Subject: Education State x State -- If You Didn't Get all 52

I'm hearing that the email system randomly decided not to deliver some of the EIGHT emails sent out earlier. They carried attachments with talking points for all 50 states, DC and Puerto Rico.

If you did not get all the emails and attachments and need them, please let me know ASAP and I'll resend.

Thanks.

Did somebody work on a presidential document reallocating responsibilities within DoD, giving the responsibilities of the Asst Sec'y for SOLIC to the Secretary of the Army?

PPO now wants to undo this because they're ready to fill the SOLIC position.

Subject: Re:

That's correct -- the fundraiser would be for the Coalition and not their PAC.

They would be charging for the small event but Ari wouldn't be involved in soliciting the money.

The subject matter of Ari's speeches on Sunday wouldn't be any different than any other group he would address.

The personal plane is owned by Ned Siegel who is one of the Vice Chairmen of the Coalition. He is willing to pay personally for Ari's roundtrip travel or the Coalition will reimburse Siegel for the transportation.

This kind of stuff makes me nervous. I want to be more that cautious that Ari doesn't do anything he shouldn't.. I'm not at all for gray areas so I wan't to error on the side of caution. If Ari shouldn't be attending a fundraising event of their own, I want to let them know sooner rather than later.

Subject: Education State x State -- If You Didn't Get all 52

I'm hearing that the email system randomly decided not to deliver some of the EIGHT emails sent out earlier. They carried attachments with talking points for all 50 states, DC and Puerto Rico.

If you did not get all the emails and attachments and need them, please let me know ASAP and I'll resend.

Thanks.

Subject: Education State x State -- If You Didn't Get all 52

I'm hearing that the email system randomly decided not to deliver some of the EIGHT emails sent out earlier. They carried attachments with talking points for all 50 states, DC and Puerto Rico.

If you did not get all the emails and attachments and need them, please let me know ASAP and I'll resend.

Thanks.

Okay, I'm back to the Republican Jewish Coalition request for Ari. I spoke with them this morning to find out specifically what they want. They want Ari to come down on Friday evening or Saturday to Palm Beach, Florida. On Saturday night they would have a small private high dollar fundraising dinner (with 15-20 couples) with Ari. (They are a 501(c)(4) non-profit organization.) On Sunday they would have two large events w/Ari to help raise membership and get the President's agenda out. Each of these events would have about 250 people in attendance. Are any of the above events a problem?

Also, they are offering travel in a privately owned plane (not a corporate plane). Can Ari do this or must he fly commercial?

I defer to you guys on this one, i.e. whether it's possible to obey the no-fundraising rule here.

My understanding is that this entity is not a political organization although it does have a PAC. Assuming that the fundraiser is for the coalition rather than the PAC, Ari's attendance would have to be official in order to get his travel paid for. There are general restrictions on fundraising in an official capacity, so ARI would not want to be engaged in fundraising for the entity. He would have to give official speeches. Why is this an appropriate forum for Ari to give speeches about the administration's programs? Lastly, whose plane would he be traveling on and who would be paying for it?

DIVISION ON TAX INCREASES

"Daschle hasn't a leg to stand on, and his election-year opening salvo should be seen for just what it is: partisan politics at its worst."

--Manchester Union Leader Editorial, 1/8/02

Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for tax cuts. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Just a few examples of Democrats who disagree with Senator Tom Daschle's economic theory on tax cuts:

Senator John Breaux (D-LA): "I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA): "Twenty percent of the Democratic Senate caucus voted for the tax cut. Over $1 trillion dollars of that tax cut has yet not gone into effect. My view is that we ought to stay the course...I think it's good policy to let people keep more of their money." (CNN Late Edition, 1/6/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), who co-sponsored the tax cut, said Mr. Daschle's comments made neither political nor economic sense. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA): "Maybe it's at a level my brain can't reach. How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?" (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokesman for Senator Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana said he "can't imagine that she would advocate delaying or repealing" the tax cut. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokeswoman for Senator Max Cleland said the Georgia Democrat "is not interested in revisiting the tax cut." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD), through a spokesperson, said "that he sees no reason to regret his vote for the tax cut."

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, who usually stands shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Daschle against the White House on budget questions, said Mr. Gephardt wanted to stay out of the "Washington blame game." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Los Angeles Times editorial: "Daschle's charge is at least half-wrong. He also offers no way to fix the situation.

For DC fundraisers for candidates and committees, they often ask us for a list of senior staff that they should invite. If they invite staff, are they allowed to attend without it being considered a gift? For instance, Jeb Bush's office invited several WH employees to the reception/dinner that the President is attending. Is it fine for them to attend?

"Daschle hasn't a leg to stand on, and his election-year opening salvo should be seen for just what it is: partisan politics at its worst."

--Manchester Union Leader Editorial, 1/8/02

Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for tax cuts. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Just a few examples of Democrats who disagree with Senator Tom Daschle's economic theory on tax cuts:

Senator John Breaux (D-LA): "I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA): "Twenty percent of the Democratic Senate caucus voted for the tax cut. Over $1 trillion dollars of that tax cut has yet not gone into effect. My view is that we ought to stay the course...I think it's good policy to let people keep more of their money." (CNN Late Edition, 1/6/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), who co-sponsored the tax cut, said Mr. Daschle's comments made neither political nor economic sense. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA): "Maybe it's at a level my brain can't reach. How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?" (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokesman for Senator Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana said he "can't imagine that she would advocate delaying or repealing" the tax cut. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokeswoman for Senator Max Cleland said the Georgia Democrat "is not interested in revisiting the tax cut." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD), through a spokesperson, said "that he sees no reason to regret his vote for the tax cut."

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, who usually stands shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Daschle against the White House on budget questions, said Mr. Gephardt wanted to stay out of the "Washington blame game." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Los Angeles Times editorial: "Daschle's charge is at least half-wrong. He also offers no way to fix the situation.

DIVISION ON TAX INCREASES

"Daschle hasn't a leg to stand on, and his election-year opening salvo should be seen for just what it is: partisan politics at its worst."

--Manchester Union Leader Editorial, 1/8/02

Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for tax cuts. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Just a few examples of Democrats who disagree with Senator Tom Daschle's economic theory on tax cuts:

Senator John Breaux (D-LA): "I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA): "Twenty percent of the Democratic Senate caucus voted for the tax cut. Over $1 trillion dollars of that tax cut has yet not gone into effect. My view is that we ought to stay the course...I think it's good policy to let people keep more of their money." (CNN Late Edition, 1/6/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), who co-sponsored the tax cut, said Mr. Daschle's comments made neither political nor economic sense. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA): "Maybe it's at a level my brain can't reach. How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?" (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokesman for Senator Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana said he "can't imagine that she would advocate delaying or repealing" the tax cut. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokeswoman for Senator Max Cleland said the Georgia Democrat "is not interested in revisiting the tax cut." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD), through a spokesperson, said "that he sees no reason to regret his vote for the tax cut."

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, who usually stands shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Daschle against the White House on budget questions, said Mr. Gephardt wanted to stay out of the "Washington blame game." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Los Angeles Times editorial: "Daschle's charge is at least half-wrong. He also offers no way to fix the situation.

DIVISION ON TAX INCREASES

"Daschle hasn't a leg to stand on, and his election-year opening salvo should be seen for just what it is: partisan politics at its worst."

--Manchester Union Leader Editorial, 1/8/02

Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for tax cuts. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Just a few examples of Democrats who disagree with Senator Tom Daschle's economic theory on tax cuts:

Senator John Breaux (D-LA): "I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA): "Twenty percent of the Democratic Senate caucus voted for the tax cut. Over $1 trillion dollars of that tax cut has yet not gone into effect. My view is that we ought to stay the course...I think it's good policy to let people keep more of their money." (CNN Late Edition, 1/6/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), who co-sponsored the tax cut, said Mr. Daschle's comments made neither political nor economic sense. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA): "Maybe it's at a level my brain can't reach. How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?" (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokesman for Senator Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana said he "can't imagine that she would advocate delaying or repealing" the tax cut. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokeswoman for Senator Max Cleland said the Georgia Democrat "is not interested in revisiting the tax cut." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD), through a spokesperson, said "that he sees no reason to regret his vote for the tax cut."

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, who usually stands shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Daschle against the White House on budget questions, said Mr. Gephardt wanted to stay out of the "Washington blame game." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Los Angeles Times editorial: "Daschle's charge is at least half-wrong. He also offers no way to fix the situation.

it. it's okay for me to go, isn't it? thx--amh

These photos are fine legally. I also informed Judge of this, and he is fine.

I should have been more clear....we discussed "photos taking place in the WH." I mentioned the Oval - but, she said it occured everywhere, depending on the particular president's schedule.

She said that this included both incumbants and candidates - we did a variation of this twice this year (Schundler & Early). Though this also included time with the press which would be unnecc. if we were just doing photos.

I spoke to the President's diarist - she told me that Oval Office photo ops w/ candidates have precedent (they were done during the last three administrations). However, she could not provide me with details b/c the search is too vague.

How do you want to proceed?

being planned for his departure so that we can perhaps consolidate plans or put something in the works.

Along with Noel, I vote for 11:30am. It will take a while to get there, be seated, order, etc., with this large a group, and I worry that if we go at 1pm it is just going to go too late into the afternoon. Otherwise, we could try and think of another place.

This one falls btwn the cracks: a friend of mine in KS has a very troubling immigration problem. They need to apply for political asylum and are pursuing this course in KS. The local Congressman wants to write the AG about the matter and they have asked me to call over there to Ayers/Israelite and see if there is anything they can within the confines of legal protocol.

Is there a problem with me asking them to look into this sad ordeal?

Please take a moment to read the Alison Mitchell story in this morning's NY Times headlined "A Wary Rank and File Watch Daschle's Attack." The article shows how rank and file Democrats disagree with Daschle. (The article is attached below).

One key point in the article: "Some liberal Democrats are even privately complaining that their party leaders are making a mistake by focusing on the deficit and sounding like accountants at a time when they should be promoting plans for putting people back to work."

HEADLINE: Political Memo;
A Wary Rank and File Watch Daschle's Attack

BYLINE: By ALISON MITCHELL

BODY:
Wondering why Senator Tom Daschle, the majority leader, attacked President Bush's $1.35 trillion tax cut last week, but did not call for it to be changed? Just listen to a few of the 12 Senate Democrats who voted for the cut.

Senator Zell Miller of Georgia is openly questioning the political smarts of his party leader and bristles at Mr. Daschle's charge that the tax cut probably likely worsened the recession. "Maybe it's at a level that my brain can't reach," Mr. Miller said. "How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?"

Senators John B. Breaux of Louisiana and Dianne Feinstein of California have defended their votes on television talks shows.

And Senator Robert G. Torricelli of New Jersey said today that he might have reconsidered his vote for the tax cut last spring -- had he known the country was about to face a terror strike, war and recession.

Even so, Mr. Torricelli said, "I think to advance changing the tax reduction legislation in the midst of recession isn't good economics and it's worse politics."

Such wariness is a sign of the deep divisions within the Democratic party and the daunting challenge facing Mr. Daschle.

For every Democrat who fears revisiting last year's tax cut fight, there is another who insists that the party has an obligation to call for freezing or rolling back part of the tax cut for the very wealthiest Americans to pay for more domestic security and Democratic priorities like a prescription drug benefit or more education spending.

"We're not talking about raising taxes," said Representative Jan Schakowsky, an Illinois Democrat. "We're talking about stopping future tax cuts for the wealthiest of taxpayers."

Still, Mr. Bush's approval ratings are stratospheric right now and even Democrats sympathetic to freezing part of the tax cut remember how Ronald Reagan hammered their party as big taxers and spenders.

Tax debates can be treacherous ground for Democrats, they say, particularly when facing a popular Republican president, and they are determined not to let Mr. Bush revive old images of their party.

"The Republicans and the White House will demagogue this like hell," said Representative David R. Obey, a Wisconsin Democrat. "It's right for Democrats to be careful."

Being careful means buying time by speaking in terms of fiscal discipline and waiting for the public to turn its attention from the war to the faltering economy.

"The war will wind down here and then people will take a hard look at what's happening to the finances of this country," said Senator Byron L. Dorgan, a North Dakota Democrat.

To help focus the public's attention in this year of mid-term elections, Democrats will be doing their best to strike the same themes as Mr. Daschle: that the federal government is once again spending more than it takes in and that this will require painful choices.

President Bush, the Democrats will ruefully intone, never spoke about these painful choices but said only that federal surpluses were so plentiful that tax cuts, debt reduction and programs like prescription drug benefits were all affordable.

And the Democrats will say it is up to Mr. Bush to show presidential leadership and point the way to renewed surpluses.

"The Republicans have dug this hole," said Thomas S. Kahn, the minority staff director on the House Budget Committee. "It's now their responsibility to explain how they intend to fill it up.

"We look forward with great interest to the president's budget and State of the Union address," he said.

The Democrats have used this tactic successfully before, when Mr. Bush's father was president and pledging "no new taxes," even as the country was awash in deficits.

Then, too, the Democrats said that easing the deficit required presidential leadership, and they waited the senior Mr. Bush out, until he agreed to raise taxes in 1990.

This time, though, they are facing George Bush's son, who came away convinced that his father's chief political mistake was reneging on his pledge -- and so is unlikely to make the same move.

Some liberal Democrats are even privately complaining that their party leaders are making a mistake by focusing on the deficit and sounding like accountants at a time when they should be promoting plans for putting people back to work.

Still, at the very least, Democrats say, their focus on the deficit will allow them to resist any further long-term reductions in tax rates when the bitter debate over an economic stimulus package resumes.

Mr. Bush and other Republicans have been pushing hard for the measure to accelerate income tax cuts. Democrats have countered with short-term tax breaks for businesses that get people back to work and increase their payrolls.

Ultimately, standing pat carries risks for Democrats too. No longer in the minority, Mr. Daschle has responsibilities to show that he will not just block the president's program, but join Mr. Bush in governing. Mr. Daschle will eventually have to produce some budget plan that unifies his fractious party and pass it though the Senate.

Mr. Bush is already working to portray Mr. Daschle as an obstructionist. And Republicans say they will try to make the 2002 election a referendum on Mr. Daschle's role as a roadblock to the president's programs.

Indeed, Representative Thomas M. Davis III of Virginia, who heads the Republican re-election effort in the House, said that his candidates would argue to voters "it's the Democrats who are holding it up. Until they deliver a Republican Congress these matters won't be solved." http://www.nytimes.com

Please take a moment to read the Alison Mitchell story in this morning's NY Times headlined "A Wary Rank and File Watch Daschle's Attack." The article shows how rank and file Democrats disagree with Daschle. (The article is attached below).

One key point in the article: "Some liberal Democrats are even privately complaining that their party leaders are making a mistake by focusing on the deficit and sounding like accountants at a time when they should be promoting plans for putting people back to work."

HEADLINE: Political Memo;
A Wary Rank and File Watch Daschle's Attack

BYLINE: By ALISON MITCHELL

BODY:
Wondering why Senator Tom Daschle, the majority leader, attacked President Bush's $1.35 trillion tax cut last week, but did not call for it to be changed? Just listen to a few of the 12 Senate Democrats who voted for the cut.

Senator Zell Miller of Georgia is openly questioning the political smarts of his party leader and bristles at Mr. Daschle's charge that the tax cut probably likely worsened the recession. "Maybe it's at a level that my brain can't reach," Mr. Miller said. "How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?"

Senators John B. Breaux of Louisiana and Dianne Feinstein of California have defended their votes on television talks shows.

And Senator Robert G. Torricelli of New Jersey said today that he might have reconsidered his vote for the tax cut last spring -- had he known the country was about to face a terror strike, war and recession.

Even so, Mr. Torricelli said, "I think to advance changing the tax reduction legislation in the midst of recession isn't good economics and it's worse politics."

Such wariness is a sign of the deep divisions within the Democratic party and the daunting challenge facing Mr. Daschle.

For every Democrat who fears revisiting last year's tax cut fight, there is another who insists that the party has an obligation to call for freezing or rolling back part of the tax cut for the very wealthiest Americans to pay for more domestic security and Democratic priorities like a prescription drug benefit or more education spending.

"We're not talking about raising taxes," said Representative Jan Schakowsky, an Illinois Democrat. "We're talking about stopping future tax cuts for the wealthiest of taxpayers."

Still, Mr. Bush's approval ratings are stratospheric right now and even Democrats sympathetic to freezing part of the tax cut remember how Ronald Reagan hammered their party as big taxers and spenders.

Tax debates can be treacherous ground for Democrats, they say, particularly when facing a popular Republican president, and they are determined not to let Mr. Bush revive old images of their party.

"The Republicans and the White House will demagogue this like hell," said Representative David R. Obey, a Wisconsin Democrat. "It's right for Democrats to be careful."

Being careful means buying time by speaking in terms of fiscal discipline and waiting for the public to turn its attention from the war to the faltering economy.

"The war will wind down here and then people will take a hard look at what's happening to the finances of this country," said Senator Byron L. Dorgan, a North Dakota Democrat.

To help focus the public's attention in this year of mid-term elections, Democrats will be doing their best to strike the same themes as Mr. Daschle: that the federal government is once again spending more than it takes in and that this will require painful choices.

President Bush, the Democrats will ruefully intone, never spoke about these painful choices but said only that federal surpluses were so plentiful that tax cuts, debt reduction and programs like prescription drug benefits were all affordable.

And the Democrats will say it is up to Mr. Bush to show presidential leadership and point the way to renewed surpluses.

"The Republicans have dug this hole," said Thomas S. Kahn, the minority staff director on the House Budget Committee. "It's now their responsibility to explain how they intend to fill it up.

"We look forward with great interest to the president's budget and State of the Union address," he said.

The Democrats have used this tactic successfully before, when Mr. Bush's father was president and pledging "no new taxes," even as the country was awash in deficits.

Then, too, the Democrats said that easing the deficit required presidential leadership, and they waited the senior Mr. Bush out, until he agreed to raise taxes in 1990.

This time, though, they are facing George Bush's son, who came away convinced that his father's chief political mistake was reneging on his pledge -- and so is unlikely to make the same move.

Some liberal Democrats are even privately complaining that their party leaders are making a mistake by focusing on the deficit and sounding like accountants at a time when they should be promoting plans for putting people back to work.

Still, at the very least, Democrats say, their focus on the deficit will allow them to resist any further long-term reductions in tax rates when the bitter debate over an economic stimulus package resumes.

Mr. Bush and other Republicans have been pushing hard for the measure to accelerate income tax cuts. Democrats have countered with short-term tax breaks for businesses that get people back to work and increase their payrolls.

Ultimately, standing pat carries risks for Democrats too. No longer in the minority, Mr. Daschle has responsibilities to show that he will not just block the president's program, but join Mr. Bush in governing. Mr. Daschle will eventually have to produce some budget plan that unifies his fractious party and pass it though the Senate.

Mr. Bush is already working to portray Mr. Daschle as an obstructionist. And Republicans say they will try to make the 2002 election a referendum on Mr. Daschle's role as a roadblock to the president's programs.

Indeed, Representative Thomas M. Davis III of Virginia, who heads the Republican re-election effort in the House, said that his candidates would argue to voters "it's the Democrats who are holding it up. Until they deliver a Republican Congress these matters won't be solved." http://www.nytimes.com

Please take a moment to read the Alison Mitchell story in this morning's NY Times headlined "A Wary Rank and File Watch Daschle's Attack." The article shows how rank and file Democrats disagree with Daschle. (The article is attached below).

One key point in the article: "Some liberal Democrats are even privately complaining that their party leaders are making a mistake by focusing on the deficit and sounding like accountants at a time when they should be promoting plans for putting people back to work."

HEADLINE: Political Memo;
A Wary Rank and File Watch Daschle's Attack

BYLINE: By ALISON MITCHELL

BODY:
Wondering why Senator Tom Daschle, the majority leader, attacked President Bush's $1.35 trillion tax cut last week, but did not call for it to be changed? Just listen to a few of the 12 Senate Democrats who voted for the cut.

Senator Zell Miller of Georgia is openly questioning the political smarts of his party leader and bristles at Mr. Daschle's charge that the tax cut probably likely worsened the recession. "Maybe it's at a level that my brain can't reach," Mr. Miller said. "How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?"

Senators John B. Breaux of Louisiana and Dianne Feinstein of California have defended their votes on television talks shows.

And Senator Robert G. Torricelli of New Jersey said today that he might have reconsidered his vote for the tax cut last spring -- had he known the country was about to face a terror strike, war and recession.

Even so, Mr. Torricelli said, "I think to advance changing the tax reduction legislation in the midst of recession isn't good economics and it's worse politics."

Such wariness is a sign of the deep divisions within the Democratic party and the daunting challenge facing Mr. Daschle.

For every Democrat who fears revisiting last year's tax cut fight, there is another who insists that the party has an obligation to call for freezing or rolling back part of the tax cut for the very wealthiest Americans to pay for more domestic security and Democratic priorities like a prescription drug benefit or more education spending.

"We're not talking about raising taxes," said Representative Jan Schakowsky, an Illinois Democrat. "We're talking about stopping future tax cuts for the wealthiest of taxpayers."

Still, Mr. Bush's approval ratings are stratospheric right now and even Democrats sympathetic to freezing part of the tax cut remember how Ronald Reagan hammered their party as big taxers and spenders.

Tax debates can be treacherous ground for Democrats, they say, particularly when facing a popular Republican president, and they are determined not to let Mr. Bush revive old images of their party.

"The Republicans and the White House will demagogue this like hell," said Representative David R. Obey, a Wisconsin Democrat. "It's right for Democrats to be careful."

Being careful means buying time by speaking in terms of fiscal discipline and waiting for the public to turn its attention from the war to the faltering economy.

"The war will wind down here and then people will take a hard look at what's happening to the finances of this country," said Senator Byron L. Dorgan, a North Dakota Democrat.

To help focus the public's attention in this year of mid-term elections, Democrats will be doing their best to strike the same themes as Mr. Daschle: that the federal government is once again spending more than it takes in and that this will require painful choices.

President Bush, the Democrats will ruefully intone, never spoke about these painful choices but said only that federal surpluses were so plentiful that tax cuts, debt reduction and programs like prescription drug benefits were all affordable.

And the Democrats will say it is up to Mr. Bush to show presidential leadership and point the way to renewed surpluses.

"The Republicans have dug this hole," said Thomas S. Kahn, the minority staff director on the House Budget Committee. "It's now their responsibility to explain how they intend to fill it up.

"We look forward with great interest to the president's budget and State of the Union address," he said.

The Democrats have used this tactic successfully before, when Mr. Bush's father was president and pledging "no new taxes," even as the country was awash in deficits.

Then, too, the Democrats said that easing the deficit required presidential leadership, and they waited the senior Mr. Bush out, until he agreed to raise taxes in 1990.

This time, though, they are facing George Bush's son, who came away convinced that his father's chief political mistake was reneging on his pledge -- and so is unlikely to make the same move.

Some liberal Democrats are even privately complaining that their party leaders are making a mistake by focusing on the deficit and sounding like accountants at a time when they should be promoting plans for putting people back to work.

Still, at the very least, Democrats say, their focus on the deficit will allow them to resist any further long-term reductions in tax rates when the bitter debate over an economic stimulus package resumes.

Mr. Bush and other Republicans have been pushing hard for the measure to accelerate income tax cuts. Democrats have countered with short-term tax breaks for businesses that get people back to work and increase their payrolls.

Ultimately, standing pat carries risks for Democrats too. No longer in the minority, Mr. Daschle has responsibilities to show that he will not just block the president's program, but join Mr. Bush in governing. Mr. Daschle will eventually have to produce some budget plan that unifies his fractious party and pass it though the Senate.

Mr. Bush is already working to portray Mr. Daschle as an obstructionist. And Republicans say they will try to make the 2002 election a referendum on Mr. Daschle's role as a roadblock to the president's programs.

Indeed, Representative Thomas M. Davis III of Virginia, who heads the Republican re-election effort in the House, said that his candidates would argue to voters "it's the Democrats who are holding it up. Until they deliver a Republican Congress these matters won't be solved." http://www.nytimes.com

Please take a moment to read the Alison Mitchell story in this morning's NY Times headlined "A Wary Rank and File Watch Daschle's Attack." The article shows how rank and file Democrats disagree with Daschle. (The article is attached below).

One key point in the article: "Some liberal Democrats are even privately complaining that their party leaders are making a mistake by focusing on the deficit and sounding like accountants at a time when they should be promoting plans for putting people back to work."

HEADLINE: Political Memo;
A Wary Rank and File Watch Daschle's Attack

BYLINE: By ALISON MITCHELL

BODY:
Wondering why Senator Tom Daschle, the majority leader, attacked President Bush's $1.35 trillion tax cut last week, but did not call for it to be changed? Just listen to a few of the 12 Senate Democrats who voted for the cut.

Senator Zell Miller of Georgia is openly questioning the political smarts of his party leader and bristles at Mr. Daschle's charge that the tax cut probably likely worsened the recession. "Maybe it's at a level that my brain can't reach," Mr. Miller said. "How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?"

Senators John B. Breaux of Louisiana and Dianne Feinstein of California have defended their votes on television talks shows.

And Senator Robert G. Torricelli of New Jersey said today that he might have reconsidered his vote for the tax cut last spring -- had he known the country was about to face a terror strike, war and recession.

Even so, Mr. Torricelli said, "I think to advance changing the tax reduction legislation in the midst of recession isn't good economics and it's worse politics."

Such wariness is a sign of the deep divisions within the Democratic party and the daunting challenge facing Mr. Daschle.

For every Democrat who fears revisiting last year's tax cut fight, there is another who insists that the party has an obligation to call for freezing or rolling back part of the tax cut for the very wealthiest Americans to pay for more domestic security and Democratic priorities like a prescription drug benefit or more education spending.

Still, Mr. Bush's approval ratings are stratospheric right now and even Democrats sympathetic to freezing part of the tax cut remember how Ronald Reagan hammered their party as big taxers and spenders.

Tax debates can be treacherous ground for Democrats, they say, particularly when facing a popular Republican president, and they are determined not to let Mr. Bush revive old images of their party.

"The Republicans and the White House will demagogue this like hell," said Representative David R. Obey, a Wisconsin Democrat. "It's right for Democrats to be careful."

Being careful means buying time by speaking in terms of fiscal discipline and waiting for the public to turn its attention from the war to the faltering economy.

"The war will wind down here and then people will take a hard look at what's happening to the finances of this country," said Senator Byron L. Dorgan, a North Dakota Democrat.

To help focus the public's attention in this year of mid-term elections, Democrats will be doing their best to strike the same themes as Mr. Daschle: that the federal government is once again spending more than it takes in and that this will require painful choices.

President Bush, the Democrats will ruefully intone, never spoke about these painful choices but said only that federal surpluses were so plentiful that tax cuts, debt reduction and programs like prescription drug benefits were all affordable.

And the Democrats will say it is up to Mr. Bush to show presidential leadership and point the way to renewed surpluses.

"The Republicans have dug this hole," said Thomas S. Kahn, the minority staff director on the House Budget Committee. "It's now their responsibility to explain how they intend to fill it up.

"We look forward with great interest to the president's budget and State of the Union address," he said.

The Democrats have used this tactic successfully before, when Mr. Bush's father was president and pledging "no new taxes," even as the country was awash in deficits.

Then, too, the Democrats said that easing the deficit required presidential leadership, and they waited the senior Mr. Bush out, until he agreed to raise taxes in 1990.

This time, though, they are facing George Bush's son, who came away convinced that his father's chief political mistake was reneging on his pledge -- and so is unlikely to make the same move.

Some liberal Democrats are even privately complaining that their party leaders are making a mistake by focusing on the deficit and sounding like accountants at a time when they should be promoting plans for putting people back to work.

Still, at the very least, Democrats say, their focus on the deficit will allow them to resist any further long-term reductions in tax rates when the bitter debate over an economic stimulus package resumes.

Mr. Bush and other Republicans have been pushing hard for the measure to accelerate income tax cuts. Democrats have countered with short-term tax breaks for businesses that get people back to work and increase their payrolls.

Ultimately, standing pat carries risks for Democrats too. No longer in the minority, Mr. Daschle has responsibilities to show that he will not just block the president's program, but join Mr. Bush in governing. Mr. Daschle will eventually have to produce some budget plan that unifies his fractious party and pass it though the Senate.

Mr. Bush is already working to portray Mr. Daschle as an obstructionist. And Republicans say they will try to make the 2002 election a referendum on Mr. Daschle's role as a roadblock to the president's programs.

Indeed, Representative Thomas M. Davis III of Virginia, who heads the Republican re-election effort in the House, said that his candidates would argue to voters "it's the Democrats who are holding it up. Until they deliver a Republican Congress these matters won't be solved." http://www.nytimes.com

CBS (1/8, story 5, Rather) reported last night, &Following September 11, America's outpouring of sympathy and generosity for families of the attack victims was remarkable. Congress followed suit by approving a special compensation package for them. But other Americans touched by terrorism have begun questioning the fairness of it all.8 CBS (Stewart) added, &Lou Gunn of Norfolk, Virginia, has a simple question. What's the difference between his son's death and the deaths suffered on September 11? After all, his son was killed by terrorists, just like in New York, and the terrorists worked for Osama bin Laden, just like in New York. It was just a different place and time. Signalman Charone Gunn died October 12, 2000, aboard the USS Cole.8 Gunn was shown saying, &My loss is just like the loss of the people in New York. You know, the only difference between 9/11 and 10/12 is we're talking one year, one month, and one day. But the pain and the grief are the same.8 CBS added, &But not the compensation. Lou Gunn's family received $15,000 in benefits for their son's death, while under a program approved by Congress, families of September 11 victims stand to receive, on average, $1.5 million. Gunn and several other Cole families now plan to challenge their exclusion from that plan. They tell CBS News and they are not alone. Relatives of the 12 Americans who died in the African embassy bombings in 1998 -- also bin Laden's handiwork -- are asking the same. Edith Bartley lost her father and only brother there.8 Bartley was shown saying, &I think that something should have been done three years ago for our families. You know, the body bags came home, people saw Andrews Air Force Base, front-page news, and I think the world thought, +Oh, our government is so compassionate, taking care of these families., That is so far from the truth.8 CBS added, &Nor are many September 11 families happy about the fund. Stephen Push lost his wife, Lisa Raines, in the plane that hit the Pentagon. The fund's awards are far smaller than you might win in a lawsuit, he notes, only if you accept money from the fund, you can't sue.8 Push was shown saying, &We are the only victims of terrorism who had our rights to seek compensation taken away by an act of Congress.8 CBS added, &Mostly what the families want is a sense of fairness. +Just treat us as well as you treated the Chinese,, one suggested, noting that after the US accidentally bombed the Chinese embassy in Belgrade two years ago killing three employees, we gave Beijing more than $32 million for their building and their dead.8

Some Still Expect 9/11 Lawsuits To Materialize. The Washington Post (1/9, C1, Ringle) reports, &For those of us who love to celebrate the ethical oiliness and predatory hunger of the nation's legal profession, these are disappointing times. America's lawyers have been looking almost human. More than a few of us predicted that a tidal wave of ambulance-chasing lawsuits after the terrorist attacks last Sept. 11 would make the famous litigation feeding frenzy in Bhopal, India, in 1984 look like a Sunday school picnic. That hasn't happened. Yet.8 The Post adds, &Instead, the president of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, Leo Boyle, called almost immediately for a moratorium on liability litigation dealing with Sept. 11, and lobbied aggressively instead for a government-sponsored fund to compensate the victims. More than 3,000 attorneys have volunteered their services since to help the victims' families surrender their right to sue -- and to enrich lawyers -- in return for access to money from the government fund. (Not everyone, however, believes trial lawyers have changed their stripes since Bhopal. The avalanche of 9-11 lawsuits is still to come, says Victor E. Schwartz, counsel to the American Tort Reform Association and a partner with the Washington firm of Shook, Hardy & Bacon. Until the rules for distributing the compensation fund were announced Dec. 20, he says, trial lawyers didn't know how to position themselves and their clients to maximize their recoverable damages.8

forwarded to her by the RNCC pursuant to a fundraising program whereby RNCC would receive a $10 contribution for each peice of correspondence RNCC would forward to the President. While typically WH correspondence responds to all Presidential correspondence, Desiree's inclination, and I wholeheartedly agree, is to send nothing to the RNCC contributors in this case. Furthermore, I don't think much of the practice the RNCC has decided to use here and think we should make sure this doesn't occur in the future. Reactions?

Tomorrow we will need to send a four page fax to all of the Members of Committee on Government Reform.

Do you guys have a database with the name and fax numbers of all these people? Is there someone (perhaps an intern) in leg affairs who can assist in the faxing of all of these members?

Please let me know.

Thanks!

Lollygag Leahy?
By Thomas L. Jipping

<P> 2
002 WorldNetDaily.com</P><P>With the second year of President Bush's term and of the 107th Congress about to begin, we can expect great things on the ju dicial-appointment front as long as Democrats follow at least of three their ow n standards.

<P><I>First</I>, the Dems have insisted ad nauseum that the right standard is t heir confirmation performance during President Clinton's first term. They clai m, for example, that last year's 28 confirmations matched 1993, when Dems also ran the Senate during Mr. Clinton's first year. While these confirmation total s may have been the same, however, the confirmation rates were not the Senate confirmed 57 percent of Mr. Clinton's nominees in 1993, but only 42 percent of Mr. Bush's nominees last year.

<P>Whether perfect or not, it's their yardstick. So what should we expect this year? In 1994, with Democrats in charge during Mr. Clinton's second year, the Senate Judiciary Committee held 25 confirmation hearings and the Senate confir med 101 judicial nominees. The Dems topped the annual average from the Reagan-Bush years by the August recess. In just the three months leading up to the fa ll elections, the Senate approved 54 judges October's tally of 28 is still a s ingle-month record and equals the previous year's total.

<P>After Republicans captured the Senate in the 1994 election, Democrats contin ued using this 1994 performance as their benchmark. On March 16 and June 26, 1 998, for example, the Judiciary Committee's top Democrat senator, Patrick Leahy , used the same language to make the point: "Unfortunately, over the last three years, the Senate has barely matched the one-year total of judges confirmed in 1994." On July 7, 1998, Sen. Leahy noted that year's confirmation progress "a s compared to our total of judges confirmed in 1994 on our way to 101 confirma tions." On April 14, 1999, Senator Leahy said: "Look at how we have done in th e past. Let's go a little backward. In 1994, we confirmed 101." On both Nove mber 19, 1999, and February 10, 2000, he used the same language: "In 1994, with a Democratic majority in the Senate, we confirmed 101 judges."

<P>Democrats also repeatedly quoted Supreme Court Chief Justice Rehnquist's ref erence to 1994 as a confirmation highwater mark. On July 17, 1998, Sen. Leahy quoted from the chief justice's annual report, released on New Year's Day that year, that recent confirmations had been "well under the 101 judges it confirme d in 1994." He did the same on June 29, 1999. You get the point.

<P><I>Second</I>, when Democrats ran the Senate in the past, even under Republi can presidents, they have confirmed all nominees before finally adjourning a tw o-year Congressional session. Sen. Leahy reminded the majority Republicans of this on October 14, 1998: "The Democratic Senate majority in the two Congresses of the Bush administration ended both those Congresses, the 101st and 102nd, w ithout a single judicial nomination on the calendar." One week later, the Sena te confirmed 17 judicial nominees in a single group by unanimous consent minute s before adjournment.

<P>Trolling around in the Congressional Record uncovered a <I>third</I> Democra t standard they have yet to live up to. On July 25, 2000, Sen. Leahy said: "Th e soon-to-be presidential nominee of the Republican Party has said and I agree with him that the Senate ought to vote these people up or down in 60 days. Of course, we could do that One of the things that most Republicans and Democr ats ought to be able to agree on is what Governor Bush said: Do it and vote the m up or down in 60 days."

<P>Gov. Bush, of course, is now President Bush. The Dems will say that 60-day standard assumed that the American Bar Association had done its nominee evaluat ions and ratings prior to nomination. OK, so toss in another 30 days longer t han the three weeks the ABA said last year its work should take. If the Dems l ive up to this standard, they will vote immediately on the dozens of nominees i gnored last year, all long past this modified 90-day Leahy limit.

<P>On July 17, 1998, Sen. Leahy said that filling judicial vacancies "is a cons titutional duty that the Senate and all of its members are obligated to fulfi ll." Indeed it is. Democrats say that 1994 is the benchmark, that all nominee s must be confirmed by adjournment, and that nominees should be voted on within 90 days of their nomination. This should be a very busy year.<P>

Any thoughts on this stuff. My inclination is to call NRCC and tell them to stop this stuff.

I received a voice mail from Matt Gannon at the Nat'l Republican Congressional Committee regarding approximately 2,000 Christmas cards they have received for President Bush. He said there are no gifts, only cards. Trudy - could you or Mary please give him a call and let him know the best way to send them to your shop? His number is PRA 6. He had my name as a contact due to a similar project for the President's birthday in which the NRCC did receive some gifts mixed in with the cards.

Thanks!

It is going to be hard for you to keep up with the millions of requests from this office during this election year. We are a bit concerned about the volume you will receive (gonna get worse) since all of us want to make sure we follow all the ethical/legal guidelines. Do you think it would be wise to add another person to this mix? Do you think the Judge would be open to hiring a lawyer to help maybe even one with electoral experience? What do you think.

Ed, we would like for you to talk about your previous experience at HHS as well as the domestic policy agenda for this year. Also, the Secretary, Claude Allen or Bob will discuss HHS priorities for the year. Although the meeting will be planned to last an hour to an hour and a half, we would love to have you for at least 20 minutes.

We don't have a date yet but are hopeful about setting up something later this month. We can work with your schedulers if you just let me know who they are.

We are trying to set up the Irish American reception event for St.

My question for you is if it could be paid for by an outside group, like

I had thought about trying to have HHS pay for it, but Israel advised to

I assume this event is at the WH. Maybe if this is a joint WH - Irish American Association program, payment of some of the expenses could be by the outside organization on a co-sponsorship theory. I would not want to have the event look like it was entirely a WH sponsored event if the WH wasn't paying for it. Courtney, have you seen this kind of thing?

I don't think Ari should make "official" trips to speak to "Republican" organizations. The Republican Jewish Coalition is not a political organization under 26 U.S.C. 527(e), I am told. While I don't think Ari should speak to them officially, the political exception on gifts may not apply either. Any thoughts?

That's correct -- the fundraiser would be for the Coalition and not their PAC.

They would be charging for the small event but Ari wouldn't be involved in soliciting the money.

The subject matter of Ari's speeches on Sunday wouldn't be any different than any other group he would address.

The personal plane is owned by Ned Siegel who is one of the Vice Chairmen of the Coalition. He is willing to pay personally for Ari's roundtrip travel or the Coalition will reimburse Siegel for the transportation.

This kind of stuff makes me nervous. I want to be more that cautious that Ari doesn't do anything he shouldn't.. I'm not at all for gray areas so I wan't to error on the side of caution. If Ari shouldn't be attending a fundraising event of their own, I want to let them know sooner rather than later.

Given a certain amount of play in the ethics rules (executive branch-wide standards of conduct), it is not surprising that there are different conclusions as to whether participation or attendance in these functions is appropriate. Also, level of participation can be different as well (i.e., speeches, sitting at head table, etc.) or the relationship between the outside interests and a particular agency. Each of the cabinet secretaries should get guidance from the ethics officials at the agencies where they work. If there is to be consistency in application, the ethics officials may want to consult with the Office of Gov't Ethics. In my view, this is not an issue that the WH should try to provide uniform guidance on -- the guidance is already in the ethics rules.

brett: are you the person to ask in counsel's office about guidance for cabinet agencies (and senior WH staff) on participating in celebrity type events? for example, march of dimes gourmet gala is coming up on march 5. sec. veneman was invited and i'm sure others are being invited as well. frankly, i attended last year's and saw that mineta, abraham and card (and spouses) participated. usda's counsel advised against veneman's participation although the concern all hinges, as i understand it, around whether or not the event sponsor publicizes the gov't official by title, or simply by name. do you or someone else have any guidance on this (as you might have looked at this related to participating senior WH staff...e.g., andy card and others) that we can pass on to agencies?

Brett - I just found out that the State Department is paying for the St.

looking into it. If you do eventually find out it would probably be a good thing for our office to know about anyway.

2 issues:

1. What do you all think about announcing on Friday the 18th the likely number of judges that will be nominated on the 23rd, but not actually announcing any names until Wednesday the 23rd?

2. Can Neal or someone do quick research on this ?: How many Article III judicial nominations (and how many to each relevant court) did Presidents Kennedy, Nixon, Carter, Reagan, Bush, and Clinton make before the State of the Union address at the beginning of the second year of their Presidencies -- that is, before the State of Union addresses in 1962, 1970, 1978, 1982, 1990, and 1994?

Hi Brett --

We are trying to set up the Irish American reception event for St. Patrick's week.
My question for you is if it could be paid for by an outside group, like the Irish-American Republicans maybe?
I had thought about trying to have HHS pay for it, but Israel advised to ask you about an outside group instead.

Please let me know your thoughts.
Thanks, Meredith

Excellent. The bottom line is that we do a case-by-case analysis depending on the nature of the event, how that event has been handled in the past, the nature of the organization that would pay the costs, etc. I know that does not lead to precise advance guidance for you all, but that approach has been used and worked well in the past.

Two large Ohio Supporters - Wayne Boich and Dave Destefano - are coming in tomorrow to sit down with me.
I know Dave from the campaign - he was a key volunteer adviser in Southern Ohio - and he has continued to pass on his thoughts since then. I sit down with him every two months or so just to talk about the region (S. Ohio), get updates from his point of view on what people are thinking out there, etc.
One of Dave's clients is Wanyne Boich, a huge Bush supporter who also owns a large coal company.
I think Wayne, in addition to meeting me and saying hello, will want to bring up his views on what the Administration should do re. International Climate Policy.
Am I legally free to listen to these ideas?

Brett,

I have another question for you. Since the RNC pays for Presidential Gifts, would it be appropriate for them to pay for the wrapping paper as well? We just had an order of the gold, embossed Presidential wrapping paper printed and want to be sure that it is paid for by the appropriate entity (RNC or White House.) Our research has only yielded information about the last administration...the DNC paid for the wrapping paper.

Please advise.

(ii) RNC is fine for payment for wrapping people, so long as Moose also has no problem.

Brett,

I have another question for you. Since the RNC pays for Presidential Gifts, would it be appropriate for them to pay for the wrapping paper as well? We just had an order of the gold, embossed Presidential wrapping paper printed and want to be sure that it is paid for by the appropriate entity (RNC or White House.) Our research has only yielded information about the last administration...the DNC paid for the wrapping paper.

Please advise.

Thanks,

Kim

PS - I will bring the trip summary back to your office and leave with Lori. Please sign as soon as you can. Thanks.

Hi Brett & Courtney - Did you have specific comments on the tort reform paper that we circulated at last week's meeting? As you know, we're hoping to put together another version that reflects the group's comments. Among other things, if there are proposals you think are not worth supporting and proposals that you think we should pursue, it would be very helpful to have your input. Any other thoughts are also welcome. Thanks very much.

Marc Sumerlin would like to have a terrorism insurance meeting on Wednesday, 1/16.

The agenda will be: is there still a need for a Federal role in terrorism insurance?

Please let me know if 2:30 works for you. If it does not, please indicate what times you are available.

Thanks,
Leslie

My friend

both presentations should be 5 minutes, no more than 6.

yes to Q and A, everything from substantive to political.

Weyrich folks are not hostile but can be tough; you will welcomed warmly, though.

Norquist types are less hostile, and more process oriented.

Warmly

look, this is not important enough to me to get into some kind of fight about it. i just thought that when you asked me to stay out here another day for you, you would get me back by taking a day for me some other time, when i needed it. i don't think that's unreasonable. but whatever.

the point being that by going out then, you thereby avoided having to go out another day where you otherwise would have been scheduled. I do not believe we were trading such that I would have to go out 2 other nights where you would not. In other words, under your interpretation, I actually traded 2 nights for 1 night. I do not remember discussing that. I did offer to give you an unspecified favor in return, and I would intend to keep that promise.

She legally can do this.
I believe the appearance issue can and should be addressed by the Attorney General's office directly in the first instance. Let me know if you all disagree with that.
She also is legally free to do a message event.

Brett:
Janet Ashcroft - wife of AG John Ashcroft - is willing to do a political event for former Congressman and current US MO Senatorial candidate Jim Talent.
1) Can she legally fundraise for Talent?
2) Even if she can legally fundraise, what does your shop think about this in terms of perception?
3) If she cannot fundraise, I assume she is free to do a message event on women's issues?

Tim-

Thanks for bringing the guests to the lunch yesterday. Is there anything in writing on the judge/Senate issue? I took notes but want to make sure I am accurate. I want to put it in our email that goes to 300,000 key pastors and lay leaders.

Thanks

Our due date on the AHA brief is Monday the 28th. While I recognize that Craig Blackwell asked for comments by next Wednesday, I'd like to give him (and me) as much time as possible to react to those comments and get out a good, polished brief. Therefore, if possible, please get him your comments as soon as possible, hopefully before Wed.

1. The hearing is now scheduled for Wednesday the 23rd rather than Thursday the 24th. 2. Michael Chertoff plans to testify for the Administration, which is very good.
3. Tomorrow, the Department plans to send the Committee a privilege log of the Boston documents together with a cover letter that reiterates Judge Gonzales' first-step offer of a briefing and the Committee's refusal to accept that very reasonable offer. DOJ will circulate a draft cover letter to us before sending.
4. Paul Colborn of DOJ is drafting an opening statement for Chertoff that he will circulate late this afternoon for comment.
5. On Tuesday the 22nd, the Department plans to brief Salvati's lawyer re the Boston documents. That should help take the Salvati issue off the table at the hearing.

Great. I didn't want to interfere; but their idea seemed novel, and I wanted to make sure you were aware of what they were doing.

Brett,
Below is a proposed e-mail that we would like to send to the White House Liaisons notifying them that they will soon start receiving A-list e-mails that are put together by Neil Zimmerman and the folks in Strategic Initiatives.
Is it ok to include the WH Liaisons on this e-mail distribution list that is regularly blasted out and if so is the below e-mail ok from your perspective?
Thanks for your guidance.
-Doug
6-7016

WH Liaison,

As a White House Liaison, Ken Mehlman and Matt Schlapp thought you'd be interested in receiving e-mail updates from the "White House Briefing Room" list. A-List Briefings are put together by the White House Office of Strategic Initiatives with the help of other White House offices, including the Office of Political Affairs.

With a focus on providing the latest information from the White House, the purpose of the Briefing Room is to keep people like you in the loop. A review of the President's events and speeches, as well as a morning update on the War on Terrorism are sent daily. Other items sent on a regular basis: fact sheets, talking points, public opinion analysis, media commentary and links to articles of interest.

Briefing Room updates are sent frequently, often more than once a day, which is why it goes to a select group. The goal is to have opinion makers like you filter and forward as appropriate the information for the political appointees in your respective department/agency. When you think information we send would be of particular interest to your group, you can simply forward the information with a note saying you thought they'd be interested or, better yet, incorporate the information into your own commentary. It's up to you. The content sent is evolving, and we are always trying to send information that is most useful to you. You all will begin receiving these updates within the near future.

We hope you find the Briefing Room informative, and that you can use it to help better communicate the President's agenda.

Thanks for your continued hard work and we look forward to continue working with you all.

-Doug Hoelscher

PS If you come across information you think would be of interest, or think of information that would be useful to others, please forward it to me or Neil Zimmerman in the Office of Strategic Initiatives - Neil_Zimmerman@who.eop.gov.

This draft reflects the edits of our press/communications shop, as well as desire not to lay down the specific marker. (Jen: please send this one to Neal
for fact check. We are doing same here, but needs to be exact obviously, so 2
checks is good.).

If I ask someone who works at the dept of education to help me draft my 18 million briefings for the President -- can they write them at education and email them to me, or do they have to do them here after hours on their own time? None of the briefings are specific education briefings. Also, is it illegal for someone to volunteer on their off time over here? It is probably 3 hours of work per week.

Brett,

I just wanted to sent a quick reminder that the "Enrolled Bill HR 3392 - Gerald B.H. Solomon Saratoga National Cemetery" red tag is due today at 10:00 AM. You received it sometime this weekend.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

Subject: political travel

I'm trying to get a better understanding of trave procedures when it comes to sending Administration officials to do poltical events for our Republican candidates. Example:

Secretary Evans has agreed to speak to the SD Chamber of Commerce in Pierre, SD. We would also like him to do a fundraiser for John Thune. Because there would be a fundraiser in the same city as the SD chamber event, the Thune campaign is responsible for travel costs. (I conferred with Toner on FEC law)

FEC law also states that a campaign can use a corporate plane if first class airfare is reimbursed for each person traveling before the plane takes off. Legally, it is ok for Thune to fly Evans on a corporate plane.

But, my question for you is will you allow Evans to fly on a corporate plane?? If we find an owner who allows his plane to be used frequently for political travel and the company doesn't have significant business before the federal government, can we generally operate under the assumption that this will work?? This is particularly important for far away states like SD. Please advise.

Thanks.

Yes, you can use this same language. Also, it seems to me that Susan's inquiry is somewhat different from the previous one you and I discussed. If someone asks her directly where is a good place to volunteer, she can certainly say as much. She should simply avoid stating or implying that such activity is a necessary pre-condition for any specific government position.

Brett,
On an inquiry like this can I respond with the same suggested language that you said would be ok to say to the WH interns (language is attached below)? Susan works in the White House Liaison's office at DOD. What would you advise we/Susan say?

Some factors that traditionally have been taken into account for political appointments are one's work on behalf of the President and his agenda, on behalf of fellow Republicans who espouse the President's agenda priorities, on behalf of the Republican Party and its principles, and in support of issues that are priorities for the President.
Many individuals who are currently serving as political appointees in the Administration previously worked or volunteered for the Bush For President Campaign, the Republican National Committee, the Republican Governors Association, the National Republican Congressional Committee, and the National Republican Senatorial Committee. Many also worked for Republican officials at the federal and state level, including for the election campaigns of those officials.

hey guys -
i often interview candidates, especially ones who have recently graduated, who are good conservatives but have done nothing to date for the party. many of them are really interested in getting involved on some level - regardless of whether or not they get a job with us in the near future. seems to me that we need to take advantage of their offers to volunteer. do you have any suggestions on where i can direct their energy?

Does Thune campaign have corporate planes that it regularly uses for these purposes?

Subject: political travel

I'm trying to get a better understanding of trave procedures when it comes to sending Administration officials to do poltical events for our Republican candidates. Example:

Secretary Evans has agreed to speak to the SD Chamber of Commerce in Pierre, SD. We would also like him to do a fundraiser for John Thune. Because there would be a fundraiser in the same city as the SD chamber event, the Thune campaign is responsible for travel costs. (I conferred with Toner on FEC law)

FEC law also states that a campaign can use a corporate plane if first class airfare is reimbursed for each person traveling before the plane takes off. Legally, it is ok for Thune to fly Evans on a corporate plane.

But, my question for you is will you allow Evans to fly on a corporate plane?? If we find an owner who allows his plane to be used frequently for political travel and the company doesn't have significant business before the federal government, can we generally operate under the assumption that this will work?? This is particularly important for far away states like SD. Please advise.

Thanks.

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Murray, Cantwell protest Bush judicial pick Senators miffed at selection process, say they won't back Leighton

Thursday, January 24, 2002

By CHARLES POPE
SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON -- President Bush yesterday nominated Tacoma attorney Ronald Leighton to be a federal district judge for Western Washington, ignoring strenuous objections by the state's two senators who complained they weren't adequately consulted.

Leighton was selected by an all-Republican selection committee formed with the White House's support by Rep. Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash. That angered Democratic Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell who said the nominee should be the product of a bipartisan panel.

In a letter last month to White House counsel Alberto Gonzales, Murray and Cantwell said "we will not support any nominee for a Washington state federal bench vacancy who has not come through a bipartisan commission process."

That threat could stop Leighton in his tracks in the Senate, where a single objection is all that's required to derail a nomination. "I'm confident the Senate will not confirm a judicial nominee that does not have the support of the state's senators," Murray said.

"This is not about Mr. Leighton. He may well be a good, qualified candidate for judge. I'm sorry he got caught up in the White House's inability to understand that the Senate has a role in confirming judges," Murray said.

Murray added that the bipartisan system she used when Republican Slade Gorton served in the Senate would be a good model. That effort produced nominees that were supported by both parties and who enjoyed quick confirmation.

That is not likely to happen this time.

The nomination intensified a war of wills pitting Murray and Cantwell against Dunn and the White House. Murray insisted that the all-Republican committee broke a well-established practice of using a bipartisan panel to solicit potential nominees.

But Dunn said Cantwell and Murray weren't excluded and were given an opportunity to be "equal partners" in the process.
Leighton was one of four candidates selected by Dunn's committee. Aides to Dunn said that a complete resume of each candidate was provided to Murray and Cantwell along with an offer to comment. Dunn said neither senator offered any comment.

Dunn praised the 50-year-old Leighton as a strong nominee whose ability and accomplishments shouldn't be overshadowed by a dispute over the process used to select him. "Sometimes senators make it sound like there is one system that has to be used," she said. "For the senators to use process as an excuse not to give the president his nominee is unfortunate."

If confirmed, Leighton wold would replace Judge Robert Bryan at the federal court in Tacoma. Bryan announced last year he would take "senior status," meaning he no longer would hear a full docket of cases.

A senior White House official, who spoke only on the condition he not be named, said the administration rejected a bipartisan commission because it would take too long. "There is a judicial vacancy crisis and the president wants to move rapidly," the official said. "This one has been vacant too long."

Murray disputed that claim, saying she, Cantwell and Dunn have been in discussions for a year in an effort to reach agreement on a method for picking judicial nominees.

The White House official added that Leighton is "superbly qualified" and urged that the Senate consider his qualifications rather than how he was selected. "We're confident he is of such high quality that no matter what the process, Ron Leighton would have been at the top of the list."

This latest dustup is not entirely new for Leighton. In 1992 President George Bush nominated him to be a federal judge.
That nomination was delayed and ultimately dropped after Bill Clinton was elected president.

nick's office. i think our plan is to discuss which members to work on the committee, leadership, the intra-Hill dynamics, etc. just wanted you to know.

i just talked to barbara. someone will be in touch with 60Minutes staff today to get them the letter and make sure they're at least educated with our arguments. any focus and/or aerial support from the WH communications shop might be very useful. can only imagine how busy they must be, and i'm no press expert, but just one person working surrogate op-eds, rapid response, etc. over the next few weeks might be very useful.

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - 3 In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - 3 A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - 3 "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 3 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - 3 Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - 3 In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - 3 A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - 3 "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 3 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - 3 Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - 3 In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - 3 A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - 3 "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 3 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - 3 Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

is there any problem with campaigns sending staff members invitations to fundraisers to the White House address? we receive many of them daily via fax, etc., but someone asked me specifically. I didn't want to tell them the wrong thing if they were subject to a fine or something for sending to a govt. building. thanks

The Crisis In Our Courts (WSJ)
Op-Ed by Alberto Gonzales, counsel to President Bush.

Federal courts protect constitutional rights, resolve critical civil cases, and ensure that criminals are punished. But as Chief Justice William Rehnquist cautions, the ability of our courts to perform these functions is in jeopardy due to the "alarming number" of judicial vacancies, 101 as of today.

President Bush has responded to the vacancy crisis by nominating a record number of federal judges: 90 since taking office, almost double the nominations that any of the past six presidents submitted in the first year. Despite his decisive action, the Senate has not done enough to meet its constitutional responsibility. It has voted on less than half of the nominees. Indeed, it has voted on only six of the 29 nominees to the courts of appeals. And the Senate has failed even to grant hearings to many nominees, who have languished before the Judiciary Committee for months.

For example, on May 9, 2001, the president announced his first 11 nominees. All were deemed "well qualified" or "qualified" by the American Bar Association, whose rating system Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy has called the "gold standard" for evaluating nominees. Yet his committee has held hearings for only three of the 11. Although the Senate did confirm 28 judges last year, its overall record was unsatisfactory, given the number of vacancies and pending nominees.

As Congress returns to work, the administration respectfully calls on the Senate to make the vacancy crisis a priority and to ensure prompt hearings and votes for all nominees. The Senate should make this practice permanent, adhering to it well after President Bush leaves office, so as to ensure that every judicial nominee by a president of either party receives a prompt hearing and vote.

The federal courts desperately need reinforcements. There are 101 vacancies out of 853 circuit and district court judgeships. The 12 regional circuit courts of appeals have an extraordinary 31 vacancies out of 167 judgeships (19%). The chief justice recently warned of the dangerous impact the vacancies have on the courts and the American people, and the Judicial Conference has classified 39 vacancies as "judicial emergencies."

In 1998, when there were many fewer judicial vacancies, Sen. Thomas Daschle, now majority leader, and Mr. Leahy expressed their concern about the "vacancy crisis" -- with the latter explaining that the Senate's failure to vote on nominees was "delaying or preventing the administration of justice."

Today's crisis is worse, and is acute in several places. The D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, which, other than the Supreme Court, is often considered the most important federal court because of the constitutional cases that come before it, has four vacancies on a 12-judge court. The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals has eight vacancies on a court of 16. In March 2000, when that court had only four vacancies, its chief judge stated that it was "hurting badly and will not be able to keep up with its work load."

In the past, senators of both parties have accused each other of illegitimate delays in voting on nominees. The past mistreatment of nominees does not justify today's behavior. Finger-pointing does nothing to put judges on the bench and ease the courts' burdens; it only distracts the Senate from its constitutional obligation to act on the president's judicial nominees.

President Bush has encouraged the Senate to act in a bipartisan fashion, both now and in the future. He put it best at the White House last May while announcing his first 11 nominees: "I urge senators of both parties to rise above the bitterness of the past, to provide a fair hearing and a prompt vote to every nominee. That should be the case for no matter who lives in this house, and no matter who controls the Senate. I ask for the return of civility and dignity to the confirmation process."

It is time for the Senate to heed his call.

Alliance for Justice/PFAW press conference, Thursday January 24, 2002.

The primary speakers were Nan Aron, Hilary Shelton (ph) (of NAACP), Ralph Neas, Kate Michelman, Wade Henderson, and Marcia Greenberger. There were no television cameras, some reporters, and a lot of supporters. Among the media were reporters for Gannett, Scripps-Howard, Roll Call (Kane), and Legal Times (Groner).

Aron: The participants represent millions of Americans. Pickering's confirmation will turn back the clock on the rights all Americans have come to enjoy. Priscilla Owen is also a problem; both ignore civil rights. The Fifth Circuit is the circuit with the highest number of minorities. Can we let them undo 40 years of protection? With Bush nominees, that's what's likely to happen. There's a hearing today, for Melloy. He's a moderate. Bush must understand that experienced moderate candidates will have support, but if he doesn't nominate them, he'll have a fight on his hands.

Shelton: The geography of the Fifth Circuit combines with the history of the civil rights struggle. Pickering is no friend of civil rights; he even criticizes some civil rights complaints as an attempt to cover up past poor job performance. He wrote an article in support of anti-miscegenation statutes. He had contacts with the Sovereignty Commission. Alone, that one is enough to justify his defeat. The right to vote was gained through struggling. Pickering would close the doors of opportunity.

Neas: Pickering has 40 years of demonstrated hostility to civil rights in the public record. What's at stake? Abortion, the environment, &c., &c. Right-wing groups have packing the courts as their No. 1 priority. The Supreme Court is at stake. We've already seen the Orwellian performance of Lott, Ashcroft, and Hatch . . . and their complaints about delays. They created an ideological blockade during the Clinton Administration. You don't hear about the 35% of Clinton nominees who were blocked. They created 80 vacancies. Gonzales said what they did was wrong. Already, 7 of 13 circuits are under Republican control. That's going to increase. Leahy and Daschle are statesmen. They're doing a great job confirming judges; more than in '93. Twice as many as in '89. Leahy must feel like the guy following the circus parade, cleaning up the elephants' mess. Levin and Stabenow are right. McCree Lewis and White weren't treated fairly, and until the Administration makes a deal, there will be no confirmations to the Sixth Circuit.

Michelman: Pickering shows open hostility to abortion. He sought a constitutional amendment to prohibit abortion. The Fifth Circuit is the center of the anti-choice movement. He even supported a bill that would prohibit abortion except to save the life of the mother. He lacks respect for judicial independence (the constitutional amendment shows that [she claimed]). His efforts to limit the tenure of federal judges are further proof. He would use the Fifth Circuit as a platform for judicial activism.

Henderson: Pickering has "immoderate positions." We're discussing this in the context of the circuit to which he is nominated -- now one of the most, if not the most hostile circuits to civil rights. "This court cries out for moderation."

Greenberger: The burden should be on every nominee to demonstrate his or her qualifications. For many, we don't know what their positions ultimately are.
We don't know how they will turn out. Pickering isn't a stealth nominee, though. Also, we haven't had the opportunity to see many of his unpublished opinions.

Greenberger spoke during a question and answer time. I suspect that most questions came from plants in the audience, judging by the way they were worded, &c. A few statements made during the questioning:

Regarding his approval to the district court by a Democrat Senate, Michelman said that he must be judged wholly anew. The stakes are higher and abortion wasn't covered during the first hearing.

Michelman said that restrictions on abortion disproportionally affect the poor, and the Fifth Circuit has more poor people in it than any other circuit.

Neas said that Lott, Ashcroft, et al. are good at the tactics of intimidation.

The whole thing ran for about an hour and 15 minutes. There were handouts from the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, National Partnership for Women & Families, AFL-CIO, Alliance for Justice, ADA Watch, PFAW, NARAL, American Association of University Women, National Council of Jewish Women, and the National Women's Law Center. PFAW's 24 page report on Pickering was also available.

I distributed FCF's press release and spoke to several reporters.

Could you also tell me the rules on charter planes for the RNC? Would the RNC be able to pay first class airfare for a corporate plane to fly Sec. Evans to a fundraiser? (or would they have to charter a plane) It is specifically for a Team 100/Regents meeting in FL, some what of a donor maintainence rather than fundraiser.

Subject: political travel

I'm trying to get a better understanding of trave procedures when it comes to sending Administration officials to do poltical events for our Republican candidates. Example:

Secretary Evans has agreed to speak to the SD Chamber of Commerce in Pierre, SD. We would also like him to do a fundraiser for John Thune. Because there would be a fundraiser in the same city as the SD chamber event, the Thune campaign is responsible for travel costs. (I conferred with Toner on FEC law)

FEC law also states that a campaign can use a corporate plane if first class airfare is reimbursed for each person traveling before the plane takes off. Legally, it is ok for Thune to fly Evans on a corporate plane.

But, my question for you is will you allow Evans to fly on a corporate plane?? If we find an owner who allows his plane to be used frequently for political travel and the company doesn't have significant business before the federal government, can we generally operate under the assumption that this will work?? This is particularly important for far away states like SD. Please advise.

Thanks.

Hey, if you think appropriate, can we make sure 60 Minutes knows
(i) that the Administration has offered the Committee an oral briefing on the contents of the disputed prosecution memoranda and has further indicated that it will listen to requests for additional information after that oral briefing; and (ii) the Administration has been in contact with

I tried your number - 456-3282, is that correct? I got "you have reached a non working number. I didn't want to interrupt you by calling you on your mobile.
Anyway - I am meeting with the NYC contractors tomorrow (Friday) at 11 am about their insurance proposal. They mentioned they hae been talking with you. Did he make a statement today? This is the only thing I could find from him in the last few days...
Press Release of Senator Hatch
HEARING ON THE DISTRICT JUDGE NOMINATIONS
Contact: Margarita Tapia - 202.224.5225
Thursday, January 24, 2002
Hearing on the Nominations of

Michael Melloy to be U.S. Circuit Judge, 8th Circuit
Robert Blackburn to be U.S. District Judge, District of Colorado
James Gritzner to be U.S. District Judge, Southern District of Iowa
Cindy Jorgenson to be U.S. District Judge, District of Arizona
Richard Leon to be U.S. District Judge, District of Columbia
Jay Zainey to be U.S. District Judge, Eastern District of Louisiana

I am pleased that we are considering today the nominations of six exceedingly well qualified candidates for the federal bench. The convention of this hearing on the first full day of the new congressional session is a step in the right direction. Moreover, our consideration of six judges at this hearing represents the most judges we have considered at a single confirmation hearing during this Congress, which is another positive step.

I sincerely hope that we maintain this pace at future hearings, because we have plenty of work to do. There are 101 vacancies in the federal judiciary, a vacancy rate of nearly 12%. Yesterday, the White House submitted 24 new nominations to the Senate for confirmation. Since we have 38 nominees still pending from last session, we now have a total of 62 nominees awaiting action from the Senate.

In 1994, the second year of President Clinton's first term, the Senate confirmed 100 judicial nominees. I am confident that Republicans and Democrats can work together to achieve, or even hopefully exceed, this number in 2002, particularly the many circuit court nominees that are pending to fill emergency vacancies in appellate courts around the country. To do this, however, we must keep up the pace of hearings and confirmation votes so that we do not fall further behind in filling the vacancies that plague our federal judiciary. I look forward to working with my Democratic colleagues to accomplish this goal.

As I stated earlier, today's hearing is a step in the right direction. We have the privilege of considering six outstanding lawyers to be federal judges. Our only circuit nominee on the agenda is Michael Melloy, who has been nominated to be a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. Judge Melloy has already sat by designation on the Eighth Circuit in his present capacity as a federal district court judge in Iowa, so he comes to this hearing with more than a passing familiarity of what his future role will require.

Robert Blackburn has been nominated to be a District Court Judge for the District of Colorado, and he will bring a great deal of legal experience to the Federal bench. Judge Blackburn has practiced law for 13 years in private practice, served as a Deputy District Attorney for 6 years, as a County Attorney for 8 years, as a Municipal Judge for 3 years, and as a state court judge since 1988.

Our next nominee is James Gritzner, who has been nominated to the District Court for the Southern District of Iowa. Although Mr. Gritzner began his legal career in a general litigation practice, it really exploded - so to speak - when he began specializing in cases concerning catastrophic fires and explosions. From his office in Des Moines, he has handled such cases in 23 states and, in the process, developed a national reputation. He is also known as an expert in legal ethics, having prosecuted over 100 attorney disciplinary cases before the Grievance Commission of the Iowa Supreme Court.

Next, Cindy Jorgenson is the nominee for the District of Arizona. Judge Jorgenson's legal experience includes serving as a deputy county attorney, an Assistant U.S. Attorney, and as a Superior Court Judge - all in the State of Arizona. She supervised the felony sex crimes and child abuse prosecution unit in Pima County for several years. Then, as an Assistant U.S. Attorney handled both criminal and civil cases. Since 1996, Judge Jorgenson has served with great distinction on the state trial court bench in Tucson, Arizona.

Richard Leon has been nominated to be a district judge in the District of Columbia. Mr. Leon has had a remarkable career that has spanned both public service and private practice. He has served as a judicial law clerk, as counsel to U.S. House committees and task forces, and as a Deputy Assistant Attorney General at the U.S. Department of Justice. Despite the present demands of his private practice, he teaches a class on congressional investigations right up the street at Georgetown University Law Center.

Jay Zainey is today's nominee for the district court in the Eastern District of Louisiana. Mr. Zainey has maintained a successful private practice and has garnered the respect of his colleagues, as reflected in his election as President of the Louisiana State Bar Association. One remarkable achievement during his tenure as president was the creation of the first state bar committee in the nation to provide legal referral services for the disabled.

I welcome each of our nominees to the Committee this afternoon, and commend the President on his choices for the federal judiciary. I look forward to working with my Democratic colleagues to ensure your swift confirmation.

evidently the WH charges outside groups to pay the cost of production for a video, in this case $1000. The National Guard didn't have the funds, so the SD party will pick up the tab.

What exactly will the $1000 pay for? Generally, when the President provides a video for a specific purpose, we limit use of the video for that specific purpose. That is, if it is provided for a particular event, it may be used for that event only, and we try to limit any further recirculation of the video.

I got a message today from Maj. Settle with the SD National Guard regarding the video the President recorded for Gov. Janklow. He said that a gentleman named Stanford Adelstein of Rapid City had agreed to pay the costs of the video, and I wanted to run this by you. I have never had an individual pay for a presidential video and thought there might be some political/legal issues with this (legal--I can check with Noel Francisco). Otherwise, I was hoping the SD party might pick up the tab (about $1000). Please let me know your thoughts. Thanks.

Relatives of Sept. 11 victims want compensation for Afghans hurt by U.S. bombings
NEW YORK (AP) The United States should compensate victims of U.S. bombings in Afghanistan, families who lost loved ones in the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks said Monday after returning from a visit to the Asian nation.
``They know what it's like to lose someone to violence you can't understand,'' said Kelly Campbell, 29, of Oakland, Calif., whose brother-in-law, Craig Amundson, was killed at the Pentagon.
Campbell appeared at a news conference with one other woman who lost a relative. They and two other relatives of Sept. 11 victims returned from Afghanistan on Saturday.
Their visit was organized by the San Francisco-based Global Exchange, a peace and human rights organization.
In Kabul, Afghanistan, Campbell and Rita Laser, 70, of New York City, whose brother Abe Zelmanowitz died in the World Trade Center, handed petitions for aid through the closed gates of the U.S. Embassy to a Marine guard.
Last week, the United States pledged $296 million during the current fiscal year to help Afghanistan rebuild from decades of war. The aid is part of a $4.5 billion, multiyear package pledged at a conference of nearly 60 donor nations and international organizations in Tokyo.

2. Will we have access to the photos? Will we have permission to use these after the event for future promotional opportunities? If so, to whom do we credit the photo?

NBC News Transcripts, 01/25/02:

Her Honor; Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor discusses being the first female Supreme Court justice

REPORTERS: KATIE COURIC

HER HONOR

Announcer: From our studio in New York, here is Stone Phillips.

STONE PHILLIPS: Good evening. They are powerful and enigmatic, they meet behind closed doors, their work cloaked in secrecy, and they affect each and every one of us. They are the justices of the US Supreme Court, and they almost never speak publicly about their decisions or their lives. But tonight, in a DATELINE Exclusive, Katie Couric has the first prime time interview with the first woman to sit on the high court, Sandra Day O'Connor. Katie:

KATIE COURIC reporting: Thanks, Stone.

To many, Justice O'Connor has been an icon of intellect and equality ever since she took her place on the bench more than 20 years ago. But sitting down with her, I also found a humble, relaxed, and at times, very funny woman who readily admits to once having some mixed feelings about her place in history. Justice SANDRA DAY O'CONNOR: The phone rang, and it was President Reagan, 'Sandra, I'd like to announce your nomination to court tomorrow. Is that all right with you?' And I didn't know if it was or not.

COURIC: (Voiceover) For Sandra Day O'Connor, it was hard to believe the choice was hers. She could become perhaps the most influential woman in the country, but she wasn't so sure she was the right person for the job.

(Sandra Day O'Connor exiting car; Supreme Court building; flag)

COURIC: You were scared?

Justice O'CONNOR: Yes. I was concerned about whether I could do the job well enough to deserve saying yes.

COURIC: (Voiceover) A very rare and candid admission from a member of the most exclusive and reclusive club in America.

COURIC: 'The first woman on the Supreme Court' is a pretty daunting title.

Justice O'CONNOR: Yes.

COURIC: Did you think about how important that was for women everywhere?

Justice O'CONNOR: Well, of course. Of course. The minute I was confirmed and on the Court, states across the country started putting more women on than had ever been the case on their supreme courts. And it made a difference in the acceptance of young women as lawyers. It opened doors for them.

Here we go.

COURIC: OK. So this is...

COURIC: (Voiceover) Sandra Day O'Connor has been opening--well, gently pushing doors open all of her life, sometimes without even knowing it. Born Sandra Day 71 years ago, she traces her pioneering spirit back to her childhood, growing up on the Lazy B, the name of the family cattle ranch along the Arizona/New Mexico border, an isolated, lonely place where O'Connor's main companions were books and cowboys.

Justice O'CONNOR: There were not other children with whom to play. And I didn't have a brother and sister for about 10 years, and was an only child in this rather godforsaken place.

COURIC: (Voiceover) But this "rather godforsaken place" and the people who lived there would shape Sandra Day in ways that would resonate throughout her life. She says her mother, called M.O., made a hard life look easy, adding style and sophistication to the ranch with subscriptions to Vogue, The New Yorker and National Geographic. She taught Sandra to read when she was just four. She describes her father, who everyone called D.A., as intelligent, curious and friendly to everyone, and the epitome of self-reliance.

Justice O'CONNOR: He had to build a house. He had to doctor the cattle. He even doctored cowboys on occasion, and the rest of us if something went wrong.

COURIC: (Voiceover) In her new book, "Lazy B," that O'Connor wrote with her brother Alan, she recalls not only her parents, but the other men who would play a crucial role in her life: the cowboys.

COURIC: You describe them as "tobacco chewing, unshaven, unbathed,

Justice O'CONNOR: That's right.

COURIC: They sound like they come straight out of central casting.

Justice O'CONNOR: Well, they did. But they kind of enjoyed having a little girl around to tease and play with, I think.

COURIC: (Voiceover) And it wouldn't be long before they were all playing "Home on the Range."

COURIC: Before you rode on the roundups, it had been an all-male domain.

Justice O'CONNOR: Right.

COURIC: And you say that you've been breaking down all-male barriers really ever since.

Justice O'CONNOR: Ever since then.

COURIC: (Voiceover) Intent on giving her a good education, beginning in kindergarten Sandra's parents sent her to school in El Paso, Texas, where she lived with her grandmother and soared academically. She skipped two grades and graduated from high school at 16. She then headed to Stanford majoring in economics. And finally, on to Stanford Law, where she was one of six women in her class. O'Connor graduated third--the number one spot occupied by the big man on campus, now the big man on the court.

COURIC: You're behind Chief Justice Rehnquist.

Justice O'CONNOR: Absolutely.

COURIC: But you graduated first.

Justice O'CONNOR: He was a star. The total star.

COURIC: Speaking of Chief Justice Rehnquist, I read that you actually dated William Rehnquist when you all were at Stanford together.

Justice O'CONNOR: Well, we went to a few movies, and one thing or an other.

Justice O'CONNOR: Yes.

COURIC: Wow. That's...

Justice O'CONNOR: And then...

COURIC: That's quite a record.

Justice O'CONNOR: Then John decided he needed to get some rest.

COURIC: Yeah.

(Voiceover) O'Connor's introduction to Sandra's father was just as grueling.

COURIC: One of the funniest stories in the book is about how you brought John...

Justice O'CONNOR: Oh, to the ranch.

COURIC: Yes, poor John.

Justice O'CONNOR: I know. He was a city boy.

COURIC: I can't believe he stuck around.

Justice O'CONNOR: We arrived one afternoon, and my father and the cowboys were down in the corral. They were branding calves and castrating the bull calves and tossing the testicles in the bucket on the side. And my father went over and got some bailing wire off the fence, made kind of a long skewer out of it, took a couple of these things out of the bucket, trimmed them a little with his pocket knife, stuck them on this bailing wire skewer and put them in the branding fire where they sizzled away. And eventually he held it out. 'Here John, try these.' And poor John, he had to take one and, gulp, 'Very good, Mr. Day.' It must have been a miserable moment.

COURIC: 'Mountain oysters' you call them, right?

Justice O'CONNOR: Mountain oysters.

COURIC: Have you ever eaten one of those?

Justice O'CONNOR: Of course. We used to have them for the cocktail hour. My mother knew how to fix them pretty well.

COURIC: (Voiceover) Clearly she had proven that she could handle anything on the ranch, but it was harder to prove she could handle the then male-dominated world of law.

Justice O'CONNOR: I was shocked. I think I was naive. I had never stopped to think that it might be hard to get a job.

COURIC: (Voiceover) She found out that it was when she tried to get hired as a lawyer in the 1950s.

Justice O'CONNOR: The partner who interviewed me said, 'Miss Day, how do you type?' And I said, 'Well, fair, not great, but I can get by.' And he said, 'Well, if you can type well enough, I might be able to get you a job here as a legal secretary, but we've never hired a woman as a lawyer here, and we don't anticipate that we will be doing that.'

COURIC: (Voiceover) Undeterred, she kept on trying, eventually landing a job with the attorney general in Northern California. Over the course of her career, she would open a small firm in Phoenix, work as a state judge and give politics a try, becoming the first female state Senate majority leader in the nation. Along the way, she would spend five years as a full-time mom, raising her three sons, Scott, Brian and Jay.

Justice O'CONNOR: (From video) Good morning.

COURIC: (Voiceover) But nothing would prepare her for what was on the docket in 1981. A vacancy was created when Supreme Court Justice Potter Stewart retired. O'Connor, then a state appeals court judge, was summoned to Washington to discuss the job. After a 40-minute get-acquainted chat in the Oval Office, O'Connor returned to Arizona.

(Sandra; empty Supreme Court; Washington Monument; video of Sandra and Ronald Reagan)

Justice O'CONNOR: I got on the airplane and sat down and took a big breath and said, 'My, that was an interesting time to go to Washington. But thank goodness I don't have to do that job.'

COURIC: Why did you think you hadn't gotten it?

Justice O'CONNOR: I was sure that I wouldn't be asked. I just thought it was so unlikely, and so I breathed a big sigh of relief.

Unidentified Reporter: (From video) Mr. President, what about a woman for the Supreme Court?

COURIC: (Voiceover) But three days later, she'd have to catch her breath again when President Reagan called to offer her the job. Suddenly, all eyes were on Sandra Day O'Connor. Twenty years after she was sworn in, her views are still analyzed and dissected, and, to the fascination of court watchers, almost impossible to predict.

COURIC: You've often been described, Justice O'Connor, as the swing vote on the Supreme Court. People say that however you vote, so goes the court.

Justice O'CONNOR: I don't share the notion expressed by some in the media in trying to describe the justices. I try to do the best I can with each case and leave it there.

COURIC: (Voiceover) And according to those close to her, she never looks back. Even when a court decision creates a stir. Ten years ago, many abortion opponents thought the Supreme Court would overturn the landmark decision legalizing abortion, Roe vs. Wade.

COURIC: Many consider your most dramatic decision was the case of Planned Parenthood vs. Casey, where you concluded while lawmakers could regulate abortion through things like 24-hour waiting periods, the essential holding of Roe vs. Wade would still stand. Did you feel incredible pressure because abortion in this country is such a hot-button issue?

Justice O'CONNOR: It is an issue on which people in the nation are deeply divided. They have been ever since I've been on this court, and I think still are. And it's an issue about which people feel passionately. And I'm very much aware of that when we have a case in that area.

COURIC: (Voiceover) Passions ran high again when the Supreme Court found itself casting the deciding vote on the 2000 presidential election.

(People protesting regarding 2000 presidential election)

COURIC: Bush vs. Gore. I know you don't want to get into details at all. But you did join the 5-4 vote to stop the Florida recount. And that, in essence, delivered the White House to George Bush. Can you describe the atmosphere at all, Justice O'Connor?

Justice O'CONNOR: I--I just think that's inappropriate.

COURIC: (Voiceover) That's exactly the word some critics used to describe the decision, critics who charged the court had succumbed to politics, forever tarnishing its image and reputation for impartiality.

(People protesting regarding 2000 presidential election)

Justice O'CONNOR: (Voiceover) There was a great deal of criticism.

(Lawsuit document)

Justice O'CONNOR: It was a difficult case. It's too bad that it came up.

COURIC: Do you wish it had never fallen on the shoulders of the Supreme Court?

Justice O'CONNOR: Of course. Of course. Of course I do. I mean, we don't enjoy being thrust into the middle of political controversy. We don't always have a choice in what comes here.

COURIC: (Voiceover) Nor did she have a choice in a very personal battle: a diagnosis of breast cancer in 1988. During her six months of treatment, O'Connor never missed a day in court.

(Video of Sandra)

Justice O'CONNOR: It was a devastating thing to be told, and you can't believe that you have some disease that is potentially fatal, that you have to stop everything and take care of it. You tend to think, 'Me? You can't be serious. I'm too busy. I don't have time to deal with something like that.' And yet, you have to make time to deal with it.

COURIC: What is the most valuable lesson, Justice O'Connor, you learned from this that might be helpful to other people who are facing a similar crisis?

Justice O'CONNOR: Stay busy with something else to keep your mind off of it. And the other thing that I think I learned from it was to appreciate and treasure each day, because you don't know how many you'll be given, so make those that you have count.

COURIC: (Voiceover) An unusual display of candor from a woman whose thoughts are generally shared only through her written opinions.

(Sandra working)

COURIC: The fact that we're actually sitting down and doing this interview is somewhat notable. Supreme Court justices, as a rule, are not very available to talk to--to members of the press.

Justice O'CONNOR: Right. Right. Well, we lead what are, essentially, academic lives here. We're trying to deal with issues, and do a great deal of reading, thinking, writing. And it isn't the kind of thing, as an academic, that you want to air your views in public as you go along.

COURIC: (Voiceover) Though she now has company, many marvel at the ease and grace with which O'Connor has handled the attention that goes with her 'first female' status.

(Justices in reception line)

Justice O'CONNOR: I'm thrilled to be in this gorgeous building.

COURIC: Now, do you have...

(Voiceover) And as we walked the halls of the Supreme Court, it's clear she's keenly aware of her role in history,

(Sandra and reporter touring Supreme Court)

Justice O'CONNOR: So, here we are in my chambers. And it has such a nice view of the Capitol.

COURIC: (Voiceover) But don't say Sandra Day O'Connor brings something special to the chamber because of her gender.

COURIC: You don't like to be considered a judge who speaks--or a justice--with a different voice because you're a woman. You're a justice who happens to be a woman.

Justice O'CONNOR: Exactly. And it seems to me as other women on the bench have said from time to time, that, 'A wise old woman and a wise old man will reach the same decision,' and I think that's generally true.

COURIC: One of your former clerks said that when it comes to the role of women, you're--you're sort of like "Annie Get Your Gun," 'Anything he can do, I can do better.'

Justice O'CONNOR: I don't know about that.

COURIC: How about, 'Anything he can do, I can do as well'?

Justice O'CONNOR: Yeah. There you go. There you go. Or at least try.

COURIC: There was speculation that Justice O'Connor might consider retiring in the near future, but in a highly unusual move for a member of the high court, she announced that she would not be stepping down any time soon. During our interview, Justice O'Connor also addressed speculation that if Chief Justice Rehnquist were to retire, she might be tapped to take his place. She told me she doesn't even think about that possibility.

To read an excerpt from Justice O'Connor's book, "Lazy B," logon to our Web site. The address is dateline.msnbc.com.

Announcer: Coming up, the sentencing of the dad who killed another father at their sons' hockey practice. UUUU Unidentified Boy: (In court) My dad will never be back to me and to my family.

Announcer: The emotional final act in the case that would rivet the country.

Brett,

I figured it might be easier to just forward this email.

Per Lorraine Nisbet in Strategic Initiatives, several political guests are coming to the State of the Union. Lorraine contacted the RNC to have hotel accommodations provided for them. As you'll see below, there are a few more expenses. Do we need to give the okay on any of this (i.e. provide paperwork) or can the RNC just go forward with making arrangements for these folks? Thanks!

Kim

Hi Kim,
I'm sorry to bother you again. I just wanted to double check with you one more time because there will be more expenses the RNC will be paying for in addition to the hotel and airfare expenses for tonight's guests. There are three individuals (additional guests possible) that are coming to the State of the Union Address this evening per Lorraine Nesbitt. The RNC has reserved and will pay for the all hotel rooms and the airfare for one guest. Also, the RNC has rented a shuttle bus to transport these guests and others from the White House to the Capital. I had asked you last night about the hotels but I wanted to also let you know about the shuttle . I know in the past we reimbursed WH staff for expenses like these rather than paying for them directly and I just to make sure we can directly pay for this. Sorry if I am being a pain I just want to make sure I going through the proper channels.
Thank you,

Today's admin meeting was short, but here's the scoop on what's happening.

Please continue to be patient when ordering supplies as our supply people are going around the area (w/ Secret Service escort) to purchase supplies to fill our needs.

Fed Ex There is now a 24 hour delay in receiving delivered Fex Ex flat letter packages. For larger packages, all bets are off. They are still trying to get things to us as soon as possible.

If you will need a Congressional Directory (for computer desktop), please let me know so I can place our order.

Parking: Please be sure that when you park, your parking permit/pass must be displayed. Park police will begin ticketing and you are responsible for any tickets received. Unless you park on West Exec, you are not guaranteed a parking spot. You are reminded to park in the areas that your permit covers.

The State of the Union address is at 9 pm and will be available broadcast on our website (www.whitehouse.gov).

That's all folks. Have a great day!

Tim asked me to respond to you on this. As a matter of law, EOP officials who do not work set hours (in other words, non-career EOP officials) are explicitly authorized to "organize" fundraisers and engage in other political activity, even while on the job, and they also can speak at fundraisers. They cannot, however, directly solicit or receive contributions, host fundraisers, or use their official titles in connection with political activity. Note that it can be difficult, of course, to organize a fundraiser (allowed) without personally soliciting funds (not allowed), and I have talked to Jocelyn about some additional prudential issues beyond the law.

I told Charlie Spies that we cannot approve the request for the plane they had lined up for the trip down there. The RNC can charter a plane or can pay for Sec. Evans to fly commercial.
Note that we have tentatively approved a flight for Sec. Evans from Naples to Orlando on Al Hoffman's plane.
If you want, I can come down and explain further.

Could you also tell me the rules on charter planes for the RNC? Would the RNC be able to pay first class airfare for a corporate plane to fly Sec. Evans to a fundraiser? (or would they have to charter a plane) It is specifically for a Team 100/Regents meeting in FL, some what of a donor maintainence rather than fundraiser.

Subject: political travel

I'm trying to get a better understanding of trave procedures when it comes to sending Administration officials to do poltical events for our Republican candidates. Example:

Secretary Evans has agreed to speak to the SD Chamber of Commerce in Pierre, SD. We would also like him to do a fundraiser for John Thune. Because there would be a fundraiser in the same city as the SD chamber event, the Thune campaign is responsible for travel costs. (I conferred with Toner on FEC law)

FEC law also states that a campaign can use a corporate plane if first class airfare is reimbursed for each person traveling before the plane takes off. Legally, it is ok for Thune to fly Evans on a corporate plane.

But, my question for you is will you allow Evans to fly on a corporate plane?? If we find an owner who allows his plane to be used frequently for political travel and the company doesn't have significant business before the federal government, can we generally operate under the assumption that this will work?? This is particularly important for far away states like SD. Please advise.

Thanks.

Tim asked me to respond to you on this. As a matter of law, EOP officials who do not work set hours (in other words, non-career EOP officials) are explicitly authorized to "organize" fundraisers and engage in other political activity, even while on the job, and they also can speak at fundraisers. They cannot, however, directly solicit or receive contributions, host fundraisers, or use their official titles in connection with political activity. Note that it can be difficult, of course, to organize a fundraiser (allowed) without personally soliciting funds (not allowed), and I have talked to Jocelyn about some additional prudential issues beyond the law.

so, the RNC cannot arrange for a plane to get him to Naples, but they can to get him to Orlando?

Or is it always out for the RNC or other pol. committee (that is not a campaign) to arrange for a plane for a cabinet member?

I am not that bright so i may need further explaination, but no need to come down- you can call.

The Free Congress Commentary
Government Without the Consent of the Governed?
By Paul M. Weyrich

Enron gave lots of money to the Republicans who occupy the White House as well as those who sit in Congress. But they played both sides and aided the Democrats as well. The news media has been trying to make the case that there is some scandal here. But time after time these guys go fishing and come up empty-handed. In fact they have had to shift course. Finding that GOP officials did not lift a finger to help Enron, the media and some Democrats are denouncing the Administration for doing nothing.

This is a crazy town. Take so-called campaign reform. Liberal Republicans and Democrats had filed a discharge petition to force a vote on the "reform" bill in the House after the bill went down in flames last year.

Now comes the Enron fiasco. Resignations and finger pointing were still taking place when the media began driving home the message that Enron was another example of why we needed campaign reform. Sure enough, fuzzy-headed liberals, mostly from the Stupid Party, joined on, desperately hoping for a kind word from the New York Times editorial page. I wonder how many of them have ever calculated who in their district cares about the New York Times or the Washington Post or even the Boston Globe. It is no wonder Kevin Phillips years ago branded our government a "Mediaocracy.'' We are run by the media or the absurdity of what happened this past week would never have taken place.

No use crying over spilled campaign contributions. Speaker Hastert has been forced by Members of his own party into scheduling a vote on so-called campaign finance reform. The essence of the bill would cut off so-called soft money. Issue groups would be prohibited from explaining the voting records of Members of Congress within sixty days of an election. The bill is no doubt unconstitutional, but we won't have that verdict until 2004. The political parties would be prohibited from using soft money for party building and to develop themes and comparisons between themselves and their candidates on issues.

Make no mistake about it: This legislation is about free speech. It is about the freedom to exercise the will of individuals and groups in the political process. If Sen. John McCain, who has pushed this approach unrelentingly following his failed presidential campaign, prevails, and if the U.S. Supreme Court somehow garners the five votes to uphold these ideas so contrary to the framers of our Constitution, then we will have government without the consent of the governed.

That is what is at stake as Speaker Hastert looks at his options. There is another strange little twist to this whole consideration. When you look at what the parties have raised in total dollars, they appear to be very competitive. They are within a couple million of each other. That's good news for Democrats who usually lag way behind the GOP in the number of dollars available for the elections. A closer look, however, reveals that most of the money the Democrats have raised is in soft dollars. By contrast, the vast majority of Republican money is in hard dollars. So does Speaker-wannabe Gephardt and Majority Leader by one Daschle agree to a bill which would apply to THIS election in 2002 when it would drain away almost all of their money and which would leave the Republicans with a huge monetary advantage?

My guess is that the Democratic leadership will try to get the bill amended to apply to the 2004 election. By then the Democrats would have the chance to straighten themselves around. Yet if they touch the legislation, purists will scream ???sell out.??? The news media will likely join the purists in claiming that special interests are trying to manipulate this bill.

It will be interesting to see who prevails. There is a long shot that the Democratic leadership would put out the word that this bill hurts Democrats and to join quietly with Republicans to defeat it. I don't believe that will happen because the Democrats are too indebted to the interests who have been pushing the bill. If they don't change the date of application, they will be slitting their own throats. My guess is that is what they will try to do is change the date. Republicans should not help them accomplish this. If terrible unconstitutional legislation is what the Democrats want, then the Republicans should give it to them and see what happens.

Paul Weyrich is president of the Free Congress Foundation.

Senators play politics with judicial choice
Jan 28 2002 12:00AM By the Editorial Board of the Union-Bulletin

The power to appoint federal judges is clearly vested in the president.
Sens. Patty Murray and Maria Cantwell, both Democrats, are irate over President Bush's selection of Ronald Leighton to be a federal district judge for Western Washington. The senators believe Bush, a Republican, should have made the selection through a ``bipartisan'' process.
Funny, we heard the same sort of rant from former Sen. Slade Gorton, a Republican, when President Clinton, a Democrat, was in office. Yet, Murray wasn't too riled about the issue during the Clinton years.
Murray's and Cantwell's concerns ring as hollow today as Gorton's did a few years ago.
The power to appoint federal judges is clearly vested with the president.
The Senate's role in the process is equally clear - it looks at nominees' qualifications to determine if they are fit for the post.
However, it is custom that the president consult with the senators from the state where the federal judge will be presiding. Not surprisingly, the president tends to take more seriously the wishes of senators of his own political party.
Murray and Cantwell, both seasoned political veterans, should understand that reality.
Yet, the pair have promised (or is that threatened?) to block Leighton's nomination unless the White House uses a bipartisan commission to make federal judicial appointments. The tirade is akin to a kid throwing a tantrum at a sandlot baseball game when he vows to take his ball and go home
if he doesn't get to play shortstop.
The Bush administration is on high ground here. Perhaps, from a standpoint of political expediency, the administration should have catered more to Murray and Cantwell. After all, the Democrats do control the Senate.
Nevertheless, the White House has no reason to apologize. Bush asked Rep.
Jennifer Dunn, R-Wash., to head a selection committee. Dunn apparently asked

Murray and Cantwell to appoint people to the committee, but they declined because the senators did not want to be obligated to support the commission's final four candidates.

Ultimately, we would like to see a truly bipartisan process used to select federal judges. But we are also pragmatists. This president, like all presidents, is going to take ideology and politics into account when making appointments.

Murray and Cantwell had an opportunity to be involved - to some degree - in the selection process. Instead, they opted to play politics.

I'm teaching a class at Georgetown this semester about the history of presidential scandal. Last night, we examined Teapot Dome, and I had my students analyze the special prosecutor structure used in that scandal: two ICs of opposite parties appointed by the president with advice and consent. Almost to a one, the students loved the appointment mechanism (many also liked, by the way, the dual IC model). Which means that your article has at least 14 voting age constituents.

Short Circuited: Senate Sits on Estrada Hearings

Let the borking begin-or, rather, continue as far as President Bush's judicial nominees are concerned. Miguel Estrada, a distinguished Washington lawyer, has been nominated as the first Hispanic jurist on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, but his hearing continues to be delayed by the Senate's usual suspects. The most vocal opponent is Former Deputy Solicitor General Paul Bender, who criticized Estrada for his so-called conservative bias. Bender has earned a reputation as one of the most liberal professors in the country, who has made it his personal mission to discredit Estrada with false accusations. As the editor for the Harvard Law Review, magna cum laude, and law clerk to Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy, Mr. Estrada's credentials speak for themselves. Look for a repeat performance of the liberals' "politics of personal destruction."

Rep. Jones Hopes to End Churches' "Silent Treatment"

For two centuries, America's religious leaders used their pulpits to mobilize their followers on the political issues of their time. In recent years, however, the threat of IRS investigations has made churches reluctant to talk about topics like abortion, homosexuality, or even political candidates. Thus far, the law has been unevenly enforced, with conservative churches drawing more IRS scrutiny than others. Now, 48 years after Lyndon B. Johnson's amendment to curb charitable organizations' political activity, Congressman Walter B. Jones (R-NC) has introduced a new bill. His Houses of Worship Political Speech Protection Act would permit pastors, priests, or rabbis to engage in public policy by distributing voter guides and taking positions on moral issues. Despite the bill's 112 co-sponsors, the legislation sits idle in the House. We call on the Ways and Means Committee to move this important bill along so ministers can speak their minds without fear of government reprisal.

Our special guests this week are Dayna Curry and Heather Mercer. Dayna and Heather were the U.S. Christian aid workers who spent more than three months of confinement in harsh Taliban prisons before being freed from their cells on November 15 by U.S. Special Forces. Come and hear their incredible testimony.

As I understand it, the Governor has been scheduled to travel to NY tonight with a number of other OHS personnel (Neely?) on official travel via US Air in order to participate in a series of long-planned television appearances on Wednesday relating to his official responsibilities.

Background

The question has been raised as to whether there are any issues if -- rather than return in the afternoon -- Gov. Ridge elects to join the President, Sec. Card, Karl Rove and others to attend a two-tiered, $1.7 million political fundraiser on behalf of Gov. Patacki's re-election campaign -- and then returns to Washington via Air Force One.
(The first tier is at Mayor Bloomberg's personal home. Invitees are paying $25,000 per couple to attend (or $15,000 per person) this 1/2 hour event.
The second tier is a large ballroom speech by the President, at $1,500 per person.)

The Short Answer

The short answer is that, yes, it IS permissible for Gov. Ridge to attend political fundraising events such as these.

The key obligation is to then ensure that the Governor's travel and other expenses are allocated correctly.

Also, any OHS staff who elect to attend the NY or other fundraisers have the same obligation about allocating travel and other expenses.
The basic rule, as noted at page D-18 of the WH Staff Manual, is that "Government funds may NOT be used to cover travel or lodging or other political expenses." The Federal Election Commission has rules on allocating costs when a trip combines both political and official activities. The allocations in this case would apply both to allocated payments (or reimbursements) for tonight's travel via U.S. Air, and payments for any "political" portion of the return seats (for those from OHS who attend the fundraisers) aboard Air Force One, or for that matter for other expenses (such as ground transportation in NY to the political fundraiser). My understanding is that these calculations are handled by the Financial Management office in the Office of Administration, and that Marie will be following up with them. Given that it appears likely that other EOP employees in the presidential entourage appear to be subject to these same basic "allocation" requirements for the NY trip, doing a parallel calculation for the political allocation for OHS employees should be fairly straightforward.

Who Pays the "Political" Portion of the Travel Expenses?

Some such travel reimbursements are paid by individual campaign committees (such as Friends of Patacki) or political party committees (such as the RNC). Some are paid by the individual federal employee. If the allocated "political" portion of Gov. Ridge's (or other OHS staff) travel expenses are to be paid by a campaign or other third party, then the WH Staff Manual also requires, at page D-18, that "Advance approval must be obtained from Counsel's office for political travel the expense of which is paid for by someone other than the staff member." I have today sought and obtained that advance approval on behalf of Gov. Ridge, so yes he has that option. If there are other OHS staff on the trip who expect to participate in the fundraiser and receive allocated expense payments from the campaign, they should contact me as soon as practicable.

The Hatch Act

The Hatch Act prohibits all federal employees from using their official influence for the purposes of affecting the results of an election. No federal employee may solicit, receive or disburse political contributions -- or allow their official title to be used in connection with fundraising activities. For example, no official OHS title can be used in a campaign fundraiser invitation letter, or in printed materials for fundraisers. On this category, there appears to be no issue in this case.

I. PURPOSE

To demonstrate early and strong support for Governor Pataki's re-election campaign.

II. BACKGROUND

Pataki will face either former Housing and Urban Development Secretary Andrew Cuomo or New York State Comptroller Carl McCall, after the September 10 Democrat primary.

Pataki defeated incumbent Democrat Governor Mario Cuomo with 49 percent of the vote to Cuomo's 45 percent in 1994. He was re-elected in 1998 with 54 percent of the vote, the largest margin of any Republican in state history.

Friends of Pataki has raised $1.7 million from your fundraiser.

You will participate in a photo opportunity for the first portion of a two-tier fundraiser.

Governor Pataki has $16.5 cash on hand and has raised $20 million. The Governor's race is expected to cost $40 million. Cuomo has $6.9 million cash on hand and has raised $8.7 million. McCall has $5.1 million cash on hand and has raised $6 million.

Pataki is leading the polls:

Fight Over Judicial Nominee Resumes

By NEIL A. LEWIS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 - The case of Judge Charles W. Pickering of Mississippi, who has been nominated to a federal appeals court post, may be the beginning of the long-expected war over judicial nominations in the Bush presidency.

Civil rights and abortion rights groups have selected Judge Pickering, now a federal trial judge, as their first major target for defeat, and some Democratic senators on the Judiciary Committee have suggested they might be inclined to block the nomination. The White House and Senate Republicans have vowed to fight to the end to see Judge Pickering confirmed to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, based in New Orleans.

Judge Pickering, 64, a Mississippi native and longtime friend of Trent Lott, the Senate Republican leader, will appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday for an unusual second public hearing to discuss his record.

Two competing depictions of Charles Pickering have been put forward. His opponents describe him as "a throwback to the old, segregated South," in the words of Marcia Kuntz from the Alliance for Justice, one of the liberal Washington-based groups opposing the nomination.

His supporters have portrayed him almost as a kind of Atticus Finch, the heroic lawyer standing against bigotry in the novel "To Kill a Mockingbird." They say he has been a progressive figure on racial issues in Mississippi, and they praised him for testifying against a Ku Klux Klan leader at a murder trial in the 1960's.

Both sides have lined up rosters of people, especially black Mississippians, to support their version.

The case also provides another opportunity to consider the vexing issue of whether there is a moral or political statute of limitations on a Southerner's racial views; whether it is fair to blame someone for ideas held 30 or 40 years ago.

Most, but not all, of the evidence marshaled against Judge Pickering involves his behavior as a young man from 1959 to 1964. In 1959, while a student at the University of Mississippi law school, he wrote a three- page note for the law review, pointing out flaws in the state's law prohibiting marriages between blacks and whites. The antimiscegenation law, he said, was vulnerable to attack unless changes were made by the Legislature. They were.

L. A. Warren, an official of the Mississippi state conference of the N.A.A.C.P., said the 1959 article should still count in judging the man.

"This was a man who wanted to preserve the Southern way of life and that meant racial separatism," Mr. Warren said in explaining his organization's vote to oppose the nomination.

Mr. Warren also said that in Judge Pickering's early years as a lawyer in the 1960's, he was a partner of Lt. Gov. Carroll Gartin, a staunch segregationist. Mr. Warren said that he was not bothered that raising the issue of partnership amounted to guilt by association and that the partnership demonstrated Mr. Pickering's sympathies.

He also criticized Mr. Pickering's decision in 1964 to bolt the Democratic Party and become a Republican. "You have to understand that the only issue in the Mississippi Democratic Party in 1964 was whether the party was going to open some of its offices to black people," Mr. Warren said.

News articles at the time quote Mr. Pickering as attributing his move to a judgment that the national Democratic Party was too liberal for him.

James King, a black political consultant affiliated with the Republican Party, who has known Judge Pickering for more than 25 years, said he generally discounted instances of racial rivalry in Mississippi in the early 1960's.

"Back then, relations were quite heated," Mr. King said in an interview. "There was lots of hard, strong feelings on all sides."

He said he was stunned that anyone would charge that Mr. Pickering was insensitive on the issue of race. When Mr. Pickering was Jones County party chairman in 1976, Mr. King said, he reached out to black Republicans and made him the county's first black party official.

"He has always been my mentor," Mr. King said.

The one more recent issue about race involves Judge Pickering's statements about his connection to Mississippi's Sovereignty Commission. The commission was a notorious state agency dedicated to retaining segregation and causing difficulty for civil rights activists, especially those from out of state.

When he was first nominated for the trial court in 1990, Mr. Pickering testified before the Judiciary Committee that he had no connection to the agency and knew little of its activities. But he is likely to be challenged at Thursday's hearing about that statement by senators who have since obtained records of the commission that were released in 1998. The records show that Mr. Pickering, then a state senator, asked a senior commission official to keep him informed about a fractious labor dispute at a Masonite plant in Laurel, his hometown.

The issue of abortion rights and Judge Pickering is more straightforward but also illuminates a contemporary question about evaluating judicial nominees: Should Judge Pickering's undisputed personal opposition to abortion be considered or is it obviated by his pledge to uphold the law no matter his own views?

There is little doubt that Judge Pickering has been an ardent opponent of abortion rights. He was the moving force behind the Republican Party's first platform plank in 1976 calling for a human life amendment.

Kate Michelman, the president of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said: "The circuit courts are where the boundaries on the right to choose are being worked out. This man would turn back the clock on progress."

Senator Edward M. Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat and member of the Judiciary Committee, said through a spokeswoman this week that he had "serious concerns about Judge Pickering's record in upholding civil rights and reproductive rights" and planned to question him closely on Thursday.

The committee held a hearing on the Pickering nomination on Oct. 18, but it was little noticed because of the events of Sept. 11. Democrats insisted that another hearing be held after they learned that Judge Pickering had issued more than 1,000 unpublished opinions during his time on the bench. That is highly unusual volume, as unpublished opinions are supposed to be only for routine, noncontroversial matters, and most of the times Judge Pickering has been reversed involved unpublished opinions.

Senator Lott has been unrelenting in his support. Judge Pickering's son, Charles W. Pickering Jr., used to work for Mr. Lott and is now a congressman from Mississippi.

"Judge Pickering has been an outstanding, effective district court judge who is extremely qualified and supported by a broad group of Republicans and Democrats from our state," Mr. Lott said in a statement. "Unfortunately, he is being subjected to unnecessary partisan harassment and obstructionism."

U.S. Department of Justice

Office of Legislative Affairs

Washington, D.C. 20530

Draft February 6, 2002

The Honorable Dan Burton
Chairman
Committee on Government Reform
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

This is to reiterate the Department's offer to meet with you about the Boston documents that are responsive to the Committee's subpoena of September 6, 2002.

As I indicated at the hearing on February 6, a meeting would provide an opportunity for Department officials to describe each document to you and learn more about the Committee's particularized needs. While we understand that you believe that a meeting will not satisfy your needs, we believe that such an exchange of information would be helpful to resolving the dispute regarding these documents and to your preparations for the Committee's hearing on February 13. Your website indicates that Judge Edward Harrington is scheduled to appear at the hearing and one of the documents we have offered to discuss with you relates to the performance of his duties as an Assistant United States Attorney in Boston. Accordingly, I want to reiterate our offer to meet with you about the subpoenaed Boston documents.

Please do not hesitate to contact me if you would like additional assistance regarding this or any other matter.

Sincerely,

Daniel J. Bryant
Assistant Attorney General

Judiciary Showdown Looms

The ongoing fight over President Bush's judicial nominees is expected to get ugly on Thursday, when the Senate Judiciary Committee holds its second hearing on U.S. District Judge Charles Pickering Sr. -- the embattled nominee Bush has named to fill a seat on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

A coalition of liberal groups have arrayed in opposition to Pickering, claiming he has a poor record on abortion, women's rights and civil rights. But a closer look at his record shows that Pickering is being opposed primarily because he is conservative, not because he's a bad judge.

For example, in an Oct. 18, 2001, letter to Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, Nan Aron, president of Alliance for Justice -- one of the groups opposed to Pickering -- notified Leahy that Pickering had once chaired the Republican Party platform committee that voted to condemn Roe v. Wade, the Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. However, Pickering's political activity occurred in 1976, when he was a state senator -- not a judge.

Groups also claim Pickering is "anti-woman" because he opposed the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA). But according to the conservative Coalition for a Fair Judiciary, Pickering opposed the ERA because it would have subjected women to the military draft. The Coalition also pointed out that Pickering publicly supported equal pay and equal treatment for women.

Probably the most volatile charge, however, is that Pickering has a poor record on civil rights. Yet according to a Feb. 4 article in Legal Times, Pickering fought against the Ku Klux Klan and helped put Klansmen in jail when he was a Jones County, Miss., prosecutor in the 1960s. Later as a judge, he also worked with black civic leaders to craft civil rights compromises and to develop after-school programs to help keep black males out of the justice system. He has been praised by local black leaders as "fair" and "sensitive on racial issues."

TAKE ACTION:

Please make a special effort to contact Sens. Mike DeWine (202-224-2315) and Arlen Specter (202-224-4254) -- key members of the Judiciary Committee -- and urge them to vote to confirm Pickering.

Bush Asks for More Abstinence Funds
By Stuart Shepard, correspondent

SUMMARY: President Bush is asking for an increase in abstinence education funding, and experts say it's definitely needed.

More money to encourage purity. President Bush's budget proposal includes an increase of $33 million for "abstinence only" education, raising the total to $135 million a year.

Pat Fagan, an analyst with the conservative think-tank The Heritage Foundation, had encouraged the White House to increase spending on abstinence education. He says young people need a message that clearly communicates the value of abstinence over "safe sex."

"What the president has done here is to say, 'Well, the traditional, virtuous way deserves at least as much money as the other way,' " Fagan said. "You can't say to kids, 'Look, we want you to walk down this path, but, by the way, this is another path you can walk down.' The kids are going to be confused and say, 'Now wait, which path are you pointing me towards? They're going two very different directions."

How important is abstinence? At a recent weekend camp, 8th-grade girls learned how to untangle the confusing messages they get concerning morality and sexuality. The camp is the first session of a program for public schools provided by a nonprofit group called Intercept.

Michele Prible is an Intercept team leader at the camp.

"I believe in abstinence-until-marriage education because I see it working," Prible said.

The program, she said, especially targets those girls most at-risk for teen pregnancy.

"We teach abstinence until marriage, but it's so much more than that, because when they learn the abstinence-until-marriage message, their whole future and perspective on what they're doing with their life now -- and with their future -- is changed."

The girls may not know much about the federal funding that makes it possible, but they do know the impact.

Said one camper: "I think it changed my life on the perspective of doing drugs and having sex before I'm married."

To many, that sounds like money well spent.

The budget increase for abstinence-only education fulfills a campaign promise from President Bush. It also brings the spending on abstinence to nearly the same level as the amount going to failed "comprehensive sex education" -- or condom education -- programs of the past 30 years.

Abstinence-only education got its original funding out of the Welfare Reform Act.

Lynne Cheney Speaks Out For History
By Charles R. MiVille, Washington, D.C., correspondent

SUMMARY: Recent studies show college students know more about TV sitcoms than they do about American history.

While Vice President Dick Cheney is helping the president fight the war on terrorism, his wife Lynne is working to remind our young people what it is we're defending.

How bad is the problem? A recent survey asked students at Harvard, Yale and other top colleges about American history. Seth Leibson, of Empower America, said the results were shocking.

"Ninety-nine percent of college students know who Beavis and Butthead are, according to that same survey," Leibson said . "Yet 22 percent can't identify (the phrase) 'government of the people, by the people for the people.' "

Lynne Cheney, the former chairwoman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, blames America's universities for the lack of knowledge. Many don't require students to learn American history to graduate.

Peter Ferrara, a spokesman with the American Civil Rights Union, said the trend even threatens our freedom.

"I think Lynne Cheney is exactly right," Ferrara said. "For our country to continue its legacy into the future, young people need to be educated as to what that legacy is."

Cheney has spent much of her professional life writing and speaking on the importance of history.

Charles Kesler, who teaches government at Claremont McKenna College, said the root of the problem goes beyond the classroom.

"Multiculturalism and movements within the university -- not just the history discipline but the other professions, as well -- have leached the moral significance out of the Western tradition and especially out of the American tradition," Kesler said.

Feminist-Leaning Military Panel Targeted
By Bob Kellogg, correspondent

SUMMARY: As America steps up its War on Terrorism, what role will women play in our armed forces?

Concerned Women for America and the Center for Military Readiness are urging the Bush administration to do away with a military advisory committee that has some radical ideas on that subject.

Army Lt. Col. James Casalla explained the function of the little-known Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services -- more commonly known as DACOWITS.

"Members from DACOWITS volunteer their time to meet with service members around the world at various times to hear what their concerns might be and then to make recommendations and provide advice," Casalla said.

Wendy Wright, spokeswoman for Concerned Women for America, said DACOWITS has unlimited access to military policy makers and has a feminist agenda.

"The military has one purpose -- to win wars," Wright said. "Gender politics has no place when we are dealing with something as serious as war."

Though DACOWITS was established in the 1950s, Elaine Donnelly, of the Center for Military Readiness, said the strong feminist platform only came about recently.

"Something has to be done about the social engineering policies put in place under Bill Clinton, including the incremental steps to get women into combat units that used to be all male," Donnelly said.

Donnelly said there is no longer a need for DACOWITS. Wright agreed it's now up to the president whether DACOWITS should continue.

"(The president) simply should not appoint any new people to this committee, and it will go out of existence," Wright said.

Both women said putting women in combat situations puts soldiers' lives in greater danger.

Donnelly said the Israeli Army used to put women in combat, until a group of them was ambushed, killed and their bodies desecrated. She said women haven't been used in combat since, except in aviation.

Towey Named Head of Faith-Based Effort
By Charles R. MiVille, Washington, D.C., correspondent

SUMMARY: President Bush has selected a new leader for his Office of Faith-Based Initiatives.

While the job ahead is bound to be difficult, the president's new selection to head up his Office of Faith-Based Initiatives is getting high marks from conservative groups who are very interested in what he brings to the table.

The candidate, Jim Towey, brings "a servant's heart to the job," according to Bush. Genevieve Wood, communications vice president for the Family Research Council, believes Towey, who succeeds John DiIulio, has both political acumen and experience with a faith-based ministry.

"He walked the halls of Congress when he worked for representatives there," Wood said. "He also brings with him firsthand experience in helping the poor, the needy. He worked for Mother Teresa. He (also) started a program to help the elderly. So, Jim is really someone who I think brings two key factors to this job."

Towey served as Florida's director of health and rehabilitation services under Democratic Gov. Lawton Chiles. He also worked with Mother Teresa's ministry for more than 10 years.

In 1996, Towey founded the advocacy group Aging With Dignity.

Gary Bergel, of Intercessors for America, said Towey is an answer to prayer.

"He has . . .broad-based experience and (is) one who has actually modeled out the very objectives that the faith-based initiative would be trying to execute across the nation," Bergel said.

Stephen Lazarus, of the Center for Public Justice, likes Towey's practical experience.

"We think that he's going to bring that with him to the kind of public policy and legislative work that that office has before it in the next year," Lazarus said.

President Hails Progress on Armies of Compassion Agenda

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush met with a bipartisan group of Senators who have introduced the CARE Act – legislation that closely mirrors the President's Armies of Compassion agenda to help America's charities. The President also urged the Senate leadership to move forward with the legislation.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ARMIES OF COMPASSION AGENDA

- Last year, the President announced his Armies of Compassion initiative to strengthen charitable organizations in America. Legislation reflecting key elements of the President's initiative -- H.R. 7, the Community Solutions Act, sponsored by Congressmen J.C. Watts (R-OK) and Tony Hall (D-OH) -- passed the House in July by a vote of 233-189.

- In August, the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives released the Unlevel Playing Field report. The report was the first comprehensive audit of five Federal agencies and their policies towards community and faith based organizations. The report showed the barriers these groups face in the Federal funding process.

- The CARE Act (Charity Aid, Recovery, and Empowerment)) builds on the good work of the House bill in meeting the key principles of the Armies of Compassion initiative. And, the legislation also includes provisions that help address the specific barriers identified in the Unlevel Playing Field report.

- The Senate legislation meets the President's Armies of Compassion principles in three key ways:

  (1) Encourages charitable giving through tax incentives.

  - Allows an estimated 84 million taxpayers who do not itemize to deduct their charitable contributions – providing a $400 (individual)/$800 (joint filers) deduction for charitable giving for two years;
  - Allows individuals to make tax-free distributions from their IRAs to charities after the age of 67; and
  - Provides enhanced deductions for farmers and restaurants to donate food to food banks.

  (2) Addresses principal barriers that faith- and community-based charities face in accessing Federal funds that were identified in the Administration's Unlevel Playing Field report.

  - Requires non-discrimination against non-governmental organizations based on religious grounds, religious iconography, governance, and lack of experience with government contracts;
  - Creates a 501(c)3 "EZ Pass" process to help small, community-based groups get tax-deductible status more easily; and
  - Establishes a $150 million Compassion Capital Fund to educate and empower community-based organizations.

  (3) Provides needed support for initiatives targeted to vulnerable populations.

- Authorizes up to $33 million in support for maternity group homes, principally for teenage unwed mothers.

BACKGROUND ON THE CHARITIES CRISIS IN AMERICA

- Many of America's charities have been hit hard in the aftermath of September 11 due to the effects of a weakened economy. A survey by the Independent Sector found that 48% of Americans will reduce their charitable giving if the economic slowdown worsens. The survey also found that 26% of Americans will stop giving or reduce the size of their donations to the charities they normally support due to their recent donation to September 11-related charitable causes.

- Today, the Association of Fund Raising Professionals -- representing more than 25,000 different social service, health and education-related charities -- released a report showing that nearly 45% of its charities reported a decline in gift receipts for the most recent reporting period. According to another study, individual and corporate donations were slashed by as much as $300 million in the Los Angeles area alone for the fourth quarter of 2001.

- President Bush's Armies of Compassion initiative is designed to support charities that provide vital social services for millions of disadvantaged Americans. The President urges the Senate leadership to take up the CARE Act quickly to help address America's charities crisis.

President Hails Progress on Armies of Compassion Agenda

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush met with a bipartisan group of Senators who have introduced the CARE Act – legislation that closely mirrors the President's Armies of Compassion agenda to help America's charities. The President also urged the Senate leadership to move forward with the legislation.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ARMIES OF COMPASSION AGENDA

- Last year, the President announced his Armies of Compassion initiative to strengthen charitable organizations in America. Legislation reflecting key elements of the President's initiative -- H.R. 7, the Community Solutions Act, sponsored by Congressmen J.C. Watts (R-OK) and Tony Hall (D-OH) -- passed the House in July by a vote of 233-189.

- In August, the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives released the Unlevel Playing Field report. The report was the first comprehensive audit of five Federal agencies and their policies towards community and faith based organizations. The report showed the barriers these groups face in the Federal funding process.

- The CARE Act (Charity Aid, Recovery, and Empowerment)) builds on the good work of the House bill in meeting the key principles of the Armies of Compassion initiative. And, the legislation also includes provisions that help address the specific barriers identified in the Unlevel Playing Field report.

- The Senate legislation meets the President's Armies of Compassion principles in three key ways:

  (1) Encourages charitable giving through tax incentives.

  - Allows an estimated 84 million taxpayers who do not itemize to deduct their charitable contributions – providing a $400 (individual)/$800 (joint filers) deduction for charitable giving for two years;
  - Allows individuals to make tax-free distributions from their IRAs to charities after the age of 67; and
  - Provides enhanced deductions for farmers and restaurants to donate food to food banks.

  (2) Addresses principal barriers that faith- and community-based charities face in accessing Federal funds that were identified in the Administration's Unlevel Playing Field report.

  - Requires non-discrimination against non-governmental organizations based on religious grounds, religious iconography, governance, and lack of experience with government contracts;
  - Creates a 501(c)3 "EZ Pass" process to help small, community-based groups get tax-deductible status more easily; and
  - Establishes a $150 million Compassion Capital Fund to educate and empower community-based organizations.

  (3) Provides needed support for initiatives targeted to vulnerable populations.

- Authorizes up to $33 million in support for maternity group homes, principally for teenage unwed mothers.

BACKGROUND ON THE CHARITIES CRISIS IN AMERICA

- Many of America's charities have been hit hard in the aftermath of September 11 due to the effects of a weakened economy. A survey by the Independent Sector found that 48% of Americans will reduce their charitable giving if the economic slowdown worsens. The survey also found that 26% of Americans will stop giving or reduce the size of their donations to the charities they normally support due to their recent donation to September 11-related charitable causes.

- Today, the Association of Fund Raising Professionals -- representing more than 25,000 different social service, health and education-related charities -- released a report showing that nearly 45% of its charities reported a decline in gift receipts for the most recent reporting period. According to another study, individual and corporate donations were slashed by as much as $300 million in the Los Angeles area alone for the fourth quarter of 2001.

- President Bush's Armies of Compassion initiative is designed to support charities that provide vital social services for millions of disadvantaged Americans. The President urges the Senate leadership to take up the CARE Act quickly to help address America's charities crisis.

President Hails Progress on Armies of Compassion Agenda

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush met with a bipartisan group of Senators who have introduced the CARE Act – legislation that closely mirrors the President's Armies of Compassion agenda to help America's charities. The President also urged the Senate leadership to move forward with the legislation.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ARMIES OF COMPASSION AGENDA

- Last year, the President announced his Armies of Compassion initiative to strengthen charitable organizations in America. Legislation reflecting key elements of the President's initiative -- H.R. 7, the Community Solutions Act, sponsored by Congressmen J.C. Watts (R-OK) and Tony Hall (D-OH) -- passed the House in July by a vote of 233-189.

- In August, the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives released the Unlevel Playing Field report. The report was the first comprehensive audit of five Federal agencies and their policies towards community and faith based organizations. The report showed the barriers these groups face in the Federal funding process.

- The CARE Act (Charity Aid, Recovery, and Empowerment)) builds on the good work of the House bill in meeting the key principles of the Armies of Compassion initiative. And, the legislation also includes provisions that help address the specific barriers identified in the Unlevel Playing Field report.

- The Senate legislation meets the President's Armies of Compassion principles in three key ways:

  (1) Encourages charitable giving through tax incentives.

  - Allows an estimated 84 million taxpayers who do not itemize to deduct their charitable contributions – providing a $400 (individual)/$800 (joint filers) deduction for charitable giving for two years;
  - Allows individuals to make tax-free distributions from their IRAs to charities after the age of 67; and
  - Provides enhanced deductions for farmers and restaurants to donate food to food banks.

  (2) Addresses principal barriers that faith- and community-based charities face in accessing Federal funds that were identified in the Administration's Unlevel Playing Field report.

  - Requires non-discrimination against non-governmental organizations based on religious grounds, religious iconography, governance, and lack of experience with government contracts;
  - Creates a 501(c)3 "EZ Pass" process to help small, community-based groups get tax-deductible status more easily; and
  - Establishes a $150 million Compassion Capital Fund to educate and empower community-based organizations.

  (3) Provides needed support for initiatives targeted to vulnerable populations.

- Authorizes up to $33 million in support for maternity group homes, principally for teenage unwed mothers.

BACKGROUND ON THE CHARITIES CRISIS IN AMERICA

- Many of America's charities have been hit hard in the aftermath of September 11 due to the effects of a weakened economy. A survey by the Independent Sector found that 48% of Americans will reduce their charitable giving if the economic slowdown worsens. The survey also found that 26% of Americans will stop giving or reduce the size of their donations to the charities they normally support due to their recent donation to September 11-related charitable causes.

- Today, the Association of Fund Raising Professionals -- representing more than 25,000 different social service, health and education-related charities -- released a report showing that nearly 45% of its charities reported a decline in gift receipts for the most recent reporting period. According to another study, individual and corporate donations were slashed by as much as $300 million in the Los Angeles area alone for the fourth quarter of 2001.

- President Bush's Armies of Compassion initiative is designed to support charities that provide vital social services for millions of disadvantaged Americans. The President urges the Senate leadership to take up the CARE Act quickly to help address America's charities crisis.

President Hails Progress on Armies of Compassion Agenda

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush met with a bipartisan group of Senators who have introduced the CARE Act – legislation that closely mirrors the President's Armies of Compassion agenda to help America's charities. The President also urged the Senate leadership to move forward with the legislation.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ARMIES OF COMPASSION AGENDA

- Last year, the President announced his Armies of Compassion initiative to strengthen charitable organizations in America. Legislation reflecting key elements of the President's initiative -- H.R. 7, the Community Solutions Act, sponsored by Congressmen J.C. Watts (R-OK) and Tony Hall (D-OH) -- passed the House in July by a vote of 233-189.

- In August, the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives released the Unlevel Playing Field report. The report was the first comprehensive audit of five Federal agencies and their policies towards community and faith based organizations. The report showed the barriers these groups face in the Federal funding process.

- The CARE Act (Charity Aid, Recovery, and Empowerment)) builds on the good work of the House bill in meeting the key principles of the Armies of Compassion initiative. And, the legislation also includes provisions that help address the specific barriers identified in the Unlevel Playing Field report.

- The Senate legislation meets the President's Armies of Compassion principles in three key ways:

  (1) Encourages charitable giving through tax incentives.

  - Allows an estimated 84 million taxpayers who do not itemize to deduct their charitable contributions – providing a $400 (individual)/$800 (joint filers) deduction for charitable giving for two years;
  - Allows individuals to make tax-free distributions from their IRAs to charities after the age of 67; and
  - Provides enhanced deductions for farmers and restaurants to donate food to food banks.

  (2) Addresses principal barriers that faith- and community-based charities face in accessing Federal funds that were identified in the Administration's Unlevel Playing Field report.

  - Requires non-discrimination against non-governmental organizations based on religious grounds, religious iconography, governance, and lack of experience with government contracts;
  - Creates a 501(c)3 "EZ Pass" process to help small, community-based groups get tax-deductible status more easily; and
  - Establishes a $150 million Compassion Capital Fund to educate and empower community-based organizations.

  (3) Provides needed support for initiatives targeted to vulnerable populations.

- Authorizes up to $33 million in support for maternity group homes, principally for teenage unwed mothers.

BACKGROUND ON THE CHARITIES CRISIS IN AMERICA

- Many of America's charities have been hit hard in the aftermath of September 11 due to the effects of a weakened economy. A survey by the Independent Sector found that 48% of Americans will reduce their charitable giving if the economic slowdown worsens. The survey also found that 26% of Americans will stop giving or reduce the size of their donations to the charities they normally support due to their recent donation to September 11-related charitable causes.

- Today, the Association of Fund Raising Professionals -- representing more than 25,000 different social service, health and education-related charities -- released a report showing that nearly 45% of its charities reported a decline in gift receipts for the most recent reporting period. According to another study, individual and corporate donations were slashed by as much as $300 million in the Los Angeles area alone for the fourth quarter of 2001.

- President Bush's Armies of Compassion initiative is designed to support charities that provide vital social services for millions of disadvantaged Americans. The President urges the Senate leadership to take up the CARE Act quickly to help address America's charities crisis.

President Hails Progress on Armies of Compassion Agenda

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush met with a bipartisan group of Senators who have introduced the CARE Act – legislation that closely mirrors the President's Armies of Compassion agenda to help America's charities. The President also urged the Senate leadership to move forward with the legislation.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ARMIES OF COMPASSION AGENDA

- Last year, the President announced his Armies of Compassion initiative to strengthen charitable organizations in America. Legislation reflecting key elements of the President's initiative -- H.R. 7, the Community Solutions Act, sponsored by Congressmen J.C. Watts (R-OK) and Tony Hall (D-OH) -- passed the House in July by a vote of 233-189.

- In August, the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives released the Unlevel Playing Field report. The report was the first comprehensive audit of five Federal agencies and their policies towards community and faith based organizations. The report showed the barriers these groups face in the Federal funding process.

- The CARE Act (Charity Aid, Recovery, and Empowerment)) builds on the good work of the House bill in meeting the key principles of the Armies of Compassion initiative. And, the legislation also includes provisions that help address the specific barriers identified in the Unlevel Playing Field report.

- The Senate legislation meets the President's Armies of Compassion principles in three key ways:

  (1) Encourages charitable giving through tax incentives.

  - Allows an estimated 84 million taxpayers who do not itemize to deduct their charitable contributions – providing a $400 (individual)/$800 (joint filers) deduction for charitable giving for two years;
  - Allows individuals to make tax-free distributions from their IRAs to charities after the age of 67; and
  - Provides enhanced deductions for farmers and restaurants to donate food to food banks.

  (2) Addresses principal barriers that faith- and community-based charities face in accessing Federal funds that were identified in the Administration's Unlevel Playing Field report.

  - Requires non-discrimination against non-governmental organizations based on religious grounds, religious iconography, governance, and lack of experience with government contracts;
  - Creates a 501(c)3 "EZ Pass" process to help small, community-based groups get tax-deductible status more easily; and

BACKGROUND ON THE CHARITIES CRISIS IN AMERICA

- Many of America's charities have been hit hard in the aftermath of September 11 due to the effects of a weakened economy. A survey by the Independent Sector found that 48% of Americans will reduce their charitable giving if the economic slowdown worsens. The survey also found that 26% of Americans will stop giving or reduce the size of their donations to the charities they normally support due to their recent donation to September 11-related charitable causes.

- Today, the Association of Fund Raising Professionals -- representing more than 25,000 different social service, health and education-related charities -- released a report showing that nearly 45% of its charities reported a decline in gift receipts for the most recent reporting period. According to another study, individual and corporate donations were slashed by as much as $300 million in the Los Angeles area alone for the fourth quarter of 2001.

- President Bush's Armies of Compassion initiative is designed to support charities that provide vital social services for millions of disadvantaged Americans. The President urges the Senate leadership to take up the CARE Act quickly to help address America's charities crisis.

President Hails Progress on Armies of Compassion Agenda

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush met with a bipartisan group of Senators who have introduced the CARE Act – legislation that closely mirrors the President's Armies of Compassion agenda to help America's charities. The President also urged the Senate leadership to move forward with the legislation.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ARMIES OF COMPASSION AGENDA

- Last year, the President announced his Armies of Compassion initiative to strengthen charitable organizations in America. Legislation reflecting key elements of the President's initiative -- H.R. 7, the Community Solutions Act, sponsored by Congressmen J.C. Watts (R-OK) and Tony Hall (D-OH) -- passed the House in July by a vote of 233-189.

- In August, the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives released the Unlevel Playing Field report. The report was the first comprehensive audit of five Federal agencies and their policies towards community and faith based organizations. The report showed the barriers these groups face in the Federal funding process.

- The CARE Act (Charity Aid, Recovery, and Empowerment)) builds on the good work of the House bill in meeting the key principles of the Armies of Compassion initiative. And, the legislation also includes provisions that help address the specific barriers identified in the Unlevel Playing Field report.

- The Senate legislation meets the President's Armies of Compassion principles in three key ways:

  (1) Encourages charitable giving through tax incentives.

  - Allows an estimated 84 million taxpayers who do not itemize to deduct their charitable contributions – providing a $400 (individual)/$800 (joint filers) deduction for charitable giving for two years;
  - Allows individuals to make tax-free distributions from their IRAs to charities after the age of 67; and
  - Provides enhanced deductions for farmers and restaurants to donate food to food banks.

  (2) Addresses principal barriers that faith- and community-based charities face in accessing Federal funds that were identified in the Administration's Unlevel Playing Field report.

  - Requires non-discrimination against non-governmental organizations based on religious grounds, religious iconography, governance, and lack of experience with government contracts;
  - Creates a 501(c)3 "EZ Pass" process to help small, community-based groups get tax-deductible status more easily; and
  - Establishes a $150 million Compassion Capital Fund to educate and empower community-based organizations.

  (3) Provides needed support for initiatives targeted to vulnerable populations.

- Authorizes up to $33 million in support for maternity group homes, principally for teenage unwed mothers.

BACKGROUND ON THE CHARITIES CRISIS IN AMERICA

- Many of America's charities have been hit hard in the aftermath of September 11 due to the effects of a weakened economy. A survey by the Independent Sector found that 48% of Americans will reduce their charitable giving if the economic slowdown worsens. The survey also found that 26% of Americans will stop giving or reduce the size of their donations to the charities they normally support due to their recent donation to September 11-related charitable causes.

- Today, the Association of Fund Raising Professionals -- representing more than 25,000 different social service, health and education-related charities -- released a report showing that nearly 45% of its charities reported a decline in gift receipts for the most recent reporting period. According to another study, individual and corporate donations were slashed by as much as $300 million in the Los Angeles area alone for the fourth quarter of 2001.

- President Bush's Armies of Compassion initiative is designed to support charities that provide vital social services for millions of disadvantaged Americans. The President urges the Senate leadership to take up the CARE Act quickly to help address America's charities crisis.

President Hails Progress on Armies of Compassion Agenda

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush met with a bipartisan group of Senators who have introduced the CARE Act – legislation that closely mirrors the President's Armies of Compassion agenda to help America's charities. The President also urged the Senate leadership to move forward with the legislation.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ARMIES OF COMPASSION AGENDA

- Last year, the President announced his Armies of Compassion initiative to strengthen charitable organizations in America. Legislation reflecting key elements of the President's initiative -- H.R. 7, the Community Solutions Act, sponsored by Congressmen J.C. Watts (R-OK) and Tony Hall (D-OH) -- passed the House in July by a vote of 233-189.

- In August, the White House Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives released the Unlevel Playing Field report. The report was the first comprehensive audit of five Federal agencies and their policies towards community and faith based organizations. The report showed the barriers these groups face in the Federal funding process.

- The CARE Act (Charity Aid, Recovery, and Empowerment)) builds on the good work of the House bill in meeting the key principles of the Armies of Compassion initiative. And, the legislation also includes provisions that help address the specific barriers identified in the Unlevel Playing Field report.

- The Senate legislation meets the President's Armies of Compassion principles in three key ways:

  (1) Encourages charitable giving through tax incentives.

  - Allows an estimated 84 million taxpayers who do not itemize to deduct their charitable contributions – providing a $400 (individual)/$800 (joint filers) deduction for charitable giving for two years;
  - Allows individuals to make tax-free distributions from their IRAs to charities after the age of 67; and
  - Provides enhanced deductions for farmers and restaurants to donate food to food banks.

  (2) Addresses principal barriers that faith- and community-based charities face in accessing Federal funds that were identified in the Administration's Unlevel Playing Field report.

  - Requires non-discrimination against non-governmental organizations based on religious grounds, religious iconography, governance, and lack of experience with government contracts;
  - Creates a 501(c)3 "EZ Pass" process to help small, community-based groups get tax-deductible status more easily; and
  - Establishes a $150 million Compassion Capital Fund to educate and empower community-based organizations.

  (3) Provides needed support for initiatives targeted to vulnerable populations.

- Authorizes up to $33 million in support for maternity group homes, principally for teenage unwed mothers.

BACKGROUND ON THE CHARITIES CRISIS IN AMERICA

- Many of America's charities have been hit hard in the aftermath of September 11 due to the effects of a weakened economy. A survey by the Independent Sector found that 48% of Americans will reduce their charitable giving if the economic slowdown worsens. The survey also found that 26% of Americans will stop giving or reduce the size of their donations to the charities they normally support due to their recent donation to September 11-related charitable causes.

- Today, the Association of Fund Raising Professionals -- representing more than 25,000 different social service, health and education-related charities -- released a report showing that nearly 45% of its charities reported a decline in gift receipts for the most recent reporting period. According to another study, individual and corporate donations were slashed by as much as $300 million in the Los Angeles area alone for the fourth quarter of 2001.

- President Bush's Armies of Compassion initiative is designed to support charities that provide vital social services for millions of disadvantaged Americans. The President urges the Senate leadership to take up the CARE Act quickly to help address America's charities crisis.

ACU's Keene Comments on Pickering Nomination
U.S. Newswire

ACU's Keene Comments on Pickering Nomination: 'Left's Campaign of Character Assassination Twists Record of Qualified Candidates' To: National Desk
Contact: Ian Walters of the American Conservative Union, 703-836-8602, ext. 16

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Feb. 6 /U.S. Newswire/ -- American Conservative Union (ACU) Chairman David A. Keene today released the following statement on the nomination of Judge Charles W. Pickering to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals:

"It seems to me that Senate Democrats, under the leadership of Majority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D.) and Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) are activating the usual cast of liberal characters in an attempt to cover up their unfair and bitterly partisan treatment of President Bush's judicial nominees. This time they are targeting Mississippi Federal District Court Judge Charles W. Pickering, Sr., who has been nominated by the President to fill a vacancy on the U. S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

"By all accounts Judge Pickering is more than qualified for a seat on the Court of Appeals. He graduated at the top of his class at the University of Mississippi in 1961, and has shown a commitment to public service by serving as a Municipal Court Judge, prosecuting attorney and two terms in the Mississippi State Senate. He has also served as the county head of the March of Dimes campaign and county chairman of the American Red Cross.

"Judge Pickering was unanimously confirmed by the United States Senate served with distinction as a U.S. District Court Judge in Mississippi, a position he has held since 1990; additionally, he was the recipient of a "well qualified" rating from the American Bar Association.

"Judge Pickering is supported by numerous past Presidents of the Mississippi Bar Association, former Democratic Governor of Mississippi William Winter as well as prominent African Americans such as federal District Court Judge Henry Wingate, Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Damion Kieth, Deborah Gambrell, a civil rights attorney who has practiced before Judge Pickering and Reverened nathan Jordan, a former President of an NAACP chapter in the Southern District of Mississippi.

"Although well-qualified for the position for which he has been nominated, he is being vilified by Democrats and liberal organizations-such as the National Organization of Women, NARAL, People for the American Way and the National Women's Law Center-because he is committed to following controlling precedent of the Supreme Court, even when he may not personally agree with it. The concept of a judge following precedent and interpreting law rather than interposing personal bias in the decision making process is contrary to the liberal philosophy. Therefore, the liberals are out to get him.

"To accomplish this task the left has brought up issues addressed 11 years ago when he was confirmed by the Senate and have inappropriately twisted his record in an attempt to demonize him. It's clear that they are mischaracterizing his efforts on race relations and other issues as they mount their opposition: all because he understands the proper role of the judiciary under our Constitution.

"ACU supports the Nomination of Judge Pickering and demands that Democrats stop their unfair political posturing and campaign of character assassination," concluded Keene.

Borking Judge Pickering
It's open season among Senate Democrats on Bush's judicial nominees.
by Terry Eastland
02/18/2002, Volume 007, Issue 22

WHEN JIM JEFFORDS left the Republican party last May and became an independent, Democrats gained control of the Senate. By a single vote, yes, but what a difference that margin makes, especially when it comes to appointing judges.

Consider the case of Charles Pickering, for twelve years a U.S. District Judge in Hattiesburg, Mississippi. Last year George W. Bush designated him for the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. On October 18, Pickering (rated "well qualified" by the American Bar Association) went before the Senate Judiciary Committee. Had Republicans still controlled the Senate, he would have been easily confirmed. But the one hearing wasn't enough for Judiciary Committee Democrats. Pickering returned last week for a second hearing--more nearly an inquisition. Whether Pickering is ultimately confirmed or not, the Democrats made clear how they intend to deal with Bush nominees they target for possible defeat. Attack their life, attack their work, attack both if you can, and don't let evidence get in the way.

Last week's hearing moved back and forth between Pickering's career before he became a judge and his tenure on the bench. Pickering was in private practice before becoming a county prosecutor and then a state senator. The Democrats' inquiry into statements and actions of his during those distant days sought to paint him as unsympathetic to claims of black equality, even a segregationist at heart.

The Democrats read more into some events than the facts could reasonably bear. Yet Pickering found himself repenting of his 1964 statement that the national Democratic party had "humiliated" the people of Mississippi in the way it had treated the state party, then insistently segregationist. Asked whether he regretted saying that, Pickering, who became a Republican that year, replied, "I do." On another matter--a seemingly innocuous contact in 1973 with the pro-segregationist Mississippi Sovereignty Commission--Pickering also wished that it was not on his record: "If I were making that decision today, I would not do it," he said.

Those acts of repentance didn't seem to impress the Democrats. Nor did evidence portraying Pickering as an exemplary figure during Mississippi's stormy civil rights era. Republican senators reviewed how in 1967 Pickering, a locally elected prosecutor, testified in open court against Sam Bowers, the imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, who was being tried for the firebombing death of civil rights leader Vernon Dahmers. Later, Pickering was turned out of office. During his testimony Pickering attributed that outcome at least in part to the fact he had taken the stand against Bowers. Citing Pickering's testimony against Bowers and other actions he had taken that helped move Mississippi away from its discriminatory past, Sen. Mitch McConnell lauded Pickering for his "moral courage." But that was a point no Democrat was heard to second.

The Democrats expressed apparent interest in Pickering's approach to judging. Pickering distinguished between his personal and political views and the law, stating that as a judge he was duty-bound to follow the latter. He added that as a district judge he was bound by the decisions of the Fifth Circuit and the Supreme Court, whether he agreed with them or not. He further added that as an appellate judge he would be similarly bound.

These routine positions didn't satisfy the Democrats. Nor does it seem possible that they could have. At times the Democrats said they wanted judges who adhered to decisions by courts above. At other times they implied they wanted judges who would dissent from such decisions. Dianne Feinstein, for example, described the Fifth Circuit as "a trailblazer in protecting individual rights." But she lamented that it was no longer that, a point more bluntly made by Democratic colleagues who called it a "very conservative" court. Did she mean to say that the decisions of such a court shouldn't be followed? Likewise, Charles Schumer decried an "era of unprecedented judicial activism" wrought, though he did not say so, by Supreme Court appointees of Republican presidents. Did he mean to say that judges on the courts of appeals should defy the Supreme Court's decisions? To his credit, Pickering declined to embrace the lawless approach to judging suggested by his Democratic interrogators.

During her turn, Maria Cantwell inquired about Pickering's views on the "right of privacy," by which she really meant the abortion right. Pickering said that he "would follow what the Court has said" about the privacy right, which was first announced in a 1965 case, Griswold v. Connecticut. Cantwell noted that he, Pickering, didn't say that he personally believed that. Pickering replied that he would follow the Court's precedents. To which Cantwell responded: "Do you recognize it in the Constitution?" Said Pickering, "I see it because the Court has said it is there." Cantwell was unsatisfied, as were other Democrats. It appears that they want judges who personally believe not merely that the Constitution contains an unenumerated right of privacy but that this right encompasses the abortion right declared by the Court in the 1973 case of Roe v. Wade. Judges nominated by a Democratic president would doubtless personally believe all of these things--and more.

Pickering's confirmation chances seemed slim at week's close. Thanks to Jeffords, the committee now has 10 Democrats and 9 Republicans, and it takes 10 votes to get out of committee. Herb Kohl was the one Democrat who failed to make it to the hearing, and there was some speculation after the hearing that Pickering's friend and sponsor, Trent Lott, had struck some sort of deal with Kohl in which the Wisconsin Democrat would vote for Pickering in committee and also on the floor. If so, Pickering just might make it onto the Fifth Circuit. In any case, his hearing is a reliable indicator of the nasty confirmation battles that lie ahead.

Can you tell me where things stand on reviewing the remaining 1000 pages of Reagan records? Will you be able to complete that review this week? If it is likely to take a while, can you identify them for us, so we can proceed with opening the cleared 59,000 pages.

Finally, as you may recall, we have been FOIAed for the 2 notices we sent to Reagan and you on the entire 68,000, which has been appealed, by Public Citizen, and our response is now overdue. Given that the review is now virtually over, along with the attention to the matter and the difficulty we might have in sustaining the withholding of the notices under (b)(5), thus creating a high likelihood of litigation, do you have any concern if we were to proceed now with releasing them as a discretionary (b)(5) disclosure?

Can you tell me where things stand on reviewing the remaining 1000 pages of Reagan records? Will you be able to complete that review this week? If it is likely to take a while, can you identify them for us, so we can proceed with opening the cleared 59,000 pages.

Finally, as you may recall, we have been FOIAed for the 2 notices we sent to Reagan and you on the entire 68,000, which has been appealed, by Public Citizen, and our response is now overdue. Given that the review is now virtually over, along with the attention to the matter and the difficulty we might have in sustaining the withholding of the notices under (b)(5), thus creating a high likelihood of litigation, do you have any concern if we were to proceed now with releasing them as a discretionary (b)(5) disclosure?

I was going to bring this to your and ken's attention before the meeting, but it totally slipped through the cracks. The Pentagon canceled their "strategic overview" because their counsel was uncomfortable with it being there. Is there anythign we can do to convince them otherwise or should we just leave it alone? thanks

White House Pushes to Reshape Calif. GOP Entrepreneur Who Led Bush's 2000 Effort in State Seeks to Broaden Party's Appeal
By Dana Milbank
Washington Post Staff Writer
Thursday, February 21, 2002; Page A08

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 20 -- The Bush White House, frustrated by Democratic dominance of the nation's largest state, is orchestrating a vigorous effort to overhaul the California GOP and broaden the party's appeal to more moderate voters here.

The point man in the White House effort -- reform in the eyes of its architects, a coup in the view of some conservatives -- is Gerald Parsky, a wealthy venture capitalist who ran President Bush's campaign in California. Parsky, with Bush's backing, circumvented the state GOP during the election, and has since pushed through reforms that increase the power of donors and professionals in the party -- in effect wresting control from conservative activists in favor of more moderate leadership.

Parsky speaks weekly with top Bush strategist Karl Rove and the two recruited former Los Angeles mayor Richard Riordan, a supporter of abortion rights and gay rights, to run for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

On Tuesday night, as part of a four-day swing through California, Vice President Cheney attended a dinner at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles that raised more than $1 million for Parsky's latest venture: "Team California." Donors wrote big checks to the California GOP for grass-roots efforts -- but they retained control over the fund they created so that they can control how the party uses the money.

Cheney's embrace of Parsky this week shows the pragmatic strain in the Bush administration. Though ideologically conservative and close to the religious right, Bush is backing an effort to rebuild the GOP here in a way that reflects the state's liberal leanings. In doing so, the White House has put itself on the side of realism -- much as it did by joining the march for campaign finance reform once it realized the legislation would pass.

In all, Bush has visited California, which he lost by a million votes, three times, and there have been 70 Cabinet-level visits here, more than any other state has received.

"What's the administration going to do to get California back to the Republicans?" Cheney asked at a $300,000 fundraiser in Pleasanton, Calif., last night. "It won't be for lack of effort on our part. We'll make every effort we can to win the support of the people of California and hopefully this time around it will be a slightly different decision."

The first test of Bush's -- and Parsky's -- labors comes in the California GOP gubernatorial primary in two weeks. Parsky, though officially neutral, views Riordan, who is facing two conservatives, as the best hope of toppling Gov. Gray Davis (D) in the fall and reviving the moribund party.

Reagan here who is helping conservative businessman William E. Simon Jr. to run against Riordan. "You don't get more votes as a Republican with big government, liberal Democrat positions."

Parsky, who was a Treasury official in the Ford administration, says he does not oppose conservatives in the party, only extremists. "Our party needs to welcome back the people who have been left out," he said. "We've allowed our party to be viewed as the anti-party: anti-women, anti-Social Security, anti-minorities."

During Cheney's four days in the state, Parsky has been omnipresent. Today, he joined the vice president on Air Force Two from Los Angeles for a meeting with farmers and politicians in Fresno, a stop here in Sacramento and a fundraiser for Rep. Richard W. Pombo (R-Calif.) at a country club outside San Francisco. Parsky was in the limousine with the Cheneys on Monday en route to the Marine Corps' Miramar Air Station near San Diego, and he hosted the Cheneys at his home in Rancho Santa Fe late Monday.

He was with Cheney again Tuesday at the Richard Nixon Library & Birthplace; an interview with Parsky was interrupted when an aide came to fetch him with a message that he was needed at Cheney's table for lunch. Later, Parsky was in the NBC studio as Cheney appeared on the "Tonight Show." Thursday, the two go to San Jose together to talk with business executives.

White House officials encourage the notion that Parsky is "our guy" in California. "He's a real optimist . . . perpetually saying 'we can do it,' " said Mary Matalin, a top aide to Cheney.

The once-proud California GOP declined markedly in the 1990s as the state's immigrant population grew and the Republican governor, Pete Wilson, became identified with anti-immigrant measures. The state, which has 1.7 million more registered Democrats than Republicans, has turned reliably Democratic in presidential and most statewide elections.

Parsky, though chairman of the San Diego host committee for the Republican National Convention in 1996, became a critic of the party's direction. "The party wasn't functioning properly," he said.

Bush invited Parsky to Texas during the early days of his presidential race in 1998, and in early 1999 asked Parsky to lead his California campaign -- a slap in the face to state party leaders. Parsky built an operation entirely separate from the party. A senior Bush aide said the campaign viewed the California Republican Party as hopeless because of its profligate ways. "Donors are not dopes. They want to know their money is going for what they're giving it for," the official said.

After the campaign, Rove gave Parsky the mandate of overhauling the state party. Parsky presented GOP Chairman Shawn Steel, a conservative, with the terms for Bush's support for the state party: create a "Structural Reform Commission," with Parsky at the helm. When the recommendations of Parsky's committee became known last July, conservative activists were enraged. The conservative magazine Human Events called Parsky a "dictator" and pronounced: "Bush Friend Plotting Coup in California GOP."

Parsky had proposed limiting the clout of the party chairman in favor of a chief operating officer, a board of directors (Bush loyalists all) and a five-member operations committee to oversee day-to-day activities. The changes also allowed voting by mail by all registered Republicans in party leadership elections -- thus weakening the power of activists who voted at meetings. Steel unsuccessfully fought the proposed changes.

After that move, Parsky went about recruiting Riordan to challenge Davis. The tacit backing by Parsky and Rove of Riordan has exposed the fissures in the party, with conservatives backing Simon or Secretary of State Bill Jones.

"The White House is going to have more trouble with the California Republican Party than the Afghan warlords," said Bob Mulholland, an adviser to the California Democratic Party. As for Parsky's efforts to broaden the party, "I give him an A for effort but an F for failure."

But Parsky has earned respect from a number of Republicans. Dan Schnur, a California Republican strategist who worked for Wilson, the former governor, said Parsky has "taken on a lot of huge tasks and I think he's done well so far."

Parsky acknowledges that change "doesn't happen overnight." But White House aides, while doubtful that Bush has a serious chance of carrying the state in 2004, have concluded that the Republicans need California. "You can't write off California," Matalin said. "It has to be a long-term effort."

Yes, the campaign committee in question should either provide the tickets, pay in advance, or reimburse the government after the fact. (We prefer the first option.) The form should indicate that the campaign committee in question is responsible for payment.

Brett, another question for you: Andy Card suggested including debate and convention items in the exhibit also. Carol Thompson went to the off-site storage and retrieved some debate materials which she will have reviewed quickly.
How do these materials fit .... what kind of loan agreement is necessary to record what is loaned and ensure their return? Assume this is actually owned by the campaign .... but how do we handle appropriately?
Thanks.

The sample you received was actually used for a loan to NARA's Gerald Ford Museum, so it can and has been used for loans to us. In any event, I don't see any problem with the WH using this form to loan materials (which include personal property of the President and staff, and other governmental items that are not in NARA's legal custody) to NARA. It is my understanding that the WH has been using this since at least 1989. (I also see now from looking at the form, that it includes the items as part of the form, and not as an attachment.)

Let us know if you have any particular concerns and how you would like to proceed.

Wittes just called me and said there will be a Post editorial tomorrow raising questions (but only questions at this point, he said) about Brooks Smith's views on the scope of the Commerce Clause and about the Mid-State Bank matter (as well as about one case involving DOJ and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania). The first I heard of this was just now; he said he left messages at DOJ this morning but received no return call. The editorial is already written. He expects that Post will write something on Smith in the future. His tone about Smith was serious. I have informed Anne Womack.

Another Bush judicial nomination faces questioning from Senate Judiciary Democrats

Eds: INSERTS 2nd graf with Smith's personal plea to the Senate panel in a letter; deletes 5th graf, Smith denies ...
By JESSE J. HOLLAND=
Associated Press Writer=
WASHINGTON (AP) _ Another of President Bush's judicial choices faces a bruising battle in the Senate, with liberal groups raising ethical accusations against U.S. Appeals Court nominee D. Brooks Smith of Pennsylvania.
In a personal plea to the Senate Judiciary Committee which is considering his nomination, Smith defended his handling of two court cases for which he is being criticized, stating that ``I have always treated my ethical obligations as a United States Judge with the utmost seriousness.'' His rulings ``were neither illegal nor unethical,'' he wrote.
Smith was nominated by Bush for a seat on the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia on Sept. 10, and has been approved by the American Bar Association. But his opponents say senators should look into some of his actions before they confirm him for the court that covers Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and the Virgin Islands.
Doug Kendall of the Washington, D.C.-based Community Rights Counsel, says Smith made court rulings regarding a case with a company in which he had a ``very substantial financial interest.'' ``It clearly violates federal recusal law and raises serious questions about Judge Smith's fitness for a seat on the appellate bench,'' Kendall said.

The attacks ``are simply an attempt to misuse the confirmation process by unfairly impugning the reputation of a 14-year veteran of the federal bench,'' Assistant Attorney General Viet Dinh said.
These accusations, which will be heard in front of the Senate Judiciary Committee on Tuesday, come as senators also contemplate whether to approve Appeals Court candidate Charles Pickering of Mississippi, who has been attacked by civil rights and liberal groups for his conservative votes as a Mississippi state senator and some of his opinions as a judge.
Some of same groups that protested the Pickering nomination now are going after 50-year-old Smith. Even one of his supporters, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., predicted it would ``be a battle'' to confirm Smith.
Smith oversaw for a month a fraud trial in 1997 involving Mid-State Bank, which was accused of complicity in the defendant's scheme to defraud dozens of Pennsylvania schools and municipalities.
Smith's wife, Karen Smith, was the vice president of the lending department at Mid-State Bank at the time. Smith also held $100,000 to $250,000 in Mid-State stock and his wife had the same amount invested in a 401(k) fund with the bank.
Smith issued several rulings before recusing himself, and did not disclose the investments when he recused himself.
The investments were listed on a financial disclosure statement required of all federal judges. The Justice Department cleared Smith of any wrongdoing.
Smith says there is no law or nothing in the judges' code of conduct saying he had to disclose his investments. He also said in a Monday letter to the Judiciary Committee that there was nothing at the outset of the case that indicated that Mid-State Bank would be involved in the case.
``During the one month I presided over the trial, I knew nothing of Mid-State's true involvement,'' he said.
As soon as he found out that Mid-State might possibly play a role in the case, Smith said he recused himself.
``None of the parties, lawyers or judges nor the trustee has questioned my conduct,'' Smith said. ``At no time did I have an actual conflict of interest that required my automatic disqualification. Rather, to avoid even a possible appearance of impropriety in the future, I recused myself ... My rulings were neither illegal nor unethical.''
Added former Pennsylvania Gov. and U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, who served as trustee for the defrauded schools: ``I can say with front row, firsthand knowledge that Judge Smith acted with absolute integrity, independence and honor.''
Regarding Pickering's nomination, Republicans point out that he testified against the Ku Klux Klan in Mississippi and has worked at racial reconciliation in the state.
But Democrats, who control the Senate Judiciary Committee, say Pickering's past as a Mississippi Republican weighs too heavily to put him on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, which handles cases from Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.
Sen. Diane Feinstein, D-Calif., told NBC's 'Meet the Press' that she doubts the nomination will get out of the Judiciary Committee.
``I believe that there is virtually unanimous opinion on the Democratic side of the Judiciary Committee that he will not be confirmed,'' she said.
The committee will vote on Pickering's nomination on Thursday.

Here it is, as it will run in tomorrow's editions...

Perspectives: Setting the record straight on Judge D. Brooks Smith
Tuesday, February 26, 2002
By Dick Thornburgh

WASHINGTON - Today the Senate Judiciary Committee will consider President Bush's nomination of Chief U.S. District Judge D. Brooks Smith for the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, headquartered in Philadelphia.

For 18 years, Judge Smith has served Pennsylvanians with distinction. Judge Smith boasts first-rate credentials in addition to his years of judicial experience, and the American Bar Association unanimously gave him its highest rating. Over 100 Democrats and Republicans alike have signed letters of support to the Senate Judiciary Committee. These letters from judges, public officials and leaders of civil liberties, labor, and women's organizations all praise Judge Smith's fairness and impartiality.

The Post-Gazette has detailed the campaign against Judge Smith by the Community Rights Counsel and other extreme interest groups. Just as night follows day, it seems the usual suspects are lining up for another effort to "Bork" a distinguished judge. Specifically, critics argue that Judge Smith should have immediately recused himself from a 1997 municipal fraud case involving an investment adviser later convicted of defrauding several Pennsylvania school districts. Critics say recusal was necessary as Judge Smith's wife worked at Mid-State Bank, where some of the defendants' assets were deposited, and the Smiths held stock in Mid-State's parent company.

Please allow me to set the record straight. I served as the trustee for the defrauded schools and bore a fiduciary duty to safeguard their funds. And I can say with front-row, firsthand knowledge that Judge Smith acted with absolute integrity, independence and honor.

First, Mid-State Bank was not a party to the case, and nothing at the outset suggested Mid-State was complicit in any fraudulent scheme. It was therefore unlikely that Judge Smith's wife, who worked in an unrelated part of the bank, would become a material witness. Since the complaint did not allege any wrongdoing by the bank holding the defendants' funds, any stock the Smiths owned in its parent company was immaterial. As trustee, I had sole possession of and control over the assets, and Judge Smith's initial order distributing 50 percent of frozen funds to defrauded school districts just approved an interim plan proposed jointly by me and the Securities and Exchange Commission while the case proceeded.

When Judge Smith later received information that Mid-State could, in the future, conceivably play a role in the litigation, out of an excess of caution he immediately recused himself sua sponte, without being asked by either party. The actions that Judge Smith took prior to his recusal in the civil case did nothing to limit Mid-State's eventual liability exposure or impact the victims' rights of recovery.

In fact, the attacks by interest groups ignore the fact that no funds were even deposited at Mid-State at the time Judge Smith granted his last orders. As trustee, I had transferred the assets to another bank several days before this order. Nothing that occurred between this order and Judge Smith's recusal days later benefited Mid-State. Judge Donetta Ambrose, who obtained the case after Judge Smith's recusal, agreed. She wrote to the Senate Judiciary Committee to say, "There was never any suggestion by me or the Court of Appeals that Judge Smith acted inappropriately or unethically. Rather, he acted prudently and cautiously. . . . The allegations of unethical conduct in the context of this case are without foundation."

Partisan critics also improperly fault Judge Smith for temporarily handling a later criminal case against the investment adviser. Nobody involved in the case has alleged that Judge Smith issued any improper orders or took any inappropriate action. The case was assigned to Judge Smith only after lawyers in the case agreed that it was unrelated to the SEC's civil case. Mid-State Bank was not a party. The U.S. attorney's office never sought recusal, and defense counsel did not seek recusal until four months later, when Judge Smith immediately recused himself.

As governor of Pennsylvania in 1984, I had the honor of originally nominating Brooks Smith to sit on the Court of Common Pleas in Blair County. In 1988, while attorney general of the United States, I had the honor of seeing the U.S. Senate unanimously confirm Brooks Smith as a federal judge. This year, I hope to see the same Senate set aside the recent attacks of extreme interest groups and honor Judge Smith's long record of judicial service with a swift and unanimous approval to the 3rd Circuit.

By any measure of judicial merit, Brooks Smith is qualified to serve. Like the president who nominated him, Brooks Smith has rallied a broad coalition of support. It would be wrong to allow extreme interest groups to delay his confirmation by even one day. However, I am optimistic that this will not occur. Judge Smith acquired his reputation for honesty, uprightness and professionalism the old-fashioned way -- he earned it. And it will see him through.

Brett- Ken is speaking to Tom Reynolds' PAC event in April. It is not a fundraiser, but it is a panel discussion on "Expanding our Congressional majority: A Political Update". In the past, ken's title has been "Political Director for President Bush". Should we use that for this event or can we use his official title?

What about "White House Political Director"? thanks

Can we use your name on the invitation?

There may be some concerns from your legal counsel--so please advice.

I have two comments, one minor, one not.

I am concerned about confusing what belongs to the President personally and what belongs to the office. Do we have a clear understanding of this and when we are having official signatures and personal signatures, do we confuse these issues?

EPA called earlier today to try to get a current Administration guidance memo on political participation. We tried looking for one in our files and none could be found. Do you have something that EPA could use?

Unfortunately they were looking to use it for a 1:30 briefing, but they still have more briefings to go.

Secretary Norton is using the Govt plane on Monday & Tuesday of next week and she is planning travel on Energy legislation to three Legislative targets (Indiana, Missouri, and Arkansas). During her stops, a few locals are helping put together events for her and host her (at venues such as Chambers of Commerce or Labor Town Halls). Norton plans on putting pressure at home on the Democratic Senators on the energy bill - meanwhile we are also asking her to say nice things about the local politicals folks who are at the events as well (nothing related to the election or their cadidacy for office - basically issue advocacy remarks). In Indiana, we are planning on having her in South Bend with candidate Chris Chocola and in Missouri, we plan on having her with Senator Kit Bond and Senate candidate, Jim Talent.

Would you consider this proper? Can she say how helpful these folks are and that the President's recognizes their support?

Subject: Montgomery County, MD, Law Day lunch

This lunch is Friday May 3. Can Judge Gonzales speak at this lunch? Approximately 350-500 people attend. The speech would be 20 minutes. Harry Storm, the President-elect of the Montgomery County Bar is seeking a WH speaker. I have known Harry for a long time, and he's a great guy, and this is a nice event. (Side note: Harry is a Republican in a Dem county and was a precinct chair for Bush-Cheney campaign in Montgomery County.) (Other side note: Montgomery County is my home county and where my mom is a state trial judge, now in senior status.)

Colleagues:

I had a teleconference with our judicial coalition partners this morning.
We will move forward today on Heather's outline from yesterday. And, there will be a teleconference later today to further coordinate with the grassroots, grasstops, RNC on the relevant Members.

Too, we will have presentations at the weekly Norquist breakfast this am and the Weyrich luncheon this pm on judges.

I think all the activity outlined in Heather's memo is quite doable, and we will get the wheels turning today.

Warmly,

tsg

If the events are official (Interior counsel should sign off on that), then she can make comments about notables in the crowd, but she should not advocate their election (and it is safest not even to refer to elections). As to speaking about legislation and Congress' action or inaction, it is entirely acceptable for her to discuss the Democrats in Congress.

Subject: Question of propriety with Norton's upcoming travel

Secretary Norton is using the Govt plane on Monday & Tuesday of next week and she is planning travel on Energy legislation to three Legislative targets (Indiana, Missouri, and Arkansas). During her stops, a few locals are helping put together events for her and host her (at venues such as Chambers of Commerce or Labor Town Halls). Norton plans on putting pressure at home on the Democratic Senators on the energy bill - meanwhile we are also asking her to say nice things about the local politicals folks who are at the events as well (nothing related to the election or their cadidacy for office - basically issue advocacy remarks). In Indiana, we are planning on having her in South Bend with candidate Chris Chocola and in Missouri, we plan on having her with Senator Kit Bond and Senate candidate, Jim Talent.

Would you consider this proper? Can she say how helpful these folks are and that the President's recognizes their support?

Matt: I understand that you're now the man to speak to our COSs and White House liaisons tomorrow at 3pm in room 180 about political activities/participation this year (given Ken is now going to the funeral in Iowa tomorrow). Would you touch base with Brett to trade notes on what ground you guys are going to cover. As I've discussed with Brett and Ken, the primary purpose of the meeting is to give the COSs and WH liaisons guidance on the do's and don'ts of what the political appointees can and cannot do with regard to political activities. I understand that there are certain rules that apply to the Secretary and other PASs, certain rules that apply to Schedule Cs, and yet certain rules that apply to the non-career SESs (like the COSs). The COSs are concerned about any conversation they may have with their bosses and other PASs during the course of the day that involve a political activity. Brett met with the agency General Counsels last week to go through some of this, but we felt it important that the COSs hear too from Brett given their constant interaction with the Secretary and the other PASs and Schedule Cs in the agency. And Matt, I would look to you to help put in context the type of political activities that may come up this year (both in town and travel) that may impact the Secretaries, Dep Secs and other PASs -- and to be there to answer questions. Matt, you should probably also bring Adrian to the meeting given his role in dealing with the Secretaries' offices on surrogate scheduling for political purposes. Thanks.

REPORT OF THE DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

ON

EMPLOYER STOCK IN 401(k) PLANS

February 28, 2002

Executive Summary

The Department of the Treasury, as head of the President's Retirement Security Task Force, has undertaken a review and analysis of the impact of placing a percentage cap on employer stock holdings by 401(k) participants. In formulating its conclusions, the Treasury Department has examined information provided by the Department of Labor, reviewed surveys of 401(k) participants conducted by the Employee Benefits Research Institute (EBRI) and the Investment Company Institute, and held discussions with a number of benefit administrators of plans that hold employer stock. Based on this review, the Department concludes that placing arbitrary caps on individual 401(k) account holdings in employer stock would have a widespread impact on 401(k) plan participants and potentially severe disruptive effects on the stock prices of several major companies. Data show that as many as 1 in 5 of 401(k) participants would be forced to change their investment allocations if employer stock holdings were limited to 20 percent. Moreover, at one major company, for example, enforcement of a 20 percent limit on employer stock holding would precipitate the sale of hundreds of millions of shares, an amount equal to almost 16 times the daily trading volume. At another company, it would be 37 times daily trading volume.

Background and History

Pension schemes in the United States have always been voluntary. Private pensions, as a form of employee compensation, have been a competitive tool employed by firms to attract employees. The nation,s pension system has evolved in recent years into one that emphasizes two of the country,s quintessential values: personal responsibility and freedom of choice. This evolution provides workers much greater opportunity than ever before to build retirement savings, but also imposes a greater degree of individual responsibility in preparing for retirement.

Since 1974 the labor and financial markets have undergone major change. As the economy has evolved from one based on heavy industry to one based on the provision of information and services, the work force has become increasingly mobile and highly educated. For the typical American worker, job and even career changes have become commonplace. During the same period, as a result of deregulation, financial markets have made a wide array of new investment vehicles available to consumers. This has provided the average consumer the opportunity to build wealth through a broader range of investments offering higher rates of return for long-term savings than the traditional passbook account. As the relationships between workers and employers and consumers and financial markets have evolved so has the pension system. This is reflected through current federal policies that provide incentives for retirement wealth development through tax advantaged portable vehicles like Individual Retirement Accounts and defined contribution plans.

Since today,s workers are less likely to be tied to an individual firm for their entire careers than their parents were, they must increasingly look to their own resources to build sufficient wealth for a secure retirement. Today,s workers need plans that allow them to undertake retirement planning independently. Under defined benefit plans, most retirement planning and investment decisions are left to the employer. Pension contributions for employees are placed in a common fund that is controlled by the employer. The employer decides on the size of contributions, their timing, and the choice of assets in which the fund is invested. This results in a one-size-fits-all type of system that does not account for differences in employees, preferences for saving and the timing of consumption during their lifetime. And because all contributions become part of a consolidated overall fund, employees may have no sense of ownership of pension assets and no feeling of building personal wealth for the future. Since defined benefit plans are tied directly to employment with a specific firm they tend not to be portable when employees change jobs. Defined benefit plans offer the advantage of security in that benefits are guaranteed at a certain level. However, moving to a new job from one with a defined benefit plan often means a major sacrifice in future benefits, whether or not the move is voluntary.

Defined Contribution Plans

Defined contribution plans, about half of which are 401(k) plans, return most decision making to the individual. For purposes of this report we will refer to 401(k) plans, but the discussion and recommendations generally apply to all defined contribution plans. There are about 50 million defined contribution plan participants, of which about 42 million are 401(k) participants. Some workers may participate in more than one type of defined contribution plan. Under a defined contribution plan individual employees have their own accounts in which they can build their own wealth. Employees are allowed, within limits set in the tax code, to choose the level of their pension plan contributions. In order to encourage higher rates of retirement saving, these limits were expanded by the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act signed by the President last year.

Employees also have more latitude in choosing the timing of contributions with defined contribution plans. As an individual's circumstances change, 401(k) plans allow for higher contributions in some years than others. In virtually all plans, employees have the ability to choose the investment options in which their own contributions are invested, and in many others they can allocate both their own and their employer,s contributions into investments of their own choosing. This freedom to allocate among investments allows employees to choose the tradeoff between risk and return that suits them best. It also allows individuals to adjust their portfolios from one with higher potential returns and higher risk early in their careers to one that provides smaller but surer returns as they approach retirement.

The Role of Employer Stock in Defined Contribution Plans

Employer stock is an integral part of many 401(k) plans, particularly among those sponsored by America,s largest firms. It may be offered as one of a number of investment options to which employees may allocate 401(k) assets. Employers may make matching contributions to employees' accounts in the form of company stock. Employees may be given specific incentives to invest in company stock. For example, some firms offer matches in the form of company stock or cash, but provide a higher match if the employee chooses his or her employer,s stock. Some plans allow employees to sell matching contributions of employer stock at any time. Other plans require that employer stock provided by the employer as a matching contribution be held for an extended period of time.

Providing matching contributions in the form of company stock can have a number of benefits for both employers and employees. Companies may benefit from tax and cash flow advantages. Many companies believe that giving employees company stock builds their employees' loyalty to the company and gives them a greater economic incentive to work to promote the company's long-term economic prospects. Employees benefit directly when employers provide greater matching contributions to their 401(k) accounts. Also, research shows that employees themselves are more likely to participate in their company's 401(k) plan when their employer offers matching contributions.

Most defined contribution plans that include employer stock as an investment option or as a matching contribution are found in very large companies. For instance, for plans with fewer than 500 participants, the overall percentage of assets held in employer stock is less than 1 percent. In contrast, for plans with more than 5,000 participants, the overall percentage of assets held in employer stock is 26.6 percent. Large companies are also the ones more likely to offer their workers other retirement savings vehicles such as a defined benefit pension plan.

Issues and Conclusion

Recently introduced legislation on retirement security proposes to limit the holdings of company stock by individual plan participants in their 401(k) accounts. These proposed limits are expressed as a maximum percentage of the value of all 401(k) assets that an individual can hold in the form of company stock. The caps that have been discussed are 10 percent, which is the limit placed on company stock in defined benefits plans, or 20 percent. The proposals exempt employee stock ownership plans (ESOPs) from these restrictions.

In preparing its recommendations on enhancing retirement security, the President's Retirement Security Task Force sought to enhance workers' investment options, including their ability to diversify their 401(k) accounts according to their individual situations. The Task Force rejected the idea of imposing federal limitations on those options by arbitrarily setting a ceiling on the amount of employer stock a worker may hold in his or her own 401(k) plan. Also, the Task Force wanted to avoid establishing rules that discouraged employers from matching workers' own contributions to their 401(k) accounts. The Task Force -- and the President -- concluded that the most appropriate public policy is to give workers as much flexibility as possible while encouraging employers to provide matching contributions, and to give employees regular disclosures regarding their accounts and financial education so that employees make informed investment decisions.

The next section explains the President's proposal and the following section sets forth in greater detail why the Administration opposes arbitrary, federally imposed caps on workers' holdings of employer stock in their 401(k) plans.

The President's Recommendation for Enhancing Worker Choice

Asset diversification is a bedrock principle of prudent long-term investing. Congress established 401(k) plans to promote individual retirement saving. But a plan requirement mandating that all or a portion of an employee's 401(k) account be invested in employer stock runs counter to this diversification principle. Concentration of employer stock in a worker's retirement plan creates a double risk for workers -- if their company fails, they lose their jobs and that portion of their retirement savings. At the same time, employer matching contributions are a form of compensation and as such an employee should have a right to invest them as the employee sees fit.

The President has recommended that Congress require that employees be free to sell company stock contributed to their 401(k) plan by their employer at any time after they have been participating in the company's 401(k) plan for three years. An employee stock ownership plan (ESOP) will not be subject to the diversification rules as long as no (1) participant elective contributions (i.e. 401(k) contributions), (2) matching contributions, or (3) employer contributions which are used to pass the 401(k) nondiscrimination tests, are made to the plan.

This change balances the desire of some companies to offer company stock as matching contributions with employees' freedom to pursue a retirement savings plan appropriate to their situations. Allowing employees to freely hold or sell employer stock would have a disciplining effect on companies -- employees will want to hold stock in good companies. In most 401(k) plans, workers already have considerable autonomy to diversify both their own contributions and their employer's matching contribution, except for employer stock. This change ensures that autonomy extends to all assets in a worker's 401(k) plan.

The three-year period is not a requirement. Some companies today give their workers immediate freedom to sell employer stock. These companies should be applauded and their practices would be unaffected by the change we are proposing. For other companies, however, the proposed change is a substantial departure from their current practice. In particular, many of these companies want their workers to feel directly invested in their company's future prospects by giving them an equity stake in the company. A three-year wait before guaranteeing workers' freedom to diversify allows employers to build that incentive without locking in a substantial portion of a worker's retirement security to employer stock.

Congress Should Not Arbitrarily Limit Employees' Investment Options in 401(k) Plans

Arbitrary caps have serious drawbacks. They fail to consider that workers make investment decisions regarding their 401(k) accounts in the broader context of their household's complete portfolio of retirement savings. Caps imposed on 401(k) accounts may be easily circumvented, both by employers and employees, and may in fact create incentives for both to do so. Arbitrary caps also would cause disruption in the market for certain large company stock, as substantial amounts of stock in certain companies would have to be sold at once. Caps may also discourage employer contributions to their employees' accounts, leaving the employees worse off. In turn, reduction in employer contributions may discourage workers' participation. Finally, assets in 401(k) accounts belong to the workers and the government should not arbitrarily restrict how they choose to invest their funds.

Arbitrary caps ignore workers total retirement portfolios.

For some individuals, holding higher levels of employer stock within their 401(k) plan may be desirable, particularly if they are well diversified outside of their 401(k) plan. Purchasing employer stock through a 401(k) plan is a tax-effective way for employees to make that investment.

Many 401(k) participants also have defined benefit plans, profit sharing plans, IRAs and personal savings as part of their retirement savings. Thus, participants who may appear to be overly concentrated in employer stock when their 401(k) accounts are viewed alone may be diversified over their portfolio of retirement assets. For instance, a spouse may have retirement assets that the couple took into account when deciding on their asset allocation in the other spouse's 401(k) account. Or a worker may have 401(k) or other retirement assets through a previous employer.

Data gathered in a survey of 401(k) participants undertaken by the Investment Company Institute 401(k) Plan Participants: Characteristics, Contributions, and Account Activity, Spring 2000, The Investment Company Institute. The study is based on a random digit dialing sample of telephone exchanges. Sample size is 1,181. Margin of error is plus or minus 2 percent. Half of all households surveyed had only bank or thrift deposits outside their company sponsored plans, 39 percent had stocks, bonds, annuities, mutual funds or real estate besides their primary residence. indicate that:

ú Thirty nine percent are covered by a defined benefit plan in addition to their 401(k) plan. (The same survey indicates that employees are likely to hold a higher percentage of total assets in company stock if their employer also offers a defined benefit plan. Respondents who have a defined benefit plan invest an average of 24 percent of overall assets in company stock, while those with none invest only 13 percent in company stock.);

ú Thirty three percent have IRAs; and ú Twenty eight percent have spouses who are covered by a 401(k) plan, a defined benefit plan, or both.

Data from a recent survey by EBRI Vanderhi, Jack L., EBRI Special Report, Company Stock in 401(k) Plans: Results of a Survey of ISCEBS Members, January 31, 2002, Employee Benefit Research Institute. This was a survey of members of the International Society of Certified Employee Benefit Specialists. Since the sample is not representative of all 401(k) plans, the results should be interpreted as suggestive of, rather than representative of, the wider population of 401(k) plans. suggest that 401(k) plans are more likely to include company stock as an option if the company also offers a defined benefit plan. In the survey, 60 percent of all 401(k) plans in which there is also a defined benefit plan offer employer stock as a 401(k) option, while only 35 percent of plans without a defined benefit plan do so.

Arbitrary caps will be difficult to administer.

Unlike the 10 percent cap on employer securities held in defined benefit plans, caps in defined contribution plans must be enforced on a participant-by-participant basis. In a large plan, this would necessitate tens of thousands of individual computations annually (or even more frequently). It would also require divestment of employer stock on a participant-by-participant basis, with each participant then needing to give the plan administrator instructions on how to reinvest those proceeds. Efforts to minimize that complexity by using a plan-wide arbitrary cap do not recognize that individuals may have allocations far below the cap. Changes in the value of employer stock and the value of all other assets in the plan further complicate these calculations and complicate the asset allocation decisions each participant must make.

Arbitrary caps will require a large number of 401(k) participants to sell employer stock that they currently own.

We estimate that one out of every five 401(k) participants may have to sell employer stock if caps were imposed. This calculation is based on a BLS estimate of the fraction of participants with the option of investing in employer stock and an EBRI/ICI estimate of the fraction of participants with the option of investing in employer stock who report holding assets above the proposed cap. The proposed caps would require divestiture at a specified point in time after it has been determined that the cap has been exceeded. Forcing sales of all stock above the cap at a point in time could disrupt the market for those stocks where the amount that must be sold is sufficiently large to affect the stock price. At one major company, for example, enforcement of a 20 percent limit on employer stock holding would precipitate the sale of hundreds of millions of shares, an amount equal to almost 16 times the daily trading volume. At another company, it would be 37 times daily trading volume.

Increases in the market value of company stock could trigger the caps, forcing employees to sell the stock during periods in which it is outperforming other 401(k) assets. This dynamic could particularly disadvantage lower income workers who cannot afford to save outside the 401(k) plans. Higher paid workers would, of course, have the option of using assets outside the plan to purchase the stock once the caps were triggered.

Arbitrary caps may discourage company matches.

If most employees hold company stock that is already near the cap, the company will not be able to provide generous matches for new contributions in company stock without exceeding the cap. As a result, rather than making a matching contribution in cash, some companies may choose to reduce or eliminate the employer match. Clearly, workers are better off receiving employer stock as matching contributions to their own 401(k) contributions than receiving no matching contribution at all. Reductions in company matches would likely lead to reductions in the amount of employee savings. Studies show that the amount of a company's match is a key determinant of employee contribution rates.

401(k) accounts represent a form of compensation and property that belong to the employees.

Arbitrary caps on employees 401(k) investment choices challenge fundamental notions of private property rights. 401(k) participant contributions and matching contributions are a form of employee compensation, and government should not restrict or limit employees ability to invest their assets as they see fit. Rather, government policies should promote the ability of employees to make informed, educated decisions about how they wish to allocate their assets. This is why the President's retirement security proposals include a renewed call for incentives for employers to provide employees with free, professional investment advice. It is also why the President is calling for quarterly statements of 401(k) plan performance to empower employees to track and manage their 401(k) assets in a manner best suited to their own individual retirement needs.

Workers and firms using other tax-preferred vehicles may easily circumvent arbitrary caps.

Imposing an arbitrary cap on employer stock provides an incentive for companies to use ESOPs instead of company matching with employer stock in a 401(k) plan. Also, with an arbitrary cap on employer stock in 401(k) plans, workers would still be able to invest retirement savings in employer stock through IRA accounts.

ADDENDUM

EBRI Survey Result Summary Vanderhi, Jack L., EBRI Special Report, Company Stock in 401(k) Plans: Results of a Survey of ISCEBS Members, January 31, 2002, Employee Benefit Research Institute.

(Survey Sample Drawn from 3,300 Members of the International Society of Certified Employee Benefit Specialists. Number of respondents: 375.) Note since this data was gathered from a sample survey it is subject to sampling error.

Responses to Factual Questions

ú 48 percent of all firms represented in the survey offer company stock as an investment option.

ú Restrictions on sale of employee stock.
ú 13 percent of firms that provide employer stock as a matching contribution do not restrict the sale of employer stock. 27 percent restrict sales as long as an employee is a participant in the plan; 60 percent lift restrictions after age or service requirements have been met.

ú Average percent of company stock in employees, 401(k) accounts in those plans in which company stock is an investment option:
ú In 39 percent of the companies surveyed, employees hold an average of less than 10 percent of their 401(k) assets in the form of company stock.
ú In 42 percent of the companies surveyed, employees hold an average of between 10 and 50 percent of their 401(k) assets in the form of company stock.

ú In 18 percent of the companies surveyed, employees hold an average of more than 50 percent of their 401(k) assets in the form of company stock.

ú Only 14 percent of firms represented in the survey restrict the amount or percentage of employer stock that employees can hold in their 401(k) accounts.

ú Blackouts
ú 74 percent of respondents reported that their plans have undergone a blackout.
ú 30 percent of the respondents whose plans have undergone a blackout reported that the blackout period lasted two weeks or less, 39 percent reported that the period lasted between two weeks and one month, 31 percent reported that the period lasted more than one month.

Responses to Opinion Questions

ú 63 percent of respondents think that the government should limit a plan sponsor,s ability to require that matching contributions be invested in company stock.

ú 32 percent of respondents think that the government should limit an employee,s ability to invest in company stock.

ú 61 percent of respondents think that problems resulting from employees investing their own contributions in company stock would be mitigated if employers could provide independent investment advice.

ú The respondents are sympathetic with the concept of blackouts. 79 percent think blackouts are fair to employees if they are required for a plan conversion and there is no company stock in the plan. If company stock is part of the plan that percentage falls to 72 percent.

ú 43 percent of respondents think there would be a decrease in matching contributions if matching contributions could consist of no more than 50 percent employer stock.

Subject: draft opposition

Attached is a draft opposition brief to plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment

in the AHA v. NARA case. Please give me any comments by cob next Tuesday (3/5) at the latest. The brief is due cob next Friday (3/8).

Shannen has not yet reviewed the draft, but we wanted to get it around so that everyone has enough time to weigh in.

FYI, I just received an amicus brief supporting plaintiffs filed on behalf of the Association of American Publishers (and others). I will work in any responses to the amicus arguments in the next draft, which I will circulate as soon as I can after receiving your comments on this draft. Thanks.

Craig

The face-to-face Chief of Staff meeting (on political activity guidance) has been changed from tomorrow to Monday, March 4 at 3pm in room 472 of the EEOB.
Ken Mehlman has to go to Iowa tomorrow for a funeral. Please let me know if the new meeting time on Monday does not work for you. Also please remember to bring your WH Liaisons to the meeting on Monday. Thank you.
ASAP

Brett Kavanaugh (White House Counsel's Office) and Ken Mehlman (White House Political Affairs) will be on hand to provide advice and counsel with regard to the do's and don'ts regarding your participation in politically-related activities, as well as your politically-related discussions with your respective Secretaries. We will also cover the do's and don'ts of PAS participation in politically-related activities (including the Secretary and Schedule Cs), since the rules for PASs are somewhat different than those related to you as a non-career SES. Brett is meeting tomorrow with your respective General Counsels to go over these issues.

While there will be a strong need this election year for the legal and responsible participation of political appointees in the political process, we want to make sure that we are all on the same page regarding the rules of the road given the enormous amount of public scrutiny on this Administration's political activities going forward. We would also ask that you bring your White House Liaisons with you for this meeting given they will also be involved in helping your agency's political appointees understand the rules. Cathy Hargraves of Cabinet Affairs will be contacting your assistants to confirm your attendance. Thank you.

We're thinking of asking Market Strategies to do a customer use/satisfaction survey on the WH website - if we do it, random site visitors would be takend to a survey screen to fill out and then, upon completion would be taken back to the WH website. Is this something that the RNC can cover the costs ($25k approx) or would this have to be funded internally?

Leahy Seeks Probe of Media Access at DOJ

By James Gordon Meek
L.A. Daily Journal Staff Writer

Mar. 4, 2002

WASHINGTON -- Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., on Friday asked the General Accounting Office to investigate whether Attorney General John Ashcroft is ignoring Freedom of Information Act requests by the public and news media.
Leahy asked the accounting office, Congress' investigative arm, to probe the Department of Justice following reports that news media are being denied access to weekly legislative reports sent to Ashcroft, an action that could be justified under an October directive by the attorney general.
"The new policy appears to favor withholding agency records not only when an exemption clearly applies and disclosure would harm a protected interest but also when there is doubt about its application and no foreseeable harm from disclosure," reads the Leahy letter, which was obtained by the L.A. Daily Journal.
The department declined to comment on Leahy's letter. But in a prepared statement about an unrelated matter, the department has said that it does not dispute "the necessity of producing documents which are properly subject to the Freedom of Information Act and not exempt from disclosure under that Act."

Brett,

Wanted to follow up on our conversation after the COS meeting regarding ONDCP's weird status.

Our authorization statute, codified at 1703(a)(5) reads as follows:

Prohibition on political campaigning
Any officer or employee of the Office who is appointed to that position by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, may not participate in Federal election campaign activities, except that such official is not prohibited by this paragraph from making contributions to individual candidates.

"Federal election campaign activities" are not defined in the statute.

Also, just to make sure I understand, ALL EOP employees are permitted to engage in political activity in the office, during their regular hours, notwithstanding their appointment authority. E.g., I'm a Sch. C on the GS scale, not AD, we have a non-career SES, and no commissioned officers.

Thanks,
Chris

KAREN HUGHES RADIO ACTUALITY

I'm Karen Hughes, Counselor to President George W. Bush. I'm pleased to have this opportunity to support Jim Talent for the United States Senate.

For more than 16 years, Jim Talent has stood up for the common sense, conservative values of Missouri.

While others followed, Jim Talent led the tough fights in Congress and achieved powerful results. He was an author of the landmark welfare reform bill, Chairman of the Small Business Committee, an original sponsor of the first-ever Patients' Bill of Rights and an eight year member of the Armed Services Committee.

Now, we need Jim Talent in the Senate fighting for a national energy policy to create jobs, health care for uninsured Americans and a strong national defense.

Jim Talent will work together with President Bush and Senators on both sides of the aisle to get things done.

I'm also very excited to help kick off the Women for Talent Kansas City coalition. Women made the difference in electing President Bush in 2000 and I'm excited that so many women are getting involved in Jim Talent's campaign for the U.S. Senate.

Jim Talent and President Bush share the common sense, conservative values of the heartland of America and now more than ever we need people with the character, ability and experience of Jim Talent in the United States Senate.

What I never disputed is that money can and sometimes is a factor in the cert process. But my prediction is that they won't grant cert b/c, notwithstanding $ value at issue, there is no split, it involves a novel question of law, and they just denied in a similar case.

Doubtless true, and no one (at least not me) disputed that. We'll see what happens although it's interesting that the Ct already denied cert in the very similar Metro PCS case.

I am not passing judgment on the merits or ultimate outcome of the Nextwave case (about which I know nothing), but for purposes of the cert predictions, it does bear mention that, according to Stern & Gressman, the money involved could be a factor in whether the Supreme Court grants cert: "The fact that especially large amounts of money are involved in litigation over the issue of statutory construction may also be a persuasive factor, though normally not sufficient by itself unless the amount is enormous." P. 188.

Attack pack of liberals unleashed on nominee

March 1, 2002

Not since the confirmation battles over Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas have liberal attack groups like the NAACP and People for the American Way waged as vicious a campaign against a judicial nominee as they have against Charles Pickering Sr.

"A vote for Pickering is a vote against civil rights," declared Julian Bond, the NAACP's national chairman. "Pickering poses a grave danger to Americans' rights and liberties," charged Ralph Neas, president of People for the American Way.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is expected to vote next week on Pickering's nomination to sit on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. At least one committee member, California Democrat Dianne Feinstein, flatly predicts: "He will not be confirmed."

"This particular seat is as important to us as a Supreme Court seat," said Feinstein, who chaired the Judiciary Committee hearing at which Pickering was "Borked," given the Thomas treatment.

She noted that the 5th Circuit, covering Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, led the way in years past on desegregation and voting rights. And she agreed with Bond and Neas that seating Pickering on that federal appellate court would set back those rights.

Pickering's foes all but declare him a racist, without going so far as to use the R-word. They thoroughly dissected his record going all the way back to his law school days to come up with ammunition to shoot down his nomination.

His contacts as a state lawmaker in the 1970s with the state's so-called Sovereignty Commission, which, according to People for the American Way, was created to resist desegregation.

And, more recently, his criticism as a federal district court judge of redistricting based on race, and his handling of a cross-burning case.

But even the usually liberal Washington Post editorial page felt compelled to protest the ad hominem attack on Pickering.

"None of these incidents, when examined closely, amounts to much," the Post opined, "but opponents string them together, gloss over their complexities and self-righteously present a caricature of any unworthy candidate."

But it is absurd to suggest that Pickering's confirmation to the 5th Circuit would somehow turn back the clock on racial progress in America.

That blacks would suddenly lose the right to vote. Or would be returned to the back of the bus. Or be denied service at lunch counters throughout the country.

Yet the appeals court nominee is held in high regard in Laurel's black community, as The New York Times recently reported.

According to the Times, Pickering was praised by Laurel city officials for helping to set up after-school youth programs there, and for steering federal money to medical clinics in low-income areas when he was a state senator.

Laurel's black business leaders say Pickering was influential in persuading white-owned banks to lend money to black entrepreneurs, which helped strengthen the city's black middle class.

"Over the years I've seen him work with black leaders and really try to make an effort to understand and help the community," said Larry Thomas, owner of a local pharmacy.

"I can't believe the man they're describing in Washington is the same one I've known for years, said Thaddeus Edmonson, president of the seven-member Laurel City Council and one of its five black members.

"If those people who are voting against him because of some press release would just come down here and talk to the people who know him, I think they would have a very different opinion."

But neither Feinstein nor her Democratic colleagues have troubled themselves to travel to Laurel to hear from Pickering's black supporters.

They have blindly accepted the dishonest portrait of Judge Pickering painted by the NAACP, People for the American Way and other liberal attack groups.

Attack pack of liberals unleashed on nominee

March 1, 2002

Not since the confirmation battles over Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas have liberal attack groups like the NAACP and People for the American Way waged as vicious a campaign against a judicial nominee as they have against Charles Pickering Sr.

"A vote for Pickering is a vote against civil rights," declared Julian Bond, the NAACP's national chairman. "Pickering poses a grave danger to Americans' rights and liberties," charged Ralph Neas, president of People for the American Way.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is expected to vote next week on Pickering's nomination to sit on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. At least one committee member, California Democrat Dianne Feinstein, flatly predicts: "He will not be confirmed."

"This particular seat is as important to us as a Supreme Court seat," said Feinstein, who chaired the Judiciary Committee hearing at which Pickering was "Borked," given the Thomas treatment.

She noted that the 5th Circuit, covering Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, led the way in years past on desegregation and voting rights. And she agreed with Bond and Neas that seating Pickering on that federal appellate court would set back those rights.

Pickering's foes all but declare him a racist, without going so far as to use the R-word. They thoroughly dissected his record going all the way back to his law school days to come up with ammunition to shoot down his nomination.

And, of course, they came up with a few items:

A 1959 law review article Pickering authored suggesting changes in Mississippi's anti-miscegenation law that would make it more effective.

His contacts as a state lawmaker in the 1970s with the state's so-called Sovereignty Commission, which, according to People for the American Way, was created to resist desegregation.

And, more recently, his criticism as a federal district court judge of redistricting based on race, and his handling of a cross-burning case.

But even the usually liberal Washington Post editorial page felt compelled to protest the ad hominem attack on Pickering.

"None of these incidents, when examined closely, amounts to much," the Post opined, "but opponents string them together, gloss over their complexities and self-righteously present a caricature of any unworthy candidate."

That blacks would suddenly lose the right to vote. Or would be returned to the back of the bus. Or be denied service at lunch counters throughout the country.

Indeed, if Pickering represented such a threat, one would expect to hear it from the black folks who know him best) those who hail from his hometown of Laurel, in southeast Mississippi.

Hi Moose! You may remember our earlier conversation about the possibility of Larry speaking to a small group of people regarding the MLK initiative and how the ethics laws interfaced with that event. It has gone from theorectical to reality. Larry would like to travel to Atlanta on Monday, 3/18. There are 3 possible pieces to the the trip:

1. Meet with Mrs. King and her son Martin King III.
2. A political fund raising luncheon (not related to the MLK initiative) where Larry would speak.
3. A roundtable discussion on MLK with a group of Atlanta-based CEOs. Both Larry and Martin King would speak. No funds would be solicited at the event.

Questions:
1. Do you have any concerns about the trip as outlined?
2. Can the RNC pay for travel expenses?
3. If so, may Larry use personal frequent flier miles to upgrade his airline ticket?

Many thanks!
Janet

Subject: Re: Pickering event in OEOB 474 on Wednesday

I provided some suggested talking points for Brett's review/edits. It's my understanding from DoJ OLP that the AG will not be available (which isn't a real problem from our standpoint).

We are waving in those coming to the meeting with the President, but are not handling the waves for the meeting with the Judge. Matt, I know you all are in contact with Todd at progress for america on the participants for the meeting with the Judge. Will you all handle those waves?

Let me know what you need from us! Thanks, Heather

We have requested 20 chairs, a podium but no tables. If this needs to be modified to include more chairs, any audio/video equip, etc. let me know.

I just saw an ad on Fox News for a report on, I think, Hannity and Colmes tonight headlined: "Judicial nominees donating big bucks to the Bush campaign: are they buying the bench?" I don't precisely what this is based on or who seeded it, but we may want to explore this a bit, or at least be prepared to respond.

We are coming near the end of our process of paying the families of the public safety officers who died on 9/11. I am considering a formal letter from Ashcroft to each family, but wondered, did the President ever do anything similar for these families?

I generally agree with your point, although many in the group sometimes do not mention issues that seem somewhat more sensitive. I have never really understood this practice, which I view as counterproductive, but it is clear that it occurs. Indeed, that is what I had assumed had happened re corporate governance.

I agree with Brett wholeheartedly. I also think it is important that, during our morning staff meetings, the associate counsel mention briefly new projects they are working on -- particularly when those assignments are coming from outside the Counsel Office staffing process.

Subject: Corporate governance

Putting aside OMB/staff secretary clearance issues, which may be the tail of a problem rather than the dog, I was concerned that there was some kind of working group on corporate governance issues that did not include a representative from this Office. If so, I think that was a mistake, and something that should not happen.
