrations on Senate judiciary nominees, but his arguments are misleading.

In fact, the first Bush administration saw 15 of its 24 first-year nominees confirmed by the Senate - a 62 percent confirmation rate. Similarly, in his first year, President Clinton had 27 of his 47 nominees confirmed - a 57 percent rate.

Today, with the Senate nearing completion of its business for the year, the president has had just 18 of his 64 nominees confirmed by the Senate - or just 28 percent.

Mr. Leahy seeks to justify his inaction on the grounds that some nominees have only recently been ready for Senate action. That is no excuse for not acting on all of those candidates nominated before August. As to those pre-August nominees, the Senate's performance has been downright disgraceful, particularly when comparing the president's nominees to those of his last three predecessors. With only one exception, 100 percent of the pre-August nominees of Presidents Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Clinton were confirmed in their first year of office. By contrast, the Senate has managed to confirm an anemic 40 percent of George W. Bush's pre-August nominees, with the Senate only a couple of weeks away from its recess.

Mr. Leahy was not nearly so patient when the nominees were liberal Democrats and the Senate was under Republican control. At that time, Mr. Leahy urged us to redouble our efforts to fill "an alarming vacancy rate" on the federal courts - nearly 70 seats. Today the vacancies exceed 100.

Again, when Republicans controlled the Senate, Mr. Leahy remarked that "every week in which the Senate does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." Yet at the current confirmation pace controlled by Mr. Leahy, this Senate has confirmed an average of only three judges a month. The Judiciary Committee is moving at a tortoise's pace, especially regarding circuit court nominees: Just five have been confirmed all year. (Judicial nominees are not the only ones suffering from these dilatory tactics; to date, the president's entire Cabinet is still not in place because the Senate has yet to confirm John Walters as the national drug czar.)

The fact that many nominees have not been confirmed is not an accident. Liberal Democrats simply don't want judges with whom they disagree seated on the federal courts. There is no other explanation for the Judiciary Committee's failure to hold a hearing on more than two-thirds of the first 11 persons nominated by the president - back in early May. The Judiciary Committee stalls, even though the American Bar Association has rated a number of the nominees "well-qualified" to serve on the federal bench.

In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy wrote that he and his committee are striving for "bipartisanship." In Washington, this term is wielded more often than it is applied. How can it be bipartisan for the majority to refuse even to hold hearings on qualified candidates nominated by the president in

Judicial Profiling

Tuesday, November 27, 2001

It's too bad Miguel Estrada never thought of doing a reverse Geraldo Rivera (formerly Rivers) and renamed himself Mike Smith. He'd probably be sitting on the federal bench right now. But Mr. Estrada, who was one of President Bush's first judicial nominations, can't even get a hearing from Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy.

The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority in the U.S. Senate.

The 40-year-old Mr. Estrada is an American success story, a Honduran immigrant who taught himself English and went on to Harvard Law, where he was editor of the law review. He clerked for Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy and worked as a deputy in Bill Clinton's Justice Department, where he argued cases before the Supreme Court. Seth Waxman, Mr. Clinton's Solicitor General, has only the highest praise for him.

But in Pat Leahy's Senate, such credentials are a liability. They're so sterling they'd make it impossible for Senate Democrats to stand up and oppose Mr. Estrada if he ever did get a hearing. And that would mean confirming him to a seat on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, the same court that has produced Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia. And the last thing Democrats want to confront is an able conservative Hispanic nominated for the High Court by a Republican President.

Mr. Leahy's spokesman says Mr. Estrada's hearing is being delayed because of the judge's "rigid ideological background." But if that's true, why not hold a hearing and then have an up or down vote? Mr. Leahy answered this question himself some years ago when GOP Senators were holding up Clinton nominee Sonia Sotomayor.

"What they are saying is that they have a brilliant judge who also happens to be a woman and Hispanic, and they haven't the guts to stand up and argue publicly against her on the floor," Mr. Leahy told the New York Times at the time. "They just want to hide in their cloakrooms and do her in quietly." Ms. Sotomayor was later confirmed with little opposition, but Mr. Leahy must have secretly admired Republican tactics.

Meanwhile, the D.C. Circuit is the court that will hear a majority of the habeas corpus petitions resulting from the war on terrorism. It is now down to eight active judges, but needs 10 to carry its workload. Chief Judge Douglas Ginsberg wrote Mr. Leahy in August that if two new judges weren't confirmed by Sept. 30, "the court will likely find it necessary to delay until next term hearing cases that would otherwise be argued and decided this winter and spring."

Mr. Leahy has since done nothing to advance the nominations of either Mr. Estrada or John Roberts, another Bush nominee to the D.C. Circuit. Mr. Roberts, who is white, is enduring his own form of judicial profiling. Democrats don't want to be seen confirming a white judge ahead of an Hispanic one. So the entire D.C. Circuit suffers.

This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton all had at least 88% of their judicial nominees confirmed by the Senate. With only days to go before the Senate adjourns for the year, only 28% of George W. Bush's nominees have been confirmed.

In 1998, when there were even fewer vacancies, Mr. Leahy said that any week in which the Senate "does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." But now Mr. Leahy gets to screen the ethnicity and credentials of nominees, and on the evidence he'd rather keep a vital court understaffed than allow a qualified Hispanic on the bench.

EXCERPT

HUME: You've got a number of judicial nominees pending up there, and one that is of particular interest, is Miguel Estrada who, like you, is of Hispanic origin. This is a man who has quite a picturesque story. A Honduran immigrant, made it through Harvard, is very highly regarded by people who have served with him in the government. His nomination has yet to receive a hearing on Capitol Hill. What about that? What do you sense is going on there?

GONZALES: Well, we, of course, are a little bit disappointed at the pace of the confirmations within the judiciary committee. We don't believe that a sufficient number of the president's nominees have received a hearing. Miguel Estrada is a wonderfully qualified, gifted individual who was nominated by the president on May 9th, over six months ago, along with 11 other qualified nominees.

And, you know, again, we're disappointed at the pace. And we would urge the judiciary to focus more on judicial nominations. We understand there's a lot going on. Chairman Leahy has been distracted by other responsibilities, as chairman of the judiciary committee, but we would urge that he focus on the president's nominations, because we have too many vacancies that exist on the federal courts around this country. And it's very important that those vacancies be filled as quickly as possible.

HUME: I want to try the same question again on this matter. Do you not sense politics here? Last question.

GONZALES: Well, I guess one might say that there's politics in everything that goes on here in Washington. Obviously, again, I would just simply leave it on the basis that we would hope that the judiciary committee would do its job.

HUME: All right, Judge Al Gonzales, thanks very much for being with us. We have to take a quick break for other headlines. When we come back, find out where in the U.S. Santa Claus has become persona non grata. That story, after a break.

GOP Charges 'Profiling' of Hispanic Nominee

REV_00082680

By Audrey Hudson & Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Tuesday, November 29, 2001

Senate Republicans yesterday accused Democrats of "racial profiling" in holding up President Bush's nomination of a Hispanic candidate to a high-profile federal appeals court seat.

"Liberal Democrats don't want an Hispanic-American appointed to this significant court because they understand he could be one of the president's first nominees . . . on the U.S. Supreme Court," said Sen. Jon Kyl, Arizona Republican and a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "They are literally racially profiling this nomination."

Mr. Bush in May nominated Miguel Estrada, whom Hispanics view as a prime example of the American dream, to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The appeals court is one step below the Supreme Court. Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, said the profiling includes ideology.

"Democrats on the committee seem to love minorities, as long as they are liberal," Mr. Hatch said. "Miguel Estrada deserves to be on the court regardless of ideology."

The Democrat-led Judiciary Committee has yet to hold a hearing for Mr. Estrada, 40, who served four years in the Clinton administration as an assistant to the solicitor general.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, denied through a spokesman that he is blocking the Estrada nomination out of racial bias.

"Can you even ask that with a straight face?" Leahy spokesman David Carle said. "It's a ridiculous assertion."

Another senior Republican senator said privately that he believes Mr. Estrada is being held back because of race. And the Traditional Values Coalition in Washington has called on Mr. Leahy "to stop playing racial politics with this nomination."

The larger issue, Republicans say, is that Democrats have confirmed only 28 percent of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees this year, compared with 57 percent in the first year of the Clinton presidency and 62 percent in the first year of the elder President Bush's administration.

Mr. Carle said the committee has acted first on nominations "where there is consensus." Mr. Leahy said earlier through his spokesman that he was holding up the Estrada nomination because of Mr. Estrada's "rigid ideological background."

REV_00082681

Some Hispanics, who are being aggressively courted by both parties for the 2004 presidential race, scoff at the accusation that Mr. Estrada is not qualified.

"For Senator Leahy to call Miguel Estrada controversial is simply preposterous," said Robert Deposada, president of the Washington-based Latino Coalition. "The only controversy here is that Mr. Estrada is of Hispanic descent. We call on Senator Leahy to do what's fair and allow an up or down vote on this extremely qualified judicial nominee."

Mr. Estrada was born in Honduras and emigrated to the United States at age 17, speaking almost no English. He earned a degree from Harvard Law School and is a partner at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher in Washington.

Mr. Kyl said Mr. Bush "would like to be known as the president who appointed the first Hispanic to the Supreme Court."

"Mr. Estrada is eminently qualified for that position, and the liberal Democrats know that," Mr. Kyl said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat and a Judiciary Committee member, said Mr. Leahy's reputation for advancing minorities is beyond reproach.

"It's so preposterous to make that accusation against Senator Leahy, he doesn't deserve it," Mr. Kennedy said. "He has demonstrated over a very distinguished career that he is one of the leaders in knocking down the walls of discrimination."

Mr. Kennedy said there are "serious policy issues" with Mr. Estrada's nomination.

Mr. Bush submitted his first batch of judicial nominations May 9, when Republicans held the majority in the Senate by a single vote. But the following month, before the Republicans had acted on any judicial nominations, Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont threw control of the Senate to the Democrats by quitting the Republican Party to become an independent.

Since Democrats gained control, they have confirmed 18 of the 64 judicial candidates submitted by Mr.
Bush. Democrats say that's already better than the 15 judicial nominees approved in the first year of the elder Bush's presidency.

"We're actually going to be ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year, even though we only started in July," said Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat.

But the elder Mr. Bush submitted only 24 judicial nominations in his first year because there were fewer court vacancies.

Mr. Daschle said of Senate Republicans, "They're responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years."

Sen. Jeff Sessions, Alabama Republican and a member of the Judiciary Committee, said he does not think Mr. Estrada is a victim of racial bias but believes the Democrats are "deliberately going slower" on Bush nominations.

"We haven't even had hearings on some stellar nominees," Mr. Sessions said. "I think with the vacancy rate we've got, we've got to pick up the pace. Are the Bush nominees receiving the same treatment as the Clinton nominees? To date, they have not."

Republican leaders initially tried to block spending bills this fall to force Democrats to bring up more judicial nominations. But they abandoned the strategy when Mr. Daschle refused to be hurried.

Bush Throws Out Teamwork in New Judge Selection

By Joel Connelly
The Seattle Post-Intelligencer
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

The presence of a strong bench, filled with versatile people who can perform under pressure, is as vital in a U.S. Courthouse as it is down at Safeco Field.

Due to the position's importance, then, the three-way political struggle over filling the seat of retiring
Tacoma-based U.S. District Court Judge Robert Bryan has become as sensitive as a three-way baseball trade.

It also shows how the Bush administration is playing hardball while preaching harmony.

The White House legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, says President Bush will nominate a replacement for Bryan by January. Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., will block Senate action unless they get a voice in selecting the nominee. GOP Sen. Slade Gorton did the same thing with Bill Clinton in the White House. Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., the Bush administration's patronage overseer in the state, offered the senators half the membership on a bipartisan judicial screening commission.

But the offer was on the condition that Murray and Cantwell "agree in advance" to support Bush's nominee if it is a name recommended by the panel. It denied them any voice in picking nominees to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, in which Gorton was intimately involved.

Political infighting usually interests mainly political insiders.

But this scrap deserves a wider audience, precisely because we have had a talented bench.

Federal judges have helped shape life in the Northwest, from Indian fishing-rights cases to the ongoing debate over the legality of assisted suicide to the U.S. Forest Service's failure to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

The job requires no small amount of intellect, and not inconsiderable presence.

In the early 1980s, prosecutors brought bid-rigging charges against contractors who made a mint off the Washington Public Power Supply System's ill-fated nuclear program.

New York and Washington, D.C., defense lawyers descended on Helena, Mont., where the trial was moved due to WPPSS' bad image. "I once wrote a law review article on this issue of admissibility," one self-impressed barrister intoned.

"I taught this issue of admissibility in law school," U.S. District Judge Jack Coughenour coolly replied. Seeing Coughenour control the high-priced talent before him, in a long complex trial, reminded me of nothing so much as, when I was a kid, watching circus lion trainer Clyde Beatty.

The challenge to Washington's initiative imposing term limits for members of Congress found U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer presiding at a hearing that pitted one-time Attorney General Griffin Bell against former White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler. Dwyer's meticulous, witty ruling, tossing out the initiative, was reflected in a later majority opinion by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other judges have been more controversial. American Lawyer magazine once scored the courtroom
demeanor and rulings of U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner.

In 1997, with a Democratic administration, Gorton threatened to block nominees to the U.S. District Court and the 9th Circuit unless given "an equal voice" in picking judges.

Gorton insisted he was "trying to follow the Constitution" which provides for the Senate giving both advice and consent, saying: "It seems to me the people of the United States have called for cooperation, and we will end up having cooperation."

He got his wish. White House Counsel Charles Ruff paid a visit to Gorton's office, and worked out an agreement.

A bipartisan committee screened candidates for court vacancies. Gorton and Murray interviewed

finalists. They jointly recommended, Clinton nominated and the Senate confirmed U.S. District Court Judges Robert Lasnik and Marsha Pechman.

The Bush administration is taking a much harder line.

Last week, in an icy letter, Gonzales told the senators: "A bipartisan commission process is neither part of the constitutional design nor reflective of the traditional practice."

"It's interesting to hear a Republican White House undo everything Slade Gorton fought so hard to get,
assuring senators a meaningful role in this," Murray said yesterday.

The White House is also insisting on at least three candidates to fill Bryan's judgeship. "The president wants to make the choice," Dunn said.

Dunn has given the White House a list of four candidates. Bush intends to make a nomination, Gonzales informed the senators. "I think we are going to go ahead with the process," Dunn added.

The gesture may be meaningless. Democrats control the Senate, and Cantwell is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee that passes on judicial nominations.

"I want a process," Murray said. "I want us to work with the White House, but I am unwilling to hand them my vote. Unless there is cooperation I am not prepared to put their nominees in place."

Gorton said exactly the same thing. Cooperation yielded first-rate candidates, and Senate confirmation of Northwest judges followed while other nominations languished.

Yesterday, Murray and Cantwell asked for a meeting with Gonzales to try to work things out.

To the White House counsel goes this question: Is this an example of the new spirit of cooperation that candidate Bush promised he would bring to Washington?

Leahy's Jihad

By Greg Pierce
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

"Although most Republican lawmakers approve of Bush administration policies, they also believe the Justice Department's actions in the war on terrorism are a legitimate area for congressional oversight. However, the sheer number of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, plus the involvement of a coalition of liberal interest groups that attacked John Ashcroft at his confirmation hearings early this year, suggests, at least to the GOP, that Democrats are also interested in inflicting political damage on the attorney general," Byron York writes at www.nationalreview.com.

"Republicans believe committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy and other Democrats have chosen to concentrate their fire on Ashcroft as a way of scoring points against the Bush administration without appearing to attack the president, who enjoys high job-approval ratings. For example, Republicans point out that the issue of military tribunals was a Bush executive order that will be carried out by the Defense Department. Why not go after the White House instead of focusing on Ashcroft? . . . "Finally, some in the GOP believe another name for the flurry of Judiciary Committee activity might be 'What We're Doing Instead of Confirming Judges.' There has been little if any progress on the issue of judges since the failure of a GOP plan to block appropriations bills as a way of forcing Democrats to consider more of the president's judicial nominations. Now, with no pressure to act, Leahy is virtually ignoring the issue. Will Republicans renew a push for more confirmations before the end of the year? 'There's no point in it,' says one frustrated aide."

Leahy's Ethnic Bias

By Greg Pierce
The Washington Times
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

"It's too bad Miguel Estrada never thought of doing a reverse Geraldo Rivera (formerly Jerry) and renamed himself Mike Smith. He'd probably be sitting on the federal bench right now. But Mr. Estrada, who was one of President Bush's first judicial nominations, can't even get a hearing from Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy," the Wall Street Journal says.

"The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore
might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority of the U.S. Senate," the newspaper said in an editorial.

"This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton all had at least 85 percent of their judicial nominees confirmed by the Senate. With only days to go before the Senate adjourns for the year, only 28 percent of George W. Bush's nominees have been confirmed. "In 1998, when there were even fewer vacancies, Mr. Leahy said that any week in which the Senate 'does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis.' But now Mr. Leahy gets to screen the ethnicity and credentials of nominees, and on the evidence he'd rather keep a vital court understaffed than allow a qualified Hispanic on the bench."

Senator Pushes for Hearing on 10th Circuit Nominee from Wyoming

The Associated Press
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

U.S. Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo., has asked the Senate Judiciary Committee's chairman to schedule a hearing as soon as possible on the nomination of Terrence O'Brien of Gillette to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

O'Brien was nominated Aug. 2 to the appellate court, which covers Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah. He is one of four 10th Circuit nominees.

In a letter dated Tuesday to the committee chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., Thomas said time is running out for a hearing this year. Besides being important to Wyoming, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has a 33 percent vacancy rate, Thomas wrote.

O'Brien, a district judge in the 6th Judicial District Court of Wyoming from 1980 to 2000, is now a legal consultant to Kennecott Energy.

The committee has all the documents pertaining to O'Brien's nomination, Thomas wrote.

Op/Eds

Judicial Nominees Have Waited Long Enough, Senator

By Senators Hatch, Kyl, Thurmond, Brownback, Grassley, DeWine, Specter, McConnell & Sessions
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

The Nov. 26 letter to the editor from Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, "Judicial confirmations going faster than ever," compels a more complete and factual account of the current state of the judicial confirmation process.

Mr. Leahy seeks to rebut growing criticism that his Judiciary Committee is blocking qualified judicial nominees selected by President Bush. The criticism is warranted, and the issue is of extreme importance. The Senate's inexcusable inaction on dozens of qualified judicial nominees threatens to further clog already overburdened courtrooms, delay justice for millions of Americans and, even more alarming, make it harder for federal law enforcement officials to get judicial assistance in their efforts to track and monitor suspected terrorists and other criminals. In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy tries to use statistics and numbers to create the illusion that his committee is moving at a pace "faster" than the last two administrations on Senate judiciary nominees, but his arguments are misleading.

In fact, the first Bush administration saw 15 of its 24 first-year nominees confirmed by the Senate - a 62 percent confirmation rate. Similarly, in his first year, President Clinton had 27 of his 47 nominees confirmed - a 57 percent rate.

Today, with the Senate nearing completion of its business for the year, the president has had just 18 of his 64 nominees confirmed by the Senate - or just 28 percent.

Mr. Leahy seeks to justify his inaction on the grounds that some nominees have only recently been ready for Senate action. That is no excuse for not acting on all of those candidates nominated before August. As to those pre-August nominees, the Senate's performance has been downright disgraceful, particularly when comparing the president's nominees to those of his last three predecessors. With only one exception, 100 percent of the pre-August nominees of Presidents Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Clinton were confirmed in their first year of office. By contrast, the Senate has managed to confirm an anemic 40 percent of George W. Bush's pre-August nominees, with the Senate only a couple of weeks away from its recess.

Mr. Leahy was not nearly so patient when the nominees were liberal Democrats and the Senate was under Republican control. At that time, Mr. Leahy urged us to redouble our efforts to fill "an alarming vacancy rate" on the federal courts - nearly 70 seats. Today the vacancies exceed 100.

Again, when Republicans controlled the Senate, Mr. Leahy remarked that "every week in which the Senate does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." Yet at the current confirmation pace controlled by Mr. Leahy, this Senate has confirmed an average of only three judges a month. The Judiciary Committee is moving at a tortoise's pace, especially regarding circuit court nominees: Just five have been confirmed all year. (Judicial nominees are not the only ones suffering from these dilatory tactics; to date, the president's entire Cabinet is still not in place because the Senate has yet to confirm John Walters as the national drug czar.)

The fact that many nominees have not been confirmed is not an accident. Liberal Democrats simply don't want judges with whom they disagree seated on the federal courts. There is no other explanation for the Judiciary Committee's failure to hold a hearing on more than two-thirds of the first 11 persons nominated by the president - back in early May. The Judiciary Committee stalls, even though the American Bar Association has rated a number of the nominees "well-qualified" to serve on the federal bench.

In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy wrote that he and his committee are striving for "bipartisanship." In Washington, this term is wielded more often than it is applied. How can it be bipartisan for the majority to refuse even to hold hearings on qualified candidates nominated by the president in

Per discussion at staff meeting today, the House terrorism insurance bill passed this afternoon with the 5 very good liability provisions intact (including the limit on attorney's fees). The key procedural vote that allowed the bill to be considered was 220-204, almost strictly partisan. The final vote on the bill was 227-193 with a handful of D's crossing over and voting yes and a handful of R's crossing over and voting no.

The Wall Street Journal
Tuesday, November 27, 2001

It's too bad Miguel Estrada never thought of doing a reverse Geraldo Rivera (formerly Rivers) and renamed himself Mike Smith. He'd probably be sitting on the federal bench right now. But Mr. Estrada, who was one of President Bush's first judicial nominations, can't even get a hearing from Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy.

The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority in the U.S. Senate.

The 40-year-old Mr. Estrada is an American success story, a Honduran immigrant who taught himself English and went on to Harvard Law, where he was editor of the law review. He clerked for Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy and worked as a deputy in Bill Clinton's Justice Department, where he argued cases before the Supreme Court. Seth Waxman, Mr. Clinton's Solicitor General, has only the highest praise for him.

But in Pat Leahy's Senate, such credentials are a liability. They're so sterling they'd make it impossible for Senate Democrats to stand up and oppose Mr. Estrada if he ever did get a hearing. And that would mean confirming him to a seat on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, the same court that has produced Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia. And the last thing Democrats want to confront is an able conservative Hispanic nominated for the High Court by a Republican President.

Mr. Leahy's spokesman says Mr. Estrada's hearing is being delayed because of the judge's "rigid ideological background." But if that's true, why not hold a hearing and then have an up or down vote? Mr. Leahy answered this question himself some years ago when GOP Senators were holding up Clinton nominee Sonia Sotomayor.

"What they are saying is that they have a brilliant judge who also happens to be a woman and Hispanic, and they haven't the guts to stand up and argue publicly against her on the floor," Mr. Leahy told the New York Times at the time. "They just want to hide in their cloakrooms and do her in quietly." Ms. Sotomayor was later confirmed with little opposition, but Mr. Leahy must have secretly admired Republican tactics.

Meanwhile, the D.C. Circuit is the court that will hear a majority of the habeas corpus petitions resulting from the war on terrorism. It is now down to eight active judges, but needs 10 to carry its workload. Chief Judge Douglas Ginsberg wrote Mr. Leahy in August that if two new judges weren't confirmed by Sept. 30, "the court will likely find it necessary to delay until next term hearing cases that would otherwise be argued and decided this winter and spring."

Mr. Leahy has since done nothing to advance the nominations of either Mr. Estrada or John Roberts, another Bush nominee to the D.C. Circuit. Mr. Roberts, who is white, is enduring his own form of judicial profiling. Democrats don't want to be seen confirming a white judge ahead of an Hispanic one. So the entire D.C. Circuit suffers.

This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton all had at least 88% of their judicial nominees confirmed by the Senate. With only days to go before the Senate adjourns for the year, only 28% of George W. Bush's nominees have been confirmed.

In 1998, when there were even fewer vacancies, Mr. Leahy said that any week in which the Senate "does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." But now Mr. Leahy gets to screen the ethnicity and credentials of nominees, and on the evidence he'd rather keep a vital court understaffed than allow a qualified Hispanic on the bench.

EXCERPT

HUME: You've got a number of judicial nominees pending up there, and one that is of particular interest, is Miguel Estrada who, like you, is of Hispanic origin. This is a man who has quite a picturesque story. A Honduran immigrant, made it through Harvard, is very highly regarded by people who have served with him in the government. His nomination has yet to receive a hearing on Capitol Hill. What about that? What do you sense is going on there?

GONZALES: Well, we, of course, are a little bit disappointed at the pace of the confirmations within the judiciary committee. We don't believe that a sufficient number of the president's nominees have received a hearing. Miguel Estrada is a wonderfully qualified, gifted individual who was nominated by the president on May 9th, over six months ago, along with 11 other qualified nominees.

And, you know, again, we're disappointed at the pace. And we would urge the judiciary to focus more on judicial nominations. We understand there's a lot going on. Chairman Leahy has been distracted by other responsibilities, as chairman of the judiciary committee, but we would urge that he focus on the president's nominations, because we have too many vacancies that exist on the federal courts around this country. And it's very important that those vacancies be filled as quickly as possible.

HUME: I want to try the same question again on this matter. Do you not sense politics here? Last question.

GONZALES: Well, I guess one might say that there's politics in everything that goes on here in Washington. Obviously, again, I would just simply leave it on the basis that we would hope that the judiciary committee would do its job.

HUME: All right, Judge Al Gonzales, thanks very much for being with us. We have to take a quick break for other headlines. When we come back, find out where in the U.S. Santa Claus has become persona non grata. That story, after a break.

GOP Charges 'Profiling' of Hispanic Nominee

REV_00082769

By Audrey Hudson & Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Tuesday, November 29, 2001

Senate Republicans yesterday accused Democrats of "racial profiling" in holding up President Bush's nomination of a Hispanic candidate to a high-profile federal appeals court seat.

"Liberal Democrats don't want an Hispanic-American appointed to this significant court because they understand he could be one of the president's first nominees . . . on the U.S. Supreme Court," said Sen. Jon Kyl, Arizona Republican and a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "They are literally racially profiling this nomination."

Mr. Bush in May nominated Miguel Estrada, whom Hispanics view as a prime example of the American dream, to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The appeals court is one step below the Supreme Court. Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, said the profiling includes ideology.

"Democrats on the committee seem to love minorities, as long as they are liberal," Mr. Hatch said. "Miguel Estrada deserves to be on the court regardless of ideology."

The Democrat-led Judiciary Committee has yet to hold a hearing for Mr. Estrada, 40, who served four years in the Clinton administration as an assistant to the solicitor general.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, denied through a spokesman that he is blocking the Estrada nomination out of racial bias.

"Can you even ask that with a straight face?" Leahy spokesman David Carle said. "It's a ridiculous assertion."

Another senior Republican senator said privately that he believes Mr. Estrada is being held back because of race. And the Traditional Values Coalition in Washington has called on Mr. Leahy "to stop playing racial politics with this nomination."

The larger issue, Republicans say, is that Democrats have confirmed only 28 percent of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees this year, compared with 57 percent in the first year of the Clinton presidency and 62 percent in the first year of the elder President Bush's administration.

Mr. Carle said the committee has acted first on nominations "where there is consensus." Mr. Leahy said earlier through his spokesman that he was holding up the Estrada nomination because of Mr. Estrada's "rigid ideological background."

REV_00082770

Some Hispanics, who are being aggressively courted by both parties for the 2004 presidential race, scoff at the accusation that Mr. Estrada is not qualified.

"For Senator Leahy to call Miguel Estrada controversial is simply preposterous," said Robert Deposada, president of the Washington-based Latino Coalition. "The only controversy here is that Mr. Estrada is of Hispanic descent. We call on Senator Leahy to do what's fair and allow an up or down vote on this extremely qualified judicial nominee."

Mr. Estrada was born in Honduras and emigrated to the United States at age 17, speaking almost no English. He earned a degree from Harvard Law School and is a partner at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher in Washington.

Mr. Kyl said Mr. Bush "would like to be known as the president who appointed the first Hispanic to the Supreme Court."

"Mr. Estrada is eminently qualified for that position, and the liberal Democrats know that," Mr. Kyl said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat and a Judiciary Committee member, said Mr. Leahy's reputation for advancing minorities is beyond reproach.

"It's so preposterous to make that accusation against Senator Leahy, he doesn't deserve it," Mr. Kennedy said. "He has demonstrated over a very distinguished career that he is one of the leaders in knocking down the walls of discrimination."

Mr. Kennedy said there are "serious policy issues" with Mr. Estrada's nomination.

Mr. Bush submitted his first batch of judicial nominations May 9, when Republicans held the majority in the Senate by a single vote. But the following month, before the Republicans had acted on any judicial nominations, Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont threw control of the Senate to the Democrats by quitting the Republican Party to become an independent.

Since Democrats gained control, they have confirmed 18 of the 64 judicial candidates submitted by Mr.
Bush. Democrats say that's already better than the 15 judicial nominees approved in the first year of the elder Bush's presidency.

"We're actually going to be ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year, even though we only started in July," said Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat.

But the elder Mr. Bush submitted only 24 judicial nominations in his first year because there were fewer court vacancies.

Mr. Daschle said of Senate Republicans, "They're responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years."

Sen. Jeff Sessions, Alabama Republican and a member of the Judiciary Committee, said he does not think Mr. Estrada is a victim of racial bias but believes the Democrats are "deliberately going slower" on Bush nominations.

"We haven't even had hearings on some stellar nominees," Mr. Sessions said. "I think with the vacancy rate we've got, we've got to pick up the pace. Are the Bush nominees receiving the same treatment as the Clinton nominees? To date, they have not."

Republican leaders initially tried to block spending bills this fall to force Democrats to bring up more judicial nominations. But they abandoned the strategy when Mr. Daschle refused to be hurried.

Bush Throws Out Teamwork in New Judge Selection

By Joel Connelly
The Seattle Post-Intelligencer
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

The presence of a strong bench, filled with versatile people who can perform under pressure, is as vital in a U.S. Courthouse as it is down at Safeco Field.

Due to the position's importance, then, the three-way political struggle over filling the seat of retiring
Tacoma-based U.S. District Court Judge Robert Bryan has become as sensitive as a three-way baseball trade.

It also shows how the Bush administration is playing hardball while preaching harmony.

The White House legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, says President Bush will nominate a replacement for Bryan by January. Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., will block Senate action unless they get a voice in selecting the nominee. GOP Sen. Slade Gorton did the same thing with Bill Clinton in the White House. Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., the Bush administration's patronage overseer in the state, offered the senators half the membership on a bipartisan judicial screening commission.

But the offer was on the condition that Murray and Cantwell "agree in advance" to support Bush's nominee if it is a name recommended by the panel. It denied them any voice in picking nominees to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, in which Gorton was intimately involved.

Political infighting usually interests mainly political insiders.

But this scrap deserves a wider audience, precisely because we have had a talented bench.

Federal judges have helped shape life in the Northwest, from Indian fishing-rights cases to the ongoing debate over the legality of assisted suicide to the U.S. Forest Service's failure to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

The job requires no small amount of intellect, and not inconsiderable presence.

In the early 1980s, prosecutors brought bid-rigging charges against contractors who made a mint off the Washington Public Power Supply System's ill-fated nuclear program.

New York and Washington, D.C., defense lawyers descended on Helena, Mont., where the trial was moved due to WPPSS' bad image. "I once wrote a law review article on this issue of admissibility," one self-impressed barrister intoned.

"I taught this issue of admissibility in law school," U.S. District Judge Jack Coughenour coolly replied. Seeing Coughenour control the high-priced talent before him, in a long complex trial, reminded me of nothing so much as, when I was a kid, watching circus lion trainer Clyde Beatty.

The challenge to Washington's initiative imposing term limits for members of Congress found U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer presiding at a hearing that pitted one-time Attorney General Griffin Bell against former White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler. Dwyer's meticulous, witty ruling, tossing out the initiative, was reflected in a later majority opinion by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other judges have been more controversial. American Lawyer magazine once scored the courtroom
demeanor and rulings of U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner.

In 1997, with a Democratic administration, Gorton threatened to block nominees to the U.S. District Court and the 9th Circuit unless given "an equal voice" in picking judges.

Gorton insisted he was "trying to follow the Constitution" which provides for the Senate giving both advice and consent, saying: "It seems to me the people of the United States have called for cooperation, and we will end up having cooperation."

He got his wish. White House Counsel Charles Ruff paid a visit to Gorton's office, and worked out an agreement.

A bipartisan committee screened candidates for court vacancies. Gorton and Murray interviewed

finalists. They jointly recommended, Clinton nominated and the Senate confirmed U.S. District Court Judges Robert Lasnik and Marsha Pechman.

The Bush administration is taking a much harder line.

Last week, in an icy letter, Gonzales told the senators: "A bipartisan commission process is neither part of the constitutional design nor reflective of the traditional practice."

"It's interesting to hear a Republican White House undo everything Slade Gorton fought so hard to get,
assuring senators a meaningful role in this," Murray said yesterday.

The White House is also insisting on at least three candidates to fill Bryan's judgeship. "The president wants to make the choice," Dunn said.

Dunn has given the White House a list of four candidates. Bush intends to make a nomination, Gonzales informed the senators. "I think we are going to go ahead with the process," Dunn added.

The gesture may be meaningless. Democrats control the Senate, and Cantwell is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee that passes on judicial nominations.

"I want a process," Murray said. "I want us to work with the White House, but I am unwilling to hand them my vote. Unless there is cooperation I am not prepared to put their nominees in place."

Gorton said exactly the same thing. Cooperation yielded first-rate candidates, and Senate confirmation of Northwest judges followed while other nominations languished.

Yesterday, Murray and Cantwell asked for a meeting with Gonzales to try to work things out.

To the White House counsel goes this question: Is this an example of the new spirit of cooperation that candidate Bush promised he would bring to Washington?

Leahy's Jihad

By Greg Pierce
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

"Although most Republican lawmakers approve of Bush administration policies, they also believe the Justice Department's actions in the war on terrorism are a legitimate area for congressional oversight. However, the sheer number of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, plus the involvement of a coalition of liberal interest groups that attacked John Ashcroft at his confirmation hearings early this year, suggests, at least to the GOP, that Democrats are also interested in inflicting political damage on the attorney general," Byron York writes at www.nationalreview.com.

"Republicans believe committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy and other Democrats have chosen to concentrate their fire on Ashcroft as a way of scoring points against the Bush administration without appearing to attack the president, who enjoys high job-approval ratings. For example, Republicans point out that the issue of military tribunals was a Bush executive order that will be carried out by the Defense Department. Why not go after the White House instead of focusing on Ashcroft? . . . "Finally, some in the GOP believe another name for the flurry of Judiciary Committee activity might be 'What We're Doing Instead of Confirming Judges.' There has been little if any progress on the issue of judges since the failure of a GOP plan to block appropriations bills as a way of forcing Democrats to consider more of the president's judicial nominations. Now, with no pressure to act, Leahy is virtually ignoring the issue. Will Republicans renew a push for more confirmations before the end of the year? 'There's no point in it,' says one frustrated aide."

Leahy's Ethnic Bias

"The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority of the U.S. Senate," the newspaper said in an editorial.

Senator Pushes for Hearing on 10th Circuit Nominee from Wyoming

The Associated Press
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

U.S. Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo., has asked the Senate Judiciary Committee's chairman to schedule a hearing as soon as possible on the nomination of Terrence O'Brien of Gillette to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

O'Brien was nominated Aug. 2 to the appellate court, which covers Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah. He is one of four 10th Circuit nominees.

In a letter dated Tuesday to the committee chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., Thomas said time is running out for a hearing this year. Besides being important to Wyoming, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has a 33 percent vacancy rate, Thomas wrote.

O'Brien, a district judge in the 6th Judicial District Court of Wyoming from 1980 to 2000, is now a legal consultant to Kennecott Energy.

The committee has all the documents pertaining to O'Brien's nomination, Thomas wrote.

Judicial Nominees Have Waited Long Enough, Senator

By Senators Hatch, Kyl, Thurmond, Brownback, Grassley, DeWine, Specter, McConnell & Sessions
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

The Nov. 26 letter to the editor from Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, "Judicial confirmations going faster than ever," compels a more complete and factual account of the current state of the judicial confirmation process.

Mr. Leahy seeks to rebut growing criticism that his Judiciary Committee is blocking qualified judicial nominees selected by President Bush. The criticism is warranted, and the issue is of extreme importance. The Senate's inexcusable inaction on dozens of qualified judicial nominees threatens to further clog already overburdened courtrooms, delay justice for millions of Americans and, even more alarming, make it harder for federal law enforcement officials to get judicial assistance in their efforts to track and monitor suspected terrorists and other criminals. In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy tries to use statistics and numbers to create the illusion that his committee is moving at a pace "faster" than the last two administrations on Senate judiciary nominees, but his arguments are misleading.

In fact, the first Bush administration saw 15 of its 24 first-year nominees confirmed by the Senate - a 62 percent confirmation rate. Similarly, in his first year, President Clinton had 27 of his 47 nominees confirmed - a 57 percent rate.

Today, with the Senate nearing completion of its business for the year, the president has had just 18 of his 64 nominees confirmed by the Senate - or just 28 percent.

Mr. Leahy seeks to justify his inaction on the grounds that some nominees have only recently been ready for Senate action. That is no excuse for not acting on all of those candidates nominated before August. As to those pre-August nominees, the Senate's performance has been downright disgraceful, particularly when comparing the president's nominees to those of his last three predecessors. With only one exception, 100 percent of the pre-August nominees of Presidents Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Clinton were confirmed in their first year of office. By contrast, the Senate has managed to confirm an anemic 40 percent of George W. Bush's pre-August nominees, with the Senate only a couple of weeks away from its recess.

Mr. Leahy was not nearly so patient when the nominees were liberal Democrats and the Senate was under Republican control. At that time, Mr. Leahy urged us to redouble our efforts to fill "an alarming vacancy rate" on the federal courts - nearly 70 seats. Today the vacancies exceed 100.

Again, when Republicans controlled the Senate, Mr. Leahy remarked that "every week in which the Senate does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." Yet at the current confirmation pace controlled by Mr. Leahy, this Senate has confirmed an average of only three judges a month. The Judiciary Committee is moving at a tortoise's pace, especially regarding circuit court nominees: Just five have been confirmed all year. (Judicial nominees are not the only ones suffering from these dilatory tactics; to date, the president's entire Cabinet is still not in place because the Senate has yet to confirm John Walters as the national drug czar.)

The fact that many nominees have not been confirmed is not an accident. Liberal Democrats simply don't want judges with whom they disagree seated on the federal courts. There is no other explanation for the Judiciary Committee's failure to hold a hearing on more than two-thirds of the first 11 persons nominated by the president - back in early May. The Judiciary Committee stalls, even though the American Bar Association has rated a number of the nominees "well-qualified" to serve on the federal bench.

In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy wrote that he and his committee are striving for "bipartisanship." In Washington, this term is wielded more often than it is applied. How can it be bipartisan for the majority to refuse even to hold hearings on qualified candidates nominated by the president in

Judicial Profiling

The Wall Street Journal
Tuesday, November 27, 2001

It's too bad Miguel Estrada never thought of doing a reverse Geraldo Rivera (formerly Rivers) and renamed himself Mike Smith. He'd probably be sitting on the federal bench right now. But Mr. Estrada, who was one of President Bush's first judicial nominations, can't even get a hearing from Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy.

The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority in the U.S. Senate.

The 40-year-old Mr. Estrada is an American success story, a Honduran immigrant who taught himself English and went on to Harvard Law, where he was editor of the law review. He clerked for Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy and worked as a deputy in Bill Clinton's Justice Department, where he argued cases before the Supreme Court. Seth Waxman, Mr. Clinton's Solicitor General, has only the highest praise for him.

But in Pat Leahy's Senate, such credentials are a liability. They're so sterling they'd make it impossible for Senate Democrats to stand up and oppose Mr. Estrada if he ever did get a hearing. And that would mean confirming him to a seat on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, the same court that has produced Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia. And the last thing Democrats want to confront is an able conservative Hispanic nominated for the High Court by a Republican President.

Mr. Leahy's spokesman says Mr. Estrada's hearing is being delayed because of the judge's "rigid ideological background." But if that's true, why not hold a hearing and then have an up or down vote? Mr. Leahy answered this question himself some years ago when GOP Senators were holding up Clinton nominee Sonia Sotomayor.

"What they are saying is that they have a brilliant judge who also happens to be a woman and Hispanic, and they haven't the guts to stand up and argue publicly against her on the floor," Mr. Leahy told the New York Times at the time. "They just want to hide in their cloakrooms and do her in quietly." Ms. Sotomayor was later confirmed with little opposition, but Mr. Leahy must have secretly admired Republican tactics.

Meanwhile, the D.C. Circuit is the court that will hear a majority of the habeas corpus petitions resulting from the war on terrorism. It is now down to eight active judges, but needs 10 to carry its workload. Chief Judge Douglas Ginsberg wrote Mr. Leahy in August that if two new judges weren't confirmed by Sept. 30, "the court will likely find it necessary to delay until next term hearing cases that would otherwise be argued and decided this winter and spring."

Mr. Leahy has since done nothing to advance the nominations of either Mr. Estrada or John Roberts, another Bush nominee to the D.C. Circuit. Mr. Roberts, who is white, is enduring his own form of judicial profiling. Democrats don't want to be seen confirming a white judge ahead of an Hispanic one. So the entire D.C. Circuit suffers.

This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton all had at least 88% of their judicial nominees confirmed by the Senate. With only days to go before the Senate adjourns for the year, only 28% of George W. Bush's nominees have been confirmed.

In 1998, when there were even fewer vacancies, Mr. Leahy said that any week in which the Senate "does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." But now Mr. Leahy gets to screen the ethnicity and credentials of nominees, and on the evidence he'd rather keep a vital court understaffed than allow a qualified Hispanic on the bench.

EXCERPT

HUME: You've got a number of judicial nominees pending up there, and one that is of particular interest, is Miguel Estrada who, like you, is of Hispanic origin. This is a man who has quite a picturesque story. A Honduran immigrant, made it through Harvard, is very highly regarded by people who have served with him in the government. His nomination has yet to receive a hearing on Capitol Hill. What about that? What do you sense is going on there?

GONZALES: Well, we, of course, are a little bit disappointed at the pace of the confirmations within the judiciary committee. We don't believe that a sufficient number of the president's nominees have received a hearing. Miguel Estrada is a wonderfully qualified, gifted individual who was nominated by the president on May 9th, over six months ago, along with 11 other qualified nominees.

And, you know, again, we're disappointed at the pace. And we would urge the judiciary to focus more on judicial nominations. We understand there's a lot going on. Chairman Leahy has been distracted by other responsibilities, as chairman of the judiciary committee, but we would urge that he focus on the president's nominations, because we have too many vacancies that exist on the federal courts around this country. And it's very important that those vacancies be filled as quickly as possible.

HUME: I want to try the same question again on this matter. Do you not sense politics here? Last question.

GONZALES: Well, I guess one might say that there's politics in everything that goes on here in Washington. Obviously, again, I would just simply leave it on the basis that we would hope that the judiciary committee would do its job.

HUME: All right, Judge Al Gonzales, thanks very much for being with us. We have to take a quick break for other headlines. When we come back, find out where in the U.S. Santa Claus has become persona non grata. That story, after a break.

GOP Charges 'Profiling' of Hispanic Nominee

REV_00082783

By Audrey Hudson & Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Tuesday, November 29, 2001

Senate Republicans yesterday accused Democrats of "racial profiling" in holding up President Bush's nomination of a Hispanic candidate to a high-profile federal appeals court seat.

"Liberal Democrats don't want an Hispanic-American appointed to this significant court because they understand he could be one of the president's first nominees . . . on the U.S. Supreme Court," said Sen. Jon Kyl, Arizona Republican and a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "They are literally racially profiling this nomination."

Mr. Bush in May nominated Miguel Estrada, whom Hispanics view as a prime example of the American dream, to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The appeals court is one step below the Supreme Court. Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, said the profiling includes ideology.

"Democrats on the committee seem to love minorities, as long as they are liberal," Mr. Hatch said. "Miguel Estrada deserves to be on the court regardless of ideology."

The Democrat-led Judiciary Committee has yet to hold a hearing for Mr. Estrada, 40, who served four years in the Clinton administration as an assistant to the solicitor general.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, denied through a spokesman that he is blocking the Estrada nomination out of racial bias.

"Can you even ask that with a straight face?" Leahy spokesman David Carle said. "It's a ridiculous assertion."

Another senior Republican senator said privately that he believes Mr. Estrada is being held back because of race. And the Traditional Values Coalition in Washington has called on Mr. Leahy "to stop playing racial politics with this nomination."

The larger issue, Republicans say, is that Democrats have confirmed only 28 percent of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees this year, compared with 57 percent in the first year of the Clinton presidency and 62 percent in the first year of the elder President Bush's administration.

Mr. Carle said the committee has acted first on nominations "where there is consensus." Mr. Leahy said earlier through his spokesman that he was holding up the Estrada nomination because of Mr. Estrada's "rigid ideological background."

REV_00082784

Some Hispanics, who are being aggressively courted by both parties for the 2004 presidential race, scoff at the accusation that Mr. Estrada is not qualified.

"For Senator Leahy to call Miguel Estrada controversial is simply preposterous," said Robert Deposada, president of the Washington-based Latino Coalition. "The only controversy here is that Mr. Estrada is of Hispanic descent. We call on Senator Leahy to do what's fair and allow an up or down vote on this extremely qualified judicial nominee."

Mr. Estrada was born in Honduras and emigrated to the United States at age 17, speaking almost no English. He earned a degree from Harvard Law School and is a partner at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher in Washington.

Mr. Kyl said Mr. Bush "would like to be known as the president who appointed the first Hispanic to the Supreme Court."

"Mr. Estrada is eminently qualified for that position, and the liberal Democrats know that," Mr. Kyl said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat and a Judiciary Committee member, said Mr. Leahy's reputation for advancing minorities is beyond reproach.

"It's so preposterous to make that accusation against Senator Leahy, he doesn't deserve it," Mr. Kennedy said. "He has demonstrated over a very distinguished career that he is one of the leaders in knocking down the walls of discrimination."

Mr. Kennedy said there are "serious policy issues" with Mr. Estrada's nomination.

Mr. Bush submitted his first batch of judicial nominations May 9, when Republicans held the majority in the Senate by a single vote. But the following month, before the Republicans had acted on any judicial nominations, Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont threw control of the Senate to the Democrats by quitting the Republican Party to become an independent.

Since Democrats gained control, they have confirmed 18 of the 64 judicial candidates submitted by Mr.
Bush. Democrats say that's already better than the 15 judicial nominees approved in the first year of the elder Bush's presidency.

"We're actually going to be ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year, even though we only started in July," said Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat.

But the elder Mr. Bush submitted only 24 judicial nominations in his first year because there were fewer court vacancies.

Mr. Daschle said of Senate Republicans, "They're responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years."

Sen. Jeff Sessions, Alabama Republican and a member of the Judiciary Committee, said he does not think Mr. Estrada is a victim of racial bias but believes the Democrats are "deliberately going slower" on Bush nominations.

"We haven't even had hearings on some stellar nominees," Mr. Sessions said. "I think with the vacancy rate we've got, we've got to pick up the pace. Are the Bush nominees receiving the same treatment as the Clinton nominees? To date, they have not."

Republican leaders initially tried to block spending bills this fall to force Democrats to bring up more judicial nominations. But they abandoned the strategy when Mr. Daschle refused to be hurried.

Bush Throws Out Teamwork in New Judge Selection

By Joel Connelly
The Seattle Post-Intelligencer
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

The presence of a strong bench, filled with versatile people who can perform under pressure, is as vital in a U.S. Courthouse as it is down at Safeco Field.

Due to the position's importance, then, the three-way political struggle over filling the seat of retiring
Tacoma-based U.S. District Court Judge Robert Bryan has become as sensitive as a three-way baseball trade.

It also shows how the Bush administration is playing hardball while preaching harmony.

The White House legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, says President Bush will nominate a replacement for Bryan by January. Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., will block Senate action unless they get a voice in selecting the nominee. GOP Sen. Slade Gorton did the same thing with Bill Clinton in the White House. Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., the Bush administration's patronage overseer in the state, offered the senators half the membership on a bipartisan judicial screening commission.

But the offer was on the condition that Murray and Cantwell "agree in advance" to support Bush's nominee if it is a name recommended by the panel. It denied them any voice in picking nominees to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, in which Gorton was intimately involved.

Political infighting usually interests mainly political insiders.

But this scrap deserves a wider audience, precisely because we have had a talented bench.

Federal judges have helped shape life in the Northwest, from Indian fishing-rights cases to the ongoing debate over the legality of assisted suicide to the U.S. Forest Service's failure to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

The job requires no small amount of intellect, and not inconsiderable presence.

In the early 1980s, prosecutors brought bid-rigging charges against contractors who made a mint off the Washington Public Power Supply System's ill-fated nuclear program.

New York and Washington, D.C., defense lawyers descended on Helena, Mont., where the trial was moved due to WPPSS' bad image. "I once wrote a law review article on this issue of admissibility," one self-impressed barrister intoned.

"I taught this issue of admissibility in law school," U.S. District Judge Jack Coughenour coolly replied. Seeing Coughenour control the high-priced talent before him, in a long complex trial, reminded me of nothing so much as, when I was a kid, watching circus lion trainer Clyde Beatty.

The challenge to Washington's initiative imposing term limits for members of Congress found U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer presiding at a hearing that pitted one-time Attorney General Griffin Bell against former White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler. Dwyer's meticulous, witty ruling, tossing out the initiative, was reflected in a later majority opinion by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other judges have been more controversial. American Lawyer magazine once scored the courtroom
demeanor and rulings of U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner.

In 1997, with a Democratic administration, Gorton threatened to block nominees to the U.S. District Court and the 9th Circuit unless given "an equal voice" in picking judges.

Gorton insisted he was "trying to follow the Constitution" which provides for the Senate giving both advice and consent, saying: "It seems to me the people of the United States have called for cooperation, and we will end up having cooperation."

He got his wish. White House Counsel Charles Ruff paid a visit to Gorton's office, and worked out an agreement.

A bipartisan committee screened candidates for court vacancies. Gorton and Murray interviewed

finalists. They jointly recommended, Clinton nominated and the Senate confirmed U.S. District Court Judges Robert Lasnik and Marsha Pechman.

The Bush administration is taking a much harder line.

Last week, in an icy letter, Gonzales told the senators: "A bipartisan commission process is neither part of the constitutional design nor reflective of the traditional practice."

"It's interesting to hear a Republican White House undo everything Slade Gorton fought so hard to get,
assuring senators a meaningful role in this," Murray said yesterday.

The White House is also insisting on at least three candidates to fill Bryan's judgeship. "The president wants to make the choice," Dunn said.

Dunn has given the White House a list of four candidates. Bush intends to make a nomination, Gonzales informed the senators. "I think we are going to go ahead with the process," Dunn added.

The gesture may be meaningless. Democrats control the Senate, and Cantwell is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee that passes on judicial nominations.

"I want a process," Murray said. "I want us to work with the White House, but I am unwilling to hand them my vote. Unless there is cooperation I am not prepared to put their nominees in place."

Gorton said exactly the same thing. Cooperation yielded first-rate candidates, and Senate confirmation of Northwest judges followed while other nominations languished.

Yesterday, Murray and Cantwell asked for a meeting with Gonzales to try to work things out.

To the White House counsel goes this question: Is this an example of the new spirit of cooperation that candidate Bush promised he would bring to Washington?

Leahy's Jihad

By Greg Pierce
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

"Although most Republican lawmakers approve of Bush administration policies, they also believe the Justice Department's actions in the war on terrorism are a legitimate area for congressional oversight. However, the sheer number of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, plus the involvement of a coalition of liberal interest groups that attacked John Ashcroft at his confirmation hearings early this year, suggests, at least to the GOP, that Democrats are also interested in inflicting political damage on the attorney general," Byron York writes at www.nationalreview.com.

"Republicans believe committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy and other Democrats have chosen to concentrate their fire on Ashcroft as a way of scoring points against the Bush administration without appearing to attack the president, who enjoys high job-approval ratings. For example, Republicans point out that the issue of military tribunals was a Bush executive order that will be carried out by the Defense Department. Why not go after the White House instead of focusing on Ashcroft? . . . "Finally, some in the GOP believe another name for the flurry of Judiciary Committee activity might be 'What We're Doing Instead of Confirming Judges.' There has been little if any progress on the issue of judges since the failure of a GOP plan to block appropriations bills as a way of forcing Democrats to consider more of the president's judicial nominations. Now, with no pressure to act, Leahy is virtually ignoring the issue. Will Republicans renew a push for more confirmations before the end of the year? 'There's no point in it,' says one frustrated aide."

Leahy's Ethnic Bias

By Greg Pierce

"The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His

Senator Pushes for Hearing on 10th Circuit Nominee from Wyoming

The Associated Press
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

U.S. Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo., has asked the Senate Judiciary Committee's chairman to schedule a hearing as soon as possible on the nomination of Terrence O'Brien of Gillette to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

O'Brien was nominated Aug. 2 to the appellate court, which covers Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah. He is one of four 10th Circuit nominees.

In a letter dated Tuesday to the committee chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., Thomas said time is running out for a hearing this year. Besides being important to Wyoming, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has a 33 percent vacancy rate, Thomas wrote.

O'Brien, a district judge in the 6th Judicial District Court of Wyoming from 1980 to 2000, is now a legal consultant to Kennecott Energy.

The committee has all the documents pertaining to O'Brien's nomination, Thomas wrote.

Judicial Nominees Have Waited Long Enough, Senator

By Senators Hatch, Kyl, Thurmond, Brownback, Grassley, DeWine, Specter, McConnell & Sessions
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

The Nov. 26 letter to the editor from Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, "Judicial confirmations going faster than ever," compels a more complete and factual account of the current state of the judicial confirmation process.

Mr. Leahy seeks to rebut growing criticism that his Judiciary Committee is blocking qualified judicial nominees selected by President Bush. The criticism is warranted, and the issue is of extreme importance. The Senate's inexcusable inaction on dozens of qualified judicial nominees threatens to further clog already overburdened courtrooms, delay justice for millions of Americans and, even more alarming, make it harder for federal law enforcement officials to get judicial assistance in their efforts to track and monitor suspected terrorists and other criminals. In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy tries to use statistics and numbers to create the illusion that his committee is moving at a pace "faster" than the last two administrations on Senate judiciary nominees, but his arguments are misleading.

In fact, the first Bush administration saw 15 of its 24 first-year nominees confirmed by the Senate - a 62 percent confirmation rate. Similarly, in his first year, President Clinton had 27 of his 47 nominees confirmed - a 57 percent rate.

Today, with the Senate nearing completion of its business for the year, the president has had just 18 of his 64 nominees confirmed by the Senate - or just 28 percent.

Mr. Leahy seeks to justify his inaction on the grounds that some nominees have only recently been ready for Senate action. That is no excuse for not acting on all of those candidates nominated before August. As to those pre-August nominees, the Senate's performance has been downright disgraceful, particularly when comparing the president's nominees to those of his last three predecessors. With only one exception, 100 percent of the pre-August nominees of Presidents Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Clinton were confirmed in their first year of office. By contrast, the Senate has managed to confirm an anemic 40 percent of George W. Bush's pre-August nominees, with the Senate only a couple of weeks away from its recess.

Mr. Leahy was not nearly so patient when the nominees were liberal Democrats and the Senate was under Republican control. At that time, Mr. Leahy urged us to redouble our efforts to fill "an alarming vacancy rate" on the federal courts - nearly 70 seats. Today the vacancies exceed 100.

Again, when Republicans controlled the Senate, Mr. Leahy remarked that "every week in which the Senate does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." Yet at the current confirmation pace controlled by Mr. Leahy, this Senate has confirmed an average of only three judges a month. The Judiciary Committee is moving at a tortoise's pace, especially regarding circuit court nominees: Just five have been confirmed all year. (Judicial nominees are not the only ones suffering from these dilatory tactics; to date, the president's entire Cabinet is still not in place because the Senate has yet to confirm John Walters as the national drug czar.)

The fact that many nominees have not been confirmed is not an accident. Liberal Democrats simply don't want judges with whom they disagree seated on the federal courts. There is no other explanation for the Judiciary Committee's failure to hold a hearing on more than two-thirds of the first 11 persons nominated by the president - back in early May. The Judiciary Committee stalls, even though the American Bar Association has rated a number of the nominees "well-qualified" to serve on the federal bench.

In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy wrote that he and his committee are striving for "bipartisanship." In early May? It only takes a couple of hours for each half-dozen nominees, yet six months have elapsed with no action. How can it be bipartisan to allow more than 100 vacancies to exist, scores of which need to be urgently filled?
Washington, this term is wielded more often than it is applied. How can it be bipartisan for the majority to refuse even to hold hearings on qualified candidates nominated by the president in

Judicial Profiling

The Wall Street Journal
Tuesday, November 27, 2001

It's too bad Miguel Estrada never thought of doing a reverse Geraldo Rivera (formerly Rivers) and renamed himself Mike Smith. He'd probably be sitting on the federal bench right now. But Mr. Estrada, who was one of President Bush's first judicial nominations, can't even get a hearing from Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy.

The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority in the U.S. Senate.

The 40-year-old Mr. Estrada is an American success story, a Honduran immigrant who taught himself English and went on to Harvard Law, where he was editor of the law review. He clerked for Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy and worked as a deputy in Bill Clinton's Justice Department, where he argued cases before the Supreme Court. Seth Waxman, Mr. Clinton's Solicitor General, has only the highest praise for him.

But in Pat Leahy's Senate, such credentials are a liability. They're so sterling they'd make it impossible for Senate Democrats to stand up and oppose Mr. Estrada if he ever did get a hearing. And that would mean confirming him to a seat on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, the same court that has produced Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia. And the last thing Democrats want to confront is an able conservative Hispanic nominated for the High Court by a Republican President.

Mr. Leahy's spokesman says Mr. Estrada's hearing is being delayed because of the judge's "rigid ideological background." But if that's true, why not hold a hearing and then have an up or down vote? Mr. Leahy answered this question himself some years ago when GOP Senators were holding up Clinton nominee Sonia Sotomayor.

"What they are saying is that they have a brilliant judge who also happens to be a woman and Hispanic, and they haven't the guts to stand up and argue publicly against her on the floor," Mr. Leahy told the New York Times at the time. "They just want to hide in their cloakrooms and do her in quietly." Ms. Sotomayor was later confirmed with little opposition, but Mr. Leahy must have secretly admired Republican tactics.

Meanwhile, the D.C. Circuit is the court that will hear a majority of the habeas corpus petitions resulting from the war on terrorism. It is now down to eight active judges, but needs 10 to carry its workload. Chief Judge Douglas Ginsberg wrote Mr. Leahy in August that if two new judges weren't confirmed by Sept. 30, "the court will likely find it necessary to delay until next term hearing cases that would otherwise be argued and decided this winter and spring."

Mr. Leahy has since done nothing to advance the nominations of either Mr. Estrada or John Roberts, another Bush nominee to the D.C. Circuit. Mr. Roberts, who is white, is enduring his own form of judicial profiling. Democrats don't want to be seen confirming a white judge ahead of an Hispanic one. So the entire D.C. Circuit suffers.

This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton all had at least 88% of their judicial nominees confirmed by the Senate. With only days to go before the Senate adjourns for the year, only 28% of George W. Bush's nominees have been confirmed.

In 1998, when there were even fewer vacancies, Mr. Leahy said that any week in which the Senate "does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." But now Mr. Leahy gets to screen the ethnicity and credentials of nominees, and on the evidence he'd rather keep a vital court understaffed than allow a qualified Hispanic on the bench.

EXCERPT

HUME: You've got a number of judicial nominees pending up there, and one that is of particular interest, is Miguel Estrada who, like you, is of Hispanic origin. This is a man who has quite a picturesque story. A Honduran immigrant, made it through Harvard, is very highly regarded by people who have served with him in the government. His nomination has yet to receive a hearing on Capitol Hill. What about that? What do you sense is going on there?

GONZALES: Well, we, of course, are a little bit disappointed at the pace of the confirmations within the judiciary committee. We don't believe that a sufficient number of the president's nominees have received a hearing. Miguel Estrada is a wonderfully qualified, gifted individual who was nominated by the president on May 9th, over six months ago, along with 11 other qualified nominees.

And, you know, again, we're disappointed at the pace. And we would urge the judiciary to focus more on judicial nominations. We understand there's a lot going on. Chairman Leahy has been distracted by other responsibilities, as chairman of the judiciary committee, but we would urge that he focus on the president's nominations, because we have too many vacancies that exist on the federal courts around this country. And it's very important that those vacancies be filled as quickly as possible.

HUME: I want to try the same question again on this matter. Do you not sense politics here? Last question.

GONZALES: Well, I guess one might say that there's politics in everything that goes on here in Washington. Obviously, again, I would just simply leave it on the basis that we would hope that the judiciary committee would do its job.

HUME: All right, Judge Al Gonzales, thanks very much for being with us. We have to take a quick break for other headlines. When we come back, find out where in the U.S. Santa Claus has become persona non grata. That story, after a break.

GOP Charges 'Profiling' of Hispanic Nominee

REV_00082797

By Audrey Hudson & Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Tuesday, November 29, 2001

Senate Republicans yesterday accused Democrats of "racial profiling" in holding up President Bush's nomination of a Hispanic candidate to a high-profile federal appeals court seat.

"Liberal Democrats don't want an Hispanic-American appointed to this significant court because they understand he could be one of the president's first nominees . . . on the U.S. Supreme Court," said Sen. Jon Kyl, Arizona Republican and a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "They are literally racially profiling this nomination."

Mr. Bush in May nominated Miguel Estrada, whom Hispanics view as a prime example of the American dream, to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The appeals court is one step below the Supreme Court. Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, said the profiling includes ideology.

"Democrats on the committee seem to love minorities, as long as they are liberal," Mr. Hatch said. "Miguel Estrada deserves to be on the court regardless of ideology."

The Democrat-led Judiciary Committee has yet to hold a hearing for Mr. Estrada, 40, who served four years in the Clinton administration as an assistant to the solicitor general.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, denied through a spokesman that he is blocking the Estrada nomination out of racial bias.

"Can you even ask that with a straight face?" Leahy spokesman David Carle said. "It's a ridiculous assertion."

Another senior Republican senator said privately that he believes Mr. Estrada is being held back because of race. And the Traditional Values Coalition in Washington has called on Mr. Leahy "to stop playing racial politics with this nomination."

The larger issue, Republicans say, is that Democrats have confirmed only 28 percent of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees this year, compared with 57 percent in the first year of the Clinton presidency and 62 percent in the first year of the elder President Bush's administration.

Mr. Carle said the committee has acted first on nominations "where there is consensus." Mr. Leahy said earlier through his spokesman that he was holding up the Estrada nomination because of Mr. Estrada's "rigid ideological background."

REV_00082798

Some Hispanics, who are being aggressively courted by both parties for the 2004 presidential race, scoff at the accusation that Mr. Estrada is not qualified.

"For Senator Leahy to call Miguel Estrada controversial is simply preposterous," said Robert Deposada, president of the Washington-based Latino Coalition. "The only controversy here is that Mr. Estrada is of Hispanic descent. We call on Senator Leahy to do what's fair and allow an up or down vote on this extremely qualified judicial nominee."

Mr. Estrada was born in Honduras and emigrated to the United States at age 17, speaking almost no English. He earned a degree from Harvard Law School and is a partner at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher in Washington.

Mr. Kyl said Mr. Bush "would like to be known as the president who appointed the first Hispanic to the Supreme Court."

"Mr. Estrada is eminently qualified for that position, and the liberal Democrats know that," Mr. Kyl said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat and a Judiciary Committee member, said Mr. Leahy's reputation for advancing minorities is beyond reproach.

"It's so preposterous to make that accusation against Senator Leahy, he doesn't deserve it," Mr. Kennedy said. "He has demonstrated over a very distinguished career that he is one of the leaders in knocking down the walls of discrimination."

Mr. Kennedy said there are "serious policy issues" with Mr. Estrada's nomination.

Mr. Bush submitted his first batch of judicial nominations May 9, when Republicans held the majority in the Senate by a single vote. But the following month, before the Republicans had acted on any judicial nominations, Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont threw control of the Senate to the Democrats by quitting the Republican Party to become an independent.

Since Democrats gained control, they have confirmed 18 of the 64 judicial candidates submitted by Mr.
Bush. Democrats say that's already better than the 15 judicial nominees approved in the first year of the elder Bush's presidency.

"We're actually going to be ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year, even though we only started in July," said Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat.

But the elder Mr. Bush submitted only 24 judicial nominations in his first year because there were fewer court vacancies.

Mr. Daschle said of Senate Republicans, "They're responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years."

Sen. Jeff Sessions, Alabama Republican and a member of the Judiciary Committee, said he does not think Mr. Estrada is a victim of racial bias but believes the Democrats are "deliberately going slower" on Bush nominations.

"We haven't even had hearings on some stellar nominees," Mr. Sessions said. "I think with the vacancy rate we've got, we've got to pick up the pace. Are the Bush nominees receiving the same treatment as the Clinton nominees? To date, they have not."

Republican leaders initially tried to block spending bills this fall to force Democrats to bring up more judicial nominations. But they abandoned the strategy when Mr. Daschle refused to be hurried.

Bush Throws Out Teamwork in New Judge Selection

By Joel Connelly
The Seattle Post-Intelligencer
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

The presence of a strong bench, filled with versatile people who can perform under pressure, is as vital in a U.S. Courthouse as it is down at Safeco Field.

Due to the position's importance, then, the three-way political struggle over filling the seat of retiring
Tacoma-based U.S. District Court Judge Robert Bryan has become as sensitive as a three-way baseball trade.

It also shows how the Bush administration is playing hardball while preaching harmony.

The White House legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, says President Bush will nominate a replacement for Bryan by January. Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., will block Senate action unless they get a voice in selecting the nominee. GOP Sen. Slade Gorton did the same thing with Bill Clinton in the White House. Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., the Bush administration's patronage overseer in the state, offered the senators half the membership on a bipartisan judicial screening commission.

But the offer was on the condition that Murray and Cantwell "agree in advance" to support Bush's nominee if it is a name recommended by the panel. It denied them any voice in picking nominees to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, in which Gorton was intimately involved.

Political infighting usually interests mainly political insiders.

But this scrap deserves a wider audience, precisely because we have had a talented bench.

Federal judges have helped shape life in the Northwest, from Indian fishing-rights cases to the ongoing debate over the legality of assisted suicide to the U.S. Forest Service's failure to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

The job requires no small amount of intellect, and not inconsiderable presence.

In the early 1980s, prosecutors brought bid-rigging charges against contractors who made a mint off the Washington Public Power Supply System's ill-fated nuclear program.

New York and Washington, D.C., defense lawyers descended on Helena, Mont., where the trial was moved due to WPPSS' bad image. "I once wrote a law review article on this issue of admissibility," one self-impressed barrister intoned.

"I taught this issue of admissibility in law school," U.S. District Judge Jack Coughenour coolly replied. Seeing Coughenour control the high-priced talent before him, in a long complex trial, reminded me of nothing so much as, when I was a kid, watching circus lion trainer Clyde Beatty.

The challenge to Washington's initiative imposing term limits for members of Congress found U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer presiding at a hearing that pitted one-time Attorney General Griffin Bell against former White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler. Dwyer's meticulous, witty ruling, tossing out the initiative, was reflected in a later majority opinion by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other judges have been more controversial. American Lawyer magazine once scored the courtroom
demeanor and rulings of U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner.

In 1997, with a Democratic administration, Gorton threatened to block nominees to the U.S. District Court and the 9th Circuit unless given "an equal voice" in picking judges.

Gorton insisted he was "trying to follow the Constitution" which provides for the Senate giving both advice and consent, saying: "It seems to me the people of the United States have called for cooperation, and we will end up having cooperation."

He got his wish. White House Counsel Charles Ruff paid a visit to Gorton's office, and worked out an agreement.

A bipartisan committee screened candidates for court vacancies. Gorton and Murray interviewed

finalists. They jointly recommended, Clinton nominated and the Senate confirmed U.S. District Court Judges Robert Lasnik and Marsha Pechman.

The Bush administration is taking a much harder line.

Last week, in an icy letter, Gonzales told the senators: "A bipartisan commission process is neither part of the constitutional design nor reflective of the traditional practice."

"It's interesting to hear a Republican White House undo everything Slade Gorton fought so hard to get,
assuring senators a meaningful role in this," Murray said yesterday.

The White House is also insisting on at least three candidates to fill Bryan's judgeship. "The president wants to make the choice," Dunn said.

Dunn has given the White House a list of four candidates. Bush intends to make a nomination, Gonzales informed the senators. "I think we are going to go ahead with the process," Dunn added.

The gesture may be meaningless. Democrats control the Senate, and Cantwell is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee that passes on judicial nominations.

"I want a process," Murray said. "I want us to work with the White House, but I am unwilling to hand them my vote. Unless there is cooperation I am not prepared to put their nominees in place."

Gorton said exactly the same thing. Cooperation yielded first-rate candidates, and Senate confirmation of Northwest judges followed while other nominations languished.

Yesterday, Murray and Cantwell asked for a meeting with Gonzales to try to work things out.

To the White House counsel goes this question: Is this an example of the new spirit of cooperation that candidate Bush promised he would bring to Washington?

Leahy's Jihad

By Greg Pierce
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

"Although most Republican lawmakers approve of Bush administration policies, they also believe the Justice Department's actions in the war on terrorism are a legitimate area for congressional oversight. However, the sheer number of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, plus the involvement of a coalition of liberal interest groups that attacked John Ashcroft at his confirmation hearings early this year, suggests, at least to the GOP, that Democrats are also interested in inflicting political damage on the attorney general," Byron York writes at www.nationalreview.com.

"Republicans believe committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy and other Democrats have chosen to concentrate their fire on Ashcroft as a way of scoring points against the Bush administration without appearing to attack the president, who enjoys high job-approval ratings. For example, Republicans point out that the issue of military tribunals was a Bush executive order that will be carried out by the Defense Department. Why not go after the White House instead of focusing on Ashcroft? . . . "Finally, some in the GOP believe another name for the flurry of Judiciary Committee activity might be 'What We're Doing Instead of Confirming Judges.' There has been little if any progress on the issue of judges since the failure of a GOP plan to block appropriations bills as a way of forcing Democrats to consider more of the president's judicial nominations. Now, with no pressure to act, Leahy is virtually ignoring the issue. Will Republicans renew a push for more confirmations before the end of the year? 'There's no point in it,' says one frustrated aide."

Leahy's Ethnic Bias

Senator Pushes for Hearing on 10th Circuit Nominee from Wyoming

The Associated Press
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

U.S. Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo., has asked the Senate Judiciary Committee's chairman to schedule a hearing as soon as possible on the nomination of Terrence O'Brien of Gillette to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

O'Brien was nominated Aug. 2 to the appellate court, which covers Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah. He is one of four 10th Circuit nominees.

In a letter dated Tuesday to the committee chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., Thomas said time is running out for a hearing this year. Besides being important to Wyoming, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has a 33 percent vacancy rate, Thomas wrote.

O'Brien, a district judge in the 6th Judicial District Court of Wyoming from 1980 to 2000, is now a legal consultant to Kennecott Energy.

The committee has all the documents pertaining to O'Brien's nomination, Thomas wrote.

Judicial Nominees Have Waited Long Enough, Senator

By Senators Hatch, Kyl, Thurmond, Brownback, Grassley, DeWine, Specter, McConnell & Sessions
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

The Nov. 26 letter to the editor from Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, "Judicial confirmations going faster than ever," compels a more complete and factual account of the current state of the judicial confirmation process.

Mr. Leahy seeks to rebut growing criticism that his Judiciary Committee is blocking qualified judicial nominees selected by President Bush. The criticism is warranted, and the issue is of extreme importance. The Senate's inexcusable inaction on dozens of qualified judicial nominees threatens to further clog already overburdened courtrooms, delay justice for millions of Americans and, even more alarming, make it harder for federal law enforcement officials to get judicial assistance in their efforts to track and monitor suspected terrorists and other criminals. In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy tries to use statistics and numbers to create the illusion that his committee is moving at a pace "faster" than the last two administrations on Senate judiciary nominees, but his arguments are misleading.

In fact, the first Bush administration saw 15 of its 24 first-year nominees confirmed by the Senate - a 62 percent confirmation rate. Similarly, in his first year, President Clinton had 27 of his 47 nominees confirmed - a 57 percent rate.

Today, with the Senate nearing completion of its business for the year, the president has had just 18 of his 64 nominees confirmed by the Senate - or just 28 percent.

Mr. Leahy seeks to justify his inaction on the grounds that some nominees have only recently been ready for Senate action. That is no excuse for not acting on all of those candidates nominated before August. As to those pre-August nominees, the Senate's performance has been downright disgraceful, particularly when comparing the president's nominees to those of his last three predecessors. With only one exception, 100 percent of the pre-August nominees of Presidents Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Clinton were confirmed in their first year of office. By contrast, the Senate has managed to confirm an anemic 40 percent of George W. Bush's pre-August nominees, with the Senate only a couple of weeks away from its recess.

Mr. Leahy was not nearly so patient when the nominees were liberal Democrats and the Senate was under Republican control. At that time, Mr. Leahy urged us to redouble our efforts to fill "an alarming vacancy rate" on the federal courts - nearly 70 seats. Today the vacancies exceed 100.

Again, when Republicans controlled the Senate, Mr. Leahy remarked that "every week in which the Senate does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." Yet at the current confirmation pace controlled by Mr. Leahy, this Senate has confirmed an average of only three judges a month. The Judiciary Committee is moving at a tortoise's pace, especially regarding circuit court nominees: Just five have been confirmed all year. (Judicial nominees are not the only ones suffering from these dilatory tactics; to date, the president's entire Cabinet is still not in place because the Senate has yet to confirm John Walters as the national drug czar.)

The fact that many nominees have not been confirmed is not an accident. Liberal Democrats simply don't want judges with whom they disagree seated on the federal courts. There is no other explanation for the Judiciary Committee's failure to hold a hearing on more than two-thirds of the first 11 persons nominated by the president - back in early May. The Judiciary Committee stalls, even though the American Bar Association has rated a number of the nominees "well-qualified" to serve on the federal bench.

In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy wrote that he and his committee are striving for "bipartisanship." In early May? It only takes a couple of hours for each half-dozen nominees, yet six months have elapsed with no action. How can it be bipartisan to allow more than 100 vacancies to exist, scores of which need to be urgently filled?
Washington, this term is wielded more often than it is applied. How can it be bipartisan for the majority to refuse even to hold hearings on qualified candidates nominated by the president in

Judicial Profiling

The Wall Street Journal
Tuesday, November 27, 2001

It's too bad Miguel Estrada never thought of doing a reverse Geraldo Rivera (formerly Rivers) and renamed himself Mike Smith. He'd probably be sitting on the federal bench right now. But Mr. Estrada, who was one of President Bush's first judicial nominations, can't even get a hearing from Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy.

The reason, as Mr. Estrada's detractors are only too happy to whisper, is his ethnic background. His nomination is being sidelined because he is a keen legal mind who happens to be Hispanic and therefore might someday become the first Hispanic member of the U.S. Supreme Court. Welcome to the world of judicial profiling, as practiced by the liberal majority in the U.S. Senate.

The 40-year-old Mr. Estrada is an American success story, a Honduran immigrant who taught himself English and went on to Harvard Law, where he was editor of the law review. He clerked for Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy and worked as a deputy in Bill Clinton's Justice Department, where he argued cases before the Supreme Court. Seth Waxman, Mr. Clinton's Solicitor General, has only the highest praise for him.

But in Pat Leahy's Senate, such credentials are a liability. They're so sterling they'd make it impossible for Senate Democrats to stand up and oppose Mr. Estrada if he ever did get a hearing. And that would mean confirming him to a seat on the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, the same court that has produced Supreme Court Justices Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Antonin Scalia. And the last thing Democrats want to confront is an able conservative Hispanic nominated for the High Court by a Republican President.

Mr. Leahy's spokesman says Mr. Estrada's hearing is being delayed because of the judge's "rigid ideological background." But if that's true, why not hold a hearing and then have an up or down vote? Mr. Leahy answered this question himself some years ago when GOP Senators were holding up Clinton nominee Sonia Sotomayor.

"What they are saying is that they have a brilliant judge who also happens to be a woman and Hispanic, and they haven't the guts to stand up and argue publicly against her on the floor," Mr. Leahy told the New York Times at the time. "They just want to hide in their cloakrooms and do her in quietly." Ms. Sotomayor was later confirmed with little opposition, but Mr. Leahy must have secretly admired Republican tactics.

Meanwhile, the D.C. Circuit is the court that will hear a majority of the habeas corpus petitions resulting from the war on terrorism. It is now down to eight active judges, but needs 10 to carry its workload. Chief Judge Douglas Ginsberg wrote Mr. Leahy in August that if two new judges weren't confirmed by Sept. 30, "the court will likely find it necessary to delay until next term hearing cases that would otherwise be argued and decided this winter and spring."

Mr. Leahy has since done nothing to advance the nominations of either Mr. Estrada or John Roberts, another Bush nominee to the D.C. Circuit. Mr. Roberts, who is white, is enduring his own form of judicial profiling. Democrats don't want to be seen confirming a white judge ahead of an Hispanic one. So the entire D.C. Circuit suffers.

This is all part of a larger pattern of judicial obstruction that has left 108 current vacancies on the federal bench. More than a third of those openings have been classified as judicial emergencies by the nonpartisan U.S. Judicial Conference. At the end of their first years in office, Ronald Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Bill Clinton all had at least 88% of their judicial nominees confirmed by the Senate. With only days to go before the Senate adjourns for the year, only 28% of George W. Bush's nominees have been confirmed.

In 1998, when there were even fewer vacancies, Mr. Leahy said that any week in which the Senate "does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." But now Mr. Leahy gets to screen the ethnicity and credentials of nominees, and on the evidence he'd rather keep a vital court understaffed than allow a qualified Hispanic on the bench.

EXCERPT

HUME: You've got a number of judicial nominees pending up there, and one that is of particular interest, is Miguel Estrada who, like you, is of Hispanic origin. This is a man who has quite a picturesque story. A Honduran immigrant, made it through Harvard, is very highly regarded by people who have served with him in the government. His nomination has yet to receive a hearing on Capitol Hill. What about that? What do you sense is going on there?

GONZALES: Well, we, of course, are a little bit disappointed at the pace of the confirmations within the judiciary committee. We don't believe that a sufficient number of the president's nominees have received a hearing. Miguel Estrada is a wonderfully qualified, gifted individual who was nominated by the president on May 9th, over six months ago, along with 11 other qualified nominees.

And, you know, again, we're disappointed at the pace. And we would urge the judiciary to focus more on judicial nominations. We understand there's a lot going on. Chairman Leahy has been distracted by other responsibilities, as chairman of the judiciary committee, but we would urge that he focus on the president's nominations, because we have too many vacancies that exist on the federal courts around this country. And it's very important that those vacancies be filled as quickly as possible.

HUME: I want to try the same question again on this matter. Do you not sense politics here? Last question.

GONZALES: Well, I guess one might say that there's politics in everything that goes on here in Washington. Obviously, again, I would just simply leave it on the basis that we would hope that the judiciary committee would do its job.

HUME: All right, Judge Al Gonzales, thanks very much for being with us. We have to take a quick break for other headlines. When we come back, find out where in the U.S. Santa Claus has become persona non grata. That story, after a break.

GOP Charges 'Profiling' of Hispanic Nominee

REV_00082811

By Audrey Hudson & Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Tuesday, November 29, 2001

Senate Republicans yesterday accused Democrats of "racial profiling" in holding up President Bush's nomination of a Hispanic candidate to a high-profile federal appeals court seat.

"Liberal Democrats don't want an Hispanic-American appointed to this significant court because they understand he could be one of the president's first nominees . . . on the U.S. Supreme Court," said Sen. Jon Kyl, Arizona Republican and a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "They are literally racially profiling this nomination."

Mr. Bush in May nominated Miguel Estrada, whom Hispanics view as a prime example of the American dream, to serve on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The appeals court is one step below the Supreme Court. Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, said the profiling includes ideology.

"Democrats on the committee seem to love minorities, as long as they are liberal," Mr. Hatch said. "Miguel Estrada deserves to be on the court regardless of ideology."

The Democrat-led Judiciary Committee has yet to hold a hearing for Mr. Estrada, 40, who served four years in the Clinton administration as an assistant to the solicitor general.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat, denied through a spokesman that he is blocking the Estrada nomination out of racial bias.

"Can you even ask that with a straight face?" Leahy spokesman David Carle said. "It's a ridiculous assertion."

Another senior Republican senator said privately that he believes Mr. Estrada is being held back because of race. And the Traditional Values Coalition in Washington has called on Mr. Leahy "to stop playing racial politics with this nomination."

The larger issue, Republicans say, is that Democrats have confirmed only 28 percent of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees this year, compared with 57 percent in the first year of the Clinton presidency and 62 percent in the first year of the elder President Bush's administration.

Mr. Carle said the committee has acted first on nominations "where there is consensus." Mr. Leahy said earlier through his spokesman that he was holding up the Estrada nomination because of Mr. Estrada's "rigid ideological background."

REV_00082812

Some Hispanics, who are being aggressively courted by both parties for the 2004 presidential race, scoff at the accusation that Mr. Estrada is not qualified.

"For Senator Leahy to call Miguel Estrada controversial is simply preposterous," said Robert Deposada, president of the Washington-based Latino Coalition. "The only controversy here is that Mr. Estrada is of Hispanic descent. We call on Senator Leahy to do what's fair and allow an up or down vote on this extremely qualified judicial nominee."

Mr. Estrada was born in Honduras and emigrated to the United States at age 17, speaking almost no English. He earned a degree from Harvard Law School and is a partner at Gibson Dunn & Crutcher in Washington.

Mr. Kyl said Mr. Bush "would like to be known as the president who appointed the first Hispanic to the Supreme Court."

"Mr. Estrada is eminently qualified for that position, and the liberal Democrats know that," Mr. Kyl said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat and a Judiciary Committee member, said Mr. Leahy's reputation for advancing minorities is beyond reproach.

"It's so preposterous to make that accusation against Senator Leahy, he doesn't deserve it," Mr. Kennedy said. "He has demonstrated over a very distinguished career that he is one of the leaders in knocking down the walls of discrimination."

Mr. Kennedy said there are "serious policy issues" with Mr. Estrada's nomination.

Mr. Bush submitted his first batch of judicial nominations May 9, when Republicans held the majority in the Senate by a single vote. But the following month, before the Republicans had acted on any judicial nominations, Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont threw control of the Senate to the Democrats by quitting the Republican Party to become an independent.

Since Democrats gained control, they have confirmed 18 of the 64 judicial candidates submitted by Mr.
Bush. Democrats say that's already better than the 15 judicial nominees approved in the first year of the elder Bush's presidency.

"We're actually going to be ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year, even though we only started in July," said Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat.

But the elder Mr. Bush submitted only 24 judicial nominations in his first year because there were fewer court vacancies.

Mr. Daschle said of Senate Republicans, "They're responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years."

Sen. Jeff Sessions, Alabama Republican and a member of the Judiciary Committee, said he does not think Mr. Estrada is a victim of racial bias but believes the Democrats are "deliberately going slower" on Bush nominations.

"We haven't even had hearings on some stellar nominees," Mr. Sessions said. "I think with the vacancy rate we've got, we've got to pick up the pace. Are the Bush nominees receiving the same treatment as the Clinton nominees? To date, they have not."

Republican leaders initially tried to block spending bills this fall to force Democrats to bring up more judicial nominations. But they abandoned the strategy when Mr. Daschle refused to be hurried.

Bush Throws Out Teamwork in New Judge Selection

By Joel Connelly
The Seattle Post-Intelligencer
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

The presence of a strong bench, filled with versatile people who can perform under pressure, is as vital in a U.S. Courthouse as it is down at Safeco Field.

Due to the position's importance, then, the three-way political struggle over filling the seat of retiring
Tacoma-based U.S. District Court Judge Robert Bryan has become as sensitive as a three-way baseball trade.

It also shows how the Bush administration is playing hardball while preaching harmony.

The White House legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, says President Bush will nominate a replacement for Bryan by January. Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., will block Senate action unless they get a voice in selecting the nominee. GOP Sen. Slade Gorton did the same thing with Bill Clinton in the White House. Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., the Bush administration's patronage overseer in the state, offered the senators half the membership on a bipartisan judicial screening commission.

But the offer was on the condition that Murray and Cantwell "agree in advance" to support Bush's nominee if it is a name recommended by the panel. It denied them any voice in picking nominees to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, in which Gorton was intimately involved.

Political infighting usually interests mainly political insiders.

But this scrap deserves a wider audience, precisely because we have had a talented bench.

Federal judges have helped shape life in the Northwest, from Indian fishing-rights cases to the ongoing debate over the legality of assisted suicide to the U.S. Forest Service's failure to enforce the Endangered Species Act.

The job requires no small amount of intellect, and not inconsiderable presence.

In the early 1980s, prosecutors brought bid-rigging charges against contractors who made a mint off the Washington Public Power Supply System's ill-fated nuclear program.

New York and Washington, D.C., defense lawyers descended on Helena, Mont., where the trial was moved due to WPPSS' bad image. "I once wrote a law review article on this issue of admissibility," one self-impressed barrister intoned.

"I taught this issue of admissibility in law school," U.S. District Judge Jack Coughenour coolly replied. Seeing Coughenour control the high-priced talent before him, in a long complex trial, reminded me of nothing so much as, when I was a kid, watching circus lion trainer Clyde Beatty.

The challenge to Washington's initiative imposing term limits for members of Congress found U.S. District Court Judge William Dwyer presiding at a hearing that pitted one-time Attorney General Griffin Bell against former White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler. Dwyer's meticulous, witty ruling, tossing out the initiative, was reflected in a later majority opinion by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Other judges have been more controversial. American Lawyer magazine once scored the courtroom
demeanor and rulings of U.S. District Judge Jack Tanner.

In 1997, with a Democratic administration, Gorton threatened to block nominees to the U.S. District Court and the 9th Circuit unless given "an equal voice" in picking judges.

Gorton insisted he was "trying to follow the Constitution" which provides for the Senate giving both advice and consent, saying: "It seems to me the people of the United States have called for cooperation, and we will end up having cooperation."

He got his wish. White House Counsel Charles Ruff paid a visit to Gorton's office, and worked out an agreement.

A bipartisan committee screened candidates for court vacancies. Gorton and Murray interviewed

REV_00082815

finalists. They jointly recommended, Clinton nominated and the Senate confirmed U.S. District Court Judges Robert Lasnik and Marsha Pechman.

The Bush administration is taking a much harder line.

Last week, in an icy letter, Gonzales told the senators: "A bipartisan commission process is neither part of the constitutional design nor reflective of the traditional practice."

"It's interesting to hear a Republican White House undo everything Slade Gorton fought so hard to get,
assuring senators a meaningful role in this," Murray said yesterday.

The White House is also insisting on at least three candidates to fill Bryan's judgeship. "The president wants to make the choice," Dunn said.

Dunn has given the White House a list of four candidates. Bush intends to make a nomination, Gonzales informed the senators. "I think we are going to go ahead with the process," Dunn added.

The gesture may be meaningless. Democrats control the Senate, and Cantwell is a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee that passes on judicial nominations.

"I want a process," Murray said. "I want us to work with the White House, but I am unwilling to hand them my vote. Unless there is cooperation I am not prepared to put their nominees in place."

Gorton said exactly the same thing. Cooperation yielded first-rate candidates, and Senate confirmation of Northwest judges followed while other nominations languished.

Yesterday, Murray and Cantwell asked for a meeting with Gonzales to try to work things out.

To the White House counsel goes this question: Is this an example of the new spirit of cooperation that candidate Bush promised he would bring to Washington?

Leahy's Jihad

By Greg Pierce
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

"Although most Republican lawmakers approve of Bush administration policies, they also believe the Justice Department's actions in the war on terrorism are a legitimate area for congressional oversight. However, the sheer number of Senate Judiciary Committee hearings, plus the involvement of a coalition of liberal interest groups that attacked John Ashcroft at his confirmation hearings early this year, suggests, at least to the GOP, that Democrats are also interested in inflicting political damage on the attorney general," Byron York writes at www.nationalreview.com.

"Republicans believe committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy and other Democrats have chosen to concentrate their fire on Ashcroft as a way of scoring points against the Bush administration without appearing to attack the president, who enjoys high job-approval ratings. For example, Republicans point out that the issue of military tribunals was a Bush executive order that will be carried out by the Defense Department. Why not go after the White House instead of focusing on Ashcroft? . . . "Finally, some in the GOP believe another name for the flurry of Judiciary Committee activity might be 'What We're Doing Instead of Confirming Judges.' There has been little if any progress on the issue of judges since the failure of a GOP plan to block appropriations bills as a way of forcing Democrats to consider more of the president's judicial nominations. Now, with no pressure to act, Leahy is virtually ignoring the issue. Will Republicans renew a push for more confirmations before the end of the year? 'There's no point in it,' says one frustrated aide."

Leahy's Ethnic Bias

Senator Pushes for Hearing on 10th Circuit Nominee from Wyoming

The Associated Press
Wednesday, November 28, 2001

U.S. Sen. Craig Thomas, R-Wyo., has asked the Senate Judiciary Committee's chairman to schedule a hearing as soon as possible on the nomination of Terrence O'Brien of Gillette to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

O'Brien was nominated Aug. 2 to the appellate court, which covers Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah. He is one of four 10th Circuit nominees.

In a letter dated Tuesday to the committee chairman Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., Thomas said time is running out for a hearing this year. Besides being important to Wyoming, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals has a 33 percent vacancy rate, Thomas wrote.

O'Brien, a district judge in the 6th Judicial District Court of Wyoming from 1980 to 2000, is now a legal consultant to Kennecott Energy.

The committee has all the documents pertaining to O'Brien's nomination, Thomas wrote.

Judicial Nominees Have Waited Long Enough, Senator

By Senators Hatch, Kyl, Thurmond, Brownback, Grassley, DeWine, Specter, McConnell & Sessions
The Washington Times
Thursday, November 29, 2001

The Nov. 26 letter to the editor from Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, "Judicial confirmations going faster than ever," compels a more complete and factual account of the current state of the judicial confirmation process.

Mr. Leahy seeks to rebut growing criticism that his Judiciary Committee is blocking qualified judicial nominees selected by President Bush. The criticism is warranted, and the issue is of extreme importance. The Senate's inexcusable inaction on dozens of qualified judicial nominees threatens to further clog already overburdened courtrooms, delay justice for millions of Americans and, even more alarming, make it harder for federal law enforcement officials to get judicial assistance in their efforts to track and monitor suspected terrorists and other criminals. In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy tries to use statistics and numbers to create the illusion that his committee is moving at a pace "faster" than the last two administrations on Senate judiciary nominees, but his arguments are misleading.

In fact, the first Bush administration saw 15 of its 24 first-year nominees confirmed by the Senate - a 62 percent confirmation rate. Similarly, in his first year, President Clinton had 27 of his 47 nominees confirmed - a 57 percent rate.

Today, with the Senate nearing completion of its business for the year, the president has had just 18 of his 64 nominees confirmed by the Senate - or just 28 percent.

Mr. Leahy seeks to justify his inaction on the grounds that some nominees have only recently been ready for Senate action. That is no excuse for not acting on all of those candidates nominated before August. As to those pre-August nominees, the Senate's performance has been downright disgraceful, particularly when comparing the president's nominees to those of his last three predecessors. With only one exception, 100 percent of the pre-August nominees of Presidents Reagan, George H.W. Bush and Clinton were confirmed in their first year of office. By contrast, the Senate has managed to confirm an anemic 40 percent of George W. Bush's pre-August nominees, with the Senate only a couple of weeks away from its recess.

Mr. Leahy was not nearly so patient when the nominees were liberal Democrats and the Senate was under Republican control. At that time, Mr. Leahy urged us to redouble our efforts to fill "an alarming vacancy rate" on the federal courts - nearly 70 seats. Today the vacancies exceed 100.

Again, when Republicans controlled the Senate, Mr. Leahy remarked that "every week in which the Senate does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis." Yet at the current confirmation pace controlled by Mr. Leahy, this Senate has confirmed an average of only three judges a month. The Judiciary Committee is moving at a tortoise's pace, especially regarding circuit court nominees: Just five have been confirmed all year. (Judicial nominees are not the only ones suffering from these dilatory tactics; to date, the president's entire Cabinet is still not in place because the Senate has yet to confirm John Walters as the national drug czar.)

The fact that many nominees have not been confirmed is not an accident. Liberal Democrats simply don't want judges with whom they disagree seated on the federal courts. There is no other explanation for the Judiciary Committee's failure to hold a hearing on more than two-thirds of the first 11 persons nominated by the president - back in early May. The Judiciary Committee stalls, even though the American Bar Association has rated a number of the nominees "well-qualified" to serve on the federal bench.

In his letter to this paper, Mr. Leahy wrote that he and his committee are striving for "bipartisanship." In Washington, this term is wielded more often than it is applied. How can it be bipartisan for the majority to refuse even to hold hearings on qualified candidates nominated by the president in

In Case You Missed It

- On November 27, the International Organization for Migration -- with USAID funding – sent a 30-truck convoy of winter clothing and blankets from the Turkmenistan/Afghanistan to the Afghan city of Andkhoi.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "...senior officials of the Taliban regime, including two ministers, visited Kabul's famous museum. They arrived with a team of men carrying sledgehammers, then stood around in transports of delight as Afghanistan's cultural history was reduced to rubble. After three days they repaired to the Ministry of Culture where, over three months, they meted out the same treatment to the priceless antiquities stored in the basement." (Peter Popham; The Independent, 11/29/01)

- "Fleeing Taliban plundered Afghanistan's national bank of millions of dollars in cash...during their hurried retreat from Kabul. Its Taliban governor, Haji Mullah Mohammad Ahmadi, showed up with a posse of gunmen on 12 November, and took $6 million..." (The Daily Mail [U.K.], 11/29/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.

- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens and overthrow friendly governments. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.

- We fight the terrorists – and all those who give them aid. America has a message for the nations of the world: If you harbor a terrorist, you are a terrorist. If you feed a terrorist or fund a terrorist, you are a terrorist. And you will be held accountable.

Facts of the Day

- The Department of Defense is approaching the two million mark in Humanitarian Daily Rations airdropped into Afghanistan. Since the war began, more than 1,970,000 HDRs have been airdropped.

- To help deal with the difficulty of delivering aid in winter, the World Food Program – with U.S. funding – has 50 heavy-duty trucks, some fitted with snow plows, in Turkmenistan ready to deliver food into Afghanistan's Central Highlands.

- On November 27, the International Organization for Migration -- with USAID funding – sent a 30-truck convoy of winter clothing and blankets from the Turkmenistan/Afghanistan to the Afghan city of Andkhoi.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "...senior officials of the Taliban regime, including two ministers, visited Kabul's famous museum. They arrived with a team of men carrying sledgehammers, then stood around in transports of delight as Afghanistan's cultural history was reduced to rubble. After three days they repaired to the Ministry of Culture where, over three months, they meted out the same treatment to the priceless antiquities stored in the basement." (Peter Popham; The Independent, 11/29/01)

- "Fleeing Taliban plundered Afghanistan's national bank of millions of dollars in cash...during their hurried retreat from Kabul. Its Taliban governor, Haji Mullah Mohammad Ahmadi, showed up with a posse of gunmen on 12 November, and took $6 million..." (The Daily Mail [U.K.], 11/29/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.

- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens and overthrow friendly governments. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.

- We fight the terrorists – and all those who give them aid. America has a message for the nations of the world: If you harbor a terrorist, you are a terrorist. If you feed a terrorist or fund a terrorist, you are a terrorist. And you will be held accountable.

Facts of the Day

- The Department of Defense is approaching the two million mark in Humanitarian Daily Rations airdropped into Afghanistan. Since the war began, more than 1,970,000 HDRs have been airdropped.

- To help deal with the difficulty of delivering aid in winter, the World Food Program – with U.S. funding – has 50 heavy-duty trucks, some fitted with snow plows, in Turkmenistan ready to deliver food into Afghanistan's Central Highlands.

In Case You Missed It

- On November 27, the International Organization for Migration -- with USAID funding – sent a 30-truck convoy of winter clothing and blankets from the Turkmenistan/Afghanistan to the Afghan city of Andkhoi.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "...senior officials of the Taliban regime, including two ministers, visited Kabul's famous museum. They arrived with a team of men carrying sledgehammers, then stood around in transports of delight as Afghanistan's cultural history was reduced to rubble. After three days they repaired to the Ministry of Culture where, over three months, they meted out the same treatment to the priceless antiquities stored in the basement." (Peter Popham; The Independent, 11/29/01)

- "Fleeing Taliban plundered Afghanistan's national bank of millions of dollars in cash...during their hurried retreat from Kabul. Its Taliban governor, Haji Mullah Mohammad Ahmadi, showed up with a posse of gunmen on 12 November, and took $6 million..." (The Daily Mail [U.K.], 11/29/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.

- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens and overthrow friendly governments. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.

- We fight the terrorists – and all those who give them aid. America has a message for the nations of the world: If you harbor a terrorist, you are a terrorist. If you feed a terrorist or fund a terrorist, you are a terrorist. And you will be held accountable.

Facts of the Day

- The Department of Defense is approaching the two million mark in Humanitarian Daily Rations airdropped into Afghanistan. Since the war began, more than 1,970,000 HDRs have been airdropped.

- To help deal with the difficulty of delivering aid in winter, the World Food Program – with U.S. funding – has 50 heavy-duty trucks, some fitted with snow plows, in Turkmenistan ready to deliver food into Afghanistan's Central Highlands.

In Case You Missed It

- On November 27, the International Organization for Migration -- with USAID funding – sent a 30-truck convoy of winter clothing and blankets from the Turkmenistan/Afghanistan to the Afghan city of Andkhoi.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "...senior officials of the Taliban regime, including two ministers, visited Kabul's famous museum. They arrived with a team of men carrying sledgehammers, then stood around in transports of delight as Afghanistan's cultural history was reduced to rubble. After three days they repaired to the Ministry of Culture where, over three months, they meted out the same treatment to the priceless antiquities stored in the basement." (Peter Popham; The Independent, 11/29/01)

- "Fleeing Taliban plundered Afghanistan's national bank of millions of dollars in cash...during their hurried retreat from Kabul. Its Taliban governor, Haji Mullah Mohammad Ahmadi, showed up with a posse of gunmen on 12 November, and took $6 million..." (The Daily Mail [U.K.], 11/29/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.

- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens and overthrow friendly governments. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.

- We fight the terrorists – and all those who give them aid. America has a message for the nations of the world: If you harbor a terrorist, you are a terrorist. If you feed a terrorist or fund a terrorist, you are a terrorist. And you will be held accountable.

Facts of the Day

- The Department of Defense is approaching the two million mark in Humanitarian Daily Rations airdropped into Afghanistan. Since the war began, more than 1,970,000 HDRs have been airdropped.

- To help deal with the difficulty of delivering aid in winter, the World Food Program – with U.S. funding – has 50 heavy-duty trucks, some fitted with snow plows, in Turkmenistan ready to deliver food into Afghanistan's Central Highlands.

Per discussion at staff meeting today, the House terrorism insurance bill passed this afternoon with the 5 very good liability provisions intact (including the limit on attorney's fees). The key procedural vote that allowed the bill to be considered was 220-204, almost strictly partisan. The final vote on the bill was 227-193 with a handful of D's crossing over and voting yes and a handful of R's crossing over and voting no.
On to the Senate . . .

Tiring Of Delays, McCain Introduces Own Terrorism Insurance Bill Senate Commerce ranking member John McCain, R-Ariz., waded deep into the terrorism reinsurance debate Thursday by becoming the first senator to formally introduce a bill on the subject. McCain, who up until now has been a peripheral player in the debate, appears determined to shake up the process.
Introduction of a bipartisan bill in the Senate has been delayed for weeks, largely because of a jurisdictional squabble among Democratic committee leaders over the White House's insistence on the inclusion of certain tort reform provisions.
Senate Banking ranking member Phil Gramm, R-Texas, said earlier this week that he, too, was tired of the delays and planned to introduce his own legislation, based on a previous agreement he had reached with Banking Chairman Sarbanes, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., and the Bush administration.
Moreover, Gramm indicated he was going to try to convince Dodd to join him in the introduction--an offer that sources surmised Dodd might have found tempting. Senate Commerce Chairman Hollings, who also has written an insurance bill, was gearing up to introduce his own measure this week, sources said. McCain had said he would cosponsor Hollings' bill, even though sources claimed McCain was not wholly enthusiastic about the proposal. Concern about possible splintering in his own party was on Senate Majority Leader Daschle's mind this week, when he urged Republican and Democratic negotiators to see the wisdom in delaying introducing individual bills, sources said.

McCain introduced his measure just moments after the House voted 227-193 to approve a terrorism insurance bill. Only a handful of Democrats joined in supporting the bill, which contains legal reform language plainly objectionable to Senate Democrats.

Victorious House sponsors, including Financial Services Chairman Oxley and Financial Services Capital Markets Subcommittee Chairman Richard Baker, R-La., urged their Senate counterparts move. Additional bipartisan meetings among the Senate principals and White House and Treasury officials are slated for today, sources said.

A spokeswoman for the American Insurance Association was blunt in her assessment of McCain's efforts:"Sen. McCain seems to be moving in a different--and not necessarily helpful--direction," she said. "We don't see how this advances the debate."

McCain said his bill "draws from the many good ideas proposed by members of Congress and by the [Bush] administration to deal with the imminent cancellation of terrorism insurance coverage, and attempts also to address concerns raised with each of these proposals."

McCain also said his bill "generally" would prohibit the award of punitive damages in claims arising from acts of terrorism. * By Pamela Barnett

I assume a political organization (RNC or Ric Keller campaign) is the source of the gift? If so, Karl's wife and son can go too, no problem.

Subject: KR trip to FL on Dec 7-8

Al Hoffman asked KR to do the Naples event Friday night which we are working on and a breakfast in Miami on Saturday and a lunch in Orlando on Saturday, as well. These are all finance oriented and we kept Orlando to a small group of 10 folks.

According to Ann Herberger, KR will be finished with lunch at 2 pm, which gives him downtime until the event for Ric Keller. The Keller folks have requested that KR drop by a volunteer Christmas party the campaign is having for 30 minutes before attending the funder that he has already agreed to do. The line by line below has been suggested by the Keller folks (I'll get it down to photo op, mix and mingle, Keller introduces KR, KR makes remarks and then KR takes Q&A and departs-- it will be the standard at the fundraiser). Please let me know if he is willing to do that.

Also, please let me know if he wants me to do anything with the downtime in Orlando (it's 4 hours). The Bush-Brogan 2002 campaign would love to have participate in a grassroots event for the campaign, but I didn't want to kill him. Please let me know .

Thanks,
Kelley

Subject: National Day of Reconciliation

Thank you for offering to forward this to the people on our WH Bible Study mailing list. This is very exciting and it would be great to get as many people there to support our leaders!

God Bless!
Rebecca

Congress just recently passed S. CON. RES. 83 providing for a National Day of Reconciliation. The resolution states:

"The rotunda is authorized to be used at any time on December 4, 2001 for a National Day of Reconciliation where - the 2 Houses of Congress shall assemble in the rotunda with the Chaplain of the House of Representatives and the Chaplain of the Senate in attendance; and during this assembly, the Members of the 2 Houses may gather to humbly seek blessings of Providence for forgiveness, reconciliation, unity, and charity for all people of the United States, thereby assisting the Nation to realize its potential as the champion of hope, the vindicator of the defenseless and the guardian of freedom."

Join us in gathering outside the United States Capitol as we show our support for our leaders as they gather for this monumentous occasion. People from all over will be surrounding the Capitol on Tuesday, December 4 from 5:00 - 7:00 P.M. Spread the word to every person of faith who wants to be a part of this occasion.

Contact Rebecca Contreras at 456-6410 if you are interested in going over as a group at 4:45 p.m. on Tuesday and or if you are interested in being a part of a small gathering afterwards at the Capitol Prayer Center for a little time of fellowship. Hope to see you there.

God Bless America!

In Case You Missed It…

- On November 30th, the Department of Defense dropped enough Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan to push its total HDRs dropped to 2,005,620. The total cost of this unprecedented humanitarian aid effort is more than $44 million and U.S. military aircraft will continue dropping HDRs each night.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "The predominantly male delegation at the Afghan peace talks in Bonn yesterday agreed to a package securing the rights of women to an education, work and a role in politics." (Ewen MacAskill; The Guardian [U.K.], 11/30/01)

- "Girls are being allowed to return to formal education in Afghanistan after being excluded from schools since the Taliban took power in 1996…In Nangarhar province in eastern Afghanistan, 3500 girls have registered for classes and 320 women teachers have returned to work, says Abdul Ghani Hidayat, director of education in the post-Taliban provincial administration." (The Daily Express [U.K.], 11/30/01)

- "'They've mixed traditions with Islam and their own misinterpretation of it, and then imposed it on the Afghan people in the name of Islam'…[Jalal] Jalalizadeh [Iranian lawmakers, Sunni with a doctorate in Islamic studies] grew agitated as he reached the parts [of the Taliban rule book] banning children's activities such as kite flying or playing with dolls. 'This makes no sense…'" (Soraya Sarhaddi Nelson; Los Angeles Times, 11/30/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaeda is becoming more and more isolated.

- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens and overthrow friendly governments. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.

Facts of the Day

- Tajikistan has changed its rules governing access to international crossing points into Afghanistan to make it easier for humanitarian aid workers and vehicles to make crossings. This will increase the volume of U.S. assistance and the speed with which it gets to needy Afghans.

- The World Food Program – with U.S. assistance – has already distributeded 33,000 metric tons of food aid out of the 51,000 metric tons it is estimated are required for the region over the next three months.

- The total amount of money spent by the U.S. government on humanitarian aid to Afghanistan in FY01 and 02, to date, is $344,738,658.
