In Case You Missed It…

- On November 30th, the Department of Defense dropped enough Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan to push its total HDRs dropped to 2,005,620. The total cost of this unprecedented humanitarian aid effort is more than $44 million and U.S. military aircraft will continue dropping HDRs each night.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "The predominantly male delegation at the Afghan peace talks in Bonn yesterday agreed to a package securing the rights of women to an education, work and a role in politics." (Ewen MacAskill; The Guardian [U.K.], 11/30/01)

- "Girls are being allowed to return to formal education in Afghanistan after being excluded from schools since the Taliban took power in 1996…In Nangarhar province in eastern Afghanistan, 3500 girls have registered for classes and 320 women teachers have returned to work, says Abdul Ghani Hidayat, director of education in the post-Taliban provincial administration." (The Daily Express [U.K.], 11/30/01)

- "'They've mixed traditions with Islam and their own misinterpretation of it, and then imposed it on the Afghan people in the name of Islam'…[Jalal] Jalalizadeh [Iranian lawmakers, Sunni with a doctorate in Islamic studies] grew agitated as he reached the parts [of the Taliban rule book] banning children's activities such as kite flying or playing with dolls. 'This makes no sense…'" (Soraya Sarhaddi Nelson; Los Angeles Times, 11/30/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaeda is becoming more and more isolated.

- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens and overthrow friendly governments. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.

Facts of the Day

- Tajikistan has changed its rules governing access to international crossing points into Afghanistan to make it easier for humanitarian aid workers and vehicles to make crossings. This will increase the volume of U.S. assistance and the speed with which it gets to needy Afghans.

- The World Food Program – with U.S. assistance – has already distributeded 33,000 metric tons of food aid out of the 51,000 metric tons it is estimated are required for the region over the next three months.

- The total amount of money spent by the U.S. government on humanitarian aid to Afghanistan in FY01 and 02, to date, is $344,738,658.

In Case You Missed It…

- On November 30th, the Department of Defense dropped enough Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan to push its total HDRs dropped to 2,005,620. The total cost of this unprecedented humanitarian aid effort is more than $44 million and U.S. military aircraft will continue dropping HDRs each night.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "The predominantly male delegation at the Afghan peace talks in Bonn yesterday agreed to a package securing the rights of women to an education, work and a role in politics." (Ewen MacAskill; The Guardian [U.K.], 11/30/01)

- "Girls are being allowed to return to formal education in Afghanistan after being excluded from schools since the Taliban took power in 1996…In Nangarhar province in eastern Afghanistan, 3500 girls have registered for classes and 320 women teachers have returned to work, says Abdul Ghani Hidayat, director of education in the post-Taliban provincial administration." (The Daily Express [U.K.], 11/30/01)

- "'They've mixed traditions with Islam and their own misinterpretation of it, and then imposed it on the Afghan people in the name of Islam'…[Jalal] Jalalizadeh [Iranian lawmakers, Sunni with a doctorate in Islamic studies] grew agitated as he reached the parts [of the Taliban rule book] banning children's activities such as kite flying or playing with dolls. 'This makes no sense…'" (Soraya Sarhaddi Nelson; Los Angeles Times, 11/30/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaeda is becoming more and more isolated.

- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens and overthrow friendly governments. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.

Facts of the Day

- Tajikistan has changed its rules governing access to international crossing points into Afghanistan to make it easier for humanitarian aid workers and vehicles to make crossings. This will increase the volume of U.S. assistance and the speed with which it gets to needy Afghans.

- The World Food Program – with U.S. assistance – has already distributeded 33,000 metric tons of food aid out of the 51,000 metric tons it is estimated are required for the region over the next three months.

- The total amount of money spent by the U.S. government on humanitarian aid to Afghanistan in FY01 and 02, to date, is $344,738,658.

9:00a EST	Secretary Powell to appear on Face the Nation.
10:30a EST	Secretary Rumsfeld to appear on Meet the Press.
10:30a EST	Attorney General Ashcroft to appear on Fox News Sunday.
11:30a EST	Attorney General Ashcroft to appear on This Week.
12:00p EST	Secretary Powell to appear on Late Edition.

In Case You Missed It…

- On November 30th, the Department of Defense dropped enough Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan to push its total HDRs dropped to 2,005,620. The total cost of this unprecedented humanitarian aid effort is more than $44 million and U.S. military aircraft will continue dropping HDRs each night.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "The predominantly male delegation at the Afghan peace talks in Bonn yesterday agreed to a package securing the rights of women to an education, work and a role in politics." (Ewen MacAskill; The Guardian [U.K.], 11/30/01)

- "Girls are being allowed to return to formal education in Afghanistan after being excluded from schools since the Taliban took power in 1996…In Nangarhar province in eastern Afghanistan, 3500 girls have registered for classes and 320 women teachers have returned to work, says Abdul Ghani Hidayat, director of education in the post-Taliban provincial administration." (The Daily Express [U.K.], 11/30/01)

- "'They've mixed traditions with Islam and their own misinterpretation of it, and then imposed it on the Afghan people in the name of Islam'…[Jalal] Jalalizadeh [Iranian lawmakers, Sunni with a doctorate in Islamic studies] grew agitated as he reached the parts [of the Taliban rule book] banning children's activities such as kite flying or playing with dolls. 'This makes no sense…'" (Soraya Sarhaddi Nelson; Los Angeles Times, 11/30/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaeda is becoming more and more isolated.

- Our military forces, the forces of our allies, and many Afghans seeking a better future are liberating Afghanistan. The Afghan people are celebrating. The Taliban and the terrorists are on the run. And we are dismantling the terrorist network in Afghanistan, piece by piece.

- The structure of post-Taliban Afghanistan will be for the Afghan people to determine. But we will provide strong diplomatic and economic support to the aspirations of Afghan parties committed to an inclusive, democratic political structure, committed to the welfare of all Afghan men and women, and providing substantial local autonomy. This is a structure in which all Afghan ethnic groups can participate and find their rightful place.

- Our enemies are devious and ruthless. They have no conscience, no religion, and no mercy. They seek to kill our citizens and overthrow friendly governments. But we are seeking them. We are finding them. And we are fighting them.

Facts of the Day

- Tajikistan has changed its rules governing access to international crossing points into Afghanistan to make it easier for humanitarian aid workers and vehicles to make crossings. This will increase the volume of U.S. assistance and the speed with which it gets to needy Afghans.

- The World Food Program – with U.S. assistance – has already distributeded 33,000 metric tons of food aid out of the 51,000 metric tons it is estimated are required for the region over the next three months.

- The total amount of money spent by the U.S. government on humanitarian aid to Afghanistan in FY01 and 02, to date, is $344,738,658.

I talked to Scott Nelson of Public Citizen who said they are planning to file a summary judgment motion. He agreed it would make sense to have an orderly briefing schedule, and we said we'd talk later in the week about dates. I suspect he will be amenable to a filing date for cross-motions sometime in mid-January, although I don't think he'll go as far out as our answer date (Jan. 27). I'll keep you posted.

MEMORANDUM FOR ANITA B. MCBRIDE
A. MERRILL HUGHES

FROM: BRETT M. KAVANAUGH

SUBJECT: POLITICAL TRAVEL CALCULATIONS

The costs of Air Force I for non-campaign political travel should be calculated based on the hard-time formula. You requested elaboration of how this formula applies.

First, in calculating the percentage of political activity time in a particular location, total activity time should be calculated based on the activity only in that location, not on the entire trip.

Second, the percentage of political activity should then be multiplied by the equivalent commercial coach airfare for the flight from the previous location to the location where the political activity occurs. The political entity should reimburse that amount plus tax plus one dollar to the government for each political traveler.

Finally, if the next leg of the trip from the location where the political activity occurs is back to Washington, then the political entity shall also reimburse an amount equivalent to the percentage of political activity multiplied by the equivalent commercial coach airfare for the trip from that location to Washington, plus tax and one dollar, for each political traveler.

Government rates should not be used to obtain hotels or transportation in locations where political activity occurs, except for official travelers.

You also requested elaboration on reimbursement for other costs on mixed trips. The same calculations should be used for political activity and total activity time in a particular location and then the percentage of political activity time should be multiplied by the food, lodging, transportation, and other relevant costs incurred in the location of the political activity.

As you know, reimbursement is not required for costs incurred by official travelers on a mixed trip or an all-political trip.

Dave,

FYI, I talked to Nelson. He said he was planning on filing a summary judgment motion, but agreed a coordinated briefing schedule made sense. I threw out Jan. 27 as a date for cross-motions, but I think he wants something earlier (mid-January, I'd bet). We agreed to talk later in the week after conferring with clients. He definitely is plugged in to what is happening with the Reagan records (knows they're under active review, etc.), and we had a hypothetical discussion about what it would mean if all documents were released. He said he thinks parts of the case would still be live, so I guess he won't go gently if it turns out that Bush concurs in Reagan's determination to authorize release.

Total should be well under $10,000. There likely will be only a few travelers designated as "mixed" or political. The relevant airfare baseline is $232.50. The political entity would pay 1/4 of that amount for each "mixed" or political traveler (again, likely just the President and a handful of others in this instance). In addition, there could be some additional costs for food or ground transportation, which would be calculated in same way and also paid for by the political entity. Note that the law specifically exempts political entity from having to pay costs associated with security arrangements (e.g., Air Force One actual cost, motorcade, Secret Service, etc.). That is why the amount remains reasonable and manageable.

In a recently published letter to the editor in The Washington Times ("Judicial confirmations going faster
purely humanitarian in spirit, of course - that Americans hold a thought for the helpless and voiceless among us: namely, the federal judicial nominees still awaiting action by the Senate Judiciary Committee. We called them "Americans held hostage" to a particularly virulent strain of Democratic politicking.

Mr. Leahy's rambling dissent - which, regrettably, must have been written over Thanksgiving vacation - may be summarized thus: "Eighteen judges . . . eight more . . . another 10 . . . will approach 30 . . . exceeding the total and doubling the total . . . nine hearings . . . twenty-eight judicial nominees . . . two unprecedented hearings . . . including one that no Republican bothered to attend." And there was even more helpful information from Mr. Leahy. "Five hearings . . . 21 nominees . . . two nominees," he wrote. "Commercial flights grounded . . . anthrax contamination . . . the Judiciary Committee kept working," he explained. "Five more judicial nominees . . . hearings on 10 . . . hearings on more . . . held more hearings . . . more nominees . . . more nominees . . . confirmed more judges . . . does credit to the Senate." Hear ye, hear ye. Even without benefit of a numerological analysis by Louis Farrakhan, any layman with half a mind for figures can tell that the Senate Judiciary Committee under Patrick "Greased Lightning" Leahy must have confirmed about 223 judicial nominees, give or take a dozen hearings. This is a particularly astonishing feat, given that the president has nominated just 64 men and women to the bench. Why, federal courthouses across the nation must be hanging "No Vacancy" signs on the scales of justice while the truth goes marching on. Or does it? A close examination of Mr. Leahy's blizzard of figures reveals - and it pains us to say this - a bit of a snow job. The Vermont Senator notes that, by Nov. 14, the Senate had confirmed 18 judges selected by President Bush, who picked his first nominees last May. "This is 10 more than were confirmed by the same date in the first year of the Clinton administration," Mr. Leahy wrote (italics added).

It is indeed true that, by Nov. 24,1993, eight Clinton nominees (who had not been named until August) had been confirmed. But why does Mr. Leahy's history lesson stop on Nov. 14? After all, his letter is dated Nov. 26. Could it be because, on Nov. 20, 1993, the Senate confirmed 19 more Clinton judges? This adds up to the confirmation of 27 Clinton judges inside of three months. Even Mr. Leahy would agree that 27 is somewhat larger than 18 - or would he? Higher math aside, a simple ratio for easy comparison remains. Eighteen out of President Bush's 64 nominees have been confirmed. To date, this comes to a none-too-stellar 28 percent success rate. Compare Mr. Bush's record with those of his predecessors' first years in office: President Clinton hit 57 percent, with 27 confirmations out of 47 nominations; the previous President Bush managed 62 percent, with 15 confirmations out of 24; and Ronald Reagan, back in the days before "Borking" was a word, saw a Democratic-controlled Senate put 41 of his 45 new nominees on the bench, for a whopping 91 percent success rate.

In his letter to The Washington Times, Mr. Leahy promised to confirm about 10 more of Mr.

REV_00083608

nominees before the year ends. This, at least, is a little bit of good news for the overloaded justice system, which has been stretched dangerously thin by its 111 vacancies. Meanwhile, it should be remembered that the state of the judiciary is more than the sum of its vacancy and confirmation rates. As slowly - sorry - as lightning-fast as Mr. Leahy would have us believe he has acted on Mr. Bush's less-controversial nominees (who, after all, included a recess appointment of Mr. Clinton's), that rate will seem like quicksilver next to the plan of inaction that Mr. Leahy and his staff have in store for Mr. Bush's more conservative picks, such as Miguel Estrada and John Roberts, two stellar choices for the undermanned D.C. Court of Appeals.

The hostage crisis not only continues, but promises to get worse in the days ahead.

Justice on Hold

Investor's Business Daily
Friday, November 30, 2001

Judges: Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy is blocking President Bush's picks for judges. Why? He seems to distrust the rule of law. His claims notwithstanding, Leahy has played the rankest politics with Bush's judicial nominations. As of this writing, just 18 of Bush's picks have been confirmed for a 28% approval rate. By contrast, Presidents Reagan, Bush Sr. and Clinton had 91%, 62% and 57% approval rates in their first years. While Reagan and Clinton had Senates held by their parties, Bush Sr. did not. And he still got more judges through than his son. As point man on the judicial picks, Leahy seemingly has the full support of Senate Democrats. Michigan Sens. Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow, for instance, have convinced Leahy to do nothing on Bush's picks for the Sixth Circuit. Why? Because Bush refused to renominate two Michiganders for the bench that former President Clinton nominated just days before leaving office. Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., has prevailed on Leahy to hold up on nominations to the Fourth Circuit if his - not the president's - pick from North Carolina isn't nominated. That no principle guides Leahy other than partisan politics is seen in his own statements. On Oct. 11, 2000, when Democrats were complaining about Republicans' alleged foot-dragging on Clinton's judicial picks, Leahy said: "I have agreed with Gov. George Bush, who has said that in the Senate a nominee ought to get a vote, up or down, within 60 days." At least four of Bush's picks have been waiting more than 160 days. Earlier in 2000, Leahy's indignation rang out: "The Senate should get about the business of voting on the confirmation of the scores of judicial nominations that have been delayed. . That is our constitutional responsibility. It should not be shirked." Shirking is actually what Leahy is doing. With a fifth of the 101 vacancies on the federal bench labeled "judicial emergencies," Leahy cares not for his responsibility. Nor, it seems, for the rule of law. All the judges he's blocked come from the constructionist school of jurisprudence; that is, they interpret the law, not create it. His agenda would no doubt falter if there weren't activist judges to confirm it. It seems odd that Leahy is so concerned about Bush's military tribunals departing from established standards of justice. After all, he's shown that he's willing to depart from such standards when it suits him.

Senator Daschle Must Remove 'Leaky Leahy' From Judiciary Committee

Rev. Louis P. Sheldon
Traditional Values Coalition
Tuesday, December 4, 2001

Washington, DC - Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT), head of the Senate Judiciary Committee is probably one of the most powerful men in the Senate. He may also be one of the most unreliable and a threat to our national security. Senator Tom Daschle should remove Leahy from heading any Senate committee and prohibit him from sitting on any committee handling intelligence information.

Surely, Majority Leader Daschle knows about Leahy's sad history of leaking classified information, yet he placed him as head of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Leahy gained notoriety in 1987 for his role in leaking classified information in 1986 about a covert operation by the Reagan Administration against Libyan dictator Moammar Gaddhafi.

Leahy, at the time, was on the Senate Intelligence Committee. Leaky Leahy was quoted in the Washington Times as saying he thought this effort "was the most ridiculous thing I had seen, and also the most irresponsible." Apparently he felt obligated to leak this intelligence information to the press-and the plan was aborted. One can only wonder how many innocent civilians have died since then because of Gaddhafi's terrorist activities.

Leahy also leaked intelligence information in 1985 dealing with the terrorist attack on the cruise ship Achille Lauro. The San Diego Union-Tribune reported that this leak apparently cost the life of at least one Egyptian operative who was working on the case. When Leahy leaks, people die.

The Senate conducted an internal investigation of Leahy's penchant for leaking classified information, and he was allowed to save face by resigning from the intelligence committee.

Thanks to Tom Daschle's committee assignments, Leaky Leahy is currently stonewalling President Bush's judicial nominees and recently held the first of several hearings to grill Attorney General Ashcroft and Justice Department officials on their efforts to fight terrorism here and around the world. Last week's hearing conducted by Leaky Leahy was called "Department of Justice Oversight: Preserving Our Freedoms While Defending Against Terrorism."

Leahy claims to be concerned about civil liberties and our national security, but his track record is dismal. He has previously compromised U.S. national security for partisan political purposes. There is little to make us confident that he will not again jeopardize national security by leaking future classified information to the press if it suits his political agenda.

Senator Daschle is ultimately responsible for this situation. He determines who will head Senate committees. He should remove Leahy immediately for the sake of national security. The unfortunate truth is that Leaky Leahy is the one who deserves to be investigated, not Attorney General John Ashcroft or the Justice Department. Providing classified information to Senator Leahy constitutes a potential security breach and American operatives may die as a result.

Sen. Daschle must understand this fact and act now to relieve Leahy of his duties.

Judicial Confirmations Called Significantly Low

By Audrey Hudson
The Washington Times
Friday, November 30, 2001

The percentage of President Bush's judicial confirmations is significantly lower than previous administrations, according to a nonpartisan congressional report.

The survey by the Congressional Research Service reports that Mr. Bush has put forward 64 district and circuit court nominations since May, but only 18 have been approved by the full Senate — a confirmation rate of 28 percent.

"It's the slowest in memory when you look at confirmation rates," said Tom Jipping, judicial selection monitoring project director for the Free Congress Foundation.

The Judiciary Committee approved nine judges yesterday and a full vote is expected before the Senate adjourns. That would bring the final number to 27 confirmations.

President Clinton nominated 47 judges his first year and 27 were approved — a confirmation rate of 57 percent.

During the entire Clinton administration 374 judges were confirmed — just five judges shy of a record set by President Reagan. When Mr. Clinton left office, 41 nominations had not been acted on by the Senate.

In his first year, President George Bush, father of the current president, nominated 24 judges, of which 15 were confirmed — a 62 percentage rate. Mr. Reagan saw 41 of his 45 nominations approved his first year, a confirmation rate of 91 percent.

"This Senate has more to choose from but is confirming less than any Senate in 20 years," Mr. Jipping said.

Mr. Jipping said the Democrats want to keep courts in the hands of activist, liberal judges.

"The longer they can keep Bush's judges off the bench, the more mischief those liberal activist judges can make," Mr. Jipping said.

REV_00083600

Republicans say Mr. Bush's nominees are being blocked almost wholesale based on ideology and they are alarmed by the vacancy rate on federal benches throughout the country.

"When you have over 100 vacancies, and 38 of them are considered emergency situations, you know you are in real trouble," said Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking Judiciary Committee member.

"I would say it's a disaster right now," Mr. Hatch said.

Democrats counter that hearings and confirmations are proceeding in a quicker manner than when Republicans controlled the Senate.

"Democrats have done far better than Republicans in moving forward with hearings and nominations, and this has been anything but a typical year," said David Carle, spokesman for Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat and chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Carle said they have held "unprecedented" hearings during the August recess to move the process forward, and continued hearings after the September 11 terrorist attacks and the closure of the Hart Senate Office Building after anthrax was mailed to the office of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat. Mr. Leahy was also a target of an anthrax-tainted letter discovered in a quarantined bin of congressional mail.

"It's been a difficult situation with the office being closed, but despite that the record compares favorably with the Republican record of handling nominations in the Clinton administration," Mr. Carle said.

Since July, one month after Democrats took control of the Senate, nine hearings have been held for 28 nominees. Since the terrorist attacks, an additional five hearings have been held, Mr. Carle said.

When Republicans controlled the Senate for more than six years, no confirmation hearings were held during 34 of 76 months, Mr. Carle said.

However, Mr. Jipping said final confirmations, not the number of hearings, are what counts.

Additionally, emergency vacancies on the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia are hampering enforcement of anti-terrorism legislation recently passed by Congress, Mr. Hatch said.

"The anti-terrorism bill depends almost exclusively on this circuit court, if we don't fill those positions they can't do the job," Mr. Hatch said. "For justice to occur, these emergencies have to be filled."

Senate Judiciary Committee Approves Nine Judges

The Associated Press
Friday, November 30, 2001

Nine judicial nominations, eight for U.S. District Courts and one U.S. Appeals Court, have been forwarded to the Senate by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee approved all the judges on 19-0 votes on Thursday. It was not immediately known when the Senate would consider the nominations.

Approved were:

-Harris L. Hartz for a seat on the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which includes Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah and Wyoming.

-William P. Johnson to be a U.S. District Court judge in New Mexico.
-John D. Bates to be a U.S. District Court judge in the District of Columbia.
-Kurt D. Engelhardt to be a U.S. District Court judge in Louisiana.
-Joe L. Heaton to be a U.S. District Court judge in Oklahoma.
-Clay D. Land to be a U.S. District Court judge in Georgia.
-Frederick J. Martone to be a U.S. District Court judge in Arizona.
-Danny C. Reeves to be a U.S. District Court judge in Kentucky.

Congress Used to Staying All Year in Times of Crisis but Republicans See Conspiracy to Stall Nominees

By Jesse Holland
The Associated Press
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Congress appears poised to skip the normal formal adjournment this month, taking just a recess while lawmakers return home. It's something the House and Senate used to do in times of national and global trouble.

With America is at war in Afghanistan, lawmakers say they want to be able to meet on a moment's notice. Some Republicans, however, see another motive. Without a formal adjournment, President Bush will not have the power to make "recess" appointments that bypass the need for confirmation by a Democratic-controlled Senate. "That may be what's behind this, trying to make it tough on the president so he can't run the country well," said Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the top Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"There are a lot of games being played to try and embarrass this president so they can win seats next year. To me it's abysmal, abominable and downright cheap, but that's the way it is."

Normally, Congress adjourns "sine die" - Latin for without a date - at the end of a legislative year. That brings an official end of to all business before returning in January for a new session.

Senators and House members can just go home without officially adjourning, giving them the option to reconvene without having to ask the president for a special session, Senate Historian Don Ritchie said.

Past presidents have enjoyed periods of unilateral power when Congress is not in session.

"They've been very reluctant to call the Congress back into session, which would give the executive branch another branch to consult with instead of just being able to act on their own," Ritchie said. "The executive branch feels it works fine without the legislative branch in town."

Protecting their turf, lawmakers have become accustomed to keeping Congress formally in session during times of crisis. The first time Congress stayed all year was in 1940, while World War II raged in Europe.

"Although America wasn't involved at the time," Ritchie said, "lawmakers felt that they needed to be in Washington just in case."

The pattern has been repeated several times: in 1950, during the Korean War; in 1963, after the Kennedy assassination; in 1973, during Watergate; in 1979, during the Iran hostage crisis; in 1991, during the Gulf War; and in 1995, the first year of the Republican takeover of Congress.

"Republicans were in control of Congress that year, and didn't want to leave Washington and leave a Democratic president in charge," Ritchie said. Bill Clinton was president.

In addition to having the stage to himself when Congress adjourns, the president also gets to bypass Senate consideration of his nominations and place people he wants directly into federal judgeships and important policy positions.

Although not permanent, these recess appointments can run for more than a year, until Congress adjourns at the end of the next session. If the Senate does not ratify the president's appointments by then, they expire.

Clinton angered Republicans by using this power to appoint the first openly gay ambassador, the first black appeals court judge in a heavily southern judicial circuit and an affirmative action advocate to run the Justice Department's civil rights office after he was rejected by a Senate committee.

The appeals court judge, Roger Gregory, was the only one to keep his job once Bush took office.

Bush has had problems getting as many judicial nominations through the Senate as he would like. While he has nominated 64 judges, the Senate has confirmed 18 of them since June.

Hatch said the Bush administration has "pretty much made the point that they're not going to do much in the way of recess appointments" of federal judges.

But many other nominees also are hanging. Not counting the judicial nominations, U.S. attorneys, U.S.
marshals and ambassadors, 67 presidential appointees await confirmation by the Senate.

Among them are Otto Reich to assistant secretary of state for Western Hemisphere Affairs and John Walters as White House drug policy director. The Senate could act as early as this week on Walters but Democrats have refused so far to even hold a hearing on Reich's nomination.

Unworthy Delay Vice President Presses for Confirmations

The Daily Oklahoman
Friday, November 30, 2001

Hispanic groups recently added their voices to a growing chorus which is frustrated over Senate consideration of President Bush's judicial nominees - including Miguel Estrada, nominee for the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals.

But the most notable elevation of the issue in the last few weeks came when Vice President Dick Cheney expressed hope the Senate "will speed up the confirmation of federal judges. There is a dual responsibility here that we all understand. The president has discharged his duty by nominating well-qualified men and women to the federal district and circuit courts. "Yet there are today more vacancies on the federal bench than there were the day we were inaugurated. The pace of new vacancies is actually faster than the pace of confirmations. Barely one in four of President Bush's nominees have been given a hearing and a vote. This should be unacceptable to anyone concerned about the administration of justice in our country."

Cheney, a veteran of political wars in the nation's capital, had not said much on the confirmation delays until this month. He noted, "The deliberate slowing of the confirmation process is unworthy of the United States Senate, and an injustice to the men and women whose names have been presented. These are good people, each and every one of them selected with care by the president himself.

"The president announced his initial eleven nominees on May 9, more than six months ago. Yet of these only three have had hearings.... These nominations are not being held up for lack of support. On the contrary, few doubt they would be swiftly confirmed by the full Senate, if only given that chance. By any standard of judicial merit, they are fully qualified to serve. And by any standard of fairness, they deserve a hearing.

"In that spirit, simple fairness, and in the interest of the nation, I appeal to the Senate Judiciary Committee to proceed without further delay in filling the vacancies on our federal courts.

"I'm confident that this matter will be resolved, and the interests of the nation well served in the months to come.... This is a moment of opportunity. All of us have been given a new perspective on old differences, and perhaps a better sense of the great things we can achieve together."

We hope Cheney's confidence is well placed. The liberal Democrats who control the Senate should move these judicial nominees forward by late January. If they refuse, Bush should make judicial confirmations, and deliberate efforts by liberal Democrats to delay the administration of justice, major themes in his State of the Union speech.

Give Them Hearings

The Washington Post
Friday, November 30, 2001

Six months ago, President Bush named 11 nominees to federal courts of appeals. To date, exactly three of these people have been confirmed by the Senate. The other eight have not even received hearings from the Senate Judiciary Committee. This would be bad under any circumstances; it's particularly so with more than 100 judgeships vacant and many courts hurting. By year's end, for example, half of the authorized slots on the 6th Circuit will be empty. The D.C. Circuit has four vacancies out of 12. Yet the Senate has moved on nominees to neither court since the president named them in May. The Judiciary Committee chairman, Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy, has offered no reasonable justification for stalling on these nominations. The Senate, so far this year, has confirmed 18 nominees -- most of them uncontroversial, and most of them district judges. Mr. Leahy's spokesman says that focusing on the least controversial nominations to lower-ranking courts enables the Senate to get the most done the quickest. This approach, which mimics the one that Mr. Leahy's predecessor as committee chairman -- Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch -- employed during the Clinton administration, also allows the Senate to confirm a respectable number of nominees while going slow on any that might raise the hackles of liberal senators or interest groups. But controversial nominees are no less entitled to hearings. Failing to hold them in a timely fashion damages the judiciary, disrespects the president's power to name judges and is grossly unfair to often well-qualified nominees.

One example is D.C. Circuit nominee John Roberts, a respected appellate lawyer who -- along with attorney Miguel Estrada – was named to the court in the president's first batch of nominees. Mr. Roberts was originally nominated by the elder President Bush, only to see his nomination languish and finally die after Bill Clinton's election. Now he is waiting again -- and for no good reason. Another example is Michael McConnell, a law professor in Utah whom Mr. Bush named to the 10th Circuit. Again, no hearing and no public explanation. If senators have anxieties about these -- or other -- nominees, the proper thing to do is to question them in hearings or vote against confirmation, not hold them up. The fact that lengthy delays were employed against Mr. Clinton's nominees does not excuse the practice now. Mr. Clinton deserved better -- and so does Mr. Bush.

Daschle's Deception

By Thomas Jipping, Free Congress Foundation
The Washington Times
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Your Nov. 29 front-page report on judicial confirmations quoted Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota as making two of the Democrats' most misleading and false claims ("GOP charges 'profiling' of Hispanic nominee").

His first claim - that Democrats are "ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year" in confirming judicial nominees - is based on the misleading comparison of confirmation totals rather than confirmation rates. As Mr. Daschle knows, presidents do not make the same number of nominations or make them at the same time; as such, comparing isolated totals is meaningless.

In 1989, President Bush began nominations in August and the Senate confirmed 15 of his 23 nominees. This year, President Bush began nominations in May, and the Senate has confirmed just 18 of his 64 nominees. Yes, 18 is higher than 15. But this year's 28 percent confirmation rate is less than half of 1989's 65 percent rate. No matter what the totals, the Senate may have done as much as it could in 1989, but it is doing as little as it can now.

His second claim - that Republicans are "responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years" - is just a lie.

When Democrats ran the Senate from 1991 to 1994, judicial vacancies averaged 117. When Republicans ran the Senate from 1995 to 2000, judicial vacancies averaged 71. During Republican Senate control, vacancies were never as high as in each of the last six months under Democratic control. Republicans can certainly not be blamed for vacancies today being 25 percent higher than when Mr. Bush took office, despite his having sent the Senate 64 nominees by mid-October.

Judicial Appointment Holdup

The Voice of the Times
The Anchorage Daily News
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Perhaps we were overly optimistic - maybe even a bit naive - in suggesting last week that state Superior Court Judge Ralph Beistline would have a quick and easy time en route to confirmation as a new member of the U.S. District Court in Alaska.

There's no question about his qualifications. He already has proved himself an able and distinguished trial court judge since his appointment to the Superior Court in October 1992. Personally and professionally, he is high quality all around - a perfect choice to move up to the federal bench. So it was easy to say his confirmation route through the U.S. Senate should be a breeze.

What we were not aware of at the time is that Judge Beistline now has become one of 46 men and women nominated to the federal bench by President George W. Bush who have hit a roadblock in the Senate.

The hitch is Sen. Patrick Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. He alone is stopping Senate action on all of these nominations - playing a blatant game of political partisanship.

Despite all the pretensions of bipartisanship being claimed by Senate big shots, Leahy simply doesn't want the Republican president to fill any federal court vacancies.

Beistline, one of five judicial nominees submitted to the Senate by President Bush in November, is caught in this arrogant senator's net. So are five who were nominated in October, seven who were nominated in September, 10 who were nominated in August, one who was nominated in July, five who were nominated in June, and 13 whose names went to the Senate in May.

We can't speak to the qualifications of the other 45 nominees, but we do know that Judge Beistline is a superior choice for the federal bench. He should be confirmed without delay.

Sen. Leahy brings no distinction to himself by his politically motivated refusal to act on these nominations.

In a recently published letter to the editor in The Washington Times ("Judicial confirmations going faster
purely humanitarian in spirit, of course - that Americans hold a thought for the helpless and voiceless among us: namely, the federal judicial nominees still awaiting action by the Senate Judiciary Committee. We called them "Americans held hostage" to a particularly virulent strain of Democratic politicking.

Mr. Leahy's rambling dissent - which, regrettably, must have been written over Thanksgiving vacation - may be summarized thus: "Eighteen judges . . . eight more . . . another 10 . . . will approach 30 . . . exceeding the total and doubling the total . . . nine hearings . . . twenty-eight judicial nominees . . . two unprecedented hearings . . . including one that no Republican bothered to attend." And there was even more helpful information from Mr. Leahy. "Five hearings . . . 21 nominees . . . two nominees," he wrote. "Commercial flights grounded . . . anthrax contamination . . . the Judiciary Committee kept working," he explained. "Five more judicial nominees . . . hearings on 10 . . . hearings on more . . . held more hearings . . . more nominees . . . more nominees . . . confirmed more judges . . . does credit to the Senate." Hear ye, hear ye. Even without benefit of a numerological analysis by Louis Farrakhan, any layman with half a mind for figures can tell that the Senate Judiciary Committee under Patrick "Greased Lightning" Leahy must have confirmed about 223 judicial nominees, give or take a dozen hearings. This is a particularly astonishing feat, given that the president has nominated just 64 men and women to the bench. Why, federal courthouses across the nation must be hanging "No Vacancy" signs on the scales of justice while the truth goes marching on. Or does it? A close examination of Mr. Leahy's blizzard of figures reveals - and it pains us to say this - a bit of a snow job. The Vermont Senator notes that, by Nov. 14, the Senate had confirmed 18 judges selected by President Bush, who picked his first nominees last May. "This is 10 more than were confirmed by the same date in the first year of the Clinton administration," Mr. Leahy wrote (italics added).

It is indeed true that, by Nov. 24,1993, eight Clinton nominees (who had not been named until August) had been confirmed. But why does Mr. Leahy's history lesson stop on Nov. 14? After all, his letter is dated Nov. 26. Could it be because, on Nov. 20, 1993, the Senate confirmed 19 more Clinton judges? This adds up to the confirmation of 27 Clinton judges inside of three months. Even Mr. Leahy would agree that 27 is somewhat larger than 18 - or would he? Higher math aside, a simple ratio for easy comparison remains. Eighteen out of President Bush's 64 nominees have been confirmed. To date, this comes to a none-too-stellar 28 percent success rate. Compare Mr. Bush's record with those of his predecessors' first years in office: President Clinton hit 57 percent, with 27 confirmations out of 47 nominations; the previous President Bush managed 62 percent, with 15 confirmations out of 24; and Ronald Reagan, back in the days before "Borking" was a word, saw a Democratic-controlled Senate put 41 of his 45 new nominees on the bench, for a whopping 91 percent success rate.

In his letter to The Washington Times, Mr. Leahy promised to confirm about 10 more of Mr.

Bush's
nominees before the year ends. This, at least, is a little bit of good news for the overloaded justice system, which has been stretched dangerously thin by its 111 vacancies. Meanwhile, it should be remembered that the state of the judiciary is more than the sum of its vacancy and confirmation rates. As slowly - sorry - as lightning-fast as Mr. Leahy would have us believe he has acted on Mr. Bush's less-controversial nominees (who, after all, included a recess appointment of Mr. Clinton's), that rate will seem like quicksilver next to the plan of inaction that Mr. Leahy and his staff have in store for Mr. Bush's more conservative picks, such as Miguel Estrada and John Roberts, two stellar choices for the undermanned D.C. Court of Appeals.

The hostage crisis not only continues, but promises to get worse in the days ahead.

Justice on Hold

Investor's Business Daily
Friday, November 30, 2001

Judges: Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy is blocking President Bush's picks for judges. Why? He seems to distrust the rule of law. His claims notwithstanding, Leahy has played the rankest politics with Bush's judicial nominations. As of this writing, just 18 of Bush's picks have been confirmed for a 28% approval rate. By contrast, Presidents Reagan, Bush Sr. and Clinton had 91%, 62% and 57% approval rates in their first years. While Reagan and Clinton had Senates held by their parties, Bush Sr. did not. And he still got more judges through than his son. As point man on the judicial picks, Leahy seemingly has the full support of Senate Democrats. Michigan Sens. Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow, for instance, have convinced Leahy to do nothing on Bush's picks for the Sixth Circuit. Why? Because Bush refused to renominate two Michiganders for the bench that former President Clinton nominated just days before leaving office. Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., has prevailed on Leahy to hold up on nominations to the Fourth Circuit if his - not the president's - pick from North Carolina isn't nominated. That no principle guides Leahy other than partisan politics is seen in his own statements. On Oct. 11, 2000, when Democrats were complaining about Republicans' alleged foot-dragging on Clinton's judicial picks, Leahy said: "I have agreed with Gov. George Bush, who has said that in the Senate a nominee ought to get a vote, up or down, within 60 days." At least four of Bush's picks have been waiting more than 160 days. Earlier in 2000, Leahy's indignation rang out: "The Senate should get about the business of voting on the confirmation of the scores of judicial nominations that have been delayed. . That is our constitutional responsibility. It should not be shirked." Shirking is actually what Leahy is doing. With a fifth of the 101 vacancies on the federal bench labeled "judicial emergencies," Leahy cares not for his responsibility. Nor, it seems, for the rule of law. All the judges he's blocked come from the constructionist school of jurisprudence; that is, they interpret the law, not create it. His agenda would no doubt falter if there weren't activist judges to confirm it. It seems odd that Leahy is so concerned about Bush's military tribunals departing from established standards of justice. After all, he's shown that he's willing to depart from such standards when it suits him.

Senator Daschle Must Remove 'Leaky Leahy' From Judiciary Committee

Rev. Louis P. Sheldon
Tuesday, December 4, 2001

Washington, DC - Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT), head of the Senate Judiciary Committee is probably one of the most powerful men in the Senate. He may also be one of the most unreliable and a threat to our national security. Senator Tom Daschle should remove Leahy from heading any Senate committee and prohibit him from sitting on any committee handling intelligence information.

Surely, Majority Leader Daschle knows about Leahy's sad history of leaking classified information, yet he placed him as head of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Leahy gained notoriety in 1987 for his role in leaking classified information in 1986 about a covert operation by the Reagan Administration against Libyan dictator Moammar Gaddhafi.

Leahy, at the time, was on the Senate Intelligence Committee. Leaky Leahy was quoted in the Washington Times as saying he thought this effort "was the most ridiculous thing I had seen, and also the most irresponsible." Apparently he felt obligated to leak this intelligence information to the press-and the plan was aborted. One can only wonder how many innocent civilians have died since then because of Gaddhafi's terrorist activities.

Leahy also leaked intelligence information in 1985 dealing with the terrorist attack on the cruise ship Achille Lauro. The San Diego Union-Tribune reported that this leak apparently cost the life of at least one Egyptian operative who was working on the case. When Leahy leaks, people die.

The Senate conducted an internal investigation of Leahy's penchant for leaking classified information, and he was allowed to save face by resigning from the intelligence committee.

Thanks to Tom Daschle's committee assignments, Leaky Leahy is currently stonewalling President Bush's judicial nominees and recently held the first of several hearings to grill Attorney General Ashcroft and Justice Department officials on their efforts to fight terrorism here and around the world. Last week's hearing conducted by Leaky Leahy was called "Department of Justice Oversight: Preserving Our Freedoms While Defending Against Terrorism."

Leahy claims to be concerned about civil liberties and our national security, but his track record is dismal. He has previously compromised U.S. national security for partisan political purposes. There is little to make us confident that he will not again jeopardize national security by leaking future classified information to the press if it suits his political agenda.

Senator Daschle is ultimately responsible for this situation. He determines who will head Senate committees. He should remove Leahy immediately for the sake of national security. The unfortunate truth is that Leaky Leahy is the one who deserves to be investigated, not Attorney General John Ashcroft or the Justice Department. Providing classified information to Senator Leahy constitutes a potential security breach and American operatives may die as a result.

Sen. Daschle must understand this fact and act now to relieve Leahy of his duties.

Judicial Confirmations Called Significantly Low

By Audrey Hudson
The Washington Times
Friday, November 30, 2001

The percentage of President Bush's judicial confirmations is significantly lower than previous administrations, according to a nonpartisan congressional report.

The survey by the Congressional Research Service reports that Mr. Bush has put forward 64 district and circuit court nominations since May, but only 18 have been approved by the full Senate — a confirmation rate of 28 percent.

"It's the slowest in memory when you look at confirmation rates," said Tom Jipping, judicial selection monitoring project director for the Free Congress Foundation.

The Judiciary Committee approved nine judges yesterday and a full vote is expected before the Senate adjourns. That would bring the final number to 27 confirmations.

President Clinton nominated 47 judges his first year and 27 were approved — a confirmation rate of 57 percent.

During the entire Clinton administration 374 judges were confirmed — just five judges shy of a record set by President Reagan. When Mr. Clinton left office, 41 nominations had not been acted on by the Senate.

In his first year, President George Bush, father of the current president, nominated 24 judges, of which 15 were confirmed — a 62 percentage rate. Mr. Reagan saw 41 of his 45 nominations approved his first year, a confirmation rate of 91 percent.

"This Senate has more to choose from but is confirming less than any Senate in 20 years," Mr. Jipping said.

Mr. Jipping said the Democrats want to keep courts in the hands of activist, liberal judges.

"The longer they can keep Bush's judges off the bench, the more mischief those liberal activist judges can make," Mr. Jipping said.

REV_00083617

Republicans say Mr. Bush's nominees are being blocked almost wholesale based on ideology and they are alarmed by the vacancy rate on federal benches throughout the country.

"When you have over 100 vacancies, and 38 of them are considered emergency situations, you know you are in real trouble," said Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking Judiciary Committee member.

"I would say it's a disaster right now," Mr. Hatch said.

Democrats counter that hearings and confirmations are proceeding in a quicker manner than when Republicans controlled the Senate.

"Democrats have done far better than Republicans in moving forward with hearings and nominations, and this has been anything but a typical year," said David Carle, spokesman for Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat and chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Carle said they have held "unprecedented" hearings during the August recess to move the process forward, and continued hearings after the September 11 terrorist attacks and the closure of the Hart Senate Office Building after anthrax was mailed to the office of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat. Mr. Leahy was also a target of an anthrax-tainted letter discovered in a quarantined bin of congressional mail.

"It's been a difficult situation with the office being closed, but despite that the record compares favorably with the Republican record of handling nominations in the Clinton administration," Mr. Carle said.

Since July, one month after Democrats took control of the Senate, nine hearings have been held for 28 nominees. Since the terrorist attacks, an additional five hearings have been held, Mr. Carle said.

When Republicans controlled the Senate for more than six years, no confirmation hearings were held during 34 of 76 months, Mr. Carle said.

However, Mr. Jipping said final confirmations, not the number of hearings, are what counts.

Additionally, emergency vacancies on the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia are hampering enforcement of anti-terrorism legislation recently passed by Congress, Mr. Hatch said.

"The anti-terrorism bill depends almost exclusively on this circuit court, if we don't fill those positions they can't do the job," Mr. Hatch said. "For justice to occur, these emergencies have to be filled."

Senate Judiciary Committee Approves Nine Judges

The Associated Press
Friday, November 30, 2001

Nine judicial nominations, eight for U.S. District Courts and one U.S. Appeals Court, have been forwarded to the Senate by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee approved all the judges on 19-0 votes on Thursday. It was not immediately known when the Senate would consider the nominations.

Approved were:

-Harris L. Hartz for a seat on the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which includes Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah and Wyoming.

-William P. Johnson to be a U.S. District Court judge in New Mexico.
-John D. Bates to be a U.S. District Court judge in the District of Columbia.
-Kurt D. Engelhardt to be a U.S. District Court judge in Louisiana.
-Joe L. Heaton to be a U.S. District Court judge in Oklahoma.
-Clay D. Land to be a U.S. District Court judge in Georgia.
-Frederick J. Martone to be a U.S. District Court judge in Arizona.
-Danny C. Reeves to be a U.S. District Court judge in Kentucky.
-Julie A. Robinson to be a U.S. District Court judge in Kansas.

Also sent to the Senate were the nominations of James E. Rogan to be director of the U.S. Patent and Trademark office and Thomas L. Sansonetti to be Assistant Attorney General for the Environment and Natural Resources Division.

By Jesse Holland
The Associated Press
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Congress appears poised to skip the normal formal adjournment this month, taking just a recess while lawmakers return home. It's something the House and Senate used to do in times of national and global trouble.

With America is at war in Afghanistan, lawmakers say they want to be able to meet on a moment's notice. Some Republicans, however, see another motive. Without a formal adjournment, President Bush will not have the power to make "recess" appointments that bypass the need for confirmation by a Democratic-controlled Senate. "That may be what's behind this, trying to make it tough on the president so he can't run the country well," said Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the top Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"There are a lot of games being played to try and embarrass this president so they can win seats next year. To me it's abysmal, abominable and downright cheap, but that's the way it is."

Normally, Congress adjourns "sine die" - Latin for without a date - at the end of a legislative year. That brings an official end of to all business before returning in January for a new session.

Senators and House members can just go home without officially adjourning, giving them the option to reconvene without having to ask the president for a special session, Senate Historian Don Ritchie said.

Past presidents have enjoyed periods of unilateral power when Congress is not in session.

"They've been very reluctant to call the Congress back into session, which would give the executive branch another branch to consult with instead of just being able to act on their own," Ritchie said. "The executive branch feels it works fine without the legislative branch in town."

Protecting their turf, lawmakers have become accustomed to keeping Congress formally in session during times of crisis. The first time Congress stayed all year was in 1940, while World War II raged in Europe.

"Although America wasn't involved at the time," Ritchie said, "lawmakers felt that they needed to be in Washington just in case."

The pattern has been repeated several times: in 1950, during the Korean War; in 1963, after the Kennedy assassination; in 1973, during Watergate; in 1979, during the Iran hostage crisis; in 1991, during the Gulf War; and in 1995, the first year of the Republican takeover of Congress.

"Republicans were in control of Congress that year, and didn't want to leave Washington and leave a Democratic president in charge," Ritchie said. Bill Clinton was president.

In addition to having the stage to himself when Congress adjourns, the president also gets to bypass Senate consideration of his nominations and place people he wants directly into federal judgeships and important policy positions.

Although not permanent, these recess appointments can run for more than a year, until Congress adjourns at the end of the next session. If the Senate does not ratify the president's appointments by then, they expire.

Clinton angered Republicans by using this power to appoint the first openly gay ambassador, the first black appeals court judge in a heavily southern judicial circuit and an affirmative action advocate to run the Justice Department's civil rights office after he was rejected by a Senate committee.

The appeals court judge, Roger Gregory, was the only one to keep his job once Bush took office.

Bush has had problems getting as many judicial nominations through the Senate as he would like. While he has nominated 64 judges, the Senate has confirmed 18 of them since June.

Hatch said the Bush administration has "pretty much made the point that they're not going to do much in the way of recess appointments" of federal judges.

But many other nominees also are hanging. Not counting the judicial nominations, U.S. attorneys, U.S.
marshals and ambassadors, 67 presidential appointees await confirmation by the Senate.

Among them are Otto Reich to assistant secretary of state for Western Hemisphere Affairs and John Walters as White House drug policy director. The Senate could act as early as this week on Walters but Democrats have refused so far to even hold a hearing on Reich's nomination.

Op/Eds

Unworthy Delay Vice President Presses for Confirmations

The Daily Oklahoman
Friday, November 30, 2001

Hispanic groups recently added their voices to a growing chorus which is frustrated over Senate consideration of President Bush's judicial nominees - including Miguel Estrada, nominee for the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals.

But the most notable elevation of the issue in the last few weeks came when Vice President Dick Cheney expressed hope the Senate "will speed up the confirmation of federal judges. There is a dual responsibility here that we all understand. The president has discharged his duty by nominating well-qualified men and women to the federal district and circuit courts. "Yet there are today more vacancies on the federal bench than there were the day we were inaugurated. The pace of new vacancies is actually faster than the pace of confirmations. Barely one in four of President Bush's nominees have been given a hearing and a vote. This should be unacceptable to anyone concerned about the administration of justice in our country."

Cheney, a veteran of political wars in the nation's capital, had not said much on the confirmation delays until this month. He noted, "The deliberate slowing of the confirmation process is unworthy of the United States Senate, and an injustice to the men and women whose names have been presented. These are good people, each and every one of them selected with care by the president himself.

"The president announced his initial eleven nominees on May 9, more than six months ago. Yet of these only three have had hearings.... These nominations are not being held up for lack of support. On the contrary, few doubt they would be swiftly confirmed by the full Senate, if only given that chance. By any standard of judicial merit, they are fully qualified to serve. And by any standard of fairness, they deserve a hearing.

"In that spirit, simple fairness, and in the interest of the nation, I appeal to the Senate Judiciary Committee to proceed without further delay in filling the vacancies on our federal courts.

"I'm confident that this matter will be resolved, and the interests of the nation well served in the months to come.... This is a moment of opportunity. All of us have been given a new perspective on old differences, and perhaps a better sense of the great things we can achieve together."

We hope Cheney's confidence is well placed. The liberal Democrats who control the Senate should move these judicial nominees forward by late January. If they refuse, Bush should make judicial confirmations, and deliberate efforts by liberal Democrats to delay the administration of justice, major themes in his State of the Union speech.

Give Them Hearings

The Washington Post
Friday, November 30, 2001

Six months ago, President Bush named 11 nominees to federal courts of appeals. To date, exactly three of these people have been confirmed by the Senate. The other eight have not even received hearings from the Senate Judiciary Committee. This would be bad under any circumstances; it's particularly so with more than 100 judgeships vacant and many courts hurting. By year's end, for example, half of the authorized slots on the 6th Circuit will be empty. The D.C. Circuit has four vacancies out of 12. Yet the Senate has moved on nominees to neither court since the president named them in May. The Judiciary Committee chairman, Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy, has offered no reasonable justification for stalling on these nominations. The Senate, so far this year, has confirmed 18 nominees -- most of them uncontroversial, and most of them district judges. Mr. Leahy's spokesman says that focusing on the least controversial nominations to lower-ranking courts enables the Senate to get the most done the quickest. This approach, which mimics the one that Mr. Leahy's predecessor as committee chairman -- Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch -- employed during the Clinton administration, also allows the Senate to confirm a respectable number of nominees while going slow on any that might raise the hackles of liberal senators or interest groups. But controversial nominees are no less entitled to hearings. Failing to hold them in a timely fashion damages the judiciary, disrespects the president's power to name judges and is grossly unfair to often well-qualified nominees.

One example is D.C. Circuit nominee John Roberts, a respected appellate lawyer who -- along with attorney Miguel Estrada – was named to the court in the president's first batch of nominees. Mr. Roberts was originally nominated by the elder President Bush, only to see his nomination languish and finally die after Bill Clinton's election. Now he is waiting again -- and for no good reason. Another example is Michael McConnell, a law professor in Utah whom Mr. Bush named to the 10th Circuit. Again, no hearing and no public explanation. If senators have anxieties about these -- or other -- nominees, the proper thing to do is to question them in hearings or vote against confirmation, not hold them up. The fact that lengthy delays were employed against Mr. Clinton's nominees does not excuse the practice now. Mr. Clinton deserved better -- and so does Mr. Bush.

Daschle's Deception

By Thomas Jipping, Free Congress Foundation
The Washington Times
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Your Nov. 29 front-page report on judicial confirmations quoted Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota as making two of the Democrats' most misleading and false claims ("GOP charges 'profiling' of Hispanic nominee").

His first claim - that Democrats are "ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year" in confirming judicial nominees - is based on the misleading comparison of confirmation totals rather than confirmation rates. As Mr. Daschle knows, presidents do not make the same number of nominations or make them at the same time; as such, comparing isolated totals is meaningless.

In 1989, President Bush began nominations in August and the Senate confirmed 15 of his 23 nominees. This year, President Bush began nominations in May, and the Senate has confirmed just 18 of his 64 nominees. Yes, 18 is higher than 15. But this year's 28 percent confirmation rate is less than half of 1989's 65 percent rate. No matter what the totals, the Senate may have done as much as it could in 1989, but it is doing as little as it can now.

His second claim - that Republicans are "responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years" - is just a lie.

When Democrats ran the Senate from 1991 to 1994, judicial vacancies averaged 117. When Republicans ran the Senate from 1995 to 2000, judicial vacancies averaged 71. During Republican Senate control, vacancies were never as high as in each of the last six months under Democratic control. Republicans can certainly not be blamed for vacancies today being 25 percent higher than when Mr. Bush took office, despite his having sent the Senate 64 nominees by mid-October.

Judicial Appointment Holdup

The Voice of the Times
The Anchorage Daily News
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Perhaps we were overly optimistic - maybe even a bit naive - in suggesting last week that state Superior Court Judge Ralph Beistline would have a quick and easy time en route to confirmation as a new member of the U.S. District Court in Alaska.

There's no question about his qualifications. He already has proved himself an able and distinguished trial court judge since his appointment to the Superior Court in October 1992. Personally and professionally, he is high quality all around - a perfect choice to move up to the federal bench. So it was easy to say his confirmation route through the U.S. Senate should be a breeze.

What we were not aware of at the time is that Judge Beistline now has become one of 46 men and women nominated to the federal bench by President George W. Bush who have hit a roadblock in the Senate.

The hitch is Sen. Patrick Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. He alone is stopping Senate action on all of these nominations - playing a blatant game of political partisanship.

Despite all the pretensions of bipartisanship being claimed by Senate big shots, Leahy simply doesn't want the Republican president to fill any federal court vacancies.

Beistline, one of five judicial nominees submitted to the Senate by President Bush in November, is caught in this arrogant senator's net. So are five who were nominated in October, seven who were nominated in September, 10 who were nominated in August, one who was nominated in July, five who were nominated in June, and 13 whose names went to the Senate in May.

We can't speak to the qualifications of the other 45 nominees, but we do know that Judge Beistline is a superior choice for the federal bench. He should be confirmed without delay.

Sen. Leahy brings no distinction to himself by his politically motivated refusal to act on these nominations.

In a recently published letter to the editor in The Washington Times ("Judicial confirmations going faster than ever," Nov. 26), Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy responded to a suggestion -
purely humanitarian in spirit, of course - that Americans hold a thought for the helpless and voiceless among us: namely, the federal judicial nominees still awaiting action by the Senate Judiciary Committee. We called them "Americans held hostage" to a particularly virulent strain of Democratic politicking.

Mr. Leahy's rambling dissent - which, regrettably, must have been written over Thanksgiving vacation - may be summarized thus: "Eighteen judges . . . eight more . . . another 10 . . . will approach 30 . . . exceeding the total and doubling the total . . . nine hearings . . . twenty-eight judicial nominees . . . two unprecedented hearings . . . including one that no Republican bothered to attend." And there was even more helpful information from Mr. Leahy. "Five hearings . . . 21 nominees . . . two nominees," he wrote. "Commercial flights grounded . . . anthrax contamination . . . the Judiciary Committee kept working," he explained. "Five more judicial nominees . . . hearings on 10 . . . hearings on more . . . held more hearings . . . more nominees . . . more nominees . . . confirmed more judges . . . does credit to the Senate." Hear ye, hear ye. Even without benefit of a numerological analysis by Louis Farrakhan, any layman with half a mind for figures can tell that the Senate Judiciary Committee under Patrick "Greased Lightning" Leahy must have confirmed about 223 judicial nominees, give or take a dozen hearings. This is a particularly astonishing feat, given that the president has nominated just 64 men and women to the bench. Why, federal courthouses across the nation must be hanging "No Vacancy" signs on the scales of justice while the truth goes marching on. Or does it? A close examination of Mr. Leahy's blizzard of figures reveals - and it pains us to say this - a bit of a snow job. The Vermont Senator notes that, by Nov. 14, the Senate had confirmed 18 judges selected by President Bush, who picked his first nominees last May. "This is 10 more than were confirmed by the same date in the first year of the Clinton administration," Mr. Leahy wrote (italics added).

It is indeed true that, by Nov. 24,1993, eight Clinton nominees (who had not been named until August) had been confirmed. But why does Mr. Leahy's history lesson stop on Nov. 14? After all, his letter is dated Nov. 26. Could it be because, on Nov. 20, 1993, the Senate confirmed 19 more Clinton judges? This adds up to the confirmation of 27 Clinton judges inside of three months. Even Mr. Leahy would agree that 27 is somewhat larger than 18 - or would he? Higher math aside, a simple ratio for easy comparison remains. Eighteen out of President Bush's 64 nominees have been confirmed. To date, this comes to a none-too-stellar 28 percent success rate. Compare Mr. Bush's record with those of his predecessors' first years in office: President Clinton hit 57 percent, with 27 confirmations out of 47 nominations; the previous President Bush managed 62 percent, with 15 confirmations out of 24; and Ronald Reagan, back in the days before "Borking" was a word, saw a Democratic-controlled Senate put 41 of his 45 new nominees on the bench, for a whopping 91 percent success rate.

In his letter to The Washington Times, Mr. Leahy promised to confirm about 10 more of Mr.

Bush's
nominees before the year ends. This, at least, is a little bit of good news for the overloaded justice system, which has been stretched dangerously thin by its 111 vacancies. Meanwhile, it should be remembered that the state of the judiciary is more than the sum of its vacancy and confirmation rates. As slowly - sorry - as lightning-fast as Mr. Leahy would have us believe he has acted on Mr. Bush's less-controversial nominees (who, after all, included a recess appointment of Mr. Clinton's), that rate will seem like quicksilver next to the plan of inaction that Mr. Leahy and his staff have in store for Mr. Bush's more conservative picks, such as Miguel Estrada and John Roberts, two stellar choices for the undermanned D.C. Court of Appeals.

The hostage crisis not only continues, but promises to get worse in the days ahead.

Justice on Hold

Investor's Business Daily
Friday, November 30, 2001

Judges: Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy is blocking President Bush's picks for judges. Why? He seems to distrust the rule of law. His claims notwithstanding, Leahy has played the rankest politics with Bush's judicial nominations. As of this writing, just 18 of Bush's picks have been confirmed for a 28% approval rate. By contrast, Presidents Reagan, Bush Sr. and Clinton had 91%, 62% and 57% approval rates in their first years. While Reagan and Clinton had Senates held by their parties, Bush Sr. did not. And he still got more judges through than his son. As point man on the judicial picks, Leahy seemingly has the full support of Senate Democrats. Michigan Sens. Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow, for instance, have convinced Leahy to do nothing on Bush's picks for the Sixth Circuit. Why? Because Bush refused to renominate two Michiganders for the bench that former President Clinton nominated just days before leaving office. Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., has prevailed on Leahy to hold up on nominations to the Fourth Circuit if his - not the president's - pick from North Carolina isn't nominated. That no principle guides Leahy other than partisan politics is seen in his own statements. On Oct. 11, 2000, when Democrats were complaining about Republicans' alleged foot-dragging on Clinton's judicial picks, Leahy said: "I have agreed with Gov. George Bush, who has said that in the Senate a nominee ought to get a vote, up or down, within 60 days." At least four of Bush's picks have been waiting more than 160 days. Earlier in 2000, Leahy's indignation rang out: "The Senate should get about the business of voting on the confirmation of the scores of judicial nominations that have been delayed. . That is our constitutional responsibility. It should not be shirked." Shirking is actually what Leahy is doing. With a fifth of the 101 vacancies on the federal bench labeled "judicial emergencies," Leahy cares not for his responsibility. Nor, it seems, for the rule of law. All the judges he's blocked come from the constructionist school of jurisprudence; that is, they interpret the law, not create it. His agenda would no doubt falter if there weren't activist judges to confirm it. It seems odd that Leahy is so concerned about Bush's military tribunals departing from established standards of justice. After all, he's shown that he's willing to depart from such standards when it suits him.

Senator Daschle Must Remove 'Leaky Leahy' From Judiciary Committee

Rev. Louis P. Sheldon
Tuesday, December 4, 2001

Washington, DC - Senator Patrick Leahy (D-VT), head of the Senate Judiciary Committee is probably one of the most powerful men in the Senate. He may also be one of the most unreliable and a threat to our national security. Senator Tom Daschle should remove Leahy from heading any Senate committee and prohibit him from sitting on any committee handling intelligence information.

Surely, Majority Leader Daschle knows about Leahy's sad history of leaking classified information, yet he placed him as head of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Leahy gained notoriety in 1987 for his role in leaking classified information in 1986 about a covert operation by the Reagan Administration against Libyan dictator Moammar Gaddhafi.

Leahy, at the time, was on the Senate Intelligence Committee. Leaky Leahy was quoted in the Washington Times as saying he thought this effort "was the most ridiculous thing I had seen, and also the most irresponsible." Apparently he felt obligated to leak this intelligence information to the press-and the plan was aborted. One can only wonder how many innocent civilians have died since then because of Gaddhafi's terrorist activities.

Leahy also leaked intelligence information in 1985 dealing with the terrorist attack on the cruise ship Achille Lauro. The San Diego Union-Tribune reported that this leak apparently cost the life of at least one Egyptian operative who was working on the case. When Leahy leaks, people die.

The Senate conducted an internal investigation of Leahy's penchant for leaking classified information, and he was allowed to save face by resigning from the intelligence committee.

Thanks to Tom Daschle's committee assignments, Leaky Leahy is currently stonewalling President Bush's judicial nominees and recently held the first of several hearings to grill Attorney General Ashcroft and Justice Department officials on their efforts to fight terrorism here and around the world. Last week's hearing conducted by Leaky Leahy was called "Department of Justice Oversight: Preserving Our Freedoms While Defending Against Terrorism."

Leahy claims to be concerned about civil liberties and our national security, but his track record is dismal. He has previously compromised U.S. national security for partisan political purposes. There is little to make us confident that he will not again jeopardize national security by leaking future classified information to the press if it suits his political agenda.

Senator Daschle is ultimately responsible for this situation. He determines who will head Senate committees. He should remove Leahy immediately for the sake of national security. The unfortunate truth is that Leaky Leahy is the one who deserves to be investigated, not Attorney General John Ashcroft or the Justice Department. Providing classified information to Senator Leahy constitutes a potential security breach and American operatives may die as a result.

Sen. Daschle must understand this fact and act now to relieve Leahy of his duties.

Judicial Confirmations Called Significantly Low

By Audrey Hudson
The Washington Times
Friday, November 30, 2001

The percentage of President Bush's judicial confirmations is significantly lower than previous administrations, according to a nonpartisan congressional report.

The survey by the Congressional Research Service reports that Mr. Bush has put forward 64 district and circuit court nominations since May, but only 18 have been approved by the full Senate — a confirmation rate of 28 percent.

"It's the slowest in memory when you look at confirmation rates," said Tom Jipping, judicial selection monitoring project director for the Free Congress Foundation.

The Judiciary Committee approved nine judges yesterday and a full vote is expected before the Senate adjourns. That would bring the final number to 27 confirmations.

President Clinton nominated 47 judges his first year and 27 were approved — a confirmation rate of 57 percent.

During the entire Clinton administration 374 judges were confirmed — just five judges shy of a record set by President Reagan. When Mr. Clinton left office, 41 nominations had not been acted on by the Senate.

In his first year, President George Bush, father of the current president, nominated 24 judges, of which 15 were confirmed — a 62 percentage rate. Mr. Reagan saw 41 of his 45 nominations approved his first year, a confirmation rate of 91 percent.

"This Senate has more to choose from but is confirming less than any Senate in 20 years," Mr. Jipping said.

Mr. Jipping said the Democrats want to keep courts in the hands of activist, liberal judges.

"The longer they can keep Bush's judges off the bench, the more mischief those liberal activist judges can make," Mr. Jipping said.

REV_00083632

Republicans say Mr. Bush's nominees are being blocked almost wholesale based on ideology and they are alarmed by the vacancy rate on federal benches throughout the country.

"When you have over 100 vacancies, and 38 of them are considered emergency situations, you know you are in real trouble," said Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, Utah Republican and ranking Judiciary Committee member.

"I would say it's a disaster right now," Mr. Hatch said.

Democrats counter that hearings and confirmations are proceeding in a quicker manner than when Republicans controlled the Senate.

"Democrats have done far better than Republicans in moving forward with hearings and nominations, and this has been anything but a typical year," said David Carle, spokesman for Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, Vermont Democrat and chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Carle said they have held "unprecedented" hearings during the August recess to move the process forward, and continued hearings after the September 11 terrorist attacks and the closure of the Hart Senate Office Building after anthrax was mailed to the office of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, South Dakota Democrat. Mr. Leahy was also a target of an anthrax-tainted letter discovered in a quarantined bin of congressional mail.

"It's been a difficult situation with the office being closed, but despite that the record compares favorably with the Republican record of handling nominations in the Clinton administration," Mr. Carle said.

Since July, one month after Democrats took control of the Senate, nine hearings have been held for 28 nominees. Since the terrorist attacks, an additional five hearings have been held, Mr. Carle said.

When Republicans controlled the Senate for more than six years, no confirmation hearings were held during 34 of 76 months, Mr. Carle said.

However, Mr. Jipping said final confirmations, not the number of hearings, are what counts.

Additionally, emergency vacancies on the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia are hampering enforcement of anti-terrorism legislation recently passed by Congress, Mr. Hatch said.

"The anti-terrorism bill depends almost exclusively on this circuit court, if we don't fill those positions they can't do the job," Mr. Hatch said. "For justice to occur, these emergencies have to be filled."

Senate Judiciary Committee Approves Nine Judges

The Associated Press
Friday, November 30, 2001

Nine judicial nominations, eight for U.S. District Courts and one U.S. Appeals Court, have been forwarded to the Senate by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The committee approved all the judges on 19-0 votes on Thursday. It was not immediately known when the Senate would consider the nominations.

Approved were:

-Harris L. Hartz for a seat on the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which includes Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Utah and Wyoming.

-William P. Johnson to be a U.S. District Court judge in New Mexico.
-John D. Bates to be a U.S. District Court judge in the District of Columbia.
-Kurt D. Engelhardt to be a U.S. District Court judge in Louisiana.
-Joe L. Heaton to be a U.S. District Court judge in Oklahoma.
-Clay D. Land to be a U.S. District Court judge in Georgia.
-Frederick J. Martone to be a U.S. District Court judge in Arizona.
-Danny C. Reeves to be a U.S. District Court judge in Kentucky.
-Julie A. Robinson to be a U.S. District Court judge in Kansas.

Also sent to the Senate were the nominations of James E. Rogan to be director of the U.S. Patent and
Natural Resources Division.

Congress Used to Staying All Year in Times of Crisis but Republicans See Conspiracy to Stall Nominees

By Jesse Holland
The Associated Press
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Congress appears poised to skip the normal formal adjournment this month, taking just a recess while lawmakers return home. It's something the House and Senate used to do in times of national and global trouble.

With America is at war in Afghanistan, lawmakers say they want to be able to meet on a moment's notice. Some Republicans, however, see another motive. Without a formal adjournment, President Bush will not have the power to make "recess" appointments that bypass the need for confirmation by a Democratic-controlled Senate. "That may be what's behind this, trying to make it tough on the president so he can't run the country well," said Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the top Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"There are a lot of games being played to try and embarrass this president so they can win seats next year. To me it's abysmal, abominable and downright cheap, but that's the way it is."

Normally, Congress adjourns "sine die" - Latin for without a date - at the end of a legislative year. That brings an official end of to all business before returning in January for a new session.

Senators and House members can just go home without officially adjourning, giving them the option to reconvene without having to ask the president for a special session, Senate Historian Don Ritchie said.

Past presidents have enjoyed periods of unilateral power when Congress is not in session.

"They've been very reluctant to call the Congress back into session, which would give the executive branch another branch to consult with instead of just being able to act on their own," Ritchie said. "The executive branch feels it works fine without the legislative branch in town."

Protecting their turf, lawmakers have become accustomed to keeping Congress formally in session during times of crisis. The first time Congress stayed all year was in 1940, while World War II raged in Europe.

"Although America wasn't involved at the time," Ritchie said, "lawmakers felt that they needed to be in Washington just in case."

The pattern has been repeated several times: in 1950, during the Korean War; in 1963, after the Kennedy assassination; in 1973, during Watergate; in 1979, during the Iran hostage crisis; in 1991, during the Gulf War; and in 1995, the first year of the Republican takeover of Congress.

"Republicans were in control of Congress that year, and didn't want to leave Washington and leave a Democratic president in charge," Ritchie said. Bill Clinton was president.

In addition to having the stage to himself when Congress adjourns, the president also gets to bypass Senate consideration of his nominations and place people he wants directly into federal judgeships and important policy positions.

Although not permanent, these recess appointments can run for more than a year, until Congress adjourns at the end of the next session. If the Senate does not ratify the president's appointments by then, they expire.

Clinton angered Republicans by using this power to appoint the first openly gay ambassador, the first black appeals court judge in a heavily southern judicial circuit and an affirmative action advocate to run the Justice Department's civil rights office after he was rejected by a Senate committee.

The appeals court judge, Roger Gregory, was the only one to keep his job once Bush took office.

Bush has had problems getting as many judicial nominations through the Senate as he would like. While he has nominated 64 judges, the Senate has confirmed 18 of them since June.

Hatch said the Bush administration has "pretty much made the point that they're not going to do much in the way of recess appointments" of federal judges.

But many other nominees also are hanging. Not counting the judicial nominations, U.S. attorneys, U.S.
marshals and ambassadors, 67 presidential appointees await confirmation by the Senate.

Among them are Otto Reich to assistant secretary of state for Western Hemisphere Affairs and John Walters as White House drug policy director. The Senate could act as early as this week on Walters but Democrats have refused so far to even hold a hearing on Reich's nomination.

Unworthy Delay Vice President Presses for Confirmations

The Daily Oklahoman
Friday, November 30, 2001

Hispanic groups recently added their voices to a growing chorus which is frustrated over Senate consideration of President Bush's judicial nominees - including Miguel Estrada, nominee for the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals.

But the most notable elevation of the issue in the last few weeks came when Vice President Dick Cheney expressed hope the Senate "will speed up the confirmation of federal judges. There is a dual responsibility here that we all understand. The president has discharged his duty by nominating well-qualified men and women to the federal district and circuit courts. "Yet there are today more vacancies on the federal bench than there were the day we were inaugurated. The pace of new vacancies is actually faster than the pace of confirmations. Barely one in four of President Bush's nominees have been given a hearing and a vote. This should be unacceptable to anyone concerned about the administration of justice in our country."

Cheney, a veteran of political wars in the nation's capital, had not said much on the confirmation delays until this month. He noted, "The deliberate slowing of the confirmation process is unworthy of the United States Senate, and an injustice to the men and women whose names have been presented. These are good people, each and every one of them selected with care by the president himself.

"The president announced his initial eleven nominees on May 9, more than six months ago. Yet of these only three have had hearings.... These nominations are not being held up for lack of support. On the contrary, few doubt they would be swiftly confirmed by the full Senate, if only given that chance. By any standard of judicial merit, they are fully qualified to serve. And by any standard of fairness, they deserve a hearing.

"In that spirit, simple fairness, and in the interest of the nation, I appeal to the Senate Judiciary Committee to proceed without further delay in filling the vacancies on our federal courts.

"I'm confident that this matter will be resolved, and the interests of the nation well served in the months to come.... This is a moment of opportunity. All of us have been given a new perspective on old differences, and perhaps a better sense of the great things we can achieve together."

We hope Cheney's confidence is well placed. The liberal Democrats who control the Senate should move these judicial nominees forward by late January. If they refuse, Bush should make judicial confirmations, and deliberate efforts by liberal Democrats to delay the administration of justice, major themes in his State of the Union speech.

Give Them Hearings

The Washington Post
Friday, November 30, 2001

Six months ago, President Bush named 11 nominees to federal courts of appeals. To date, exactly three of these people have been confirmed by the Senate. The other eight have not even received hearings from the Senate Judiciary Committee. This would be bad under any circumstances; it's particularly so with more than 100 judgeships vacant and many courts hurting. By year's end, for example, half of the authorized slots on the 6th Circuit will be empty. The D.C. Circuit has four vacancies out of 12. Yet the Senate has moved on nominees to neither court since the president named them in May. The Judiciary Committee chairman, Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy, has offered no reasonable justification for stalling on these nominations. The Senate, so far this year, has confirmed 18 nominees -- most of them uncontroversial, and most of them district judges. Mr. Leahy's spokesman says that focusing on the least controversial nominations to lower-ranking courts enables the Senate to get the most done the quickest. This approach, which mimics the one that Mr. Leahy's predecessor as committee chairman -- Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch -- employed during the Clinton administration, also allows the Senate to confirm a respectable number of nominees while going slow on any that might raise the hackles of liberal senators or interest groups. But controversial nominees are no less entitled to hearings. Failing to hold them in a timely fashion damages the judiciary, disrespects the president's power to name judges and is grossly unfair to often well-qualified nominees.

One example is D.C. Circuit nominee John Roberts, a respected appellate lawyer who -- along with attorney Miguel Estrada – was named to the court in the president's first batch of nominees. Mr. Roberts was originally nominated by the elder President Bush, only to see his nomination languish and finally die after Bill Clinton's election. Now he is waiting again -- and for no good reason. Another example is Michael McConnell, a law professor in Utah whom Mr. Bush named to the 10th Circuit. Again, no hearing and no public explanation. If senators have anxieties about these -- or other -- nominees, the proper thing to do is to question them in hearings or vote against confirmation, not hold them up. The fact that lengthy delays were employed against Mr. Clinton's nominees does not excuse the practice now. Mr. Clinton deserved better -- and so does Mr. Bush.

Daschle's Deception

By Thomas Jipping, Free Congress Foundation
The Washington Times
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Your Nov. 29 front-page report on judicial confirmations quoted Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota as making two of the Democrats' most misleading and false claims ("GOP charges 'profiling' of Hispanic nominee").

His first claim - that Democrats are "ahead of where the first Bush administration was in its first year" in confirming judicial nominees - is based on the misleading comparison of confirmation totals rather than confirmation rates. As Mr. Daschle knows, presidents do not make the same number of nominations or make them at the same time; as such, comparing isolated totals is meaningless.

In 1989, President Bush began nominations in August and the Senate confirmed 15 of his 23 nominees. This year, President Bush began nominations in May, and the Senate has confirmed just 18 of his 64 nominees. Yes, 18 is higher than 15. But this year's 28 percent confirmation rate is less than half of 1989's 65 percent rate. No matter what the totals, the Senate may have done as much as it could in 1989, but it is doing as little as it can now.

His second claim - that Republicans are "responsible for the large number of vacancies because they refused to allow the confirmation of these judges in prior years" - is just a lie.

When Democrats ran the Senate from 1991 to 1994, judicial vacancies averaged 117. When Republicans ran the Senate from 1995 to 2000, judicial vacancies averaged 71. During Republican Senate control, vacancies were never as high as in each of the last six months under Democratic control. Republicans can certainly not be blamed for vacancies today being 25 percent higher than when Mr. Bush took office, despite his having sent the Senate 64 nominees

by mid-October.

Judicial Appointment Holdup

The Voice of the Times
The Anchorage Daily News
Sunday, December 2, 2001

Perhaps we were overly optimistic - maybe even a bit naive - in suggesting last week that state Superior Court Judge Ralph Beistline would have a quick and easy time en route to confirmation as a new member of the U.S. District Court in Alaska.

There's no question about his qualifications. He already has proved himself an able and distinguished trial court judge since his appointment to the Superior Court in October 1992. Personally and professionally, he is high quality all around - a perfect choice to move up to the federal bench. So it was easy to say his confirmation route through the U.S. Senate should be a breeze.

What we were not aware of at the time is that Judge Beistline now has become one of 46 men and women nominated to the federal bench by President George W. Bush who have hit a roadblock in the Senate.

The hitch is Sen. Patrick Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee. He alone is stopping Senate action on all of these nominations - playing a blatant game of political partisanship.

Despite all the pretensions of bipartisanship being claimed by Senate big shots, Leahy simply doesn't want the Republican president to fill any federal court vacancies.

Beistline, one of five judicial nominees submitted to the Senate by President Bush in November, is caught in this arrogant senator's net. So are five who were nominated in October, seven who were nominated in September, 10 who were nominated in August, one who was nominated in July, five who were nominated in June, and 13 whose names went to the Senate in May.

We can't speak to the qualifications of the other 45 nominees, but we do know that Judge Beistline is a superior choice for the federal bench. He should be confirmed without delay.

Sen. Leahy brings no distinction to himself by his politically motivated refusal to act on these nominations.

Pageant of Peace Tree Lighting Ceremony -- Alternate Parking

The annual Pageant of Peace Tree Lighting Ceremony is scheduled for Thursday, December 6, 2001, with events to be held on the Ellipse. On this day, there will be no parking on the east side of the Ellipse. Valid Ellipse permit holders may enter the area until 3:00PM. After 3:00PM, there will be no entrance to or exit from the Ellipse until 6:30PM. If you arrive after 3:00PM, or anticipate the need to move your vehicle before 6:30PM please note permit holders may park in the following alternate locations:

1. Washington Monument Oval Lot, which should be accessed from the south side of Constitution Avenue at 16th Street. There are few spaces available in this lot.

2. The limited alternate parking areas provided by the District of Columbia Department of Public Works, which include:
ú east side of 14th Street between Independence and Constitution Avenues; ú north side of Pennsylvania Avenue between 6th and 13th Streets; and ú south side of Pennsylvania Avenue between 6th and 12th Streets.

These areas have been designated "emergency no parking" areas so that you may park there on Thursday between 7:00 AM and 7:00 PM. Also, the District has informed us that, on Thursday only, you may disregard the rush hour parking restrictions for these designated areas. Please refrain from parking in handicap spaces, bus zones or crosswalks or in front of fire hydrants to avoid the risk of receiving a parking citation or having your car towed.

Please note that the alternate parking is extremely limited and only available on a first come, first served basis. You are strongly encouraged to utilize public transportation to avoid traffic jams and limited parking.

We regret any inconvenience these parking restrictions cause. If you have any questions regarding this notice, please contact White House Management at X6-2500.

Thank you.

End Original ARMS Header

does Hoffman provide planes for Fla GOP regularly, that is, for people other than Admin officials/Karl?

In Case You Missed It

- On December 3, USAID's Office of U.S. Foreign Disaster Assistance provided $3,583,330 to the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE) to support initiatives that will provide water and sanitation services, agricultural rehabilitation, and shelter assistance to Afghans in need of humanitarian relief.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "Targeting the pocketbooks of terrorists, the Bush Administration froze the assets early Tuesday of an American foundation and two overseas groups accused of financing the militant Palestinian organization HAMAS." (AP, 12/4/01)
- Federal agents locked down the offices of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development in Texas, Illinois, New Jersey, and California, taking custody of relevant business records. The Foundation provides millions of dollars each year to HAMAS. The assets of Beit el-Mal Holdings, an investment company controlled by HAMAS, and Al-Aqsa Islamic Bank, a financial arms of HAMAS substantially owned by Beit el-Mal, were also frozen.
- "U.S. and Canadian officials have agreed to measures tightening border security, including the deployment of 600 U.S. National Guard troops to border crossings and the sharing of computerized fingerprints. The measures – signed by the U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft and Canadian Cabinet ministers on Monday – are aimed at speeding up commerce across the border while strengthening anti-terrorism controls." (AP, 12/4/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- The terrorists seek to destroy our freedom and impose its views. We value life, the terrorists ruthlessly destroy it.
- The President has called our military into action to hunt down the members of the al-Qaida organization who murdered innocent Americans. We gave fair warning to the government that harbors them in Afghanistan. The Taliban made a choice to continue hiding terrorists, and now they are paying the price.
- Throughout this battle, we adhere to our values. Unlike our enemy, we respect life. We do not target innocent civilians. We care for the innocent people of Afghanistan, so we continue to provide humanitarian aid, even while their government tries to steal the food we send. When the terrorists and their supporters are gone, the people of Afghanistan will say with the rest of the world: good riddance.
- No group or nation should mistake America's intentions: Where terrorist groups of global reach exist, the United States and our friends and allies will seek it out and destroy them.

Facts of the Day

- Already in FY02, USAID has contributed $98,556,594 in emergency assistance to Afghanistan. To date, the United States Government has provided $177,214,363 in humanitarian assistance to Central Asia in response to the Afghan crisis.
- USAID has also provided an additional $2,000,000 to the U.N.'s World Food Program to support the logistics requirements of its current food aid distribution program. The grant supplements $13.5 million previously granted to WFP's Afghanistan operation for food commodities and food transport equipment.

Brett,

SORRY TO BOTHER YOU WITH THIS...

The Office of Homeland Security has been asking me about the language they need for letters to Members on why staff can not testify before Congress. I think that I talked to you about it last week.

Do you have any language that you can send me?

Thanks.
Nicole

Brett:

I'm sorry to bug you but do you think you could let me know about Sec. Card participating in the the Nerve book by tomorrow sometime? The author is in town this week and would really like to meet w/Sec. Card.

Thanks.
Melissa

Subject: Bob Ross w/ GC at Transportation

Has a FOIA ? re: prior administrations chief of staff (Podesta) and communications with him.

He said he left you a message a week or so ago and still needs to visit.

Please call him at PRA 6

President Promotes Economic Security & Worker Assistance

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush visits Operation Paycheck – a job training center in Orlando, Florida – to emphasize his concern and his plans to help workers who lost their jobs in the wake of the September 11 attacks. The President also leads a town hall meeting with local citizens from a community adversely impacted by the September 11 attacks to discuss economic concerns and America's efforts in the war on terrorism.

- The attacks of September 11 were also an attack on our economy. President Bush continues to urge Congress to act on an economic security package to help America's workers.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S VISIT

- The President visits the newest Operation Paycheck One-Stop Center in Orlando. Operation Paycheck is a program of the State of Florida's Agency for Workforce Innovation that helps laid-off workers obtain the skills they need to quickly transition into a new job. A significant number of the workers in the Operation Paycheck program are from the service sector, including the tourism and aviation industries.

- The One-Stop Center is an example of how an effective state-federal partnership can quickly get assistance to the displaced workers who need it. Florida is implementing the Operation Paycheck program with $10 million in existing dislocated worker funds from the Department of Labor. The program will further benefit from a portion of the $3.4 million in new National Emergency Grant funds that the Department of Labor approved for Florida this week. With these funds, qualifying employees are eligible for income support and job training.

THE PRESIDENT'S AGENDA FOR ECONOMIC SECURITY & WORKER RELIEF

- President Bush has urged Congress to act on an economic security package to jumpstart the economy and directly help workers who have lost their jobs in the wake of the September 11 attacks.

- The President proposed a Back to Work Relief Package on October 4 to provide help to those workers hardest hit by the economic impact of the attacks. This package would:

  - Extend unemployment benefits by 13 weeks for workers in the states hardest hit by the events of September 11;
  - Provide $3 billion in special National Emergency Grants to help displaced workers maintain health coverage, supplement their income and receive job training;
  - Make $11 billion available to states to help low-income workers obtain health insurance; and
  - Encourage affected workers to take advantage of more than $6 billion in existing federal job search, training and placement programs.

- The President initially urged Congress on October 5 to enact an economic security package that focuses on:

  - Accelerating Marginal Tax Rate Reductions: Gives consumers more to spend and invest, and gives businesses and entrepreneurs more resources to help them retain or create more jobs.
  - Partial Expensing: Encourages businesses to invest in new equipment and resources by allowing them to partially expense capital expenditures, allowing them to make purchases they might not otherwise have been able to afford.
  - Eliminating the Corporate AMT: Promotes new investment by businesses by eliminating the corporate alternative minimum tax, which imposes job-killing higher taxes on corporations and small businesses.

- Tax Relief for Low- and Moderate-Income Workers: Reduces taxes for low- and moderate-income households beyond relief already approved by Congress, ensuring that the most vulnerable workers will have more money in their pockets.

THE WHITE HOUSE
COALITION INFORMATION CENTER

Today's Schedule

9:45a EST	White House press gaggle with Ari Fleischer.
12:00p EST	White House daily press briefing with Ari Fleischer.
12:00p EST	Defense Department daily press briefing with Admiral Stufflebeam and Torie Clarke.
1:00p EST	State Department daily press briefing with spokesman Philip Reeker.
3:30p EST	President Bush to meet the Prime Minister of Norway.
9:00p EST	Secretary Rumsfeld to appear on CNN's Larry King Live show.

In Case You Missed It

- On December 3, USAID's Office of U.S. Foreign Disaster Assistance provided $3,583,330 to the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE) to support initiatives that will provide water and sanitation services, agricultural rehabilitation, and shelter assistance to Afghans in need of humanitarian relief.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "Targeting the pocketbooks of terrorists, the Bush Administration froze the assets early Tuesday of an American foundation and two overseas groups accused of financing the militant Palestinian organization HAMAS." (AP, 12/4/01)
- Federal agents locked down the offices of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development in Texas, Illinois, New Jersey, and California, taking custody of relevant business records. The Foundation provides millions of dollars each year to HAMAS. The assets of Beit el-Mal Holdings, an investment company controlled by HAMAS, and Al-Aqsa Islamic Bank, a financial arms of HAMAS substantially owned by Beit el-Mal, were also frozen.
- "U.S. and Canadian officials have agreed to measures tightening border security, including the deployment of 600 U.S. National Guard troops to border crossings and the sharing of computerized fingerprints. The measures – signed by the U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft and Canadian Cabinet ministers on Monday – are aimed at speeding up commerce across the border while strengthening anti-terrorism controls." (AP, 12/4/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- The terrorists seek to destroy our freedom and impose its views. We value life, the terrorists ruthlessly destroy it.
- The President has called our military into action to hunt down the members of the al-Qaida organization who murdered innocent Americans. We gave fair warning to the government that harbors them in Afghanistan. The Taliban made a choice to continue hiding terrorists, and now they are paying the price.
- Throughout this battle, we adhere to our values. Unlike our enemy, we respect life. We do not target innocent civilians. We care for the innocent people of Afghanistan, so we continue to provide humanitarian aid, even while their government tries to steal the food we send. When the terrorists and their supporters are gone, the people of Afghanistan will say with the rest of the world: good riddance.
- No group or nation should mistake America's intentions: Where terrorist groups of global reach exist, the United States and our friends and allies will seek it out and destroy them.

Facts of the Day

- Already in FY02, USAID has contributed $98,556,594 in emergency assistance to Afghanistan. To date, the United States Government has provided $177,214,363 in humanitarian assistance to Central Asia in response to the Afghan crisis.
- USAID has also provided an additional $2,000,000 to the U.N.'s World Food Program to support the logistics requirements of its current food aid distribution program. The grant supplements $13.5 million previously granted to WFP's Afghanistan operation for food commodities and food transport equipment.

In Case You Missed It

- On December 3, USAID's Office of U.S. Foreign Disaster Assistance provided $3,583,330 to the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE) to support initiatives that will provide water and sanitation services, agricultural rehabilitation, and shelter assistance to Afghans in need of humanitarian relief.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "Targeting the pocketbooks of terrorists, the Bush Administration froze the assets early Tuesday of an American foundation and two overseas groups accused of financing the militant Palestinian organization HAMAS." (AP, 12/4/01)
- Federal agents locked down the offices of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development in Texas, Illinois, New Jersey, and California, taking custody of relevant business records. The Foundation provides millions of dollars each year to HAMAS. The assets of Beit el-Mal Holdings, an investment company controlled by HAMAS, and Al-Aqsa Islamic Bank, a financial arms of HAMAS substantially owned by Beit el-Mal, were also frozen.
- "U.S. and Canadian officials have agreed to measures tightening border security, including the deployment of 600 U.S. National Guard troops to border crossings and the sharing of computerized fingerprints. The measures – signed by the U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft and Canadian Cabinet ministers on Monday – are aimed at speeding up commerce across the border while strengthening anti-terrorism controls." (AP, 12/4/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- The terrorists seek to destroy our freedom and impose its views. We value life, the terrorists ruthlessly destroy it.
- The President has called our military into action to hunt down the members of the al-Qaida organization who murdered innocent Americans. We gave fair warning to the government that harbors them in Afghanistan. The Taliban made a choice to continue hiding terrorists, and now they are paying the price.
- Throughout this battle, we adhere to our values. Unlike our enemy, we respect life. We do not target innocent civilians. We care for the innocent people of Afghanistan, so we continue to provide humanitarian aid, even while their government tries to steal the food we send. When the terrorists and their supporters are gone, the people of Afghanistan will say with the rest of the world: good riddance.
- No group or nation should mistake America's intentions: Where terrorist groups of global reach exist, the United States and our friends and allies will seek it out and destroy them.

Facts of the Day

- Already in FY02, USAID has contributed $98,556,594 in emergency assistance to Afghanistan. To date, the United States Government has provided $177,214,363 in humanitarian assistance to Central Asia in response to the Afghan crisis.
- USAID has also provided an additional $2,000,000 to the U.N.'s World Food Program to support the logistics requirements of its current food aid distribution program. The grant supplements $13.5 million previously granted to WFP's Afghanistan operation for food commodities and food transport equipment.

THE WHITE HOUSE
COALITION INFORMATION CENTER

Today's Schedule

9:45a EST	White House press gaggle with Ari Fleischer.
12:00p EST	White House daily press briefing with Ari Fleischer.
12:00p EST	Defense Department daily press briefing with Admiral Stufflebeam and Torie Clarke.
1:00p EST	State Department daily press briefing with spokesman Philip Reeker.
3:30p EST	President Bush to meet the Prime Minister of Norway.
9:00p EST	Secretary Rumsfeld to appear on CNN's Larry King Live show.

In Case You Missed It

- On December 3, USAID's Office of U.S. Foreign Disaster Assistance provided $3,583,330 to the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE) to support initiatives that will provide water and sanitation services, agricultural rehabilitation, and shelter assistance to Afghans in need of humanitarian relief.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "Targeting the pocketbooks of terrorists, the Bush Administration froze the assets early Tuesday of an American foundation and two overseas groups accused of financing the militant Palestinian organization HAMAS." (AP, 12/4/01)
- Federal agents locked down the offices of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development in Texas, Illinois, New Jersey, and California, taking custody of relevant business records. The Foundation provides millions of dollars each year to HAMAS. The assets of Beit el-Mal Holdings, an investment company controlled by HAMAS, and Al-Aqsa Islamic Bank, a financial arms of HAMAS substantially owned by Beit el-Mal, were also frozen.
- "U.S. and Canadian officials have agreed to measures tightening border security, including the deployment of 600 U.S. National Guard troops to border crossings and the sharing of computerized fingerprints. The measures – signed by the U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft and Canadian Cabinet ministers on Monday – are aimed at speeding up commerce across the border while strengthening anti-terrorism controls." (AP, 12/4/01)

Message

- The global coalition against terrorism grows stronger every day – every day al-Qaida is becoming more and more isolated.
- The terrorists seek to destroy our freedom and impose its views. We value life, the terrorists ruthlessly destroy it.
- The President has called our military into action to hunt down the members of the al-Qaida organization who murdered innocent Americans. We gave fair warning to the government that harbors them in Afghanistan. The Taliban made a choice to continue hiding terrorists, and now they are paying the price.
- Throughout this battle, we adhere to our values. Unlike our enemy, we respect life. We do not target innocent civilians. We care for the innocent people of Afghanistan, so we continue to provide humanitarian aid, even while their government tries to steal the food we send. When the terrorists and their supporters are gone, the people of Afghanistan will say with the rest of the world: good riddance.
- No group or nation should mistake America's intentions: Where terrorist groups of global reach exist, the United States and our friends and allies will seek it out and destroy them.

Facts of the Day

- Already in FY02, USAID has contributed $98,556,594 in emergency assistance to Afghanistan. To date, the United States Government has provided $177,214,363 in humanitarian assistance to Central Asia in response to the Afghan crisis.
- USAID has also provided an additional $2,000,000 to the U.N.'s World Food Program to support the logistics requirements of its current food aid distribution program. The grant supplements $13.5 million previously granted to WFP's Afghanistan operation for food commodities and food transport equipment.

The President and First Lady will be hosting a Holiday reception on Dec.
16th. We will be receiving invitations in the near future. The Social Office would like to find out who would prefer to attend the Hanukkah reception on Monday, December 10th instead of the Holiday reception. I must get back to them today so please respond if you would rather attend the Hanukkah reception. I am not aware of what time the receptions will be held, but will inform you as more information is disseminated. I do know that only one guest is allowed.

I have more information on the Holiday receptions. The Social Office is trying to get a confirmed # of who is attending the Hanukkah reception on Monday, December 10th at 6 pm. They are still working on confirming a time for the Christmas reception on December 16. It will more than likely be at 4 pm or 6 pm. As far as I know, these are the only options given to our office. The only difference between the two receptions is that the

Hanukkah reception guests will be greeted in the Green Room vs. the Christmas Tree Room and 2. that the food will be kosher and kosher style food. Everything else will be the same. Please let me know which reception you and your guest would like to attend so I can ensure that you receive the correct invitation.

End Original ARMS Header ######

Something got screwed up in the Sunbarger mass e-mail system, and (as many of you already noticed) the announcement of Peter Kirsanow for the Civil Rights Comm'n stated that he was appointed to a term expiring 2001 rather than 2007. PPO and the Exec Clerk had drafted the language properly.
Anne Womack is going to take care of getting this reissued immediately.

yes, it helps, I think. (It could also bring more attention to it. . . but I think this one is okay.)

Moose, with this fact provided by Kelley, I am inclined to approve. Do you agree that this fact provides strong basis for approval?

does Hoffman provide planes for Fla GOP regularly, that is, for people other than Admin officials/Karl?

THE WORLD WILL ALWAYS REMEMBER SEPTEMBER 11

The terrorists have told us that we should "forget" the mass murder they perpetrated on September 11.

"No, you should forget the 11 September attacks…"

-- SYED TAYYAD AGHA – SPOKESMAN FOR MULLAH OMAR; TALIBAN PRESS CONFERENCE, SPIN BOLDAK, 11/21/01.

We will never "forget" September 11.

We will never forget the innocent victims and the brave heroes that died attempting to save them. We will never forget the survivors, the children, the devastated families and the grieving friends they left behind. And we will never forget the victims who came from more than 80 countries, and many races and religions.

On December 11 – the three-month anniversary of the September 11 attacks – President George W. Bush is asking countries across the world to hold remembrance events and to play their national anthems or other appropriate music at the exact moment the first airplane struck the World Trade Center in New York (8:46 EST).

The terrorists would like nothing more than to silence the world's vocal opposition to their frightening vision.

When nations around the world join hands in unity on December 11, the light of freedom and opportunity will once again shine on the terrorists' dark and frightening vision of murder and fear.

President George W. Bush will lead the worldwide initiative with the playing of the national anthem on December 11 at an event at 8:46 a.m. (EST). Similar events will also take place at the Pentagon, in New York, and in Pennsylvania.

The President will ask the United Nations, and all U.S. embassies, posts and agencies to hold events in countries around the world. The President will also encourage the U.S. Congress and citizens all across the world to join in this remembrance on December 11 by holding similar events in their communities. NASA will hold a special remembrance event in space.

These worldwide events are designed to help ensure that the world never "forgets," and to help remind the world that the terrorists' dark and frightening vision will soon be relegated to history's unmarked graves of discarded lies.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

"Pro-Taliban bandits have hacked off the noses and ears of six men just for being clean-shaven. The gunmen stopped a bus in eastern Afghanistan and ordered all the men without beards to get out. Other passengers watched in horror as the thugs used jungle knives to mutilate their victims…The attackers, thought to be Arab members of al Qaeda, stopped the bus..." (The Daily Mirror [U.K.], 12/5/01)

The World Will Always Remember Sept. 11

On December 11 – the three-month anniversary of the September 11 attacks – President George W. Bush is asking countries across the world to hold remembrance events and to play their national anthems or other appropriate music at the exact moment the first airplane struck the World Trade Center in New York (8:46 EST).

When nations around the world join hands in unity on December 11, the light of freedom and opportunity will once again shine on the terrorists' dark and frightening vision of murder and fear.

President George W. Bush will lead the worldwide initiative with the playing of the national anthem on December 11 at an event at 8:46 a.m. (EST). Similar events will also take place at the Pentagon, in New York, and in Pennsylvania.

Message

Osama bin Laden and members of al Qaeda continue to hide comfortably in their caves while they sacrifice innocent Afghans – especially women and children – to pay the price for their frightening vision.

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves:

- Innocent Afghans -- including many children -- are starving to death, while bin Laden and al Qaeda are well fed.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are targeting innocent Afghan civilians and making them military targets.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food meant for innocent Afghans.

It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn al Qaeda's attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

Humanitarian Facts of the Day

USAID recently gave a $3.6 million grant the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE) to fund three key components of assistance to needy Afghans:

- The water/health component will provide the pumping of potable water and delivery of house-to-house health education to approximately 59,000 people in Kabul.
- The agriculture component supports a work program to rehabilitate critical farming facilities for 100,000 people.
- The shelter program provides money for food and short-term work opportunities to some 75,000 people as well as reconstruction of nearly 5,000 homes in Kabul province.

Can you find out for me if Kirke and Northwestern are routinely flying people around for the campaigns that they are supporting or is this a one time type deal to get Karl out there and back?

Subject: Rove Trip - Dec. 10th

Moose:

Here is the plane information we discussed for Karl's trip to Iowa and South Dakota next Monday

We will depart Reagan on a planed operated by Jetways. The Grassley campaign is paying / or in-kinding the plane. They are getting it from a man named Gary Kirke, who owns Kirke Financial Services LLC in Des Moines Iowa. Kirke is a part leaser of the Jetways Falcon 10 plane. He and several other Des Moines Businessmen are in a lease arrangement with Jetways Flying Service. Passengers on board will be Karl Rove and Sara Taylor

Grassley understands that they are financially liable for the travel and that they must comply with federal election law.
The same plane, under the same arrangements will fly Karl and myself to Sioux Falls, SD

From Sioux Falls back to Reagan that evening we will fly on a plane owned by Business Aviation who is part owner in Citation Club LLC. The tail number is 223JV. Northwestern Corporation leases from Business Aviation as do a number of other Sioux Falls businesses. Northwestern Corp. is making it possible for the Thune campaign to get the plane. The Thune campaign understands that they must comply with federal election law. Passengers from Sioux Falls to Washington DC will be Karl Rove, Sara Taylor, Congressman John Thune, Herb Jones, Ryan Nelson, Christine Iverson (all others are Thune staff)

Can you please confirm that these arrangements are acceptable.

Brett,

Thank you so much for putting that letter together for us...Have a good night.

If I do any changes to the letter, would it be all right if you reviewed it to make sure it is all right?

Thanks.

WHILE OSAMA BIN LADEN & AL QAEDA HIDE IN THEIR CAVES…

"Never forget that those who are now hiding in their caves and holes have once harmed your country. It is unfortunate that they are counted as Muslims, while Islam is innocent of them. The Muslim does not harbor evil for his fellow Muslims." (Source: 10/18, BBC, Saudi Interior Minister HRH Prince Nayif Bin-Abd-al-Aziz)

"I would tell him that for one, Osama bin Laden, you destroyed a whole country," said Hajatullah, 36, a squat blanket-shop owner who first fled Afghanistan in 1989, settling in Quetta, before returning to Afghanistan to fight for the Americans. (Source: Knight Ridder/Tribune News Service, 12/2)

SUMMARY

Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda continue to hide comfortably in their caves while they sacrifice innocent Afghans – especially women and children – to pay the price for their frightening vision. While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves:

- Innocent Afghans, including many children, are starving to death while bin Laden and al Qaeda are well fed.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are targeting innocent Afghan civilians by making them military targets.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food meant for innocent Afghans.

It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn their attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves – warm and with plenty of food – bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food and supplies meant for innocent Afghans who are literally starving to death.

- 70% of the Afghan people are malnourished.
- Only 13% of the Afghan people have access to clean water.
- One in four Afghan children will not make it to their fifth birthday.
- One in three Afghan children is an orphan.
- One in two Afghan children is malnourished.

Among many, many, examples of al Qaeda's theft of humanitarian supplies include:

- The Taliban seized control of two U.N. World Food Program (WFP) warehouses, one in Kabul, and one in Kandahar, containing more than half the World Food Program's wheat supply for Afghanistan. The WFP in Kandahar had been feeding 150,000 Afghans a month before the Taliban seizure. The WFP reports that 1,600 tons of food and several vehicles have since disappeared from the Kandahar WFP warehouse. (Source: World Food Program)

- The Taliban are actually hijacking humanitarian convoys for military purposes. The November 6 Washington Post reports, "A truck in a convoy purportedly on a humanitarian mission to deliver food tipped over, and crates of tank and mortar shells could be seen spilling to the ground underneath a thin layer of flour."

- The UN refugee agency (UNHCR) says the Taliban is hindering humanitarian efforts inside Afghanistan… Speaking on behalf of the UNHCR, Peter Kessler said the Taliban was failing to cooperate: "The UNHCR and our partner agencies have had our vehicles stolen, our offices taken over and our staff beaten." (Source: BBC)

- The Taliban occupied the Kunduz office and warehouse of the International Organization for Migration (IOM). The warehouse had been stocked with winter clothing, shoes and blankets to be distributed to internally displaced persons in the region. (Source: IOM)

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves, their operatives are using innocent Afghan civilians – including women and children – as human military shields.

- The Taliban are actually placing their military assets near civilian areas and using innocent Afghans as human shields for their oppressive regime. For example, the November 6 Washington Post reports that the Taliban are actually placing military assets in mosques and across the street from hospitals and innocent people's homes. Taliban commanders have also taken over humanitarian aid facilities for military purposes. A senior officer tells the Washington Post, "Whole villages are being used as human shields by the Taliban to protect their large stockpiles of ammunition and weapons hidden in nearby caves."

While bin Laden and Al Qaeda hide in their caves – their operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.

- "Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

- "The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

- "'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

- "'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves, Muslims around the world are condemning their attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

What others are saying about bin Laden and al Qaeda:

- "Bin Laden has revealed himself as a terrorist and a criminal," Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan said...reminding the local press his country has stripped bin Laden of his Saudi citizenship. (Source:-AP Worldstream, 10/08/01, by Donna Abu-Nasr)

- "Usamah Bin-Ladin himself is no Islamic authority: he's a bloodthirsty murderer, guilty of tens of thousands of crimes. It's not because he invokes God's name and proclaims his allegiance to Islam that people will regard him as an Islamic authority." (Source: Sohib Bencheikh, Mufti of Marseille and Doctor of Theology, BBC Monitoring Europe, 10/09/01)

- "Bin Laden does not speak in the name of Arabs and Muslims." (Source: Amr Moussa, Secretary General of the Arab League, The Ottawa Citizen, 11/05/01)

- "...we should continue to do what needs to be done, to deal with Osama bin Laden... He's been trying to take advantage of Islam, historic Islam, to take on moderate regimes in the Middle East, to take on civilized society in the West and different parts of the world. But it's a distortion…Islam has nothing to do with what…he's propagating." (Source: Nabil Fahmy, Egypt's ambassador to the United States, CBS's "Face the Nation," 11/04/01)

- Ahmed Maher, Egypt's foreign minister, concurred, saying that there is no war between Islam and the West. "I think there is a war between (Mr. bin Laden) and the world." (Source: Columbus Dispatch, 11/07/01)

- "I believe that Mullah Omar and Osama bin Laden are responsible for (the harm) on these innocent people, and God will punish them, because they are the cause for what is happening now. I feel amazed how the Afghan people and interests of Muslims are being sacrificed for the sake of (saving) individuals," Saudi deputy interior minister Prince Ahmad bin Abdul Aziz was quoted as saying. He added that such actions should be condemned by all Muslims. "If bin Laden was a real Mujahid - holy fighter - he should come out of his hideout to save Afghanistan and Islam, and face an international inquiry," Prince Ahmad said. (10/31, AFP)

- Mufti of Marseille Sohib Bencheikh, spiritual leader of the large North African Muslim community in the French city, was quoted as saying, "Bin Laden is no Islamic authority. He is blood-thirsty murderer, guilty of tens of thousands of crimes. It beholds us Muslims to condemn him before anyone else, because his crimes were committed in the name of our religion." (Source: 10/12, The Press Association Limited)

- Saudi Interior Minister HRH Prince Nayif Bin-Abd-al-Aziz, in a speech opening the Ninth Conference of Police and Traffic Commissioners and the national campaign for security and traffic, said,"We denounce terrorism wherever it occurs. But, you must not forget that your country has suffered from terrorism for more than 20 years. Never forget that those who are now hiding in their caves and holes have once harmed your country. It is unfortunate that they are counted as Muslims, while Islam is innocent of them. The Muslim does not harbor evil for his fellow Muslims." (10/18, BBC)

Just a few of the many examples of al Qaeda and Taliban desertions:

- More than 1,000 fighters abandoned the Taliban's last northern stronghold, Kunduz, and handed their weapons to Northern Alliance troops. (11/25, Newsday)

- As many as 2,000 other Taliban troups surrendered at Maidan Shahr, about 20 miles west of Kabul… (11/25, Newsday)

- West of Kunduz, a reported 600 to 700 Taliban surrendered to the ethnic Uzbek troops of Gen. Abdul Rashid Dostum. (11/25, Newsday)

- "...it appears that thousands of Taliban simply cut and ran, angry with radical mullahs and bin Laden for bringing ruin to their homeland..." (12/2, Knight Ridder/Tribune News Service)

- One mass defection of 1,000 Taliban fighters last week cut off the Taliban's main supply route to the northern city of Mazar-e Sharif. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

- "These defectors are not the highly religious Taliban [stalwarts]," says Alliance General Babajan. "They were mujahideen before, so they can come here. We know them. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

- Alliance officials also speak of another 4,000 defectors in one mass defection - adding territory under their control to the Alliance. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

WHILE OSAMA BIN LADEN & AL QAEDA HIDE IN THEIR CAVES…

"Never forget that those who are now hiding in their caves and holes have once harmed your country. It is unfortunate that they are counted as Muslims, while Islam is innocent of them. The Muslim does not harbor evil for his fellow Muslims." (Source: 10/18, BBC, Saudi Interior Minister HRH Prince Nayif Bin-Abd-al-Aziz)

"I would tell him that for one, Osama bin Laden, you destroyed a whole country," said Hajatullah, 36, a squat blanket-shop owner who first fled Afghanistan in 1989, settling in Quetta, before returning to Afghanistan to fight for the Americans. (Source: Knight Ridder/Tribune News Service, 12/2)

SUMMARY

Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda continue to hide comfortably in their caves while they sacrifice innocent Afghans – especially women and children – to pay the price for their frightening vision. While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves:

- Innocent Afghans, including many children, are starving to death while bin Laden and al Qaeda are well fed.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are targeting innocent Afghan civilians by making them military targets.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food meant for innocent Afghans.

It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn their attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves – warm and with plenty of food – bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food and supplies meant for innocent Afghans who are literally starving to death.

- 70% of the Afghan people are malnourished.
- Only 13% of the Afghan people have access to clean water.
- One in four Afghan children will not make it to their fifth birthday.
- One in three Afghan children is an orphan.
- One in two Afghan children is malnourished.

Among many, many, examples of al Qaeda's theft of humanitarian supplies include:

- The Taliban seized control of two U.N. World Food Program (WFP) warehouses, one in Kabul, and one in Kandahar, containing more than half the World Food Program's wheat supply for Afghanistan. The WFP in Kandahar had been feeding 150,000 Afghans a month before the Taliban seizure. The WFP reports that 1,600 tons of food and several vehicles have since disappeared from the Kandahar WFP warehouse. (Source: World Food Program)

- The Taliban are actually hijacking humanitarian convoys for military purposes. The November 6 Washington Post reports, "A truck in a convoy purportedly on a humanitarian mission to deliver food tipped over, and crates of tank and mortar shells could be seen spilling to the ground underneath a thin layer of flour."

- The UN refugee agency (UNHCR) says the Taliban is hindering humanitarian efforts inside Afghanistan… Speaking on behalf of the UNHCR, Peter Kessler said the Taliban was failing to cooperate: "The UNHCR and our partner agencies have had our vehicles stolen, our offices taken over and our staff beaten." (Source: BBC)

- The Taliban occupied the Kunduz office and warehouse of the International Organization for Migration (IOM). The warehouse had been stocked with winter clothing, shoes and blankets to be distributed to internally displaced persons in the region. (Source: IOM)

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves, their operatives are using innocent Afghan civilians – including women and children – as human military shields.

- The Taliban are actually placing their military assets near civilian areas and using innocent Afghans as human shields for their oppressive regime. For example, the November 6 Washington Post reports that the Taliban are actually placing military assets in mosques and across the street from hospitals and innocent people's homes. Taliban commanders have also taken over humanitarian aid facilities for military purposes. A senior officer tells the Washington Post, "Whole villages are being used as human shields by the Taliban to protect their large stockpiles of ammunition and weapons hidden in nearby caves."

While bin Laden and Al Qaeda hide in their caves – their operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.

- "Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

- "The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

- "'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

- "'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves, Muslims around the world are condemning their attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

What others are saying about bin Laden and al Qaeda:

- "Bin Laden has revealed himself as a terrorist and a criminal," Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan said...reminding the local press his country has stripped bin Laden of his Saudi citizenship. (Source:-AP Worldstream, 10/08/01, by Donna Abu-Nasr)

- "Usamah Bin-Ladin himself is no Islamic authority: he's a bloodthirsty murderer, guilty of tens of thousands of crimes. It's not because he invokes God's name and proclaims his allegiance to Islam that people will regard him as an Islamic authority." (Source: Sohib Bencheikh, Mufti of Marseille and Doctor of Theology, BBC Monitoring Europe, 10/09/01)

- "Bin Laden does not speak in the name of Arabs and Muslims." (Source: Amr Moussa, Secretary General of the Arab League, The Ottawa Citizen, 11/05/01)

- "...we should continue to do what needs to be done, to deal with Osama bin Laden... He's been trying to take advantage of Islam, historic Islam, to take on moderate regimes in the Middle East, to take on civilized society in the West and different parts of the world. But it's a distortion…Islam has nothing to do with what…he's propagating." (Source: Nabil Fahmy, Egypt's ambassador to the United States, CBS's "Face the Nation," 11/04/01)

- Ahmed Maher, Egypt's foreign minister, concurred, saying that there is no war between Islam and the West. "I think there is a war between (Mr. bin Laden) and the world." (Source: Columbus Dispatch, 11/07/01)

- "I believe that Mullah Omar and Osama bin Laden are responsible for (the harm) on these innocent people, and God will punish them, because they are the cause for what is happening now. I feel amazed how the Afghan people and interests of Muslims are being sacrificed for the sake of (saving) individuals," Saudi deputy interior minister Prince Ahmad bin Abdul Aziz was quoted as saying. He added that such actions should be condemned by all Muslims. "If bin Laden was a real Mujahid - holy fighter - he should come out of his hideout to save Afghanistan and Islam, and face an international inquiry," Prince Ahmad said. (10/31, AFP)

- Mufti of Marseille Sohib Bencheikh, spiritual leader of the large North African Muslim community in the French city, was quoted as saying, "Bin Laden is no Islamic authority. He is blood-thirsty murderer, guilty of tens of thousands of crimes. It beholds us Muslims to condemn him before anyone else, because his crimes were committed in the name of our religion." (Source: 10/12, The Press Association Limited)

- Saudi Interior Minister HRH Prince Nayif Bin-Abd-al-Aziz, in a speech opening the Ninth Conference of Police and Traffic Commissioners and the national campaign for security and traffic, said,"We denounce terrorism wherever it occurs. But, you must not forget that your country has suffered from terrorism for more than 20 years. Never forget that those who are now hiding in their caves and holes have once harmed your country. It is unfortunate that they are counted as Muslims, while Islam is innocent of them. The Muslim does not harbor evil for his fellow Muslims." (10/18, BBC)

Just a few of the many examples of al Qaeda and Taliban desertions:

- More than 1,000 fighters abandoned the Taliban's last northern stronghold, Kunduz, and handed their weapons to Northern Alliance troops. (11/25, Newsday)

- As many as 2,000 other Taliban troups surrendered at Maidan Shahr, about 20 miles west of Kabul… (11/25, Newsday)

- West of Kunduz, a reported 600 to 700 Taliban surrendered to the ethnic Uzbek troops of Gen. Abdul Rashid Dostum. (11/25, Newsday)

- "...it appears that thousands of Taliban simply cut and ran, angry with radical mullahs and bin Laden for bringing ruin to their homeland..." (12/2, Knight Ridder/Tribune News Service)

- One mass defection of 1,000 Taliban fighters last week cut off the Taliban's main supply route to the northern city of Mazar-e Sharif. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

- "These defectors are not the highly religious Taliban [stalwarts]," says Alliance General Babajan. "They were mujahideen before, so they can come here. We know them. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

- Alliance officials also speak of another 4,000 defectors in one mass defection - adding territory under their control to the Alliance. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

WHILE OSAMA BIN LADEN & AL QAEDA HIDE IN THEIR CAVES…

"Never forget that those who are now hiding in their caves and holes have once harmed your country. It is unfortunate that they are counted as Muslims, while Islam is innocent of them. The Muslim does not harbor evil for his fellow Muslims." (Source: 10/18, BBC, Saudi Interior Minister HRH Prince Nayif Bin-Abd-al-Aziz)

"I would tell him that for one, Osama bin Laden, you destroyed a whole country," said Hajatullah, 36, a squat blanket-shop owner who first fled Afghanistan in 1989, settling in Quetta, before returning to Afghanistan to fight for the Americans. (Source: Knight Ridder/Tribune News Service, 12/2)

SUMMARY

Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda continue to hide comfortably in their caves while they sacrifice innocent Afghans – especially women and children – to pay the price for their frightening vision. While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves:

- Innocent Afghans, including many children, are starving to death while bin Laden and al Qaeda are well fed.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are targeting innocent Afghan civilians by making them military targets.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food meant for innocent Afghans.

It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn their attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves – warm and with plenty of food – bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food and supplies meant for innocent Afghans who are literally starving to death.

- 70% of the Afghan people are malnourished.
- Only 13% of the Afghan people have access to clean water.
- One in four Afghan children will not make it to their fifth birthday.
- One in three Afghan children is an orphan.
- One in two Afghan children is malnourished.

Among many, many, examples of al Qaeda's theft of humanitarian supplies include:

- The Taliban seized control of two U.N. World Food Program (WFP) warehouses, one in Kabul, and one in Kandahar, containing more than half the World Food Program's wheat supply for Afghanistan. The WFP in Kandahar had been feeding 150,000 Afghans a month before the Taliban seizure. The WFP reports that 1,600 tons of food and several vehicles have since disappeared from the Kandahar WFP warehouse. (Source: World Food Program)

- The Taliban are actually hijacking humanitarian convoys for military purposes. The November 6 Washington Post reports, "A truck in a convoy purportedly on a humanitarian mission to deliver food tipped over, and crates of tank and mortar shells could be seen spilling to the ground underneath a thin layer of flour."

- The UN refugee agency (UNHCR) says the Taliban is hindering humanitarian efforts inside Afghanistan… Speaking on behalf of the UNHCR, Peter Kessler said the Taliban was failing to cooperate: "The UNHCR and our partner agencies have had our vehicles stolen, our offices taken over and our staff beaten." (Source: BBC)

- The Taliban occupied the Kunduz office and warehouse of the International Organization for Migration (IOM). The warehouse had been stocked with winter clothing, shoes and blankets to be distributed to internally displaced persons in the region. (Source: IOM)

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves, their operatives are using innocent Afghan civilians – including women and children – as human military shields.

- The Taliban are actually placing their military assets near civilian areas and using innocent Afghans as human shields for their oppressive regime. For example, the November 6 Washington Post reports that the Taliban are actually placing military assets in mosques and across the street from hospitals and innocent people's homes. Taliban commanders have also taken over humanitarian aid facilities for military purposes. A senior officer tells the Washington Post, "Whole villages are being used as human shields by the Taliban to protect their large stockpiles of ammunition and weapons hidden in nearby caves."

While bin Laden and Al Qaeda hide in their caves – their operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.

- "Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

- "The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

- "'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

- "'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves, Muslims around the world are condemning their attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

What others are saying about bin Laden and al Qaeda:

- "Bin Laden has revealed himself as a terrorist and a criminal," Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan said...reminding the local press his country has stripped bin Laden of his Saudi citizenship. (Source:-AP Worldstream, 10/08/01, by Donna Abu-Nasr)

- "Usamah Bin-Ladin himself is no Islamic authority: he's a bloodthirsty murderer, guilty of tens of thousands of crimes. It's not because he invokes God's name and proclaims his allegiance to Islam that people will regard him as an Islamic authority." (Source: Sohib Bencheikh, Mufti of Marseille and Doctor of Theology, BBC Monitoring Europe, 10/09/01)

- "Bin Laden does not speak in the name of Arabs and Muslims." (Source: Amr Moussa, Secretary General of the Arab League, The Ottawa Citizen, 11/05/01)

- "...we should continue to do what needs to be done, to deal with Osama bin Laden... He's been trying to take advantage of Islam, historic Islam, to take on moderate regimes in the Middle East, to take on civilized society in the West and different parts of the world. But it's a distortion…Islam has nothing to do with what…he's propagating." (Source: Nabil Fahmy, Egypt's ambassador to the United States, CBS's "Face the Nation," 11/04/01)

- Ahmed Maher, Egypt's foreign minister, concurred, saying that there is no war between Islam and the West. "I think there is a war between (Mr. bin Laden) and the world." (Source: Columbus Dispatch, 11/07/01)

- "I believe that Mullah Omar and Osama bin Laden are responsible for (the harm) on these innocent people, and God will punish them, because they are the cause for what is happening now. I feel amazed how the Afghan people and interests of Muslims are being sacrificed for the sake of (saving) individuals," Saudi deputy interior minister Prince Ahmad bin Abdul Aziz was quoted as saying. He added that such actions should be condemned by all Muslims. "If bin Laden was a real Mujahid - holy fighter - he should come out of his hideout to save Afghanistan and Islam, and face an international inquiry," Prince Ahmad said. (10/31, AFP)

- Mufti of Marseille Sohib Bencheikh, spiritual leader of the large North African Muslim community in the French city, was quoted as saying, "Bin Laden is no Islamic authority. He is blood-thirsty murderer, guilty of tens of thousands of crimes. It beholds us Muslims to condemn him before anyone else, because his crimes were committed in the name of our religion." (Source: 10/12, The Press Association Limited)

- Saudi Interior Minister HRH Prince Nayif Bin-Abd-al-Aziz, in a speech opening the Ninth Conference of Police and Traffic Commissioners and the national campaign for security and traffic, said,"We denounce terrorism wherever it occurs. But, you must not forget that your country has suffered from terrorism for more than 20 years. Never forget that those who are now hiding in their caves and holes have once harmed your country. It is unfortunate that they are counted as Muslims, while Islam is innocent of them. The Muslim does not harbor evil for his fellow Muslims." (10/18, BBC)

Just a few of the many examples of al Qaeda and Taliban desertions:

- More than 1,000 fighters abandoned the Taliban's last northern stronghold, Kunduz, and handed their weapons to Northern Alliance troops. (11/25, Newsday)

- As many as 2,000 other Taliban troups surrendered at Maidan Shahr, about 20 miles west of Kabul… (11/25, Newsday)

- West of Kunduz, a reported 600 to 700 Taliban surrendered to the ethnic Uzbek troops of Gen. Abdul Rashid Dostum. (11/25, Newsday)

- "...it appears that thousands of Taliban simply cut and ran, angry with radical mullahs and bin Laden for bringing ruin to their homeland..." (12/2, Knight Ridder/Tribune News Service)

- One mass defection of 1,000 Taliban fighters last week cut off the Taliban's main supply route to the northern city of Mazar-e Sharif. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

- "These defectors are not the highly religious Taliban [stalwarts]," says Alliance General Babajan. "They were mujahideen before, so they can come here. We know them. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

- Alliance officials also speak of another 4,000 defectors in one mass defection - adding territory under their control to the Alliance. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

WHILE OSAMA BIN LADEN & AL QAEDA HIDE IN THEIR CAVES…

"Never forget that those who are now hiding in their caves and holes have once harmed your country. It is unfortunate that they are counted as Muslims, while Islam is innocent of them. The Muslim does not harbor evil for his fellow Muslims." (Source: 10/18, BBC, Saudi Interior Minister HRH Prince Nayif Bin-Abd-al-Aziz)

"I would tell him that for one, Osama bin Laden, you destroyed a whole country," said Hajatullah, 36, a squat blanket-shop owner who first fled Afghanistan in 1989, settling in Quetta, before returning to Afghanistan to fight for the Americans. (Source: Knight Ridder/Tribune News Service, 12/2)

SUMMARY

Osama bin Laden and al Qaeda continue to hide comfortably in their caves while they sacrifice innocent Afghans – especially women and children – to pay the price for their frightening vision. While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves:

- Innocent Afghans, including many children, are starving to death while bin Laden and al Qaeda are well fed.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are targeting innocent Afghan civilians by making them military targets.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food meant for innocent Afghans.

It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn their attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves – warm and with plenty of food – bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food and supplies meant for innocent Afghans who are literally starving to death.

- 70% of the Afghan people are malnourished.
- Only 13% of the Afghan people have access to clean water.
- One in four Afghan children will not make it to their fifth birthday.
- One in three Afghan children is an orphan.
- One in two Afghan children is malnourished.

Among many, many, examples of al Qaeda's theft of humanitarian supplies include:

- The Taliban seized control of two U.N. World Food Program (WFP) warehouses, one in Kabul, and one in Kandahar, containing more than half the World Food Program's wheat supply for Afghanistan. The WFP in Kandahar had been feeding 150,000 Afghans a month before the Taliban seizure. The WFP reports that 1,600 tons of food and several vehicles have since disappeared from the Kandahar WFP warehouse. (Source: World Food Program)

- The Taliban are actually hijacking humanitarian convoys for military purposes. The November 6 Washington Post reports, "A truck in a convoy purportedly on a humanitarian mission to deliver food tipped over, and crates of tank and mortar shells could be seen spilling to the ground underneath a thin layer of flour."

- The UN refugee agency (UNHCR) says the Taliban is hindering humanitarian efforts inside Afghanistan… Speaking on behalf of the UNHCR, Peter Kessler said the Taliban was failing to cooperate: "The UNHCR and our partner agencies have had our vehicles stolen, our offices taken over and our staff beaten." (Source: BBC)

- The Taliban occupied the Kunduz office and warehouse of the International Organization for Migration (IOM). The warehouse had been stocked with winter clothing, shoes and blankets to be distributed to internally displaced persons in the region. (Source: IOM)

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves, their operatives are using innocent Afghan civilians – including women and children – as human military shields.

- The Taliban are actually placing their military assets near civilian areas and using innocent Afghans as human shields for their oppressive regime. For example, the November 6 Washington Post reports that the Taliban are actually placing military assets in mosques and across the street from hospitals and innocent people's homes. Taliban commanders have also taken over humanitarian aid facilities for military purposes. A senior officer tells the Washington Post, "Whole villages are being used as human shields by the Taliban to protect their large stockpiles of ammunition and weapons hidden in nearby caves."

While bin Laden and Al Qaeda hide in their caves – their operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.

- "Among the accounts of mutilations, beatings and arbitrary executions there was evidence of a new abomination: the torture of children. An unknown number of infants were savagely beaten during the Islamic militia's 14-month occupation of Taloqan, the former headquarters of the Alliance, usually for the supposed crimes of their parents." (Source: The Times [U.K.], 11/13/01)

- "The barbarity of the Taliban plumbed new depths when troops shot dead eight boys for daring to laugh, sickened refugees revealed yesterday. The teenage lads had been chuckling at the soldiers who suddenly raised their Kalashnikov rifles and gunned them down. It was one of a string of atrocities in the besieged Afghanistan city of Kunduz, which was last night poised to fall to the Northern Alliance. At least 300 frightened Taliban were killed by men from their own side because they wanted to surrender." (Source: The Sun [U.K.], 11/19/01)

- "'They burnt some of us alive.' It was almost the first thing he said to us. In the dust and squalor of a refugee camp, Salahuddin told yesterday how the Taliban burnt an entire family to death in their own home in revenge for the American bombing. He says he saw them bringing out the blackened bodies of the children. Then the Taliban took Salahuddin and the other villagers to the front line, where they ordered them to gather up scattered bits of bodies, all that was left of Taliban soldiers killed by the American bombs." (Source: The Independent U.K. 11/9/01)

- "'The Taliban commanders killed 100 of our friends,' said this defector, adding, 'They hung their bodies from lamp posts as a warning to the rest of us.'" (Source: CBS Evening News, 11/19/01)

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves, Muslims around the world are condemning their attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

What others are saying about bin Laden and al Qaeda:

- "Bin Laden has revealed himself as a terrorist and a criminal," Saudi Defense Minister Prince Sultan said...reminding the local press his country has stripped bin Laden of his Saudi citizenship. (Source:-AP Worldstream, 10/08/01, by Donna Abu-Nasr)

- "Usamah Bin-Ladin himself is no Islamic authority: he's a bloodthirsty murderer, guilty of tens of thousands of crimes. It's not because he invokes God's name and proclaims his allegiance to Islam that people will regard him as an Islamic authority." (Source: Sohib Bencheikh, Mufti of Marseille and Doctor of Theology, BBC Monitoring Europe, 10/09/01)

- "Bin Laden does not speak in the name of Arabs and Muslims." (Source: Amr Moussa, Secretary General of the Arab League, The Ottawa Citizen, 11/05/01)

- "...we should continue to do what needs to be done, to deal with Osama bin Laden... He's been trying to take advantage of Islam, historic Islam, to take on moderate regimes in the Middle East, to take on civilized society in the West and different parts of the world. But it's a distortion…Islam has nothing to do with what…he's propagating." (Source: Nabil Fahmy, Egypt's ambassador to the United States, CBS's "Face the Nation," 11/04/01)

- Ahmed Maher, Egypt's foreign minister, concurred, saying that there is no war between Islam and the West. "I think there is a war between (Mr. bin Laden) and the world." (Source: Columbus Dispatch, 11/07/01)

- "I believe that Mullah Omar and Osama bin Laden are responsible for (the harm) on these innocent people, and God will punish them, because they are the cause for what is happening now. I feel amazed how the Afghan people and interests of Muslims are being sacrificed for the sake of (saving) individuals," Saudi deputy interior minister Prince Ahmad bin Abdul Aziz was quoted as saying. He added that such actions should be condemned by all Muslims. "If bin Laden was a real Mujahid - holy fighter - he should come out of his hideout to save Afghanistan and Islam, and face an international inquiry," Prince Ahmad said. (10/31, AFP)

- Mufti of Marseille Sohib Bencheikh, spiritual leader of the large North African Muslim community in the French city, was quoted as saying, "Bin Laden is no Islamic authority. He is blood-thirsty murderer, guilty of tens of thousands of crimes. It beholds us Muslims to condemn him before anyone else, because his crimes were committed in the name of our religion." (Source: 10/12, The Press Association Limited)

- Saudi Interior Minister HRH Prince Nayif Bin-Abd-al-Aziz, in a speech opening the Ninth Conference of Police and Traffic Commissioners and the national campaign for security and traffic, said,"We denounce terrorism wherever it occurs. But, you must not forget that your country has suffered from terrorism for more than 20 years. Never forget that those who are now hiding in their caves and holes have once harmed your country. It is unfortunate that they are counted as Muslims, while Islam is innocent of them. The Muslim does not harbor evil for his fellow Muslims." (10/18, BBC)

Just a few of the many examples of al Qaeda and Taliban desertions:

- More than 1,000 fighters abandoned the Taliban's last northern stronghold, Kunduz, and handed their weapons to Northern Alliance troops. (11/25, Newsday)

- As many as 2,000 other Taliban troups surrendered at Maidan Shahr, about 20 miles west of Kabul… (11/25, Newsday)

- West of Kunduz, a reported 600 to 700 Taliban surrendered to the ethnic Uzbek troops of Gen. Abdul Rashid Dostum. (11/25, Newsday)

- "...it appears that thousands of Taliban simply cut and ran, angry with radical mullahs and bin Laden for bringing ruin to their homeland..." (12/2, Knight Ridder/Tribune News Service)

- One mass defection of 1,000 Taliban fighters last week cut off the Taliban's main supply route to the northern city of Mazar-e Sharif. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

- "These defectors are not the highly religious Taliban [stalwarts]," says Alliance General Babajan. "They were mujahideen before, so they can come here. We know them. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

- Alliance officials also speak of another 4,000 defectors in one mass defection - adding territory under their control to the Alliance. (10/19, The Christian Science Monitor)

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

"Pro-Taliban bandits have hacked off the noses and ears of six men just for being clean-shaven. The gunmen stopped a bus in eastern Afghanistan and ordered all the men without beards to get out. Other passengers watched in horror as the thugs used jungle knives to mutilate their victims…The attackers, thought to be Arab members of al Qaeda, stopped the bus..." (The Daily Mirror [U.K.], 12/5/01)

The World Will Always Remember Sept. 11

On December 11 – the three-month anniversary of the September 11 attacks – President George W. Bush is asking countries across the world to hold remembrance events and to play their national anthems or other appropriate music at the exact moment the first airplane struck the World Trade Center in New York (8:46 EST).

When nations around the world join hands in unity on December 11, the light of freedom and opportunity will once again shine on the terrorists' dark and frightening vision of murder and fear.

President George W. Bush will lead the worldwide initiative with the playing of the national anthem on December 11 at an event at 8:46 a.m. (EST). Similar events will also take place at the Pentagon, in New York, and in Pennsylvania.

Message

Osama bin Laden and members of al Qaeda continue to hide comfortably in their caves while they sacrifice innocent Afghans – especially women and children – to pay the price for their frightening vision.

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves:

- Innocent Afghans -- including many children -- are starving to death, while bin Laden and al Qaeda are well fed.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are targeting innocent Afghan civilians and making them military targets.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food meant for innocent Afghans.

It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn al Qaeda's attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

Humanitarian Facts of the Day

USAID recently gave a $3.6 million grant the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE) to fund three key components of assistance to needy Afghans:

- The water/health component will provide the pumping of potable water and delivery of house-to-house health education to approximately 59,000 people in Kabul.
- The agriculture component supports a work program to rehabilitate critical farming facilities for 100,000 people.
- The shelter program provides money for food and short-term work opportunities to some 75,000 people as well as reconstruction of nearly 5,000 homes in Kabul province.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

"Pro-Taliban bandits have hacked off the noses and ears of six men just for being clean-shaven. The gunmen stopped a bus in eastern Afghanistan and ordered all the men without beards to get out. Other passengers watched in horror as the thugs used jungle knives to mutilate their victims…The attackers, thought to be Arab members of al Qaeda, stopped the bus..." (The Daily Mirror [U.K.], 12/5/01)

The World Will Always Remember Sept. 11

On December 11 – the three-month anniversary of the September 11 attacks – President George W. Bush is asking countries across the world to hold remembrance events and to play their national anthems or other appropriate music at the exact moment the first airplane struck the World Trade Center in New York (8:46 EST).

When nations around the world join hands in unity on December 11, the light of freedom and opportunity will once again shine on the terrorists' dark and frightening vision of murder and fear.

President George W. Bush will lead the worldwide initiative with the playing of the national anthem on December 11 at an event at 8:46 a.m. (EST). Similar events will also take place at the Pentagon, in New York, and in Pennsylvania.

Message

Osama bin Laden and members of al Qaeda continue to hide comfortably in their caves while they sacrifice innocent Afghans – especially women and children – to pay the price for their frightening vision.

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves:

- Innocent Afghans -- including many children -- are starving to death, while bin Laden and al Qaeda are well fed.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are targeting innocent Afghan civilians and making them military targets.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food meant for innocent Afghans.

It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn al Qaeda's attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

Humanitarian Facts of the Day

USAID recently gave a $3.6 million grant the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE) to fund three key components of assistance to needy Afghans:

- The water/health component will provide the pumping of potable water and delivery of house-to-house health education to approximately 59,000 people in Kabul.
- The agriculture component supports a work program to rehabilitate critical farming facilities for 100,000 people.
- The shelter program provides money for food and short-term work opportunities to some 75,000 people as well as reconstruction of nearly 5,000 homes in Kabul province.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

"Pro-Taliban bandits have hacked off the noses and ears of six men just for being clean-shaven. The gunmen stopped a bus in eastern Afghanistan and ordered all the men without beards to get out. Other passengers watched in horror as the thugs used jungle knives to mutilate their victims…The attackers, thought to be Arab members of al Qaeda, stopped the bus..." (The Daily Mirror [U.K.], 12/5/01)

The World Will Always Remember Sept. 11

On December 11 – the three-month anniversary of the September 11 attacks – President George W. Bush is asking countries across the world to hold remembrance events and to play their national anthems or other appropriate music at the exact moment the first airplane struck the World Trade Center in New York (8:46 EST).

When nations around the world join hands in unity on December 11, the light of freedom and opportunity will once again shine on the terrorists' dark and frightening vision of murder and fear.

President George W. Bush will lead the worldwide initiative with the playing of the national anthem on December 11 at an event at 8:46 a.m. (EST). Similar events will also take place at the Pentagon, in New York, and in Pennsylvania.

Message

Osama bin Laden and members of al Qaeda continue to hide comfortably in their caves while they sacrifice innocent Afghans – especially women and children – to pay the price for their frightening vision.

While bin Laden and al Qaeda hide in their caves:

- Innocent Afghans -- including many children -- are starving to death, while bin Laden and al Qaeda are well fed.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are targeting innocent Afghan civilians and making them military targets.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives continue to commit frightening atrocities.
- bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are stealing food meant for innocent Afghans.

It is no wonder that thousands of bin Laden and al Qaeda operatives are breaking ranks and deserting. And it's no wonder that Muslim experts around the world continue to condemn al Qaeda's attempt to hijack the peaceful religion of Islam for their terrorist purposes.

Humanitarian Facts of the Day

USAID recently gave a $3.6 million grant the Cooperative for American Relief Everywhere (CARE) to fund three key components of assistance to needy Afghans:

- The water/health component will provide the pumping of potable water and delivery of house-to-house health education to approximately 59,000 people in Kabul.
- The agriculture component supports a work program to rehabilitate critical farming facilities for 100,000 people.
- The shelter program provides money for food and short-term work opportunities to some 75,000 people as well as reconstruction of nearly 5,000 homes in Kabul province.

Subject: Use of the Library

Martha - thanks again for allowing us the use of the Library this afternoon - I recognize the concerns it brings and assure you the request is made under extrordinary circumstances.

To recap our conversation, we'll be using the Library at 3:30 for a meeting involving approximately 60 people who are traveling to Washington to attend the Christmas party with the President this evening. Karl will be conducting a briefing for them, followed by questions and answers. The briefing will not be campaign related, but will focus on the President's agenda and Congress.

We will contact facilities management for room set up. We will make sure there is an aisle left in front of the librarian desks and will leave the work station/computer in place behind where we usually place the podium for the OSI lecture series. We also understand that the Library will not be officially closed, allowing users and librarians to continue their work.

Again, thanks for your help. If any concerns arise during the day, please give me a call.

Our Civil Division prepared a packet of public comments (all of the Congressional comments plus some of the most important or informative other comments), but apparently your office is not accepting packages from our messenger. Are you meeting w/ anyone from DOJ today? If so, I can give them to someone to take to you.

I think someone from Phil Perry's shop will be coming over around 6:30 pm today to meet with Rachel Brand and the Judge.

Perhaps that person can bring this package with them.

Our policy has been for WH officials to avoid contacts with the Air Transportation Stabilization Board regarding applications pending before it. The proceedings before it are in the nature of an agency adjudication, and our general policy has been for WH officials to avoid contacts with agencies regarding agency adjudications. If an outside entity calling the White House says it merely is seeking a "status check," we can suggest that the outside entity contact the Board directly. The bottom line is that Ken is probably best off politely declining this meeting on the advice of WH Counsel.

Joyce Haver is a donor/supporter and saw Ken last night. She called Ken this morning to ask him to meet with the CEO of America West airline (Doug Parker) and C.A. Hallett. (I don't know Hallett's title.) Ken does not feel comfortable, and he wanted me to ask counsel. (so perhaps we would have a defense for saying no) thanks.

Tim and Judge want me to find a federal judge or a DC superior or appeals court judge to administer Peter Kirsanow's oath tonight at 6:30. Help! We need someone with stature, preferably, like the chief judge. Anyone have suggestions or have connections with one of these judges that might help?

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "The news that a woman has been named deputy prime minister of Afghanistan made headlines around the world Wednesday…[Sima] Samar, 44, is a physician and founder of the Shuhada Organization network of clinics, hospitals and schools that began in this southern Pakistani border town [Quetta] and spread all over central Afghanistan. In addition to the deputy prime minister job, she has been appointed minister of women's and children's affairs in the interim government." (Kim Murphy; Los Angeles Times, 12/6/01)

- "Mahzawar Angoor, 60, protested that she was too old and uneducated to have an opinion [about Samar's appointment] and clutched her scarf over her face. But then she let the scarf fall. 'I thank God that now we have a woman in government,' she declared. 'We always say welcome to peace. Maybe a woman knows how to keep it.'" (Kim Murphy; Los Angeles Times, 12/6/01)

Message

- What happened at Pearl Harbor was the start of a long and terrible war for America. Yet out of that surprise attack grew a steadfast resolve that made America freedom's defender. And that mission – our great calling – continues to this hour, as the brave men and women of our military fight the forces of terror in Afghanistan and around the world.

- We are fighting to protect ourselves and our children from violence and fear. We are fighting for the security of our people and the success of liberty. We are fighting against men without conscience, but full of ambition – to remake the world in their own brutal image. For all these reasons we are fighting to win – and win we will.

- There is a great divide in our time – not between religions or cultures, but between civilization and barbarism. People of all cultures wish to live in safety and dignity. The hope of justice and mercy and better lives are common to all humanity. Our enemies reject these values – and by doing so, they set themselves not against the West but against the world.

- We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. They are said to be prepared for a long stay underground. But they are in for a sudden change of plans – because one by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

In Case You Missed It

- A USAID-funded airlift of food commodities from Quetta to Turkmenabad and Osh has been completed. The airlift was made necessary by insecurity along the road from Quetta to Kandahar. A total of 2,240 metric tons of wheat was airlifted to help meet the food needs of thousands of Afghans.

Facts of the Day

- As of December 6, the United States Government had provided a total of $178,214,363 in humanitarian assistance in response to the Central Asia crisis.
- As of December 6, the Department of Defense has airdropped a total of 2,212,260 Humanitarian Daily Rations into Afghanistan.

BEFORE & AFTER

As Jamili Awhari sat down for her first broadcast on Radio Afghanistan, she took off the burka required by the Taliban. She put on a scarf instead. "Congratulations," she said to her listeners. "Through the walls and the doors of Kabul we hear sounds of happiness."

--ABC World News Tonight, 11/15/01

We're a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come.

Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. They may be prepared for a long stay underground, but they are in for a sudden change of plans – because one by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

But as al Qaeda and the Taliban watch their frightening vision become relegated to history's unmarked graves of discarded lies, it is worth taking a moment to look at how things are improving for those Afghans who have been freed from the al Qaeda and Taliban regime.

For example, where Kabul's soccer stadium was used every third Friday as a house of execution, it is now used by children for soccer. Where music, kites, singing and open laughter were forbidden, Afghans are now living happier lives and enjoying new freedoms.

Consider Afghan women who have suffered years of al Qaeda and Taliban atrocities. Under the al Qaeda and Taliban regime, women are not allowed to participate in society, are beaten for working or seeking an education, and are forbidden from moving about their communities freely.

Today, in those areas lucky enough to have been liberated from al Qaeda and the Taliban, women are enjoying new freedoms. Here are just a few examples:

- ☑ Recently completed negotiations have guaranteed that Afhgan women will be represented at the highest levels of the new Afghan government.
- ☑ 2,424 women in Kabul alone are working with the World Food Program to distribute food to the needy. (Source: World Food Program)
- ☑ Radio Afghanistan hired 3 women to read the news on the radio. (Source: Associated Press)
- ☑ In Nangarhar Province in eastern Afghanistan 3,500 girls have registered for classes and 320 women teachers have returned to work. (Source: The Daily Express UK)
- ☑ Women run 45 bakeries in Kabul and Mazar-I-Shariff (Source: World Food Program)
- ☑ A 16-year-old girl opened Kabul Television's return to the airwaves after a 5-year blackout under the Taliban (Source: The Independent UK)
- ☑ The World Food Program's Afghan offices are already employing 15 women full time. 7 are based in Kabul, with others in Jalalabad, Kandahar, Faizabadm, Herat, and Mazar-I-Shariff. (Source: World Food Program)

Our policy has been for WH officials to avoid contacts with the Air Transportation Stabilization Board regarding applications pending before it. The proceedings before it are in the nature of an agency adjudication, and our general policy has been for WH officials to avoid contacts with agencies regarding agency adjudications. If an outside entity calling the White House says it merely is seeking a "status check," we can suggest that the outside entity contact the Board directly. The bottom line is that Ken is probably best off politely declining this meeting on the advice of WH Counsel.

Joyce Haver is a donor/supporter and saw Ken last night. She called Ken this morning to ask him to meet with the CEO of America West airline (Doug Parker) and C.A. Hallett. (I don't know Hallett's title.) Ken does not feel comfortable, and he wanted me to ask counsel. (so perhaps we would have a defense for saying no) thanks.

BEFORE & AFTER

As Jamili Awhari sat down for her first broadcast on Radio Afghanistan, she took off the burka required by the Taliban. She put on a scarf instead. "Congratulations," she said to her listeners. "Through the walls and the doors of Kabul we hear sounds of happiness."

--ABC World News Tonight, 11/15/01

We're a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come.

Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. They may be prepared for a long stay underground, but they are in for a sudden change of plans – because one by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

But as al Qaeda and the Taliban watch their frightening vision become relegated to history's unmarked graves of discarded lies, it is worth taking a moment to look at how things are improving for those Afghans who have been freed from the al Qaeda and Taliban regime.

For example, where Kabul's soccer stadium was used every third Friday as a house of execution, it is now used by children for soccer. Where music, kites, singing and open laughter were forbidden, Afghans are now living happier lives and enjoying new freedoms.

Consider Afghan women who have suffered years of al Qaeda and Taliban atrocities. Under the al Qaeda and Taliban regime, women are not allowed to participate in society, are beaten for working or seeking an education, and are forbidden from moving about their communities freely.

Today, in those areas lucky enough to have been liberated from al Qaeda and the Taliban, women are enjoying new freedoms. Here are just a few examples:

- ☑ Recently completed negotiations have guaranteed that Afhgan women will be represented at the highest levels of the new Afghan government.
- ☑ 2,424 women in Kabul alone are working with the World Food Program to distribute food to the needy. (Source: World Food Program)
- ☑ Radio Afghanistan hired 3 women to read the news on the radio. (Source: Associated Press)
- ☑ In Nangarhar Province in eastern Afghanistan 3,500 girls have registered for classes and 320 women teachers have returned to work. (Source: The Daily Express UK)
- ☑ Women run 45 bakeries in Kabul and Mazar-I-Shariff (Source: World Food Program)
- ☑ A 16-year-old girl opened Kabul Television's return to the airwaves after a 5-year blackout under the Taliban (Source: The Independent UK)
- ☑ The World Food Program's Afghan offices are already employing 15 women full time. 7 are based in Kabul, with others in Jalalabad, Kandahar, Faizabadm, Herat, and Mazar-I-Shariff. (Source: World Food Program)

FYI.

Friday, December 7, 2001

JUDICIARY: Senate demurs

By the end of the first year of the previous administration, the Senate had confirmed 57 percent of judicial nominations. By contrast, only 28 percent of President Bush's selections have been approved this year.

One left hanging is Miguel Estrada, a respected legal scholar who won praise from the Democrats themselves when he argued cases before the U.S. Supreme Court as an assistant solicitor general in the Clinton administration.

The Senate's Democratic majority won't even hold hearings on Estrada's nomination to the District of Columbia appellate court because, they say, he isn't liberal enough to satisfy them.

As The Wall Street Journal points out, there is a good chance that Estrada one day will be appointed to the Supreme Court unless his lower-court nomination is derailed -- and Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., cannot bear the thought of the first Hispanic justice being conservative.

Welcome to the world of liberal litmus tests and racial profiling.

The D.C. court will hear most appeals of habeas corpus cases involving the war on terrorism but, with two vacancies, its chief justice says there will be a big backlog. This is an inopportune time to be injecting petty partisan politics into the judiciary.

For anyone unfamiliar with politics, it must be quite confusing to hear liberals rail against ideological tests, until a conservative black or Hispanic jurist is nominated.

House GOP Questions Senate Terrorism Insurance Plan
With compromise terrorism insurance legislation on an apparent glide path to Senate consideration as early as next week, House GOP aides today voiced concern the Senate bill fails to take into account critical parts of a counterpart House measure. Although the Senate agreement has yet to be formally unveiled or voted upon in the Senate, let alone reconciled with the House bill, many observers believe the Senate bill * which has been hammered out in full consultation with the Treasury Department * ultimately will be the version signed into law. "This is the 11th hour," said a spokeswoman for House Financial Services Chairman Oxley, the sponsor of a terrorism bill narrowly approved by the House last week. "We've been talking about this for two months (A lot of time has been wasted."
The most difficult aspect for House bill leaders to swallow is the Senate's failure to require a taxpayer "payback," she said. While declining to say whether the House would insist on a formal conference with the Senate on the matter, "Our view of what they are proposing is just to write a blank check from the taxpayer * and that is unacceptable to us." She added, "We want to make clear this is hugely problematic." She also expressed serious concern that the Senate bill apparently would allow personal insurance lines to opt into the reinsurance coverage proposed for commercial property and casualty lines. That language was not included in the House bill, and would increase the overall liability to the federal government.
The absence of a payback requirement, or of language controlling premium increases, also has raised the ire of consumer activists. "I was under the impression that a number of senators were trying to improve the bill through negotiations with the White House, not make it harder for consumers and taxpayers," said Travis Plunkett of Consumer Federation of America. A spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Daschle said only that Daschle has supported the payback concept.
Meanwhile, White House and Treasury Department officials met Thursday evening at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to talk over the legislation with business representatives. Insurance industry officials also were present, and perhaps also some Senate aides, sources said. The session was designed to enable the business community to "take the White House's pulse" on the bill, said a spokeswoman for the American Insurance Association. As for the AIA's reaction to the Senate legislation being floated: "Certainly there's a lot to like. I think we'd like to see the duration a little longer, but, generally speaking, it's something that could work in the marketplace," she added. As for the inclusion of legal reform language, sources close to the Association of Trial Lawyers of America said they expect the base insurance bill will be left "clean."
However, Senate Democratic leaders are contemplating giving Republican senators an opportunity to offer amendments on liability reform on the floor. Senate Banking Committee members also have taken under consideration a request by some group life insurers to be covered by the bill, sources said. * by Pamela Barnett

I have not read the statutes relating to this question but saw a story on Friday and had a thought -- you can either delete now or keep reading.

This is what I gathered from the report -- The 1994 law says that everyone has to serve a six year term and another previous law requires appointments to be staggered so the commission is not appointed by one President.

I would argue that the 1994 change removed the ability to appoint a replacement if someone decides not to/cannot fulfill the six year term. I would continue that under the new law, each slot is for six years, keeping the staggering of terms in place. If someone does not fulfill the six year term, the seat is vacant until the end of the term. President Clinton did not have the authority under the 1994 law to fill the vacancy unless the term had ended so the person he appointed has been improperly/illegally seated on the commission.

If the 1994 law provides for filling vacancies, this argument obviously would not work but the impression I got from the news report which obviously could be inaccurate or incomplete, was that it does not.

Don't know if this is your area but it was just a thought. Thanks,
Juliet

GOP ANGRY OVER MICH. DEMOCRATS% STALL ON 6TH CIRCUIT JUDICIAL NOMINEES

By Jennifer A. Dlouhy, CQ Staff Writer

Dec. 10, 2001 - Senate Republicans are becoming increasingly angry at the attempts of two Democrats from Michigan to force President Bush to renominate his predecessor%s picks for the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

For months, Sens. Debbie Stabenow and Carl Levin have asked Judiciary Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., to stall action on any of Bush%s nominees to the 6th Circuit until Bush renominates two of former President Bill Clinton%s nominees from Michigan or a bipartisan commission is formed to decide nominees to the fill the Michigan slots.

The appellate court, which covers Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, has 16 seats, seven of which are vacant. Bush has nominated six people to fill those empty seats, beginning in May. So far, none have had hearings.

It is extremely rare but not wholly unprecedented for a president to renominate a predecessor%s selection. At the urging of Virginia%s two Republican senators, Bush did just that earlier this year when he put Roger L. Gregory on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. The Republican-controlled Senate had refused to act on Clinton%s nomination of Gregory.

Stabenow and Levin say Clinton nominees Helene White and Kathleen McCree Lewis also were treated unfairly by the GOP. White%s nomination languished before the Judiciary Committee for more than four years, while McCree Lewis% nomination was pending before the committee for more than a year.

"We have two extremely competent, qualified women here," Stabenow said. "This is a special case where there was incredible unfairness."

White House officials turned down a request from Levin and Stabenow to allow a bipartisan commission - made up of three Republicans and three Democrats - to decide the nominees from Michigan on the court.

Although senators can "blue-slip" judicial nominees from their states, it would be unprecedented to allow two senators from Michigan to hold up nominees from other states, said White House counsel Alberto R. Gonzales in a Nov. 2 letter to Levin and Stabenow.

"I would hope you would acknowledge and respect the powers of appointment that rightfully belong to President Bush under the Constitution and would not continue to insist on unprecedented devices that would trench upon those powers," Gonzales said. "Circuit court appointments are uniquely matters of presidential prerogative, and nowhere in the nation has the president surrendered his power to select circuit court nominees to a commission, bipartisan or otherwise."

Leahy has not publicly stated his position on the 6th Circuit skirmish.

"Sen. Leahy is optimistic that a fair compromise will be achieved with regard to the 6th Circuit," said committee spokeswoman Mimi Devlin. "In the meantime, no decisions about hearings for these nominees have been made. The committee has been working feverishly in these final days to hold as many hearings and votes as possible on other qualified nominees that have the support of both home state senators."

Brett,

I was contacted by one of the largest Christian music organizations in Nashville wanting to send a copy of a patriotic/prayer CD to each member of the White House Prayer Group that meets Thursdays.

The CDs are valued at $15 each. They have been clear that they would not publicize this, but found it profound that there is a group that gathers in prayer once a week here.

I told them this was a nice gesture and that I would have to check with folks here because of the gift rules.

What are your thoughts?

Matt

My strong view on the latter is that we wouldn't want him raising any money even if it were legal, because it would politicize the museum.

So that's what I would tell him. Still, it would be nice to know for certain what the law might require.

Partial answer -- basically in line with my initial impression. You can tell him today that the preliminary answer is he can donate money but we're checking into whether he can raise money, which would include, e.g., being the co-host of a fundraising dinner.

Moose:

Can someone appointed by the President to be chair of the Holocaust Memorial Commission continue to be active in partisan politics, specifically in donating to and raising money for election campaigns?

This is a presidential appointment, not Senate-confirmed, and is a part-time federal commission.

This person is coming in this afternoon for discussions with Jay, so a preliminary answer by early afternoon would be appreciated if you have a moment. Thanks!

Just talked to Faith: Please coordinate with Albert Hawkins at Cabinet
Affairs. He has been assigned to get original to you (and can presumably copy in interim). Please let me know ASAP if you have any problems.
FAX a

Didn't you deal with this? I remember the issue but can't remember the answer.

Yes, the pending issue was legal (can we notify selected members before authorizing committees? Can the notification come from the White House instead of from the agencies?). What I got from Counsel was that there are no restrictions were found in notifying members early from the WH. Rachel - is that correct?

Daschle (at his daily press conf) also indicated there probably was not time to deal this year with terrorism insurance legislation, which is likely to provoke a lengthy debate over tort reform issues. "We're not getting much cooperation in dealing [with it], at least so far," Daschle told reporters. "There are those who continue to insist that we deal with the whole question of liability if we're going to take up terrorist insurance, and I think that would be very difficult to do." Daschle added that should Republicans drop their insistence that liability reform be part of the debate, "We've got a real chance of getting something done."

If you are going to be out of the office and/or out of the DC area over the Christmas and New Year holidays please let me know what dates you are out of town and how you can be reached. We need to submit a contact list to Signal so they know where to find everyone.

So far I show Allison, Rachel and Brad out the week of Christmas.

Call 5-0188 if you have a question re: your leave balance. Leave policy can be found on p. A-11 of the staff handbook.

Thanks!

how does our leave time become known to payroll people; who in this office forwards such info to them; how can we find out what days have been identified as vacation days; I think I have been out 6 days (one week this summer and the Friday after T'giving) and just want to make sure that's what is recorded wherever . . .

If you are going to be out of the office and/or out of the DC area over the Christmas and New Year holidays please let me know what dates you are out of town and how you can be reached. We need to submit a contact list to Signal so they know where to find everyone.

So far I show Allison, Rachel and Brad out the week of Christmas.

Call 5-0188 if you have a question re: your leave balance. Leave policy can be found on p. A-11 of the staff handbook.

Thanks!

WPost Calls On Daschle To Stop Blocking Legislation, &Bowing To Lobbies.8
The Washington Post (12/17, A22) editorializes, &The Senate has been tied up in recent days debating a terrible farm bill that would waste billions on rich farmers who don't need it. Even if the bill were actually helpful, there would be no need to pass it now; the existing farm law does not expire yet. Meanwhile the Senate has been dragging its feet on more important subjects. ... Both Republicans and Democrats must share some blame for the Senate's skewed priorities, but the Democrats are in control. On insurance, the Democrats are objecting to Republican proposals to ban punitive damages in the event of terrorist attacks, which seems a reasonable proposal. On trade, they are throwing up procedural delays; Tom Daschle, the Senate majority leader, says there is no prospect of bringing trade promotion authority to the floor before next year -- even though he found time to bring the egregious farm bill up for discussion. Mr. Daschle has been hailed as the Democratic Party's brightest star, and his ability to block administration proposals is cited as proof of his abilities. We would prefer to see the majority leader demonstrate his mastery by minimizing gridlock and by not bowing to the lobbies that sometimes hijack Democratic policies. The Democratic position on terrorism insurance smacks of the trial bar, which never saw a disaster that didn't justify a lawsuit. The foot-dragging on trade hints at the influence of the labor unions. The real test of Mr. Daschle's leadership is whether he can rise above these lobbies.8

They're ready now. Staff just needs to go by SDG 58 and pick them up.
Make sure they take a drivers license or WH i.d.

Senators Urged to Act on Nominees

By Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Saturday, December 15, 2001

The White House yesterday called on Senate Democrats to act on a backlog of 157 nominations, including a candidate who a Republican senator suggested is a victim of anti-Catholic bigotry.

REV_00086366

"It's time for the Senate to act on the president's nominees and assure that the important work of America's government can be done," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

Mr. Fleischer singled out two stalled nominations: Otto Reich for assistant secretary of state, and Eugene Scalia for Labor Department solicitor. Of Mr. Reich, he said the Democrat-controlled Senate Foreign Relations Committee "refuses even a simple request to give the man his day in court or a fair hearing." A spokeswoman for committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware did not respond to several requests for comment.

Mr. Scalia, son of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, was approved six weeks ago by the Senate Health, Education and Labor and Pensions Committee, but Majority Leader Tom Daschle has yet to allow a floor vote on his nomination.

Mr. Daschle said yesterday he will allow a vote on Mr. Scalia at some point, but added that supporters probably do not have the required 60 votes to defeat an expected Democratic filibuster of the nomination.

"I just haven't scheduled it, in part because I realize that it is going to take some time," Mr. Daschle said.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said he is concerned about accusations that Mr. Scalia is being punished because he is a "devout pro-life Catholic."

The Washington Times reported Tuesday that liberal and feminist groups are gearing up for a "nasty and contentious fight" against President Bush's judicial nominees who do not support abortion. Mr. Hatch said he hopes the same reasons do not extend to Mr. Scalia's nomination.

"These partisan rationales, extraneous to Mr. Scalia's qualifications, are bound to arise when the Democratic leadership refuses to allow his nomination to be openly debated in the light of day," Mr. Hatch said. "If you don't like Mr. Scalia, for any reason at all - including the fact that he is a pro-life Catholic or the fact that he's Justice Scalia's son, then vote against him and you can show your bigotry that way."

Mr. Daschle said that Democrats' opposition to Mr. Scalia has nothing to do with his religious views.

"In all of the discussions and conversations I've had about that particular nomination, his pro-life position has never come up with me once," Mr. Daschle said. "It has a lot more to do with his unwillingness to, apparently, carry out the laws that will be entrusted to him as the chief enforcer in the Department of Labor, his unwillingness to look at ergonomics laws that exist or that might be propounded."

Mr. Scalia has said that the proposed regulations on ergonomics, or repetitive workplace injuries, fashioned during the Clinton administration, were based on bad science. But he told the Senate committee that he would follow the law as Labor Department solicitor.

Congress repealed the last-minute Clinton regulations after Mr. Bush became president.

Some Senate Republicans also say Mr. Scalia is the victim of political payback because Democrats were angered by his father's vote with the majority in the Supreme Court decision that ended the contested Florida presidential election in favor of Mr. Bush. Democrats deny the accusation.

Mr. Fleischer also pointed out yesterday that the Senate has yet to act on 37 of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees.

"There are more vacancies in the federal judiciary now than when President Bush came into office," Mr. Fleischer said. "The reason is because the Senate has failed to act."

Mr. Bush has nominated 64 district and circuit court judges, of whom 21 have been confirmed by the Senate.

Family Ties in Top Federal Jobs

By Michael Collins
Scripps Howard News Service
Monday, December 17, 2001

Sens. Strom Thurmond and Jim Bunning have been catching flak from critics who think their sons' nominations for prominent federal jobs reek of nepotism.

But the senators' offspring are just the latest in a long line of people with close family ties who have landed prominent government positions.

"It is not at all unusual for relatives of political people to receive nominations" for a federal post, said Al Felzenberg, a political historian with the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank. Strom Thurmond Jr., the 29-year-old son of Sen. Thurmond, R-S.C., was recently sworn in as a U.S. attorney for South Carolina. The White House nominated him for the job, and the Senate confirmed the nomination.

David Bunning, the 35-year-old son of Sen. Bunning, R-Ky., has been nominated for a U.S. District Court judgeship in Kentucky's Eastern District. His nomination is pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The Bunning recommendation raised eyebrows from the beginning because of the senator's role in the process. He and Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., interviewed 11 finalists for three posts and forwarded their names to the White House, which pared the list down to three.

The nomination became further complicated when the American Bar Association concluded that the younger Bunning - an assistant U.S. attorney in Covington, Ky. - isn't qualified to become a federal judge. The organization listed several concerns about his competence, including lack of experience.

He has been a practicing lawyer for 10 years; the bar association says federal judges should have a minimum of 12 years' experience.

Judicial Watch, a conservative organization that regularly files lawsuits aimed at the federal government, has raised similar concerns.

"Judicial Watch has great respect for the senator, and his son I'm sure is a fine person," said Tom Fitton, president of the organization. "But at this point, he's not qualified to be a judge, especially a federal judge. He's too young. He needs more life experience. And it raises the specter of nepotism."

Others, however, say questions about David Bunning's qualifications are part of a broader campaign to keep President Bush's judicial nominees off the bench.

"This flap has to do with other agendas," said Thomas Jipping, director of the Free Congress Foundation's Judicial Selection Monitoring Project. "It does not have anything to do with the qualifications and suitability of David Bunning to be a district judge."

Since the days of George Washington, the placement of close relatives of presidents or congressmen in high-ranking federal jobs is a political tradition as old as the Republic itself.

Washington's nephew, Bushrod Washington, was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court by President John Adams and served as an associate justice from 1799 to 1829. President John Kennedy chose his brother, Robert, as the attorney general.

Sen. Tom Connally of Texas wanted President Franklin Roosevelt to nominate his son, Ben, for a federal judgeship, even though there were questions about whether the 32-year-old was qualified for the bench. Roosevelt refused, citing the son's age and inexperience, said Sheldon Goldman, author of a book on the selection of federal judges.

Eventually, Connally got what he wanted. President Harry Truman appointed Ben Connally as a federal district court judge in 1949, and the nomination was confirmed by the Senate.

Former Scripps Howard reporter Vance Trimble won a Pulitzer Prize in 1960 for a series of stories that exposed the extent of nepotism in Congress. Trimble found that about one-fifth of all members of Congress had relatives on the official payrolls.

Even the current administration has its share of appointees with family ties. Vice President Dick Cheney's son-in-law, Philip Perry, is deputy attorney general. Secretary of State Colin Powell's son, Michael Powell, is chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

When close relatives of a member of Congress are nominated for a federal post, the Senate is put in an awkward position because it must confirm the nomination or risk alienating a colleague, said Goldman, a political science professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Still, the bottom line should be, "is this the best person qualified for the job," he said.

Wisconsin Selection Process More Inclusive than Minnesota's

By Frederic Frommer
The Associated Press
Friday, December 14, 2001

Minnesota can look to its eastern neighbor to minimize future allegations of nepotism in federal judicial selections. Unlike Minnesota, Wisconsin uses a federal nominating commission that ensures at least two federal lawmakers get a say in the selection.

In Minnesota, as in most other states, senators get to select candidates for federal positions from their state. If neither senator is from the same party as the president, that responsibility falls to the most senior House member from the president's party. Because both Minnesota senators are Democrats, Rep. Jim Ramstad, the state's senior Republican House member, got to make the selection for the federal judgeship in Minneapolis. He forwarded the names of three candidates to the White House, but recommended his sister - Minnesota Corrections Commissioner Sheryl Ramstad Hvass - as his first choice.

Ramstad was criticized for the recommendation, and Sen. Mark Dayton, D-Minn., says he'll ask to play some role in the next selection.

In Wisconsin, the state's two Democratic senators already have a significant say.
Under the state's federal nominating commission, which was established in 1980, Sens. Herb Kohl and Russ Feingold got to name two people each to the 11-member panel, while the state's most senior Republican, Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner, named four. The other three members were appointed by the State Bar of Wisconsin and law school deans.

The bipartisan makeup didn't mean the process went without some partisan squabbling.

Feingold and Kohl pared down the list of judicial candidates for Green Bay from five to three, and of the two U.S. Attorney positions from four each to three each. Sensenbrenner criticized their actions but signed on to the list, which President Bush will draw on for the appointments.

The commission isn't always bipartisan. If both senators and the president are from the same party - as happened under President Clinton - the two senators appoint eight commissioners between them and the party out of power get none.

If the senators are from different parties, the senator from the president's party names five commissioners, while the other one names three.

In both scenarios, the deans and bar appoint the remaining three commissioners.

Forest Maltzman, a political science professor at George Washington University, said only a handful of states use a bipartisan commission, but the number is growing. Other states include California and Washington.

Democratic senators from states that don't use commissions still have veto power. Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has said he will not hold confirmation hearings on any candidate without the acquiescence of both state's senators.

But neither Dayton nor Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., have said they will block the judicial nominees from the state.

Dayton hasn't called for a commission approach in Minnesota, but he did say he will encourage Ramstad to involve both senators "at least to the extent that we have some more knowledge and an opportunity to encourage applicants."

Wellstone spokesman Jim Farrell agreed.

"Any effort to ensure broader bipartisan cooperation on the selection of judicial nominees sounds like a good idea," he said.

Ramstad's office did not return phone messages left Friday.

Senate Panel Confirms Judge Nominee

By Donrey Washington
Las Vegas Review-Journal
Friday, December 14, 2001

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 19-0 Thursday to confirm the nomination of Clark County District Judge James C. Mahan to become Nevada's newest federal judge.

The panel's vote advances Mahan's nomination to the Senate floor for a final vote, expected next week.

Mahan, who turns 58 on Sunday, would be the second Nevada judge this year to be appointed to the federal bench. U.S. District Judge Larry Hicks of Reno was confirmed earlier.

REV_00086371

Both were nominated by President Bush after being recommended by Sens. John Ensign, R-Nev., and Harry Reid, D-Nev.

Voting without debate, the committee approved Mahan and four other federal judge nominees who breezed through a confirmation hearing last week.

The only suspense at Thursday's meeting was whether enough senators would show up for a quorum. Ten senators were needed, but only nine were present.

'I really would like to wrap this up,' said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the committee chairman. Unless another senator arrived in three or four minutes, Leahy warned, the confirmation vote would be postponed until January.

The delay was averted when Sen. Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., appeared to complete the quorum. The 10 senators present voted to confirm the judges, and affirmative votes from the committee's nine other members were submitted by proxy.

Subject: Grants Meeting

We are going to have a meeting on Monday (12/17) at 3pm in room 472 to discuss Grant notification. Please come along - or send somebody from your office to attend. Also pls invite who you think should attend.

The goal of this meeting is to firm up the process of grant notification to the hill - and how we get maximise our gain in these notification. Here is a process we have discussed:

1. A lot of the grant information is being sent to different departments (i.e., HUD goes to OPA, Labor goes to OLA, etc). We should ensure that ALL grant information be funneled into the White House through a central point: Cabinet Affairs. That way, their Weekly Grant Report will serve as the master document to start this process.

2. The information sent to Cabinet Affairs should be formated in a way that includes (a) the Congressional Districts that are being affected, (b) the date the agency plans to announce the grant publically so that we can give some lead time to our friends up on the hill and (c) who the agency plans on notifying on that date.

3. The grant report is sent out to all necessary departments withing the WH (OPA, OLA, IGA, etc).

4. Each division that accepts responsibility for notifying outsiders of the grant should also be tasked with ensuring the agency knows the White House's plans and is in contact with whomever has been notified.

Senators Urged to Act on Nominees

By Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Saturday, December 15, 2001

The White House yesterday called on Senate Democrats to act on a backlog of 157 nominations, including a candidate who a Republican senator suggested is a victim of anti-Catholic bigotry.

REV_00086553

"It's time for the Senate to act on the president's nominees and assure that the important work of America's government can be done," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

Mr. Fleischer singled out two stalled nominations: Otto Reich for assistant secretary of state, and Eugene Scalia for Labor Department solicitor. Of Mr. Reich, he said the Democrat-controlled Senate Foreign Relations Committee "refuses even a simple request to give the man his day in court or a fair hearing." A spokeswoman for committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware did not respond to several requests for comment.

Mr. Scalia, son of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, was approved six weeks ago by the Senate Health, Education and Labor and Pensions Committee, but Majority Leader Tom Daschle has yet to allow a floor vote on his nomination.

Mr. Daschle said yesterday he will allow a vote on Mr. Scalia at some point, but added that supporters probably do not have the required 60 votes to defeat an expected Democratic filibuster of the nomination.

"I just haven't scheduled it, in part because I realize that it is going to take some time," Mr. Daschle said.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said he is concerned about accusations that Mr. Scalia is being punished because he is a "devout pro-life Catholic."

The Washington Times reported Tuesday that liberal and feminist groups are gearing up for a "nasty and contentious fight" against President Bush's judicial nominees who do not support abortion. Mr. Hatch said he hopes the same reasons do not extend to Mr. Scalia's nomination.

"These partisan rationales, extraneous to Mr. Scalia's qualifications, are bound to arise when the Democratic leadership refuses to allow his nomination to be openly debated in the light of day," Mr. Hatch said. "If you don't like Mr. Scalia, for any reason at all - including the fact that he is a pro-life Catholic or the fact that he's Justice Scalia's son, then vote against him and you can show your bigotry that way."

Mr. Daschle said that Democrats' opposition to Mr. Scalia has nothing to do with his religious views.

"In all of the discussions and conversations I've had about that particular nomination, his pro-life position has never come up with me once," Mr. Daschle said. "It has a lot more to do with his unwillingness to, apparently, carry out the laws that will be entrusted to him as the chief enforcer in the Department of Labor, his unwillingness to look at ergonomics laws that exist or that might be propounded."

Mr. Scalia has said that the proposed regulations on ergonomics, or repetitive workplace injuries, fashioned during the Clinton administration, were based on bad science. But he told the Senate committee that he would follow the law as Labor Department solicitor.

Congress repealed the last-minute Clinton regulations after Mr. Bush became president.

Some Senate Republicans also say Mr. Scalia is the victim of political payback because Democrats were angered by his father's vote with the majority in the Supreme Court decision that ended the contested Florida presidential election in favor of Mr. Bush. Democrats deny the accusation.

Mr. Fleischer also pointed out yesterday that the Senate has yet to act on 37 of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees.

"There are more vacancies in the federal judiciary now than when President Bush came into office," Mr. Fleischer said. "The reason is because the Senate has failed to act."

Mr. Bush has nominated 64 district and circuit court judges, of whom 21 have been confirmed by the Senate.

Family Ties in Top Federal Jobs

By Michael Collins
Scripps Howard News Service
Monday, December 17, 2001

Sens. Strom Thurmond and Jim Bunning have been catching flak from critics who think their sons' nominations for prominent federal jobs reek of nepotism.

But the senators' offspring are just the latest in a long line of people with close family ties who have landed prominent government positions.

"It is not at all unusual for relatives of political people to receive nominations" for a federal post, said Al Felzenberg, a political historian with the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank. Strom Thurmond Jr., the 29-year-old son of Sen. Thurmond, R-S.C., was recently sworn in as a U.S. attorney for South Carolina. The White House nominated him for the job, and the Senate confirmed the nomination.

David Bunning, the 35-year-old son of Sen. Bunning, R-Ky., has been nominated for a U.S. District Court judgeship in Kentucky's Eastern District. His nomination is pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The Bunning recommendation raised eyebrows from the beginning because of the senator's role in the process. He and Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., interviewed 11 finalists for three posts and forwarded their names to the White House, which pared the list down to three.

The nomination became further complicated when the American Bar Association concluded that the younger Bunning - an assistant U.S. attorney in Covington, Ky. - isn't qualified to become a federal judge. The organization listed several concerns about his competence, including lack of experience.

He has been a practicing lawyer for 10 years; the bar association says federal judges should have a minimum of 12 years' experience.

Judicial Watch, a conservative organization that regularly files lawsuits aimed at the federal government, has raised similar concerns.

"Judicial Watch has great respect for the senator, and his son I'm sure is a fine person," said Tom Fitton, president of the organization. "But at this point, he's not qualified to be a judge, especially a federal judge. He's too young. He needs more life experience. And it raises the specter of nepotism."

Others, however, say questions about David Bunning's qualifications are part of a broader campaign to keep President Bush's judicial nominees off the bench.

"This flap has to do with other agendas," said Thomas Jipping, director of the Free Congress Foundation's Judicial Selection Monitoring Project. "It does not have anything to do with the qualifications and suitability of David Bunning to be a district judge."

Since the days of George Washington, the placement of close relatives of presidents or congressmen in high-ranking federal jobs is a political tradition as old as the Republic itself.

Washington's nephew, Bushrod Washington, was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court by President John Adams and served as an associate justice from 1799 to 1829. President John Kennedy chose his brother, Robert, as the attorney general.

Sen. Tom Connally of Texas wanted President Franklin Roosevelt to nominate his son, Ben, for a federal judgeship, even though there were questions about whether the 32-year-old was qualified for the bench. Roosevelt refused, citing the son's age and inexperience, said Sheldon Goldman, author of a book on the selection of federal judges.

Eventually, Connally got what he wanted. President Harry Truman appointed Ben Connally as a federal district court judge in 1949, and the nomination was confirmed by the Senate.

Former Scripps Howard reporter Vance Trimble won a Pulitzer Prize in 1960 for a series of stories that exposed the extent of nepotism in Congress. Trimble found that about one-fifth of all members of Congress had relatives on the official payrolls.

Even the current administration has its share of appointees with family ties. Vice President Dick Cheney's son-in-law, Philip Perry, is deputy attorney general. Secretary of State Colin Powell's son, Michael Powell, is chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

When close relatives of a member of Congress are nominated for a federal post, the Senate is put in an awkward position because it must confirm the nomination or risk alienating a colleague, said Goldman, a political science professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Still, the bottom line should be, "is this the best person qualified for the job," he said.

Wisconsin Selection Process More Inclusive than Minnesota's

By Frederic Frommer
The Associated Press
Friday, December 14, 2001

Minnesota can look to its eastern neighbor to minimize future allegations of nepotism in federal judicial selections. Unlike Minnesota, Wisconsin uses a federal nominating commission that ensures at least two federal lawmakers get a say in the selection.

In Minnesota, as in most other states, senators get to select candidates for federal positions from their state. If neither senator is from the same party as the president, that responsibility falls to the most senior House member from the president's party. Because both Minnesota senators are Democrats, Rep. Jim Ramstad, the state's senior Republican House member, got to make the selection for the federal judgeship in Minneapolis. He forwarded the names of three candidates to the White House, but recommended his sister - Minnesota Corrections Commissioner Sheryl Ramstad Hvass - as his first choice.

Ramstad was criticized for the recommendation, and Sen. Mark Dayton, D-Minn., says he'll ask to play some role in the next selection.

In Wisconsin, the state's two Democratic senators already have a significant say.
Under the state's federal nominating commission, which was established in 1980, Sens. Herb Kohl and Russ Feingold got to name two people each to the 11-member panel, while the state's most senior Republican, Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner, named four. The other three members were appointed by the State Bar of Wisconsin and law school deans.

The bipartisan makeup didn't mean the process went without some partisan squabbling.

Feingold and Kohl pared down the list of judicial candidates for Green Bay from five to three, and of the two U.S. Attorney positions from four each to three each. Sensenbrenner criticized their actions but signed on to the list, which President Bush will draw on for the appointments.

The commission isn't always bipartisan. If both senators and the president are from the same party - as happened under President Clinton - the two senators appoint eight commissioners between them and the party out of power get none.

If the senators are from different parties, the senator from the president's party names five commissioners, while the other one names three.

In both scenarios, the deans and bar appoint the remaining three commissioners.

Forest Maltzman, a political science professor at George Washington University, said only a handful of states use a bipartisan commission, but the number is growing. Other states include California and Washington.

Democratic senators from states that don't use commissions still have veto power. Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has said he will not hold confirmation hearings on any candidate without the acquiescence of both state's senators.

But neither Dayton nor Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn., have said they will block the judicial nominees from the state.

Dayton hasn't called for a commission approach in Minnesota, but he did say he will encourage Ramstad to involve both senators "at least to the extent that we have some more knowledge and an opportunity to encourage applicants."

Wellstone spokesman Jim Farrell agreed.

"Any effort to ensure broader bipartisan cooperation on the selection of judicial nominees sounds like a good idea," he said.

Ramstad's office did not return phone messages left Friday.

Senate Panel Confirms Judge Nominee

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 19-0 Thursday to confirm the nomination of Clark County District Judge James C. Mahan to become Nevada's newest federal judge.

The panel's vote advances Mahan's nomination to the Senate floor for a final vote, expected next week.

Mahan, who turns 58 on Sunday, would be the second Nevada judge this year to be appointed to the federal bench. U.S. District Judge Larry Hicks of Reno was confirmed earlier.

REV_00086558

Both were nominated by President Bush after being recommended by Sens. John Ensign, R-Nev., and Harry Reid, D-Nev.

Voting without debate, the committee approved Mahan and four other federal judge nominees who breezed through a confirmation hearing last week.

The only suspense at Thursday's meeting was whether enough senators would show up for a quorum. Ten senators were needed, but only nine were present.

'I really would like to wrap this up,' said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the committee chairman. Unless another senator arrived in three or four minutes, Leahy warned, the confirmation vote would be postponed until January.

The delay was averted when Sen. Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., appeared to complete the quorum. The 10 senators present voted to confirm the judges, and affirmative votes from the committee's nine other members were submitted by proxy.

Senators Urged to Act on Nominees

By Dave Boyer
The Washington Times
Saturday, December 15, 2001

The White House yesterday called on Senate Democrats to act on a backlog of 157 nominations, including a candidate who a Republican senator suggested is a victim of anti-Catholic bigotry.

REV_00086563

"It's time for the Senate to act on the president's nominees and assure that the important work of America's government can be done," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

Mr. Fleischer singled out two stalled nominations: Otto Reich for assistant secretary of state, and Eugene Scalia for Labor Department solicitor. Of Mr. Reich, he said the Democrat-controlled Senate Foreign Relations Committee "refuses even a simple request to give the man his day in court or a fair hearing." A spokeswoman for committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware did not respond to several requests for comment.

Mr. Scalia, son of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, was approved six weeks ago by the Senate Health, Education and Labor and Pensions Committee, but Majority Leader Tom Daschle has yet to allow a floor vote on his nomination.

Mr. Daschle said yesterday he will allow a vote on Mr. Scalia at some point, but added that supporters probably do not have the required 60 votes to defeat an expected Democratic filibuster of the nomination.

"I just haven't scheduled it, in part because I realize that it is going to take some time," Mr. Daschle said.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said he is concerned about accusations that Mr. Scalia is being punished because he is a "devout pro-life Catholic."

The Washington Times reported Tuesday that liberal and feminist groups are gearing up for a "nasty and contentious fight" against President Bush's judicial nominees who do not support abortion. Mr. Hatch said he hopes the same reasons do not extend to Mr. Scalia's nomination.

"These partisan rationales, extraneous to Mr. Scalia's qualifications, are bound to arise when the Democratic leadership refuses to allow his nomination to be openly debated in the light of day," Mr. Hatch said. "If you don't like Mr. Scalia, for any reason at all - including the fact that he is a pro-life Catholic or the fact that he's Justice Scalia's son, then vote against him and you can show your bigotry that way."

Mr. Daschle said that Democrats' opposition to Mr. Scalia has nothing to do with his religious views.

"In all of the discussions and conversations I've had about that particular nomination, his pro-life position has never come up with me once," Mr. Daschle said. "It has a lot more to do with his unwillingness to, apparently, carry out the laws that will be entrusted to him as the chief enforcer in the Department of Labor, his unwillingness to look at ergonomics laws that exist or that might be propounded."

Mr. Scalia has said that the proposed regulations on ergonomics, or repetitive workplace injuries, fashioned during the Clinton administration, were based on bad science. But he told the Senate committee that he would follow the law as Labor Department solicitor.

Congress repealed the last-minute Clinton regulations after Mr. Bush became president.

Some Senate Republicans also say Mr. Scalia is the victim of political payback because Democrats were angered by his father's vote with the majority in the Supreme Court decision that ended the contested Florida presidential election in favor of Mr. Bush. Democrats deny the accusation.

Mr. Fleischer also pointed out yesterday that the Senate has yet to act on 37 of Mr. Bush's judicial nominees.

"There are more vacancies in the federal judiciary now than when President Bush came into office," Mr. Fleischer said. "The reason is because the Senate has failed to act."

Mr. Bush has nominated 64 district and circuit court judges, of whom 21 have been confirmed by the Senate.

Family Ties in Top Federal Jobs

By Michael Collins
Scripps Howard News Service
Monday, December 17, 2001

Sens. Strom Thurmond and Jim Bunning have been catching flak from critics who think their sons' nominations for prominent federal jobs reek of nepotism.

But the senators' offspring are just the latest in a long line of people with close family ties who have landed prominent government positions.

"It is not at all unusual for relatives of political people to receive nominations" for a federal post, said Al Felzenberg, a political historian with the Heritage Foundation, a conservative think tank. Strom Thurmond Jr., the 29-year-old son of Sen. Thurmond, R-S.C., was recently sworn in as a U.S. attorney for South Carolina. The White House nominated him for the job, and the Senate confirmed the nomination.

David Bunning, the 35-year-old son of Sen. Bunning, R-Ky., has been nominated for a U.S. District Court judgeship in Kentucky's Eastern District. His nomination is pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The Bunning recommendation raised eyebrows from the beginning because of the senator's role in the process. He and Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., interviewed 11 finalists for three posts and forwarded their names to the White House, which pared the list down to three.

The nomination became further complicated when the American Bar Association concluded that the younger Bunning - an assistant U.S. attorney in Covington, Ky. - isn't qualified to become a federal judge. The organization listed several concerns about his competence, including lack of experience.

He has been a practicing lawyer for 10 years; the bar association says federal judges should have a minimum of 12 years' experience.

Judicial Watch, a conservative organization that regularly files lawsuits aimed at the federal government, has raised similar concerns.

"Judicial Watch has great respect for the senator, and his son I'm sure is a fine person," said Tom Fitton, president of the organization. "But at this point, he's not qualified to be a judge, especially a federal judge. He's too young. He needs more life experience. And it raises the specter of nepotism."

Others, however, say questions about David Bunning's qualifications are part of a broader campaign to keep President Bush's judicial nominees off the bench.

"This flap has to do with other agendas," said Thomas Jipping, director of the Free Congress Foundation's Judicial Selection Monitoring Project. "It does not have anything to do with the qualifications and suitability of David Bunning to be a district judge."

Since the days of George Washington, the placement of close relatives of presidents or congressmen in high-ranking federal jobs is a political tradition as old as the Republic itself.

Washington's nephew, Bushrod Washington, was appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court by President John Adams and served as an associate justice from 1799 to 1829. President John Kennedy chose his brother, Robert, as the attorney general.

Sen. Tom Connally of Texas wanted President Franklin Roosevelt to nominate his son, Ben, for a federal judgeship, even though there were questions about whether the 32-year-old was qualified for the bench. Roosevelt refused, citing the son's age and inexperience, said Sheldon Goldman, author of a book on the selection of federal judges.

Eventually, Connally got what he wanted. President Harry Truman appointed Ben Connally as a federal district court judge in 1949, and the nomination was confirmed by the Senate.

Former Scripps Howard reporter Vance Trimble won a Pulitzer Prize in 1960 for a series of stories that exposed the extent of nepotism in Congress. Trimble found that about one-fifth of all members of Congress had relatives on the official payrolls.

Even the current administration has its share of appointees with family ties. Vice President Dick Cheney's son-in-law, Philip Perry, is deputy attorney general. Secretary of State Colin Powell's son, Michael Powell, is chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

When close relatives of a member of Congress are nominated for a federal post, the Senate is put in an awkward position because it must confirm the nomination or risk alienating a colleague, said Goldman, a political science professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Still, the bottom line should be, "is this the best person qualified for the job," he said.

Wisconsin Selection Process More Inclusive than Minnesota's

By Frederic Frommer
The Associated Press
Friday, December 14, 2001

Minnesota can look to its eastern neighbor to minimize future allegations of nepotism in federal judicial selections. Unlike Minnesota, Wisconsin uses a federal nominating commission that ensures at least two federal lawmakers get a say in the selection.

In Minnesota, as in most other states, senators get to select candidates for federal positions from their state. If neither senator is from the same party as the president, that responsibility falls to the most senior House member from the president's party. Because both Minnesota senators are Democrats, Rep. Jim Ramstad, the state's senior Republican House member, got to make the selection for the federal judgeship in Minneapolis. He forwarded the names of three candidates to the White House, but recommended his sister - Minnesota Corrections Commissioner Sheryl Ramstad Hvass - as his first choice.

Ramstad was criticized for the recommendation, and Sen. Mark Dayton, D-Minn., says he'll ask to play some role in the next selection.

In Wisconsin, the state's two Democratic senators already have a significant say.
Under the state's federal nominating commission, which was established in 1980, Sens. Herb Kohl and Russ Feingold got to name two people each to the 11-member panel, while the state's most senior Republican, Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner, named four. The other three members were appointed by the State Bar of Wisconsin and law school deans.

The bipartisan makeup didn't mean the process went without some partisan squabbling.

Feingold and Kohl pared down the list of judicial candidates for Green Bay from five to three, and of the two U.S. Attorney positions from four each to three each. Sensenbrenner criticized their actions but signed on to the list, which President Bush will draw on for the appointments.

The commission isn't always bipartisan. If both senators and the president are from the same party - as happened under President Clinton - the two senators appoint eight commissioners between them and the party out of power get none.

If the senators are from different parties, the senator from the president's party names five commissioners, while the other one names three.

In both scenarios, the deans and bar appoint the remaining three commissioners.

Forest Maltzman, a political science professor at George Washington University, said only a handful of states use a bipartisan commission, but the number is growing. Other states include California and Washington.

Jim Wilson and I spoke twice today. This morning he suggested a meeting to discuss where we go from here. Subsequently, about 10 minutes ago, he informed me that Chairman Burton has directed his staff not to have any meetings, or conversations, with Department or White House staff on this issue. Any communication in the immediate future will have to be either in writing or at the principal level.

See you at 8 am tomorrow morning in the OLA conf. room.

TALKING POINTS: WRITINGS OF EUGENE SCALIA

Eugene Scalia's writings are being misrepresented by critics. He opposed the ergonomics regulation in the last administration, but so did nearly every management lawyer – and a majority of Congress. What is remarkable about Scalia's writings is the degree to which, even as a management lawyer, he occasionally advocated positions that favored workers or unions and that were not necessarily favorable to business.

1. "The Strange Career of Quid Pro Quo Sexual Harassment," 21 Harv. J.L. & Pub. Pol'y 307 (1998).

This markedly non-partisan article is a genuine contribution to the academic literature on sexual harassment:

- The article studies the origin of the term "quid pro quo sexual harassment." It condemns quid pro quo harassment as "an especially contemptible sort" of harassment (p. 313), while also arguing that quid pro quo does not merit a special test, or category, of discrimination.

- The Supreme Court cited the article with approval in a decision that diminished the special treatment given quid pro quo, as the article had urged. Burlington Industries, Inc. v. Ellerth, 524 U.S. 742 (1998).

- Justice Ginsburg has praised the article.

The article made numerous points helpful to discrimination plaintiffs and adverse to employers:

- It criticized as occasionally "unjust" to plaintiffs the "quid pro quo" test being used by the courts.

- In criticizing the quid pro quo test as unduly rigid and occasionally unfair, the article quoted a Clinton judge – Judge Diane Wood, 7th Cir. – and in turn was cited and relied upon by another Clinton judge, in a decision for the plaintiff – Judge Guido Calabresi, 2d Cir., and former dean of Yale Law School.

- The article criticized at least three positions that recently had been advocated by employers under the discrimination laws. Specifically, it criticized the views that:

  --Someone over 40 could not sue under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act if he was replaced by someone who also was over 40;

  --"Same-sex" sexual harassment was only actionable when the harasser was homosexual; and

--There should never be strict employer liability for "quid pro quo" sexual harassment.

- Professor Cass Sunstein of the University of Chicago – a highly-regarded academic who teaches labor and employment law and has been a prominent advisor to Democratic senators – has written a letter stating that the article "should result in some significant advances for analysis and even plaintiffs."

- Scalia's opponents ignore all these aspects of the article and claim that the article shows insensitivity toward sexual harassment because of passing statements made on the proper standard of employer liability for sexual harassment. Yet the article states at the outset, "The proper standard of employer liability for harassment is beyond the scope of this Article." (P. 322.) The article's suggestion that there should not be employer liability for harassment without some company "acquiescence" (n. 62) or "endorsement" (p. 323) was well within the mainstream of debate at the time and is not far from how the Supreme Court resolved the issue – in the decision where it favorably cited Scalia's article.

2. "Ending Our Anti-Union Federal Employment Policy," 24 Harv. J.L. & Pub. Pol'y 489 (2001).

This article proposed that unions be permitted to negotiate partial variances from some federal employment laws. Unions often know better than the government what the most pressing problems are in a workplace, the piece argued; if unions had authority to negotiate partial variances from some federal laws – in order to concentrate on the issues most important in particular workplaces – then some companies would see less reason to oppose unionization and unionization might actually increase.

It is absurd to contend the piece is anti-union:

- The article makes numerous positive statements about unions. It commends their ability to improve working conditions, including safety and health and discrimination.

- The article suggests that increased unionization is one possible benefit of the approach it recommends.

- The article states: "I have arbitrated a number of discrimination claims under a collective bargaining agreement . . .. In those cases the lawyers had been retained by the union on an hourly basis, and they made sincere and persistent efforts to achieve reinstatement (as well as backpay) for the employee." 500.

- And: Those Republicans who "advocate less federal regulation, and more local control, need to consider how unions could help bring that about." 502.

- Professor Cass Sunstein of the University of Chicago – a highly-regarded academic who teaches labor and employment law and has been a prominent advisor to Democratic senators – has written a letter describing the article as "highly creative, and essentially non-ideological." He describes the article as showing "independence of mind" and "sensitivity to competing views."

- Prof. Ted St. Antoine – former dean of Michigan Law School who represented the AFL-CIO in the past – has written a letter stating that Scalia has done some "excellent legal writing" that "by no means follow[s] any strict party line," and citing this article in particular.

3. Law School Note.

Scalia's law review "note" in law school sided with a dissent by Justice Thurgood Marshall. He argued that police who lie at trial should not be absolutely immune from suit under section 1983 of the Civil Rights Act of 1871. ("Police Witness Immunity Under Section 1983," 56 U. Chi. L. Rev. 1433 (1989).)

4. Ergonomics.

While raising questions about ergonomics, Scalia also wrote the following:

- "Patients do not lie" about their musculoskeletal pain and discomfort – indeed, musculoskeletal pain is "prevalent." (1994, "Ergonomics: OSHA's Strange Campaign to Run American Business")

- Employers should "consider a global medical protocol aimed at ensuring that musculoskeletal discomfort is treated [and] not improperly diagnosed." (1997, paper to American Employment Law Council)

- "A company should not ignore legitimate complaints of pain and discomfort." (1997, paper to American Employment Law Council)

- "[I]n some instances, ergonomic measures may reduce pain and injury." (National Law Journal, 1993)

- "Some ergonomics practitioners are serious engineers with valuable, sensible advice on how to increase comfort, morale, and efficiency through new work methods and flexible personnel policies." (1995, Judicial/Legislative Watch Report, National Legal Center for the Public Interest)

- "Industry should . . . continue to examine the relationship between repetitive work and discomfort and injury, just as it should continue to take account of 'human factors' in engineering." (1995, Judicial/Legislative Watch Report, National Legal Center for the Public Interest)

Scalia has not written off all ergonomics as "junk science," as the unions contend.

The Supreme Court "Daubert" decision governs the admissibility of expert evidence in court. Scalia conducted legal research showing that in 11 of 14 reported judicial decisions where a Daubert challenge was raised to an ergonomist's testimony, the testimony was excluded in full or in part. (1997 paper to American Employment Law Council)

Ergonomics testimony was rejected under the Daubert standard by an administrative law judge of the Occupational Safety and Health Standards Review Commission in one of OSHA's three ergonomics trials. The judge ruled that the testimony of OSHA's ergonomics experts was "conjectural," "unreliable," and "untrustworthy." (Dayton Tire case)

While Scalia said that ergonomists repeatedly failing the Supreme Court's "junk science" test raised concerns, he did not say that all ergonomics was junk science. Indeed he has written that "plainly no clear rule can be extracted from these cases," since the results depended greatly on the particular evidence and witnesses at issue. (1997 paper to American Employment Law Council)

5. On OSHA Recordkeeping.

Scalia supported the Clinton Administration's decision to issue a recordkeeping rule, although he expressed disagreement with some aspects of the rule.

Excerpts:

"Recording occupational injuries and illnesses is an important part of businesses' efforts to ensure safety and health, and is integral to OSHA's identification and correction of workplace hazards and its enforcement of OSHA standards and the Occupational Safety and Health Act." (2000 congressional testimony)

The [Clinton's administration's] proposed rule contains some salutary changes that will help OSHA and business better achieve those worthy objectives."
(2000 congressional testimony)

Brett,

My box contained nothing that I think is noteworthy -- almost all of the documents pertained to economic policy. There was one letter, which I tabbed, from the Texas Governor (Clements) that was critical of David Stockman, essentially calling him a liar who should be fired. I do not, however, think that it is of any particular concern to us.

I am working with Melissa in Card's office to find a time that works best for him for a meeting to discuss the categories of documents that will be released. This meeting time will likely be sometime late afternoon - after 3:30 pm. I'll let you know what is worked out.

Participants include: Card, Gonzales, Fleischer, Bartlett, Kavanaugh, Elwood and Sampson. If Press wants Anne to attend she is certainly welcome also.

There is a gentleman running for office that Karl would like for us invite for a Photo-Op here at the White House. What are the legal issues with us taking a photo with Mr. Jim Sullivan and the President in the Oval or the Roosevelt Room?

I need to work on getting him tomorrow or Friday so let me know as soon as you can.

Thanks

My friend-

Couldn't get you or Brad or Viet, but I fully understand: life is busy. No problem. It all went beautifully: lots of talking points are out, and the groups were enthusiastic to beat the drum.

I did not see Hatch's speech, but would like to get it into everyone's hands today. Do you have text that Matt Smith might email/send out pronto?

Warmly

tsg

Another New Face for U.S. Trial Court

By Jonathan Groner
Legal Times
Thursday, December 20, 2001
On Dec. 11, the Senate unanimously confirmed Miller & Chevalier partner John Bates as the newest U.S. district judge for the District of Columbia.

Bates will be the second George W. Bush appointee to be seated on the trial court, following

REV_00087442

Judge Reggie Walton. His ascent marks the latest step in a little-noticed phenomenon -- the virtually complete turnover of the court's roster of active judges in less than a decade.

Once the 55-year-old Bates is sworn in to replace retired Judge Stanley Harris, an event that will probably occur late this week, he will be one of 11 active judges out of 14 on the court with less than eight years' experience as a federal judge.

Starting with four judges confirmed on the same day in June 1994, President Bill Clinton appointed nine judges to the D.C. federal trial court. Bush already has picked two.

The process is certain to continue. Richard Leon -- a white collar crime litigator and partner at the D.C. office of Columbus, Ohio's Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease – was nominated Sept. 10 to yet another vacancy. Leon would replace Judge Norma Holloway Johnson, who took senior status last summer.

And Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson has announced his intention to take senior status as well when he becomes eligible at the end of next month. That will create a fourth opportunity for the president to name a judge to the court, which has 15 authorized judgeships.

The nomination of Leon, who has served frequently as counsel to GOP members of the House of Representatives, is not expected to be controversial. Hearings will take place in early 2002.

Leon impressed Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson in 2000 when he served as a member of the Judicial Review Commission on Foreign Asset Control, a panel that Thompson chaired when he was in private practice. Like Bates and Walton, Leon garnered a "well qualified" rating from the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, the highest ABA rating.

"I was pleased and honored to be nominated," says Leon, 52. "I look forward to working with the Senate staff and members, and I hope I can move quickly through the process."

Assuming that Leon is confirmed and that the Jackson seat is filled as well, the only judges on the court who served before 1994 will be two Ronald Reagan appointees -- Chief Judge Thomas Hogan, who joined the court in 1982, and Judge Royce Lamberth, who came on in 1987.

Bates, a longtime federal prosecutor in the District who had a lead role on Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's Whitewater investigative team, is well-regarded by both Democrats and Republicans. He declines comment.

Leon also gets good reviews from members of the opposing party.

"He will be a wonderful federal judge," says litigator Martha Purcell Rogers of Ober, Kaler, Grimes & Shriver, a Democrat. "He has extremely varied experience as a lawyer, which is a good thing. He is an inherently fair person."

REV_00087443

Bush's judge-pickers might well wish to look for a woman to fill the fourth vacancy, since they have selected three male candidates so far. The court has only three female judges -- Clinton appointees Gladys Kessler, Colleen Kollar-Kotelly, and Ellen Segal Huvelle.

The two Bush nominees for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, John Roberts Jr. and Miguel Estrada, have not had a hearing, and none has yet been scheduled by Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.).

Daschle Says He Has No Plans To Block Recess Appointments

By Tully
Congressional Quarterly
Tuesday, December 18, 2001

"With the Bush administration indicating it will use recess appointments to fill some executive-branch posts in the coming weeks, Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle said Tuesday he does not plan to block that effort." Daschle said, "It's not my intention to preclude this administration from using recess appointments as previous administrations have." Daschle said he "does expect to be 'notified and consulted' on such appointments before Congress leaves town for the year. In past years, Republicans angrily criticized former President Bill Clinton for making recess appointments without first notifying them." CQ added a number of Republican senators, "critical of Daschle's handling of judicial and non-judicial nominations, have urged President Bush to use his power to fill positions when Congress is in recess." White House spokesman Ari Fleischer "would not confirm reports that Bush plans to give recess appointments to Eugene Scalia to be solicitor of the Labor Department and Otto Reich to be assistant secretary of state for Western Hemisphere affairs." Fleischer said, "The Constitution does give the president authority to act otherwise, but the president continues to hope the Senate will do what the Senate should do." CQ added lawmakers "made clear the White House is considering that strategy, and numerous Republicans endorsed it." Republicans "expressed concern that Daschle would take steps to prevent recess appointments, such as not officially recessing the Senate when it concludes its business for the year. But the majority leader downplayed that notion on Tuesday."

Let's Have More Voices, Not Fewer, on New Judges

By Jim Fisher
Lewiston Morning Tribune
Tuesday, December 18, 2001

Republicans say Democratic Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell are unreasonably blocking the speedy appointment of a new federal judge in the Tacoma area because they did not have a say in the names submitted to President Bush. Democrats say Republican Rep. Jennifer Dunn had a lot of nerve submitting those names on her own when she knows former Republican Sen. Slade Gorton refused to permit consideration of any judicial nominations in which he did not have a hand. Who's right?

Both sides are.

More importantly, however, both are also wrong.

The tradition of presidents permitting senior senators of their party to choose judicial nominees in their own states is a long one. But that doesn't make it a good one. By permitting one person arbitrarily to decide who gets a lifetime appointment to a federal judgeship, the practice permits senators to reward virtually anyone -- a former law partner for example.

And that is exactly what has happened in both Washington and Idaho.

It gets discouraging to see disputes over this practice play out with each change of administration. That's not because someone -- in this case, Dunn -- is trying to reform the process, but because someone -- in this case, Dunn -- is trying to bend it to her own advantage.

As a House member, Dunn would customarily be out in the cold on the replacement for Judge Robert Bryan of Tacoma. But because both of Washington's senators are Democrats, and not of Bush's party, she called an end run around them. She sent Bush four names not seen, let alone approved, by Murray and Cantwell.

That played as well with the senators as Murray's attempt to bypass Gorton did under the Democratic administration of Bill Clinton. And her recent response echoes Gorton's nearly verbatim:

"We will not have a judge out of the Senate unless Senator Cantwell and I have a say naming the judge."

You can no doubt take that assertion to the bank. Not only do Murray and Cantwell have precedent, including Gorton's own, on their side, but the Senate is now in Democratic hands.

It's time for Dunn to call a strategic retreat, and, as Cantwell suggests, to compromise on a bipartisan commission to help choose Washington's judges, now and in the future. That would help take some of the politics out of the process. And who knows? It might even help put some better judges on the bench. -- J.F.

Transcripts/Members of Congress

News Conference with Senator Lott
FDCH Political Transcripts
Tuesday, October 18, 2001

Excerpt:

REV_00087445

QUESTION: Recess appointments for Gene Scalia and Otto Reich, did you talk about this with the president at the leadership meeting this morning, and should he do this?

LOTT: The president did, again, make an appeal to the Senate, specifically to Senator Daschle, to move the nominations. We have a large number of nominations for the administration that are still pending and a large number of judicial nominations that are still pending. We have an opportunity to move a whole lot of those this week, and we certainly should.

If something can't be worked out to get a direct vote on Scalia or -- to go to the Department of Labor, or Otto Reich, we should have a vote on those. But if we don't, I think the administration will consider recess appointments.

But as I did when I was the majority leader in the Clinton administration, there should be notification of the Senate what they're thinking about, and they should work with the Senate leaders as to any recess appointments that do occur.

LOTT: During the Clinton years there were a number of recess appointments, but they were almost always agreed to, with about three exceptions, and obviously one of those was Bill Lann Lee and a couple of others that we objected to strenuously. I really was upset that the president recess appointed a federal judge. That has rarely been done.

So I think that the Bush administration will be careful and will be -- you know, will make an effort to communicate what their thinking is. But if they're not going to be given fair treatment, then they are going to have to consider recess appointments.

Vicious Attacks on Senators Daschle and Leahy Seek to Force Speedy Confirmations of Judicial Nominees

People for the American Way
Monday, December 17, 2001

> Report Documents Right Wing's Campaign to Exploit War on Terrorism,
> Short-Circuit Senate Scrutiny of Controversial Bush Nominees to Courts

People For the American Way Foundation today released a report detailing the vicious campaign that right-wing groups have employed since Sept. 11 to try to force quick confirmation of President Bush's judicial nominees. The report, How Low Will They Go? The Right Wing's Attack Campaign To Advance Judicial Nominations, documents attacks that go far beyond the usual partisan rhetoric—including attacks that challenge the patriotism and integrity of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. The PFAWF report is available at: http://www.pfaw.org/issues/right/HowLow.pdf

REV_00087446

"Nominees for lifetime appointments to our federal courts deserve close and careful scrutiny," said PFAWF President Ralph G. Neas said. "This attack campaign is designed to undercut that scrutiny, which is a critical responsibility that our Constitution confers on the Senate. Even worse, these right-wing groups have stooped to new levels by trying to use the war on terrorism to further their own political agenda for the courts. Senators must resist this campaign of intimidation."

How Low Will They Go? reveals how this attack campaign was first crafted. Detailing a memo written by a Republican staffer and enthusiastically endorsed by at least one person in the White House, the report reveals how the Right has used the Sept. 11 tragedies as a vehicle to press for speedy confirmation of Bush's judicial nominations by falsely claiming these nominees are needed on the bench to order wiretaps and search warrants necessary for fighting terrorism.

In the wake of the terrorist attacks, right-wing groups and their Senate GOP allies have held news conferences and issued statements to put Senators Daschle and Leahy on notice: confirm the president's judicial nominees or we'll use the war on terrorism to wage war on you. As How Low
Will They Go? explains, the post-Sept. 11 strategies used by the far-right leaders include:

Falsely suggesting that federal appeals court vacancies are having a negative effect on fighting terrorism—even though the judges who serve on these courts do not have responsibility for granting search warrants or approving wiretaps.

Questioning the patriotism and integrity of Senate Democrats, including placing ads in the home state of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle that challenge his commitment to fighting terrorism.

Claiming that Senate Democrats are engaging in "racial profiling."

Calling for Senator Leahy's removal as chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Unsuccessfully attempting to link judicial confirmations to foreign aid.

Our Courts at Risk: Senate Has Power to Stop Ultra-Conservative Bush Nominees

By Linda Berg
National Organization for Women
December, 2001

Although the issue of judicial nominations has been quiet thus far, activists in both parties are preparing for a cataclysmic clash after the first of the year. To date, the Senate Judiciary Committee has held 10 hearings on George W. Bush's nominees, resulting in 27 favorable recommendations to the full Senate. However, there are at least 100 federal court vacancies and a preoccupied Senate charged with confirming new judges.

REV_00087447

Republicans are urging quick Senate confirmation of many right-wing judges, using "national security" as their pretext for glossing over the nominees' hostility toward women's rights. These are the same Republicans who, hypocritically, blocked so many of President Clinton's judicial nominees on ideological grounds.

Meanwhile, Democratic Senators have been unwilling to expend political capital opposing more than a few of Bush's conservative jurists. And many commentators are silent, perhaps fearful of being called "unpatriotic" for opposing the President during wartime. NOW has declared this unprecedented onslaught of right-wing judicial nominees an emergency that threatens the rights of women. "The courts should be the guardians of our rights," said Terry O'Neill, Treasurer of NOW's Political Action Committees. "But political and religious extremists have taken aim at the courts in order to dismantle those rights."

Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has thus far managed to hold up the nominations of some of the most egregious candidates; however, we expect the battle lines to be drawn soon after the first of the year.

The fate of reproductive rights, civil rights, lesbian rights, disability rights and so many other gains feminists have fought for in the past 35 years will be in the hands of these judges.

We are also facing the ever-growing threat of a Supreme Court vacancy, and Bush will surely choose a nominee from his stable of right-wing judicial ideologues. Just one new Supreme Court Justice could endanger the future of Roe v. Wade, so it is crucial that we do everything within our power to keep opponents of our rights off the bench.

Another New Face for U.S. Trial Court

By Jonathan Groner
Legal Times
Thursday, December 20, 2001
On Dec. 11, the Senate unanimously confirmed Miller & Chevalier partner John Bates as the newest U.S. district judge for the District of Columbia.

Bates will be the second George W. Bush appointee to be seated on the trial court, following

REV_00087451

Judge Reggie Walton. His ascent marks the latest step in a little-noticed phenomenon -- the virtually complete turnover of the court's roster of active judges in less than a decade.

Once the 55-year-old Bates is sworn in to replace retired Judge Stanley Harris, an event that will probably occur late this week, he will be one of 11 active judges out of 14 on the court with less than eight years' experience as a federal judge.

Starting with four judges confirmed on the same day in June 1994, President Bill Clinton appointed nine judges to the D.C. federal trial court. Bush already has picked two.

The process is certain to continue. Richard Leon -- a white collar crime litigator and partner at the D.C. office of Columbus, Ohio's Vorys, Sater, Seymour and Pease – was nominated Sept. 10 to yet another vacancy. Leon would replace Judge Norma Holloway Johnson, who took senior status last summer.

And Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson has announced his intention to take senior status as well when he becomes eligible at the end of next month. That will create a fourth opportunity for the president to name a judge to the court, which has 15 authorized judgeships.

The nomination of Leon, who has served frequently as counsel to GOP members of the House of Representatives, is not expected to be controversial. Hearings will take place in early 2002.

Leon impressed Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson in 2000 when he served as a member of the Judicial Review Commission on Foreign Asset Control, a panel that Thompson chaired when he was in private practice. Like Bates and Walton, Leon garnered a "well qualified" rating from the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary, the highest ABA rating.

"I was pleased and honored to be nominated," says Leon, 52. "I look forward to working with the Senate staff and members, and I hope I can move quickly through the process."

Assuming that Leon is confirmed and that the Jackson seat is filled as well, the only judges on the court who served before 1994 will be two Ronald Reagan appointees -- Chief Judge Thomas Hogan, who joined the court in 1982, and Judge Royce Lamberth, who came on in 1987.

Bates, a longtime federal prosecutor in the District who had a lead role on Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's Whitewater investigative team, is well-regarded by both Democrats and Republicans. He declines comment.

Leon also gets good reviews from members of the opposing party.

"He will be a wonderful federal judge," says litigator Martha Purcell Rogers of Ober, Kaler, Grimes & Shriver, a Democrat. "He has extremely varied experience as a lawyer, which is a good thing. He is an inherently fair person."

REV_00087452

Bush's judge-pickers might well wish to look for a woman to fill the fourth vacancy, since they have selected three male candidates so far. The court has only three female judges -- Clinton appointees Gladys Kessler, Colleen Kollar-Kotelly, and Ellen Segal Huvelle.

The two Bush nominees for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, John Roberts Jr. and Miguel Estrada, have not had a hearing, and none has yet been scheduled by Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.).

Daschle Says He Has No Plans To Block Recess Appointments

By Tully
Congressional Quarterly
Tuesday, December 18, 2001

"With the Bush administration indicating it will use recess appointments to fill some executive-branch posts in the coming weeks, Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle said Tuesday he does not plan to block that effort." Daschle said, "It's not my intention to preclude this administration from using recess appointments as previous administrations have." Daschle said he "does expect to be 'notified and consulted' on such appointments before Congress leaves town for the year. In past years, Republicans angrily criticized former President Bill Clinton for making recess appointments without first notifying them." CQ added a number of Republican senators, "critical of Daschle's handling of judicial and non-judicial nominations, have urged President Bush to use his power to fill positions when Congress is in recess." White House spokesman Ari Fleischer "would not confirm reports that Bush plans to give recess appointments to Eugene Scalia to be solicitor of the Labor Department and Otto Reich to be assistant secretary of state for Western Hemisphere affairs." Fleischer said, "The Constitution does give the president authority to act otherwise, but the president continues to hope the Senate will do what the Senate should do." CQ added lawmakers "made clear the White House is considering that strategy, and numerous Republicans endorsed it." Republicans "expressed concern that Daschle would take steps to prevent recess appointments, such as not officially recessing the Senate when it concludes its business for the year. But the majority leader downplayed that notion on Tuesday."

Let's Have More Voices, Not Fewer, on New Judges

By Jim Fisher

Republicans say Democratic Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell are unreasonably blocking the speedy appointment of a new federal judge in the Tacoma area because they did not have a say in the names submitted to President Bush. Democrats say Republican Rep. Jennifer Dunn had a lot of nerve submitting those names on her own when she knows former Republican Sen. Slade Gorton refused to permit consideration of any judicial nominations in which he did not have a hand. Who's right?

Both sides are.

More importantly, however, both are also wrong.

The tradition of presidents permitting senior senators of their party to choose judicial nominees in their own states is a long one. But that doesn't make it a good one. By permitting one person arbitrarily to decide who gets a lifetime appointment to a federal judgeship, the practice permits senators to reward virtually anyone -- a former law partner for example.

And that is exactly what has happened in both Washington and Idaho.

It gets discouraging to see disputes over this practice play out with each change of administration. That's not because someone -- in this case, Dunn -- is trying to reform the process, but because someone -- in this case, Dunn -- is trying to bend it to her own advantage.

As a House member, Dunn would customarily be out in the cold on the replacement for Judge Robert Bryan of Tacoma. But because both of Washington's senators are Democrats, and not of Bush's party, she called an end run around them. She sent Bush four names not seen, let alone approved, by Murray and Cantwell.

That played as well with the senators as Murray's attempt to bypass Gorton did under the Democratic administration of Bill Clinton. And her recent response echoes Gorton's nearly verbatim:

"We will not have a judge out of the Senate unless Senator Cantwell and I have a say naming the judge."

You can no doubt take that assertion to the bank. Not only do Murray and Cantwell have precedent, including Gorton's own, on their side, but the Senate is now in Democratic hands.

It's time for Dunn to call a strategic retreat, and, as Cantwell suggests, to compromise on a bipartisan commission to help choose Washington's judges, now and in the future. That would help take some of the politics out of the process. And who knows? It might even help put some better judges on the bench. -- J.F.

LOTT: The president did, again, make an appeal to the Senate, specifically to Senator Daschle, to move the nominations. We have a large number of nominations for the administration that are still pending and a large number of judicial nominations that are still pending. We have an opportunity to move a whole lot of those this week, and we certainly should.

If something can't be worked out to get a direct vote on Scalia or -- to go to the Department of Labor, or Otto Reich, we should have a vote on those. But if we don't, I think the administration will consider recess appointments.

But as I did when I was the majority leader in the Clinton administration, there should be notification of the Senate what they're thinking about, and they should work with the Senate leaders as to any recess appointments that do occur.

LOTT: During the Clinton years there were a number of recess appointments, but they were almost always agreed to, with about three exceptions, and obviously one of those was Bill Lann Lee and a couple of others that we objected to strenuously. I really was upset that the president recess appointed a federal judge. That has rarely been done.

So I think that the Bush administration will be careful and will be -- you know, will make an effort to communicate what their thinking is. But if they're not going to be given fair treatment, then they are going to have to consider recess appointments.

Vicious Attacks on Senators Daschle and Leahy Seek to Force Speedy Confirmations of Judicial Nominees

> Report Documents Right Wing's Campaign to Exploit War on Terrorism,
> Short-Circuit Senate Scrutiny of Controversial Bush Nominees to Courts

People For the American Way Foundation today released a report detailing the vicious campaign that right-wing groups have employed since Sept. 11 to try to force quick confirmation of President Bush's judicial nominees. The report, How Low Will They Go? The Right Wing's Attack Campaign To Advance Judicial Nominations, documents attacks that go far beyond the usual partisan rhetoric—including attacks that challenge the patriotism and integrity of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. The PFAWF report is available at: http://www.pfaw.org/issues/right/HowLow.pdf

REV_00087455

"Nominees for lifetime appointments to our federal courts deserve close and careful scrutiny," said PFAWF President Ralph G. Neas said. "This attack campaign is designed to undercut that scrutiny, which is a critical responsibility that our Constitution confers on the Senate. Even worse, these right-wing groups have stooped to new levels by trying to use the war on terrorism to further their own political agenda for the courts. Senators must resist this campaign of intimidation."

How Low Will They Go? reveals how this attack campaign was first crafted. Detailing a memo written by a Republican staffer and enthusiastically endorsed by at least one person in the White House, the report reveals how the Right has used the Sept. 11 tragedies as a vehicle to press for speedy confirmation of Bush's judicial nominations by falsely claiming these nominees are needed on the bench to order wiretaps and search warrants necessary for fighting terrorism.

In the wake of the terrorist attacks, right-wing groups and their Senate GOP allies have held news conferences and issued statements to put Senators Daschle and Leahy on notice: confirm the president's judicial nominees or we'll use the war on terrorism to wage war on you. As How Low
Will They Go? explains, the post-Sept. 11 strategies used by the far-right leaders include:

Falsely suggesting that federal appeals court vacancies are having a negative effect on fighting terrorism—even though the judges who serve on these courts do not have responsibility for granting search warrants or approving wiretaps.

Questioning the patriotism and integrity of Senate Democrats, including placing ads in the home state of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle that challenge his commitment to fighting terrorism.

Claiming that Senate Democrats are engaging in "racial profiling."

Calling for Senator Leahy's removal as chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Unsuccessfully attempting to link judicial confirmations to foreign aid.

Our Courts at Risk: Senate Has Power to Stop Ultra-Conservative Bush Nominees

By Linda Berg
National Organization for Women
December, 2001

Although the issue of judicial nominations has been quiet thus far, activists in both parties are preparing for a cataclysmic clash after the first of the year. To date, the Senate Judiciary Committee has held 10 hearings on George W. Bush's nominees, resulting in 27 favorable recommendations to the full Senate. However, there are at least 100 federal court vacancies and a preoccupied Senate charged with confirming new judges.

Republicans are urging quick Senate confirmation of many right-wing judges, using "national security" as their pretext for glossing over the nominees' hostility toward women's rights. These are the same Republicans who, hypocritically, blocked so many of President Clinton's judicial nominees on ideological grounds.

Meanwhile, Democratic Senators have been unwilling to expend political capital opposing more than a few of Bush's conservative jurists. And many commentators are silent, perhaps fearful of being called "unpatriotic" for opposing the President during wartime. NOW has declared this unprecedented onslaught of right-wing judicial nominees an emergency that threatens the rights of women. "The courts should be the guardians of our rights," said Terry O'Neill, Treasurer of NOW's Political Action Committees. "But political and religious extremists have taken aim at the courts in order to dismantle those rights."

Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has thus far managed to hold up the nominations of some of the most egregious candidates; however, we expect the battle lines to be drawn soon after the first of the year.

The fate of reproductive rights, civil rights, lesbian rights, disability rights and so many other gains feminists have fought for in the past 35 years will be in the hands of these judges.

We are also facing the ever-growing threat of a Supreme Court vacancy, and Bush will surely choose a nominee from his stable of right-wing judicial ideologues. Just one new Supreme Court Justice could endanger the future of Roe v. Wade, so it is crucial that we do everything within our power to keep opponents of our rights off the bench.

LOTT: During the Clinton years there were a number of recess appointments, but they were almost always agreed to, with about three exceptions, and obviously one of those was Bill Lann Lee and a couple of others that we objected to strenuously. I really was upset that the president recess appointed a federal judge. That has rarely been done.

So I think that the Bush administration will be careful and will be -- you know, will make an effort to communicate what their thinking is. But if they're not going to be given fair treatment, then they are going to have to consider recess appointments.

Vicious Attacks on Senators Daschle and Leahy Seek to Force Speedy Confirmations of Judicial Nominees

People for the American Way
Monday, December 17, 2001

> Report Documents Right Wing's Campaign to Exploit War on Terrorism,
> Short-Circuit Senate Scrutiny of Controversial Bush Nominees to Courts

People For the American Way Foundation today released a report detailing the vicious campaign that right-wing groups have employed since Sept. 11 to try to force quick confirmation of President Bush's judicial nominees. The report, How Low Will They Go? The Right Wing's Attack Campaign To Advance Judicial Nominations, documents attacks that go far beyond the usual partisan rhetoric—including attacks that challenge the patriotism and integrity of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., and Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. The PFAWF report is available at: http://www.pfaw.org/issues/right/HowLow.pdf

REV_00087464

"Nominees for lifetime appointments to our federal courts deserve close and careful scrutiny," said PFAWF President Ralph G. Neas said. "This attack campaign is designed to undercut that scrutiny, which is a critical responsibility that our Constitution confers on the Senate. Even worse, these right-wing groups have stooped to new levels by trying to use the war on terrorism to further their own political agenda for the courts. Senators must resist this campaign of intimidation."

How Low Will They Go? reveals how this attack campaign was first crafted. Detailing a memo written by a Republican staffer and enthusiastically endorsed by at least one person in the White House, the report reveals how the Right has used the Sept. 11 tragedies as a vehicle to press for speedy confirmation of Bush's judicial nominations by falsely claiming these nominees are needed on the bench to order wiretaps and search warrants necessary for fighting terrorism.

In the wake of the terrorist attacks, right-wing groups and their Senate GOP allies have held news conferences and issued statements to put Senators Daschle and Leahy on notice: confirm the president's judicial nominees or we'll use the war on terrorism to wage war on you. As How Low
Will They Go? explains, the post-Sept. 11 strategies used by the far-right leaders include:

Falsely suggesting that federal appeals court vacancies are having a negative effect on fighting terrorism—even though the judges who serve on these courts do not have responsibility for granting search warrants or approving wiretaps.

Questioning the patriotism and integrity of Senate Democrats, including placing ads in the home state of Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle that challenge his commitment to fighting terrorism.

Claiming that Senate Democrats are engaging in "racial profiling."

Calling for Senator Leahy's removal as chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Unsuccessfully attempting to link judicial confirmations to foreign aid.

Our Courts at Risk: Senate Has Power to Stop Ultra-Conservative Bush Nominees

By Linda Berg
National Organization for Women
December, 2001

Although the issue of judicial nominations has been quiet thus far, activists in both parties are preparing for a cataclysmic clash after the first of the year. To date, the Senate Judiciary Committee has held 10 hearings on George W. Bush's nominees, resulting in 27 favorable recommendations to the full Senate. However, there are at least 100 federal court vacancies and a preoccupied Senate charged with confirming new judges.

REV_00087465

Republicans are urging quick Senate confirmation of many right-wing judges, using "national security" as their pretext for glossing over the nominees' hostility toward women's rights. These are the same Republicans who, hypocritically, blocked so many of President Clinton's judicial nominees on ideological grounds.

Meanwhile, Democratic Senators have been unwilling to expend political capital opposing more than a few of Bush's conservative jurists. And many commentators are silent, perhaps fearful of being called "unpatriotic" for opposing the President during wartime. NOW has declared this unprecedented onslaught of right-wing judicial nominees an emergency that threatens the rights of women. "The courts should be the guardians of our rights," said Terry O'Neill, Treasurer of NOW's Political Action Committees. "But political and religious extremists have taken aim at the courts in order to dismantle those rights."

Chair of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., has thus far managed to hold up the nominations of some of the most egregious candidates; however, we expect the battle lines to be drawn soon after the first of the year.

The fate of reproductive rights, civil rights, lesbian rights, disability rights and so many other gains feminists have fought for in the past 35 years will be in the hands of these judges.

We are also facing the ever-growing threat of a Supreme Court vacancy, and Bush will surely choose a nominee from his stable of right-wing judicial ideologues. Just one new Supreme Court Justice could endanger the future of Roe v. Wade, so it is crucial that we do everything within our power to keep opponents of our rights off the bench.

Terri -

Please see the attached op ed attached to Anne Womack's email.

The Judge would like for you to work up a letter to the editor of the Washington Post addressing the gubernatorial records. The Judge indicated that this letter needs to be written this week and would appreciate it if you would allow Brett Kavanaugh a chance to review your draft letter prior to submission to the Post.
Brett's email address is referenced above.

Thank you and please call me at 202-456-2632 if you have any questions.

Suggestions-

Voice mail: If you are going to be out you have the option of creating a temporary greeting telling callers you are out and when you will return. You can refer them to 456-2632. I don't recommend putting the Signal number on your voice mail- if they need to get you through signal they should already know the number or they can go through the WH operator at 456-1414.

Email: under "actions" - then "mail tools" - then "out of office" is a way to set up a auto reply to folks telling them you are out and when you will be back in. You can customize this as well.

Thanks!

Good and Bad of Congress's Inaction; Judges

By James Brosnan
The Commercial Appeal
Monday, December 24, 2001

Democrats can rightly claim they confirmed one more of Bush's judicial nominees - 28 - than Republicans approved in President Clinton's first year, but that's still not good enough.

The shortage is getting critical. The Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, which hears appeals from Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio and Michigan, soon will be down to half its usual complement of 16 judges because of retirements.

Sen. Carl Levin (D-Mich.) is holding up three Michigan nominees in an effort to force Bush to re-nominate one of Clinton's nominees whom Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham blocked when he was a Michigan senator.

But the Judiciary Committee also hasn't acted on Sixth Circuit nominees from other states, including U.S. Dist. Judge Julia Gibbons of Memphis. Sen. Fred Thompson (R-Tenn.) said he's going to work with Levin to try to resolve the Gibbons nomination.

Bush shares blame because of his tardiness. He didn't nominate Gibbons until Oct. 5 and has yet to act on a recommendation from Tennessee's senators to put Hardy Mays on the district court in Memphis. With Judge Jon McCalla under suspension, Gibbons and Bernice Donald are the only district court judges who regularly hear cases in Memphis.

Courting Tension; Statistics Don't Tell the Whole Story of Judicial Nominations Fight

By Jonathan Groner
Legal Times
Monday, December 24, 2001

In an East Room speech on May 9, President George W. Bush announced his first 11 judicial nominees–all of them selected to fill important seats on federal appeals courts.

Over the next eight months, Bush nominated 17 more circuit judges and put forth 36 candidates for spots on federal district courts. By year's end, six appeals judges and 21 trial judges had been confirmed by the Senate.

Those are the basic facts. The raging debate is over what they mean.

The Bush administration, backed by Republican senators on the Judiciary Committee, accuses Senate Democrats of bad faith. Bush and his allies are incensed that only three of the original 11 circuit nominees have been seated–and that the other eight haven't even had a hearing.

Republicans concede that the Democrats have moved forward on noncontroversial nominations, mostly for the district courts. But that's just window dressing, Republicans say, and the majority has no intention of holding hearings on nominees they see as too conservative.

On the other side, Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-VT) responds that nominees with an ideological bent need careful scrutiny. By clearing other judges and holding off on the tough ones, the committee is just doing its job.

It's a numbers game; pick a set.

REV_00087652

On Dec. 13, Leahy said 27 Bush judges had been confirmed by the Senate–as many as were confirmed in 1993, the first year of the Clinton administration. This despite the fact that Leahy only assumed control of the committee after Sen. Jim Jeffords (Ind-VT) abandoned the GOP, and that a great deal of time was consumed with anti-terror legislation.

Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch, ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, had a ready reply. He quickly pointed out that the committee had moved only 21 percent of appellate nominees, a much lower percentage than in President Bill Clinton's first year.

On Dec. 19, Hatch wrote, "What they are not telling the public is that the Senate has purposefully ignored more judicial nominees than in any other president's first year in office in recent history. Thirty-two of President Bush's nominees have been prohibited from even having a hearing."

District judges are doing much better than appeals judges. The Senate has confirmed 21 of 36 choices for district courts, but just six of 28 for appeals courts.

There's a reason for this. Liberals argue that because the Supreme Court is taking fewer cases, the appeals courts have become more important. They see nominees such as Michael McConnell for the 10th Circuit and Jeffrey Sutton for the 6th Circuit has particularly ideological.

The administration and its supporters agree regarding the significance of circuit court nominees–thus, they argue, bottling up qualified nominees is all the more irresponsible.

The D.C. federal courts are a microcosm. Reggie Walton and John Bates were swiftly and unanimously confirmed for the district court, and Richard Leon, a third nominee, should also have smooth sailing. But for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, John Roberts, Jr. and Miguel Estrada are among the eight picks from May 9 who haven't had a hearing.

Lately, the politics of the Estrada nomination have become especially heated. On Nov. 28, Sen Jon Kyl (R-AZ) accused Democrats of "racially profiling" the nomination by intentionally denying Estrada a hearing because he is Hispanic. Leahy spokesman David Carle replied that this was a "ridiculous assertion."

Last week, People for the American Way, the liberal activist group, cited the Kyl statement as a part of a "vicious campaign" by the right wing against Democratic senators.

On Nov. 15, all 49 GOP senators wrote a letter to Leahy calling for hearings on Estrada and Roberts. Vice President Dick Cheney sent a "Dear Pat" letter on Dec. 5 specifically mentioning vacancies on the 6th Circuit, Estrada, and Roberts.

Going forward, the administration will become more aggressive, says an administration source.

"This president tried to turn a new page after the bitterness of the previous administration," says this source. "But the perception here is that he got nothing at all in return from the Democratic

REV_00087653

Senate. So we will take a harder line on how our nominees are treated by the Judiciary Committee. Our recourse is to complain, and to complain loudly."

Area Native Readies for Judgeship

By Sandy Hodson
The Augusta Chronicle
Tuesday, December 25, 2001

Augusta native Ashley Royal will become the newest member of the federal judiciary as soon as President Bush signs his commission.

Last week, the U.S. Senate approved Mr. Royal's nomination to become a U.S. District judge for the Middle District of Georgia, Macon Division. Mr. Royal, 52, will replace U.S. District Judge Duross Fitzpatrick, who is assuming senior status. "The president has to sign my commission and as soon as he signs that I can begin," said Mr. Royal, who is in Augusta for the holiday.

It's been a long process, he said. It began in January. Mr. Royal is planning to attend seminars for new judges in February and in March.

Mr. Royal attended local schools before graduating from the University of Georgia and the University of Georgia Law School. Mr. Royal started his professional career in the Augusta Judicial Circuit district attorney's office. For the past 18 years, he has practiced law in Macon and has been a partner in the law firm of Jones, Cork & Miller.

Mr. Royal has taught at the University of Georgia Law School, Mercer University and the state's Institute of Trial Advocacy. He also has written a number of professional articles and co-wrote a book, Handbook on Georgia Medical Malpractice Law.

The Martindale-Hubbell Bar Register of Pre-eminent Lawyers lists Mr. Royal as an expert source on attorneys and legal firms. According to the register, his peers have rated his legal ability as very high to pre-eminent, and have evaluated his ethical standards as very high.

Op/Eds

Mahan Stalled

Las Vegas Review-Journal
Tuesday, December 25, 2001

Responding to a recent editorial on these pages, Sen. Patrick Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who chairs the Judiciary Committee, wrote in earlier this month to assure Review-Journal readers that his panel was doing its utmost to confirm Bush judicial nominees.

REV_00087654

Sen. Leahy did admit, though, that under his leadership, the committee has stalled 'more controversial nominees' because starting with them 'would have slowed' the process. Instead, he sought to go first to 'those nominees who will be solid, fair, nonideological judges.'

Well, now not even that approach seems to satisfy Democrats intent on bottling up or even torpedoing Bush nominees.

Last week, Sen. Tom Harkin placed holds on four Bush judicial nominees who had been overwhelmingly approved by Sen. Leahy's committee. Among them was District Judge James Mahan, nominated by Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., for a spot on the federal bench.

Sen. Harkin's motivation? He was angry that Republicans -- and some Democrats -- had prevented a new farm bill from being rammed through Congress last week. Never mind that the bill in question is an abomination, completely undoing any previous market-based reforms in farm policy in favor of a Soviet-style approach rich in regulatory bureaucracy, hand-outs and corporate welfare.

Yes, it's likely that Sen. Harkin's pique will have dissipated by the time the Senate reconvenes late next month -- meaning Judge Mahan and four others will then be confirmed. Yes, it's also true the GOP has in the past used similar tactics.

But by holding up even the most noncontroversial nominees such as Judge Mahan, Sen. Harking makes a mockery of his party's calls for 'bipartisanship.'

Stop Stalling on Judicial Confirmations

By Sen. Orrin Hatch
The Wall Street Journal
December 26, 2001

Now that Congress has adjourned for the year, we are seeing the result of the Senate Democrats' systematic and calculated effort to confirm the absolute minimum number of President Bush's judicial nominees.
Here is what the Senate Democrats want the American public to believe: They have done everything that can be expected because the Senate has confirmed as many judges during President Bush's first year in office as it did in President Clinton's first year. What they are not saying is that the Senate has also ignored, on purpose, more judicial nominees than in any president's first year in modern history.

Thirty-two of President Bush's nominees have been prohibited from even having a hearing -- the first step in the Senate's constitutionally required process of 'advice and consent.' Meanwhile, the judicial branch is in the midst of a vacancy crisis. Nearly 100 judgeships sit empty -- 11% of the total.

The Senate Democrats are using a misleading yardstick – the number of confirmations eight years ago rather than the percentage of work completed this year – in order to pretend that they are doing their job. But the percentage of work completed is a much more appropriate gauge because President Bush has nominated considerably more judges this year than President Clinton did in his first year.

The Senate has approved only 21% of President Bush's appellate court nominations this year. In contrast, we approved 60% of President Clinton's appellate nominees during his first year. Adding in trial court nominations, this year the Senate has confirmed only 42% of President Bush's nominees, which is less than the 57% of President Clinton's nominees the Senate approved in 1993.

The disparity between this year and 1993 is even more dramatic considering the amount of time the Senate had in each case. President Bush nominated his first set of judges on May 9, and had nominated 44 by the beginning of August. In contrast, President Clinton made only one nomination prior to August of his first year, leaving the Senate only three-and-a-half months to consider all his other judges before Congress adjourned on Non. 26, 1993. Why can't the Senate do more work in seven months than it did in three-and-a-half months?

One of the travesties of this year's Senate stall is that it is preventing some tremendously talented people from working for the American people. For example, President Bush has nominated Miguel Estrada and John Roberts – two of the most able lawyers in the country – for seats on the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. That court, which wis widely considered to be the second most important after the Supreme Court, stands one-third vacant today. Another example is Michael McConnell, President Bush's nominee to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, who is widely regarded as one of the nation's foremost constitutional scholars.

A Senate vote on the Estrada, Roberts or McConnell nominations would garner overwhelming, if not unanimous, approval. But the Senate Democrats will not even give them a hearing.

The Senate's constitutional obligation to provide President Bush "advice and consent" on his judicial nominations is not a game of statistics, as the Senate Democrats seem to believe. The goal is not simply to make the numbers look good.

Neither the Senate nor the American public should count it as a victory that the Senate Democrats have succeeded in ignoring more than half of President Bush's picks for the federal judiciary. Contrary to the widely held belief, the Republicans did not play such games when Bill Clinton was president.

During those eight years, the Senate confirmed 377 judges -- only five fewer than the 382 it approved during the eight years of President Reagan. And the Republicans controlled the Senate during six of Mr. Clinton's eight years, just as it did for Mr. Reagan.

This proves beyond any political spin that the Republicans treated a Democratic president just as fairly as they treated a Republican. Now it is time for the Senate Democrats to show they can be fair, too.

Despite the unfortunate decisions made this year, I believe there is room for hope in 2002. If the Senate Democratic leadership sticks to its results-oriented zeal, it will make sure to confirm as many judges in President Bush's second year is it did in President Clinton's second year. The Senate confirmed 100 or President Clinton's judicial nominees in 1994.

The American people should join me in expecting the Senate Democrats to do the same for President Bush–in fact, I think we should take this year's systematic and calculated performance as a pledge that the Senate will confirm at least 100 of President Bush's judicial nominees next year.

hears appeals from Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio and Michigan, soon will be down to half its usual complement of 16 judges because of retirements.

Sen. Carl Levin (D-Mich.) is holding up three Michigan nominees in an effort to force Bush to re-nominate one of Clinton's nominees whom Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham blocked when he was a Michigan senator.

But the Judiciary Committee also hasn't acted on Sixth Circuit nominees from other states, including U.S. Dist. Judge Julia Gibbons of Memphis. Sen. Fred Thompson (R-Tenn.) said he's going to work with Levin to try to resolve the Gibbons nomination.

Bush shares blame because of his tardiness. He didn't nominate Gibbons until Oct. 5 and has yet to act on a recommendation from Tennessee's senators to put Hardy Mays on the district court in Memphis. With Judge Jon McCalla under suspension, Gibbons and Bernice Donald are the only district court judges who regularly hear cases in Memphis.

Courting Tension; Statistics Don't Tell the Whole Story of Judicial Nominations Fight

By Jonathan Groner
Legal Times
Monday, December 24, 2001

In an East Room speech on May 9, President George W. Bush announced his first 11 judicial nominees–all of them selected to fill important seats on federal appeals courts.

Over the next eight months, Bush nominated 17 more circuit judges and put forth 36 candidates for spots on federal district courts. By year's end, six appeals judges and 21 trial judges had been confirmed by the Senate.

Those are the basic facts. The raging debate is over what they mean.

The Bush administration, backed by Republican senators on the Judiciary Committee, accuses Senate Democrats of bad faith. Bush and his allies are incensed that only three of the original 11 circuit nominees have been seated–and that the other eight haven't even had a hearing.

Republicans concede that the Democrats have moved forward on noncontroversial nominations, mostly for the district courts. But that's just window dressing, Republicans say, and the majority has no intention of holding hearings on nominees they see as too conservative.

On the other side, Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-VT) responds that nominees with an ideological bent need careful scrutiny. By clearing other judges and holding off on the tough ones, the committee is just doing its job.

It's a numbers game; pick a set.

REV_00087661

On Dec. 13, Leahy said 27 Bush judges had been confirmed by the Senate–as many as were confirmed in 1993, the first year of the Clinton administration. This despite the fact that Leahy only assumed control of the committee after Sen. Jim Jeffords (Ind-VT) abandoned the GOP, and that a great deal of time was consumed with anti-terror legislation.

Utah Sen. Orrin Hatch, ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee, had a ready reply. He quickly pointed out that the committee had moved only 21 percent of appellate nominees, a much lower percentage than in President Bill Clinton's first year.

On Dec. 19, Hatch wrote, "What they are not telling the public is that the Senate has purposefully ignored more judicial nominees than in any other president's first year in office in recent history. Thirty-two of President Bush's nominees have been prohibited from even having a hearing."

District judges are doing much better than appeals judges. The Senate has confirmed 21 of 36 choices for district courts, but just six of 28 for appeals courts.

There's a reason for this. Liberals argue that because the Supreme Court is taking fewer cases, the appeals courts have become more important. They see nominees such as Michael McConnell for the 10th Circuit and Jeffrey Sutton for the 6th Circuit has particularly ideological.

The administration and its supporters agree regarding the significance of circuit court nominees–thus, they argue, bottling up qualified nominees is all the more irresponsible.

The D.C. federal courts are a microcosm. Reggie Walton and John Bates were swiftly and unanimously confirmed for the district court, and Richard Leon, a third nominee, should also have smooth sailing. But for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, John Roberts, Jr. and Miguel Estrada are among the eight picks from May 9 who haven't had a hearing.

Lately, the politics of the Estrada nomination have become especially heated. On Nov. 28, Sen Jon Kyl (R-AZ) accused Democrats of "racially profiling" the nomination by intentionally denying Estrada a hearing because he is Hispanic. Leahy spokesman David Carle replied that this was a "ridiculous assertion."

Last week, People for the American Way, the liberal activist group, cited the Kyl statement as a part of a "vicious campaign" by the right wing against Democratic senators.

On Nov. 15, all 49 GOP senators wrote a letter to Leahy calling for hearings on Estrada and Roberts. Vice President Dick Cheney sent a "Dear Pat" letter on Dec. 5 specifically mentioning vacancies on the 6th Circuit, Estrada, and Roberts.

Going forward, the administration will become more aggressive, says an administration source.

"This president tried to turn a new page after the bitterness of the previous administration," says this source. "But the perception here is that he got nothing at all in return from the Democratic

REV_00087662

Senate. So we will take a harder line on how our nominees are treated by the Judiciary Committee. Our recourse is to complain, and to complain loudly."

Area Native Readies for Judgeship

By Sandy Hodson
The Augusta Chronicle
Tuesday, December 25, 2001

Augusta native Ashley Royal will become the newest member of the federal judiciary as soon as President Bush signs his commission.

Last week, the U.S. Senate approved Mr. Royal's nomination to become a U.S. District judge for the Middle District of Georgia, Macon Division. Mr. Royal, 52, will replace U.S. District Judge Duross Fitzpatrick, who is assuming senior status. "The president has to sign my commission and as soon as he signs that I can begin," said Mr. Royal, who is in Augusta for the holiday.

It's been a long process, he said. It began in January. Mr. Royal is planning to attend seminars for new judges in February and in March.

Mr. Royal attended local schools before graduating from the University of Georgia and the University of Georgia Law School. Mr. Royal started his professional career in the Augusta Judicial Circuit district attorney's office. For the past 18 years, he has practiced law in Macon and has been a partner in the law firm of Jones, Cork & Miller.

Mr. Royal has taught at the University of Georgia Law School, Mercer University and the state's Institute of Trial Advocacy. He also has written a number of professional articles and co-wrote a book, Handbook on Georgia Medical Malpractice Law.

The Martindale-Hubbell Bar Register of Pre-eminent Lawyers lists Mr. Royal as an expert source on attorneys and legal firms. According to the register, his peers have rated his legal ability as very high to pre-eminent, and have evaluated his ethical standards as very high.

Mahan Stalled

Las Vegas Review-Journal
Tuesday, December 25, 2001

Responding to a recent editorial on these pages, Sen. Patrick Leahy, the Vermont Democrat who chairs the Judiciary Committee, wrote in earlier this month to assure Review-Journal readers that his panel was doing its utmost to confirm Bush judicial nominees.

REV_00087663

Sen. Leahy did admit, though, that under his leadership, the committee has stalled 'more controversial nominees' because starting with them 'would have slowed' the process. Instead, he sought to go first to 'those nominees who will be solid, fair, nonideological judges.'

Well, now not even that approach seems to satisfy Democrats intent on bottling up or even torpedoing Bush nominees.

Last week, Sen. Tom Harkin placed holds on four Bush judicial nominees who had been overwhelmingly approved by Sen. Leahy's committee. Among them was District Judge James Mahan, nominated by Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., for a spot on the federal bench.

Sen. Harkin's motivation? He was angry that Republicans -- and some Democrats -- had prevented a new farm bill from being rammed through Congress last week. Never mind that the bill in question is an abomination, completely undoing any previous market-based reforms in farm policy in favor of a Soviet-style approach rich in regulatory bureaucracy, hand-outs and corporate welfare.

Yes, it's likely that Sen. Harkin's pique will have dissipated by the time the Senate reconvenes late next month -- meaning Judge Mahan and four others will then be confirmed. Yes, it's also true the GOP has in the past used similar tactics.

But by holding up even the most noncontroversial nominees such as Judge Mahan, Sen. Harking makes a mockery of his party's calls for 'bipartisanship.'

Stop Stalling on Judicial Confirmations

By Sen. Orrin Hatch
The Wall Street Journal
December 26, 2001

Now that Congress has adjourned for the year, we are seeing the result of the Senate Democrats' systematic and calculated effort to confirm the absolute minimum number of President Bush's judicial nominees.
Here is what the Senate Democrats want the American public to believe: They have done everything that can be expected because the Senate has confirmed as many judges during President Bush's first year in office as it did in President Clinton's first year. What they are not saying is that the Senate has also ignored, on purpose, more judicial nominees than in any president's first year in modern history.

Thirty-two of President Bush's nominees have been prohibited from even having a hearing -- the first step in the Senate's constitutionally required process of 'advice and consent.' Meanwhile, the judicial branch is in the midst of a vacancy crisis. Nearly 100 judgeships sit empty -- 11% of the total.

The Senate Democrats are using a misleading yardstick – the number of confirmations eight years ago rather than the percentage of work completed this year – in order to pretend that they are doing their job. But the percentage of work completed is a much more appropriate gauge because President Bush has nominated considerably more judges this year than President Clinton did in his first year.

The Senate has approved only 21% of President Bush's appellate court nominations this year. In contrast, we approved 60% of President Clinton's appellate nominees during his first year. Adding in trial court nominations, this year the Senate has confirmed only 42% of President Bush's nominees, which is less than the 57% of President Clinton's nominees the Senate approved in 1993.

The disparity between this year and 1993 is even more dramatic considering the amount of time the Senate had in each case. President Bush nominated his first set of judges on May 9, and had nominated 44 by the beginning of August. In contrast, President Clinton made only one nomination prior to August of his first year, leaving the Senate only three-and-a-half months to consider all his other judges before Congress adjourned on Non. 26, 1993. Why can't the Senate do more work in seven months than it did in three-and-a-half months?

One of the travesties of this year's Senate stall is that it is preventing some tremendously talented people from working for the American people. For example, President Bush has nominated Miguel Estrada and John Roberts – two of the most able lawyers in the country – for seats on the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. That court, which wis widely considered to be the second most important after the Supreme Court, stands one-third vacant today. Another example is Michael McConnell, President Bush's nominee to the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals, who is widely regarded as one of the nation's foremost constitutional scholars.

A Senate vote on the Estrada, Roberts or McConnell nominations would garner overwhelming, if not unanimous, approval. But the Senate Democrats will not even give them a hearing.

The Senate's constitutional obligation to provide President Bush "advice and consent" on his judicial nominations is not a game of statistics, as the Senate Democrats seem to believe. The goal is not simply to make the numbers look good.

Neither the Senate nor the American public should count it as a victory that the Senate Democrats have succeeded in ignoring more than half of President Bush's picks for the federal judiciary. Contrary to the widely held belief, the Republicans did not play such games when Bill Clinton was president.

During those eight years, the Senate confirmed 377 judges -- only five fewer than the 382 it approved during the eight years of President Reagan. And the Republicans controlled the Senate during six of Mr. Clinton's eight years, just as it did for Mr. Reagan.

This proves beyond any political spin that the Republicans treated a Democratic president just as fairly as they treated a Republican. Now it is time for the Senate Democrats to show they can be fair, too.

Despite the unfortunate decisions made this year, I believe there is room for hope in 2002. If the Senate Democratic leadership sticks to its results-oriented zeal, it will make sure to confirm as many judges in President Bush's second year is it did in President Clinton's second year. The Senate confirmed 100 or President Clinton's judicial nominees in 1994.

The American people should join me in expecting the Senate Democrats to do the same for President Bush–in fact, I think we should take this year's systematic and calculated performance as a pledge that the Senate will confirm at least 100 of President Bush's judicial nominees next year.

Bush's Judicial Nominees Go 28 for 80 in the Senate

By David Savage
The Los Angeles Times
Monday, December 31, 2001

In early May, President Bush proudly introduced his first judicial nominees in a White House ceremony and said all 11 of them had "sterling credentials" to sit on the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Most already were judges on lower courts; four others were prominent lawyers or law professors who had clerked at the U.S. Supreme Court.

But as the year ends, only three of these nominees have won confirmation in the Democrat-controlled Senate. In all, the White House has made 80 judicial nominations, but has won confirmation on only 28 new judges.

So far, Bush is finding the process of appointing federal judges much as President Clinton found it: slow, frustrating and uncertain. "The Republicans played hardball with Clinton's nominees. Now the Democrats are playing hardball with Bush's," said Sheldon Goldman, a political scientist at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. "The Republicans rewrote the rules when Clinton was in office, and the Democrats are unwilling to turn the other cheek now."

Goldman says the process has broken down. "The partisanship has gotten out of hand. The 'advise and consent' process has turned into 'obstruct and delay.' "

Compared with his recent predecessors, Bush had the typical first year in naming judges.

A new team of lawyers at the Justice Department and the White House counsel's office usually have several months to crank out the first nominations. And the Senate Judiciary Committee takes a few months more to complete a basic investigation of each nominee. Only then is a hearing scheduled.

In 1989, then-President Bush had only 15 new judges confirmed, while Clinton had 27 confirmed in his first year as president.

But Bush's legal team was determined to get off to a fast start. They also focused their attention on the appeals courts, which oversee the trial judges and set the law in their regions.

Their first nominees included an all-star team of relatively young conservatives. University of Utah law professor Michael McConnell, 45, is a recognized authority on the Constitution's religion clauses. He believes the Supreme Court has gone too far in barring public aid to parochial schools. Washington lawyer John G. Roberts, 46, and Ohio attorney Jeffrey Sutton, 40, have proved themselves as highly effective advocates before the Supreme Court.

But Sutton's court victories have won him no friends among liberals. He represented Alabama in two states' rights cases. The first shielded the states from being sued by disabled workers who are discriminated against. The second barred suits against states under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for policies that have a discriminatory effect on minorities. Sutton also represented the tobacco industry in a successful free-speech attack on state laws that prohibited posted cigarette ads near schools or playgrounds.

In midyear, the Democrats retook control of the Senate, and the Judiciary Committee, now led by Sen. Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.), has taken no action on the nominations of McConnell, Roberts, Sutton and five other Bush nominees. Also in limbo is Los Angeles County Superior Judge Carolyn Kuhl, a Reagan administration veteran who was nominated in June to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

In a nod toward bipartisanship, Bush nominated two African American Democrats in his first batch of judges. They are Judge Roger Gregory, whom Clinton had named to a temporary slot on the U.S. 4th Circuit Court in Richmond, Va., and Judge Barrington Parker Jr., whom Clinton had named as a trial judge. Bush chose Parker for the 2nd Circuit Court in New York.

REV_00087676

Leahy's committee approved them quickly. It did the same with Edith Brown Clement, a Louisiana judge who moved up to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans.

But White House lawyers are irked that their favorite nominees have gone nowhere. Conservative activists accuse the Democrats of stalling.

"You need to look at the confirmation rate, not just the final number," said Tom Jipping of the Free Congress Foundation. "And when you do, you see the Senate is moving slower than ever before."

But Leahy and his fellow Democrats counter that this year was anything but ordinary for the Senate.

First, control of the chamber shifted suddenly in July when Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont left the Republican Party, becoming an independent. The Sept. 11 terrorism attacks refocused the Judiciary Committee's work on passing an anti-terrorism bill. Then, in October, the senators were driven out of their offices when anthrax arrived in the mail.

"We are working harder and faster than previously on judicial nominations despite the difficulties being faced by the nation and the Senate," Leahy said.

Leahy said he had repealed the Republicans' policy of allowing senators to secretly block judicial nominees. The bad feelings from that policy lingered this year. Indeed, the Senate feuds over some judicial slots have spanned a decade.

In 1992, during his last months in office, the senior Bush nominated Judge Terrence Boyle, a protege of Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals. But his nomination never got a hearing.

In retaliation, Helms vetoed all of Clinton's nominees from North Carolina to the 4th Circuit, including three African Americans.

This year, Bush nominated Boyle to the 4th Circuit Court, but Sen. John Edwards (D-N.C.) said he will not allow Boyle's nomination to go forward until Bush reconsiders one of Clinton's nominees, North Carolina state Judge James Wynn.

A similar logjam has developed for nominees from the upper Midwest. In 1997, Clinton nominated Michigan state court Judge Helene N. White and Detroit lawyer Kathleen McCree Lewis to the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals. But then-Sen. Spencer Abraham (R-Mich.) vetoed their nominations, staffers say, and neither had a hearing or vote.

In November 2000, voters ousted Abraham, and Michigan's two current senators--Democrats Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow--are refusing to go along with Bush's nominees to the U.S. 6th Circuit, including Sutton.

REV_00087677

"It's Sen. Leahy's goal to have a hearing for every nominee," said Mimi Devlin, a Judiciary Committee spokeswoman. "He is trying to work out some sort of fair compromise for the 6th Circuit."

As of last week, there were 97 vacancies on the federal bench, about one in 12 judgeships. And that number will rise in January, as several judges retire.

Nonetheless, liberal activists are encouraging Democrats to go slow in approving new judges.

"Bush's nominees are not centrists. They are hostile to the elderly, to minorities and to choice" on abortion, said Nan Aron of the Alliance for Justice, which represents liberal legal groups. Bush's lawyers "want to put a radical-right imprint on the federal bench, so we support the Democrats' desire to subject them to close scrutiny."

Since 1980, the partisan divide concerning the judiciary has seemed to widen with each administration. When Presidents Reagan and Bush were in the White House, liberal activists targeted a handful of their nominees and few were voted down by Senate Democrats. Soon after Clinton took office, the Republican-led Senate followed a stealth strategy of blocking "liberal activists."

One of the leaders of that campaign was then-senator and now Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft.

Goldman argues that both parties should agree on a simple set of rules for judicial nominations.

"Every nominee deserves a hearing and a vote in the Senate Judiciary Committee," the political scientist said.

Op/Eds

Mr. Hatch's Revisionism

The Washington Post
Sunday, December 30, 2001

Asked last summer to explain the reluctance of Democratic senators to confirm President Bush's judicial nominations expeditiously, White House counsel Alberto Gonzales responded, "Part of this is based on the conduct of Republican senators in the past." Mr. Gonzales, in an interview with CNN.com, described "a lot of bitterness" about the manner in which President Clinton's nominees were treated by the Republican-controlled Senate, and he said that he "can't argue with some of [the Democrats'] perceptions." In a recent column published in the Wall Street Journal, Sen. Orrin Hatch -- who chaired the Senate Judiciary Committee during the years of Republican control -- takes a somewhat less candid approach to history. In attacking what he terms a "systematic and calculated effort [by the Democrats] to confirm the absolute minimum number" of nominees possible, he simply denies that six years of Republican obstructionism ever took place. "Contrary to the widely held belief," he writes, "the Republicans did not play such games when Bill Clinton was president." A refresher course in recent history is in order. During Mr. Hatch's tenure as committee chairman, the average time between a judicial nomination and final Senate action grew substantially, with individual nominees sitting around for outrageously long periods of time -- sometimes years. In 1999, Mr. Hatch went so far as to freeze consideration of all nominees for several months in an effort to force Mr. Clinton to nominate a conservative lawyer favored by Mr. Hatch for a district judgeship in Utah. Before Mr. Hatch complains too loudly about the 28 nominees the Senate confirmed this year, moreover, he should recall that in 1996, the Senate confirmed only 17.

It is a mark of just how badly the nominations process had deteriorated that, despite this record, Mr. Hatch was seen as one of the good guys -- among the only prominent members of his caucus with whom the Clinton White House could do business at all on the subject of judges. As chairman, Mr. Hatch was in a no-win situation, caught between a Republican caucus bent on blocking Clinton nominees at all costs and an apparent desire to keep the process functioning. At times, he stood against the tide and forced votes for nominees other senators wished to deep-six. But particularly as the administration wore on, he increasingly let the obstructionists have their way.

The result has put his successor, Sen. Patrick Leahy, in no less difficult a position. Mr. Leahy must either further damage an already broken system or let the beneficiaries of that system's repair be an administration committed to appointing nominees with whom he disagrees. They would, incidentally, go into slots that are still open only because the Senate failed to do its duty when Mr. Hatch ran the committee. We have been critical of Mr. Leahy for not moving more swiftly to confirm some of Mr. Bush's judges. But he did not create the current mess -- a situation made all the more galling by the pious carping of those who presided over the system's collapse.

Judicial Stalemate

The Kentucky Post
December 27, 2001

When Judge Eugene E. Siler retires at the end of the year, fully half of the 16 seats on the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals will be vacant.

It's a sorry and cynical milestone, brought on by years of political infighting in Washington over judicial appointments and presidential prerogatives. The dispute has long since gotten out of hand (one seat has been open for six solid years now); it's time for President Bush and the leaders of the Senate to end it.

The Cincinnati-based 6th Circuit court is arguably the most important one in the region. It hears appeals in federal cases from Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Michigan, and disposes of all but the handful that go on to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judges are appointed (for life) by the president, subject to confirmation by the Senate. In better days, vacancies on the court were filled with reasonable promptness and a minimum of politics.

But over the past decade, one that saw the Senate and White House controlled by different political parties, the civility has broken down. Republicans refused to confirm a significant number of President Clinton's judicial appointments. Now the Senate is in Democratic hands, and Bush appointees are seeing the favor returned.

While the 6th Circuit has used retired and lower court judges on a case-by-case basis to keep up with its workload, the large number of vacancies is taking a toll. The U.S. Administrative Office of the Courts has declared a "judicial emergency" in the 6th Circuit, and its analyses show that the court now has the second-worst record in the nation in terms of the time it takes to dispose of cases.

It's easy enough to understand the partisan impulses that have produced this stalemate. But the Senate and the White House must rise above the politics of revenge.

Maybe it will take a raw partisan compromise to end the impasse over the 6th Circuit nominations. But it would be bad for the country to further politicize the judicial appointment process. No matter which party controls the Senate or the White House, the upper chamber must respect the president's right to make independent appointments and restore the practice of prompt confirmation hearings and votes.

Bush's Judicial Nominees Go 28 for 80 in the Senate

By David Savage
The Los Angeles Times
Monday, December 31, 2001

In early May, President Bush proudly introduced his first judicial nominees in a White House ceremony and said all 11 of them had "sterling credentials" to sit on the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Most already were judges on lower courts; four others were prominent lawyers or law professors who had clerked at the U.S. Supreme Court.

But as the year ends, only three of these nominees have won confirmation in the Democrat-controlled Senate. In all, the White House has made 80 judicial nominations, but has won confirmation on only 28 new judges.

So far, Bush is finding the process of appointing federal judges much as President Clinton found

it: slow, frustrating and uncertain. "The Republicans played hardball with Clinton's nominees. Now the Democrats are playing hardball with Bush's," said Sheldon Goldman, a political scientist at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. "The Republicans rewrote the rules when Clinton was in office, and the Democrats are unwilling to turn the other cheek now."

Goldman says the process has broken down. "The partisanship has gotten out of hand. The 'advise and consent' process has turned into 'obstruct and delay.' "

Compared with his recent predecessors, Bush had the typical first year in naming judges.

A new team of lawyers at the Justice Department and the White House counsel's office usually have several months to crank out the first nominations. And the Senate Judiciary Committee takes a few months more to complete a basic investigation of each nominee. Only then is a hearing scheduled.

In 1989, then-President Bush had only 15 new judges confirmed, while Clinton had 27 confirmed in his first year as president.

But Bush's legal team was determined to get off to a fast start. They also focused their attention on the appeals courts, which oversee the trial judges and set the law in their regions.

Their first nominees included an all-star team of relatively young conservatives. University of Utah law professor Michael McConnell, 45, is a recognized authority on the Constitution's religion clauses. He believes the Supreme Court has gone too far in barring public aid to parochial schools. Washington lawyer John G. Roberts, 46, and Ohio attorney Jeffrey Sutton, 40, have proved themselves as highly effective advocates before the Supreme Court.

But Sutton's court victories have won him no friends among liberals. He represented Alabama in two states' rights cases. The first shielded the states from being sued by disabled workers who are discriminated against. The second barred suits against states under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for policies that have a discriminatory effect on minorities. Sutton also represented the tobacco industry in a successful free-speech attack on state laws that prohibited posted cigarette ads near schools or playgrounds.

In midyear, the Democrats retook control of the Senate, and the Judiciary Committee, now led by Sen. Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.), has taken no action on the nominations of McConnell, Roberts, Sutton and five other Bush nominees. Also in limbo is Los Angeles County Superior Judge Carolyn Kuhl, a Reagan administration veteran who was nominated in June to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

In a nod toward bipartisanship, Bush nominated two African American Democrats in his first batch of judges. They are Judge Roger Gregory, whom Clinton had named to a temporary slot on the U.S. 4th Circuit Court in Richmond, Va., and Judge Barrington Parker Jr., whom Clinton had named as a trial judge. Bush chose Parker for the 2nd Circuit Court in New York.

REV_00087700

Leahy's committee approved them quickly. It did the same with Edith Brown Clement, a Louisiana judge who moved up to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans.

But White House lawyers are irked that their favorite nominees have gone nowhere. Conservative activists accuse the Democrats of stalling.

"You need to look at the confirmation rate, not just the final number," said Tom Jipping of the Free Congress Foundation. "And when you do, you see the Senate is moving slower than ever before."

But Leahy and his fellow Democrats counter that this year was anything but ordinary for the Senate.

First, control of the chamber shifted suddenly in July when Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont left the Republican Party, becoming an independent. The Sept. 11 terrorism attacks refocused the Judiciary Committee's work on passing an anti-terrorism bill. Then, in October, the senators were driven out of their offices when anthrax arrived in the mail.

"We are working harder and faster than previously on judicial nominations despite the difficulties being faced by the nation and the Senate," Leahy said.

Leahy said he had repealed the Republicans' policy of allowing senators to secretly block judicial nominees. The bad feelings from that policy lingered this year. Indeed, the Senate feuds over some judicial slots have spanned a decade.

In 1992, during his last months in office, the senior Bush nominated Judge Terrence Boyle, a protege of Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals. But his nomination never got a hearing.

In retaliation, Helms vetoed all of Clinton's nominees from North Carolina to the 4th Circuit, including three African Americans.

This year, Bush nominated Boyle to the 4th Circuit Court, but Sen. John Edwards (D-N.C.) said he will not allow Boyle's nomination to go forward until Bush reconsiders one of Clinton's nominees, North Carolina state Judge James Wynn.

A similar logjam has developed for nominees from the upper Midwest. In 1997, Clinton nominated Michigan state court Judge Helene N. White and Detroit lawyer Kathleen McCree Lewis to the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals. But then-Sen. Spencer Abraham (R-Mich.) vetoed their nominations, staffers say, and neither had a hearing or vote.

In November 2000, voters ousted Abraham, and Michigan's two current senators--Democrats Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow--are refusing to go along with Bush's nominees to the U.S. 6th Circuit, including Sutton.

REV_00087701

"It's Sen. Leahy's goal to have a hearing for every nominee," said Mimi Devlin, a Judiciary Committee spokeswoman. "He is trying to work out some sort of fair compromise for the 6th Circuit."

As of last week, there were 97 vacancies on the federal bench, about one in 12 judgeships. And that number will rise in January, as several judges retire.

Nonetheless, liberal activists are encouraging Democrats to go slow in approving new judges.

"Bush's nominees are not centrists. They are hostile to the elderly, to minorities and to choice" on abortion, said Nan Aron of the Alliance for Justice, which represents liberal legal groups. Bush's lawyers "want to put a radical-right imprint on the federal bench, so we support the Democrats' desire to subject them to close scrutiny."

Since 1980, the partisan divide concerning the judiciary has seemed to widen with each administration. When Presidents Reagan and Bush were in the White House, liberal activists targeted a handful of their nominees and few were voted down by Senate Democrats. Soon after Clinton took office, the Republican-led Senate followed a stealth strategy of blocking "liberal activists."

One of the leaders of that campaign was then-senator and now Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft.

Goldman argues that both parties should agree on a simple set of rules for judicial nominations.

"Every nominee deserves a hearing and a vote in the Senate Judiciary Committee," the political scientist said.

Op/Eds

Mr. Hatch's Revisionism

The Washington Post
Sunday, December 30, 2001

Asked last summer to explain the reluctance of Democratic senators to confirm President Bush's judicial nominations expeditiously, White House counsel Alberto Gonzales responded, "Part of this is based on the conduct of Republican senators in the past." Mr. Gonzales, in an interview with CNN.com, described "a lot of bitterness" about the manner in which President Clinton's nominees were treated by the Republican-controlled Senate, and he said that he "can't argue with some of [the Democrats'] perceptions." In a recent column published in the Wall Street Journal, Sen. Orrin Hatch -- who chaired the Senate Judiciary Committee during the years of Republican control -- takes a somewhat less candid approach to history. In attacking what he terms a "systematic and calculated effort [by the Democrats] to confirm the absolute minimum number" of nominees possible, he simply denies that six years of Republican obstructionism ever took place. "Contrary to the widely held belief," he writes, "the Republicans did not play such games when Bill Clinton was president." A refresher course in recent history is in order. During Mr. Hatch's tenure as committee chairman, the average time between a judicial nomination and final Senate action grew substantially, with individual nominees sitting around for outrageously long periods of time -- sometimes years. In 1999, Mr. Hatch went so far as to freeze consideration of all nominees for several months in an effort to force Mr. Clinton to nominate a conservative lawyer favored by Mr. Hatch for a district judgeship in Utah. Before Mr. Hatch complains too loudly about the 28 nominees the Senate confirmed this year, moreover, he should recall that in 1996, the Senate confirmed only 17.

It is a mark of just how badly the nominations process had deteriorated that, despite this record, Mr. Hatch was seen as one of the good guys -- among the only prominent members of his caucus with whom the Clinton White House could do business at all on the subject of judges. As chairman, Mr. Hatch was in a no-win situation, caught between a Republican caucus bent on blocking Clinton nominees at all costs and an apparent desire to keep the process functioning. At times, he stood against the tide and forced votes for nominees other senators wished to deep-six. But particularly as the administration wore on, he increasingly let the obstructionists have their way.

The result has put his successor, Sen. Patrick Leahy, in no less difficult a position. Mr. Leahy must either further damage an already broken system or let the beneficiaries of that system's repair be an administration committed to appointing nominees with whom he disagrees. They would, incidentally, go into slots that are still open only because the Senate failed to do its duty when Mr. Hatch ran the committee. We have been critical of Mr. Leahy for not moving more swiftly to confirm some of Mr. Bush's judges. But he did not create the current mess -- a situation made all the more galling by the pious carping of those who presided over the system's collapse.

Judicial Stalemate

The Kentucky Post
December 27, 2001

When Judge Eugene E. Siler retires at the end of the year, fully half of the 16 seats on the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals will be vacant.

It's a sorry and cynical milestone, brought on by years of political infighting in Washington over judicial appointments and presidential prerogatives. The dispute has long since gotten out of hand (one seat has been open for six solid years now); it's time for President Bush and the leaders of the Senate to end it.

The Cincinnati-based 6th Circuit court is arguably the most important one in the region. It hears appeals in federal cases from Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Michigan, and disposes of all but the handful that go on to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judges are appointed (for life) by the president, subject to confirmation by the Senate. In better days, vacancies on the court were filled with reasonable promptness and a minimum of politics.

But over the past decade, one that saw the Senate and White House controlled by different political parties, the civility has broken down. Republicans refused to confirm a significant number of President Clinton's judicial appointments. Now the Senate is in Democratic hands, and Bush appointees are seeing the favor returned.

While the 6th Circuit has used retired and lower court judges on a case-by-case basis to keep up with its workload, the large number of vacancies is taking a toll. The U.S. Administrative Office of the Courts has declared a "judicial emergency" in the 6th Circuit, and its analyses show that the court now has the second-worst record in the nation in terms of the time it takes to dispose of cases.

Bush's Judicial Nominees Go 28 for 80 in the Senate

Now the Democrats are playing hardball with Bush's," said Sheldon Goldman, a political scientist at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. "The Republicans rewrote the rules when Clinton was in office, and the Democrats are unwilling to turn the other cheek now."

Goldman says the process has broken down. "The partisanship has gotten out of hand. The 'advise and consent' process has turned into 'obstruct and delay.' "

Compared with his recent predecessors, Bush had the typical first year in naming judges.

A new team of lawyers at the Justice Department and the White House counsel's office usually have several months to crank out the first nominations. And the Senate Judiciary Committee takes a few months more to complete a basic investigation of each nominee. Only then is a hearing scheduled.

In 1989, then-President Bush had only 15 new judges confirmed, while Clinton had 27 confirmed in his first year as president.

But Bush's legal team was determined to get off to a fast start. They also focused their attention on the appeals courts, which oversee the trial judges and set the law in their regions.

Their first nominees included an all-star team of relatively young conservatives. University of Utah law professor Michael McConnell, 45, is a recognized authority on the Constitution's religion clauses. He believes the Supreme Court has gone too far in barring public aid to parochial schools. Washington lawyer John G. Roberts, 46, and Ohio attorney Jeffrey Sutton, 40, have proved themselves as highly effective advocates before the Supreme Court.

But Sutton's court victories have won him no friends among liberals. He represented Alabama in two states' rights cases. The first shielded the states from being sued by disabled workers who are discriminated against. The second barred suits against states under the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for policies that have a discriminatory effect on minorities. Sutton also represented the tobacco industry in a successful free-speech attack on state laws that prohibited posted cigarette ads near schools or playgrounds.

In midyear, the Democrats retook control of the Senate, and the Judiciary Committee, now led by Sen. Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.), has taken no action on the nominations of McConnell, Roberts, Sutton and five other Bush nominees. Also in limbo is Los Angeles County Superior Judge Carolyn Kuhl, a Reagan administration veteran who was nominated in June to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

In a nod toward bipartisanship, Bush nominated two African American Democrats in his first batch of judges. They are Judge Roger Gregory, whom Clinton had named to a temporary slot on the U.S. 4th Circuit Court in Richmond, Va., and Judge Barrington Parker Jr., whom Clinton had named as a trial judge. Bush chose Parker for the 2nd Circuit Court in New York.

Leahy's committee approved them quickly. It did the same with Edith Brown Clement, a Louisiana judge who moved up to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans.

But White House lawyers are irked that their favorite nominees have gone nowhere. Conservative activists accuse the Democrats of stalling.

"You need to look at the confirmation rate, not just the final number," said Tom Jipping of the Free Congress Foundation. "And when you do, you see the Senate is moving slower than ever before."

But Leahy and his fellow Democrats counter that this year was anything but ordinary for the Senate.

First, control of the chamber shifted suddenly in July when Sen. James M. Jeffords of Vermont left the Republican Party, becoming an independent. The Sept. 11 terrorism attacks refocused the Judiciary Committee's work on passing an anti-terrorism bill. Then, in October, the senators were driven out of their offices when anthrax arrived in the mail.

"We are working harder and faster than previously on judicial nominations despite the difficulties being faced by the nation and the Senate," Leahy said.

Leahy said he had repealed the Republicans' policy of allowing senators to secretly block judicial nominees. The bad feelings from that policy lingered this year. Indeed, the Senate feuds over some judicial slots have spanned a decade.

In 1992, during his last months in office, the senior Bush nominated Judge Terrence Boyle, a protege of Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.), to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals. But his nomination never got a hearing.

In retaliation, Helms vetoed all of Clinton's nominees from North Carolina to the 4th Circuit, including three African Americans.

This year, Bush nominated Boyle to the 4th Circuit Court, but Sen. John Edwards (D-N.C.) said he will not allow Boyle's nomination to go forward until Bush reconsiders one of Clinton's nominees, North Carolina state Judge James Wynn.

A similar logjam has developed for nominees from the upper Midwest. In 1997, Clinton nominated Michigan state court Judge Helene N. White and Detroit lawyer Kathleen McCree Lewis to the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals. But then-Sen. Spencer Abraham (R-Mich.) vetoed their nominations, staffers say, and neither had a hearing or vote.

In November 2000, voters ousted Abraham, and Michigan's two current senators--Democrats Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow--are refusing to go along with Bush's nominees to the U.S. 6th Circuit, including Sutton.

REV_00087709

"It's Sen. Leahy's goal to have a hearing for every nominee," said Mimi Devlin, a Judiciary Committee spokeswoman. "He is trying to work out some sort of fair compromise for the 6th Circuit."

As of last week, there were 97 vacancies on the federal bench, about one in 12 judgeships. And that number will rise in January, as several judges retire.

Nonetheless, liberal activists are encouraging Democrats to go slow in approving new judges.

"Bush's nominees are not centrists. They are hostile to the elderly, to minorities and to choice" on abortion, said Nan Aron of the Alliance for Justice, which represents liberal legal groups. Bush's lawyers "want to put a radical-right imprint on the federal bench, so we support the Democrats' desire to subject them to close scrutiny."

Since 1980, the partisan divide concerning the judiciary has seemed to widen with each administration. When Presidents Reagan and Bush were in the White House, liberal activists targeted a handful of their nominees and few were voted down by Senate Democrats. Soon after Clinton took office, the Republican-led Senate followed a stealth strategy of blocking "liberal activists."

One of the leaders of that campaign was then-senator and now Atty. Gen. John Ashcroft.

Goldman argues that both parties should agree on a simple set of rules for judicial nominations.

"Every nominee deserves a hearing and a vote in the Senate Judiciary Committee," the political scientist said.

Op/Eds

Mr. Hatch's Revisionism

The Washington Post
Sunday, December 30, 2001

Asked last summer to explain the reluctance of Democratic senators to confirm President Bush's judicial nominations expeditiously, White House counsel Alberto Gonzales responded, "Part of this is based on the conduct of Republican senators in the past." Mr. Gonzales, in an interview with CNN.com, described "a lot of bitterness" about the manner in which President Clinton's nominees were treated by the Republican-controlled Senate, and he said that he "can't argue with some of [the Democrats'] perceptions." In a recent column published in the Wall Street Journal, Sen. Orrin Hatch -- who chaired the Senate Judiciary Committee during the years of Republican control -- takes a somewhat less candid approach to history. In attacking what he terms a "systematic and calculated effort [by the Democrats] to confirm the absolute minimum number" of nominees possible, he simply denies that six years of Republican obstructionism ever took place. "Contrary to the widely held belief," he writes, "the Republicans did not play such games when Bill Clinton was president." A refresher course in recent history is in order. During Mr. Hatch's tenure as committee chairman, the average time between a judicial nomination and final Senate action grew substantially, with individual nominees sitting around for outrageously long periods of time -- sometimes years. In 1999, Mr. Hatch went so far as to freeze consideration of all nominees for several months in an effort to force Mr. Clinton to nominate a conservative lawyer favored by Mr. Hatch for a district judgeship in Utah. Before Mr. Hatch complains too loudly about the 28 nominees the Senate confirmed this year, moreover, he should recall that in 1996, the Senate confirmed only 17.

It is a mark of just how badly the nominations process had deteriorated that, despite this record, Mr. Hatch was seen as one of the good guys -- among the only prominent members of his caucus with whom the Clinton White House could do business at all on the subject of judges. As chairman, Mr. Hatch was in a no-win situation, caught between a Republican caucus bent on blocking Clinton nominees at all costs and an apparent desire to keep the process functioning. At times, he stood against the tide and forced votes for nominees other senators wished to deep-six. But particularly as the administration wore on, he increasingly let the obstructionists have their way.

The result has put his successor, Sen. Patrick Leahy, in no less difficult a position. Mr. Leahy must either further damage an already broken system or let the beneficiaries of that system's repair be an administration committed to appointing nominees with whom he disagrees. They would, incidentally, go into slots that are still open only because the Senate failed to do its duty when Mr. Hatch ran the committee. We have been critical of Mr. Leahy for not moving more swiftly to confirm some of Mr. Bush's judges. But he did not create the current mess -- a situation made all the more galling by the pious carping of those who presided over the system's collapse.

Judicial Stalemate

The Kentucky Post
December 27, 2001

When Judge Eugene E. Siler retires at the end of the year, fully half of the 16 seats on the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals will be vacant.

It's a sorry and cynical milestone, brought on by years of political infighting in Washington over judicial appointments and presidential prerogatives. The dispute has long since gotten out of hand (one seat has been open for six solid years now); it's time for President Bush and the leaders of the Senate to end it.

The Cincinnati-based 6th Circuit court is arguably the most important one in the region. It hears appeals in federal cases from Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Michigan, and disposes of all but the handful that go on to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judges are appointed (for life) by the president, subject to confirmation by the Senate. In better days, vacancies on the court were filled with reasonable promptness and a minimum of politics.

But over the past decade, one that saw the Senate and White House controlled by different political parties, the civility has broken down. Republicans refused to confirm a significant number of President Clinton's judicial appointments. Now the Senate is in Democratic hands, and Bush appointees are seeing the favor returned.

While the 6th Circuit has used retired and lower court judges on a case-by-case basis to keep up with its workload, the large number of vacancies is taking a toll. The U.S. Administrative Office of the Courts has declared a "judicial emergency" in the 6th Circuit, and its analyses show that the court now has the second-worst record in the nation in terms of the time it takes to dispose of cases.

It's easy enough to understand the partisan impulses that have produced this stalemate. But the Senate and the White House must rise above the politics of revenge.

Maybe it will take a raw partisan compromise to end the impasse over the 6th Circuit nominations. But it would be bad for the country to further politicize the judicial appointment process. No matter which party controls the Senate or the White House, the upper chamber must respect the president's right to make independent appointments and restore the practice of prompt confirmation hearings and votes.

often lengthy and unpleasant nature of the confirmation process."

In his 16th annual report since becoming chief after his own difficult Senate confirmation, Rehnquist also discussed courthouse safety. An emergency preparedness office has been created for the federal courts, and a consultant has recommended tighter security at courthouses, background checks on employees and better protection for judges in and out of court.

In the meantime, Rehnquist said, Congress should give the Supreme Court more money for security.

Since the Sept. 11 attacks, he said, federal courts "have gotten back to business, even if not business as usual."

Anthrax contamination forced a weeklong closing of the Supreme Court building, and justices heard arguments in another location for the first time since the building opened in 1935.

In addition, Rehnquist said, anthrax-related mail problems might affect the number of cases the court hears this year. Traditionally, justices review about 80 a year.

Rehnquist Decries Vacancies; Stalled Judgeships Hurt War on Terror, Chief Justice Says

By Charles Lane
The Washington Post
Tuesday, January 1, 2002

In his first assessment of the condition of the federal judiciary since the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11 and subsequent anthrax threat, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said yesterday that the courts "have gotten back to business, even if not business as usual" but still need swift action by the Senate on President Bush's judicial nominations.

The assessment came in Rehnquist's annual report on the federal courts published yesterday. He has cited the confirmation backlog in past reports. The tragic events of 2001, however, have made resolving the problems more urgent, Rehnquist said. "During times such as these, the role of the courts becomes even more important in order to enforce the rule of law," he wrote. "To continue functioning effectively and efficiently, however, the courts must be appropriately staffed. This means that necessary judgeships must be created and judicial vacancies must be timely filled with well-qualified candidates."

Rehnquist offered a brief account of his experience on Sept. 11, saying that he heard of the attack on the World Trade Center as he was preparing to open a meeting at the Supreme Court of the Judicial Conference, made up of 27 federal judges headed by the Chief Justice of the United States. The court was evacuated and the meeting canceled, the first time the Judicial Conference has halted one of its semiannual sessions since its founding in 1922.

Rehnquist also confirmed for the first time that the Supreme Court may not be able to hear as many cases as usual this year, because of delays in mail deliveries of legal documents due to anthrax-spore contamination. Anthrax spores in the court's mail facilities forced it to close its building temporarily. The Supreme Court and many other federal courts have instituted expensive anthrax-spore screening.

Largely because of partisan deadlock over the ideological direction of the federal courts, a long-standing situation compounded this year by the need for the Senate to take up Sept. 11-related legislation, the Democratic-controlled Senate had confirmed only 28 federal judges as of Dec. 20, when it adjourned. There are 23 nominations to the courts of appeals and 14 nominations to the district courts awaiting action.

Some courts have been especially hard hit. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 6th Circuit, based in Cincinnati, is down to about half of its authorized strength of 16 full-time judges. Bush has made six nominations to the 6th Circuit, but they have not yet received a hearing in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

As Rehnquist noted, similar problems occurred when Republicans controlled the Senate and a Democrat, President Bill Clinton, occupied the White House. There were 17 confirmations in 1996 and 36 in 1997.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.) defended the Senate record, noting that since Democrats took control June 6, "we have confirmed more judicial nominations than were confirmed in the entire first years of each of the last two presidents. Most of these nominees were conservative Republicans, and virtually all were approved unanimously . . . because the Senate believed these nominees for lifetime appointment would put justice and the law ahead of rigid ideology." Leahy promised action in 2002, but added: "The president can help by choosing more nominees primarily for their fairness and abilities instead of for their ideology."

Rehnquist's report also restated his concern about federal judicial salaries, which ranged in 2001 from $ 133,492 for a magistrate judge to $ 186,300 for the chief justice. These salaries, many judges complain, are far below what top lawyers make in private practice. That gap, combined with long, uncertain waits for confirmation during which lawyers often cannot take on new clients, "significantly restricts" the federal judiciary's ability to recruit attorneys from private practice, Rehnquist wrote.

Rehnquist also noted that an independent study of the courts after Sept. 11 found that "security needs continue to grow." The Supreme Court is urging Congress to fund a $ 110 million modernization program for its aging building, including safety and security upgrades that "should not be delayed," he wrote.

Missing Appointments

By Peter Roff
United Press International

REV_00087997

Thursday, January 3, 2002

In his 2001 end-of-year report on the state of the federal judiciary, U.S. Chief Justice William Rehnquist came down hard on the Senate, excoriating its failure to confirm federal judicial nominees.

This is not a new theme for the chief justice. He made a similar admonition in his 1997 report. Then, however, it was directed at Senate Republicans who were not, in Rehnquist's view, moving quickly enough to confirm Clinton judicial nominees.

The process of confirming presidential nominees to the federal bench has always been contentious when a party other than the president's has controlled the Senate. Because federal judges, especially those at the appellate level or higher, have so much power to make law from the bench, ideologues of all stripes are always watchful for nominees who might shift the balance of a particular court.

This tension was especially evident from 1986 forward.

From that point, the Democrat-controlled Senate took on President Ronald Reagan over judicial nominations. And, when President George Bush the elder replaced Reagan in the Oval Office, the conflict continued as Democrats feared the federal bench would be remade in a way that allowed conservative legal philosophy to dominate judicial opinions.

The high watermark in that struggle was the battle to confirm Clarence Thomas as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Only the second black to be named to the court, Thomas was embraced by conservatives and abhorred by liberals – even though he had been confirmed for a lower federal bench by an overwhelming majority just a few years earlier.

Much has been written about the battle for Thomas. It was, as many who covered the hearings agree, always about his judicial philosophy -- even when it seemed to be about something else.

After 1994, the GOP-led Senate was almost as tough on Clinton appointees to the federal bench, again not for reasons of political payback so much as over concerns about ideological trends among nominees -- especially to U.S. circuit courts where the dominant legal philosophy might be shifted in one direction or the other by a single appointment.

Judicial nominations were, especially in the Reagan and post-Reagan presidencies, games of high-stakes political poker. Other presidential appointments, however, did not receive the same kind of ideological scrutiny – until now.

Much of the way Washington works is based on the appearance of political niceties. The much-ballyhooed "comity of the Senate" is frequently invoked, even in the most trying of circumstances, to keep the process moving.

REV_00087998

Now the process has broken down.

The harsh political divisions that erupted during the Clinton years were sorely exacerbated by the post-election legal challenges to George W. Bush's victory. The Sept. 11 terror attack put the brakes for a short time on the ad hominem sniping that passed for reasoned political discourse.

As the New Year begins, most observers agree that the knives are once again sharpened and out and can be seen clearly in the confirmation process.

Many presidential and congressional scholars believe this new breakdown was inevitable. It might just as likely have occurred with a Democrat in the White House and Republicans in control of the Senate, but either way, the confirmation process has virtually ground to a halt.

The Constitution invests in the Senate the power to advise upon and confirm or reject presidential appointees. It is a check on the president's ability to stack his administration with favor-seekers, incompetents and political cronies.

Under Majority Leader Tom Daschle's, D-S.D., leadership, that power is being exercised ruthlessly.

Some suggest that this is a case of turnabout being fair play, partisan vindication -- or vengeance, depending on political perspective -- for the way the GOP-controlled Senate treated Clinton administration nominees between 1995 and 2000.

As a counter, Republican leaders say that in the case of Clinton nominees -- especially judges -- care was exercised t o base opposition on issues of competence and ethics, acknowledging the president's Constitutional prerogative to appoint whom he wanted to post in his administration.

True or not, Senate Democrats brought the idea that a nominee's ideology is now on the table to the forefront shortly after they took control of the process in 2001.

What had been behind-the-scenes, inside baseball became public spectacle.

There are now close to 200 Bush appointees awaiting confirmation. Many of them have not yet been given a hearing before the relevant Senate committee.

Holding up nominees is, as partisan strategists acknowledge, a way of sticking a senatorial thumb in a presidential eye. But for most of the latter half of the 20th Century, it was an extreme measure, not a general practice.

There are those who fear it is now so widespread as to cripple the administration's ability to carry out its duties.

In one example, Massachusetts Democrat Sen. John F. Kerry announced he was placing a hold on all non-judicial confirmations in retaliation for an anonymous hold that had been placed on a bipartisan Kerry/Bond small business relief package.

The move is high-stakes political gamesmanship, designed to break a logjam on the Kerry/Bond bill.

Less explainable is the failure of the Senate to act on nominees like Otto Reich, whom the president has asked to be Assistant Secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs.

A former U.S. ambassador to Venezuela and a Reagan appointee, Reich was named to the post on March 22, 2001. As of Jan. 3, 2002, he had still not come before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for a hearing.

According to many Capitol Hill insiders, the roadblock to moving ahead is Connecticut Democrat Sen. Christopher Dodd, who, they suggest, is looking to settle an old policy score by keeping Reich from getting the job.

In the 1980s, Dodd was a vocal opponent of the Reagan administration's Central America policy. History records that he was on the wrong side of the issue, at least as far as the outcomes are concerned.

The Nicaraguan people tossed the Dodd-supported Sandinistas from power in the first democratic election. In El Salvador, the country has become a generally stable and prosperous democracy. The political ambitions of the FMLN guerillas, Communists backed by the Soviet Union, have been largely thwarted.

Reich, who has been endorsed for the State Department post by nine former U.S. ambassadors to the region, was an important player in the implementation of the Reagan doctrine in Central America -- policies that Dodd strongly and vocally opposed.

Dodd has publicly accused Reich of being a terrorist sympathizer while others have made serious allegations about his conduct during his time in the Reagan administration. And because Dodd is blocking Reich from a hearing before the Senate, the nominee is being denied the opportunity to face his accusers and to hear and defend against the allegations.

Conservative supporters of the nominee have called this a terribly un-American way of doing things. They are calling on Dodd to allow a hearing to go forward, in a spirit of post-Sept. 11 bi-partisanship.

They believe the linkage to Sept. 11 is appropriate because the post to which he has been nominated is of some importance in the war against terror -- with Cuba falling under his purview. And while it may be that President Bush names Reich to the job in a recess appointment, they still want the hearing to go forward so that the issues may be resolved, one way or another.

The Reich case is but one example of what some see as the collapse of the confirmation process, which observers on both sides of the aisle agree is bad for America.

The political outcomes from the dispute cannot be forecast. If, Republicans say privately, the process is allowed to move forward, with all pending nominees given hearings and votes of the full Senate, then that will be sufficient to satisfy their concerns.

In the vision of the founders, a majority of senators should be allowed to reject a nominee on ideological grounds, putting their opposition on record for the voters to consider. There are few who will make the case that delays in the confirmation process -- if they are shields against political consequences of opposition on ideological grounds -- should be seen in the same light.

It is likely, political strategists say, that continued delays will show up in political ads in states, like Tom Daschle's South Dakota, that voted overwhelmingly for George W. Bush in 2000. But that is no guarantee that such a campaign will break the appointments logjam.

Hicks Ready to Step in to New Role on Nevada Federal Bench

The Associated Press
Wednesday, January 2, 2002

Nevada's newest federal judge said he is ready to step in and help his overburdened colleagues.

U.S. District Judge Larry R. Hicks will begin presiding over cases on Monday, three days before a formal installation ceremony. He took the oath of office Nov. 29.

President Bush nominated Hicks in August to replace U.S. District Judge Johnnie Rawlinson, who was elevated to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

U.S. Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., recommended Hicks to Bush, and Hicks' appointment was confirmed by the Senate in November.

He will be the sixth federal judge in the state. The lifetime federal court appointment carries an annual salary of $145,100.

Hicks was a partner in the Reno law firm of McDonald, Carano, Wilson, McCune, Bergin, Frankovich & Hicks. He was Washoe County district attorney from 1974 to 1978 and is a past president of the state bar association board of governors.

Hicks told the Las Vegas Sun on Monday that he had been apprehensive about the confirmation process. However, he said he was not asked his personal views or how he would vote on particular issues.

He said his 32 years as a lawyer and his personality will help him on the bench.

"I'm comfortable with lawyers, with the litigation process and with trials," he said. "I'm anxious to take on my part of it all."

Clark County District Judge James Mahan in Las Vegas has been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee to fill the seventh and final seat on Nevada's federal bench. He awaits a vote by the full Senate.

Rehnquist Urges Action on Judicial Picks; Courts: The Chief Justice said Senate Democrats Should Schedule Votes Soon on Nominees for Federal Vacancies

By David Savage
The Los Angeles Times
Tuesday, January 1, 2002

Four years ago, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist chided the Senate Republicans for stalling on President Clinton's nominees to the federal courts.

"The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry, it should vote him up or vote him down," the chief justice said then in his year-end report on the federal judiciary.

Rehnquist repeated the admonition in a report issued today, but this time it was directed at Senate
Democrats. "When I spoke to this issue [as 1997 ended], there were 82 judicial vacancies," Rehnquist said. "When the Senate adjourned on [this] Dec. 20, there were 94 vacancies."

The three-tiered federal court system is supposed to have 862 judges.

President Bush nominated 80 judges during his first year in office, but only 28 won Senate confirmation.

"The Senate ought to act with reasonable promptness and to vote each nominee up or down," Rehnquist said.

Five years ago, Sen. Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont, then the ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, applauded Rehnquist's message and said he hoped it "will help shame" the Republicans into "clearing the backlog early next year."

Now chairman of the committee, Leahy issued a more equivocal statement pledging to "seek consensus and to move forward to fill remaining vacancies."

Like Sen. Orrin G. Hatch (R-Utah), his predecessor as chairman, Leahy has brought up before the committee only those proposed judges who have support from key senators from both parties.

Quick action was possible in these cases, Leahy said, "because the Senate believed these nominees for lifetime appointments would put justice and the law ahead of rigid ideology."

So far, the Democrats have refused to schedule hearings on several of Bush's most prominent nominees to the U.S. Court of Appeals. They include Washington attorney John G. Roberts, a former clerk to Rehnquist, and attorney Miguel Estrada, who once clerked at the Supreme Court for Justice Anthony M. Kennedy.

University of Utah law professor Michael McConnell and Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Carolyn Kuhl, all of whom were nominated in the first half of last year, also have no hearing scheduled.

Nonetheless, Leahy pointed out that his committee had approved more judges in his six months of Democratic control than were approved during the first year of the presidencies of Clinton and the senior George Bush.

The chief justice mentioned no names in his report, but urged the Senate to schedule "up or down votes" on all the nominees within a reasonable period.

Besides confirming more judges to fill vacancies, Rehnquist also asked Congress to authorize more judges in California.

The U.S. 9th Circuit of Appeals, which reviews federal cases from the Western states, has seen its cases rise by 95% since the mid-1980s, he said. The circuit needs five additional judges, he said.

The trial courts in San Diego are swamped by drug and immigration cases, Rehnquist said.

"The judges there have the highest number of filings per judge of any federal district court in the nation," he said, and called upon Congress to authorize eight more judges for California's southernmost district.

Judges Delayed

Pittsburgh Post-Gazette
Thursday, January 3, 2002

Chief Justice William Rehnquist has offered a timely assist to the Republican minority in the U.S. Senate, which has been accusing Democrats of dragging their feet on confirming new federal judges.

And although the chief justice is a Republican appointee, there is nothing partisan about his plea that the Democratic-controlled Senate "act with reasonable promptness" on President Bush's judicial nominees and vote them "up or down" instead of ensnaring them in procedural delays.

The chief justice made similar pleas in the late 1990s when it was Bill Clinton's nominees who were being stalled by a Republican-controlled Senate. In both cases the chief justice warned that vacancies on federal trial and appellate courts were undermining the administration of justice. This time there is a post-Sept. 11 twist in the chief justice's plea for Senate action. "During times such as these, the role of the courts becomes even more important in order to enforce the rule of law," he said this week in his annual report on the state of the federal judiciary.

Predictably, Democrats and Republicans differ about the extent of the problem and whether the Democrats who control the Senate are engaged in payback for delays in the approval of Mr. Clinton's judicial nominees.

Democrats argue that the Senate has confirmed more Bush nominees this year than it did Clinton nominees in 1993, Mr. Clinton's first year in office. Republicans counter that on a percentage basis Mr. Clinton fared better, winning confirmation of 84 percent of his nominees compared to 42 percent for Mr. Bush.

What is indisputable is that there are 94 judicial vacancies, about 11 percent of all federal judgeships. Even if the federal courts didn't have to contend with litigation growing out of new anti-terrorist laws, those empty benches would be a scandal.

The Senate has yet to act on 23 nominations to federal appeals courts and 14 nominations to district courts, including Mr. Bush's choice of D. Brooks Smith, the chief U.S. district judge for Western Pennsylvania, for the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. While senators of both parties view judicial appointments as pieces in a political chess game, for lawyers and litigants more manpower means more expeditious justice.

Sen. Tom Daschle, the Democratic leader of the Senate, bristles when the White House calls him an obstructionist. He can do a lot to dispel that accusation by scheduling prompt action on judicial nominations when the Senate reconvenes Jan. 23.

Sixth Circuit Breaker

Thursday, January 3, 2001

So now we get it. The reason there's a dangerous 11% vacancy rate in the federal judiciary is Osama bin Laden. Why didn't we think of that? Maybe this also explains why Buffalo got 82 inches of snow over Christmas.

That, in essence, is the preposterous reply that Senate Judiciary Chairman Pat Leahy gave to Chief Justice William Rehnquist's gentle rebuke this week about the slow pace of Senate judicial confirmations. Senators "ought to act with reasonable promptness to vote each nominee up or down," the Chief Justice wrote in his annual state-of-the-Judiciary report, delivered to Congress on New Year's Day. "The Senate is not, of course, obliged to confirm any particular nominee. But it ought to act on each nominee and to do so within a reasonable time."

Sounds pretty reasonable: The President nominates and the Senate confirms or rejects. So get on with an up or down vote. Senator Leahy's response? It's been a "tumultuous year for the nation and also for the Senate," he explains. He promises to get back to work as soon as the recess is over.

We'll believe it when we see it. The record shows that the Vermont Democrat has perfected the art of the big stall, refusing to schedule so much as a hearing for many of Mr. Bush's nominees. Mr. Leahy is fond of saying that the Senate confirmed 28 judicial nominees in 2001. What he doesn't say is that most of those are lower-level district court judges, and that there are 37 more awaiting action by either the Judiciary Committee or the full Senate. Of these, 32 don't even have dates for hearings, the first step in the Senate's advice-and-consent process.

Leahy's Hostages/Nominees for the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals who can't get a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, and their dates of nomination:

Deborah Cook (Ohio) May 9

Jeff Sutton (Ohio) May 9

Julia Gibbons (Tenn.) Oct. 9
David McKeague (Mich.) Nov. 8
Susan Neilson (Mich.) Nov. 8
Henry Saad (Mich.) Nov. 8
John Rogers (Ky.) Dec. 19

To see what this means in the real world, consider the Sixth Circuit, which hears appeals from Michigan, Ohio, Tennessee and Kentucky. With eight openings, the 16-member court is operating at half strength. Its three-member panels handle close to 1,500 cases a year, or about five for every work day, and about 50% more than the average for panels on the other appellate courts. Four of those Sixth Circuit openings have been deemed judicial emergencies by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, based on the number of years a judgeship has been open and the size of the court's caseload.

President Bush addressed this crisis with seven nominations to the Sixth Circuit last year, including two in his first batch of nominees last May 9. (See the nearby table.) And the Senate? Mr. Leahy has yet to grant a single hearing for a Sixth Circuit nominee.

Mr. Bush's nominees are mostly moderate conservatives, some of whom are already on the bench. Deborah Cook is a justice on the Ohio Supreme Court. David McKeague and Julia Gibbons are federal district judges. Jeff Sutton, a former solicitor general of Ohio, won a landmark disabilities case before the U.S. Supreme Court. John Rogers is an eminent law professor at the University of Kentucky. Susan Neilson is a judge on the Wayne County Circuit Court. Henry Saad sits on the Michigan Court of Appeals. If confirmed, Mr. Saad would be the first Arab-American on an appeals court.

The political problem here isn't the quality of the nominees but the fact that the Sixth Circuit includes the home state of Carl Levin. The Michigan Senator is seeking payback for two Bill Clinton nominees from Michigan whose nominations stalled in the GOP-controlled Senate. He's demanding "fairness," which we hear he is defining as a seat on the Sixth Circuit for one of his unsuccessful candidates and a federal district judgeship as a consolation prize for the other.

And so Senators Levin and Debbie Stabenow have "blue slipped" the President's three Sixth Circuit nominees from Michigan. Blue slips, which let a Senator blackball a judicial nominee from his state, are one of our least favorite Senate traditions. But both political parties have practiced it, and if one state's Senators get too obstructionist, a President always has the option of nominating a judge from another state in the circuit.

Or at least he did until Mr. Leahy came along. The Judiciary Chairman has redefined the meaning of senatorial courtesy by effectively extending Senator Levin's blue-slip power beyond Michigan to any nominee from any state in the Sixth Circuit. In other words, unless the President finds judgeships for the Michigan judges Senators Leahy and Levin support, he can forget about filling any vacancy on the Sixth Circuit. So much for the overburdened judiciary.

President Bush has put forward a group of highly qualified nominees for the Sixth Circuit, and there are many more well-qualified men and women among the 23 appeals court nominees and 14 district court nominees behind Mr. Leahy's blockade. At the very least, they deserve a hearing.

In a letter to the editor we published on December 13, Senator Leahy wrote that "Democrats have worked day after day to support the administration and to subsume partisanship." His treatment of the President's nominees to the Sixth Circuit tells a different story -- to wit, that Senate politics trumps the urgent need for a fully staffed federal judiciary.

NY Times Flip on Rehnquist Rebuke

Media Research Center
Wednesday, January 2, 2001

A pretty flagrant New Year's Day double standard at the New York Times. Four years ago when Chief Justice William Rehnquist chastised the Republican-controlled Senate for holding up judicial nominees, the New York Times showcased the complaint on its front page under the scolding headline: "Senate Imperils Judicial System, Rehnquist Says." But this year, when he issued the same complaint about the Democratic-controlled Senate, the Times put the story inside and gave Rehnquist's complaint just two paragraphs -- the tenth and eleventh ones. The headline: "Rehnquist Says Courts Risk Losing Private-Sector Nominees."

In both cases, Rehnquist's comments came in his annual year-end report, on the state of the judiciary, issued every December 31.

Four years ago, when 82 federal judgeships stood unfilled, Rehnquist asserted: "The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry, it should vote him up or vote him down." On December 31, 2001, with 94 judgeships vacant, Rehnquist employed similar language as he implored: "On behalf of the judiciary, I ask Congress to raise the salaries of federal judges, and I ask the Senate to schedule up or down votes on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after receiving the nomination....The Senate is not, of course, obliged to confirm any particular nominee....but I urge prompt attention to the challenge of bringing the federal judicial branch closer to full staffing

Rehnquist has remained consistent in chiding the Senate, no matter which party is in control, but not the New York Times.

Under the front page headline, "Senate Imperils Judicial System, Rehnquist Says," reporter John H. Cushman Jr. wrote the January 1, 1998 story. An excerpt:

In an unusual rebuke, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist today criticized the Senate for failing to move more quickly on judicial appointments, saying that the "vacancies cannot remain at such high levels indefinitely without eroding the quality of justice."

The Chief Justice made the statement in his annual year-end report of the state of the judiciary -- a 19-page document in which he also praised Congress for responding to other judicial concerns, like increasing judges' salaries and providing more money for operations of the courts. But he said that the major problem facing the judiciary was "too few judges and too much work" and that continuing inaction on nominees was imperiling the court system.

Chief Justice Rehnquist said delays by President Clinton in sending nominations to the Senate had contributed to the problem, but his main criticism fell on the Senate itself, which is responsible for approving or rejecting nominees to the Federal judiciary.

"The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry, it should vote him up or vote him down," the Chief Justice said.

Chief Justice Rehnquist and other judges have complained before about the problem of vacancies, but the Chief Justice's remarks today were especially pointed....

Senator Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont, the ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, said he hoped the Chief Justice's report would "help shame the Senate into clearing the backlog." Mr. Leahy said more than 40 judicial nominees were kept on hold in 1997, some of them in limbo since 1995....

REV_00088007

END of Excerpt

But with Leahy now the Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the New York Times avoided criticism of him and focused its story on another aspect of Rehnquist's latest annual report. An excerpt from the January 1, 2002 story by Linda Greenhouse, headlined "Rehnquist Says Courts Risk Losing Private-Sector Nominees." The first four paragraphs followed by the tenth and eleventh ones:

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist warned today that a combination of relatively low salaries and a tortuous confirmation process was making the federal judiciary increasingly unappealing as a career move for lawyers in private practice.

The result, he said in his annual year-end report, is that federal judges are increasingly being recruited from among lawyers already in public service, working as public prosecutors or defenders, federal magistrate or bankruptcy judges, or serving on state courts.

"For them the pay is a modest improvement and the confirmation process at least does not damage their current income," the chief justice said.

He said the risk was that the judiciary would lose the perspective of lawyers who had spent their careers in the private sector, and would come to resemble European systems in which young lawyers choose to become judges in what is in effect a civil service system....

On the pace of confirmation for judicial nominees, Chief Justice Rehnquist noted that in past years, he had criticized a Republican-controlled Senate for delays in considering President Bill Clinton's nominees. "Now the political situation is exactly the reverse, but the same situation obtains," he said, noting that the Senate confirmed 28 judges during 2001 and adjourned without acting on 37 nominations.

"The Senate is not, of course, obliged to confirm any particular nominee," he said. "But it ought to act on each nominee and to do so within a reasonable time."...

Rehnquist Calls on Senate to Pick up Pace of Judicial Confirmations

CNN.com
Wednesday, January 2, 2002

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist is pressing senators to speed up judicial confirmations with a new urgency because of terrorism.

Rehnquist has complained before about slow confirmations, but he directed new, harsh criticism Tuesday at Democrats who have controlled the Senate since June and now decide whether and when to vote on President Bush's nominees.

"During times such as these, the role of the courts becomes even more important in order to enforce the rule of law," Rehnquist, a Republican, said in his annual report on the courts. "To continue functioning effectively and efficiently, however, the courts must be appropriately staffed."

There are 94 vacancies in the federal judiciary -- about 11 percent of the 853 district, trade and appeals court judgeships, court records show. That's the most openings at the start of a year since January 1994, when there were 118.

Rehnquist said senators "ought to act with reasonable promptness and to vote each nominee up or down." He also said the president should choose judges quickly and try to recruit private attorneys for judgeships.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont, defended the confirmation pace during what he called a "tumultuous year for the nation and also for the Senate."

Bush had more choices approved in 2001 than the past two presidents -- Democratic President Clinton and Bush's father before him -- each had in their first year in office, Leahy said.

Of Bush's 64 judicial nominations, 28 were confirmed, Senate records show. That compares with 27 Clinton judicial confirmations in 1993 and 15 in the first Bush administration in 1989.

Leahy said the Senate will work to fill remaining vacancies after the holiday break.

"The president can help by choosing more nominees primarily for their fairness and abilities, instead of for their ideology," Leahy said.

REV_00087988

White House spokeswoman Anne Womack said that with only about 43 percent of Bush's judicial nominations confirmed so far, "The president has done his part. Now it's time for the Senate to do theirs."

Hindering efforts to find good candidates for federal judgeships, Rehnquist said, are the "inadequacy of judicial pay I have spoken (of) again and again, without much result," and "the often lengthy and unpleasant nature of the confirmation process."

In his 16th annual report since becoming chief after his own difficult Senate confirmation, Rehnquist also discussed courthouse safety. An emergency preparedness office has been created for the federal courts, and a consultant has recommended tighter security at courthouses, background checks on employees and better protection for judges in and out of court.

In the meantime, Rehnquist said, Congress should give the Supreme Court more money for security.

Since the September 11 attacks, he said, federal courts "have gotten back to business, even if not business as usual."

Anthrax contamination forced a weeklong closing of the Supreme Court building, and justices heard arguments in another location for the first time since the building opened in 1935.

In addition, Rehnquist said, anthrax-related mail problems might affect the number of cases the court hears this year. Traditionally, justices review about 80 a year.

Rehnquist Says Courts Risk Losing Private-Sector Nominees

By Linda Greenhouse
The New York Times
Tuesday, January 1, 2002

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist warned today that a combination of relatively low salaries and a tortuous confirmation process was making the federal judiciary increasingly unappealing as a career move for lawyers in private practice.

The result, he said in his annual year-end report, is that federal judges are increasingly being recruited from among lawyers already in public service, working as public prosecutors or defenders, federal magistrate or bankruptcy judges, or serving on state courts.

"For them the pay is a modest improvement and the confirmation process at least does not damage their current income," the chief justice said.

He said the risk was that the judiciary would lose the perspective of lawyers who had spent their careers in the private sector, and would come to resemble European systems in which young lawyers choose to become judges in what is in effect a civil service system.

REV_00087989

"We have never had, and should not want, a judiciary composed only of those persons who are already in the public service," Chief Justice Rehnquist said, adding, "We must not drastically shrink the number of judicial nominees who have had substantial experience in private practice."

He said "reasonable people, not merely here but in Europe," believe that the European systems of career judges "simply do not command the respect and enjoy the independence of ours."

Federal judges, along with members of Congress, will receive a 3.4 percent cost-of-living increase on Jan. 1, resulting in the following judicial salaries: district judges, $150,000; court of appeals judges, $159,100; associate Supreme Court justices, $184,400; and the chief justice, $192,600.

In his report, Chief Justice Rehnquist did not say what he thought judicial salaries should be. He said that while judges were "grateful" for the cost-of-living increase, it "only keeps judges from falling further behind the median income of the profession."

An article in The New York Law Journal last week reported that some major New York City law firms were paying first-year lawyers as much as $145,000 a year, counting year-end bonuses as well as salary. Federal judges have long found it galling that their law clerks often surpass them in earnings within a year or two of completing the one- year clerkship.

On the pace of confirmation for judicial nominees, Chief Justice Rehnquist noted that in past years, he had criticized a Republican-controlled Senate for delays in considering President Bill Clinton's nominees. "Now the political situation is exactly the reverse, but the same situation obtains," he said, noting that the Senate confirmed 28 judges during 2001 and adjourned without acting on 37 nominations.

"The Senate is not, of course, obliged to confirm any particular nominee," he said. "But it ought to act on each nominee and to do so within a reasonable time."

In his report, the chief justice made passing reference to the events of Sept. 11, which resulted in the evacuation of the Supreme Court building, where judges from around the country had just assembled for the semiannual meeting of the Judicial Conference of the United States. The next month, the building was closed again after anthrax contamination was found in an off-site mail center, causing the justices to hold arguments for a week in a nearby federal courthouse.

Despite those disruptions, he said, "the judiciary can look back upon the year ended as one of accomplishments in the face of adversity."

Border Courts Overwhelmed

By Toni Locy
USA Today

REV_00087990

"Culpable! Culpable!" defendant Jose Cervantes Moreno blurts, loud enough for several potential jurors to hear. Most people in this part of West Texas understand enough Spanish to know he's saying, "Guilty! Guilty!"

U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson can't believe it. Less than an hour into the workday, his court is in chaos. He had hoped to pick juries in a dozen criminal cases -- including Cervantes' -- for a visiting judge to try in the coming week.

But now Cervantes doesn't want a trial. He wants to switch his not-guilty plea to guilty. Like many defendants who appear before Furgeson, Cervantes doesn't speak English or understand his rights under U.S. law. He adds to the confusion by saying he was high on drugs and didn't know what he was doing when he drove across the U.S.-Mexico border with 145 pounds of marijuana. Furgeson sags. Legally, he can't accept a plea knowing that a defendant's judgment might have been impaired during the crime. Cervantes' court-appointed attorney buries his head in his hands.

Nothing comes easily here in Pecos, one of several federal courts along the southern border that are being overwhelmed by a flood of drug and immigration cases and a shortage of judges to handle them.

The volume forces judges to take shortcuts, at times accepting guilty pleas and imposing sentences en masse – an unheard-of approach in federal courts elsewhere. Civil cases are getting short shrift.

And there's no relief in sight. The Republican White House and the Democrat-led Senate continue to wrangle over judicial nominations despite the border-court problems and the war on terrorism, which Republicans say will require more judges to approve warrants and wiretap orders.

Caseloads in the five judicial districts along the Southwest border have ballooned in the seven years since U.S. law enforcement cracked down on illegal border crossings and the North American Free Trade Agreement eased trade restrictions between the United States and Mexico. An economic boon to both nations, the treaty also has increased opportunities for drug smuggling and illegal immigration. As border traffic rises, contradictory moves by the U.S. government have created a crisis in border-area courts:

* An initiative led by the Justice Department has nearly doubled the number of agents and prosecutors in the border jurisdictions of California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas to nearly 15,000. From 1994 through 2000, there was a 210% jump in criminal filings per judge in border-area courts.

Many of the cases involve Mexicans who are coming to the United States for a better life, but others are bringing drugs. In the Western District of Texas, which includes Pecos, the annual number of criminal cases per judge jumped from 101 to 404, a 300% increase. For Furgeson, the jump was even larger. His caseload rose 776%, from 51 in 1994 to 447 in 2000.

* Washington has not helped the courts keep up. There are supposed to be 56 trial judges in the border judicial districts in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California. Because of judges' deaths and retirements and gridlock in Washington over judicial nominations, there have been as many as nine vacancies in the past year. The Senate recently approved three border-court nominees, which reduced vacancies to six.

Federal judges, who are appointed for life, are nominated by the president and confirmed by the Senate.

The judiciary repeatedly has pressed in Washington for the vacancies to be filled and has urged Congress to add 18 judges' positions along the border. In 2000, Congress did add two permanent judgeships in Texas and one in New Mexico.

There are 94 vacancies on the 862-member federal bench. The Senate has approved 28 of President Bush's 64 nominees to federal trial and appeals courts; the remaining 36 nominations either are pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee or are about to be considered there. Seven of Bush's nominations have been for border-area courts, including three that have been confirmed.

Meanwhile, Democrats and Republicans continue to bicker over the pace of confirmations. In his annual report on the federal judiciary, Chief Justice William Rehnquist pleaded this week with Congress to set aside partisanship and move more quickly to fill judicial posts. Republicans accuse Democrats, who control the Senate, of slowing the process. Democrats say they've done a better job than Republicans did when they were in charge. During President Clinton's first year, the Senate approved 27 of 47 judicial nominees.

No time to think

Perhaps nowhere is the border courts' crisis more poignant than here in Pecos, where Furgeson is the only federal judge in a dusty, desolate judicial division encompassing 12,000 square miles, roughly the size of Massachusetts and Connecticut combined. The region covers 420 miles of the U.S.-Mexico border.

Many of those who wind up before Furgeson have risked death walking for days in the desert. To court, they bring communication problems and complex legal issues that create constant delays.

"It's like a waterfall," says Furgeson, whose yearly caseload is six times the national average of 78 for federal judges. "It never stops."

He has handled all of the cases since 2000, when a senior judge who had been helping him became too ill to continue. "One of the things a judge needs most is time to think," he says. "But when you're dealing with such volume, you don't have the time you know you need to think."

REV_00087992

For decades, the U.S.-Mexico border was as simple to cross as a small-town street. That changed during the 1980s, after U.S. authorities made it more difficult for drug dealers to use Florida as the main smuggling point for Colombian cocaine. Several Mexican drug rings stepped in and set up routes across the 2,000-mile border.

In 1994, the Justice Department launched the Southwest Border Initiative, a crackdown on illegal immigrants and drug smugglers. In 2000 alone, the effort resulted in more than 1.6 million arrests of illegal aliens. Drug seizures in 2000 included nearly 2.2 million pounds of marijuana and more than 38,000 pounds of cocaine.

Perils on the border

Law enforcement's approach has been simple: close the accessible routes and leave the most treacherous territory as the only way in. However, thousands of drug smugglers and illegal immigrants are undeterred. They cross mountainous high desert terrain that is as inhospitable to them as it is to the law enforcers who patrol it.

Illegal immigrants often are abandoned with little food or water by "coyotes," corrupt guides. "Backpackers," Mexicans hired to carry 50 or more pounds of marijuana, usually are as ill-equipped. "Out here, we find ourselves putting life over law," Border Patrol agent Fred Hollenbeck says.

Cases involving illegal immigrants caught sneaking across the border usually are routine. But some law-enforcement actions here are raising significant constitutional issues. The Supreme Court ruled in 2000 that agents cannot squeeze bus passengers' luggage in search of drugs. The volume of traffic increases the odds that agents will encounter legally complicated scenarios. In Texas, the number of cars traveling from Mexico jumped from 32.2 million in 1994 to 41.5 million in 2000. The number of commercial trucks rolling into the USA rose from 660,000 to 2.4 million during that period.

Other hot legal issues, such as racial profiling, are more complex here and so take longer to resolve. Prosecutors have argued that experienced Border Patrol agents can tell what part of Mexico drivers or passengers are from by their dress or haircut. But the courts have ruled that ethnicity cannot be the sole reason for a stop.

In carrying out random stops, Border Patrol agents often operate on instinct. They stop drivers who appear nervous or who don't look like tourists, as well as vehicles that appear weighted down.

"We are at ground zero for the Fourth Amendment," Furgeson says, referring to the protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.

The traveling judge

REV_00087993

Furgeson is assigned to Midland, where he has an equally busy docket. When he was appointed to the bench by Clinton in 1994, he also was given responsibility for the Pecos court as a traveling judge, a throwback to the days when jurists covered circuits by horseback.

He spends half of every month in Pecos, a city of 9,500 known for its rodeo. Before Furgeson heads there, he fills a cooler with broccoli and frozen dinners that he cooks in a microwave in his chambers.

Distances in the division also pose a hardship. The judge and his staff drive nearly 100 miles from Midland southwest to Pecos and stay for a week at a time. Three prosecutors and three public defenders travel a similar distance north from Alpine, where they are based. Jurors drive up to 150 miles to court.

The hardest part of the job, Furgeson says, is listening to the defendants' life stories. Many are poor, uneducated Mexicans who smuggle drugs in exchange for payments that equal half a year's wages for them. Others are so desperate that they follow animal paths through the mountains with children in tow.

"You don't get a sense that the people (appearing) in front of you are responsible for the planning and execution of this avalanche of drugs coming into this country," Furgeson says in a soft drawl.

Because the law requires trials in criminal cases within 70 days of indictment, border judges are streamlining complex criminal procedures. They offer what court personnel call "blue-light specials": breaks in prison time for defendants who waive time-consuming pre-sentencing reports.

Furgeson says he fears that the rush to judgment might be at an increasing cost to justice -- as does Carolyn King, chief judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit. In 1999, she came up with a short-term solution to the crisis. Several judges, mainly from Louisiana, volunteer to help judges like Furgeson by trying cases.

The U.S. Judicial Conference, the policymaking body for federal judges, wants Congress to create nine new permanent judgeships and nine temporary positions on the border -- and fill existing vacancies.

In Pecos, after huddling with his lawyer and a court interpreter, Cervantes, 24, wants to admit his guilt. However, he says, "I was doped up when I did it. I did not know what I was doing."

The judge can't sign off on a such a caveat, nor can he hold a trial because Cervantes' outburst has tainted the day's jury pool. He orders a psychological exam and calls the next case.

"I realize I'm not trying (Panamanian strongman Manuel) Noriega or (Mafia boss John) Gotti," Furgeson says later. "But I can't keep this up. I'm running on fumes."

Chief Justice Rehnquist Calls on Senate to Pick up Pace of Judicial Confirmations

By Gina Holland
The Associated Press
Tuesday, January 1, 2002

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist is pressing senators to speed up judicial confirmations with a new urgency because of terrorism.

Rehnquist has complained before about slow confirmations, but he directed new, harsh criticism Tuesday at Democrats who have controlled the Senate since June and now decide whether and when to vote on President Bush's nominees.

"During times such as these, the role of the courts becomes even more important in order to enforce the rule of law," Rehnquist, a Republican, said in his annual report on the courts. "To continue functioning effectively and efficiently, however, the courts must be appropriately staffed." There are 94 vacancies in the federal judiciary - about 11 percent of the 853 district, trade and appeals court judgeships, court records show. That's the most openings at the start of a year since January 1994, when there were 118.

Rehnquist said senators "ought to act with reasonable promptness and to vote each nominee up or down." He also said the president should choose judges quickly and try to recruit private attorneys for judgeships.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., defended the confirmation pace during what he called a "tumultuous year for the nation and also for the Senate."

Bush had more choices approved in 2001 than the past two presidents - Democratic President Clinton and Bush's father before him - each had in their first year in office, Leahy said.

Of Bush's 64 judicial nominations, 28 were confirmed, Senate records show. That compares with 27 Clinton judicial confirmations in 1993 and 15 in the first Bush administration in 1989.

Leahy said the Senate will work to fill remaining vacancies after the holiday break.

"The president can help by choosing more nominees primarily for their fairness and abilities, instead of for ideology," Leahy said.

White House spokeswoman Anne Womack said that with only about 43 percent of Bush's judicial nominations confirmed so far, "The president has done his part. Now it's time for the Senate to do theirs."

Hindering efforts to find good candidates for federal judgeships, Rehnquist said, are the "inadequacy of judicial pay I have spoken (of) again and again, without much result," and "the often lengthy and unpleasant nature of the confirmation process."

In his 16th annual report since becoming chief after his own difficult Senate confirmation, Rehnquist also discussed courthouse safety. An emergency preparedness office has been created for the federal courts, and a consultant has recommended tighter security at courthouses, background checks on employees and better protection for judges in and out of court.

In the meantime, Rehnquist said, Congress should give the Supreme Court more money for security.

Since the Sept. 11 attacks, he said, federal courts "have gotten back to business, even if not business as usual."

Anthrax contamination forced a weeklong closing of the Supreme Court building, and justices heard arguments in another location for the first time since the building opened in 1935.

In addition, Rehnquist said, anthrax-related mail problems might affect the number of cases the court hears this year. Traditionally, justices review about 80 a year.

Rehnquist Decries Vacancies; Stalled Judgeships Hurt War on Terror, Chief Justice Says

By Charles Lane
The Washington Post
Tuesday, January 1, 2002

In his first assessment of the condition of the federal judiciary since the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11 and subsequent anthrax threat, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said yesterday that the courts "have gotten back to business, even if not business as usual" but still need swift action by the Senate on President Bush's judicial nominations.

The assessment came in Rehnquist's annual report on the federal courts published yesterday. He has cited the confirmation backlog in past reports. The tragic events of 2001, however, have made resolving the problems more urgent, Rehnquist said. "During times such as these, the role of the courts becomes even more important in order to enforce the rule of law," he wrote. "To continue functioning effectively and efficiently, however, the courts must be appropriately staffed. This means that necessary judgeships must be created and judicial vacancies must be timely filled with well-qualified candidates."

Rehnquist offered a brief account of his experience on Sept. 11, saying that he heard of the attack on the World Trade Center as he was preparing to open a meeting at the Supreme Court of the Judicial Conference, made up of 27 federal judges headed by the Chief Justice of the United States. The court was evacuated and the meeting canceled, the first time the Judicial Conference has halted one of its semiannual sessions since its founding in 1922.

Rehnquist also confirmed for the first time that the Supreme Court may not be able to hear as many cases as usual this year, because of delays in mail deliveries of legal documents due to anthrax-spore contamination. Anthrax spores in the court's mail facilities forced it to close its building temporarily. The Supreme Court and many other federal courts have instituted expensive anthrax-spore screening.

Largely because of partisan deadlock over the ideological direction of the federal courts, a long-standing situation compounded this year by the need for the Senate to take up Sept. 11-related legislation, the Democratic-controlled Senate had confirmed only 28 federal judges as of Dec. 20, when it adjourned. There are 23 nominations to the courts of appeals and 14 nominations to the district courts awaiting action.

Some courts have been especially hard hit. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the 6th Circuit, based in Cincinnati, is down to about half of its authorized strength of 16 full-time judges. Bush has made six nominations to the 6th Circuit, but they have not yet received a hearing in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

As Rehnquist noted, similar problems occurred when Republicans controlled the Senate and a Democrat, President Bill Clinton, occupied the White House. There were 17 confirmations in 1996 and 36 in 1997.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.) defended the Senate record, noting that since Democrats took control June 6, "we have confirmed more judicial nominations than were confirmed in the entire first years of each of the last two presidents. Most of these nominees were conservative Republicans, and virtually all were approved unanimously . . . because the Senate believed these nominees for lifetime appointment would put justice and the law ahead of rigid ideology." Leahy promised action in 2002, but added: "The president can help by choosing more nominees primarily for their fairness and abilities instead of for their ideology."

Rehnquist's report also restated his concern about federal judicial salaries, which ranged in 2001 from $ 133,492 for a magistrate judge to $ 186,300 for the chief justice. These salaries, many judges complain, are far below what top lawyers make in private practice. That gap, combined with long, uncertain waits for confirmation during which lawyers often cannot take on new clients, "significantly restricts" the federal judiciary's ability to recruit attorneys from private practice, Rehnquist wrote.

Rehnquist also noted that an independent study of the courts after Sept. 11 found that "security needs continue to grow." The Supreme Court is urging Congress to fund a $ 110 million modernization program for its aging building, including safety and security upgrades that "should not be delayed," he wrote.

Missing Appointments

By Peter Roff
United Press International

REV_00088109

Thursday, January 3, 2002

In his 2001 end-of-year report on the state of the federal judiciary, U.S. Chief Justice William Rehnquist came down hard on the Senate, excoriating its failure to confirm federal judicial nominees.

This is not a new theme for the chief justice. He made a similar admonition in his 1997 report. Then, however, it was directed at Senate Republicans who were not, in Rehnquist's view, moving quickly enough to confirm Clinton judicial nominees.

The process of confirming presidential nominees to the federal bench has always been contentious when a party other than the president's has controlled the Senate. Because federal judges, especially those at the appellate level or higher, have so much power to make law from the bench, ideologues of all stripes are always watchful for nominees who might shift the balance of a particular court.

This tension was especially evident from 1986 forward.

From that point, the Democrat-controlled Senate took on President Ronald Reagan over judicial nominations. And, when President George Bush the elder replaced Reagan in the Oval Office, the conflict continued as Democrats feared the federal bench would be remade in a way that allowed conservative legal philosophy to dominate judicial opinions.

The high watermark in that struggle was the battle to confirm Clarence Thomas as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Only the second black to be named to the court, Thomas was embraced by conservatives and abhorred by liberals – even though he had been confirmed for a lower federal bench by an overwhelming majority just a few years earlier.

Much has been written about the battle for Thomas. It was, as many who covered the hearings agree, always about his judicial philosophy -- even when it seemed to be about something else.

After 1994, the GOP-led Senate was almost as tough on Clinton appointees to the federal bench, again not for reasons of political payback so much as over concerns about ideological trends among nominees -- especially to U.S. circuit courts where the dominant legal philosophy might be shifted in one direction or the other by a single appointment.

Judicial nominations were, especially in the Reagan and post-Reagan presidencies, games of high-stakes political poker. Other presidential appointments, however, did not receive the same kind of ideological scrutiny – until now.

Much of the way Washington works is based on the appearance of political niceties. The much-ballyhooed "comity of the Senate" is frequently invoked, even in the most trying of circumstances, to keep the process moving.

REV_00088110

Now the process has broken down.

The harsh political divisions that erupted during the Clinton years were sorely exacerbated by the post-election legal challenges to George W. Bush's victory. The Sept. 11 terror attack put the brakes for a short time on the ad hominem sniping that passed for reasoned political discourse.

As the New Year begins, most observers agree that the knives are once again sharpened and out and can be seen clearly in the confirmation process.

Many presidential and congressional scholars believe this new breakdown was inevitable. It might just as likely have occurred with a Democrat in the White House and Republicans in control of the Senate, but either way, the confirmation process has virtually ground to a halt.

The Constitution invests in the Senate the power to advise upon and confirm or reject presidential appointees. It is a check on the president's ability to stack his administration with favor-seekers, incompetents and political cronies.

Under Majority Leader Tom Daschle's, D-S.D., leadership, that power is being exercised ruthlessly.

Some suggest that this is a case of turnabout being fair play, partisan vindication -- or vengeance, depending on political perspective -- for the way the GOP-controlled Senate treated Clinton administration nominees between 1995 and 2000.

As a counter, Republican leaders say that in the case of Clinton nominees -- especially judges -- care was exercised t o base opposition on issues of competence and ethics, acknowledging the president's Constitutional prerogative to appoint whom he wanted to post in his administration.

True or not, Senate Democrats brought the idea that a nominee's ideology is now on the table to the forefront shortly after they took control of the process in 2001.

What had been behind-the-scenes, inside baseball became public spectacle.

There are now close to 200 Bush appointees awaiting confirmation. Many of them have not yet been given a hearing before the relevant Senate committee.

Holding up nominees is, as partisan strategists acknowledge, a way of sticking a senatorial thumb in a presidential eye. But for most of the latter half of the 20th Century, it was an extreme measure, not a general practice.

There are those who fear it is now so widespread as to cripple the administration's ability to carry out its duties.

In one example, Massachusetts Democrat Sen. John F. Kerry announced he was placing a hold on all non-judicial confirmations in retaliation for an anonymous hold that had been placed on a bipartisan Kerry/Bond small business relief package.

The move is high-stakes political gamesmanship, designed to break a logjam on the Kerry/Bond bill.

Less explainable is the failure of the Senate to act on nominees like Otto Reich, whom the president has asked to be Assistant Secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs.

A former U.S. ambassador to Venezuela and a Reagan appointee, Reich was named to the post on March 22, 2001. As of Jan. 3, 2002, he had still not come before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for a hearing.

According to many Capitol Hill insiders, the roadblock to moving ahead is Connecticut Democrat Sen. Christopher Dodd, who, they suggest, is looking to settle an old policy score by keeping Reich from getting the job.

In the 1980s, Dodd was a vocal opponent of the Reagan administration's Central America policy. History records that he was on the wrong side of the issue, at least as far as the outcomes are concerned.

The Nicaraguan people tossed the Dodd-supported Sandinistas from power in the first democratic election. In El Salvador, the country has become a generally stable and prosperous democracy. The political ambitions of the FMLN guerillas, Communists backed by the Soviet Union, have been largely thwarted.

Reich, who has been endorsed for the State Department post by nine former U.S. ambassadors to the region, was an important player in the implementation of the Reagan doctrine in Central America -- policies that Dodd strongly and vocally opposed.

Dodd has publicly accused Reich of being a terrorist sympathizer while others have made serious allegations about his conduct during his time in the Reagan administration. And because Dodd is blocking Reich from a hearing before the Senate, the nominee is being denied the opportunity to face his accusers and to hear and defend against the allegations.

Conservative supporters of the nominee have called this a terribly un-American way of doing things. They are calling on Dodd to allow a hearing to go forward, in a spirit of post-Sept. 11 bi-partisanship.

They believe the linkage to Sept. 11 is appropriate because the post to which he has been nominated is of some importance in the war against terror -- with Cuba falling under his purview. And while it may be that President Bush names Reich to the job in a recess appointment, they still want the hearing to go forward so that the issues may be resolved, one way or another.

The Reich case is but one example of what some see as the collapse of the confirmation process, which observers on both sides of the aisle agree is bad for America.

The political outcomes from the dispute cannot be forecast. If, Republicans say privately, the process is allowed to move forward, with all pending nominees given hearings and votes of the full Senate, then that will be sufficient to satisfy their concerns.

In the vision of the founders, a majority of senators should be allowed to reject a nominee on ideological grounds, putting their opposition on record for the voters to consider. There are few who will make the case that delays in the confirmation process -- if they are shields against political consequences of opposition on ideological grounds -- should be seen in the same light.

It is likely, political strategists say, that continued delays will show up in political ads in states, like Tom Daschle's South Dakota, that voted overwhelmingly for George W. Bush in 2000. But that is no guarantee that such a campaign will break the appointments logjam.

Hicks Ready to Step in to New Role on Nevada Federal Bench

The Associated Press
Wednesday, January 2, 2002

Nevada's newest federal judge said he is ready to step in and help his overburdened colleagues.

U.S. District Judge Larry R. Hicks will begin presiding over cases on Monday, three days before a formal installation ceremony. He took the oath of office Nov. 29.

President Bush nominated Hicks in August to replace U.S. District Judge Johnnie Rawlinson, who was elevated to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

U.S. Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., recommended Hicks to Bush, and Hicks' appointment was confirmed by the Senate in November.

He will be the sixth federal judge in the state. The lifetime federal court appointment carries an annual salary of $145,100.

Hicks was a partner in the Reno law firm of McDonald, Carano, Wilson, McCune, Bergin, Frankovich & Hicks. He was Washoe County district attorney from 1974 to 1978 and is a past president of the state bar association board of governors.

Hicks told the Las Vegas Sun on Monday that he had been apprehensive about the confirmation process. However, he said he was not asked his personal views or how he would vote on particular issues.

He said his 32 years as a lawyer and his personality will help him on the bench.

REV_00088113

"I'm comfortable with lawyers, with the litigation process and with trials," he said. "I'm anxious to take on my part of it all."

Clark County District Judge James Mahan in Las Vegas has been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee to fill the seventh and final seat on Nevada's federal bench. He awaits a vote by the full Senate.

Rehnquist Urges Action on Judicial Picks; Courts: The Chief Justice said Senate Democrats Should Schedule Votes Soon on Nominees for Federal Vacancies

By David Savage
The Los Angeles Times
Tuesday, January 1, 2002

Four years ago, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist chided the Senate Republicans for stalling on President Clinton's nominees to the federal courts.

"The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry, it should vote him up or vote him down," the chief justice said then in his year-end report on the federal judiciary.

Rehnquist repeated the admonition in a report issued today, but this time it was directed at Senate
Democrats. "When I spoke to this issue [as 1997 ended], there were 82 judicial vacancies," Rehnquist said. "When the Senate adjourned on [this] Dec. 20, there were 94 vacancies."

The three-tiered federal court system is supposed to have 862 judges.

President Bush nominated 80 judges during his first year in office, but only 28 won Senate confirmation.

"The Senate ought to act with reasonable promptness and to vote each nominee up or down," Rehnquist said.

Five years ago, Sen. Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont, then the ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, applauded Rehnquist's message and said he hoped it "will help shame" the Republicans into "clearing the backlog early next year."

Now chairman of the committee, Leahy issued a more equivocal statement pledging to "seek consensus and to move forward to fill remaining vacancies."

Like Sen. Orrin G. Hatch (R-Utah), his predecessor as chairman, Leahy has brought up before the committee only those proposed judges who have support from key senators from both parties.

REV_00088114

Quick action was possible in these cases, Leahy said, "because the Senate believed these nominees for lifetime appointments would put justice and the law ahead of rigid ideology."

So far, the Democrats have refused to schedule hearings on several of Bush's most prominent nominees to the U.S. Court of Appeals. They include Washington attorney John G. Roberts, a former clerk to Rehnquist, and attorney Miguel Estrada, who once clerked at the Supreme Court for Justice Anthony M. Kennedy.

University of Utah law professor Michael McConnell and Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Carolyn Kuhl, all of whom were nominated in the first half of last year, also have no hearing scheduled.

Nonetheless, Leahy pointed out that his committee had approved more judges in his six months of Democratic control than were approved during the first year of the presidencies of Clinton and the senior George Bush.

The chief justice mentioned no names in his report, but urged the Senate to schedule "up or down votes" on all the nominees within a reasonable period.

Besides confirming more judges to fill vacancies, Rehnquist also asked Congress to authorize more judges in California.

The U.S. 9th Circuit of Appeals, which reviews federal cases from the Western states, has seen its cases rise by 95% since the mid-1980s, he said. The circuit needs five additional judges, he said.

The trial courts in San Diego are swamped by drug and immigration cases, Rehnquist said.

"The judges there have the highest number of filings per judge of any federal district court in the nation," he said, and called upon Congress to authorize eight more judges for California's southernmost district.

Judges Delayed

Pittsburgh Post-Gazette
Thursday, January 3, 2002

Chief Justice William Rehnquist has offered a timely assist to the Republican minority in the U.S. Senate, which has been accusing Democrats of dragging their feet on confirming new federal judges.

And although the chief justice is a Republican appointee, there is nothing partisan about his plea that the Democratic-controlled Senate "act with reasonable promptness" on President Bush's judicial nominees and vote them "up or down" instead of ensnaring them in procedural delays.

The chief justice made similar pleas in the late 1990s when it was Bill Clinton's nominees who were being stalled by a Republican-controlled Senate. In both cases the chief justice warned that vacancies on federal trial and appellate courts were undermining the administration of justice. This time there is a post-Sept. 11 twist in the chief justice's plea for Senate action. "During times such as these, the role of the courts becomes even more important in order to enforce the rule of law," he said this week in his annual report on the state of the federal judiciary.

Predictably, Democrats and Republicans differ about the extent of the problem and whether the Democrats who control the Senate are engaged in payback for delays in the approval of Mr. Clinton's judicial nominees.

Democrats argue that the Senate has confirmed more Bush nominees this year than it did Clinton nominees in 1993, Mr. Clinton's first year in office. Republicans counter that on a percentage basis Mr. Clinton fared better, winning confirmation of 84 percent of his nominees compared to 42 percent for Mr. Bush.

What is indisputable is that there are 94 judicial vacancies, about 11 percent of all federal judgeships. Even if the federal courts didn't have to contend with litigation growing out of new anti-terrorist laws, those empty benches would be a scandal.

The Senate has yet to act on 23 nominations to federal appeals courts and 14 nominations to district courts, including Mr. Bush's choice of D. Brooks Smith, the chief U.S. district judge for Western Pennsylvania, for the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. While senators of both parties view judicial appointments as pieces in a political chess game, for lawyers and litigants more manpower means more expeditious justice.

Sen. Tom Daschle, the Democratic leader of the Senate, bristles when the White House calls him an obstructionist. He can do a lot to dispel that accusation by scheduling prompt action on judicial nominations when the Senate reconvenes Jan. 23.

Sixth Circuit Breaker

The Wall Street Journal
Thursday, January 3, 2001

So now we get it. The reason there's a dangerous 11% vacancy rate in the federal judiciary is Osama bin Laden. Why didn't we think of that? Maybe this also explains why Buffalo got 82 inches of snow over Christmas.

That, in essence, is the preposterous reply that Senate Judiciary Chairman Pat Leahy gave to Chief Justice William Rehnquist's gentle rebuke this week about the slow pace of Senate judicial confirmations. Senators "ought to act with reasonable promptness to vote each nominee up or down," the Chief Justice wrote in his annual state-of-the-Judiciary report, delivered to Congress on New Year's Day. "The Senate is not, of course, obliged to confirm any particular nominee. But it ought to act on each nominee and to do so within a reasonable time."

Sounds pretty reasonable: The President nominates and the Senate confirms or rejects. So get on with an up or down vote. Senator Leahy's response? It's been a "tumultuous year for the nation and also for the Senate," he explains. He promises to get back to work as soon as the recess is over.

We'll believe it when we see it. The record shows that the Vermont Democrat has perfected the art of the big stall, refusing to schedule so much as a hearing for many of Mr. Bush's nominees. Mr. Leahy is fond of saying that the Senate confirmed 28 judicial nominees in 2001. What he doesn't say is that most of those are lower-level district court judges, and that there are 37 more awaiting action by either the Judiciary Committee or the full Senate. Of these, 32 don't even have dates for hearings, the first step in the Senate's advice-and-consent process.

Leahy's Hostages/Nominees for the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals who can't get a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee, and their dates of nomination:

Deborah Cook (Ohio)	May 9
Jeff Sutton (Ohio)	May 9
Julia Gibbons (Tenn.)	Oct. 9
David McKeague (Mich.)	Nov. 8
Susan Neilson (Mich.)	Nov. 8
Henry Saad (Mich.)	Nov. 8
John Rogers (Ky.)	Dec. 19

To see what this means in the real world, consider the Sixth Circuit, which hears appeals from Michigan, Ohio, Tennessee and Kentucky. With eight openings, the 16-member court is operating at half strength. Its three-member panels handle close to 1,500 cases a year, or about five for every work day, and about 50% more than the average for panels on the other appellate courts. Four of those Sixth Circuit openings have been deemed judicial emergencies by the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, based on the number of years a judgeship has been open and the size of the court's caseload.

President Bush addressed this crisis with seven nominations to the Sixth Circuit last year, including two in his first batch of nominees last May 9. (See the nearby table.) And the Senate? Mr. Leahy has yet to grant a single hearing for a Sixth Circuit nominee.

Mr. Bush's nominees are mostly moderate conservatives, some of whom are already on the bench. Deborah Cook is a justice on the Ohio Supreme Court. David McKeague and Julia Gibbons are federal district judges. Jeff Sutton, a former solicitor general of Ohio, won a landmark disabilities case before the U.S. Supreme Court. John Rogers is an eminent law professor at the University of Kentucky. Susan Neilson is a judge on the Wayne County Circuit Court. Henry Saad sits on the Michigan Court of Appeals. If confirmed, Mr. Saad would be the first Arab-American on an appeals court.

The political problem here isn't the quality of the nominees but the fact that the Sixth Circuit includes the home state of Carl Levin. The Michigan Senator is seeking payback for two Bill Clinton nominees from Michigan whose nominations stalled in the GOP-controlled Senate. He's demanding "fairness," which we hear he is defining as a seat on the Sixth Circuit for one of his unsuccessful candidates and a federal district judgeship as a consolation prize for the other.

And so Senators Levin and Debbie Stabenow have "blue slipped" the President's three Sixth Circuit nominees from Michigan. Blue slips, which let a Senator blackball a judicial nominee from his state, are one of our least favorite Senate traditions. But both political parties have practiced it, and if one state's Senators get too obstructionist, a President always has the option of nominating a judge from another state in the circuit.

Or at least he did until Mr. Leahy came along. The Judiciary Chairman has redefined the meaning of senatorial courtesy by effectively extending Senator Levin's blue-slip power beyond Michigan to any nominee from any state in the Sixth Circuit. In other words, unless the President finds judgeships for the Michigan judges Senators Leahy and Levin support, he can forget about filling any vacancy on the Sixth Circuit. So much for the overburdened judiciary.

President Bush has put forward a group of highly qualified nominees for the Sixth Circuit, and there are many more well-qualified men and women among the 23 appeals court nominees and 14 district court nominees behind Mr. Leahy's blockade. At the very least, they deserve a hearing.

In a letter to the editor we published on December 13, Senator Leahy wrote that "Democrats have worked day after day to support the administration and to subsume partisanship." His treatment of the President's nominees to the Sixth Circuit tells a different story -- to wit, that Senate politics trumps the urgent need for a fully staffed federal judiciary.

NY Times Flip on Rehnquist Rebuke

Media Research Center
Wednesday, January 2, 2001

A pretty flagrant New Year's Day double standard at the New York Times. Four years ago when Chief Justice William Rehnquist chastised the Republican-controlled Senate for holding up judicial nominees, the New York Times showcased the complaint on its front page under the scolding headline: "Senate Imperils Judicial System, Rehnquist Says." But this year, when he issued the same complaint about the Democratic-controlled Senate, the Times put the story inside and gave Rehnquist's complaint just two paragraphs -- the tenth and eleventh ones. The headline: "Rehnquist Says Courts Risk Losing Private-Sector Nominees."

In both cases, Rehnquist's comments came in his annual year-end report, on the state of the judiciary, issued every December 31.

Four years ago, when 82 federal judgeships stood unfilled, Rehnquist asserted: "The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry, it should vote him up or vote him down." On December 31, 2001, with 94 judgeships vacant, Rehnquist employed similar language as he implored: "On behalf of the judiciary, I ask Congress to raise the salaries of federal judges, and I ask the Senate to schedule up or down votes on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after receiving the nomination....The Senate is not, of course, obliged to confirm any particular nominee....but I urge prompt attention to the challenge of bringing the federal judicial branch closer to full staffing

Rehnquist has remained consistent in chiding the Senate, no matter which party is in control, but not the New York Times.

Under the front page headline, "Senate Imperils Judicial System, Rehnquist Says," reporter John H. Cushman Jr. wrote the January 1, 1998 story. An excerpt:

In an unusual rebuke, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist today criticized the Senate for failing to move more quickly on judicial appointments, saying that the "vacancies cannot remain at such high levels indefinitely without eroding the quality of justice."

The Chief Justice made the statement in his annual year-end report of the state of the judiciary -- a 19-page document in which he also praised Congress for responding to other judicial concerns, like increasing judges' salaries and providing more money for operations of the courts. But he said that the major problem facing the judiciary was "too few judges and too much work" and that continuing inaction on nominees was imperiling the court system.

Chief Justice Rehnquist said delays by President Clinton in sending nominations to the Senate had contributed to the problem, but his main criticism fell on the Senate itself, which is responsible for approving or rejecting nominees to the Federal judiciary.

"The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry, it should vote him up or vote him down," the Chief Justice said.

Chief Justice Rehnquist and other judges have complained before about the problem of vacancies, but the Chief Justice's remarks today were especially pointed....

Senator Patrick J. Leahy of Vermont, the ranking Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, said he hoped the Chief Justice's report would "help shame the Senate into clearing the backlog." Mr. Leahy said more than 40 judicial nominees were kept on hold in 1997, some of them in limbo since 1995....

REV_00088119

END of Excerpt

But with Leahy now the Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the New York Times avoided criticism of him and focused its story on another aspect of Rehnquist's latest annual report. An excerpt from the January 1, 2002 story by Linda Greenhouse, headlined "Rehnquist Says Courts Risk Losing Private-Sector Nominees." The first four paragraphs followed by the tenth and eleventh ones:

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist warned today that a combination of relatively low salaries and a tortuous confirmation process was making the federal judiciary increasingly unappealing as a career move for lawyers in private practice.

The result, he said in his annual year-end report, is that federal judges are increasingly being recruited from among lawyers already in public service, working as public prosecutors or defenders, federal magistrate or bankruptcy judges, or serving on state courts.

"For them the pay is a modest improvement and the confirmation process at least does not damage their current income," the chief justice said.

He said the risk was that the judiciary would lose the perspective of lawyers who had spent their careers in the private sector, and would come to resemble European systems in which young lawyers choose to become judges in what is in effect a civil service system....

On the pace of confirmation for judicial nominees, Chief Justice Rehnquist noted that in past years, he had criticized a Republican-controlled Senate for delays in considering President Bill Clinton's nominees. "Now the political situation is exactly the reverse, but the same situation obtains," he said, noting that the Senate confirmed 28 judges during 2001 and adjourned without acting on 37 nominations.

"The Senate is not, of course, obliged to confirm any particular nominee," he said. "But it ought to act on each nominee and to do so within a reasonable time."...

Rehnquist Calls on Senate to Pick up Pace of Judicial Confirmations

CNN.com
Wednesday, January 2, 2002

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist is pressing senators to speed up judicial confirmations with a new urgency because of terrorism.

Rehnquist has complained before about slow confirmations, but he directed new, harsh criticism Tuesday at Democrats who have controlled the Senate since June and now decide whether and when to vote on President Bush's nominees.

"During times such as these, the role of the courts becomes even more important in order to enforce the rule of law," Rehnquist, a Republican, said in his annual report on the courts. "To continue functioning effectively and efficiently, however, the courts must be appropriately staffed."

There are 94 vacancies in the federal judiciary -- about 11 percent of the 853 district, trade and appeals court judgeships, court records show. That's the most openings at the start of a year since January 1994, when there were 118.

Rehnquist said senators "ought to act with reasonable promptness and to vote each nominee up or down." He also said the president should choose judges quickly and try to recruit private attorneys for judgeships.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vermont, defended the confirmation pace during what he called a "tumultuous year for the nation and also for the Senate."

Bush had more choices approved in 2001 than the past two presidents -- Democratic President Clinton and Bush's father before him -- each had in their first year in office, Leahy said.

Of Bush's 64 judicial nominations, 28 were confirmed, Senate records show. That compares with 27 Clinton judicial confirmations in 1993 and 15 in the first Bush administration in 1989.

Leahy said the Senate will work to fill remaining vacancies after the holiday break.

"The president can help by choosing more nominees primarily for their fairness and abilities, instead of for their ideology," Leahy said.

REV_00088100

White House spokeswoman Anne Womack said that with only about 43 percent of Bush's judicial nominations confirmed so far, "The president has done his part. Now it's time for the Senate to do theirs."

Hindering efforts to find good candidates for federal judgeships, Rehnquist said, are the "inadequacy of judicial pay I have spoken (of) again and again, without much result," and "the often lengthy and unpleasant nature of the confirmation process."

In his 16th annual report since becoming chief after his own difficult Senate confirmation, Rehnquist also discussed courthouse safety. An emergency preparedness office has been created for the federal courts, and a consultant has recommended tighter security at courthouses, background checks on employees and better protection for judges in and out of court.

In the meantime, Rehnquist said, Congress should give the Supreme Court more money for security.

Since the September 11 attacks, he said, federal courts "have gotten back to business, even if not business as usual."

Anthrax contamination forced a weeklong closing of the Supreme Court building, and justices heard arguments in another location for the first time since the building opened in 1935.

In addition, Rehnquist said, anthrax-related mail problems might affect the number of cases the court hears this year. Traditionally, justices review about 80 a year.

Rehnquist Says Courts Risk Losing Private-Sector Nominees

By Linda Greenhouse
The New York Times
Tuesday, January 1, 2002

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist warned today that a combination of relatively low salaries and a tortuous confirmation process was making the federal judiciary increasingly unappealing as a career move for lawyers in private practice.

The result, he said in his annual year-end report, is that federal judges are increasingly being recruited from among lawyers already in public service, working as public prosecutors or defenders, federal magistrate or bankruptcy judges, or serving on state courts.

"For them the pay is a modest improvement and the confirmation process at least does not damage their current income," the chief justice said.

He said the risk was that the judiciary would lose the perspective of lawyers who had spent their careers in the private sector, and would come to resemble European systems in which young lawyers choose to become judges in what is in effect a civil service system.

REV_00088101

"We have never had, and should not want, a judiciary composed only of those persons who are already in the public service," Chief Justice Rehnquist said, adding, "We must not drastically shrink the number of judicial nominees who have had substantial experience in private practice."

He said "reasonable people, not merely here but in Europe," believe that the European systems of career judges "simply do not command the respect and enjoy the independence of ours."

Federal judges, along with members of Congress, will receive a 3.4 percent cost-of-living increase on Jan. 1, resulting in the following judicial salaries: district judges, $150,000; court of appeals judges, $159,100; associate Supreme Court justices, $184,400; and the chief justice, $192,600.

In his report, Chief Justice Rehnquist did not say what he thought judicial salaries should be. He said that while judges were "grateful" for the cost-of-living increase, it "only keeps judges from falling further behind the median income of the profession."

An article in The New York Law Journal last week reported that some major New York City law firms were paying first-year lawyers as much as $145,000 a year, counting year-end bonuses as well as salary. Federal judges have long found it galling that their law clerks often surpass them in earnings within a year or two of completing the one- year clerkship.

On the pace of confirmation for judicial nominees, Chief Justice Rehnquist noted that in past years, he had criticized a Republican-controlled Senate for delays in considering President Bill Clinton's nominees. "Now the political situation is exactly the reverse, but the same situation obtains," he said, noting that the Senate confirmed 28 judges during 2001 and adjourned without acting on 37 nominations.

"The Senate is not, of course, obliged to confirm any particular nominee," he said. "But it ought to act on each nominee and to do so within a reasonable time."

In his report, the chief justice made passing reference to the events of Sept. 11, which resulted in the evacuation of the Supreme Court building, where judges from around the country had just assembled for the semiannual meeting of the Judicial Conference of the United States. The next month, the building was closed again after anthrax contamination was found in an off-site mail center, causing the justices to hold arguments for a week in a nearby federal courthouse.

Despite those disruptions, he said, "the judiciary can look back upon the year ended as one of accomplishments in the face of adversity."

Border Courts Overwhelmed

"Culpable! Culpable!" defendant Jose Cervantes Moreno blurts, loud enough for several potential jurors to hear. Most people in this part of West Texas understand enough Spanish to know he's saying, "Guilty! Guilty!"

U.S. District Judge Royal Furgeson can't believe it. Less than an hour into the workday, his court is in chaos. He had hoped to pick juries in a dozen criminal cases -- including Cervantes' -- for a visiting judge to try in the coming week.

But now Cervantes doesn't want a trial. He wants to switch his not-guilty plea to guilty. Like many defendants who appear before Furgeson, Cervantes doesn't speak English or understand his rights under U.S. law. He adds to the confusion by saying he was high on drugs and didn't know what he was doing when he drove across the U.S.-Mexico border with 145 pounds of marijuana. Furgeson sags. Legally, he can't accept a plea knowing that a defendant's judgment might have been impaired during the crime. Cervantes' court-appointed attorney buries his head in his hands.

Nothing comes easily here in Pecos, one of several federal courts along the southern border that are being overwhelmed by a flood of drug and immigration cases and a shortage of judges to handle them.

The volume forces judges to take shortcuts, at times accepting guilty pleas and imposing sentences en masse – an unheard-of approach in federal courts elsewhere. Civil cases are getting short shrift.

And there's no relief in sight. The Republican White House and the Democrat-led Senate continue to wrangle over judicial nominations despite the border-court problems and the war on terrorism, which Republicans say will require more judges to approve warrants and wiretap orders.

Caseloads in the five judicial districts along the Southwest border have ballooned in the seven years since U.S. law enforcement cracked down on illegal border crossings and the North American Free Trade Agreement eased trade restrictions between the United States and Mexico. An economic boon to both nations, the treaty also has increased opportunities for drug smuggling and illegal immigration. As border traffic rises, contradictory moves by the U.S. government have created a crisis in border-area courts:

* An initiative led by the Justice Department has nearly doubled the number of agents and prosecutors in the border jurisdictions of California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas to nearly 15,000. From 1994 through 2000, there was a 210% jump in criminal filings per judge in border-area courts.

Many of the cases involve Mexicans who are coming to the United States for a better life, but others are bringing drugs. In the Western District of Texas, which includes Pecos, the annual number of criminal cases per judge jumped from 101 to 404, a 300% increase. For Furgeson, the jump was even larger. His caseload rose 776%, from 51 in 1994 to 447 in 2000.

* Washington has not helped the courts keep up. There are supposed to be 56 trial judges in the border judicial districts in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California. Because of judges' deaths and retirements and gridlock in Washington over judicial nominations, there have been as many as nine vacancies in the past year. The Senate recently approved three border-court nominees, which reduced vacancies to six.

Federal judges, who are appointed for life, are nominated by the president and confirmed by the Senate.

The judiciary repeatedly has pressed in Washington for the vacancies to be filled and has urged Congress to add 18 judges' positions along the border. In 2000, Congress did add two permanent judgeships in Texas and one in New Mexico.

There are 94 vacancies on the 862-member federal bench. The Senate has approved 28 of President Bush's 64 nominees to federal trial and appeals courts; the remaining 36 nominations either are pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee or are about to be considered there. Seven of Bush's nominations have been for border-area courts, including three that have been confirmed.

Meanwhile, Democrats and Republicans continue to bicker over the pace of confirmations. In his annual report on the federal judiciary, Chief Justice William Rehnquist pleaded this week with Congress to set aside partisanship and move more quickly to fill judicial posts. Republicans accuse Democrats, who control the Senate, of slowing the process. Democrats say they've done a better job than Republicans did when they were in charge. During President Clinton's first year, the Senate approved 27 of 47 judicial nominees.

No time to think

Perhaps nowhere is the border courts' crisis more poignant than here in Pecos, where Furgeson is the only federal judge in a dusty, desolate judicial division encompassing 12,000 square miles, roughly the size of Massachusetts and Connecticut combined. The region covers 420 miles of the U.S.-Mexico border.

Many of those who wind up before Furgeson have risked death walking for days in the desert. To court, they bring communication problems and complex legal issues that create constant delays.

"It's like a waterfall," says Furgeson, whose yearly caseload is six times the national average of 78 for federal judges. "It never stops."

He has handled all of the cases since 2000, when a senior judge who had been helping him became too ill to continue. "One of the things a judge needs most is time to think," he says. "But when you're dealing with such volume, you don't have the time you know you need to think."

REV_00088104

For decades, the U.S.-Mexico border was as simple to cross as a small-town street. That changed during the 1980s, after U.S. authorities made it more difficult for drug dealers to use Florida as the main smuggling point for Colombian cocaine. Several Mexican drug rings stepped in and set up routes across the 2,000-mile border.

In 1994, the Justice Department launched the Southwest Border Initiative, a crackdown on illegal immigrants and drug smugglers. In 2000 alone, the effort resulted in more than 1.6 million arrests of illegal aliens. Drug seizures in 2000 included nearly 2.2 million pounds of marijuana and more than 38,000 pounds of cocaine.

Perils on the border

Law enforcement's approach has been simple: close the accessible routes and leave the most treacherous territory as the only way in. However, thousands of drug smugglers and illegal immigrants are undeterred. They cross mountainous high desert terrain that is as inhospitable to them as it is to the law enforcers who patrol it.

Illegal immigrants often are abandoned with little food or water by "coyotes," corrupt guides. "Backpackers," Mexicans hired to carry 50 or more pounds of marijuana, usually are as ill-equipped. "Out here, we find ourselves putting life over law," Border Patrol agent Fred Hollenbeck says.

Cases involving illegal immigrants caught sneaking across the border usually are routine. But some law-enforcement actions here are raising significant constitutional issues. The Supreme Court ruled in 2000 that agents cannot squeeze bus passengers' luggage in search of drugs. The volume of traffic increases the odds that agents will encounter legally complicated scenarios. In Texas, the number of cars traveling from Mexico jumped from 32.2 million in 1994 to 41.5 million in 2000. The number of commercial trucks rolling into the USA rose from 660,000 to 2.4 million during that period.

Other hot legal issues, such as racial profiling, are more complex here and so take longer to resolve. Prosecutors have argued that experienced Border Patrol agents can tell what part of Mexico drivers or passengers are from by their dress or haircut. But the courts have ruled that ethnicity cannot be the sole reason for a stop.

In carrying out random stops, Border Patrol agents often operate on instinct. They stop drivers who appear nervous or who don't look like tourists, as well as vehicles that appear weighted down.

"We are at ground zero for the Fourth Amendment," Furgeson says, referring to the protection against unreasonable searches and seizures.

The traveling judge

REV_00088105

Furgeson is assigned to Midland, where he has an equally busy docket. When he was appointed to the bench by Clinton in 1994, he also was given responsibility for the Pecos court as a traveling judge, a throwback to the days when jurists covered circuits by horseback.

He spends half of every month in Pecos, a city of 9,500 known for its rodeo. Before Furgeson heads there, he fills a cooler with broccoli and frozen dinners that he cooks in a microwave in his chambers.

Distances in the division also pose a hardship. The judge and his staff drive nearly 100 miles from Midland southwest to Pecos and stay for a week at a time. Three prosecutors and three public defenders travel a similar distance north from Alpine, where they are based. Jurors drive up to 150 miles to court.

The hardest part of the job, Furgeson says, is listening to the defendants' life stories. Many are poor, uneducated Mexicans who smuggle drugs in exchange for payments that equal half a year's wages for them. Others are so desperate that they follow animal paths through the mountains with children in tow.

"You don't get a sense that the people (appearing) in front of you are responsible for the planning and execution of this avalanche of drugs coming into this country," Furgeson says in a soft drawl.

Because the law requires trials in criminal cases within 70 days of indictment, border judges are streamlining complex criminal procedures. They offer what court personnel call "blue-light specials": breaks in prison time for defendants who waive time-consuming pre-sentencing reports.

Furgeson says he fears that the rush to judgment might be at an increasing cost to justice -- as does Carolyn King, chief judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit. In 1999, she came up with a short-term solution to the crisis. Several judges, mainly from Louisiana, volunteer to help judges like Furgeson by trying cases.

The U.S. Judicial Conference, the policymaking body for federal judges, wants Congress to create nine new permanent judgeships and nine temporary positions on the border -- and fill existing vacancies.

In Pecos, after huddling with his lawyer and a court interpreter, Cervantes, 24, wants to admit his guilt. However, he says, "I was doped up when I did it. I did not know what I was doing."

The judge can't sign off on a such a caveat, nor can he hold a trial because Cervantes' outburst has tainted the day's jury pool. He orders a psychological exam and calls the next case.

"I realize I'm not trying (Panamanian strongman Manuel) Noriega or (Mafia boss John) Gotti," Furgeson says later. "But I can't keep this up. I'm running on fumes."

Chief Justice Rehnquist Calls on Senate to Pick up Pace of Judicial Confirmations

By Gina Holland
The Associated Press
Tuesday, January 1, 2002

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist is pressing senators to speed up judicial confirmations with a new urgency because of terrorism.

Rehnquist has complained before about slow confirmations, but he directed new, harsh criticism Tuesday at Democrats who have controlled the Senate since June and now decide whether and when to vote on President Bush's nominees.

"During times such as these, the role of the courts becomes even more important in order to enforce the rule of law," Rehnquist, a Republican, said in his annual report on the courts. "To continue functioning effectively and efficiently, however, the courts must be appropriately staffed." There are 94 vacancies in the federal judiciary - about 11 percent of the 853 district, trade and appeals court judgeships, court records show. That's the most openings at the start of a year since January 1994, when there were 118.

Rehnquist said senators "ought to act with reasonable promptness and to vote each nominee up or down." He also said the president should choose judges quickly and try to recruit private attorneys for judgeships.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., defended the confirmation pace during what he called a "tumultuous year for the nation and also for the Senate."

Bush had more choices approved in 2001 than the past two presidents - Democratic President Clinton and Bush's father before him - each had in their first year in office, Leahy said.

Of Bush's 64 judicial nominations, 28 were confirmed, Senate records show. That compares with 27 Clinton judicial confirmations in 1993 and 15 in the first Bush administration in 1989.

Leahy said the Senate will work to fill remaining vacancies after the holiday break.

"The president can help by choosing more nominees primarily for their fairness and abilities, instead of for ideology," Leahy said.

White House spokeswoman Anne Womack said that with only about 43 percent of Bush's judicial nominations confirmed so far, "The president has done his part. Now it's time for the Senate to do theirs."

Hindering efforts to find good candidates for federal judgeships, Rehnquist said, are the "inadequacy of judicial pay I have spoken (of) again and again, without much result," and "the

vacancies on 1/4/2001 and I think two occurred later in January. AO US Courts had 81 on 1/8/01 and Gilbert Merritt took senior status on is it ok to mention a WH official name when talking about actual events. for instance, activities for the Forbes campaign included a Baptist Minister Roundtable with Marc Scott from the White House Office of Faith Based and Community Initiatives.

it also mentions "a call with Vice President Cheney and Republican governors, durig which the govers received a briefing on the President's energy plan before it was publicly announced. The office also arranged for Larry Lindsey, assistant to the Presidetn for economic affairs, to address the National Association of State Treausers.

Subject: Chairman's report

I caught another issue- under a section called "Expanding the Party"- it says the following:

"The division also initiated Full Impact, a new RNC program designed to coodinate our Republican African-American outreach efforts. We are grateful for the cooperation of the staffs of the White House Office of Public Liaison and Rep. J.C. Watts."

do you think that should be removed too?

Hi Rachel
Do you have a current list of all outstanding judicial nominees? I have various lists but not all in one place. This would be helpful as we prepare our strategy. Thanks.

For DC fundraisers for candidates and committees, they often ask us for a list of senior staff that they should invite. If they invite staff, are they allowed to attend without it being considered a gift? For instance, Jeb Bush's office invited several WH employees to the reception/dinner that the President is attending. Is it fine for them to attend?

thanks

My reimbursement questions were unrelated to political travel, so that line of inquiry is no help. I will defer to the expertise of Mr. Kavanaugh as regards use of Government resources for political purposes.

Moose- I talked to Kim Douglas in Management and Administration. Is Counsel's Office still working to find a standard reimbursement rate for Carpet? Since there will most likely be more political activity this year, I wanted to check. I have been making sure that Ken does not use carpet for political purposes until now. It would be nice if he could and then just make sure the RNC reimburses. thanks

I agree with Brett's analysis. We should scrupulously avoid using Government resources in connection with political activity, except as is specifically provided for by law.

Subject: Re: Carpet

If he is meeting with a political organization (RNC, House Republican campaign committee, Senate Republican campaign committee, candidate's campaign committee) about specific election strategy for the 2002 elections (finding candidates, campaign message, raising money), then that falls into a political category where he should not use carpet. Sorry about this; I know it is a constant headache. One way to think about it as shorthand is: What is purpose of the group to which Ken is speaking? If purpose of group is to elect a specific candidate or slate of candidates, or to raise money for political candidates or political activity such as advertising, then that is when he should not use carpet. Note that if he were to use carpet for something later determined to be political, the remedy would be RNC/political organization reimbursement for costs. We are happy to sign off on these in advance so that we, not your office, is open to criticism in unlikely event of a misjudgment. We can guarantee a same-day turnaround on these if need be. MIght be wise. I also would talk to RNC about having a car Ken can use when going to clearly political events to make your lives easier. (Note that the reason the President and some others can use official cars when going to political events is the security exception to rules, but that exception does not apply here.)
(I have cc'ed Moose to get his thoughts on this. Moose, let me know.)

Ken would like some concrete guidelines on when he can use White House cars for his meetings. He does not use them to go to the RNC or airport, etc. for meetings that are clearly political like fundraisers, but sometimes he has meetings at the capitol hill club or the committees that are somewhat unclear. Like, he often meets with Republican chief of staffs or friendly lobbyists at the NRCC to discuss the president's message/agenda. is ok to use carpet to get there for those? thanks that is it for tonight.

Subject: Education State x State -- If You Didn't Get all 52

I'm hearing that the email system randomly decided not to deliver some of the EIGHT emails sent out earlier. They carried attachments with talking points for all 50 states, DC and Puerto Rico.

If you did not get all the emails and attachments and need them, please let me know ASAP and I'll resend.

Thanks.
