Q. Was it signed in connection with the Coleman Sunbeam transaction?

A. Yes.

Q. You can hand it back to me. Thank you very much.

Let me show you now what has been marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 93.

A. All right.

Q. Do you have that exhibit in front of you?

A. I do.

Q. For the record, that is the agreement and plan of merger among Sunbeam Corporation, Laser Acquisition Corporation, CLN Holdings Inc. and Coleman (Parent) Holdings, Inc.

happened at the luncheon?

A. It was a non-event, the luncheon, just telling him he had done a deal.

Q. Did Mr. Perelman -- Mr. Perelman testified yesterday or the day before, I can't remember -- at this point I don't remember which of the two days it was -- at some point he discussed with Mr. Dunlap whether he would have an interest in being on the board of directors of the Coleman Company. Did he ever discuss that subject with you?

A. No. That would not have been a fruitful subject with me.

Q. Why not?

A. I thought that Dunlap was very aggressive, um -- and not someone that I thought was, would have been a great board member.

Q. There does come a time, again in the fall of 1997, when you meet Mr. Dunlap again; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And did you meet him in connection with an introduction by Michael Price?

A. Yes.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012925

A. He laughed.
Q. Did you have any further talks with Mr. Price that involved Mr. Dunlap?
A. I did.
Q. What happened next?
A. Price called me shortly thereafter, and said that Dunlap had a significant interest in seeing Sunbeam acquire Coleman, and I said look Mike, you know, Coleman is in the early stages of its turnaround, its stock market price is not going to reflect what we consider to be its real intrinsic value.

So, it is sort of silly to have that kind of a meeting now, wait six or nine months or a year when you will see that the market price will have begun to reflect what the real value is and, you know, you can talk to us then.

He said, no, no, Al is hell-bent on doing it very quickly, he wants to do this right way.
Q. He said that Al Dunlap was bent on doing it?
A. Yes.
Q. Did he mention in this conversation

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0012926 at all Morgan Stanley?

A. No. He did not mention Morgan Stanley. This was all Al.

Q. So, at this time when Michael Price called, are we in, sometime in late November of 1997?

A. No. It is late November. It could have been the first week of December, but sometime in that time frame.

Q. And at this time was Mr. Price still the fund manager for the mutual fund that you described?

A. Yes. And they owned a ton of Sunbeam shares.

Q. When you refer to "a ton," does that translate into more than 1 percent?

A. Yes.

Q. So, Mr. Price, obviously, had some financial interest in the performance of Sunbeam stock?

A. Oh, sure.

Q. And he was interested, I would take it, in having it go up, rather than go down?

A. He certainly was.

Q. So, how was this conversation with

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012927

A. This is Mr. Price. I said Mike, what's going to happen, we are going to have a meeting, nothing is going to happen for two weeks anyway, we will all 2be away, you are going to be away, too.

He said, no. No. We have to have a meeting. So, Ronald was going to fly down to Palm Beach en route to St. Bart's on the Thursday of that weekend. I was not scheduled to leave with some kids and grand kids until Friday.

I finally said, all right, I will talk to Ronald. Look, Ronald, I will fly down with you and then the plane will take my kids and grandkids down the next day. He said okay, so, we will meet with them.

Q. You flew down to Palm Beach?

A. I flew down with Ronald that afternoon on his plane. My plane stayed back and took my grandkids down the next day. We met at Ronald's house about 5:30. That's what I told --

Q. Now we are at the December 18th meeting at Mr. Perelman's house; correct?

A. That is correct; about 5:30 in the evening. Exactly.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012928

Q. Was there any communication between you and Mr. Dunlap before the meeting on December 18th at Mr. Perelman's house about the meeting, or was it all conducted through Mr. Price?

A. All through Mr. Price.

Q. Mr. Price is acting kind of like an intermediary between the two parties to set up the meeting?

A. The principal shareholder of Sunbeam, yes. That is the role in which he was acting.

Q. Okay. The principal shareholder through his mutual funds?

A. Right.

Q. So, all right, we are at 5:30, December 18th, the doorbell rings.

A. And in comes Mr. Price and Mr. Dunlap.

Q. What happens next?

A. We had some Coca-Cola or -- a glass of iced tea or coffee. If they wanted anything stronger, if they wanted coffee, they could have had it. We went into Mr. Coleman's library and Mr. Dunlap began to extol the virtues of everything that he had done at Sunbeam -- the company is doing great, making money hand over fist. He had taken 26 factories down to eight, some such number. He cut, fired 7,000 people.

012929

I never heard of such stuff, but he was really flying.

Q. Nobody from Morgan Stanley was at this meeting?

A. No. It is just the four of us. And so.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Listen -- so.

I want to buy Coleman, I want to have Sunbeam buy Coleman.

Q. This is Mr. Dunlap talking?

A. Dunlap.

Ronald said to him what I had said to Mike Price, look Al, it is all very interesting, but I have zero interest in selling Coleman at this stage.

The stock market price is not reflective of the true value of the company. I have great confidence in the management team

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0012930

So --

Q. I am sorry, go ahead.

A. So, I said to him -- look, Al, this is not a conversation I want to have with you, but I am going to tell you, I have taken a look at your company, the analyst reports, I have looked at mine, I asked CSFB to calculate out one thing for me, which is what price can Sunbeam pay depending upon the amount of synergies that we would agree might be available.

Without us being dilutive to Sunbeam. And that is 30 bucks a share.

And I have zero interest in selling for less than that. And I either thought that -- you know -- an attack on, you know, Dunlap's manhood or something, he went, you know, yelling and screaming, and his face was red, we want to do a share-for-share exchange.

All of a sudden I said Al, what's the sense of having this meeting, we told Mike five times now that we have no interest in selling this business at this stage.

So, why would you even come in and talk to us about that. That is another transaction. You know, I hope you enjoy your Christmas holiday, and we will see you in a year or so.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

01293I

Q. What did Mr. Dunlap say?

A. Oh, no, Mr. Dunlap started screaming, no, this is a deal that cries out to be done, Morgan has looked all over, Morgan determined who should be our next acquisition. You are our favorite candidate.

You are the only one we want to do this merger with.

Morgan is prepared to finance it, and on and on and on. And his face was getting redder and redder.

I said, Al, please, this is only a business transaction. It is not going to change your style of living and certainly not going to change ours. You know, there is no rush.

I mean, you are going to have a heart attack, calm down. I was really worried.

He started pointing his finger at me, I don't get heart attacks, I give heart

Q. Mr. Byrne describes --

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Your microphone.

Q. Mr. Byrne describes some portion of the meeting and, and he attributes to Mr. Dunlap the statement, Ron you are a pig. You know your company is a piece of shit, you will never see it worth $30 a share in your lifetime, it is only worth 20 bucks, and that is an early Christmas present. Was something like that said?

A. No, he would never have called Ronald a pig. He did not lose that much control. Actually, Ronald and I always thought that he hadn't really lost control, this was just part of his act. This is, you know, the Rambo act.

Q. Did Mr. Dunlap say words to the effect, during the discussions on price, well fuck you, screw you, you guys don't know what you are talking about?

A. He did use certain scatologic terms.

Q. Did Mr. Perelman reply "fuck you"?

A. No.

Q. He would never use a term like that?

A. Ronald doesn't talk like that.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012933

Q. Did Mr. Dunlap shout at the meeting?
A. Oh, yes. He was very exercised.
Q. Did Mr. Dunlap say words to the effect, quote, I am going to save this company for you, I am going to do for -- ah, do what I did at Scott and Sunbeam, I am going to cut all of the costs out? Did he say words like that?
A. Oh, yes. He said words like that.
Q. Then, you are attributed as saying look Al, don't get yourself so excited, you are going to have a heart attack here?
A. That is absolutely accurate.
Q. And then Mr. Dunlap is reported to have said, which I think is consistent with what you said, "I don't get heart attacks, I give heart attacks and I am going to give you a heart attack"?
A. Right. That happened. You don't forget that.
Q. And then you are attributed as saying to Mr. Dunlap, calm down, this is only business, whether we make this deal or not, Ron is not going to be any more or less rich and I am not going to be any more or less rich, I am not going to change -- it is not going to change any of our lives, I don't think it is going to change yours. I know it is not going to change Mike's.

012934

Was something like that said?

A. Something like that I would have said, yes.

Q. Then Dunlap screamed, according to Mr. Byrne, fuck you guys, you will never make a deal, I told you Perelman, you should never listen to lawyers.

A. That means me.

Q. I think it means you.

A. Yes. He said something like that.

Q. Then Dunlap is reported to have stormed out of the house. Did he do that?

A. Well, stormed out. He left.

Q. In a hurry?

A. He did not finish his coke, I will put it that way.

Q. And as he was walking out, did he shout, words to the effect, fuck you and fuck your company?

A. No. I don't remember that.

Q. Did you come to the conclusion --

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012935

Ronald's birthday is, it is January 1st. He was the first child born on January 1st.

And historically, for 20-some years, we spent his birthday together. So, I flew over from Palm Beach to St. Bart's for his birthday party, which we celebrated, no discussion of Mr. Dunlap or Mr. Price.

Q. So, what is the next thing that you remember happening in connection with the Coleman Sunbeam transaction after this meeting with Mr. Dunlap in Palm Beach?

A. Morgan Stanley called Maher, and again, I don't remember whether it was Kitts or Reid -- and Bill Reid called Ronald, that I do know, saying look, this is really silly, these two companies should be together, we worked on this for months. You know, Al gets carried away, let's leave Al out of this. Let's see if we can't get this back on track.

Q. Did you consider there being anything improper about Morgan Stanley speaking to -- to MacAndrews & Forbes again about whether negotiations could be restarted?

A. Not at all.

Q. Or discussions?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012936

A. Morgan Stanley has been a bank of ours for years. You know, we have had very good relations with them. There was no problem at all in their calling us like that.

Bill Reid was the guy in charge of our account at Morgan Stanley at that time -- he succeeded Eric Gleacher and Joe Perella. There were a series of guys at Morgan.

He was trying to get us to buy Gucci, it was a company that we looked at.

And so, it was perfectly appropriate for them to call Ronald or to call me, or to have some of the younger guys call Maher. There was no problem at all with that.

And they were trying to get a deal done. It is their job.

Q. Mr. Perelman said, in his deposition, that he did speak to Mr. Reid sometime in January, approximately, January. Were you on that call?

A. No.

Q. Did you hear about the call?

A. Yes. He told me right away.

Q. To the best you can recall -- it is years later, I understand -- what did in, sometime in the mid-1997, as best I can tell. And he said they pumped him up now, not that they can sell the company, but that he ought to be buying. And they are willing to use their balance sheet to finance.

012937

And that's why Morgan Stanley is doing this and not me.

Q. Did you say that in advance of the meeting on December 18th, that there had been at least some analysis of analysts reports on Sunbeam by CSFB?

A. Sure.

Q. Who had requested that work be done by CSFB?

A. Me.

Q. You?

A. Aha.

Q. In 1997, let's take the month of December, were there analysts that were following Sunbeam?

A. Oh, sure.

Q. About how many?

A. I don't remember now, but at least half a dozen.

Q. Were they analysts at houses, record.

Q. Following the December 18th meeting and moving up all the way to the call that Mr. Perelman received, as he testified from Mr. Reid, I take it you had really no involvement in any discussions in that kind of gap period; is that correct?

A. No. There were no discussions during that gap period.

Q. I think the description I used yesterday with Mr. Perelman was, as of December 18th, the matter was dead in the water, as far as he was concerned; is that fair?

A. I think it never started, it was pretty close to being dead in the water.

Q. If it ever got started, it got turned off?

A. Yes.

Q. Moving now into January, as a result of Mr. Reid's call, or if it was someone else who called Mr. Maher, it is not clear -- did discussions resume?

A. Yes. Mr. Maher then resumed discussions with Morgan. And from that team, which was Jerry Levin, Joe Paige, Bobby Jenkins and Paul Shapiro. He is a Philadelphia Shapiro.

012939

Q. Shapiro.

All right.

All right. So, on the MacAndrews & Forbes team we have Mr. Maher and Mr. Nesbitt and then --

A. And Glen Dickes overseeing the legal aspect.

Q. Then we have Mr. Dickes and Mr. Levin and Mr. Paige down the Coleman side of the transaction?

A. Levin, Paige, Jenkins, Shapiro.

Q. Do you know what due diligence was done by Mr. Nesbitt and Mr. Maher with regard to Sunbeam?

A. I couldn't tell you now. Whatever they thought was necessary.

Q. Were you following the due diligence -- well, I will put it this way. Was the Sunbeam Coleman deal your deal or Mr. Maher's deal?

A. It was not my deal, it was Mr. Maher's deal, but Mr. Maher did not have the power to sign anything and I did. So, I would not get back, I did not get back into this until probably February, right after I got back from vacation.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012940

Q. When did you get back from vacation?

A. I don't remember now, but around the 20th, probably.

Q. Then the deal closes, like, within a week.

A. Right.

Q. Did you consider it --

Well, withdrawn.

Was that a fast, was it a fast deal?

A. Very fast. And that was driven by Morgan. They wanted to do this very quickly.

Q. Did someone tell you that Morgan wanted to do the deal fast or Sunbeam wanted to do the deal fast?

A. I know Sunbeam did, but I was told that Morgan wanted to do it fast, too.

Q. Did someone from Morgan Stanley tell you that?

A. No. It was one of our guys repeating what Morgan Stanley told them.

Q. Who was that who told you that?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012941

A. I think it was either Nesbitt or Maher.

Q. What did Mr. Nesbitt or Mr. Maher tell you?

A. That Sunbeam was driving Morgan to get it done then and Morgan liked the financing markets then.

Q. So, Sunbeam was driving Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley thought the financing markets were time for this transaction?

A. Yes. We do that all the time. It was not unusual. You know, when you catch good financing markets, particularly in a transaction this size, you don't want to lose your market. February is historically a good time to finance this kind of paper.

Q. When -- the paper here we are talking about are the almost two point, I think it is -- 014 billion dollars worth of the debentures that were eventually issued?

A. Well, there was, the zero convert, which was the face of about two billion dollars, and then there was the bank loans, which were about a billion 7.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Thank you, you are right. There was a second component. That is what we are talking about, the financing?

A. Yes.

Q. All of that financing is interest rate-sensitive; right?

A. Sure.

Q. Did you -- well, withdrawn.

What is the first thing that you did when you got back from vacation, I think you said about February 20th, 1998, that relates to the Coleman Sunbeam transaction?

A. I got Maher and Nesbitt in my office, and I said, asked them where we were.

You know, tell me what is being done, where are the documents, where are Jerry and his team in connection with their due diligence. How is our business doing.

I think I talked to Jerry, probably to Paul about that.

Paul was my better contact inside Coleman than was Jerry. I talked to Paul a lot about it. Gave it to a partner of -- worked for me a long time.

Q. This is Mr. Shapiro?

012943

A. Yes. So, then, I said well, look, you better get Morgan and Sunbeam in to take you through one last time, take us, Dickes is telling me that the contract is going to be signed by the end of February.

I want to get one final run-through, where you guys tell me that you are satisfied.

And that led to the meeting which took place sometime after the 20th of February and before the 27th.

The result of that meeting was delivery to me of these Morgan Stanley books.

My question then was, did anything come up at the meeting that would lead you to conclude that the Morgan Stanley book was inaccurate.

He said, no, to the contrary, everybody is extolling the virtues of this company and what is going to happen and how great it is going to be. And I said Okay.

Q. Mr. Perelman testified yesterday that Mr. Levin told Mr. Perelman, that at least for the month of January Sunbeam's sales were soft.

Were you told that by Mr. Nesbitt or

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012944

Mr. Maher?

A. Yes.

Q. So, both Mr. Nesbitt and Mr. Maher told you that fact?

A. Well, one or the other, and it could have been Mr. Levin said that January sales were slow.

But that February was okay.

And they were going to make the quarter. The estimate for the quarter was very high.

Q. So, did you --

A. Not unusual in the consumer products company, a slow January, by the way.

Q. So, having, looking at -- I will show you now MS 84, which, I think, is, is one of the documents that we talked about earlier. I said that we will come back to it, and we will.

A. All right.

Q. I have handed you Morgan Stanley Exhibit 84, and you have that in front of you; correct?

A. Aha.

Q. If you will turn to the page, and I happen in the future, what was going to be the result by the end of March?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012945

A. March 31st. But by -- February 23rd, most businesses, you know, what's going to happen by March 31st.

Q. At any point in time before the closing, did anyone from MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team, whether it be Mr. Levin's group or Mr. Nesbitt, Maher, ask for interim financial statements of Sunbeam for the month of January to see how slow they were?

A. I don't think so. I don't know if they did.

Q. You did not do that?

A. No.

Q. If anyone should have done it, it should have been Mr. Maher; right?

MR. SOLOVY: Objection to the form of the question.

A. It was not particularly relevant. If they are going to make the quarter, they are going to make the quarter.

Q. I asked you about January. At any point, up to the closing, did anyone from the MacAndrews & Forbes due diligence team ask

012946

Sunbeam for its February interim financial statements?

A. No, I did not even know if they had them.

Q. Up to the point of closing, which the record will show is March 30th, 1998, did anyone on the MacAndrews & Forbes due diligence team ask Sunbeam for its interim financial statements for any month in 1998?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did they ask for an update foreclosing on where Sunbeam was for its sales for the first quarter of 1998?

A. Sure.

Q. Who asked?

A. I am sure Mr. Nesbitt did, because I asked him. Because, on March 18th they put this statement out, saying they are not going to make what The Street was projecting they are going to make for the first quarter. They were going to make more than last year.

Q. So, you --

A. That is not in terms of earnings, but it is in terms of sales. I see this press release, said -- well, Nesbitt, what's going

012947

A. After the press release was issued. The press release did not raise a lot of hackles in anybody's mind.

Q. Do you know what the market did after the press release was issued on March 19th?

A. Yes, the market went off a few points.

Q. It went off almost 10 percent; didn't it?

A. Yeah, but it had been up so high, that is all right. That value of Sunbeam, when it went off the 10 percent, that was okay with me.

Q. It was okay when the market dropped 10 percent?

A. That was okay with me. I would have taken the Sunbeam stock at that price. That did not bother me.

You know, the stock was worth 43, 44, that is a good price of Sunbeam.

If you take a look at the transaction and you calculate out, you know what that would have meant to us, take it 14-million-0 shares, that was a nice price.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012948

Q. In connection with issuing debt, after, you are familiar with the underwriter receiving comfort letters from the auditors; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. At any point after the March 19th press release, did anyone on the MacAndrews & Forbes due diligence team request from Morgan Stanley a copy of the comfort letters that it would have received in connection with the underwriting?

A. No. Because I wouldn't believe that they had received the comfort letters which we discovered later in the Arthur Andersen litigation that anybody would have closed that -- or would have permitted us to close that transaction.

Q. I take it your answer is that you made no such request?

A. No such request.

Q. Comfort letters, the comfort letters that were received by Morgan Stanley just weren't from Arthur Andersen, they were also a comfort letter from the Coleman Company; correct?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Other than the meeting in February, the meeting that you, that Mr. Nesbitt and Mr. Maher apparently attended and collected the Exhibit MS 84 that you had in front of you and the other document, Morgan Stanley Exhibit 85 we looked at earlier, can you describe for the jury any other due diligence that the MacAndrews & Forbes team did after February 23rd -- which is, by the way, the date of that meeting, February 23rd --

A. Right.

Q. -- up to closing.

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Where were you on the date of the closing, which was, again, March 30th, 1998?

A. I have not the slightest idea.

Q. You remembered where you were on vacation. I thought you might remember --

A. No.

Q. Sometimes we remember those things.

A. No.

Q. Did you ever review any of the financial modeling that Mr. Nesbitt did in connection with the Sunbeam Coleman

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Okay.
A. You notice the one you showed me previously, assumed -- ah -- synergies of 100,000,000. This one assumes synergies of 150. As I told you, Mr. Dunlap told me it was going to be 250, but we were not as bullish as he was.
Q. Okay. You can hand that back to me, and we are all done with that.
A. Aha.
Q. Thank you.
Are you aware of any interviews of Sunbeam's customers such as a Walmart or a K Mart, during the due diligence that was conducted by the MacAndrews & Forbes team before the closing?
A. No. That would have been done by the Coleman team themselves. Jerry Levin is the one that would have the contact with those customers.
Q. Are you aware of Mr. Levin making any contacts with Sunbeam's customers as part of the due diligence?
A. I know he made contact with the customers. Whether it was before or after closing, I don't know.

012951

Q. In advance of the -- before the closing on March 30th, are you aware of any meetings by the MacAndrews & Forbes due diligence teams with analysts that were following Sunbeam?

A. I don't think so.

Q. I said meetings. I would ask you the same question with regard to just conversations on whether they be face-to-face or on the telephone.

A. I don't know the answer to that, because I know Jerry, for instance, had a very good relationship with Andy Shore.

Q. That is Jerry Levin?

A. Yes. And whether he talked to Andy or not, I don't know.

Q. Did you --

A. Jerry also had a good relationship with Conney Maneatty, who, I think, was covering them, as well. I don't know the answer to that.

Q. Was there a procedure by which Mr. Perelman was kept advised of the status of the negotiations between Sunbeam and Coleman prior to the closing?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012952

A. Well, if he doesn't sign off on price, no one else can. So, he is, has to be aware of price, and he would be aware of the terms -- that is, how much cash, how much stock. He has the final say on that, not me.

And he would be advised -- that you have to understand, we are a very small organization, and he walks the halls, you know; so, it is my office or Maher's office or Jerry had an office up on the 5th floor. It is only a five-story building.

Ronald was there and out of everybody's office, but nobody had authority to negotiate that price if he did not give them.

Q. What about the structure of the transaction? Did anyone have authority to negotiate the structure, other than Mr. Perelman?

A. He wouldn't negotiate it himself. He would instruct his negotiators as to what he was willing do, and it was their job to negotiate then with Morgan.

Q. Did you receive from Mr. Perelman any instructions, that you can remember, about the structure of the consideration that he wanted in the transaction?

012953

A. He wanted stock.

Q. All stock, if he could get it?

A. Yes. Aha.

Q. Did he tell you why he wanted all stock?

A. He believed Morgan.

Q. He believed Morgan.

Did he believe in Sunbeam?

A. Well --

Q. Did he tell you that he believed in Sunbeam?

A. He believed in what Morgan told him about Sunbeam.

Q. Did he believe in Mr. Dunlap?

A. Look, Dunlap had a great record up to that point. It is hard to argue with the record. He did not implode until far after that, until this deal.

Q. Why did the transaction then eventually result in not all stock -- that is, some cash and some assumption of debt?

A. Because Morgan wanted to close the deal right away. They couldn't give us more than 19.8 percent of the stock without going and, without getting New York Stock Exchange approval, which requires time, and they did not want to take the time. That's what set the cap on the stock that we could get.

012954

Q. You say Morgan wanted to close. Did Sunbeam, in your understanding, want to close to the client --

A. Sure. I said that before, absolutely. They both wanted to close right away. They did not want to go to the Stock Exchange, which would have taken time. So, that put the cap on the amount of stock that we could get.

Q. It was that issue that caused Mr. Perelman to take less than 100 percent stock?

A. Yes.

Q. If he could have taken 100 percent stock, he would have?

A. He would have.

Q. Did you ever encourage -- strike that.

Did you ever suggest to him that he should not do that, that he should take cash?

012955

A. That is irrelevant. That is why he is richer than me. I would always take cash, but he is far more bullish than I am.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Levin, were you ever present when Mr. Levin said words to the effect that he, Mr. Perelman, should take as cash and not stock?

A. I don't recall that. At least, it was not in my presence.

Q. I take it, given the 1998 markets being what they were, there was more upside in stock than in cash?

A. Ronald certainly believed so.

MR. BEMIS: Let's break for lunch.

Q. Now -- this is the time -- you have a copy over there.

I will put this one back.

What I would like you to do -- my understanding is that, from your prior testimony today, is that you did receive a copy of this document from either Mr. Maher or Mr. Nesbitt, following the meeting that we have been talking about, which the record will establish was February 23rd. Am I correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And that you reviewed this document sometime thereafter; is that correct?

A. That same day.

Q. Okay. Or did you get it -- did you get it on -- in the evening or during a normal business day?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Okay. Whatever day it was, you received it is when you reviewed it?

A. Yes.

Q. I would like you to just walk through the document with me, and you will have to use page numbers.

A. Sure. Okay.

012957

Is there something funny? If you would look, again, at MS 85, there is going to be page numbers in the lower-right-hand corner. CPH page numbers.

A. Yes.

Q. Those are the numbers that we will be referring to.

Looking at each page of the document, one page at a time, would you tell me which of those pages you read and relied upon and that you believed Morgan Stanley knew, in February of 1993, were false?

A. Okay, let's start with page 224, that is the CPH number.

Q. If you give me a chance, I will get there.

A. Okay.

Q. I am there.

MR. SOLOVY: Let's see what page that is. Where are you reading the numbers from?

THE WITNESS: The side here. Right on the side here.

MR. SOLOVY: I see. 224. Sorry.

A. The majority of the restructuring

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012958

plan was completed in the first quarter of 1997.

And I expected the resultant cost savings to be 225 million, of which 75 percent are -- expected to be realized in 1997 and the balance in 1998.

I relied upon that. I expected it to be true.

I found out later that it was not true.

Q. May I ask you: Do you have any facts to support a statement that Morgan Stanley believed that statement to be false in February of 1998?

A. Well, if they did not, they should have known. They had been working on this company for nine months at this point.

Q. Other than what -- sorry?

A. If they did not know that, they did not know anything. When they present this to me, I expect them to believe that it is true.

They had to know this was not true. They had to know that.

Q. Do you have any facts, other than what you think they should have known, that would tell you that they knew it was false?

012959

A. No.
Q. Please continue.
A. Page 226.
Q. Yes, sir.
A. The consolidated net sales number for 1997.
Projections for '98 and '99.
I relied upon. Morgan Stanley certainly by the time of um, the comfort letters knew that was inaccurate, and couldn't be met.
Q. Before you move on, the figures for 1997 -- may I ask you -- that you referred to, those figures are footnoted as being taken from Sunbeam's annual report; correct?
A. Right.
Q. Do you have any facts that you can tell the jury that would support a conclusion that Morgan Stanley knew in February of 1998 that the sales figures in Sunbeam's audited 1997 financial statements were incorrect?
A. Well, they did not have the audited statements yet. Because this was, the earliest, February, they did not have the audited statement yet, I don't think. For 1997. Then they had to know they were false.

012960

Q. How is it that, what facts do you base that upon?

A. Because once we got into the numbers, as they had, spending months doing, and they had to reset all these, all these numbers were changed.

Q. When were they changed?

A. They were changed by the year 2000. It took us that long to get a financial statement here.

Q. Wasn't it in late 1998 when Arthur Anderson -- when the restatement was done?

A. The restatement was done in '98, but they wouldn't issue a certified financial statement then.

Q. Wasn't it, was it not until -- excuse me. When did Arthur Andersen withdraw its opinion on the 1997 financial statements?

A. Sometime mid June.

Q. Of 1998?

A. Of 1998.

Q. When did Arthur Andersen withdraw its opinion on anything related to the 1996

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

financial statements of Sunbeam?
A. Sometime subsequent.
Q. In June of 1998, right?
A. Sometime subsequent.
Q. Sometime subsequent to February 23rd, 1998?
A. Absolutely.
Q. With regard to the projections going forward that you mentioned, those are also footnoted as being projections from Oppenheimer, an Oppenheimer research report; correct?
A. Yeah, that doesn't excuse them. They were -- are being presented to me by Morgan Stanley as being accurate.
Q. Did you ask anyone from Morgan Stanley or the MacAndrews & Forbes' team to see the Oppenheimer research report?
A. No. I am sure we had that.
Q. You are sure you had it?
A. I am sure we had it.
Q. Would you continue for me, please.
A. The consolidated profitability statistics, as shown on page 227, which shows net income in '97 of 123 million, in '98 of 199 million -- and in '99 of 253 million.

012962

Q. Notes to those figures say they are based on projections from Oppenheimer Research, which you said you had; correct?

A. Right, and they excluded any one time for extraordinary charges.

Q. Would you please continue.

A. Page 231. Stated growth objectives of Sunbeam.

To double without acquisition, '96 sales of 984 million, to two billion by 1999, implying compound average growth at about 27 percent.

Q. Which is what it says?

A. That's what it says; right. But Morgan Stanley should have known that was impossible to obtain.

Q. And did you understand objectives to be something to be achieved in the future when you read this?

A. Sure.

Q. Did you ask Morgan Stanley any questions about the figures that appear on this page, 231?

A. I know Mr. Levin did.

012963

Q. Mr. Levin did.

A. Tripling international sales from 185 million to about 600 million in '99, compound annual growth rate of about 48 percent.

Q. Again, that was an objective through the year 1999?

A. That is an objective through the year 1999, but when Morgan Stanley presented it to you, they are adopting that thing. This is what we are going to get done.

Q. You read this stated growth objectives as a representation by Morgan Stanley that in 1999 Sunbeam would be able to achieve these results?

A. If Morgan Stanley thought that they were false, they would not have presented these, or they shouldn't have presented them.

Q. Go ahead, please continue to the next page, sir, that you -- that, as you worked through document.

A. Page 234, the future growth opportunities.

Again, dealing with very significant international growth -- the same number, 185 million to 600 million.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Then they said they were going to introduce 30 new products a year -- shortening the product development time to six months, from two-and-a-half years, generating an additional $300,000,000.

Morgan Stanley had to have known that they weren't, did not have that many products on the board, you can't generate those products that fast enough.

Q. Do you know that Morgan Stanley knew that or are you just assuming that they had to know that?

A. I am assuming that they had to know that.

Q. Okay. Please continue.

(Pause.)

A. Then there is a whole page on the allergy smart air cleaner, page 237, which we thought -- we thought it was going to be a great product.

Q. Who was that telling you that?

A. Morgan and Sunbeam.

And certainly by June they knew this product was a failure. I don't know if they knew it in February. I can't say that they did.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012565

Q. We are talking the year 1998 when you said February and June; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Please continue.

A. Then --

Q. Before we move on, if I can interrupt you one second. Have you, in your many years of business experience, ever known to have a company develop a product that they felt was going to be a big success and turned out to be a failure?

A. Oh, sure. But they were so sure about this one, of all of the 30 new products, this one and one other were the ones that they were relying on.

Q. Do you think that Ford was sure about the Edsel when it marketed it?

MR. SOLOVY: Objection to the form of the question.

A. Probably was.

Q. You can answer.

You did.

And you may continue.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012966

MR. SOLOVY: Did you buy any Edsel stock?

MR. BEMIS: I was too young, Mr. Solovy.

MR. SOLOVY: Me, too.

A. Then the operational improvement which we thought had been accomplished because they told us it had been.

Q. What page are you on, sir?

Q. Let me get there. Give we one second. I am there. Page 240.

A. Yes.

Essentially, what they are saying to you on this page is that we have now cleaned up our service operation so that we are gaining market share and we will do that because we are, you know, fulfilling our orders, you know, efficiently and on timely.

Q. Do you have any basis to know that any of these service improvements in the potentials here, that Morgan Stanley knew that they were false on February 23rd?

A. By April, by April we knew that they were false, because they were screwing up the

012967

Coleman part of it.

We did not find out there was, that they were screwing up the Sunbeam part of it until June, when we got there.

Q. So, as of February, at least, 1998, you don't have any basis to say that Morgan Stanley knew that these statements were false?

A. When you say that -- what I am saying to you is, if Morgan Stanley, after being there for nine months, did not know this, they weren't doing their job right.

Q. Would you please continue.

A. Then the channel management case, I did not really pay a lot of attention to that.

Q. That was on page 241; right?

A. Yes. The worldwide organization post chart, post merger, looked okay to us. We did not know very many of these people.

Then, when we got there, you know, half of these people were gone.

Q. When you say when you got there, you mean in June of -- excuse me.

A. By April, Uzzi, who is the chief operating officer, he was gone by April. Fannin, you know, he is ratting out, you know,

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012968

senior management, Dunlap and Kersh, by June.

Q. Mr. Fannin never left the company?

A. He left.

Q. Not during this time period?

A. No. He left the company subsequently.

Q. After June?

A. After June. By June he is already telling them that there is a gigantic fraud going on.

Q. Let's focus on the period February. Was this chart, as you knew it, accurate in February of 1998?

A. I don't know. I am not sure that Debbie McDonald was still there. She left right around then.

Q. Do you have any facts to support, just as an example, the conclusion that Morgan Stanley knew Mr. Uzzi would be terminated on or about April 3rd, 1998?

A. Yes. I think so, because, you know, when they got the comfort letter, the person they talked with, Morgan Stanley talked with was Uzzi. And then, thereafter, when they talked with Dunlap and Kersh, they blamed all this on Uzzi and they were going to fire him.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012969

Q. Could I ask you to, please, refer back to February, that is the question.
A. February 23rd, no.
Q. As of February 23rd, 1998, you don't have any basis to say that Morgan Stanley knew Mr. Uzzi was going to be fired in April; correct?
A. No. It was not until March.
Q. Okay. You can continue.
A. Summary of recent analysts commentary.
Q. What page is that, sir?
A. Page 248.
Q. I am --
A. Something about the sign-in agreement with Nuskin to help distribute its fresh source water product in Asia. The source being CIBC Oppenheimer, CSFB Oppenheimer may have said that. I can't believe that Morgan Stanley did not know that that had happened and wasn't.
Q. It is quoted as being a source from CSFB?
A. Slightly right. You can't excuse

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

what you are presenting to us by saying it is a source of somebody else and I don't know, and I don't know anything about it. That is not what I expect from Morgan Stanley or any other investment bank.

Q. Did you ask CSFB, your investment bank, to check this representation?

A. I did not have to, because Morgan Stanley is presenting it to us. Do you think that they are going to lie to us?

Q. You did not ask CSFB, then, to investigate this statement?

A. I did not.

Q. Okay.

A. "Sunbeam has 20 signed distribution and license agreements so far in 1997. By expanding into new SKUs in Latin America, the company can leverage the Oster brand into new revenue streams."

This is nonsense, nonsense. It was not true.

It is true -- that was right.

Q. This statement that you read is in quotation marks, and the source is given; correct?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. Exactly. Again, it is Oppenheimer, but what does that have to do with it; it is Morgan Stanley giving it to us. If it was not true, they shouldn't have given it to us.

Q. Again, you did not ask your investment banker, CSFB, to investigate this statement?

A. I did not.

Q. Neither did anyone on the MacAndrews & Forbes team, to your knowledge?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Please continue.

A. One of my favorites, "Sunbeam overview of the outdoor cooking devices industry."

Q. What page are you on?

A. I am on page 252.

Q. Okay. What about that?

A. They are talking about the grill business. Gas, charcoal, electric grill.

And they are telling you about all of the growth opportunities. Okay.

Q. Yes, the opportunities.

A. Right. And what they are saying here is, these are the opportunities that this great Sunbeam company has. They did not tell you that Sunbeam had been thrown out of either Home Depot or Walmart, I don't remember now, in the accessories business, in the most profitable part of the grill business.

012972

Q. When did that happen?

A. Before February 23rd. The Morgan community did not bother to tell us that.

Q. Are you telling me that you know that Morgan Stanley knew that?

A. If they did not know, they should have known.

Q. Go ahead.

A. Also, when we got there in June we got an anonymous tip to go down and look in June, sometime after we sent our people down there in June of 1998 to the Tulsa air -- a little airport in Tulsa, we found a million square feet of rented space by Sunbeam filled to the gills with grills.

Q. Had this been reported in Sunbeam's annual report audited by Arthur Andersen?

A. No. And sure wasn't told to us by Morgan Stanley, either.

Q. Do you have any facts to support a statement that Morgan Stanley knew about this warehouse in February, in Tulsa, that you received information on by way of an anonymous tip?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012973

A. No.

Q. Did you ever hear that Morgan Stanley received an anonymous tip to go look at this warehouse in Tulsa?

A. I don't know whether they did or not.

Q. Please continue. Is there anything else on this page, 252?

A. Well, that was enough for the grill business.

Q. Okay. Please continue.

A. Then they go through a whole series of summaries -- analysts; commentary. The reason they are telling you that is that they are vouching for it. They are not telling you this is what all of the analysts are saying but it is false, we have been here for nine months.

Q. So, you were on page 255?

A. I was going through all of those pages, with respect to the analysts'

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012974

commentaries.

Q. Let me make sure that I get those.

A. 255, 254. 255 is the best one.

Q. 255.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Please continue. You last stopped on page 255. You should go forward.

A. 259 is just repeating what they had said before. I already commented on that.

263, again, talking about shortening the product development frame from two and a half years to six months. Again, about the, open air, purification and grill business. 30 distinct products a year. Launching.

Again, not attributed to any analysts, but this is what Morgan Stanley said.

Q. These are under the heading, if you will, "new product initiatives"?

A. That's right. And they continued to go.

Q. Please turn to, give me the next page that you find --

A. 266, the water fresh source water purifier. This was a hot new product, according to Morgan Stanley. The only problem is that it did not work. It did not work.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012975

Q. Where did Morgan Stanley tell you that the product did or did not work? When did --

A. Well, they certainly represented it to us on February 23rd, that this was a hot new product.

Q. You weren't there on February 23rd; so, are you just talking about what's in this document?

A. Yeah. Of course. Why do you think they put it in the document for? They did not put it in the document because it was a failure.

Q. What else, sir?

A. They go through the international expansion again.

Page 270, "management goal tripled international sales from 185 million to 600 million."

Q. That is stated as a goal; correct?

A. Stated as a goal.

Q. Okay. You may continue.

A. Morgan Stanley -- they knew, or should have known, they were incapable of doing that.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012976

Q. Please continue.

A. If you look at page 274, you see what their opportunities were for growth, particularly in Asia. They go from 3 million in '96 to 150 million in 1999. Morgan Stanley knew, or should have known, that they were not capable of doing that.

Q. Again, these are -- what you are referring to are projections of what are described as global opportunities and market potential; correct?

Q. All right. Please go forward from page 274.

A. This whole series of pages which deal with the channel management opportunities, what they are doing here is saying look, here is how we can manage these channels, improve -- improve our sales and profitability.

We certainly thought that was a worthwhile objective and thought it was possible to have happened. Someone who had been servicing this company for nine months should have known that they were nowhere in trying to get that project completed.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012977

Q. You were referring to pages 79 --

A. Right, up through 82.

Q. -- through 82.

A. Then, page 293, the marketing licensing and merchandising opportunities.

And the point that licensing presents an immediate profit opportunity. Everyone agrees with that.

They should have known, or did know that, at that point, Sunbeam had virtually no licensing projects going forward.

Q. That is under the heading "Make Versus License Decisions."

A. Yes.

Q. Please continue.

A. I think that is it. Thank you.

Q. Thank you, sir, for taking the time to do that for me. Get that assembled.

Two of the products that you pointed out for us, one was the, I want to call it the air cleaner, but I think it is the air filtration system?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012978

A. Air purifier.
Q. Air purifier. Did you, at any point during the due diligence, see one of those units?
A. I did not.
Q. Do you know if anyone did on your --
A. Yes, I am sure the Coleman people did.
Q. When you say you are sure, do you know that they did?
A. They told me that they did.
Q. Who told you that?
A. Now, I can't remember which one of them.
Q. Did they tell you that it wouldn't work?
A. No.
Q. The other device that you identified was, I think, a water purification system?
A. Right.
Q. Did you see that device?
A. No.
Q. Did you ask to see it?
A. No.
Q. Are you, did anyone on the

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012979

MacAndrews & Forbes team of due diligence see the device?

A. I am sure the Coleman people saw that, probably --

Q. Sorry.

A. Pretty sure.

Q. You are sure that they did. Did someone tell you that they did?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that?

A. I can't remember.

Q. Did the person who saw it and told you that they saw it tell you that it wouldn't work?

A. No.

Q. Did they tell you it worked?

A. We just presumed that it worked. The question was would it sell.

Q. Okay. Of all of the pages that you identified, and I wrote them down as you went through -- and I will list them out for you, and I don't expect you to follow through if you don't want to -- you listed CPH 1411. 224. And then 226, 227, and 231. 234, 237, 240. 242. 248. 252.

012980

255. 259. 263. 266. 270. 274. 279 through 282, and 293 -- did you ask CSFB to perform any investigation of the matters set forth on those pages?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone on the due diligence team of MacAndrews & Forbes?

A. I don't know.

Q. That would be Mr. Maher, would know that?

A. Maher and Mr. Nesbitt, or the Coleman people.

Q. Okay. Let me set this aside.

A. All right.

Q. In the final contracts which I will hand to you, which are Morgan Stanley 193 and 117, did you review, at least in draft form, those contracts before you approved them?

A. At some point, yes.

Q. Each of those contracts, which I will refer to as the merger agreements, contains representations and warranties; correct?

A. Sure.

Q. Those were negotiated by the parties

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012981 is valuable. Whatever the parties negotiated in terms of representations and warranties were reviewed by you; correct?

A. I am sure I read them, yes.

Q. When you read them, you read them with the idea that someone from MacAndrews & Forbes was going to sign the document; correct?

A. Sure.

Q. And being a transaction in the billions of dollars of value, it was an important matter for you and for the people signing the document to understand what was in it; correct?

A. Absolutely.

Q. And it was a negotiated document; was it not?

A. Of course.

Q. And at least in the negotiations you both had lawyers who reviewed the documents before they were signed; correct?

A. Sure.

Q. You both had investment bankers before the documents were signed; correct?

A. Absolutely.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012982

Q. And you both had -- that is, both companies had an opportunity to do whatever due diligence they chose to do before signing the documents and, indeed, closing the transaction; correct?

A. Right.

Q. Why don't you hand me those back. We are all done with those.

(Pause.)

Q. Now, earlier you told me that had you known the information that was in the Arthur Andersen comfort letter that was issued to Morgan Stanley in connection with the issuance of the debentures, that had you known that information, you would not have proceeded with the transaction; correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. I take it that means you would have terminated the transaction?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Did you see the 10-Q that Sunbeam filed in May of 1998, which set forth the actuals of both sales and income or loss numbers for the first quarter of 1998?

A. I don't recall now whether I did or approximating where it was before?

012983

A. Sure.
Q. The announcement --
MR. SOLOVY: Objection to the form of the question.
A. That is exactly what I would have expected.
MR. SOLOVY: Objection to the form of the question.
Q. Where was Coleman -- withdrawn. I am done with that.
Did you see Sunbeam's annual report on form 10K for the year 1997 before the closing?
A. No.
Q. Did you see the offering memorandum for the debentures that Morgan Stanley underwrote in connection with the transaction?
A. I did.
Q. Did you read it?
A. I paged through it, I really just looked at financials.
Q. You, of course -- well, let me ask you. Do you read the footnotes to the financial statements?

012984 announcing its first quarter 1998 results; did you see that?

A. I did.

Q. Let me show you what has been marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 58.

There you are, sir. I hand you Morgan Stanley Exhibit 58. Please take a moment and let me know when you are finished. I don't have a lot of detailed questions about it. Read it to the extent that you wish.

A. Okay.

Q. Did you see a copy of this press release at or about April 3rd, '97?

A. Shortly afterwards.

Q. Could you tell us the circumstances as to how you came to see it.

A. Somebody brought it to my desk.

Q. What happened then?

A. I was, to say the least, very much annoyed. I felt we had been misled. I felt that they had to know this before April 3rd.

Q. Now, who is the who?

A. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam.

Q. Okay.

A. That, I had not seen a comfort letter at this point. That, in my view, when they issued the March 19th release, it had to have been false. I called Mike Price and took his head off.

012985

And Mike said to me, look Howard, I don't -- you know, don't worry about it, they are going to make the year.

You know, I don't know what you are complaining about.

I said, what I am complaining about is, it is my choice to make, if I want to run a risk, I am a big boy, I can run a risk, but i want to have the facts.

I don't know who had the facts.

Why are you so sure?

I said, why did they fire Uzzi? Uzzi was the guy running the place.

Q. This is Michael Price at the mutual fund?

A. Yes, he is the largest shareholder besides us -- he is a larger shareholder than we are.

Q. What else did Mr. Price say to you?

A. He said he would look into it.

Q. Did he get back to you?

012986

Mr. Price?

A. Yes. He was Mr. Price's lead designee on the board.

Q. So, now, you, MacAndrews & Forbes and Mr. Price's Mutual Funds, they are the two largest shareholder of Sunbeam?

A. Right.

Q. You are communicating with each other about these matters?

A. Yes. Came in to see me, look, you know, ah, Al is the greatest, he will pull this together. Uzzi misled him.

I said, it is outrageous, I don't understand how you guys can say that to me.

You knew so little about this business.

Where is Morgan Stanley now? They just sold -- sold the damn, you know, zero coupon A debentures, I would not want to be in their position.

Q. You wouldn't want to be in Morgan Stanley's position, to say anything false --

A. Absolutely not. Let me tell you something, the customers were going to be all over them, just as I am all over them. If

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. Sure was.

Q. Did you, at any point after April 3rd and up to the firing of Mr. Dunlap, did you call anyone at Morgan Stanley and say, what happened, why didn't you tell us; anything like that?

A. No.

Q. Did you write any letters to them saying we are upset about this, you misled us, what happened; anything like that?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes?

A. No. First, we had to -- first, we had to explore what had happened. We were on the outside. It was not until after we got there in June that we began to learn some of the facts. We get there in June.

We learn some of the facts, and we have three potential defendants, Sunbeam, officers and directors, Arthur Andersen, Morgan Stanley.

At first, the first thing I want to do is, give me back my company, okay.

It is very simple, guys.

I will give you back your stock, that was put out that day was sufficient and that there was no need for additional disclosures in documents to be filed with the SEC.

Q When did the idea of putting out the press release spring up?

A I don't know precisely when it sprung up. But I believe that it was a result of Arthur Andersen's discussions with the underwriters and the draft of the comfort letter indicating that there was a decline in sales in 1998 as compared to 1997. I believe that was the genesis of top management and counsel of putting out some type of press release.

Q When was the first time that Arthur Andersen discussed this information with the underwriters?

A I cannot precisely answer with a date, but it was very close. And by close, I mean within several days of the point in time the press release was put out on the 19th or 20th.

Q Realizing that you don't know the specific date right now when you say several days, more like seven or more like three?

A More like three. More like two.

Q Was Arthur Andersen involved in any discussions relating to the content of the press release?

A Arthur Andersen was not consulted on the content of

A. I am confident there was a hard copy the second half of 1998 and we somehow re-created the first half. It could have been a hard copy.

Q. Other than the calendar now that you have described for us, did you keep any other form of calendar for either 1997 or 1998?

A. No.

Q. Have you ever been asked to produce your calendar in any of the Sunbeam litigation that you can remember?

A. I don't recall.

Q. I want to ask you a couple of background questions about your employment, not where you worked 20 years ago right now, so just the jury understands who you are in case you testify by videotape here. Let me focus first on the Coleman Company.

The Coleman Company was headquartered in Wichita, Kansas; right?

A. Yes.

Q. You were employed there twice as I understand it; is that correct?

A. Prior to Sunbeam, twice.

012993

Q. When was the first time that you were employed at the Coleman Company in Wichita?

A. In April of 1989.

Q. How long did you work there before you left?

A. Two years.

Q. So you left about 1991?

A. In April of 1991.

Q. During your first tour at Coleman, what was your position with the company?

A. Chairman of the holding company.

Q. When you refer to chairman of the holding company, what is the name of that holding company?

A. I believe it was Coleman Holding Company.

Q. That held all of the stock of Coleman -- the Coleman Company, Inc.?

A. I believe so.

Q. Then Coleman Holding Company was owned by another holding company; correct?

A. I'm not sure which one of the holding companies was affiliated with

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012994

MacAndrews & Forbes.

Q. Ultimately, these holding companies that were affiliated with MacAndrews & Forbes were owned by Ronald O. Perelman; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Perelman hire you to go to work at the Coleman Company?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you had a second tour of duty at the Coleman Company starting in 1997?

A. Yes.

Q. February?

A. Yes.

Q. How long did you stay with the Coleman Company on this second tour?

A. Until we closed the sale of the Coleman Company to Sunbeam.

Q. That was in March 30, 1998 as the record will show. Did you resign at that point?

A. Yes.

Q. Let me show you a document we'll mark as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 445 which I will put it to you again with all the confusion. Do you want me to ask you again?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. Yes.

Q. Was Mr. Maher in the room when you were there during the negotiations?

MR. BIDEAU: Objection to the form of the question.

A. I wasn't there during the negotiations other than at the very end, approximately February 20th to the 27th. Through that time period, Mr. Maher was in the room when I was there.

Q. Is it fair to say that your participation in the negotiations from your perspective began in earnest on, say, February 20th, which is the date you just used, 1998?

A. It was approximately February 20th.

Q. Because, as I recall, you were in Puerto Rico and got a phone call and were asked to come back to New York and you got that phone call directly from Mr. Perelman; is that right?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

012996

A. That's correct.

Q. After February 20th, 1998, the negotiation moved very quickly and concluded on February 27, 1998; correct?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

A. That sounds reasonably accurate.

Q. Again, just to put this in place for the jury, you did attend the board of directors meetings of the Coleman Company, Inc. where the merger was considered by the full board; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You did attend the February 25 meeting where the merger was first disclosed to the full board; correct?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

A. I don't think it's fair to say that was the first time the board was informed about the merger.

Q. I'm speaking of the full board. So if there was any confusion let me try again.

When was the full board of

A. I do not recall hiring a special accounting advisor.
Q. Did the Coleman Company have an outside accounting firm conducting its audits, for example, at that time?
A. Yes.
Q. Who was that?
A. I don't recall.
Q. How about Ernst & Young; does that sound familiar?
A. It could well have been.
Q. At any point in time, did the board of directors of the Coleman Company retain Morgan Stanley or any of its affiliates to perform services in connection with the Sunbeam/Coleman merger?
A. No.
Q. At any point in time, did the Coleman Company make any payments to Morgan Stanley in connection with the Sunbeam/Coleman merger?
A. I'm unaware of any.
Q. Did you have any face-to-face meetings with Morgan Stanley employees after the merger agreements were signed and up to the date of closing, March 30, 1998?

012998

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did you have any -- I will use the word conference call or telephone calls, if you like, with Morgan Stanley concerning the Sunbeam/Coleman acquisition after the signing of the merger documents on February 27 and up to the closing on March 30, 1998?

A. I can't speak to the specific date but the only incident that I can recall is when the company asked us to make a presentation to the proposed bank's syndicate. They were trying to syndicate the loan and asked us to lead them through our plans. I believe that call was led by Morgan Stanley.

Q. When you say our plans, you are referring to the Coleman Company's plans?

A. Coleman Company's plans.

Q. Would this be the 1998 strategic plan for Coleman you looked at in preparation for your deposition?

A. Yes and no.

Q. What's the no part?

012999

Q. Sure. Between February 27, 1998 and up to the date of closing which is March 30, 1998, Coleman upon request was was to be given access of the books and records of Sunbeam Corporation pursuant to the merger agreement; correct?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to form.

MR. BIDEAU: Same objection.

A. Could you just repeat that for me?

Q. Sure. After the signing of the merger agreement and up until the time of the closing, the Coleman Company upon request had access pursuant to this provision to the books and records of Sunbeam Corporation?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Same objection.

A. It appears as long as the times were reasonable that is true.

Q. To your knowledge, between February 27 and March 30, did the Coleman Company make a request to inspect the books and records of Sunbeam Corporation pursuant to this provision, section 7.2?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Would it be fair to say, sir -- first of all, you've operated a number of public companies; right?

A. Yes.

Q. Public companies file or prepare or have prepared annual financial statements which are audited by their accountants; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. They also, that is public companies such as you have managed, they have prepared quarterly financial statements that are filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. So-called 10-Q filings; right?

A. Yes.

Q. And in the companies that you have managed, do those companies also maintain monthly financial statements, sometimes called interim financial statements, that lead to the issuance of quarterly and then annual statements?

MR. BIDEAU: Objection.

A. As I said, I was in Tucson and I'm unaware of what happened.

Q. Are you aware of any request by MacAndrews & Forbes even if you didn't participate in it directly, are aware of any request by MacAndrews & Forbes to view at any point up to the point up to the time of closing, March 30, 1998, the interim financial statements of Sunbeam for the month of January 1998?

A. I don't know.

Q. Are you aware of any such request by MacAndrews & Forbes to see the February 1998 Sunbeam interim financial statements?

A. I'm unaware of any.

Q. Are you aware of MacAndrews & Forbes requesting, even if you didn't participate in this directly, Sunbeam's interim financial statements for any portion of March of 1998?

A. I was out of the company completely by the time those financials were available.

Q. When you managed your public companies such as the Coleman Company, I think you said Revlon as well; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. As the president of the company, did you review on a monthly basis your company's interim financial statements?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know how to read them?

A. I think so.

Q. Do you know Mr. Perelman pretty well?

A. From a business perspective. I've worked for him for a long time.

Q. From a business perspective, do you think Mr. Perelman knows how to read an interim financial statement?

A. I believe so.

Q. Do you think he knew how to do that in 1998?

A. I believe so.

Q. Before the closing on March 30, 1998, the Coleman Company filed its annual Form 10-K with the Securities and Exchange Commission for the year 1997; correct?

A. It should have.

Q. You signed that document, did you

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013003 not, as the president and chief executive officer of the company?

A. I don't recall if I signed that document or not but I'm aware of it.

Q. Before the actual closing of the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction, did you obtain a copy of Sunbeam's 1997 annual report on Form 10-K filed with the SEC and the record will show on or about February 26, 1998?

A. Yes.

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form. I think you misspoke.

MR. BEMIS: I did. Thank you.

Let me re-ask the question. Thank you.

Q. Before the actual closing of the Sunbeam transaction on March 30, 1998, did you obtain a copy of Sunbeam's 1997 annual report on Form 10-K that was filed with the SEC on or about March 6, 1998?

A. Before the closing?

Q. The closing on March 30, 1998.

A. I don't recall doing so.

Q. At that time, March of 1998, if I recall your testimony correctly, you were in Tucson, Arizona at your vacation home;

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013004 is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. You had effectively left day-to-day operations of the Coleman Company at the request I think you said of Mr. Kersh; is that right?

A. Dunlap and Kersh.

Q. Mr. Dunlap and Mr. Kersh. Thank you.

We touched a little bit on these preliminary matters of your employment with Mr. Perelman's companies. I would like to get just a little more detail on your background for the jury so they can understand what's going to come in the rest of your testimony.

You first went to work, as I understand it, with Texas Instruments after you got your MBA; is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. How long were you with them?

A. Approximately four years.

Q. What did you do there?

A. Starting as a financial analyst, my last position was to manage the treasury of the Coleman leaving the core company?

A. Yes.
Q. And using the proceeds of the sale then to pay off the debt incurred in order to acquire the Coleman Company; correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And that's what you did?
A. Yes.
Q. Successfully?
A. Yes.
Q. You then leave the Coleman Company and go on to -- is it Revlon Corp., is that where you went first?
A. I don't recall. It was private at the time I went and then he took it public. I can't remember which Revlon it was but it was all of the Revlon operations.
Q. What was your position at Revlon?
A. My first position was president and chief operating officer.
Q. How long were you the president and chief operating officer of Revlon?
A. I don't recall the sequence.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013006

Q. Did you eventually become the chief executive officer of Revlon?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that include all of its subsidiary operating companies?

A. Yes.

Q. So you also would have been chief executive officer of Revlon Consumer Products?

A. Yes.

Q. How long were the chief executive officer of the Revlon entities?

A. I don't recall when I became chief executive officer but I believe it was about two years -- maybe it was a year and a half after I joined Revlon I became chief executive officer and I was at Revlon from April of 1991 until I joined Coleman in very early 1997.

Q. During this period of April 1991 until the time that you joined the Coleman Company, did Mr. Perelman or his affiliated entities own an interest in Revlon?

A. Yes.

Q. What interest did they own? All the only two companies in Mr. Perelman's group of companies that you worked with the Coleman operating company and the Revlon operating companies?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013007

A. As broadly defined. There was partially owned subsidiaries here and there but yes.

Q. Do you consider yourself an operations guy?

A. Not particularly.

Q. What do you consider to be your forte as a businessman now that you are 60 years old and you have described your career for us; what is your forte?

A. I have an ability to put teams together that can execute turnarounds of branded consumer product companies.

Q. Would you consider yourself a specialist in consumer branded products?

A. It's one of my strengths.

Q. In 1998 at the time of the merger, did you consider Sunbeam to be a consumer branded products company?

A. Yes.

Q. And Sunbeam had as of 1998, had

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. In your role as you've described it in the negotiations on behalf of Coleman, did you report directly to Mr. Perelman?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

A. I reported to the board of directors for which Mr. Perelman was not a member.

Q. Did you have any responsibility on behalf of Coleman for due diligence of Sunbeam before the signing of the merger agreements?

A. Yes.

Q. What was your responsibility?

A. They asked me to review Sunbeam's business plan and long term strategy.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Who is they? You said, "They asked me."

A. I don't recall. I just wound up going to the meeting as part of the due diligence. I don't know specifically who asked me.

Q. Is this meeting you referred to a meeting that took place after you returned from Puerto Rico?

A. Yes.

Q. Where Mr. Kersh made a presentation using overhead slides?

A. I know their investor relations, Rich Goudis, being at the presentation, it was probably Mr. Kersh that made the rest of it, I don't remember.

Q. Let me show you a document that's been marked as MS 84. I don't want to cover it right now but I want to see if that's the strategic plan or business plan that you were looking at.

A. Yes.

Q. Is that your handwriting that appears on the document?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013010

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Keep it in front of you right now because we'll get back to it later.

MR. BEMIS: And when I do, I will give you a copy.

Q. Did you have any responsibility for due diligence of Sunbeam after the signing of the merger agreements? I think you said you went to Tucson.

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did anyone at the Coleman Company have due diligence responsibilities after February 28 or was it a matter that was handled by MacAndrews & Forbes?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

A. I don't know of any that Coleman did.

Q. During the negotiations on behalf -- to the extent they were being conducted on behalf of MacAndrews & Forbes, was it your understanding that Mr. Perelman was taking the final responsibility on the terms of the transaction for MacAndrews & Forbes' side?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

directors.

Q. Did you work at all with James Maher during the negotiations?

A. Slightly.

Q. How would you describe the slightly?

A. There were a few issues that were important to the company that I wanted to make sure were attended to.

Q. What were those issues?

A. I felt it was very important that if we were going to do this, we did it with great certainty and very fast.

Q. What do you mean by great certainty?

A. I thought it would be destructive to the value of the company to have announced a transaction with Mr. Dunlap and Sunbeam and then not consummated. I felt it would have done damage to the company from a shareholders' perspective.

Q. What did you mean by quickly?

A. As fast as they could possibly do it.

Q. Why did you want to do the

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0130I2

transaction with Sunbeam as fast as they could possibly do it?

A. Mr. Dunlap had a unique reputation and quite a different management style than I had, different philosophies, and once the Coleman Company employees realized that we were willing to sell the company to Dunlap, it would have been hard to restore the morale, the trade relations, many implications which bothered me and since it was a public company and public data available to us, I didn't see any reason not to do a very fast, public kind of transaction.

Q. Was your view that the transaction should be done quickly a view that was also held by MacAndrews & Forbes at least to the extent that you were aware of their views?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Object to lack of foundation.

A. I don't know. All I know is all parties agreed that it was in everybody's interest to do this very fast.

Q. That includes the people at

013013 drafting of the merger agreements on behalf the Coleman Company?

A. Personally, no.

Q. What do you mean by personally no?

A. I read them before they were released to the other side. They were drafted by the attorneys. It was a fairly straightforward document. I don't remember if I had any edits or not.

Q. During the course of the negotiations, were there any particular points of interest that you focused on during the negotiations?

A. There were two points. One was the speed, which I mentioned, and the other is that management not be put in a position of having to hold Sunbeam stock or options unless they voluntarily chose to do so.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. Well, most of the transaction value to me and to the Coleman team, and the options ran very deep, was in the form of stock options and I didn't want to wind up in a situation where I would not have control of the business, Mr. Dunlap would, and most of my personal net worth would be tied up in Sunbeam stock options. It was just something I did not want to do.

013014

Q. Did you want Sunbeam stock as opposed to cash in the transaction, you personally?

A. Well, Sunbeam stock I could have sold right away. There wouldn't be a particular problem. In fact --

Q. You could have if it was registered but it wasn't registered stock --

A. Anything that was not saleable I did not want. I did not want Sunbeam stock.

Q. Were you one of the negotiators on the Coleman side that crafted the agreements and allowed the Coleman option holders to cash out, if you would, at a price of $27.50 per share of their Coleman stock?

A. I didn't draft it.

Q. I understand you didn't do the drafting.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013015

A. But I looked to make sure it worked to my satisfaction.
Q. Were you an advocate of that on behalf of the Coleman option holders?
A. Yes.
Q. Explain that provision to the jury, please.
A. As I recall, it gave the ability for a Coleman option holder to exercise the options immediately to be fully vested and receive no less than 27.50 in price.
Q. That was cash price?
A. In cash price, yes.
Q. Did the public shareholders have that option?
A. None of the public shareholders had options. It wasn't an issue.
Q. That was a very bad question.
Was there any provision in the merger agreements with respect to the public shareholders that gave them, even though they didn't have an option, options, stock options, the right to receive in lieu of Sunbeam stock a cash payment of 27.50 per share?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013016

A. I don't remember if I was at Revlon or Coleman at that time.

Q. At this time was it your understanding that Mr. Dunlap was then with Sunbeam?

A. I believe so.

Q. Did you pass along any of your feelings about Mr. Dunlap to anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes?

A. Yes.

Q. To whom?

A. Mr. Perelman.

Q. When did you tell Mr. Perelman about your observations about Mr. Dunlap?

A. It would have been in 1997.

Q. Why do you pinpoint that year?

A. Mr. Perelman and I made a trip to Boca Raton to meet with Bernie Marcus of Home Depot and that evening he went to have cocktails with Al Dunlap.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Excuse me, 10 minutes now, counselors.

MR. BEMIS: Let's switch the tape.

him how cocktails went.

Q. What did Mr. Perelman say?

A. Great.

Q. Anything else?

A. That the guy is doing a tremendous job and has extraordinary financial returns and he couldn't understand why I couldn't produce profitability like Dunlap was doing at Sunbeam.

Q. What did you say to Mr. Perelman, if anything?

A. I said, "I assume you're talking about profits he's projecting, not profits he's actually made." Perelman said, "No, he's actually doing it. "I said I find that incredible. Mr. Perelman called Mr. Dunlap and asked him to fax to his New York office a set of the financials.

Q. The conversation that you are relating between you and Mr. Perelman was in the car on the way to the airport?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Perelman about your experience with Mr. Dunlap at the

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013018

Merrill Lynch conference?

A. No.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Perelman your impressions of Mr. Dunlap based on your one meeting with him at the Merrill Lynch conference?

A. I don't recall doing so. This was several months later, if my memory serves me right.

Q. Can you recall anything else about the conversation that you and Mr. Perelman had in the car on the way to the airport following the cocktail session between Mr. Dunlap and Mr. Perelman in Boca Raton?

A. I think I generally described what I recall.

Q. My understanding is that when you and Mr. Perelman return -- you and Mr. Perelman were obviously on your way back to New York; is that fair?

A. Yes.

Q. At some point your understanding is that Mr. Perelman asked Mr. Dunlap for some financial statements; is that right?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013019

A. While we were in the car.
Q. Mr. Perelman made a phone call from the car?
A. Yes.
Q. Did he speak directly to Mr. Dunlap, to your knowledge?
A. He did.
Q. Were you able to hear the conversation?
A. No.
Q. Just one side of it, Mr. Perelman?
A. Yes.
Q. What do you recall Mr. Perelman asking of Mr. Dunlap?
A. He essentially said I'm here with Jerry Levin, I would like for him to see more of what you are doing, could you send us a copy of your financials so he could look at it.
Q. When you got back to New York were the financials there in New York in Mr. Perelman's office?
A. Yes.
Q. They were Sunbeam's financials I

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

take it?
A. Yes.
Q. Were these public financial statements or interim financial statements? What were they?
A. I believe it was a combination thereof.
Q. Both their interim statements as well as what was publicly on file?
A. I don't recall specifically but I believe it was a very current look at his business.
Q. At the time you looked at the public materials, were these audited financial statements?
A. I had not looked at that point at any public materials outside of what Mr. Dunlap might have provided me, whatever he sent.
Q. The financial statements that you looked at, did they include financial statements that had been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission?
A. I don't think so. This was probably towards the end of the first quarter of 1997, I suspect what I was given was a combination of actuals for early 1997 and projections for the rest of the year.

013021

Q. When you use the term actuals, you mean interim financial statements as of a particular date?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Perelman personally give you these financial statements from Sunbeam?

A. Either he or his secretary handed them to me.

Q. Did you look at them?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you analyze them to the best of your ability?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you reach any opinions about the financial statements when you reviewed them?

A. Yes.

Q. What?

A. That it was a business model that I was unfamiliar with, that I did not understand how that business model would be effective over the long term.

013022

Q. Could you please tell us what the business model was that you observed in reviewing the financial statements?

A. There did not appear to be enough investment in sales or research and development or consumer communication to sustain a business in mature industries at a remarkably high growth rate and still be very profitable at the same time.

Q. When you say remarkably high growth rate, what do you mean by that?

A. I believe the company was growing double digits, perhaps 20 percent per annum at that point.

Q. When you expressed this growth at 20 percent, is this net sales or --

A. Sales.

Q. Did you speak to Mr. Perelman about your review and analysis of the Sunbeam financial statements sent to Mr. Perelman by Mr. Dunlap?

A. Yes.

Q. How soon after you did your review did you speak to Mr. Perelman?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013023

A. The next morning.
Q. In New York in Mafco's offices?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you say to Mr. Perelman and what did he say to you?
A. That recognizing that Al Dunlap is currently the most admired and respected CEO in America, he's Wall Street's absolute darling, I did not know based on my own experiences how to do what he is doing. If you, Mr. Perelman, want somebody to try, find somebody else because this is not in my business skill base. I'm just a relic of the past if this is what is working out there today.
Q. What do you mean that Mr. Dunlap was the darling of Wall Street?
A. He was one of the lead commentators on CNBC, he was written up the best CEO of America by himself and the others, the analysts that run his stock price up very favorable reports. He was considered a true great celebrity CEO at that point.
Q. What did Mr. Perelman say in

013024

in the summer of 1997, would that be fair?
A. I think it would have been earlier because it would be unlikely that Bernie Marcus would be in the Boca house in the summer.
Q. Too hot?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever meet Mr. Dunlap after the Merrill Lynch conference?
A. Once.
Q. Was this in Mr. Perelman's offices?
A. Yes.
Q. When did you meet him?
A. It was the Friday before his analyst conference when he was going to straighten out Wall Street on the issues that were beginning to surround Sunbeam. I believe that was towards the end of April, early May of '98 but I'm sure you would have a record of it.
Q. If the analyst conference was on or about May 11, 1998, where would that put the conversation with Mr. Perelman?
A. If it was May 11, then I think I would have met in his office at May 7 or 8 or something like that.

Q. How is it you came to be at this meeting in Mr. Perelman's office where Mr. Dunlap was present right before the analyst meeting in May 1998?

A. Either Mr. Perelman or one of the other MacAndrews officers had called me about a week to two weeks before that and said they were getting concerned about what was going on at Sunbeam and they were trying to get this meeting together with Mr. Dunlap, would I do some independent research as to what was going on in the company.

Q. You said it was Mr. Perelman or someone else in the MacAndrews office who called you. Do you know who the other person is?

A. It was almost certainly either Mr. Gittis or Mr. Perelman, I don't recall which one.

Q. By the time that you met with Mr. Dunlap and Mr. Perelman, had you done the investigation that you had been asked

Do you know anyone else in the MacAndrews & Forbes company as of, say, 1998 who had the initials jwl?

A. No.

Q. Anyone at Coleman who had those initials?

A. No.

Q. At least as of April 14, 1998, I think you told us earlier you --

(Witness and counsel confer.)

A. Pardon?

Q. I think you told us earlier that in April of 1998 you were still working for MacAndrews & Forbes without any specific responsibilities; is that fair?

A. Yes.

Q. Going back now to the meeting that you had in Mr. Perelman's with Mr. Dunlap in May of 1998, I think you said, according to my notes here, that Mr. Perelman was concerned about his investment in Sunbeam at this time?

A. Yes.

Q. Was this the first time that Mr. Perelman had expressed that concern to you?

A. As I said, I don't remember whether Mr. Gittis or Mr. Perelman called me but it was the first time that I became aware that they were concerned.

Q. Whether it be Mr. Perelman or Mr. Gittis, do you recall what they said about their concern over Sunbeam at this time?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

A. I don't recall the specifics, I just remember they were concerned.

Q. Did you have any role in inviting Mr. Dunlap to come to MacAndrews & Forbes' offices?

A. No.

Q. Who invited you to attend?

A. Either Mr. Gittis or Mr. Perelman.

Q. Who was present at the meeting at MacAndrews & Forbes' offices when Mr. Dunlap was there; and I know you were there, who else was there?

A. I believe David Fannin who was companies owned approximately 13 percent of Sunbeam?

A. I don't recall.

Q. But it was a substantial amount?

A. It was an important vote.

Q. What happened after Mr. Dunlap started the meeting with that question?

A. They said, "Oh, we'll get to that." And then Mr. Dunlap proceeded to take us through a draft copy of his presentation to the analysts.

Q. What happened next?

A. Well, he finished the presentation and then he asked if there were any questions.

Q. And?

A. I asked him a question.

Q. Did you ask him a question about Wal-Mart?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the question?

A. "I understand that you've been discontinued from a large part of your grill sales and grill accessories at Wal-Mart."

013029

Q. What did he say?

A. He didn't say anything for a long pause and then proceeded to scream at the top of his voice as to what an incompetent I was.

Q. Can you be any more specific about the terms in which he expressed your incompetence?

A. Worst manager he's ever encountered, Coleman was not what we represented to him, they were off 30 million dollars in sales versus the forecast, several other unflattering comments none of which, in my opinion, were true. The ones that could easily be determined by -- anything there was data for in terms of his that we were off on sales was definitely not true other than it disturbed the marketplace some and I did not -- I still do not feel I am as incompetent as Al Dunlap.

Q. Did he tell you, "Go fuck yourself," in so many words?

A. That would be an extremely polite way of putting what he said.

013030

what happened at the May 11 meeting, the meeting in anticipation of the analysts' conference?

A. I think he really -- I don't recall if that was covered, I just don't remember.

Q. What if anything did you say or do as Mr. Dunlap was expressing his views on your management style and capabilities?

A. I said, "Okay, if that's the way you feel about it, fine, but did you or did you not lose distribution at Wal-Mart?"

Q. Did he answer eventually?

A. Then he got really mad and we actually were concerned about his physical well-being because he was so out of control but he didn't answer the question and finally David Fannin said, "Yes, we did lose three distribution centers," which was a small fraction of what had actually happened.

Q. Did you find out when this happened, this loss of the distribution centers at Wal-Mart? At some point in time did you find out when did it happen?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013031

A. Oh, I knew before I went into the meeting.

Q. When did it happen?

A. It happened, must have been sometime in February, March and it was obviously shocking to me to learn about this because one of the feature presentations of Sunbeam and why it was such a great company was the grill business and this had never been disclosed.

Q. How did you learn about this at whatever point in time you did learn about it?

A. Wal-Mart told me.

Q. Who was it at Wal-Mart that told you this?

A. I don't recall. I talked to a number of people but they made it quite clear as to what happened and how angry they were.

Q. They were angry at Sunbeam?

A. This was a punishment. This was done as a punishment.

Q. What happened next after Mr. Fannin made his statements about the situation at Wal-Mart?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. I dropped the subject as it was ludicrous to continue that course of action and then there was one additional question asked as to whether Mr. Dunlap felt Andrew Shore would attend the analyst meeting.

Q. What was the response?

A. He got about as angry as in the second phase and proceeded to make many unflattering comments about Andrew Shore.

Q. Andrew Shore was at this time an analyst for PaineWebber; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You knew Mr. Shore I think you said; right?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you spoken to Andrew Shore by the time of this meeting about Sunbeam?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you speak to Mr. Shore?

A. It would have been within the two-week period before the meeting.

Q. The two-week period before the analyst meeting, May 1998?

A. Yes.

the request given to you by Mr. Perelman or Mr. Gittis; right?

A. Yes.

Q. At any point before the closing on March 30, 1998, did you speak to Mr. Shore about Sunbeam?

A. No.

Q. Are you aware of anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes or Coleman or any of their advisors speaking to Andrew Shore about Sunbeam before the closing?

A. I'm not aware of any.

Q. What happened next at the meeting following Mr. Dunlap's remarks about Andrew Shore?

A. He stopped and said, "Well, got to go. Can I have my proxy statement?" And somebody signed it and he left.

Q. So at the end of the meeting MacAndrews & Forbes did execute a proxy statement in favor of Sunbeam's management; correct?

A. I guess it's not a proxy statement, they signed their proxy.

Q. Just so the record is clear since

I asked a poor question: At end of the meeting, it's your recollection that MacAndrews & Forbes did sign their proxy in favor of Sunbeam's management?

A. Yes.

Q. And then the meeting was adjourned?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever meet Mr. Dunlap again?

A. No.

got a phone call saying they had agreed in principal.

Q. February 19, that's when you were in Puerto Rico and came back to New York; right?

A. Yes.

MR. BEMIS: Ms. Reporter, would you mark as Morgan Stanley 442 a transcript of a deposition of Mr. Levin in the Russell Kersh and Sunbeam Corporation arbitration proceeding and that transcript is dated August 2, 2000.

(Morgan Stanley Exhibit 442, deposition transcript of Mr. Levin dated August 2, 2000, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. Do you have Exhibit Morgan Stanley 442 in front of you, sir?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you give a deposition in this arbitration proceeding on or about August 2, 2000?

A. Apparently, yes.

Q. As I recall, you said at one point you read your transcript after the proceedings that you gave testimony in and you made corrections or changes as appropriate; am I right in that?

A. Yes.

Q. Is Exhibit Morgan Stanley 442 a copy of your deposition transcript in the arbitration proceeding?

A. I would have to go through the entire document to be completely positive but it appears to be.

Q. If it turns out it is not, your counsel can let us know.

Sir, did you tell Mr. Perelman at one of the instances in which you talked about cash or stock, did you tell him in the strongest possible terms not to take any stock of Sunbeam?

A. I don't recall exactly how I phrased it but I did feel strongly about it.

Q. Sir, if you will turn to page 112 of your deposition transcript we've marked as Exhibit MS 442. Tell me when you're there.

prepared by Mr. William Nesbitt?

A. I don't recall seeing any.

Q. You can hand that back to me.

What's the next thing that you remember happening in connection with the transaction following your meeting on December 12, 1997 with the Sunbeam personnel in which the synergies ideas were discussed, along with other matters as you've told us?

A. Well, I had reported back to me that meeting with Dunlap to try to work out a transaction was a disaster, that Mr. Perelman wanted $30 a share, that was his price, and Dunlap was somewhere in the low 20s, I can't recall exactly what it was, and that it was dead.

Q. The meeting that was a disaster, this is the meeting at Mr. Perelman's home or Mr. Gittis' home in Palm Beach; correct?

A. Yes.

Q. There comes a point in time when the Coleman Company retains Credit Suisse First Boston as its investment banker; correct?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013038

Q. Then you don't know how long it lasted I take it?
A. Correct.
Q. There is then, if you turn the page, a second meeting identified between Messrs. or among Messrs. Nesbitt, Shapiro, Levin, Page, Maher, Duffy, Steven Isko, Messrs. Fannin, Kersh, Kitts, Stynes, Fuchs, Chang and Goudis at Morgan Stanley office. Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall this meeting?
A. Yes. I also recall that I was introduced to Mr. Goudis for the first time at this meeting so there's a fair chance that I was not at that earlier meeting.
Q. Is that the earlier meeting on the date of the 23rd?
A. Yes.
Q. That may explain why you don't remember it then.
Look at MS 84 which you should now have in front of you. Let's start at the beginning. How long did this meeting last at Morgan Stanley's offices that evening of February 23?

A. I don't recall but it was at least an hour.

Q. How is it that you came to attend the meeting?

A. I was probably in the best position to evaluate their business plans from our group.

Q. When you say their business plan, you mean Sunbeam's business plan?

A. Yes. That's Sunbeam's long range strategic plan.

Q. The handwriting in MS 84 is entirely your handwriting; correct?

A. As far as I had a chance to look through this document, yes.

MR. BIDEAU: Why don't you go through and see if there's anything that doesn't look like yours.

A. All of the markings on this exhibit are mine.

Q. Did Mr. Goudis speak at this meeting on February 23?

A. Yes.

Q. Did Mr. Kersh speak?

was the first time I met him or if he was participating in some other way.

Q. Was there any presentation by Morgan Stanley at the February 23 evening meeting?

MR. BIDEAU: Objection to the form.

A. I don't recall any.

Q. Did you know the Morgan Stanley representatives who were at the meeting; Mr. Fuchs, for example, did you know him?

A. No.

Q. Had you ever met him before?

A. I'm not very good at remembering names or faces. Nobody comes to mind as somebody I knew.

Q. So we can put this all down at one time: Did you know Mr. Stynes?

A. No.

Q. To your knowledge, you had never met him before either?

A. Correct.

Q. Did you know Mr. Kitts?

A. No.

Q. So as you sit here today, to the forward projection; correct?

A. Yes.
Q. Was that true for all of the long range strategic objectives as you understood the presentation was covering this three-year period?
A. It was true for all the financials that were presented. I can't speak to each individual business activity.
Q. But you understood that the financial matters that were presented were projections three years into the future?
A. Yes.
Q. You've done projections into the future for your business plans; have you not?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you ever missed your targets on your business plans?
A. Both ways.
Q. Up and down?
A. Yes.
Q. You don't have a crystal ball; do you?
A. No.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013042

A. Yes.

Q. What does that number represent?

A. I must have asked what their net sales were in 1996.

Q. And then you have -- right above net sales you have Jan slow Feb; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you mean by that?

A. Well, I must have asked them or they volunteered that January was a slow month in sales, not unusual for a company in these businesses, January should be -- December or January should be their smallest month. So it doesn't mean that much when you're off somewhat in January. I wrote something about February, I really don't recall what the comment was.

Q. Did someone ask a question about January or February sales or did Mr. Kersh or Mr. Goudis volunteer the information?

A. I don't remember.

Q. When the information from either Mr. Goudis or Mr. Kersh, as the case may be, was given about Jan, Feb slow, did anyone ask for further information after the meeting from Sunbeam?

013043

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form. You misstated the --

MR. BIDEAU: Right.

MR. BEMIS: I will withdraw the question.

Q. At the meeting itself, when there was either a statement or a question asked about sales in January and it was reported as you wrote, slow, did anyone at the meeting ask for additional information from Sunbeam?

A. I might have asked them about February right at that point and my reference might mean January and February were both slow and I didn't write it down, I just don't recall.

Q. Let's leave the meeting on the 23rd. Between the evening of February 23 and the signing of the merger agreements as of February 27, to your knowledge, did anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes request any information from Sunbeam on what its actual January and February sales were to date?

013044

A. In the four-day period?
Q. Yes, sir, in the four-day period.
A. I don't recall.
Q. Up to the time of the closing of the transaction, March 30, 1998, did anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes, to your knowledge, ask Sunbeam for detailed information on what it's sales were, net sales were for the first quarter of 1998 or any period --
A. They didn't have to, they made a disclosure as to their sales at that point.
Q. Focus on my question. We'll get to what you are talking about later.
Did anyone from MacAndrews & Forbes, to your knowledge, specifically ask Sunbeam after the February 23 meeting and before the closing on March 30, 1998 for detailed information on Sunbeam's net sales for any period in the first quarter of 1998?
A. I don't know of any.
Q. Did anyone from Coleman ask Sunbeam for the same information at any time before the closing on March 30, 1998?
A. I'm unaware of anybody doing

013045

that.

Q. Let's move down the page to operating profit. You have some writing that appears to the right. It looks like you did some division and then -- I think I know where it comes from but could you explain it to us please?

A. I'm glad you know where it comes from because I was having trouble deciphering with my own computations.

Q. I think the 1168 comes from actual sales in 1997. You divide it by 4 to arrive at a per sales by quarter. That's your testimony, not mine.

A. I don't know why I would have been looking at the quarters because they would have to have seasonal variation. I just don't know what I was trying to accomplish.

Q. Could you now move to the right of your first block of handwriting and read that into the record? It looks like --

A. It says 328 divided by a billion 6 and then there's a note 20 percent from 25 percent.

013046

I want to know how many times they turned their receivables and my conclusion was they were making very significant improvements in their plan and receivable collections despite an increase in international sales.

Q. Did you conclude that was a good thing or bad thing?

A. It would be great if they could do it. My question was was that reasonable.

Q. Did you ask anyone whether it was reasonable at the meeting?

A. I think this was something I was just doing off to the side.

Q. So I take it you weren't actually listening, you were actually doing some calculations while the presentation was ongoing; weren't you?

A. Apparently.

Q. In the line that appears above earnings per share, EPS, it reads, "Net earnings from continuing operations." Do you see that?

A. Yes.

013047

Q. You have some figures written there. What are those figures and what do they represent?

A. I seem to be saying something about the earnings growth rate is 35 percent but -- something like that. I was probably trying to evaluate how fast the earnings per share were growing.

Q. Below the earnings per share line it looks like you have written 1.99 and then there's something in writing after that. Can you read that into the record for us?

A. Yes. It's 1.99 street.

Q. Was that the street estimate for earnings?

A. Yes. That was really what I was trying to focus on because long range plans are long range plans and I did, as you noted, have some skepticism. I was trying to see if the street estimates are reasonable and I thought that was much more reasonable than the long range plan.

Q. The street estimates were much more reasonable?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013048

A. Yes.
Q. Tell the jury what a street estimate is.
A. It's either the average or the median of the analysts who cover the company's estimates for earnings per share. In this case, for 1998.
Q. Is this something in your business, consumer products as you've described it, that you follow and pay attention to?
A. Not since we're private.
Q. When you were public?
A. Yes.
Q. When you were at Sunbeam and public, running the company before the bankruptcy, did you pay attention to this, street estimates?
A. Yes. Not with the intensity one would normally because of the circumstances.
Q. One more -- you've got about 7 minutes before five. You want to leave now or you --
A. We'll do one more page.

Q. Okay.

Was there any further discussion that evening, outside of the presence of Sunbeam or Morgan Stanley, about the materials in Exhibit 84?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

A. Yes.

Q. There was? Did you say Yes?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did that discussion take place?

A. Between the conference room we were in and reaching the lobby of the Morgan Stanley building.

Q. Do you recall the discussion?

A. I recall some of it.

Q. What do you recall?

A. I voiced an opinion.

Q. What was your opinion? Who did you voice the opinion to from -- while you were traveling from the Morgan Stanley conference room to the lobby of the building?

A. The MacAndrews & Forbes people.

Q. What did you tell them?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013051

A. That I thought the sales in that, and net income expectations of the long-range plan were quite a stretch and I did not think they were achievable.

Q. What did -- withdrawn. Was there any -- withdrawn.

Who were you speaking to when you expressed this opinion?

A. I recall Jim Maher, in particular, and Will Nesbitt.

Q. Anyone else in the, either from MacAndrews & Forbes or CSFB?

A. I don't know if anyone from CSFB was present when I made that comment.

Q. Did Mr. Maher respond to your opinion?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. He asked what I thought was realistic.

Q. What did you say?

A. Things more along the line of the Wall Street expectations.

Q. Did he respond to that?

A. No.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Everybody went home, as you recall it?

A. I did.

Q. Okay. Now, at the meeting, were there other materials available for discussion or review by those who were there?

A. I don't recall. It was too long ago.

Q. Let me show you a document that was, that has been marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 85.

A. Thank you.

(Witness and counsel confer.)

Q. Do you have Morgan Stanley Exhibit 85 in front of you?

A. Yes.

Q. Now, have you seen this document before?

A. I don't recall seeing this.

Q. Please take as much time as you would like to look at it, and if you tell me you don't recall seeing it, I will not ask you any questions about it.

A. You can stop right there. I don't recall seeing this.

Q. Would you hand Morgan Stanley Exhibit 85 back to me, please.

Thank you.

The meeting that we have been discussing with Morgan Stanley, Exhibit 84, it is on the evening of February 23rd, 1998. By all accounts from other witnesses, it was -- between that evening -- withdrawn.

Between the evening of February 23rd, 1998 and the conclusion of the meeting that we have been going over, discussing Morgan Stanley Exhibit 84 and the actual execution of the merger agreements, as of February 27th, 1998, did you have any discussions with anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes or Coleman about Morgan Stanley Exhibit 84?

MR. BIDEAU: Other than the elevator --

Q. Other than the elevator conversation, yes.

A. Probably.

Q. Did you have any specific recollection of those conversations, as you sit here today?

A. Not specific, no.

013054

Q. Do you have any general recollection of discussions of the, of Morgan Stanley Exhibit 84, of --

A. That was the presentation?

Q. Yes, sir. From the conclusion of the presentation up to the signing of the merger agreements on February 27th.

A. Yes.

Q. What is your general recollection?

A. That I felt the strategic plan, as presented, was a stretch, unlikely to be achieved, but that I thought it was reasonable that they would achieve growth and earnings in line with whatever, where Wall Street was, which was considerably below the strategic plan at that point.

And I did not have any particular thoughts, one way or the other, as to whether the stock was valued high or low, as a result.

Q. Who did you have these discussions with?

A. I am sure I had them with Mr. Perelman and Mr. Gittis and associates.

Q. Would Mr. Maher be within that group?

013055

A. Yes, sir.
Q. Would Mr. Nesbitt be in that group?
A. He may or may not have been in attendance.
Q. Where did these discussions take place, if you remember?
A. They -- almost certainly took place the next morning. Assuming that was not the Friday night -- I don't -- February 23rd?
Q. It was a Monday, I believe.
A. I am almost certain they took place the next morning, either at breakfast at the townhouse or after breakfast at the townhouse -- the MacAndrews & Forbes headquarters, I should say.
Q. And the townhouse, and the headquarters are virtually within 100 yards of each other; correct?
A. It is a lot closer.
Q. A lot closer than that, actually.
Do you remember, as you sit here today, the reaction of Mr. Perelman, for example, to your opinion about the strategic projections of Sunbeam in MS 84?
A. No. I don't recall anything

013056

MR. MARKOWSKI: It looks like it is inadvertently attached.

MR. BIDEAU: The witness has the numbers that you just read. I think we just had one that was misassembled. Sorry about that.

Q. Do you have Morgan Stanley Exhibit 88 in front of you?

A. Yes.

Q. You did attend the meeting and made a presentation; right?

A. Yes.

Q. Could you tell us what the general outline of your presentation was to the board of directors at that meeting on February 25th, 1998?

A. Well, according to the minutes, I talked about how the company was doing --

Q. That is Coleman; correct?

A. Coleman & Company.

And how we did in the fourth quarter and how 1997 had finished and gave a perspective on how we, in 1998, how 1998 was shaping up, as we were then starting the camping season, the heaviest part of our year.

013057

And I went down to discuss the transaction whereby Coleman would be merged with Sunbeam and described the terms of the transaction, stated that it was structured, the transaction was structured to put Sunbeam in control as quickly as possible through -- to reduce disruption to the company's business. And talked about Sunbeam's current plans, what businesses they keep and what they would sell, and then talked about some employee protection provisions which we wanted our board to implement.

Q. Did you -- withdrawn.

What did you tell the board about how Coleman finished in 1997?

A. I don't recall.

Q. At this point in time, February 25th, 1998, the record will show you had, the company had not filed -- that is, Coleman had not yet filed its 10K, which, I believe, was filed on March 18th, if my memory serves me correctly.

Did you give the board full year-end results at the February 25th meeting?

A. It would have been as best we could

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. I don't recall.
Q. Did you tell the board your opinion that you had reached about Sunbeam's strategic plan set forth in Morgan Stanley Exhibit 84, that it was -- I think you used the term "a stretch" -- did you tell them that?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Did you tell the board why the transaction was being structured to put Sunbeam in control as quickly as possible?
A. Yes.
Q. What did you tell them?
A. To repeat what I said yesterday, because of Mr. Dunlap's reputation as taking out many, many employees, I felt, as soon as it was known that Sunbeam was taking over Coleman, there would be considerable employee moral issues for the company, and it was a predicate that could extend into our trade relations.
Q. Did anyone from the board of directors express a disagreement with your view that the transaction should be consummated as quickly as possible?
A. I don't recall anyone disagreeing.

that Morgan Stanley and Wachovia had some roles in it, but I did not know whether they were taking any of the participation, and what their debt role was.

Q. Did you know, by the time of the bankruptcy, that Morgan Stanley Senior Funding had loaned money to Sunbeam in connection with the transaction?

A. I became quite familiar with that fact, yes.

Q. In fact, when Morgan Stanley Senior Funding was the largest creditor in the bankruptcy proceeding; was it not?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember what the size of Morgan Stanley's claim was in the bankruptcy proceeding?

A. It would be approximately 40 percent of 1 billion-650, or something like that.

Q. The date of the bankruptcy filing was what?

A. February, '01.

Q. One second.

Using your figures, because I can't lay my hand right on the Morgan Stanley claim at the moment -- you said it was approximately 40 percent of $1.6 billion?

013960

A. It was slightly over 1.6, but I believe the 40 percent is correct.

Q. Okay. So that, if my math is correct, that is about $480,000,000, if your figures are correct; right? Actually it is more than that.

A. I don't think it is correct.

Q. My math is wrong. It is actually closer to 664 --

A. That sounds letter.

Q. I was multiplying it by 3 and not 4. So, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding filed a claim for approximately $664,000,000 in the bankruptcy, as you recall it; correct?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

Q. You can answer.

A. On the secured debt.

Q. Was the Morgan Stanley claim on the secured debt allowed in the bankruptcy proceeding?

A. I am not sure what "allowed" means.

Q. Recognized as being a valid claim.

A. I believe so.

Q. Based on your participation in negotiations of the acquisition, as you described it, and as limited as you described it, and your stewardship of Sunbeam Corporation after you became president, can you think of any reason why Morgan Stanley would have loaned in excess of $664,000,000 to Sunbeam to participate in this massive fraud that you described earlier?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form. Lack of foundation.

MR. BIDEAU: Objection to the form.

A. Yes.

Q. What is that reason?

A. The loan syndication failed.

Q. Is that the only reason?

A. I do not believe Morgan Stanley had any intent of taking but a small fraction of that and anticipated taking substantial fees Withdrawn.

Am I correct, sir, that following the issuance of the press release and your learning of the release, that you really did not take any action as a result of the press release because you did not view it as your problem?

MR. BIDEAU: Objection to the form.

A. Well, if you took it at its face, there was no problem. I just thought it was odd.

Q. My question was, sir: As a result of -- I will withdraw the question.

My question to you was, sir: Following your receipt of the press release, am I correct that you took no action with regard to the press release, either individually or on behalf of MacAndrews & Forbes, because you did not view it as your problem?

MR. BIDEAU: Objection. He just answered that exact question.

MR. BIDEAU: That was the objection, you are right. It was asked and answered.

MR. BEMIS: He may answer again.

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

A. I continued to consider anything that could happen that could affect Coleman Company and its shareholders to be my problem; so, the answer to your question is No.

Q. Sir, let me ask you if you were asked the following questions and gave the following answers in your deposition, I believe in 2001. For the record, we previously marked that as Exhibit 443.

MR. BIDEAU: You may want to put your microphone back on.

MR. BEMIS: I will. Thank you.

MR. BIDEAU: I just noticed the videographer going -- (indicating).

Q. Turn to page 33. Tell me when you are there.

A. Okay.

Q. Sir, were you asked the following questions and did you give the following answers, under oath, in your deposition on June 20th, 2001, beginning at line 19, page 33:

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

"Question: Mr. Levin, I have handed you a printout of a press release that was issued by Sunbeam on March 19th, 1998, and I invite you to read it -- but, in particular, the first two sentences relate to sales, the possibility that sales would fall below Wall Street estimates. And it says, 'But net sales are expected to exceed 1997 first quarter net sales of 253.4 million.'

"Answer: Yes.

"Question: Do you see that language?

"Answer: Yes.

"Question: Now, do you recall that the Coleman acquisition occurred at, I think it was March 30th or 31st of 1998?

"Answer: I believe it was March 30th.

"Question: Does this help refresh your recollection about whether or not you saw this press release before the acquisition was closed?

"Answer: Yes. I did see this before the acquisition closed.

"Question: After you saw this press release, did you undertake any actions in response to the press release?

"Answer: No, I -- I viewed this as not my problem at the time."

Were you asked those questions and did you give those answers under oath in 2001?

A. Yes.

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection to the form.

(Witness and counsel confer.)

Q. Following the issuance of the press release, my understanding is that you did not take any steps at anybody's direction to contact Sunbeam; correct?

A. Not -- not to the best of my recollection.

Q. You did not take any steps, following the issuance of the March 19th press release, to contact Arthur Andersen, Sunbeam's auditors; correct?

A. Correct.

to what was going on.

Q. When you say "what was going on," what do you mean by that?

A. In general, what was happening with the company.

Q. Are you aware -- withdrawn.

When you say "the company," you mean Sunbeam; correct?

A. There is only one left at this point, yes. Sunbeam.

Q. Before your assignment in April, as you have described it for us, are you aware of anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes contacting any of Sunbeam's customers, such as K-Mart, Target or Walmart?

A. I would have found that odd, had they done it.

Q. You would have found that odd in the due diligence process, for MacAndrews & Forbes to have made contact with those customers?

A. They would have asked me to do it.

Q. You did not do it, because you weren't asked?

A. I was not asked until sometime mid-April.

013067

Q. Just so we are clear, before the closing of the merger transaction on March 30th, 1998, no one at MacAndrews & Forbes asked you to contact any of Sunbeam's customers, such as Walmart, Target or K-Mart to see what the status of their relationship was with Sunbeam?

A. That would have been disastrous and probably illegal.

Q. We will deal with the illegality to someone else and we will leave the disaster to someone else. My question is: You did not do it because you weren't asked; is that fair?

A. I wouldn't have done it if I was asked, and it would have been totally inappropriate.

Q. You weren't asked and you did not do it?

A. No, they would not ask me to do something inappropriate like that.

Q. Before the closing on March 30th, 1998, of the merger transaction, you also never spoke to any analysts that were following Sunbeam; is that correct?

A. Yes.

review in connection with a possible acquisition?

A. I don't know.

Q. In the period after the execution of the merger agreements, February, as of February 27th, 1998, let's go all the way up now to April 30th, 1998, the closing, are you --

MR. BIDEAU: You mean, March 30th? You said April 30th.

MR. BEMIS: I did. I apologize, I will try again.

Q. In the period after the execution of the merger agreements, which are dated as of February 27th, 1998, and going forward to March 30th, 1998, the date of the actual closing, are you aware of anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes going to any Sunbeam plant, facility or office, to do any due diligence of their method of operation?

A. I am unaware of any.

Q. In fact, didn't you tell me that you were told that you were not even to go to work at Coleman following the February, the February 28th execution of the merger

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013069 agreements; isn't that right?

A. That is correct.
Q. And you did what you were told, you did not even go to work; right?
A. I attempted to help them, but they rejected every offer.
Q. Well, so, you knew at least that as of February, as of the time that they rejected every offer, that Sunbeam was going to reject any help that you were prepared to offer them, to integrate the two companies; you knew that, right?
A. Yes.
Q. And are you aware of any investigation by CSFB between February 28th, 1998 and March 30th, 1998, of Sunbeam's offices, manufacturing facilities, warehouses, retail outlets, anything like that?
A. I am unaware of any.
Q. Are you aware of MacAndrews & Forbes' or Coleman's, if that be the case, attorneys, after February 28th, and up through March 30th, doing any investigation of Sunbeam's facilities, its plants, its warehouses, its retail outlets, anything like that, doing any type of investigation?

013070

A. I am unaware of any.

Q. From the beginning of the first discussions with Mr. Dunlap and Sunbeam, about the acquisition of Coleman, all the way up to the date of the closing on March 30th, 1998, are you aware of any MacAndrews & Forbes employee or person representing them, whether it be an investment banker or an accountant, or an attorney, going and visiting any of Sunbeam's manufacturing facilities?

A. I am unaware of any.

Q. Are you aware of anyone in that group investigating or going to visit, if you will, any of Sunbeam's retail outlet facilities, as you have described them?

A. Other than myself, I am unaware of any.

Q. Are you aware of any MacAndrews & Forbes person going to visit either -- the home office of Sunbeam in Boca Raton?

A. It was in Delray, Florida.

Q. Sorry. Delray, Florida.

A. I am unaware of any.

Q. What did MacAndrews & Forbes do as

013071

due diligence up to March 30th, 1998, other than attend the February 23rd, 1998 meeting that you have described, that you have described to us and that we went over looking at MS 84? What else did they do?

A. They assumed that the public filings were accurate.

Q. Anything else?

A. I know they went through contracts.

I know they looked at, I believe they went through the accountants' work papers. I believe they acted responsibly and in a way that is very appropriate for public companies that are trying to put together a transaction under the veil of secrecy and confidentiality. I find no fault with what they did.

Q. Without asking you to opine on fault, as I understand it, all you can tell me that MacAndrews & Forbes did by way of due diligence is look at public filings, perhaps look at the work papers of Arthur Andersen, but you don't know that, one way or the other, for sure; correct?

A. Correct.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0130172

Q. And attending a meeting on February 23rd, 1998, that's all; isn't that right?

A. From my perspective, and my recollection, and I don't remember specifically what was done, that is correct.

Q. After your report to the MacAndrews & Forbes team, as you have described it, did they give you any further assignment to do any -- I will withdraw the question.

After your report to the MacAndrews & Forbes people following your April investigation, did you get any further assignment from MacAndrews & Forbes to do anything further with regard to Sunbeam?

A. Yes.

Q. What was that?

A. I don't know how it came about.

But they -- it was either the board or Michael Price or Al Dunlap, but they had all agreed that Al Dunlap needed a successor, and they asked if I would help or if I had any ideas on the search, as I knew the industry reasonably well and the kind of people that they would be looking at.

Q. Any mental condition that would affect your memory?

Q. I am older than you and my memory is pretty good.

Any reason to tell the jury why your memory would be faulty here today?

A. No.

Q. Tell the jury a little bit about your background starting with where you went to school, your education.

A. I went to undergraduate school -- is that where you want to start?

Q. Let's start at college.

A. I went to Boston College, graduated in 1971, worked for several years after that, went to Columbia Business School, graduated in 19 -- June of 1976, went to work for First Boston in the investment banking department.

Q. Let me stop you right there before we jump ahead to your employment history.

Q. Then you went on and got an MBA from Columbia?

A. Yes.

Q. Master's of Business Administration?

A. That's correct.

Q. You later went to work shortly -- let's start with after you got your MBA degree. Where did you first go to work?

A. First Boston.

Q. That is the same First Boston that you were referring to in your earlier testimony about documents that reviewed but at least after the merger with Credit Suisse?

A. That is correct.

Q. Let me ask you a couple of questions before we get into some of the substance of your involvement with the Coleman transaction.

In 1995 you were employed by MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., is that right?

A. In 1995?
Q. Right.
A. No.
Q. When did you start?
A. The first time I was employed by MacAndrews & Forbes Inc. was 19 -- sometime in 1998.
Q. What was --
A. I could be wrong about a year here.
Q. You did eventually have the title of president of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc., didn't you?
A. Yes.
Q. When were you the president?
A. I think 1998, 1999, 2000, somewhere in there. I don't remember the exact dates.
Q. Did you have a position with one of Mr. Perelman's companies before 1998?
A. Yes.
Q. What was that?
A. One of his companies. It was a public company called MAFCO Consolidated

Group Inc.

Q. When did you go to work for MAFCO Consolidated Group Inc.?

A. I think it was the summer of 1995, I believe.

Q. Was that your -- withdrawn.

Was that your first position with one of Mr. Perelman's companies?

A. What do you mean by "one of Mr. Perelman's companies?"

Q. One of the companies that he owns directly or indirectly?

A. What do you mean by "directly or indirectly?"

Q. Through one of his holding companies.

A. What does that mean?

Q. Answer -- if you can't answer the question tell me you are not going to answer the question.

A. I will answer the question. I want to know what you are asking me.

Q. What is confusing you?

A. Directly or indirectly. Does that mean 1 percent, 20 percent, 50 percent?

Q. Any one of those numbers you like.

A. Well, I went to work in 1992 for National Health Labs as CEO. Mr. Perelman owned, I believe, 25 percent, approximately, of that company at that point in time.

Q. Was that the first company that Mr. Perelman owned directly or indirectly that you worked for?

A. Yes.

Q. Then in 1995 as I understand it your next position was with MAFCO Consolidated Group Inc.?

A. That's correct.

Q. What -- then you moved up to being president of MacAndrews & Forbes Holdings Inc. in 1998, right?

A. That's correct.

Q. How long were you -- negotiations leading up to the merger agreement.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Okay. The other people that were heavily involved were Mr. Levin, you said?

A. Yes.

Q. And then Mr. Perelman who gave the final approval to enter into the merger transaction subject to board approval?

A. He didn't give an approval to enter into it. He gave an approval that it could be taken to the board.

Q. Did Mr. Perelman approve the merger agreements that were submitted to the board?

A. I don't know -- I don't recall whether he voted on that or not.

Q. Do you recall that he was present at the board meetings?

A. Yes, he was.

Q. Did you review, that is, personally, the Sunbeam 10-K for the year 1997 before the closing of the Coleman-Sunbeam transaction?

A. I don't recall seeing it, no. I don't recall.

Q. Did you assign anyone within MacAndrews & Forbes working with you to review the Sunbeam 10-K for the period ending in 1997 before the closing of the merger agreements?

A. I don't recall assigning anybody, no.

The general responsibility for the financials of Sunbeam was allied with the financial department at Coleman largely which was -- the chief financial officer was Joe Page, I believe, at that time.

Q. Did you assign -- withdrawn.

Did someone to your knowledge assign Joe Page to review the Sunbeam 10-K?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you review the offering memorandum -- withdrawn.

You recall, don't you, sir, that there were debentures issued by Sunbeam in connection with the merger?

A. Yes.

Q. That they were underwritten by Morgan Stanley?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. I do.
Q. You recall there was an offering memorandum?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you read the offering memorandum for the Sunbeam debentures issued in connection with the Coleman transaction?
A. I don't specifically recall reading it, no.
Q. Do you recall ever reading it as you sit here today?
A. No.
Q. Did you assign anyone from MacAndrews & Forbes the responsibility for reading the offering memorandum for the Sunbeam debentures before the closing on March 30, 1998 of the Coleman transaction?
A. No.
Q. To also put this in perspective for the jury you did attend the February 25, 1998 board meeting of the Coleman company, correct?
A. February 25. I don't remember the exact date. Maybe you can help me.

013089

Q. That would be the first of the two meetings when the merger agreement was presented.

A. Yes.

Q. You made a presentation to the board about the history of the negotiations, didn't you?

A. I did.

Q. You made that presentation in your capacity as a representative of MacAndrews & Forbes, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You also -- this was the first time, by the way, February 25, 1998, that the board as a board of directors of Coleman had been advised of the negotiations with Sunbeam; isn't that right?

A. I don't know when the board was advised of the negotiations. I don't know whether they were advised prior to that or not.

Q. As you sit here today you personally are not aware of any specific meetings before February 25, 1998 of the board of Coleman at which the board was advised of the ongoing discussions; is that fair?

A. Yes.

Q. You also attended, just so, again, for the jury's benefit, the February 27 board of directors meeting of Coleman at which the board actually voted to proceed with the merger agreement with Sunbeam, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Again, you attended on behalf of MacAndrews & Forbes, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. When you attended the board meetings, and, by the way, it was the board of directors of Coleman that approved the merger agreement, correct?

A. I believe so.

Q. The -- did you tell the board of directors how to vote?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Perelman to your knowledge?

A. No.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. You mentioned earlier that you saw some presentation materials that were prepared by Credit Suisse First Boston, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Credit Suisse First Boston, so the jury understands, was the financial adviser to the Coleman board?

A. That's correct.

Q. The exclusive financial adviser, correct?

A. I think so, yes.

Q. As the exclusive financial adviser it actually made a presentation to the board of directors at the February 27 meeting, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. It opined, that is, Credit Suisse First Boston, that the transaction was fair, correct?

A. With all the words that go around that, yes.

Q. Morgan Stanley didn't make any presentations to the board of directors of the Coleman company, did it?

013092

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. In addition to the -- in addition to the presentation by Credit Suisse First Boston at the board of directors, this would be February 27, were there presentations by the legal advisers to the Coleman company?

A. I am sure there were. I am sure the merger agreement was presented, at least outlined.

Q. Did the Coleman company have its own legal advisers in the merger transaction, that is, separate and apart from Sunbeam's legal advisers?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was that?

A. Wachtell, Lipton, I believe.

Q. Did you -- is MacAndrews & Forbes Holding Inc. in your view a sophisticated company in financial transactions?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you agree that Mr. Perelman is a sophisticated individual in financial transactions?

A. Yes.

013093

Q. Are you?
A. Most days.
Q. Most days?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you consider yourself a sophisticated person in financial transactions in 1998 on the day the transaction was approved by the Coleman board?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you consider yourself a sophisticated person in financial transactions on March 30, 1998 when the transaction closed?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you consider -- did you consider Credit Suisse First Boston -- by the way, you worked for Credit Suisse First Boston when it was First Boston, right?
A. Yes.
Q. Going back before --
A. Even before it was Credit Suisse First Boston too.
Q. As well as when it was Credit Suisse First Boston?

013094

A. That is a good question. It may have been. There are parts of it that were certainly Credit Suisse First Boston at that time.

Q. We won't worry about when the combination took place yet.

When the Credit Suisse First Boston made its presentation to the Coleman boards in connection with the merger was Credit Suisse First Boston in your view a sophisticated financial adviser to the company.

A. Yes.

Q. It was an investment banking firm?

A. Yes.

Q. High standing in the financial community in New York?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider Credit Suisse First Boston in 1998 to be capable of performing due diligence in connection with a merger such as the Coleman-Sunbeam merger?

A. Yes.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Did you consider yourself capable of doing due diligence in connection with a transaction like the Coleman-Sunbeam merger in 1998?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider Mr. Perelman capable of doing due diligence in connection with a transaction like the Coleman-Sunbeam merger in 1998?

A. Capable of doing it, yes.

Q. Yes.

Did you consider the law firm of Wachtell, Lipton to be a law firm that was sophisticated from a corporate side in mergers and acquisition transactions in 1998?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you consider them to not only be capable but to have an outstanding reputation in that area in the New York financial markets?

A. I understood them to be capable.

Q. Did you have any -- strike that.

Did you consider the Coleman-Sunbeam merger transaction to be an arms length transaction?

A. Yes.
Q. Would you agree with me that Mr. Perelman's company and -- Mr. Perelman's companies, if you will, and Sunbeam are both -- were both at that time large companies?
A. Yes.
Q. Both companies, Sunbeam and Mr. Perelman's companies, were both sophisticated in terms of their businesses?
A. Yes.
Q. Sunbeam -- Coleman had at that time an audit firm, did it not?
A. I am sure it did.
Q. Ernst & Young?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Do you know who Ernst & Young is?
A. Yes.
Q. You knew who they were in 1998?
A. Yes.
Q. Would you consider them to be a sophisticated accounting firm?
A. Yes.
Q. Sophisticated in public

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Would you tell the jury what "underwriting" is?

A. When a company sells securities in the public markets it sells them first to a securities firm, i.e., an underwriter.

The underwriter owns them for a brief period of time and then distributes them to "the public."

By "underwriting" I mean they actually own the security for a, some people would say a nanosecond, but a brief period of time.

Q. In simple terms, the underwriter actually buys in -- a firm underwriting will buy the underlying securities whether it be debt or equity and then it will resell them, as you put it, to the public over a period of time, whether it be a nanosecond or two nanoseconds?

A. That is correct. That is a fair description.

Q. You told me that you started in 1976 with First Boston as you described it.

What was your first position there?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. I was an associate.

Q. How long did you work for First Boston?

A. Until 1992.

Q. When you left in 1992 what was your position within First Boston?

A. I was head of investment banking.

Q. Were you with First Boston continuously from 1976 to 1992?

A. Yes.

Q. When you started as an associate is that pretty much the bottom of the investment banking rung?

A. It was then.

Q. I take it when you left as head of the investment banking division that was quite a promotion within the company over the years, is that fair?

A. There is a significant difference between associate and head of investment banking, yes.

Q. When you were head of investment banking in 1992 you had by that time I take it done many mergers and acquisition transactions?

responsibility for that division within First Boston?

A. Well, there are -- without complicating the issue, the people who do the underwriting, who go out and contact the companies, do the due diligence and take the companies on road shows, are the people that -- that I was responsible for.

There are capital markets people and trading people who are in another part of the firm which are responsible for the actual sale of the securities.

I was not responsible for that part of the business which would be typical of any investment banking firm.

Q. I apologize for interrupting you.

Were you one of the people who would approve an underwriting by First Boston?

A. Approve? There are various approval processes within the firm so you have to be more specific.

Q. Let's take an example. In the Sunbeam transaction when the debentures were eventually underwritten by Morgan

013100

Stanley someone had to approve Morgan Stanley putting its capital out on the debenture underwriting.

Did you have that type of role as the head of the investment banking division?

A. Typically in an investment banking firm taking on a new client would require approval of an investment banking committee.

That investment banking committee reported to me and at various times during my career I sat on that investment banking committee.

That committee was responsible for approving, doing business with a client, not responsible for the capital commitment.

The capital commitment was the responsibility of the capital markets division of the company.

Q. If you --

A. Now --

Q. I interrupted again.

A. As head of investment banking, if there were issues with any underwriting I would certainly be aware of it.

013101

Q. As the head of the investment banking division and in the role as you have explained it with regard to underwriting, I take it you became familiar with financial statements?

A. Ask that question again.

Q. In your role as head of the investment banking division and on the committee reviewing underwritings you became familiar with reading financial statements of companies, right?

A. I don't think the two are related. I became -- I did during the course of my career at First Boston I became familiar with financial statements.

Q. You -- that would --

A. I mean it had nothing to do with my role as head of investment banking.

Q. As part of your role as head of the investment banking division you did read financial statements of companies that you were involved with as an investment banker, right?

013102

You used the financial statements of the company?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Object to the form of the question.

MR. BEMIS: Let me withdraw the question and ask you again.

THE WITNESS: I am not trying to be difficult.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. I understand. Let's try to move on.

You know what an audited financial statement is of a public company?

A. I do.

Q. You have seen those over many of the years of your career, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. You know how to read them?

A. I do.

Q. You know how to read the footnotes?

A. I do.

Q. You are also familiar as a result of your work in the investment banking community with public filings that companies do like an annual report on a form 10-K?

013103

A. I do.

Q. You are also familiar with the reports that companies file, public companies, on a quarterly basis like a form 10-Q, right?

A. Yes.

Q. You are also familiar with the maintenance of interim financial statements by companies, aren't you?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it your experience that most public companies that file quarterly statements maintain interim financial statements?

A. Yes.

Q. At least in 1998, at the time that you were negotiating the Sunbeam-Coleman transaction, you knew that Sunbeam filed public -- filed financial statements with its public filings, correct?

A. I did.

Q. It filed audited statements for

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013104

Do you have that in front of you?

A. I do.

Q. This is a document that supplements another document for the record previously marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 75.

If you will look at the second page, Wachtell, Lipton's attorney, Paul K. Rowe, writes, "There should be an entry for November 6, 1997."

Do you see that entry?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you please read it to yourself and tell me when you are done?

A. I have.

Q. Does that entry by -- refresh your recollection in any way when you first met with Sunbeam representatives about a possible acquisition of Coleman?

A. It does. It says we met with Morgan Stanley on a variety of matters. It wasn't just a Sunbeam meeting so that would make it more consistent.

I couldn't remember an event where it was just Sunbeam.

013105

Q. This entry as I see it on November 6 is -- refers to general business opportunities or potential business opportunities but it specifically refers to an acquisition of Sunbeam by MacAndrews.

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. You earlier had said that you thought your first communication with Sunbeam was about a possible purchase of Sunbeam by MacAndrews & Forbes; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you believe this -- based on your recollection of events and having now looked at this document, do you believe November 6, 1997 was the first time you had such a meeting with representatives of Sunbeam about a buy or sell transaction?

A. No.

Q. You think there was something before November?

A. I do.

Q. In any event, sometime between November 6, 1997 and the meeting at

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013106

Mr. Perelman's house in Palm Beach the transaction discussions, to the extent we can call them that, had shifted to Sunbeam making a purchase of the -- of Coleman; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. In between November 6, 1997 and the meeting at Mr. Perelman's home in Palm Beach you gave Mr. Nesbitt certain instructions, did you not, to do some analysis of a combination of Sunbeam and Coleman?

A. There was an analysis done. I don't know whether I gave him instructions or Perelman did or Gittis or somebody else. I don't recall.

Q. Mr. Nesbitt would not have done such a modeling analysis on his own, would he?

A. No. I think that sort of covered the waterfront; Perelman, myself or Gittis, probably, or Levin.

Q. You can hand 408 back to me and I will put that away and get that out of your way.

produced something. I am not sure or we may have just worked off of the documents. I don't recall.

Q. Is it fair to say during the course of the negotiations that MacAndrews & Forbes was preparing its own internal analyses of the financial consequences of a transaction with Sunbeam?

A. Well, you have an example that you just showed me, sure.

The answer is, yes.

Q. When you said the answer is, yes, you were referring to Morgan Stanleys 104 and 105 that we just looked at, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Let me show you two other exhibits.

I will start with Morgan Stanley Exhibit 106 previously marked at Mr. Nesbitt's deposition.

MR. BEMIS: Mr. Markowski, could you hand it to the witness?

Thank you.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Would you please look at Exhibit

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013108

Q. As you sit here today can you tell the jury whether you discussed it with Mr. Nesbitt?

A. I cannot tell you definitively that I discussed it with him.

Q. Did you provide a copy of MS 107 to anyone at Morgan Stanley?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did you provide a copy of Exhibit MS 107 to anyone at Sunbeam?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Sir, we have looked at four spreadsheets prepared by Mr. Nesbitt and they are Exhibits MS 104 through 107 and you have 107 in front of you, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. With regard to all four of these exhibits --

A. The two early ones and these two later ones in early December, late January?

Q. Correct.

With regard to those four exhibits, MS 104 through 107, do you have any recollection as you sit here today of discussing them with Mr. Nesbitt?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013109

A. Yes.
Q. Turn to December 12, 1997. Are you there?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you attend the first meeting that is referred to in that -- in the chronology?
A. On the 12th?
Q. On the 12th of December.
A. No.
Q. It says later in the day there was a meeting?
A. I think that is what I was referring to before.
Q. That is the meeting you are referring to?
A. Yes.
Q. So the record is clear, going down the chronology in MS 75 under December 12 there is a meeting later in that day where Mr. Perelman, Mr. Gittis, yourself, Mr. Rich of Credit Suisse First Boston and Mr. Levin had a discussion about a potential transaction; is that right?
A. That sounds right.

013110

Q. Do you remember anything that Mr. Perelman said?

A. No.

Q. Did you discuss anything about Morgan Stanley at the meeting?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. To your knowledge -- withdrawn.

The chronology does not show Morgan Stanley attending the meeting on December 12 that preceded your meeting with Mr. Perelman, Mr. Gittis and Mr. Levin, if I have everyone properly attending; is that right?

A. I think that is right.

Q. As of this point in time, December 12, when you met with Mr. Perelman, et cetera, as we described, had you been provided with any documents by Morgan Stanley?

I should qualify that by saying regarding an acquisition of Coleman by Sunbeam, not the other way around.

A. We were provided with documents by Morgan Stanley about Sunbeam prior to the 12th.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013111

You have told us there was a meeting earlier which we think was about November 6 of 1997 where there were discussions of MacAndrews purchasing Sunbeam?

A. Yes.

Q. That was rejected, was it not, by MacAndrews?

A. Yes. It had been rejected before because it had been brought up before.

Q. Up to December 12 had you received any documents from Morgan Stanley about a potential transaction where Sunbeam would acquire Coleman whether for stock or cash or some combination?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. When you met with Mr. Perelman on December 12 and Credit Suisse First Boston did you discuss any of the work that Mr. Nesbitt had done to -- by that time as reflected in Exhibits Morgan Stanley 104 and 105?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Is the next thing -- withdrawn.

Was the document that is attached

013112

Q. Do you know why Mr. Nesbitt would have been looking for information about Mr. Dunlap's contract with Sunbeam?

A. I don't actually.

Q. You can hand that back to me.

If you look at MS 75 again which is the chronology -- I hope you have it still out there -- there is a reference to a meeting with CSFB on that date, December 16, 1997.

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. You are identified as attending that meeting. Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. Did you attend the meeting?

A. I assume so.

Q. Do you have any recollection as you sit here today of attending a meeting?

A. Well, I can't tell you if it was on that specific date but I do remember having this cast of characters together at some point in time in December.

Q. What was the reason why these characters gathered at this time?

013113

A. To discuss a possible transaction between Coleman and Sunbeam. I think there was -- there was a meeting scheduled between Perelman, Gittis and Dunlap for that weekend.

Q. Was this meeting in anticipation of that meeting?

A. I believe so.

Q. That was a terrible question.

Was the meeting on December 16 in anticipation of the meeting that was upcoming between Mr. Perelman and Mr. Dunlap in Palm Beach?

A. I believe so.

Q. Was there a discussion at this meeting, that is, December 16, concerning a price that Mr. Perelman would seek to obtain for his company's interest in Coleman?

A. There may have been but I don't recall it.

Q. As of the meeting that took place at Mr. Perelman's home which we believe is December 18, 1997, you had not received any documents from Morgan Stanley with regard

0131114

Mr. Perelman and Mr. Dunlap which ended up in Mr. Dunlap storming out of the meeting as you put it?

A. I think my recollection is the best way to describe it is, that was interesting, let's move on, that is over.

Any transaction with Sunbeam was dead and gone.

Q. As of December 18, as you put it, things were dead and done?

A. I said dead and gone but dead and done works too.

Q. I note that in the chronology for December 18 the transaction price range that Mr. Dunlap indicated was 18 to $22 per share.

Do you see that on your copy of MS 75?

A. Yes, I did see that, yes.

Q. According to MacAndrews' attorneys, Wachtell, Lipton, they told the Securities and Exchange Commission that Mr. Perelman advised Mr. Dunlap that the price was too low and he would not be prepared to support a transaction at that and said Sunbeam was still interested in doing a transaction and I guess the net result of that was that they set up a meeting.

Q. There is an entry on the chronology and by McAndrews' counsel that Mr. Price called Mr. Gittis to indicate that Sunbeam might be willing to consider a transaction valued as high as $25 per Coleman share. Mr. Gittis indicated that a proposal at that level would not be of interest.

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you know about that call?

A. In advance of the call?

Q. Well, we could ask that but I was actually thinking about after the call took place.

A. At some point in time after the call took place I knew about that, yes.

Q. Did Mr. Gittis tell you about that?

A. I frankly don't know who told me about it, Gittis or Perelman.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013116

Q. Somebody told you?
A. Somebody, yes.
Q. What they told you was Sunbeam was willing to go as high as $25 a share; is that right?
A. That is what it says here.
Q. You were on your way to Aspen, as I recall, on December 22, according to your calendar?
A. Is that what my calendar says, the 22nd?
Q. Yes. That is what you told me earlier today.
A. On the 22nd?
Q. On the 22nd. I don't know whether you were in the plane on the 22nd but that is what you told me.
A. Whatever my calendar says is probably right.
Q. Let me get MS 86 out again and make sure we don't have that wrong.
Do you have a copy of your calendar still in front of you or did I pick it up?
A. I think you picked it up.

013117

phone call, is something happens in early January and the parties have some further discussions; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Up to January of 1998 had MacAndrews & Forbes done any due diligence concerning Sunbeam other than what we have been through; for example, Mr. Nesbitt's spreadsheets, the discussion materials from -- that we saw from Credit Suisse First Boston, I think, in Morgan Stanley 76; anything else?

A. Well, I don't know what Jerry and Joe Page were doing at that point in time. I think once we got to the 18th I am sure there was nothing done after that until we got into January.

Q. We get to January. What is it that you recall happening in January to restart the parties' discussions about a possible business combination?

A. Well, I am reading a chronology again which I have no reason to dispute.

Reid called Perelman and said they would have an interest in doing a transaction in excess of, as it says here, in excess of $25 that would involve both cash and stock.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013118

Q. Setting aside the chronology.

A. I remember that happening sometime in early January.

The next thing that happened is -- I don't know how the transition came from that. I don't remember the transition but there was a meeting where Morgan Stanley came by, to MacAndrews & Forbes, I think it was, I don't know whether Kitts was there, Stynes was there, I think Kitts was there, and they made a presentation about a transaction that -- they gave us some documents and I think if I recall that was a transaction that again was -- I think it was all stock and it was at a price that -- I don't remember the price but it was not acceptable and I think before they left the meeting we told them that it wasn't acceptable.

Q. Let me go back to Mr. Reid's phone call which at least according to the chronology was January 18.

Q. Do you have MS 175 in front of you?
A. I do.
Q. Have you seen this document before?
A. I don't remember -- I don't specifically recall it but it looks like the type of document that Morgan Stanley would have put together at that time.
Q. On the first page, the first page where it refers to Laser specific, do you see the first bullet point which reads, Laser earnings projections based on I/B/E/S dated 1/21/98?
A. Yes.
Q. Would you tell the jury what I/B/E/S is?
A. I think it is a compilation of analysts' estimates.
Q. Is it short for Institutional Brokers Estimate System?
A. It may well be.
Q. Have you used this source before?
A. Yes. It is sort of universally used.

0131121

Q. Universally used in the investment banking profession?
A. Yes.
Q. Is it -- in 1998 was it a compilation, if you will, of estimates by various institutions?
A. Excuse me one second.
MR. MARKOWSKI: Stop that.
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Going off the record. The time is 9:06.
(Discussion off the record)
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We are back on the record. The time is 9:06.
BY MR. BEMIS:
Q. The question that was pending was were the I/B/E/S estimates in 1998, the date of the document you are looking at, a compilation of estimates by various institutional brokers about earnings of corporations?
A. Yes.
Q. If you look to the right side of the first page of MS 175 you see under the Camper specific heading a bullet which reads as follows: "Camper earning meeting and it says so in the chronology so I have no reason to dispute that.

Q. What do you recall about the meeting regardless at this point of the source from whom you heard it?

A. I don't recall saying anything about the meeting but I do recall the first meeting after the Bill Reid called where Morgan Stanley came and I didn't look closely enough at the sheet to tell you what it says but it was my understanding they came with an all-stock offer at a price that was less than Reid had indicated. It didn't involve any cash. And that is my recollection.

I don't know if that is what that says.

Q. What is the next thing that you remember happening following this offer as you have just described it?

A. I don't know if it is the next thing that happened but the next thing that relates to this transaction was I think Morgan Stanley was told -- I told them, somebody told them that whatever they proposed was unacceptable.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013123

Q. Whatever proposal followed Mr. Reid's phone call was unacceptable; is that fair?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you at that point -- did at that point MacAndrews & Forbes make a counterproposal?

A. There was a counterproposal eventually made. I think it was -- I think it was as to the form of the transaction.

There needed to be cash in the transaction and it needed to be a higher price. I don't think -- I don't think there was a price indicated at that time.

Q. I am going to hand you back real quickly Morgan Stanley 175 and if you look under Transaction Specific on the first page, do you see that heading?

A. Yes.

Q. It does state in the first bullet, assumes 100 percent stock finance transaction with purchase accounting.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you see that?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013124

Q. You, as you sit here today, have no specific recollection of what happened at this meeting?

A. No.

Q. You may set -- hold on to your calendar. Keep that in front of you but you may set it aside for the time being.

If you look at the chronology, Morgan Stanley Exhibit 75, you will see there is a reference to a -- the retention of Wachtell, Lipton; do you see that?

A. I do, on the 28th.

Q. Yes, sir. Were you at all involved in that decision?

A. I think -- I mean, I am sure I was aware of the decision. There may have been some discussion about it. I was certainly aware of it.

Q. By January 28 MacAndrews & Forbes either directly or through Coleman had retained both an investment banker and a law firm as part of the negotiations over a possible Coleman transaction; is that fair to say?

A. That is fair to say.

third entry.

A. Where does it say MacAndrews & Forbes offices?

Q. I think that comes out of another exhibit which is Morgan Stanley 279.

I tell you what. Without setting where the meeting was did you attend the meeting that is shown for January 29?

A. I remember a meeting of this sort of magnitude, this cast of characters, taking place around that period of time to discuss synergies, yes.

Q. Where did that meeting take place as you recall it?

A. I think it may have been at Revlon's office.

Q. At Revlon's offices?

A. I think so.

Q. Where are Revlon's offices?

A. 625 Madison, but I think there is a reference in my calendar, 11th page, Nesbitt, 625 Madison, on the 29th.

Q. Did you attend the entire meeting?

A. I think so.

013126

Q. As of the January -- what was the basic subject matter of the January 29 meeting?

A. Well, it says in the chronology, to discuss potential synergies which would be a combination of Coleman and Sunbeam.

Q. At that meeting, as of the -- sorry.

A. As well as setting a time frame for due diligence.

Q. I take it as of January 29 at least there had been no due diligence done by either side, on your side of the transaction?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Object to the form of the question. I think it mischaracterizes the witness' prior testimony.

THE WITNESS: I wouldn't characterize it that way. There had been work being done all along. When we went back and Nesbitt had done work, I am sure First Boston had done work in preparation for the December meeting. I think there was a period of time when probably nothing was done. Prior to the 29th meeting I would imagine that work was being done again by a combination of First Boston, Nesbitt, Levin, Page.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0131127

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. You have told me the -- you have told me some of the work that was done before the meeting with Mr. Dunlap in Palm Beach on December 18. We covered that yesterday, right?

A. We covered that I believe yesterday.

Q. Then I believe you told me that following the meeting on December 18 at Mr. Perelman's home matters broke down; is that right?

A. That is correct.

Q. There was no further discussions, no further investigation or due diligence, if you will, up until the time the parties next met following Mr. Reid's call in the week of January 18; is that fair?

A. I don't know when Reid's call was. Again -- I don't know we established

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013128

when Reid's call was.

Q. The public filings say it was on January 22. That was Exhibit MS 79 that we looked at yesterday.

I don't want to quarrel --

A. Okay. I will say the 22nd.

Q. Following the 22nd, following the 22nd we know, you told me, there was a meeting apparently between at least Mr. Nesbitt and certain representatives of Morgan Stanley, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Between the 23rd and this meeting on the 29th what due diligence had been done by MacAndrews & Forbes concerning a transaction with Sunbeam and Coleman?

A. As I just stated, you asked me a question whether -- you said, I think you said, no due diligence had been done prior to the 29th.

Q. Forget what my other question was. Let's focus on the question I asked you right now.

Between the 23rd of January and the meeting on January 29th what due

013129

Q. Were there discussions at the January 29 meeting among those who attended it about how the companies might proceed with due diligence and related matters if Sunbeam made an acceptable proposal?

A. That is what it says in the chronology. I have no reason to dispute it.

Q. So the due diligence was to proceed once Sunbeam made an acceptable proposal; is that correct?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. What was the agreement reached at the January 29 meeting?

A. The due diligence of -- the specific due diligence relating to interaction between representatives of Sunbeam and Coleman would take place after an acceptable proposal was on the table.

It doesn't mean that Levin wasn't doing work, due diligence work. It doesn't mean that Nesbitt wasn't doing it, it doesn't mean that First Boston wasn't doing it in the interim.

Q. Do you know that they were?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0131130

A. I don't know that they weren't.
Q. Do you know that they were is my question.
Do you have personal knowledge of them, the people you have identified, doing this work?
A. Well, Levin was certainly doing work on the -- on synergies which is certainly part of the due diligence effort.
Q. Anything else?
A. Not that I can think of at the moment.
Q. Let's move forward and there is a reference to Sunbeam entering into a confidentiality agreement with Coleman on or about February 4, 1998.
Do you see that entry?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you seen the confidentiality agreement?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Let me show you a copy of what has been identified as the confidentiality agreement and ask you to please take a moment and look at it.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013131

I have handed the witness what has been marked as MS 133.

Have you had an opportunity to look at MS 133?

A. I have, yes.

Q. Have you ever seen it before?

A. I don't recall seeing it, no.

Q. In your experience as an investment banker is it customary for parties in a transaction being negotiated such as the Coleman-Sunbeam transaction to exchange confidentiality agreements?

A. Generally.

Q. You can hand that back to me.

By the time of the exchange of the confidentiality agreements had you learned of Sunbeam's results for the fourth quarter of 1997?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Object, lack of foundation, mischaracterizes the record. There has been no testimony that there was in fact an exchange of confidentiality agreements.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Let me rephrase the question.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013132

Q. I did.

Let me ask the question again.

Having looked at the document at least as of February 4 were you aware of the reported earnings for Sunbeam for its fourth quarter of 1997 as set forth in MS 206?

A. I imagine I would have been. I don't have a recollection of being specifically informed but I would imagine I would have seen this.

Q. Would you have seen it as part of the clipping service that you received?

A. I would have seen it by reason of the Wall Street Journal article.

Q. You read the Wall Street Journal regularly?

A. Pretty much.

Q. You can hand that back to me.

At the January 29 meeting that we discussed before we turned to the confidentiality agreement was the earnings shortfall reported in MS 206 discussed among the parties at that meeting?

A. I don't recall it being

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0131133 discussed.

Q. What is the next thing that you recall in the negotiations following the January 29, 1998 -- excuse me. Let me withdraw that.

What is the next event you recall occurring in the negotiations between Sunbeam and Coleman and their representatives after the January 29, 1998 meeting which you believe took place at Revlon's offices?

A. Well, I have in front of me the chronology from Wachtell, Lipton.

Q. Does that assist you in your testimony looking at that chronology?

A. Yes. MS 75?

Q. Yes.

A. It says there was a meeting attended by Morgan Stanley, Mr. Nesbitt, myself and Mr. Rich, Mr. Duffy of First Boston, and it says that they made a presentation reflecting a transaction which Coleman would be acquired by Sunbeam for .6017 Sunbeam shares per Coleman shares which was approximately $22 a share plus warrants that Morgan Stanley valued at $4 per share.

0131314

Apparently I indicated that MacAndrews would not be prepared to support such a proposal and advised Morgan Stanley that only an all-stock transaction that valued Coleman stock at $30 a share or an amount slightly lower than $30 a share if the transaction involved cash and stock would be of interest.

It sounds right to me.

Q. As of February 6 the parties hadn't reached an agreement. You were still at a proposal counterproposal stage, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it fair to say that this meeting on February 6 as described in MS 75 was the first time that MacAndrews & Forbes had made a counteroffer as opposed to simply rejecting an offer made by Sunbeam?

A. I think that's correct but I also, as I pointed out earlier, it depends how you characterize counteroffer.

I think our counter -- with a

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013135

A. No, not that I recall.

Q. Was Sunbeam the only party that was in the negotiations or even preliminary discussions, if you will, with MacAndrews & Forbes concerning a purchase or some form of business combination with Coleman?

A. Yes, I think that is right.

I am just going to grab some coffee.

Q. At the February 26 meeting, excuse me -- withdrawn.

At the February 6, 1998 meeting we have been discussing was there a discussion at that meeting of Sunbeam assuming as part of a transaction Coleman Worldwide and CLN Holdings' indebtedness?

A. I think that may have occurred at that meeting, yes. I think there was a discussion. I am not sure if it was in that meeting or a later meeting but it was --

Q. Who raised that as a potential point of the structure of a transaction?

A. I think I did.

Q. Did you do that on your own or

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013136 was that an instruction you received from Mr. Perelman?

A. I wouldn't have done it on my own, no.

Q. What was the amount of the indebtedness of Coleman Worldwide and CLN Holdings that you were discussing being assumed by Sunbeam as part of the Coleman-Sunbeam transaction should it go forward?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Was it in the hundreds of millions of dollars?

A. Yes, it was.

Q. Was it indeed over a billion dollars?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Object.

THE WITNESS: I don't know what the number was. I am sure you know what the number is. Tell me what it is.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. I am not trying to be contentious with you, sir. You don't assume that I know anything right now. If you can answer

013137

Q. Was CLN Holdings a holding company as opposed to an operating company?

A. I am telling you I don't remember the exact structure so --

Q. I didn't ask you the exact structure.

A. These are the companies that -- are you asking me the companies that owned -- are those the companies that owned the stock of Coleman on behalf of MacAndrews & Forbes in the short form?

Q. In short form that is where we are going, yes.

My first question is: Was CLN Holdings a holding company and not an operating company?

MR. MARKOWSKI: I think what Mr. Maher says is he doesn't remember the exact names of the companies.

THE WITNESS: CLN could be a public entity. I don't know which it is. That is my issue.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Did MacAndrews & Forbes, I am going to pick your words, ultimately own the Coleman common stock, the 82 percent that is attributed to Mr. Perelman?

013138

A. Yes.

Q. It did. Mr. Perelman owned this stock indirectly if you will through a series of holding companies, correct?

A. I believe that is correct.

Q. The debt that you were speaking of assuming was debt of the holding companies within the chain running from Coleman up to ultimately Mr. Perelman's ownership, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Let me show you -- I only have one extra copy of this exhibit. I am sorry.

I am going to hand you what has been previously marked as Morgan Stanley 108. Do you have that exhibit in front of you?

A. I do.

Q. Mr. Nesbitt testified in his deposition that he prepared this document.

Did -- have you seen the document before?

0131139

Q. How do you obtain those figures?
A. I frankly don't know.
Q. You leave that to the analysts?
A. I call Mr. Nesbitt.
Q. Fair enough.
A. I think you can get them on the internet.
Q. You think the I/B/E/S figures are on the internet?
A. I think so.
Q. Let's set this document aside, MS 108, for now. You can hand it back to me.
Let's try to move forward now from February 6 and let me ask you, was there a response to your counterproposal at the February 6 meeting when you rejected the offer that Sunbeam made that we just reviewed of all cash -- excuse me, all stock and warrants and an implied value of $22 per share?
A. I have the chronology again in front of me.
It says on February 13 Stynes and Kitts called me saying they were making their best and final proposal of .65116 shares of Sunbeam stock which was approximately 24.50.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

I apparently indicated it was of no interest.

Q. Going back to the meeting on February 6, did you at that meeting receive a document from Morgan Stanley?

A. Which meeting? Sorry.

Q. The meeting of February 6, the one we were talking about.

A. I don't recall a specific document but I would be surprised if there wasn't one.

Q. Let me show you what has been marked as Exhibit 81 in an earlier deposition.

This, sir, is the exact same document that was attached to Exhibit 108, Mr. Nesbitt's collection of documents.

I would ask you first to take a look at it. I just have a couple of quick questions.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you have the document in front of you?

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Mr. Maher, when we broke we were going to turn to the February 13 conference call.

First of all, my understanding is on February 13 you were in Aspen, is that correct, based on your calendar, MS 86?

A. Well, according to my calendar on February 13 I left for Aspen in the afternoon.

Q. Did you take the conference call before or after you left?

A. I am not sure. I don't think it would have been -- it must have been before I left because once I was in the air I wouldn't have taken it.

Q. The reference on February 13, breakfast at 36 East 63rd Street, is a reference to breakfast at Mr. Perelman's townhouse; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Did the conference call come in at the townhouse or did you take the call at the office?

A. Was it a conference call or a meeting? I just don't recall.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013142

Q. I don't see a meeting on your calendar on the 13th. Do you?

A. I don't.

Q. All right.

Setting aside --

A. I don't see a conference call either.

Q. That's correct. I don't either.

So setting aside whether it was a conference call or a meeting, this was a communication between the parties which was a response to what had been essentially rejected and the counterproposal of February 6, right?

A. Yes.

Q. Were there any documents that were used in the conference call or the meeting if that is what happened?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Let me show you MS 82.

Let me see if I can see one that is easier for you to read.

I will show you what has been marked as MS 82 at an earlier deposition changing of the closing date from the second quarter of 1998 as we saw in the earlier documentation?

013143

A. Not that I recall.

Q. What is the next thing that you recall happening after the February 13 call or meeting at which time you rejected the proposal put forth at that time?

A. Once again, referring to the Wachtell, Lipton chronology, MS 75, it appears that Kitts and I had a conversation on the 18th of February which I have no reason to dispute in which he invited a counterproposal.

Q. At this time on February 18 you were back in your office having returned from Aspen, right?

A. According to my calendar I was back in New York, yes.

Q. Were there any documents exchanged in relationship to this telephone call on February 18 -- withdrawn.

In connection with the February 18 telephone call between yourself and Mr. Kitts was there -- were there documents

0131144 exchanged by the parties?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. This again was just a verbal back and forth between the two on various terms?

A. I don't think it is a verbal back and forth on various terms. That is not what the chronology suggests.

Q. Perhaps then I misspoke. Let me try again.

On the telephone call on the 18th was all that was discussed a -- an invitation to MacAndrews & Forbes to make a counterproposal to the offer made on February 13, 1998?

A. I don't know that that is all that was discussed.

Q. Can you -- having read the chronology can you now recall anything else that was discussed?

A. No.

Q. Did Mr. Kitts, to your knowledge -- strike that.

As you sit here today can you recall Mr. Kitts putting any specifics on an invited -- an uninvited counterproposal?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013145 enough. I will not quarrel about something like that. I don't think it is significant either. Let me go back and ask the question in a slightly different way.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. After Mr. Kitts spoke to you on February 18 you did have a discussion with Mr. Perelman about Mr. Kitts' call, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. There is a counterproposal that is relayed to Mr. Kitts on February 19, 1998, right?

A. Yes.

Q. That counterproposal was a proposal that was given to you by Mr. Perelman, right?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. I don't know whether it was a proposal that Mr. Perelman suggested or a proposal that I suggested that he agreed to or a proposal that somebody else in the room may have suggested that he agreed to that I delivered, or I am sure there are other permutations.

013146

Q. In any event, Mr. Perelman approved the proposal?

A. I believe that to be the case.

Q. The next thing that happened after Mr. Perelman approves the proposal is that you transmit the proposal to Mr. Kitts; is that right?

A. That sounds correct.

Q. Your proposal which is 7.89 Sunbeam shares per Coleman share which is stated in MS 75 to be $30 per share, does that seem correct, the figures that are in there?

A. It seems correct, yes.

Q. This was an all-stock offer, correct?

A. I think so.

Q. Did the offer include assumption of holding company debt such as we discussed earlier for the debt of Coleman Worldwide and CLN Holdings Inc.?

A. I am not sure.

Q. What was the closing date on this

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013147 counterproposal?

A. I don't know what his response was when I gave him the counterproposal.

Q. He didn't immediately accept it, did he?

A. No.

Q. Indeed, is what happened that Mr. Kitts called you later on the same day, that is February 19, and made another proposal?

A. According to the chronology that sounds correct.

Q. The counterproposal was a proposal of 7.11 Sunbeam shares per Coleman share which according to the chronology had a valuation of about $26.90 per Coleman share.

A. Did you say 7.11?

Q. I said .711 I thought. Maybe I did. I did say -- let me ask you the question. Thank you for catching that.

The counterproposal that Mr. Kitts provided was an exchange of .711 Sunbeam shares per Coleman share which according to the chronology had a valuation of $26.90 per Coleman share; is that correct?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013148

A. Yes.

Q. To the best of your recollection as you sit here today are the figures, those figures, accurate in terms at least of the counterproposal that was given to you?

A. It sounds more or less correct.

Q. Did you -- when Mr. Kitts called you to make this further counterproposal on February 19 were there any documents exchanged in connection with this counterproposal?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Kitts at the time you received this counterproposal that Coleman would be prepared to consider an exchange ratio of .745 shares of Sunbeam stock which was approximately $28.20 per share?

A. I don't recall whether that was in that same conversation or in a subsequent conversation but it seems to me correct, somewhere either in that conversation or a subsequent conversation I responded.

013149

Q. Having, at this point, on February 19, you having made this proposal to Mr. Kitts as to what Coleman would be prepared to consider as an exchange ratio of .745 shares, how did Mr. Kitts respond?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Was there any discussion at this point where you make this last proposal on February 19 of assumption of holding company debt of the MacAndrews & Forbes companies?

A. I think at this point in time that was part of the transaction, I think. I am not 100 percent sure but I think.

Q. Was the closing date still the second quarter of 1998 as we looked at earlier?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Let's move forward.

Did Mr. Perelman, by the way, give you the authority to tell Mr. Kitts that Coleman would be prepared to consider the exchange ratio of .745 shares?

013150

A. I don't recall having specific authority but I don't also believe that I would have offered it without either understanding that he was prepared to accept it or having been told specifically that he would accept it.

Q. Let me hand to you now what has been marked previously as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 83.

I have handed you a copy of Morgan Stanley Exhibit 83 and you have that in front of you, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. I will tell you that some of the handwriting on this document is Mr. Nesbitt's by his testimony. I don't represent that all of it is but some of it is.

Did you receive a copy of MS 83?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Are you including the handwriting in your question at this point or just the document?

MR. BEMIS: No, just the document. I am not quarreling over when the handwriting was put on. Did he get a copy of the document with or without the handwriting.

0131151

THE WITNESS: This looks somewhat familiar to me.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. This document bears a date, it is on the very bottom of the document, in the left-hand side, it is on the so-called footer line. You will see it is 022098.

Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. Does this document in terms of the consideration package, if you will, represent the terms that you counterproposed to Mr. Kitts on February 19?

A. I don't think so but I am not 100 percent sure of that because there are two packages here.

Q. Can we focus on package 1 first? I realize there are two. I note that the exchange ratio on package 1 is .7450, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. That is what you proposed on

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013152 wouldn't have discussed it with Perelman, Gittis, Levin, Wachtell, Lipton, First Boston.

Q. When you had -- were there any issues that arose in your discussions with Wachtell, Lipton, First Boston or Mr. Perelman or Mr. Gittis?

A. I don't recall. I don't recall exactly what issues arose out of this.

Q. Okay.

Does this document though, MS 83, form the basis for your further negotiations with Sunbeam or its representatives that leads to the execution of the merger agreements?

A. It formed the basis for further negotiations and those negotiations ultimately led to an execution of the merger agreement.

Q. You can hand that back to me. Thank you very much.

Let me hand you what has previously been marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 340.

I will take one second and see if we marked this exhibit. We might not have.

013153

I misspoke, this exhibit has not been marked and I would ask the court reporter to mark this copy as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 340.

(Morgan Stanley Exhibit 340 marked for identification)

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Do you have Exhibit MS 340 in front of you?

A. I do.

Q. The first two pages following the fax cover sheet do have some handwriting on it.

Is any of that handwriting yours?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Do you know whose it is?

A. I don't.

Q. Did you have any -- did you have any discussions with anyone where the items which are marked "no" in the margin were discussed?

A. I may have. I have specifically "no" next to a preferred share 48-1/8 conversion price, 25 percent premium over

013154 current Laser price.

It says "no" next to it in the column. I don't recall why that says no.

Q. If you turn to page 2 to the right of the heading Shareholder Lockup there is "no" and I think that means registration rights, is that what that means?

A. Probably a reasonable interpretation. It says REGRTS.

Q. That would refer to --

A. I would believe registration rights.

Q. Rather than a lockup of the shares they would be subject to some form of registration rights agreement, correct?

A. It would be the norm.

Q. That would be the norm?

A. Yes.

Q. Going down the page under the heading Acquisition of Publicly Held Camper Shares, there is a termination fee and there is -- to the right it is written, no.

Do you remember discussing that issue with anyone?

0131155

A. I am sure I was involved in discussions about every one of these items but I don't recall it specifically.

Q. Again, the -- I don't see any no or any writing next -- withdrawn.

The expected closing is still shown here as being second quarter of 1998, correct?

A. Yes. Well, it is in two places. It looks like it contemplates two closings.

Q. That ultimately is the form of the transaction that takes place that is a two-step transaction and there are to be indeed two closings, correct?

A. That is my recollection, yes.

Q. On the third page which is entitled Project Laser Pricing Mechanism Overview --

MR. MARKOWSKI: I think that may be the fourth page.

MR. BEMIS: Is it the fourth page on that one? You are correct. It is the fourth page. Thank you.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Item number 1 refers to assumed

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013156

Camper holding company debt of 500 million dollars and then it being offset by a portion of the existing holding company stock position in Camper and then at an assumed 26 per camper share valuation.

Do you see that?

A. I do, yes.

Q. Can you tell the jury what that refers to?

A. It is -- it looks to me to be a calculation where the holding company debt is valued at $26 per Camper share held by MacAndrews & Forbes.

Q. There is writing at the bottom that reads -- I think I am reading this correctly -- "Will - other holding company obligations."

Do you see that writing?

A. I do.

Q. Is that your writing?

A. I don't believe so.

Q. Do you know whose it is?

A. No.

Q. On the final page of the document which is transaction pricing calculations,

013157

we have first deal assumptions at the top and it, below the price per Laser share the exchange ratio of .745. That again is what you proposed in your call on February 19, 1998, right?

A. That is correct.

Q. Then there are some basic debt assumptions there, correct? One of them is $500 million?

A. There is the line, debt assumption, assumed face amount -- face value, $500 million."

Q. That is debt of the Coleman Company, Inc., correct?

A. It doesn't say that here but I assume that is correct.

Q. You can set that -- you can set this document aside for right now. You can hand it back to me. Thank you.

Would you agree with me that from February 19 through the execution of the documents on February 28 things moved pretty quickly?

A. I would -- I guess I would characterize it differently. I think things moved as they would in a normal transaction of this size.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013158

Q. It would be normal in a transaction of this size -- let me step back.

On February 20 did you have a deal -- withdrawn.

On February 19 after you spoke to Mr. Kitts, did you have a deal?

A. Sometime after I spoke to Mr. Kitts we had a rough deal. I don't know when he came back to me and acknowledged what we had.

Q. After you received the February 20, 1998 document that we just went through that was MS 340 did you have a deal?

A. No, because -- I don't think we had a deal. I think we were clearly in the ballpark because the economic value of that transaction was starting to be close to what we were talking about but I don't think we had a final deal at that point in time because I know it changed after that.

Q. You went to -- am I correct that you were in Aspen between February 19 and

013159

February 22 skiing, is that correct, looking at your calendar?

A. February 19?

Q. Through the 22nd.

A. I left on the night of Thursday, the 19th, and spent the weekend in Aspen.

Q. Did you do any negotiations over the weekend in Aspen about this transaction with Sunbeam?

A. I may well have.

Q. Do you have any specific recollection of doing so such that you could tell that to the jury under oath?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Object to the form of the question.

THE WITNESS: Yes. I think I recall having discussions with Kitts before and after taking off from -- taking off on Thursday evening and I think they continued into Friday and they may have continued all weekend. I don't specifically recall them continuing all weekend but I certainly recall having a discussion or discussions with Kitts on Thursday

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Apparently on the 23rd there was a meeting at some point in time during the day between Nesbitt, Page, Levin, Shapiro, Duffy and Geller with representatives of, it looks like, Morgan Stanley to conduct due diligence.

Later that day there were meetings with -- I met with, it looks like, the First Boston people and then that evening there was a meeting at Morgan Stanley which included Nesbitt, Shapiro, Levin, Page, Maher, Duffy, Steven Isko and Fannin and Kersh, Kitts, Stynes, Fuchs, Chang and Goudis at Morgan Stanley where Sunbeam made a presentation regarding its business and its outlook.

Q. Could I ask you to focus on the first meeting on February 23? You are not shown as attending the first meeting which is identified in MS 75 which you read a moment ago.

Do you see that meeting?

A. On the 23rd?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. I do.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0131161

Q. There is a specific reference to conduct due diligence. Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what due diligence was done at this meeting on February 23, 1998?

A. I think this meeting was Morgan Stanley's due diligence regarding Sunbeam.

Q. Regarding Sunbeam or regarding Coleman?

A. Regarding Coleman, excuse me.

Q. So then you don't attend this meeting, right? You are not shown as being there.

A. I didn't attend it, nor does my calendar suggest that I did.

Q. Later in the day you have -- you have a meeting with, it looks like, CSFB personnel; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the subject matter of that meeting on February 23, 1998 among CSFB personnel and yourself?

A. I can only -- I don't recall specifically. I would think it was to discuss the status of the transaction.

0113162

Q. When you are discussing -- withdrawn.

Can you recall anything specific about the status of the transaction that you discussed?

A. No.

Q. Then you attend this meeting on February 23 in the evening; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Your calendar refers to a 5:45 p.m. meeting at Morgan Stanley and that is, for the record, on MS 86.

Is that the meeting you attended?

A. Yes. I don't know if it is at 5:30. That is what my calendar says. 5:45.

Q. You said there -- earlier you told me there was a presentation at that meeting by Mr. Fannin and Mr. Kersh. Do you recall that?

A. Yes.

Q. They presented a -- strike that.

What did -- what did Mr. Fannin

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0131163

A. I don't recall. I don't recall who asked any questions.

Q. Other than this question to Mr. Stynes do you recall any other questions asked of anyone on behalf of -- withdrawn.

Other than this question addressed to Mr. Stynes do you recall any other questions addressed to Morgan Stanley?

A. Not specifically, no.

Q. Do you recall any specific question ever asked of Morgan Stanley at the February 23 meeting whether Sunbeam would meet its net sales objectives for the first quarter of 1998?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall any question asked of Morgan Stanley at the February 23rd meeting whether Sunbeam would meet its earnings per share estimates for the first quarter of 1998?

A. What was -- go back one question.

Q. What -- do you recall any question asked of Morgan Stanley at the

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

February 23 meeting whether Sunbeam would meets its earnings per share estimates for the first quarter of 1998?

MR. MARKOWSKI: I think he asked for the prior question.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Do you recall any specific question ever asked of Morgan Stanley at the February 23 meeting whether Sunbeam would meet its net sales objectives for the first quarter of 1998?

A. No. I said, no. No to the second question also.

Q. Okay.

Did anyone ask Morgan Stanley at the meeting whether Sunbeam would meet its long term strategic plan net sales goals for 1998?

A. No.

Q. Did -- I would ask you.

A. I don't recall anybody asking.

Q. I am sorry. I didn't mean to interrupt you.

Did anyone at the February 23 meeting ask anyone at Morgan Stanley

013165 whether Sunbeam would meet its long range strategic plan net sales goals for 1999?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. The same question for the year 2000.

A. Not that I recall.

Q. With regard to earnings per share, did anyone ask Morgan Stanley at the meeting whether Sunbeam would meet its earnings per share projection for 1998 of $2.20 as set forth in this document?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. I would ask you the same question for the periods 1999 and 2000 which have the respective earning per share figures of $2.75 and $3.30.

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did anyone ask -- did anyone ask at the February 23rd meeting whether Sunbeam had interim financial statements for the month of January 1998?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did anyone at the February 23 meeting ask Sunbeam to provide MacAndrews & Forbes copies of their interim financial statements for January 1998?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. As part of the -- there is a discussion on page CPH, and then the last two digits, 60. If you would turn there please?

A. Okay.

Q. In the left-hand margin -- by the way, this handwriting has been previously identified to be, at least in the belief of one person, Mr. Jerry Levin's handwriting.

Are you familiar with Mr. Levin's handwriting?

A. No, I am not.

Q. Anyway, we will set that issue aside.

Turn to the left-hand column on that page where it is written, dumped 10 million blankets, Japan and China fourth Q.

Do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Kersh or anyone else discussing Sunbeam dumping 10 million blankets in Japan and China in the fourth quarter?

the meeting of February 23?

A. For some reason I think there was a Morgan Stanley presentation on -- either on Sunbeam or the combined entity. I just remember something. I don't know whether it was at that meeting or a later meeting or an earlier meeting.

Q. Did you see it in your deposition preparation?

A. I don't recall seeing it, no.

Q. Did you keep a copy of the document from Morgan Stanley?

A. I doubt it.

Q. According to the chronology, we will go back to MS 75, between February 24 and the 27th, 1998, Coleman and Sunbeam and their respective advisers negotiated the structure of the transaction, conducted due diligence and drafted the necessary documentation. Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. Is that an accurate statement of what happened during that period?

A. I think that is an accurate statement.

Lipton.

Q. It is going to include Wachtell, Lipton and also Credit Suisse First Boston on your side and your accountants.

Let's start with the due diligence kind of in general terms and let me ask you whether there was a person on behalf of MacAndrews & Forbes that had overall responsibility for this due diligence that was conducted between February 24 and February 27, 1998.

A. I would say the laboring oar was, from a business standpoint, was Jerry Levin and Joe Page and their accountants.

Obviously from a legal standpoint it was Wachtell, Lipton and First Boston was involved with both the legal and financial, business due diligence.

Q. Did you have overall responsibility for monitoring the due diligence?

A. No.

Q. Did you have overall responsibility -- I will use a different term -- coordinating the due diligence?

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Mr. Maher, did you give any instructions to Credit Suisse First Boston as to what due diligence they should do in this period between February 24 and February 27, 1998?

A. Other than to do -- none that I recall specifically other than to do their normal due diligence that they would conduct in a transaction like this.

Q. Did you give any instructions to your law firm, Wachtell, Lipton as to what due diligence they should do in this period between February 24 through February 27, 1998?

A. Nothing that I recall specifically; the normal drill.

Q. Did you give your, Coleman's, accounting firm -- did you give Coleman's accounting firm, Ernst & Young, any instructions as to the accounting due diligence they should?

A. No. I am sure Page did. I wouldn't have.

Q. With regard to -- with regard to MacAndrews & Forbes internally now excluding your outside advisers was there any person inside MacAndrews & Forbes who was tasked with doing any form of due diligence?

A. I think Will was doing due diligence working with all of the parties, I believe. Will Nesbitt.

Q. Right. I knew who you were talking about.

To your knowledge did any of the group that you have described as conducting the due diligence, CSFB, Wachtell, Lipton, Mr. Nesbitt and the accounting firm of Ernst & Young, did they during this period of due diligence, February 24 through February 27, did they conduct any interviews of any Sunbeam employees about Sunbeam's financial performance in the first quarter of 1998?

A. I don't know.

Q. Again, this same group of people?

A. Other than the interviews that occurred at the meeting that took place at Morgan Stanley on the 23rd, there was a pretty thorough vetting of Sunbeam's performance at that meeting with the management of Sunbeam.

Q. Anything other than the February 23 meeting that you are aware of?

A. No.

Q. Are you aware of any of the -- your due diligence team interviewing Sunbeam middle management during the due diligence period?

A. I believe that Levin and Page, Shapiro made a number of visitis to different locations.

I can't tell you where they went or what they did but I would imagine in the course of that they talked to a number of middle managers.

Q. Recognizing --

Q. You negotiate those between the parties?
A. Yes.
Q. And then you reduce them to writing in the contracts?
A. That's right.
Q. The contracts -- they did, in your case there were no other warranties and representations other than what the parties specifically sat down and agreed to?
MR. MARKOWSKI: I object to the form of the question. Mr. Maher said he never read the final versions of the agreement.
THE WITNESS: I didn't read the final version of the agreement.
BY MR. BEMIS:
Q. You read the summaries of the agreements, right, sir?
A. What is your question?
Q. Sir, you -- my question was the contracts that were executed in this case contained representations and warranties by the parties, correct?

0131173

A. Yes.
Q. They were representations by Sunbeam on the one hand, right?
A. I believe so.
Q. And there were representations by Coleman in one of the documents, correct?
A. I believe so.
Q. And representations by CLN Holdings, one the parties to the contract, in the first step of the merger, right?
A. Different, but, yes.
Q. In your, those representations and warranties were all placed in writing after the parties completed their negotiations, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. And in customary fashion the parties in those agreements agreed there were no other representations and warranties other than set forth in the definitive documents that they signed?
MR. MARKOWSKI: Object to the lack of foundation.
THE WITNESS: I don't know that for a fact. If it says it, if you want to tell me that it says it, then it says it.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. You would agree with me if it says that, right?

A. Yes.

Q. If the merger agreements say there are no other warranties and representations other than set forth in those documents you would agree that is an accurate statement?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Objection.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. BEMIS: You will be laughing a different tune later.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Hand that document back to me.

Let's go forward from February 27, 1998.

You told us that you did appear at the board meeting of the Coleman Company, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. You made a presentation at that time?

on February 28, as of February 27.

I want to go forward from that date with you.

After February 28 did you have, up until the time of closing which I believe is March 30, 1998, did you, Mr. Maher, have any communications with anyone at Morgan Stanley about Sunbeam-Coleman?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Are you aware of Mr. -- are you aware of Mr. Levin having any communications with anyone at Morgan Stanley between February 28, 1998 and the closing on March 30, 1998?

A. No.

Q. Mr. Perelman?

A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Mr. Page?

A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Mr. Nesbitt?

A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Are you aware of anyone at Credit Suisse First Boston having any communications with anyone at Morgan Stanley about the Sunbeam transaction between February 28 and March 30, 1998?

A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. After March -- strike that.

After February 28 and continuing up to the closing which is again March 30, 1998 did MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team do any further due diligence on Sunbeam?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Would you read the question back for me please?

(Record read)

THE WITNESS: Other than -- it is my understanding that during that period of time I think there was a number of meetings that involved, I believe, Page and Levin in terms of what the future operations of the company are, would be and how the company was going to be operated. I don't know whether that qualifies for further due diligence under your definition or not but I think those discussions, ongoing discussions, were taking place as to synergies and putting the businesses together and it occurred, do you?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. No.

Q. Did you hear from some source what Mr. Kersh said to Mr. Levin?

A. It is my understanding that he was reassuring as to the prospects of the company.

Q. Did someone -- did you hear from some source what Mr. Kersh said to Mr. Levin?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever speak -- strike that.

To this day have you ever spoken to Mr. Levin and asked him whether he spoke to Mr. Kersh?

A. No.

Q. Following the issuance of the March 19 press release -- strike that.

Did you see the March 19 press release on or about that time, March 19?

A. Somewhere around there, yes; somewhere on that day or thereafter.

Q. You were in Aspen between March 14 and March 28, 1998, weren't you?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0113178

A. That's correct.

Q. So how did you find out about the press release in Aspen while you were skiing in Aspen?

A. I don't recall.

Q. While you were skiing in Aspen did you give any instructions to your due diligence team as to any followup they should do with respect to the press release?

A. I didn't have a due diligence team.

Q. MacAndrews & Forbes had a due diligence team, didn't they?

A. Yes.

Q. That is what I am referring to. I think I have been trying to be consistent with that. I will rephrase the question.

Did the MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team do anything about the March 19 press release by way of further investigation after it was issued and while you were skiing in Aspen?

A. Well, as I told you I believe that Levin talked to Kersh.

hearing this in the hallways or wherever at MacAndrews & Forbes -- Mr. Dunlap was making these statements.

Did anyone on the MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team call Mr. Dunlap and ask him about the statements that were being attributed to him in connection with the March 19 press release?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did anyone on the MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team after the issuance of the March 19 press release ask Sunbeam for copies of their interim financial statements for the first quarter of 1998 to the extent they existed on that date?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you ever up to the time of closing as a representative of MacAndrews & Forbes ever see an interim financial statement of Sunbeam for the first quarter or any portion of it 1998?

A. No, I didn't see that until after the closing.

Q. At any time up to the closing on

013180

March 30, 1998 did anyone on the MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team even request of Sunbeam either directly or through its accountants, Arthur Andersen, a copy of Sunbeam's interim financial statements for any period in the first quarter of 1998?

A. Not that I am aware of.

I asked you earlier whether you had ever seen the offering memorandum and -- withdrawn.
I asked you yesterday whether you had ever seen the offering memorandum for the debentures. You testified yesterday you had not and yet I thought I heard you say a few moments ago you may have seen a red herring?
A. I may have.
Q. You don't know one way or another?
A. No.
Q. The red herring is not the final offering memorandum, correct?
A. No, it is not.

Did anyone -- withdrawn.
Did MacAndrews & Forbes through any entity that you are aware of purchase any of the debentures issued by Sunbeam in March of 1998 and underwritten by Morgan

Stanley in connection with the Sunbeam-Coleman transaction?

A. I don't know.

Q. You don't know of any?

A. I don't know of any.

Q. You didn't buy any, did you, personally?

A. Personally, no.

Q. You didn't buy any on behalf of Mr. Perelman's companies, did you?

A. No. I already answered that.

Q. Let me show you what has been marked as -- before I show you this document, stepping back to the underwriting, did you see any of the documents executed between Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam in connection with the underwriting such as a notes purchase agreement, underwriting agreement?

A. I doubt it.

Q. When you have done, you have done -- strike that.

Your firm, at least when you worked with them, First Boston, did underwritings; you told me that, right?

013183

A. Yes.

Q. You are familiar and have seen underwriting agreements, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. For securities that are subject to the 1933 Securities Act you are familiar with the due diligence defense of underwriters, are you not?

A. It has been a long time so refresh my memory.

Q. As an underwriter you understand that under section 33 of the 1933 Act, that underwriters are absolutely liable for statements in an underwriting memorandum absent the availability of due diligence.

Do you recall that from your many years in investment banking?

A. I told you, most of my time was on the M&A side of the business, merger and acquisition, but that sounds correct.

Q. In connection with underwritings that you are familiar with it is customary, is it not, to include the financial statements of the offering company in the offering memorandum as certified by the auditors, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar -- are you familiar with the term "comfort letters?"

A. Yes.

Q. You have seen them before?

A. Yes.

Q. Is it not indeed customary in the case of an underwriting for securities such as was done in the Sunbeam transaction by virtue of the debentures to obtain comfort letters from the auditors in connection with the offering memorandum?

A. Yes.

Q. I am going to ask you to take a look at Morgan Stanley 166 which is the offering memorandum that has previously been identified by other witnesses.

MR. MARKOWSKI: Do you have a copy I can use?

MR. BEMIS: Sure.

BY MR. BEMIS:

Q. Let me withdraw that question and start over again.

I have handed you what has previously been marked as MS 166 which is the offering memorandum for the Sunbeam zero coupon convertible senior subordinated debentures 2018.

Do you have that in front of you?

A. I do.

Q. My understanding is that you did not see -- you have not seen this offering memorandum before, right?

A. I told you I wasn't sure. I don't think I have.

Q. In connection with the offering memorandum, Coleman's financial statements are attached to this, to this document as are Sunbeam's financial statements?

A. Okay.

Q. Did you have -- did you have any role in having Ernst & Young provide its consent to have its financial statements included in the offering memorandum?

A. No.

Q. In connection with -- in connection with the offering memorandum for the debentures were you aware that Morgan Stanley would in the ordinary course have received comfort letters from the auditors whose financial statements as certified by them are included in the offering memorandum?

0131186

A. The question --

Q. Let me rephrase the question.

A. I think I know what you are asking.

Q. In connection with the inclusion of the financial statements in the offering memorandum for Coleman which, for example, are in here, is it customary for the --

A. And for Sunbeam.

Q. And for Sunbeam.

A. And the other companies.

Q. First Alert and Signature Brands to have their auditors provide comfort letters with respect to the financial statements included in the offering memorandum?

A. Yes.

Q. Am I correct, sir, that -- let me try again.

Am I correct, sir, that a comfort letter in this case which -- we are dealing with a period mid first quarter, would provide certain comfort to the underwriter with regard to the period since the last audited financial statement included in the offering memorandum?

013187

A. Comfort or discomfort, yes.

Q. Comfort or discomfort?

A. Yes.

Q. For example, nothing has come to you attention except that?

A. Something along those lines.

Q. You are familiar with that?

A. Yes.

Q. In connection with the offering memorandum for the zero coupons bonds, the Coleman Company's auditors, Ernst & Young, did provide a comfort letter to Morgan Stanley.

Have you seen that letter?

A. The Coleman?

Q. Yes.

A. No.

Q. Did you --

Q. In connection with the offering memorandum for the zero coupon debentures Ernst & Young did provide a comfort letter to Morgan Stanley. Have you seen that letter?

A. I did not.

Q. Have you ever asked to see that letter at any time?

A. No.

Q. In connection with the offering memorandum for the zero coupon debentures the auditors for Sunbeam, Arthur Andersen, provided a comfort letter to Morgan Stanley. Have you ever seen that letter?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you first see it?

A. I can't tell you when I first saw it. It was sometime after -- after -- after -- year -- years later. It may have been in connection with the, or during the period of time after the, let's call it, the collapse of Sunbeam.

Q. Is it fair to say, sir, that MacAndrews & Forbes did not, until sometime after March 30, 1998, the date of the closing, request from either Sunbeam or Arthur Andersen, for that matter, a copy of the comfort letter provided by Arthur Andersen in connection with the debenture offering?

A. I don't know that for a fact.

Q. Did you request a copy of the Arthur Andersen comfort letter?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you request anyone at MacAndrews & Forbes on the due diligence team to request a copy of the audit comfort letter provided by Arthur Andersen to Morgan Stanley in connection with the debenture offering?

A. Did not.

Q. Are you aware of anyone on the MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team making such a request through Ernst & Young?

A. I am not.

Q. Did you get -- did you get, and if I asked you this I apologize, but did you, that is, MacAndrews & Forbes, get a copy of the Ernst & Young comfort letter that was sent to Morgan Stanley?

A. I think you asked me that question already.
Q. I may have and I apologize if I did. I just want to make sure I close this out and we will go on.
A. No.
Q. Are you aware after March 19 of anyone on the MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team asking Morgan Stanley for the contents of the comfort letter provided to Morgan Stanley in connection with the debenture offer?

A. I am not.

Q. You knew on behalf of MacAndrews & Forbes that at least as of the closing, March 30, that Sunbeam would have interim financial statements for a period of approximately three months as of the date of closing, is that right?

A. I am not sure I understand the question you are asking.

Q. Let me try again. If you don't understand it it wouldn't do any good to have you answer it.

At the time of the closing, you, Mr. Maher --

A. Yes.

Q. -- your history of investment banking and being sophisticated financially as you are knew that Sunbeam had interim financial statements as of March 30, 1998, interim financial statements?

A. I am there.

Q. There is a caption for seasonality, do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. Would you read that section into the record for the jury please?

A. "Sales of certain of the company's products can be negatively impacted by unseasonable weather conditions during different seasons and quarters of the years. For instance, company's sales of warming blankets were negatively impacted in the fourth quarter of 1997 by Such a program shifts certain of the weather-related risks of negative sales impact for such seasonal products to later months of the season and as a result could have a negative impact on future financial performance."

Q. Had you read the offering memorandum you would have been aware of this information at the time of the closing on March 30, 1998, correct?

A. I would have been aware of what?

Q. The language you just read to the jury.

Q. I misspoke. March 30, 1998. Let me ask the question again.
Before March 30, 1998 did you look at Sunbeam's form 10-K for the year 1997? Earlier you testified did you not.

Are you aware of any request by the MacAndrews & Forbes' due diligence team directed to either Sunbeam or its accountants to examine Sunbeam's books and records, properties, personnel, copies of any documents filed with the federal or state securities authorities pursuant to Section 6.7 of MS 93?

A. No.

Q. Can you hand that back to me?

I have handed you what has previously been marked as MS 117, the agreement and plan of merger among Sunbeam Corporation, Camper Acquisition Corporation and the Coleman Company, Inc. dated as of February 27, 1998.

A. I am not but as we talked about earlier today after signing the merger agreement there was a -- it is my understanding that management of Sunbeam and management of Coleman started to spend a lot of time together so information of this nature quite naturally I think was passed back and forth during that period of time. ARGUMENT 33

I. Morgan Stanley's Summary Judgment Motion Should Be Denied At The Threshold Because It Is Based Entirely On The Erroneous Legal Assumption That The Moving Party Can Prevail On A Summary Judgment Motion Merely By Asserting That The Plaintiff Has No Evidence To Support Its Claims 35

II. Morgan Stanley's Individual Attacks On CPH's Claims Are Insufficient To Warrant Summary Judgment In Morgan Stanley's Favor 37

A. CPH's Negligent Misrepresentation Claim Should Be Allowed To Proceed To Trial 37

1. Morgan Stanley Has Failed To Demonstrate Conclusively The Non-Existence Of A Special Relationship Between The Parties 37

2. The Question Of Whether A Special Relationship Exists Almost Invariably Involves Issues Of Fact Precluding Summary Judgment 38

a. Because Morgan Stanley Has Failed To Identify An Outcome-Determinative Conflict Between Florida And New York Law, Florida Law Controls CPH's Aiding and Abetting Claim 68

b. Even Assuming That There Is A Conflict Between New York And Florida Law, Under This Court's Choice of Law Order Read In Light Of The Facts Developed Since The Order, Florida Law Governs CPH's Aiding and Abetting Claim 69

c. Even Assuming That It Is Necessary To Proceed Further With A Formal Choice Of Law Analysis, Under The Restatement, Florida Law Plainly Controls 75

2. Under Florida Law — Or, For That Matter, New York Law — Morgan Stanley's Substantive Attacks On CPH's Aiding And Abetting Claim Are Baseless 75

INTRODUCTION

Morgan Stanley has filed a motion for summary judgment in which it asks this Court to accept as undisputed more than 300 purported facts and conclusions of law — a request that, by itself, exposes just how inappropriate this case is for summary judgment treatment. Then, in its memorandum of law, Morgan Stanley argues over and over again that it is entitled to summary judgment because "CPH has not presented any evidence" of essential elements of its claims. See, e.g., MS Mem. 13, 15, 18, 22, 26, 30, 32. In doing so, Morgan Stanley ignores that, under Florida law, the defendant moving for summary judgment must show conclusively that the plaintiff has no claim. The plaintiff is not required to make any showing unless and until the defendant has proved the non-existence of a material fact. See, e.g., Visingardi v. Tirone, 193 So. 2d 601, 605 (Fla. 1967) (rejecting defendant's contention that it is entitled to summary judgment if the plaintiff fails to "come forward with sufficient . . . support for each and every fact which he must establish in order to prevail" concluding while defendant "correctly state[s] the burden of the plaintiff at trial," defendant misstates "his burden as the party opposing a motion for summary judgment"); see also Holl v. Talcott, 191 So. 2d 40, 47-48 (Fla. 1966) (party moving for summary judgment meets its burden either by "showing conclusively that he is not guilty of the negligence charged against him" or "by showing conclusively that the plaintiff is unable to present requisite proof of the negligence charged"); Wills v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 351 So. 2d 29, 31 (Fla. 1977) ("Unless a [defendant] can show unequivocally that there was no negligence, or that plaintiff's negligence was the sole proximate cause of the injury, courts will not be disposed to granting a summary judgment in its favor.").

Morgan Stanley does not even attempt to meet its stringent summary judgment burden, and as shown below, Morgan Stanley cannot do so. Thus, the applicable law — as well as the material facts that Morgan Stanley studiously ignores — establish that triable issues of fact remain on each and every one of CPH's claims.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

A. The Initiation Of The Sunbeam Fraud By The Dunlap Management Team.

The backdrop for this lawsuit is the massive Florida-based fraud that occurred at Sunbeam Corporation during the tenure of its former Chief Executive Officer, Albert Dunlap. The fraud resulted in hundreds of millions of dollars of damage to CPH, as the value of Sunbeam stock it received dropped from more than $50 per share to 0.

The existence of the Florida-based fraud involving Sunbeam is a matter of public record and resulted in the termination of top Sunbeam executives, a restatement of Sunbeam's financial statements from the fourth quarter of 1996 to the first quarter of 1998, Sunbeam's bankruptcy, and numerous lawsuits filed here in Florida. CPH App. 4 (CPH Ex. 21); CPH App. 5 (CPH Ex. 22 at 1); CPH App. 6 (Denkhaus Dep. at 69-73); CPH App. 7, 8 (Levin Dep. at 76-77, 398-99).[1]

Morgan Stanley's own litigation against Arthur Andersen (pending before Judge Miller) is centered around "Andersen and Sunbeam's Fraudulent Scheme." (CPH App. 68 (Morgan Stanley Amended Complaint ¶ 30)). As Morgan Stanley admits in its complaint (CPH App. 68 (Amended Complaint ¶ 30)):

> Unbeknownst to the public and to Plaintiffs, Sunbeam's new senior management embarked upon a scheme designed to misrepresent Sunbeam's financial condition. Sunbeam's subsequent November 1998 restatement of its 1996 and 1997 financial statements revealed the plan that Sunbeam's management had adopted and Andersen facilitated. In 1996, Sunbeam's management, with Andersen's knowing assistance, caused Sunbeam to overstate its operating losses by at least $40 million, thereby establishing an overly bleak financial backdrop against which the company's performance in 1997 would be measured. In 1997, by contrast, management caused Sunbeam dramatically to overstate its earnings. When 1997 operating earnings were eventually corrected and restated, they were $95 million less than the earnings originally reported — and approximately half of the figure that Andersen had previously certified.

[1] "CPH App." refers to the multi-volume Appendix that accompanies this brief.

In a hearing before this Court on its motion for judgment on the pleadings, Morgan Stanley further conceded that "as a matter of record," "Sunbeam had misstatements," and CPH therefore would not "need to prove that." CPH App. 2 (12/12/03 Tr. 26). And, in its summary judgment papers, Morgan Stanley repeatedly refers to the fraud of Sunbeam. See MS Mem. 24 (referring to "Sunbeam's fraud"); id. at 26 (referring to "Sunbeam's fraudulent conduct"); MS Mot. for S.J. ¶ 3 (referring to Morgan Stanley as "a victim of that fraud"). Although Morgan Stanley's purported lack of knowledge is certainly disputed, the Sunbeam fraud is not. A summary of that undisputed fraud follows.

On July 18, 1996, after several quarters of poor financial performance, Sunbeam's Board hired Dunlap — at the time a heralded turnaround specialist and the "darling" of Wall Street (CPH App. 117 (Fogg Dep. at 31-32)) — to increase Sunbeam's sales and profits, which would lead to an increase in the value of Sunbeam shares. But Dunlap (and a number of hand-picked, long-time associates such as Russell Kersh, whom Dunlap installed as Sunbeam's Chief Financial Officer), devised a strategy to create the illusion rather than the reality of a turnaround, in order to artificially inflate Sunbeam stock. Initially, Dunlap overstated Sunbeam's existing financial problems so that Sunbeam appeared to be in worse shape in 1996 than it really was.

Then, Dunlap overstated Sunbeam's 1997 revenues and earnings in order to create the illusion of dramatic improvement over 1996 results. Dunlap employed various techniques, including "bill-and-hold" sales and "channel stuffing." Phony "bill-and-hold" sales allowed Dunlap to make Sunbeam look successful by recognizing revenues from supposed sales, even though customers had not actually paid for or taken delivery of goods and were not obligated to do so. "Channel stuffing" involved a practice of accelerating sales that otherwise would have occurred in a later period, sometimes by offering steep discounts or other extraordinary customer inducements. Channel stuffing, therefore, has two future side effects: The profits on the sales were drastically reduced or eliminated, and sales that otherwise would have been realized in later periods were moved into 1997. Dunlap also made Sunbeam appear more successful than it really was by reaching into the "cookie jar," reversing inflated reserves, and recording $35 million as income. These practices created the appearance that 1997 was strong, while assuring that 1998 would bring an end to the illusion. CPH App. 130 (expert report of Douglas R. Emery describing the Sunbeam fraud).

B. Morgan Stanley Joins Sunbeam's Team.

Because Sunbeam's 1997 "turnaround" was an illusion, Dunlap needed an investment banker to help him sell Sunbeam during a time when Dunlap could realize the value of the artificial inflation of Sunbeam's stock. Despite hot competition from Mark Davis, another investment banker who had worked for Dunlap in the past in connection with the sale of Scott Paper, Morgan Stanley won the Sunbeam engagement. CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 61-63); CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 41). Morgan Stanley landed the engagement in September 1997, after doing months of uncompensated work studying Sunbeam, which started in April 1997. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 51-54); CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 35-36); CPH App. 103 (CPH Ex. 70).

Morgan Stanley's William Strong headed up the Sunbeam matter. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 27-28); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 129-30). Strong had joined Morgan Stanley in 1993 as a senior executive, responsible for the firm's corporate finance activities in Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Toronto. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 6). The marching orders that Morgan Stanley management gave Strong in his very first evaluation were clear: "He should personally generate more revenue in 1994." CPH App. 15 (CPH Ex. 371 at MS 85418). Strong's 1995 evaluations show that senior Morgan Stanley executives had continued to press Strong to bring in more business. Robert Scott, who served as head of the firm's corporate finance and investment banking business, made it clear that he had been unimpressed with what he had seen of Strong's ability to generate fees (CPH App. 16 (CPH Ex. 372 at MS 85424)):

> Revenue input: Bill covers a lot of territory; I wonder how productive he really is. 1996: What should Bill's focus be in 1996? More on productivity and client business.

Strong got the message and understood precisely what he needed to do to advance his career at Morgan Stanley — he had to bring in fees — and he was prepared to do what was required to demonstrate his "rainmaking" capabilities. In his personal assessment of 1996, Strong boasted that he had had his "most productive year since joining the Firm in 1993" and that his "personal revenue production by the end of the fiscal year will have increased for the fourth straight year to a total exceeding $70 million . . . ." CPH App. 13 (CPH Ex. 373 at MS 85438).

But at the same time that Morgan Stanley was exhorting Strong to generate fees, senior Morgan Stanley executives became increasingly aware that Strong's methods were too aggressive. Robert Scott noted in Strong's 1996 evaluation (CPH App. 13 (CPH Ex. 373 at MS 85440)):

> While Bill is bright, his judgment is sometimes flawed. He is so focused on his own agenda that he can lose perspective. He has the ability to steamroll colleagues while accomplishing his goals.

Kirsten Feldman, one of Strong's Managing Director colleagues, similarly observed of Strong (CPH App. 13 (CPH Ex. 373 at MS 85440)):

> Judgment is usually very good (unless he is trying [to] promote a specific outcome).

Richard Kaufmann, another senior Morgan Stanley executive, cautioned that those reporting to Strong were "afraid of Bill's reaction" because of his competitiveness. CPH App. 13 (CPH Ex. 373 at MS 85441).

In 1997, Tarek Abdel-Meguid, then the deputy head of Morgan Stanley's corporate finance division, concluded that Strong's desire to capture fees clouded his judgment (CPH App. 17 (CPH Ex. 374 at MS 85461)):

> Bill can be overly aggressive in terms of trying to capture transactional opportunities. Makes some judgments which are sometimes very close to, if not over, the line.

Abdel-Meguid continued (CPH App. 17 (CPH Ex. 374 at MS 85462)):

> Bill continues to suffer the consequences of less than a straightforward approach. Gives people, including me, the impression that he is not completely upfront. This needs to improve; there are numerous approaches to me from very credible people on this issue.

Another of Morgan Stanley's most senior executives, Joseph Perella, had come to a similar assessment of Strong's credibility (CPH App. 17 (CPH Ex. 374 at MS 85461)):

> The one problem I continue to have with Bill is that you never seem to get the whole story unless you probe very hard.

Although Strong continued to deliver greater and greater fees — over $100 million in 1998 alone — Strong's success came at a price. CPH App. 18 (CPH Ex. 375 at MS 85474). In 1998, Abdel-Meguid acknowledged Strong's success in generating the fees, but continued to express his discomfort with the means of Strong's ends (CPH App. 18 (CPH Ex. 375 at 85477)):

> [Strong] is highly focused on money making opportunities, sometimes to a fault.

Reiterating the same views he had expressed in 1997, Abdel-Meguid carefully repeated his warnings about Strong (CPH App. 18 (CPH Ex. 375 at 85480-81)):

> Bill can be overly aggressive in terms of trying to capture transactional opportunities. Makes some judgments which are very close to, if not over, the line. I continue to hear comments about his greater general concern for his own people/business unit, relative to the Firm's best interest.
> . . . .
> Bill continues to suffer the consequences of less than a straight-forward approach. Gives people, including me, the impression that he is not completely up front.

Echoing the comments of Strong's superiors and colleagues, an investment banker who worked for Strong stated (CPH App. 18 (CPH Ex. 375 at MS 85485)):

> Uses information selectively — often times does not disclose information which I may view important or will disclose some information on a subject, but not all.

These concerns, voiced by multiple persons consistently over time, led Morgan Stanley management in 1998 to expressly identify "Development Needs" for Strong (CPH App. 18 (CPH Ex. 375 at MS 85492)):

> Overly commercial. Can be overly aggressive in terms of trying to capture transactional opportunities. Makes some judgments which are sometimes very close to if not over the line.
> Communication: Although he has made progress (and is acutely aware of the concerns), he continues to suffer the consequences of less than a straightforward approach. Some colleagues feel he gives people the impression that he is not completely upfront and uses information selectively. Often times does not disclose information which others may view as important or will disclose some information on a subject, but not all. Also there is the perception that he does not properly balance the issues of his people/his region with the best overall interests of the Firm.

Strong's 1997 self-assessment touted his success in bringing in significant fees — aided in no small part by his expectation of a lucrative Sunbeam fee (CPH App. 17 (CPH Ex. 374 at MS 85455, emphasis added)):

> My personal Firm revenue has been $70 million, $73 million and will exceed $90 million for 1995, 1996 and 1997 respectively. Further, my personal backlog going into fiscal 1998 has never been higher. Highlights from that backlog include the sale of Sunbeam (market capitalization $3.7 billion, signed engagement letter with success fees above fee scale) . . . .

Senior Morgan Stanley executives were on clear notice that Strong's ambition and desire for fees had become a serious problem. But Morgan Stanley put its own desire to bring in those fees above its concern about Strong's judgment, and entrusted Strong to handle the Sunbeam transaction. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 27-38); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 129-30); CPH App. 110 (Webber Dep. at 27).

Throughout 1997, after landing the Sunbeam engagement, Strong and Morgan Stanley immersed themselves in the details of Sunbeam's business and financial performance, with over a dozen Morgan Stanley personnel visiting Sunbeam's Florida headquarters to study Sunbeam and perform the due-diligence required of investment bankers. CPH App. 19 (CPH Ex. 37); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 91); CPH App. 20 (Tyree Dep. at 575-81); CPH App. 21 (CPH Ex. 84); CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 16-19); CPH App. 22 (CPH Ex. 172); CPH App. 23 (Rafii Dep. at 106-08); CPH App. 24 (CPH Ex. 173); CPH App. 25 (CPH Ex. 221); CPH App. 26 (Yoo Dep. at 83-88); CPH App. 27 (CPH Ex. 245). During that time, Strong personally spoke with Dunlap and/or Kersh in Florida between 50 and 100 times. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 53-54). It is inconceivable that Morgan Stanley could have had such deep involvement and not known at an early date that Sunbeam's turnaround story was an illusion. CPH App. 8 (Levin Dep. at 403-04); CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 415-16).

C. Morgan Stanley Cannot Find A Buyer For Sunbeam And Changes Strategy.

Although Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley jointly set out to find a buyer for Sunbeam, they found none, CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 28-30); CPH App. 26 (Yoo Dep. at 218-19), much to Dunlap's disappointment. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 84-85). So Morgan Stanley changed its strategy and convinced Sunbeam to look for a company that could be acquired with Sunbeam stock. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 94-97).

Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam zeroed in on Coleman as a possible acquisition target and contacted CPH. CPH App. 30 (MS 75 at CPH 1041528-29); CPH App. 31 (Defendant's Answer ¶ 36). Morgan Stanley contends in its brief that CPH was eager to unload Coleman and have Sunbeam assume $1 billion in Coleman debt. See MS Mem. 1. In addition to ignoring that Morgan Stanley approached CPH about Coleman, not the other way around, Morgan Stanley's brief ignores its own research analyst reports concerning Coleman. In her late 1997 report, Morgan Stanley research analyst Karen Eltrich touted the escrow notes issued by Coleman that Morgan Stanley purchased for its own account and praised Coleman's prospects and the success that Jerry Levin, Coleman's Chief Executive Officer, was having in enhancing Coleman's performance. CPH App. 119 (CPH Ex. 272); CPH App. 120 (Eltrich Dep. at 66, 76-78).

In wooing CPH, Morgan Stanley exploited the fact that it had been CPH's investment banker on almost two-dozen transactions, dating back to 1985. CPH App. 32 (Perelman Dep. at 222); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 86); see also CPH App. 33 (Plaintiff's Responses and Objections to Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.'s Fifth Set of Interrogatories at 2-4 listing 23 transactions back to 1985). And as late as the first part of 1998, Morgan Stanley was using its relationship with CPH executives in an attempt to sell Gucci. CPH App. 32 (Perelman Dep. at 215-17).

CPH executives and Morgan Stanley had developed a "very close" working relationship. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 352); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 86 ("we have had very good relations with [Morgan Stanley]")). That close relationship was due in part to William Reid, a managing director at Morgan Stanley, who was the "primary contact." CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 352); CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 288 (describing Reid as the "relationship banker at Morgan Stanley")); CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 180 (acknowledging that Reid had a relationship with CPH executives)); see also CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 83); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 86). In his capacity as CPH's Morgan Stanley contact, Reid frequently pitched business ideas to CPH executives. CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 115); CPH App. 32 (Perelman Dep. at 221); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 86); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 134-35). MAFCO Chief Executive Officer Ronald Perelman and MAFCO Senior Vice-President William Nesbitt, both of whom had worked with Reid personally, had developed a strong working relationship with him and held him in high regard. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 352 (Reid was "very smart," "very nice," and a "very good guy")); CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 114 (Nesbitt knew Reid "quite well")).

D. Morgan Stanley And Sunbeam Meet With CPH Representatives And CPH Considers A Potential Transaction With Sunbeam.

Once Sunbeam set its sights on Coleman, Sunbeam sought to complete the acquisition of Coleman from CPH as quickly as possible. CPH App. 26 (Yoo Dep. at 218-19); CPH App. 36 (CPH Ex. 229); CPH App. 132 (CPH 324558); CPH App. 133 (CPH 586-87); CPH App. 134 (CPH 466948-49). The negotiations that led to Sunbeam's acquisition of CPH's Coleman shares were not the first negotiations between CPH and Sunbeam. Before those negotiations, on November 6, 1997, Morgan Stanley had given a presentation to CPH representatives concerning the possible sale of Sunbeam, but CPH was not interested. CPH App. 39 (Maher Dep. 133, 144-45); CPH App. 138 (CPH 379 at SASMF 17231).

Shortly after that November 1997 meeting, at which Morgan Stanley unsuccessfully sought to sell Sunbeam, the parties shifted their attention to Sunbeam's interest in purchasing Coleman. Sunbeam, assisted by Morgan Stanley, held face-to-face meetings with CPH representatives in December 1997 and February 1998, meetings at which Sunbeam was falsely portrayed as a "turnaround" success. CPH App. 32 (Perelman Dep. at 196-99, 273-74, 308); CPH App. 7 (Levin Dep. at 182-87); CPH App. 30 (MS Ex. 75 at CPH 1401528-31); CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9); CPH App. 37 (CPH Ex. 238); CPH App. 38 (CPH Ex. 316).

On December 18, 1997, after Morgan Stanley prepped Sunbeam executives and had spoken with CPH representatives on December 11, 15, and 16 (CPH App. 135 (CPH Ex. 222); CPH App. 123 at MSC 44558-59, a meeting of representatives of CPH and Sunbeam took place in Palm Beach. But the meeting ended suddenly when Dunlap stormed out after Perelman rejected his stock offer to buy Coleman at a low price. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 342). Morgan Stanley's Reid was thereafter used by Morgan Stanley to revive the talks by reaching out to Perelman personally in January 1998. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 353-54); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 85). Reid called Perelman and told him that Sunbeam was still very interested in doing a transaction with Coleman. Perelman told Reid that Sunbeam and Coleman had not agreed on a price in earlier negotiations, but Reid assured Perelman that we can "come together on price." CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 353-54). As a result of Reid's call, CPH representatives reopened talks with Sunbeam. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 354). Reid continued to facilitate general communications between Sunbeam and Coleman during the progress of the Sunbeam transaction. CPH App. 40 (Duffy Dep. at 123).

Beginning in December 1997, CPH prepared a number of financial analyses evaluating the consequences of a potential merger of Coleman and Sunbeam. CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 117); CPH App. 41 (MS Ex. 104); CPH App. 42 (MS Ex. 105); CPH App. 43 (Ex. 106); CPH App. 44 (MS Ex. 107). Credit Suisse First Boston ("CSFB"), Coleman's investment advisor, assembled a set of materials for Coleman's review, including Sunbeam's 10-Q for the period ending September 1997, Sunbeam's 1996 10-K, and various research analyst reports. CPH App. 45 (MS Ex. 76). CSFB also prepared an analysis of Coleman's value, concluding that Coleman was worth between $24.78 and $38.94 per share. CPH App. 46 (CPH Ex. 236).

As Sunbeam was a public company, CPH and analysts at CSFB reviewed publicly available information on Sunbeam, including SEC filings and analyst reports. CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 131); CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 276-78); CPH App. 49 (Geller Dep. at 31); CPH App. 40 (Duffy Dep. at 32); CPH App. 7 (Levin Dep. at 69, 100-02, 159-62). Indeed, this is basically the same type of due-diligence examination of Sunbeam conducted by Christopher Whelan, the employee in Morgan Stanley's credit department responsible for assessing the credit risks associated with the loan to Sunbeam. CPH App. 113 (Whelan Dep. at 60-62 (Whelan testifying that Morgan Stanley relied on public filings, financial statements, and information provided by management)). Given that Sunbeam and Coleman were publicly traded companies that had a duty to disclose all material facts to the public, 15 U.S.C. § 78m, and CPH was relying on the information provided by Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley, neither party reviewed the other's non-public books and records. CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 132-33). Paul Shapiro, the former General Counsel of Coleman, noted that because CPH was becoming a minority investor in a public company, he did not believe that CPH "had a reason to request any access." CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 130).

After Morgan Stanley's Reid revived the negotiations in his January 1998 conversation with Perelman, Morgan Stanley took responsibility for the negotiations and discussions with CPH regarding the terms of the transaction and the condition of Sunbeam. For example, on January 23, 1998, January 29, 1998, and February 6, 1998, representatives of CPH met with representatives of Morgan Stanley to discuss a transaction involving Coleman and Sunbeam. CPH App. 123 (CPH Ex. 169); CPH App. 138 (CPH Ex. 379). And on February 3, 13, 16, and 19, 1998, representatives from Morgan Stanley and CPH participated in a series of conference calls regarding the terms of the transaction. CPH App. 123 (CPH Ex. 169); CPH App. 138 (CPH Ex. 379).

In early 1998, CPH made a number of inquiries of Sunbeam regarding Sunbeam's financial status since the end of the 1997 calendar year and what Sunbeam's future "growth plan" looked like. CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 134). These inquiries were responded to in a series of due-diligence meetings held on February 23-24, 1998. CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 134); CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 366-68). CPH executives sought these meetings to confirm that Sunbeam's business and financial plan were in line with analysts' expectations. CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 100-01).

E. The February 23, 1998 Session And CPH's Follow Up Due-Diligence.

On February 23, 1998, Morgan Stanley and representatives from CPH and Sunbeam met at Morgan Stanley's offices. Morgan Stanley gave CPH an 85-page book — with the Morgan Stanley logo on the cover and on every page — that it had created. CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9); CPH App. 38 (CPH Ex. 316 at MSC 27062-63); CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 367-69); CPH App. 26 (Yoo Dep. at 114). Morgan Stanley's book promoted Sunbeam's supposed turnaround and projections that Sunbeam's extraordinary growth in sales and earnings would continue through 1998 and beyond. CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9 at CP 026290). Morgan Stanley's book also adopted research analysts' views of Sunbeam's results and accomplishments. CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9 at CP 026295). CPH and Coleman representatives also received a second document at the February 23 meeting entitled "Sunbeam Long Range Strategic Plan." CPH App. 37 (CPH Ex. 238).

At the February 23 meeting, Morgan Stanley introduced Sunbeam's presentation and also fielded questions from CPH representatives. CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 308-09). CPH was falsely assured that: (a) Sunbeam would meet or exceed Wall Street's expectations for its first quarter 1998 earnings; (b) analysts' favorable earnings estimates of $1.90 to $2.15 per share were low; (c) Sunbeam's plan to earn $2.20 per share for 1998 was easily achievable and probably low; and (d) Sunbeam had a strong management team. CPH App. 37 (CPH Ex. 238). CPH responded by making a number of inquiries related to Sunbeam's financial margins, new products, international markets, and grilling business. CPH App. 7, 8 (Levin Dep. at 182-242, 252-55); CPH App. 50 (Shapiro Dep. at 285-86); CPH App. 51 (Page Dep. at 211). The Morgan Stanley book laid out detailed information on each of these subjects. CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9).

CPH also asked a number of questions about Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 earnings and whether Sunbeam still was on track to make its year-end earnings. CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 305, 316 ("there was a substantial amount of discussion about the first quarter")); CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 187 (questions were asked "related to how is [Sunbeam's] performance today, how is it going relative to analyst expectations . . . are you going to meet your numbers for the remainder of the year")). In response to these inquiries, Sunbeam management, with the imprimatur of Morgan Stanley, represented that "Sunbeam was going to make their numbers." CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 187); see also CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 306 ("Mr. Kersh in no uncertain terms said that not only was he going to make 'what the Street's forecast was,' but they were going to make their budget in the first quarter and for the year.")). Based on these assurances, CPH representatives left the meeting having been assured that business was "going very well." CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 190). The fact that Sunbeam had Morgan Stanley's imprimatur is significant because, as two of Morgan Stanley's senior executives have testified in this case, investors are entitled to believe that Morgan Stanley associates itself only with quality companies, and Morgan Stanley understands that investors rely on Morgan Stanley's involvement in making their investment decisions. See CPH App. 114 (Perella Dep. at 125-26); CPH App. 115 (Porat Dep. at 297-98); accord CPH App. 122 (Slovin Dep. at 291-92 (Bruce Slovin, a Coleman Board member at the time of the transaction, testifying that he relied on Morgan Stanley's representations due to its reputation)); see also Section II.B below.

In its summary judgment brief, on the issue of Sunbeam's earnings, Morgan Stanley repeatedly states that Jerry Levin made some handwritten notes on the February 23 meeting materials to the effect "that Sunbeam said that 'Jan Feb Slow.'" See MS Mem. 7; see also MS Mem. 33. That is incorrect. Levin's notes actually read, "Jan Slow" and below that, the word "Feb" appears by itself. CPH App. 52 (MS 84 at MF 00016). In addressing the note at his deposition, Levin testified that he "must have asked them or they volunteered that January was a slow month." As for the "Feb" reference, Levin testified that he was not sure why he wrote it.

CPH App. 7 (Levin Dep. at 229-30). Perelman testified that Levin reported to him after the meeting that January sales were "slow," February sales were "fine," and that the statements by Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam were "bullish." CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 372-73); see also CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 102).

Morgan Stanley's own documents and witness testimony debunk Morgan Stanley's suggestion that all were on early notice of Sunbeam's poor performance. The Morgan Stanley deal team, including Strong and the Morgan Stanley participants in the February 23 meeting, prepared a March 10, 1998 memorandum to the Equity Commitment Committee to obtain approval to underwrite the debenture offering that contains no reference to any sales slowdown in either January or February of 1998. CPH App. 126 (CPH Ex. 129); CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 245-50). Indeed, Ruth Porat, the Managing Director of Morgan Stanley's equity capital markets who was heavily involved in the debenture offering and conceded that it was important to the debenture offering that Sunbeam "hit its numbers," testified that the first time she heard Sunbeam's sales were slow was on March 18. CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 96, 147). Consistent with this testimony, other participants in the February 23 meeting do not recall any comments about Sunbeam's first quarter sales being slow. CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 305); CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 188-89); CPH App. 40 (Duffy Dep. at 151); CPH App. 49 (Geller Dep. at 111-12).

Following the February 23 meeting, CPH representatives conducted additional due-diligence, including discussions with Sunbeam on the company's "future operations," CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 351), and inquiries about outstanding litigation, environmental matters, and business operations. CPH App. 50 (Shapiro Dep. at 298-99). Additionally, on February 24, CSFB met again with Sunbeam senior management to discuss Sunbeam's strategic plan and 1997 results. CPH App. 125 (MS Ex. 230).

On February 25 and 27, using the long-range strategic plan numbers of Sunbeam that were provided to Coleman and CPH at the February 23 meeting at Morgan Stanley, CSFB made presentations to the Coleman Board of Directors that analyzed the proposed transaction. CPH representatives attended the meeting. CPH App. 53 (CPH Ex. 239); CPH App. 54 (MS Ex. 112); CPH App. 55 (MS Ex. 88); CPH App. 56 (MS Ex. 113). CPH representatives also reviewed CSFB's fairness opinion of the transaction, issued on February 27. CPH App. 57 (MS Ex. 120).

F. CPH Agrees To Sell Its Coleman Stock To Sunbeam.

Taken in by the Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley misrepresentations, on February 27, 1998, CPH entered into a written agreement with Sunbeam to sell its 82 percent stake in Coleman for 14 million shares of Sunbeam stock plus additional consideration and entered into a written agreement with Sunbeam. CPH App. 95 (MS Ex. 93). At the same time, Morgan Stanley made a presentation to the Sunbeam Board, opining that the consideration paid by Sunbeam was fair as the Coleman shares were worth as much as $53.24. CPH App. 139 (CPH Ex. 89 at MSC 83981).

Despite Morgan Stanley's suggestions to the contrary (MS Mem. 6), the February 27 written agreement with Sunbeam is the only agreement into which CPH entered. Morgan Stanley repeatedly refers (e.g., MS Mem. 6-7, 21) to two Confidentiality Agreements dated February 4 and 23, 1998, agreements that contain provisions stating that no reliance is being placed on evaluation materials that are being supplied under the agreements, but Morgan Stanley ignores that CPH is not a party to either agreement — Coleman, not CPH, is a party. See MS Ex. 133, MS Ex. 134 (both exhibits are included in Morgan Stanley's Appendix of documents). Moreover, with regard to the February 23 Confidentiality Agreement, it is of no force and effect even as to Coleman because Coleman never signed the document and thus never became bound by it. See MS Ex. 134 at 7 (showing a blank signature line under the words "Confirmed and agreed to").

013914

Indeed, the draft of the February 23 Confidentiality Agreement that Morgan Stanley has produced was not even signed by Sunbeam, nor had Sunbeam filled in the identity of the individual to whom Coleman's requests for information should be addressed. See MS Ex. 134 at 4, 7. Because the February 23 draft Confidentiality Agreement never was finalized or signed, it is not binding on Coleman — and certainly not on CPH, which is not identified as a party in the February 23 draft Confidentiality Agreement, or in the signed February 4 Confidentiality Agreement either. See Hinote v. Brigman, 33 So. 303, 305-06 (Fla. 1902) (where a "party neither had nor signified such an intention to close the contract until it was fully expressed in a written instrument and attested by signatures, then he will not be bound until the signatures are affixed"); see also Strong & Trowbridge Co. v. H. Baars & Co., 54 So. 92, 95 (Fla. 1910); 11 Fla. Jur. Contracts § 100 (2004).

The February 27 Merger Agreement — the only agreement into which CPH entered — contains no non-reliance provision. Quite the opposite: the agreement incorporates representations that the financials are accurate (CPH App. 95 (MS Ex. 93 at MS 7964, Article V); CPH App. 58 (MS 117)), that there have been no material adverse changes, and that Sunbeam has the duty to advise CPH of any material adverse changes (CPH App. 95 (MS Ex. 93 at MS 7969)):

> Advice of Changes. Upon obtaining knowledge of any such occurrence, Holdings or Laser [defined in the Recitals as Sunbeam] shall promptly advise the other party orally and in writing of (i) any representation or warranty made by it contained in this Agreement that is qualified as to materiality becoming untrue or inaccurate in any respect or any such representation or warranty that is not so qualified becoming untrue or inaccurate in any material respect, (ii) the failure by it to comply with or satisfy in any material respect any covenant, condition or agreement to be complied with or satisfied by it under this Agreement or (iii) any change or event . . . having [a] . . . Material Adverse Effect [defined at Page 3 of the Merger Agreement as a material adverse effect on the business, or results of operation or financial condition of Holdings and its subsidiaries, taken as a whole] . . . .

When the transaction was announced on March 2, Morgan Stanley assisted Sunbeam in crafting a positive message about Sunbeam's business to the public and CPH, to keep the turnaround illusion alive until after the closing. Specifically, Morgan Stanley worked with the public relations firm of Hill & Knowlton, to assure investors that Sunbeam's bullish revenue and earnings projections for 1998 and beyond would be achieved. CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 109-15); CPH App. 59 (CPH Ex. 140); CPH App. 60 (CPH Ex. 141): CPH App. 61 (CPH Ex. 142); CPH App. 62 (CPH Ex. 143).

G. Morgan Stanley Obtains More And More Confirmation Of The Sunbeam Fraud.

It is inconceivable that Morgan Stanley could have been involved in its due-diligence with Sunbeam since April 1997 and not have known at some early date that Sunbeam's turnaround story was an illusion. But whatever it may have known sooner, Morgan Stanley was put on written notice of Sunbeam's phony turnaround story by mid-March 1998, when it was advised by Sunbeam's own outside auditors that Sunbeam was on a disaster course and received devastating information from senior Sunbeam management showing that Sunbeam sales had collapsed in the first 2½ months of 1998.

On March 12, 1998, Sunbeam's auditors warned Morgan Stanley during an accounting due-diligence telephone conference that Sunbeam had engaged in aggressive revenue recognition practices in 1997. Morgan Stanley learned, among other things, that Sunbeam was conducting aggressive bill-and-hold transactions and that certain sales were made with a 100 percent right of return. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 104-06); CPH App. 64 (CPH Ex. 123); CPH App. 65 (CPH Ex. 31); CPH App. 66 (CPH Ex. 32). Morgan Stanley admits that these revenue recognition practices "raised clear red flags" regarding all of Sunbeam's revenue recognition decisions. CPH App. 68 (Amended Complaint ¶ 84).

Lawrence Bornstein, a senior audit manager for Sunbeam's outside accountants who participated in the telephone conference, testified that he was surprised Morgan Stanley never asked him the single most important question that should have been discussed on the call: How is Sunbeam doing? CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 183). It is clear that Morgan Stanley was hoping to avoid creating a record that it was on notice that the Sunbeam story was a fraud.

Sometime before March 19, Morgan Stanley and its attorneys had received written proof, in the form of a "comfort" letter prepared by Sunbeam's outside auditors, that Sunbeam's purported turnaround was a sham, that Sunbeam's projected 1998 performance promoted by Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley was unattainable, and that Sunbeam already was in the midst of a disastrous collapse in sales and earnings. CPH App. 69 (CPH Ex. 17 at MS 379); CPH App. 70 (CPH Ex. 24); CPH App. 71 (CPH Ex. 344); CPH App. 72 (Dean Dep. at 132-33). The letter warned Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's actual January and February 1998 net sales of $71 million were less than 25 percent of Wall Street's first quarter expectations of $285 to $295 million, and were just half of the $143.5 million in net sales Sunbeam had made in the first two months of 1997. The auditor's letter also disclosed that the primary reason for the collapse in Sunbeam's net sales was that Sunbeam had "accelerated" sales that would have been received in the first quarter of 1998 into the fourth quarter of 1997. CPH App. 69 (CPH Ex. 17 at MS 378). Morgan Stanley's attorneys have testified that the comfort letter would have been provided to Morgan Stanley, but would not have been made available to anyone else because comfort letters customarily are provided only to the underwriter (which Morgan Stanley was in this transaction). CPH App. 73 (Lurie Dep. at 172-73).

Also on March 18, during the debenture offering "road show" that was part of Morgan Stanley's effort to sell $2 billion face value in Sunbeam debentures to fund the acquisition, Ruth Porat of Morgan Stanley was advised by a senior Sunbeam executive that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance may be falling below Wall Street analyst expectations and Sunbeam's internal sales plan. CPH App. 20 (Tyree Dep. at 346-47); CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 264-66, 286-93, 298-302); CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 147).

With the comfort letter in its law firm's hands and with the "heads up" given to Porat earlier that day, Morgan Stanley principals, led by Strong and Porat, called "all hands" conferences on March 18, at which they confirmed with Sunbeam the truth of the comfort letter's description of Sunbeam's sales collapse — in fact learning that the situation was even worse — and discussed issuing a press release. CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 154-58); CPH App. 75, 20 (Tyree Dep. at 237-48, 359-71); CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 264-66, 286-93, 298-302); CPH App. 76 (CPH Ex. 16); CPH App. 72 (Dean Dep. at 132-33).

During these conferences, Morgan Stanley received a sales chart from Donald Uzzi, Sunbeam's Executive Vice President of Consumer Products, detailing the severity of the sales crisis and showing that matters were even worse than shown in the comfort letter. CPH App. 76 (CPH Ex. 16); CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 176-79). This document revealed that Sunbeam's average daily sales for the first 18 days in March were a mere $1.6 million, and that Sunbeam somehow needed to sell $151.8 million in products — an average of $13.8 million per day — simply to match 1997 first quarter sales. CPH App. 76 (CPH Ex. 16); CPH App. 75 (Tyree Dep. at 232-35). In order to reach analysts' estimates of $285 to $295 million in net sales, Sunbeam somehow needed to sell $183.4 to $193.4 million in products — an average of $16.7 to $17.5 million per day. Id. The Uzzi sales chart contains no indication of how Sunbeam could even hope to achieve $285 to $295 million in net sales. CPH App. 117 (Fogg Dep. at 112). The chart did purport to show how Sunbeam might barely match its 1997 net sales of $253.4 million, but to do so, Sunbeam had to obtain and close more than $125.5 million of "potential orders" or "forecasted" orders in 11 days. CPH App. 76 (CPH Ex. 16); CPH App. 117 (Fogg Dep. at 112-16). It thus became clear, as one of Morgan Stanley's lawyers admitted, that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales certainly would be lower than Wall Street analysts had expected. CPH App. 77 (Stack Dep. at 123, 147-48). Indeed, Porat feared Sunbeam might not meet analysts' estimates, yet she did not receive any assurance that Sunbeam had ever accomplished $180 million in sales in the last 11 days of any prior quarter. CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 184-85).

Morgan Stanley was now confronted with two documents showing that Sunbeam was only days from the close of the first quarter with disastrous sales and earnings. CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 156-69 (Bram Smith, an official at Morgan Stanley, confirming that he knew of the January-February 1998 sales shortfall and the reasons for it before the issuance of the March 19 press release)). Morgan Stanley faced a critical dilemma: continue the cover-up long enough to close the transaction and public debt offering and collect massive fees, or reveal the problems to CPH and the investing public, which at a minimum would delay the transaction, and risk losing all its fees.

H. The March 19 Press Release.

Despite knowing that the collapse of Sunbeam's first quarter was caused primarily by its acceleration of 1998 sales into 1997, and having no assurance that Sunbeam could find $185 million in "potential" net sales in the next 11 days, Morgan Stanley elected to help draft a false and misleading press release. CPH App. 137 (CPH Ex. 13); CPH App. 115 (Porat Dep. at 189-190). The press release, issued on March 19, 1998, represented to the public and CPH that Sunbeam might still achieve $285 to $295 million in net sales for the first quarter and that, in any event, sales were expected to exceed first quarter 1997 sales of $253.4 million. CPH App. 79 (CPH Ex. 14). Significantly, the press release gave no warning whatsoever that there was any possibility that Sunbeam might fall short of Wall Street expectations for its first quarter net earnings. Contrary to the statement in the auditor's comfort letter that the reason for the sales collapse was the acceleration of sales into the fourth quarter of 1997, the press release falsely blamed the shortfall from analysts' estimates, "if any," on retailer inventory management and order patterns, not Sunbeam's acceleration of sales into the fourth quarter of 1997 (CPH App. 79 (CPH Ex. 14)):

> Sunbeam Corporation (NYSE: SOC) said today that it is possible that its net sales for the first quarter of 1998 may be lower than the range of Wall Street analysts' estimates of $285 million to $295 million, but net sales are expected to exceed 1997 first quarter net sales of $253.4 million. The Company stressed that sales of its products at retail remains very strong. The shortfall from analysts' estimates, if any, would be due to changes in inventory management and order patters at certain of the Company's major retail customers. The Company further stated that based on the strength of its new product offerings and powerful brand names, it remains highly confident about the overall sales outlook for its products for the entire year.

See also CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 62-65); CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 187-190, 203); CPH 72 (Dean Dep. at 123-24, 132-33).

The March 19, 1998 press release contained at least 5 lies: 3 affirmative misrepresentations and 2 misstatements of omission. The misrepresentations: (1) it was "possible" Sunbeam might not achieve sales of $285 to $295 million — a misrepresentation because Sunbeam had no plan to achieve that level of sales and Morgan Stanley knew it; (2) Sunbeam would exceed 1997 first quarter net sales of $253.4 million — a misrepresentation because with 11 days to go, Sunbeam was more than $150 million short of that figure; and (3) the shortfall from analysts' estimates, "if any," would be caused by retailers' order patterns and those orders would come in later in the year — a misrepresentation because the actual reason, which Morgan Stanley knew, was that Sunbeam had "accelerated" those 1998 sales to make 1997 look better than it actually was. The misstatements of omission: (4) the actual sales numbers for January, February, and the first half of March were not included, leaving investors unable to see the complete collapse of Sunbeam's sales performance; and (5) most significant of all, nothing was said about earnings, creating the implication that Sunbeam was still on track to hit the earnings expectations of Wall Street analysts and creating the clear implication that Sunbeam would come very close to the $285 to $295 million in expected net sales. Morgan Stanley had certain knowledge that Sunbeam had experienced a substantial loss rather than expected profits, but allowed the press release to imply falsely that there was no cause for concern about earnings.

R. Bram Smith, one of the Morgan Stanley investment bankers who worked on the Sunbeam deal, was asked at his deposition whether he knew, based on the facts he was aware of at the time, that the press release was misleading. Incapable of responding, Mr. Smith answered with a "no comment" and abruptly left the room with counsel while the question was still pending (CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 183-84)):

> Q: Did you think the press release adequately disclosed the information that Morgan Stanley was aware of relating to Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance when you read it?

Over the objections of CPH's counsel, Mr. Smith then exited with Morgan Stanley's counsel, returned with counsel 10 minutes later, and offered a series of nonresponsive answers to CPH's questions (CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 184-85)):

Q: Are you prepared to answer my question, Mr. Smith?

THE WITNESS: Please repeat it.

(Record read.)

THE WITNESS: And what did I say before?

(Record read.)

A: So I said I had no opinion.

Q: Is it your testimony, sir, that you have no opinion concerning whether the March 19, 1998 press release fairly disclosed the information concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance that you personally were aware of?

A: Yes.

Q: The press release contains no statement whatsoever that Sunbeam sales in January and February were below to any extent the sales in January and February of 1997, correct?

A: Yup.

The March 19 press release was the product of a series of conference calls involving senior Morgan Stanley personnel and Sunbeam's outside law firm the previous day that had lasted late into the evening. CPH App. 71 (CPH Ex. 344); CPH App. 78 (CPH Ex. 384 at SASMF 19682). Indeed, Sunbeam's senior lawyer on the deal, Blaine Fogg, recorded 8.5 hours on March 18 solely to handling what he described as "The First Quarter Problem." CPH App. 78 (CPH Ex. 384 at SASMF 19682); CPH App. 118 (Fogg Dep. at 154). Morgan Stanley, Sunbeam, and their lawyers engaged in a "heated" discussion about "the level of detail" that should be included in the press release. CPH App. 72 (Dean Dep. at 123-24, 132). As more persons were brought into the circle about the revelations Morgan Stanley had received, it became clear, as one of Morgan Stanley's lawyers admitted, that Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales certainly would be lower than what Wall Street expected. CPH App. 77 (Stack Dep. at 123, 147-48). Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam were advised by another of Morgan Stanley's own lawyers that a forthright disclosure would be to include Sunbeam's actual sales figures for January and February 1998. That advice was "soundly rejected." CPH App. 72 (Dean Dep. at 132-33).

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

The participants in the discussion knew that Dunlap "was very concerned about doing anything that would throw a monkey wrench into this deal, and he thought the press release might do that." CPH App. 118 (Fogg Dep. at 315-16). It was understood that the more negative (and therefore candid) the press release, the greater the risk a disclosure would blow up the Coleman deal. CPH App. 118 (Fogg Dep. at 333). It was important to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam continue to hit its numbers with the pending debenture offering, and that a decline in Sunbeam's stock price meant that the debenture offering would become more expensive for the company. (CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 96, 216). Sunbeam's lawyer has acknowledged that if Morgan Stanley was not satisfied with the language in the press release, Morgan Stanley could simply have declined to price the debentures the next day. CPH App. 118 (Fogg Dep. at 344). Morgan Stanley was clearly in the driver's seat with respect to what was disclosed about Sunbeam's first quarter collapse. CPH App. 118 (Fogg Dep. at 344).

William Wright, the head of Morgan Stanley's execution team on the deal, testified that Morgan Stanley was obligated to seek input from the auditors to assess "the accuracy and completeness of the press release." CPH App. 80 (Wright Dep. at 92). But Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley never sought the views of Sunbeam's outside auditors, who did not know about the press release until after it was issued. In fact, the auditors could not believe they were not consulted — as they typically would be — for their view on the accuracy of a release involving financial issues such as this. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 62-64); CPH App. 81 (Pastrana Dep. at 93, 167); CPH App. 82 (Pruitt Dep. at 21).

Upon reading the March 19, 1998 press release, CPH representatives met to discuss its contents. CPH App. 50 (Shapiro Dep. 333-34). CPH representatives also conducted their own independent research following the issuance of the press release. William Nesbitt testified that he "canvassed the institutional research community" to see what "the response was to this release." CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 439).

Morgan Stanley suggests that the March 19 press release should have raised red flags. See MS Mem. 10. But Christopher Whelan, the employee in Morgan Stanley's credit department responsible for the Sunbeam loan, saw nothing in the press release that would raise red flags for him. CPH App. 113 (Whelan Dep. at 96-98). And neither did the analysts following Sunbeam, who reiterated their "buy" or "strong buy" ratings of the company. CPH App. 89 (CPH 1241513-14 ("we think the timing of the pricing of the convertible deal so close to the end of the quarter, coupled with orders now on the books prompted the company's press release")); CPH App. 90 (CPH 1039208 (the "cautious comment was driven by Sunbeam's legal staff" on the eve of pricing debentures)); CPH App. 91 (CPH 1059641 ("Continue to recommend purchase of SOC")). The price of Sunbeam stock following the issuance of the press release fell from $50 to $45.375, but CPH did not view that dip in price as a problem, because the price of Sunbeam stock still was well above the $41.75 price on the day CPH signed the Merger Agreement. CPH App. 127 (CPH Ex. 241); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 110). Analysts also believed that the decline in Sunbeam's stock price was "unwarranted," and an overreaction to the information contained in the press release. CPH App. 89 (CPH 1241513). Indeed, despite the press release, the debenture offering was increased from its initial target of $500 million to $750 million due to investor interest. CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 223-24); CPH App. 129 (Harris Dep. at 104); CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 130).

Morgan Stanley helped to disseminate the press release in the middle of a series of road show presentations it organized to attract investors for the debenture offering it was underwriting to raise the cash needed to close the transaction. During the road show presentation after the issuance of the press release, Morgan Stanley stood with Sunbeam as Sunbeam reassured investors and financial analysts that the lawyers made them issue the press release because of the debt offering, but that Sunbeam's "sales at retail are strong" and that Sunbeam was on track with its outlook for 1998. CPH App. 101 (CPH Ex. 75 at SB 18225). Morgan Stanley stood with Sunbeam as CPH and other investors were specifically reassured that the press release was no cause for alarm because Sunbeam was on track to meet expectations. CPH App. 97 (Drapkin Dep. at 126). Morgan Stanley stood with Sunbeam as Sunbeam reassured its investors that it issued the press release only because the lawyers insisted, not because of any problem with the business at Sunbeam. CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 358) (Dunlap was telling analysts that the press release was distributed "at the behest of the lawyers and that things were really okay")).

I. Sunbeam's Outside Auditor Cries Foul On March 19, 1998.

Morgan Stanley's efforts to conceal Sunbeam's first quarter collapse and the true reasons for it raised the ire of Lawrence Bornstein, one of Sunbeam's senior outside audit managers, who was stunned to hear that Sunbeam had issued a press release assuring the public that it would exceed first quarter 1997 sales of $253.4 million. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 65-66, 217). After reviewing the March 18 Uzzi sales chart, which included Sunbeam's results for the first two weeks of March, Bornstein felt that Sunbeam's statements in the March 19 press release were even more aggressive than he originally thought based on the sales results in January and February. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 85); CPH App. 105 (CPH Ex. 121).

On March 19, while Morgan Stanley was making final revisions to the debenture offering memorandum at the printer, Bornstein objected to the inclusion of the press release in the memorandum and confronted John Tyree of Morgan Stanley with his skepticism that Sunbeam could exceed first quarter 1997 sales of $253.4 million. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 75). Bornstein told Tyree: "I've done basic math, that they have done a million dollars in sales a day for the first 72 days and now they have to do — whatever it was, 12 to $15 million in sales for the next — . . . let's say 17 days, whatever the numbers were, and that I was very skeptical, that I remember saying to him that I don't think this company's turned around." Bornstein then warned Tyree: "You better hope to God that they do, because if not, you're all going to get sued." CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 81, emphasis added).

Bornstein also told Tyree at the printer that he was going to send auditors to Sunbeam's shipping docks at midnight on the last day of the quarter, towards the end of March 1998, to ensure that Sunbeam accurately accounted for sales. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 82); CPH App. 106 (CPH Ex. 118); CPH App. 107 (CPH Ex. 119). Bornstein was concerned that Sunbeam might record as first quarter sales products that were not shipped until after the first quarter had closed. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 10-17). Bornstein testified that this cut-off review was unusual and required a "huge amount of effort." CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 30).

Bornstein, understandably concerned that Morgan Stanley would not remember the confrontation accurately, memorialized his statements to Tyree in a March 31, 1998 memorandum to the file. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 94-96); CPH App. 102 (CPH Ex. 114). The time records of Adrian Dietz, a Sunbeam attorney who was at the printer that evening, corroborate Bornstein's account by confirming that the press release was discussed at the printer. CPH App. 78 (CPH Ex. 384 at SASMF 19679). So does the deposition testimony of Philip

013926

Harlow, another auditor of Sunbeam, who confirmed that there were "heated discussions" at the printer about the disclosures in the press release. CPH App. 121 (Harlow Dep. at 50-53). Tyree does not deny that Bornstein objected to including the press release in the offering memorandum, but claims that he does not recall any other detail of his conversation with Bornstein. CPH App. 75 (Tyree Dep. at 225-26). Mark Brockelman, Bornstein's assistant, reviewed Bornstein's March 31, 1998 memorandum in March or April 1998, and concluded that Bornstein's recollections were correct insofar as they related to events that Brockelman witnessed. Brockelman confirmed that Tyree was very upset with Bornstein and referred to Bornstein using derogatory terms outside his presence. CPH App. 109 (Brockelman Dep. at 41, 48-50).

Sunbeam's first quarter, historically determined on a 13-week basis, normally would have ended on March 29, but Sunbeam was so desperate to record sales in the first quarter of 1998 that it shifted to a calendar quarter to enable it to add two extra days of additional sales. By doing so, Sunbeam was able to include not only its own sales from March 30-31, but also Coleman sales from March 30-31, following the closing on CPH's sale of Coleman stock to Sunbeam — thereby inflating the numbers and obscuring the true picture of Sunbeam's performance. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 21-22).

J. The More Morgan Stanley Learns, The Less Morgan Stanley Says.

After the March 19 press release was issued, Morgan Stanley made final preparations to close the Coleman acquisition. Morgan Stanley's agenda for a bring-down due-diligence conference call, which was to be conducted just before the March 25 debenture closing, had included an inquiry into Sunbeam's "[t]op and bottom line outlook for first quarter, first half and the year." CPH App. 83 (CPH Ex. 33). On March 20 — the day after Bornstein confronted Tyree about the press release — the document was edited, Ruth Porat's name was added to the list of authors, and Morgan Stanley's planned inquiry into Sunbeam's second quarter was tellingly dropped from the agenda. CPH App. 84 (CPH Ex. 34). That inquiry remained deleted on the March 23 agenda. CPH App. 85 (CPH Ex. 35). No Morgan Stanley witness has been able to explain the deletion of this item from the agenda, although Sunbeam undoubtedly would attempt to address its first quarter disaster by stealing sales from the second quarter, a fact that Morgan Stanley chose to ignore. And at the same time, no Morgan Stanley witness can identify any specific step taken by Morgan Stanley to track Sunbeam's actual sales between March 19 and the deal closing. CPH App. 20 (Tyree Dep. at 530-31); CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 245-46); CPH App. 87 (Hart Dep. at 248); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 229-30). In light of Morgan Stanley's knowledge of the sales crisis, it is plain that Morgan Stanley consciously decided not to ask specific questions the answers to which it already knew, answers that would throw a further "monkey wrench" into an already ugly situation.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Meanwhile, a committee of senior Morgan Stanley officials met on March 20, 1998 to approve Morgan Stanley's providing a loan to Sunbeam necessary to complete the acquisition of CPH's Coleman stock. During the meeting, William Strong took primary responsibility for advocating that the underwriting — without which the Coleman transaction with CPH could not occur — should be approved. CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 101); CPH App. 87 (Hart Dep. at 224-25); CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76).

Strong's role at the Morgan Stanley committee meeting is very significant. When called upon to do so, Strong vouched for his client, Sunbeam, at that March 20, 1998 meeting. CPH App. 120 (Eltrich Dep. at 162-63). Strong had a vested personal interest in closing the deal. Just weeks earlier, Morgan Stanley management had told Strong that he needed to bring in $90 million or more in fees in 1998 — $20 million higher than the target Strong had hoped the firm would set for him. CPH App. 17 (CPH Ex. 374 at MS 85457, MS 854717). The Sunbeam deal would provide Strong with more than $40 million in fee credits. CPH App. 93 (CPH Ex. 146 at MS 80328). Strong, known by senior Morgan Stanley personnel to be "overly aggressive" and "highly focused on moneymaking opportunities, sometimes to a fault," advocated that the deal go forward despite his knowledge of Sunbeam's disastrous actual results, so that he could make his own personal numbers for fee generation. Morgan Stanley's senior managers, knowing of Strong's tendencies, voted the deal forward so that Morgan Stanley could make its $40-plus million fee. CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 203); see also CPH App. 93 (CPH Ex. 146 at MS 80328). Indeed, one member of that committee, Abdel-Meguid, had specifically criticized Strong's "less than straightforward approach." CPH App. 17 (CPH Ex. 374 at MS 85462).

013928

Bram Smith's handwritten notes on the presentation materials circulated for the March 20 finance committee meeting confirm that these high-level Morgan Stanley executives discussed both Sunbeam's sales crisis and the fees Morgan Stanley would receive if the transactions closed. CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 203-04). Smith's notes on the front page of the document indicate that the finance committee discussed Wall Street's estimates of $285 to $295 million in net sales, and the words "112.5 short" appear with "Don Uzzi — VP Sales" [sic] above and next to the Street estimates. CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76). A few pages later, Smith makes handwritten notations concerning Morgan Stanley's arrangement fee and net underwriting fees for the debenture offering. CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76 at MSC 25831). These Morgan Stanley senior executives, cognizant of the sales crisis and aware of Strong's reputation for aggressively pursuing fees and not being "completely up front," shirked another opportunity to communicate the truth to investors.

Instead, Morgan Stanley's senior management discussed how they could quickly transfer nearly the entire loan to other lenders to reduce Morgan Stanley's exposure. CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 211-12); see also CPH App. 128 (Rankin Dep. at 18-20 (Morgan Stanley subordinate of Bram Smith testifying that the expected timeframe for syndicating the loan was two to three months)). Morgan Stanley's plan was to transfer all but $50 million of the loan (or even more, if it was "lucky," according to Smith) to other lenders by the end of May 1998. CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep at 211-12).

On March 25, 1998, Sunbeam's outside auditors delivered yet another letter to Morgan Stanley with more bad news. The auditors reported that as of March 1, 1998, Sunbeam was experiencing a net loss of almost $11 million in the first quarter of 1998 (excluding one-time charges). That was significantly below Wall Street analysts' expectations, which had been lowered slightly in the wake of the March 19, 1998 press release, but still were expecting a profit ranging from $24 to $27 million (excluding one-time charges). CPH App. 88 (CPH Ex. 112); CPH App. 91 (CPH 1059641); CPH App. 111 (CPH 1393269). In order to meet those expectations, Sunbeam was required to reverse its $11 million loss and somehow realize $35 million or more in the remaining days of March — an absurd possibility.

Neither Morgan Stanley nor Sunbeam warned any investor in Sunbeam, including CPH, of these sales or earnings shortfalls. Indeed, the assurances that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley gave CPH caused no alarm at CPH or with Wall Street analysts, who reiterated their "buy" or "strong buy" ratings of Sunbeam. CPH App. 89 (CPH 1241513); CPH App. 90 (CPH 1039208); CPH App. 91 (CPH 1059641).

Also on March 25, which is the day the debenture offering closed, Morgan Stanley sat idly by as Sunbeam issued another press release announcing the successful closing of the debenture offering, a press release that included bullish statements about Sunbeam's condition while failing to make any statement concerning Sunbeam's sales or earnings collapse. CPH App. 92 (CPH Ex. 380); CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 273-76). Despite this knowledge, and despite having spent many late night hours in heated discussions concerning the contents of the March 19 press release, Morgan Stanley never followed up with Sunbeam to ensure that

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013930

Sunbeam had achieved the $125.5 million in "projected" and "forecasted" sales needed just to meet first quarter 1997 sales. CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 254-62); CPH App. 20 (Tyree Dep. at 530-31); CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 245-46); CPH App. 87 (Hart Dep. at 248); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 229-30). Morgan Stanley chose instead to close a massive, $2 billion face amount issuance of Sunbeam debt securities to the public and Sunbeam's purchase from CPH of its controlling interest in Coleman. By keeping silent, Morgan Stanley could and did reap its fees — which were projected to be in excess of $40 million. CPH App. 93 (CPH Ex. 146); see also CPH App. 94 (11/19/04 Morgan Stanley Written Response to Rule 1.310 Topics).

ARGUMENT

Morgan Stanley concedes that Florida law governs the procedure that this Court must follow in considering Morgan Stanley's motion. See MS Mem. 12. Summary judgment therefore is appropriate only when the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, admissions, and supporting affidavits demonstrate that no genuine issue of material fact exists and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. See Fla. R. Civ. P. 1.510. When a defendant in a tort action moves for summary judgment, it bears the burden of proving "conclusively" either that it is not liable for the tort of which it is accused or that the plaintiff is unable to prove the tort. See Holl, 191 So. 2d at 47-48; accord Khosrow Maleki, P.A. v. M.A. Hajianpour, M.D., P.A., 771 So. 2d 628, 630 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000). Before the nonmoving party is required to show the existence of a genuine issue of material fact, "it must first be determined that the movant has successfully met his burden of proving a negative, i.e., the non-existence of a genuine issue of material fact." See Holl, 191 So. 2d at 43; accord Daeda v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Florida, 698 So. 2d 617, 617 (Fla. 2d DCA 1999); *Christian v. As stated in 49 Fla. Jur. 2d, Summary Judgment and Judgment on the Pleadings, § 50, the movant's summary judgment burden is "heavy":

> [I]f the record reflects the existence of any genuine issue of material fact, or the possibility of any such issue, or if the record raises even the slightest doubt that such an issue might exist, summary judgment for the movant is improper. . . . Indeed, the burden on the movant is not simply to show that the facts support his or her theory of the case, but rather to demonstrate that the facts show that the party moved against cannot prevail, and until the movant does so it is not necessary for the nonmoving party to produce evidence to establish his or her case, as it would be at trial. Accordingly, where a defendant moves for summary judgment, since it is his or her burden to establish the absence of any genuine issue of material fact, the trial court improperly shifts the burden of proof by requiring the plaintiff to establish a prima facie case supporting his or her cause of action in order to avoid the summary judgment. . . . The burden on a party moving for summary judgment is greater than the burden which a plaintiff must carry at trial, since a plaintiff may prevail at trial on the basis of a mere preponderance of the evidence, whereas a party moving for summary judgment must show conclusively that no material issues remain for trial. The burden is satisfied only when the movant clearly establishes what the true factual picture is, and thereby removes any serious doubt as to the existence of any genuine issue of fact.

See also Visingardi v. Tirone, 193 So. 2d 601, 604 (Fla. 1967) ("the burden of a party moving for summary judgment is greater, not less, than that of the plaintiff at the trial. The plaintiff may prevail on the basis of a mere preponderance of the evidence. However, the party moving for summary judgment must show conclusively that no material issues remain for trial."); accord Board of Trustees of the Internal Improvement Trust Fund v. Florida Utils. Co., 599 So. 2d 1356, 1359 (Fla. 1st DCA 1992).

All inferences, moreover, are drawn in favor of the nonmoving party. See Hajianpour, 771 So. 2d at 630; Novotny v. Estate of Dantone, 848 So. 2d 398, 400 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003). Under these standards, which Morgan Stanley has ignored in its brief, Morgan Stanley has not come close to meeting its burden of demonstrating its entitlement to summary judgment.

I. Morgan Stanley's Summary Judgment Motion Should Be Denied At The Threshold Because It Is Based Entirely On The Erroneous Legal Assumption That The Moving Party Can Prevail On A Summary Judgment Motion Merely By Asserting That The Plaintiff Has No Evidence To Support Its Claims.

This Court should deny Morgan Stanley's motion in its entirety, without considering any of Morgan Stanley's arguments on the merits, because every one of those arguments is predicated on a summary judgment standard that is directly contrary to Florida law. Morgan Stanley's arguments all are based on the legal assumption that Morgan Stanley can prevail simply by pointing to essential elements of CPH's claims and asserting that CPH has no evidence to support them. See, e.g., MS Mem. 13 (arguing entitlement to summary judgment on CPH's negligent misrepresentation claim because "[t]here is no record evidence that CPH shared such a [special] relationship with Morgan Stanley in this transaction"); id. at 15 (making same argument based on the assertion that "CPH has not even alleged that it was in a 'special relationship of trust or confidence' with Morgan Stanley"; emphasis in original); id. at 18 (arguing entitlement to summary judgment on CPH's fraudulent misrepresentation claim because "CPH has not presented any evidence of justifiable reliance as a matter of law"); id. at 22 (making same argument based on assertion that "CPH has not presented any evidence of scienter or intent to defraud as a matter of law"); id. at 26 (arguing entitlement to summary judgment on CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim because "CPH has not presented any evidence that Morgan Stanley had actual knowledge that Sunbeam engaged in fraud"); id. at 30 (making same argument based on assertion that "CPH has not presented any evidence that Morgan Stanley provided substantial assistance to Sunbeam in effectuating its alleged fraud"); id. at 32 (arguing that "Morgan Stanley is entitled to summary judgment" on CPH's conspiracy claim "because CPH has no record evidence on actual agreement between Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam to defraud CPH") (emphasis in original).

013933

Morgan Stanley has the burden exactly backwards. The burden is on Morgan Stanley, not CPH, to show "conclusively that [it] is not guilty" of the torts it is accused of committing or to "show conclusively that [CPH] is unable to present requisite proof" of its charges against Morgan Stanley. See Holl, 191 So. 2d at 47-48. In assuming otherwise, Morgan Stanley is making the same mistake made in the Visingardi case by the defendant, who argued that summary judgment must be granted if the plaintiff fails to "come forward with sufficient, substantial, competent, evidentiary support for each and every fact which [it] must establish" and if the plaintiff fails "to show by expert testimony that defendant had departed from the requisite standard of care." See Visingardi, 193 So. 2d at 605. The Florida Supreme Court rejected defendant's argument, observing that "[b]oth passages [just quoted] correctly state the burden of the plaintiff at trial; both are inaccurate as to his burden as the party opposing a motion for summary judgment." Id. The Supreme Court concluded that "the burden of the party moving for summary judgment is greater, not less, than that of the plaintiff at the trial. The plaintiff may prevail on the basis of a mere preponderance of the evidence. However, the party moving for summary judgment must show conclusively that no material issues remain for trial." Id. at 604 (emphasis added); see also Green v. CSX Transp., Inc., 626 So. 2d 974, 975 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993) (confirming that Florida has not adopted the federal summary judgment standard, which is the one utilized by Morgan Stanley, under which the party seeking summary judgment need only identify the opposing party's failure to make a showing of an essential element on which the party would bear the burden of proof at trial); Five G's Car Sales, Inc. v. Florida Dep't of Law Enforcement, 581 So. 2d 212, 212 (Fla. 3d DCA 1991) (same).

In sum, because Morgan Stanley's summary judgment motion is predicated entirely on the erroneous assumption that CPH bears the initial burden of coming forward with evidence supporting essential elements of its claims, this Court need read no further: Summary judgment should be denied without any consideration of Morgan Stanley's individual arguments.

II. Morgan Stanley's Individual Attacks On CPH's Claims Are Insufficient To Warrant Summary Judgment In Morgan Stanley's Favor.

Morgan Stanley's arguments fail for the additional reason that they are contrary to the applicable law and the material facts. CPH's claims of negligent misrepresentation, fraudulent misrepresentation, aiding-and-abetting fraud, and conspiracy to commit fraud therefore should be allowed to proceed to trial.

A. CPH's Negligent Misrepresentation Claim Should Be Allowed To Proceed To Trial.

Morgan Stanley begins its attack on CPH's claims by contending that it is entitled to summary judgment on CPH's negligent misrepresentation claim because "[t]here is no record evidence that CPH shared a relationship with Morgan Stanley in this transaction," and because such a contention "would not pass the straight-face test," inasmuch as Morgan Stanley was sitting across the negotiating table from CPH. See MS Mem. 13, 15. Morgan Stanley's argument is baseless for three reasons: (1) Morgan Stanley has failed to establish as a matter of law the non-existence of a special relationship between the parties; (2) courts applying New York law almost uniformly consider the existence of a special relationship to present issues of fact that cannot be resolved on summary judgment; and (3) there is ample factual support for the existence of a special relationship in this case in any event.

1. Morgan Stanley Has Failed To Demonstrate Conclusively The Non-Existence Of A Special Relationship Between The Parties.

Although Morgan Stanley's argument assumes that CPH bears the burden of coming forward with record evidence of a special relationship (MS Mem. 13), as shown above, Morgan

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013935

Stanley actually is required to establish conclusively the non-existence of such a relationship. See, e.g., Holl, 191 So. 2d at 43 ("it must first be determined that the movant has successfully met his burden of proving a negative, i.e., the non-existence of a genuine issue of material fact," and "[h]e must prove this negative conclusively," before a plaintiff must come forward with proof of a genuine issue of material fact); see also Robinson v. Kalmanson, 882 So. 2d 1086, 1088 (Fla. 5th DCA 2004) (reversing grant of summary judgment on fraud claim because the movant "failed to demonstrate the non-existence of [the non-movant's] reliance").

Here, other than to present generalized arguments about CPH's so-called "sophistication" and about the fact that Morgan Stanley sat across the negotiating table from CPH, Morgan Stanley has not addressed the existence or non-existence of a special relationship between the parties. Morgan Stanley's generalized assertions fall far short of proving the negative — conclusively — that no special relationship existed between CPH and Morgan Stanley. That is reason enough to deny Morgan Stanley's motion. See City of Lake City, 62 So. 2d at 733 (summary judgment must be denied if the record "raises even the slightest doubt that an issue might exist").

2. The Question Of Whether A Special Relationship Exists Almost Invariably Involves Issues of Fact Precluding Summary Judgment.

New York courts almost uniformly consider the special relationship question to be one of fact that must be left for trial. See, e.g., AFA Protective Sys., Inc. v. American Tel. & Tel. Co., Inc., 442 N.E.2d 1268, 1269 (N.Y. 1982) (affirming denial of summary judgment on negligent misrepresentation claim because "the issue of whether a 'special relationship' exists sufficient to make out a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation should also be left to the finder of fact"); Gruber v. Victor, 1996 WL 492991, at *18 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) ("[C]ourts that have found, applying New York law, that no special relationship existed have typically done so, not at the pleading stage, but after trial, on the basis that plaintiffs have failed to carry their evidentiary burden."); Kimmell v. Schaefer, 675 N.E.2d 450, 454 (N.Y. 1996) ("Whether the nature and caliber of the relationship between the parties is such that the injured party's reliance on a negligent misrepresentation is justified generally raises an issue of fact"); Suez Equity Inv., L.P. v. Toronto-Dominion Bank, 250 F.3d 87, 104 (2d Cir. 2001) (denying motion to dismiss negligent misrepresentation claim brought under New York law because "a determination of whether a special relationship exists is essentially a factual inquiry"); Cewnick Fund v. Castle, 1993 WL 88243, at *10 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) (denying summary judgment on negligent misrepresentation claim brought under New York law because whether a special relationship exists is a "genuine issue of material fact"); DIMON Inc. v. Folium, Inc., 48 F. Supp. 2d 359, 373 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (special relationship inquiry under New York law is a matter "for case-by-case analysis").

The fact that CPH is a so-called sophisticated investor that sat across the negotiating table from Morgan Stanley makes no difference: The special relationship test remains a fact-bound inquiry that is not amenable to adjudication as a matter of law. See, e.g., Delta Holdings, Inc. v. National Distillers & Chem. Corp., 1988 WL 36330, at *9 (S.D.N.Y. 1988) ("While the complaint describes a commercial relationship, the Court cannot conclude that the relationship could not have been 'special' [as a matter of New York law]. This determination must await the development of all of the facts at trial."); In re Rickel & Assocs., Inc, 272 B.R. 74, 102-03 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 2002) ("a special relationship [under New York law] may be found in an arms-length commercial transaction"); DIMON Inc., 48 F. Supp. 2d at 373 (denying motion to dismiss negligent misrepresentation claim under New York law where buyer and seller engaged in lengthy negotiations prior to the acquisition); Polycast Technology Corp. v. Uniroyal, Inc., 792 F. Supp. 244, 269-70 (S.D.N.Y. 1992) (denying motion to dismiss negligent representation claim under New York law where buyer and seller had an extended negotiation period); Coolite

Corp. v. American Cyanamid Co., 52 A.D.2d 486, 488 (N.Y. App. Div. 1976) ("Although the distributorship agreement refers to the parties as vendor and seller, there is merit to the contention that a special relationship existed").

Thus, despite the fact that CPH is a so-called sophisticated party and that the parties were on opposite sides of the negotiating table, whether a special relationship existed between them inherently involves issues of fact that are not amenable to disposition as a matter of law.

3. The Record Contains Ample Evidence Of A Special Relationship Between The Parties.

There is ample evidence — all ignored by Morgan Stanley — of a special relationship between CPH and Morgan Stanley. New York courts generally require that the relationship between the parties have a closer degree of "confidence and trust" than an ordinary relationship between a buyer and seller. See Kimmell v. Schaefer, 675 N.E.2d 450, 454 (N.Y. 1996); see also American Protein Corp. v. AB Volvo, 844 F.2d 56, 63-64 (2d Cir. 1988) (applying New York law). Here, given Morgan Stanley's prior relationship with CPH and its continuing contacts with CPH throughout the transaction at issue, at a minimum there exists a jury question as to whether a special relationship existed between CPH and Morgan Stanley.

a. Morgan Stanley And CPH Had A Longstanding Prior Relationship.

Morgan Stanley's prior dealings with CPH created a relationship of trust and confidence that continued to exist at the time of the Sunbeam transaction. New York courts routinely consider the existence of a prior relationship as important to the special relationship inquiry. See, e.g., Gordon P. Getty Family Trust v. Peltz, 1998 WL 148425, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) (denying summary judgment on negligent misrepresentation claim under New York law where the parties in an arms-length transaction had prior relationship); Morse v. Swank, Inc., 459 F. Supp. 660, 668 (S.D.N.Y. 1978) (denying summary judgment on negligent misrepresentation claim under New York law as to one of several defendants in part because parties' prior relationship may support the "inference of an 'intimate relationship' that would invoke more rigorous obligations").

Morgan Stanley and CPH were far from strangers prior to the Sunbeam transaction; Morgan Stanley had been the investment banker for CPH's executives for years, having worked with the CPH executives on about two-dozen transactions dating back to 1985. CPH App. 32 (Perelman Dep. at 222); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 86); see also CPH App. 33 (Plaintiff's Responses and Objections to Morgan Stanley & Co. Inc.'s Fifth Set of Interrogatories, at 2-4 listing 23 transactions). Indeed, in early 1998, Morgan Stanley was using its prior relationship with CPH's executives in an effort to sell Gucci. CPH App. 32 (Perelman Dep. at 215-17).

Over almost two decades, the parties had developed a "very close" working relationship. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 352); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 86 (we had "very good relations with [Morgan Stanley]")). That was due in part to William Reid, a managing director at Morgan Stanley, who was CPH's "primary contact" at Morgan Stanley. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 352); see also CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 288 (describing Reid as CPH's "relationship banker at Morgan Stanley")); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 86). William Strong, the Morgan Stanley managing director who ran the Sunbeam engagement, admitted that he was aware that Reid had a relationship with CPH. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 180); accord CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 83).

In his capacity as CPH's Morgan Stanley contact, Reid frequently pitched business ideas to CPH. CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 115); CPH App. 32 (Perelman Dep. at 221); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 86). Perelman and Nesbitt, both of whom had worked with Reid personally, had developed a strong working relationship with him and held him in high regard. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 352 (Reid was "very smart," "very nice," and a "very good guy")); CPH

013939

App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 114 (Nesbitt knew Reid "quite well")).

Reid went on to play a key role in Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman. At a time when the transaction appeared to be dead, following the December 18, 1997 meeting between Dunlap and CPH representatives at which Dunlap stormed out (CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 350)), Morgan Stanley decided to use Reid to personally reach out to Perelman. After the December meeting, Reid spoke directly to Perelman in January 1998 to revive the negotiations. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 353); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 85). Reid advised Perelman that Sunbeam still was very interested in a transaction with Coleman. Perelman told Reid that Sunbeam and Coleman had not agreed on a price in earlier negotiations but Reid assured Perelman that "we can come together on price." CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 353-54). After that discussion with Reid, CPH representatives reopened talks with Sunbeam. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 354). Thereafter, Reid continued to facilitate general communications between Sunbeam and Coleman. CPH App. 40 (Duffy Dep. at 123).

Thus, Morgan Stanley's extensive prior dealings with CPH over the years — and especially the working relationship between Reid and CPH — created a relationship of "trust and confidence" between the two parties that existed prior to the Sunbeam transaction. See Gordon P. Getty Family Trust, 1998 WL 148425, at *8 (denying summary judgment on negligent misrepresentation claim under New York law, in case involving arms-length transaction, where parties had prior relationship).[2]

[2] In urging the contrary conclusion, Morgan Stanley relies heavily on the decision in WIT Holding Corp. v. Klein, 724 N.Y.S.2d 66 (N.Y. App. Div. 2001), insisting that this case is "similar" to WIT. See MS Mem. 16. In fact, there is no similarity. The court in WIT found that no special relationship existed because the parties were mere "business acquaintances" who had socialized on a number of occasions and who once had worked on the same project while they were at different brokerage firms. See 724 N.Y.S.2d at 68. Here, as shown above, Morgan Stanley had a sustained and longstanding business relationship prior to the time that Morgan Stanley approached CPH about the potential acquisition of Coleman.

b. Morgan Stanley Had Extensive Contacts With CPH During The Sunbeam Transaction.

Morgan Stanley had extensive contacts with CPH throughout the course of the Sunbeam transaction. New York courts often measure a special relationship by the extent of the contacts between the parties during the subject transaction. See, e.g., DIMON Inc., 48 F. Supp. 2d at 373 (denying motion to dismiss negligent misrepresentation claim where buyer and seller engaged in lengthy negotiations prior to the acquisition); Polycast Technology Corp., 792 F. Supp. at 244 (denying motion to dismiss negligent representation claim where buyer and seller had an extended negotiation period).

First, Morgan Stanley initiated contact with CPH. Shortly after Morgan Stanley began serving as Sunbeam's investment banker in April 1997, Morgan Stanley set out to find a way to help Sunbeam cash in on the inflated price of its stock. Morgan Stanley initially tried to search for buyers for Sunbeam, but when it could not identify a purchaser, Morgan Stanley recommended that Sunbeam consider acquiring other companies and use its stock as part of the consideration. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 94-97). Morgan Stanley soon identified Coleman as a potential acquisition candidate and contacted CPH representatives to discuss a potential acquisition. CPH App. 31 (Defendant's Answer ¶ 36).

Second, Morgan Stanley thereafter had repeated direct contacts with CPH representatives. In November 1997, Morgan Stanley gave a presentation to CPH representatives concerning a possible transaction involving the sale of Sunbeam, and Morgan Stanley had contacts with CPH representatives on December 11, 15, and 16 in advance of the meeting between Sunbeam and CPH executives at Perelman's Palm Beach home on December 18, 1997. CPH App. 39 (Maher Dep. 133, 144-45); CPH App. 123 at MSC 44558-59. And in January 1998, as discussed above, Morgan Stanley's Reid contacted Perelman and revived the acquisition talks. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 353-54).

FILED

After Reid revived the negotiations, Morgan Stanley and CPH participated in a series of meetings and discussions regarding the terms of the transaction and the condition of Sunbeam. For example, on January 23, 1998, January 29, 1998, and February 6, 1998, representatives of CPH met with representatives of Morgan Stanley to discuss a transaction involving Coleman and Sunbeam. CPH App. 123 (CPH Ex. 169); CPH App. 138 (CPH Ex. 379). And on February 3, 13, 16, and 19, 1998, representatives from Morgan Stanley and CPH participated in a series of conference calls regarding the terms of the transaction. CPH App. 123 (CPH Ex. 169); CPH App. 138 (CPH Ex. 379).

Further, on February 23, 1998, Morgan Stanley participated with Sunbeam in a face-to-face presentation to CPH representatives at Morgan Stanley's offices on the proposed transaction with Sunbeam. CPH App. 34 (Perelman Dep. at 367-69); CPH App. 7 (Levin Dep. at 182-87); CPH App. 30 (MS Ex. 75 at CPH 1401528-31). Morgan Stanley introduced Sunbeam's presentation and fielded questions from CPH representatives. CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 308-09). During the February 23 meeting, CPH also asked a number of questions about Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 earnings, and whether Sunbeam was on track to make its yearly earnings. CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 305, 316 ("there was a substantial amount of discussion about the first quarter")); CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 187 (questions were asked "related to how is [Sunbeam's] performance today, how is it going relative to analyst expectations . . . are you going to meet your numbers for the remainder of the year")). In response to these inquiries, Sunbeam management, with the imprimatur of Morgan Stanley, represented that "Sunbeam was going to make their numbers." CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 187); CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 306 ("Mr. Kersh in no uncertain terms said that not only was he going to make 'what the Street's forecast was,' but they were going to make their budget in the first quarter and for the year.")). Based on these representations, CPH representatives left the meeting having been told that business was "going very well." CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 190).

Third, Morgan Stanley prepared a document on which CPH relied. In its capacity as Sunbeam's investment banker, Morgan Stanley prepared an 85-page book with its logo on the cover and on every page, a hard copy of which was handed to CPH during the February 23, 1998 meeting. CPH App. 37 (CPH Ex. 238). The book promoted Sunbeam's supposed turnaround and projections for continued growth in sales and earnings in the near term and beyond. Thus, this is not a situation in which Morgan Stanley did not know that CPH would rely on Morgan Stanley, as Morgan Stanley had a prior relationship and had significant contacts with CPH throughout the Sunbeam transaction. A special relationship between the parties clearly could be found by the jury to exist in these circumstances. See, e.g., Credit Alliance Corp. v. Arthur Andersen & Co, 483 N.E.2d 110, 118 (N.Y. 1985) (a professional owes a duty of care to a party with whom it is not in privity if (1) the defendant was aware that its representation would be used for a particular purpose; (2) the defendant intended that a known party would rely thereon in furtherance of that purpose; and (3) there was some conduct on the part of the defendant linking it to that party, evincing the defendant's understanding of that party's reliance).[3] Id. At a minimum, because it cannot conceivably be concluded that the lack of a special relationship has been established beyond "the slightest doubt," summary judgment is inappropriate. See City of Lake City, 62 So. 2d at 733.

[3] Although the Credit Alliance rule developed in the context of accountant liability for negligently prepared reports, it has been applied in cases involving other professions. See, e.g., Ossining Union Free Sch. Dist. v. Andersen LaRocca Andersen, 539 N.E.2d 91, 95 (N.Y. 1989) (applying the requirement in a negligent misrepresentation claim against engineering consultants); Prudential Ins. Co. v. Dewey, Ballantine, Bushby, Palmer & Wood, 605 N.E.2d 318, 320-21 (N.Y. 1992) (applying the requirement in a negligent misrepresentation claim against attorneys).

B. CPH's Fraudulent Misrepresentation Claim Should Be Allowed To Proceed To Trial.

Morgan Stanley next attacks CPH's fraudulent misrepresentation claim, asserting an entitlement to summary judgment on that claim for two reasons: (1) "CPH has not presented any evidence of justifiable reliance as a matter of law;" and (2) "CPH has not presented any evidence of scienter or intent to defraud as a matter of law." See MS Mem. 17-25. Neither of these contentions has any merit.

1. A Triable Issue Of Fact Exists Concerning CPH's Justifiable Reliance.

Morgan Stanley contends that it is entitled to summary judgment on CPH's fraud claim because CPH cannot show that it exercised due-diligence in connection with the transaction at issue, and thus, "cannot remotely establish justifiable reliance on any allegedly fraudulent statements by Morgan Stanley regarding Sunbeam." See MS Mem. 18. Morgan Stanley's argument is baseless for multiple reasons.[4]

a. Morgan Stanley Has Failed To Carry Its Burden Of Establishing The Non-Existence Of CPH's Reliance.

In making its justifiable reliance argument, once again, Morgan Stanley ignores relevant summary judgment standards. Under those standards, it is Morgan Stanley's burden to establish the non-existence of CPH's reliance on Morgan Stanley, and it is Morgan Stanley's burden to do so conclusively. See Robinson, 882 So. 2d at 1088 (observing that "the moving party has the burden to prove conclusively the non-existence of any genuine issue of material fact" and holding that because the movant "failed to demonstrate the non-existence of [the non-movant's] reliance, we must reverse [the grant of summary judgment]"). Morgan Stanley has failed to acknowledge its burden and has failed to meet it — which is reason enough to reject its argument.

[4] This Court has concluded that there is a due-diligence requirement with respect to fraud claims under New York law — a conclusion with which CPH respectfully disagrees. See, e.g., Long Island Sav. Bank, F.S.B. v. Bigman, 1991 WL 144224, at *6 (E.D.N.Y. 1991) (the negligence of a plaintiff is no defense to intentional fraud); In re Adler, Coleman Clearing Corp., 247 B.R. 51, 123 (Bankr. S.D.N.Y. 1999). As is demonstrated below, however, Morgan Stanley is not entitled to summary judgment even assuming the existence of a due-diligence requirement.

b. Whether CPH Justifiably Relied On Morgan Stanley's Representations Is A Fact-Intensive Inquiry That Cannot Be Resolved On Summary Judgment.

Whether a party's reliance on an alleged misrepresentation is justified generally is a fact-bound inquiry that is inappropriate for adjudication as a matter of law. See, e.g., Schlaifer Nance & Co. v. Estate of Warhol, 119 F.3d 91, 98 (2d Cir. 1997) ("The question of what constitutes reasonable reliance is always nettlesome because it is so fact-intensive."); Doehla v. Wathne Limited, Inc., 1999 WL 566311, at *10 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) ("Whether or not reliance on alleged misrepresentations is reasonable in the context of a particular case is intensely fact-specific."); Country World, Inc. v. Imperial Frozen Foods Co., 589 N.Y.S.2d 81, 82 (N.Y. App. Div. 1992) ("In a fraud action, whether a party could have ascertained the facts with reasonable diligence so as to negate justifiable reliance is a factual question.") (citations omitted).

Similarly, determining whether the reliance of a "sophisticated" party is justified and determining the level of due-diligence that is required involve equally fact-intensive inquiries that are not subject to the type of bright-line rule advanced by Morgan Stanley. See JP Morgan Chase Bank v. Winnick, 2004 WL 1418197, at *10 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (New York law "takes a contextual view, focusing on the level of sophistication of the parties, the relationship between them, and the information available at the time of the operative decision."); see also Mallis v. Bankers Trust Co., 615 F.2d 68, 79-80 (2d Cir. 1980) (holding that jury instruction requiring sophisticated plaintiffs to establish due-diligence as a separate element of fraud claim was reversible error).

Just this year, a New York federal district court applying New York law denied a defendant's motion for summary judgment on a plaintiff's fraud claim, holding that it could not "say as a matter of law that the Banks' reliance was unreasonable (or unjustified) because a sophisticated lender could have protected itself by making reasonable inquiries." Winnick, 2004 WL 1418197, at *17. The court in Winnick held that although the party was sophisticated and had unfettered access to defendants' records and analyst reports, whether that party's reliance was justified was still "a factual question inappropriate for summary adjudication." Id.; see also Peltz v. Mountleigh Holdings, 1998 WL 148425, at *6 (S.D.N.Y. 1998) (refusing to grant summary judgment on fraud claim where a sophisticated party had limited time to verify defendant's representations before closing); Primavera Familienstifung v. Askin, 130 F. Supp. 2d 450, 500 (S.D.N.Y. 2001) ("while it is certainly relevant that the Investors were sophisticated, and this increases their burden at trial, it cannot be said as a matter of law that on this basis they cannot show justifiable reliance").

Thus, even taking CPH's sophistication into account, the issue of whether CPH conducted adequate due-diligence in this case calls for a factual inquiry that is plainly inappropriate for adjudication as a matter of law. See Nakano v. Jamie Sadock, Inc., 2000 WL 1010825, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. 2000) (holding that the adequacy of plaintiff's investigation to verify defendant's representation that it had "extensive experience" was an issue for the jury); Crigger v. Fahnestock & Co., 2003 WL 22170607, at *8 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) ("Whether plaintiffs engaged in enough due-diligence relative to their net worths and the resources potentially at their disposal to satisfy their burden is a question of fact for a jury to decide.").

c. CPH Conducted A Reasonable Investigation Into Sunbeam's Finances.

To the extent that a sophisticated party has a duty to conduct an investigation to claim justifiable reliance, the record plainly reveals that CPH conducted an appropriate review into Sunbeam's finances, contrary to Morgan Stanley's assertion. Beginning in December 1997,

013946

CPH prepared several financial analyses evaluating the consequences of a potential merger of Coleman and Sunbeam. See, e.g., CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 117); CPH App. 41 (MS Ex. 104); CPH App. 42 (MS Ex. 105); CPH App. 43 (MS Ex. 106); CPH App. 44 (MS Ex. 107). CSFB, Coleman's investment advisor, assembled a set of materials for Coleman's review — including Sunbeam's 10-Q for the period ending September 1997, Sunbeam's 1996 10-K, and various research reports. CPH App. 45 (MS Ex. 76). CSFB also prepared an analysis of Coleman's value. CPH App. 46 (CPH Ex. 236).

In early 1998, CPH made several inquiries of Sunbeam regarding Sunbeam's financial status since the end of the 1997 calendar year, and what Sunbeam's future "growth plan" looked like. CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 134). These inquiries were responded to in a series of due-diligence meetings held on February 23, 1998. CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 134); CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 366-68). CPH executives required these meetings to assure themselves that Sunbeam's business and financial plan appeared in line with analysts' expectations. CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 100-01).

On February 23, 1998, Morgan Stanley personnel and Sunbeam representatives held face-to-face discussions with representatives from CPH. At this meeting, CPH received hard copies of a presentation entitled "Sunbeam Corporation Discussion Materials," which had Morgan Stanley's logo on the cover and on each page, and a presentation entitled "Sunbeam's Long Range Strategic Plan." CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9); CPH App. 37 (CPH Ex. 238). CPH made several inquiries related to Sunbeam's financial margins, new products, international markets, and grilling business. CPH App. 7, 8 (Levin Dep. at 182-242, 252-55); CPH App. 50 (Shapiro Dep. at 285); CPH App. 51 (Page Dep. at 211).

At the February 23 meeting, CPH asked questions about Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 earnings and whether Sunbeam was still on track to make its yearly earnings. CPH App. 48

013547

(Maher Dep. at 305, 316 ("there was a substantial amount of discussion about the first quarter")); CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 187 (questions were asked "related to how is [Sunbeam's] performance today, how is it going relative to analyst expectations . . . are you going to meet your numbers for the remainder of the year")). In response to these direct inquiries, Sunbeam senior management — with the imprimatur of Morgan Stanley, which had been representing Sunbeam for months — represented that "Sunbeam was going to make their numbers." CPH App. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 187); see also CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 306 ("Mr. Kersh in no uncertain terms said that not only was he going to make 'what the Street's forecast was,' but they were going to make their budget in the first quarter and for the year.")); accord CPH App. 50 (Shapiro Dep. at 388). Based on these representations, CPH representatives left the meeting having been told that business was "going very well." CPH pp. 35 (Nesbitt Dep. at 190).[5]

CPH representatives continued to conduct due-diligence after the February 23, 1998 meeting — due-diligence that included discussions with Sunbeam on the "future operations" of the company, CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 351), and inquiries about outstanding litigation, environmental matters, and business operations. CPH App. 50 (Shapiro Dep. at 298-99). On February 24, CSFB met with Sunbeam senior management to discuss Sunbeam's strategic plan and 1997 results. CPH App. 125 (MS Ex. 230). And on February 25 and 27, CSFB made presentations to the Coleman Board of Directors. CPH App. 53 (CPH Ex. 239); CPH App. 54 (MS Ex. 112); CPH App. 55 (MS Ex. 88); CPH App. 56 (MS Ex. 113). CPH representatives also reviewed the fairness opinion that CSFB issued on February 27. CPH App. 57 (MS Ex. 120). CSFB, based on all of the information it had obtained, advised the Coleman Board that, in its opinion, Sunbeam's shares were being priced fairly by the market. CPH App. 57 (MS

Ex. 120). Nesbitt later attended the New York debenture road show to monitor Sunbeam's business and financial condition in March. CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 425-29, 483-85).

Upon receipt of the March 19, 1998 press release, see CPH App. 79 (CPH Ex. 14), CPH representatives reviewed the release and discussed its contents. CPH App. 50 (Shapiro Dep. 333-34). CPH representatives further conducted their own independent research following the press release. William Nesbitt testified that he "canvassed the institutional research community" to see what "the response was to this release." CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 433).

CPH was hardly alone in not being disturbed with the press release. The purchasers of the $750 million in debentures used to fund the transaction obviously were not upset and neither were the analysts following Sunbeam. The analysts reiterated their "buy" or "strong buy" ratings of the company. CPH App. 89 (CPH 1241513); CPH App. 90 (CPH 1039208); CPH App. 91 (CPH 105964). And Morgan Stanley's own representative from its credit department saw no cause for concern in the March 19 press release. CPH App. (Whelan Dep. at 96-98).

Based on the above facts, it cannot possibly be concluded as a matter of law that CPH failed to conduct a reasonable inquiry into Sunbeam's financial status, including its first quarter earnings for 1998. That there might have been other measures that CPH supposedly could have taken to ferret out the fact that the press release issued on the eve of the $2 billion face value debenture offering was a "bold face" lie (CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 376)) does not change that result, despite CPH's sophistication, as is illustrated by the decision in Nakano v. Jamie Sadock, Inc., 2000 WL 1010825 (S.D.N.Y. 2000). In that case, even though the defendant moving for summary judgment had proposed several measures that a sophisticated party "could and should have taken — but failed to take" to verify the representation, the court nevertheless refused to grant summary judgment, where plaintiffs had offered evidence that they had made "affirmative efforts to protect themselves from misrepresentations." Id. at *2-3. Similarly, in

013949

Crigger v. Fahnestock & Co., Inc., 2003 WL 22170607 (S.D.N.Y. 2003), the court refused to hold that investors' reliance was unjustified as a matter of law where it was undisputed that the investors had "engage[d] in some investigation," including computer research, making inquiries, and demanding certain documents. Id. at *8. The same result is required here.

d. CPH Did Not Have A Duty To Inquire Into Or Discover Material Adverse Changes.

Another reason why issues of fact remain concerning the adequacy of CPH's investigation is that CPH had taken prudent steps to protect itself from material adverse changes at Sunbeam. The Merger Agreement contained an express provision making Sunbeam responsible for advising CPH of material adverse changes (CPH App. 95 (MS Ex. 93 at MS 7969)):

> Advice of Changes. Upon obtaining knowledge of any such occurrence, Holdings or Laser [defined in the Recitals as Sunbeam] shall promptly advise the other party orally and in writing of (i) any representation or warranty made by it contained in this Agreement that is qualified as to materiality becoming untrue or inaccurate in any respect or any such representation or warranty that is not so qualified becoming untrue or inaccurate in any material respect, (ii) the failure by it to comply with or satisfy in any material respect any covenant, condition or agreement to be complied with or satisfied by it under this Agreement or (iii) any change or event . . . having [a] . . . Material Adverse Effect [defined at Page 3 of the Merger Agreement as a material adverse effect on the business, or results of operation or financial condition of Holdings and its subsidiaries, taken as a whole] . . . .

This provision further precludes an adjudication as a matter of law of the factual issues surrounding CPH's justifiable reliance — including the level of diligence that was due. See. e.g., Household Commercial Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Schottenstein, 1991 WL 111206, at *1 (N.D. Ill. 1991) (question of justifiable reliance was for the jury where plaintiff had conducted an independent investigation of defendant's financial condition and had "insisted on a 'no material adverse change' provision in the loan agreement").

e. The Fact That CPH's Reliance Was Justified Is Confirmed By The Testimony Of Morgan Stanley's Senior Executives.

CPH was justified in relying on Morgan Stanley's vouching for Sunbeam, as the deposition testimony of two senior executives of Morgan Stanley confirms. Joseph Perella, currently the Vice-Chairman of Morgan Stanley and a senior executive who evaluated Strong in the relevant time period, testified that Morgan Stanley expects and understands that institutional investors "believe that if we put our name on an underwriting, that we've done due diligence at a very high standard, and that we work for quality companies" (CPH App. 114 (Perella Dep. at 125-26)):

> Q: Do you — do you agree, sir, that if Morgan Stanley has its name on a deal, investors will assume it's something of quality?
> MR. YANNUCCI: Object to the relevance.
> A: I think that our firm has very high standards. We have a motto here, first class business in a first class way. We have a tremendous system of checks and balances, a process that people have to go through to vet things, to get things done. For example, in the — in the case of the — let's say the bubble, the Internet, Mary was always of the opinion that 90 percent of the companies were going to fail, that you'd only remember who was number one or two, and you'd forget all the rest of the companies. Because she was the leading analyst, everyone wanted her imprimatur. And so I think consistent with, you know, the standards of the firm, we tried to pick firms to work for that we thought were winners in that particular era. Secondly, institutional investors I think believe that we have higher standards or let's say the highest standards on Wall Street, and I think they believe that if we — they believe that if we put our name on an underwriting, that we've done due diligence at a very high standard, and that we work for quality companies. I think — and you heard me make the statement 500,000 e-mails later no one has been asked to leave our firm from the research department or the investment banking division. In all of the scandals that have rocked Wall Street, and Elliot Spitzer's investigation for the last I don't know how many years, 500,000 e-mails later our name is not on Adelphia, it's not on Enron, it's not on WorldCom, it's not on Global Crossing, okay? So they're — all those, Tyco, Quest. And that I think has a lot to do with the fact that a lot of these companies that were at least 50 percent of business model, and the rest, Omnicom, have passed a very rigorous test to get through the Morgan Stanley system, and when people know you have that kind of rigorous test, a lot of times they don't even have [sic] ask you to even go through it; they go somewhere else. And it wasn't because we couldn't have done business with these companies. We wanted to. So, you know, you ask me about what Schlock, Inc. means. It's — it's — it's something we don't like to be associated with. We like to be associated with first class companies and do business in a first class way, and try every day to — to live to that standard.

Ruth Porat, another senior executive of Morgan Stanley, concurred with a statement attributed to Perella in a magazine article to the effect that investors are entitled to assume that a company is not a "schlock" company if Morgan Stanley puts its name on the underwriting. (CPH App. 115 (Porat Dep. at 297-98)):

Q: I'll read a couple of sentences to you, ma'am. It reads, quote, "Morgan Stanley could have made more money by being less selective, but Meeker and her colleagues say that big-money investors tend to rely on the firm's seal of approval." Quote, "If Morgan Stanley has its name on it, investors assume it's better than Schlock Incorporated," close quote, "Joe Perella, the head of Morgan's Corporate Finance Department, mused." Do you see that statement?

A: I do.

Q: Do you agree with Mr. — the quote attributed to Mr. Perella?

MR. CLARE: I object to the form of the question.

A: I agree that if Morgan Stanley has its name on it, investors assume it's better than Schlock Incorporated.

Q: That's your personal feeling, correct?

A: Yes.

See also CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 19-21).

In light of the deposition testimony of Morgan Stanley's own senior executives, Morgan Stanley is in no position to argue that CPH's reliance was unjustified, let alone that it was unjustified as a matter of law.

f. CPH's Expert Further Explains Why CPH's Reliance Was Reasonable.

CPH's expert, William N. Horton, confirmed the reasonableness of CPH's reliance upon Morgan Stanley. CPH App. 131. In his report, Horton concludes that Coleman acted in a reasonable and customary manner in relying upon Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley's public and private disclosures and Morgan Stanley's obligations to notify them of any material adverse change in Sunbeam's business prior to closing on the merger. CPH App. 131 (Horton Report at 7-19). Horton's expert opinion confirms further that summary judgment is inappropriate.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013952

g. The Fraud Was Peculiarly Within The Knowledge Of Morgan Stanley.

Even if CPH's investigation of Sunbeam were somehow deemed inadequate, under New York law a plaintiff is not precluded from claiming justifiable reliance when a representation relates to matters "peculiarly within the defendant's knowledge." Mallis, 615 F.2d at 80; Schumaker v. Mather, 30 N.E. 755, 757 (N.Y. 1892); Danann Realty Corp. v. Harris, 5 N.Y.2d 317, 322 (N.Y. 1959); Winnick, 2000 WL 1418197, at *14. Here, Morgan Stanley undoubtedly had knowledge of Sunbeam's financial health throughout the duration of the transaction that was not shared with CPH. Beginning in April 1997, Morgan Stanley conducted extensive due-diligence on Sunbeam, sending more than a dozen representatives to Sunbeam's headquarters to study every facet of the business. CPH App. 19 (CPH Ex. 37); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 91); CPH App. 20 (Tyree Dep. at 575-81); CPH App. 21 (CPH Ex. 84); CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 16-19); CPH App. 22 (CPH Ex. 172); CPH App. 23 (Rafii Dep. at 106-08); CPH App. 24 (CPH Ex. 173); CPH App. 25 (CPH Ex. 221); CPH App. 26 (Yoo Dep. at 83-88); CPH App. 27 (CPH Ex. 245). During that time, Strong personally spoke with Dunlap and/or Kersh in Florida between 50 and 100 times. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 53-54).

On March 12, 1998, just one week before the issuance of the March 19 press release, Morgan Stanley received a warning from Sunbeam's auditors that Sunbeam had engaged in aggressive revenue recognition practices, with a robust bill-and-hold strategy and many sales that included a 100% right of return. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 104-06); CPH App. 64 (CPH Ex. 123). On March 18, Morgan Stanley and its attorneys received a letter from Sunbeam's outside auditors precisely detailing Sunbeam's massive sales shortfall in the first quarter of 1998 and the primary cause. The letter, which disclosed facts diametrically opposed to the beliefs of the financial community concerning Sunbeam, proved false all the representations made at the February 23, 1998 face-to-face meeting, all the representations made in the written presentations Morgan Stanley had given to CPH, and all the representations made at other meetings about Sunbeam's turnaround and projected growth. CPH App. 70 (CPH Ex. 24); CPH App. 69 (CPH Ex. 17); CPH App. 71 (CPH Ex. 344). Morgan Stanley admits it received a signed copy of the letter no later than March 19, 1998. CPH App. 68 (Amended Complaint ¶ 97). Morgan Stanley also had in its possession Mr. Uzzi's sales chart showing Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam had only $101.6 million in net sales as of March 18, 1998. CPH App. 76 (CPH Ex. 16). On March 25, days before the Coleman transaction closed, Arthur Andersen sent Morgan Stanley a "bring down" comfort letter revealing that Sunbeam's situation had deteriorated even further. Morgan Stanley now knew that Sunbeam was experiencing a net loss of $11 million in the first quarter of 1998, excluding one-time charges, when Wall Street was expecting Sunbeam to achieve profits of close to $30 million in the first quarter. CPH App. 88 (CPH Ex. 112 at CPH 129615); CPH App. 72 (Dean Dep. at 177); CPH App. 73 (Lurie Dep. at 170-72).[6]

Moreover, as the underwriter on the Sunbeam deal, Morgan Stanley inherently had special access to information about Sunbeam, and CPH took comfort in the fact that Morgan Stanley was underwriting the transaction and would receive a comfort letter. CPH App. 48 (Maher Dep. at 373-74). The underwriter's special access, and the public's right to rely on the underwriter, was recently reemphasized by the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York in the December 15, 2004 decision in In re Worldcom, Inc. Securities Litigation (CPH App. 112 (Decision at 121-22, emphasis added)):

[6] One of Morgan Stanley's attorneys at Davis Polk stated that, as a matter of general practice, comfort letters would not be shared with anyone other than the underwriter (which Morgan Stanley was) on the transaction. CPH App. 73 (Lurie Dep. at 172-73).

> Underwriters perform a different function from auditors. They have special access to information about an issuer at a critical time in the issuer's corporate life, at a time it is seeking to raise capital. The public relies on the underwriter to obtain and verify relevant information and then make sure that essential facts are disclosed. Acting with the degree of diligence that applies to a prudent man when managing his own property, underwriters should ask those questions and seek those answers that are appropriate in the circumstances. They are not being asked to duplicate the work of auditors, but to conduct a reasonable investigation. If their initial investigation leads them to question the accuracy of financial reporting, then the existence of an audit or a comfort letter will not excuse the failure to follow through with a subsequent investigation of the matter. If red flags arise from a reasonable investigation, underwriters will have to make sufficient inquiry to satisfy themselves as to the accuracy of the financial statements, and if unsatisfied, they must demand disclosure, withdraw from the underwriting process, or bear the risk of liability.

Thus, Morgan Stanley had a wealth of information about Sunbeam's true financial condition that was not available to CPH. That is yet another reason to reject Morgan Stanley's argument.

h. Morgan Stanley's Additional Arguments Also Lack Merit.

Morgan Stanley raises several additional contentions concerning its supposed entitlement to summary judgment on the justifiable reliance issue, but none of those arguments withstands scrutiny.

First, Morgan Stanley argues that CPH's reliance was unjustified as a matter of law because CPH did not exercise its contractual right to inspect Sunbeam's financial records. See MS Mem. 19. Morgan Stanley's assertion lacks merit. Although the level of a plaintiff's access to particular records is relevant to a justifiable reliance inquiry, an unexercised right to inspect records alone does not render reliance unjustified. Winnick, 2004 WL 1418197, at *14. The Winnick court expressly rejected a defendant's argument that justifiable reliance was "impossible" where a sophisticated plaintiff had "bargained for the right to examine . . . books and records but failed to exercise that right." Id. Dismissing that argument, the court held that "there is no such bright line rule, even where sophisticated entities are concerned." Id.

013955

Under Morgan Stanley's reasoning, whenever "a party bargains for a right which, if exercised, might provide the means to discover a concealed falsehood, it must exercise that right in every instance or risk extinguishing its remedies." Id. As the Winnick court found, however, such a rule would be "unrealistic." Id. And not surprisingly, such a rule has not been adopted by courts applying New York law. See, e.g, DIMON Inc., 48 F. Supp. 2d at 369, 372 (denying motion to dismiss plaintiff's fraud claim despite plaintiff's complete access to defendant's records and "theoretical discoverability" of the alleged fraud because of the "difficulty of conducting a sufficiently intensive review" to uncover the fraud); Alexander v. Evans, 1993 WL 427409, at *17 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) (refusing to grant summary judgment on plaintiff's fraud claim because "the reliance requirement was not designed to shield perpetrators of fraud by forcing investors to conduct exhaustive research every time they invest money, lest the seller be manipulative or deceptive").

Accordingly, a right to inspect the books is a right that routinely remains unexercised in a transaction involving two public companies, such as the transaction at issue in this case. As Sunbeam was a public company, analysts at CSFB reviewed publicly available information on Sunbeam, including SEC filings and analyst reports. See, e.g., CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 131); CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 276-78); CPH App. 49 (Geller Dep. at 31); CPH App. 40 (Duffy Dep. at 32). But as Paul Shapiro testified, "[i]t was never contemplated that we would, for example, go in and do an audit. . . . [I]t would have been simply impossible. This was not like buying a small company that wasn't public. We didn't treat it as such." CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 132). In fact, neither party exercised its right to review the other's books "as opposed to what [was] publicly reported." CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 132-33). Shapiro further testified that "we would never have asked for that kind of access, nor do I believe the other side asked for it of us." CPH App. 47 (Shapiro Dep. at 132).

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013956

That the right to inspect records plainly is not dispositive is confirmed by the testimony of Christopher Whelan, the employee from Morgan Stanley's credit department responsible for the Sunbeam loan. At his deposition, when asked about what due-diligence he performed, Whelan testified that he relied on basically the same type of information on which CPH relied without performing anything like the internal audit that Morgan Stanley contends was necessary (CPH App. 113 (Whelan Dep. at 60)):

> Q: In connection with your credit due diligence with respect to Sunbeam, what sources of information did you utilize?
> A: We relied on the public filings of Sunbeam and the financial statements of the companies that they were acquiring. We relied on information provided to us by Sunbeam management and also management of the target companies. And I don't recall specifics; however, in a situation like this, I probably used some fixed income research reports on some other consumer products companies that we researched — reports, rating agency reports. That is probably it.

In light of Whelan's testimony, Morgan Stanley is in no position to challenge the due-diligence inquiry of CPH.

Second, Morgan Stanley exaggerates the standard that New York employs for determining whether a party is required to inquire into the veracity of a representation. See MS Mem. 18-20. New York courts do not impose a duty to inquire as a matter of law when a plaintiff first hears the slightest hint of falsehood, but only when that plaintiff has been "placed on guard or practically faced with the facts." Keywell Corp. v. Weinstein, 33 F.3d 159, 164 (2d Cir. 1994).

The cases cited by Morgan Stanley generally are not to the contrary and uniformly are distinguishable in material respects. See, e.g., Schlaifer Nance & Co., 119 F.3d at 98 (sophisticated party's reliance on representation that seller had exclusive control over all Warhol pieces was unjustified as a matter of law where the language of the agreement explicitly contradicted this representation, and the notes of plaintiffs' own attorneys and plaintiffs' own testimony revealed that plaintiff was on notice); Abrahami v. UPC Constr. Co., Inc., 638 N.Y.S.2d 11, 14 (N.Y. App. 1996) (investors' reliance on company's representations that it had "excellent business prospects" was unjustified as a matter of law where plaintiff conducted no investigation after receiving notice that company had reported a sum of only "$54 of cash on hand"); UST Private Equity Inv. Fund, Inc. v. Salomon Smith Barney, 733 N.Y.S.2d 385, 386-87 (N.Y. App. Div. 2001) (plaintiffs could not establish reliance where (1) they had not alleged "that defendants' access to the relevant information was superior" to plaintiffs' or "that defendants otherwise knew, or recklessly disregarded the likelihood, that [the corporation] was concealing material information from plaintiffs," and (2) the president of one of the institutional plaintiffs conducted a due-diligence inquiry, and during that inquiry, obtained a document referring to the very documents that would have alerted plaintiffs to the conditions that they claim were misrepresented); Rotterdam Ventures, Inc. v. Ernst & Young LLP, 752 N.Y.S.2d 746, 748-49 (N.Y. App. Div. 2002) (affirming dismissal of fraud complaint because "plaintiffs [had] not alleged any facts suggesting that defendant was aware of the alleged problems associated with the foregoing transactions" and because one of the plaintiffs was a member of the board of directors of the corporation whose financial condition was misrepresented and therefore had the capacity to determine the corporation's financial viability); Giannacopoulos v. Credit Suisse, 37 F. Supp. 2d 626, 632 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (plaintiff failed to show reliance where plaintiff had access to information that would have exposed the fraud; under federal summary judgment standards, the plaintiff-nonmovant had the burden "to produce concrete evidence sufficient to establish a genuine unresolved material issue of material fact").

013957

Third, Morgan Stanley contends that CPH disclaimed reliance on any misrepresentation by Morgan Stanley in provisions of several Confidentiality and Merger Agreements. See MS Mem. 21. At the threshold, despite Morgan Stanley's suggestions to the contrary, the

013558

February 27 Merger Agreement with Sunbeam is the only agreement into which CPH entered. Morgan Stanley repeatedly refers (e.g., MS Mem. 6-7, 21) to two Confidentiality Agreements dated February 4 and 23, 1998, agreements that contain provisions stating that no reliance is being placed on evaluation materials that are being supplied under the agreements, but Morgan Stanley ignores that CPH is not a party to either agreement — Coleman, not CPH, is a party. See MS Ex. 133, MS Ex. 134 (both exhibits are included in Morgan Stanley's Appendix of documents). Moreover, with regard to the February 23 Confidentiality Agreement, it is of no force and effect even as to Coleman because Coleman never signed the document and thus never became bound by it. See MS Ex. 134 at 7 (showing a blank signature line under the words "Confirmed and agreed to").

Indeed, the draft of the February 23 Confidentiality Agreement that Morgan Stanley has produced was not even signed by Sunbeam, nor had Sunbeam filled in the identity of the individual to whom Coleman's requests for information should be addressed. See MS Ex. 134 at 4, 7. Because the February 23 draft Confidentiality Agreement never was finalized or signed, it is not binding on Coleman — and certainly not on CPH, which is not identified as a party in the February 23 draft Confidentiality Agreement, or in the signed February 4 Confidentiality Agreement either. See Hinote v. Brigman, 33 So. 303, 305-06 (Fla. 1902) (where a "party neither had nor signified such an intention to close the contract until it was fully expressed in a written instrument and attested by signatures, then he will not be bound until the signatures are affixed"); see also Strong & Trowbridge Co. v. H. Baars & Co., 54 So. 92, 95 (Fla. 1910); 11 Fla. Jur. Contracts § 100 (2004).

With respect to the February 27 Merger Agreement — the only agreement into which CPH entered — the provision cited by Morgan Stanley (MS Mem. 21) in that agreement states as follows (CPH App. 95 (MS Ex. 93 at 7981)):

> Entire Agreement. This Agreement (including all Schedules and Exhibits) contains the entire agreement among the parties hereto with respect to the subject matter hereof and supersedes all prior agreements and understandings, oral or written, with respect to such matters, except for the Confidentiality Agreements which will remain in full force and effect for the term provided for therein.

Morgan Stanley's contention that CPH disclaimed reliance on Morgan Stanley's fraudulent statements through this integration clause is baseless for several reasons.

A threshold problem with Morgan Stanley's invocation of the integration clause in the Merger Agreement is that Morgan Stanley is not a party to the February 27 Merger Agreement. The parties are Sunbeam, CPH, Laser Acquisition Corp., and CLN Holdings Inc. CPH App. 95 (MS Ex. 93). That is fatal because a person or entity that is not a party to a contract cannot invoke the clauses that it contains in order to escape liability for fraud. See Cohan v. Sicular, 625 N.Y.S.2d 278, 280 (N.Y. App. Div. 1995) (in refusing to dismiss fraud claim against brokers, court rejected brokers' invocation of integration clause in contract "since they were not parties to the real estate contract"); Diodato v. Eastchester Dev. Corp., 489 N.Y.S.2d 293, 294 (N.Y. App. Div. 1985) ("the purported disclaimer would not inure to the benefit of defendant . . . as he was not a party to the contract").

Morgan Stanley's reliance argument also does not withstand scrutiny because, on its face, the integration clause at issue merely says that there is no other agreement between the parties other than what they have put down in writing in their contract. The law is settled that such clauses do not immunize even the parties to the contract (which, again, Morgan Stanley was not) from claims of fraud or fraud in the inducement. See, e.g., Mfrs. Hanover Trust Co. v. Yanakas, 7 F.3d 310, 315 (2d Cir. 1993) (under New York law, "a general merger clause is ineffective, however, to preclude parol evidence that a party was induced to enter into the contract by means of fraud"); 60A N.Y. Jur. 2d, Fraud and Deceit § 227 (2001) ("It is well established that a general or 'boiler plate' merger clause in a written contract is ineffective to preclude judicial inquiry into specific allegations of fraud").

Morgan Stanley's attempt to find refuge in the integration clause is unavailing for the additional reason that a party cannot enter into a contract that would relieve it of the consequences of its fraud. See Pearce v. Knepper, 53 N.Y.S.2d 845, 846 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1945) ("no contract could ever be entered into which would relieve a party thereto from the consequences of his fraud or bad faith"); see also AES Corp. v. Dow Chem. Co., 325 F.3d 174, 179 (3d Cir. 2003) (under federal law, a nonreliance clause can never bar a Rule 10b-5 claim as a matter of law). Further, Morgan Stanley cannot escape responsibility for its fraud because the integration clause predates many of the misrepresentations for which Morgan Stanley is responsible. Specifically, the Merger Agreement is dated February 27, 1998, but the evidence shows that Morgan Stanley's fraudulent conduct continued long past that date.

And finally, the existence of a contractual disclaimer is not dispositive, but is merely part of the overall mix of facts to consider in determining what diligence is due. See, e.g., DIMON Inc., 48 F. Supp. 2d at 369 ("the fundamental question is whether the difficulty of conducting a sufficiently intensive review, given the information otherwise available, was so great that reliance upon the defendants' representations was reasonable notwithstanding the disclaimer").

In sum, for numerous reasons, CPH's reliance cannot be held as a matter of law to have been unjustified.

2. A Triable Issue Of Fact Exists On Morgan Stanley's Scienter Or Intent To Defraud.

Morgan Stanley's second and last attack on CPH's fraud claim is that CPH supposedly has no evidence of scienter or intent to defraud because (1) CPH supposedly alleges only that Morgan Stanley had the ordinary economic interest of receiving compensation for the work it was doing, and (2) the idea that Morgan Stanley was attempting to engage in fraud defies economic reason. See MS Mem. 22-24. Those contentions — which are lifted virtually verbatim from Morgan Stanley's unsuccessful motion for judgment on the pleadings — are insufficient to support judgment as a matter of law.

013961

16div-020429

First, Morgan Stanley again ignores that it is not CPH's initial burden to present evidence of intent. It is Morgan Stanley's burden to "prove the negative" — that is, prove the non-existence of material facts concerning intent. See Holl, 191 So. 2d at 43. This it has not done.

Second, Morgan Stanley ignores that questions of intent are for the trier of fact and are especially ill-suited for summary judgment treatment. See, e.g., Cohen v. Cravit Estate Buyers, Inc., 843 So. 2d 989, 991 (Fla. 4th DCA 2003) ("In fraud cases, summary judgment is rarely proper as the issue so frequently turns on the axis of the circumstances surrounding the complete transaction, including circumstantial evidence of intent and knowledge."); Robinson, 882 So. 2d at 1088 ("Generally, the issue of fraud is not a proper subject for summary judgment."); Baker v. United Serv. Automobile Ass'n, 661 So. 2d 128, 132 (Fla. 1st DCA 1995) ("A litigant has a right to trial where there is the slightest doubt as to the facts in a fraud case."); Hermes v. Anton, 300 So. 2d 46, 47 (Fla. 3d DCA 1974) ("Generally, the issue of fraud is not a proper subject of a summary judgment. Fraud is a subtle thing requiring a full explanation of the facts and circumstances of the alleged wrong to determine if they collectively constitute a fraud."); Alepgo Corp. v. Puzin, 114 So. 2d 645, 647 (Fla. 3d DCA 1959) ("Since the full context is necessary for the determination, it is seldom that one can determine the presence or absence of fraud without trial."); State v. Welch-Richards, 618 N.Y.S.2d 923, 924 (N.Y. App. Div. 1994) (denying defendant's summary judgment motion: "questions concerning a party's subjective belief or intent are best resolved by the trier of fact"); Grumman Aerospace Corp. v. Rice, 605 N.Y.S.2d 305, 306 (N.Y. App. Div. 1993) (denying defendant's summary judgment motion: "The determination of . . . intent is ordinarily a question of fact which cannot be resolved on a motion for summary judgment").

Third, with respect to Morgan Stanley's contention that all that it had to gain from its fraud was "ordinary" compensation for the services it was rendering (MS Mem. 23), Morgan Stanley ignores the material facts of record. There was nothing "ordinary" about Morgan Stanley's compensation. Morgan Stanley believed that it stood to reap more than $40 million in fees from the Sunbeam transaction — and the retention letter provided that Morgan Stanley would be receiving fees above scale if Morgan Stanley's work was a success. CPH App. 93 (CPH Ex. 146); CPH App. 17 (CPH Ex. 374 at 85455) (Strong's self-evaluation noting that he "signed engagement letter with success fees above fee scale"). In addition, Morgan Stanley had won the Sunbeam engagement away from a long-time investment banker of Dunlap's, Mark Davis (CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 41); CPH App. 10 (Gittis Dep. at 61-63)), after dozens of Morgan Stanley employees had performed months of uncompensated work on Sunbeam from April to September 1997. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 51-54); CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 35-36); CPH App. 103 (CPH Ex. 70). It is hardly "ordinary" to have an army of employees perform months of work for free. Finally, as William Strong's evaluations demonstrate, he had been exhorted by his superiors to generate fees — $90 million or more in 1998 alone — and he was more than willing to undertake extraordinary measures in order to do so, even stepping "very close to, if not over, the line." CPH App. 15 (CPH Ex. 371 at MSC 85418); CPH App. 16 (CPH Ex. 372 at MSC 85424); CPH App. 17 (CPH Ex. 374 at MSC 85461-62); CPH App. 18 (CPH Ex. 375 at MSC 85477). Thus, this is far from a case involving a mere "ordinary" desire to receive "ordinary" compensation.

Fourth, with respect to Morgan Stanley's assertion that CPH's fraud claim defies economic reason, CPH certainly agrees that defrauding one's customers is not a proper business strategy. But from time to time businesses — including Morgan Stanley — do indeed cheat their own customers and others. The courts hold them accountable for their wrongdoing when they do. With respect to Morgan Stanley's related contention that CPH's theory makes no sense because Morgan Stanley's sister company (MSSF) loaned and lost millions of dollars, the short answer is that it is an unfortunate matter of public record that banks do indeed lend money to companies that the banks know are misrepresenting their true financial conditions. Just recently, two of the nation's largest banks — J.P. Morgan Chase and Citigroup — were the subject of criminal and regulatory charges due to their knowing participation in Enron's fraud on its shareholders. Despite the fact that both banks made massive loans to Enron, and ended up as two of the biggest creditors in the Enron bankruptcy, the SEC and U.S. Attorney in Manhattan both accused the banks of assisting Enron in misrepresenting its true financial condition for years — and the banks ended up paying approximately $300 million in fines and penalties to resolve the matter. See Kurt Eichenwald and Riva D. Atlas, 2 Banks Settle Accusations They Aided in Enron Fraud, N.Y. Times, July 29, 2003, at A1 (available at www.lexis.com); Floyd Norris, A Warning Shot to Banks on Role in Others' Fraud, N.Y. Times, July 29, 2003, at C1 (available at www.lexis.com).

Even more recently, a federal judge approved Citigroup Inc.'s $2.58 billion settlement with investors for its role in the WorldCom debacle. See Mitchell Pacelli, Citigroup's WorldCom Payment is Finalized at $2.58 billion, Wall St. J, Nov. 8, 2004, at C5 (available on WESTLAW at 2004 WL-WSJ 98740760). Thus, although it might not be wise or right for banks to lend money to corporations to assist in a fraud on shareholders, the reality is that banks too often have done so to earn massive fees.

Morgan Stanley's argument also ignores that: (a) Morgan Stanley expected that MSSF would syndicate most or all of the loan promptly after completing the transaction (CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 139-40, 251)); (b) MSSF enjoyed an economic cushion against the risk resulting from Sunbeam's fraud because of the Sunbeam-issued $750 million of debentures that were subordinated to MSSF's loan (CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 87-88)); and (c) as a secured lender, MSSF had far less risk than the parties (such as CPH) that received Sunbeam's common stock. MSSF was playing with fire and ultimately got burned when the fraud was exposed when Dunlap suddenly was terminated, but it certainly does not follow from that fact that Morgan Stanley is entitled to summary judgment.

013364

16div-020432

In sum, notwithstanding Morgan Stanley's invitation to this Court to resolve the inherently fact-bound issues of reliance and scienter as a matter of law, the applicable law and the relevant facts preclude that result.

C. CPH's Aiding And Abetting Fraud Claim Should Be Allowed To Proceed To Trial.

Morgan Stanley's next attack is on CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim, but for the reasons set forth below, that attack also cannot withstand scrutiny.

1. Florida Law Applies To CPH's Aiding And Abetting Claim.

Before addressing the substance of Morgan Stanley's arguments, a threshold issue needs to be addressed, because this Court's choice-of-law Order reserved judgment on what law applies to CPH's aiding-and-abetting and conspiracy claims. CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 6). In its Order, this Court identified a "three-step process" for making a choice-of-law determinations: "First, the court must consider whether there are potentially outcome-determinative differences between the substantive laws alleged to apply." Id. at 2. Second, if outcome-determinative conflicts are identified, "the Court must next determine the choice-of-law to be applied for the type of claim alleged." Id. "Finally, the court must apply the appropriate choice-of-law rules." Id. Application of this three-step analysis leads to the conclusion that Florida law controls CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim.

a. Because Morgan Stanley Has Failed To Identify An Outcome-Determinative Conflict Between Florida And New York Law, Florida Law Controls CPH's Aiding and Abetting Claim.

Step one of the choice-of-law analysis is dispositive because Morgan Stanley has failed to identify outcome-determinative differences — or any differences for that matter — between New York law and Florida law with respect to aiding-and-abetting claims. Indeed, in footnote 5 on page 27 of its memorandum, Morgan Stanley cites a number of Florida cases as being in accord with New York cases.

In fact, with respect to aiding-and-abetting claims, New York and Florida law are basically the same. Under New York law, "[t]he elements of a claim for aiding-and-abetting fraud are: '(1) the existence of an underlying fraud; (2) knowledge of this fraud on the part of the aider and abbetor; and (3) substantial assistance by the aider and abettor in achievement of the fraud.'" UniCredito Italiano SPA v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, 288 F. Supp. 2d 485, 502 (S.D.N.Y. 2003) (quoting Gabriel Capital, L.P. v. NatWest Fin., Inc., 94 F. Supp. 2d 491, 511 (S.D.N.Y. 2000)); accord Houbigant, Inc. v. Deloitte & Touche LLP, 753 N.Y.S.2d 493, 500 (N.Y. App. Div. 2003). In Florida, the same elements are required: "(1) a fraud committed by [the primary violator], (2) [defendant's] knowledge of the fraud, and (3) [defendant's] knowing rendition of substantial assistance." Tew v. Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., 728 F. Supp. 1551, 1568 (S.D. Fla. 1990).

Because Florida law is basically the same as New York law, this Court need not address the choice-of-law issue any further: Under this Court's choice-of-law Order, and under settled choice-of-law principles, Florida law applies when no conflict has been demonstrated. See also CPH App. 108 (Court's Order holding that Florida law applies to CPH's punitive damages claim because Morgan Stanley failed to demonstrate any outcome-determinative differences);

Gustafson v. Jensen, 515 So. 2d 1298, 1300 (Fla. 3d DCA 1987); Collins v. Collins, 36 So. 2d 417, 417 (Fla. 1948).

b. Even Assuming That There Is A Conflict Between New York And Florida Law, Under This Court's Choice of Law Order Read In Light Of The Facts Developed Since The Order, Florida Law Governs CPH's Aiding and Abetting Claim.

Although deferring resolution of the remaining choice-of-law issues, the Court indicated in its Order that CPH's aiding-and-abetting and conspiracy claims would be most sensibly governed by Florida law if the evidence connects Morgan Stanley to Sunbeam's Florida-based fraud. CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 12). As the Court explained, in contrast to CPH's direct claims of fraud and misrepresentation, CPH's claims of aiding-and-abetting and conspiracy all concern Morgan Stanley's participation in the overarching Sunbeam fraud, which "is largely Florida based." Id.

The further factual development contemplated by the Court in its choice-of-law Order has now occurred and the remaining choice-of-law issues are ripe for resolution. Indeed, as the Court has recognized, see CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 6), Florida courts regularly decide choice-of-law issues on summary judgment because determining the governing law is a necessary predicate for the proper resolution of a summary judgment motion. See, e.g., Tune v. Philip Morris Inc., 766 So. 2d 350, 352 (Fla. 2d DCA 2000) (reviewing trial court's resolution of choice-of-law issues at summary judgment stage); Crowell v. Clay Hyder Trucking Lines, Inc., 700 So. 2d 120, 122 (Fla. 2d DCA 1997) (same).[7]

013967

[7] Although the Court suggested that a choice-of-law analysis is "controlled by the summary judgment rule," CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 6), resolution of the remaining choice-of-law issues is appropriate even if this Court determines that certain facts remain disputed. Courts regularly resolve choice-of-law issues before all factual disputes have been resolved, because it is the trial court's responsibility to make preliminary factual findings to determine which state's substantive law applies. See, e.g., J. Weinstein & M. Berger, Weinstein's Evidence § 104[08], at 104-98 n.8 (1982) ("[I]n most circumstances the judge should determine the facts on which choice-of-law depends."); Coltec Indus. v. Zurich Insur. Co., 2004

The facts that have been developed demonstrate that Morgan Stanley worked hand-in-hand with Florida-based Sunbeam personnel to lie about Sunbeam's business and financial performance to defraud CPH and potential investors, and thus, the requisite connection to the Florida-based Sunbeam fraud has been established. As the record reflects, throughout 1997, Sunbeam management fraudulently overstated revenues and earnings — through techniques such as improper "bill-and-hold" sales and "channel stuffing" — to create the illusion of a dramatic improvement over artificially low 1996 results. CPH App. 4 (CPH Ex. 21); CPH App. 5 (CPH Ex. 22); CPH App. 6 (Denkhaus Dep. at 69-73); CPH App. 7, 8 (Levin Dep. at 76-77, 398-99). Indeed, Morgan Stanley itself conceded the Sunbeam fraud in its own Florida complaint against Arthur Andersen, in which Morgan Stanley described in detail "Andersen and Sunbeam's Fraudulent Scheme." CPH App. 1 (Morgan Stanley Complaint ¶ 30); see also CPH App. 2 (12/12/03 Tr. at 26 (counsel for Morgan Stanley stating that the Sunbeam fraud is "a matter of record")).

Morgan Stanley joined Sunbeam's fraud by agreeing to assist Sunbeam in finding a potential buyer of Sunbeam. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 28). The purpose of finding a buyer for Sunbeam (or later, an acquisition target) was directly related to the Sunbeam fraud: Sunbeam sought to acquire another company — such as Coleman — in order to realize the value of the artificial increase in Sunbeam's counterfeit stock created by a phony turnaround story, as well as to conceal that fraud after the fact. Moreover, Sunbeam needed Morgan Stanley to find an interested party as quickly as possible, and certainly before Sunbeam's 1998 results were reported publicly. CPH App. 26 (Yoo Dep. at 218-19); CPH App. 36 (CPH Ex. 229). To accomplish this mission, Sunbeam handpicked William Strong, a senior managing director of Morgan Stanley who knew Albert Dunlap and Russell Kersh. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 27-29, 34-35). Morgan Stanley permitted Strong to handle the Sunbeam account, despite knowing that it had placed Strong under great pressure to generate revenues and Strong was known to operate with a lack of truth and candor — even when dealing with his colleagues at Morgan Stanley. CPH App. 15 (CPH Ex. 371); CPH App. 16 (CPH Ex. 372); CPH App. 13 (CPH Ex. 373); CPH App. 17 (CPH App. 374); CPH App. 18 (CPH Ex. 375).

WL 413304, at *4 (N.D. Ill. 2004) ("The court, not the jury, is responsible for making any factual determinations necessary to resolve the choice-of-law issue based on a preponderance of the evidence standard."); Chance v. E.I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co., 57 F.R.D. 165, 168 (E.D.N.Y. 1972) (explaining that "the question of what the substantive law is must normally be resolved by the judge because he must determine if plaintiff has established a prima facie case and he must tell the jury what the issues of fact are that they must decide as determined by applicable law."). Indeed, the preliminary fact-finding necessary to resolve threshold choice-of-law issues is no different than the fact-finding that is required to determine other preliminary matters — such as personal and subject-matter jurisdiction, venue, and the admissibility of evidence. See, e.g., Chance, 57 F.R.D. at 169; Amiot v. Ames, 693 A.2d 675, 679-80 (Vt. 1997).

To accomplish this critical stage of Sunbeam's fraud, Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam personnel worked hand-in-hand — largely in Florida — to design a strategy to entice potential investors. For example, beginning in April 1997 and continuing into 1998, more than a dozen Morgan Stanley personnel repeatedly visited Sunbeam's headquarters in Delray Beach to study Sunbeam and conduct the due-diligence required of investment bankers. CPH App. 19 (CPH Ex. 37); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 91); CPH App. 20 (Tyree Dep. at 575-76); CPH App. 21 (CPH Ex. 84); CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 16-19); CPH App. 22 (CPH Ex. 172); CPH App. 23 (Rafii Dep. at 106-08); CPH App. 24 (CPH Ex. 173); CPH App. 25 (CPH Ex. 221); CPH App. 26 (Yoo Dep. at 83-88); CPH App. 27 (CPH Ex. 245). Indeed, Morgan Stanley's Strong has admitted that he had between 50 and 100 conversations with Sunbeam principals in Florida throughout that time period. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 53-54).

When Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam were unable to find a buyer for Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley decided to look for a company that it could acquire with Sunbeam's fraudulently inflated stock. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 94-97). Once Morgan Stanley identified Coleman as a potential acquisition target, Morgan Stanley prepared Sunbeam executives for a meeting with

0139369

CPH principals on December 18, 1997 at the Palm Beach home of Ronald Perelman, to discuss a potential transaction between Sunbeam and Coleman. CPH App. 32 (Perelman Dep. at 116, 133, 196-99, 273-74, 308); CPH App. 135 (CPH Ex. 222). The December 1997 Florida meeting was a precursor to Morgan Stanley's face-to-face meeting with CPH on February 23, 1998, at which Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam falsely portrayed Sunbeam as a turnaround success. CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9); CPH App. 37 (CPH Ex. 238).

Once CPH agreed to the merger in late February 1998, Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley continued to use Florida as the base of operations for accomplishing their fraud by making final preparations for consummating the transaction between Coleman and Sunbeam at the end of March 1998. Morgan Stanley personnel traveled to Florida during that time period to meet with Sunbeam in connection with the Coleman transaction. CPH App. 19 (CPH Ex. 37); CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76 at MS 25833). Sunbeam's Florida-based auditors conducted an accounting due-diligence conference call from Florida on March 12, 1998, during which they expressly warned Morgan Stanley about Sunbeam's aggressive revenue recognition practices. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 100-06); CPH App. 64 (CPH Ex. 123). Moreover, Sunbeam's auditors sent Morgan Stanley a comfort letter from Andersen's Florida office, which demonstrated the falsity of representations that Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley had been making about Sunbeam's business and financial condition. CPH App. 69 (CPH Ex. 17); CPH App. 88 (CPH Ex. 112). In addition, on March 18, 1998, Sunbeam personnel in Florida sent Morgan Stanley information about Sunbeam's disastrous first-quarter sales figures, CPH App. 76 (CPH Ex. 16), and participated with Morgan Stanley in conference calls that same day concerning this topic. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 258-62, 286-93). And Morgan Stanley effectively controlled the content of the March 19 press release that Sunbeam issued from its Delray Beach offices because Morgan Stanley could have simply declined to proceed with the debenture offering on March 19.

CPH App. 118 (Fogg Dep. at 344).

As the Court's choice-of-law Order contemplated, the developed record evidence plainly demonstrates that with respect to CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim, Morgan Stanley was a key player in accomplishing the underlying Florida-based Sunbeam fraud. CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 12). Florida law therefore governs that claim.

c. Even Assuming That It Is Necessary To Proceed Further With A Formal Choice Of Law Analysis, Under The Restatement, Florida Law Plainly Controls.

Even assuming that it is necessary to proceed to the second and third steps identified in this Court's choice-of-law Order — identifying the applicable choice-of-law rule and then applying it — Florida law clearly governs CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim. As this Court has explained, assuming that a conflict exists, Florida courts apply the "significant relationship test" of the Restatement (Second) of Conflicts of Laws. CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 5). See Bishop v. Florida Specialty Paint Co., 389 So. 2d 999, 1001 (Fla. 1980). In particular, Section 148 of the Restatement applies here because the claims at issue concern fraud and misrepresentation. CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 5-6). Section 148 contains two subsections, and the Court has explained that Section 148(2) applies where (as here) two states are involved — one where most of the reliance occurred (i.e., New York), and one where most of the fraudulent conduct occurred (i.e., Florida). CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 10).[8] [8] The choice-of-law issues presented here are fundamentally different from those addressed in the Court's choice-of-law Order, which applied Section 148(1), because the underlying fraud upon which CPH's aiding-and-abetting and conspiracy claims are based is Sunbeam's unquestionably Florida-based fraud. As a result, Section 148(2) applies, because the acts of reliance and the fraud occurred in two different states. In any event, even under a Section 148(1) analysis, which applies when the acts of reliance and fraud occurred in the same state, Florida law governs. Given that Florida was the epicenter of the Sunbeam fraud that underlies CPH's aiding-and-abetting and conspiracy claims, Florida's policy interests are at their utmost. That 30 cases related to the Sunbeam fraud have been litigated in Florida further confirms Florida's paramount interest in this dispute. See Restatement (Second) Conflicts of Laws § 6 (listing factors relevant to a Section 148(1) analysis).

Under Section 148(2), the Court must assess which state has the "most significant relationship to the occurrence and the parties," considering, among other things, where the plaintiff acted in reliance, where the plaintiff received the representations, where the defendant made the representations, and the location of the parties. Restatement (Second) Conflicts of Laws § 148(2). Application of Section 148(2)'s factors clearly demonstrates that Florida law applies.

- Where the plaintiff acted in reliance. Although CPH certainly engaged in some acts of reliance in New York and elsewhere (urged on by the participants in the Florida-based fraud), CPH also acted in reliance in Florida, where under the express terms of the Merger Agreement it was to have received notice of a material adverse change. CPH App. 95 (MS Ex. 93 at 7969). Moreover, this factor is not particularly significant to the analysis where, as here, the harm at issue is pecuniary harm to a nationwide corporation: Such harm is "far more difficult to locate than when the damages consist of physical injury to persons or to tangible things." Restatement (Second) Conflicts of Laws § 148, cmt. c.

- Where the plaintiff received the representations. With respect to CPH's fraud and misrepresentation claims, the Court determined that Morgan Stanley's specific representations to CPH were received primarily in New York. In stark contrast, with respect to CPH's aiding-and-abetting and conspiracy claims, there is a much wider universe of representations at issue. For example, the critical face-to-face meeting between CPH and Sunbeam on December 18, 1997 — at which CPH was lured into Sunbeam's fraudulent trap — occurred in Palm Beach, Florida.

- Where the defendant made the representations. Unlike CPH's fraud and misrepresentation claims, the aiding-and-abetting and conspiracy claims implicate not only Morgan Stanley's actions, but also the actions of Sunbeam and other co-conspirators. And it is clear that the entire Sunbeam fraud — and the great bulk of fraudulent representations made to CPH — emanated directly from Florida. As the Court has explained, Florida's "strong public policy in favor of protecting the recipients of fraudulent misrepresentations" is "clearly implicated" to the extent that Morgan Stanley "was an actor in a Florida-based fraud." CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 12, citing Besset v. Basnett, 389 So. 2d 995, 997 (Fla. 1980)). Accordingly, this factor strongly weighs in favor of applying Florida law. Indeed, given the substantiality of Florida's connection to the genesis and execution of the fraudulent scheme, this factor should be dispositive.

- The domicile, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties. Florida is listed in a 1998 SEC filing as the principal place of business of CPH during the relevant time period (CPH App. 124 (CPH0626469)), New York was the principal place of Morgan Stanley, and Delaware is the state where both entities are incorporated. So this factor is not very significant. See Hy Cite Corp. v. Badbusinessbureau.com, L.L.C., 297 F. Supp. 2d 1154, 1166-67 (W.D. Wis.

2004) (because "'[a] corporation does not suffer harm in a particular geographic location in the same sense that an individual does,'" the court "agree[d] with the majority of courts that merely identifying the plaintiff's principal place of business is not enough without more to show that the plaintiff has suffered the brunt of an injury in the state").[9]

Thus, because Florida has the most significant relationship to the indisputably Florida-based Sunbeam fraud — a fraud that has given rise to the filing of 30 lawsuits in this state, including Morgan Stanley's own pending action against Andersen — Florida law governs CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim.

2. Under Florida Law — Or, For That Matter, New York Law — Morgan Stanley's Substantive Attacks On CPH's Aiding And Abetting Claim Are Baseless.

Morgan Stanley attacks CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim on two grounds: (1) "CPH has not presented any evidence that Morgan Stanley had actual knowledge that Sunbeam engaged in fraud"; and (2) "CPH has not presented any evidence that Morgan Stanley provided substantial assistance to Sunbeam in effectuating its alleged fraud." See MS Mem. 26, 30. Those arguments are without merit — no matter what law applies.

a. A Triable Issue Of Fact Exists On Whether Morgan Stanley Had Actual Knowledge That Sunbeam Engaged in Fraud.

Morgan Stanley asserts that CPH must show that Morgan Stanley had actual (not just constructive) knowledge of the Sunbeam fraud and that CPH has not come forward with evidence of that actual knowledge. See MS Mem. 26-29. Morgan Stanley's argument that it is entitled to summary judgment based on this contention is without merit for four reasons.

First, as before, Morgan Stanley ignores that it bears the initial burden of proving that it had no knowledge of the underlying fraud and that CPH cannot prove otherwise. See Holl, 191 So. 2d at 47-48. Morgan Stanley's summary judgment argument is conspicuously silent on this important issue.

[9] Neither of the remaining two Section 148(2) factors weighs in favor of New York or Florida law, given the intangible nature of the transactions at issue. See Restatement (Second) Conflicts of Laws § 148(2)(e) ("the place where a tangible thing which is the subject of the transaction between the parties was situated at the time"); id. § 148(2)(f) ("the place where the plaintiff is to render performance under a contract which he has been induced to enter by the false representations of the defendant.").

Morgan Stanley asserts that CPH has relied on "naked assertions and equivocal inferences" to support its claim, and cites two Florida summary judgment cases supposedly holding that such assertions are insufficient. See MS Mem. 29. Morgan Stanley, however, misstates what those Florida cases held concerning the parties' respective burdens on a motion for summary judgment. Both cases hold that the movant must present conclusive evidence that there is no genuine issue for trial before the nonmovant has to present anything. See Peoples Gas Sys., Inc. v. Acme Gas Corp., 689 So. 2d 292, 299 (Fla. 3d DCA 1997) (in finding that the "bare self-serving assertions made by Peoples Gas" were insufficient to defeat summary judgment, Appellate Court observed that "the record conclusively refutes Peoples Gas' assertions."); Bryant v. Shands Teaching Hosp. & Clinics, Inc., 479 So. 2d 165, 168 (Fla. 4th DCA 1985) (observing that "[i]t is well-recognized that the non-moving party faced with a summary judgment motion supported by appropriate proof may not rely on bare, conclusory allegations" and finding that "appellants provided no evidence contrary to the affidavit" provided by the movants; emphasis added). Here, Morgan Stanley has not come forward with any showing of a lack of a genuine issue of fact on the question of its knowledge.

Second, Morgan Stanley ignores that summary judgment on a claim of aiding-and-abetting fraud — as with all fraud claims — is strongly disfavored because "issues such as fraud, intent, and knowledge lend themselves to trial, rather than summary judgment." Tew, 728 F. Supp. at 1555. That is so because "[t]hese matters can often only be proved by reliance upon circumstantial evidence except in the rare case where there is uncontraverted proof of a 'smoking gun.'" Id. Thus, the preference is for "a reasonable fact finder . . . to hear all the evidence, weigh it and draw all reasonable inferences therefrom." Id.; see also Cohen, 843 So. 2d at 991 ("In fraud cases, summary judgment is rarely proper as the issue so frequently turns on the axis of the circumstances surrounding the complete transaction, including circumstantial evidence of intent and knowledge."); Department of Revenue v. Rudd, 545 So. 2d 369, 372 (Fla. 1st DCA 1989) ("'A litigant has a right to trial where there is the slightest doubt as to the facts' in a fraud case"); quoting Dean v. Gold Coast Theatres, Inc., 156 So. 2d 546 (Fla. 2d DCA 1963)) (emphasis in original).

Third, Morgan Stanley asserts that it is not appropriate to consider what is "likely" or to engage in "inferential" reasoning in determining whether Morgan Stanley had actual knowledge. See MS Mem. 26-27. But the law holds otherwise. Indeed, because a party's knowledge is "most likely to be within the sole knowledge of the defendant and least amenable to direct proof," Houbigant, 753 N.Y.2d at 498, it is well established that both circumstantial and direct evidence can be used to prove actual knowledge. See, e.g., SEC v. Lybrand, 200 F. Supp. 2d 384, 400 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (discussing "ample circumstantial evidence that could give rise to an inference of actual knowledge"). Morgan Stanley apparently confuses proof of actual knowledge by circumstantial evidence, which is the standard practice, with the concept of constructive knowledge. The concepts, however, plainly are different. See, e.g., Ben Soep Co. v. Highgate Hall of Orange County, Inc., 535 N.Y.S.2d 1018, 1021 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 1988) (discussing the need to "make clear the distinction between constructive knowledge and circumstantial evidence of facts, from which a trier of fact may conclude that one possessed actual knowledge").

Here, the evidence of record and the reasonable inferences drawn from the evidence establish Morgan Stanley's actual knowledge of the Sunbeam fraud. Morgan Stanley was intimately acquainted with Sunbeam and its financial records throughout 1997 and 1998, and it is inconceivable that Morgan Stanley could have had such deep involvement and not known at some early date that Sunbeam's turnaround story was an illusion. CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76 at 4) (Leverage Finance Committee memo stating that "Morgan Stanley's M&A group has been working closely with Sunbeam for almost one year . . . The M&A group has gained extremely sound knowledge of the Company"). CPH App. 8 (Levin Dep. at 403-04); CPH App. 28 (Nesbitt Dep. at 415-16). Indeed, Morgan Stanley spent months studying Sunbeam and conducting due-diligence starting in April 1997, during which time more than a dozen Morgan Stanley personnel visited Sunbeam's headquarters to examine Sunbeam's books and files. CPH App. 19 (CPH Ex. 37); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 91); CPH App. 20 (Tyree Dep. at 575-81); CPH App. 21 (CPH Ex. 84); CPH App. 11 (Kitts Dep. at 16-19); CPH App. 22 (CPH Ex. 172); CPH App. 23 (Rafii Dep. at 106-08); CPH App. 24 (CPH Ex. 173); CPH App. 25 (CPH Ex. 221); CPH App. 26 (Yoo Dep. at 83-88); CPH App. 27 (CPH Ex. 245). Strong personally spoke with Dunlap and/or Kersh in Florida between 50 and 100 times in this same period. CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 53-54).

Although Morgan Stanley likely knew about the underlying fraud at an early date, at the very latest, the undisputed facts establish that Morgan Stanley knew about Sunbeam's fraud by mid-March 1998. At that point, Morgan Stanley was warned by Sunbeam's own outside auditors, during a March 12, 1998 accounting due-diligence conference call, that Sunbeam was engaged in aggressive revenue recognition practices to obscure Sunbeam's actual performance. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 104-06); CPH App. 64 (CPH Ex. 123). Morgan Stanley has admitted that such practices "raised clear red flags." CPH App. 68 (Amended Complaint ¶ 84). And by March 18, 1998, Morgan Stanley had received written proof, in the form of a comfort letter prepared by Sunbeam's auditors, that the 1998 numbers promoted by Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley were false and that Sunbeam was actually in the midst of a disastrous collapse.

0139176

CPH App. 76 (CPH Ex. 16); CPH 69 (CPH Ex. 17); CPH App. 70 (CPH Ex. 24); CPH App. 98 (CPH Ex. 110); CPH App. 71 (CPH Ex. 344); CPH App. 72 (Dean Dep. at 132-33). This information in Morgan Stanley's possession made it indisputably clear that Sunbeam's 1997 results were artificially inflated and an illusion, that the illusion could not be sustained, and that the Sunbeam turnaround story was a sham. Indeed, based on this turn of events, Morgan Stanley principals were alarmed enough to hold an "all hands" conference on March 18, 1998, at which they confirmed with Sunbeam the truth of the comfort letter's description of Sunbeam's sales collapse. CPH App. 75, 20 (Tyree Dep. at 237-48, 359-71); CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 264-66, 286-93, 298-302); CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. at 154-58); CPH App. 76 (CPH Ex. 16).

What is more, as Morgan Stanley made its final preparations to close the Coleman deal, it obtained even more detail about Sunbeam's dismal condition, but nevertheless continued to forge ahead with the transaction. For example, Morgan Stanley planned a "bring down" due-diligence call that was to take place days before the March 30, 1998 closing, but deliberately dropped from the meeting's agenda a planned inquiry into what to expect from Sunbeam's second quarter. CPH App. 83 (CPH Ex. 33); CPH App. 84 (CPH Ex. 34); CPH App. 85 (CPH Ex. 35). Morgan Stanley's alteration of the agenda shows that Morgan Stanley purposely avoided a discussion of Sunbeam's second quarter because it knew that Sunbeam would try to accelerate second quarter sales to obscure its first quarter collapse. Then, at a March 20, 1998 meeting, the Morgan Stanley finance committee approved the underwriting of the loan to Sunbeam necessary to complete the transaction with CPH. The finance committee did so despite expressly discussing Sunbeam's sales crisis, because they also discussed the massive fees that Morgan Stanley stood to gain, and Strong was there to push the deal through. CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76); CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 199-204). And on March 25, 1998 — the day that Morgan Stanley closed a debenture offering raising $750 million from public investors —

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013977

Sunbeam's outside auditors sent yet another comfort letter to Morgan Stanley that left no doubt about Sunbeam's fiscal crisis. CPH App. 88 (CPH Ex. 112). Rather than disclose these facts to investors or to the public, Morgan Stanley sat idly by as Sunbeam issued a press release on March 25 announcing the closing and touting Sunbeam's prospects in glowing terms. CPH App. 92 (CPH Ex. 380).

Fourth, Morgan Stanley devotes a page and a half of its brief (MS Mem. 28-29) to the decision in Filler v. Hanvit Bank, 339 F. Supp. 2d 553 (S.D.N.Y. 2004), but Morgan Stanley's reasons for doing so are a mystery. See MS Mem. 28-29. Even putting aside the fact that Filler applies New York law, instead of Florida law, it plainly is inapposite because the underlying fraud involved an entirely separate company and wholly different actions from the transaction in which the defendant was involved. Filler, 330 F. Supp. 2d at 557-59. It is therefore no wonder that the court found no evidence of defendant's actual knowledge of the underlying fraud. More to the point here is CPC International Inc. v. McKesson Corp., 514 N.E.2d 116 (N.Y. 1987), which held that Morgan Stanley could be found liable for aiding-and-abetting and conspiracy because Morgan Stanley was alleged to have known of and agreed to participate in a fraud that originated with another party. Id. at 124. That is the case here as well.

Thus, there is substantial record evidence that Morgan Stanley actually knew about the Sunbeam fraud. In these circumstances, one cannot conclude that Morgan Stanley's entitlement to summary judgment is "beyond doubt," as the governing summary judgment standard requires. See City of Lake City, 62 So. 2d at 733.

b. A Triable Issue Of Fact Exists On Whether Morgan Stanley Provided Substantial Assistance To Sunbeam In Effectuating Its Fraud.

Morgan Stanley's last attack on CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim is that "CPH has not presented any evidence that Morgan Stanley provided substantial assistance" in connection with the Sunbeam fraud. See MS Mem. 30-31. This argument, like Morgan Stanley's other contentions, lacks merit for multiple reasons.

013578

16div-020446

First, as shown above, the governing summary judgment standard requires Morgan Stanley to prove the negative — that it did not provide substantial assistance and that CPH cannot prove otherwise. See Holl, 191 So. 2d at 47-48. Once again, instead of addressing what it did and did not do, Morgan Stanley points the finger at CPH — and contends that "Perelman is responsible for his own losses." See MS Mem. 31. Such evasiveness by Morgan Stanley may be viewed by it as necessary, in light of Morgan Stanley's actual involvement and substantial assistance in the Sunbeam fraud, but it certainly is not sufficient to overcome the governing summary judgment standard.

Second, strong evidence exists that Morgan Stanley gave "substantial assistance" to Sunbeam to ensure the accomplishment of the Sunbeam fraud. Tew, 728 F. Supp. at 1569 (substantial assistance is established by demonstrating that a party "acted affirmatively or failed to disclose with the purpose of furthering the fraud"). Morgan Stanley's substantial assistance included the following:

- Throughout 1997 and the beginning of 1998, Morgan Stanley worked hand-in-hand with Sunbeam, to accomplish Sunbeam's fraud. CPH App. 19 (CPH Ex. 37); CPH App. 21 (CPH Ex. 84); CPH App. 22 (CPH Ex. 172); CPH App. 24 (CPH Ex. 173); CPH App. 25 (CPH Ex. 221); CPH App. 27 (CPH Ex. 245); CPH App. 99 (CPH Ex. 255); CPH App. 9 (Strong Dep. at 47-48, 153-54).

- Morgan Stanley assisted Sunbeam in targeting CPH as a potential acquisition and in convincing CPH, through a series of face-to-face meetings and other contacts, to consummate the transaction with Sunbeam. CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9); CPH App. 37 (CPH Ex. 238).

- Even after Morgan Stanley plainly was aware of the fraud at Sunbeam, Morgan Stanley assisted Sunbeam in preparing and disseminating the false and misleading press release on March 19, 1998. CPH App. 79 (CPH Ex. 14); CPH App. 72 (Dean Dep. at 123-24, 132-33); CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. 187-190, 203).

- Morgan Stanley's affiliate provided the funding that Sunbeam required in order to close the Coleman acquisition and conceal Sunbeam's dire financial situation.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

013979

CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 197-203); CPH App. 87 (Hart Dep. at 222-25); CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76).

- Morgan Stanley lured individuals into investing in the debentures that were necessary to fund Sunbeam's acquisition of CPH and realize the objective of the fraudulent scheme. CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 75-82); CPH App. 100 (CPH Ex. 10); CPH App. 101 (CPH Ex. 75); CPH App. 102 (CPH Ex. 114).

Thus, record evidence plainly shows that Morgan Stanley rendered substantial assistance to Sunbeam.[10]

In sum, CPH's aiding-and-abetting fraud claim is more than sufficient to survive summary judgment.

D. CPH's Conspiracy Claim Should Be Allowed To Proceed To Trial.

Morgan Stanley's last attack is on CPH's conspiracy claim. That attack, as is demonstrated below, likewise lacks merit.

1. As A Threshold Matter, Florida Law Applies To This Claim, For The Same Reasons It Applies To CPH's Aiding And Abetting Claim.

For all the reasons set forth above in connection with CPH's aiding-and-abetting claim, see Section II.C.1, Florida law applies to CPH's conspiracy claim. Indeed, given that Morgan Stanley concedes that the requirements under Florida law for such a claim are the "same" as those under New York law (MS Mem. 32), this Court's choice-of-law Order dictates that Florida

[10] Morgan Stanley suggests that "inaction" constitutes substantial assistance only when a fiduciary duty is owed to the plaintiff. See MS Mem. 30. Morgan Stanley's argument is inapposite because CPH is not relying on Morgan Stanley's "inaction" to show substantial assistance, but rather, is relying on evidence that Morgan Stanley assisted Sunbeam's fraud through a wide variety of affirmative acts. Moreover, Morgan Stanley misstates New York law in claiming that the existence of a fiduciary duty is required for inaction to constitute substantial assistance. New York courts long have explained that "inaction" may constitute substantial assistance "in the absence of some independent duty" so long as the defendant has "a conscious and specific motivation for not acting." IIT v. Cornfeld, 619 F.2d 909, 927 (2d Cir. 1980) (Friendly, J.); see also BF Capital Mgmt. v. Askin Capital Mgmt., 957 F. Supp. 1308, 1328 (S.D.N.Y. 1997) (citing Armstrong v. McAlpin, 699 F.2d 79, 91 (2d Cir. 1983)) (explaining that "even in the absence of a duty to act or disclose information, inaction on the alleged aider and abettor's part can provide a basis for liability where the inaction was 'designed intentionally to aid the primary fraud'").

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

16div-020448

law must apply. See CPH App. 96 (Choice of Law Order at 3). As for the rest of the choice-of-law analysis, because Morgan Stanley asserts that "CPH's conspiracy claim is just another way of phrasing the aiding-and-abetting claim" (MS Mem. 32), the identical choice-of-law analysis and conclusion apply: Florida law governs CPH's conspiracy claim.

2. Morgan Stanley Is Not Entitled To Summary Judgment On CPH's Conspiracy Claim.

In its one-and-a-half-page attack on CPH's conspiracy claim, Morgan Stanley contends that it is entitled to summary judgment because "CPH has no record evidence of an actual agreement between Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam to defraud CPH." See MS Mem. at 32. That contention fails for two reasons.

First, as with every other argument made by Morgan Stanley, this argument misapprehends who bears the burden of proof on a summary judgment motion. It is not CPH's burden to come forward with evidence of an actual agreement. Morgan Stanley instead must "prov[e] a negative, i.e., the non-existence of a genuine issue of material fact." Holl, 191 So. 2d at 43. Morgan Stanley "must prove this negative conclusively," id., but clearly, Morgan Stanley has not done so.

Second, contrary to Morgan Stanley's contention, there is ample evidence from which the trier of fact can conclude that there was an actual agreement between Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam to engage in fraud. In this regard, however, it is not necessary to present direct evidence of the conspiracy: "The existence of a conspiracy and an individual's participation may be inferred from circumstantial evidence." Donofrio v. Matassini, 503 So. 2d 1278, 1281 (Fla. 2d DCA 1987); see also Borden, Inc. v. Spoor Behrins Campbell & Young, Inc., 828 F. Supp. 216, 225 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) (explaining that "direct proof of a conspiracy is seldom available, and therefore an illicit agreement may be shown via circumstantial evidence"). One of Morgan Stanley's own authorities recognizes this point. See William H. Kuehnle, Secondary Liability

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Under the Federal Securities Laws — Aiding and Abetting, Conspiracy, Controlling Person, and Agency: Common-Law Principles and the Statutory Scheme, 14 J. Corp. L. 313, 346 (1988) ("An express agreement need not be proven; and the agreement can be shown by circumstantial evidence, including a showing that the conspirators conformed their conduct to an arrangement or understanding."). Thus, a jury may infer the existence of a conspiracy (and the requisite agreement) based on, among other things, "the relationship of the parties, proximity and time and place of the acts, and the duration of the actors' joint activity." Borden, 828 F. Supp. at 225; see also Czarnecki v. Roller, 726 F. Supp. 832, 840-41 (S.D. Fla. 1989) (denying summary judgment on a conspiracy claim under Florida law because it was "open to the trier of fact to infer" that the alleged co-conspirator and the underlying tortfeaser had "reached an understanding" to defraud the plaintiff, based on meetings between the defendants, and in light of the defendant's "clear motive in not disrupting a deal which was about to be consummated and which would have allowed [the defendants] to pocket a sizeable brokerage fee").

Here, under these standards, a jury question clearly exists on CPH's conspiracy claim. CPH has substantial evidence from which the jury could infer an agreement between Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam to accomplish a common fraudulent objective. For example, there is substantial evidence that: (a) Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam agreed on and jointly presented written materials to CPH at the February 23, 1998 meeting (CPH App. 29 (CPH Ex. 9)); (2) Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam agreed to issue the false misleading March 19, 1998 press release (CPH App. 74 (Porat Dep. 187-90, 203); CPH 72 (Dean Dep. at 123-24, 132-33)); (b) Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam agreed to incorporate and republish the false March 19, 1998 press release into the offering documents for the sale of $2 billion face value in debentures (CPH App. 100 (CPH Ex. 10 at CP33176); CPH App. 63 (Bornstein Dep. at 75-82)); (c) Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam agreed to participate in the road-show presentation for the debentures during which false information was provided to investors and analysts (CPH App. 101 (CPH Ex. 75); CPH App. 115 (Porat Dep. at 237-47)); and (d) Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam agreed that Morgan Stanley would provide the financing required to close the Coleman transaction (CPH App. 12 (Smith Dep. at 197-203); CPH App. 87 (Hart Dep. at 222-25); CPH App. 86 (CPH Ex. 76)). This evidence, in addition to Morgan Stanley's initial agreement to work with Sunbeam toward a common goal that led to the Coleman transaction, constitute strong evidence of an actual agreement between Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam to accomplish a common tortious objective. In these circumstances, under applicable summary judgment standards, it cannot be said that Morgan Stanley has established its entitlement to summary judgment beyond the "slightest doubt." See City of Lake City, 62 So. 2d at 733.

013982

CONCLUSION

Morgan Stanley's motion for summary judgment should be denied.

COMPLAINT

In March 1998, Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated, Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc., and Morgan Stanley (collectively, "Morgan Stanley") — in direct reliance on certified financial statements audited by the Arthur Andersen defendants ("Andersen")[1] — underwrote a multi-million dollar offering of convertible notes and provided a $680 million loan to Sunbeam

[1] Defendants Arthur Andersen LLP; Andersen Worldwide, Société Coopérative (a Swiss cooperative); Arthur Andersen & Co. (a Canadian company); Arthur Andersen & Co. (a Hong Kong company); Ruiz, Urquiza y Cia, S.C. (a Mexican Company); Piernavieja, Porta, Cachafeiro & Avocados (a Venezuela company); Arthur Andersen (a United Kingdom company), Phillip E. Harlow, William Pruitt, and Donald Denkhaus are hereinafter collectively referred to as "Andersen." Unless otherwise stated, allegations made against "Andersen" are made against each of these defendants jointly and severally.

Corporation, Inc., in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of three companies. As Sunbeam's subsequent restatement of its financial results showed, the financial statements that Andersen certified grossly misrepresented Sunbeam's true financial condition. Andersen had full knowledge of these misstatements, and it intended that Morgan Stanley would rely on its unqualified audit opinions. Morgan Stanley — as a direct consequence of Andersen's deceit — has lost hundreds of millions of dollars. Accordingly, Morgan Stanley brings this action against Andersen and alleges the following:

Nature of Action

1. In March 1998, Sunbeam acquired The Coleman Company, Inc. ("Coleman") and two smaller companies. In order to finance this acquisition, Morgan Stanley underwrote a $750 million offering of convertible notes, and it also directly provided Sunbeam with an additional $680 million in secured financing.

2. In serving as an underwriter and in agreeing to extend the loan, Morgan Stanley relied on Sunbeam's financial statements, which had been audited and certified by Andersen, as well as Andersen's continued opinions about Sunbeam's financial condition. The Sunbeam financial statements painted a picture of Sunbeam as a company in the midst of an extraordinary financial turnaround.

3. In reality, unbeknownst to Morgan Stanley, Sunbeam's "turnaround" was an illusion. As became apparent in the summer of 1998 and as confirmed by Sunbeam's subsequent restatement of its financial results, the 1996 and 1997 statements that Andersen had certified — and upon which Morgan Stanley had relied — did not conform with generally accepted accounting principles ("GAAP"). Andersen, with full knowledge of the material misstatements contained in Sunbeam's financial reports, issued unqualified audit opinions for both 1996 and 1997. In so doing, it failed to perform its audit in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards ("GAAS").

011160

4. As Andersen knew, the statements that it audited and certified were replete with accounting improprieties. As a consequence, Sunbeam's true financial condition was misstated by millions of dollars. In November 1998, when it restated its 1996 and 1997 financial results, Sunbeam revealed that, in 1996, it had overstated its operating losses by at least $40 million, thereby establishing an overly bleak financial backdrop against which the company's performance in 1997 would be measured. In 1997, by contrast, Sunbeam dramatically overstated its earnings. When 1997 operating earnings were eventually corrected and restated, they were $95 million less than the earnings originally reported — and approximately half of the figure that Andersen had previously certified.

5. Andersen's fraud ultimately forced Sunbeam and several of its subsidiaries to seek relief under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in February 2001. As part of the bankruptcy court-approved reorganization plan, Morgan Stanley's $680 million loan to Sunbeam was discharged in full, and Morgan Stanley received Sunbeam stock valued at a small fraction of the original loan. In addition, as a result of Andersen's actions, the convertible notes issued by Sunbeam and held by Morgan Stanley had been rendered substantially less valuable.

6. As the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") subsequently determined, in auditing and certifying Sunbeam's financial statements, Andersen completely disregarded its professional and legal obligations. It certified Sunbeam financial statements that it knew grossly mischaracterized the company's true financial condition. It ignored its duty to maintain independence from its client, Sunbeam. It did so with full knowledge that Morgan Stanley would be harmed immensely by Andersen's deception.

0114161

7. By this complaint, Morgan Stanley seeks compensatory damages of several hundreds of millions of dollars. In addition, Morgan Stanley reserves the right to seek leave to amend its complaint pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 768.72 to assert claims for an additional recovery of punitive damages in excess of $1.2 billion as allowed by law.

THE PARTIES AND OTHER RELEVANT ENTITIES

8. Plaintiff Morgan Stanley & Co. Incorporated ("MS & Co.") is a financial services firm that engages in underwriting, investment banking, financial advisory services, securities sales and trading, and research. In late 1997 and early 1998, MS & Co. assisted Sunbeam in identifying potential acquisition targets and served as Sunbeam's financial advisor with respect to certain aspects of Sunbeam's acquisitions of Coleman, Signature Brands USA, Inc. and First Alert, Inc. MS & Co. also served as the underwriter of a $750 million offering of convertible notes that Sunbeam used to finance these acquisitions. MS & Co. is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal place of business in New York.

9. Plaintiff Morgan Stanley Senior Funding, Inc. ("MSSF") is a company that provides credit services to its clients. In 1998, MSSF entered into a credit agreement with Sunbeam under which MSSF agreed to provide a loan to Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman and two smaller companies. Pursuant to the credit agreement, Sunbeam borrowed $680 million from MSSF, with the borrowings used by Sunbeam to fund certain costs relating to the acquisitions. MSSF is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal place of business in New York.

10. Plaintiff Morgan Stanley is a financial services company. It owns 100 percent of the stock of both MS & Co. and MSSF. Morgan Stanley is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Delaware, with its principal place of business in New York. In this complaint, the term "Morgan Stanley" is used collectively to describe both Morgan Stanley and its two wholly-owned subsidiaries, MS & Co. and MSSF.

11. Defendant Andersen Worldwide, Société Coopérative Switzerland was a partnership organized under the Swiss Federal Code of Obligations. Its partners included more than 2,000 individuals from 390 offices in 84 countries. Various individuals who were partners of Andersen-Worldwide participated in the 1996 and 1997 audits of Sunbeam and the 1998 restatement of the reports of those audits. Andersen-Worldwide and Andersen-US dictated the policies and procedures to be used within Andersen throughout the world.

12. Defendant Arthur Andersen & Co. ("Andersen-Canada") was part of Andersen-Worldwide. Andersen-Canada participated in the 1996 and 1997 audits of Sunbeam and the 1998 restatement of the reports of those audits.

13. Defendant Arthur Andersen & Co. ("Andersen-Hong-Kong") was part of Andersen-Worldwide. Andersen-Hong Kong participated in the 1996 and 1997 audits of Sunbeam and the 1998 restatement of the reports of those audits.

14. Defendant Ruiz, Urquiza y Cia, S.C. ("Andersen-Mexico") was part of Andersen-Worldwide. Andersen-Mexico participated in the 1996 and 1997 audits of Sunbeam and the 1998 restatement of the reports of those audits.

15. Defendant Piernavieja, Porta, Cachafeiro & Avocados ("Andersen-Venezuela") was part of Andersen-Worldwide. Andersen-Venezuela participated in the 1996 and 1997 audits of Sunbeam and the 1998 restatement of the reports of those audits.

16. Defendant Arthur Andersen ("Andersen-UK") was part of Andersen-Worldwide. Andersen-UK participated in the 1996 and 1997 audits of Sunbeam and the 1998 restatement of the reports of those audits.

17. Defendant Arthur Andersen LLP ("Andersen-US") was part of Andersen-Worldwide. Andersen-US is a partnership formed under the laws of the State of Illinois. Once one of the world's largest accounting firms, almost all of its partners have left the firm. Andersen-US participated in and coordinated the 1996 and 1997 audits of Sunbeam and the 1998 restatement of the reports of those audits. In addition, Andersen-US partners and employees provided consulting services to Sunbeam as part of due diligence work performed in conjunction with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, as well as on other projects.

18. Defendant Phillip E. Harlow was a partner at Andersen-US and was also a partner of Andersen-Worldwide. He served as the engagement partner on the audits of Sunbeam's financial statements from 1993 to 1998. As engagement partner, Harlow had primary responsibility for supervising the 1996 and 1997 audits of Sunbeam, including overseeing the activities with respect to the Sunbeam work performed by numerous persons at Andersen. Harlow also participated as a member of Sunbeam's due diligence team in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman.

19. Defendant William Pruitt at all times material hereto was a partner of both Andersen-US and Andersen-Worldwide. He served as the concurring partner on the Sunbeam audits for at least 1996 and 1997.

20. Defendant Donald Denkhaus at all times material hereto was a partner of both Andersen-US and Andersen-Worldwide. Denkhaus served as the engagement partner on the Sunbeam's ultimate restatement of its financial statements, as Audit Division Head and manager of Andersen's audit practice for the entire South Florida region.

21. The Coleman Company, Inc. was a leading manufacturer and marketer of consumer products for the worldwide outdoor recreation market. Coleman was a Delaware corporation, with its principal place of business in Kansas. Prior to March 30, 1998, Coleman (Parent) Holdings Inc. ("Coleman-Parent") owned 44,067,520 shares (or approximately 82 percent) of Coleman. Coleman-Parent is a Delaware corporation, with its principal place of business in New York and is a wholly-owned subsidiary of MacAndrews and Forbes Holdings, Inc. ("MAFCO"). MAFCO is a global investment firm owned and operated by financier Ronald O. Perelman. Through its various subsidiaries and affiliates, MAFCO owns and/or controls a number of multi-billion dollar global corporations, including Revlon, Inc., the international consumer cosmetics company. MAFCO is a Delaware corporation, with its principal place of business in New York.

22. Sunbeam Corporation through its operating subsidiaries and affiliates, manufactured, marketed, and distributed durable household and outdoor leisure consumer products through mass-market and other consumer channels. In 1998, Sunbeam purchased Coleman-Parent's controlling interest in Coleman for $2.2 billion. On February 6, 2001, Sunbeam and several of its affiliates filed a petition for relief under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York. Sunbeam has since emerged from bankruptcy and now operates under the name American Household.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

23. This Court has jurisdiction over the subject matter of this action pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 26.012(2)(a) because Plaintiff seeks damages in excess of $15,000 exclusive of interest, costs and attorneys' fees. This Court has jurisdiction over Andersen-US, Andersen-Worldwide, Andersen-Canada, Andersen-Hong Kong, Andersen-Mexico, Andersen-Venezuela, and Andersen-UK pursuant to Fla. Stat. §§ 48.193(1)(a) and (f), (2) and/or (5).

24. This Court has personal jurisdiction over Andersen pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 48.193(2) because Andersen engaged in substantial business activities in the State of Florida. Additionally, this Court has personal jurisdiction over Andersen pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 48.193(1)(a) because the cause of action arises out of Andersen's activities in the State.

25. Venue is proper in this Court pursuant to Fla. Stat. §§ 47.011 and 47.021 because, when the actionable conduct described herein occurred, Andersen maintained an office with more than 30 employees and partners in West Palm Beach and therefore resided in Palm Beach County.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Andersen and Sunbeam's Fraudulent Scheme

26. In July 1996, to address its growing financial difficulties, Sunbeam hired Albert Dunlap as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. Dunlap was a well-known "turnaround" specialist who had a history of brief tenures at other companies. He was nicknamed "Chainsaw Al" because of his practice of cutting staff and closing plants to achieve quick turnaround results.

27. Immediately after joining Sunbeam, Dunlap replaced almost all of top management with his own selections, hiring Russell A. Kersh (Chief Financial Officer); Donald R. Uzzi (Vice President, Marketing and Product Development, and later Executive Vice President, Consumer Products Worldwide); Lee B. Griffith (Vice President, Sales); and Robert J. Gluck (Principal Accounting Officer).

0114166

28. Immediately after he was hired, Dunlap publicly predicted that, as a result of the Company's restructuring, Sunbeam would attain significant increases in its margins and sales.

29. Unbeknownst to the public and to Morgan Stanley, senior management established an overly dismal financial backdrop against which the company's performance in 1997 would be measured. Management decided to accomplish this task by recording improper expenses and taking unjustified accounting write-offs in their 1996 financial statements. In order to convince the public that their 1996 losses were real, however, Sunbeam needed an outside auditor to validate their financial reports.

30. Andersen stood ready to assist Sunbeam in its scheme. Andersen had a significant stake in retaining Sunbeam, a long-time major client. The company generated substantial income for Andersen, paying over $1 million in fees for its 1995 audit alone. Andersen also hoped to continue to receive lucrative consulting assignments from Sunbeam. Moreover, being dropped by a high-profile client such as Sunbeam would have been a severe blow to Andersen's reputation. Indeed, Andersen was so eager to keep Sunbeam as its client that it agreed to a 30 percent reduction in its 1996 audit fees.

31. After Dunlap assumed control of Sunbeam, Andersen had reason to fear that its relationship with Sunbeam was in jeopardy. Phillip Harlow, the Andersen engagement partner, knew that Dunlap had employed Coopers & Lybrand, one of Andersen's major competitors, as a financial consultant and independent auditor in past turnaround assignments. In fact, Dunlap had already engaged Coopers & Lybrand to assist in planning Sunbeam's massive restructuring.

32. Ultimately, Andersen's desire to retain a valuable client overrode any sense of duty or professionalism, and it capitulated to Sunbeam's demand that it sanction the improper accounting treatments used by the company's senior management.

Andersen's Worldwide Operations

33. Andersen operated through a global network of international offices, branches and subsidiaries of the U.S. partnership, a structure called the Andersen Worldwide Organization. The Andersen network worked as "one firm" and maintained this "one firm" identity through a variety of mechanisms. Partners (or equivalents) in its various branches were also partners of Andersen-Worldwide, resulting in a global partnership of more than 2,000 individuals from 390 offices in 84 different countries. In addition to overlapping partners, Andersen-Worldwide and Andersen-US shared officers in common. Moreover, Andersen-Worldwide set uniform professional standards for all its offices and required its international offices to agree to be bound by those professional standards and principles. Andersen-Worldwide coordinated the sharing of costs and allocation of revenues and profits among its partners and its offices around the world. Andersen-Worldwide operated under a worldwide tax structure. In addition, Andersen-Worldwide handled all borrowing on behalf of its international offices and maintained those offices' financial records, payroll, and employee health benefits plans. All of Andersen's offices also shared global computer operations and training facilities.

34. Andersen applied the "one firm" approach in its work with Sunbeam. Top partners responsible for the Sunbeam audits and restatement were partners of both Andersen-US and Andersen-Worldwide, including the engagement partner on the Sunbeam audits, Phillip Harlow; the concurring partner on those audits, William Pruitt; and the engagement partner on the Sunbeam restatement, Donald Denkhaus.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0114168

35. In addition, various international offices of Andersen-Worldwide did substantial work for Sunbeam. Sunbeam was a multinational corporation with operations in Canada, Mexico, Venezuela, Hong Kong, and Europe. The engagements required the participation of auditors from each of those countries and numerous American cities. Harlow, on behalf of both Andersen-US and Andersen-Worldwide, developed work plans that he circulated to Andersen-Canada, Andersen-Hong Kong, Andersen-Mexico, Andersen-Venezuela, and Andersen-UK. Those offices worked together with Harlow and others to complete the tasks outlined in the plan and sent their work product to Harlow for inclusion in an Andersen-Worldwide Management Letter.

The Fraudulent 1996 Financial Statements

36. In 1996, after Dunlap took control of Sunbeam, Andersen permitted Sunbeam management to employ numerous accounting practices that — as Sunbeam's restatement of its 1996 financial statements and an SEC investigation later showed — did not comply with GAAP.

37. Among other things, Sunbeam's 1996 financial statements, certified by Andersen, did not comply with the accounting principles of (1) reliability, Financial Accounting Standards Board ("FASB") Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 58-97; Accounting Principles Board ("APB") Statement No. 4, §§ 109, 138, 189; (2) completeness, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 79, 80; APB Statement No. 4, § 94; (3) conservatism, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 91-97; APB Statements No. 9, §§ 35, 71; (4) neutrality, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 98-110; or (5) relevance, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 47, 48.

38. Among the accounting frauds that Andersen knowingly allowed was the artificial inflation of Sunbeam's reserves. Because the reserves were charged as an expense against income, this accounting practice allowed Sunbeam to overstate the 1996 loss against which its 1997 financial results would be compared.

39. For example, Sunbeam created a $338 million reserve for "restructuring" charges. As the November 1998 restatement made clear, included in these charges were costs of redesigning product packaging; costs of relocating employees and equipment; bonuses to be paid to employees who were told that they were being laid off but were asked to stay on temporarily; advertising expenses; and certain consulting fees. Because these items benefited future activities, GAAP did not permit them to be classified as restructuring charges. Andersen also permitted Sunbeam to violate GAAP by creating a $12 million reserve for a lawsuit alleging that Sunbeam was liable for cleanup costs associated with a hazardous waste site, even though Sunbeam's estimated liability was, at best, half that amount.

40. Andersen also permitted Sunbeam improperly to write down its household products inventory in 1996. In connection with the restructuring, Sunbeam had decided to eliminate half of Sunbeam's product lines and to liquidate its inventory of those product lines. Although only half of Sunbeam's product lines were eliminated, Andersen allowed Sunbeam to apply, at year-end 1996, the special accounting treatment that it had accorded the eliminated lines to its entire inventory of household products. As a result, as the November 1998 financial restatement later showed, Sunbeam understated the balance sheet value of its inventory at year-end 1996 by approximately $2 million and overstated its 1996 loss by the same amount.

41. Andersen also allowed management improperly to recognize, as a 1996 expense, $2.3 million in 1997 advertising expenses and related costs. In addition, Andersen permitted

0114170

Sunbeam to manipulate its 1996 liabilities for "cooperative advertising." It was Sunbeam's practice to fund a portion of its retailers' costs of running local promotions. As required by GAAP, Sunbeam accrued its estimated liabilities for this expense. At year-end 1996, Sunbeam set its cooperative advertising accrual at an inflated value of $21.8 million. According to the November 1998 restatement, this accrual was improper under GAAP because it was approximately 25 percent higher than the prior year's accrual amount, without a proportional increase in sales providing a basis for the increase. Ultimately, as the November 1998 restatement showed, $5.8 million of that excessive accrual was used (without disclosure) to inflate Sunbeam's 1997 income.

Andersen's 1996 Unqualified Audit Opinion

42. In the course of auditing Sunbeam's 1996 financial statements, Andersen became aware of these improper accounting practices. Indeed, it questioned a Sunbeam employee about the restructuring reserves and was told that the reserve included "everything but the kitchen sink." Harlow, the Andersen engagement partner, raised the issues with Kersh and Gluck and proposed that Sunbeam reverse certain of its improper entries. But when Kersh and Gluck rejected these proposals, Andersen backed down.

43. In March 1997, Andersen issued an unqualified audit opinion regarding Sunbeam's 1996 financial statements and authorized the inclusion of its audit opinion in Sunbeam's 1996 Form 10-K filed with the SEC. Despite its knowledge of the many improper accounting practices that Sunbeam's management had employed, Andersen's opinion stated:

> We conducted our audits in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards.
> Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements > are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

01411

> In our opinion, the financial statements . . . present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Sunbeam Corporation and subsidiaries as of December 31, 1995 and December 29, 1996, and the results of their operations and their cash flows for each of the three fiscal years in the period ended December 29, 1996 in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

44. Andersen also knowingly provided false descriptions of certain of Sunbeam's specific accounting practices. For example, it characterized Sunbeam's treatment of its restructuring charges in Note 2 to the audited 1996 consolidated financial statements as follows:

> In conjunction with the implementation of the restructuring and growth plan, the Company recorded a pre-tax special charge to earnings of approximately $337.6 million in the fourth quarter of 1996. This amount is allocated as follows in the accompanying Consolidated Statement of Operations: $154.9 million to Restructuring, Impairment and Other Costs as further described below; $92.3 million to Cost of Goods Sold related principally to inventory write-downs from the reduction in SKUs and costs of inventory liquidation programs; $42.5 million to Selling, General and Administrative expenses principally for increases in environmental and litigation reserves (see Notes 12 and 13) and other reserve categories; and the estimated pre-tax loss on the divestiture of the Company's furniture business of approximately $47.9 million.

In fact, however, Andersen knew that Sunbeam had improperly inflated its restructuring costs by millions of dollars.

45. Andersen's 1996 audit violated GAAS because, among other things, Andersen failed (1) to perform the audits with an attitude of professional skepticism as required by the Statement on Auditing Standards ("SAS") No. 53; (2) to conclude that there was a significant risk that Sunbeam management would intentionally distort the company's financial statements, in violation of American Institute of Certified Public Accountants Professional Standards, AU §§ 316.10 and 316.12; (3) to recognize that the accounting policies employed by Sunbeam were not acceptable in the circumstances, in violation of AU § 316.19; (4) to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter through inspection, observation, inquiries, and confirmations to afford a reasonable basis for its opinions regarding Sunbeam's financial statements, in violation of AU § 150.02; (5) to exercise due professional care in the performance of the audit, in violation of AU § 150.02; (6) to plan the work adequately to uncover the errors and irregularities in Sunbeam's accounting information, in violation of AU § 150.02; and (7) to obtain a sufficient understanding of Sunbeam's internal control structure to plan the audits and to determine the nature, timing, and extent of tests to be performed, in violation of AU § 150.02.

46. In addition, in conducting the 1996 audit, Andersen (1) improperly relied on management representations rather than applying the auditing procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion on Sunbeam's financial statements, in violation of SAS No. 19 (AU § 333.02); (2) failed to recognize that misstatements resulting from misapplication of GAAP, departures from fact, and omissions of necessary information, in aggregate, caused Sunbeam's financial statements to be materially misstated, in violation of SAS No. 47 (AU § 312.04); (3) failed to issue a qualified or adverse opinion, in violation of SAS No. 47 (AU § 312.31); and (4) improperly concluded that the accounting principles applied by Sunbeam were appropriate in the circumstances and that Sunbeam's financial statements were informative of matters that could affect their use, understanding, and interpretation, in violation of SAS No. 69 (AU §§ 411.04(b) and (c)).

47. In all, the 1996 financial statements audited by Andersen were materially false and misleading and overstated Sunbeam's operating losses for 1996 by at least $40 million. Moreover, Andersen's unqualified audit opinion was false in at least two material respects. First, the financial statements that Andersen audited did not "fairly" present Sunbeam's financial position in conformity with GAAP, as it represented. Second, Andersen had not, as it claimed, conducted its audit in accordance with GAAS.

011173

The Fraudulent 1997 Financial Statements

48. The accounting frauds in which Andersen permitted Sunbeam to engage in 1997 were aimed at inflating the company's earnings. To accomplish this — as the November 1998 restatement and an SEC investigation subsequently showed — Andersen allowed Sunbeam to record fraudulent sales, to account improperly for one-time events, and improperly to use "cookie-jar" reserves, all in violation of GAAP.

49. Among other things, Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements, certified by Andersen, did not comply with the accounting principles of (1) reliability, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 58-97; APB Statement No. 4, §§ 109, 138, 189; (2) completeness, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 79, 80; APB Statement No. 4, § 94; (3) conservatism, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 91-97; APB Statements No. 9, §§ 35, 71; (4) neutrality, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 98-110; or (5) relevance, FASB Statement of Financial Accounting Concepts No. 2, §§ 47, 48.

50. According to the November 1998 restatement, one of the revenue inflation tactics permitted by Andersen in 1997 was Sunbeam's improper accounting for "bill-and-hold" sales. A bill-and-hold sale occurs when a seller bills a customer for a purchase while retaining the merchandise for later delivery. During 1997, Dunlap's management team offered financial incentives to various customers to purchase products. Under GAAP, revenue under bill-and-hold transactions may be recognized only if, among others things, the buyer — not the seller — requests a sale on that basis. As Andersen subsequently learned in the course of its 1997 audit, the purported bill-and-hold customers had not requested that treatment, and, in numerous cases, the risks of ownership and legal title were never passed to the customer. According to the November 1998 restatement, Sunbeam added more than $29 million to Sunbeam's 1997 sales and $4.5 million to income by improperly accounting for these transactions.

011174

51. Another income-boosting tactic that Andersen sanctioned was Sunbeam's improper use of its inflated 1996 reserves, which the November 1998 restatement later showed artificially increased the company's 1997 income by almost $5 million. Andersen also let Sunbeam improperly treat $19 million that it received from the sale of discounted and obsolete inventory as ordinary income. Although the recognition of that revenue was permitted under GAAP, Sunbeam was required to disclose that revenue as a non-recurring event. Sunbeam failed to do so, again with Andersen's blessing.

52. In addition, Andersen allowed Sunbeam's Hong Kong and Canadian subsidiaries to book sales that violated applicable accounting principles because they included an unlimited right to return unsold merchandise and because the amount of future returns on such sales could not reasonably be estimated. The November 1998 restatement showed that, on Andersen's watch, Sunbeam's Hong Kong subsidiary improperly recorded sales revenue of $8.6 million from various sales made during the fourth quarter of 1997.

53. Andersen also permitted Sunbeam to employ several improper accounting tricks with respect to its Mexican subsidiary. According to the November 1998 restatement, that subsidiary engaged in $900,000 in bill-and-hold transactions in 1997 that should not have been recognized as income until 1998. In addition, the subsidiary's inventory was overvalued by $2 million, and the financial statements for Sunbeam's Mexico operations failed to include $3 million expense for the profit sharing obligations of that business. According to the November 1998 restatement, Sunbeam's Venezuela subsidiary also improperly valued its inventory.

54. As a result of these and other improper accounting devices, in 1997, Sunbeam reported $186 million in income, much of which was, according to the November 1998 restatement, improper under GAAP. In all, the overstatements included over $90 million of improper net income, including approximately $10 million from a sham sale of inventory to a contractor, approximately $4.5 million from non-GAAP bill-and-hold sales, approximately $35 million in income derived from the use of non-GAAP reserves and accruals taken at year-end 1996 and approximately $6 million from improper revenue recognition.

011175

Sunbeam's Purchase of Coleman

55. Toward the end of 1997, Sunbeam's senior management initiated an effort to sell the company. Sunbeam engaged Morgan Stanley to advise it with respect to the possible sale of its core businesses and/or the initiation of one or more major acquisitions. Ultimately, Coleman, Signature Brands USA, Inc. and First Alert, Inc. were identified as three companies interested in being acquired by Sunbeam.

56. On January 28, 1998, Sunbeam announced its financial results for 1997, reporting total revenues of $1.168 billion, and total earnings from continuing operations of $189 million (or $1.41 per share). Sunbeam's announcement coincided with Andersen's purported completion of the field work for its audit of Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements, although Andersen's work in fact continued for more than a month.

57. On February 3, 1998, Harlow met with key officers of Sunbeam to discuss the acquisition of Coleman and its financial impact on Sunbeam. By that time, as a result of reviewing Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements in the course of its audit, Andersen knew that Sunbeam's 1997 results were false.

58. On February 20, 1998, Andersen agreed to act as a Sunbeam financial advisor and perform financial due diligence in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, First Alert, and Signature Brands, further compromising its duty as an auditor to maintain its independence from its client. In agreeing to undertake that assignment, Andersen became an active member of the team working to assist Sunbeam in its acquisitions. Andersen employees who worked on Sunbeam's audit also served as members of Sunbeam's due diligence team in connection with Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman.

59. On February 27, 1998, Sunbeam's Board of Directors met in New York to discuss Sunbeam's possible purchase of Coleman. During the February 27, 1998 meeting, Morgan Stanley provided Sunbeam's Board of Directors with a written "fairness" opinion regarding the fair acquisition price of Coleman. The opinion made clear that, even in the context of issuing a fairness opinion on the Coleman acquisition price, Morgan Stanley had relied upon Andersen's representations regarding Sunbeam's financial health. The fairness opinion explicitly stated that Morgan Stanley had reviewed "certain publicly available financial statements and other information" of Sunbeam. The opinion advised that Morgan Stanley had "assumed and relied upon without independent verification the accuracy and completeness of the information reviewed by us for the purposes of this opinion."

60. The Sunbeam Board of Directors approved the Coleman acquisition. That same day, Coleman-Parent — the 82 percent shareholder of Coleman — agreed to sell Coleman to Sunbeam for a purchase price of $2.2 billion. Sunbeam agreed to provide Coleman-Parent with $160 million in cash, to assume $584 million in Coleman-related debt, and to provide Coleman-Parent with 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam stock. Sunbeam also agreed to purchase Signature Brands and First Alert for approximately $300 million.

Andersen's 1997 Unqualified Audit Opinion

61. In the first week of March 1998, shortly after the agreement for Sunbeam's purchase of Coleman was signed, but before the transaction closed, Andersen rendered an unqualified audit opinion for Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements. With Andersen's express consent, management included that opinion in Sunbeam's 1997 Form 10-K filed with the SEC on March 6, 1998.

62. Andersen was well aware of the potential for fraud in Sunbeam's 1997 books, including the risk that Sunbeam management would attempt to claim profits and revenue on transactions before the earnings process was completed. Harlow specifically advised Andersen's foreign offices (including Andersen-Canada, Andersen-Hong Kong, Andersen-Mexico,

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Andersen-Venezuela and Andersen-UK), for example, that Dunlap had made promises to the public regarding earnings-per-share to be attained in 1997, and that management had a vested interest in achieving the promised earnings levels because management's primary form of compensation was based on the company's stock price. Harlow also noted the presence of the possibility of a third-party purchase of the company's stock or assets.

63. In the course of its audit of Sunbeam's 1997 financial records, Andersen learned Harlow's concerns were well founded. It discovered that Sunbeam had improperly accounted for certain bill-and-hold sales, had misused its reserves, and had overvalued its inventories. Andersen discussed these problems with Sunbeam's senior management and proposed that Sunbeam reverse these improper entries. But Sunbeam's senior management refused to do so. Rather than insisting that the adjustments be made, Andersen permitted the entries.

64. Once again, Andersen gave Sunbeam a clean bill of financial health. In its opinion concerning Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements, Andersen stated:

> We conducted our audits in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.
> In our opinion, the financial statements . . . , present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Sunbeam Corporation and subsidiaries as of December 29, 1996 and December 28, 1997, and the results of its operations and its cash flows for each of the three fiscal years in the period ended December 28, 1997 in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

65. In fact, Andersen's 1997 audit violated GAAS because, among other things, Andersen had failed (1) to perform the audits with an attitude of professional skepticism as required by SAS No. 53; (2) to reach a conclusion that there existed a significant risk of intentional distortion of financial statements by Sunbeam management, in violation of AU §§ 316.10 and 316.12; (3) to recognize that the accounting policies employed by Sunbeam were not acceptable in the circumstances, in violation of AU § 316.19; (4) to obtain sufficient competent evidential matter through inspection, observation, inquiries, and confirmations to afford a reasonable basis for its opinions regarding Sunbeam's financial statements, in violation of AU § 150.02; (5) to exercise due professional care in the performance of the audit, in violation of AU § 150.02; (6) to plan the work adequately to uncover the errors and irregularities in Sunbeam's accounting information, in violation of AU § 150.02; and (7) to obtain a sufficient understanding of Sunbeam's internal control structure to plan the audits and to determine the nature, timing, and extent of tests to be performed, in violation of AU § 150.02.

66. In addition, in conducting the 1997 audit, Andersen (1) improperly relied on management representations rather than applying the auditing procedures necessary to afford a reasonable basis for an opinion on Sunbeam's financial statements, in violation of SAS No. 19 (AU § 333.02); (2) failed to recognize that misstatements resulting from misapplication of GAAP, departures from fact and omissions of necessary information, in aggregate, caused Sunbeam's financial statements to be materially misstated, in violation of SAS No. 47 (AU § 312.04); (3) failed to issue a qualified or adverse opinion, in violation of SAS No. 47 (AU § 312.31); (4) improperly concluded that the accounting principles applied by Sunbeam were appropriate in the circumstances and that Sunbeam's financial statements were informative of matters that could affect their use, understanding and interpretation, in violation of SAS No. 69 (AU §§ 411.04(b) and (c)); and (5) failed to report that a change in the application of accounting principles in Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements had materially affected their comparability with the financial statements for prior periods, especially 1996, due to a different treatment of sales and reserves in those periods, in violation of SAS Nos. 1 and 43 (AU § 420.02).

67. In all, the 1997 financial statements audited by Andersen reported operating income of $186 million — an overstatement of at least 50 percent. Like its 1996 unqualified audit opinion, Andersen's 1997 opinion was false in two material respects. First, the financial statements Andersen audited did not "fairly" present Sunbeam's financial position in conformity with GAAP, as it represented. Second, Andersen had not, as it claimed, conducted its audit in accordance with GAAS.

Morgan Stanley's Reliance on Andersen's Unqualified Audit Opinions

68. After it agreed to acquire Coleman, First Alert, and Signature Brands, Sunbeam needed to raise approximately $2.3 billion to refinance existing debt and to fund these acquisitions. To accomplish these financing objectives, Sunbeam's management elected to issue $500 million in subordinated convertible notes (an amount later increased to $750 million) (the "Convertible Note Offering") and enter into a new $2 billion senior credit agreement (later reduced to $1.7 billion) with secured lenders (the "Bank Facility"). Morgan Stanley served as the lead underwriter for the Convertible Note Offering and as the Syndication Agent for the Bank Facility. Morgan Stanley also coordinated the Bank Facility with First Union and Bank of America, Sunbeam's other secured lenders.

69. Andersen knew of these proposed financing arrangements. Specifically, Andersen knew that the Coleman and other acquisitions would not close unless Sunbeam secured the financing necessary to cover the acquisition prices. Moreover, Andersen knew that Morgan Stanley was a principal participant in the Bank Facility, and that Morgan Stanley would be relying on the representations Andersen made regarding Sunbeam's financial condition. Indeed, Andersen knew that documents issued in connection with the Convertible Note Offering clearly stated that "[Sunbeam] is currently negotiating the terms of the New Credit Facility with a group of banks which [Sunbeam] expects will provide for borrowings by [Sunbeam] or one or more of its subsidiaries in the aggregate principal amount of $2.0 billion. The New Credit Facility is being arranged by an affiliate of [Morgan Stanley]."

70. In addition to its knowledge of Morgan Stanley's role in Sunbeam's acquisitions, Andersen had many reasons to know that Morgan Stanley would rely on Sunbeam's audited financial statements. To begin with, Andersen, in its substantial experience working on multi-billion dollar mergers and acquisitions, understood that Sunbeam's lenders and underwriters would rely on an auditor's certification of Sunbeam's financial condition. As would any lender engaged in a deal of this scale, Morgan Stanley looked to the financial statements provided by Sunbeam and audited by Andersen to evaluate annual cash flow and to assess Sunbeam's ability, following the acquisition, to promptly and comfortably pay interest and ultimately pay back the loan. Indeed, reasonable and professional lenders such as Morgan Stanley, Bank of America, and First Union would not have loaned over $1 billion dollars to any person or entity without strong assurance that their money would be returned.

71. Not only was Andersen aware that any prudent business in Morgan Stanley's position would rely on Andersen's financial statements, but Andersen also knew that Morgan Stanley was specifically relying on Andersen's certifications. Indeed, Andersen itself had expressly represented to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's financial statements were truthful and that Andersen's unqualified audit opinions were reliable. On March 19, 1998, Andersen sent Morgan Stanley a "comfort" letter stating that, in Andersen's opinion, "the consolidated financial statements [for 1996 and 1997] audited by [Andersen] and included in the Offering Memorandum comply as to form in all material respects with the applicable accounting requirements of the [Securities Act of 1933] and the related published rules and regulations." In a follow-up letter dated March 25, 1998, Andersen reaffirmed its previous representation.

72. In addition, Andersen participated in meetings and telephone calls in which it represented to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's audited financial statements were accurate.

73. Andersen also knew that Morgan Stanley had stated in a February 27, 1998 "fairness" letter that Morgan Stanley presented to Sunbeam's Board of Directors that Morgan

018181

Stanley had assumed and relied upon the accuracy and completeness of Sunbeam's audited financial statements.

74. In addition, Andersen knew that Sunbeam had expressly represented, in loan negotiations with Morgan Stanley, that Andersen's audit opinions were accurate. Specifically, Andersen knew that, in the Sunbeam-Morgan Stanley credit agreement, Sunbeam warranted that it had provided Morgan Stanley with accurate information regarding Sunbeam's consolidated statements of operations, stockholders' equity and cash flows, as well as its consolidated balance sheets. According to Sunbeam, its financial statements — certified by Andersen — "present[ed] fairly, in all material respects, the financial position and results of operations and cash flows . . . in accordance with GAAP."

75. Similarly, Andersen knew that, in connection with the Convertible Note Offering, Sunbeam had included its 1996 and 1997 audited financial statements in its March 19, 1998 offering memorandum and had represented to Morgan Stanley that its audited financial statements were reliable.

76. Andersen also knew that, as part of the Coleman merger agreement executed on February 27, 1998, Sunbeam had represented and warranted that all of its filings with the SEC, which included the 1996 financial statements audited by Andersen, were accurate and not misleading, and that they would continue to be accurate and not misleading as of the transaction's closing date. Sunbeam further represented that its audited financial statements were prepared in accordance with GAAP, and that at the time of the closing of the transaction, that representation would continue to be true and correct.

77. Significantly, although it knew that Morgan Stanley had based multi-million dollar financing decisions on its representations, Andersen did not tell Morgan Stanley of the accounting concerns that it had raised with Sunbeam management in the course of its 1996 and 1997 audits or that Sunbeam's financial statements had not been fairly stated in 1996 and 1997.

78. On March 25, 1998, the $750 million Convertible Note Offering closed.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

011182

79. Sunbeam closed its acquisition of Coleman on March 30, 1998. On that date, Sunbeam, through a wholly owned subsidiary, acquired approximately 81 percent of the then-outstanding shares of Coleman common stock. These shares were acquired by Sunbeam in exchange for 14,099,749 shares of Sunbeam's common stock and approximately $160,000,000 in cash. In addition, Sunbeam assumed or repaid approximately $1,016,000,000 in debt belonging to Coleman and Coleman-Parent. Included in the repaid debt portion of the transaction was an immediate cash payment by Sunbeam to Coleman-Parent of $590 million.

80. Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam closed the Bank Facility on March 31, 1998. In accordance with the terms of the Bank Facility, Morgan Stanley — unaware of the falsity of Sunbeam's financial statements and Andersen's audit reports — loaned Sunbeam $680 million in immediately available funds to be used for the acquisitions. First Union, which served as the Administrative Agent for the Bank Facility, loaned Sunbeam an additional $510 million. Bank of America, which served as the Documentation Agent for the Bank Facility, loaned Sunbeam an additional $510 million.

81. As Andersen knew, Morgan Stanley had relied on Sunbeam's report of $186 million in income in deciding to underwrite the Convertible Note Offering and to loan Sunbeam $680 million. Moreover, Andersen knew that the Sunbeam-Morgan Stanley credit agreement provided that a condition precedent to Morgan Stanley's obligations under the agreement was the absence of any event, change, or development that would have a material adverse effect on the business, results of operation, or financial condition of Sunbeam. Andersen knew that an additional condition precedent to Morgan Stanley's obligations was the absence of any material misrepresentation or omissions in Sunbeam's SEC filings, including Andersen's 1996 and 1997 audit reports in the Form 10-Ks.

82. But for Andersen's fraud and its failure to issue qualified or adverse reports exposing the falsity of Sunbeam's financial statements, Morgan Stanley would have had notice of an adverse material change affecting Sunbeam before funding, and of a material misstatement in Sunbeam's SEC filings. Not only would Morgan Stanley never have agreed to underwrite the Convertible Note Offering, but Morgan Stanley's obligation to loan Sunbeam $680 million also would have been discharged by the failure of conditions precedent to its obligations under the credit agreement. Andersen's fraud directly caused the extensive losses that Morgan Stanley suffered.

011183

Andersen's Improper Accounting and Misrepresentations Are Revealed

83. In an April 3, 1998 conference call with securities analysts, Sunbeam revealed that sales for the first quarter of 1998 were 5 percent below reported sales for the same period of the prior year.

84. On April 22, 1998, a class of Sunbeam shareholders sued Sunbeam and its senior officers in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, alleging that the company had violated the securities laws by issuing materially false and misleading statements regarding Sunbeam's financial condition. Andersen was subsequently added as a defendant in this lawsuit.

85. On June 8, 1998, an article was published in Barron's that raised serious questions regarding Sunbeam's apparent success under Dunlap, suggesting that it was the result of "accounting gimmickry." On June 15, 1998, Sunbeam's Board announced that it had removed Dunlap as Chairman and CEO. On June 17, 1998, Sunbeam received a letter from the SEC informing it that the SEC had initiated an investigation into the company.

86. Andersen continued to stand behind its fraudulent audit opinions. On June 15, 1998, Andersen allowed Sunbeam's Board of Directors to assert that Andersen had "assured the Board that Sunbeam's audited financial statements [were] accurate in all material respects." It was not until June 25, 1998 — when Andersen withheld its consent for use of its 1997 audit opinion in a registration statement that was to have been filed with the SEC — that Andersen gave any hint that its unqualified audit opinions were unreliable.

87. On June 30, 1998, Sunbeam announced that the Audit Committee of its Board of Directors would conduct an inquiry into the accuracy of its 1997 financial statements. The Audit Committee subsequently retained Deloitte & Touche LLP to assist in the review, in addition to Andersen. Sunbeam stated that "pending the completion of the review, its 1997 financial statements and the report of Arthur Andersen LLP should not be relied upon." Sunbeam added that the review "could result in a restatement of the 1997 financial statements and the first quarter 1998 Form 10-Q."

88. On August 6, 1998, Sunbeam announced that its Audit Committee had determined that Sunbeam would be required to restate its audited financial statements for 1997 and possibly for 1996, as well as its unaudited financial statements for the first quarter of 1998. On October 20, 1998, Sunbeam and Andersen announced a restatement of its 1996 and 1997 financial statements.

89. Holders of the convertible notes sued Sunbeam on October 30, 1998, and Andersen was later named as a defendant in that suit.

90. On November 12, 1998, Sunbeam released its restated 1996 and 1997 financial results, again audited by Andersen. The restated 1996 financial statements reported operating losses for 1996 that were approximately $40 million less than originally reported, losses from continuing operations that were approximately $26 million less than previously reported and net losses that were approximately $20 million less than previously reported.

91. For 1997, the restated financial statements reported operating earnings that were approximately $95 million less than originally reported, earnings from continuing operations that were approximately $70 million less than previously reported and net earnings that were approximately $70 million less than previously reported. The new operating income figure for 1997 was approximately half the amount that Andersen had previously certified.

92. On February 6, 2001, as a direct result of the deceit that Andersen had facilitated, Sunbeam and several of its subsidiaries were forced to seek relief under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of New York. As part of the bankruptcy court-approved reorganization plan, Morgan Stanley's $680 million loan to Sunbeam was discharged in full, and Morgan Stanley received Sunbeam stock valued at a fraction of the original loan. In addition, as a result of Andersen's actions, the convertible notes issued by Sunbeam and held by Morgan Stanley had been rendered substantially less valuable.

Subsequent Censure of Andersen's Conduct

93. Both courts and regulators have scrutinized Andersen's facilitation of Sunbeam's fraud. In their judgments against the firm and Harlow, they have denounced Andersen's conduct.

94. In December 1999, for example, the federal court presiding over the Sunbeam shareholders' class action lawsuit refused to dismiss the claims against Andersen. The court concluded that the class plaintiffs had alleged sufficient facts "to demonstrate that Arthur Andersen had acted with severe recklessness in issuing its misleading [1997] Unqualified Audit Opinion." In re Sunbeam Sec. Litig., 89 F. Supp. 2d 1326, 1344 (S.D. Fla. 1999). Andersen subsequently settled this lawsuit in 2001 for $110 million.

95. On May 15, 2001, the SEC filed a civil action in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida against five former Sunbeam officers and Harlow, Andersen's engagement partner.

96. In January 2003, the SEC settled its charges with Harlow. In its settlement order, it made numerous factual findings regarding Harlow and Andersen's improper conduct. It concluded that Harlow had proposed, on many occasions, adjustments to rectify Sunbeam's false financial statements. After management refused to make these adjustments, Harlow improperly acceded to that decision. In re Phillip E. Harlow, Rel. No. 34-47261, 2003 WL 169818, at 1-3 (SEC Release Jan. 27, 2003).

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

97. The SEC's assessment of Harlow's conduct was damning. Among many other things, it concluded that Harlow (1) "failed to exercise professional skepticism when performing audit procedures and gathering and analyzing audit evidence"; (2) "accepted uncorroborated representations of Sunbeam's management in lieu of performing appropriate audit procedures"; (3) "failed to exercise due professional care in performing the audit and preparing the audit report"; (4) "failed to perform sufficient audit procedures to determine whether the financial statements were in conformity with GAAP," even after he had "identified a number of audit risks and accounting issues associated with the Sunbeam engagement"; and (5) "failed to obtain sufficient competent evidential matters through inspection, observation, inquiries, and confirmation to afford a reasonable basis for an audit opinion." Id. at *4. Based on these factual findings, the Commission concluded that the 1996 and 1997 financial statements that Harlow had audited were not in conformity with GAAP, and the audit was not performed in accordance with GAAS. Id. (citing AU §§ 410, 411, 508.07).

98. Other participants in the Coleman acquisition have also sued Andersen for its fraudulent conduct. On July 1, 2001, Coleman-Parent sued Andersen for fraudulent misrepresentation, fraudulent inducement to contract, and negligent misrepresentation. Andersen subsequently agreed to settle that dispute for an undisclosed amount.

COUNT I

Fraudulent Misrepresentation

99. Paragraphs 1 through 98 are repeated and realleged as if set forth herein.

100. Andersen consented to the publication of its audit reports to the public and business world by permitting Sunbeam to include them in Sunbeam's SEC filings. Given that publication, Andersen knew and intended that the public — including Morgan Stanley — would rely on Andersen's representations.

101. Andersen knew of Morgan Stanley's role in Sunbeam's acquisitions. Andersen also knew that Morgan Stanley would rely and had relied upon Andersen's 1996 and 1997 unqualified audit opinions for the particular purpose of determining whether to underwrite the Convertible Note Offering and to provide Sunbeam with a loan for $680 million. Andersen itself invited Morgan Stanley to rely on its unqualified audit opinions, expressly representing to Morgan Stanley, in letters dated March 19, 1998, and March 25, 1998, that Sunbeam's financial statements were truthful and that Andersen's unqualified audit opinions were reliable. Moreover, Andersen knew that Morgan Stanley had provided Sunbeam's Board of Directors with a "fairness" letter expressly stating that Morgan Stanley had assumed and relied upon the accuracy and completeness of Sunbeam's audited financial statements.

0141187

102. Andersen also knew of Sunbeam's proposed financing arrangements, and it participated in meetings and telephone calls in which it represented to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's audited financial statements were accurate.

103. In addition, Andersen knew that Sunbeam had expressly represented, in loan negotiations with Morgan Stanley, that Andersen's audit opinions were accurate and that, in the Sunbeam-Morgan Stanley credit agreement, Sunbeam had warranted that it had provided Morgan Stanley with accurate information regarding its consolidated statements of operations, stockholders' equity and cash flows, as well as its consolidated balance sheets. Similarly, Andersen knew that, in connection with the Convertible Note Offering, Sunbeam had included its 1996 and 1997 audited financial statements in its March 19, 1998 offering memorandum and had represented to Morgan Stanley that its audited financial statements were reliable.

104. Andersen also knew that, as part of the Coleman merger agreement executed on February 27, 1998, Sunbeam had represented and warranted that all of its filings with the SEC, which included the 1996 financial statements audited by Andersen, were accurate, not misleading, and prepared in accordance with GAAP, and that they would continue to be accurate and not misleading as of the transaction's closing date.

105. Andersen knew that Sunbeam's financial statements were replete with accounting irregularities and that the information in Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 financial statements was materially false and misleading. Those material misrepresentations included, among other things, overstatements of (a) Sunbeam's 1996 operating losses by approximately $40 million; (b) its 1996 losses from continuing operations by approximately $26 million; (c) its 1996 net losses by approximately $20 million; (d) its 1997 operating earnings by approximately $95 million; (e) its 1997 earnings from continuing operations by over $70 million; (f) its 1997 net earnings by approximately $70 million; and (g) its 1997 operating income figure by approximately 50 percent.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

106. In addition, Andersen knew that its 1996 and 1997 unqualified audit opinions were materially false and misleading. Andersen knew that it had falsely stated, among other things, that (a) Sunbeam's financial statements fairly presented the financial position of Sunbeam during 1996 and 1997; (b) Sunbeam's financial statements fairly presented the results of Sunbeam's operations and cash flows during 1996 and 1997; (c) Sunbeam's financial statements conformed with GAAP; and (d) its audits of Sunbeam were conducted in accordance with GAAS.

107. Although Andersen knew that Morgan Stanley would rely and had relied on its false statements, it did not inform Morgan Stanley that the unqualified audit opinions it had provided were materially false or that Sunbeam's financial statements contained numerous misstatements of material facts.

108. Andersen made its materially false representations regarding its unqualified audit opinions and the accuracy of Sunbeam's financial statements with the intent to deceive Morgan Stanley.

109. Andersen knew that the false information that it had provided to Morgan Stanley, and its intentional failure to correct the misrepresentations contained in Sunbeam's financial statements, would be critical to Morgan Stanley's decision to participate in the financing of Sunbeam's acquisitions. But for Andersen's fraudulent representations, Morgan Stanley would not have underwritten the Convertible Note Offering, nor would it have loaned Sunbeam $680 million.

0114189

110. As a direct result of Andersen's fraud, Morgan Stanley has suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages.

COUNT II
Fraudulent Inducement To Contract
(Conspiracy and Concerted Action)

111. Paragraphs 1 through 110 are repeated and realleged as if set forth herein.

112. Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 financial statements contained false statements of material fact. Those material misrepresentations included, among other things, overstatements of (a) Sunbeam's 1996 operating losses by approximately $40 million; (b) its 1996 losses from continuing operations by approximately $26 million; (c) its 1996 net losses by approximately $20 million; (d) its 1997 operating earnings by approximately $95 million; (e) its 1997 earnings from continuing operations by over $70 million; (f) its 1997 net earnings by approximately $70 million; and (g) its 1997 operating income figure by approximately 50 percent.

113. Andersen knew that its 1996 and 1997 unqualified audit opinions were materially false and misleading. Andersen knew that it had falsely stated, among other things, that (a) Sunbeam's financial statements fairly presented the financial position of Sunbeam during 1996 and 1997; (b) Sunbeam's financial statements fairly presented the results of Sunbeam's operations and cash flows during 1996 and 1997; (c) Sunbeam's financial statements conformed with GAAP; and (d) its audits of Sunbeam were conducted in accordance with GAAS.

114. Both Sunbeam and Andersen knew that their representations regarding Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 financial statements were false when made and/or made these representations with reckless disregard as to their truth.

115. Andersen, Harlow, Dunlap, Kersh, and other senior Sunbeam executives acted in concert and wrongfully conspired to create the appearance that Sunbeam was performing at a high level in order artificially to inflate the stock price of Sunbeam and make it attractive for a sale to another company. Andersen explicitly or implicitly by acquiescence agreed to become part of that conspiracy and committed overt acts in furtherance of its fraudulent scheme in order to retain Sunbeam as a client.

116. In furtherance of that conspiracy, Dunlap and the other Sunbeam executives decided to acquire Coleman, First Alert, and Signature Brands. In furtherance of that scheme, in March 1998, Andersen committed the overt acts of issuing Andersen's false and misleading unqualified audit opinion with respect to Sunbeam's 1997 financial statements and of consenting to its publication to the SEC as part of Sunbeam's Form 10-K filing on March 6, 1998.

117. To induce Morgan Stanley into underwriting the Convertible Note Offering and to loan Sunbeam $680 million to finance its acquisition of Coleman, First Alert, and Signature Brands, Andersen and Sunbeam represented to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's audited financial statements and Andersen's audit opinions were accurate and not misleading. Andersen invited Morgan Stanley to rely on its unqualified audit opinions, expressly representing to Morgan Stanley, in letters dated March 19, 1998, and March 25, 1998, that Sunbeam's financial statements were truthful and that Andersen's unqualified audit opinions were reliable. Both Andersen and Sunbeam management knew that Morgan Stanley had provided Sunbeam's Board of Directors with a "fairness" letter expressly stating that Morgan Stanley had assumed and relied upon the accuracy and completeness of Sunbeam's audited financial statements.

118. In connection with the Convertible Note Offering and the Bank Facility, Andersen and Sunbeam participated in meetings and telephone calls in which they represented to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's audited financial statements were accurate.

119. In addition, Sunbeam expressly represented, in loan negotiations with Morgan Stanley, that Andersen's audit opinions were accurate. It further warranted, in the Sunbeam-Morgan Stanley credit agreement, that it had provided Morgan Stanley with accurate information regarding its consolidated statements of operations, stockholders' equity and cash flows, as well as its consolidated balance sheets. Likewise, in connection with the Convertible Note Offering,

Sunbeam included its 1996 and 1997 audited financial statements in its March 19, 1998 offering memorandum and represented to Morgan Stanley that its audited financial statements were reliable.

120. Also, as part of the Coleman merger agreement executed on February 27, 1998, Sunbeam represented and warranted that all of its filings with the SEC, which included the 1996 financial statements audited by Andersen, were accurate, not misleading, and prepared in accordance with GAAP, and that they would continue to be accurate and not misleading as of the transaction's closing date.

121. Andersen knew that its audit opinion would be used by Sunbeam to induce Morgan Stanley to underwrite the Convertible Note Offering and to induce Morgan Stanley to loan Sunbeam $680 million to finance Sunbeam's acquisition of a controlling stake in Coleman. Andersen's audit report furthered the conspiracy between Andersen and Sunbeam by actively perpetuating the illusion that Sunbeam was a financially healthy company, which helped to support the company's artificially inflated stock price. In doing so, Andersen committed the tortious act of fraudulent inducement in concert with Dunlap and the other Sunbeam executives pursuant to a common design.

122. In reasonable and justifiable reliance on Andersen's and Sunbeam's representations that Sunbeam's financial statements and Andersen's audit reports were accurate and truthful, Morgan Stanley agreed to underwrite the Convertible Note Offering, and Morgan Stanley agreed to loan Sunbeam $680 million to finance Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman.

123. As a direct result of this conspiracy of fraudulent inducement, Morgan Stanley has suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages.

COUNT III

Aiding and Abetting Fraud

124. Paragraphs 1 through 123 are repeated and alleged as if set forth herein.

125. Sunbeam's 1996 and 1997 financial statements contained false statements of material fact. Those material misrepresentations included, among other things, overstatements of (a) Sunbeam's 1996 operating losses by approximately $40 million; (b) its 1996 losses from continuing operations by approximately $26 million; (c) its 1996 net losses by approximately $20 million; (d) its 1997 operating earnings by approximately $95 million; (e) its 1997 earnings from continuing operations by over $70 million; (f) its 1997 net earnings by approximately $70 million; and (g) its 1997 operating income figure by approximately 50 percent.

126. Andersen's 1996 and 1997 unqualified audit opinions were materially false and misleading. Andersen falsely stated, among other things, that (a) Sunbeam's financial statements fairly presented the financial position of Sunbeam during 1996 and 1997; (b) Sunbeam's financial statements fairly presented the results of Sunbeam's operations and cash flows during 1996 and 1997; (c) Sunbeam's financial statements conformed with GAAP; and (d) its audits of Sunbeam were conducted in accordance with GAAS.

127. To induce Morgan Stanley into underwriting the Convertible Note Offering and to loan Sunbeam $680 million to finance its acquisition of Coleman, First Alert, and Signature Brands, Sunbeam represented to Morgan Stanley in loan negotiations that Sunbeam's audited financial statements were accurate and not misleading. In addition, in the Sunbeam-Morgan Stanley credit agreement, Sunbeam warranted that it had provided Morgan Stanley with accurate information regarding its consolidated statements of operations, stockholders' equity and cash flows, as well as its consolidated balance sheets. Likewise, in connection with the Convertible Note Offering, Sunbeam included its 1996 and 1997 audited financial statements in its March 19, 1998 offering memorandum and represented to Morgan Stanley that its audited financial statements were reliable.

128. Also, as part of the Coleman merger agreement executed on February 27, 1998, Sunbeam expressly represented and warranted that all of its filings with the SEC, which included the 1996 financial statements audited by Andersen, were accurate, not misleading, and prepared in accordance with GAAP, and that they would continue to be accurate and not misleading as of the transaction's closing date.

129. Sunbeam knew that its representations regarding its 1996 and 1997 financial statements were materially false when made and/or made these representations with reckless disregard as to their truth. In addition, Sunbeam knew that Andersen's 1996 and 1997 unqualified audit opinions were materially false and misleading.

130. Sunbeam knew that Morgan Stanley would rely on its representations in determining whether to act as Sunbeam's underwriter and to loan Sunbeam $680 million to finance its acquisitions. Although Sunbeam knew that Morgan Stanley would rely and had relied on its false statements, it did not inform Morgan Stanley that the unqualified audit opinions it had provided were materially false or that Sunbeam's financial statements contained numerous misstatements of material facts.

131. Sunbeam made its materially false representations regarding its financial statements and Andersen's unqualified audit opinions with the intent to deceive Morgan Stanley and to induce Morgan Stanley to participate in the financing of Sunbeam's acquisitions.

132. Sunbeam knew that the false information that it had provided to Morgan Stanley, and its intentional failure to correct the misrepresentations contained in Sunbeam's financial statements, would be critical to Morgan Stanley's decision to participate in the financing of Sunbeam's acquisitions. But for Sunbeam's fraudulent representations, Morgan Stanley would not have underwritten the Convertible Note Offering, nor would it have loaned Sunbeam $680 million.

133. Andersen knowingly and substantially assisted Sunbeam in its fraud. Andersen itself expressly represented to Morgan Stanley, in letters dated March 19, 1998, and March 25, 1998, that Sunbeam's financial statements were truthful and that Andersen's unqualified audit opinions were reliable. In addition, Andersen participated in meetings and telephone calls in which it represented to Morgan Stanley that Sunbeam's audited financial statements were accurate. Moreover, Andersen knew that Morgan Stanley had provided Sunbeam's Board of Directors with a "fairness" letter expressly stating that Morgan Stanley had assumed and relied upon the accuracy and completeness of Sunbeam's audited financial statements. Andersen did not tell Morgan Stanley of the accounting concerns that it had raised with Sunbeam management in the course of its 1996 and 1997 audits.

134. As a direct result of Sunbeam's fraud, aided and abetted by Andersen, Morgan Stanley has suffered hundreds of millions of dollars in damages.

WHEREFORE, plaintiffs Morgan Stanley demand judgment against Andersen-Worldwide, Andersen-US, Andersen-Canada, Andersen-Hong Kong, Andersen-Mexico, Andersen-Venezuela, Andersen-UK, Harlow, Pruitt, and Denkhaus, jointly and severally, as follows:

A. Compensatory damages in an amount to be determined at trial;

B. Attorneys' fees and costs incurred in this and related litigation;

C. Pre-judgment interest; and

D. All other relief this Court may deem just and appropriate.

Plaintiffs expressly reserve the right to seek leave to amend its complaint pursuant to Fla. Stat. § 768.72 to assert claims for punitive damages in excess of $1.2 billion as allowed by law.

BE IT REMEMBERED that the foregoing proceedings were had before the HONORABLE ELIZABETH MAASS, in the Palm Beach County Courthouse, West Palm Beach, Florida, on December 12, 2003, starting at 8:27 a.m., with appearances as hereinabove noted, to wit:

- - - -

THE COURT: This is Coleman and Morgan Stanley. It's really defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings.

Where did we want to start? Do we want to do the forum non conveniens aspect first, or do we want to do motion for judgment on the pleadings?

MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, I'm Tom Yannucci representing Morgan Stanley, and I would like to start with the forum non conveniens motion.

THE COURT: That's fine.

The only other thing, in looking at the items yesterday, I got a wonderful notebook with all the cases cited in your reply attached to your response to the motion. I didn't get your reply. In calling down to the clerk's office this morning, they have just found it and are currently docketing it and are bringing it up.

Do you happen to have another copy of it?

0004

MR. IANNO: Judge, there should have been a separate notebook with the pleadings, the entire set of pleadings, the original motion to dismiss --

THE COURT: Oh, I'm sorry, it is in here. Great. Okay. I was thinking, because I had a whole different notebook, it's after all the letters. Okay. Fine.

MR. IANNO: It should be at tab 6.

THE COURT: Yep. Okay. Great. Thank you very much.

MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, it's so good, if you want to take a few minutes to read it, I'm happy to wait.

THE COURT: That's okay. I mean, I was happy to get through your initial one and Mr. Scarola's reply.

Go ahead. What did you want to say in support of the motion to dismiss for forum non conveniens?

MR. YANNUCCI: Good morning, Your Honor. First of all, I want to thank you for giving us this opportunity to burden you with all this paper. It's an important issue though to us.

What I'd like to do, Your Honor, is talk about two issues at this juncture, and then if it's okay, we'll just come back on judgment on the pleadings, if that's all right with you.

0005

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. YANNUCCI: I would like to start with, actually, the choice of law, because I think that's something you have to resolve even with regard to forum non conveniens motion, because that's one of the public factors.

THE COURT: That's one of the thing I would look at. What's -- Okay.

So we're talking about choice of laws only as it impacts forum non conveniens, not as it impacts a motion for judgment on the pleadings?

MR. YANNUCCI: At this juncture, when I come back, that's what we do, depending on how you want to proceed.

If we're talking about the judgment on pleadings, we brief that under New York law.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. YANNUCCI: If you agree with that, I'd be happy to argue it, but I don't need to go into the judgment on pleadings now, but you would have to decide which substantive law applies to the judgment on pleadings in terms of whether it states a cause of action. At least that's our view.

0006

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. YANNUCCI: But at this point, I want to talk about the choice of law, because it's also certainly relevant for forum non conveniens.

Your Honor, I did put together some materials I'd like to hand out to you, and I've given a copy to counsel, if I may.

Thank you.

THE COURT: Thanks.

MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, may I raise a procedural issue?

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. SCAROLA: The documents that have just been handed to Your Honor, the package that Your Honor was just handed, was handed to us as we walked into this courtroom.

Your Honor established a briefing schedule and required that briefs be filed at a given time. I have not had an opportunity to look at this yet, but I note just from the table of contents that this submission does something that the defendants failed to do and were obliged to do in support of this motion, particularly with regard to the conflicts of laws issue.

When we get to the argument on that point, one of the contentions of the plaintiff is that it is the defendant's burden to establish that there is a material difference between the law of the foreign jurisdiction sought to be applied and Florida law, and in the absence of carrying that burden, the case law is clear that Your Honor is not obliged to engage in a conflicts of law analysis unless and until they demonstrate a material difference with regard to specific issues between, in this case, New York law and Florida law.

For the very first time, because all of their prior submissions are absolutely silent on that issue, for the very first time, we walk in this morning and are presented with a document which purports to analyze the differences between New York and Florida law.

I really believe that that's entirely inappropriate, it's contrary to Your Honor's order, and I would ask the Court to preclude the defendants from submitting this document, I would ask the Court to disregard this document, and I would ask the Court to confine both the argument and the Court's determinations to the submissions previously made in accordance with Your Honor's order.

THE COURT: Okay. Is what you're most objecting to what's found at tab 4 of this notebook?

MR. YANNUCCI: Yes, Your Honor, I think that's the one that goes to the point that was just made.

MR. SCAROLA: I will tell Your Honor that the only thing that caught my attention immediately was tab 4 and the chart that is presented purporting to demonstrate differences between New York and Florida law. I don't know what else is in here, because I haven't had an opportunity to look at it.

So I object to the entire submission. I don't understand why, in light of the extraordinary volume of material that was prepared in accordance with Your Honor's order, we get this kind of submission on the morning of this very important hearing. I think it's entirely unfair, and it ought to be completely disregarded.

MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, could I be heard on this?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0009

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. YANNUCCI: First of all, this is not the first time that we've actually addressed the differences between New York law and Florida law. In fact, in the opening motion, we specifically cite with regard to the negligent misrepresentation claim, we analyze under New York law you have to prove there's a fiduciary relationship in order to even state that cause of action, which is not the case in Florida. We noted that in our opening brief. It's also not the case that it's our burden to prove there's a difference. If the Court concludes that there's no difference, it's known as a false conflict, if you were to conclude that. You don't have to go on and do that. It's not our burden to prove that there's a difference, but we did in our opening memorandum.

Now, with regard to giving this to you, it's my understanding this has happened in prior arguments before this Court. These are simply charts and tables to present information to you, and I would say this is consistent with their position. They don't want you to know certain things about what's going on in the record.

THE COURT: Let me ask you -- I would agree, looking again quickly at what you just handed me, some of these are just a different format to arguments that's already been made. And I need to go back and look at the file, and during this motion, I don't recall, at least in what I read, any discussion of material differences between Florida and New York law.

Is that accurate?

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, again, Your Honor, first of all --

THE COURT: In the submissions I specifically read today.

MR. YANNUCCI: And I understand you don't have the benefit of the reply brief. We talk about it there.

THE COURT: I do have it now. Tell me where in the reply brief you bring up that point.

MR. YANNUCCI: Let me get the reply brief.

THE COURT: Thanks.

MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, for instance, if you would turn to page 40 of the reply brief.

THE COURT: Yes, sir.

MR. YANNUCCI: We talk about the fact that there is requirement that there be a relationship of trust or a special relationship under New York law in order to maintain that cause of action.

0011

And looking specifically at page 41, Your Honor --

THE COURT: But --

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I see in the footnote we talk about courts in Florida recognize about accountant's liability, we're talking about the differences there. I don't know if we specifically said -- I'll have to take a look at it, but we talk about the fact that Florida law doesn't require that relationship, but we point out that New York has it as a requirement, and therefore, they would fail to state a cause of action.

THE COURT: I think that's a little bit different than saying that these are the differences between the two laws.

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, Your Honor --

THE COURT: I'll be honest with you. For a forum non conveniens analysis, having read what I have read about Florida law and New York law on these points, you know, absent some amazing argument, I don't see it as a major issue in resolving the forum non conveniens motion.

0012

So I guess the way it would stand is if I find, after doing my analysis, it is a determinative issue, I would give both sides maybe an additional opportunity to brief that issue, but, you know, frankly, New York law, Florida law, once that determination is made, I just don't see that as a major factor in determining where is the appropriate place to have the case heard.

MR. SCAROLA: I understand --

MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, the restatement factors, by the way, it does not require that you demonstrate that. It does require that you show the factors that they determine about where representations were made, where the injury occurred.

THE COURT: I understand. Right now we're talking about forum non conveniens --

MR. YANNUCCI: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- not conflict of laws questions or anything else.

So if that becomes a determinative factor, Mr. Scarola, I will give you the chance to respond in writing.

MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

Do I understand then that at least for purposes of this hearing, Your Honor, this submission this morning will be stricken and that there will be no consideration of the entirely new authorities that are presented in this brief?

0013

THE COURT: No, because it doesn't affect sort of what the authority is. And, for instance, the fact that he gave me a copy of the restatement that was cited or a copy of the rule that was cited --

MR. SCAROLA: I have no problem, Your Honor, with --

THE COURT: Nine and ten, were those provided previously?

MR. YANNUCCI: In ten, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Nine and ten. I don't remember seeing those.

MR. YANNUCCI: These were part of our reply brief, Your Honor.

THE COURT: They were? Okay.

MR. YANNUCCI: And we briefed it and discussed it in our reply brief.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, my specific concern, at least at this point, is in Section 4, Your Honor will see a chart that reflects differences between Florida and New York law.

0014

THE COURT: Right.

MR. SCAROLA: There is included on that chart reference to cases that have never previously been cited.

THE COURT: That's fine.

MR. SCAROLA: And when we get to the judgment on the pleadings issue, if there is a contention that there is some material difference between New York and Florida law which would require a judgment on the pleadings pursuant to New York law based upon record citations that have never previously been given to us, based upon cases cited that have never previously been given to us, when Your Honor knows from the stack of documents you received the number of cases that we have reviewed and analyzed to be prepared for this morning, it would be entirely unfair to permit the opposing party to come in this morning and to obtain any advantage as a consequence of attempting to rely on authorities that they never gave us notice of.

THE COURT: Okay. What I will tell you all then is if any part of my analysis turns out to turn on what's at tab 4 of this submission, I will give plaintiffs a chance to respond in writing.

MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Why don't we continue.

MR. YANNUCCI: Thank you, Your Honor.

I was just going to note that I was given a case this morning by Mr. Scarola that he said he might use that we were never given notice of either.

I would just like to get into the argument, Your Honor --

THE COURT: I agree.

MR. YANNUCCI: -- and let you decide what's pertinent to your decision. And I would like to start with choice of law if I might, which is a relevant factor.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. YANNUCCI: And to do that, Your Honor, as you know, there was some debate, if you read at least the first two briefs, about which section of restatement 148, one or two, applies. And I would submit to you, it doesn't really matter, because whether you use one or two or Section 6 of the restatement, essentially, you look at the forum that has the greatest connection with the underlying controversy.

0016

This is a tort case. This is a fraud, misrepresentation, aiding and abetting and conspiracy. And there's no dispute among the parties that that means Section 148 would govern. And what we did in order to move it ahead and not stand on whether it's one or two, particularly since I don't think it changes the outcome, under tab one of what I handed up to you is simply a repetition of those six factors in the left column, and then on the right column, we put the facts that demonstrate on the record that's in front of you, not declaration, but on the record that's already in front of you, the things that you're supposed to look at to make this decision, and all of them uniformly point to the fact that New York is the center of where this occurred.

THE COURT: Wait. I'm sorry. When you say the record in front of me, what specifically are you referring to?

MR. YANNUCCI: I'm referring to admissions, request for admissions that were entered, the answer to the Complaint, the answers to interrogatories. These are all things they admit for purpose of forum non conveniens motion, page 37, that you are entitled to look at.

0017

They make an argument in their brief that somehow we've done something wrong by attaching declarations.

Now, that may be true with regard to a judgment on the pleadings; not that we did it wrong, but we're not going to rely on those for that motion. But for forum non conveniens, we have every right, and the Supreme Court of Florida and the 11th Circuit said you're supposed to inquire about where the representations were made, you shouldn't blind yourself to what's in the Complaint.

As we point out in our reply brief, Your Honor, there are a number of courts who have said that would only reward a plaintiff who pleads a Complaint, but leaves out location of events and citizenship of the party, which happened here. They don't tell you in this case that CPH is headquarters in New York.

Now, they did tell Judge Rapp in a case brought against Arthur Andersen, which you're familiar with -- and that's at tab 3. And we cite cases that say you can certainly take judicial notice of pleadings in this courthouse. But in that tab, tab 3, in front of Judge Rapp in an Amended Complaint filed in March of '02, if you look at the parties on page 2, paragraph 16, they admit that they are headquartered in New York.

In the Complaint before you, they don't make any statement about that. Why? Because it's almost fatal to their case here where what the choice of law should be.

If we go back and look at these six factors, Your Honor, the first one is the place or places where the plaintiff acted in reliance upon our alleged misrepresentations. And the only place they indicate that there was a meeting face to face with my client and them is at paragraph 39 of their Complaint, which is a meeting in February in New York City. They admitted that in discovery. There's no dispute.

The next factor is where did the plaintiff receive the representations. Well, same thing. They acted in reliance in New York, because that's where they signed the contract. They entered into a merger agreement to sell the Coleman shares and take back Sunbeam shares.

So there's no dispute that the core allegation, the gravamen of this Complaint is this is a deal where they said they were tricked into doing a deal to give up their shares of Coleman for bad shares in Sunbeam.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. YANNUCCI: They talk about being fraudulently induced. Where was that contract negotiated; New York. Where was it signed; New York. Where was it performed; New York.

This has all been admitted either in answers to interrogatories or spelled out in the merger agreement, Your Honor. Even if it was a judgment on pleadings, the merger agreement says this merger will close the offices of Skadden & Arps in March, and it did, on March 30 in New York City.

There were no meetings in Florida between my client and CPH. And the reason for that is because CPH is just across the street from Manhattan, just across town in Manhattan from where Morgan Stanley is. That's where the meetings occurred.

So if you look at these factors that they say, under 142, you should look at where did they rely, and the courts say reliance means where did you act on the information. They signed the agreement.

That's their theory of the case, they got duped into doing the deal. Where did they receive the representations; in New York. That's where the meetings occurred with Sunbeam; sometimes with us, sometimes with Sunbeam, that's where they all occurred.

0020

Where did we make those representations? Again, not in dispute. And that's what I have in this right-hand column, and these are record cites. There's no affidavits in this. I could, that's permissible, but I didn't want to make it an issue.

And then you look at domicile, that's D, Your Honor, the fourth one down; residence, nationality, or place of incorporation.

Again, they have already told Judge Rapp that they were headquartered in New York. And we also attached, you saw further on, an affidavit with the general counsel of MAFCO filed in the Alabama case where they stated their headquarters are in New York and that's where they have the files and all the witnesses.

And that, by the way, Your Honor, was a case where they were sued for fraud in Alabama by an Alabama plaintiff, and they successfully transferred that case to New York City, it was a fraud case involving a commercial transaction, because that's where they said their investment banks were, the underwriters were, and that's where their employees were, and they prevailed on that. And that general counsel was the same general counsel as CPH, the party that signed the merger agreement in this case.

So it's extraordinary that they would ask for a transfer in Alabama in a fraud case involving a commercial transaction and say they're headquartered in New York, but say in this case -- they don't even tell you where they're headquartered in the Complaint. So that's undisputed.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. YANNUCCI: And in a restatement, when you know that a party's headquarters is in one state and they rely on a representation or act on a fraud representation in that state, that more or less ends the inquiry as well. That's comment J at 148-2.

E, the place where a tangible thing which is the subject of the transaction, these are shares, Your Honor, they were traded on the New York Stock Exchange, and they tendered their shares in

New York City at the closing.

F, the place where the plaintiff is to render performance. Once again, that occurred in New York. It's the same thing; they tendered their shares and they took the Sunbeam shares in New York City.

So if you look at the relevant facts that pertain to their allegations against us, the fraud claim, it's all New York. You have two New York parties who were advised by New York law firms with each of them having their own investment advisors. We were retained by Sunbeam. They hired; that is, the plaintiff here, CSFB, and they were represented by Wachtell, Lipton, they had accountants out of New York looking at this transaction. Everything points to New York. And those are the relevant facts, Your Honor, and that's why we went through that.

THE COURT: Let's assume for the purposes of the motion to dismiss on the forum non conveniens ground that I were to determine New York substantive law applied. What else would you want to argue?

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, if that's the case, Your Honor, then I would just point out that that itself, under the Kinney case, the Supreme Court case of Florida in Kinney, they say that alone is a basis for you in your discretion to transfer the case under forum non conveniens.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. YANNUCCI: And I think that's critical. I don't know if you've had a chance to look at the Kinney case, but in that case, the Supreme Court expresses its concerns that Florida has fallen behind other jurisdictions and does not grant forum non conveniens as much as it should given the great burden on Florida courts, and Florida courts should not be asked to resolve disputes among parties who are out of state, which is what you have in front of you.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. YANNUCCI: So I think that's a critical factor.

But not wanting to stand just on that proposition, I would ask you to take a look at where the convenience of the parties and the witnesses takes you, which is the first of the private factors.

If you would look at tab 6, Your Honor, all I've done here is simply take those four factors again which are not in dispute on the left-hand column. As you can see, factors 1 and 4, there's no dispute among the parties, which is highly significant, because that means there is an adequate alternate forum in New York, just like we don't contest in asking for a transfer under forum non conveniens or dismissal that this court lacks venue. Venue here is proper, and you have personal jurisdiction, but we think it would be more convenient to have the case tried there.

So it's highly significant, but there's no issue here that New York would be an adequate alternate forum. So it leaves you these two factors, 2 and 3, which is what's the private interest factor, and that has to do with where the parties are, where the witnesses are, and then the public factors, you go back to choice of law and will Florida law predominate. That's why that is so significant.

What I've done, Your Honor, in number 7 is simply list from the answers to the interrogatories the witnesses that Coleman, CPH, has identified have knowledge of the facts in this case. And you can see you start at the very stop with the parties, there's 50 Morgan Stanley witnesses in New York they say ... their answers to our interrogatories have knowledge.

01-4203

0025

THE COURT: What would be the response to sort of the argument that just listing the numbers of witnesses is really not determinative, that sort of the core of plaintiff's Complaint is an accounting scandal, and that's where most of the discovery is going to be directed, and that's based in Florida?

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I think in this case, the core -- I don't know that they're going to allege that the core of the case against us is an accounting scam.

THE COURT: No, but that's sort of the genesis that there was this, you know, concerted attempt to overstate earnings and then to dump --

MR. YANNUCCI: But, Your Honor, one of the key issues in this case would be what do they know about that and what steps do they take in due diligence.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. YANNUCCI: And that's in New York. They had their own accountants who were to review the books. What did they do? Those are in New York. Those are just as important. In fact, I would say

0026 they're more important, Your Honor, because it's not really --

THE COURT: Except they're parties.

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, no, not those third parties, not Ernst & Young, who were their advisors, and that's who advised them on looking at the financial statements that were in fact in error.

I would say they're more important, Your Honor, because it's not in dispute that Sunbeam had misstatements. That's now been determined as a matter of record through the bankruptcy and elsewhere. The SEC investigated that transaction and found that the financial statements were in fact misleading. So I don't think they need to prove that.

THE COURT: So you're willing to stipulate to that?

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I think it's a matter of record.

THE COURT: That wasn't the question.

MR. YANNUCCI: Am I willing to stipulate? Well, I'd have to go back and see exactly what the findings are. I don't think that has anything to do with us.

0027

I would note for the record, because I do want to certainly state on the record before you that we vigorously contest the allegations against us. And I'll just state for the record, when the SEC closed its exhaustive investigation, it found that we were mislead by Mr. Oozy (phonetic) on the sales projections, the very sales projections we're --

THE COURT: That may be, but I don't know that that's an issue.

MR. YANNUCCI: What I'm saying, Your Honor, is --

THE COURT: There are bunches of allegations about things Sunbeam did. Are you willing to concede that Sunbeam did those things and that your defense is simply that you didn't know?

MR. YANNUCCI: I think I'd have to go back and see exactly which allegation you're talking about, but I don't think we're going to contest that there were determinations made that Sunbeam's financial statements had errors. And I think in fact we'll be pointing out that we didn't do the auditing and we're not responsible for that.

So going to your question, I don't think the availability of Arthur Andersen should drive or that Florida should host this case.

First of all, New York has the same provisions Florida does for out-of-state depositions. This man they're talking about, Bornstein, has been deposed in New York. He went to New York to be deposed, and he has New York counsel. And the statement he supposedly would testify to that he told Morgan Stanley at a printing press about the fact that these sales projections were off, that occurred in New York.

So I don't even think if you look at Mr. Bornstein that drives the analysis. So I think if you look at that, Your Honor, it's not just the numbers, you're right about that.

If you look at the core witnesses, they don't get to decide who are the key witnesses. There's several important witnesses in this case, and a lot of them we'll have with the parties, Coleman, and certainly from Morgan Stanley, but also these third parties like Wachtell. As you know, we do argue they had ample opportunity to verify or do due diligence, and that's one of the factors under New York law that's relevant to whether or not they were defrauded.

And so we want to talk to all those third parties. And there's 83 of tho[illegible] our Honor, that they identify. There are these 15, we're not denying that, but as you can see in the footnote, many of them have New York counsel, they've been deposed in New York, and they can have a videotape trial deposition if that's necessary.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

So I don't think the balance of hardship there favors them versus of us. I think we would be disadvantaged if the case is down here and we want to call all these third parties. There's 83 of those.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. YANNUCCI: So I would say that at least as much cuts in our favor as it does theirs. But even if you were to find, as you know, that there's equipoise in the private interest, then you look at the public interest, and the primary thing you look at is would Florida law predominate.

So if we're under the assumption that New York law would apply, that would tell you that this court should not be burdened trying a case between two New York parties over a contract that was signed and executed and performed in New York applying New York law makes no sense. In fact, that's precisely the concern cited by the Supreme Court in Kinney. That's the kind of case that should be dismissed under forum non conveniens.

Again, there's no prejudice to the plaintiffs, and they've admitted that New York would be adequate, And it's certainly our right to come in and raise as we did properly. We have 60 days under Rule 061 to state this, and we did immediately.

So I think if you look at the private factors, the fact that both parties are in New York, and the overwhelming majority of witnesses they say have knowledge are in New York, we shouldn't be bound by their characterization that the witnesses in Florida who were deposed in New York and have counsel in New York are the most important witnesses.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. YANNUCCI: Also, Your Honor, just in terms of the meetings that occurred, again, they all took place in New York, and I think the documents are there, and that's going to be very important.

So I think if you apply the traditional analysis, this case would certainly argue that it ought to be dismissed for forum non conveniens. If this case isn't, it would be hard to imagine a case that would be.

And again, I think the Alabama case is relevant. It doesn't bind them, I'm not arguing that, but their general counsel signed an affidavit in that case saying I'm being sued for fraud in Alabama by an Alabama plaintiff, but it all took place in New York, that's where the accountants are, that's where the underwriters are, that's where we keep our offices, and they prevailed and the case was transferred. I think that's highly informative to you as to what their position is in fact on each of those inquiries.

So for those reasons, Your Honor, I would say that it should be dismissed.

Let me just turn briefly to their arguments in response.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. YANNUCCI: Because I think those are, with all due respect, a series of red herrings. The first is, they said they're entitled to a presumption, page 20, that you shouldn't disturb their choice of forum, but as this court knows and the Supreme Court of Florida has held many times, you're not entitled to a presumption if you're a foreign plaintiff. And again, that's a matter of record. They're entitled to no presumption whatsoever.

0032

Second, they give you a string cite citing all these cases that have been filed in Florida involving Sunbeam. And again, Your Honor, this has been one of the themes I think. It's very important to us as you decide this issue, Sunbeam is not in this case; they're not a party, they're not involved, and in all those cases they cite, Sunbeam was a defendant or there was a Florida party -- a Florida resident was a party. That distinguishes them from this case. Now, 17 of those 24 cases were consolidated, they were in the Southern District of Florida, by the MDL panel, and they were stayed by the bankruptcy, which took place in the Southern District of New York.

Sunbeam, the whole apparatus, with all the problems, all the resolutions, was done out of a bankruptcy proceeding in front of Judge Gonzalez in the Southern District of New York. So even if you look at Sunbeam, where were those claims adjudicated, there's been no trial in Florida that's gone to verdict to vindicate the rights of Florida consumers as they sug[illegible] that they want to protect those interests. And that's the next red herring. They didn't buy any debentures. They don't have any standing to bring claims on behalf -- So I don't know why that's relevant to the motion in front of you.

0033

The next one is, they cited a series of contacts. And we again don't dispute that there were phone calls made and faxes sent. Of course, that cuts both ways. I mean, there were calls from New York and to New York. Each state obviously had phone calls and faxes, but the meetings, the representations, the reliance, the execution and the performance of the contract was all in New York. None of that occurred here.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. YANNUCCI: So I think that you don't count contacts, and Florida courts have specifically said you don't just add them up, that's for personal jurisdiction, which we're not contesting.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. YANNUCCI: The next one is that our sister company filed, in essence, a counterclaim, Your Honor. As we stated in our brief, we did that because we didn't want to run up to New York and file a claim after they filed here first and then be running back and forth to New York and saying we want a discovery ruling on this and they come to you and we have disputes. We think they should be heard together, wherever. And that's why we brought it here.

And there's nothing inconsistent with bringing what is in essence a counterclaim and then seeking dismissal for forum non conveniens. In fact, under the rule, you get 60 days to brings that motion for dismissal under the doctrine of forum non conveniens, and that would often be after the time for filing a counterclaim.

We could simply assign a claim from senior funding to Morgan Stanley itself, and it would be a counterclaim. In any event, we did offer, and we will stipulate again today on the record that we will take whatever steps necessary to dismiss that case, non-suit it or make it part of a transfer under forum non conveniens.

There's no significance to it. The fact that we filed it here, and we admit that you have venue over that case, just like you do over the first case, is the baseline that is always present under Rule 061. You're required to accept the fact that personal jurisdiction and venue are proper in the host court. So nothing is added. There's no significance to that fact that we filed a counterclaim.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. YANNUCCI: I just wanted to make sure that I covered that, because they make a big deal about it.

THE COURT: You have just another few minutes on this motion, and then we need to give plaintiffs a chance to respond.

MR. YANNUCCI: Then I guess that's the last one I had, Your Honor. I just want to make sure I addressed at least in my opening comments their points.

If I could just have one second on this issue.

THE COURT: Sure.

MR. YANNUCCI: I think I did cover them all. Thank you so much for your time.

THE COURT: Thank you.

What's the response?

MR. SCAROLA: Thank you, Your Honor. Your Honor, Jack Scarola on behalf of plaintiff, Coleman (Parent) Holding Company, and I would just like to introduce you to those who are accompanying me today. This is Mr. Jerold Solovy, Jack Shaw, Ron Marmer and Steve Fasman.

0036

THE COURT: Good morning.

MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, with the Court's permission, it is our contention that this is indeed an appropriate and convenient forum for these actions. And we'll skip --

THE COURT: Did you bring this with you, or did you do this this morning?

MR. SCAROLA: I brought it with me. I did it last night.

THE COURT: I didn't know how you got it into this courtroom.

MR. YANNUCCI: And, Your Honor, I'll just note that I haven't seen it, but I'm not going to object.

THE COURT: We appreciate that for the record.

Go ahead.

MR. SCAROLA: Your Honor, with regard to the forum non conveniens issues, this court I think has already recognized in the comments that Your Honor has made that this claim is part of a far broader set of circumstances than are presented in this individual case.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

011206

There is absolutely no doubt whatsoever that had the role of Morgan Stanley been known as of the time that we litigated against Arthur Andersen here in Florida and Morgan Stanley was named as the co-defendant that it is in that litigation, there would have been no way that Morgan Stanley could have avoided defending that claim in Florida.

It is extremely important that the Court recognize that Florida indeed has the most significant relationship to a fraudulent scheme conceived in Florida by a Florida corporation headquartered in Florida. The fraud was executed in Florida by implementing business strategies and accounting practices designed to artificially inflate the value of Sunbeam stock, which was then to be used as the counterfeit currency with which Sunbeam was going to purchase CPH's interest in the Coleman Company, and Morgan Stanley was an active and knowing participant in that Florida-based fraud.

Those are the allegations in the Complaint. The Complaint clearly sets out that what Morgan

Stanley did with respect to Coleman (Parent) Holding Company was to assist in a fraud perpetrated by Sunbeam and that they were a knowing and active participant in the perpetration of that fraud.

Kinney Systems, both sides agree, defines the Court's analysis of these forum non conveniens issues. And contrary to the position taken by the defendants in this case, there is indeed a strong presumption in favor of the forum selected by the plaintiff.

The cases that are cited by the defendants which are contrary to that assertion are cases in which the plaintiff is not simply an out-of-state domestic corporation; every one of those cases is a case in which the plaintiff is an out-of-country foreign corporation or foreign individual. Every one of those cases involves a circumstance where a non-U.S. resident is attempting to utilize the services of the courts in the United States to resolve controversies with a focus that is outside the United States.

I can go through those and talk about them in detail individually, but if Your Honor takes a look at them, I think you're going to recognize that each of those authorities involves foreign corporations, not simply non-Florida corporations.

THE COURT: Kinney was '96?

MR. YANNUCCI: Yes, Your Honor.

THE COURT: What was the portion of the rule that includes the presumption; was that there in Kinney or not?

MR. SCAROLA: It is referenced in Kinney, Your Honor, and it is referenced as part of the second factor that Kinney defines where Kinney expressly states that there is a presumption for the plaintiff's choice of forum.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. SCAROLA: We agree that of the four factors that Kinney describes, two of them are not contested, one and four are not contested, so the Court's focus needs to be on weighing the relevant factors of private interest initially, and only if those relevant factors of private interest are in equipoise does Your Honor go to an examination of the public interest factors.

Both parties cite the Court to the Woods case, which is a Fourth DCA decision in 1999, and it specifically identifies the manner in which the private interests are to be examined under the Kinney criteria. And what it says is that these are the relevant factors with respect to this case in terms of the manner in which the private interests are to be determined.

It's significant to remember that it is the defendant's burden to establish the inconvenience of the Florida forum in conducting this analysis.

We agree that this Court is permitted to go outside the pleadings to make that determination; the filing of declarations, affidavits, the filing of evidence with respect to this issue is permitted. And once the Court has before it all of the evidence, recognizing that it's the defendant's burden, this is what Your Honor's got to do; you've got to determine the ease of access to sources of proof, the ability to compel attendance of unwilling witnesses, the cost of obtaining willing witnesses and all other practical problems impacting on ease, expediency and expense of the trial.

There are other factors that are mentioned in Woods that just don't have any relevance here. Those are the ones that are relevant here.

And then again, only if the defendant has established through the presentation of evidence to the Court that these private interests are either substantially outweighed in favor of a transfer or are in equipoise does Your Honor look at the public interests. And it is our position that the defendant has failed to prove any relevant factor by virtue of what has been submitted in this case.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

01420 7

Private interests. Morgan Stanley voluntarily selected Florida as a forum in which to sue Coleman (Parent) Holding Company on claims involving common facts with those on which Coleman (Parent) Holding bases its claims against Morgan Stanley. It's a judicial concession that Florida is an appropriate and convenient forum.

They didn't have to file the MSSF case here in Florida, but they did. And when they filed that case in Florida, they said the following: "This court has personal jurisdiction over defendants pursuant to Florida Statute 48.193(2), because defendants engaged in substantial business activities in the State of Florida. Additionally, this court has personal jurisdiction," et cetera.

Your Honor will recall, they moved for an enlargement of time to respond to the Complaint and establish a briefing schedule in this case.

And in this case they said that the Coleman (Parent) action and the MSSF action are companion cases pursuant to Local Rule 2.009. Both cases involve the same series of financial transactions, involve a common set of operative facts and will require the Court to consider and resolve in the context of the motion to dismiss substantially similar legal issues.

They're saying these are the same cases. And they stood before Your Honor this morning and said all we need to do, and apparently they must have the ability to do this, is to assign the Morgan Stanley senior funding case to Morgan Stanley, and then they'll make it a counterclaim in this action.

So they voluntarily selected this forum to bring an action arising out of exactly the same circumstances, and I suggest that it is entirely inconsistent to subsequently stand before Your Honor and say it is inconvenient and unjust for us to be in this court when they chose voluntarily to be in this court with regard to the same set of circumstances.

If we move beyond that and look at the Woods factors, let's look first at ease of access to sources of proof. The vast majority of documents in this very document-intensive case have already been exchanged between the parties in the context of this Florida action, and they have been exchanged conveniently, expeditiously and inexpensively, because most of them are already reduced to electronic image.

The suggestion that has been made without any support in terms of evidence in the argument presented to the Court that somehow there is a significant burden involved in discovering documents because they're all in New York simply is wrong and is not supported by any evidence by the party with the burden to prove that there is somehow a problem of accessing sources of proof in this case. They're the ones with the burden of establishing it, and they have nothing in anything before this court to suggest that it will be difficult to access proof in the State of Florida, and they can't present anything, because the access to the proof has already occurred.

The second factor is the ability to compel attendance of unwilling witnesses, not the inability to compel attendance of a long list of people who may have had something at some point in time to do with some action that remotely relates to this lawsuit.

Now, I'm sure when they compiled the numbers of 50 members of this law firm or 50 employees of this law firm and 30 employees of that law firm, we've gotten the count of every paralegal and every clerk and every secretary who ever walked past the file cabinet in which documents relating to this case were contained.

That doesn't satisfy the defendant's burden of proof. They must come forward and demonstrate that the people whose names they've listed, including the 22 who were identified in their response or their motion, have material and relevant evidence.

We did that in terms of the 16 people whose names we listed. We identified the nature of the role that they played in connection with this litigation.

So all that Your Honor has before you right now upon which to make a determination about the ability to compel the attendance of unwilling witnesses is the plaintiff's assertion that there are 16 people who are extremely important, central to the focus of this case, which is the Florida-based fraud whose pe. .al attendance cannot be compelled because they are non-parties and they reside in Florida. If this case were to be transferred to New York, their personal attendance at trial could not be compelled, and the suggestion that taking a deposition in Florida for presentation in New York is an adequate substitute, I'm sure Your Honor recognizes is simply not well-taken.

011208

0045

The next point is the cost of obtaining willing witnesses. There just isn't anything before the Court upon which the Court could demonstrate -- could say, yes, defendants, you have carried your burden, you have proven to me that it is inconvenient for you to be here in Florida because it's going to cost you more to be here in Florida; absolutely nothing.

The last point is, all other practical problems created by the plaintiff's forum selection and solved by a change; expense, inconvenience, whatever else it may be, and again, there is absolutely nothing in this record, nothing upon which the Court could make a determination that it is any cheaper, any more expeditious to be litigating this case in New York than it would be to litigating in Florida. And I'm sure Your Honor can envision the substantial delay that would be involved simply by virtue of after the length of time this case has been pending in Florida, attempting at this point to transfer it to New York.

The Florida activities on the part of Morgan Stanley are chronicled and detailed in the submissions that we have made to the Court, not because we have somehow confused the difference between jurisdictional contacts and forum non conveniens issues; that's not why they're there. The reason why they are there is to demonstrate, one, Florida's interest in this case, and secondly, the fact that Florida is where relevant elements of proof are available in this case. We have presented those matters to Your Honor so that you recognize the fact that this is indeed a Florida fraud that we're talking about.

Morgan Stanley's active and knowing participation in the Sunbeam fraud included substantial Florida activities, and you've been told there were no Florida meetings. Well, that's just not true. Meetings between Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam in Florida occurred on at least 11 separate dates. Morgan Stanley came here to meet with Sunbeam and participated in their fraud with a physical presence in this state. In excess of 100 telephone contacts were exchanged between Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam's Florida executives and agents. Countless relevant electronic and mail contacts with Morgan Stanley occurred into and out of the State of Florida.

Why are these things important? Sure, Morgan Stanley may have been in New York, but the individual who was receiving those phone calls at the other end of the line, the individual who's receiving the mail, the individual transmitting those communications is in Florida. That's where that proof needs to be accessed.

THE COURT: We're going to do about five more minutes on this.

MR. SCAROLA: Thank you.

THE COURT: Because I want to make sure we have time for the other motion.

MR. SCAROLA: Morgan Stanley arranged the initial meeting between Sunbeam and Coleman (Parent) Holding regarding the Coleman sale right here in Florida. That's where that meeting took place.

The joint preparation and issuance from Florida with Sunbeam of the March 1998 fraudulent press release which was referenced repeatedly in the submissions to the Court, the joint issuance with Sunbeam of the subordinated debenture offering to finance the fraudulently-induced purchase and sale, and that was jointly drafted in Florida by Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam, and finally, the solicitation in Florida of Florida investors to finance the fraudulently-induced purchase and sale by Coleman (Parent) Holding.

If we get to the public interest, and I suggest that because of the complete absence of any offer of proof to satisfy the private interest requirements, if we ever get there, there are at least 24 prior cases which have been litigated in Florida state and federal courts arising out of the Sunbeam fraud in which Morgan Stanley was an active and knowing participant. That in and of itself, in spite of the arguments that have been made by opposing counsel, is a clear indication of the focus of this course of conduct in the State of Florida.

And we have cited to the Court PAFCO, which stands for the proposition that litigation of related claims in the same tribunal is favored in order to avoid inconsistent results.

011209

And finally, Florida has a great public interest in assuring that its corporate and individual citizens who engage in fraudulent conduct causing injury both within and outside Florida together with those who aid, abet, counsel, hire or otherwise procure the commission of those frauds, those who conspire with Florida corporate and individual citizens to do injury both inside and outside Florida, that those persons are held accountable. And Florida has an interest in making sure that the victims of Florida perpetrators of fraud aided by out-of-state perpetrators of those Florida frauds are justly compensated, and it has a further interest in making sure that that kind of conduct is deterred.

On the basis of those arguments, Your Honor, it is our position that this issue is very clear. Jurisdiction is conceded, there is no jurisdictional issue. The issue is whether Florida is or is not a convenient forum. In order to demonstrate that it's not, the defendant must come forward with proof. They have failed to do that. Your Honor is obliged under the circumstances to deny the motion to dismiss on the basis of forum non conveniens.

THE COURT: Thank you.

What did you want to respond, sir?

MR. YANNUCCI: Just a few points, Your Honor. Thank you.

I would just say that with regard to the fact that Sunbeam is based in Florida, of course, which is a matter of record, that's akin to what was going on in Trumpet Vine matter, the 11th Circuit case where Del Monte was the company in question. They're a Florida-based corporation that was part of the transaction that was alleged to be fraudulent between two other parties, one of which was a Florida resident, the counter-plaintiff that was a declaratory judgment. But the plaintiff in that case was Florida-based, and the 11th Circuit said, applying Florida choice of law principles, that even though some of the reliances occurred in Florida, the injury in part occurred in Florida, the fact that the contract that was in question that gave rise to the claim that they had been not given their benefit of the bargain was in New York required them -- that's a choice of law case -- to apply New York law.

Now, turning to these balancing tests, in terms of the burden or the presumption, what I see in Kinney is a cite from a federal court case talking about generally the plaintiff's choice of forum should not be disturbed. That's a block quote from a U.S. Supreme Court case saying we don't contest that's generally the rule, but I'm not aware of any case where Florida has allowed an out-of-state plaintiff to enjoy that presumption.

In fact, one of our cases we cite --

THE COURT: Can I see Kinney again? I don't have my cases here.

MR. YANNUCCI: Yes. Sure, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thanks.

I'm sorry. Go ahead.

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I was just going to say, one of the cases we cite involved a Missouri foreign plaintiff where the case was dismissed, along with maybe a foreign corporation or one that's outside the U.S., but that's not the test. I don't think an Oklahoma plaintiff is entitled to have deference to a selection, and they don't cite a case that says an out-of-state plaintiff gets the presumption.

0052

So I believe that just like the case in Trumpet Vine where you actually have a Florida party, New York law would apply, and I think that's the relevant factor.

Kinney says that if you decide that New York law applies, that alone could be the basis for granting a motion for forum non conveniens. And Kinney says this concern that Florida is too hostile for the motions for forum non conveniens is creating a huge problem.

If this case goes forward, I can assure you that a lot of parties in New York would be very interested in coming to Florida, realizing that two New York parties can litigate a New York contract in Florida.

THE COURT: I guess that I need to maybe look a little bit more about civil procedure, but the rule we're operating on was first adopted after Kinney, and the rule itself has the presumption.

MR. YANNUCCI: But, Your Honor, the courts have later said it doesn't apply to a -- the rule doesn't say an out of state --

THE COURT: It just says --

MR. YANNUCCI: I think you have to look at whether or not -- That's why it makes all the difference in the world is it a Fl...a plaintiff.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

01210

THE COURT: Do you have a case that would suggest that although the rule says under A2, "In fact, the trial court finds that although limited factors of private interests favor the alternate forum, when in the balance, a strong presumption against disturbing plaintiff's initial forum choice," is there a case construing that language of the rule to say except when plaintiff is an out-of-state party?
MR. YANNUCCI: Well, Your Honor, all I know is the cases that say -- I don't know if they tie it to that rule, but they talk about the fact that an out-of-state or a foreign plaintiff is not entitled to that presumption.
THE COURT: But do they postdate the adoption of this rule in '96 is my question.
MR. YANNUCCI: I'd have to look, Your Honor. I don't know.
THE COURT: And do they cite to this language in the rule and say although the rule says there's a presumption, somehow it's disregarded for an out-of-state plaintiff?
MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I don't know, Your Honor.

The case I'm looking at, I'm told, Your Honor, is a case called Mursia Investments vs. Industria, and that's 847 So.2d 1064. That's a June 11th, 2003 decision, so it's certainly applying the rule. And that case does find --
THE COURT: Does it cite the portion of the rule that creates the presumption saying somehow it doesn't apply in this context, or does it just go back to Kinney?
MR. YANNUCCI: Well, it certainly would be after the rule's adopted, but it just goes back to Kinney, and it's citing cases like Ciba-Geigy that we cited in our brief, Your Honor, and so forth, so no, I don't think it addresses that.
THE COURT: I would need to go back and look at that.
MR. YANNUCCI: Yes, I would, too, Your Honor.
But I would submit to Your Honor the fact that there's a general proposition that a plaintiff's choice of forum must not be disturbed I think requires you to look at, well, who was the plaintiff. If it's a Florida plaintiff, I think that would be significant. And we don't dispute when it's a Florida plaintiff that you would typically have the presumption certainly can be overcome, but all I've seen so far is the Florida courts have said if you're an out-of-state or foreign plaintiff -- I'm not sure it's true that they're always international companies, and I certainly didn't see that in terms of the policy arguments that were being made by Kinney. The Supreme Court said they were concerned that out of Florida, parties would come to Florida and start taxing the court system here to resolve these disputes.

THE COURT: Okay. Again, I need to go back and look, because I'm not sure if Kinney is good law once they went and adopted the rule.
MR. IANNO: I think Mr. Yannucci can address that now, Your Honor. If you look at tab 5 of the handout.
THE COURT: I have a rule here with the commentary.
MR. IANNO: If you look at the first paragraph of the commentary.
MR. YANNUCCI: Yes.
THE COURT: I understand that, but it still strikes me if they were trying to limit the presumption, they shouldn't have said that in the rule. That just strikes me as odd. I can go back and look at it.

0056

Let me take another advisement. We probably need to take time for your motion for judgment on the pleadings.
What did you want to say in support of that? And why don't we first probably address plaintiff's argument that it is not apparent from the face of the Complaint that New York substantive law would apply.
MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I think on a situation like this, Your Honor, you have to -- That's why I think we briefed the choice of law issue, because I think you have to decide, even for purposes of a motion to dismiss, you have to decide if you're going to apply New York or Florida law.
We didn't want to burden you with more pages and separately brief those same arguments under Florida law. I think we could prevail on those counts, and I just think New York law is so much more developed in that regard.
THE COURT: Let me ask you this.
Do you have anything to tie me to that on a motion for judgment on the pleadings I can look outside the pleadings themselves to make a choice of law decision?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0057

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I th... that you can make a choice of law decision for whatever purpose, whether it be forum non conveniens or decide a motion like this or a motion for summary judgment, and the courts are clear that you can look at these factors. You're directed to under the restatement. So yes, there's ample authority that you can go outside the Complaint.

THE COURT: Do you have anything that would suggest on a motion for judgment on the pleadings I can look outside the pleadings for the purpose of the choice of law?

MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, I believe that you can, but I'll have to go back and look at whether or not you can go outside the pleadings to decide what law you're going to apply on a motion to dismiss.

THE COURT: On the motion for judgment on the pleadings.

MR. YANNUCCI: Otherwise, what would you decide to use as -- how would you go about deciding what substantive law applies? There's clearly a dispute here.

THE COURT: I don't know if you can do a summary judgment on that issue. I was looking at the summary judgment rule to see if you can even do that or how you -- I understand the practical problem you're raising. I would just have to think procedurally how you get to a choice of law.

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, again, I regret the fact that we weren't able to get the reply brief in front of you, but we address this. We even talk about the courts, they're federal courts, Your Honor, the District of Maine case that goes into some length of saying this is really a problem if on the pleading, the Complaint, the plaintiff leaves out relevant facts, such as place of residence, where the meetings occurred, and that just rewards someone to artfully plead around the factors on the restatement. They kind of use it as a roadmap to leave all those things out. And we know that, again, because in other Complaints even in this courthouse, they do make those representations. So they admit where they're headquartered.

So I think you can and you must look at that, because you have to make a choice of law determination at some point in this case.

You know, when we asked before -- My understanding is early on in the case we asked you to decide this early on, and you said, no, you want to do it in the context of a fuller record when there were several issues --

THE COURT: Or something, right.

MR. YANNUCCI: Yes, of course.

THE COURT: Some procedural vehicle.

MR. YANNUCCI: And I think in a judgment on the pleadings in Florida, we're entitled to make that motion, and you'll have to decide which law applies. And I think in doing that, you should --

THE COURT: Let me ask you this.

What if I were to make a determination for purposes of this motion that New York substantive law applied; would that then be binding?

You tell me the procedural vehicle under which that decision is ultimately made.

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I think it's ultimately made as part of your duties in terms of resolving the issues. You have, under conflicts analysis or Florida choice of laws --

THE COURT: True, but can I make it at trial after I've heard all the evidence?

MR. YANNUCCI: No, I think you make it at this juncture when it's presented to you in the first instance that you have to resolve in this case a motion for judgment on the pleadings.

THE COURT: So you're saying we would make the determination at this juncture on that issue and it would be binding for the remainder of the case no matter what evidence is revealed at trial?

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I suppose if you found out that they really -- If you found there were facts at trial that went to the core of that selection, I mean, I'm not going to ask you to do something that would be absurd. I would of course note again, Your Honor, that the sister case against Andersen which involves a Florida party, Harlow, they've agreed at least in terms of the settlement agreement New York law will apply. I mean, it would be a bizarre result to have that case governed by New York law when there's a fourth party and then apply here --

THE COURT: You know, when people make a determination that New York law is going to apply to a settlement agreement, I don't, quite honestly, think that's a lot of probative value of whether it would otherwise apply.

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, I doubt if Mr. Harlow asked for that. I agree, Your Honor, it is not the underlying controversy.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0142 12

0061

THE COURT: Right.
MR. YANNUCCI: It is a settlement agreement, will they pay the money or will they not.
THE COURT: And people who are in that contract can choose any law they want to apply.
MR. YANNUCCI: But to your question --
THE COURT: It's just a way of inserting other terms.
MR. YANNUCCI: Your questions I think under conflicts analysis, I believe Trumpet Vine, I'll go back and look at this point, I think Trumpet Vine was in the context of a summary judgment motion, and therefore, that would tell you in advance of trial, and the 11th Circuit affirmed the lower court's application of choice of law principles to applying New York law.
THE COURT: Well, they're suggesting that maybe it's an issue you can reach -- I mean, that's why I was looking at the summary judgment rule, to see if you could reach something that's a finding of law predicated on facts, and I guess you can.
MR. YANNUCCI: But if you don't, Your Honor, the result would be that you can't move for a judgment on the pleadings where there's a dispute over choice of law, and that wouldn't make sense.

THE COURT: Well, it sort of does if the backup is you move for summary judgment, and then you have record evidence that would support the choice of law.
MR. YANNUCCI: If you needed that, but again, I think -- Again, the parties agreed that 148 controls, and you've got the record evidence on every one of those six factors.
For choice of law principles, I don't know what else you would learn about that.
By the way, again, when you were told about --
THE COURT: So what you're saying is you want to convert a portion of your motion for judgment on the pleadings that alleges choice of law into a motion for summary judgment on that point?
MR. YANNUCCI: I will do that, but I don't believe I have to, Your Honor, with all due respect.
I think if I bring a motion for judgment on the pleadings, you have to decide it, and I think you have to make an analysis of what law applies where it's not agreed to by the parties. So I don't think I should be denied the right for that ruling because you don't want to make a ruling on choice of law. I don't know that it would be binding. If you concluded later on there was some fundamental change in your decision, what led you to decide New York law applies, well then, of course I think you have the authority to make a change.

THE COURT: Okay.
Does plaintiff contest sort of this procedural assertion or not?
MR. SCAROLA: I am not sure what the this refers to, Your Honor.
THE COURT: This meaning defendant's contention that it can present record evidence to support a choice of law decision in support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings.
MR. SCAROLA: Yes, we do contest that.
A motion for judgment on the pleadings is confined strictly to consideration of the well-pled allegations in the Complaint. The case law is clear that it is the equivalent in terms of the standards to be applied to a motion to dismiss.
THE COURT: Let me ask you this.
Would plaintiff agree that a choice of law decision could be reached at a motion for summary judgment?

0064

MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely.
THE COURT: Okay.
MR. SCAROLA: Absolutely.
I think that that is an entirely different standard. Consideration of matters outside the pleadings is completely appropriate and required, and the fact that a preliminary determination is made that on the pleadings Florida law applies would not preclude the Court from making a determination on the basis of later-presented evidence that in fact as to a particular issue, law in some other foreign jurisdiction applies, because the cases are clear that the choice of law determination is made on an issue-by-issue basis.
THE COURT: Do you have any law that would suggest I can make a choice of law determination in a motion for judgment on the pleadings by reaching outside the pleadings themselves?
MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, I don't know that we have a particular case in that regard.
THE COURT: Okay. In all honesty, my gut is that you can't.
MR. YANNUCCI: Well, but again, Your Honor,

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0065

that would mean in a case like this where there's a dispute, you're effectively always going to be denied.

THE COURT: No. It would strike me that the procedure is that you bring it as a motion for summary judgment.

MR. MCGURK: Your Honor?

THE COURT: I'm sorry. Yes, sir?

MR. MCGURK: I would just direct you to our reply brief. There's a very recent case from the District of Maine that explains the very problem. It says, plaintiff should not be able to plead around governing law by leaving out relevant circumstances --

THE COURT: I understand that, but --

MR. MCGURK: -- and it explains the procedure.

THE COURT: Do you have a copy of the case for me?

MR. YANNUCCI: The District of Maine case. It's a federal case, Your Honor.

THE COURT: No, I understand.

MR. YANNUCCI: I understand what you're raising with us, but I guess --

THE COURT: I thought there was a representation that was in a summer judgment. I want to look at the procedural posture of it. Thanks.

0066

MR. YANNUCCI: It's out of Maine, Your Honor.

THE COURT: I'm not saying I wouldn't be persuaded by it.

MR. YANNUCCI: I understand why you may be reluctant to do it on judgment on the pleadings, but even on judgment on the pleadings, you have to decide which law to you test the judgment on the pleadings on.

THE COURT: Assuming I can. I mean, that's assuming I can. Assuming I can make that determination, yes.

In all honesty, I don't know if I can make that determination based on the allegations in the Complaint. And if I don't know which state's law applies --

First of all, did we find a copy of the Maine case? Let's start there.

MR. IANNO: They're pulling it, Your Honor, but it's cited on page 12.

MR. YANNUCCI: Page 12 of our reply brief. And it says --

THE COURT: I'm sorry, page 12?

0067

MR. YANNUCCI: Page 12 of our reply brief, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Right. I'll get that, but I still would like to see the case itself.

MR. IANNO: He's pulling that right now, Your Honor.

THE COURT: And where is it cited; in the footnote?

MR. YANNUCCI: No. It's in the block quote, Your Honor?

THE COURT: Oh, I'm sorry.

MR. YANNUCCI: The italicized language suggests that this is clearly a motion to dismiss as opposed to summary judgment.

My concern, Your Honor, I know you've heard this, but this more or less rewards a plaintiff who leaves out critical facts that would --

THE COURT: Give me a second to read this, okay?

MR. YANNUCCI: All right.

THE COURT: Thanks.

Nobody has a copy of Federal Rule 12B, do they?

MR. YANNUCCI: 4B, Your Honor?

THE COURT: 12B.

0068

MR. IANNO: I do know that it is very similar to 1.140.

MR. YANNUCCI: Is it 12B(6), Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes, 12B(6).

MR. YANNUCCI: Well, 12B(6), as you know, is the demurer of failure to state a claim.

THE COURT: I just would like to see the exact rule.

MR. YANNUCCI: Sure.

THE COURT: Nobody's got a copy of it?

MR. IANNO: No.

THE COURT: Let me check my office one second to see if I can get a copy.

(Recess taken from 9:36 a.m. to 9:38 a.m.)

THE COURT: I got it. Thanks. Have a seat.

It is substantially the same; well, except that the rule also says if on a motion asserting the defense number 6, which is failure to state a cause of action, to dismiss for failure of the pleadings to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the Court, the motion shall be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in Rule 56.

MR. YANNUCCI: But, Your Honor, I don't think that has to do with factors for choice of law.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

011214

0069

THE COURT: Well, it sort of -- I'll be honest with you, I don't think this issue is reached on a motion for judgment on the pleadings. I think choice of law needs to be reached on a motion for summary judgment.
MR. YANNUCCI: Can I just offer one more suggestion on this particular point?
THE COURT: Sure.
MR. YANNUCCI: If that's the case, then I'm wondering why Florida is taking a fairly bold step of carving out the final judgment rule, the right to have an interlocutory appeal on the issue of forum non conveniens. I understand about choice of law, but --
THE COURT: That's why I was drawing the distinction in the beginning of the argument between choice of law for forum non conveniens and choice of law for purposes of deciding a motion for judgment on the pleadings. I think they're different.
MR. YANNUCCI: All right. So if I understand though, Your Honor, as you see it, you can't decide a judgment on the pleadings under Florida law if there aren't sufficient facts in front of you to inform you as to what choice of law to apply?

THE COURT: Correct, that that needs to be a motion for summary judgment, because it strikes me what you're asking me to do is take record evidence outside the pleadings themselves to make a decision that may be determinative on whether the motion for judgment on the pleadings should be granted.
MR. YANNUCCI: But again, I don't think there's any dispute that you have to do that to make a choice of law.
THE COURT: And that's why I think it's a motion for summary judgment. I think the procedural vehicle is a motion for summary judgment.
MR. YANNUCCI: Is it premature to do that?
THE COURT: Yeah.
MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, if I could, I just would like to have an opportunity to at least look at that issue.
THE COURT: It was an issue raised by plaintiff. I didn't just make it up.
MR. YANNUCCI: No, and in our reply brief, we address that we think you can make a decision.

0071

THE COURT: If this is the case you're relying on, quite honestly, given -- assuming our rule doesn't carry forward this language from the federal rule, but let me just double-check.
MR. YANNUCCI: Sure.
THE COURT: I don't remember it, but that doesn't mean it's not there.
I don't see it. Yeah, I don't see anything similar in our rule. I mean, that just seems intuitive to me. To the extent it's based on a factual predicate, we sort of need the procedural structure of a rule for summary judgment to establish the factual predicate.
MR. YANNUCCI: Let me try one more time, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Sure.
MR. YANNUCCI: I'm nothing if not persistent.
If you're going to make a choice of law determination for the forum non conveniens motion, I don't know why you wouldn't be able to use that same determination then as to which law applies for the pending motion for judgment on the pleadings.
Now, if you were to grant the forum non -- It's all moot anyway, because I would assume you wouldn't decide the issue if you were going to dismiss it in favor of New York.

THE COURT: In all honesty, what I was given for the choice of law issue on the forum non conveniens motion is not what I would expect in a motion for summary judgment for a choice of law. I mean, that's certainly not how I would expect it to be proven up.
I understand you disagree, but I don't think this gets done on a motion for judgment on the pleadings.
MR. YANNUCCI: All right, Your Honor.
Could I at least just make one or two points on the forum non conveniens motion?
THE COURT: No, because that we're done with.
MR. YANNUCCI: All right.
THE COURT: Okay?
MR. YANNUCCI: I just want to understand the issue of witnesses, but...
THE COURT: Thank you very much.
MR. YANNUCCI: Thank you.
THE COURT: So the motion for judgment on the pleadings would be denied, because everything is argued under New York law, and I can't determine, based on the face of the Complaint itself, that

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

New York law applies. Okay?
Thank you very much.
MR. SCAROLA: Thank you very much, Your Honor.
MR. IANNO: Judge, we have a draft order on disk if you'd like that.
THE COURT: I like doing my own, but I would love the envelops.
MR. IANNO: Okay.
THE COURT: Thank you.
MR. YANNUCCI: Thank you, Your Honor
THE COURT: Just so the record is clear, the item you gave me in court today with the little tabs, is this one for the Court file, or was there one also filed?
MR. YANNUCCI: I can file one, Your Honor, but I brought it here this morning. I did not file it.
THE COURT: Do we need it filed?
MR. YANNUCCI: It's part of the argument, Your Honor, I did refer to it, but I don't think you need to have it filed, or you're going to have to have filed the flip charts.
MR. IANNO: Yeah. I think it was more demonstrative.

MR. YANNUCCI: It's the same thing you saw in the flip charts from counsel. I don't think it needs to be filed.
THE COURT: Mr. Scarola, do you care if it's filed?
MR. SCAROLA: I just need to maintain the objection that I raised earlier, Your Honor. Whether it is filed or not, I don't care, but I don't want by not objecting to its filing to waive the argument that it was an improper submission.
THE COURT: I'll tell you what. Do we agree that we can file it if I determine that you need to be given a chance -- Well, actually, no, because it's not relevant.
MR. YANNUCCI: Well, it could be relevant to the forum -- If you make a decision adverse to forum non conveniens, if we want to take an appeal on an interlocutory basis, it would be relevant.
THE COURT: Just to show that New York and Florida law is different?
MR. YANNUCCI: Yes, Your Honor. And I think the listing of witnesses; although, it's in the record again, Your Honor.
THE COURT: We will just tell the clerk to file it, and then we're not worrying the clerk.

MR. IANNO: Judge, would you like another copy, and that way you can keep one?
THE COURT: Sure. And actually, what I might do is -- We'll let the clerk take one apart.
Thank you. Okay.
MR. YANNUCCI: Your Honor, just so I'm clear, you denied the motion for judgment on the pleadings as premature. You're not in a position to apply law. Are you taking advisement on the --
THE COURT: Right. I'm taking the forum non conveniens motion under advisement.
The motion for judgment on the pleadings will be denied, because I can't determine based on the pleadings which state's law applies.
MR. YANNUCCI: Thank you, Your Honor.
THE COURT: Thank you.

Subject: Update on Sunbeam

Yesterday the banks met with Sunbeam senior management and MacAndrews & Forbes to discuss the latest developments as well as covenant relief from the banks. In attendance were Jerry Levin, new CEO, Paul Sarvina, Chief Admin Officer, and from M&F- Howard Gittis, Irwin Engelman, and Todd Slotkin. The banks had their counsel Davis Polk and the company had Skadden in attendance. BofA had myself, Steve Sterling-Syndications and Tom Biggi-SAG, in attendance.

First- Jerry Levin updated everyone on their latest findings in the company now that they have been on the job for 10 days in Florida. Additional disturbing findings are now becoming clear:

- It is a virtual certainty in management's view that the 1997 audited financial statements will have to be re-stated due to accounting irregularities. Recall that Arthur Anderson gave a clean unqualified opinion on the Sunbeam 1997 statements and again supported that decision to the Board last week. Now however both new management and Arthur Anderson are finding things which are material which make the 1997 statements probably erroneous. For example, it appears that at least $165mm in sales accounted for as 1997 sales were in fact either 1998 sales or 1998 sales. Yes it appears the misleading statements started as early as late 1996 when Dunlap took over and some late 1996 sales were shown as 1997 while the associated expenses were left in '96. Again this was done at the end of 97 but in reverse.

- Arthur Anderson has said to M&F that they were " lied to in a fraudulent fashion by management"

- Because now Arthur Anderson will not consent to allow their 1997 opinion to be used in the planned S-3 filing (to register the existing zero coupon convertibles) that filing is being delayed. Note- this does not result in any default on the zeros but does cause a $5,000 per day penalty for late filing of the registration statement.

- Deloitte will do another audit of 1997 and an opinion and likely restated 1997 would come out around October 15th.

- New management will probably have a handle on the situation at the company and be able to forecast future income statements by August 10. At this point the business in 1999 looks more like a $ 2.5 billion sales and $ 325 to $350mm Ebitda business rather than Dunlap's 1998 of $ 2.8 billion sales and $ 460mm Ebitda. However given all the problems and accounting issues, 1998 numbers will be severely down. While Jerry Levin has now hired back most of the Coleman people that were fired or walked out the door in April, Coleman's business was significantly hurt for two months but is now OK according to management and M&F.

The Bank negotiation: we have an oral deal but first here is some background:
The company needs covenant relief and access to the remaining $270mm available under the $ 1.7 b bank facility. The banks have said ok but have insisted on getting now the stock of Coleman which is pledged to us but not in our possession and therefore not perfected. The Board and Howard Gittis have said no to the Coleman stock because they do not want to give us a valuable asset for a 45-day covenant waiver (the original deal on the table) and run the risk that if things don't look good in two months we take the collateral and accelerate. M&F bluntly stated that unless we gave a longer and stronger indication of support that they will have access to credit during this transition, that they would (i) pull Jerry Levin back to Revlon and ii) M&F would walk and we can have a legal fight over who gets Coleman. After the banks talked amongst themselves it was clear we all preferred to be fully covered by collateral. Today, we have $ 1.4 b in bank loans and we have partial collateral. We felt we would rather have $ 1.7 b in loans and be fully secured. The banks and the company and its board have verbally agreed to the following:

- company gets full access to the revolver until December 31 (i.e. no conditions to borrowings) plus no financial tests until then.
- in return we get the stock of Coleman and security in all the material hard assets (except Coleman)
- we are still discussing pricing changes

Rationale:
* this support from the banks gives the market and the trade a positive signal. The trade is likely to move against the company somewhat even with this but less so if we only gave a 45 day waiver.
* we and the management think there is value in the company once it fixes the mess left by the Dunlap management. Even with the stock price at $ 10 per share (down from $50), the enterprise value of the company is $ 3.3 billion, compared to senior secured debt of $ 1.5 billion. $ 2.5 b in sales and $ 325 ebitda also confirms about a $ 3 billion valuation. Again we would rather be fully secured with a little more in outstandings and prevent the trade from over reacting

BACRR rating. DCA, SAG and the Credit Manager in Atlanta all view this as a Bacrr- 5 with this information although a cash forecast due to us in the first week of July would confirm this view. The expectation would be to restructure the loan between August and October once we get real numbers to work with. A syndication is not likely until after the restatement of 1997 by Deloitte. We should plan on no syndication until December or January . Our view is with the loan covered by collateral and enterprise value 2:1 the risk rating will probably stay a 5 . But if by end of August the future cash flows forecast are materially less than $ 300mm BofA should prepare for the potential of a Substandard rating before the Oct 15 new audit.

ARTHUR ANDERSEN

To: The Files

From: Donald A. Denkhaus, Miami

Date: July 22, 1998

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with David Fannin

On July 16, 1998, Phil Harlow, Chris Maloy, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with David Fannin, chief legal officer of Sunbeam Corporation. The summary of information provided by Mr. Fannin is as follows:

- Fannin met with Bob Gluck on July 12, 1998 (four days after the Board meeting).
  - Fannin met with Bob Gluck as a result of being asked by Peter Langerman, a Board member, to "check things out" as a result of events that occurred at the Board meeting.
  - Fannin's interview with Bob Gluck lasted approximately one hour.
  - Fannin kept some brief notes regarding his meeting with Gluck.
  - At the Board meeting, Fannin had learned from Russ Kersh that sales for the second quarter were "soft" with a potential for $60-$80 million in shortfall.
  - Fannin was concerned that "1998 was in collapse."
  - Gluck indicated that open RAs ("return authorizations") were $10 million as of June 12 and would exceed the amounts that had been reserved at yearend.
  - Returns of merchandize from PHD would be $4-$5 million.
  - Bob Gluck told Fannin he had attended a meeting with Lee Griffith, Al Lefevre, Richard Kersh and Don Uzzi where they discussed setting up a "distributor program" for the fourth quarter of 1997. These sales were needed in order to make the fourth-quarter sales.
  - Bob said that Lee Griffith is a salesman and will do whatever needs to be done to make the sale.
  - Bob said that Don Uzzi said during the third quarter of 1997 that they will "need to go to the balance sheet to make the numbers."
  - Per Bob Gluck, "1997 performance was not sustainable."
  - Gluck said that people "hid the ball from him" during 1997 and came to him after events or transactions had already happened.
  - Kersh dumped the "no return" issue on Gluck.
  - Per Gluck, the Company wrote off the negative manufacturing variances in 1997 which was a one-time event.
  - Per Gluck, the accrual rates were kept at the low end of what is acceptable.
  - Per Gluck, reserves had been used to cover expense items. For example, the cost to the risk management department had been charged to the product liability reserve.
  - Per Gluck, the reserves established at yearend were "lean."
  - Gluck was "leaned on" by Kersh to make the targeted numbers.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with David Fannin

- Gluck did what was needed. He felt his actions were acceptable but were the "bare minimum."
- Gluck thought the 1998 projected numbers were totally unrealistic. He felt that the 5¢-10¢ earnings per share in the second quarter could never be achieved.
- Per Gluck, the Company "operated for the moment."
- Per Gluck, Don Uzzi asked him to do whatever was necessary to make the numbers during the fourth quarter of 1997 since the Company would be sold.
- Per Gluck, the reserves were at the low end of reasonableness and there was a lot he wished he had done differently.
- The sale to I. Lehroff was to a distributor who sold products to the same customers that Sunbeam sold directly to. Per Gluck, the sales people knew that the Lehroff sales would return.
- The Company "moved" reserves. For example, the package redesign reserve was transferred to the media advertising account.
- Gluck learned about the PHD transaction two weeks after the books were closed.
- Fannin did not ask and Gluck did not volunteer any comments regarding discussions of any accounting issues with Arthur Andersen LLP.
- Gluck mentioned that barter sales transactions were discussed in connection with the fourth quarter of 1997 but were turned down.
- Gluck indicated that the EPI transaction in the fourth quarter of 1997 was made as an outsourcing decision and was not designed to make the numbers.

- Gluck received an option grant for 75,000 shares in connection with the 1998 acquisitions. Fannin indicated that this was the highest number of options that was granted to any of the officers or employees in connection with the acquisitions.

- Bonuses were paid in February 1998. Fannin was not sure about the amount of Gluck's bonus.

- Bill and Hold sales were discussed at the operating committee meetings during the middle of the fourth quarter of 1997. At those committee meetings, operating issues regarding the billing Bill and Hold transactions were discussed and not accounting matters. No minutes were maintained for operating committee meetings per Fannin. Starting in 1998, Al Dunlap stopped the operating committee meetings because Al was unhappy with Don Uzzi and did not want to meet with him.

- All-Tech litigation
  - On January 22, 1997, the Third Circuit Court reversed a judgment in the All-Tech matter that had been in Sunbeam's favor.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with David Fannin

- Fannin said that at January 1997, the maximum exposure for the All-Tech litigation was $12 million and the Company received a legal letter from Morgan Lewis stating the possible exposure of $12 million.
- The All-Tech litigation was settled in August 1997 for $3 million.
- Gluck asked in May 1997 whether the All-Tech reserve was still needed. Morgan Lewis issued a second legal letter saying that a $6 million reserve was reasonable based on the current status of the case.
- Fannin told Gluck that other litigation matters needed to have increased reserves (he mentioned the Busso/Hotval litigation) and that the All-Tech reserve could be reduced by $6 million.

- Fannin said that he reviewed all press releases prior to their issuance. He indicated that Rich Goudis, former vice president of investor relations, drafted the press releases.

- March 19, 1998 press release. This press release was issued while the Company was in process of issuing its zero coupon bonds.
  - Morgan Lewis said that Arthur Andersen LLP raised an issue regarding disclosure of the reduced first-quarter 1998 sales.
  - Fannin discussed this matter with outside legal counsel (Fin Fog).
  - Don Uzzi said on March 18 that the Company would still be able to make $290 million in sales for the first quarter which was the "street" expectation.
  - Al Dunlap did not want to disclose anything regarding the Company's inability to make the analyst sales projections. Al indicted to Fannin that he did not know what the sales would be for the quarter. Al gave assurances that sales would exceed the sales in the first quarter of 1997.
  - Al Dunlap was very unhappy on the day after the press release went out and felt he had made the wrong decision allowing this disclosure.
  - Fanning said that Kersh was on a road show at this time and did not participate in the press release. Fannin confirmed that Arthur Andersen LLP did not review the press release (it was prepared at 11 p.m.). He also confirmed that Arthur Andersen LLP wanted disclosure in the press release of the Company's inability to achieve sales equal to the level of the first quarter of 1997.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with David Fannin

- The press release indicated that the Company felt comfortable with the 1998 forecast.

- Fannin indicated the he was not aware of the February 5, 1998 sales forecast which had indicated that the Company would not make its first quarter or 1998 sales forecast. Fannin said that Roger Lee, former sales controller, told him that Don Uzzi had directed Lee to destroy the February 5, 1998 sales forecast (a copy of this sales forecast was obtained during Discovery).

- Fannin confirmed that he was aware of the substantial pressure to make the numbers but he had no knowledge of improper accounting or sales recognition, particularly during the third and fourth quarters of 1997. Fannin confirmed that top management of the Company was primarily focused during the fourth quarter of 1997 on the sale of the Company. He indicated that the Company had set up a "data room" containing due diligence documents; however, no parties performed due diligence work.

- Fannin indicated that the Company's personnel resources were very inadequate. He also said that the internal audit department, consisting of two people, was very inadequate and was "chasing special projects." He said that internal audit reported to Russ Kersh until December 31, 1997. They worked closely with Bob Gluck. In 1998, internal audit reported to Fannin.

PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL/ATTORNEY-CLIENT COMMUNICATION

TO: Skadden Arps Team
Arthur Andersen

FROM: David Fannin

DATE: July 27, 1998

RE: March 18, 1998 Conference Call

I need to correct one item I gave to each of you last week, pertaining to the March 18 conference call with Don Uzzi and Deborah MacDonald. The document printed from the computer by Scott Yales is not the same document from which we worked on the conference call on March 18th. While it looked similar to the document which was faxed on the 18th of March, in fact, we worked from a different memo.

Attached is a copy of the worksheet as actually sent by Don and Deborah at 5:05 p.m. on the 18th of March (and as provided by Mark Shehan of Skadden Arps, who participated in the call with Fin Fogg, Greg Fernicola and me). The call took place between 5:30 and 6:30 p.m. (approximate times), followed by several calls with Al Dunlap, Russ Kersh and Bill Strong around 7:30 to 9:00 p.m. to work on the press release. I am not certain whose handwritten comments are on the document, although it would appear that these are the comments of either Don or Deborah.

The fax numbers at the top of the page are for Ruth Porat, who served as the point person at Morgan Stanley, the attorney at Davis Polk advising Morgan Stanley and the fax machine outside Fin Fogg's office at Skadden Arps for the group which was at Skadden. The notes at the bottom of the page correctly reflect the advice from Don and Deborah that the "low" side estimate for the quarter was $267 million and the "high" side estimate was $293 million. Everyone on the call was assured, after questioning, that sales for the first quarter would exceed the $253 million of sales in the first quarter of 1997.

If you have any questions about the attached, please contact me.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with George Tunchal

On July 21, 1998, Larry Bornstein, Chris Maloy, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with George Tinchal, vice president for procurement for Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of the information obtained during the interview is as follows:

- Tinchal started with Sunbeam in August of 1996. Tinchal is in charge of procurement which consists of supplier selection and contract negotiation. He is not responsible for the on-going operation of supply contracts.

- Fourth quarter 1996 restructuring.
  - As part of the restructuring, the Company centralized the purchasing function of the Company.
  - Tinchal was involved with Coopers & Lybrand's consulting regarding the restructuring.
  - The Company originally had 7,000 to 11,000 suppliers which were consolidated into 350 major suppliers.

- 98% of the Company's raw materials are sourced from the PRC (Peoples Republic of China).

- The supply contracts are in writing, however, the length and detail of the supply contracts vary substantially. Tinchal believes that the terms, pricing and conditions for each of the supply contracts are in writing.

- Bitterford textile plant.
  - This plant was sold by Sunbeam in 1997.
  - The Company has a "take or pay" contract with Bitterford.

- All suppliers are independent of Sunbeam and the Company has no loans or investments in any of its suppliers.

- Pace
  - Pace provides castings and the Company takes all of its production.
  - There is a "true-up" at the end of June.
  - There is an internal audit report that deals with the Pace relationship.

- Under the Company's normal supply agreement, title to goods passes at the supplier's plant.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with George Timchal

- Raw materials and other Sunbeam products are received from the PRC and stored at the Morgan warehouse.
- There are no supplier contracts with a Bill and Hold arrangement.
- Supplier rebate program.
  - The idea for supplier rebates came from Kersh and Uzzi.
  - There were two supplier rebate contracts in the second quarter of 1997 and a larger number of supplier contracts in the third and fourth quarter of 1997.
  - During the first quarter of 1998, the Company discontinued the supplier rebate program.
  - The suppliers were contacted by the Company and told that if they did not grant the Company a rebate in the form of cash or credit, that Sunbeam would do no further business with them.
  - Under most of the supplier rebate contracts, if Sunbeam does not make additional purchases in the future, then Sunbeam will have to pay a penalty in the future.
  - Timchal discussed the June 1997 Pace supplier rebate transaction. By way of example, he indicated that Sunbeam would pay $1 per unit for a product and was able to renegotiate purchases of that product for 90¢ per unit with Pace. After the price had been renegotiated at 90¢, the Company went back to Pace and asked them to give them a cash rebate for one half of the savings (5¢ per unit) in the form of a cash payment. In return, Sunbeam would agree to pay for future product at 95¢ per unit.
  - Some rebates were negotiated with suppliers after the initial contracts had been negotiated.
  - Timchal believes the Company received cash or credit memos from the suppliers prior to recording the rebates as income.
  - The manufactured standard cost did not include these types of rebates.
  - Timchal believes there were two or three other Pace-type deals.
  - All supplier rebates flowed through the purchase price variance (PPV) account. This account is recorded as a component of income.
  - Timchal does not believe any significant part of the supplier rebates relate to 1998 purchases. The agreements were all written and approved by Bob Gluck so that they would reflect the rebates as being applicable to 1997 purchases. However, these agreements also required Sunbeam to make purchase commitments at fixed prices for future periods. Timchal was aware of no situations where the Company was receiving lower invoice prices in 1997 with an understanding of paying back a lower price in a future period.
  - The Company received a rebate from Ogolve & Mathers that was used to reduce advertising expense.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with George Timchal

- The Company received a $500,000 rebate from Durable Electric in the first quarter of 1998.
  - This was a commitment to source new product at a much lower price than Sunbeam could manufacture the product.
  - Durable Electric is an iron manufacturer.
  - Per Timchal, Sunbeam could have paid a lower price for future purchases rather than receive the up-front rebate of $500,000.
- Sunbeam received $1 million from Pentalfa (a company that produced bread makers for Sunbeam).
  - Pentalfa was a key supplier in the PRC for Sunbeam and was very influential in the PRC.
  - Timchal estimated that the Company purchased $5 to $6 million in product from Pentalfa.
  - Sunbeam incurred $800,000 of legal fees which Pentalfa was supposed to pay and this was part of the negotiated $1 million rebate.

At this point in the interview, Brian Wood, one of Timchal's direct reports, entered the interview.

- The yearend earnings per share initiatives included supplier rebates of $2 million. Timchal indicated that they were able to achieve $1.6 million at yearend 1997.

- Yearend EPS planning.
  - Timchal indicated that there were meetings three to five times per week at yearend and in early January 1998 regarding planning for achievement of 1997 EPS.
  - The meetings were run by Don Uzzi. Timchal indicated that he never attended a meeting in which Ross Kersh participated.
  - Timchal confirmed that he had seen the fourth-quarter initiatives schedule passed out at the meetings and that these schedules were collected at the end of each meeting.

- Third quarter 1997 EPS planning. Timchal indicated that the planning to achieve third-quarter 1997 EPS was less formal than at yearend.
  - Lisa Dalberth produced a similar schedule to that which was used at yearend 1997.

- EPI
  - Sunbeam uses Matrix Co. to outsource its consumer response function.
  - EPI is a major fulfillment house that does work for major companies such as General Motors and Kellogg.
  - EPI received Sunbeam goods on consignment prior to the end of 1997. The inventory of replacement parts was never closely monitored or managed by either Sunbeam or EPI.
  - Bob Gluck was very critical of the EPI transaction.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with George Timchal

- Timchal believes the EPI transaction was a good business decision for the Company.
- Under the current arrangement with EPI, there is an intent to retroactively account for EPI activity back to January 1, 1998. Gary Jennings has been handling the EPI activities since January 1998.
  - The Company has renegotiated payment for the transfer of inventory to EPI and it will be received in six to seven monthly payments.

- Supplier rebates.
  - The Company wanted to receive cash or credit for the savings negotiated.
  - In most cases, there were multi-year agreements for Sunbeam to purchase product.
  - In some cases the Company was received a rebate for past purchases but, in most cases, it was tied to a commitment for future purchases.
  - If the Company did not purchase any more product, Sunbeam would have to repay cash to the supplier.
  - Sunbeam negotiated lower prices and received part of the savings upfront.
  - Morten was a normal volume rebate.
  - Weyerhaeuser rebate was for lower paper prices (used for boxes). The rebate required future purchases but, because of the volume of purchases by Sunbeam, this was a very short-term commitment.
  - Union was a $6 million box supplier. Sunbeam negotiated a reduction in paper prices. Because of the amount of future purchases, this was a short-term future commitment.
  - Market Tools. This was a rebate for grills.
  - Tuscarora. This is a supplier of expanded foam. The Company received a $250,000 rebate.
  - Brenner – Sunbeam was overcharged for material and received a proper rebate for this overcharge.
  - Janet Kelly has copies of the contracts.
  - Second quarter 1997 purchase rebates were $1.2 million.
  - Third quarter 1997 Pace supplier rebate were $1 million.

- Total purchase savings on an annual basis for 1997 were approximately $42 million over 1996. This is based on forecasted units of production.

From: Larry Bornstein, Ft. Lauderdale

Date: July 28, 1998

Subject: Interview of Al Lefevre (July 14, 1998)

Bill and Hold summary of issues by quarter

On July 14, 1998, Phil Harlow, Rita Gordon, Attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Al Lefevre of Sunbeam Corporation. The Summary of information provided by Mr. Lefevre is as follows:

Lisa Dalberth and Debbie McDonald told Don Uzzi in November that $1.40 to 1.45 is a real problem

In November Lee Griffith and Al was in a sales meeting and Lee was asked by Don and Russ what needs to be done to make the number. Lee responded with the Distributor go to market initiative whereby products would be pushed out to distributors. Don and Russ said to go ahead.

Let me tell you how I believe the quarters were made:

Q1- Sale of excess and obsolete inventory of $12-15 million E & O stock. Sold at below margin, not sure how accounted for, I believe Bob Gluck credited loss against reserve.

Q2- $15 million of blankets pulled forward sold to Wal-Mart and stored at Deep South, not sure of the terms, Wal-Mart took title

Q3- more blankets pulled forward. 48% increase in blanket sales quarter over quarter. Sales were discounted at direction of Lee with the knowledge of Lee and Don

Q4- Grills sold in Q4 under early buy program, which has always been done by the Company in the Past

-Early buy program was not taking off
-Building grills earlier in order to meet demand and avoid stockouts we had in the past

-Discussions of bill and hold were made during early September. Phil Bogner drove bill and hold program, it was his idea.

Al Dunlap, Russ and Don all aware of program and approved in November

Subject: Interview of Al Lefevre

Inquiry made to Bob Gluck in November December on what needed to be done in terms of accounting for bill and hold. Bob told them that they needed to get Customer's to confirm the transactions on Company letterhead, and insurance was needed in the Customer's name. Bob Gluck approved the accounting treatment and the revenue could be booked.

Ask Bill Bloomfield who paid for the insurance and the storage charges

In early January Bob Gluck told us to go back to the customers and get audit confirmation letters signed Early buy program vs. Bill and hold. Bill and hold gave customer comfort that the product was built segregated. Extended terms were given in bill and hold the same as early buy but a 2%-3% co-op was given in bill and hold.

Of the 1997 bill and holds only $300k of Fred Meyer's remains

Q1 bill holds 2-3 million of Menards inventories remain.

Q1 bill and holds was under the same business reason as year end

RETURNS

The majority of 1998 returns relate to Q3, Q4 1997 sales

Industry standard to take back blankets

Blankets for Wal-Mart have always been guaranteed and Gluck knew this.

QVC always had the right to return

Price clubs have always drop non-selling product and send back. This was not new for Sam's, BJ's and Costco

No return policy was discussed at an August 25, 26 1997 meeting with all the VP's and GM's approx. 20 people. Al Dunlap, Don and Russ were present. Al Dunlap made fun of Lee at the returns taken back and Al Dunlap stated a no return policy

There was a new return policy with certain level of sign off established in December 1997. There had to be some level of approval for RA's to be put on the system.

I. Lehroff- guaranteed sale with no documentation
II. Eckerds- in writing, first time promotion for Eckerds to take consumer products
III. K-mart - possible softserve ice cream return problem
IV. Medards- Bill and hold customer
V. Petsmart- large professional 97 clippers large credit issued in 1998
VI. QVC-new products always have taken back over stock, existing products like blenders don't take back
VII. Fred Meyer -Bill and hold customer aprox $300k still remains
VIII. Costco- always have taken back items not sold through

Make returns go away directive from Russ between 1/18/98-1/22/98. Al received a call in Hattiesburg from Russ, Don and Bob Gluck. Russ was enraged and stated to delete the RA's from the system. Al questioned Russ and Russ said don't you fucken understand "No returns"

I did not feel comfortable and I called Lee and Don and they said just do it.

I called Bob Gluck, and said I don't feel comfortable, and said we can look at the returns vs. your reserves and figure something out." Bob replied I have other problems, you heard Russ Delete the returns off the system. You don't know what I need my reserves for." Al said OK to Bob I'll delete the Fucken returns. Al told Bob That we had other programs out there that needed a reserve.

Al told Roger Lee to keep track of them off the system.

The truck would come in with returns in January and they would be turned away circle the country, at time the trucker would just keep the product.

Wilkins was the salesperson on M Block, D.Hudson and Eckerds.

OTHER ISSUES

Middle of January a meeting with Bob Gluck, Russ Kersh, Lee Griffith and Al to discuss two audit issues:

EPI- Al discussed that the sale smelled fishy and that a 40-50% margin and that Bob had some reserves in inventory.

Returns- Russ said to make the issue go away

Don Uzzi circulated daily memos " drive to $1.45 per share. "High-pressure, fearful environment.".

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Steve Dalberth

On July 16, 1998, Phil Harlow, Rita Gordon, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Steve Dalberth, assistant treasurer with Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of the information provided by Mr. Dalberth is as follows:

- Dalberth started with Sunbeam in November 1996.
- Dalberth was somewhat involved with the 1996 restructuring plan.
  - The plan was built by identifying savings to be achieved by the Company on an SKU basis.
  - $225 million in savings were anticipated, which included approximately $50 million in savings for procurement of materials and $58 million of other manufacturing costs savings.
  - The plan called for the discontinuance of all non-continuing SKUs by June 1997.
  - The plan provided for the bulk sale of certain inventory to liquidators such as Goldstein, Gordon Brothers and Consolidated. These sales took place in the first quarter of 1997.
  - The Company never altered the restructuring plan after January 1997.
  - The Company tracked actual versus plan each month. Dalberth referred to an excel file with the name "planrev."
- A new marketing program was established each quarter.
  - These programs provided discounts to customers.
  - Examples of names of marketing programs: Midnight Madness and Sizzle with Sunbeam.
- Dalberth indicated that there was significant pressure by Russ Kersh and Don Uzzi on every sales and marketing person to make the revenue projection.
  - Dalberth did not think any of the sales that were made were "breaking the accounting rules."
- Inventory standards.
  - The Company converted to a new computer system (JD Edwards) in January 1997.
  - There were problems with the new standards and these problems were fixed by March 1997.

- After April 1997, the Company tracked variances from standards.
- Dalberth does not know if the manufacturing efficiencies projected in the 1996 restructuring plan were ever realized.

- The Company would hold off buying office supplies at quarter end in accordance with communications received from Don Uzzi.

- Sale of accounts receivable to Capital USA on December 4, 1997.
  - The sale of these receivables was to only four customers (Wal-Mart, JCPenney, Loews and Home Depot).

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Janet Kelly

On July 17, 1998, Phil Harlow, Rita Gordon (attorney with Skadden Arps) and I conducted an interview of Janet Kelly, general counsel of Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of information provided by Ms. Kelly is as follows:

- Kelly was employed by the Company in March of 1994 as associate general counsel.
  - She was promoted to general counsel April 3, 1998.
  - She attended many of the Company's Board meetings.
  - David Fannin had started with the Company in mid-1993 and had hired her.
  - Kelly reviewed the environmental and litigation reserves on a quarterly basis.
  - Kelly confirmed that there was a substantial "push" by Dunlap and others to make the revenue and earnings projections.

- Supplier rebates
  - During the second quarter of 1997, there were rebates recorded as income from various suppliers. One rebate for $500,000 was from Pentalpha.
  - There were a number of other rebates and Kelly suggested discussing this with Charley James and Brian Woods.
  - The accounting for the supplier rebates were discussed with Russ Kersh, Bob Gluck and George Timchal.
  - The rebates were negotiated and were not part of a predetermined volume rebate. The agreements may have contained future purchase commitments.
  - Brian Woods was concerned about the "structure of the agreements."
  - In 1998 Kersh decided not to do any more supplier rebate transactions for the smaller suppliers.
  - Kelly thought there were approximately six supplier rebate agreements, but could only remember the names Pentalpha, Washington Penn Plastics and Marshall Glass.

- Bill and Hold sales.
  - Kelly heard about Bill and Hold sales for the first time in late 1997 and at Audit Committee Meeting but was not directly involved.

- Systems issue.
  - Kelly heard about problems with systems conversion issues relating to the first quarter of 1997. The Company was not getting reports losing information and had to do some billings by hand.

- No Return Policy
  - Kelly first heard about the no returns policy in the last 30-60 days.
  - Bill Blumfield would know about the warehouse problem.

- Press releases.
  - Coopers and Lybrand reviewed the press releases relating to the two restructuring transactions.
  - There was no formal review process for press releases.

- Kelly did not work on any guaranteed sales agreements.

- Kelly worked on the EPI agreement.
  - She worked with Bob Gluck on the accounting treatment and Gluck was happy with it.
  - She believes that Larry Bornstein was involved in discussing the EPI transaction in connection with Arthur Andersen's yearend audit work.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Barry Hanson

On July 17, 1998, Phil Harlow, Rita Gordon, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Barry Hanson, credit manager with Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of the information provided by Mr. Hanson is as follows:

- Hanson started with Sunbeam on November 6, 1996. He previously was employed by Telstar Factors.

- Hanson discussed the Company's JD Edwards system.
  - The Company has outsourced the credit system to CIT.
  - Hanson expressed his concern regarding the "address book" on the JD Edwards system which he says will allow anyone with access to the menu to be able to access any field in the system (a potential internal control issue). Hanson indicated that someone with this access could release an order for shipment.
  - Hanson said there was no one master account number for customers. By example, he said that PHD had 11 or 12 customer numbers.
  - The system has the ability to roll up a combination of account numbers which can be used to monitor the consolidated credit risk on a customer; however, this function was generally not used.
  - Hanson had two "critical" recommendations for the Company, as follows:
    - Fix the address book
    - Fix the audited cash process

- There were 354,000 disputed shipments in 1997.
  - This represents disputed items totaling $355 million.
  - There were approximately $200 million of disputed invoices and approximately $150 million of deductions.
  - The 1998 year-to-date disputed items are in excess of those during the comparable period in 1997.
  - These disputed items result in a significant delay in receiving cash from customers.
  - The Company has a 90% collection rate on billing issues.

- In January 1997, the Company converted to the new billing and collection system.

- There was no parallel testing of data during the conversion.

- Transition to new system was done in nine weeks.
- Hanson's key staff person is Dave Mullen.
- The Company had numerous problems with its EDI customers at the date of conversion and still continues to have some problems in this area.
  - There are technical issues relating to the transmission of data and "mapping issues" relating to the set up of EDI information.
  - Was running at a 35% error rate now down to 18%.
- The Company uses CrediTec for collection of deductions (the Company outsourced this function).
- CIT is responsible for follow up on past-due accounts receivable.
  - Initially with the conversion, CIT was following up on past due accounts receivable after 30 days.
  - CIT now follows up with past due accounts receivable after 10 days (this change was instituted sometime during the May to July 1997 period).
- The Company's loss experience on deductions is about 24% to 25%.
  - The Company also has slow paying customers representing about 10% to 15% of the receivable balances.
- The reasons for the deductions (in order of dollar magnitude) are as follows:
  1. Advertising
  2. Returns of non-defective merchandize
  3. Warranty returns
  4. Shortages of merchandise received
  5. Pricing differences between the purchase order and invoice
- The Company had a problem with duplicate shipments.
  - This was a significant problem during the early phases of the conversion (in the first and second quarters of 1997). This was partially the result of the Company using the same invoice number more than once.
  - During the third and fourth quarters of 1997, the problems with duplicate shipments improved.
  - Hanson was aware of no issues relating to intentional "double shipments."

- Hanson was involved in establishing the accounts receivable reserves at yearend.
- The Company established daily reporting for accounts receivable during 1997. Information included:
  - Aging of receivables.
  - Dispute report by type of dispute.
  - Listing of accounts with balances over $500,000.
  - Listing of accounts over 90-day delinquent.
  - On average, the current portion of accounts receivable would be from a low of 40% of the total outstanding balance to a high of 55% to 60% of the outstanding balance.
- Montgomery Wards went bankrupt during the year and the Company had an accounts receivable of $3.2 million due from Montgomery Wards.
- Bad debt reserves.
  - Bob Gluck was in charge of establishing the bad debt reserves.
  - At December 31, 1997, Hanson believed that the bad debt reserve was approximately $6 million and that there was another $6 million in reserves for other items.
  - There was a delay in writing off bad debts at yearend until May or June of 1998.
  - There was a write off of Samsonite receivable in May 1998.
  - There was a write off of all 1996 balances.
- Unidentified deductions.
  - These represent instances where the customer makes a deduction from payment of its invoice but does not specify the reason the deduction is being made.
  - It usually takes 15 to 30 days to resolve the reason for an unidentified deduction.
  - Approximately 40% to 60% of all deductions are "unidentified deductions" which Hanson believes is the industry average.
  - CrediTec cannot authorize the issuance of the credit without Company approval.
  - Bob Gluck was very persistent in trying to resolve deductions and did not routinely authorize credit memos.
  - Nothing unusual occurred in 1998 in relating to the deductions issue.
  - CrediTec has 35 people employed in trying to resolve deduction issues. When the Company first outsourced this function to CrediTec, CrediTec believed that they would only need 7 to 10 people for this function.
- Credit memos can be issued in the following manner:
  - The customer service department can issue a credit.

- Return authorizations can be approved.
- CrediTec, with approval, can issue credit memos.
- The Company issues automatic credits for disputed items of less than $50 (previously the minimum was set at $200). This amounted to approximately $5 million to $7 million in 1997.

- CrediTec produces detailed monthly reports for the Company.

- During the July – August 1997 time frame, management came up with the "no-return" policy. Hanson thinks that a letter went to customers explaining the policy.

- Some return authorizations were improperly coded as warranty returns but really represented returns of non-defective products. This was done to allow the salesman to get around the Company policy of no returns.

- CrediTec receives a 23% commission on collection of chargebacks.

- During the July – August 1997 time frame, management came up with the "no-return" policy. Hanson thinks that a letter went to customers explaining the policy.

- CIT produces a weekly report of collections and reasons for non-collection of receivables.
  - The lead contact person at CIT is Joe Richardson in the New York office.
  - Rita Fletcher, the Company's account representative, is based in Danville, Virginia. Her telephone number is (804) 791-6345.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Kyle Sinclair

On July 21, 1998, Larry Bornstein, Chris Maloy, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Kyle Sinclair, director of international finance for Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of information obtained from Mr. Sinclair is as follows:

- Sinclair started with Sunbeam in January of 1994.
- Prior to joining Sunbeam, Sinclair was with Arthur Andersen in Canada and worked on the Sunbeam audit.
- Sinclair has been the director of international finance since late 1996.
- Jim Miller has been hired as the international controller from Coleman Corporation and Sinclair is hoping to transfer to Sunbeam of Canada.
- Sinclair was responsible for Sunbeam's accounting for its foreign subsidiaries which consist of Asia (Hong Kong), Europe (UK), Mexico, Venezuela, Canada and Miami export.
- Sinclair participated in establishing the reserves at yearend 1996 for restructuring of the foreign operations.
  - Bob Gluck reviewed those reserves and reduced them (at December 31, 1996) to remove all contingencies from the reserves.
- Some excess and obsolescence reserves were taken into 1997 income. Sinclair thinks this was only a few hundred thousand dollars.
- Bob Gluck was not involved in the details regarding accounting for foreign operations.
- The Company was very aggressive in obtaining sales orders from customers, particularly at the end of the fourth quarter of 1997.
  - Sinclair was not aware of any 1997 sales with guaranteed right of return.
  - There were several instances in 1998 of potential guaranteed sales. In February 1998, Sunbeam Canada had high-sales return (approximately $774,000). In addition, The Bay Company and Wal-Mart may have had some guaranteed sales in 1998.

- Asia
  - Sales projection for 1997 was $20 million.
    - The strategy to achieve these sales included a substantial increase in blanket sales
    - Blankets, which were manufactured at the Waynesboro plant were shipped before yearend 1997 to China, Japan and Taiwan. These were sold to the Company's Hong Kong distributor.
  - Sinclair showed us a income statement for the six-months ended June 1998 which reflected sales of $2.5 million and returns of $4.8 million resulting in net sales for the six months of a negative $2.3 million and a negative operating profit of approximately $3 million.
  - The blankets were returned in 1998. Sinclair indicated this was because of concern over ability of the distributor to pay for the blankets.
  - The blankets are still being held in Sunbeam warehouses located in China, Japan and Taiwan.

- Mexico
  - Sinclair believes that there was approximately $500,000 to $1 million in Bill and Hold sales at yearend 1997 in Mexico.
  - The Mexico operation is in disarray due to the substantial reduction in headcount from the restructuring plan.
  - The Company was producing more products in Mexico since the restructuring, but had no additional personnel.
  - There were problems in the finance area, including payables not being paid and receipts of raw materials being entered into the production line without entering this information into the inventory accounting system.
  - The physical inventory resulted in more inventory than was recorded on the books (due to the problem noted above).
  - There was a proposed adjustment by Arthur Andersen to record accounts payable and reduce inventory by approximately $1.5 million at the end of 1997. This adjustment was passed by the Company and negatively impacted 1998 income.
  - There were 1997 freight bills that were not accrued as of yearend 1997.
  - The Mexico plant has obsolete raw materials (perhaps $4 million) which may not be realizable if the Mexico plant is shut down. Sinclair indicated that the decision to close down the Mexico plant was still uncertain.

- Venezuela
  - There was an inventory shrink in Venezuela.
  - There are obsolete raw materials which are not used in the current production.

- Bill and Hold sales.
  - Sinclair was first aware of Bill and Hold sales in the middle of the fourth quarter of 1997.
  - Gluck did not want to have any Bill and Hold sales in the foreign operations.

- "Initiatives for Success in 4Q97."
  - Sinclair first saw this schedule in a leadership team meeting.
  - Don Uzzi was responsible for maintaining this list of initiatives.
  - The Canadian tax issue involves the duty charged on heating pads. The Company was charged at the "textile" rate but should have been charged at the rate applicable to "appliances." There was approximately $1 million of potential duty recovery.
    - The appeal was in process at December 31, 1997 and the Canadian duty recovery was not booked in 1997 and has not been done so far in 1998.
  - The National Electric bad debt recovery was 100% reserved at December 31, 1997. Sinclair thinks there was some money recovered in 1998 and suggested we talk with Janet Kelly regarding this matter.
    - The Company recorded $1 million in recovery on National Electric in 1997. Sinclair indicated that he would not have booked this recovery in 1997 since it had not been realized.
  - Sinclair indicated that there was no discussion at the leadership team meetings regarding "breaking the rules" regarding accounting matters.
  - Dickson Thayer did not agree with Don Uzzi regarding the Company's approach to accelerate sales and income. He was in a constant battle with Uzzi and left the Company in January 1998.
  - There was an atmosphere of constant pressure to make the numbers (revenue and earnings per share).
  - There was a push to make sales or lose your job.
  - The Company was run on a short-term basis.
  - Gluck's nature was to "do the right thing."

- Results of international operations for 1997.
  - 1997 had operating income of approximately $25 million versus a loss of approximately $5 million in 1996.
  - Sinclair thinks that the operating results, except as noted above, appropriately reflect actual operations.
  - The Company made significant improvements in foreign operations and in sales during 1997.
  - Mexico significantly increased production in 1997 and the Company's financial statements give full recognition for the intercompany profit to the Mexico operations.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Deborah McDonald

---

On July 21, 1998, Larry Bornstein and Chris Maloy, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Deborah McDonald. The summary of the information provided by Ms. McDonald is as follows:

- McDonald started with Sunbeam in October of 1997.
- Her initial job was in charge of corporate planning which included forecasting, budgeting and monitoring against the overall corporate budget.
- At the end of December 1997 when Lisa Dalberth left the Company, Lisa's responsibilities were added to McDonald's. Lisa was assistant to Don Uzzi. Uzzi was responsible for all operations and operated as the Chief Operating Officer of the Company.
- On April 1, 1998, McDonald was given the additional responsibility for business development and reported to Russ Kersh since Uzzi was no longer with the Company.
- McDonald had very little direct involvement in the yearend closing process. She believes that one of her direct reports (perhaps Steve Grow) was involved in reviewing research and development expenditures to determine which amounts could be properly capitalizable.
- McDonald was asked a series of questions about the report titled "Initiatives for Success for 4Q97."
  - This report was prepared by Lisa Dalberth and McDonald took over the process during the last week of December 1997 when Lisa left the Company.
  - The schedule was updated every day for Don Uzzi.
  - The schedule was discussed at leadership meetings. Attendees at the leadership meetings included the general managers for the business units, Bob Gluck, Lisa Dalberth, Al Lefevre, George Timchal, Judy Maudlin and Rich Goudis. Don Uzzi was the chairman of the leadership meetings.
  - The initiatives on the schedule were designed to help the Company achieve its forecasted fourth quarter 1997 earnings per share. Specific follow up was assigned to individuals.
  - Some of the individuals who were assigned responsibilities did not agree with certain items and these items were dropped from future schedules. McDonald mentioned that the Company looked at and decided that it could not capitalize certain repair and maintenance costs.

- McDonald indicated she had no knowledge of what accounting entries actually got recorded on the books and records of the Company.
- She indicated that some of the circled items on her schedule were "up in the air" (presumably meaning they still needed to be resolved). For example, capitalized research and development cost of $2.5 million and over reserves for warranty costs.
- McDonald indicated that sale of the Bulls tickets related to the Company's plan to sell the Company's season tickets for the Bulls games which were used by the Chicago sales office.

- McDonald received a copy of Gluck's yearend adjustment schedule.

- McDonald indicated that the by January 15, 1998, she advised management (presumably Uzzi, her boss) that there was risk that the Company would not make its first quarter earnings projection. She thought that the Company would more like make 15¢ per share versus the 30¢ that had been planned.

- There was a conference call about mid-February 1998 where she stated that there was no way that the Company could make its first-quarter earnings per share plan.
  - Participants on this conference call included Rich Goudis, Russ Kersh, David Fannin, Don Uzzi (Kersh and Fannin where in New York at the time).
  - McDonald indicated that the first quarter of 1998 included a significant number of expenses which were applicable to 1997 and, therefore, the projected EPS was unrealistic.

- A schedule of "charges from 1997 booked in 1998" was prepared in February 1998.
  - The schedule reflects distribution-warehousing costs (D&W) freight costs relating to 1997. She indicated that Bill Bloomfield "scrubbed" (prepared) this information for her. She indicated that freight costs had been billed to a customer for $975,000 which should have been $975.
  - There was an under-accrual of freight costs of $1.5 million.
  - Customer cash discounts taken of $600,000 relate to 1997. The Company's previous accounting policy was to record cash discounts when the credit memos were issued.
  - Special deals not included in the "deal master" of $600,000 had been agreed to.
  - There was a proposed but not recorded audit adjustment of $1.1 million for Mexico which applied to 1997 and was recorded in the first quarter of 1998. This was booked to "other manufacturing variances."
  - There was a foreign exchange loss of $700,000.

  - This book represented the "go to market" plan to help achieve fourth-quarter 1997 sales.
  - Kersh knew that the fourth quarter of 1997 was not going well.
  - There was a meeting of Russ Kersh and Don Uzzi (co-chairs of the meeting) and Lee Griffith, Lisa Dalberth and the general managers of the business units to discuss the red book. This meeting was held around the middle of the fourth quarter of 1997. Al Dunlap did not attend this meeting.
  - McDonald believes that the red book may have been the result of a meeting where Dunlap reviewed the 1998 to 2000 plan and was outraged because it was not aggressive enough. This meeting was conducted sometime in the middle of the fourth quarter of 1997.
  - The red book indicated that if a customer ordered 25% of its projected 1998 grill order before yearend, the customer would receive an extra discount. The plan was to sell in early and hopefully extend the selling season. McDonald indicated that the problem was that the Company never changed the customer's buying patterns.

- The early buy program was started in September 1997 and, as a result, October 1997 sales were terrible.

- McDonald was not involved in the Bill and Hold sales program. She indicated that Bob Gluck, Roger Lee and Al Lefevre were the ones most familiar with this program.

- There was a big push to sell to "consolidators" at quarter end. She mentioned PHD as an example.

- Sale of inventory to EPL
  - The only reason for this sale was to record sales revenue and margin.
  - The sales revenue recorded was approximately $9 or 10 million and the margin was approximately 70%. McDonald believes the Company reserved approximately $1 million of the margin on this sale.

- Gluck was concerned with first-quarter 1998 returns. McDonald believes he was told that there were no guaranteed sales at yearend.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Deborah McDonald

- First-quarter 1998 sales forecast.
  - The goal was $315 million, the street expectation was $290 million and the actual results were $240 million.
  - McDonald knew they could not make the sale revenue numbers. She told management in a conference call in February of 1998 that they could not make the sales or earnings per share. She was projected EPS of 20¢ to 22¢ per share at that time. The shortfall was due partially to the "spillover" of expenses from 1997 and the low run rate of sales during the first quarter of 1998.
  - There was no way the Company could ever make $2.20 per share for 1998. McDonald thought that EPS would be closer to $1.20 per share.

- March 18, 1998 conference call prior to the March 19 press release.
  - Participants in the conference call included David Fannin, Don Uzzi and multiple participants from their investment banker (Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley's legal counsel). McDonald indicated Lee Griffith may have participated in this conference call. The call was held from approximately 4:30 p.m. to approximately 7:30 p.m.
  - The investment bankers and attorneys had concern over how the Company could ship the amount of product needed to make the first-quarter 1998 sales forecast. They were told that the customers had been conditioned to buy most of their products during the last week of the quarter.
  - There was no discussion of profit margin or first-quarter 1998 earnings per share during this conference call.

- McDonald indicated some sales were being made at a loss or low margin just to make the first-quarter 1998 sales projections.

- The second conference call on March 18, 1998.
  - McDonald did not participate in this call, but she believes it lasted until around 11 p.m. or later that evening.
  - She believes Fannin or Kersh drafted the press release.
  - The press release was distributed in the morning and she did not review the press release.
  - She disagreed with the statement in the press release that the Company would be able to match its first quarter 1997 revenue and earnings nor did she believe it would be able to make the revenue and earnings for the 1998 year.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Deborah McDonald

- McDonald indicated that the only contact that the investment bankers (Morgan Stanley) had with the Company was through Kersh and Goudis.
  - Morgan Stanley prepared a ten-year projection with no input from operating management of the Company. McDonald believes Kersh and Gluck provided certain information to the investment bankers for this projection.
  - McDonald and Scott Yales (who worked for Lisa Dalberth) were asked to put together a ten-year plan for the company.
  - McDonald and Yales were told not to bother talking with operating management in the Company in order to put together this ten-year projection. They were asked to prepare it "in a vacuum" and give the information to Morgan Stanley. McDonald believes Morgan Stanley may have made further revisions to this ten-year projection. Yales produced a pro forma combined projection of the Company reflecting earnings per share of $1 to $1.30 per share. Morgan Stanley apparently used $1.80 per share in their projection.

- In mid-March 1998, McDonald attended a meeting with the investment bankers (including Morgan Stanley) and attorneys.
  - Uzzi and Kersh were out of town and McDonald was asked to chair this meeting.
  - Approximately 30 people attended this meeting.
  - She was never asked about the results for the first quarter of 1998.
  - McDonald presented a strategic plan overview which had previously been prepared by Kersh which she believes included a plan to earn $2.20 per share for 1998.

- April 1998 submission to investment bankers.
  - Coleman was coming in below plan at this time.
  - Scott Yales prepared an analysis of operating results which was later changed to be more favorable.
  - McDonald advised Kersh about her concerns regarding the plan. Specifically she advised Kersh of the following:
    - $150 million in exposure on sales revenue.
    - No plans were in place to reduce selling, general and administrative expenses (which had been projected at $20 million).
    - The plan reflected an outsourcing strategy savings which was not in place.
    - The plan reflected positive grill manufacturing variances which were not being achieved.

- May 1998 submission to Morgan Stanley.
  - The Company prepared a "replan."
  - The revenue income projections provided to Morgan Stanley could not be achieved according to McDonald.
  - Goudis and other management committed to Al Dunlap and Wall Street projections that were not attainable.

- May 1998 press release.
  - No one in mid-level management ever saw or agreed to the numbers included in this press release.

- February 1998 change in accounting policy for inventory overhead.
  - Gluck approved this change in accounting policy which resulted in a one-time favorable impact on income.

- There was consideration of a sale of product for barter credits in the first quarter of 1998. Kersh did not approve this transaction.

- Supplier rebates.
  - 1998 rebate program was effectively taken to income in 1997. McDonald indicated that the agreements do not say this, but the practical result is that the Company will not receive planned rebates for 1998.

Subject: Sunbeam Interview with Tom Moody

On July 28, 1998, Larry Bornstein, Chris Malloy, attorney with Skadden, Arps and I interviewed Tom Moody, Plant Controller at Waynesboro, Mississippi. Tom joined the Company on March 23, 1998 and as such did not have much knowledge of 1997 activity.

Tom has not seen anything unusual relative to vendor rebates or bill and hold.

He indicated that open receivers related to 1997 paid in 1998, not accrued, amount to about $60,000. He also said that a blanket redesign recall reserve of $400,000 was established in the first quarter of "98" and should be adequate.

We also discussed blanket returns. Tom indicated that he did not have much knowledge of returns other than there was a lot of them.

Per Tom, has not seen –

- Vendor Rebates
- Anything unusual

Open "97" receiver amounts to $60,000 in "98" immaterial.

Tremendous amount of returns – (not on local Company books).

Redesign recall - $400,000 reserve on books. He thinks this will be adequate.

Janell Meadows – previous controller left the Company.

Nine years with Sunbeam

Title: District Manager, Waynesboro (Since Feb. '98)

Responsibilities:

- Bedding Division distribution
- Responsible for off-site warehouse in Laurel

Wal-Mart
Target
Payless
} Customer specific blanket inventory held under separate branch plant (Laub) in the inventory subledger

Prior Positions: 9/97 - Hattiesburg, as District Manager responsible for 49N warehouse & outlying warehouses.
Prior to 9/97, operations Manager for Brownsville (94 - 9/97) supplying materials to Mexico Maquiladoras

1/97 - 7/97 - Had some communications with suppliers as Kevin was responsible for placing P.O.s (to meet requirements of Maquiladoras). Pricing decisions were all made through the corporate purchasing.

Nothing unusual noted in purchasing responsibilities.

9/97 - Was aware that orders were pulled forward on a couple of occasions. e.g., Q3 - October orders pulled into September (15-20 days*)
- Not done for largest customers
- Normal lead = 14 days

Not too involved with this too much. He was mostly responsible for re-stocking the distribution centers.

4th Q '97 - Did not note significant pull forward of orders

Bill & Hold

Not involved in Q3/Q4 '97. First involvement was in Q1 '98. Waynesboro & Neosho

12/97 - Was involved in shipments to customers out of the 49N warehouse. No early shipments occurred from this warehouse.

Q1 '98 - Bill & Hold

Blankets

1. Pamida - $424K - Shipped 6/15/98
2. Bradlees - $770K - Ship dates 8/98-10/98

} only 2 Bill & Hold re: Blankets

Stored at D&D Transport - used for storage of bankstock (i.e. unfinished Blanket cores) & Bill & Hold

Does not recall any pull forward of orders in Q1.
Due to seasonality - not much pull forward of blankets orders.

No unusual actions taken with respect to order processing in Q1 but B&H were separately identified (vs in Q4 they were not separately coded in the sales order system).

Grills

1. Last 3 weeks of March Kevin was pulled from Waynesboro to help with Grill Bill & Hold at NDC warehouse
2. NDC - 3 B&H customers stored at this warehouse
   Wal-Mart
   Bradlees
   Montgomery Ward
   } Aggregate guess = $8 million
3. Segregated inventory by marking off with tape, placards
4. Separately tracked on spreadsheet
5. Segregated by customer in NDC's inventory tracking system
6. Does not know about subsequent shipments

Waynesboro - Returns →

1. Not responsible for returns, but come through the same facility therefore has a feel for the activity
2. Lent people from the Distribution Center to assist in unloading returns in 1998
3. Large volume of returns in March & April* (*bigger month); returns continued through end of May.

4. Could initially not accept return due to no RA's
5. RA problem was cleared up mainly in Aprnl. A small volume of RA's were processed in March.
6. Trucks carrying non-defective returns were turned away in March - approx. 15 loads. Returns were refused due to lack of RAs. Trucks sent back to carrier terminal.
7. Not involved in processing freight bills
8. Kevin asked the general question about why this was happening (turning away returns due to no RA's) he was told that the Company was in the process of trying to work out the issues with customers.

Inventory Levels

1. Currently ≈ $80 million
2. Mostly w/p inventory - $50-55 million

Subject: Sunbeam Conversation - Interview with Kevin Jeffcoat

---

On July 28, 1998, Dennis Pastrana, Chris Malloy, attorney with Skadden Ayres and I conducted an interview with Kevin Jeffcoat, Distribution Manager at Waynesboro, Mississippi. A summary of information provided by Mr. Jeffcoat is as follows:

- Summary of positions held
  - Became Distribution Manager in Waynesboro in February, 1998
  - Distribution Manager - Warehousing September '97 to January '98
  - Product Supply Manager in Brownsville, Texas September '94 to September '97

- Order Pull-Ups.
  - Kevin was aware of several occasions at third quarter end '97 where customer orders were pulled up from 1 to 16 days.

- Bill and Hold
  - Not involved with Bill and Hold at year-end
  - Q 1 in 1998 was aware of two customers
    - Bradlees - Sales of $400,000 with ship date of August
    - Carmida (?) - Sales of $100,000 with ship date of June

  - These items were stored at D & T Transport warehouse in Meridian, Mississippi.

  - Kevin spent the last week of Q1 1998 at the NDC warehouse in Miami, Oklahoma.

  - He was aware of these B & H transactions totaling $8Million there:

    - Wal-mart
    - Bradlees
    - Montgomery Ward

  - This inventory was marked off in the warehouse and NDC maintained a separate list of each customer B&H inventory.

1998 Returns

- Returns were very heavy in March and April.
- Return authorization was the problem, since returns were coming back with no return authorizations in the system.
- Problem started in early March.

Subject: Sunbeam - Interview with Don Jackson

On July 16, 1998, Don Denkhaus, Rita Gordon, attorney from Skadden Ayers, and I interviewed Don Jackson, Corporate Accounting Manager. Don discussed the following items with us:

1996 Restructuring

- Don's only role, other than booking Journal entries given to him by others, was to gather the information for the COBRA accrual.
- Don never saw the Coopers and Lybrand report.
- Bob Gluck controlled the restructuring accounting process.
- Most of the restructuring journal entries were based on a summary form of information.
- Don did not see anything unusual with the restructuring reserve entries other than the speed in which it was pulled together.

1997 Use of Restructuring

- Bob Gluck would run the P & L's and identify items that didn't make sense.
- Don would receive a report monthly which showed "sales below standard". This was used for booking the standard cost shortfall on sales against the "E and O" reserve.
- Per Don, he was not aware of any reserves being moved around in the first quarter of 1997.
- In August and September 1997, some reserves may have been moved around to product liability – also litigation reserve may have been taken down.
- In fourth quarter, moved excess litigation reserve of $7 Million to warranty reserve.
- Workers Compensation restructuring was moved to Workers Compensation General since the third party administrator could not distinguish claims between active and closed facilities.

Other

- Each month a sales accrual is made. This started out as a large amount in early 1997 and has become a smaller amount each month.

First Quarter 1998

- $3 Million of environmental reserve taken down.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation - Interview with Al Dunlap and Russell Kersh

---

On October 12, 1998, Don Denkhaus and Phil Harlow AA LLP partners, interviewed Al Dunlap former Chairman and CEO of Sunbeam Corporation (the "Company") and Russell Kersh, former CFO of the Company, in connection with the restatement of the Company's 1996, 1997 and first quarter 1998 financial statements. In attendance at the meeting were the following:

Name	Firm
Don Denkhaus	Arthur Andersen
Phil Harlow	Arthur Andersen
Chris Malloy	Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flam
Chris Sues	Pryor Cashman
Don Zakarin	Pryor Cashman
Dan Dooley	PricewaterhouseCoopers
Harvey Kelly	PricewaterhouseCoopers
Steven Skalak	PricewaterhouseCoopers
Cassandra Reynolds	PricewaterhouseCoopers
Noel Spiegel	Deloitte & Touche
Debra Cohen	Deloitte & Touche
Robert Ambler	King & Spalding
Al Dunlap
Russell Kersh

The meeting began with all of the firms present reviewing and signing the Company required confidentiality agreement. Don began the interview by discussing the ground rules for the interview, indicating that AA would ask questions about various potential areas of restatement, however, AA could not provide details about the mechanics or specific facts for such areas of potential adjustment.

The following summarizes the areas covered and the responses from Dunlap and Kersh:

- EPI Guaranteed/Consignment Sale

  Kersh indicated that he did not negotiate this transaction and that Bob Gluck and Janet Kelly would have more details. He also stated that George Tinchal did the negotiation on this agreement and that he didn't know the details or terms of the purported sale (he thought it was for approximately $10 million). He said that the Company was getting out of the spare parts business and that, in his mind, this transaction was a sale and that the business was gone.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation - Interview with Al Dunlap and Russ Kersh

Dunlap indicated that he didn't know about this transaction. He did however, begin discussing his philosophy on sales return and stated that his policy was that a "sale was a sale" and that returns were ridiculous and that the Company was not in a consignment business. Dunlap further indicated that his management team knew of the "no returns" policy and that a business could not be run with the level of returns, that the Company incurred. He also indicated that he put out a directive to his senior executives to accept no returns shortly after he joined the Company. Dunlap also stated that he didn't know if the Company had nondefective returns after he put out his "no returns policy". His job as CEO was to set the policy and he assumed his management team carried out his policies. He was not aware of how his policy was communicated to the Company's customers. He stated that if returns came back to the Company that the salesman authorizing the return would be fired and/or the customer would be sued. He was aware of only one salesman that was fired for not following his no returns policy.

Kersh discussed how he had very little knowledge about sales terms and that he put out a directive to the sales and marketing people not to take blankets back and "don't send more than you can sell". This was done sometime in late 1997. Kersh was asked about the deletions of return authorization (RA's) file and he stated he had no knowledge of this matter.

- M Block

Dunlap had no knowledge of the M Block transaction.

Kersh initially said he didn't know the product sold to M Block but later said he thought it was blankets. He said he knows that Lee Griffith told him that M Block would keep the blankets but he thinks that they came back in May or June 1998. Kersh said that the customer had a bad winter resulting in poor sales and that the return of these blankets were accrued at the end of the first quarter of 1998. He stated that he didn't know about the original right of return terms and was not told until April 1998 (by Lee Griffith) that the blankets were being returned.

- PHD

Dunlap had no knowledge of the PHD transaction.

Kersh didn't know about the type of products sold to this customer and had no idea about the terms of this purported sale. At this point, he indicated that the returns reserve was controlled by Bob Gluck.

Kersh said that he never saw an actual customer order at any time he was with the Company. This Kersh comment relates to all sales (not just PHD).

  According to Kersh, this was a failed attempt to make a sale that didn't work. Kersh didn't remember much about this transaction but he began at this point to say that he recently talked to Lee Griffith and knew that Lee went over all of these sales in "excruciating pain" with AA auditors (presumably in May through July 1998) and that he has discussed these sales so many times that he (Lee Griffith) was sick of discussing these sales. At this point Dunlap asked the question, "Are you people still independent?" referring to AALLP and Skadden. He then began a tirade about how Ron Perleman was trying to "steal" the Company and wanted to make the numbers (restated) look as bad as possible for the benefit of Perleman.

  Kersh indicated that he was made aware by Bob Gluck that there were several returns in the first quarter of 1998 that related to 1997 sales and that he believes there were some additional reserves recorded. He also indicated that Bob Gluck "controlled" the amount of return reserves that were recorded.

- I. Lehroff

  Neither Kersh nor Dunlap knew anything about this purported sale.

- Eckerd

  Kersh indicated that sometime in the April or May 1998 time frame there were some 1997 sales from this customer that were returned and that the salesman on this account had granted the customer the right of return. As a result of this, the salesman was terminated from employment by the Company. Dunlap did not have any additional comments.

- Hong Kong Guaranteed Sales

  Kersh did not know about sales made out of the Company's Hong Kong location. Dunlap didn't know about the Hong Kong blanket sales at yearend 1997, but he did know that China was a good market for blankets.

- Canada Guaranteed Sales

  Neither Kersh nor Dunlap knew anything about sales in Canada.

- Mexico

  Neither Kersh nor Dunlap knew anything about sales in Mexico.

- Menards Sale

  Neither Kersh nor Dunlap could remember any specific information about the fourth quarter 1997 sale to Menards.

- Bill & Hold Sales

  Kersh didn't know which customers were involved in Bill and Hold ("B&H") sales. The B&H program was created because of the poor 1997 grill season. The Management group came up with the plan to encourage customers to sign up and order grills early. The program was designed to get to the grills out to customers earlier and provide for more sell through due to earlier sales by the retailer.

  The program was designed for only the very large customers like the Wal-Mart, Home Depot, etc. Dunlap stated that he was assured by Skadden, Arps and Arthur Andersen that B&H sales were okay. He believes this assurance was given at the Board meeting in June 1998.

  Kersh stated that he had a discussion with Frank Feraco regarding B&H sales and stated that "this was the biggest B.S. in the world because all companies do this to some extent, including his former employer". Kersh remembered a discussion with Don Uzzi regarding the accounting rules for recording B&H sales.

  Regarding second quarter 1997 B&H sale, Dunlap and Kersh said they had no knowledge. Kersh didn't know where the third party warehouse for B&H sales was located. Kersh discussed the cost of B&H warehousing and why he believes it was very immaterial.

  After a short break in the meeting, Dunlap and Kersh wanted to recap the B&H sales program. They stated that the program was a program designed for the Company's customers and that the customers came to the Company and requested the program.

- Supplier Rebates

  Dunlap stated that the Company's policy was to get the best price for the Company and the shareholders. Kersh said he did not know how the supplier rebates were recorded in the Company's books (he didn't know about the accounting). He did state that he knew that one of the supplier rebates was reversed in the first quarter of 1998.

  Kersh stated that he talked with George Tinchal who told him that he was surprised that "Arthur Andersen was messing with such small amounts". Kersh stated that there was nothing wrong with the Company's accounting for rebates and that, if we wanted to see aggressive accounting, we should look at Coleman's accounting for royalties. Kersh believed that the Penthalpha rebate was a penalty for lousy quality and not a volume rebate.

- Product Liability

  Kersh indicated that he didn't get involved with product liability and he "wasn't even sure if the Company was self-insured" He stated that this was an area handled by Bob Gluck and Bob told him that the actuarial runs were very conservative. Kersh didn't know anything about consistency in the product liability accounting between 1996, 1997 and 1998 and that Bob Gluck would know.

- Warranty Reserve

  Kersh indicated that the Company's focus was to improve quality and that with a significant amount of outsourcing, the financial responsibility for quality had switched more to the supplier. Kersh stated that he thought most returns within a year came back from the previous years sales as opposed to the current year sales.

  Kersh stated that the calculation of the warranty reserve was done by the accounting department and that he had not seen it and did not know anything about it. Kersh felt that some of the warranty information in the system was or could be questionable (he couldn't remember the name of the system, but later indicated it was J.D. Edwards).

  Kersh indicated that the reason for the change in the warranty calculation model was due to the changes in the business. He stated that he didn't review any details but at the end of the year he asked Bob Gluck if the reserve was adequate. He also stated that the adequacy of the reserve was covered at the audit committee since Charles Thayer was "all over the reserves".

  In Kersh's opinion the quality of the Company's products remained about the same between 1996 and 1997.

  Kersh said he would expect warranty and product liability reserves to decrease because of the following: (1) emphasis on quality; (2) the Company sold certain businesses in 1997; (3) more overseas sales which generally experience less litigation and (4) outsourcing shifts burden to suppliers.

- Coop Advertising

  Kersh wanted the Company to move from a "push to a pull" concept of sales and marketing and move towards more direct advertising. Kersh stated that in 1997 many errors were found in the Coop system. Kersh believed that there were a lot of over accruals in the system and that these were more than offset by any under accruals. For example, the system accrued for 1% of sales to Walmart for coop, yet none was paid. He stated that in 1998, the Company was going to take a more aggressive approach with customers who took overly aggressive advantage of the coop program.

  Kersh said he told Roger Lee to clean up the coop advertising problems. He indicated that he did not review yearend or quarter end calculations of the coop reserve.

- Chargebacks

  Kersh stated that the chargeback reserve was an estimate of amounts that the Company ultimately would not recover from its customers. Kersh said that he did not review any details on the chargeback reserve but he would ask Bob Gluck if the reserve was adequate. He knew that the management and processing of chargebacks was a problem and he said the Company asked Arthur Andersen to come in either February or March of 1998 to help look at this problem.

  Kersh did not have any knowledge about the IBNR issue. He indicated that one of the causes of the problem was that the furniture division had 126 different terms of sale. Kersh did not know about the adequacy of the Company's computer programs but he felt that the Company's attempt to put everything on one system in January 1997 resulted in the computer system crash.

  Some of the problems resulted from the new CSC system being unable to distinguish between household and outdoor products, the system could not accept EDI transmission and employees didn't know how to use the system.

  He felt that overall the system was okay but that the employees didn't know how to use it and were not properly trained. Dunlap felt that the CSC system was a "disaster". Kersh felt that the early 1997 CSC problems were pretty well corrected by mid 1997.

- Excess and Obsolete Inventory Reserves

  Kersh believed that there was no need for a excess and obsolete inventory reserve in 1997 because all of the obsolete inventory was identified in 1996 restructuring and had been sold through liquidators in 1996 or 1997. He was not aware of any technologically obsolete product at yearend 1997. Also, the Company opened up outlet stores during 1997 to sell any excess and obsolete inventory.

  Kersh could not remember the balance of reserves or inventory amounts during 1997. He stated that the 1996 discontinued products were sold to Value City at the end of 1996 and early 1997 and that raw material and work-in-process inventory for discontinued products was sold at "10¢ on the dollar" at auctions.

  Kersh was asked if there was a Company policy in 1997 to not sell goods at a loss. He said that he did not believe any of the goods were impaired in value and therefore, management's policy was not accept sales at a loss since it made no economic sense.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation - Interview with Al Dunlap and Russ Kersh

Kersh stated that the Company had low grill inventories in 1996 and as a result, lost sales. Part of this was due to the moving of factories at that time resulting in low production. He felt that finally in the fourth quarter of 1997, the Company was getting to the point where it had adequate inventory. Additionally, the Company was building inventory to cover the Mexico factory shutdown, to improve service levels and ensure adequate product as the Company moved toward more outsourcing.

According to Kersh and Dunlap, the decision to close Mexico was made sometime in the first quarter of 1998 and approved by the Board in the second quarter of 1998. The Company's plan for 1998 was to increase distribution points, increase the number of new products and increase grill production.

Dunlap stated that at the May 11, 1998 meeting in New York City with the analysts and investment bankers, the heads of the two business units presented their plans and at that time the Company had not backed off of its original 1998 sales forecast. This plan was developed by the Company in late 1997 and was the basis for the 1998 production schedule. Kersh said the 1998 plan was "built from the ground up" and was based on detail support from various levels of management. Kersh did not know of the "ghosts and gaps" sales forecast report dated February 1998. At the May 11, 1998 meeting the 1998 EPS estimate was lower from $2.30 to $2.00 per share.

- Capitalized Inventory Variances

Kersh stated that the purpose of capitalizing variances is to match the cost of sales with revenues. He said that at the end of the first quarter of 1998 grill sales were not materializing as planned so an adjustment was made to capitalized variances. (He was not able to elaborate).

Kersh indicated that at yearend 1996 capitalized variances were less than 1997 since the plants were being shutdown, moved, etc. and production was very low. He indicated that during 1997, the Company had better cost information and that the cost accounting was much better and other than that, he was not aware of any changes to the Company's methodology for capitalizing variances in 1996 and 1997.

- Mexico Inventory

Kersh heard about proposed inventory adjustments at the end of 1997 as a result of the audit. He said he was concerned about internal controls in Mexico and was attempting to place an internal auditor in Mexico. He was not familiar with the 10% statutory profit sharing in Mexico. Dunlap stated that Skadden or AA should have kept the Company informed on that issue. Kersh indicated that he was aware of several million dollars of waived audit adjustments related to Mexico, that the Company was going to book over the following year (i.e., spread the negative impact on income over 1998).

- Hong Kong

  Neither Kersh nor Dunlap had knowledge about accounting adjustments in Hong Kong.

- Venezuela

  Neither Kersh nor Dunlap knew about $500,000 of missing Venezuelan inventory.

- Unvouchered Receipts

  Kersh was told that the Company had a problem with the payable system and that it resulted in misstating the payable balances. He said he asked Bob Gluck if the Company would have vendor invoices outstanding over six months and they decided that this (over six months) would be a reasonable cut off since, if the Company had not been notified by the vendor within a six month period of time, then the invoice had most likely been paid.

- Restructuring Charges

  Kersh and Dunlap said that they did not see any details related to the accounting for restructuring. Kersh stated that estimates of cost were made of implementing the Coopers & Lybrand ("C&L") plan and that the Company's accounting department and C&L worked up the numbers. Kersh said he had no idea where the numbers for restructuring were recorded in the Company's income statement.

  Kersh recalled having some discussion with AA on what costs qualified as a restructuring charge, but he doesn't remember any details. He also remembered AA having discussions with the audit committee on what costs qualify as restructuring charges.

  McMinnville - Kersh and Dunlap indicated that the closing of McMinnville was delayed since the Company needed blades and clippers and the Mexican plant could not manufacture them in sufficient quantities. Kersh indicated that as part of the restructuring plan they closed about 50% (around 70,000 square feet) of the McMinnville plant. Once the Company decided to close the Mexican plant, the decision was made to keep McMinnville open. The decision to keep McMinnville open and to close Mexico was made at a board meeting in April 1998. The notices to McMinnville employees were sent in late 1996 but only some of the employees were actually let go. The clipper production was moved back to McMinnville from Mexico in March 1998.

  Hattiesburg Writedown - Regarding the Hattiesburg related charge, Kersh said that he was told that the Company had to take an impairment charge. He didn't know how the impairment computation was done but he felt that an even greater charge should have been taken. He assumed that the calculation was done properly but he had not seen it. Kersh said the Company had invested about $100 million in the Hattiesburg facility versus only $10 to $20 million for the other facilities.

CSC Outsourcing - Kersh didn't know much about the outsourcing of computer systems to CSC and said that Jack Dailey and George Timchal negotiated this agreement. He thought and Dunlap as well, that the $2 million refund received by the Company from CSC in mid 1997 was due to the poor service received from CSC starting on January 1, 1997 the beginning of the contract.

C&L Fees - Kersh was asked why he asked C&L to combine the Neosho plant reengineering consulting and the J.D. Edwards consulting project into one project. He could not remember the reason but he thought it could have been to get a lower fee.

Package Redesign - Kersh believes the package redesign charge was properly included as part of the restructuring and special charges.

Kersh and Dunlap were asked about a number of special charges and had the following comments:

Bad Debts - The reason why this was special was due to an unusual amount of bankruptcy's, i.e., Caldors and Bradlees. The Company trued up the bad debt reserve for this and also accrued for bad debts arising from some of the problems encountered in the CSC conversion.

Warranty - This was a part of the special charge since there was a concern over the prior year product quality and also to cover warranty requirements for the sold businesses. There was a general "make well" adjustment to get the reserve to the required level.

Product Liability - Per Kersh this special charge was needed in connection with the sale of the furniture division.

Litigation/Environmental - This reserve was increased for the $12 million All Tech judgement at year end 1996 which was related to discontinued businesses.

Discontinued Operations - The Company, per Kersh, booked a $13 million loss for the furniture business. The furniture divisions sales had decreased from $250 million to $175 million and as a result the buyer demanded a lower purchase price.

- Post Prototype Design Cost

  Kersh didn't know about this.

- Neosho Fixed Equipment

  Kersh had no knowledge of the Neosho fixed assets eliminated during the plant-reengineering project.

- Under Accrual of Freight Expense

  Kersh didn't know about billing issues related to Wal-Mart. He stated that the Company wouldn't bill Wal-Mart without a good reason.

- Overaccrual of Expenses

  Kersh and Dunlap were asked about the Olgivey and Mathers ("O&M") and they indicated there was a lot of advertising activity which took place in late 1996 to develop brand awareness. According to them, no 1997 advertising expenses were paid in 1996 or recorded in 1996. Don Uzzi handled the O&M relationship.

- Sales Shipments

  Kersh was asked about pulling forward shipments and he indicated that this was something done by all companies.

  He was asked about shipments made past cancellation date and he indicated that this was done and "is a part of doing business".

  Regarding duplicate shipments, he indicated that these were errors and should not have been done.

  He was asked about shipping grills with missing parts and he stated that it could happen but they did not instruct anyone to do this.

- Income Taxes

  Kersh had no knowledge of this area and left it up to Bob Totte.

- Initiative For Success

  Dunlap and Kersh said this was one of Don Uzzi's programs and he had meetings with his managers once a week to discuss how to make the planned fourth quarter 1997 results. Dunlap said he stopped in one meeting and had pizza but had no other involvement. He and Kersh didn't know any details about these meetings.

Re: In re Sunbeam Securities Litigation

Dear Barney.

Thank you for arranging the October 12, 1998 meeting between your client, Arthur Andersen and our clients Messrs. Al Dunlap and Russell Kersh. I was pleased to see that, at the conclusion of the meeting, the Arthur Andersen auditors agreed that it had been helpful. As we agreed at the meeting, we have reflected on the matters raised by you on October 12th. The purpose of this letter is to respond to Arthur Andersen's request that we provide any additional information and thoughts that might be pertinent to Sunbeam's auditors.

Before launching into those matters, however, I think it is important to reiterate selected issues discussed on October 12th. Arthur Andersen's descriptions of certain of the matters upon which they inquired were frequently vague, ambiguous and lacking in sufficient detail to fully comprehend any concerns which may exist. Similarly, the denial to our clients of access to any of the relevant documents necessarily hindered the process. Our experts advise us that failure to provide former management with meaningful information is contrary to the auditors' intention to obtain management's understanding of the issues being reviewed (in particular accounting estimates).

At the meeting we quickly understood that it was Sunbeam, Deloitte & Touche ("D&T") and Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom ("Skadden Arps"), rather than Arthur Andersen itself, which were restricting the auditors' (i.e., Arthur Andersen) ability to disclose relevant information and documents. We reiterate our concerns that such restrictions on the scope of Arthur Andersen's efforts are not customary in the context of generally accepted auditing standards and limit the ability of interviewees to discern the issues at hand and, consequently, the relevant information they possess. That said, below are some responses to the issues raised by Arthur Andersen on October 12th.

For clarity we have organized our comments by the nature of the issues raised and grouped them into the following categories:

1. Bill and hold sales;
2. Revenue recognition;
3. Estimates of expense accruals;
4. Estimates for capitalization of certain expenses;
5. Restructuring charge estimates;
6. Other estimates.

1. BILL AND HOLD SALES

1.1. Arthur Andersen raised the concept of Sunbeam's bill and hold policies. Specifically, Arthur Andersen inquired as to: a) which customers were offered bill and hold, b) which party requested the bill and hold terms, and c) whether Messrs Dunlap and Kersh's had any knowledge as to the party responsible for warehousing and insurance costs. No specific transaction details or documents were provided to refresh the recollections of Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh.

1.2. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's understandings and recollections are as follows:

1.2.1. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh believe Arthur Andersen was fully aware of Sunbeam's policies and practice of bill and hold sales program and had reviewed and tested such transactions in the course of Arthur Andersen's 1997 audit. In addition, they believe that contained in Arthur Andersen's work papers is contemporaneous documentation and evaluation of significant bill and hold transactions

1.2.2. Arthur Andersen previously advised Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh that auditors directly contacted Sunbeam customers to confirm matters relevant to the propriety of the revenue recognition Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh recall that Arthur Andersen agreed with Sunbeam's accounting for such bill and hold sales.

1.2.3. Neither Messrs. Dunlap nor Kersh recall Arthur Andersen ever proposing an adjustment to Sunbeam's financial statements with respect to the bill and hold sales Quite the opposite, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh recall that at the June 11, 1998 Sunbeam Board of Directors meeting the bill and hold practice was reviewed by Arthur Andersen and Phil Harlow of Arthur Andersen gave the Board assurances that the bill and hold practice was accounted for properly.

1.2.4 They recall that Skadden Arps, specifically Blaine Fogg, Esq., also reviewed the bill and hold sales process and assured Mr. Dunlap that the sales were fine and that the program was proper.

1.2.5. Mr. Kersh recommended that Arthur Andersen review the minutes of various audit committee meetings, since it was his understanding that bill and hold sales were discussed at length with Sunbeam's audit committee which also reviewed the bill and hold sales and determined that the program was proper.

1.2.6. Sunbeam's marketing department developed a bill and hold program sometime in 1997 to address customer needs including the following:

(a) Customers demanded vendor reliability with respect to the timely delivery of its products ordered. Historically, Sunbeam had experienced supply problems relating to reliability of delivery and supply of the products resulting in lost sales and sales opportunities. This, in turn, led to customers demanding that Sunbeam solve its previous inability to meet customer orders on a timely basis or risk losing the customer's business.

(b) Sunbeam's customers expected to generate more and earlier sales demand.

(c) Customers wanted to take advantage of early season discounts.

1.2.7. Although bill and hold sales also addressed manufacturing and sales issues for Sunbeam's benefit, the bill and hold sales were at the request of non-related, economically independent customers such as Wal-Mart, Home Depot, K-Mart and Sears.

1.2.8. All bill and hold sales were supported by bona fide purchase orders generated by the customers. All or substantially all of the merchandise sold on the bill and hold program was ultimately transferred to a customer site.

1.2.9. Products identified for bill and hold sales were packaged, segregated and designated by customer.

1.2.10. Warehousing costs and insurance for the bill and hold products were deminimus.

1.2.11. Any insurance for merchandise "held" under the bill and hold program, which may have been paid by Sunbeam, would have been for the benefit of customers, since the risk of loss associated with such merchandise had passed to the customer.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

1.2.12. Sunbeam disclosed its bill and hold sales program in its Form 10-K for the year ended December 31, 1997 and Form 10-Q for the quarter ended March 31, 1998. Both Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh believed that Arthur Andersen and Skadden Arps fully reviewed and took no exceptions to the accounting and disclosure in their Forms 10-K and 10-Q

1.2.13. If there are specific bill and hold transactions for which there are questions about the arrangements on accounting, Mr. Kersh may be able to assist Arthur Andersen in evaluating the accounting for these transactions.

2. REVENUE RECOGNITION

2.1. Arthur Andersen asked Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh as to their understanding of Sunbeam's policy with respect to sales returns and their recollection of various sales transactions. Specific details of the transactions, the accounting issues being considered by Arthur Andersen or documents were not provided to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh.

2.2. Messrs. Kersh and Dunlap recall the following:

2.2.1. Beginning in an around early 1997, Sunbeam's unequivocal corporate policy was to accept no returns, other than for damaged goods or misshipments.

2.2.2. Sunbeam's no return policy was clearly communicated by Mr. Dunlap to his senior executives and he fully believes that such executives then clearly communicated the policy to sales personnel, who were specifically instructed not to offer or accept sales returns.

2.2.3. Sunbeam universally applied its policy of accepting no returns to customers of all sizes.

2.2.4. Mr. Dunlap advised management of the sales department that Sunbeam would not accept any returns (other than damaged goods and misshipment) and should sue customers to collect any related receivables which customers did not pay. Indeed, Mr Dunlap explicitly instructed David Fannin to initiate a lawsuit against a customer that attempted to return product and to fire a salesman who, against Company policy, had agreed to take back product if the customer could not sell the same.

2.2.5. Sunbeam instructed its sales personnel not to sell more product than their customers believed they could sell.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

2.2.6. Sunbeam recorded a reserve for potential returns consistent with the Company's return policies and management's best estimates of the likely returns. In this regard, Mr. Kersh pointed out that the rationalization of SKUs and the elimination of certain product lines (furniture in particular) also had a significant impact on the quantification of reserves.

2.3. Arthur Andersen questioned Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh regarding selected transactions discussed below.. Arthur Andersen did not produce any relevant documents, nor did they articulate the basis for any concerns they may have with respect to the accounting for such transactions.

2.3.1 EPI Sale: Arthur Andersen inquired as to the extent of any understanding Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh had with respect to the sale to EPI of Sunbeam's grill replacement parts business and inventory to EPI and any terms affecting the sales price. Without reference to the contract itself and related documents, Messrs Dunlap and Kersh had no specific recollection of the transaction terms, although they understood that the sale to EPI was final Mr. Kersh believes Ms. Janet Kelly, Sunbeam's in-house counsel, participated in the contract negotiations and drafting.

2.3.2. Wal-Mart alleged return of blankets: Arthur Andersen inquired as to whether Messrs. Kersh and Dunlap had any knowledge of an alleged authorized return of blankets being deleted from the system in the third week of January 1998. No documents or further specifics of this matter were provided by Arthur Andersen to Messrs Dunlap and Kersh, and neither of them had any recollection of the transaction or any processing of such in Sunbeam's computer system.

2.3.3. M-Block alleged returns: Arthur Andersen solicited any knowledge of Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh with respect to alleged returns of merchandise from M-Block. Mr. Kersh has some recollection that M-Block requested, but Sunbeam denied, an authorization to return certain merchandise. Mr Kersh also recalled instructing sales personnel that no sales returns would be accepted. Mr. Kersh also recalled that Mr. Lee Griffith, a representative of Sunbeam's sales department, advised him that M-Block would keep the blankets. In May or June 1998, due to changed circumstances which included Sunbeam's need for blanket products to meet other customer demand, Sunbeam negotiated with M-Block and accepted the return of certain merchandise.

2.3.4. PhD Distributors· Arthur Andersen inquired as to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's recollection of a Sunbeam sale to PhD in late 1997, that included an alleged possibility of sales returns and of Sunbeam paying for storage costs. Mr. Kersh recalls giving instructions not to accept any sales returns but does not recall any contract terms where Sunbeam was to pay any the storage costs

2.3.5. Encore: Arthur Andersen asked Messrs Dunlap and Kersh for their understanding of Sunbeam's terms of sale of kitchen appliances to Encore for its frequent buyer program. Mr. Kersh recalls that Encore's program was a pilot marketing effort that was not successful. Mr. Kersh said that he understood from Mr. Griffith that Encore would keep the product or Sunbeam would work out a program with them and there was no need for a reserve as Sunbeam would be able to collect its receivables from Encore eventually. Mr. Kersh believes that Sunbeam did book a reserve in the first quarter of 1998 even though there were continued assurances from the sales personnel that collection would occur.

2.3.6. Lehroff: Arthur Andersen questioned Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh about their recollection of a sale to Lehroff for $900,000 in the fourth quarter of 1997 Without additional information or reference to the sale documentation Messrs. Dunlap or Kersh have no recollection of the transaction or accounting therefor.

2.3.7. Eckard sale: Arthur Andersen inquired as to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's knowledge of an offer to guarantee a sale to Eckard for $600,000-$500,000 Messrs. Kersh and Dunlap recalled that contrary to Sunbeam's no return policy, a "rogue" salesperson had provided an unauthorized guarantee of sale to the customer. The sales person was terminated for his unauthorized actions

2.3.8. Hong Kong sale: Arthur Andersen asked Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh whether they were aware of an agent allegedly offering a guaranteed sale to a Hong Kong entity. Arthur Andersen did not provide specific details of their concern with this transaction or associated documents and consequently Messrs Dunlap and Kersh were unable to recall any right of return with respect to the sale. Mr. Dunlap believes that the blankets were not and would not be taken back under his management.

2.3.9. Menards: During the fourth quarter of 1997, a $1.9 million sale of grill accessories was made to Menards. Although neither Messrs. Dunlap nor Kersh had any specific recollection of the transaction or the accounting thereof, they may have relevant information if Arthur Andersen made the documents available to them and specified their issue of concern (which Arthur Andersen did not do).

3 ESTIMATE OF EXPENSE ACCRUALS

3 1. Estimates for Product Liability reserves

3.1.1. Arthur Andersen alluded to the possibility that certain calculations underlying management's estimates may have been different from one year to the next year. Mr. Kersh identified issues that may bear upon such estimates as detailed below. However, because Arthur Andersen did not provide Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh with details of the calculation at issue or relevant documents they were unable to refresh their recollections and provide more detailed explanations as to the calculation and methodology Messrs Dunlap and Kersh noted that Arthur Andersen had full and complete access to all Sunbeam files and personnel (i.e., carte blanche) and at an initial meeting with Messrs Dunlap and Kersh, Arthur Andersen personnel were advised that if they had any problem obtaining information they should bring it to the attention of either Mr. Dunlap or Mr. Kersh. Arthur Andersen did not indicate to either Mr. Dunlap or Mr. Kersh that any problems existed and did not interface with either Mr. Dunlap or Mr Kersh in conducting their audits

3.1.2 Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh noted that all material reserves were reviewed by Arthur Andersen as part of its quarterly review and presented by Arthur Andersen and internal Sunbeam personnel to Sunbeam's audit committee at several audit committee meetings throughout the year and the audit committee in fulfilling its responsibility reviewed the same

3.1.3. Mr. Kersh recalled various factors that should be taken into account when estimating the product liability reserve including:

(a) Sunbeam's general policy to enhance the quality of its products by returning to the older and traditional quality values of Sunbeam and completing redesigns and retooling for some of its products.

(b) Changes in the composition of Sunbeam's sales mix.

(c) The discontinuance of various business lines including outsourcing the production of various products and thereby shifting the product warranty burden to outsourcers.

(d) The proportional increase in international sales especially to Asian and Latin American countries that have a lower propensity to instigate litigation proceedings and where damage awards (including punitive damages) are considerably lower than the United States (if not non-existent).

(e) Disposal of various product lines In particular, the furniture business had been the source of significant claims and its sale warranted an adjustment.

3.1.4. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh were not aware of any large settlements, litigation matters or unusual circumstances involving Sunbeam that would result in need for change in the estimates.

3.1.5. Mr. Kersh recalled that the product warranty reserves were presented to and reviewed by the audit committee on a regular basis He also stated his belief the all material reserves regularly had been tested and reviewed by Arthur Andersen in the normal course of its audits. He believes that Arthur Andersen's working papers will contain contemporaneous documentation of its testing of the reasonableness of Sunbeam's reserves and allowances.

3.1.6. Arthur Andersen asked why the system on tracking product warranty claims was discontinued. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh indicated that they did not know that the system had been discontinued. Mr. Kersh then asked Arthur Andersen how did Arthur Andersen know whether the product warranty tracking system was accurate before discontinuance because of the many historical problems Sunbeam had with its systems He then indicated that it may have been discontinued as a result of Sunbeam's significant reduction in product lines, and as a result of Sunbeam's consolidating its systems to a uniform basis from division to division. He did indicate that Sunbeam's system had to be standardized as part of a reengineering process. He also asked Arthur Andersen if they had knowledge of which product lines the product warranty program pertained to.

3.2. Arthur Andersen inquired as to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's recollection of Sunbeam's estimated warranty reserve for a Hong Kong sale of $5 million. Arthur Andersen provided no documents or further specifics of the matter. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh did not recall any circumstances for this sale requiring a special reserve other than the general warranty reserve, or requiring a significant increase to the existing reserve. However, Mr. Kersh believes that based on historical and industry experience any warranty reserve for these sales would be small given the size of the sale and the less litigious environment of Hong Kong compared to the United States (if not, non-existent).

3.3 Arthur Andersen asked Messrs Dunlap and Kersh about an estimate for cooperative advertising accrual Arthur Andersen did not detail the issue of concern or provide documents for this accrual. Mr. Kersh recalled that in 1997 various errors were found in the cooperative advertising accrual dating back to 1996. In addition, an accrual for 1% of Wal-Mart sales should have been corrected which would have resulted in a change in the estimated accrual. Sunbeam also had a policy of reducing co-op advertising and switching to mass media advertising. Finally, Sunbeam was investigating using an outside source to monitor and process its co-op advertising to prevent abuse

3.4. Arthur Andersen questioned Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh as to their recollection of calculating the estimate for charge-backs reserves. Arthur Andersen did not elaborate as to the issue of concern and did not provide documentation for Messrs Dunlap and Kersh to refresh their recollection. Mr. Kersh believed there were problems with the new computer system that resulted in a manual review of charge-backs. Generally, he believed that the estimated charge-back reserve would be lower in 1997 compared to 1996 due to

(a) The disposal of the furniture manufacturing business that traditional had higher charge-backs.

(b) There was a consolidation of up to 125 different customer contracts to 3 standard contracts resulting in an estimated lower number of charge-backs

(c) In January or February 1998, Sunbeam had engaged Arthur Andersen to review the charge back procedure to help Sunbeam implement a credit memo procedure instead of a deduction procedure. Sunbeam was in the process of using credit memos to customers instead of allowing them to use charge-backs

(d) Sunbeam had engaged an independent agency to collect charge-backs from customers that had been incorrectly issued.

3.5. Arthur Andersen inquired as to Messrs Dunlap and Kersh's recollection of the estimate for excess inventory reserves Arthur Andersen did not elaborate as to the issue of concern or provide documents to refresh Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's recollection. Messrs Dunlap and Kersh recalled that during 1997 and the first quarter of 1998, Sunbeam had a policy of increasing its inventory levels. Reasons for the increased inventory levels include:

(a) Closing down its Mexico manufacturing operations. During the process of closing down a manufacturing operation a company often experiences production interruptions not just at the plant being closed down but at other plants in the company. Sunbeam needed to ensure that the it had adequate inventory supplies to cover any production interruptions.

(b) The transition to outsourcing the production for some of its products. Sunbeam needed to ensure that during the transition period that it had an adequate supply of products as a contingency to meet any outsourcing supply, reliability or quality control problems that could arise.

(c) Sunbeam was determined to have sufficient supply of products to its customer demands and prevent the supply problems experienced during 1997

(d) During 1997 sales personnel were demanding more blenders, clipper blades and blankets indicating the need to increase inventory levels

3 6. Arthur Andersen questioned Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh regarding the calculation of the estimate for obsolete inventory reserve. Without details as to Arthur Andersen's concern or reference to documents Mr. Kersh recalled that most of the obsolete inventory was accrued for or sold during 1996/1997 Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh were not aware of any lower than cost compared to market problems or any advertent intention to sell product below carrying value. Mr. Kersh also stated that Sunbeam had done a complete purge of old inventory during the restructuring so, very little, if any, inventory should have been obsolete, and if anything were determined to be obsolete, it would still be sold through retail outlets

3.7 Arthur Andersen asked Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh as to their recollection of an estimate of an accrual for a statutory 10% of profit share in Mexico. Arthur Andersen did not provide specifics of the issue of their concern nor provide documents. Both Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh did not even know of this requirement Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh questioned why Arthur Andersen, who had been Sunbeam's auditors for several years prior to the time Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh were employed by Sunbeam did not raise this issue prior to the meeting. Messrs. Kersh and Dunlap were not aware of any claim filed relating to the Mexican profit sharing accrual or the probability of success of any such claim should a claim be made. In addition, Messrs. Kersh and Dunlap do not recall the issue being raised by Sunbeam's legal advisors; and they were most certain that Skadden Arps, particularly Mr Fogg, never had identified to them any such potential liability.

3.8 Arthur Andersen inquired as to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's recollection of an estimate for unvouched payable accrual. Arthur Andersen did not provide details of why this accrual was at issue or documents regarding the accrual. Mr. Kersh understood that in 1997, it was discovered that there were several accounts payable outstanding that could not be matched to the computerized system, some of which dated back years. To resolve this problem all invoices greater than 6 months old for which there was no correspondence requesting payment were deemed to have been paid and no longer considered to be outstanding liabilities.

4. ESTIMATES FOR CAPITALIZATION OF EXPENSES

4.1 Arthur Andersen questioned Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh as to Sunbeam's policy of capitalizing inventory variances during interim periods. Mr. Kersh believed that Sunbeam historically capitalized inventory variances prior to the end of the season at which point the balance was brought to account on the income statement. There were continual adjustments to the estimated inventory variances due to increases in production levels. In addition, Mr. Kersh believed that during 1997, Sunbeam was fine tuning the costing system from the 1996 year where there were unallocated production expenses of $60 million. In the first quarter of 1998, Sunbeam made an adjustment to account for a variance between the number of grills estimated to be sold and the number of grills included in the inventory and in future production.

5. RESTRUCTURING CHARGES

5.1. Arthur Andersen raised general questions as to how the estimate for the 1996 restructuring charge of approximately $338 million was calculated and who was involved in making the calculation.

5.2. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh had the following general recollection:

5.2.1. They understood that the restructuring charge was determined by estimating the costs associated with the implementation of the Coopers & Lybrand restructuring business plan.

5.2.2. They believe that the estimates of the restructuring charges were derived from many sources including the Coopers & Lybrand plan, plant managers, sales department personnel, payroll department with respect to estimates such as employee severance costs, the legal department with respect to contractual obligations such as lease terminations.

5.2.3. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh were not aware of any disagreement with Arthur Andersen regarding the restructuring charge. They believe that details of the calculation of the estimates for the restructuring charge were fully tested and reviewed by Arthur Andersen, in the course of their audits They also believed that evidence of such work by Arthur Andersen is contained in Arthur Andersen's work papers, and that such files may contain various contemporaneous documents that evidence the calculations of the estimates

5.2 4. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh believe that Arthur Andersen advised them as to the nature and appropriateness, under GAAP, of expenses that could be recorded in the restructuring charge.

5.2.5. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh do not recall an adjustment to the restructuring charge being included on the Summary of Audit Differences, or Summary of Proposed Audit Adjustments Schedule

5 2.6. If Arthur Andersen were to provide Mr. Kersh with documents and detailed information as to the calculation of the estimate of the restructuring charge, he may be able to provide more detailed explanations as to the calculation and methodologies.

5.3. Specific issues raised by Arthur Andersen relating to the estimate for the 1996 restructuring charge are:

5.3.1. Arthur Andersen questions Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh as to their recollection of Sunbeam's charge for the discontinuation of the furniture business. Arthur Andersen did not provide specific details as to the issue of concern or documents relating to the calculation to refresh Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's memory. However, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh stated that it was Sunbeam's intention to exit the business of manufacturing furniture.

5.3.2. Arthur Andersen asked Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh about Sunbeam's calculation of the package redesign charge for $6 million. Mr. Kersh believed that it was Sunbeam's estimate that the cost of the package redesign was part of the general restructuring of Sunbeam and that any apportionment of the package redesign cost for the future benefits were not significant

5.3.3. Arthur Andersen inquired about the accounting for a Coopers & Lybrand bill in connection with the restructuring and for the reengineering of the Neosho facility and the reimplementation of the JD Edwards system. With respect to the Neosho facility and the JD Edwards system, Mr. Kersh recalled that Coopers & Lybrand personnel worked on both projects simultaneously and it was not practical to bill the projects separately since they were so intertwined.

534 Arthur Andersen questioned Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh as to the calculation of the estimated restructuring charge for the proposed McMinnville factory closure. Arthur Andersen did not express their accounting concern or provide documentation as to the calculation, however, Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh were able to identify certain business issues that may bear upon the estimate.

(a) Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh stated that it was Sunbeam's intention to close the McMinnville plant.

(b) They recalled that Coopers & Lybrand had recommended the closure of the McMinnville plant in its restructuring plan.

(c) They believe that the plan was to close McMinnville included moving the production of all clipper blades to Mexico. During the transition phase it was determined that Mexico was unable to produce neither the quantity nor quality of clipper blades to satisfy production needs. During this interim period, McMinnville was still in operation to ensure that supply of the clipper blades was maintained.

(d) Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh believed that termination notices were sent to employees at McMinnville detailing the future closure of the plant, evidencing Sunbeam's intention to close the plant.

(e) APB No. 30 "Reporting the Results of Operations – Reporting the Effects of Disposal of a Segment of a Business, and Extraordinary, Unusual and Infrequently Occurring Events and Transactions" states that plans for the disposal of a business would be carried out within a period of one year from the measurement date. Footnote No. 6 to APB No. 30 states that "When disposal is estimated to be completed within one year and subsequently is revised to a longer period of time, any revision of the net realizable value of the segment should be treated as a change in estimate."

(f) EITF 90-16 "Accounting for Discontinued Operations Subsequently Retained" governs the accounting for when a company decides to dispose of a segment of a business and accounts for that decision by accruing a loss in accordance with APB No. 30 and subsequently keeps the business segment. EITF 90-16 states that the company should in the period where the decision to keep the business reverse the accrued loss to the extent that the accrued loss does not relate to the prior period decision to dispose of the segment EITF 90-16 specifically states that changes to accrued loss of the prior reporting period should not be restated.

(g) Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh recalled that in 1998 Sunbeam concluded that Mexico would be closed and all of its products including retail clippers (but not professional clippers) would be outsourced. During this process, the decision to close McMinnville was reversed, the plant would remain in operation producing professional clippers.

5 3.5. Arthur Andersen's questioned Messrs Dunlap and Kersh about the SFAS No. 121 "Accounting for the Impairment of Long-Lived Assets and for Long-Lived Assets to be Disposed Of" write down of the Hattiesburg plant costs for the management information system and conveyor system. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh identified certain business issues that may bear upon such estimate as follows:

(a) Mr. Kersh indicated that the Hattiesburg plant was a $100 million white elephant and that the write down of approximately $9 million was very conservative.

(b) Messrs. Kersh and Dunlap both believed that it was the future plan of Sunbeam to change the Hattiesburg plant to a one system manufacturing facility.

(c) Mr. Kersh understood that the write-down of the management information system and conveyor system represented an asset impairment due to the conversion to one system.

(d) Mr. Kersh recalled that Coopers & Lybrand assisted Sunbeam in the determination and calculation of the asset impairment.

(e) They recalled that the determination and calculation of the asset impairment was reviewed at numerous board meetings.

(f) Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh believe that Arthur Andersen was aware of the calculation and included in their work papers is contemporaneous documentation as to the calculation and the methodology used.

5.3 6. Arthur Andersen raised questions with respect to the initial cost charged by Computer Science Corporation ("CSC") for Sunbeam's outsourcing program and a subsequent refund of $2 million. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh recalled

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

AA166321

by Arthur Andersen LLP

CPH0062637

that CSC had failed to meet the expectations of the outsourcing agreement and after protracted negotiations between Sunbeam and CSC a settlement was reached where CSC was refunded $2 million. It is not clear whether the $2 million related to the initial outsourcing charge of CSC or a refund of subsequent payments or both.

5.3.7. Arthur Andersen inquired about the Bad Debt Reserve of $9 million included in special charges for 1996. Arthur Andersen did not specify the area of concern or documentation supporting the calculation, however, Mr. Kersh recalled that the special charge was to cover specific reserves required for bankruptcies experienced in the industry, including Sunbeam customers such as Bradlees and Caldors.

5.3.8. Arthur Andersen inquired about the Warranty Reserve of $10-$8 million included in special charge in 1996. Arthur Andersen did not elaborate on the issue of concern or provide documentation as to the calculation. Mr Kersh recalled that included in the special charge was an estimate for the cost of product damage associated with the close and moving of facilities and warranties associated with the disposal of various product lines.

5.3.9. Arthur Andersen inquired about a Litigation and Environmental charge of $12 million that was estimated with respect to the Altech matter. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh understood that the legal department had been consulted with and assisted in the estimate and determination of probability of the expected cost of the litigation which was based upon a judgment against Sunbeam. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh believe that an estimate of $12 million for litigation and environmental matters with Altech had been established as part of the 1996 restructuring charge. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh believe that after negotiations with Altech a settlement was reached for approximately $4 million.

6. OTHER ESTIMATES

6.1 Arthur Andersen inquired about the accounting for the Supplier Rebate received during 1997. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh understood that supplier rebates were for past purchases, to compensate for the supply of bad product and for changes in commodity prices such as steel and aluminum during the past year. The legal department, including Mr. Fannin and Ms. Kelly negotiated the terms of supplier rebate contracts with the objective of obtaining the best advantage for Sunbeam.

6.2. Arthur Andersen inquired as to Messrs Dunlap and Kersh's recollection with respect to a $2 million adjustment relating inventory to attrition in Mexico that was included on the 1997 Summary of Audit Differences schedule and how it was accounted for in 1998. Arthur Andersen did not provide documentation relating to the inventory attrition, however Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh were aware of the internal control matter relating to the security of company assets and had the intention of hiring an internal auditor for the Mexico operations. While Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh do not have a specific recollection as to this waived audit adjustment that was waived by Arthur Andersen as part of its audit or the subsequent accounting thereof, Mr. Kersh believed it was expensed on a monthly basis in 1998.

AA166322

CONFIDENTIAL - SUBJECT TO PROTECTIVE ORDER

CPH0062638

6.3. Arthur Andersen inquired as to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's knowledge with respect to alleged unaccounted inventory in Venezuela. Arthur Andersen did not provide details as to the time for when the inventory could not be accounted for or associated documentation. Messrs. Kersh and Dunlap are not aware of any unaccounted for inventory in Venezuela. From the ensuing conversation it was not even clear that there was any inventory issue, or if there was an issue, whether it related to any period during Messrs. Dunlap's and Kersh's employment. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh expressed surprise, that if there were an issue, Arthur Andersen did not bring it to Sunbeam's attention when Arthur Andersen conducted its audits.

6.4. Arthur Andersen inquired as to Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's understanding of Sunbeam rebilling Wal-Mart for a $900,000 handling fees from 1995 to 1997. Arthur Andersen did not provide Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh with documents or detailed information as to this transaction and consequently they were unable to recall the details of the transaction.

6.5. Arthur Andersen inquired as to the accounting for the Olgivy & Mather's accrued expense for $2 million. Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh recalled that the $2 million accrual was for advertising costs to revitalize Sunbeam product brand image during the Christmas period. Mr. Kersh was not aware of any amount expensed in 1996 that should have been recorded as an expense in 1997.

The above analysis of the accounting issues pertaining to the proposed restatement of Sunbeam financial statements sets forth a contemporaneous record of Messrs Dunlap and Kersh's recollection of the various accounting issues raised by Arthur Andersen. The very nature of Arthur Andersen's inquiry, by not specifying the accounting issues of concern and withholding relevant documentation, inherently resulted in some limitation of Messrs. Dunlap and Kersh's recollection. Should you provide such relevant documentation, we may be able to give you additional comments or information.

It became clear to us, in the course of this meeting, that much of this process is being driven by D&T or Skadden Arps and that the issues raised relate to changes in estimates and circumstances brought about by Sunbeam's new management. Based upon what was learned of these issues, it is Messrs. Dunlap's and Kersh's belief that any restatement for correction of accounting errors would be: (1) unwarranted by the facts; (2) a misapplication of GAAP (by erroneously treating changes in estimates as prior period errors), and (3) serious mischaracterization or misinterpretation of prior transactions, events and management judgments

Sincerely yours,

Donald S. Zakarin

Subject: Sunbeam - Interview with Tom Hartschorne

On July 17, 1998, Don Denkhaus, Rita Gordon, attorney from Skadden Ayers, and I interviewed Ton Hartschorne, Director of Internal Audit. The following items were discussed by Mr. Hartschorne:

Bill and Hold

- Tom was not clear when he found out about B & H - probably right around year-end.
- Other than being a business problem, he doesn't see anything wrong from an accounting standpoint. He believes GAAP was followed.
- Per Tom, Deidra Dendants, his internal audit staff, did an investigation and found some bill and hold sales in November 1997.
- Deidra gave Bob Gluck an oral report sometime in January on her findings (subsequently in the interview, Tom changed this to be sometime after the first quarter).
- Tom thinks that Deidra had several conversations with Arthur Andersen about B & H, but he isn't sure.

Other Topics

- Per Tom, the Company was booking sales a later period into an earlier period, but Tom wasn't sure how he learned this or the details as to how this was done.
- Per Tom, he discussed this with Russ Kersh, and Russ told him "it was Company policy". He also discussed it with the audit committee chairman who wasn't concerned as long as Russ knew about it.

Due to time constraints, we terminated our discussion with Tom and resumed them on July 23, 1998. Chris Mallay, attorney from Skadden, Ayers, replaced Rita Gordon in that meeting.

Accelerated Shipping Dates

- When we reconvened with Tom, he chanted his description of the accelerated sales accounting issue to an issue of moving the ship date up a number of days in order to book a sale in an earlier month.
- Tom thought that this complied with GAAP but thought it hurt subsequent sales.
- Tom believes that he spoke to Larry Bornstein but wasn't sure.

Bill and Hold (Second Discussion)

- After year-end '97, Tom talked with Vance Kistler and Dennis Pastrana and was told we were happy with "Bill and Hold".
- Per Tom, he reviewed the letters received from B & H customers.

- According to Tom, he raised the issue of guaranteed sales with Russ Kersh and was told it was not a problem.
- He believes he gave Larry Bornstein a report on these sales.

Sales Returns

- According to Tom, he prepared a report on the returns at Hattiesburg, Mexico City and Neosho.
- He believes that he spoke to Dennis Pastrana and Larry Bornstein about the problem.
- He also spoke to Russ Kersh, Bob Gluck, Roger Lee and Jack Daily.

1996 Restructuring

- Tom traveled with the C & L consultants to Mexico City and Cancun to assist in the restructuring project focusing on controllable expenses.
- He spent time in Hattiesburg, Laurel and Neosho doing time and motion studies on the credit/collection, accounts receivable and accounts payable functions.
- Per Tom, contingencies were built into the restructuring numbers.
- Tom spent six months in Laurel to work on new outsourcing of systems, including the first three months working on billings.

On July 20, 1998, Don Denkhaus, Rita Gordon, Attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Ken Huff, Hattiesburg plant controller of Sunbeam Corporation. The summary of the information provided by Mr. Huff is as follows:

- Mr. Huff was hired in August of 1995 as plant controller at Hattiesburg.
- He reported directly to Mike Bondisky, his responsibilities included making sure STD costs were accurate, Bill of materials were accurate and supported the plant management duties.
- Not aware of corporate level rebates, however included in the standard setting was a 1-2% factor for volume rebates.
- Standard revaluation is performed on 1/1 of each year. He reviews the top 700 most active SIC (standard inventory cost) to review reevaluation procedure.
- No involvement with the unvouchered receipt issue , talk to Kirby Brown or Bob Gluck. He was aware that there was a large receiver issue at year-end.
- Did not know about bill and hold until the inventory in December.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Mitch Long

On August 6, 1998, Larry Bornstein, Rita Gordon, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Mitch Long, distribution manager of Sunbeam's Neosho manufacturing facility The following is a summary of the information provided by Mr Long

- He had been the operations manager in Hattiesburg from May 1994 to March 1997
- Since March 1997 he had been the distribution manager for the Company's Grill Group
- He was in-charge of shipping and receiving in Hattiesburg in 1996, but he did not have a direct involvement in the Company's restructuring.
- In late 1996 and early 1997, he was aware of discontinued products being shipping in significant quantities to liquidators, e.g., Gordon Brothers and Consolidated.
- Mitch was aware of the Company's bill and hold practices He specifically mentioned a large order (40,000 grills - model #GS2412-17) sales $3,389,000 from Wal-Mart which originally had a ship date of late November 1997 The order was subsequently resubmitted as a "bill and hold" order whereby some of these grills were shipped in December and some in January. He was not aware of the reason for this change.
- Mr. Long first became aware of "bill and hold" sales in November and sometime, in December, he received more instructions on bill and hold.
- Under this program, the Company shipped a significant number of grills and accessories to a third party warehouse (NDC) in Miami, Oklahoma.
- NDC's organization and administration of shipping "bill and hold" orders was not good and many of the shipments were incorrect.
- M. Long set up a folder to monitor when customers wanted their orders shipped and ultimately he sent his own employees to the NDC warehouse to ship product since the "bill and hold" orders "overwhelmed" the NDC warehouse staff.
- Initially, he sent two or three of his staff to act as checkers as the orders were pulled. He increased the number of staff in the March or April time frame to keep up with the shipping demands.
- Mr. Long maintained records of the credits issued to customers as a result of the NDC "bill and hold" shipping errors.

- Most of the "bill and hold" customers received product based on their purchase order identified dates.
- He was aware of one large customers Home Depot, pulling up their order to an earlier date
- The Company's system identified the "bill and hold" transactions as shipped confirmed "which would record revenue. Sometime in March 1998 the Company set-up a new code for "bill and hold" (S and H). This designation was assigned by customer service.
- Mr Long was aware of one sale made to Menards near the end of the year (1997) where the customer wanted only two loads per day (every day) with shipments beginning in late December He believed that there were probably a total of 80 loads shipped under this purchase order He indicated that this deal was set up by Phil Bogner and Lee Griffith. He was not aware of any other sales like this
- Mr. Long was not aware of any significant "bill and hold" returns other than the following:

Menards	$407,000
Home Depot	25,162
Fred Meyers	272,440 orders #767641 and #767705
Lowes	$ 0 order #682892

- Mr Long indicated that there was some scale inventory shipped to Neosho from Shabuta, which was obsolete, and he suggested that we talk to Dennis Rice who is in charge of scales operations
- Mr. Long just recently put in charge of the Neosha return center and was not aware of anything unusual at this time.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Judy Maudlin

On July 17, 1998, Phil Harlow, Rita Gordon, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I interviewed Judy Maudlin, vice president of manufacturing of Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of information obtained during the interview is as follows:

- Maudlin started with Sunbeam in October 1997 and will be leaving Sunbeam effective July 31, 1998.
- Maudlin's current title is vice president of manufacturing. Prior to April 1998, Maudlin was vice president of operations and was in charge of the manufacturing plants, logistics, inventory, manufacturing engineering and distribution.
- Maudlin reported directly to Don Uzzi until his termination.
- The restructuring of the Company had been completed by the time Maudlin commenced employment with the Company, except for the closing of the Bay Springs plant.
- Maudlin was responsible for 7,000 Sunbeam employees (approximately 90% of the total employees) and about 85% of Sunbeam's total operating costs.
- Maudlin said that the 1997 manufacturing budget was prepared at the "top level" and was not prepared at the "detail level." She reviewed the 1998 budget for manufacturing volume projections which would be required to meet the Company's projected sales volumes.
- The 1996 restructuring plan projected substantial manufacturing and purchasing savings. Maudlin stated that she was not asked and did not attempt to monitor against the projected savings in the restructuring plan.
- Manufacturing standards.
  - Most of the manufacturing standards were estimated based on historical experience. Only some of the plants had industrial engineers.
  - Standards for new products had been estimated by the design engineers prior to her employment. Maudlin changed this procedure and new product standards were currently estimated by the production engineering department.
  - Standards were routinely used to review the "make vs. buy" decisions on products and components.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Judy Maudlin

- The manufacturing standards were reviewed during the November 1997 to January 1998 period by the plant controllers.
- Maudlin was responsible for controlling manufacturing variances but did not get into the accounting aspects for manufacturing variances. That was done by the plant controllers.

- Warranty cost.
  - Bob Gluck was responsible for determining warranty reserves and for tracking of costs against the warranty reserves.
  - The Company's policy regarding warranties varied considerably among products and the warranties may have changed over time.
  - Maudlin estimated the warranty exposure relating to the grill recall and advised Bob Gluck of that estimate which was $1.4 million.
  - Maudlin also estimated the cost of the blanket recall.

- Mike Bondiski worked with the plant controllers to determine the accounting for manufacturing variances.

- Early-buy program.
  - Manufacturing was expected to start building for the 1998 grill season starting in September 1997.

- The marketing department provided the sales plan by product SKU and manufacturing was expected to build sufficient product to meet the sales plan.
  - In 1998 the Company had no "stock outs" except for one order of approximately $600,000 in clippers.

- In March 1998 there was a reduction in the 1998 sales forecast. The marketing department communicated the change to manufacturing which lowered its production levels.

- The manufacturing plants were able to estimate returns based on the prior year's activity and current year estimate.

- No-return policy.
  - Don Uzzi communicated to management the Company's change in policy to no longer accept returns sometime during the November 1997 to January 1998 period.
  - Maudlin had to stop trucks that were trying to return merchandise to the Company's distribution centers and plants.
  - Some trucks were turned away and the product was sent back to the customer.

- In March 1998 the Company started accepting returns of blankets.
- Maudlin had no knowledge of any gap in the tracking of RAs ("return authorizations").
- In January 1998, the Company started receiving reports that showed the reasons for merchandize returns.

- Maudlin was under no pressure to reduce or change standard costs from what she believed they should be (even though most of the standards represented estimated costs).

- Approximately 85% of the cost of grills is for materials.

- Regarding productivity and manufacturing volume
  - The "AR" represented the capacity of the plant based on the planned plant modifications.
  - The forecasted productivity for 1997 was lower than the AR.
  - The actual productivity was lower than the forecast.

- Excess and obsolete inventory
  - Maudlin was asked to review E&O inventory in November 1997.
  - Manufacturing delivered weekly reports of finished goods to the marketing department.
  - The Company uses a MRP ("materials requirement planning") process. Per Maudlin, the Company based its manufacturing production plan based on six and twelve month sales requirements.
  - The marketing department was responsible for the finished goods E&O reserves.
  - In December 1997 there was a comprehensive review of raw materials and work in process to determine if the inventory could be used in other products. Mike Bondiski coordinated this effort.

On August 10, 1998, Larry Bornstein, Chris Malloy, attorney with Skadden, Arps and I conducted an interview with Chuck Myers, Sales Manager for Team Wal-Mart. A summary of information provided by Mr Myers is as follows:

- Chuck joined the Company in January 1991 in sales operations for outdoor products.
- In 1997 he had responsibility for Wal-Mart and Sam's
- He now has responsibility for Wal-Mart, Sam's K-Mart, Target, Military, East & West Regional accounts, Ames, Caldor, Bradlees, Fred Meyer, Coles and Montgomery Wards.
- He has eight direct reports.
- From October "96" to mid February "97" he worked in Hattiesburg on the computer system problems.
- Company didn't invoice any customers (through the computer) for approximately 90 days.
- Myers never referred to the program as B&H but always called it "early buy"
- Myers indicated that he had a copy of letter to Wal-Mart in his files.

Returns

- Myers indicated that customers have issues which result in return such as inventory balancing, pricing and dumping of products.
- Wal-Mart has always been able to return on a seasonal basis - blankets.
- Wal-Mart currently has two RA's for next season's blankets and seasonal business.
- Myers estimate of Wall-Mart returns, in 1998 for "97" sales was $8 million plus $1.2 million for blankets.
- Myers did not tell Wal-Mart of the Company's no return policy.
- Dunlap had a "fight" with accounting on the turns issue.
- After the R.A.'s were deleted from the J.D.E. system - Sam's and Wal-Mart had a problem with the Company's non-acceptance of returns. Myers told Wal-Mart he would handle.

- Myers said no return" policy was crazy, because its important for customer to have product first to get sales.
- Company not only was unable to deliver grills to Wal-Mart in "97" season, but had only about a 60% fill rate across the Board.
- During"97" grill season, there was such a push to get grills out that there would consistently be problems with availability of Wal-Mart grills since available inventory would be shipped on first request-first ship" basis. Big "out-of-stock" problem for Wal-Mart.
- As a result of this problem, the Company lost 5 Wal-Mart warehouses.
- Myers knew that 1998 sales goal was not attainable in December 1997. He indicated that all sales people knew.

Bill and Hold

- There were approximately $1.5 million of blankets sold on a bill and hold basis in 2Q 1997. This was for 3 or 4 accounts (Wal-Mart deal was 1% incentive).
- Terms were that inventory must be billed in order to secure the inventory. Net 30 days from receipt. Holding period was from 30-40 days. Inventory was segregated for the customer.
- Wal-Mart insisted that the company ship on time and accurately.
- Q-3- 1997 – No B&H that he was aware of.
- If you ship late to Wal-Mart there is a $100,000 fine and you lose out on catalog orders.
- The results of B&H in Q4 of 1997 were to move $18 to $20 million of sales from 1998 to 1997.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Lee Griffith

On July 10, 1998, Phil Harlow, Brian Loughman, Rita Gordon, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Lee Griffith, vice president of sales of Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of information provided by Mr. Griffith is as follows:

Bill and Hold Sales (B&H)

- Genesis from 1997 grill season
  - Just came off a disastrous service level in Q2 1997.
  - Wal-Mart is Company's largest customer. During the "97" grill season, Sunbeam was not able to meet all the scheduled delivery needs of grills. As a result, Wal-Mart penalized Sunbeam for the "98" grill season by reducing the number of regional warehouses from 20 to 15. Chuck Meyers has the specific information regarding the Wal-Mart return estimates.
  - Thinking about how to improve "98" grill season.
  - How do we jump-start the "98" grill season.

- Management came up with an "early season buy" program which would cater to customer's need forecast
  - Gave customer an incremental 1-2% and normal seasonal term.
  - Product was manufactured in Q4 of 1997 and shipped to third party bonded warehouse.
  - All product was marked for each customer and segregated in warehouse.
  - Retailer could take down as needed.
  - Contracts with customer.
  - Goal was to avoid retailer stockouts.
  - Normal 30 day terms once customer got the product.
  - Griffith did not keep all the contracts only has Wal-Mart. LaFavre may have more.
  - Phil Harlow and Griffith called certain customers and confirmed that they couldn't return the product and that title had transferred to customer.
  - These calls were made to Wal-Mart, Home Depot, Fred Meyers and a few more.
  - B&H sales amounted to approximately $2.8 million at Q1 1998.
  - B&H program required at least $5 million in sales from a customer. This program was basically for "big guys". It would help larger customer manage their seasonal program. For customers it was a win-win situation since customer did not have to squeeze Sunbeam for product.
  - Goal was to increase sell through but weather did not cooperate (El Nino)

- Sunbeam had a small amount of B&H sales in Q3 1997 - approximately $2 million.
- Phil Bogner is the manager of the Bill and Hold program.
- As of July 9, 1998, only $500,000 of the Bill and Hold sales remained uncollected.
- Fred Myers purchased approximately $4 to $5 million in grills but cancelled and asked to return about $200,000 of unsold inventory.
- Bradlees purchased about $4 to $5 million of Bill and Hold inventory and asked to return approximately $200,000 of inventory after the grill season. Griffith felt it was a good relationship thing to do.

- Lee Griffith pre-called customers just to let them know that AA was going to call and ask a few questions about B&H. Griffith did not "prep" them. Had to "hound" certain customers to sign the confirmation letters.

- Griffith had conversations with customers prior to initiating B&H it's ensure that the customer knew it was their inventory; they got an incentive (2%) to do this. Griffith wanted everyone to be clear.

- Griffith doesn't know how customers would record inventory received. Griffith recalls Phil Harlow asking customer's for sure that they understood it was their inventory.

- Griffith recalls need the SEC reg. on B&H (Bob supplied it to him).

- Did B&H cover non-grills? Yes, blankets were done earlier '96 blanket season was screwed up.
  - So in June '97 went to Wal-Mart (Bob Connolly); grill season was really bad; customer service idea; we will make sure that blankets are place by August. "taking care of customer" - B&H.
  - Some blanket B&H in 3Q & 4Q 97 (small in 3Q).
  - '97 the 1st year they did this B&H.
  - Total B&H blankets were a few million $. (all Wal-Mart).
  - Blankets have historically had significant returns.
  - Agreement with Wal-Mart no contracts but PO's have term that Sunbeam will provide inventories in anticipation of a good season; then take back what doesn't sell; then no stock and sell next season or repkg. (Unwritten policy).
  - During 98-season attempt was to reduce level of returns i.e. sell less and manage inventory better.

- Around January 18 to January 23, 1998, a meeting was held in which a decision was made to eliminate the return authorization on the Company's system. Don Uzzi, Russ Kersh and Bob Gluck at that meeting and LaFavre by phone.
- Al LeFevre reported that results to Griffith and was upset about this decision because elimination of information left him with customer service issues.
- Company had instituted a no return policy sometime in last half of 1997 but didn't really stick to it.
- Roger Lee, sales controller, may have reports on this Al LeFevre and Kyle Kaiser in Hattiesburg may have more details.
- Al LeFevre was directed to delete the information by Russ Kersh and was instructed that "this is a no return" business and the Company would have no return.
- Kersh said we'll sue the customers if they return goods.

- Input to accounting for return reserves:
  - met with Bob Gluck
  - look at POS data
  - give/discuss a range
  - end of 1997 range was $5-$9M just Wal-Mart - sales
  - Griffith did not prepare a schedule
  - Discuss it. Look at history.
  - (Chuck Myers would have details).
  - Difficult to assess returns in advance.
  - Wal-Mart bought $40M of blankets - returned $9M
  - prior/year $38M returned 6-7 months

  Bob Gluck's reaction to the $5-$9M estimate?
  - Gluck asked what it was based on.
  - Push to get behind the number

- Markdown money - Co-op funds to be used - account by account
  - Price quotes would be set to "spread" co-op funds over customers.
  - 1997 treatment would have been the same as prior/years.
  - Areas of concern provided to Gluck; he would deal with the numbers;
  - Gluck had the history.

- Griffith got to Sunbeam fall of 1996.
  - In the blanket business, the best's thing to do is accept returns so they can be resold at full price. There was no process of revving up sales to offer discounts later.

- B & H
  - Basic seasonal terms normal - extended terms
  - No changes to original B & H agreements (except for Fred Meyers Bradlees - discussed above).
  - 1996 had a similar extended dating program.
  - May dating is normal for spring season. Prior years Jan/Feb shipment - May dating.

- RA's
  - Lots of pressure to make 3Q 1997 and 4Q 1997.
  - Early January 1998 policy of no returns was instituted.
  - There was talk about this prior to January; in 1997, it really heated up in January 1998.
  - Deletion of info - 3rd week January from JD Edwards files
  - Came to Griffith's attention from Al LeFevre; there was a mid-January meeting with Gluck, Russ K. and Don Uzzi.
  - No returns edict was pounded out. LeFevre was concerned and upset because elimination of info left him in a customer service void.
  - LeFevre was being "directed" to delete information. This is not a no-returns business. Griffith & LeFevre did not agree that there can be no returns. There will have to be returns.
  - Kersh said we'll sue the customers for returns.
  - LeFevre was not at the meeting (may have been patched in for a conference call). LeFevre left Griffith (who was out) a voicemail and they later talked. Don Uzzi told Griffith not to worry about it.
  - Efforts to retain information? Griffith heard that the info was to be deleted from the JD Edwards system but doesn't really know if information was retained elsewhere.
  - There were issues with customers - tied to markdowns. Customers would just put stuff on trucks and send it back. Some were unloaded, some were sent back. Sunbeam probably paid for the extra freight costs. Griffith had to effectively authorize returns up to $100K; he was having to go to Uzzi and Kersh to ask for authorization.
  - Griffith has seen the "Deleted" RA listing.
  - This report would have been after the mid-January meeting (18-23rd), but it would have summarized challenges faced version returns. This was shared with Griffith; he believes that there were earlier versions. Gluck would run reports via JD Edwards (copies would come over to Griffith).

  - Definite guaranteed sale - plenty of letters. Skadden has folder. Lee Griffith and Bill Marc and Rep (Carlyle) put sale together. Trying to expand into other grocery stores. Lee Griffith went to New Jersey to meet Encore.
  - Premium programs - product given to customers for loyalty by grocery stores.
  - There was a right of cancel by April 1998 on this sale.
  - Griffith discussed it with Bob, and AA asked him for information.
  - Intent was for merchandise to go in First Quarter 1998 but didn't work.

- EPI
  - EPI not really a "customer" - small order fulfillment.
  - This was really a sale of assets.
  - Bill Bloomfield and George Timchal was initially involved. Bob Gluck and Don Uzzi were also involved.
  - Al LeFevre thought that the sale "smelled."

- M Block
  - Terry Reilly and Dave Wilkins put this deal together. Both of them are no longer with the Company. The yearend sale to M Block was the first purchase of blankets by M Block.
  - Dave Wilkins guaranteed that if the blankets were not sold by April 1, 1998, they could be returned. Griffith says this agreement is in writing (December 1997).
  - Part of distributor program (Kersh and Gluck knew). M Block reseller. Wanted to expand the business and become a blanket distributor. Blankets sent for 97/98 season to M Block for the first time.
  - What Griffith didn't know was that Wilkins had guaranteed those blankets and would take back up to April 1st. (Agreement probably dated December '97) - LeFevre/Griffith not aware of the agreement. (Done in the field).
  - Wilkins' salesmen around 6/7 years at Sunbeam - culture was "we'll take it back". This guy had probably done this in the past, but remember there was significant pressure to meet numbers. This salesman got (about $15-$18K bonus for 1997), assuming this was a "good" sale. (No commission). Griffith determined bonuses for salesmen ("pool" basis was distributed).
  - Wilkins left Sunbeam because he was a poor administrator (Terry Reilly protected him -once Reilly left, Wilkins knew it was time). Griffith counseled Wilkins on his poor administrative performance and failure to generate customer relationship. He left a week later.
  - [Sales bonus based on revenue and EPS]
  - Griffith went to LeFevre when he found out. LeFevre didn't know, went to Terry Reilly, he knew. It would have been passed to Gluck and Fannin. Kersh & Dunlap said they can't send it back, we'll sue them.
  - Griffith said he learned about the guaranteed in March or April of 1998. This sale and other guaranteed sales were made because of tremendous pressure put on the salesmen to make the budgeted sales numbers.

- PHD – Professional Household Distributors
  - The Company had a consignment sales program in place for many years with PHD.
  - The Company put in place a program to "wean off" PHD from the consignment arrangement by yearend 1997. (October 14, 1997 Agreement)
  - The agreement allowed for PHD to do stock rebalancing in February and August.
  - $7.2M sales recorded as of year-end. Sent back $3.8M.
  - Terms: 2%/30, 1%/60 – Net 90, but Sunbeam wouldn't just let PHD buy and return in February with no contest.
  - Economics could be similar to a consignment situation at certain times of year, e.g., order December, return February. Griffith doesn't have prior agreement with PHD. It may not have been in an agreement – "old" arrangement.
  - Bob Gluck kept a schedule of consigned inventory held at PHD.
  - Griffith was concerned over PHD's credit worthiness.
  - PHD was sold the Company's new ice cream maker product which had problems with market acceptance.

  - Perzrow was the New Jersey representative on this sale.
  - The Company "re-cut" an invoice to allow $150,000 return.

- Excess and obsolete inventory
  - The Company received proceeds of approximately $30 million in the fourth quarter of 1996 and first quarter of 1997 from the sale of excess and obsolete inventory. This represented a standard cost of approximately $60 million.
  - Consolidated & Gordon Brothers took most of it. Company received about 50% of standard cost.

- On November 20, 1996, Griffith told Uzzi that he did not think the Company could achieve its fourth quarter 1997 sales budget.

- Griffith thought the problems with the Company achieving its 1998 sales budget were as follows:
  1. Because of the aggressive sales in the fourth quarter of 1997, the Company would lose a large amount of incremental revenue in 1998. There was a big push to sell products between Christmas and New Years, which was not done in prior years. Griffith thought this resulted in between $50-$60 million in revenue.
  2. New products were performing below expectations. Examples were the air filter and ice cream maker. There was also a recall on certain gas grills.
  3. The Company lost its grill accessory business (approximately $25 million in revenue) and there was a loss of 10 Wal-Mart warehouse locations (approximately $25 million in revenue).

3. Inventory global oversight
4. Standard cost development
5. Full absorption entries for Hattiesburg, Waynesboro, Neosho

Started in current position in November 1996. He has been with the company since June 1996. From June 96 - October 96, Kerby was plant controller at Waynesboro.

Kerby was not involved in the development/calculation of restructuring charges.

1996 Duties:

1. Physical inventory reconciliation
2. 1997 standard cost development

The Company's philosophy for 1997 standards development was one of "Challenge costing" - i.e. zero-based budgeting. They did not consider historical standards.

1997 standards development

1. Began the budgeting process around 11/96.
2. The first standards roll out accured in the 1st week of January 1997. Several additional standards roll outs were performed due to system problems. 1997 standards roll out was completed in April.
3. The 1997 standards roll out adjustment resulted in an approximately $4 million decrease in inventory at standard in January 1997.
4. Decreases in std costs were mainly due to pressure to achieve lowest cost. This pressure was manifested in the following actions:

   Raw materials - pressure to obtain the lowest sourced cost

   Labor - reduced headcounts to reduce direct labor cost.

   Overhead:
   - In 1996, overhead was budgeted on a regional level. In 1997 this was done at a plant level.
   - 1997 overhead pool for Hattiesburg excluded approximately $10 million as excess capacity variance because the plant was not a full capacity.

- Thus $10 million came through P&L (cogs) as period cost.
- If the $10 million had been built into the standards, it sould have had a favorable impact during periods of inventory build up but unfavorable during high sales periods.

$10 million excess capacity overhead excluded from overhead pool mainly due to:
- Unused floor space
- Excess production capacity in molding and iron factory.

But then in 1997, the Company produced more than plan. Therefore, of the $10 million excess, a $5 million was absorbed. (i.e. production absorbed $5 million more than budgeted OH pool).

Originally production ramp up budgeted to start mid June. Actually it started in early May.

OH pool approved by John Newcomb.

Certain 1997 issues discussed with Kerby

- January 1997 manufacturing variance - maybe due to reclass issue with inventory adjustments account due to systems problems. Kerby could only speculate did not know for sure.

- December 1997 inventory valuation reserves - $7 million credit - $6 million book to physical reserve was brought in to income. Kerby and Bob Gluck did the analysis. The actual book to physical adjustment was offset against the unvouchered receipts liability. The BTP reserves were brought into income.

- Kerby said that his main concern with unvouchered receipts problem (i.e. inability to match invoices against open receivers) had to with the breakdown in controls from procurement to materials management. But ultimately he felt comfortable with the reserve at year end.

- According to Kerby, no games were played with cost accounting. But there were initiatives to look for expenses that that could qualify for capitalization.

1st Quarter 1997 change in full absorbtion calculation

- Net effect of change was to benefit February 98 earnings by $4.5 million.
- In 1997 the full absorption calculation was done by plant; however, inventory moves between plants. In 1997, variances were charged to cost of sales when goods left one plant, even though they might have been moved to the DC in another plant.
- The new approach for calculating variances takes a global view of production variances so that variances associated with finished goods are not expensed until the goods are sold.
- In 97, variances were being changed to P&L when goods were still sitting in a dc.

Subject: Kerby Brown interview – 7/20/98, continued on 7/21/98

- Mike Bondisky headed up the initiative to make the change. Actually, Bob Gluck, Deb Macdonald and Kerby had discussed making this change earlier (Q397), but the change was not made until Q198.

Kerby is not aware if there was any consideration of NRV given the volume of capitalized variances.

Cost of quality amount in cost of sales represents warranty expense. This is accrued monthly.

Change in production methodology

- In 1996 the company produced under a methodology of level production throughout the year.
- In 1997 the company went to seasonal production with low production in 1st half of 1997 followed by ramp-up of production in 2nd half of 1997.

Full absorption calculation:

- Household operates on a calendar year cycle. Variances are capitalized on a FIFO basis.
- Neosho operates on a June - July cycle. All labor and overhead variances are capitalized under the philosophy that unfavorable variances in the early part of the season will be consumed by favorable variances during the peak times.
- Mike Bondisky and Bob Gluck review the full absorption calculation montly. They have never asked Kerby to alter or manipulate the full absorption calculation.

Title. Director of Logistics

3 years with Sunbeam

Duties:
- FG Warehousing
- Transportation

People who report to Bill
- Jim Job
- David Aslin
- DC managers

Restructuring 1996

- C&L studied Domestic transportation
- 11/96 meeting → go forward given for restructuring plan. Bill Bloomfeld promoted from HH to Corp. Director of Distribution
- Transportation managers previously reported to manufacturing managers under the original plan, but in 6/97 went back to the old way where line managers reported to the plants.

1997

1997 was very aggressive month/quarter ends

9/97 → Big Push (also done in June)

1. Pull forward October order file
2. Many orders changed from collect (customer picks up) to prepaid (where Sunbeam ships to customer). This allowed Sunbeam to ship orders early and select mode of transport to slow delivery times.
3. E.g. - used HUB Group (rail shipment) too slow down delivery so orders would be delivered on right dates

Usually customers will not send truck until the desired date. Prepaid allows us to control the shipping process. This involves changing the terms of P.O.

Early shipments resulted in a lot of customer trouble shooting

Shipping terms did not change, i.e. still FOB shipping point

Bill believes that all pressure/decisions came from top management - i.e. Al Dunlap, Don Uzzi, Russ Kersh and David Fannin (not David so much). This was the operating committee

Don Uzzi's philosophy - load the pipeline and we'll deal with the customers later..

According to Bill, there were daily meetings at end of each month/quarter. Attendees were generally:

All VPs
Don Uzzi
Lee Griffith
Al Lefevre
Jack Daily
Lisa Dalberth
Russ Kersh

David Fannin and Bob Gluck were not in the meetinsgs

The Company was managed based on EPS targets

- Projected EPS for quarter
- All activity managed based on EPS

1996 was quiet because they didn't want anything in 1996

March 1997 was an "unbelievable" push

Each quarter, it went deeper. Everyone was telling our operating committee "this has to stop". Lee Griffith said "this can't go on".

Don (Uzzi) in my opinion was the guy, → demanded you make the numbers and didn't want to hear any bull.

Dixon Thayer and Bill Kirkpatrick (both from Scott) were fired because Sunbeam didn't make the numbers.

Bill can only speculate as to the source of the continued pressure - % growth and EPS were the key drivers/measures

I think Al Dunlap and Russ Kersh gave the pressure. Don Uzzi was the instrument. Ultimately he was the scapegoat.

The pressure started in March 97. Every quarter there was a significant push to pull forward sales.

Customer Service received the order to pull orders. Flow of instructions as follows:
Don Uzzi → Lee Griffith → Al Lefever → Kyle Kaiser (pull orders)

Usual order allocation is approximately 5 days out (curr + 5)

14 days)
21 days) @ quarter end, , every open order was pulled forward
One month)

With regard to shipping cut off policy, Bill agreed with Gluck that if the goods are loaded and sealed in a truck, then it should count as a shipment. From a system's standpoint, there is no way to segregate invoice generation from generation of a bill of lading. A pick slip is generated and the goods are pulled and loaded. Once the truck is loaded, the order is ship confirmed. This generates the bill of lading and the invoice.

@ quarder ends - two things happened:
- Pull orders forward
- Do deals to push sales

Based on shipping activity, Bill guesses that the biggest deals were probably with:
- PHD
- M. Block
- K-mart
- Any big accounts

Liquidators were used at quarter closes to drive the top line
- Consolidated
- Gordon Bros.
- Menards - used as liquidators

At quarter ends, E&O lists were given to sales guys who called the liquidators

Late 96 and early 1997: A lot of liquidated product to Consolidated
Gordon Bros.
& one more (can't remember)

More deals were made at quarter ends. But none over $5 million

Outlet Stores - Sunbeam got in trouble with customers for selling same stuff through outlet stores. Later Sunbeam limited Outlet sales to to damaged and/or old stuff.

Returns were often sent to outlet stores rather than being repacked.

Bloomfield responsible for shipping stuff to outlet stores

Returns were counted, put in inventory location and "sold" to outlets.

Asked if he is aware of any cases of goods billed not shipped, Bloomfield responded "Never"

Customer service can process order from order status to invoice status

People can advance orders to get product "shipped". There are ways for people to advance order statuses.

JDE (Neosho/Wayesboro) → direct interface. You can generate any document in the order process.

You can force allocate in JDE to wind up with negative inventory. Over allocate. – i.e. allocate inventory to orders that does not exist in the perpetual (although JDE does not include production that has not been closed).

Sometimes orders were negative allocated and insufficient product was available. Shipped short and over allocation later cleaned up.

Bill was not aware of any duplicate shipments.

Bill and Hold

1. First heard of it in 12/97. Bloomfield is almost sure it occurred only at end of December in 1997.
2. The plan was to:
   - Get valid PO
   - Isolate/segregate the goods
   - Do order confirm
   - Manage order papers manually and get goods to the customer eventually.

In Hattiesburg due to automated systems, goods actually have to be physically moved to execute commands to get ship confirm status.

Deep South (warehouser for bill and hold out of Hattiesburg) commingled inventories

Estimated bill and hold cost @ y/e → (we gave Gluck an estimate of approx $600K). This was for warehousing, handling and transport cost.

Neosho Bill and hold

1. YE bill and hold orders were not as clearly identified as at March 31 1998.
2. Y/E goods were already in the 3rd party warehouses. We just processed the documents.
3. @ YE there was no special order type for bill and hold – "we screwed it up royally". In March we forced the company to create a new order type.

On January 2, 1998 (approx) Gluck was in his office going over the Bill & Hold SEC ruling. Bob was aware of Bill & Hold in the December time frame (Bill speculates).

In December there were numerous discussions about B&H and what docs had to exist. Gluck was up everyone's ass about what we needed to have. No deals < $100K.

Gluck said AA partners had a problem with B&H and the SEC wasn't going to like it.

Bob was never receptive to this (i.e. bill and hold). He hates this kind of stuff. Russ (Kersh) probably pushed it on him.

Bill is not aware in any changes in sales terms after shipment.

Movement of B&H inventory

- December 97 - mainly shipped from January to March. Generally, all gone by April sometime. However, some blankets didn't move until June.
- March 98 – approx. $900K of B&H inventory currently left in Neosho. Merands - 4-5 trucks; Lowes - ½ trailer, Home Depot - ½ trailer
- Sunbeam ran the NDC operations to manage B&H.

Distributors (PHD, M.Block, Encore)

- Encore shipment never left the warehouse. This is the only deal that came back to us. This was a March bill and hold. Credit issued in June 1998.
- Turned to distributors at quarter ends to get sales on books

Don (Uzzi) would push to get revenue. Did not say how to get revenue.

- Everyone was tied the same thing. EPS, revenue growth, earnings.
- Bonus plan, options, etc.
- Then in October 1997, it started to fall apart when management closed the exercise window for options
- In Jan. it reopened after yearend earnings

No one wanted to be the guy that didn't make the numbers.

As early as September 1997, the sales org. knew that the stores were stuffed with product. E.g Walmart had 12 weeks of product. Talk to Chuck Myers.

In 1997 the Company issued a no return policy (approx 6/97 – 7/97)

- Part of the C&L restructuring plan was to reduce returns
- When it wasn't working a "no return" policy was implemented.
- The policy was not communicated to retail channel
- Always @ Y/E, customers load return goods into gaylords and return them
- There were a lot of trapped freight charges through April 1998 because returned goods were not accepted at the plants.
- In April the plants were allowed to start processing returns again. $8 million in return authorizations was initially put up (i.e. RA's issued to permit returns) but this was not enough. They eventually put up more.
- $600K - $800K of additional transportation/storage charges was incurred as a resultof unwillingness to accept returns.

Bottleneck from no returns

- The retail community was never aware of the no return policy.
- This was a Russ Kersh initiative to meet C&L plan.
- Russ Kersh and Al Dunlap managed the company according to the CL study (e.g. trying to achieve targets for returns and warranty.
- 6/97 – no return policy. Only Lee Griffith could authorize returns. Later this was changed so that all returns had to be authroized by Don Uzzi. But returns are heaviest in the first 6 months of every year.
- Started turning trucks away from dock at end of January
- Instructions were issued to the carrier community that Sunbeam would not accept returns with out a return authorization.
- The transportation crisis was communicated back to sales who identified trapped freight.
- Return authorization were posted back up in April

RA Process

1. In early 1998, took all RA's off the system
2. List of trapped freight turned over to Kyle Kaiser or Jim Job or Al LeFever

1997 – Volume of shipping was high, but systems were able to handle it.

Cut off – "one of the strictest rules we have in the distribution center (DC)". At shiping cut off, we can complete a "wave" (i.e. a wave of containers at the DC bay doors) but cannot reload a new truck after the cut off time. Sometimes the morning shift would finish the wave that was started prior to cut-off.

Bill & Hold – if an order came thorough the WMS we shipped it. From Chris' standpoint processed like any other order. She would not be able to distinguish bill and hold from normal orders.

Subject: Janice Gavin interview – 7/21/98

Title: Manager, general accounting
Has been with the Company 29 years.
Reports to Delray

Involvement with 1996 restructuring

- All restructuring reserves set at Corp.
- All JEs posted to reserves are special coded (900s)
- Has support for book value of household plants written down in connection with restructuring
- No knowledge of excess reserves
- Has support for E&O reserves set up for household division
- No continuity of outdoor division personnel to track down outdoor files related to restructuring.
- Janice does not know where to find information for Outdoor restructuring
- Box of outdoor yearend 1996 accounting analysis going to Don Jackson in Delray

Asked about any unusual items related to restructuring set up or reserves, Janice responded that she was not aware of any unusual items. Any unusual items with respect to reserves: none noted. She was not asked to book entries for any additional or otherwise unsupported charges.

Corporate authorizes charges to the restructuring reserves.

1997

Manual Sales Accrual - some invoices do not make it through the system to g/l posting status. This is largely due to EDI problems.

The Company found out about this by comparing sales per the G/L to the scorecards. The scorecard tracks the relationship between orders and shipments. Shipments per the scorecard did not agree to sales posted to the general ledger. Management researched the issue and found that some invoices did not g/l posting status.

At month end, a report is generated of sales that have reached ship confirm status but did not reach g/l posting status and make a manual JE to accrue these sales. Entry automatically reverses at the beginning of the next period.

The scorecard tracks all orders that have shipped.
Manual J/E is to record sales that with "shipment confirmed" status that have not reached 999 status (i.e. g/l posting).

The manual sales accrual has ranged from approx. $1 million to $9 million A team was formed to troubleshoot and correct the problem.

Sales cutoff at end of quarters

Fourth quarter 1996 - Janice noted nothing unusual regarding sales cutoff

First quarter 1997 - again noted nothing unusual

- Sale of discontinued inventory - close out items sold to discount stores at below cost. Janice not involved. As far as she knows, these were booked as normal sales. Reports were generated of sales below standard. The loss on these sales was charged to E&O reserves.
- It seemed to Janice that sales below standard related mainly to grills and Neosho stuff. Household busy season was over.

Furniture entity was handled by outdoor division people (Disco).

Second quarter 1997 - nothing unusual

Third quarter 1997 - nothing unusual

Fourth quarter 1997 - nothing unusual

First quarter 1998 - nothing unusual

First time Janice heard Bill and Hold was at end of January (1998) - actually, Janice thought the term was "build and hold". JG made accrual for storage costs related to stored shipments:

$125k Neosho
70k Household
$195k yearend accrual = to cover for January/February/March storage charges related to bill and hold

In March 1998, the Company recorded additional storage charges due to large amount of stored inventory for Neosho.

Asked about any unusual journal entries made (or which she was asked to make) Janice said she could recall none. She was "never" asked to make any unusual/unsupported entries.

According to Janice, all judgemental reserves are handled at Corporate. The warranty reserve calculation is done at Hattiesburg, but Corp. can reverse or true up warranty accruals as they please. Ultimately, corporate decides how much to accrue.

28 years with the Company

According to Jim problems arise because "Business is Good"

Fourth quarter 1997 issues = noted nothing unusual; normal busy season stuff.

Asked about goods shipped to NDC, said he found "short work" carrier to transport goods from NEOSHO to Miami, OK. He understands these to be bona fide sales. Has no knowledge of sales terms.

Asked about any unusual activity re: customer returns:
- Blankets - March, April, May (this is normal)
- Recalled grills
- Nothing else unusual

Returns center = Cynthia Byrd in charge.

Returns were heavy but not unusual. He heard about Kersh's "no return policy," and knew it would not work. Others have tried this before. The goods came back, but had no RA to receive against.

Jim made arrangements with shippers and agreed to accept storage charges. Estimates a total of 75 - 100 trucks for which the Company incurred storage charges until the Company started accepting returns. Many of the containers were "pups" - i.e. the small containers. Trucking Co's complained about trailers being tied up.
Estimated cost of policy changed was approximately $500k. This is what he approved to shippers for storage charges.

Subject: Kyle Kaiser interview – 7/21/98

This problem occurred mostly in first quarter of 1998. NDC relationship terminated recently.

Carriers inform us of customer refusals to accept shippments.

Misshipments generally result from
1. Ship past cancel date
2. Wrong quantity
3. Wrong product

In some cases Kyle has seen duplicate shipments, but there were two orders submitted.
1. Received both an EDI order from the customer and a hard copy order from customer.
2. Al LeFevre and Lee Griffith would call the sales reps saying "where's the order" and sales reps would fax a hard copy in advance of the EDI orders
3. Duplicate invoices occurred due to heading text in EDI orders. Le the EDI order number contained leading zeros or other leading information that resulted in the system reading this as a unique order. As a result, duplicate orders were not caught.

   Return Authorization Document Types
   CW – credit warranty (defective) consumer returns
   CR – return to stock (non defective)
   CQ – recalls

4. Duplicate shipments that Kyle was aware of – approximately 20 shipments of $2000 each. Total less than $100,000

In 1998 saw no intentional wrong doings. We only shipped orders we had.

Order allocation – normally pulled orders five days ahead of request date and sent to traffic for pulling and shipment. At quarter end this was extended out 10 days. Parameters in were changed in the system to go out further than 5 days. (Al Lefevre would give the instructions).

We never pulled everything that was out there. Also, we were selective, e.g. did not advance allocate orders where we knew customers would refuse shipment.

Sometimes customers would refuse shipment. We incurred detention charges days after several days of a customer refusing shipment. Despite this, a business decision was made to go ahead and ship orders early.

Mitch Long (shipping manager at Neosho) – got copies of all misshipments to customers from the customer service department.

As of February (this is when Kyle started as director of customer service), the Company had excess grill inventory. This was being discussed as an issue – i.e. the need to find warehousing. But it was widely known that the plant kept running at full steam. This was a reaction to early 1997 poor service levels. By design, inventory levels were increased in 1997.

Bill and Hold

First heard of it in first quarter 98. Gluck talked to me about lack of procedures in fourth quarter 1997. Decision to do bill and hold was executed abruptly at end of fourth quarter of 1997.

Gluck was being forced – was not a proponent of it.

In first quarter tracked each bill and hold order in the system. Also tracked schedule of shipments.

- A few customers wanted to extend delivery dates, but Sunbeam took a hard stance and made customers take the goods.
- Approximately less than 2% of total orders were allowed to push back delivery dates and payment terms.
- Have Depot re-consigned goods to other stores. Le. Home Depot orders by store. In total orders were accepted, but were shifted to different stores.
- In Q198 bill and hold went much smoother.
- Procedures were put in place and followed. According to Kyle, "if it (bill and hold) is legal, we did it right."

Deductions

- Prior to Creditek, customer service was very involved in the process of managing deductions. In 1997, Creditek did all and there was no communication, so customer service kept doing things wrong.

  Big deductions: Advertising
  Mark downs

Chargeback types influenced by customer service

- Returns
- Vendor violations

In 1998, customer service reviewed the May 1998 Creditek report and is getting involved in the chargeback control process.

Current head of Creditek - Margaret ??

Comments about returns and guaranteed sales

Subject: Kyle Kaiser interview – 7/21/98

- First time product sales to QVC always guaranteed.

Pressure to make sales numbers at end of Q1 98.

There were daily meetings near quarter end. In attendance were:
- Don Uzzi
- Lee Griffith
- Chuck Myers
- Kyle Kaiser
- Al Lefevre - came to Hattiesburg for one week at end of the first quarter

Score card = used tomorutor daily shipments and orders. Kyle's job to make sure that the gap between shipments and orders was small

Very high pressure

Don Uzzi would tell people - "this is your number"

They (top management) were planning to sell the Company. Anyone hired after October of 1996 was told this is an 18-month deal and when we sell you will be fully vested. (e.g. Lefevre/Hanson/Mack)

Kyle: "Nobody would put up with this bull if not for the options."

In the Fall of 1997 the Company hired Morgan Stanley and enthusiasm built within. Through January, February and March, employees felt OK. By the end of March, the attitude had shifted when the Company didn't make the numbers.

Return Authorizations

January 22, 1998 - return authorizations were removed from the system

By February 8, 1998 the return authorizations started being put back in the system.

Deletion of RAs from system - Al Lefevre received a call from Russ Kersh, Bob Gluck and Lee Griffith - Al gave the order to delete the RAs from the system and make a manual spreadsheet. There were approximately $8 million of open RA's at the time.

Negative inventory allocation

As far as Kyle knows, inventory was allocated into the negative infrequently.

Job Title: Strategic Planning & Analysis
M & A on Ad Hoc

Started with Sunbeam 10/1/97

Initially reported to Lisa Dalberth, who left mid-December, '97, then to Deb McDonald.

Interacted with:

- Rich Goudis
- Russ Kersch
- Don Uzzi
- All VPs and GMs

When Scott started with Sunbeam there was already an outline for 1998. The budget was $2.25/share.

Started with $2.25 per share goal. Needed to make numbers. Other targets:

GM	= 34%	1998
SGA	= 14%
Operating Profit	= 20%

Q3 97 - Scott was not involved in reporting to management

Q4 97
- Scott was involved in communicating with upper management
- In Q4 1997 there was a big push
- Were looking to make $1.45/share
  - Selling
  - Spending Control
  - } Cost Control
- Looked through expenses in 4th Quarter for anything that could be capitalized
- A laundry list of items was being looked at
- Scott helped Zucawski in looking at 4th Quarter R & D expenses

Profit Assurance plan (LAB showed the schedule to Scott).

- The Plan was reviewed daily with VPs and GMs
- This is common at all companies but not to the extent that Sunbeam does it
- Everyone had their "go gets"
- Lisa Dalberth or Deb McDonald drove the process
- Don Uzzi was very familiar with this because he was driving the assurance plan

Certain schedules "were not to be shown to anybody"

- Scott was not the keeper of such schedules (i.e., he does not have any copies)
- Lisa was the keeper at that time
- E.g. - Schedule "4th Quarter Revised Forecast" (LAB showed the schedule to Scott) – showed that without adjustment there was no way we would make EPS
- Schedule illustrates $0.21 problem at end of Q3-97, then "Profit Assurance Plan" was developed
- The profit assurance plan was put together for Don Uzzi so he could see the magnitude of the problem
- Bob was aware of all this push. A lot of this could not happen without Bob's yes or no. Scott does not know how involved Kersh was.

Troublesome Items

- Sales waterfall items
- Co-op
- PPV
- Lower returns
- Lower commissions
- Capitalized expenses
  1. Bob & Zucanski determined amounts to be capitalized
  2. $2.25 million = ¼ of annual spending was the target. [Actual capitalized = $1.25] Thus seemed unreasonable

Gross Sales

1. Don Uzzi drove people in the leadership meetings to "drive" sales
2. They expressed their views to Don and at times it got very heated
3. Sales were being pulled forward and it was clear that the VPs and GMs were uncomfortable with sales targets and the untenability of that - i.e. Pulling Q1,'Q2 '98 sales into Q4
4. "Red Book" - This was the common name for the "Go to Market Plan"
5. Scott was aware of stated no returns policy. Don Uzzi was very vocal about this policy in the leadership meetings.
6. Everyone knew that in practice, the no returns policy was "Total B.S".
7. Gross non-defective returns in '98 budgeted at $19 million from original estimate of approximately $25 million.
8. Sunbeam became a hostile work environment when bad news was delivered. Each quarter's expectations were increased.

P&L Variations - We asked Scott about reasons for some P&L variations

1. ↓ Co-op → maybe Δ in philosophy. From customer coop to national advertising; more than likely the decrease was due to something not kosher.

> "It was known among planning group that restructuring reserves were being used to benefit earnings."

2. Returns - not kosher
3. Analytically it seems like something is not kosher in manufacturing variations
4. Cost of quality
   Product Liability } BIG ISSUES
5. Bd. Exp.

We asked Scott about the above variations, but he was unable to point to any specific reasons for variations

February 1998 Profit Assurance

1. A decision made to book favorable entries in February '98.
2. Bob Gluck was aware of this.
3. By early February, it was apparent that Sunbeam would not make Q1 numbers.

1998 Acquisitions

1. Deb MacDonald/Scott got involved on 10-year projection for all the entities (1st week of March)
2. Rich Goudis & Russ Kersh fed forecasting group the information for the projections
3. Daily sales updates were given to Al Dunlap & Don Uzzi during Q1
4. 3/19/98 – Press release made of sales $253.5 for the quarter
5. The schedule for the 1st quarter forecast was done prior to a conference call on night of March 18th
6. The schedule was "absolutely" a reach. Concern was expressed to Don Uzzi
7. 10-year estimates were continually revised downward
8. Ron Richter and Steve Dalberth put together the numbers for the bank book

1st & 2nd Quarter 1998

1. Any unusual items – February J/Es were made for profit protection, but Scott believes some were reversed in March 1998 when it was apparent Sunbeam would not make the numbers.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Mike Bondisky

On July 21, Phil Harlow, Rita Gorden, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Mike Bondisky, Director of Manufacturing Accounting for Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of the information obtained during the interview is as follows:

- Hired in October of 1996 as Director of Manufacturing Accounting. Immediate supervisor is Bob Gluck and he is based in Delray.
- During early 1997 I spent most of the time in the field (approximately 75%). Mid to late 1997 he spent more time in Delray.
- His job was to support the head of Manufacturing, Ron Newcomb, who was terminated in October of 1997. Judy Maudlin took over as Head of Manufacturing in October of 1997. Judy spent little time in the field.
- He had no involvement in helping establishing the restructuring reserves, and did not look at capitalized variances as part of the restructuring.
- His first task at Sunbeam was to develop a new budget by plant and departmental budgets.
- Helped establish the manufacturing standards during 1997 and 1998.
- Was in charge of the physical inventories at domestic locations at the end of 1997.
- To the best of his knowledge no gross profit was recorded on the sale of discontinued products.
- No analysis of excess and obsolete inventory was prepared throughout 1997, only specific problems were addressed on an as-needed basis.
- Performed a comprehensive analysis of raw material and work in process and prepared a an excess and obsolete report at year end 1997, and reached a conclusion that a $7 million reserve was needed.
- No analysis was performed on finished goods.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Mike Bondisky

- Went to Bob Gluck to inquire about finished goods E&O and was told not to worry about finished goods, as the Company would move the product through retail stores
- There was no interface with sales and marketing and manufacturing with respect to potential obsolete finished goods.
- Once product moved to the distribution facility it was no longer his responsibility.
- Moved to a new system in 1997, therefore historic data not relevant or comparative. Costs are now tracked at a department level and variances were analyzed at a plant level.
- To the best of his knowledge the overhead pool was consistent between 1996 and 1997.
- To the best of his knowledge, he is not aware of any aggressive cost accounting during 1996, 1997 or 1998.
- Had no knowledge of bill and hold at year end.
- Was aware of open receivable (NURF) problem at year end and during the year. This was a result of a painful transition to the outsourcer (NPC).
- There was a variety of reasons why NPC could not get a good match.
- The result of NPC not matching was a debit to inventory and credit to cash; therefore double booking inventory and thus the physical inventory was greater than the perpetual ledger.
- The company used unvouchered receipts greater than six months old as an estimate to offset the shrink at December 28, 1997.
- During 1998, there have been approximately $2 - $4 million of 1997 unvouchered receipts roll through.
- During the 1st quarter of 1998 the company changed the capitalized variance methodology to include all inventory at the DC's and plants including outside locations. The result of this was to capitalize additional variances during Q1 1998 in the amount of $4 million.
- The Company's inventory has increased substantially in 1998 and E&O reserves need to be addressed.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Jim Gitney

On July 21, 1998, Phil Harlow, Chris Maloy, attorney with Skadden Arps, and I conducted an interview with Jim Gitney, vice president of operations, Neosho for Sunbeam Corporation. A summary of the information obtained during the interview is as follows:

- My position for the past two weeks is VP of Operations in Neosho.
- Started with Sunbeam September of 1996 and worked closely with the Coopers and Lybrand team on the restructuring plan as it relates to plant rationization, inclusive of assisting in the preparation of a Financial Model. Worked closely with Ron Newcomb on the plant rationization.
- During the first two months of 1997 worked with Jack Daily and Rich Goudis to fix MIS/JDE system problems.
- During March of 1997 the Company had major problems producing Grills. In May of 1997 my position changed to Director of Outdoor to try and put out the fires in Neosho.
- As part of the C & L restructuring, they came to the conclusion that the facilities were underutilized from 35% to 75% and that the company's goal was to get to the optimal vertical integration.
- Not part of SKU rationization.
- The restructuring was well thought through, but the timing of completion of the plan was aggressive.
- Not involved in calculating capitalized variance.
- The Company planned in July of 1997 to re-layout Neosho, which was to be completed by October.
- No problems in getting money to complete plant re-layout in Neosho.
- This job had more pressure than other jobs. Other than that, no other differences.
- Was not aware of bill and hold until November of 1997.

- Don Uzzi received a daily status of sales during 1st, 2nd 3rd and 4th quarters of 1997
- Company rule in Neosho was to not record revenue on shipments past 10p.m.
- The Neosho facility had no sophisticated shipping process and no bar coding. To confirm a shipment, the only thing needed to be done was to have a clerk press a button.
- Was not aware of the Menards sale of grill accessories at year end that did not get shipped. Ask Ken Hempton who was the sales representative on Menards.
- He believes Menards shipment was an isolated case and that it was intended to be a bill and hold transaction.
- Mitch Long and Bob Bloomfield controlled the shipping process and the ship confirm process.
- There was one blanket order in May or June to Wal-Mart that was a bill and hold.
- 1998 plan for grills was $360 million. Actual sales were $200 million.
- 1st quarter 1998 bill and hold had co-op doubled on special deals.
- The defective returns policy was implemented in August of 1997. Only RA's signed by Lee Griffith were taken back. The remainder was pushed back to customer.

1997 problems

- Hard to get people
- Increase in employee turnover

The 1998 plan was to employ levelized production

- Running production lines on even flow (more or less 600 people)
- Build WIP which is then put into "bank stock" – i.e., wired blankets with module (no control or blanket cover). This can later be converted into one of several different models.
- The bank stock will be converted to finished goods during the busy season.

*Wal-Mart = 1/3 of business

Fourth quarter 1997 - no different than all year

- Every quarter there was a strong "push"
- Especially quarters 2, 3 and 4
- Push - some direct shipments to customers and some to outside warehouse
- Waynesboro was shipping goods to a warehouse in Laurel (at first run by Sunbeam then by Deep South)
- We were being asked to ship out product that customers were buying, the customers just did not want it delivered yet
- How much was sent to Deep South at quarter end:
  - A lot were Wal-Mart products which move quickly
  - 1997 approximately 1.3 million units were sold to Wal-Mart
- Even in prior year shipped product through the Laurel warehouse (five different buildings) and also through Purvis, MO.
- Shipping - usually the customer sends its own courier (95% of the time). Thus, order pick up is usually in customer's control.
- Goods moved to Laurel were carried on Sunbeam, not customer trucks.
- Transfers to another location.
- Generally transfers were internal transfers of Sunbeam-owned goods; however, in 1997 some transfers were for customer orders.
- Pulling forward orders - Gaffi is sure they did, but did not specifically know.

Returns
- Mostly from January to June
- Sales department approves returns and RA gets written
- Plant takes back so customer gets credit
- 1997 - approximately 500 units returned in 1997
- 1998 - approximately 460-470K units returned year to date, usual numbers

Returns are approximately 10% of units sold

Policy change - no returns
- Policy changed in January/February 1998 timeframe
- The policy was that no returns could be processed without RA (status quo)
- Learned of this through a phone call from Lee Griffith - vice president of sales (late January/early February)
- Plants argued - you are going to get "hit" all at one time if you change your mind
- Mid-April is when stuff started to come back in
- Goffi did not think this would stick due to size of Wal-Mart
- Sunbeam has tried unsuccessfully to stop returns in the past
- Trucks of returns were left in yard untouched
- Warranty returns were mixed with returns to stock
- Luis Silberwassa - gave impression that the policy was communicated to customers (left in the first quarter 1998)
- More or less 5-10 containers of unprocessed returns were in the yard at one time.
- Jim thinks Sunbeam was paying Demurrage

Manufacturing standards
- Standards were in place when Goffi started in November 1997
- Unfavorable variances increased in the slow season
- End of year approximately 100K unfavorable variances at Waynesboro

Restructuring (effect on Waynesboro)
- Lost 2-3 salaried positions.
- Laid off 450 hourly people (of which approximately 200 came back in 1997 production ramp up).
- Bay Springs - MS - makes proprietary wire for blankets and throws.

  - Site preparation done by the end of 1997.
  - Moved equipment in January/February 1998.
- Time delay due to
  - Build up of wire stock to meet business demand
  - Build needed facilities in Waynesboro
- In budgeting process the Company built in a 25% labor challenge. Hurt us because we substituted temporary help for full time.
- Ended year with negative labor variances and favorable overhead variance.

Biddeford

- Biddeford was sold in Q2 1998 (made blanket shell – sole provider). Sold in employee buy-out
- As part of the sale agreement, prices were rolled back to 1996 levels which increased prices 7%

Production

- May 1997 – decision made to produce 1 million more blankets than plan. Later reduced to 500K because could not get enough blanket cases
- June 1 – end of year ran the plant seven days a week
- Only made approximately 300K, but met demand (except for king/queen) ran a little short

Material variances

- No price changes made
- Prices came from procurement
- Procurement department responsible for purchase price variances

1998 standards

- Reviewed all standards and corrected/trued up for known problems

- End of each quarter looked for items that could be capitalized
- Capitalization of costs was approved from Del Ray - Mike Bondiskey
  - Normal end of quarter stuff
  - No changes in policy
- Directives to "stop spending" came all the time to the point where we were sacrificing plant maintenance
- Usually Waynesboro plant is down one week in July and one week in December for maintenance
- Skipped July 1997 and December 1997 - told not to take down plant and do maintenance (approximately $200K of maintenance cost)
- Total cost of shut down = 200K + unabsorbed overhead cost
- First shut down since December 1996 occurred in July 1998

International

- Big change = Japan. Decision made to introduce blankets into Japan (more or less 100Kunits)
- Shipped 80-85K blankets to Japan
- We might be taking some product back from Taiwan (1997 sales)
- 1998 production for Japan has been cancelled

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with David Aslin

With the Company from 7/94 - 9/96 and left for one year
Rejoined in 9/97

- Director of Distribution for North America
- Being transitioned to more of an integration role. His new role involves less operations responsibility, but he was previously responsible for Distribution Center operations
- Transition from manual to computerized system (paperless) in Hattesburg was tough, but the problems have been corrected
- Not here during restructuring (not involved)
- David was previously the DC manager in Waynesboro
- Involvement in restructuring limited to assessment of inventory levels and determination of warehouse space requirements
- Waynesboro = high wip which can be made into a variety of finished good products
- Came in as Director of Distribution Planning 9/97
- Beginning in February 1998, all DC managers reported to Aslin who reports to Bloomfield
- Jim Job = Transportation Manager (also reports to Bloomfield)

- 3rd Quarter 97
  1. Big "push", worked around the clock
  2. Quarterly push was typical
  3. Bigger push in blankets
  4. Not aware of any Bill & Hold prior to Q4-97
  5. Had only been back with the Company one week. Did not notice any changes in polices and procedures
- 4th Quarter 97
  1. Bill & Hold program. Learned of Bill & Hold on 12/27 upon returning from vacation
  2. Bill & Hold sales were done for all products - grills, appliances, blankets
  3. Bill & Hold was described as "the customer will issue a P.O. and we will hold the goods until customer requests"
  4. Bill & Holds were shipped to:
     a) Appliances/blankets – Deep South Trucking
     b) Grill – Miami, OK (NDC)
  5. Management felt it was best to physically segregate the goods in third-party warehouses

6. Approximate warehousing monthly cost
   a) Deep South - 10K pallets x $4 = $40,000/ month. Could be as high as 15K pallets
   b) David has looked at warehousing cost, but cannot remember total amounts
7. Did not have firm shipping dates to customers at the time Bill & Hold orders were received. Third party warehouses held the shipping documents. When goods shipped to customers, then the documents were sent back to Sunbeam
8. Bill & Hold ship dates were received a few days to two weeks before the customer's desired date. The inventory started shipping shortly after yearend through about April 1998
9. Dollar Stores blankets were just recently picked up - (July 1998).
10. David does not know much about sales terms
11. He believes there were some changes to extend terms an additional 30 days, but this is not necessarily unique to Bill & Hold. However, it is generally understood that customers will not pay or recognize an invoice prior to receipt

Shipping Cut Off Issues

1. A lot of attention was paid to cut-off in March 1998. "Wave" order, i.e., a wave of trucks at the bay doors at midnight can be completed and shipped
2. During peak times the Company sometimes closed down receiving doors and turned them into shipping doors
3. This policy was signed off on by Gluck - maximum value of wave is approximately 18 containers at $35K each
4. NO new waves started after midnight

System Circumvention - tough to do but can be done

12. Biggest trick played at end of March 1998 – Menards was expected to order 50 trucks of purifiers. Sunbeam started loading trucks in advance of receiving the order. Issued inventory to a new location and anticipated prior to P.O. $2.5 million. Complete order.

Systems from plant to plant

1. Hattiesburg automated - No manual intervention
2. Waynesboro and Neosho - Manual pick list. Alot loaded prior to keying shipping information.
3. Waynesboro and Neosho – truck loaded @ 11:50pm may not be keyed until 2pm
4. Not aware of my shipments past cut off.

5. Feels good about shipping cut-off.
6. Swapping of bill & hold product on orders - only knows of one case - Coffee Wells bought white coffee makers and later in March substituted black for white.

Distributors - does not know terms/deals were made

1. David was aware that PHD changed from consignment to sale customer
2. As far as he knows, these were full sales from the start. Did not know details of the deal. PHD and M Block are the only distributors he knows
3. PHD got a lot of inventory in 4th Q. David loaded himself. More than normal was shipped to PHD.

Receiving Returns

1. David is responsible for people who receive goods
2. Approval for returns received through customer service
3. Won't take back with out RA
4. If no RA, shipment is refused. Carrier calls customer who calls customer service, then the RA gets issued 99% of the time we end up taking back the goods
5. Took over returns center in 2/98
6. January starts the busy time for returns
7. RA's in system were "cleared" out so could not accept returns
   a) Asked carriers to hold & we paid storage for approximately one month)
   b) Started last week of January/first of February.
   c) "Russ Kersh" gave order to clean out RA's. (David heard this through the grapevine).
   d) The Company incurred $500K storage charges and lost customers' goodwill.
   e) The policy was described as the "no return policy".
   f) Returns processing personnel were occupied doing re-work, re-pack or assigned to other tasks.
9. David's impression of no return policy: In this business customers dictate. This was the first time he heard someone at the level of Kersh say there was a "no return policy".
10. RA's reinstated sometime in March/April 1998 the bulk in April at which time shipping companies brought back two travelers per day (50+ loads of product, rough estimate).
11. David estimates that returns through April relate to: 1997
    May -July relate to: 1998
12. Not familiar with Grill returns.
13. Reports of short shipments/etc. ($5-6 H problem usually) due to:
    a) Shipping dock problems
    b) Order entry
    c) No real swings noticed in 1997

1. Out of operations from December 15 → year-end

2. Deb McDonald

   - Stand-alone filing cabinet
   - In desk drawer - most recent information last couple quarters of 1997

3. Left Sunbeam → "not necessarily" due to concerns about impropriety or excessive pressure.

   - Signed a release stating that her release was part of the restructuring (1998) of Finance Department
   - Signed confidentiality agreement

4. Profit Assurance schedule (we discussed the schedule with Lisa)

   A. Common in most public companies
   B. Show Booth sale → booth from furniture division
   C. Chicago Bulls tickets
   D. At each Quarter/Month/Period End - Met with Kersh and Gluck
   E. The schedule was put together through Don Uzzi for review by Kersh
   F. Gluck consulted on accounting for these items
   G. Co-op/returns, etc. - relates to reserves
   H. Al Dunlop would not see this schedule

5. Never heard of huding stuff from the auditors in any discussion.

6. Worked with Chase on divestitures to come up with estimate of what they thought we would get.

7. Planning & Profit Assurance Activities → these are normal activities. Ultimately, accounting decided if we could or couldn't do something in a particular way. Always discussed adequacy of accruals with Gluck & many times Gluck said, "No, we can't do that."

---

On July 23, 1998 Phil Harlow, Chris Malloy, attorney with Skadden, Arps and I interviewed, by telephone, Ron Partner, plant controller in Neosho Missouri. The following summarizes his comments:

Started with Sunbeam 9/1/97

- No involvement in restructuring
- Responsibilities:
  - Focus on manufacturing
  - Forecasting, for manufacturing and keeping books
  - Cost Accounting
    - Put together product standards
    - Standards for the following year usually done in September (takes 2-4 weeks) - done by end of December
    - Rolled standards in 1/2/98
    - Also responsible for helping keep A/P clean
- Marketing demand is converted into a production Forecast which gets translated into the Production schedule
- Labor and overtime rates are finalized in January each year

PPV's → Not aware of anything unusual. 1997 - generated favorable PPV

- Vendor rebates → received a $1.2 million discount from Pace in late 1997. Ron does not know where it went on the balance sheet or income statement.
  - In 1998, the discount was spread over unit cost of units purchased.

Unvouchered receipts: NPC relationship makes it difficult to manage the unvouchered receipts liability

Old received not vouched → vendors were trying to get paid, but didn't understand the NPC process. Sunbeam wrote off the accrual for old items because management felt that most got paid off by December 1997.

Old unvouchered receipts for which vendors now sought payment were charged to BTP reserves. Then charged the balance to expense ratably from January to June.

$519,000 debit sitting in account 110.12580.210 (Neosho BTP reserve account) at yearend 1997 for invoices paid without unvouched received.

Mike Bondisky was aware of this, but did not give approval to charge off.

Monthly reporting package:

- Headcount
- Scheduled realization (forecasted build vs. acutal)
- Comparison of forecast to budget (cost)

4th Q 1997

1. Nothing strange noted related to shipping activity
2. Normally yearend is not that busy
3. Neosho finished shipping on Saturday; Ron does not recall any unusual shipping activity
4. Shipping to NDC → used on an ongoing basis due to bulk of Grills. Neosho can hold $10-20 million grills max.
5. "Drive to finish line" → bonus pools for anyone who could help exceed $1.40 EPS at yearend 1997.

6 Periodic conference call - talked about setting aside additional bonus for persons who helped make the numbers
- Directed by Uzzi
- Jim Gitney & Staff
- Mitch Long
- Ken Hempman - sales
- Ron Partner

} Beginning December 3-4 weeks to achieve

7. Ron found out about Bill & Hold → late in 4th Qtr 1997
   A. Believes it was in accordance with GAAP
   B. Didn't talk to anyone about it
   C. A lot of the goods were already at NDC
   D. Bob Gluck sent him a GAAP guide on B&H

8. Quantities of B&H inventory at yearend - $21 million owned inventory (total)

9. Storage, handling, costs associated with Bill & Hold → $200K

10. There is still some inventory at 3rd party warehouses.

11. Monthly accrual was made based on expected # of pallets or square footage occupied.

12. E&O situation at 6/30

    FG → depends on changes to product line. If 1999 products are the same as 1998; there is no obsolete problem; however may have some excess.

13. Non-defective returns →
    A. No unusual returns activity noted in the last 6 months.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation - Interview with Dixon Thayer

On August 6, 1998, Don Denkhaus, Rita Gordon, attorney with Skadden Arps and I interviewed Dixon Thayer, former Sunbeam Vice President of International, by telephone. The following summarizes the information provided by Mr Thayer:

- Started with the Company in September 1996 and was fired by Don Uzzi on January 5, 1998.
- He believes he was fired because the International division was doing well and that now that it was running well, he no longer was needed and the Company eliminated him to cut cost.
- His involvement in the Company's 1996 restructuring was limited and his role in the Company has been primarily sales and marketing.
- Some leases in the U.K. were terminated.
- He indicated that he did provide some input to Coopers & Lybrand and the Company's and the Company's accountants in the restructuring but he had limited involvement.
- Mexico was always a challenge. The major problems were cost, quality and availability of the right products.
- The Company had a continuous problem of forecasting and integrating the sales plan into the manufacturing plan.
- The International division was so far ahead of the 1997 plan, Mr. Thayer did not receive pressure to make unusual sales or provide unusual terms.
- There were very few returns from the international customers and International had a no-return policy.
- The European strategy was to focus on unloading "dead" U.S. merchandise particularly blankets, clippers and gas grills.
- The focus in Australia was blenders and blankets in Japan and China. It was necessary to use a government agent in China to make sales.
- International sales could have been much better if the products were available. Mr. Thayer would often have international designated inventory diverted for domestic sales.
- Mr. Thayer was formerly at Scott Paper and was hired by Newt White. He said the Scott heritage was to make the product better at Sunbeam the approach was "sell the Company".

---

On August 6, 1998, Don Denkhaus, Chris Maloy, attorney from Skadden, Arps and I conducted an interview with Joe Richardson, Sr Vice President of commercial services operations for CrediTec and Rita Fletcher, Vice President of Commercial Services and Account offices for Sunbeam. CrediTec provides services for the collection of deductions taken by Sunbeam's customers. The following summarizes the information provided by Mr. Richardson and Ms. Fletcher:

- The Company signed a contract in the late fall of 1996 to provide collection services for deductions taken by customers.
- The Company's deduction records were set-up on CrediTec's system in January 1997 Since the Company was consolidating the household and outdoor divisions the customer information for these divisions the customer information for these division were combined. Additionally, Samsonite was also set up for the liquidating portfolio.
- CrediTec's responsibilities include the following:
  - The preparation of daily, weekly and monthly reports.
  - Collect cash.
  - Researches deductions and resolves with the Company and the customer the reason for the deductions.
  - Maintains twelve months of payment history on line which shows invoice and how relieved.
  - Maintains information on the Company's intercompany accounts as well.
  - Prepares a customer liability report monthly which shows disputes codes and again of invoices by category, open deductions and open CMs.
  - Maintains contact with large customers to try to begin the collection process early.
- Mr Richardson and Ms. Fletcher indicated the following:
  - Most remittance advice's have details with them.
  - The Company creates some problems due to billing errors and these automatically end up as deductions.
  - There are a number of reasons for deductions or disputes - Company has 28 codes.
  - One category, buyer hold, is used by buyers withholding payment for whatever reason.
  - Seven accounts (large customers represent 52% of open items)
  - Typically customers pay within 30 days once it is discussed with the customer however, if a dispute arises as a result the process is lengthened by 30 - 45 days.
- The two largest disputes are proof of delivery and EDI errors.
- For return merchandise the customer takes.

- Not aware of the reason for the recent increased in deductions.
- Duplicate billings have not been a big issue.
- For some "bill and hold" sales there have been disputes since an invoice was sent before the goods were received and customer disputed the timing of the requested payment date
- CrediTec received a SAS 70 report on its operations.
- IF AA wants any reports there we can specify format and prepare that report .

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Bob Gluck - July 9, 1998

On July 9, 1998, Don Denkhaus, Brian Loughman of our New York Corporate Fraud practice and I interviewed Bob Gluck, Corporate Controller of Sunbeam Corporation. The purpose of the interview was to get Gluck's perspective on the potential areas of restatement on the Company's 1997 financial statements. The following is a summary of Bob's comments:

- Sales
  - Bill and Hold ("B&H")
    - Gluck felt that B&H transactions were well documented and that they occurred only at yearend 1997 and Q1, 1998. He indicated that they were mainly grills and $5 million of household products. Most of the sales were confirmed by Arthur Andersen ("AA") but not 100%. There was an adjustment made for Encore promotions in the first quarter of "98". This had been recorded as a sale at yearend 1997.
    - B&H had extended terms which were not that different than historical grill sales made in December, January or February with payment terms in May or June.
    - The Company did not have B&H in prior years.
    - The push was to push sales into the channels early to hopefully create more sales later in the season.
    - Gluck was not sure what information was given to B&H customers
    - Customers acknowledged that they accepted title to the merchandise in writing.
    - Of the $32 million of yearend 1997 B&H and $30 million of Q1 "98" all has been shipped except for Encore promotion which was adjusted for in Q1 "98" and approximately $300,000 with Fred Meyer (out of $1-5 million sale)
    - Gluck indicated that the first round of B&H transactions might be difficult to figure out details since the relationship with the third-party warehouse (NPC) in Oklahoma had been terminated. Gluck said that access to the computer data would be an issue.
    - Gluck said 95% of B&H product was eventually shipped. Collections still need to be determined since some dating was as of May 10 and June 10.

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Bob Gluck - July 9, 1998

- For 1Q "98" B&H, the Company had better documentation and letters from the customers indicating no right-of-return. Also, the Company developed a policy manual to handle B&H type transactions.
- Gluck indicated that he would not recognize revenue without support.
- Gluck said all SEC criteria are addressed in the letters received from the customers.
- The business purpose that customers entered into these sales, was to ensure product when needed and to manage their seasonal inventory.
- Overall Gluck felt that B&H was well documented and was controlled as well as he could.
- Per Gluck, all of the B&H confirmations were given to the SEC. He indicated that there were earlier letters which were not specific enough and Gluck doesn't know if these were produced.
- Overall returns were not significant (less than $5 million out of $60 million in sales)

- Sales/Shipping Cut-Off
  - Gluck doesn't know of any issues here.
- Sales Returns
  - Sales guys had aggressive targets
  - The Company's new products did not do well.
  - The Company had a 20% sales growth in an industry with only 3-4% of growth per year - maybe retail inventories were being built-up.
  - Gluck did not know if blankets were overshipped to Wal-Mart.
  - Lee Griffith may have guaranteed sales of blankets to Wal-Mart
  - Gluck said it was difficult to evaluate the returns exposure at yearend since the sell through happens through March.
  - Gluck accrued approximately $8 million for markdowns for Q1 "98" for Wal-Mart. The plan was to markdown product and then sell the blankets as opposed to being returned (Wal-Mart cooperating on this program).

Subject: Sunbeam Corporation – Interview with Bob Gluck - July 9, 1998

- The distributor return, AA was generally aware of now.
- Gluck was not aware of anything "screwy" that AA was not aware of.
- Gluck had not dug into the reasons why returns were so heavy.
- Sunbeam does over 1 million invoices per year and there is no system flag for sales with right of return". There is a RA field but it is not always practical to use in reality.
- Gluck not aware of any changes in policy.
- RA's were getting approved against policy. They were purged by Russ Kersh in order to have RA's approved in a systematic way. Some RA's were not put back onto the system, as they were resolved. Gluck made sales accounting track the return exposure off-the system. Gluck tracked the returns through the time of filing the 10-K, Gluck felt that he was adequately reserved until late April then M Block and PHD surfaced and he booked another $10 million provision in Q1 1998.
- These were about $8 million of RA's which were put on an XL spreadsheet (AA obtained a copy from Gluck with Kersh's handwritten notes).
- Gluck didn't know who originally approved the RA's on this list since there was a "no returns" policy but this was not adhered to.
- Gluck believed that some written policies exist for the "No return" stating that failure to comply would result in termination.
- Lee Griffith and Russ Kersh needed to approved returns over $100 thousand.
- Lee Griffith was approving returns greater than his assigned authority.
- Customer service personnel could put in RA's. (Kyle Kaiser is customer service manager in Mississippi)
- Excel spreadsheet was to be taken out of J.D. Edwards systems and review requests before put back onto JDC, in order to see if done is accordance with Company's policy.
- Approval limits were not adhered to then the guaranteed sales arrangements surfaced. Gluck not clear on whether policy is written or not. (Need to talk to Kyle Kaiser)
- There were no other issues in the sales area per Gluck.

Established in 1996.

- Gluck is in the process of putting together a better rollforward of the utilization of the inventory elements.
- All sales less than standard sales was adjusted against the gross margin reserve set-up in 1996 restructuring.
- There was a charge taken for the divestiture of the furniture business.
- A disposal and warehouse cost factor was applied to sales below standard cost.
- During the general ledger conversion - debit balances from 1996 were sitting in inventory (outdoor products)
- The balance of $330 million was not enough to cover all items.
- Inventory exploded in 2Q 1998.
- Domestic sales are down 30% on year to date sales due to product problems and pipeline might have been filled.
- The Q2 "1997" blankets mentioned in Barron's were not bill & hold. They were held in a Wal-Mart carrier's warehouse.
- The yearend sale of accounts receivable at yearend resulted in the receipt of cash with some holdback. The funds go into a CAP USA lockbox. The A/R are carried on the books in a contra accounts.

Board of Directors
Sunbeam Corporation

On June 25, 1998 Sunbeam Corporation (the "Company") issued a press release in which it disclosed that Arthur Andersen LLP had notified the Company that it would not provide its consent in a registration statement to the use of its opinion on the Company's 1997 financial statements, pending completion of a review of those financial statements and the Company's accounting practices. Beginning shortly after that date the Company, its Audit Committee and Arthur Andersen began a formal investigation to determine whether a restatement would be required to the Company's financial statements. Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom LLP and Deloitte & Touche LLP were engaged to advise the Company on various legal and accounting issues relating to this matter. On August 6, 1998 the Company issued a press release advising that the Company would be restating its 1997, first quarter 1998 and possibly 1996 financial statements.

The investigation relating to these financial matters involved a review of all material aspects of the Company's 1996, 1997 and first quarter 1998 financial reporting. In certain areas of the investigation, the review included financial matters relating to years prior to 1996. The investigation involved more than ten thousand hours of work by personnel from the Company and Arthur Andersen. Arthur Andersen's team included personnel from its offices in South Florida, Mexico, Hong Kong, Caracas, Toronto and London. Arthur Andersen's investigation was headed by a senior audit partner who had no involvement with the previous Sunbeam audits.

The attached memoranda describe the adjustments required as a result of the investigation referred to above and additional procedures initiated subsequent to January 28, 1998, the date of the Arthur Andersen audit report on Sunbeam Corporation's 1997 financial statements. Certain of the information discussed in the memoranda or obtained during the investigation was not available to Arthur Andersen on or before January 28, 1998. The memoranda do not address information relating to assignment of causes of the restatement adjustments.

	Q4	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	YEAR	Q1
NET SALES:		--	--		$(11,077)	$(11,077)	$(1,842)
PRE-TAX INCOME:	--			--	$(9,738)	$(9,738)	$(1,373)

BACKGROUND:

EPI Printers, Inc. ("EPI") is used to provide order processing fulfillment services for Sunbeam's small parts, warranty parts, replacement parts, accessory parts and service center stocking orders and certain related printing services. The terms and conditions of the agreement between EPI and Sunbeam were contained in a Master Servicing Agreement dated February 1, 1997. Under the Master Servicing Agreement, EPI received a specific fee for each fulfillment or printing service it performed. Prior to December 1997, the parts inventory was owned by Sunbeam and stored at EPI's warehouse.

Effective December 27, 1997, Sunbeam entered into an agreement in principle (the "Agreement") with EPI to amend the Master Servicing Agreement. Under the terms of the Agreement, EPI would purchase the Sunbeam inventory for a "base purchase price" of $11,077,409 payable "in six equal installments commencing upon the later of the date the execution of an agreement between the parties which more specifically details the terms of all transactions between the parties or July 30, 1998." The Agreement contains the following provisions:

1. The terms of the Agreement were not finalized as of December 28, 1997. Specifically, the parties would, in good faith, engage in ongoing negotiations for the further amendment of the Agreement on or before March 31, 1998 to, among other things, more completely detail all terms of performance under the Agreement.

2. Sunbeam guaranteed EPI a net profit on an annual basis of 5% of EPI's sales of inventory to third parties.

3. Certain of EPI's operating costs were guaranteed by Sunbeam through a complex inventory pricing formula.

4. Sunbeam was obligated to repurchase obsolete and excess inventory (under a formula described in the Agreement) no later than December 31, 1998.

The EPI sale does not meet the following sales recognition criteria of Financial Accounting Standards Statement No. 48 ("FASB No. 48"):

The Agreement was not finalized at the date the sale was recorded. Sunbeam's price to EPI was not substantially fixed or determinable at the date of sale.

2. EPI's obligation to Sunbeam was contingent on resale of the product.

3. Sunbeam guaranteed EPI a profit on the sale of the product.

4. The amount of future returns could not be reasonably estimated.

In connection with the 1997 audit, Arthur Andersen LLP became aware of the EPI sale and reviewed the Agreement. Arthur Andersen LLP did not believe the sale met the criteria of SFAS No. 48 and proposed an adjustment to reverse the sale. At that time, Arthur Andersen believed the gross margin on the EPI sale was approximately $3 million because it was informed by management that a portion of the Company's inventory reserves related to the EPI sale and proposed an audit adjustment for that amount. The Company did not record this adjustment since the Company's management believed such amount was not material to the 1997 financial statements.

The original invoice of $11,077,409 was credited on April 2, 1998 and re-invoiced to be paid in eight equal installments commencing July 31, 1998. As of the date of the completion of the restatement investigation, the business arrangement between the Company and EPI for parts fulfillment services had not been finalized. The arrangement is still operating substantially as it was prior to the December 27, 1997 Agreement. EPI has not paid any amount for Sunbeam's inventory and Sunbeam continues to pay EPI for its fulfillment services.

During the fourth quarter of 1997, the Company inappropriately recognized $11.1 million in revenue and $7.0 million in gross margin on the EPI sale. The gross margin was based on the difference between the expected sales price of the inventory and the carrying value of the EPI inventory in Sunbeam's accounting records in December 1997. In connection with the restatement investigation, the Company determined that much of the EPI parts inventory was obsolete at December 28, 1997 and the quantities on hand at December 28, 1997 were excessive. Accordingly, in connection with the restatement, EPI inventory with an original cost of $4.1 million has been reduced to its estimated net realizable value of $1.4 million as of December 28, 1997.

The Company also recognized additional sales revenue of $1.8 million and gross margin of $1.4 million from EPI in the first quarter of 1998 which did not meet the criteria for revenue recognition as discussed above. Accordingly, such sales were reversed in the restatement.

DESCRIPTION: 2. M. Block Guaranteed/Consignment Sale

AMOUNT AND PERIODS AFFECTED (in thousands):

	1996	1997					1998

NET SALES:	–	–	–	–	$(4,299)	$(4,299)
PRE-TAX INCOME:				–	$(1,407)	$(1,407)

BACKGROUND:

M. Block and Sons, Inc. ("M. Block") is a distributor that had purchased merchandise from Sunbeam throughout 1997 for sale to smaller customers. As of December 28, 1997 Sunbeam entered into an agreement to sell $4.3 million in electric blankets to M. Block. The blankets were to be stored by M. Block and resold exclusively to Wal-Mart and K-Mart. Both Wal-Mart and K-Mart were existing Sunbeam customers and the M. Block inventory was to be sold if these customers required additional merchandise for the 1998 winter season in excess of quantities already purchased directly through Sunbeam.

The terms of this sale included the following:

1. Extended payment terms of 120 days with a 2% discount.
2. A guarantee that all product that was not sold by April 1, 1998 (payment by M. Block was not required until after this date) could be returned to Sunbeam.
3. A guarantee that M. Block would be price protected on the sales price (to effectively receive an 8% gross margin). If the blankets were returned, M. Block would receive an 8% mark-up on the original price that Sunbeam invoiced M. Block (to effectively guarantee an 8% margin whether the inventory was sold or returned).

Sunbeam recorded sales revenue of $4.3 million and gross margin of $1.4 million on the M. Block sale during the fourth quarter of 1997. This sale did not meet the following revenue recognition criteria of Financial Accounting Standards No. 48:

1. M. Block's obligation to Sunbeam was contingent on resale of the product.
2. Sunbeam guaranteed M. Block a profit on the sale of the product.
3. The amount of future returns could not be reasonably estimated.

As the blankets were sold by April 1, 1998, Sunbeam further agreed to the following terms on May 1, 1998:

1. To pay M. Block for the storage cost of the inventory commencing May 1, 1998.

2. To re-date all receivables to net, September 30, 1998.

3. Sunbeam would use its best efforts to sell the blankets to Wal-Mart and K-Mart and M. Block would receive a 5% gross profit.

4. In the event the blankets are not sold, the remaining inventory would be returned to Sunbeam. Sunbeam would pay the freight cost and a $50,000 handling charge to M. Block.

Subsequent to May 1, 1998, Sunbeam agreed to accept the return of the goods sold to M. Block in December 1997.

DESCRIPTION: 3. PHD Guaranteed/Consignment Sale

AMOUNT AND PERIODS AFFECTED (in thousands):

NET SALES:		–	–	–	$(4,751)	$(4,751)	$1,016
PRE-TAX INCOME:		–		–	$(1,442)	$(1,442)	$308

BACKGROUND:

PHD, Inc. and Sunbeam Corporation entered into a Consignment Agreement in 1991. The agreement provided that, among other things, Sunbeam merchandise would be stored at one of PHD's four facilities in anticipation of PHD's purchase of such merchandise and subsequent sale to its customers. This Consignment Agreement was used to facilitate the growth of Sunbeam's business with PHD without the need to grant PHD a credit line. As part of the agreement, Sunbeam maintained a security interest in the consigned inventory and the resulting proceeds of the sale of such consigned inventory to PHD's customers until Sunbeam was paid by PHD.

Sometime in late 1996 Sunbeam began discussions with PHD to change the arrangement into a conventional customer relationship. In July 1997 a new "proposed partnership agreement" was drafted which was further negotiated through September 1997. Under this proposed partnership agreement the Consignment Agreement would be terminated effective December 19, 1997 and PHD would be billed for all consignment inventory on hand at December 15, 1997. PHD would pay for the inventory 120 days thereafter. Under the terms of the new agreement, PHD was granted 90-day payment terms and would have the opportunity to purchase merchandise twice a year (February and August) on extended payment terms of 120 days. In addition PHD was given the opportunity to "stock balance inventories" at all PHD locations twice a year (February and August). At those dates PHD could return undamaged product to Sunbeam without any limitation. Freight for these stock balancing return shipments would be born by Sunbeam.

In December 1997 PHD purchased $7.7 million of product from Sunbeam of which $4.7 million were over and above PHD's normal credit line which was granted under the new agreement. Sunbeam agreed to the following provisions relating to the $4.7 million in sales.

1. Payment terms were 120 days.

2. At the end of the ... day payment terms, Sunbeam would either take back or re-date the invoice for product remaining in PHD's inventory until the product was sold, field transferred, or returned to Sunbeam.

3. At the end of the 120 day payment term, PHD would charge Sunbeam a $6.00 per pallet per month storage fee for all remaining products, retroactive to the date of first receipt by PHD and PHD would continue to charge Sunbeam such storage fee for each month until the products were sold by PHD or otherwise moved by Sunbeam from the PHD facility.

4 Sunbeam agreed to price protect PHD on all products on these orders should any of these products be later reduced in price by Sunbeam

5 PHD would be permitted to stock balance in February 1998, all Sunbeam merchandise in inventory at PHD facilities, including this December 1997 merchandise.

During the fourth quarter of 1997 the Company recognized $4.7 million in revenue and $1.4 million in gross margin on the PHD sale. The above described sale does not meet the following sales recognition criteria of Financial Accounting Standards Statement No. 48:

1. Sunbeam's price to PHD is not substantially fixed or determinable at the date of sale because of the price protection feature of the sales agreement.

2. PHD's obligation to Sunbeam was contingent on resale of the product.

3. Sunbeam is obligated to pay for storage until the products are sold.

4. The amount of future returns could not be reasonably estimated.

The Company believes that the remaining $3 million in sales to PHD in December 1997 meet the revenue recognition criteria of Financial Accounting Standards Statement No. 48 since these sales were not subject to purchase order provisions 2 to 5 as described above. Further, Sunbeam has a long history of selling product to PHD and can reasonably estimate the amount of future returns related to products sold to PHD under Sunbeam's normal terms. As of the date of completion of the restatement investigation, the Company had collected substantially all of the related PHD receivables.

In the restated first quarter 1998 financial statements the Company recognized $1.0 million in sales revenue related to the $4.7 million December 1997 sale to PHD. This amount relates to goods that PHD agreed to keep and pay for. The remaining $3.7 million in goods were returned to the Company.

NET SALES:			--	--	$(2,897)	$(2,897)
PRE-TAX INCOME:			--	--	$(876)	$(876)

BACKGROUND:

On December 23, 1997, Encore Promotions, Inc. ("Encore") executed its initial purchase order with Sunbeam to acquire $2.9 million of kitchen appliances. The merchandise was segregated and held under Sunbeam's control as of year end 1997 (simular to other "bill and hold" sales). Payment was due on April 20, 1998. Sunbeam agreed to pay all storage costs for the merchandise. Sunbeam further agreed that any product not sold by March 28, 1998 would be returned to Sunbeam (that is, the purchase order would be cancelled and ownership of the inventory would revert back to Sunbeam). The cancellation provision was later extended to April 20, 1998 at which date Encore cancelled the entire order. Sunbeam also had an obligation to help Encore solicit appliance continuity business for Encore.

Sunbeam recorded revenue of $2.9 million and gross margin of $.9 million in the fourth quarter of 1997. This sale did not meet the following revenue recognition criteria of Financial Accounting Standards No. 48:

1. Encore's obligation to Sunbeam was contingent on resale of the product.
2. Sunbeam is obligated to pay for storage of the product.
3. The amount of future returns could not be reasonably estimated.
4. Sunbeam had an obligation to help Encore solicit appliance continuity business for Encore.

In addition the bill and hold sales program does not meet the SEC's third criteria for revenue recognition (see Issue No. 8 "Bill and Hold Sales").

BACKGROUND:

I. Lehroff & Co. is a distributor. Sunbeam agreed to sell Lehroff merchandise during the last week of fiscal 1997 which Lehroff anticipated purchasing during the first quarter of 1998. The merchandise was shipped prior to December 28, 1997 and the payment terms on the sale were net 120 days. In connection with the restatement investigation, Arthur Andersen LLP was advised that the Sunbeam salesman for the Lehroff sale had verbally agreed that Lehroff could evaluate its inventory position and return non-defective product to Sunbeam prior to the date the payment was due.

Sunbeam recorded $.9 million in sales revenue and $.2 million in gross margin during the fourth quarter of 1997. This sale did not meet the following revenue recognition criteria of Financial Accounting Standards Statement No. 48:

BACKGROUND:

Eckerd Drug ("Eckerd") has been a long-term customer of Sunbeam and purchased certain of Sunbeam's home and health products. In late 1997 Sunbeam wanted to expand their business with Eckerd and offered them an opportunity to purchase small appliances which Eckerd would sell on a special promotional basis. In December 1997, Sunbeam sold Eckerd $1.6 million of small appliances and agreed to accept the return of all unsold inventory at the end of the promotional period. In addition Sunbeam granted Eckerd other special terms on this sale including extended payment terms (75% due in 60 days and 25% due in 90 days), $250,000 in co-op advertising allowance and up to $75,000 in mark down funding.

Sunbeam recorded $1.6 million in sales revenues and $.6 million in gross margin during the fourth quarter of 1997. This promotional sale did not meet the revenue recognition criteria of Financial Accounting Standards No. 48 because the amount of future returns could not be reasonably estimated as Sunbeam had no historical experience in selling small appliances to Eckerd on this basis.

BACKGROUND:

Hong Kong

During 1997, the Company's Hong Kong subsidiary made several sales which did not meet the sales recognition criteria of Financial Accounting Standards No. 48 ("FASB No. 48"). One such sale was made to Tai Holly Ltd., a Hong Kong based distributor. In October 1997 Sunbeam and Tai Holly executed a distribution agreement for Tai Holly to sell Sunbeam products in Taiwan and the Peoples Republic of China. The terms of the distribution agreement included the following: "subject to the prior written approval of Sunbeam to Tai Holly, the risk of third parties" sales return will be taken care of by Sunbeam. Sunbeam had no prior sales experience with Tai Holly. Tai Holly never paid for any of any of the Sunbeam products shipped to Asia. In July 1998 Tai Holly informed Sunbeam that it would return all of its unsold inventory which reside at a warehouse in China under the control of Sunbeam pending the Company's decision regarding their disposition.

Sunbeam recorded $2.1 million in sales revenue to Tai Holly and $(.2) million in negative gross margin during the fourth quarter of 1997. Because of the guaranteed right of return and lack of experience with Tai Holly, this sale did not meet the revenue recognition criteria of FASB No. 48.

Another sale for approximately $3.3 million was made to Leo Technology, a Chinese distributor, who was given a guaranteed right of return for all unsold product. Sunbeam recorded $3.3 million in sales revenue to Leo Technology and $.75 million in gross margin during the fourth quarter of 1997. Because of the guaranteed right of return and lack of return experience with Leo Technology, the sale did not meet the revenue recognition criteria of FASB No. 48. In addition, the product arrived at the distributor after the end of the blanket selling season and was not available for sale. Substantially all of the product was returned in 1998.

Additionally, approximately $3.2 million of sales were made to various other distributors at $1.2 million gross margin during the fourth quarter of 1997. Because of the right of return and lack of return experience with these various other distributors, these sales did not meet the revenue recognition criteria of FASB No. 48. Substantially all of the product was subsequently returned to the Company.

Canada

During the 1997 blanket season, the Company's Canadian subsidiary delivered a blanket order late to one customer resulting in the customer canceling the order and returning the product after year end. This resulted in an adjustment to sales of approximately $.6 million. Additionally, the Company made a number of sales with a guaranteed right of return. A substantial amount of these returns ($.5 million) came back to the Company after year end and should have been considered in the Company's allowance for returns as of year end. The Company lacked experience with these customers to reasonably estimate a return reserve and the sale allowed for a guaranteed right of return. Accordingly, this sale does not meet the revenue recognition criteria of FASB No. 48.

Mexico

The Company's subsidiary in Mexico recorded a "bill and hold" sales transaction ($.9 million sales and $.2 million in gross margin) at year end 1997. The customer specifically requested that the goods be held by the Company because of the customer's insufficient warehouse space. This sale is being deferred until the first quarter 1998, consistent with the restatement treatment of the Company's domestic bill and hold sales (see Issue No. 8 "Bill and Hold Sales").

	Q4	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	YEAR	Q1
NET SALES:			$(9,900)	$9,900	$(29,340)	(29,340)	(1,955)
PRE-TAX INCOME:			(4,629)	4,629	(4,489)	(4,489)	478

BACKGROUND:

The Company's normal sales terms are to transfer ownership at the date the goods are shipped to the customer (i.e.; FOB shipping point). The Company's normal policy is to recognize revenue at the time of shipment. Bill and hold sales for Sunbeam represent sales of completed finished goods where a customer has executed a purchase order in which the customer agrees to take title to the goods by accepting ownership but requests a later shipment/delivery date. Bill and hold sales were made with extended credit terms and generally the customers were given a 1% to 2% additional co-op advertising discount. Bill and hold sales of barbecue grills in the fourth quarter of 1997 were part of the Company's "early buy" program and eligible customers were granted extended payment terms to May, June and July 1998. Approximately $19.7 million of the fourth quarter 1997 sales were to three large customers and the related receivables were sold without recourse to a third party financing entity as of year end 1997.

Upon receipt of a bill and hold purchase order, the Company immediately shipped the bill and hold goods to a third-party warehouse. In most cases, the Company paid for the freight costs to the third-party warehouse as well as paid for the storage and insurance costs. It was the Company's plan to outsource the control over the goods and subsequent shipment to the customer from the third-party warehouse. The Company recorded revenue on bill and hold sales when the goods were shipped from the Company's distribution center to the third-party warehouse.

The SEC has established seven criteria that must be met in order for a SEC registrant to immediately recognize revenue on bill and hold sales. The criteria and a description of Sunbeam's bill and hold sales are as follows:

1. The risks of ownership must have passed to the buyer

   Risks of ownership, including any change in the market value of the product, passed to the customers upon the shipment of the goods to the warehouses. Insurance policies covering the merchandise named the customers as the beneficiaries.

2. The customer ma[illegible] fixed commitment to purchase the goods, p[illegible]erably reflected in written documentation

All customers made fixed commitments to purchase the goods. Written or electronic purchase orders were received from the customers. The purchase orders specified the models of the merchandise and prices. Substantially all the product was ultimately shipped to the customers and the Company received full payment for the product.

3 The buyer, not the seller, requested that the transaction be on a bill and hold basis and has a substantial business purpose for ordering the goods on a bill and hold basis

Substantially all bill and hold sales were barbecue grills and in one instance, a large order of electric blankets Both of these items are large and bulky and require a large amount of warehouse space. In connection with the 1997 audit most of the customers who purchased goods under a bill and hold arrangement confirmed in writing to Arthur Andersen LLP that the goods were being held at a warehouse at their request due to the customer's limited warehousing space. In the case of grills, during the prior year's selling season, Sunbeam was unable to meet the supply and delivery schedule of many of its customers. As a result there was a business purpose for at least some of the customers to view the bill and hold arrangement as having "a substantial business purpose".

Based on the results of interviews conducted during the restatement investigation, certain Company management involved in the transactions believed that the bill and hold sales served a substantial business purpose of the customers, as described above, but also served the Company's needs in that the sales allowed the Company to accelerate sales revenue, to levelize seasonal production of grills and to resolve the Company's prior inability to supply the customers' demand for grills on a timely basis. Other individuals indicated that bill and hold sales were part of a marketing program conceived by the Company and offered to customers. This information casts substantial doubt on whether the "buyer, not the seller" requested that the transactions be done on a bill and hold basis.

4. There must be a fixed schedule for delivery of the goods which is reasonable and consistent with the buyer's business purpose

All bill and hold sales for which revenue was recognized were shipped to third-party warehouses during the period in which the revenue was recognized. Arrangements were to be made by the customers for delivery from the warehouses to the customers' distribution centers.

Based on results of interviews conducted during the restatement investigation, certain of the Company's representatives indicated that the control over the goods and subsequent shipments to the customer was controlled by Sunbeam personnel and not the outsourcer.

5. The seller did not retain any specific performance obligations such that the earnings process is not complete

The Company has no specific performance obligations other than those related to normal warranties regarding the quality of the shipped product.

6. The ordered goods were segregated from the seller's inventory and not subject to use to fill other orders

   All sales were shipped to third party warehouses and the goods were physically segregated, titled and insured in the names of the customers.

7. The goods must be complete and ready for shipment

   All of the goods sold under the bill and hold arrangements were complete at the time of their shipment to the third-party warehouses.

The restatement investigation revealed information that the Company's bill and hold sales did not meet the SEC's criteria for immediate revenue recognition. Accordingly, the Company reversed all bill and hold sales in connection with the restatement. Such sales were recognized in subsequent periods in which the goods were shipped to the customers. Approximately $3.3 million of the fourth quarter 1997 bill and hold sales were cancelled, and substantially all of the remaining portion of the related receivables were collected in 1998 (generally in accordance with the agreed extended payment terms).

DESCRIPTION: 10. 1996 Restructuring and Special Charges

AMOUNT AND PERIODS AFFECTED (in thousands):

	1996	1997					1998
	Q4	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	YEAR	Q1
PRE-TAX INCOME:	$25,114	$(4,107)	$(5,788)	$(3,078)	$(4,985)	$(17,958)	$(2,678)

BACKGROUND:

The Company previously reported financial statements reflected a pre-tax special charge to earnings of approximately $337.6 million in the fourth quarter of 1996. This amount was allocated in the Company's 1996 Consolidated Statement of Operations as follows: $154.9 million to Restructuring, Impairment and Other Costs; $92.3 million to Cost of Goods Sold related principally to inventory write-downs from the reduction in products or stock keeping units ("SKU's") and costs of inventory liquidation programs; $42.5 million to Selling, General and Administrative expenses principally for increases in environmental and litigation reserves and loss on the divestiture of the Company's Furniture Division of $47.9 million. The Company engaged Coopers & Lybrand LLP ("Coopers & Lybrand") to assist in developing and implementing the restructuring plan. In addition, Coopers & Lybrand assisted the Company in determining the cost of the restructuring plan and other special charges. Sunbeam established reserves to cover estimated restructuring costs and other "special charges" to be incurred in the amount of $252.5 million (the difference between the expense and the reserve was paid or recorded as direct write-off of assets prior to the 1996). The Company's restructuring reserve was established to cover severance for approximately 3,500 employees including other employee termination costs such as, COBRA benefits, worker's compensation and stay bonuses. Stay bonuses were primarily for employees of the Furniture Division, which was sold early in 1997 to U.S. Industries, Inc. In addition, reserves were established to cover plant closure costs, which included equipment relocation and future lease payments/termination costs and reserves for impairment for long-lived assets. Asset impairment reserves are required to be recorded on long-lived assets when the carrying value of the long-lived asset is not expected to be recoverable through future operations.

In connection with the restatement investigation, it was determined that certain 1996 reserves were not established in accordance with the applicable authoritative literature. The governing authoritative literature that provides guidance for companies to record restructuring expenses is Emerging Issues Task Force 94-3, "Liability Recognition for Certain Employee Termination Benefits and Other Costs to Exit an Activity (Including Certain Costs Incurred in a Restructuring)" ("EITF 94-3"). EITF 94-3 allows companies to record future costs that meet certain criteria as liabilities rather than recording these costs as an expense when they are incurred. As defined in EITF 94-3, only costs resulting from an exit plan that are not associated with or that do not benefit activities that will be continued are eligible for recognition as liabilities at the com. .nent date (as defined in EITF 94-3) A cost meeting that requirement should be recognized at the commitment date if the cost is not associated with or is not incurred to generate revenues after the exit plan's commitment date and it meets either criterion (1) or (2) below:

The cost is incremental to other costs incurred by the enterprise in the conduct of its activities prior to the commitment date and will be incurred as a direct result of the exit plan. The notion of incremental does not contemplate a diminished future economic benefit to be derived from the cost but rather the absence of the cost in the enterprise's activities immediately prior to the commitment date.

2. The cost represents amounts to be incurred by the enterprise under a contractual obligation that existed prior to the commitment date and will either continue after the exit plan is completed with no economic benefit to the enterprise or be a penalty incurred by the enterprise to cancel the contractual obligation.

In connection with the 1996 audit, Arthur Andersen LLP had identified approximately $18.7 million of audit adjustments relating to the restructuring or special charges that did not meet the criteria for accrual under GAAP. The Company did not record this audit adjustment since the Company's management believed such amount was not material to the 1996 financial statements.

The Company established reserves for equipment relocation and installation costs, which are not restructuring costs under GAAP, as such costs will benefit future activities. In addition, the Company recorded an asset impairment reserve of $9.06 million based on a percentage of the idle manufacturing space at the Hattiesburg facility however; the reserve was not established in accordance with the provisions of the authoritative GAAP literature and, accordingly, this reserve is reversed in the restated financial statements. The governing authoritative literature that provides guidance for companies to record asset impairment reserves is Statement of Financial Accounting Standard No. 121, "Accounting for the Impairment of Long-Lived Assets and for Long-Lived Assets to Be Disposed Of" ("SFAS 121"). SFAS 121 requires that an impairment loss be recognized if the future cash inflows (grouped at the lowest asset level) less the future cash outflows expected to be necessary to obtain those inflows (undiscounted and without interest charges) is less than the carrying amount of the asset. If an asset held for use is expected to generate sufficient future undiscounted cash flow, an impairment charge is not appropriate. The Company did not prepare a future undiscounted cash flow analysis of the Hattiesburg manufacturing facility during the fourth quarter of 1996 when the asset impairment reserve was recorded. Nonetheless, based on interviews conducted during the restatement investigation, management in 1996 believed that the carrying amount of the facility was not fully recoverable and an asset impairment writedown for a portion of the carrying value was appropriate. An asset impairment reserve was not allowed in the restated 1996 financial statements because the analysis required under SFAS 121 was not prepared at the end of 1996, nor was the Company able to prepare such an analysis at the time of the restatement (using information available during the fourth quarter of 1996, including the 1997 financial plan), which would indicate that the carrying value of the facility was impaired.

The other disallowed reserves were primarily for the estimated costs for future package redesign costs of $4 million, which are not allowed to be accrued in advance of being incurred as such costs benefit future activities.

The Company also recorded and categorized certain expenses as "special charges" in its previously reported 1996 financial statements, as the Company believed the recognition of such provisions resulted from the consolidation and/or relocation of operations, the abandonment of operations or productive assets, or the impairment of the carrying value of productive or other long-lived assets (i.e., restructuring plan). Certain expenses amounting to $62.8 million, recorded in the fourth quarter of 1996, such as litigation, environmental, product liability, warranty reserve and accounts receivable reserves, should not have been categorized as "special charges" since such charges relate to expenses that should have been recognized as a normal operating expense. The environmental and litigation component of the initially recorded "special charge" ($27.2 million) relates to discontinued operations and, therefore, could be described as a non-recurring charge. The Company has decided to exclude the environmental and litigation charges from the "special charge" category and instead provide an explanation of these items in the Management, Discussion and Analysis section of the Company's restated Form 10-K.

Furthermore, as part of the restructuring plan and redefinition of its core business, the Company announced the divestiture of its Furniture Division. In connection with the divestiture, the Company recorded a provision for estimated losses to be incurred on the sale of approximately $47.9 million ($32.4 million net of taxes). The loss was primarily comprised of the difference between the net book value of the Furniture Division assets and the expected proceeds received from U.S. Industries, Inc. and other costs directly related to the divestiture of the Furniture Division. The governing authoritative literature that provides guidance for recording the effects of the disposal of a segment of a business, as defined, is APB Opinion No. 30, "Reporting the Results of Operations - Reporting the Effects of a Disposal of a Segment of a Business, and Extraordinary, Unusual and Infrequent Occurring Events and Transactions" ("APB No. 30"). APB No. 30 allows companies to record adjustments, costs, and expenses which (a) are clearly a direct result of the decision to dispose of the segment and (b) are clearly not the adjustments of carrying amounts or costs, or expenses that should have been recognized on a going-concern basis prior to the measurement date, as defined, should be included in determining the gain or loss on disposal. Examples of such costs that are a direct result of the decision to dispose of business are severance, stay bonuses and other employee termination benefits (e.g., COBRA, workers compensation). Included in the Company's $154.9 million Restructuring Impairment and Other Costs charge in 1996 was approximately $10.3 million for severance, stay bonuses and other employee termination benefits that should have been included as a component of the "Estimated loss on sale of discontinued operations" in the Company's 1996 consolidated statement of operations. In connection with the restatement of the Company's financial statements, a reclassification of approximately $10.3 million from "Restructuring and impairment charges" expense to "Estimated loss on sale of discontinued operations" will be recorded to accurately present the disposal of a segment of a business in accordance with APB No. 30.

In 1997, when the Company incurred the restructuring and special charges which were incorrectly accrued during the fourth quarter of 1996, such costs must be expensed or capitalized (in accordance with GAAP) in the restated financial statements. Since most of the disallowed restructuring and special charges were incurred in 1997, the restatement results in a large expense in 1997. DESCRIPTION: 11. Reductions in Restructuring Reserves in 1997

AMOUNT AND PERIODS AFFECTED (in thousands):

	1996	1997					1998
	Q4	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	YEAR	Q1
NET SALES:
PRE-TAX INCOME:					$7,560	$7,560

BACKGROUND:

During the fourth quarter of 1996, the Company previously recorded a pre-tax special charge to earnings in the amount of $337.6 million. This amount was allocated to Restructuring and Impairment, Cost of Sales, Selling General and Administrative ("SG&A") expenses and Loss on Discontinued Operations. (See Issue No. 10 "1996 Restructuring and Special Charges" for further information.)

During 1997, the Company charged $3.1 million to the restructuring reserve primarily for consulting and information system costs (i.e., J D Edwards), which were not specifically accrued for in the estimation of the reserve established in the fourth quarter of 1996. The Company charged these costs to the restructuring reserve because the "plant closure" component of the reserve had an excess and unnecessary reserve due to favorable subleases obtained on closed facilities. When initially establishing the reserve for future lease obligations, the Company took a conservative approach in estimating the amount of sublease income to be obtained as it was uncertain as to its ability to sublease. The governing authoritative literature ("EITF 94-3") indicates that amounts actually incurred in connection with the restructuring plan should be charged to the reserve only if they were specifically contemplated in the estimation of the reserve; otherwise, costs should be charged to expense or capitalized, as appropriate. The consulting and information systems costs were not contemplated and would not of qualified for accrual in the estimation of the reserve established in 1996, as such costs would provide a future benefit to the Company. In the 1997 restatement, the Company capitalized $2.3 million of the $3.1 million in consulting and information systems costs.

In connection with estatement investigation, the Company identified approximately $14.6 million of excess and unnecessary restructuring reserves in the following reserve categories: severance, workers' compensation, COBRA and plant closure costs. These unnecessary amounts are reflected as a credit in the Restructuring and Impairment expense in the Company's restated financial statements. Of the $14.6 million of excess and unnecessary reserves, $7.5 million resulted in a direct increase to pre-tax income. The remaining $7.1 million does not result in a direct increase to pre-tax income as the Company utilized such excess and unnecessary reserves to offset normal operating expenses in 1997. A reclassification entry was made in the restatement to increase cost of sales ($2.5 million), other income, net ($.7 million) and discontinued operations ($3.9 million) and to credit restructuring and impairment expense which results in the proper disclosure of these reserve reductions as required by GAAP.

The Company will make appropriate disclosure on the reduction in restructuring reserves in Management's Discussion & Analysis ("MD&A") section of the Company's Form 10-K.

PRE-TAX INCOME:	$3,706	$(1,600)	$(614)	$(396)	$(962)	$(3,572)

BACKGROUND:

During December 1996, the Company requested from its advertising agency, Ogilvey & Mathers ("O&M"), an invoice for $1,320,000 representing a portion of the Company's advertising fee for 1997. The invoice was inappropriately identified as "1996 Agency Fee". Based on the Company's letter agreement with O&M, the Company was obligated to pay O&M $110,000 per month through the end of the agreement period, December 31, 1997 (i.e. $1,320,000 in total). The Company accrued $1,320,000 and incorrectly recorded this amount as an expense in 1996 even though the services were to be performed in 1997.

In addition, the Company accrued in error, an additional $700,000 in O&M agency fees for 1997 services at year end 1996. This amount was the maximum incentive bonus ("bonus") to be earned by O&M in 1997. A total restatement adjustment for $2,020,000 is necessary to reverse this expense from 1996 and record it in 1997, the proper period. In 1997 the Company incurred approximately $555,000 of the potential $700,000 bonus and expensed such amount, as a result, a restatement adjustment to record the actual bonus earned in 1997 is not required.

Other expenses relating to 1997 services which were accrued and expensed in fiscal 1996 were as follows:

Vendor	Amount
Integrated Access Corporation	$ 263,500
Herbert LaZar Bell, Inc.	437,500
Mosher Exhibits	300,000
EPI Printers	250,000

The Company also under-accrued O&M advertising agency fees at year end 1997. A total adjustment for $566,000 is necessary to accrue for these costs in 1997. Such amount is unrelated to the O&M overaccrual at year end 1996.

BACKGROUND:

During 1997, the Company began negotiating cash rebates from vendors (i.e., suppliers) for volume, pricing and other reasons. The rebates were in the form of cash or credit memorandums that could be applied against amounts the Company owed to the vendors. The Company's accounting department advised the procurement and the legal departments that the rebates would not represent 1997 income unless they related entirely to 1997 purchases. Most rebates were described in vendor agreements which stated that they related to 1997 purchases, however, most of the agreements also required Sunbeam to commit to purchase products in the future from these vendors for up to a four-year period.

Based on interviews conducted during the investigation, it was determined that for some vendors the Company negotiated a reduction in the price of goods to be purchased in the future and then requested that the vendor pay for a portion of the reduction in the form of an immediate rebate. The Company would receive the remainder of the rebate through price reductions on future purchases (at prices which were higher than the post-rebate price but lower than the price paid before the negotiation).

The Company's policy was to recognize these rebates as income at the time cash was received or documentation was obtained indicating a future credit memorandum would be received. The Company's accounting was not proper because the Company had negotiated the rebate together with an extended purchase commitment period which would require the deferral of this income over that period. To the extent that these rebates related to inventory on hand, an adjustment is made in the restatement to allocate a portion of the rebate to inventory at each quarter end.

DESCRIPTION: 14. Sales Return Reserve

AMOUNT AND PERIODS AFFECTED (in thousands):

	1996	1997					1998
	Q4	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	YEAR	Q1
NET SALES:		$118	$(1,610)	$(8,026)	$(6,775)	$(16,293)	$2,114
PRE-TAX INCOME:		$44	$(596)	$(2,970)	$(2,507)	$(6,029)	$532

BACKGROUND:

The Company has historically sold blankets to its major customers with an implied right of return for blankets when the customer is unable to sell the blankets during the winter season. In addition, the Company historically offered return privileges to certain other customers such as the television shopping networks. Due to a long history of sales and return patterns with these customers, the Company can make a reasonable estimate of the expected returns. In years prior to 1997, the Company provided reserves for expected returns which provided a reasonable estimate of the lost profit on such expected returns.

Commencing in the second half of 1997, the Company attempted to institute a "no-returns" policy for all sales. Based on interviews conducted during the investigation with sales and customer service personnel, as well as other management personnel, it appeared unlikely to those employees that the Company's new no-return policy could be successfully used with the Company's large customers. Based on interviews conducted during the investigation it appears as though few, if any, customers were formally notified of the Company's new no-return policy in late 1997 or 1998. There was very little adherence to this policy by the Company's personnel or its customers, as demonstrated by the significant amount of returned goods in 1998 relating to 1997 sales.

In addition, in late January 1998, the Company deleted its return authorization file which prevented its return centers from accepting returned merchandise. This file contained details of numerous returns that had previously been approved ("return authorizations") by Sunbeam management and customers had been notified that they were authorized to return the merchandise. The sale value of deleted return authorizations was approximately $8 million. As a result, in early 1998, the Company's return centers turned back numerous truckloads of nondefective sales returns and overloaded the capabilities of the truck carriers who were forced to hold the nondefective inventory. Company customer service personnel advised the customers that Sunbeam would pay for storage of the returned merchandise pending resolution of the decision to accept the return goods. Commencing around May 1998, the Company again began accepting and processing nondefective returns.

In connection with implementing the no-returns policy, the Company intended to provide at least one customer with incentives to keep, rather than return products, including markdown funds (i.e., for future pricing concessions).

At December 1996 the Company had a sales return reserve of $6.5 million. At December 1997 the sales return reserve was $2.5 million which represents the gross profit on expected returns of approximately $8 million. The Company reduced its sales return reserve allegedly because of its new "no-returns" policy. Based on interviews conducted during the restatement investigation, the Company's sales management did not believe the "no-returns" policy could be implemented, nor was it effectively communicated or implemented with the Company's customers. The Company now believes the sale price of expected future returns of non-defective products sold in 1997 will be approximately $24.2 million (gross margin of $8.5 million) which includes $12 million of expected blanket returns. The difference between the gross margin of the expected returns of $8.5 million and the $2.5 million recorded as of year end 1997 results in a restatement adjustment of $6.0 million. This adjustment was allocated to the quarters of 1997 based on actual sales activity and expected returns.

During the first quarter of 1998 the Company recorded some additional sale return reserves related to certain "guaranteed/consignment" sales. The impact of the 1997 restatement adjustment results in a reduction in that reserve of approximately $.5 million.

PRE-TAX INCOME:	$3,204	($1,556)	($1,568)	($2,147)	($2,986)	($8,257)	($1,750)

BACKGROUND:

As of December 1996, the Company's insurance broker prepared an estimate of third party administrator ("TPA") fees to be incurred to process future product liability claims ($3.2 million). The fourth quarter of 1996 was the first time the Company accrued the TPA fee. The $3.2 million was classified as a "special charge" (see Issue No. 10 "1996 Restructuring and Special Charges"). In 1997 the Company did not include this future TPA fee in its product liability reserve and thereby reduced its 1997 product liability expense in 1997 by $3.2 million. The Company's accounting policy is to expense product liability administrative costs as incurred, accordingly, a restatement adjustment was made to reverse the 1996 accrual for the TPA fee.

During the year ended December 29, 1996, the Company made several significant adjustments to its product liability reserve account. One adjustment related to the sale of the Company's furniture division, which was treated as a discontinued operation for financial reporting purposes. As part of the sale agreement for the furniture division, the Company retained the liability for future product claims for products sold prior to the date of the disposition. The Company's actuary calculated the liability for expected future (but not incurred) claims in addition to the amounts included in the actuary's report at the date of sale to be $5.7 million. This expense was included in the loss on discontinued operations and the liability included in the product liability reserve at December 29, 1996. In determining its 1997 product liability reserve, the Company did not include this future product liability for the furniture division and thereby reduced its 1997 product liability expense for continuing operations (the reserve for product liability for continuing and discontinued operations were included in a single account). Based on an actuarial calculation as of December 1997, the Company should have recorded an additional $4.6 million in product liability to be consistent with fiscal 1996. The $1.1 million reduction in the product liability reserve during 1997 ($5.7 million in 1996 vs. $4.6 million in 1997) results from one year less of exposure to future claims and is included in the actuary's report.

In addition, as a result of the additional procedures performed during the restatement, the Company identified an error in the original product liability calculation at December 28, 1997. The error caused the original product liability adjustment to be understated by $.4 million, accordingly this amount has been included in the restatement.

In June 1998 the Company obtained an actuarial calculation to determine if the reserve for product liability at June 30, 1998 was adequate. The actuary report showed that the Company was experiencing unfavorable developments during 1998 and that an additional $4 million liability was needed. The Company determined that $1.75 million of this additional liability was needed at March 31, 1998 and a restatement adjustment was recorded. The additional $2.25 million will be recorded at June 30, 1998.

BACKGROUND:

The Company enters into cooperative advertising arrangements ("co-op") with its customers whereby the Company shares in the cost of its customers' advertising expense for Sunbeam products. In order to qualify for co-op, a customer must buy certain Sunbeam products and generally must provide evidence that the appropriate advertising cost was incurred. The Company has a software program ("Dealmaster system") which is used for tracking these arrangements and calculating the appropriate co-op credits. The Dealmaster system was used to record the 1997 year end co-op accrued liability.

Numerous errors were found in the Company's Dealmaster system due to incorrect quotes by the salesmen, deals entered into by salesmen which were not authorized in the Dealmaster system, keypunch errors and sales or customer service employees overriding the co-op percentage in the Dealmaster system. A restatement adjustment was made to record the co-op liability at year end 1997 based on actual allowances paid or credited on 1997 sales through September 1998 related to 1997 and an estimate of remaining 1997 co-op liability.

BACKGROUND:

Sunbeam's long-standing accounting policy has been to record sales revenue at the time goods are shipped to its customers and title has transferred to the buyer (i.e., sales are recorded on an accrual basis in advance of collection of the selling price of the goods). At the time of the sale, the Company records a reduction in sales revenue and profit margin for the estimated amount of sales returns for both non-defective and warranty merchandise. In addition, the Company records the additional cost for the estimated co-op advertising and volume rebate allowances that it gives to most of its customers. The allowances are granted by the Company once the customer provides the documentation to receive the co-operative advertising allowance, if required by the agreement with the customer, or when the customer achieves the necessary purchase volume to receive a rebate. Each of these estimates was evaluated in connection with the restatement and appropriate adjustments were made (see Issue No. 14 "Sales Return Reserve" and "Co-op Advertising"). These four areas comprise the largest amount and percent of future adjustments to recorded sales revenues. Most of these adjustments are finally determined when the customer takes a "deduction" (sometimes referred to as a "chargeback") from an amount due on another sales invoice. In other words, the Company pays for the cost of these deductions in the future by collecting less than the full amount of a future (often unrelated) sales invoice.

In addition, customers take deductions from paying the full amount of sales invoices for other reasons such as pricing errors, shortages in quantities received, markdowns (i.e., pricing concessions), billing errors, etc. Customers also take deductions for unauthorized reasons and follow-up is required to collect the proper amount. The processing of deductions was outsourced by the Company, effective January 1997, as part of the 1996 restructuring plan. Control over the customer deduction function, including follow-up and issue resolution deteriorated throughout 1997 and continues in 1998. This area presented a significant business issue for the Company in 1997 and is currently being addressed in 1998.

As part of the proc trying to determine the cause of the deductions and resolution of this problem and in connection with addressing potential restatement issues, the Company determined that its methodology for accruing for estimated future deductions provided for known deductions but did not consider future deductions relating to pricing errors, shortages in quantities received, markdowns and billing errors. As a result, the Company adopted a new methodology that considered reserves for these types of deductions. The reserve for future deductions impacts collectibility of accounts receivable and, consistent with the Company's accounting policy for deductions, is included as a component of the "allowance for doubtful accounts" and "provision for bad debts." The impact of this change in accounting method was not material for periods prior to the fourth quarter of 1996. Accordingly, this new accounting method was adopted for periods commencing with the fourth quarter of 1996

BACKGROUND:

The Company records an estimate for future warranty expense as sales are recorded. The Company has periodically adjusted (at least annually) its warranty liability based on a "model" that predicts expected future warranty claims for defective products. The Company's cost of warranty for a particular product is based on the average selling price of the product in the current year (i.e., the Company grants its customers a full warranty return) and freight costs. The Company has historically tracked defective returns by year of manufacture (i.e., products are date-stamped with the year of manufacture). Accordingly, the Company was able to determine for product returned in a given year, the year of manufacture. This information, along with other factors impacting quality which could increase or decrease the defective product return rates, was used for estimating the warranty accrual. In 1997 the Company implemented a new computer system and no longer tracked warranty return data by year of manufacture.

During 1997, the Company made several changes to assumptions in its model used for determining its warranty accrual. The impact of these changes was to reduce the estimate of future warranty liability. One significant change related to adjusting upward the percentage of total product sales assumed to be returned in the year of sale and, therefore, reducing the liability for future warranty claims. Another change related to reducing the expected return period from five to three years. No change was identified in the underlying business that gave rise to these assumption changes. Further, the changes were not made as a result of any empirical data.

BACKGROUND:

Inventories are accounted for at cost determined on the first-in-first-out method. For internal management and cost control purposes, inventories are costed at standard costs determined annually based on the budgeted cost to acquire and manufacture goods. Differences between standard costs and actual costs, (referred to as "variances") are tracked and an adjustment is made at each period end to capitalize variances related to inventory on hand (i.e., variances, which can be favorable or unfavorable, are allocated to inventory in order to state inventory balances at actual costs in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles). The capitalized variance is allocated to cost of sales in the period in which the inventory is sold. For non-seasonal products, the impact of the Company's accounting method is that capitalized variances that are incurred in one quarter are generally charged or credited to cost of sales in the next quarter.

In connection with the 1996 restructuring, the Company planned to reduce or eliminate a substantial number of stock keeping units ("SKU's"). As a result, approximately one-half of the products in its year end inventory were written down in value. In addition, the Company wrote off all capitalized variances for the Household Division. Because the other one-half of the products in inventory were realizable, variances related to this inventory should not have been written off at year end based on the Company's historic accounting practice. A restatement adjustment has been made to capitalize $2.1 million of variances related to saleable Household Division inventory in the fourth quarter of 1996. A restatement adjustment has also been made to reflect the amortization of these variances through cost of sales in the first quarter of 1997 in accordance with the Company's historic accounting method.

The Company's 1997 capitalized variance calculation did not consider inventory held in distribution centers and the favorable impact of certain material and overhead variances. The aggregate impact of these items was a $1.7 million overstatement of capitalized variances and

BACKGROUND:

During the fourth quarter of 1997, the Company recorded several entries which resulted in overbilling customers for freight charges and resulted in uncollectible accounts receivable. One entry resulted from a keypunch error ($917,000). Another entry resulted from the billing of a significant customer for a return goods handling fee ($994,000) for grills returned during 1995 through 1997. Based on interviews conducted during the restatement investigation, it appears as though many individuals in the sales department believed that collectibility of this handling fee was unlikely. Another entry was made to bill another customer for handling charges ($488,000) related to returned blankets. The Company could not reasonably estimate collectibility of these charges at year end 1997 and, accordingly, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, these receivable either should not have been recorded or should have been fully reserved. The amounts have been adjusted in connection with the restatement. None of these receivables were collected during 1998.

The Company also underaccrued its liability for freight costs at year end 1997 by $322,000. This amount has been adjusted in connection with the restatement.

BACKGROUND:

Restatement adjustments of $1.0 million relating to the 1997 statutory audit of the Company's Mexican subsidiary were required. In addition, the fourth quarter of 1997 includes a $1.0 million restatement adjustment to accrue 1997 inventory purchases that were unaccrued for at year end 1997 and a $174,000 adjustment to record depreciation on certain assets placed in service in 1997. Fourth quarter 1997 also includes an adjustment to reverse sales of $122,000 due to improper shipping cut-off errors. The sales were recognized in first quarter 1998. The gross margin on these sales was $19,000.

In the first quarter of 1998 a restatement adjustment was recorded to reverse Mexico statutory adjustments of $865,000 previously recorded by the Company in first quarter 1998. The first quarter of 1998 restatement includes adjustments pertaining to inventory shrinkage of $500,000, write off of capitalized freight of approximately $334,000 (which is reflected in net sales), and $88,000 to record depreciation of an asset placed in service.

In connection with the 1997 audit of the Company's consolidated financial statements, Arthur Andersen LLP proposed several audit adjustments relating to the statutory financial statements of the Mexican subsidiary. The Company did not record these audit adjustments since the Company believed such adjustments were not material to its 1997 consolidated financial statements. In connection with the restatement of the Company's 1997 financial statements, the Company determined it was appropriate to make these adjustments. The total amount of the proposed audit adjustments was approximately $2.9 million and the adjustments related primarily to inventory issues (the amounts were later refined during the restatement investigation).

BACKGROUND:

Mexican law requires Mexican enterprises to annually pay their employees profit sharing equal to 10% of the enterprise's taxable income. In October 1998, the Company filed its 1997 Mexican tax return, which reflected a large loss. The loss is caused by provisions in the Mexican tax law that permit an immediate deduction for certain purchased inventories and fixed assets. However, for U.S. financial reporting the Company's Mexican subsidiary was profitable for 1997. The Company did not accrue any liability for profit sharing for its Mexican subsidiary for 1997. In connection with preparing the 1997 Mexican tax return the Company determined that it has a deferred profit sharing liability for 1997 of $3.1 million. The large liability results primarily from the complexity and interrelationship between the determination of Mexican taxable income and profit sharing and because net operating losses in Mexico cannot be carried forward to offset future profit sharing expense. The Company's liability for Mexican profit sharing for 1996 was only $190,000 which had been properly accrued in 1996.

BACKGROUND:

During 1997, the Company's Hong Kong subsidiary, in addition to improperly recognizing revenue (see Issue No. 7 "International Guaranteed and Consignment Sales"), under provided for warranty and product liability expenses. Restatement adjustments have been recorded to accrue $106,000 of these costs in 1997. In addition 1997 net sales included sales of goods not shipped until first quarter 1998 of $.5 million. A restatement entry has been made to transfer sales revenue of $499,000 and gross margin of $212,000 from the fourth quarter of 1997 to the first quarter of 1998.

Sunbeam Hong Kong recorded deferred advertising cost of $515,000. Generally accepted accounting principles do not allow advertising costs to be deferred over future periods. A restatement adjustment has been made to charge these deferred costs to 1997.

In the first quarter of 1998, the Company expensed $290,000 of the deferred advertising. A first quarter 1998 restatement adjustment has been made to reverse the expense, since this amount was expensed in the fourth quarter of 1997. Additionally, restatement adjustments totalling $82,000 were made in first quarter 1998 for product liability, warranty and other miscellaneous expenses.

BACKGROUND:

During 1997, the Company outsourced its accounts payable function. The outsourcer paid the Company's invoices once all the supporting information was matched (e.g., purchase order and receiving report). This procedure did not always result in the timely payment of invoices and, when vendors delayed shipments, the Company instructed the outsourcer to pay certain invoices without the supporting documents. The 1997 year end accounting entry made to adjust for this process resulted in reducing both the inventory and accounts payable balances on the general ledger.

The Company's estimate to correct "unvouchered receipts" was in error and resulted in an understatement of the Company's accounts payable balance as of the end of 1997. During 1998, the Company discovered and paid some invoices which related to 1997 inventory purchases which had not been properly accrued in 1997. The restatement entry corrects for these accounting errors.

BACKGROUND:

During the third quarter of 1997, the Company completed a reengineering of its Neosho, Missouri production facility. The costs associated with this project were comprised of consulting fees, construction and rearrangement costs and equipment purchases. Included in this project was the cost of demolition of office space and the replacement of equipment. The Company did not record the write-off of the building improvements and equipment associated with this project in 1997. A restatement adjustment of $747,000 is required to record the write-off and correct depreciation expense.

In connection with the reengineering project the Company engaged Coopers & Lybrand to provide consulting services. During 1997, the Company capitalized approximately $1.7 million of consulting fees related to the project. Of this amount, $960,000 represented the cost of re-implementing certain software modules to properly support manufacturing operations. Costs not associated with the development of new software must be expensed as incurred. Accordingly, a restatement adjustment was made to write off these costs. Additional software re-implementation costs of $234,000 were incorrectly capitalized in the first quarter of 1998. A restatement adjustment was made recorded to write off these costs in the first quarter of 1998.

BACKGROUND:

The Company performed a physical inventory count of its Neosho Outdoor Division inventory at August 31, 1997. The historical practice of the Company was to take an interim physical inventory due to low inventory levels because of the seasonality of the Outdoor Division. The Company's general ledger balance at December 28, 1997 was $739,000 in excess of the perpetual inventory records. The perpetual records were tested and found to be accurate. Accordingly, a restatement adjustment was made to provide for this inventory shrinkage between the August 31, 1997 physical inventory and December 28, 1997.

The Company's general ledger balance was in excess of the perpetual records by $627,000 as of March 31, 1998 and a restatement adjustment was made to provide for this additional inventory shrinkage.

BACKGROUND:

During the fourth quarter of 1997 the Company capitalized $1.2 million of engineering cost associated with pre-manufacturing engineering. Some of the costs capitalized were incurred in earlier 1997 quarters. This engineering was done by engineers who were also involved in research and development associated with developing new products. Generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP) allow a company to capitalize engineering cost after the research and development stage of a product life. Contemporaneous records of the time incurred by the engineers between research and development and post-prototype development costs were not maintained and, therefore, do not adequately document the cost of the post-prototype development work. An adjustment has been made as part of the restatement to expense these costs.

BACKGROUND:

At the end of each month, the Company reconciles a bank clearing account that is maintained as the interface between the Company and CIT, its outsourcer of accounts receivable processing. At year end 1997, the Company made an adjustment of $318,000 to the bank account in error that resulted in a reduction of the Company's bad debt provision. As part of the restatement, this amount has been adjusted at year end 1997.

As part of the restatement investigation, the Company identified $805,000 of debit balances in accounts payable that had accumulated during 1997. The Company is actively pursuing collection of these amounts; however, management of the Company believes that the likelihood of 100% collection is remote and that information to make this judgement was available at year end 1997. An allowance was provided for debit balances in accounts payable at December 29, 1996 and no allowance was provided at December 28, 1997. Accordingly, the Company has recorded a $500,000 allowance against these amounts in the restatement of the fourth quarter 1997.

At the end of the third quarter of 1997 the Company recorded a sale for $851,000 to a wholesaler of inventory at no profit margin. The terms of the transaction was customer pick-up. The customer did not pick up the inventory until the fourth quarter of 1997 and, accordingly, an adjustment was made to transfer the revenue from the third quarter to the fourth quarter.

In connection with the restatement procedures during the first quarter of 1998 the Company identified sales commissions that were underaccrued by $688,000 which had been adjusted as part of the restatement.

	1996	1997					1998
	Q4	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	YEAR	Q1
NET SALES:
PRE-TAX INCOME:	$(10,652)	$6,117	$9,430	$4,193	$(4,113)	$15,627	$(4,336)

BACKGROUND:

The overall impact of the restatement is to reduce the 1996 pre-tax loss from continuing operations by $40.8 million and to reduce 1997 pre-tax income from continuing operations by $96.6 million. The tax effect of the adjustments has been reflected in the restatement. Most of the restatement adjustments will not have an immediate impact on the Company's federal or state income tax returns and result in "temporary differences" between income for financial and tax reporting purposes. A relatively small amount of the adjustments impact taxable income for 1996 and 1997 and the Company is currently planning to amend its 1996 and 1997 income tax returns.

After considering the impact of the restatement, the Company will have net deferred tax assets for its U.S. operations of $32.7 million at December 29, 1996 and $19.0 million at December 28, 1997. The large deferred tax asset at December 29, 1996 arose primarily because of the one-time restructuring and special charges in 1996. Because of the Company's projected profitability in 1997 (based on the 1997 plan prepared in late 1996), including a forecasted increase in revenues and margins and in cost savings, realization of the deferred tax asset at December 29, 1996 and at the end of the first three quarters of 1997 was "more likely than not" (the accounting standard used to assess the realizability of deferred tax assets under Financial Accounting Standards Statement No. 109). Accordingly, no valuation reserve is required at December 29, 1996 or at the end of the first three quarters of 1997.

The Company's financial condition began to deteriorate in the fourth quarter of 1997. The Company's restated income from continuing operations before taxes was $20.6 million in the fourth quarter of 1997. However, excluding the affects of the reductions in reserves that were established in 1996 and prior years (see Issue No. 33 "Reductions in Operating Reserves"), the loss from operations during the fourth quarter of 1997 was approximately $1 million, a substantial reduction from prior 1997 quarters. Further, subsequent to year end 1997 a number of significant negative events occurred including:

1. The significant decline in first quarter 1998 revenues versus the Company's forecast (and the prior year's revenues). January 1998 net sales were only $29 million.

The Company restated loss before income taxes and extraordinary charge for the first quarter 1998 was $46.5 million.

At the date the 1997 financial statements were prepared there was negative information concerning the Company's future profitability. Such negative evidence needs to be considered in determining the need for a valuation reserve for deferred tax assets at December 28, 1997. The significant loss in the first quarter of 1998 and the continuing shortfall in forecasted net sales and profits provides evidence of the need to provide a valuation reserve against deferred tax assets as of March 31, 1998. It is clear that all deferred tax assets have to be fully reserved as of June 30, 1998. The Company has provided a 100% reserve against the net deferred tax assets (as restated) at December 28, 1997 and March 31, 1998. To do otherwise would result in net deferred tax assets at December 28, 1997 that would have to be fully reserved at June 30, 1998 and possibly March 31, 1998.

During the first quarter of 1998 the Company had recorded a deferred tax benefit of $3.0 million relating to the loss on refinancing (classified as an "extraordinary item" in the statement of operations). In the restatement such tax benefit has been reversed.

The valuation allowance for deferred tax assets was $23.2 million at December 28, 1997 and $42.9 million at March 31, 1998.

The Company also made several relatively minor adjustments to its December 28, 1997 consolidated balance sheet to properly reflect current tax refunds and liabilities based its evaluation of the restatement and the filing of its 1997 income tax returns. In addition the Company reduced paid-in-capital at December 28, 1997 and March 31, 1998 by $4.2 million and $5.0 million, respectively, to reflect the actual benefit received from the exercise of stock options in 1997 and 1998.

DESCRIPTION: 32. Income Tax Contingency Reserve

AMOUNT AND PERIODS AFFECTED (in thousands):

	Q4	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	YEAR	Q1
NET SALES:
PRE-TAX INCOME:					$10,335	$10,335

BACKGROUND:

In connection with the restatement investigation the Company determined that it had a reserve for tax contingencies at December 28, 1997 that was not needed for known contingencies. The contingency reserve was established a number of years ago and was needed for potential 1993 through 1994 income tax issues. In late 1997 and January 1998 the Company met with representatives of the IRS to discuss tax issues relating to the in-process 1993 and 1994 revenue agent's examination. At that time it became probable that the Company's unallocated tax contingency reserve was excessive. The Company reduced the tax contingency reserve by $3 million (i.e., a reduction of income tax expense in 1997), in its previously reported fourth quarter 1997 financial statements. However, based on the information known in January 1998, it was probable that the tax contingency reserve was still excessive. Accordingly, the Company has further reduced its tax contingency reserve in the restated fourth quarter of 1997 financial statements by an additional $10.3 million.

DESCRIPTION: 33. Reductions of Reserves

AMOUNT AND PERIODS AFFECTED (in thousands):

	1996	1997					1998
	Q4	Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4	YEAR	Q1
DISCLOSURE ITEMS ONLY:	-	($428)	($5,497)	($3,292)	($34,913)	($44,130)	($3,000)

BACKGROUND:

In connection with the restatement investigation, it was determined that $8.1 million of litigation reserves, which were properly established at the end of 1996 in accordance with GAAP, were no longer needed in 1997 due to a favorable settlement during 1997. The Company transferred $7.1 million of this amount into the Company's warranty reserve in December of 1997 in order to cover a shortfall in this account, and $1.0 million was reversed directly into income during 1997. The amount transferred to the warranty reserve has been adjusted in the restatement as a reclassification to reflect an $7.1 million increase in Cost of Sales and a reduction of Selling General and Administrative expense. The appropriate disclosure of the amount of litigation reserves transferred and taken into income will be included in Management's Discussion and Analysis ("MD&A") in the restated Form 10-K.

The Company utilized various other operating reserves established in or prior to 1996 that benefited 1997 operating results. The Company also changed its accounting policy as it relates to manufacturing supplies inventory. A listing of the reserves and change in accounting policy that benefit 1997 net income are as follows:

Description	Account Benefited	Amount (000)
Reversal of excess 1996 Cooperative advertising accrual	Net sales	$ 5,350
Reversal of excess 1996 Corporate expenses	SG&A	679
Reversal of excess 1996 litigation reserve	SG&A	8,142
Reversal of excess 1996 consulting fees	SG&A	1,282
Risk management department 1997 expense charged to litigation reserve	SG&A	536
Reversal of excess 1996 advertising accrual	SG&A	683
Reversal of excess 1996 health insurance accrual	SG&A	820
Reversal of non-core liabilities set up prior to 1996	Cost of sales	3,469
Capitalization of manufacturing supplies inventory in 1997	Cost of sales	2,834
Reversal of excess 1996 inventory valuation reserve	Cost of sales	7,000
Total impact on pretax income		30,795
Reversal of income tax contingency reserve (see Issue No. 32)	Income tax	13,335

In addition to the r[illegible]ves and change in accounting policy shown above, the Company also reduced restructuring reserves during 1997 by $14.6 million (see Issue No. 11 "Reductions in Restructuring Reserves in 1997").

For the period ended March 31, 1998 the Company properly reduced its environmental reserve by $3 million as a result of a favorable development which was confirmed by the Company's environmental consultant.

All of the restructuring and non-restructuring related excess and unnecessary reserve reversals and change in accounting policy will be disclosed in the MD&A section of the Company's restated 1997 Form 10-K and Form 10-Q's for 1997 and March 31, 1998.

DONALD DENKHAUS
was called as a witness by the Plaintiff, and having been first duly sworn, testified as follows:
THE WITNESS: I do.

DIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q Good morning, Mr. Denkhaus.
A Good morning.
Q Would you please state your name for the record?
A Donald Denkhaus.
Q And where do you reside currently?
A 10220 S.W. 87th Court, Miami.
Q And how long have you lived in the Miami area?
A Thirty-three years.
Q And do you have a college degree?
A Yes, I do.
Q What is that degree?
A I have a bachelor's of business administration with concentration in accounting.
Q From what institution?
A Kent State University.
Q And that's in Ohio?
A Yes.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q And what year did you receive that degree?
A 1969.
Q And if my math is any good, that means you moved to Florida right after getting the degree?
A No. I attended graduate school at the University of Maryland. Came to Florida the next year.
Q Did you get an MBA at Maryland?
A Yes.
Q Did you begin working when you moved to Florida?
A Yes.
Q With whom?
A Arthur Andersen.
Q And are you currently employed?
A No.
Q Are you retired?
A I guess -- I wouldn't say I'm retired. I'm looking for some activities, but not full time employment.
Q How many years were you with Andersen?
A Thirty-two or thirty-three years.
Q Did you ever obtain a CPA license in the state of Florida?
A Yes.
Q When did you receive that?

A I believe it was in 1971.
Q And is that license in force today?
A Yes.
Q Was it in force continually since 1971?
A Yes.
Q Aside from meeting with Mr. Moscato, have you done anything to prepare for the deposition today?
A No.
Q Have you spoken with anyone besides Mr. Moscato or any family members about this deposition?
A Other than the fact that I was having a deposition, I haven't spoken to anybody.
Q And you have and I have never spoken before this morning. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q You didn't have any conversations with any lawyers from Morgan Stanley. Is that correct?
A No.
Q That's not correct or you didn't have the conversations?
MR. MOSCATO: Too many negatives in the question.
MR. JOHNSON: I'm sorry.
MR. MOSCATO: It's not your fault, Don.

THE WITNESS: I did not have any conversations with attorneys from Morgan Stanley.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Now, in connection with your employment with Arthur Andersen, did you ever do any work relating to Sunbeam Corporation?
A Yes.
Q And you were involved in the additional procedures that led to the restatement of Sunbeam's financial statements. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q When did you begin working on those additional procedures?
A I believe it was early July 1998.
Q Prior to early July 1998, did you perform any audit-related procedures for Sunbeam?
A No.
Q Did you review any Sunbeam-related materials in your capacity with Arthur Andersen during March of 1998?
A I don't believe so. I was the division head for south Florida, so I -- indirectly somebody might have asked me something about it, but I don't have any particular -- any recollection of reviewing any documents.

Q In March of 1998?
A In March of 1998, yes.
Q So to the best of your knowledge, you didn't review any Sunbeam press releases that were issued in March of 1998 during the time they were issued?
A That's correct.
Q Did you, in March of 1998, review any Sunbeam offering memoranda?
A No, I don't believe -- I was aware of the offering, but I don't believe that I reviewed any of the documents.
Q At that time?
A At that time, yes.
Q Can you tell me briefly the circumstances that led you to get involved in the additional procedures that led to the restatement?
A I believe it was sometime in June -- I don't remember the exact timing -- probably late June that I was asked by our managing partner for Florida practice, Bill Pruitt, if I would have the time to do some additional procedures relating to Sunbeam, to determine if the financial statements would require restatement.
Q Prior to that conversation with Mr. Pruitt, had you had any discussions with anyone at Andersen about the need for any additional procedures at Sunbeam?

A In my capacity as the audit division head for south Florida, I was aware that there were issues involving Sunbeam. I think, my recollection would be related to the revenue recognition issues, and I was aware that there was ongoing review by Mr. Pruitt, and our team, and others in our practice director group that were involved in that. But I was not directly consulted on anything.

Q Did those issues arise in connection with the Baron's article in June of 1998?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A I don't recall if they related to the Baron's article, or whether they related to other circumstances that the audit team was concerned about.

Q Can you put a time frame on when those issues arose?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

MR. MOSCATO: Is the question when they arose or when he became aware of them?

MR. JOHNSON: If he knows when they arose, as opposed to when you specifically became aware of the issues.

MR. MOSCATO: Do you know, Don?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

THE WITNESS: No, I don't.

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q You agreed to take on the additional procedures on Mr. Pruitt's request?

A Yes. He had, I believe, consulted with other management members in Arthur Andersen and they had -- were considering who would do the additional procedures, and they asked me if I would have the time to do them, and I said I would.

Q And did you have primary responsibility within Andersen for those procedures?

A I had the primary responsibility of heading up the team and having the overall signing responsibility for the work that was going to be done, and in this case it would end up being the restated financial statements. But throughout that process there were many other individuals at Arthur Andersen that were involved that were more senior than I in the process.

Q You indicate you put together a team within Andersen to work on the additional procedures. Did this team have meetings or how did the team communicate with itself?

A There were members of the team that worked under my direction, and then they had subordinates that worked under them. As the additional procedures got expanded, there were individuals in other offices outside of south Florida that were involved, that didn't work directly for me, but they were performing procedures that were part of the work that was necessary to do the additional procedures.

And there were also -- you asked about the reporting mechanism. There was a reporting by myself to members of Andersen's management as to the status of the work that was being done. Generally those meetings were on a weekly basis.

Q Now, can you tell me in a general fashion the additional procedures that were performed in connection with your work on Sunbeam?

A I'm not sure how to describe them in a general way.

Q Okay.

A They started out looking at revenue recognition issues, and then were expanded to include a significant number of other areas, and ultimately resulted in the restatement and adjustments in quite a few different areas.

Q And as part of the additional procedures, did your team interview Sunbeam employees?

A Yes.

Q And you yourself participated in many of those interviews?

A Yes, I did.

Q And were memoranda created as to the information obtained in those interviews?

A Yes.

Q And you drafted some of those memoranda?

A Yes.

Q Did you, in connection with the additional procedures, review all of the memoranda that were prepared?

MR. MOSCATO: By him or by everybody?

MR. JOHNSON: By everybody.

THE WITNESS: To the best of my recollection, I would have reviewed all of the memoranda.

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q Were the memoranda circulated among the Arthur Andersen team in charge of the additional procedures?

A No.

Q Besides you, who, to your knowledge, reviewed all of the other interview memoranda?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A I don't know that I'm sure who reviewed all of the memorandum. I think Larry Bornstein may have reviewed them all, but I don't know that for sure. I know he participated in many of the interviews, but whether he reviewed them all I can't tell you, but he was integrally involved in the process. Phil Harlow reviewed many of them, and participated in a number of the views.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q How about Mr. Pastrana?

A Mr. Pastrana participated in some of the interviews, but I don't believe he would have necessarily reviewed the ones that he did not participate in. And the work papers reviewed by --

THE WITNESS: Mike, if you can tell me. John, from Chicago.

MR. MOSCATO: John Reilly?

THE WITNESS: Reilly.

MR. MOSCATO: So you want to get him involved in this now too, Don?

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

MR. MOSCATO: This is your revenge?

THE WITNESS: Revenge for John, yeah. John reviewed a lot of the work that was done. Whether he reviewed all of the memorandum, I can't really tell you that or not. But I know he was reviewing the work papers and had access to all of the work papers for his review, if he chose to review them.

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q What was the purpose of committing these interviews to written memoranda form?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A The purpose was, putting them in written form, was just to memorialize the conversations so that they wouldn't be recollections, they would be what we wrote down and is our best knowledge that we gained, the individual who wrote the memorandum. They weren't reviewed by the people that we interviewed, so we don't have any feedback by them, and I don't think there were comments provided by anyone other than the person that was writing the memorandum.

Q So drafts of the memoranda were not circulated to the other Andersen participants in the interview?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A I believe the drafts would have been circulated to the other -- in general there were two Andersen participants in the interviews, and I believe the second person would have also reviewed that memorandum, but not others, in terms of commenting or making suggested changes.

Q And as I understand your answer, these were committed to writing, just to make a record of what you'd learned?

A Yes.

MR. JOHNSON: I'm going to mark an exhibit, if I could. This will be CPH 21.

(Deposition Exhibit No. CPH 21 was marked for identification.)

If you can take a second to look through Exhibit 21 for me, Mr. Denkhaus.

MR. MOSCATO: Don, you don't have to look at each page. He'll take you through.

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q We're going to spend a lot of time on the details of this document today. But can you, for the record, tell me what Exhibit 21 is?

A Yes. This appears to be a copy of the Arthur Andersen file that contained the memorandum relating to the interviews conducted by Arthur Andersen during the additional procedures performed at Sunbeam.

Q So would it be accurate to say this is part of the work papers for the additional procedures?

A It certainly appears as though. It would be my recollection that this is what it would be.

Q If you would be kind enough to turn to Bates page CPH -- and you'll see there's several different Bates numbers on each page here, but if you look at the lowest bottom right numbering -- CPH 0062494 and 495. These pages contain a list of the Sunbeam personnel who were interviewed in connection with the additional procedures. Is that correct?

A Yes.

Q Looking particularly at page 62495, do you know why the index numbering jumps from tab 31 to tab 76?

A I have no recollection of why that would be.

Q Are you aware of any Sunbeam personnel who were interviewed but for whom Andersen did not prepare a summary of the interview?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A Well, let me say this is the result of what we considered formal interviews with a number of people. Throughout the additional procedures, which were performed over a five-month period, we talked with numerous individuals at Sunbeam, with no documentation, other than if we found something that our team considered of audit significance, they would have put notation of that somewhere in an audit work files, but not in a written memorandum such as these.

Q So these are the formal interviews?

A Correct.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q I want to focus on about a dozen of these interviews, and then we'll leave you alone. But as I've reviewed these, I've had questions about some of the statements made in the memos. I just wanted to walk through those, if I could.

If you turn to tab one for me, tab one, which bears the Bates stamp CPH 62498 through 62510. If you could just review that for me, I'll ask you a few questions about it.

MR. MOSCATO: What Bates numbers?

MR. JOHNSON: 62498 through 62510.

MR. MOSCATO: Okay.

Are you ready?

THE WITNESS: I've quickly looked through it.

MR. JOHNSON: Okay. Great.

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q Could you identify this document for me?

A Yes. This is a copy of the memorandum that I prepared to document the interview that we conducted with David Fannin on July 16th, 1998.

Q And you participated in that interview?

A Yes.

Q The first bullet point on the first page states, quote: Fannin met with Bob Gluck on July 12, 1998, close quote. Do you see that?

A Yes.

Q Should that in fact be June 12th, 1998?

A I don't know.

Q Do you know the parenthetical reference just after the date, "four days after the board meeting," what board meeting is referred to there?

A This was the board meeting that I think that Dunlap may have been relieved of his responsibilities, or discussion about his responsibilities and the financial results of the company. So I don't know the date of that meeting, but this is my best recollection is what is written here.

Q And about five bullet points down, you write, quote: Fannin was concerned, quote, 1998 was in collapse, close quote.

What was Mr. Fannin referring to there?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A Well, I don't know exactly what he was referring to, that's why it's in quotes, but I believe it related to the financial issues that the company was having at the time. Have to ask him what he specifically meant by that.

Q Further down on the same page, there's a bullet that states, quote: Per Bob Gluck, quote, the 1997 performance was not sustainable, close quote.

Do you know what is being referred to there?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

MR. MOSCATO: I'm going to object too. I don't really understand the question.

Do your best, Don. If you understand it, answer it.

THE WITNESS: My recollection would be that it relates to financial performance again, of the company, and the company's financial performance in 1997 was not going to be repeated, I guess, I don't know for how long, but any in the current period.

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q At least as of 1998?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A As of the period when Mr. Fannin talked with Mr. Gluck about it.

Q And then the last bullet point on that page states: Gluck was, quote, leaned on, close quote, by Kersh to make the targeted numbers.

Mr. Gluck was the comptroller of the company. Is that correct?

A Yes, he was corporate comptroller.

Q And Kersh was the chief financial officer?

A Yes.

Q Was their audit significance to the fact that the CFO leaned on the comptroller to make the targeted numbers?

MR. MOSCATO: Objection.

MS. BROWN: Objection.

THE WITNESS: The purpose of the interviews was to determine if there were -- was matters affecting the company's financial statements that might give rise to the need for restatement. So there could be concern if there was -- if that meant there was manipulation of the financial statements. I can only say what was quoted here.

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q So this is information that may be of interest to Andersen as part of the additional procedures?

A Yes.

Q On the next page, the second bullet point states: Gluck thought the 1998 projected numbers were totally unrealistic.

Do you see that?

A Yes.

Q Again, is that information that was of potential significance as part of the additional procedures?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

MS. BROWN: Objection.
A It was significant that it would alert us to the potential to want to do additional work to see if we would find misstatements of the 1998 second quarter results.
Q The next bullet point indicates that you obtained information that the company was, quote, operated for the moment, close quote.
Do you know what the reference to "operated for the moment" means?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A No, I don't recall.
Q Did it have anything to do with the likelihood that the company would be sold?
MR. MOSCATO: You know, I object. This is double hearsay. I don't know how you can expect him to interpret what Gluck told Fannin. It's just an unfair question.
MR. JOHNSON: I'll strike it then.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Did you have any reaction to the information that the company was operated for the moment?
A I think a number of people that we spoke with at Sunbeam indicated that the company was focused on trying to sell the company back in 1997, not that there's any secret that that's what Dunlap was trying to do, openly market it. And that could have -- if he was trying to sell the company, and improve the earnings and reduce expenses, maybe properly or improperly, that could have significance on the additional procedures being performed.

Q If you would turn to the next page for me. In the middle of the page there's a bullet point that states: March 19, 1998, press release. Do you see that? And then there's about a half dozen sub bullet points under that heading.
I'm afraid you're one page too far.
A I'm on the wrong page. I'm sorry.
Q So the middle of the page, there's a bullet, March 19, 1998 press release.
A Yes.
Q And then a number of sub bullets.
A I see that.
Q If you'd be kind enough to read through those for me, I'll have a handful of questions on those bullets.
A Okay.
Q The first sub bullet there states: Morgan Lewis said that Arthur Andersen raised an issue regarding disclosure of the reduced first quarter 1998 sales.

Should that be a reference to Morgan Stanley, rather than Morgan Lewis?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A In looking at this again, I believe it should be Morgan Stanley.
Q Morgan Stanley was the investment banker on the zero coupon bond?
A Yes. I don't believe -- Morgan Lewis is a law firm. I don't believe there were involved. That's my recollection.
Q Right. Okay.
Several of these bullet points indicate that Mr. Uzzi and Dunlap are giving assurances that the first quarter projections could still be met. Do you see that?
A Yes.
Q But the last bullet point on that page indicates that -- it is the last sentence of the last bullet point: Arthur Andersen LLP wanted disclosure in the press release of the company's inability to achieve sales equal to the level of the first quarter of 1997. Do you see that?
MR. MOSCATO: Well, it says that Fannin confirmed that.

MR. JOHNSON: That Arthur Andersen wanted that disclosure.
MR. MOSCATO: Right.
MR. JOHNSON: Correct.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Do you know whether Arthur Andersen wanted that disclosure?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't have any --
MR. MOSCATO: Penny for your thought.
THE WITNESS: I don't know that I had any firsthand knowledge about that. I've heard a lot about it over the period of the work that I did, but I'm not -- wasn't part of that process.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q At least of the date that you wrote this memorandum on July 22, 1998, you had some information that Arthur Andersen wanted disclosure in the press release related to the company's inability to achieve sales equal to first quarter of 1997?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
MR. MOSCATO: I'm confused. I mean, that's what the interview memo says Fannin told him.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

MR. JOHNSON: Right.
MR. MOSCATO: Is that the case, Don?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
MR. JOHNSON: Is that the first you'd heard of it?
MR. MOSCATO: If you remember.
THE WITNESS: I just don't know. I may have heard it before then, I may not have. I just don't know the exact timing of when I heard about that.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Do you have any reason to believe that what Mr. Fannin told you about Arthur Andersen's wishes is incorrect?
A I don't have any knowledge that it was incorrect.
Q As far as you know, in fact, it is correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
MR. MOSCATO: I object to that.
MR. JOHNSON: It's just a question.
MR. MOSCATO: It's argumentative. There's a long, involved record in this case that Andersen didn't even know the press release was going out, so, you know --

THE WITNESS: Can you repeat the question?
MR. JOHNSON: If I can remember it.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q The question is whether you have any information indicating that what Mr. Fannin told you about Arthur Andersen's wishes is incorrect.
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Well, with some subsequent knowledge, you know, about whether that should be press release or offering memorandum, you know, maybe my -- maybe the way I wrote this is not entirely accurate. I don't know. I don't have any specific recollection.
Q So you don't know one way or the other whether what Mr. Fannin told you is correct?
A At the time I wrote down what my recollection was after the interview of what he had said. Whether I got it right or wrong is, you know, I don't know. It's possible that it is wrong, because it's -- I know subsequently the issue of the press release and the offering memorandum are two separate issues I may have confused.
MR. MOSCATO: He may have confused it too. Right?
THE WITNESS: He may have confused it also.

BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Did you obtain any information as to whom Arthur Andersen expressed its desire for the disclosure that Mr. Fannin is referring to in the last bullet point on page 62500?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A In connection with the interview?
Q Or otherwise.
MR. MOSCATO: I don't mean to butt in. Would it be maybe more efficient just to ask him what his understanding of the whole process was? Because it's kind of picking around here, and you're probably never going to get his understanding of what happened. If you want to get his understanding of what happened, you may just want to ask him what he understands happened.
MR. JOHNSON: I think we're going to get to that, in summary fashion.
MR. MOSCATO: Okay. But it might put things in context. I'm not telling you how to do your deposition, I'm just concerned that the record be a fairly accurate record.
MR. JOHNSON: No, I appreciate that, and I appreciate your suggestion. We're going to move through this as efficiently as we can.

And, for the record, we've been speaking, at this point, strictly about the interview of David Fannin memorandum.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q I'm going to move the next one here. If you could turn to, I believe it's tab four, for me. Tab four of Exhibit 21 is a two-page document, Bates CPH 62573 and 574. Could you identify this document for me, Mr. Denkhaus?
A Yes. This is a copy of the memorandum that I prepared after the interview that we conducted with Steve Dalbert on July 16th, 1998.
Q And Mr. Dalbert was the assistant treasurer at Sunbeam?
A Yes.
Q The second-to-last bullet point, major bullet point, I should say, on the first page, states, quote: Dalbert indicated there was significant pressure by Russ Kersh and Don Uzzi on every sale and marketing person to make the revenue projection.
Do you see that?
A Yes.
Q Can you tell me why you determined that information should be included in your memorandum?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A Because it left a potential that the salespeople might be entering into sales that did not meet either generally accepted accounting or the company's normal process, normal sales methods in order to achieve the targeted results.
Q Did you ever hear anything in the course of your interviews to the effect that the atmosphere at Sunbeam was to make your number or get fired?
A I remember hearing that. I can't recall specifically who may have told me that.
Q Did you come across any information as part of the additional procedures indicating that Morgan Stanley had ever attempted to speak with Mr. Steven Dalbert?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Not that I recall.
Q If you would be good enough to turn to tab five for me in your Exhibit 21. And tab five of Exhibit 21 is a two-page document bearing Bates stamp CPH 62576 through 62577.
Mr. Denkhaus, is this an interview you prepared concerning your interview with Janet Kelly?
A Yes.
Q Ms. Kelly was the general counsel at Sunbeam?

A She had recently been promoted, is my recollection. David Fannin had been the general counsel, and she had recently been promoted.
Q The last bullet point under the first major bullet point, so that's six bullet points from the bottom, if you're counting, states that there, quote, was a substantial push, end quotes, by Dunlap and others to make the revenue earnings projections.
Do you see that?
A Yes.
Q Did you obtain any information from Ms. Kelly as to when that push had occurred?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't recall.
Q Was this push in connection with Mr. Dunlap's desire to sell the company?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't recall the specifics of the discussion with Janet Kelly on that topic.
Q Did you come across any information during the additional procedures indicating that Morgan Stanley had attempted to contact Ms. Kelly?
A No.
Q If you'd jump ahead to tab seven for me in your binder, Exhibit 21. Tab seven is a three-page document with Bates stamps CPH 62584 through 62586. Do you see that?

A Yes.
Q Is this also a memorandum that you prepared?
A Yes.
Q Concerning your interview with Kyle Sinclair?
A Yes.
Q The last major bullet point on the first page indicates that the company was, quote: Very aggressive in obtaining sales orders from customers, particularly at the end of the fourth quarter of 1997.
Do you see that?
A Yes.
Q Could you again tell me why that's information that you thought appropriate to include in this memorandum?
A Because it potentially could affect the revenue recognition that the company followed in the fourth quarter of 1997, potentially sales that didn't meet generally accepted revenue recognition.
Q If you'd flip to the last page of this memorandum for me. The second major bullet point states, in quotes, initiatives for success in 4Q97, end of quotes. Do you see that?
A Yes.

Q What is that a reference to?
A As I understand it, the company had a procedure in place that was followed, at least in the fourth quarter of '97 -- I don't recall about other periods -- where they would identify the results that had been achieved to date, and then have a list of other potential adjustments that could be made to the financial statements, potentially made to the financial statements, that could increase those results. And that was used as a document for, I'll say for planning purposes, as to the results for the -- at least for this quarter. I don't know about other quarters.
Q Under that "Initiatives for Success Bullet" point, about two-third of the way down, there's a reference to Dixon Thayer. Do you see that?
A Yes.
Q And it states here that Mr. Thayer, quote: Did not agree with Don Uzzi regarding the company's approach to accelerate sales and income.
Do you know what the reference there to accelerating sales and income is?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Well, I don't know what Mr. Sinclair would be talking about, but the company had what was called the early buy program, which would --

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

MR. MOSCATO: Well, Don, the question was what was Mr. Sinclair talking about. I think that's a fair interpretation of the question.
MR. JOHNSON: Well, let me strike it and give you a new one and see if we're all on the same page.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q When you wrote this phrase, "accelerate sales and income," did you have in mind what was being referred to?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't recall.
Q At any point did you gain information leading you to believe that the company had sales practices that could potentially accelerate the recognition of income into a quarter earlier than it otherwise would be recognized?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A The company had an early buy program which potentially could accelerate sales into earlier quarters. Those sales still may be appropriate under generally accepted accounting principals, but would accelerate those sales. And there was disclosures in the company's originally filed form 10 K for the 1997 year indicating that there were, that this early buy program did exist.

Q Putting aside the accounting propriety of accelerated recognition of income, did you gain any understanding as to why Mr. Thayer disagreed with the approach to accelerate sales and income?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I mean, no, I don't have any specific knowledge of what his concern was.
Q The next three bullet points underneath the Dixon Thayer bullet point, if you'd look at those for me for a second. And I'll read them, just for the record:
There was an atmosphere of constant pressure to make the numbers, parenthesis, revenue and earnings per share, close parenthesis.
Next bullet point: There was a push to make sales or lose your job.
Next bullet point: The company was run on a short-term basis.
Can you tell me, Mr. Denkhaus, why you thought that was information that ought to be included in your memorandum concerning your interview with Kyle Sinclair?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A For the reasons I already stated, that if there were sales that were potentially not meeting generally accepted accounting principles that were recorded in earlier period, then we'd have to look at those to see if they should be subject to restatement. So there was a concern about sales, as well as earnings, so there could be impact of items other than revenue that affect the earnings of the company.

Q Doesn't every public company have pressure to make numbers?
MR. MOSCATO: I object to that, but do your best, Don.
THE WITNESS: Well, that's a pretty general statement.
MR. JOHNSON: Sure.
THE WITNESS: When you say "every company" --
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Every public company.
A I don't know if every public company. There are some companies that are public that, you know, are not -- are not under pressure to make numbers, because maybe they're in a development stage or whatever, so I don't know if I could make that statement as emphatically as do you.
Q That's fine.

I guess what I'm getting at is did you find something potentially out of the ordinary with respect to the pressures that you were hearing about at Sunbeam.
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A In my opinion, I did. I found that there was a very strong emphasis on revenue and earnings, and it came from the top of the organization. And just about all of the people that would be involved in the financial statements or in top management seemed to feel that pressure, and talk about it, both in these formal interviews and outside of the formal interviews. So I thought that was something that I hadn't experienced before.
Q And at that point in time you'd been an auditing professional for almost 30 years?
A I guess it would be 28 years at that time.
Q Now, in connection with the additional procedures, did you come across any information indicating that Morgan Stanley had ever tried to contact Kyle Sinclair?
A No.
Q Look at tab eight for me. It's one of the longer memoranda.
MR. MOSCATO: Are you ready, Don?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

THE WITNESS: Ready.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q For the record, tab eight is comprised of a document bearing the Bates stamp CPH 62588 through 62602.
Mr. Denkhaus, this is a memorandum that you prepared, with attachments, on July 24, 1998. Is that correct?
A It's a six-page memorandum that I prepared, and then there are attachments to that memorandum that I did not prepare.
Q Okay. Thank you.
And this is an interview summary of Deborah McDonald. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q Do you know what Ms. McDonald's title was at Sunbeam?
A I don't recall. I was just looking to see it might be here in this memorandum, but I don't recall it.
Q I didn't see it, which is why I was asking.
Do you have a sense of what her job responsibilities were at Sunbeam in the '97, '98 time frame?
A Only what's indicated here in the second and third bullet point, fourth bullet point, on CPH 62588.

Q You're referring to the text that she was put in charge of corporate planning, which included forecasting, budgeting, et cetera?
A Yes.
Q If you could flip for me to the fourth page of your memorandum, which has the Bates stamp CPH 62591, and take a second to read that page, I'm going to ask about actually both that page and the next page in some detail.
A Okay.
Q The first bullet point on page 62591 concerns the first quarter 1998 sales forecast. Do you see that?
A Yes.
Q And in connection with your interview with Ms. McDonald, you obtained information that she believed those projections could not be made? Is that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Whatever is written here in the third bullet point is the exact words that would be my -- the way I wrote it.
Q That third bullet point, you're referring to the one that states, quote: There was no way the company could ever make $2.20 per share for 1998?

A Yes.
Q Under the next bullet point, major bullet point, which is entitled, "March 18, 1998, conference call prior to the March 19 press release," I believe you testified earlier that to your knowledge Andersen did not see that press release before it went out. Is that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A That's my understanding.
Q The last sub bullet point there states, quote: There was no discussion of profit margin or first quarter 1998 earnings per share during this conference call.
Do you see that?
A Yes.
Q The conference call that is being referred to there is a conference call involving Morgan Stanley, Morgan Stanley's lawyers, Mr. Fannin, Mr. Uzzi. Is that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Yes. I mean, that's what's written here.
Q Do you recall asking Ms. McDonald whether she had a reaction to the fact that there was no discussion concerning first quarter 1998 EPS?

A No.
Q Did you have a reaction to obtaining information that that subject wasn't discussed?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't recollect any reaction to that.
Q Can you tell me why you thought that was information that warranted inclusion in your memorandum, which is tab eight of Exhibit 21?
A I can't recall specifics on that. There are things throughout the memorandum that were indicated during the interviews that would have been potentially noted, because they were discussed at the interview, that we put into the memorandum that really have no direct bearing on the additional procedures that we did.
Q And this particular bullet point, sitting here today, you can't tell one way or the other whether that's a bullet point that is or is not of potential significance to the additional procedures?
A I don't have any recollection one way or the other.
Q The next major bullet point indicates that Ms. McDonald provided information to the effect that, quote: Sales were being made at a loss or low margin, just to make the first quarter 1998 sales projections.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

MR. MOSCATO: I object. It says "some sales."
MR. JOHNSON: Oh, okay. Thank you. Let me make a clean record.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q I'll just read the bullet point. The bullet point states, quote: McDonald indicated some sales were being made at a loss or low margin, just to make the first quarter 1998 sales projections.
Can you tell me why that bullet point was included in your interview summary?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Because it could potentially impact the, both the revenue and potentially the net income of the company indicating that they're trying to sell goods at a loss, and that could impact the accounting so that there should be recognition of that loss that might affect not only those goods but other goods still in inventory, and then the implication if the company is trying to make revenue numbers, how are they going to make the net income by selling at a low margin or loss. So there could be potential for understatement of expenses that could affect net income.
Q The last bullet point on this page, 62591, indicates that Ms. McDonald disagreed with the statement on the press release that the company would be able to match first quarter 1997 revenue and earnings. Do you see that?

A Yes.
Q Did you ever learn why Ms. McDonald didn't express her disagreement to that press release within the company?
MR. MOSCATO: Why she didn't?
MR. JOHNSON: Right.
MR. MOSCATO: I object.
THE WITNESS: I don't recall whether she did or did not express her concern.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Flip over to the next page for me. The first major bullet point states, quote: McDonald indicated that the only contact the investment bankers, parenthesis, Morgan Stanley, close parenthesis, had with the company was through Kersh and Goudis.
Who was Mr. Goudis?
A I believe he was the chief operating officer at a point in time, in maybe 1997. I don't know when he left the company, but he was not there when I did any of the procedures.
MR. MOSCATO: Don, was he chief operating officer or was he investor relations guy?

THE WITNESS: Your recollection --
MR. MOSCATO: I'm just asking.
THE WITNESS: No, I think your recollection may be better than mine. I think I am confusing that.
I am sorry. I am confusing that with Mr. Uzzi, who was the chief operating officer. So I believe you are correct. I think he was investor relations.
MR. JOHNSON: Let me make a clean record so there's no objection of a nonparty asking a question.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Do you have a recollection, refreshed by your counsel, or not, as to what Mr. Goudis' job function was?
A Well, Mr. Goudis, I believe, was no longer with the company when I was involved there, so I'm not sure, but my recollection was that he was involved in investment -- investor relations.
Q Did you have any reaction to Ms. McDonald's statement that Morgan Stanley had contacts only with Kersh and Goudis?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't recall any reaction, or I don't recall if I had a reaction.

Q Now, under that major bullet there's three small bullets, if you would read those for me.
A Read them into the record or just read them?
Q Just read them to yourself.
MR. MOSCATO: Just read them to yourself.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Again, why was this information that was potentially pertinent to your additional procedures?
MR. MOSCATO: Objection.
A As I indicated before, in reading this I'm not sure this was pertinent to our additional procedures, but was information that we learned during the interview with Debra McDonald, and therefore documented.
Q Did you have any concern or reaction relating to the information Ms. McDonald provided that's reflected in these three sub bullet points?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't know that I recall any specific reaction, other than this is consistent with the other information about potential for aggressive potentially improper revenue recognition or understatement of expenses that relates to the financial statements.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

This information relates to projected future financial information, but just the statements are consistent in terms of potential management of revenue and expenses.

Q Did you, as part of the additional procedures, ever come across any information indicating how Morgan Stanley came to use a dollar eighty per share as part of their projection?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A No.

Q Under the second major bullet point on 62592 there's a sub bullet point that states, quote: She was never asked about the results for the first quarter of 1998.

Did you ask Ms. McDonald whether she was surprised that she was never asked for the results of the first quarter of 1998?

A I don't recall asking her that.

Q Do you recall her saying that she was surprised that no one asked her that information?

A I believe the reason that I put this in the interview notes is because of her reaction, but I don't specifically -- I don't remember asking her any follow-up questions regarding that topic.

Q But your perception, having interviewed her, was that this was information which she believed was significant?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A I don't know how significant she thought it was. She brought it to our attention, I documented it in the memorandum.

Q And no follow-up questions with her?

A To the best of my recollection, no follow-up questions.

Q Did you yourself draw any conclusions as to Sunbeam's projections for 1998, based on what you'd learned from Ms. McDonald?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A No, I did not really do any work relating to the projections for 1998.

Q Did you draw the conclusion at least that Ms. McDonald wasn't behind the projections for 1998?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A I believe that's what she indicated and is documented in this memorandum.

Q In connection with the information you were obtaining from Ms. McDonald, did you form any opinions as to who, if anyone, within the company was behind the company's 1998 projections?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

MR. MOSCATO: I'm sorry. I don't know exactly what you mean by "behind." I don't know if Don knows.

If you know what he means.

Do you mean who recreated them, who was pushing --

MR. JOHNSON: That's a good objection. Thank you. Let me rephrase the question.

BY MR. JOHNSON:

Q Based on information you were obtaining from Ms. McDonald, did you form any opinions as to who within the company was supporting the projections that the company was releasing?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A I believe Mr. Kersh, the chief financial officer, would have been the one who had responsibility for the overall company projections. I believe that's consistent with the interview notes.

Q Anybody besides Mr. Kersh?

A I don't know Mr. Dunlap's -- I'm sure was, approved of whatever the results were in those projections, but I don't know what involvement he had with the preparation of any projections.

Q Let's skip ahead here to tab 13. Tab 13 of CPH Exhibit 21 is a two-page document, with Bates stamp

CPH 62642 through 62643.

Mr. Denkhaus, is this document a memorandum prepared by Phil Harlow concerning an interview by Mr. Harlow, you and others of Tom Hartschorne?

A Yes.

Q And Mr. Hartschorne was in charge of internal auditing at Sunbeam. Is that correct?

A Yes.

Q Under the heading "Bill and Hold," first, for the record, can you tell us what bill and hold refers to there?

A Yes. Bill and hold refers to making sales to a customer where the actual goods are retained by the seller and under the seller's control to be shipped at a later date to the customer pursuant to the customer's order.

Q The second bullet point under the "Bill and Hold" heading states: Other than being a business problem, Mr. Hartschorne doesn't see anything wrong from an accounting standpoint.

Do you know what the business problem was that Mr. Hartschorne recognized with respect to the bill and hold sales?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A I can't recall anything specific. I could

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

speculate, but I don't want to do that, so I'm just --
MR. MOSCATO: I don't want you to.
Q No one wants you to speculate.
A Okay.
Q Mr. Hartschorne did indicate his view that bill and hold could hurt subsequent sales for the company. Is that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't see that here. Am I missing something?
Q Let me get you a more precise question.
A Okay.
Q If you look a little further down under the topic "Accelerated Shipping Dates."
MR. MOSCATO: I like this. "He chanted his description." I wish I had been there.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Under the "Accelerated Shipping Dates" heading, it states, quote: Tom thought that this complied with GAAP but thought it hurt subsequent sales.
Is this the issue that we talked about earlier, about accelerating sales and revenue?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A It's a sub component of acceleration of sales and revenues. It relates to a purchase order that the company might have got that said I'd like to have the goods shipped on January 10th, and instead they shipped them on December 31st, and accelerated the sales.

Q In the example you give, that would also permit recognition in the fourth quarter as opposed to the first quarter. Is that correct?
A I don't know if GAAP is clear as to that. Usually the revenue recognition is triggered by the shipment of the goods, so under that scenario, the revenue would be properly recognized.
Q Let me ask something less esoteric for you then. In the example you gave, Sunbeam's practice at the time was to record a sale in the fourth quarter rather than in the first quarter. Is that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
MR. MOSCATO: I object.
THE WITNESS: In the example I just gave you, that would result in a sale in the fourth quarter versus the first quarter. That's what I stated.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q And Mr. Hartschorne's view was that that practice would then hurt you first quarter sales using the dates in your example?

MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Yes. It's accelerated the sales by one quarter. And do more sales in the first quarter, it would hurt the overall results the first quarter.
Q As part of the additional procedure, did you come across any information indicating that Morgan Stanley had attempted to contact Mr. Hartschorne at any time?
A No.
Q Making progress here. Tab 18 of Exhibit 21. If you could look at that for me.
MR. MOSCATO: 18?
MR. JOHNSON: Yes.
MR. MOSCATO: This is Chuck Myers?
MR. JOHNSON: Exactly.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q A couple of questions on the second page of this document. This document bears, it's a two-page document, it bears Bates state CPH 62656 and 62657. I recognize that you are not the author, nor a noted participant in the interview described in this two-page document. That said, do you recall reviewing this memorandum in your capacity as leading the additional procedures?
A I did review it. I don't have any specific recollections of that review.

Q You don't remember what day it was or where you were or any of that type information?
A That's true.
Q Did you take note of Mr. Myers' quantification of the effect of bill and hold as stated in the last bullet point on the second page, CPH 62657?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A We had done extensive procedures relating to bill and hold, and did our own independent analysis, so I don't really know that I specifically gave thought to that, the numbers stated at the bottom of that second page of the interview notes.
Q As you sit here today, do you have any view on whether Mr. Myers' estimate that 18 to 20 million dollars in sales were moved from '98 to '97 is accurate?
A I don't have recollection of those numbers.
Q Just above the "Bill and Hold" line on that same page, 62657, there's a bullet point that reads, quote: Myers knew that 1998 sales goal was not attainable in December -- and then something is stricken, and written in by hand -- 1997. He indicated that all salespeople knew.
As part of the additional procedures, did you come across any salespeople who believed that the 1998 sales goals were attainable?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

MS. BROWN: Objection.
A We didn't conduct extensive interviews with salespeople, but I don't have any knowledge of anybody that did or did not say that.
Q Did you come across any information indicating that Morgan Stanley had tried to contact Mr. Myers in connection with any of its work?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A No.
Q We can skip over to tab 19 of Exhibit 21. This is the interview of Lee Griffith. Tab 19 of Exhibit 21 is Bates stamped CPH 62659 through 62666. This is a memorandum that you prepared, Mr. Denkhaus?
A Yes.
Q And it's concerning your interview with Lee Griffith. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q And Mr. Griffith was the vice-president of sales at Sunbeam. Is that right?
A Yes.
Q If you flip to what is the sixth page of your memorandum. The initial numbering is poorly copied, and I apologize for that. It's Bates page 62664. The last dash mark on that page, which is under the "M Block" heading -- actually, let's back up. What does M Block refer to?

A M Block was one of the customers of Sunbeam.
Q The last bullet point states, dash, "Griffith said he learned about the guaranteed sale in March or April of 1998."
MS. BROWN: Objection. Not what it says.
MR. JOHNSON: Oh, I'm sorry. I'm inserting words.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q It states, dash, "Griffith said he learned about the guaranteed in March or April 1998."
Did you inadvertently omit a word there when you drafted this memorandum?
A Yes. It should have been guaranteed sales.
Q Thank you.
The bullet continues: This sale and other guaranteed sales were made because of tremendous pressure put on the salesmen to make the budgeted sales numbers.
Do you know which quarters the guaranteed sales referred to there occurred in?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A The M Block sale was during the fourth quarter of 1997. There may have been some sales during the first quarter, but I don't recall that. There were sales during the fourth quarter.

Q Do you have a recollection as to any other guaranteed sales, when they occurred?
A There were a number of guaranteed sales. They ended up as part of our restatement adjustments to the extent that the company hadn't already made adjustments. I think there was one guaranteed sale they did actually make an adjustment for.
Q So the quarters in which those guaranteed sales were initially recognized would be reflected in your restatement recommendations?
A Yes.
Q Turn to the last page of your memorandum, which is Bates 62666. The second-to-last bullet point states: On November 20, 1996, Griffith told Uzzi that he did not think the company could achieve its fourth quarter 1997 sales budget.
Should that be in reference to November 20, 1997?
A In looking at it now it doesn't make sense to be 1996. It seemed 1997 -- although in reading this out of context, I have no idea what that date refers to, why Mr. Griffith made reference to that particular date.

Q But sitting here now you think it's probably a typo, it should be '97, not '96?
A That would be my best judgment.
Q Under the last bullet point there are three numbered paragraphs. Do you see those?
A Yes.
Q The last bullet point refers to the company's problems in achieving 1998 sales. Under numbered paragraph one, Mr. Griffith indicates that between 50 and 60 million dollars in revenue was recognized in 1997, resulting in a loss of 1998 sales.
Do you see what?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Yes.
Q As you sit here, do you have any opinion as to whether Mr. Griffith's estimate of 50 to 60 million dollars in revenue was accurate?
A Not specifically. It's in the magnitude of being correct. I think there was some disclosure even in the originally filed financial statements as to the amount of the so-called early buy program.
Q If you could move to tab 21 for me. Tab 21 of Exhibit 21 is Bates stamped 62672 through 62677. And this document concerns the interview of Bill

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Bloomfield.
Do you see that, Mr. Denkhaus?
A Yes.
Q This interview memo was neither authored by you nor does it refer to an interview in which you participated. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q Do you recall reviewing this memo in connection with leading the additional procedures?
A In a very indirect way I remember looking at this memo, but how much time or the circumstances or when it occurred I don't recall.
Q On the second page of this memorandum -- 62673 is the Bates stamp -- right in the middle of the page it states: The company was managed based on EPS targets.
Do you see that?
A Yes.
Q Had you heard that information from other employees besides Mr. Bloomfield?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Well, first of all, I didn't hear it from Mr. Bloomfield. I wasn't at the interview. And I'm not sure exactly what that statement says, "The company was managed based on EPS targets." So I find that wording somewhat ambiguous to me.

Q Looking a little further up, on that same page, there's a statement, quote: Don Uzzi's philosophy, dash, load the pipeline, and we'll deal with the customers later.
What does "the pipeline" refer to there?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
MR. MOSCATO: If you know, Don.
THE WITNESS: Well, "pipeline" refers to the sales that were being recorded to a customer, and I guess the pipeline would be the continual sales to a particular customer. And if they loaded it, meaning they would front-end load the stream of sales so they got earlier revenue recognition.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q At the bottom of that page, 62673, and indeed throughout this memo, there's references to pulling forward. Is that what you've just referred to there? In other words, is it what we've talked about already today, the acceleration of sales?
A The acceleration of sales, including early buys which were referred to as bill and hold, the acceleration of the date of -- when the customer asked for receipt, shipping earlier than that, and potentially other mechanisms used by the company to accelerate sales.

Q And then on the last page of this memorandum, at Bates 62677, the top states: As early as September 1997 the sales org knew that the stores were stuffed with product; e.g., Wal-Mart had 42 weeks of product.
This is an example of loading the pipeline that we were just talking about?
MR. MOSCATO: Objection.
MS. BROWN: Objection.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Is that correct?
A That's what I would interpret this to mean.
Q Now, as part of the additional procedures, did you come across any information indicating that Morgan Stanley had attempted to contact Bill Bloomfield in connection with its work?
A No.
MS. BROWN: Objection.
Q Tab 25, if you could. Tab 25 of Exhibit 21. And I'm just going to ask about the last page, if you want to take a look at that.
For the record, tab 25 of Exhibit 21 bears the Bates stamp CPH 62688 through 62691.

MR. MOSCATO: Okay. Are you there, Don?
THE WITNESS: Yeah.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q This is a memorandum written by Mr. Pastrana to the files, dated August 30, 1998, concerning an interview with Kyle Kaiser. Is this what this document appears to be?
A Yes.
Q And, again, this is one of the memoranda that you neither authored, nor does it concern an interview in which you participated. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q But it's your belief that you would have, at least in some manner, reviewed this memorandum in connection with leading the additional procedures?
A Yes.
Q In the middle of the last page of this memorandum, which is Bates stamped 62691, there's a sentence -- this is under the heading, quote, pressure to make sales numbers at end of Q1 98 -- there's a sentence that states: They, parenthesis, top management, close parenthesis, were planning to sell the company. Anyone hired after October of 1996 was told this is an 18-month deal, and when we sell, you will be fully vested.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Do you know what the reference to "an 18-month deal" is in this memorandum?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A When Al Dunlap was brought into the company, it's my understanding that he was to turn around and improve the results of the company, then he would most likely sell the company. That's what they had determined was an 18-month time frame in order to accomplish that.
Q The next bit of text provides, in quotes: Nobody would put up with this bull if not for the options.
When you reviewed this memorandum, did you have any sense of what Mr. Kaiser was referring to when he used the phrase "this bull"?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
MR. MOSCATO: I object. That calls for speculation.
THE WITNESS: Yeah, I don't know what that specifically refers to.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Did you have a general sense of what he was talking about?
MR. MOSCATO: Same objection.
MS. BROWN: Objection.

A I wasn't at the interview, so I really can't comment.
Q Were you confused by this statement in the memorandum?
MR. MOSCATO: Objection.
A I wasn't confused. A lot of people were not happy with Al Dunlap's management style, so there was -- this statement would not be inconsistent with other statements I heard from others about management, but I don't know what -- whether Mr. Kaiser is referring to that or not, so I wasn't concerned about this statement when I saw it.
Q As part of the additional procedures, did you come across any information indicating that Morgan Stanley had attempted to contact Mr. Kaiser as part of the work it was performing?
A I'm not aware of any.
(Recess taken.)
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Mr. Denkhaus, if I could have you turn to tab 26 of Exhibit 21. It's the interview with -- Scott Yales' memorandum.
For the record, tab 26 of Exhibit 21 bears the Bates stamp CPH 62693 through 62697.
Mr. Denkhaus, does this appear to be a memorandum authored by Denus Pastrana on September 21-one, 1998, concerning an interview with Scott Yales?

A Yes.
Q And you did not participate in that interview, did you?
A That's correct, I did not.
Q I thought you indicated earlier that two Andersen people attended each of the interviews. Is that just a general practice or --
A There were a number of interviews. They were divided up. The more important ones were the ones that I was referring to that generally had two Andersen personnel, and generally Sunbeam's counsel wanted to also attend those interviews. The -- but there were some other interviews, such as this one, that there was only one person attending, an Arthur Andersen representative.
Q Did you review this memorandum, at least to some degree, as part of leading the additional procedures?
A Yes.
Q If you'd look at the last page of the memorandum, before the single-page attachment, under the heading "1998 Acquisitions," there are eight numbered paragraphs. Paragraphs five and six refer to a schedule for the first quarter forecast. Are you familiar with the schedule referred to there?

MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I remember seeing some schedules in connection with the work. There were supportive of the company's press release, but I don't have specific recollections of what schedule he's referring to.
Q Paragraph No. 6, the schedule was, quote, absolutely, close quote, a reach.
Did you have any reaction to that statement when you reviewed this memorandum in connection with the additional procedures?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't have any specific recollection, but this is dealing with projections, and we were dealing with reviewing the actual reported results.
Q Now, in connection with the additional procedures, did you come across any information indicating that Morgan Stanley had tried to contact Mr. Yales in connection with this Morgan Stanley's work?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A No.
Q If you would jump up to tab 78 of Exhibit 21

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

for me, please. Tab 78 of Exhibit 21 is a two-page document, bearing Bates stamp 62724 through 62725.

Could you identify this document for me, Mr. Denkhaus?

A Yes. This is a copy of a memorandum that was prepared by Phil Harlow, summarizing the interview that Mr. Harlow and myself and Rita Gordon conducted with Dixon Thayer on August 6, 1998.

Q And you conducted that interview by telephone. Is that correct?

A Yes.

Q The last bullet point on the first page states that Mr. Thayer was at Scott Paper. Was there any particular reason why that fact was noted in this memorandum?

A Well, the significance of Scott Paper is that's where Al Dunlap had worked prior to coming to Sunbeam.

Q In the same bullet point it stated that the approach at Sunbeam was, quote, sell the company, close quote. Is that part and parcel of the testimony you've already given as to the expectation that the company would be sold within 18 months of Mr. Dunlap starting?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A That would be my understanding of what he was referring to.

Q And then turning over to the next page, the top bullet point states, quote: New hires were told that the company would be sold by December 1997, and when it didn't happen, that is when games with numbers began.

Mr. Thayer is referring to financial statement fraud when he's referring to games with numbers? Is that correct?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

MR. MOSCATO: Objection.

A I'm not sure what Mr. Thayer was referring to. It doesn't necessarily mean financial statement fraud. It may refer to the sales policies that we've been talking about, but I don't -- can't really comment exactly what he was referring to.

Q Do you remember Mr. Thayer making a statement to the effect that games with numbers began during your interview with him?

A I don't have any recollection of that specific statement.

Q Did you come across any information as part of the additional procedures to indicate that Morgan Stanley had ever tried to contact Mr. Thayer in connection with the work that Morgan Stanley is performing?

A No.

Q If you could go to tab 80 for me, which you can tell is the last tab. For the record, could you tell us what tab 80 of Exhibit 21 is?

A It's a copy of a memorandum that Phil Harlow prepared documenting the interview that Mr. Harlow, myself and Brian Loughman conducted with Bob Gluck on July 9, 1998.

Q It bears the Bates stamp CPH 62730 through 62733.

I believe you previously testified that Mr. Gluck was the corporate comptroller of Sunbeam. Is that correct?

A Yes.

Q If you go to the second page of this memorandum for me. Five bullet points up from the bottom there's a bullet point that reads: The company had a 20 percent sales growth in an industry with only three, hyphen, four percent growth per year, dash, maybe retail inventories were being built up.

What was Mr. Gluck referring to there?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A My recollection is that Mr. Gluck was referring to the -- I think we said the filling the pipeline. It's also referred to as channel stuffing, or some other means of which sales are accelerated, and -- to the customers, and the customer inventories, because of whatever incentives are given to them, are built up to unusually high levels, meaning in the future the sales will be less.

Q And on the last page of this memo, Bates 62733, the three bullets up from the bottom, it's stated: Domestic sales are down 30 percent on year-to-date sales due to product problems and pipeline might have been filled.

The reference to "pipeline might have been filled," that's just what you were talking about with respect to channel stuffing?

A Yes.

Q So is it fair to say that during the course of the additional procedures Arthur Andersen obtained information that there was intense pressure on Sunbeam's sales force to make sales numbers?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A Yes.

Q And did you also obtain information to the effect that Sunbeam's earnings per share were monitored on a daily basis?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

MS. BROWN: Objection.
A No, I don't believe I said that. I said that at the end of the fourth quarter I was aware of a process that included monitoring of the earnings per share. I don't know about any procedure to do it on a daily basis. Even at the end of the quarter it may have been not every day, but there was a process.
Q Did you, as part of the additional procedures, obtain information indicating that many Sunbeam employees believed that Sunbeam's growth was not sustainable into 1998?
A Yes. As indicated in some of those memorandums.
Q And you also obtained information as part of additional procedures that many Sunbeam employees believed the company was being positioned for sale?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A Yes. In 1997, perhaps -- perhaps into early 1998, but -- but certainly in '97 we had learned that.
MR. JOHNSON: I want to mark what will be CPH Exhibit 22.
(Deposition Exhibit No. CPH 22 was marked for identification.)
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Sir, have you ever seen Exhibit 22 before?

A Yes.
Q Could you identify what that is for the record?
A Yes. This is a report that Arthur Andersen drafted to summarize the restatement adjustments, and it was reviewed with company management and presented to the board of directors of Sunbeam Corporation.
Q And the document, for the record, has Bates stamped CPH 84462 through 84532.
If you would turn to the third page of this document, page 84464. Did you sign "Arthur Andersen LLP" to this document?
A Yes.
Q We've touched on briefly already today quantification of the sales that were accelerated up potentially into the fourth quarter of '97. Looking at this document, is that information reflected somewhere?
I guess a slightly more precise question is is that information reflected on page 9 of the report, which has Bates stamp CPH 84476?
A The page you refer to would show the adjustments made to revenue recorded during each of the quarters, starting with the fourth quarter of '96 through the first quarter of 1998, that were improperly recorded in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

There is probably additional revenue that was accelerated and recorded in the company's books and records that met generally accepted accounting --
Q Meaning it didn't require adjustment?
A Correct. Did not require adjustment, therefore is not reflected on this schedule.
Q Items 1 through 8, or issues 1 through 8 on that page, as I read this, led to a proposed adjustment of approximately $21 million out of the fourth quarter of 1997. Is that correct?
A Could you clarify what you're referring to?
Q Sure.
A I don't see that number.
Q Yeah. It's sloppy math, which I'm sure makes you uncomfortable.
I'm just trying to make sure I understand this page correctly. In the far left column there are designated issues, issue numbers, and I'm referring to issues one through eight. And as I understand this page, Arthur Andersen is proposing that Sunbeam make adjustments for the fourth quarter of '97 on those issues to reduce net income in the amount of approximately $21 million. That is 16.484 million plus 4.89 million. Is that correct?

A That is correct for the effect on that -- I'll say the effect on pretax income of guaranteed and consignment sales and bill and hold sales. Some of these other items affect sales. And previously on your question you were referring to sales, and the schedule that you're currently looking at is -- shows the impact on net income. Three pages later there's a schedule that shows the impact on revenue of the restatement adjustments.
Q And that, you're referring to CPH 84478?
A Yes.
Q And, again, looking just at issues one through eight, for the fourth quarter of '97, the revenue adjustment would be the sum of 35.773 million and 29.340 million?
A Yes.
Q So that's about $65 million in a downward adjustment for fourth quarter '97 revenue on issues one through eight?
A Yes.
Q Now, did you, as part of the additional procedures, come to the conclusion that any Sunbeam executives had lied to Arthur Andersen during Arthur Andersen's auditing processes?
A My recollection was -- and I was not part of the original audit, so you're asking about whether there was misrepresentations or lying to some of our original audit team.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q Correct.
A I believe some of our audit team thinks that there was, either they were misled or lied to by certain members of management, but I don't have -- I think anything I would say would be potentially mischaracterizing their thoughts.
Q Did you yourself, putting aside what your colleagues may have told you as to their own opinions, did you form any opinions yourself as to whether any Sunbeam employees lied to Arthur Andersen in connection with audit procedures?
A In my belief, there was some instances where we were given incorrect information or certainly not provided adequate answers to inquiries that we made.
MR. MOSCATO: Don, when you say "we," you're talking about the original audit team?
THE WITNESS: The original audit team.
MR. JOHNSON: Exactly.
THE WITNESS: You asked my opinion.
MR. JOHNSON: Exactly.
That's a good clarification, counsel. We are on the same page, which is during the original audit procedures.

BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q That obviously raises another question. During the additional procedures, in which you were involved, do you know of any Sunbeam executives that lied to Arthur Andersen in connection with the additional procedures?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A I don't recall anybody that lied to us during the additional procedures.
Q Now, switching back to the original procedures, and I understand you weren't involved in those, did any of the Arthur Andersen auditors who were involved in the original procedures ever identify any members of Sunbeam management who provided false information to Andersen during the original audit procedures?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Can I hear that question again?
(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)
THE WITNESS: Is your question did they identify those during the original audit?
MR. JOHNSON: No. At any time did they express to you their view that Andersen had been lied to during the original audit procedures.

THE WITNESS: As I said, I already indicated, there are members of our team that think that they were lied to in connection with the original audit, but they weren't aware of it at the time of the original audit.
MR. JOHNSON: I understand that.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Which members of your team, that is which Arthur Andersen auditors, believed they were lied to in connection with the original procedures?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
MR. MOSCATO: I think the only fair way of posing that question and answering it is which of them ever told you that. Don, which ones ever told you that? Don't try to read minds.
MR. JOHNSON: Yes. Let's break it down a little bit. I think that's a good point.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Mr. Bornstein was involved in the original audit procedures. Is that correct?
A Yes.

Q Has Mr. Bornstein ever said to you that he was lied to by a Sunbeam employee in connection with the original audit procedures?
A Yes.
Q Did he identify which Sunbeam employees lied to him?
A My recollection is that his concern dealt with certain issues relating to dealing with Bob Gluck and with Al LeFevre, and there may have been others, but I never really sat down and asked that particular question. That was not the purpose of the work I was doing, to cover who lied to what, but to uncover the truth and get the financial statements as correct as possible.
Q Mr. Pastrana worked on the original audit procedures too. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q Did Mr. Pastrana ever indicate to you that he had been provided false information by any Sunbeam employee in connection with the original audit procedures?
A I don't recall.
Q How about Mr. Harlow? He worked on the original audit procedures. Is that correct?
A Yes.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q And did Mr. Harlow ever indicate to you that Sunbeam employees had provided him false information in connection with the original audit procedures?
A I don't recall.
Q Did any Andersen auditor indicate to you a view that any other specific Sunbeam employee had provided false information aside from what Mr. Bornstein said about Gluck and LeFevre?
A As I said, there may have been others. I don't have any specific recollection at this time.
MR. JOHNSON: Let's mark Exhibit 23.
(Deposition Exhibit No. CPH 23 was marked for identification.)
MR. MOSCATO: Are you ready?
MR. JOHNSON: Yes.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Mr. Denkhaus, I've given you a document that's been marked CPH 23. It bears the Bates stamp CPH 1184885 through CPH 1184905. Could you identify that document for the record?
A It appears to be copies of certain of our Sunbeam work papers from the original December 28, 1997 audit.
Q I want to focus on a portion of this document, if I could, beginning at page CPH 1184891. The top of this page states "Sunbeam SMART A: 12/28/97." What does that refer to?

A Yeah. The -- that page is the index page to the form that follows that. The SMART form was -- I can't remember what the acronym stands for, but was our risk management tool to identify and rate various audit risks related to audit engagements, not specifically Sunbeam. It was a firm-wide audit tool. And the "A: 12/28/97" refers to the audit date of December 28, 1997.
Q And you signed this document at page 1184895. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q As did Messrs. Harlow and Pruitt?
A Yes.
Q Now, as I understand this form, Sunbeam was given an overall risk assessment of high. Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q And they've been given the same overall risk assessment of high for the prior year. Is that also correct?
A Yes.
Q Now, if you turn to page 8 of this document, which is Bates stamped CPH 1184899, this is in the section called "Business Fraud Risk." Do you see that?

A Yes.
Q There's a line numbered eight on the bottom of this page, that states: Overly aggressive revenue or earnings targets, significant.
Significant is the highest risk that can be assigned in this category. Is that correct?
A I know we had an overall maximum risk. I don't know if this particular category can be a maximum or significant. I don't recall.
Q I'm going to represent for the record that you, in your June 2nd, '99 testimony, on page 55, at line 15 and 16, testified that significant -- quote, my understanding is significant is the highest category, in reference to that page.
I'd be happy to get the transcript out if you'd like me to. The question is do you have any reason to believe that your prior testimony was incorrect on that point.
A No.
Q Let's go two pages up, page 10 of this form, Bates CPH 1184901. This section is entitled "Financial Statement Misstatement Risk." Is that correct?
A Yes.
Q What is the overall assessment that Arthur

Andersen assigned to this category?
A Looks like significant minus, minus sign.
Q And in your experience at Andersen, was that an unusual risk assessment for a public company?
A I don't recall what percentage -- I don't know that I ever did know -- what percentage of our clients fell into that category of our public companies, but it -- your question is is it unusual. I don't know that it would be that unusual to have a significant financial statement risk for a public company. It was not the norm.
Q So it's not common, a common risk assessment?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A It would not be the norm or the median of the risk assessments.
Q If you could flip over to page 12 of the report, which is Bates stamped CPH 1184903. Paragraph No. 5 poses the question: Does the company have a high market risk profile relative to its industry peers, parenthesis, e.g., volatile stock price, high price earnings or other multiples, high insider sales, high short selling.
And it looks like you've completed this form with an answer of yes to that question. Do I understand that correctly?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

11553

A That's correct.
Q Do you have any recollection today of who the industry peers were that are referred to in this form?
A No, I don't have any recollection.
Q Do you know whether they were even appliance companies, or is it some other criteria that would be used?
A I don't know. Don't recall.
Q Now, as a result of the risk assessment, was it Arthur Andersen's professional judgment that some additional procedures might be appropriate as part of the auditing of the company?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
Q I'm referring back to the signature page, which is page 4, or Bates stamp 1184895.
A Yes. This form refers to three additional procedures. There obviously may have been others, but there are three that are referred to on the form, on this page 4 of the form.
Q So as I understand this, and let me know if I've got this wrong, because of the risk classifications, these additional procedures were viewed as appropriate for Andersen to conduct? Is that what this states?
MS. BROWN: Objection.

MR. MOSCATO: Objection.
THE WITNESS: Can you read that back?
(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)
MR. MOSCATO: I object. It doesn't state that.
MR. JOHNSON: Let me strike the question. There were about three different subparts, among other problems with it.
BY MR. JOHNSON:
Q Why did Andersen deem it appropriate to engage in the three enumerated procedures that are listed on page 4?
A As a result of the, completing the SMART tool, we identified a number of risk areas, and the audit team felt that those risks in those areas could be reduced to an acceptable level by performing additional procedures in the three areas that are listed on this form.
MR. JOHNSON: Do you want to give me a second?
That's all I've got.
MS. BROWN: Do you want to continue, or do you want to take a break for lunch? I'm happy to power through.

(Discussion off the record.)
(Lunch recess was taken from 12:30 p.m. to 1:05 p.m.)
CROSS-EXAMINATION
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Mr. Denkhaus, I'm Zhonette Brown. I represent Morgan Stanley and Co., Incorporated. We'll continue, if you're prepared.
A I'm prepared.
Q You said you hadn't talked with Morgan Stanley lawyers prior to your deposition. Have you spoken with anyone representing Coleman parent and MAFCO prior to your deposition?
A No.
Q Have you ever been retained as an expert on a consultant for litigation?
A Yes.
Q In what case? More than once?
A Yes.
Q What's your area of expertise?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A Accounting and financial reporting. Some valuation issues.
Q Any others that you can recall?
A No.

Q Have you given deposition testimony as an expert?
A Yes.
Q Have you been admitted by a court as an expert?
A Yes.
Q How often that you recall?
A I haven't done it in ten or fifteen years, but probably at least, as an expert, at least a half dozen times.
Q And this is while you were employed at Arthur Andersen?
A Yes.
Q You were never retained by Sunbeam as an expert for litigation. Is that correct?
A That's correct.
Q You had no personal involvement with the 1996 or 1997 audit of Sunbeam. Correct?
A That's correct.
Q You had also no involvement related to Sunbeam's original filing of their 10 K for 1997. Is that correct?
A Correct.
Q Prior to June of 1998, did you have any communication with anyone from Morgan Stanley about any issue related to Sunbeam?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

014554

A No.
Q Prior to June of 1998, did you have any communication with anyone from Morgan Stanley Senior Funding regarding Sunbeam?
A No.
Q Prior to June 1998, did you have any communication with anyone from or representing Coleman Company regarding Sunbeam?
A No. Prior -- no. That's correct. Prior to June I did not.
Q And you had no involvement with Arthur Andersen's March 19, 1998 comfort letter. Is that correct?
A That's correct. Other than my responsibilities as the audit division head, but I don't recall any specific -- I didn't look at any of the documents, so there may have been something that somebody asked me about during the process, but I wasn't involved, nor did I -- charged no time to that account, so I don't believe I had any involvement. I don't recall any involvement.
Q And you don't have any specific recollection of anyone consulting with you about that?
A No, no, I don't.

Q Is that also true with regard to the March 25th, 1998 comfort letter?
A That's also correct, yes.
Q You had no involvement or consultation regarding Sunbeam's offering memoranda for their notes in March of 1998. Is that correct?
A That's correct.
Q Prior to June of 1998, had anyone expressed to you any concern regarding the accuracy of Sunbeam's financial statements?
A Not that I recall.
Q Prior to June of 1998, had anyone expressed any concern to you regarding Sunbeam's financial performance in 1998?
A Not that I recall.
Q Prior to June 1998, did you have any contact directly with Sunbeam personnel in regards to Arthur Andersen's work for Sunbeam?
A No.
MS. BROWN: This will be Morgan Stanley Exhibit 13.
(Deposition Exhibit No. MS 13 was marked for identification.)
BY MS. BROWN:
Q The court reporter has just handed you what's been marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 13. Take a second to look at it and tell me if you've ever seen this document before.

A I may have seen it, but I don't really have any recollection of this document.
Q For the record, Morgan Stanley Exhibit 13 is Bates stamped Morgan Stanley 27828 and 829, and it is a July 2nd, 1998 memo from Lawrence Bornstein to the file.
In the first paragraph --
MR. JOHNSON: Zhonette, sorry to interrupt. I also want to note for the record the memorandum refers to attachments that are not included with the exhibit. But subject to that, go ahead.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q In the first paragraph of Morgan Stanley Exhibit 13, it refers to the fact that Phil Harlow, engagement partner, discussed with Don Denkhaus, audit division head, that Morgan -- referring to Morgan Stanley -- was unwilling to sign a release letter, and Don stated it was not uncommon, and to proceed with the meeting, providing that the client was involved on the call.
Do you recall the conversation relating to that?

A Only in a very vague way. I don't have any specific recollection. In reading this I remember there was -- somebody asked me about, you know, the conference call, and I responded. But I don't really, other than that, I wouldn't have remembered it without reading this.
Q And do you now remember anything else about that conversation?
A Not a thing.
Q What sort of release is it that Arthur Andersen might seek before participating in due diligence?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
MR. MOSCATO: Yes, I object too. I don't know if there's anything in the record about Arthur Andersen engaging in due diligence.
MR. JOHNSON: My objection was to the type of release that might be sought.
Your counsel will advise you you can answer if you understand the question.
MR. MOSCATO: Thank you.
THE WITNESS: Arthur Andersen had a standard form release that when we attended due diligence meetings that we would request that the parties seeking due diligence would sign those forms. In some cases we would meet with the due diligence parties, in some cases we wouldn't. We'd make a decision. But we would -- our reference was to get the release letter that had been drafted by Andersen's -- I don't know, in-house or outside counsel.

014555

BY MS. BROWN:

Q What's the purpose of the release that Arthur Andersen would seek to have a party performing due diligence sign?

MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.

A The purpose would be to clarify the roles and responsibilities that Andersen had in that due diligence conversation. I don't remember the specifics of what the release said.

Q According to this memo from Mr. Bornstein, in this instance Arthur Andersen participated in a due diligence conversation without a release, at least in part because the client was involved. Is that correct?

MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.

A Yes.

Q Do you recall anything contrary to what's recorded in this memo with regard to Arthur Andersen getting a release from Morgan Stanley for due diligence?

A I don't have any recollection of anything else, or even of this, really.

Q I believe you testified before, you were not involved personally in any conference calls on or around March 18th or 19th, 1998, relating to an issuance of a press release. Is that correct?

A Yes.

Q I'd like to ask you some additional questions about parent Coleman's Exhibit 23. To your knowledge, was this SMART tool, the result of this SMART tool, provided to Morgan Stanley prior to June of 1998?

A It would not have been.

Q In performing the analysis that Arthur Andersen would do associated with this SMART tool, did Arthur Andersen rely in part on public knowledge?

A Yes, in part.

Q I'd like to refer you in CPH Exhibit 23 to what's page 8. The last two numbers of the Bates are 99. At the very bottom of the page, and spilling over to the next page, it refers to "Management Integrity and Behavior." Do you see where I'm referring?

A Yes.

Q And on page 9, there's an overall assessment of management, integrity and behavior of good. Do you see that?

A Yes.

Q What did Arthur Andersen rely upon in reaching this conclusion, or assigning the assessment of good to this category?

A Well, in the case of Sunbeam, we had prior knowledge of working with management of the company for a number of years, and with the Dunlap team for at lease for the '96 audit and during, in this case, a half a year of 1997. So based on that working relationship that we would have had with the management.

Q Based on the relationship and experience that Arthur Andersen had working with Dunlap, and prior to June of 1998, were you aware of anyone within Arthur Andersen indicating that they had any reason to question the integrity of Mr. Dunlap?

MR. JOHNSON: Can I hear that one back?

(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

MR. MOSCATO: So the focus is prior to June '98, Don.

THE WITNESS: Okay. No. I wasn't aware of any concerns on integrity of Mr. Dunlap.

BY MS. BROWN:

Q Were you aware of any concerns prior to June of 1998 with regard to the integrity of any of the senior management at Sunbeam in 1997 and early 1998?

A No.

Q Referring earlier in CPH Exhibit 23, now to page 6, bottom of page 6, and on to page 7, the Arthur Andersen SMART tool indicates an overall assessment of management ability of good. Do you know what Arthur Andersen relied upon in reaching that assessment?

A First of all, I didn't prepare the tool, I approved the tool, so -- but my understanding of how the process works, and what our team would have considered, could have been the prior working relationship that we had with Sunbeam management.

Q And at this time the Sunbeam management was led by Mr. Dunlap. Correct?

A Yes.

Q On item 19, on page 7 of CPH Exhibit 23, where it refers to success with other businesses, do you know what that's referring to?

A Well, it's a general question. Whether the existing management has been successful or if they've been involved with failed companies. That's the general question that was being asked, and the engagement team that completed this indicated good.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q And did you have any knowledge prior -- when you signed this, that would cause you to question that?
A No.
Q In the item 20, "participation in design of controls, resolution of problems, legal and regulatory compliance training," an assessment is provided of good there. Did you have any reason to question that assessment prior to June of 1998?
A No.
Q Did you have any reason to question any of these assessments of good on page 7, items 18 through 24, in CPH Exhibit 23?
MR. MOSCATO: Prior to June 1998?
MS. BROWN: Correct. Thank you.
THE WITNESS: No.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Same question with regard to page 9, items 17 through 26, under "Management Behavior." Prior to June of 1998, did you have any reason to question the assessments that are reflected there regarding management integrity and behavior?
A No.
Q Even prior to June of 1998, Mr. Dunlap was a well-known figure, publicly, in the finance community. Is that correct?

A Yes.
Q Based on the information that you were aware of, or that anyone brought to your attention prior to June of 1998, did you have any concern regarding Arthur Andersen's work for Sunbeam?
MR. JOHNSON: I'm going to object to that.
MR. MOSCATO: Do you mind repeating that? You lost me.
MS. BROWN: Let me strike the question. I'll restate the question.
MR. MOSCATO: Thank you.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Based on the public information that was available, and any other information that was available to you prior to June of 1998, did you have any concern about retaining Sunbeam as a client of Arthur Andersen?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A We considered the risk, and we evaluated the higher risk of this company, in it being a public company, and Dunlap's prior history of turnarounds and trying to get the companies ready for sale. So we considered that, but we were -- felt that the -- we could manage that risk. So we were not concerned about continuing as Sunbeam's auditor.

Q And Dunlap's prior experience, turning around other companies, was public knowledge. Correct?
A Yes.
Q The overall risk assessment of high reflected in CPH 23, you said it wasn't the mean or median. But was it uncommon?
A I think I already indicated it was not uncommon. I don't know what percentage that would refer to for you, but for me I don't feel it's uncommon.
Q This risk assessment is something that Arthur Andersen would perform for each client that Arthur Andersen provided audit services for. Correct?
A Yes.
Q With regard to the procedures identified on page 4 that you testified to previously, was it uncommon to identify additional procedures to perform with regard to an audit to manage risk?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A No.
Q It's true, isn't it, that each audit that Arthur Andersen performed was unique and would be specifically tailored to the company being audited?
A That's correct.
Q And it's the company, correct, that's responsible for the fair presentation and consolidated statement of financial position, results of operations and cash flows, in conformance with the generally accepted accounting principles? Correct?

MR. JOHNSON: Hold on. Can I have that one back?
(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Generally accepted accounting standards require that an auditor obtain reasonable, rather than absolute, assurance that the financial statements are free of material misstatement. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form. You're saying GAAS or GAAP?
MR. MOSCATO: Actually, many people confuse this. It's generally accepted accounting principles, and generally accepted auditing standard.
MR. JOHNSON: Are you asking GAAS or GAAP?
MR. MOSCATO: I think she's asking GAAS.
MS. BROWN: Let me strike that and reask the question.

BY MS. BROWN:
Q Generally accepted auditing standards --
MR. MOSCATO: There you go.
Q -- require that an auditor obtain reasonable, rather than absolute, assurance that the financial statements are free from material misstatement. Correct?
A Yes.
Q Now, you testified earlier that the investigation and the additional procedures leading to the restatement was a five-month process. Correct?
A Yes.
Q And during that process, Arthur Andersen and the company spent more than 10,000 hours of work in its effort to correct and identify problems with financial statements. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A Yes.
Q And you yourself spent in the range of 800 to 900 hours in your efforts during the additional procedures in restatement. Correct?
A I don't remember the specifics, but that sounds right magnitude of number of hours.
Q And you testified that your investigation and the additional procedures leading to restatement began in June or early July of 1998. Correct?

A Yes.
Q And that was after Sunbeam had already acquired Coleman Company. Correct?
A Yes.
Q Your involvement was after Mr. Dunlap had been fired. Correct?
A Yes.
Q And Mr. Kersh had also been fired by the time you became involved. Correct?
A Yes.
Q And Mr. Levan had been brought on as new management at Sunbeam by the time you became involved. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form. And it's Levin.
MR. MOSCATO: Well, the court reporter can't pick that up one way or the other.
MS. BROWN: Let's strike that and restate that for a clean record.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q By the time that you became involved in the additional procedures in restatement, Mr. Jerry Levin had been brought on as management at Sunbeam. Correct?

MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A Yes.
Q And Mr. Levin had announced what you've referred to in prior testimony as an amnesty program for Sunbeam employees. Correct?
A Yes.
Q That amnesty program was in effect when you performed the interviews, for instance, that are memorialized in CPH Exhibit 21. Correct?
A Yes. I'm not sure whether there was a defined date on the amnesty program, but I believe that it was intended to be open ended and include that period.
Q The amnesty program that Mr. Levin announced for Sunbeam employees had been announced prior to the interviews that are memorialized in CPH Exhibit 21. Correct?
A Yes.
Q Your understanding of that amnesty program is that it was not something that was in place, for example, in March of 1998. Correct?
A Yes.
Q In addition to Arthur Andersen, there were other entities working on the restatement of the financial statements for Sunbeam. Is that correct?
A I'm not sure I follow that question.

Q Deloitte and Touche was consulted with regard to the restatement of the financial statements for Sunbeam. Is that correct?
A Deloitte and Touche was engaged by the board of Sunbeam to, I guess, overview the work that Andersen and the company were undertaking related to the restatement procedures, the additional procedures.
Q And there were times when Arthur Andersen and company, or its board, and Deloitte and Touche would consult about issues pertaining to the restatement of Sunbeam's financial statements?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A Yes.
Q Were there any other entities that were consulted in that manner with regard to the restatement of Sunbeam's financial statements in 1998?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A I believe that either the board or through Scadden Arps there was a, I'll call it a litigation consulting firm that was engaged early in the process. I don't believe I had any interaction with them, and so I think their role was somewhat limited. But there was -- there was another group that was consulted, not by Andersen, but by, I believe, either the board or Scadden Arps on behalf of the board.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q And what group are you referring to?
A It was out of the Chicago, and I don't recall the name.
Q Chicago Partners? Does that sound familiar?
A That sounds familiar, yes.
Q In conducting the additional procedures, and then the restatement of Sunbeam's financials in 1998, you were basically given unlimited resources by the company and by Arthur Andersen management. Correct?
A Yes.
Q And when you conducted the restatement, there were detailed task lists that were created by Arthur Andersen with regard to their work for the restatement. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
A It was an ongoing process that included task lists of things that had to be done.
Q The work that Arthur Andersen performed during the additional procedures leading to the restatement, was that work on the issues that Arthur Andersen was looking at more in-depth than the work that had been done in the prior audit for 1997?
A Yes. Considerable additional work in the same area -- in some of the same areas.
Q And as a result of the resources and the work that was done for the additional procedures, leading to the restatement of Sunbeam's financial statements, Arthur Andersen learned facts that it had not been aware of prior to June of 1998. Correct?

MR. JOHNSON: Hold on. Can I hear that question, please?
(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q When you were performing the interviews that are memorialized in CPH Exhibit 21, did you have a sense that some of the employees that you were interviewing were relieved by the change of management?
A Yes.
Q And did you get the sense when you were performing the interviews that are interviewed in CPH 21 that some of the employees were communicating information to you that they felt they would not have been able to do under the prior management led by Mr. Dunlap?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A That's the sense I got. I don't know if I asked them if they could have given that information to prior management, but I got that sense that had not given the information to prior management, in certain circumstances.

Q You were asked a lot of questions about the interviews reflected or memorialized in CPH Exhibit 21. Did you have a script or a list of questions that you tried to follow during your interviews?
A No, not really. We thought about trying to put one together, but we started going to interviews before we really got organized, so we just -- each one was rather unique, so we did not have a predefined list of questions. Might have had some questions in our mind or might have written them down for a particular interview, but for the most part there was nothing in writing, the question for the interviewees.
MS. BROWN: I'd like to have that marked Morgan Stanley Exhibit 14.
(Deposition Exhibit No. MS 14 received in evidence.)
BY MS. BROWN:
Q You've been handed Morgan Stanley Exhibit 14, which is Bates stamped CPH 90040 to 45. Do you recall seeing this document before?
A Yes.
Q Starting on the third page of this document, there's a list of some questions to ask, followed then by some review procedures. Do you recall anything about the creation of this document?

A Yeah. This document was the draft of what was started either -- I think maybe slightly before I got involved in the audit work at Sunbeam.
I remember seeing this. I don't think that we necessarily went -- I know in the interviews I attended, I don't believe we necessarily followed through asking all these questions to each of the interviewees, or to the respective questions that would relate to an interviewee.
Q But it's true, isn't it, that when you were conducting the exhibits that are memorialized in CPH 21, you had certain objectives or information that you wanted to get from each of the persons that you were interviewing. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Hold on a second. I think you misspoke at the beginning of questions.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q In conducting the interviews that are referred to in CPH Exhibit 21, it's true, isn't it, that you had certain objectives that you wanted to achieve with each interviewee, certain areas of interest?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A Yes. And that's why we started putting together this list of who would be interviewed and some questions, and it was sort of an ongoing process to try and identify who we would interview. And I believe that the management of Sunbeam also, we got some input from them as to who would be interviewed and some of the questions that would be asked. But as I said, this process got started, but it never really got finalized into a specific by-person program that was used.

Q Well, you had many objectives in interviewing Sunbeam employees and former employees. Was it ever part of your objective to review the due diligence that had been performed related to Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman?

MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form and foundation.

A No.

Q Was it part of your objective during the interviews that are reflected in CPH 21 to review any due diligence related to Sunbeam's issuance of notes in March of 1998?

A No.

MR. MOSCATO: You said Sunbeam's due diligence?

(The record was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

BY MS. BROWN:

Q When you were talking earlier this morning about CPH 21, one of the things you mentioned was that Sunbeam was hoping to sell the company after Dunlap had been brought on board. Correct?

A Dunlap wanted to sell the company. I don't know whether Sunbeam wanted to sell itself, but Dunlap wanted to sell the company. I think probably the shareholders thought that might be a good idea if they realized more money, also.

Q And it was public information that Dunlap was looking to sell the company or buy a company in connection with his management of Sunbeam. Correct?

MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form and foundation.

A That's correct, at different periods of time. Dunlap was hired by Sunbeam, but was to turn the company around and improve operations, and presumably sell it. The acquisition strategy that won, in my understanding, commenced when he was unable to sell the company, because the stock price was so high nobody would buy it for the valuation.

Q When you were asked this morning about whether you had any information about whether Morgan Stanley had attempted to speak with Mr. Dalbert. Do you have any information one way or another about whether Morgan Stanley spoke with Mr. Dalbert prior to June of 1998?

A No.

Q Do you have any information one way or another whether Morgan Stanley spoke with Ms. Kelly of Sunbeam prior to June of 1998?

A No.

Q Do you have any information one way or another with regard to whether Morgan Stanley spoke to Kyle Sinclair prior to June of '98?

A No.

Q Do you have any information one way or the other with regard to whether Morgan Stanley spoke with Mr. Hartschorne prior to June '98?

A No.

Q Do you have any information one way or another with regard to whether Morgan Stanley spoke with anyone that you interviewed at Sunbeam prior to June of 1998?

A McDonald said that she had been -- participated in a conference call. I don't remember the date. But I think it was prior to June of 1998.

Q Anyone else that you recall?

A No.

Q Do you have any information one way or another whether the people that you interviewed during the additional procedures had spoken with anyone from Coleman Company or any of their representatives prior to the close of the acquisition in March of 1998?

MR. JOHNSON: Can I hear that one back? I'm sorry.

(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)

THE WITNESS: Well, I think that -- I didn't ask about that, but presumably the top officers, Dunlap, Kersh, perhaps others, would have had to speak to Coleman. So I think that seems rather obvious that that took place. But as to the interviews that I conducted, I didn't gain any knowledge regarding that topic.

BY MS. BROWN:

Q And when you were referring to the interview notes of Deborah McDonald, you noted that there are things throughout the interview memoranda that really have no direct bearing on the additional procedures. Was that true only with regard to Ms. McDonald's interview or was that true with regard to other interviews as well?

MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.

Mischaracterization of testimony.
A I think that would be true perhaps for all of them. We documented information that we learned that we weren't sure at the time whether would be relevant or not; in some cases just extemporaneous information that the interviewer decided would be appropriate to put in the final memorandum.
Q The interview memorandum that are documented in CPH Exhibit 21 are not verbatim summaries of the conversation you had with the interviewees. Correct?
A Correct.
Q In some instances the interview memoranda that are memorialized at CPH Exhibit 21 incorporate the interviewer's viewpoint or information as well as the interviewee's comments. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A I'm not sure I understand that question.
Q For instance, in some of the interviews where the interviewee indicated that they had spoken with someone from Arthur Andersen, there may be a notation in the interview as to Arthur Andersen's response to that comment. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A In some cases there are some responses that would not have been from the interviewee, but there aren't -- I don't recall seeing very many, but there are a few of those instances.

MR. MOSCATO: Could we go off the record for one minute?
(Discussion off the record.)
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Turn, if you would, for just a moment to tab eight of CPH Exhibit 21.
MR. MOSCATO: I'm sorry. What tab?
MS. BROWN: Tab eight. It's the interview memorandum of the interview with Deborah McDonald.
Q Turn, if you would, to the Bates page ending in 91. With regard to the information reflected here concerning the March 19th, 1998 press release and the March 18th, 1998 press release, you have no personal first-hand knowledge of any of the facts reflected here. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
THE WITNESS: I think you referred to two press releases.
MR. MOSCATO: I think you meant the March 18th conference call.
MS. BROWN: Okay. Strike that.
BY MS. BROWN:

Q In the middle of page 91, tab eight of the CPH Exhibit 21, refers to a March 18th, 1998 conference call. You have no personal information about what transpired during that conference call. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A Yes. I have no information.
Q It also refers to a March 19th, 1998 press release. You have no personal first-hand knowledge of what transpired prior to the issuance of that press release relating to the press release. Correct?
A Correct.
Q On the next page, the page ending in Bates 92, tab eight, CPH Exhibit 21, the third open bullet after the first bullet, last sentence, states, "Morgan Stanley apparently used $1.80 per share in their projection."
Do you have any information one way or another about what facts Morgan Stanley used in any projections?
A No.
Q Do you have any information one way or another about what information Sunbeam actually provided to Morgan Stanley prior to June of 1998?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A No, I don't have the actual information provided.

Q You participated in an interview of Mr. Dunlap and Mr. Kersh with regard to the additional procedures?
A Yes.
Q Do you recall during that interview Mr. Dunlap and Mr. Kersh referring to a June 1998 board meeting, at which Phil Harlow attended, after the Baron's article came out?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A Only in a very indirect way. I don't have specific recollection. I know there was some discussion of the board meeting, but I don't know what Mr. Kersh or Dunlap may have said regarding that.
Q Do you recall that on June 25th, 1998, Sunbeam issued a press release indicating that Arthur Andersen had withheld its consent for Sunbeam to use Arthur Andersen's opinion in connection with the registration?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A I'm familiar with the press release.
Q When was it that Arthur Andersen determined that it would withhold its consent for Sunbeam to use Arthur Andersen's opinion related to the 1997 financial statements?
A I would presume about the time the press release went out, but I wasn't involved.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q Did you ever speak to Mr. Harlow about the June 1998 board meeting that he attended with Mr. Kersh and Mr. Dunlap?
A I don't recall any specific conversations regarding that. I know of the meeting, I know he attended, but I don't recall what we would have talked about.
Q So Mr. Harlow never spoke to you about whether he was asked about the propriety of the bill and hold sales in June, the June 1998 board meeting?
MR. JOHNSON: Hold on a second. Can I had that read back?
(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: I know the issue. I know -- but I don't remember sitting down with Mr. Harlow or discussing. I don't know where I learned about it, from Mr. Harlow or someone else, or from counsel, but I'm aware that it was discussed.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q But Arthur Andersen's decision to withhold its consent for the use of its opinion for the 1997 financials was a decision that had been made prior to your involvement?

A Correct. When that decision was made, it was after that that they decided additional procedures, the firm decided additional procedures had to be performed, and that's when they looked around to find somebody to head that team up, and that's when I got selected.
Q You had mentioned previously that Sunbeam's 10 K for 1997 disclosed Sunbeam's, or some of Sunbeam's bill and hold sales. Correct?
A Correct. Included in this early buy program, included the bill and hold sales. So it's included in that disclosure, as I recall.
Q As of 1998, was bill and hold a term that you would expect someone who was a professional accountant to be familiar with?
A It was -- if they were professional accountants that practice with public companies, then it's a concept that if they didn't know the term, they should have at least understood the concept and been able to research and determine the proper accounting for these types of transactions.
Q And in 1998, based on your experience in the industry, did the term "bill and hold" have any particular connotation?
MR. MOSCATO: Do you understand the question, Don?

THE WITNESS: I think the question is did I know prior to this, Sunbeam, did I know what the term bill and hold meant? Is that --
MR. MOSCATO: That's why I asked. That's not exactly --
THE WITNESS: That's not exactly the question, but --
MR. MOSCATO: You can answer that question if you want.
MS. BROWN: Strike that.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q In 1998, based on your experience in the industry, do you believe that if someone saw a public disclosure, that the company had engaged in bill and hold sales, would that have a positive or a negative impression, generally?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form of that.
MR. MOSCATO: I object also.
Can you answer that? Do you have the ability to answer that question?
THE WITNESS: I don't think I could make that judgment, no.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q In 1998, based your experience in the industry, would you consider bill and hold to be a normal practice of public companies?

MR. MOSCATO: Objection.
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A Based on my experience in the accounting industry --
Q Correct.
A -- I would find bill and hold transactions to be unusual.
Q Seeing a public disclosure indicating that a company had engaged in bill and hold sales, would that raise a red flag for you concerning the performance of that company for the related financial period?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form and foundation.
A You're asking as an investor, as an accountant?
Q As an accountant.
MR. JOHNSON: Same objection.
A As an accountant, I think it's relatively important information to understand that a company has changed its policy and would have a bill and hold policy that was unusual.
MR. MOSCATO: That's the answer to the question.

BY MS. BROWN:
Q If a company had changed its policy to now begin engaging in bill and hold sales, would that cause you concern about the performance of the company?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
MR. MOSCATO: I object.
MR. JOHNSON: Hypothetical.
MR. MOSCATO: I think it's an unfair question to be asking this witness, or any witness, for that matter. There's just too much, too much information left out of the question to really give an intelligent answer.
THE WITNESS: It seems to me that's more appropriate to ask a financial analyst, whether it has an impact on the company's future performance. An auditor is auditing the historical performance of the company, not trying to make projections regarding the future performance.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Do you recall that in a management letter to Sunbeam, Arthur Andersen indicated that it believed that Sunbeam had material weakness of its internal controls?
A In a management letter that was issued subsequent to the restated financial statements we indicated as such.

Q And that communication from Arthur Andersen to Sunbeam was a result of information that Arthur Andersen learned during the additional procedures leading to the restatement. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A Correct.
Q During the restatement and the additional procedures, Arthur Andersen became uncomfortable with the representations that Mr. Gluck had made. Is that correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to form.
A Well, they were concerned about certain representations that Mr. Gluck had made.
MR. MOSCATO: Had made when?
THE WITNESS: In connection with the original audit work.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Arthur Andersen had worked with Mr. Gluck as a client previously and found Mr. Gluck to be a conservative accountant. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A Mr. Gluck had been the corporate comptroller for some number of years prior to Dunlap's taking over as chief executive officer, and my understanding is we had a good working relationship with Mr. Gluck. I don't now remember how conservative or not conservative he was.

Q In prior testimony to the SEC, and I'm happy to provide this to you if you like, you testified in --
MR. JOHNSON: Which day is this?
MS. BROWN: This is on June 3rd, 1999.
Page 251.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q You testified that Arthur Andersen had a long history of working with Mr. Gluck, I think in four previous audits, four previous to 1997. I think that we found him to be a competent accountant and generally a conservative accountant. So we certainly didn't know that he had changed under the pressure of management, changed from being a conservative accountant to one where he thought he could go to bare minimums for his reserves, and other accounting estimates that he had to make.
Do you recall generally that impression of Mr. Gluck?
A Yes.
Q Do you have any reason to think that your prior testimony was inaccurate in that regard?

A No.
Q After you completed the restatement of the Sunbeam financials, did Arthur Andersen continue to perform work for Sunbeam?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A I -- did we continue to perform audit work or any work?
Q Any work.
A I think there was some additional work that was done. It may have been in foreign offices, over some period, short period of time, at the conclusion of the restatement, probably a month or so after that, the board made a decision to select Deloitte and Touche as the auditor, and that was -- so that would discontinue the audit relationship. There may have been some ongoing tax projects or something that didn't -- that got completed after that period of time.
Q Do you recall obtaining documents or information from Ernst and Young in late 1998 concerning Sunbeam?
A In what regard?
Q In regard to preparing an audit or work plan.
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form.
A I'm not sure I recall that.

Stanley 15.
(Deposition Exhibit No. MS 15 received in evidence.)
BY MS. BROWN:
Q The court reporter has handed you what's been mark as Morgan Stanley 15, which is Bates CPH 84310, 311. It's a December 7, 1998 letter to you from Ernst and Young. On the second page of that document, is that your signature?
A Yes, it is.
Q Do you recall for what purpose you were obtaining documents for Ernst and Young?
MR. JOHNSON: Hold on a second. I didn't hear what you said.
(The question was read by the reporter as above recorded.)
MS. BROWN: From Ernst and Young.
THE WITNESS: In connection with the consolidated financial statements of Sunbeam, subsequent to the acquisition of Coleman, they would include the financial statements. Consolidated statements would include Coleman's operation.
And Coleman -- and I'm just reading this, because I don't recollect the specifics -- but had performed work in June '98 and September 30, 1998. So those financial statements of Coleman would be consolidated into the financial statements of Sunbeam.

And since Arthur Andersen was responsible for the limited review procedures that we do in connection with quarterly financial reporting, we obtained -- we reviewed some of those work papers from the Coleman work that they had done on their quarterlies for the September and June periods.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q What is the last quarter for which Arthur Andersen performed a review of Sunbeam financials?
A I'm not sure I recall whether we did September. I think we did June. I don't remember whether we did September or not.
Maybe I should clarify, because I'm not sure what Sunbeam actually filed in terms of financial statements, because it got seriously behind in its financial statements.
So at the point they actually filed 10 Ks with the June and September periods, I don't know if we were still engaged as auditor or not. So I don't really recall.

MR. JOHNSON: Mr. Denkhaus, do you mean 10 Qs?
THE WITNESS: 10 Qs.
MR. MOSCATO: Do you feel like a two-minute break?
MS. BROWN: That's fine.
(Recess taken.)
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Do you recall a July 1998 meeting in Chicago with Jerry Levin?
A Yes.
Q What was the purpose of that meeting?
A To discuss Arthur Andersen's agreement and commitment to perform the additional procedures for Sunbeam.
Q Was there addition of any other work that Arthur Andersen would perform for Sunbeam after the additional procedures?
A Not that I recall.
Q And you testified previously that Mr. Levin had expressed concern regarding whether Arthur Andersen would be willing to do the restatement of financial statements that it had audited. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A I testified previous, not today, but previous testimony, yes.

Q And Arthur Andersen provided a number of assurances to Mr. Levin in that regard. Correct?
A Yes.
Q Was there any discussion during that meeting where Mr. Levin essentially asked how could this have happened?
MR. JOHNSON: I object to the form of that.
A Not that I recall.
Q Was there any volunteered explanation to Mr. Levin about what necessitated the need for the additional procedures?
MR. MOSCATO: Objection.
MR. JOHNSON: I'll join.
A The need for the additional procedures came as a result of Arthur Andersen's learning about, I think it was some guaranteed sales that they weren't aware of, and therefore wanted to determine if there were other items that might affect the financial statements.
I think Mr. Levin was aware of these reasons that there was a need to do additional procedures to see if a restatement was in fact going to be necessary.
Q Now, when you referred to additional guaranteed sales, are you referring to sales,

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

guaranteed sales that Arthur Andersen learned of after March of 1998?
A Yes.
Q And after March of 1998 Arthur Andersen also learned that Sunbeam had deleted files relating to return authorizations. Correct?
A Yes.
Q Other than talking to Mr. Levin about the resources that Arthur Andersen would put towards the additional procedure and a possible restatement, was there any other discussion with Mr. Levin about why additional procedures might provide information that Arthur Andersen had not been aware of prior to the close of the 1997 financial statements?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
MR. MOSCATO: I object.
THE WITNESS: I'm confused.
MS. BROWN: Can you read the question back?
MR. MOSCATO: I don't think reading it back is going to help, to tell you the truth.
MS. BROWN: I'll restate the question.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q When you met with Mr. Levin in Chicago in July of 1998, was there any discussion of any reason why the additional procedures might reveal information that had not been available prior to June of 1998?

MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
A I'm still confused about the question. The additional procedures were to determine if there was information that we weren't aware of. If that's your question --
MR. MOSCATO: No, that's not the question. The question is did you discuss any of that with Jerry. Do you remember discussing any of that with Jerry Levin, yes or no.
THE WITNESS: I don't recall.
(Deposition Exhibit No. MS 16 received in evidence.)
BY MS. BROWN:
Q You've just been handed what's been marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 16, which is Bates CPH 76949. Do you recall ever seeing this document before?
A Yes.
Q This is a memo that you authored. Correct?
A Yes.
Q Can you explain for me the purpose of this memo, which is dated November 11, 1998?

MR. MOSCATO: You mean other than what the memo states?
MS. BROWN: Yes. Summary of the purpose.
MR. MOSCATO: Do you have anything to add, other than what the document states, Don?
MR. JOHNSON: The purpose of the memo or the purpose of the procedures described in the memo?
MS. BROWN: I'll strike it. I'll reask.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q What was the purpose of the procedures described in the memo?
MR. JOHNSON: I object. It stated expressly, right in the document itself, what the purpose is.
MR. MOSCATO: That's my objection too.
THE WITNESS: "The purpose of the above procedures is to have a complete set of all relevant work papers to support our restatement audit work."
BY MS. BROWN:
Q The distribution isn't included on this document. Was this distributed to all the people that worked with you on the additional procedures for the restatement?

A I believe so.
Q And to the best of your knowledge, were the procedures that are referred to in Morgan Stanley Exhibit 16 followed by those people?
MR. MOSCATO: I object.
A I don't really know if everybody followed these procedures.
Q Do you have any information concerning anyone who did not follow these procedures as referred to in Morgan Stanley Exhibit 16?
A No.
Q Were you aware that Coleman Parent Holdings had sued Arthur Andersen in regards to the work that Arthur Andersen performed for Sunbeam?
A Yes.
Q Were you aware that Arthur Andersen settled that suit?
A Yes.
Q Are you aware of the terms of that settlement?
A No.
Q Have you ever seen the settlement agreement?
A No.
Q Have you ever discussed the settlement with anyone?
A No.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

MR. MOSCATO: Nice try. I wasn't going to let him answer anyway. Nice try.
Q In the course of the work that you were doing for Sunbeam in 1998, were you aware that Sunbeam entered into a settlement agreement with MAFCO concerning Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
A MAFCO was the holding company for Coleman, as I recall.
Q That's correct.
A Yes, I was aware of that.
MR. JOHNSON: Object to that.
MS. BROWN: Indirect parent.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Were you aware that as part of the settlement agreement between Sunbeam and MAFCO that Sunbeam issued warrants, directly or indirectly, to Ron Perlman?
A Yes.
Q Did you have occasion to review Sunbeam's valuation of those warrants?
A I reviewed the valuation. I thought it was performed by someone other than Sunbeam, but I'm not sure, but I do remember looking at some documents on the valuation.
Q Of the warrants that Sunbeam provided to MAFCO?

A Yes.
Q Did you also have occasion to review Deloitte and Touche's assessment of the value of the warrant that Sunbeam had issued, indirectly or directly, to Ron Perlman?
A No.
Q So you weren't aware of Deloitte and Touche's valuation of those warrants?
A Unless they were the ones that did the valuation, and that was what I looked at. I remember looking at something, but I can't -- I thought it was a third party, but I didn't -- my recollection wasn't Deloitte, but --
Q Do you recall looking at a presentation by a group called the Blackstone Group?
A I think that's what I looked at.
Q What was your purpose in reviewing that presentation?
A There was accounting that needed to be made for the valuation of those warrants. It was reviewing them to ascertain the proper amount of the accounting entry.
Q In the course of reviewing the accounting of the settlement between Sunbeam and MAFCO, did anyone ever express to you that Sunbeam had overpaid for the Coleman Company?

MR. JOHNSON: Objection to the form.
A I've heard -- I remember it being said that they, that Sunbeam had overpaid for Coleman. I don't remember specifics of who would have said that to me, but I do remember hearing that.
Q Do you remember whether that was something that was said by Sunbeam management that you were working with in 1998, or was that something that was said by someone else?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
A I don't really recall.
MR. JOHNSON: Let's go off the record.
(Discussion off the record.)
BY MS. BROWN:
Q When you were working on the additional procedures from June of 1998 through the restatement, you were working with the new management of Sunbeam. Correct?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
A Yes.
Q And a number of those individuals who are now at management of Sunbeam were prior employees of Coleman Company. Correct?

A Yes.
Q In the course of your interaction with any of the new management at Sunbeam, did you become aware of the history and the negotiations between Sunbeam and Coleman concerning Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
A Only in a general way. Basically what would be the public information in the financial statements.
Q In the course of your work with the senior management at Sunbeam, in late 1998, were you made aware that the deal between Sunbeam and Coleman had originally been negotiated as an all cash deal?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form, foundation.
A I don't have any recollection of that.
Q In reviewing the accounting treatment of the warrants that were issued directly or indirectly by -- directly by Sunbeam, to Ron Perlman directly or indirectly, do you recall what valuation Sunbeam placed on those warrants?
A My recollection was something around $80 million, but it's in the financial statements, so it should be readily available; not rely on my memory of this topic.
Q Do you recall in reviewing the Blackstone

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0014566

Group report that the Blackstone Group's valuation relied on a Black-Sholes method?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
A I don't know that I recall that. I mean, that's a normal way to value options, but I don't, I don't recall it specifically how they did it.
Q Do you recall that the Blackstone Group's presentation indicated a valuation for the warrants that Sunbeam issued to settle the MAFCO claims of 30 to 107 million dollars?
MR. JOHNSON: Objection to form.
A I don't recall the specifics.
Q Does that range sound approximately right?
A I know there was a range, but I don't recall whether that was the range or not.
Q Do you recall that the Blackstone Group presentation provided a warrant value sensitivity analysis?
A Only in a vague way. I don't remember the specifics, but I remember there were different scenarios to determine the value, as is typical of a valuation of a security, and I don't remember the specifics of how they determined it or what the final determination value was based on.
Q Do you recall by the time you reviewed the Blackstone presentation you reached a conclusion that Sunbeam was not performing as well as Blackstone had projected that it would perform?

MR. JOHNSON: I'm going to object to that.
MR. MOSCATO: Do you recall that, Don?
THE WITNESS: No, I don't really recall that.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q Do you recall Blackstone, representatives of the Blackstone Group being at any board meetings that you attended?
MR. JOHNSON: Object to the form and foundation.
A No, I don't recall them being -- they may have -- there were a number of meetings that were telephonic participants. Sometimes I came into meetings that were taking place. So they may have been on a telephone meeting, but I don't specifically have a recollection of meeting anybody from Blackstone.
(Deposition Exhibit No. MS 17 received in evidence.)
BY MS. BROWN:
Q You've just been handed what's been marked as Morgan Stanley Exhibit 17. Do you recall ever seeing this document before?

A Yes. I believe this is a document I would have seen relating to board of directors minutes for August 5th, 1998 meeting.
Q Morgan Stanley Exhibit 17, Bates CPH 0100203 to 207. It refers to an Arthur Newman of the Blackstone Group. Do you recall ever meeting Mr. Newman?
A Not really. He may have been there. I don't recall. They had board meetings that have 15, 20 people.
MR. MOSCATO: Don, the question is do you remember meeting him, yes or no.
THE WITNESS: No.
MR. MOSCATO: Okay. Thank you. Sorry. But just answer the question.
THE WITNESS: I know you want to get that taxi.
BY MS. BROWN:
Q You don't recall any direction conversations you had with anyone from the Blackstone Group?
A No, I don't.
Q Do you recall a meeting with bankers in New York, in September of 1998, at the request of Bobby Jenkins?

A Yes.
Q What bankers did you meet with?
A I don't recall.
Q You don't recall whether Morgan Stanley was present at that meeting?
A No.
Q What was the purpose of your attending that meeting?
A Bobby Jenkins was trying to calm down the concerns of the bankers, so that they wouldn't take any action on their loans, and he asked me to attend to tell them that we were doing additional procedures and where we -- and the progress of those procedures as it related to the restated financial statements.
Q Other than yourself and Mr. Jenkins, do you recall who else was present at that meeting?
A There were a number of bankers, but I don't recall which banks or bank names, bank individual officers that were there.
MS. BROWN: I have no further questions at this time.
MR. JOHNSON: Nothing from us.
MR. MOSCATO: Thank you, one and all.
THE REPORTER: Are you reading or waiving?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

MR. MOSCATO: I never waive anything, but I'm not ordering a transcript either, though. So I don't know where that leaves us.
MR. JOHNSON: Three days for us.

MS. BROWN: Same thing.

Three Greatest Strengths

Downward Comments

Within IBD

Anda, Jon A. (v) (E)

Excellent business manager, very direct and effective communicator, a quiet study in banking business situations, very efficient. A clearly strong relationship builder, excellent follow-through, persuasive, persistent, works well with treasurers as well as CEO's. Very effective presence in the business community. Strong work ethic, hustles, works all day and entertains clients all night, very committed.

Busch, May C. (v) (N)

Leadership. There is a marked increase in activity/focus in Chicago region since Bill joined the Firm. Our Midwest effort is much better organized and the group is more highly energized. Initiative. Takes the lead in establishing new relationships, setting up meetings, instituting accountability systems. Aggressive pursuit of opportunities. In Whitman pitch for bond deal, Bill did not take no for an answer and kept on trying to change our status with the CFO. Bill is persistent and persuasive.

Colleague Comments

Within IBD

Maischullat, Robert W. (E)

Great with clients, very effectively deals with CEO level clients because of his excellent judgment, presence, and trustworthiness. Focused, dedicated, hardworking and intense. Teamplayer, teambuilder. Always willing to help out when/where ever needed.

Crompton, John D. (v) (N)

Client skills. Relationship building, selling and situational judgment. Professional skills. Excellent product knowledge and analytical ability. Excellent team leader. Sets long and short-term client objectives, and is imaginative and organized in ensuing follow-up.

Scott, Robert G (N)

Initiative, commitment. Bill has shown a lot of energy fitting into the Firm. He has worked hard at learning about MS and its people. He has lots of ideas about how we can do things better; M&A meetings, Derivatives. People skills. Bill is interested in his people and approachable. Versatile. Knowledgeable across a broad range of products.

Seigel, Mark A (L)

Bill has very strong client relationship skills and is clearly viewed as an effective senior banker within the financial community.

Stonehill, Charles (L)

Great team member.
Obviously has considerable pulling power with clients. Not afraid to speak his mind.

Outside IBD

Lunn, Robert J (EQUITY) (N)

Very smart, hard worker. Team player. I think he will be good at relationship building over time. New in town.

Three Areas in Need of Further Development

Downward Comments

Within IBD

Anda, Jon A. (v) (E)	Could be more open-minded on strategies, consider alternative approaches. Can be almost too decisive. Needs to continue to broaden his base within the Firm, to develop strong relationships with product and execution people who he can leverage for idea generation, judgment in soliciting and executing business, etc. Should continue to test and strengthen his professional skills by directly managing a couple of key accounts in each office.
Busch, May C. (v) (N)	More exposure to capital markets transactions which will occur naturally as Bill's clients do more financings with MS. This should make Bill even more comfortable with our capabilities as a Firm. Improve communication with CFD industry groups. I sometimes find myself the communication link between CFD NY and CFD Chicago on dual coverage clients.

Colleague Comments

Within IBD

Matschullat, Robert W. (E)	Could relax a bit more at times and show his human side.
Crompton, John D. (v) (N)	Research exposure and senior MS personal acron, a full range of product areas to ensure that his clients and ideas receive the attention they should command. (Not that I have observed any specific problems here).
Seigel, Mark A (L)	In one particular instance, was a little too willing to cut fees.

Outside IBD

Lunn, Robert J (EQUITY) (N)	Stretched.

Summary Comments

Downward Comments

Within IBD

Anda, Jon A. (v) (E)

Bill has made a rapid and effective transition into his role at the Firm, and he has done it through a tireless work effort, a team-oriented attitude, and immediate utilization of his strong management talents. On management skills alone, he can be extremely valuable to MS over the long term.

Busch, May C. (v) (N)

Bill is a real positive for our Midwest effort. He has taken charge but not in an overbearing way. He does pitch the debt product and is able to gain the respect of clients at a very senior level. He is aggressive and persistent and conveys great confidence. A pleasure to work with, very responsive to capital markets efforts.

Colleague Comments

Within IBD

Matschullat, Robert W. (E)

Excellent hire, has already produced significant results commercially. Already has a very important job, but also can do more.

Crompton, John D. (v) (N)

Bill is a model of a senior client relationship manager. I have worked with him on several client banker development projects (e.g., Eaton, Price Corporation, General Dynamics) and also attend idea question and goal setting with the West Coast and Mid-West coverage groups. He displays excellent priority and goal setting skills, is an excellent listener and provides exemplary leadership both in internal and client meeting situations.

Scott, Robert G (N)

Bill has no major weaknesses. He needs to focus in '94 on personally making a major revenue impact. The loss of Stuart Taylor was not Bill's fault, but Bill should have realized sooner Stuart's degree of frustration.

Seigel, Mark A (L)

A great addition to MS team.

Stonehill, Charles (L)

The quintessential coverage officer on the Newmart deal. Knew his client, rapidly developed an understanding of the transaction, and stayed involved. Finally, gave good feedback to team members.

Outside IBD

Lunn, Robert J (EQUITY) (N)

Good partner. Straight shooter. Uphill at first because of my feelings for Doug Gray, but this is a great move long term.

Havens, John P. (EQUITY) (U)

I have only had two client meetings with Bill. He seems to be very good with clients and utilizes the Firm's resources.

Short Form Comments

Within IBD

Ayers, Jonathan W. (v)	No Comments.
Boutros, George (v)	Smart, intense individual. Seems very highly driven/motivated.
Genova, Lisa A. (v)	Camco Bake off (IPO) Baroid Business Development.: Senior banker role, introduced MS team to both situations. Very effective at identifying, pursuing and following up on new business opportunities, commands the respect of clients. Communicates very well within the team. Encourages input and participation from all team members. Very good coverage officer role model.
Goldstein, Ross H (v)	Various business development assignments.: Bill is the Senior Coverage Officer on many business development assignments. Most effective. Very good at framing the key issues and client objectives for ECMS. Understands clients' business well. Very effective public speaker. Good equity product knowledge.
Lewis, Jr., William M (v)	Very intense, very systematic and very impressive. A real pleasure to work with; will undoubtedly be a major factor in Chicago.
O'Flynn, Thomas M. (v)	Commonwealth Edison.: Provide regional coverage of Commonwealth Edison and a red list client that currently has a very strained relationship with Morgan Stanley. Outstanding commercial orientation; outstanding client relationship building. Bill has single handedly developed a relationship with president when dialogue with financial staff was closed off. Great job in a sometimes hostile environment. Very good professional skills, very good One Firm, and integrates NY and Chicago well.
Robson, Glenn R. (v)	Head of Regional Offices.: Managing west coast IBD Most. Management/Leadership Skills. Very clearly establishes goals and vision for the office and communicates it broadly to ensure that everyone is working to the same goals. Establishes a strong leadership presence without being meddlesome. Accessible and very responsive to fast changing events. Professionalism. Exercizes excellent judgment, able to draw upon a wealth of experience and bring it to bear on a client's specific situation. Ability to establish tremendous credibility with clients. Least. Probably could spend more time in LA office and play more of a mentor role.
Shay, Dewey K. (v)	Senior Banker on Fingerhut, Montgomery Ward.: Senior Banker. Limited exposure. Bill took the time to attend working level meetings which were important to a Montgomery assignment. The chairman attended one as a result. Bill is attempting to develop senior relationships with both of our companies proactively.

Outside IBD

Mack, John J (FM)	IPO for Prince Inc.: Senior coverage officer for Prince, Inc. He understands how to use the resources of the client. Managed the client and resources superbly.

Upward Comments

Should Stop Doing...

- Bill has been a very pleasant surprise. He has shed most of his unneeded Salomon tendencies and adapted well to the MS culture. He retains an edge which is useful only if displayed infrequently.

- Bill has done an exceptional job as manager of the branch offices in two respects; he has made the effort to truly understand our client base, and what we are trying to accomplish with each particular client, and he has created a framework that clearly defines goals that he expects us to accomplish, and how best he thinks we should accomplish those goals. My view of Bill is that we could benefit from his experience, and that he should stop being so hands-off, and try to keep more abreast of key activities at all levels in the branch offices.

- Although Bill works well under stress, there are times when he shows too much emotion. Tends to react too quickly in stressful situations.

- Bill should stop being a Regional person only. His methods of Management will have effect in N.Y. to the same degree it has shown in the Regional offices.

- Bill should continue providing junior people with responsibility and leading them by example, inspiring juniors to perform at their highest level and giving them opportunities to do so. Bill keeps his people informed as to the latest developments in transactions and provides clear guidance of next steps and expected performance. Bill should continue providing juniors with the opportunity to see him in action and continue to walk through his logic with respect to the strategies he chooses. Bill has a captivating presence with clients and wins their confidence very quickly.

- My only criticism relates to two instances where Bill has dealt with someone in a professsional, courteous manner. After the other person left, Bill made a very negative or caustic comment. It certainly occured to me that if Bill could be that "political in dealing with others, he could also be making negative comments about me behind my back. Having said that, I believe that Bill has been very fair and honest in all his dealings with me.

Should Continue Doing...

- Bill is a very effective communicator. If I am not involved in a specific relevant conversation, he will bend over backwards to update and post me on developments. I then can function more effectively. He delegates very well.

- Bill does a great job at setting and communicating his vision. Keeping staff informed as to all aspects of the business. Leading by example. Focusing on all areas of the business including deal management, personnel management and setting business goals. He is very focused on and excited about the business.

- Be hardworking. Show positive feedback. Highest integrity. Thoughful about solving client's problems. Help his subordinates get compensated well.

- Inspires enthusiasm. Bill has an enthusiastic style which was particularly infectious on the Rouge Steel IPO bake-off. Establish clear objectives. Bill will tell you what he wants and will give precendents that he likes for you to follow.

- Bill offers thought provoking and creative strategic/financing suggestions for our clients. It is a low pressure, trying to be helpful approach, and if an idea doesn't make sense, Bill is not burdened with a pride of authorship problem. He is also extremely encouraging, which (in this environment) is the right way to motivate the troops. He focuses on work harder because he knows we're working hard.

- Bill has been extremely supportive of me personally. Knowing that he feels that way gives me a higher level of confidence in my abilities than I would have otherwise.

- Bill is a very personable and down to earth individual who treats everyone equally and fairly. He is easy to work with because he is articulate, decisive and responsible. He is very approachable and very much a professional. Displays a great sense of humor. He is very proactive in the goings-on in the management of the office.

- Bill is simply the best manager I have worked for in my career, I make that statement without hesitation. He has created a highly energized and cooperative culture in the Chicago Office. He micromanages just the right amount. He keeps abreast without stifling degrees of formality. Most importantly he truly cares about the career development of each and every professional in the office from analyst to managing director. He is creative and thoughtful and shows tremendous initiative. He does not wait for his staff to deliver ideas and does not seek to be scripted. He has had at least one good idea in every client meeting we've done together. He has done a great job building a network of contacts and within a year has become a prominent and respected figure in the Chicago community. He has empowered each of us to create a business practice. At this point I am very happy to be in MS's Chicago office. I am quite confident that our market share and profits will grow each year under Bill Strong's leadership.

- Working hard. Very strong work ethic/leads by example. Provide support when needed. Bill is willing to get involved in client relationships and to devote his time generously. Thoughtful. Bill is refelctive and exercises good judgement on both internal and client matters.

- Continue to build the confidence and comfort of those who report to him. Continue with the high standards of excellence he has established for himself and others.

- Bill should continue to push individuals to take on greater responsibility. Bill gets involved to the extent he needs to, but allows others to think creatively about projects/ assignments/ meetings.

Should Start Doing...

- Relaxing just a bit more. Clients want a tiger when a tiger is needed, but in the context of less urgent situations, Bill needs to avoid seeming over eager and to respond appropriately to business opportunities or lack thereof.

- I believe that due to limited resources, we need to think about prioritizing some of our accounts, and decide where to spend more or less time. This comment is not so much for Bill personally, as for the entire office in general.

- re sense of humor. Relax a little. Spend more time having fun with employees. All work and no play.

- Develop a coordinated approach to steel company coverage in his region. I will pick up the phone and ask for this.

- I would recommend more frequent conversation with all the professionals who report to Bill, even if they are informal or social. He could develop closer personal ties with subordinates and generate insights into the coverage effort in regional offices.

- Bill deserves a lot of the credit for the San Francisco office's success this year. He manages by example, and the example he sets is of someone who is extremely hard working and respected by clients and colleagues alike. Bill would be an even more effective manager if he could stretch himself a little thinner and spend more time developing the skills of the junior people who report to him.

- It would be very effective if Bill interacted more with members of the support staff, i.e. word processing staff, other secretarial staff members. This would be a great morale booster.

- Slow down, relax a little. Bill can sometimes be all business and could benefit from taking time out to socialize with his staff more to strengthen morale and loyalty.

- Become more involved with N.Y. Management. Should be included in other managerial committees.

- I cannot think of any onething which Bill should start doing to bea more effective manager. He is very organized, bright, diligent and focused. At the same time, he does a good job of managing "people" issues. He is an outstanding managing leader.

Greatest Impact On The Management/Leadership Effectiveness Of This Person

- Bill readily admits that he is being exposed to certain products for the first time, and thus wants to maximize his exposure and involvement in certain situations. This can manifest itself in an almost bureaucratic pursuit of certain product initiatives.
- Bill is a tremendous leader and manager of the investment banking business. I would only like to be able to utilize more of his time with my clients.
- Develop a lighter side (like Matschullat for example-who is funny, interes ted in his people's welfare and wants to have fun some small percent of the time. 10%?)
- A somewhat stepped up level of communication would help, as several of us on the Goldsmith sale of Newmar stock felt out of the loop.
- It ain't broke, but we could probably use Bill's senior banker talents more effectively, perhaps encouraging him to play a more active role in executing projects at a senior level. It has been effective when we have utilized those skills in the past.
- Unable to evaluate.
- Interact more frequently with members of the support staff.
- I have learned in coverage that productive use of one's time is most important. As we head into the next year I would like as much guidance as possible from Bill in this regard.
- As previously mentioned, Slow down, relax a little. Bill can sometimes be all business and could benefit from taking time out to socialize with this staff more to strengthen moral and loyalty.
- Continue to expect high standards from those under him and maintain the leadership he has shown in the Regional office and get even more involvedw ith N.Y. Management.
- Bill needs to better manage the time demands placed on his associates/analysts by the officers in the office. As it is currently, associates/analysts tend to complete work for the MO first, because he screams the loudest, the principal second and the VP third. This occurs despite the fact that the VP tries to give the greatest lead time. As a result, the VP is often the recipient of a good, but not great work product. Moreover, none of the officers really care how much the associates/analysts have done for others in the office. Once one large project is completed, there is another crises awaiting.

Summary Comments

- Leadership Role. Bill clearly communicated several tasks to me such that I understood my role and how it fits into the larger task, and then followed up with me focussed,.in detail on my portion and provided timely feedback. Impressive. Bill is the type of person I like to work for. Team Management . I reiterate the above comment and that Bill seems very sensitive to finding out Firm's policy/ The Morgan Stanley answer or perspective on issues of judgment. I recognize the importance of this at his level and am impressed with his thoroughness. Training and Development. As mentioned above, Bill has several times focussed in detail on work I have done for him and has provided timely feedback. Interpersonal skills. Bill is extremely respectful of the people who workfor him. He makes me feel that he cares about me and the work I do for him. I am impressed with his willingness to talk to anyone and sort of lack of arrogance which might be expected for such a senior banker.

EVALUATION & DEVELOPMENT SUMMARY

Evaluatee:	William H. Strong	Evaluation Period:	1993
Title:	MD	Evaluation Director:	Robert G. Scott
Department:	CFD

I. PERFORMANCE HIGHLIGHTS

Major Accomplishments:

- Bill joined the Firm in January 1993 and has already become a valued senior banker in CFD. His intensity and desire to win, motivate and inspire everyone who deals with him. He brought some valuable relationships with him which produced business in 1993 (Goldsmith) but more importantly fills the important role of senior banker for Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Next Year's Performance Objectives:

- Finish staffing up the branches and generate revenue; help expand coverage in his regions.
- Become better known within the Firm.

II. KEY MESSAGES

Strengths	Comments/Action Plan:
1. Leadership/Communication.	Bill is a natural leader who inspires others to work hard and think creatively. He is an excellent communicator, both with his people and the rest of the Firm.
2. Relationship skills/Commercial instinct.	Bill is very strong on the client side, he builds relationships easily and delivers lots of ideas. He has a keen sense of where revenue opportunities might lie.
3. Initiative/Creativity/Intensity.	Bill shows tremendous initiative and hustle. He has lots of new ideas, both for managing his people as well as clients.

Development Areas	Comments/Action Plan:
1. Balance between management and covering accounts.	Bill spends a lot of time managing people. He should spend a little more in 1994 with his clients. He should personally generate more revenue in 1994.
2. Learn to read his audience better.	Bill puts his head down and charges full ahead. He needs to match his pace/style a little better with his audience.
3. Relax a little.	Bill is very intense. It fatigues some of his colleagues and must fatigue him. Many have suggested he relax.

- Major contribution to professional training and recruiting.

Evaluatee's Long-Term Career Goals:

- Increased management responsibility.

Recommended Training/Developmental Experiences/Assignments (Geography, Business, Function):

IV. EVALUATION SUMMARY

The right man, in the right place, at the right time sets a fine example of commitment, highest integrity, interest in his people and service to his clients. He has restored esprit d'corps to the domestic branches. His ideas and energy are an asset for the entire division. Bill pushes me, gently but firmly, and I appreciate it.

V. EVALUATEE COMMENTS

Three Greatest Strengths (provide examples):

Downward Comments

Within IBD

Perella, Joseph R. (N) (DirMgr)	Energy level: Bill has one of the highest in the firm. Willingness to go anywhere for business is greatly appreciated by people in the regions.–Commercial Instincts are sharp; successes on Sears, Chrysler–Persistence: does not drop the ball when asked to take on responsibility. Resilient: went right back to work after management change in May; did minimum amount of complaining relative to Walter about the same as Hepburn.
Scott, Robert G (N) (CoDir)	Experience/product knowledge: Bill is an experienced investment banker with a broad knowledge of our products and real client impact.–Leadership skills: Bill is an active and involved manager of his people. Bill knows his people well and is focused on the individual's progress.–Energy/hustle: Bill works hard, long hours and travels a lot. His energy is a good example to the junior staff.

Outside IBD

Mack, John J (N) (FM)	Possibly the hardest working person in firm.–Knows how to build relationships with clients.–Leads by example.

Colleague Comments

Within IBD

Chammah, Walid A.	Bill has been a strong supporter of DCMS in 1995. As a head of regional corporate finance, Bill has been helpful in getting his team to focus on the debt product by making sure that they are equally accountable to the market coverage officers. He has been instrumental in MS winning the Sears and Dean Foods business and in penetrating Motorola.–x–x
Evans, R Bradford (N)	Bill has unlimited energy which he constantly directs at building client relationships and developing business. I believe he has done an outstanding job increasing the Firm's visibility in the Midwest.–Bill has a creative intellect. He comes up with new ideas and ways to address client problems.–He is very persistent and persuasive developer of business. Bill is not an easy person to say no to, which of course, is one of the traits of an outstanding developer of business.
Fiedorek, Bruce D	Bill is clearly a take-charge, assertive and focused professional. He seems to do a good job identifying commercial opportunities and then executing his plan of attack. I have seen him enjoy success (Amway) and help create the foundation for reestablishment of a relationship (Sara Lee).
Hepburn, John K (N)	Very commercial in his approach: Outstanding commercial instincts. Has moved MS&Co. and Chicago to the top of the group. Works his client base. Leaves no stones unturned.–Provides leadership to the troops on the field: Leads by example. A role model for the U.S. CFD coverage group. Should be very well compensated for his overall contribution to CFD.–Team player skills: A pleasure to work with; honest, straightforward, responsive, always willing to help move the ball forward. Has been particularly helpful in dealing with the Volvo/Chrysler situation.
Kauffman, Richard L. (N)	Bill is a franchise player. He is completely committed to the firm and is tenacious in pursuit of every business opportunity. He devotes weekends in building social relationships with his clients; clients really feel that Bill is loyal to them and that he will deliver the full resources of the firm. Bill is hands-on; he writes letters, really delves into projects and presentation preparation. With clients he prevents himself as professional, intelligent and experienced.
Kourakos, William	Extremely commercial.–Smart and aggressive. Good client skills. Hard Working.–Bill wants new business and is an aggressive marketer of the Firm. He developed and excellent relationship with Stone Container and TRW. He works long hours.
Lumpkins, David B D (v)	Responsiveness: I call Bill with a problem; I get a solution immediately.–Commitment: Bill is tireless in carrying out his role for the Firm. Extremely energetic. –Firm orientation: As a lateral hire, Bill has done an extremely good job of getting plugged in to the resources of the Firm. Super manager/leader.
Parr, Gary W. (N)	Initiative: Bill is able to pursue and manage an incredible number of clients and projects. His client focus is impressive.–Relationship Management: Bill is building a real presence in the Midwest that is enhancing the M.S. franchise greatly.

Swift, Richard W.	Inititative and commitment: Bill works tirelessly. He is a role model to all who work with him or for him. When he was my client manager, Bill truly led by example. His willingness to look at presentations sent to his hotel at midnight set a standard for all of us. –Commercial instinct: Bill was excellent at seeing a transaction before it occurred and directing his people to achieve a quality product.–Leadership: Bill has demanding standards and his objectives were clear cut. I felt challenged by Bill to be at my very best.

Three areas in need of further development (Indicate suggestions for developing these areas):

Downward Comments

Within IBD

Perella, Joseph R. (N) (DirMgr)	Pace and Balance: Bill seemed to be trying to do too much. I spoke to him about this tendency. ("Bill, you have to learn to say no.") He has improved over the summer. This tendency results in others seeing him as trying to grab. Needs to work on this perception. Bill has great potential and is proving it. Things can come his way if he does not push it.~Back up plan: is his number two the right person for MS.
Scott, Robert G (N) (CoDir)	Political: Bill is viewed by many of his peers as highly political and overly ambitious. He is seen as overly focused on managing upward, especially JMack.~Revenue input: Bill covers a lot of territory; I wonder how productive he really is.~1996: What should Bill's focus be in 1996? More on productivity and client business.

Outside IBD

Mack, John J (N) (FM)	He needs to balance professional and private life better.~He needs to pace himself better.

Colleague Comments

Within IBD

Chammah, Walid A.
Evans, R Bradford (N)	Bill needs to work more effectively with product areas in pursuing, accepting and staffing new assignments. He needs to consult early and often as to the type of business the Firm should undertake, the staffing available, and the appropriate financial terms before reaching any agreement with the client. At times, he had problems with quality of some assignments and available staffing, some of which might have been mitigated with earlier and more frequent consultation with M&A administration.~I would rate Bill as outstanding in all the categories I have observed. I have not had an ability to observe his management skills.
Fiedorek, Bruce D	Bill and I should share the blame for not having required more thoughtful and focused preparation for a recent bakeoff at S.C. Johnson, which we might have won had we done so. This is a reminder to both of us that we need to be untiring in our focus on what is necessary to get a piece of business. We cannot simply show up and get the mandate. ~Bill also needs to be consistent in seeking out MS quality business on acceptable MS commercial terms. He has a reputation in MARD administration (with MARD ops officers and assignment associates), as being too flexible.
Hepburn, John K (N)	A small suggestion: A little more focus on largest situations rather than trying to be everywhere. Again, only a minor suggestion.
Kauffman, Richard L. (N)	Bill can be a bit more efficient in his use of resources. He wants big books, big teams and seniority at too many meetings. I've also been to a couple of meetings where it was simply not necessary to have been there. In his desire to get business, in other words, Bill gold plates the effort. Because he is so competitive, his teams scurry about, afraid of Bill's reaction if work is not done early enough or up to Bill's level of expectation. A less intense environment might make his team happier and perhaps more productive.
Kourakos, William	Spread too thin in an effort to be associated with a lot of Morgan Stanley business. Needs to scale back and focus on key relationships.
Parr, Gary W. (N)	Bill needs to be careful not to be bossy to his partners. He is an outstanding banker but needs to be a team player and work with others rather than attempt to make them do work.
Swift, Richard W.	Time Management: Bill is involved in too many things. At times he is hard to reach. For a period, when he acted as my manager, I found that it could take two weeks to actually speak to Bill. I truly admire his effort and his commitment, but I believe at times he just does too much.

Upward Comments

To be a more effective manager/leader and for the greatest impact, what should this person stop doing?

- Over committing to clients regarding timing and resources. May not maximize efficiency (but note comments in next question).
- Almost professional to a fault; notwithstanding huge demands on time, should try to get to know personalities in regions.
- Stop acting as an intermediary for those who don't want to deal with me directly. I believe Bill has listened effectively to last year's suggestions and made a real effort to improve what is already an extremely productive and strong leadership style.
- On occasion should slow down and not always face an issue or decision.
- Makes decisions too quickly; Bill can be too quick to judge sometimes. Sometimes this is useful but not always.
- I believe I said in last year's evaluation that Bill is the best manager I've encountered in my career, and I want to echo that again this year. Bill has done a fantastic job of managing a complex set of personnel issues in the Chicago office. He recognized that the management style and judgments of the office head were not conducive to officer career development, or to the maximization of long-term revenues. He got involved in situations in the appropriate way, at the appropriate time to ensure that, in each case, the right decision was made for the Firm, while not undermining other managers. To specifically answer the above question, I have no recommendations as to what Bill should stop doing. He has shown himself to be an adept manager in a host of situations, and I feel strongly he has the skillset to manage large units of the Firm with similar success.

To be a more effective manager/leader and for the greatest impact, what should this person continue doing?

- - Excellent at defining expectations of firm, success parameters, specific goals.
  - Continue to be positive (while still maintaining our accountability).
  - Continue to lead by example. Bill is driven and committed.
- Providing enthusiastic, aggressive briefing and follow up on client situations and making the team feel that the business opportunity is important and that each member's involvement matters. Visibly caring about each piece of business.
- Very responsive to all requests for direction. Keeps regional office current on thoughts re: various regional objectives. Keeps local coverage officers current on developments on client projects. A very strong leader.
- Continue the positive, enthusiastic, aggressive attitude that motivates those who work for him. Continue as a sounding board of outstanding investment banking judgement; this helps educate those who work for Bill. Continue to spend time with our younger professionals; they respond very well to Bill.
- Never gets rattled under pressure, which calms everyone involved down. Being extremely decisive. Being appreciative of hard work and success. Focusing on his clients needs and concerns. Being very open about his and everyone else's intentions in a particular situation.
- Lead by example: Bill works very hard, gives 100%, and always does what is right for the client and for MS. Praise good work: Bill is good at praise and it helps a lot. He is very direct and quick to give praise. Help his people: Bill is an effective advocate for his star performers and this helps those stars keep working hard.
- I have a long list of items Bill should continue doing as reflected on the Performance and Skills section I filled out. I must highlight the following: Leadership by example, hard work and intense initiative, creating a culture of maximum productivity, thoughtful yet quick decision making, plays well with a broad cross-section of client personalities, juggling a huge number of current projects effectively, insightful business and strategic planning, salesmanship, intense desire to grow the Firm's business, great team player, uses his time well, gets involved where necessary, does not glom onto revenues, achieves consensus, and is compassionate and thoughtful in the career development of all employees.

To be a more effective manager/leader and for the greatest impact, what should this person start doing?

- - Take better care of himself - slow down - before he burns out
- Spend more time in the region understanding client base and resource requirements. More assistance in developing regional objectives in terms of market penetration. Profile in Firm could be leveraged in region to use Bill as a senior banker.
- Be more demanding of those professionals who do not use resources effectively. Move to NY where the Firm can maximize the full range of Bill's talents as a leader and a manager. Be more direct with people: telling people what he really thinks in a timely manner will be a positive from a mgmt. perspective.

Upward Comments

- Could listen a bit more, before making quick decisions.
- Lighten up a bit: He's so intense and spread so thin that it's hard to develop a personal relationship.
- Given the previous comment, it is probably clear that I think Bill is already doing about all he can do. I think it is in the Firm's best interest to utilize his unique skillset as effectively as possible by giving him an increasing role in management and policy making.

Review of 1995 Firmwide Performance E Performance

1995 PERFORMANCE SUMMARY, INCLUDING ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Consider objectives in 1994 E&D Summary as well as business objectives set earlier in 1995. Refer to Self-Evaluation where applicable.

Commercially; a very successful year for WHS. Success on Chrysler, PMI, Sears. Market Share; no way to measure; although everyone applauds increased effectiveness of Midwest effort since WHS arrival in January 1993 with many first time business hits: Kearney, Motorola, Snap on Tools, etc. Regional effort; while WHS wanted Dallas office we got a Houston office. They and all other regions appreciate his support. Excellent recruiting - Fortier, important with Gersky, Canadian effort ongoing. Outside activities; WHS has raised his profile in a constructive way in his community boards of Chicago Symphony and Steppanwolf Theater.

EVALUATION THEMES

Describe Strengths	Comments
1. Energy Level.	Bill is one of the hardest working people in the Firm. Willing to travel anywhere, anytime for business; greatly appreciated by the regions.
2. Experience/Product Knowledge.	A franchise player with great commercial instincts. Does not take cookie cutter approach but rather comes up with new ideas. An impact player.
3. Leadership.	Provides great leadership to regional effort. Troops in the field love him. He is always there for them, i.e., responsive. Shows strength under pressure.

Describe Development Areas	Comments
1. Focus. Pace. Balance	Consistent theme is trying to do too much, spread too thin, which then leads to other questions and concerns.
2. Prioritization through consultations with others.	Bill is advised to consider consulting with product areas before pursuing or accepting mandates.
3. Political.	All of the above leads some to question the motive.

1996 PERFORMANCE OBJECTIVES:

Business Goals (Identify and comment on important business and commercial targets).

Focus on priorities; larger accounts. Help get Canadian effort back on its feet. Maintain momentum in Chicago office.

Professional Development Goals (List important development suggestions to enhance evaluatee's professional effectiveness).

Learn to say no more often to those who want a piece of him, to himself. Intensity level cannot be sustained. Coordinate managing pursuit of business with product areas through early communication. Lower the perception that you are political by managing sideways as well as upwards.

CAREER GOALS (Comment on evaluatee's short-term and long-term career goals as described in the self evaluation):

Wants to be on Board of Morgan Stanley; function of future role of Board of public company, how many insiders vs. outsiders and Bill's overall standing in the Firm and the financial community.

Section I. 1997 Performance Summary

Describe your performance relative to your business goals and to the relevant performance criteria (see the Performance Criteria Matrix for details). Your comments should not exceed the space provided.

I am very pleased with my performance in 1997. 1997 is the best year that I have had with the Firm since joining in January of 1993. The Regional Offices for which I am responsible (Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Toronto) achieved record revenue in 1997. The Regional Offices have incurred Firm revenue of $130 million, $205 million, $276 million and will incur revenue in the range of from $375 to $400 million in 1994, 1995; 1996 and 1997, respectively. Our market shares have increased in each of the geographical areas across virtually all of the product areas. In 1994, I pledged that the Toronto Office would reach a Firm revenue level of US$60 million by 1998. The Office will achieve US$45 million in revenue in 1997 and has budgeted US$60 million for 1998 (a budget that I may increase). The Chicago Office has had a Firm revenue progression of a similar path-$70 million, $99 million, $117 million and in excess of $160 million for 1994, 1995, 1996 and 1997, respectively. My personal Firm revenue has been $70 million, $73 million and will exceed $90 million for 1995, 1996 and 1997, respectively. Further, my personal backlog going into fiscal 1998 has never been higher. Highlights from that backlog include the sale of Sunbeam (market capitalization $3.7 billion, signed engagement letter with success fees above fee scale), the sale of Everen Capital (market capitalization $600 million, engagement letter to be signed shortly), the acquisition of Beacon Properties by Equity Office, and the possible roll-up and subsequent IPO of a combined Chicago Bulls, Chicago Blackhawks, Chicago White Sox and the United Center for a current estimated total deal size of between $250 to $350 million out of a total value approximating $1.0 to $1.3 billion. My revenue production in 1997 included completed transactions in virtually all of the product areas including IPO's (e.g., Aftermarket Technology, Omniquip, LaSalle Partners, Stoneridge, Galileo International and CH Robinson), follow-on equity transactions both primary and secondary (e.g., Jacor, Aftermarket Technology, Omniquip and Sylvan Learning), high yield transactions (e.g., Exide), M&A transactions (e.g., Allwaste, Equity Office, Figgie, R. Howard, FMC, Guaranty Reserve, Scotsman, Stant and True North), investment grade debt, COPS and related interest rate swap transactions (e.g., Cargill, FMC, Sears and Tupperware), senior bridge lending (to finance Omniquip's acquisition of the Snorkel Division of Figgie which should close in early November) and numerous share repurchase programs (e.g., Allstate, FMC, Morton International and Tupperware). Further, I am confident that my client base is growing. As a result of this growing revenue, I believe I am accomplished at identifying new client relationships, marketing a broad range of products, and maintaining a strategic dialogue with the clients for which I am responsible. I also am confident that I can persuade senior client officials to pursue our advice even in difficult circumstances. As evidence of this, I attended and led the Firm's presentations before the Boards of Directors of Figgie, FMC, LaSalle Partners, Aftermarket Technology, Scotsman, RR Donnelley and True North. My product skills, as evidenced by the summary listof deals above, is broad and deep. I feel comfortable and have been successful with all of our product areas. I feel that my judgements in the areas of deal execution, personnel decisions, conflict management and related ethical or franchise matters are excellent. These judgements are sought by our clients and my partners. In the past few weeks, the new CEO of RR Donnelley asked me to personally negotiate RR Donnelley out of a very poorly performing JV with Bain Capital. I had turned down an IPO of the leading piece of the JV (which IPO has never taken place) and therefore had not been involved to date. The investment banks involved in the IPO (Lehman, Alex. Brown, Salomon, Goldman) had all tried and failed to resolve the dispute with Bain. I went into the assignment knowing the risks were great (i.e., fail in front of RR Donnelley in a first time assignment for the new CEO and/or antagonize Bain Capital an excellent client of the Firm). In approximately two days (although with a great deal of prior preparation time), I personally negotiated a settlement acceptable to each of RR Donnelley and Bain Capital. The CEO of RR Donnelley personally thanked me last week in my presence in front of the RR Donnelley Board of Directors and Bain Capital asked if I would go onto the newly constructed Board of the JV (which, of course, I declined). The Bain Capital partners have said they are amazed that an agreement was reached. Therefore, when necessary I can negotiate successfully even in difficult circumstances. I believe that I am an excellent communicator. I am an avid user of voice mail and cc: mail. I keep everyone up-to-date on deals where I am responsible or in connection with new business situations. I know every Associate, Vice President, Principal and Managing Director in each of the Regional Offices very well. As such, I frequently exchange telephone calls or voice mails with them when they are 'off-the-record' seeking advice on a deal or other type of situation. I follow their career progress very carefully and suggest changes when necessary. From a time management and productivity perspective, the Regional Offices are at or near the top of IBD in terms of revenue per officer or other similar measures. I work very hard and enjoydoing so. My face-to-face meetings with clients consistently exceed 250 meetings per year. I work late every day, work every weekend and due to the unusually heavy flow of business I took no vacation this Summer other than to drop off my two sons at school (I intend to make up for this around Christmas). As such, I hope and believe that I serve as a good role model for my colleagues. I have also been an active cross-seller for the Firm. Examples include bringing in money to be managed by the Firm in PCS or MSAM from TeleTech's CEO, TeleTech itself and Amway Japan. When Peter Allen left the Firm early in fiscal 1997, I immediately flew to Los Angeles to develop with Dan Ewell a response plan. I first told Dan that we would not bring anyone in above him to replace Peter. Second, we developed and implemented a plan to communicate with and overserve every client. This plan resulted in the fact that the Firm has not lost a single piece of business as a result of Peter's departure. 1997 is a record revenue year for the Los Angeles Office. After careful planning, I orchestrated Brad Crompton taking charge of our Canadian IBD practice late in 1996 replacing Peter Dey. This took place smoothly without causing Peter to leave the Firm. 1997 is a record revenue year for the Toronto Office. In 1997, the Chicago Office has hired three women and a man of color for the professional staff underscoring our commitment to a diverse work force. I was very pleased with my performance in 1997 and the performance of each of the offices. Regional Office revenue grew meaningfully. I was able to again have a record revenue production year. The consistency of client coverage, market share, level of professional experience and productivity grew in 1997. I very much enjoyed 1997 and I look forward to 1998. Morgan Stanley is an outstanding platform and we should be able to further grow our market share worldwide in 1998.

How many companies did you call on for the first time in 1997? Which of these companies did you develop business from in 1997? Which companies were first time mandates obtained from a competitor's traditional client? Why did we win the business?

Based upon a review of all of the documented meetings that I had in fiscal 1997, I met with approximately 30 companies for the first time. In many cases, the target companies were IBD prospects. However, in a number of cases, I met with company officials for the first time at the request of other areas of the Firm to assist them in pursuing business. This was most often true for PCS requests. Of this group, the Firm either executed business for the first time or is in the process of executing business for 14 of these companies and we have been promised or been strongly led to believe that we will be awarded business in the very near future for 3 of these companies. The list of first time business in 1997 for clients where I was actively involved includes the sale of Allwaste (Fee: $3.5 million), advisory work for Duty Free Shops (Fee: $1.1 million), sale of Guaranty Reserve (Fee: $1.7 million), common stock for Jacor (Fee: $1.0 million), follow-on equity deal for Sylvan Learning (Fee: $0.9 million), IPO of Aftermarket Technology (Fee: $1.6 million) and the upcoming IPO's of Stoneridge (Estimated fee: $2.5 million) and CH Robinson (Estimated fee: $2.0 million). While the reasons vary as to why we won the business from these first time clients, the most common reasons included personal relationship with decision-maker, perceived leading industry expertise, respected equity research analyst or simply better personal chemistry in the bake-off presentation.

What were the biggest disappointments in developing new business (excluding conflicts, losing bid situations) and what was learned from each? (CFD officers should include missed business in each product area).

The sale of Rand McNally. The CEO told me after the decision that if I had been positioned as the senior execution person we would have been awarded the business. I learned to trust my own selling skills and instincts even when they are in conflict with my partners. Two of my partners had concluded on their own that I should play a support role as opposed to the leading role in the final bake-off meeting. When they made their recommendation to me, I too quickly agreed; I did not want to appear egotistical or self-centered. One of these partners did not do a good job in the presentation. He answered certain questions completely improperly and in a manner that I would never have done. These were a series of standard questions that always come up in sell-side M&A bake-offs. Fortunately, the Firm represented the successful buyer of Rand McNally, AEA. -The sale of Sealy. Sam Zell, for personal reasons that will never be fully understood, simply awarded the business to Merrill Lynch after we had been told it was ours. I immediately set up a one-on-one meeting with Sam which, by the way, he does not like. I told him we had not been treated professionally, that the playing field was not level and that we were going to scale back our coverage efforts if it continued. The next day he called me to award us an $80 million primary follow-on equity transaction for Capital Trust, a company that he had just invested in and which I had never heard of before. He then caused Beacon Property to retain us in connection with its acquisition by Equity Office. He then called me to tell me that he had now made up for the Sealy matter. We have also been awarded the IPO of Midway Airlines by one of the Zell/Chilmark funds, but he did not mention Midway. The only lessons here are that (i) Sam will always spread the business around (in 1997 alone, he has done business with Morgan Stanley, JPMorgan, Salomon Brothers, DLJ, Merrill Lynch and Smith Barney to name just a few), (ii) we must keep careful track of the `final score` as he put it, and (iii) we must always follow-up lost business by asking for another piece of business. -The sale of Fel-Pro. This high quality, privately-held automotive parts manufacturer selected DLJ to represent it in its sale. The reasons we were not selected as told to us were (i) we knew each of the buyers so well that they were concerned about a conflict and (ii) DLJ told the Fel-Pro management that it should be directly and personally involved in every aspect of the process including hand carrying the OM's to the buyers even on day one. Our advice was to keep the management team separate for at least the first part of the process because every company which has a good relationship with the seller will try to take advantage of the relationship by trying to negotiate a deal immediately. In addition, there are several highly qualified buyers that can and will participate in an auction. This can create a very awkward situation if the seller has to say no early on to an important relationship. With the benefit of hindsight, I would not change our advice. However, it is important to always play to the ego of the client. We have been retained by Federal-Mogul on the buy-side. If their deal fails for T&N (which appears unlikely) or if they can do both, we will end up fine from a revenue perspective. Federal-Mogul has expressed interest in doing both.

Section II. Building the Franchise

How did you enhance the Firm's franchise this year (e.g., cross selling; development of significant new client relationships;difficult execution/structuring of a particularly complex transaction; broaden the firm's reputation in your industry.

As noted in Section 1B, I have made contact with numerous new prospects for the Firm thus far in 1997. I have called on approximately 30 new names thus far in 1997. Sunbeam, LaSalle Partners, the Chicago Bulls, et. al., Advanced Silicon Materials, Sylvan Learning Centers, Aftermarket Technology and Stoneridge are some of the highlights. This resulted in substantial new business for the Firm in 1997. I also assisted PCS, MSAM and IED in getting business. Examples include new PCS money to manage from TeleTech, new money to manage for MSAM from Amway Japan and hedging trades for IED from a local Chicago-based investment firm. My successful efforts to extricate RR Donnelley from an acrimonious JV with Bain Capital as noted in Section 1A clearly enhanced our franchise and strengthened the Firm's relationship with each of Bain Capital and RR Donnelley. I have also contributed a meaningful amount of time to my role as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and as Chairman of its Finance Committee. In a small business community like Chicago, it is important to maintain a high profile in connection with serving the community. This, of course, allows me to remain in close contact with many of the area's leading CEO's whoalso serve on the Board. I have also regularly sent Firm literature to leading partners of law firms to insure that they are aware of our product strengths. This has been particularly important in the equity area. Lastly, I have encouraged each MD ineach of the Regional Offices to get to know their respective area head for Dean Witter. I am now coordinating closely, for example, with Tom O'Neil in Chicago.

Who did you recruit and/or mentor this year? Describe the results of your efforts.

I interviewed numerous people throughout the year. I made the lead presentation to kick off Kellogg School recruiting for the 1996-1997 recruiting season. I played an important role in recruiting (i) Richard Drouhin as a consultant and Vice Chairman of Morgan Stanley Canada Limited, (ii) Steve Cramer as a lateral hire for the Los Angeles office, (iii) Anand Gowda as a lateral hire for the Chicago office from Price Waterhouse, (iv) Jill Pick for the Chicago office as a University of Chicago graduate who had been made an offer from Dean Witter, and (v) Jeffrey Yingling an MD for Dean Witter in Chicago who the Firm hired in Chicago as a Principal in PUG. There are many people in the Regional Offices that I mentor. Every year for differing reasons I agree to have quarterly reviews with different professionals. In 1997, I agreed to do so for Charles Hilliard of the Los Angeles office as we almost lost him to DMG in late calendar 1996. He has remained with the Firm and will have Firm revenue in 1997 in the range of $15-$16 million.

Further, he is now up for and I believe deserves to be promoted to Principal effective December 1, 1997. I also played an important role over the past several months in encouraging Mark Bradley of the San Francisco office to remain with the Firm which Mark has just concluded to do.

Section III. Goals and Objectives

Develop preliminary business and professional development goals for 1998. Associates should focus on improving their professional/execution skills. Officers' goals should include ways to strengthen their client/business development skills.

My goals for fiscal 1998 would include (i) producing Firm revenue of at least $70 million, (ii) assisting the Toronto office achieve at least US$60 million in Firm revenue, (iii) improve the staffing in the Los Angeles and San Francisco offices, (iv) get each professional in the Regional Offices more adept at pitching our bridge lending and product bundling capabilities, (v) hold a Regional Office MD-only one day conference on the many issues common to each of the offices similar to the Technology Group meeting and (vi) work at keeping intact and motivated all of the excellent people that we have in each of the Regional Offices. The teams in each of the offices have come together nicely, we have momentum in each of the offices and they are being veryproductive. From the perspective of enhancing my leadership capabilities, I intend to pursue the following three leadership goals: 1. As our business grows, it is important that I stay focused on the key tasks and most important priorities. I believe that I accomplished this in 1997, but it is extremely important that I continue to do so. 2. Several of my partners and colleagues comment on my energy level and determination and the fact that this serves as an example for others. In order to continue to grow the business, I need to be extremely active and hard-working. 3. I need to strive for creative ways by which we can grow the business. I need to increasingly spend time on the 'big picture,' as was discussed in the Leadership Conference. Item (v) above will be a useful action, but as the Regional Office revenue moves above $400 million, 'big picture' issues will play an important role in growing the business and increasing our market share. I look forward to achieving these goals in 1998 and to a successful year.

What skills and abilities would you put to greater use? Describe training or other support that would leverage your effectiveness? What are your long-term career goals at Morgan Stanley?

As mentioned in prior years, I continue to aspire to positions of increased responsibility within the Firm. I continue to believe that my managerial skills are underutilized. Further and as mentioned last year, at the right time and only if it serves the Firm's interests, I would like to return to London or New York.

Fiedorek, Bruce D (N)	Observed a very strong relationship with the CEO and CFO of Sunbeam. These relationships were the most important factor in the Firm's success in obtaining strategic mandates at Sunbeam and in working around and through a possible conflict that developed in the course of dialogue with Sunbeam. Have seen a similar pattern in a second situation in Chicago. Bill clearly has senior level client impact which helps generate business. —
	Outside IBD
Perella, Joseph R. (N) (EvDir) (Institutional Securities Mgmt)	Aggressive in the pursuit of new business.–Markets broad range of products.–Supportive of new business effort in the regions.
	Colleague Comments
	Within IBD
Abdel-Meguid, Tarek F (N)	Bill is an extremely commercial banker and a tenacious competitor. He is highly focused on money making opportunities, sometimes to a fault. He is incredibly energetic, very diligent. Very strong commercial results—
Kitts, Robert W. (N)	Bill is an excellent senior coverage officer. Bill is extraordinarily systematic in identifying and pursuing new business opportunities. Bill can be quite persuasive with clients and has good credibility with senior management.–Bill, in large part dueto his consistent, persistent calling efforts has established a number of strong ongoing relationships with clients in the Midwest. Bill is always marketing all of the products and services to all of his clients. Bill is very effective getting the mandate.
Niehaus, Christopher J. (N)	Bill is one of IBD's most prolific business generators. He is aggressive, works extremely hard and is available to clients or team members any hour of the day.–Client Skills - He spends the time to understand the clients business and objectives even infar afield industries, like real estate. He develops concensus on advice and then persuasively delivers it to clients. Clients really respect him.–Extremely good at cross-selling the Firm.
Porat, Ruth M. (N)	Very effective with clients: They trust his judgment and rely on him for guidance without question. His strength with clients comes from the combination of strong deal judgment and work ethic. He commits to clients that he will be an integral part ofan execution team and then he somehow finds the time to stay involved enough in the transaction. Clients respect him greatly. –Initiative/creative/aggressive/commercial: He is very persistent with clients. He identifies his target list and then does not let go if there is an attractive opportunity. At the same time, he retains a very high quality screen and does an excellent job repositioning clients to retain the best commercial outcome while maintaining a high qualitystandard. For example, we were working on an equity financing for Scottsman, following an acquisition we helped the company complete. When the Companypre-announced weaker than expected earnings, he very adeptly turned the business into a high yield deal which the Company had not ever considered doing. It was the right outcome for the client and it was the right outcome for the firm to move away fromequity. –Effective leader because he evidences the business development hunger that is needed in CFD officers. In my opinion his work ethic and focus on business development opportunities sets a good standard for junior officers because he sends a positive message that business upside is limited primarily by one's effort.
Spence, John F. (N)	One of Bill's greatest strengths, and he has many, is his ability to be persuasive with clients. Each time that I am with Bill during a new business development pitch, I am amazed at his ability to forcefully, yet politely, convey the importance of having Morgan Stanley lead manage a transaction. I have been with Morgan Stanley for 12 years and he is among the top two or three most persuasive bankers with whom I have worked. –Another of Bill's strengths is his grasp of the broad array of products offered by Morgan Stanley. He competes effectively for all types of business - equity, debt, convertibles, M&A, PCS, asset management - and he does so with a relatively thorough grounding in each of these areas. –Bill is also particularly effective at maintaining a strategic dialogue with his clients. His breadth of experience serves him well and his clients seek his counsel on difficult and complex issues. What is equally impressive, and perhaps moreso, is his ability to maintain a strategic dialogue with clients across an extremely wide range of industries (from consumer products and auto parts to insurance and advertising). This is not an easy task, but he does it with great skill.

Stynes, James B (N)	Tenacious banker and relentless hard worker. Pursues new business with laserlike focus and endless perseverance. Develops good relationships with clients through constant attention and his persistence in ensuring that product people focus on his clients. Overall, very effective coverage officer. —

Fitzpatrick, Steven B. (N) (GCM - Joint Venture)	Bill has excellent client skills. He has done a good job at Chrysler and is able to assess the competitive landscape and influence the client. He was very helpful in soliciting Chrysler's debt business. He followed up well and developed a game plan to give us the best possible chance to win —
Nathan, Saul (N) (GCM - Joint Venture)	Bill has an excellent skills. In the LaSalle Partners IPO, he maintained an extremely close dialog with Stuart Scott the Chairman and Bill Sullivan the CFO and understood clearly the goals and expectations of this group in choosing Morgan Stanley to lead mange their offering. For example, faced with a strong relationship at a personal level between the Chairman and one co-manager, and knowing client's preference to help that co-manager, Bill was instrumental in distinguishing between perceived needs and reality. —

Abdel-Meguid, Tarek F (N)	Bill is a strong advocate of his people. He sets a good example in terms of working hard. Strong banking skill set, great user of voice mail. Makes an effort to help regional offices with issues—
Kitts, Robert W. (N)	Bill is one of the hardest working MD's I have seen in my 15 years on Wall Street. Bill has an incredible work ethic and in that sense serves as an excellent role model to us all.–Bill is excellent at providing direction and devoting an appropriate amount of time and attention to transaction.–Bill has a good working knowledge of the Firm's products and presents himself in a very confident and sincere manner.
Niehaus, Christopher J. (N)	Bill is extremely knowledgeable about a wide array of banking products. He quickly identifies the relevant issues, has sound judgment and articulates himself very concisely. –Bill is a very effective manager. He provides deal teams with very clear direction, spends the time to get to know more junior colleagues and is all inclusive and prolific in his voice mail communication.–Time Management - Bill crams an awful lot of business into his day. He also doesn't waste other people's time.
Porat, Ruth M. (N)	Strong Team player: He is a very positive memeber of a team. He works well with colleagues. He motivates teammates to do their best because he is a workaholic (sends the message that hard work is key) but at the same time he appears to be respectful of his teammates' views. Too often workaholics become impatient with colleagues and convey that they are not carrying their load. Bill is a dramatic contrast -- he seems to motivate his teams. –Leads by example: Bill does an excellent job balancing the demands for his time, spending the appropriate amount of time on execution. He delivers high quality advice because he takes the time to understand the issues his clients are facing -- sounds like a basic part of CFD but many senior people are not as close to the facts of a trasaction as is Bill. –Excellent judgment. He clearly understands the strategic issues confronting his clients and does an excellent job assessing their alternaitves.
Spence, John F. (N)	Bill's judgment and decision making are tremendous strengths. He is a rational and analytical thinker with extraordinary ability to cut through a variety of complex issues to focus on the one or two items tat are most critical. When I have had difficult situations to deal with, I have frequently turned to Bill for a sanity check on my judgments. –Bill's communication skills are quite strong (no pun intended). He is confident and articulate with all types of audiences, from board meetings to performance evaluations.–Bill's work ethic is legendary. I would guess that I have spent nearly one-third of my Saturday's in 1997 with at least one conference call involving Bill and close to 100% of my Saturdays with at least one voice mail from Bill.

He was also particularly good about conveying client feedback as to my performance after the offering. --

Fiedorek, Bruce D (N)	Continue to be disciplined on the quality of business variable. I did not think he was as soberly reflective on Firm franchise issues as he might have been on one specific piece of business that he was pursuing (a possible hostile mandate for a prospective client with a controversial image; I should note I supported taking this on, but Bill struck me as giving no weight to possible controversy). --

Colleague Comments

Within IBD

Abdel-Meguid, Tarek F (N)	Bill can be overly aggressive in terms of trying to capture transactional opportunities. Makes some judgements which are sometimes very close to, if not over, the line. A number of individuals have had experiences which I have had to deal with on conflicts, etc. which reflect this --
Kitts, Robert W. (N)	Bill sometimes needs to be more selective and judicious in his assessment of the attractiveness of pursuing certain pieces of business and the impact that executing such pieces of business may have on the organization (resource usage) and the franchise.--
Niehaus, Christopher J. (N)	Client Skills - Bill has a very aggressive style which does not sell with everyone. I would encourage him to modulate his approach depending on his audience. -I think Bill would have better bonding with certain clients if he relaxed more, was lower key and related in a sincere fashion to their personal and professional side. Bill's aggressiveness/confidence can come off at times as arrogance which put off certain clients.
Porat, Ruth M. (N)	None--
Spence, John F. (N)	At times, Bill exaggerates slightly to try to make a point more convincing. On occasions, I have seen clients react somewhat skeptically when Bill has exaggerated. I do not believe that Bill needs to exaggerate because the conviction with which he communicates his points is already persuasive. The exaggeration has the potential to undermine Bill's credibility. --
	Outside IBD
Nathan, Saul (N) (GCM - Joint Venture)	Occasionally he can be overprotective of his personal client's interests. For example, he was more judgement about what one of his clients perceived to be a conflict that he perhaps should have been - (Teletech / Startek) even after the assignment had been discussed with him. He was talked out of his client's view quite quickly, however. --

Perella, Joseph R. (N) (EvDir) (Institutional Securities Mgmt)	Bill should engage less in self promotion and focus more on developing a team approach, giving credit to others.-The one problem I continue to have with Bill is that you never seem to get the whole story unless you probe very hard. Abdel-Meguid, Tarek F (N)	Bill continues to suffer the consequences of less than a straightforward approach. Gives people, including me, the impression that he is not completely up front. This needs to improve; there are numerous approaches to me from very credible people on this issue —
Kitts, Robert W. (N)	Bill can sometimes exaggerate or overstate the case or present the most optimistic scenario to the client. Bill needs to sometime defer important judgements to the product experts that he has brought into a client situation. Bill sometimes `races` to answer a client's question without consulting with the relevant product expert. -Bill has a tendency to be extremely hands on during the course of an assignment and needs to delegate more responsibility and provide more head room for other members of the execution team.-Bill needs to use the word `we` more often and `I` less often with clients.
Niehaus, Christopher J. (N)	Very little to comment on here. Sometimes his oral communication gets too rushed in delivery due to his excitement and the words come out too fast for the audience.-I have seen substantial improvement in how Bill relates and leads internally, but he could still smooth some of his edges a little more.-
Porat, Ruth M. (N)	None—
Spence, John F. (N)	As could most Morgan Stanley professionals, Bill could do a better job of providing developmental feedback during projects or immediately following projects. As I mentioned in discussing Bill's strengths, he is a rational and analytical thinker and his feedback could certainly help those around him develop. -Bill is a perfectionist and that has served him well throughout his career. However, he often will commit to provide a client with certain information that may be beyond the scope of Morgan Stanley's expertise (such as best practices for Treasury functions at major corporations). As a result, a significant amount of time is spent by junior professionals trying to pull together information that is not readily available nor does the finished product deliver the incremental benefit the client had hoped for. In summary, I would encourage Bill to use more caution in promising to deliver items which do not fit within the general areas of expertise within Morgan Stanley. -
Stynes, James B (N)	Sometimes gets out ahead of the team on advice. While he is a consensus builder, if he is asked by a client for transaction advice, he occasionally volunteers advice without consultating with M&A team. Not a serious issue but one that would make clientmanagement smoother. —

Describe Strengths

Leadership

* Bill is one of the best bankers I've ever seen and is, without a doubt the best manager I've seen. He leads by example-meaning hard work, integrity, creativity and an extreme commitment to the firm manifested in his unyielding pace and tremendous focuson clients. –Bill is well organized and always maintains composure. One of Bill's best leadership traits is that he is genuinely fun to be with and truly enjoys his job. He has a way of being quite intense and driving people but in such a pleasing way that heis not intimidating. –Bill is extremely responsive. You can reach him 24 hours a day. He prepares well for every meeting and has no interest in attending anything without adding value (ie he never coasts)
* Bill is a great role model. He is one of the hardest working senior managing directors at the Firm. His level of commitment inspires those more junior members of the team to perform at the highest levels and leads to the best advice for the client. Billis the only person I know who consistently leaves voice mails at 6:00 a.m. on Saturday morning. Also, he is always willing to step in when a younger person is faced with a tough issue. Very reliable and willing to help. Several times this year I went toBill with complicated issues that needed senior focus. Bill never pushed me off, and on every occasion, helped me resolve the situation in the right way for the Firm, the client, and me (in that order). —
* Bill leads by example (from a distance) - he is hard worker and has very good business and commercial instincts. He has strong technical/product knowledge and skills. Bill is a good advocate on an as needed basis for resource allocation and organizational support. —
* Bill always leads by example and, when appropriate, leads by direction. He leads by example simply by conducting himself in a first class way at all times. He works extremely hard, he is passionate about our Firm's success and he inspires confidence and a competitiveness in those who work for him. He is completely honest and very direct. There is no ambiguity with Bill. You know where you stand. You know what is expected of you. He does not view his job as one who is responsible for simply grading subordinates. He does everything in his power to help subordinates do their job better. He's willing to fly seemingly anywhere on a moments notice if he can. He has tremendous energy and drive. This unusual combination of skills which allows him to be an extremely tough boss while at the same time maintaining very strong personal relationships with those who work for him. I feel Bill has done an excellent job of managing my career. He is extremely careful, precise and thorough in his evaluations. He spends a great deal of time of evaluating individuals development needs and is extremely specific and concrete in terms of goals for the upcoming year. He is an experienced investment banker who has seen a lot and as a result he knows were various bankers should be at each step of their career. One believes when working with Bill that he truly has a long term plan for those in his charge. —
* Leads by example - tremendous energy level and dedication to the business. Utilizes every possible advantage in the pursuit of business and is usually a winner. His direction, accountability and skill has been the key factor in the success of this office. –Establishes goals for group and is tireless in achieving those goals.–Cross-selling always looks for opportunity to sell the firm and all of its products, particularly PCS. Truly at the top of MD group in this area.
* Very strong work ethic which serves as a good example, i.e., voice mail is Bill's medium and if I need his input on something. I can generally count on a response within an hour.–Very specific in his expectations; there is generally no ambiguity in anyone's relationship with Bill.–Knows the Firm's product line well and when involved, is useful at cross selling.
* Building commitment: Bill provides an ideal balance, giving our coverage group a tremendous amount of independence to pursue our business plan, while at the same time keeping abreast of our progress and always being available and willing to provide support when needed, either with clients or internally on resource issues. –Leading by example: Bill has an exceptional work ethic and is amazingly focused and tenacious in going after new business. He is a very solid technical banker and this, combined with his drive, provides a great example to me and others in my group of the motivation and discipline expected of senior coverage officers. –Communication: Bill does a good job of making sure that the groups that report to him are all marching to the same tune as well as providing his perspective on important events both inside and outside the firm.
* Direction: Bill is very clear and concise as to his expectations for a project and its team members. He has been very supportive of the recently reestablished MARD effort in Chicago as a business policy matter, and that same clarity of purpose manifests itself on client coverage duties and specific execution assignments. –Commitment: Bill ensures that his team will be committed to a client project by weighing in at the appropriate level to append resources from other areas/divisions as needed. If, for example, research coverage is an issue, he will call Dennis Shea to correct the problem. He thus relieves the team of the need to fight internal or bureaucratic battles. Bill is also very much improved at delegating responsibility to teams and playing the more senior role his position demands. –Confrontation: In a positive sense, Bill will meet issues head on to ensure that the Firm and its client interests are being served. He has made very good progress in leaving behind the Salomon mentality of 'I got the call, we'll do the business.' He has been very much more discriminating in pursuing the mandates available to us than in the past.
* Bill leads by example better than anyone else I work with. He is incredibly driven, incredibly talented, and refuses to deliver anything less than the highest quality work product.–He manages people and projects very proactively and is capable of handling incredible volumes of activity. He creates opportunities where others fail to and takes charge of situations where he sees opportunity and makes things happen. He played a lead role in ensuring that the firm put its best foot forward in pursuit of the ASiMI IPO and as a result the team was well coordinated, driven hard and we a eventually won this very important peice of business.
* Bill was incredibly helpful and effective with the senior management at LaSalle Partners. He got totally immersed in the Company's IPO and was an enormous help to me and others working on the deal. Bill's consistent and extensive involvement in this rather small IPO flattered the client and the other bankers on the deal. –Bill is the best type of leader. On more than one occasion he referred to 'working for me' as his role in this deal. Bill always wanted to know how he could be most helpful and effective to the day-to-day deal team. Bill is very accessable, veryfocused on the issues, and ultimately very good with both the client and the bankers. Bill's work ethic is the definition of a leadership by example. He works hard, is incredibly responsive, and is encouraging to those working for him. –Working with Bill Strong on the LaSalle IPO was a very important learning experience for me. He challenges convention, pushes the client (in a very positive way) and is wholly tenacious in his desire to live up to Morgan Stanley standards of excellence.

- Bill provides honest constructive feedback throuout the year, not just at evaluation time. He is readily accessible and maintains a complete open door policy. He is extremely responsive to voicemail-it appears to me that he checks voicemail almost hourly throughout a weekend. ~Bill is great with clients. He maintains strong relationships with a large group of people and across a wide array of topics. He quite literally is an expert in just about every product and every industry.~
- Bill stays on top of every situation without excessively checking up. In fact, as part of his effort to mentor and coach, Bill concentrates on letting more junior member of the team have enough running room to grow and gain confidence. Several times this year, Bill encouraged me to take the lead which gave me added confidence and helped me gain credibility with various clients. Not only did I get a chance to prove myself but Bill's confidence in me enhanced various clients` confidence in me. ~Bill is an active communicator. When you work with Bill, you are never out of the loop. He constantly makes an effort to include even the most junior team members in the events surrounding the coverage of a client or the execution of a transaction.Of note, Bill is a great listener. Despite an unbelievably busy schedule, when you get his attention and he devotes time to a topic, he understands every nuance and probes to develop the best all around picture. His attention to detail, whether it is in analyzing a situation and dissecting the facts or proof reading for typos, is unlike any I have seen at his level in corporate finance. His intensity level and desire to get the right answer is a large part of the fun in working with him. ~
- Bill does a good job of defining expectations both for me as an individual and for the Canadian corporate finance group as a whole.~~
- Holds people accountable - always on top of all business in the region and both helps the group pursue business and holds officers accountable for missed business.~Manages for success - winning and the desire to win are important attributes to instill in people and Bill is very strong in this regard.~Strong in praise for people - has positive impact on morale.
- Has helped me define my role given that I am not a classic investment banker.~A very helpful advocate for additional resources.~
- Feedback--Bill does a great job of motivating people in our group through positive feedback. Whenever there is an important piece of new business, Bill takes the time to call or voicemail the team to deliver an `attaboy`.~Active oversight--Without micromanaging, Bill seeks periodic updates on the status of the business and always has a good sense of where key transactions and initiatives stand and what the key personnel and client issues facing the office are.~Mentoring--Bill is always willing to takethe time to provide career advice and guidance when I need it. During these conversations, I always feel that Bill is fully engaged and never that his mind is elsewhere.
- Feedback: Bill has been very responsive in providing feedback this year, from ad hoc comments in the cab on the way back from a meeting to more lengthy, yet still informal, epilogue type discussions at critical points throughout a project or solicitation.~Coaching: Bill has gone out of his way this year to provide guidance and mentoring this year, both relaying personal anecdotes and providing suggestions to help the group's efforts. He has displayed a genuine interest in my career development and has deemed it a personal challenge to help me advance this year. ~Results: The Midwest CFD results speak for themselves this year; Bill's stewardship over the last five years has translated into a group which, as a whole, is much more proactive, commercial, and successful, without compromising the qualities and standards which are the hallmark of the Firm's franchise.
- Bill drives all of the people he works with to their highest level of performance. He expects commitment but delivers his own commitment to set the example. He appears to have an endless supply of energy and motivation such that you can't help but work hard to support him. ~He is critical yet supportive of the work done for him. He makes substantive as well as detail oriented comments always leaving the impression that he has thoroughly reveiwed your work. He is apologetic if not able to give adequate attention to your work, a gesture which is often appreciated given the time generally spent to deliver him a high quality work product. ~
- Bill is very effective at cross selling the Firm's capabilities. He helped to identify and push forward both PCS opportunities and cash management opportunities.~~

Describe Development Needs

Leadership

- My most meaningful suggestion for Bill is that he at times try to minimize exaggerating in his presentation to clients. Bill has a tendency to overstate an issue or problem and over emphasize the creativity of our solution. At times, even if Bill is correct in his thesis, he undermines the credibility and power of his message. For instance, `We created this security just for you`, or `No one else is even remotely as good a a player as we are in this area`, or ` We have spoken to all of the top people in every product area to develop this advice for you` or on a Sunday afternoon, speaking to a client, `I just got off a conference call with three of my partners and we decided....`. Bill is extremely effective 95% of the time, but 5% of the time would play better if he toned it down just a little. ~~
- While I appreciate that Bill is stretched extremely thin as an investment banker given all his numerous responsibilities, I would encourage him to develop closer personal relationships with the more junior team members. Particularly associates who could benefit greatly from his guidance and mentoring. ~~
- Would like to see Bill be more direct and open on all issues. Tends to be less direct on difficult issues - the ones that most need to be discussed.~~
- Sometimes I wonder if Bill doesn't spend too much time on logistics etc., i.e., sometimes all the motion looks a bit contrived; his time should be spend on quality issues, e.g., franchise direction, business development.~ If he is going to lead our business, it's important that he improves his knowledge of our business.~Given the importance of the Dey/Crompton relationship, Bill should have spent more time with us; we were left to our own resources.
- Artificial Deadlines: Bill is still moving away from the Salomonesque technique of management by intimidation, though there remain certain circumstances (whose specifics are too revealing) where Bill has used artificial deadlines to create stress for working group teams and whose intent has been simply to reinforce his prioritization. ~Delegation: Bill at times relishes the intensity of the analytical exercise with such zeal that one can only imagine him checking exhibits for numerical accuracy as if he were a second year associate. He has established that he knows the businessand the numbers, yet still can be far too involved in the details. ~Creativity: Bill does not have enough time to `blue sky` ideas for clients and to develop thoughts and topics to discuss with clients. One senses he can be reacting to the day's headlines as his basis for business development conversations.

Comments

- Bill often has a tendencey to over exaggerate and diminish his impact on a client or particular situation. He displays so much skill and good judgment yet his efforts to impress people often go to far and appear transparent to everyone in the meeting. These over reaching comments are often simply ignored as marketing oriented yet on several occassions it led to raised eyebrows and weakened credibility. This tendency to go too far is one quality of Bill which is frequently cited among colleagues within the firm. —

Managing Performance

- Bill is a great manager and very flexible in his approach. He is not generally wasteful or unnecessarily tough on resources. However, I do think that Bill could think through a little more carefully what he needs and whether the additional work he requests at the last minute is absolutely necessary. —
- Needs to spend more time in the branch.–Not enough playback on performance; once a year is not enough.–Difficult for him to be senior banker; Canadian clients will expect the senior banker to come from New York.
- Managing Expectations: In part because of an extremely active and productive business environment, Bill has been much more successful in managing expectations upward than in recalibrating them to more realistic levels.—
- Bill often asks too much without any regard for other time committments. He views all resources as endless and at his unqualified disposal. In those instances when he piles on the work without regard, he diminsihes the otherwise overwhelmingly positive impact he has on the people who work for him –Bill does not always scrutinize the business opportunities he pursues nor does he always think through work requests fully. This can translate to unnecessary work which he does not always openly acknowledge. He hasa tendency to ask for things in writing which could be much more effeciently communicated verbally. I write more memos for Bill than all the others with whom I work in the office. –

Exceptional Performance Description

- Bill is the most productive investment banker I have seen. I truly believe that he may be our single most valuable resource. He uses his time extremely wisely and works all the time. These facts in conjunction with his vast experience, nose for deals, and great relationship skills make him uniquely valuable. Bill came to the Chicago office and inherited a sleepy culture where the firm was not being marketed effectively and our share was low. In a remarkably short period of time he turned thingsaround, tripled the number of relationships we have and probably quadrupled revenues. This was accomplished in a mature and extremely competitive market and while he was tending to the needs of the other regional offices as well. He is a textbook senior banker.
- Bill is absolutely fantastic to work with and the primary reason I choose to remain in Chicago. While Frank English and John Adams are important to the office and my level of commitment to and excitement with the business , Bill is clearly the leader from my perspective and the primary reason for our tremendous success. I learn a great deal from him, trust him, and importantly enjoy working for him. That in my view is the litmus test. I am putting my career in part in Bill's hands and feel very comfortable given his outstanding professional and interpersonal skills. I hope he remains at the helm here in Chicago for the foreseeable future.
- Establishes Direction/Leads by Example: As noted earlier, Bill is a dynamo with an outstanding work ethic. He is extremely devoted to his job and his specific responsibilities for others at our firm. He is passionate about our ability to succeed as aFirm and as individuals. He is clear and concise and specific in establishing direction and goals for individual team members. He is truly one of the most outstanding leaders at our firm.
- I was especially impressed with Bill's handling of the recent Donnelley project. Most importantly, he listened to the (new) CEO's objectives and worked with the team to devise a strategy to meet those objectives. These goals were dramatically different than had been the operative goals in the past, and Bill did not let the biases of other client team members sway him from the CEO's new marching orders. Further, in implementing the new strategy in negotiations with the counterparty to this project,he stuck unswervingly to the script, and avoided the temptation to engage in `gotcha` type interaction with the other side, satisfying (though counterproductive) as it might have been.
- Bill is truly exceptional in his ability to lead both execution and business development efforts. His hit rate in key meetings is unparalleled. He engages when a situation becomes difficult and almost always emerges victorious. He is a true winner and works hard to consistently win. He leads by example and can only be faulted for sometimes asking too much but only because he is incredibly driven to win at all costs.
- Working for Bill Strong was one of the best experiences I have had at Morgan Stanley. He is a tireless worker, he is highly responsive to both the client and to his subordinates, and he has the characteristics of a pit bull when he wants his way on anissue (meant as a positive!). I learned a lot about negotiation skills from Bill during the LaSalle IPO process.

Review of 1997 Firmwide Performance E Performance

1997 Performance Summary

Summarize the individual's performance in 1997 relative to the objectives set for the year.

Bill has continued to enhance the MS franchise. Regional offices achieved a record, with market by market share improvements. Self evaluation states personal revenue contribution at $90 million, with excellent backlog including the Sunbeam mandate.. Revenue contribution included deals in all product areas of IBD. Bill met with 30 companies for the first time in FY96, either as prospects or at the request of another MS business unit with business resulting from 14 of these companies. From a revenue standpoint, the year was great. There are performance areas where comments continue to reoccur and which need continued focus. See developmental areas. Surely, Bill will be disappointed by these but he will have to work on them harder in 1998 than he did in 1997.

PRIMARY STRENGTHS

Client Skills/Business Development	How to Leverage Strengths
Client Skills: Very persuasive with clients. Aggressive in pursuit of new business. Has impact at CEO and Board level. Shows good judgment and decision making.
Tenacity and Hard Work: Hands-on; one of the hardest working MD's in the Firm. Seems to accomplish lots in the time given. Leads by example; provides feedback in a timely manner; famous for use of voice mails, especially early in the a.m.

Professional & Execution Skills/Mgmt/Teamwork	How to Leverage Strengths
Product Knowledge: Grasp of broad array of products offered by MS is exceptional. He is also able to deal across a wide spectrum of industries.

DEVELOPMENT NEEDS

Client Skills/Business Development	Suggestions to Improve
Balance: Overly aggressive at times in trying to capture transactions, so as to miss possible negative impact on resource usage or the franchise.	Try to be more selective in pursuing business. If there are doubts, seek advice from colleagues. Also try not to get into details; your time is better spent. Resources are not endless so prioritize what is important before making requests for work.
Prone to Exaggeration: Can cause skeptical reaction from client and loss of credibility with teammates. Also a tendency to over commit to clients on certain items which are not in MS area of expertise.	Don't oversell; you don't have to. As your stature grows, your salesmanship must mature.

Review of 1997 Firmwide Performance E Performance

Professional & Execution Skills/Mgmt/Teamwork	Suggestions to Improve
Straight Forwardness: People have the impression that he is not being completely up front. Also, certain product areas think he should consult with them before racing to answer a client question. Some suggest he still manages by intimidation or setting artificial deadlines.	Needs to work on being more open and transparent with colleagues.

1998 OBJECTIVES

Business Goals

Maintain revenue contribution at or above current level of $90 million. Provide support for continued improvement in the regional offices. All this will require continued commitment of the kind Bill has demonstrated to all. However, he should try and relax once in a while.

Professional Development Goals

Bill really has to work to eliminate the items mentioned in developmental areas. All of this seems interrelated to the extremely high standards and goals Bill sets for himself and his people. I don't know a better word than balance to describe what he has to strive for. Bill comments that his skills are under utilized and that if it serves the Firm he would return to New York or London, i.e., he aspires to a position with more responsibility. This aspiration is a good one, but Bill should work on the developmental areas in order to be positioned to be considered for new responsibilities.

EVALUATEE COMMENTS:

The review was excellent. I look forward to improving in the areas mentioned and to continuing to contribute in a meaningful way to the Firm. I very much enjoyed 1997. I look forward to 1998.

Section II. Building the Franchise

How did you enhance the Firm's franchise this year (e.g., cross selling; development of significant new client relationships;difficult execution/structuring of a particularly complex transaction; broaden the firm's reputation in your industry.

I enhanced the Firm's franchise in several ways during 1998. First, I assisted in meaningfully expanding the size and scope of the regional offices' practice during the year including both revenue and professional staffing. I assisted the North American Regional Offices in producing a record level of revenue and I have already personally produced over $100 million, well above my comparable YTD 1997 total and my sixth record year in a row. As mentioned above, I called on 25 new companies during the year. I spoke at two leading conferences on M&A matters and unique financing issues. These were the Tulane Corporate Law Institute and the Northwestern University Law School Garrett Institute. I was asked to and I accepted the position as Vice Chairman of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. Among other things this requires that I supervise the management of the Symphony's endowment of $140 million. Further, I chaired the Opening Night fundraising committee to benefit the musicians' pension plan. We raised a record amount this year. The Symphony puts me in touch with virtually every meaningful CEO in the Chicago area. I led the Firm's efforts in securing the mandate to lead the IPO of Celestica which at $415 million is one of the largest technology offerings that the Firm has led. I specifically took advantage of my strong personal and professional relationship with Tony Melman, the Chief Operating Officer of Onex, the controlling shareholder of Celestica. I also led our efforts to represent True North in its acquisition of Bozell Jacobs. In the middle of our efforts, a large French company commenced a hostile tender offer for True North. We successfully completed the acquisition and we successfully defended True North. Our efforts included myproviding of a deposition as well as testifying in Federal Court on December 23rd in support of True North. I have also assisted Mr. Tom O'Neil, the regional head of Dean Witter in his recruiting efforts for significant producers. I am also acting as team leader for Allstate in the Firm's pilot program in North America for cross-divisional coordination of our efforts in covering large clients. I have also assisted in producing PCS and other non-IBD division revenue. Lastly, I organized a 1 1/2 daymeeting of the regional office heads to discuss issues of mutual concern. That meeting produced a detailed report and several specific recommendations which I developed and which I have forwarded to Rob Jones for review and consideration.

Who did you recruit and/or mentor this year? Describe the results of your efforts.

Throughout the year I recruited actively at the college or graduate school level for Analysts and Associates. Further, I actively recruited lateral hires as well including Brian McKay, Bob Ellis and Dan McClure for the Toronto Office and Scott Norby for the Chicago Office. Each of these four individuals were recruited from direct competitors. I counseled Mark Bradley, John Adams, Dan Ewell and Peter Dey during the year to remain with the Firm. Each of them for differing reasons contemplated leavingthe Firm. I believe that my relationships with each of them as well as the other professionals in the regional offices play an important part in the consistency of our staffing and coverage efforts and therefore our growing success from both revenue and market share perspectives. I also spent a considerable amount of time in assisting the strengthening of the relationship between Peter Dey and Brad Crompton. This improving relationship and role clarification have, in my judgement, played a role in the growing success in Canada.

Section III. Goals and Objectives

Develop preliminary business and professional development goals for 1999. Associates should focus on improving their professional/execution skills. Officers' goals should include ways to strengthen their client/business development skills.

First, I will endeavor in the early part of fiscal 1999 to see through the recommendations which emanated from the regional office head meeting. Implementation of these recommendations are necessary to provide for the continued growth of the regional office revenue production as well as simply maintaining market share. Second, I will try to again increase my personal revenue production in 1999 for the seventh straight year. I intend to continue to focus on Canada in 1999. This includes not only continuing to monitor the Dey-Crompton relationship, but also following to conclusion the possible acquisition of RBC Dominion Securities by the Firm. I also want to assist Steve Trauber in growing his business which includes getting increased support forhim in the Houston Office.

What skills and abilities would you put to greater use? Describe training or other support that would leverage your effectiveness? What are your long-term career goals at Morgan Stanley?

In prior years, I have commented that my management skills are being underutilized. I continue to believe that is the case. I continue to aspire to larger and more challenging roles at the Firm.

Section I. 1998 Performance Summary

Describe your performance relative to your business goals and to the relevant performance criteria (see the Performance Criteria Matrix for details). Your comments should not exceed the space provided.

I am very pleased with my performance in 1998. Further, I am especially pleased with the performance of the Regional North American offices. On two occasions in 1998, I reviewed my 1997 Evaluation and Development Summary to ensure that I did not lose sight of the specific goals and objectives. I significantly exceeded the revenue goal and I have directly addressed the style and related communication points mentioned. The aggregate revenue of the Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Toronto offices will approximate $600 million; the sixth record year in a row. This revenue growth has approximated a 46% compound annual growth rate since 1994. In 1994, I committed that the Toronto practice would reach not less than US$50 million in Firm revenue by 1998 when its revenue at the time was less than US$20 million. Toronto's current revenue projection based upon the recently completed 90 day review is US$69 million for 1998. My personal revenue production each year at Morgan Stanley has exceeded the previous year. At this point in the year, my TSW revenue exceeds $100 million which exceeds the comparable number from 1997 by over 30%. This result includes successful solicitation and execution of IPOs (e.g., Capital Trust $2.6 million in Firm revenue, Celestica $5 million, LaSalle Hotel $1.6 million, Midway Airlines $3.0 million, Steelcase $3.1 million); M&A transactions (e.g., True North' acquisition of Bozell $3.5 million in Firm revenue; Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman, First Alertand Signature Brands $13.5 million), convertible, secondary and follow-on equity transactions (e.g., Fort James $10.6 million in Firm revenue, Ha-Lo Industries $1.1 million, Omniquip $2.2 million, Sunbeam $18.2 million, Fred Meyer $2.0 million), high yield and senior bank funding transactions (e.g., Omniquip $1.6 million in Firm revenue, Scotsman Industries $2.0 million, Sunbeam $4.9 million, Focal Communications $1.4 million), and investment grade debt transactions for such companies as Allstate, Cargill, Chrysler, FMC, Fort James, IMC Global, Parker-Hannifin, Sears, Roebuck and TRW. In addition, I solicited and participated in the execution of other product areas such as share repurchase programs, tax-exempt debt offerings, valuation opinions, equity derivatives and commercial paper programs. I established new client relationships with Celestica, Focal Communications, Ha-Lo Industries, Midway Airlines, Steelcase, among others as well as first time M&A business for Motorola. I have also established a meaningful backlog of business moving into 1999 including possible transactions for Allstate, Focal Communications, Amway, IMC Global, LaSalle Partners, Sears, Motorola, Parker-Hannifin, Lennox, True North, Leo Burnett, Interlake, Rouge Steel, Kendall-Jackson and TeleTech, among others. In summary, I am confident that I have exceeded each of the goals established for me for 1998. I look forward to a successful 1999.

How many companies did you call on for the first time in 1998? Which of these companies did you develop business from in 1998? Which companies were first time mandates obtained from a competitor's traditional client? Why did we win the business?

Thus far in fiscal 1998 I have called on 25 companies for the first time. Of this 25, we have completed business already in 1998 for 6 of those including Steelcase-IPO, Ha-Lo-follow-on equity deal, Ft. James-equity, debt and derivatives, Focal-high yield, Celestica-IPO and IMC Global-M&A and debt. Business has been committed to us and is in progress for 7 companies including Kendall-Jackson-sale of company, Lennox-IPO, Leo Burnett-merger with McManus, General Mills-acquisition of Quaker Oats, Interlake-sale of company, OpenPort-IPO and ARC Network-high yield. We turned down business at two companies and nothing has yet happened at 10 companies. First time mandates obtained from a competitor's traditional client include Ft. James from Merrill Lynchand Salomon Brothers, IMC Global from Merrill Lynch, Kendall-Jackson from Hambrecht & Quist, Lennox from SG Warburg Dillon Read and General Mills from SG Warburg Dillon Read. The reasons for obtaining these mandates from new clients vary, of course, from client to client. However, the most frequent reasons include first class job in the bakeoff, strong equity research analyst, my personal relationship with a key executive, the Firm's product strengths, cold calling over a period of time and poor efforts by our competitors in bakeoffs. Given our increasing strengths vis-a-vis our competitors I expect this high percentage of success to continue and probably to increase.

What Development Areas from your 1997 Evaluation and Development (E&D) Summary/Review have you improved?

I have addressed each area. I have endeavored to be more selective in pursuing business. I have urged that we not take on inappropriate transactions for staffing or other reasons (e.g., Zacks Investment Service, NetDox, certain financing at Kendall-Jackson). Further, I have worked at not getting into the details of deals where possible. However, when the client makes a request of me I have made sure that someone got the job done or if no one else was available I addressed the issue myself. As such,I have made sure that our level of service to our clients remained at a high level. While I did not feel that Joe Perella felt that the exaggeration point made last year was a significant point, I nonetheless kept it in mind when making presentations and elsewhere. I have always prided myself on dealing with my colleagues in an open and partner-like manner. Therefore, I was quite surprised by the comment last year that certain people felt that I was not being totally upfront or transparent. I cannot say that I materially changed my operating style this year. However, I did keep the point in mind throughout the year.

What were the biggest disappointments in developing new business (excluding conflicts, losing bid situations) and what was learned from each? (CFD officers should include missed business in each product area).

Not getting the lead on Focal Communication's high yield deal. We are an investor in a direct competitor in Chicago (Allegiance, another CLEC). The client was only mildly uncomfortable with that point, but we still missed the lead. Salomon Brothers got the lead. Lesson learned: Sometimes the facts about our superior product skills just don't matter to directors who have already made up their minds. --Not representing Chrysler in its sale to Daimler-Benz. We aggressively pitched being their advisor well before anything was announced or rumored. We knew something would likely happen. We had Dick Fisher on two occasions directly 'ask for the order.' Lesson learned: Sometimes in spite of the Firm's proactive best efforts we simply are not going to overcome a 20+ year relationship that a specific officer of a competitor has with a client. --Not getting the mandate to sell Sealy on behalf of Sam Zell. We did the best job in the bakeoffs. Both Zell and Sealy representatives told us it would be our business. Two days later the business was given to Merrill Lynch with a lame and inaccurate excuse being given to me and others on our team. That same day I called Sam Zell and made it crystal clear that this is not the way we do business and a relationship is a two-way street. The next morning he called me and awarded us the IPO ofCapital Trust which I had never even heard of. Lessons learned: Billionaires move in strange ways, particularly Sam Zell and when we have not been treated in an ethical and appropriate manner go right at the decision-maker and complain.

Describe Primary Strengths

Client Skills/Business Development

Downward Comments

Within IBD

Abdel-Meguid, Tarek F (N)	Bill is an extremely commercial banker and a tenacious competitor. He is highly focused on money making opportunities, sometimes to a fault. He is incredibly energetic, very diligent. Very strong commercial results.—

Outside IBD

Purcell, Philip J. (N) (Company Management)	Bill is a highly energetic and aggressive builder of our investment banking business. He has made dramatic inroads into the Chicago business community because of his work ethic, energy and perseverance.–The situations I have personally been involved in with Bill have involved several clients. One new client in Jerry Reinsdorf, Bill assembled an excellent team, importantly involving Paul Taubman. The transaction has not been consummated, but the Firm knocked out all competition and got the assignment and it should come to fruition in the near future. Bill had a good relationship with Reinsdorf's outside attorney that led to a strong, positive Morgan Stanley recommendation and that coupled with my knowledge of Jerry Reinsdorf led to a meeting where no competitor was considered because of the team's obvious competence.–Bill led the effort with Reinsdorf and Company in a very professional way and deserves a lot of credit for that relationship. In addition, Bill has aggressively pursued a number of none-traditional Morgan Stanley clients in Chicago with a high degree of success. On the introduction of the Firm's investment banking expertise to Leo Burnett, Bill did not play a direct role, but did put Frank Oelerich in charge and Frank has performed very well. I believe Bill has a knack for finding the right resources, matching them to the right client; that includes, by my observation, Doug Brown at Allstate as well as Frank Oelerich at Leo Burnett. Therefore, I think Bill does have both business development and client resource deployment expertise that's serving the Firm well in the mid-west.
Perella, Joseph R. (U) (CoDir) (Institutional Securities Mgmt)	—

Colleague Comments

Within IBD

de Montfort, Piers (N)	Very strong client skills and relationships, enthusiastic business developer, good at seeking and taking detailed execution advice where required.—
Kauffman, Richard L. (N)	Bill always goes the distance in trying to get business. He will fly across the country for a lunch before a bake-off (as in the case of Lennox); he is very commercial, always looking for a way to get into a piece of business (pulling the Chrysler people aside at a non-profit event in Chicago).—
Oelerich, Francis J (E)	Bill conducts the coverage role with an 'in your face' approach. He is very aggressive in cultivating relationships with clients and presenting provocative thoughts to them. –Bill is highly inflential with his clients. Ken Tuchman, Bob Reum, Cheryl Francis and others will not make an important move without consulting him. –Bill has established a high profile reputation within the Chicago business community, and is proactively sought out because of his stature and referrals, from both clients and other professionals such as attorneys.

IBD Evaluation Form

William H. Strong

Evaluator Name	Comments
Porat, Ruth M. (E)	Impact with clients – I believe Bill is one of the most effective coverage officers in IBD. Clients trust and respect his judgment. He has build the trust through a combination of consistent hard work on their behalf and excellent judgment. In addition, his network of relationships is very broad, allowing him to leverage off of board contacts as well as management relationships. For example, through his work with True North we were able to secure the lead for an Internet IPO as well as meet the CEO of another important tech company. I am always confident that when Bill is the senior banker on a deal team, no stone will be left unturned and he will find a relationship to leverage to materially enhance our chance of success. –Focused/work ethic – Bill is a very good role model when it comes to business development because he is relentless. He takes nothing for granted – which may sound like Coverage 101 but his intense focus and analytical approach to winning a piece of business is, I believe, reflected in his wins. He obviously starts with a tremendous franchise but then works extremely hard and diligently to conquer each piece of business. It is then clear in a pitch that he is very familiar with the key issues facing a client which adds tremendous credibility to his assertion in a pitch that he will be there throughout the process to deliver the firm. For example, when we won the lead on the Celestica $350MM IPO, the client noted that it was impressive that Bill had been there throughout the due diligence preceding the pitch. –Well known/well respected in the industry. As noted above, Bill's work ethic and client commitment has resulted in a large stable of loyal clients which then serve as a very effective referral system to win new business.
Spence, John F. (N)	Bill's client skills are exemplary. Each year I hope to narrow the gap between Bill's client skills and my own. He is particularly effective at winning business. It is always fascinating to watch Bill when he is competing for a piece of business - he isincredibly hungry. A few years ago, I heard John Mack give an internal speech where he emphasized the need for all of us to be hungry. Bill epitomizes that hunger, even though he has already achieved great success. Most of the IBD professionals that I know are intensely competitive (myself included), but Bill's intensity is just a level higher. There are many great power hitters in the game of baseball, but Mark McGwire hit 70 home runs because of his intense concentration and ability to 'lock-in' to the pitcher when he steps to the plate. Bill has that kind of focus and intensity when he steps to the plate in our daily game. –Bill successfully markets the entire range of the Firm's products. Despite his grasp of the entire product array, Bill still strives to expand his knowledge base. If I am working on an offering of a product type that Bill has not used, he will inquire about specific technical details or implementation steps. –Bill is persuasive and credible with clients. During one potential IPO, the client wanted to proceed with their filing. The collective MSDW view was that the client should wait until early 1999 to file. Bill effectively persuaded the client to follow that advice, even though the two co-managers on the deal both recommended that the client file immediately.
Stynes, James B (N)	Bill is one of the most relentless pursuers of business I've met. He has a laser-like focus on going after business, deals with every detail, works every angle and has a pit bull persistence. He is also very good with clients. He is very focused on their needs and issues, ensures that they get first class service whether from him or a product group but can also effectively deliver a hard message when he must.—
	Outside IBD
Slayton, Shelby A. (L) (Client Solutions)	Bill Strong's work in winning the mandate for the Celestica IPO was impressive. Before officially pitching for the business, he knew who we were competing against and the key issues with a difficult client. His relationships the Onyx were crucial in getting a head start.—
Glascott, James D. (L) (GCM - Joint Venture)	Outstanding understanding of client's needs and objectives at the senior level. I only worked with Bill on TRW, but he certainly has credibility and clout at TRW with the CFO and above.—
Orem, John R (N) (GCM - Joint Venture)	Bill's experience as a senior level coverage officer is immediately apparent when he enters the room. He knows how to work the floor, is perceptive in terms of identifying issues, is a quick study in terms of formulating solutions, knows his business and products thoroughly (I am always impressed at how current he is on the finer points of the high yield market), and positions the Firm as well as any coverage officer that I have come into contact with. Perhaps most importantly, he very quickly establishes himself and the team with the client and wins their utmost confidence and trust – he literally had Jess Jackson of Kendall Jackson eating out of MSDW's hand. —
Niehaus, Robert H. (N) (Private Equity)	Excellent understanding of clients' goals and objectives.–Excellent relationship builder with CEO's; has built a good relationship with Fort James CEO Miles Marsh.–Persuasive; articulate.

Abdel-Meguid, Tarek F (N)	Bill is a strong advocate of his people. He sets a good example in terms of working hard. Strong banking skill set, great user of voice mail. Makes an effort ot help regional offices with issues.—

Outside IBD

Purcell, Philip J. (N) (Company Management)	In his current role, living in Chicago, I would say Bill could adapt a little bit more to the more laid back, less frantic approach to things that is more typical in the mid-western markets. So I would coach him along those lines.—
Perella, Joseph R. (U) (CoDir) (Institutional Securities Mgmt)	—

Colleague Comments

Within IBD

Kauffman, Richard L. (N)	Bill is detail-oriented. He usually spends time on the details of a new business pitch, allowing time for rehearsing. He keeps the ECMS team fully briefed, using his famous time-stamped voice mail. And when he wants the product team's attention, he is very good at bringing us in early. He also is always willing to help out other team members (calling Sam Zell to get support on behalf of another deal not benefiting Bill directly).—
Oelerich, Francis J (E)	Bill is highly focused on marshaling Firm resources to client issues. He commands attention and has the pull to get resources focused on problems. He has a very solid work ethic, and demands no less of his teams. –Bill has a commanding presence in Board situations. He presents views with authority, and is nimble enough to react to provocative inquiries from directors. –Bill has continued to be highly focused on developing the careers of those around him, both as part of the formal year-end process butalso on a regular, ongoing career management basis. The commercial results of the region speak volumes as to the success of these efforts.
Porat, Ruth M. (E)	Excellent deal judgment – Bill is very effective managing transactions to get the right outcome for the client and the firm. For example, early in the year we executed a $100MM high yield deal for Scottsman after it became apparent that their preferred route – an equity deal – was unlikely to work. Bill did a very good job working with the client to turn a tough situation into a success. –Excellent team player – Bill is an excellent team player on a number of dimensions. First, he does a very good job building a team that wants to produce the most possible. He leads by example, working extremely hard himself so he sets a standardfor the entire team. Second, he is very good about acknowledging where people have made a contribution, which builds strong loyalty. Finally he is very effective turning client situations into revenue generating outcomes for the firm, which engenders loyalty - he doesn't waste anyone's time. –Effective communicator/negotiator – Bill has very strong execution skills, based on experience, judgment and confidence. He does a very good job working diligently with a client to bring the client to the appropriate point of view. For example, on the Celestica IPO, the client had a number of unrealistic expectations regarding pricing and allocation strategy. Bill was very effective at building consensus at the client so that we were able to reach the 'right' answer and have the clientview MS as a critical ally in getting to the right answer.
Spence, John F. (N)	Bill has excellent communication skills. His public speaking abilities are excellent. For example, at the MSDW midwest golf outing each year, Bill is the emcee for the event. In his first year at the Firm, Bill's presentation was somewhat stiff and dry.By contrast, his prepared remarks this year were delivered smoothly and with wit. In addition to his public speaking skills, Bill excels at presenting to clients. He comes across as knowledgeable, poised and articulate. –Bill should also be commended for efforts this year at aiding in the development of other professionals in the Chicago office. Bill is not my evaluation director. Nonetheless, on multiple occasions this year, Bill has taken the time to talk with meabout my performance, my progress and my career path. In each instance, Bill initiated these conversations. Bill works as hard as anyone in the Firm, and for him to take the time on these issues was greatly appreciated. –Bill is actively involved in all levels of recruiting. He is always willing to be involved in presentations, interviews or sell days. He sets a fine example for the rest of the office to follow.
Stynes, James B (N)	Solid grounding in all aspects of banking; M&A, debt, equity, etc. Very quick study - able to pick up the key issues in a transaction right away. Good communicator - always keeps teams fully informed/responds promptly to all communications.—

Glascott, James D. (L) (GCM - Joint Venture)	Excellent product knowledge and Bill is very comfortable allowing junior bankers and product people to speak in important meetings with senior clients. He has excellent presentation skills and communicates well internally. We had a legal problem in themiddle of the TRW transaction and Bill calmly handled things and showed great leadership.—
Niehaus, Robert H. (N) (Private Equity)	Team building. Has built a strong coverage and corporate finance capability in Chicago.–Strong one-firm mentality. Understood and managed well the complexities of the large Fort James secondary offering of MWD's equity position. Bill encouraged Fort James to launch the offering at a positive time in its operating cycle, helping the Firm to maximize the value of its Fort James holding at $43 per share. FJ stock now trades at $27 per share.–

Abdel-Meguid, Tarek F (N)	Bill can be overly aggressive in terms of trying to capture transactional opportunities. Makes some judgements which are sometimes very close to, if not over, the line. I continue to hear comments about his greater general concern for his own people/business unit, relative to the Firm's best interest.—

de Montfort, Piers (N)	From time to time in the enthusiasm for the mandate, needs to avoid over committing and maintain the efficacy of the M&R fee scale, particularly for non-Chicago based execution—
Kauffman, Richard L. (N)	Bill has a very intense style which can be off putting to some clients. He is 'all-business'. He might choose to vary his style - to introduce more humor or a lighter touch.—
Oelerich, Francis J (E)	Bill relishes the battle of execution, and quite often is not able to extract himself from client wishes that he play a very active role in such execution. This can lead to his having to double up time/staffing committed to such clients (TTEC, IK, etc.) and dilute his ability to invest his time on the next piece of business. –Bill has become much more discerning of prospective business, ensuring that it meets Firm standards. Still, his innate aggressiveness means he is predisposed to pursue every scrap of business, even if it is ultimately inefficent for him, and the Firm, to do so. I would also like to see Bill be more dogmatic in defending fee scale, or in not taking on pieces of business in which or role is 'defined' as limited, but actually evolves to full involvement at suboptimal economics. –
Porat, Ruth M. (E)	It is tough for me think of development areas for Bill. As noted above, he is extremely effective with clients and has successfully built a very broad client stable.—
Stynes, James B (N)	Minor area: needs to be careful not to over-promise and to consult with team before giving advice - generally not a problem - happens every now and then.—

Kauffman, Richard L. (N)	Bill still has a fondness for the thick, put in the kitchen sink style of presentation. Less is more.—
Oelerich, Francis J (E)	Bill has more than his fair share of 'colorful' clients, and should continue to use good discretion in developing and ungrading relationships with a center of the plate client base, and less with clients on the fringe (often introduced by fringe attorneys such as Katten, Muchin and Zavis). –Bill has also improved dramatically his management of client expectations, but there are still circumstances with clients where his desire to ingratiate himself with the client can lead to unrealistic or unnecessary expections being established. –
Porat, Ruth M. (E)	Similarly, I have difficulty identifying development areas in this category. On every dimension – execution skills, leadership and teamwork, Bill is at the top of my list. He is very effective and committed to getting to the best possible result. The only potential issue to consider is that he appears to be a workaholic which he has leveraged to commercial success. My only concern is that few people are willing to work the way he does. For example, Bill appears to read every document for a transaction and be very immersed in all of the details of a deal as well as extremely active in businesses development. I would only caution him that there are probably going to be professionals who can do very well at MS and for MS who do not rise to his standard and would want to ensure that he conveys to them that there are many ways to succeed. Knowing Bill, I presume he is already sensitive to this point. —
Spence, John F. (N)	The only suggestion that I can offer for Bill is that he should let his junior professionals manage the day to day relationships with his clients at the more junior levels. He should focus his attention at the CEO and CFO levels, while permitting the junior officers to manage the lower level contacts. Such an approach will reduce Bill's already heavy burden and enable the junior officers to establish greater credibility with the client. —

Porat, Ruth M. (E)	Bill is an excellent role model for junior and senior professionals because he has all of the key elements of a successful leader – he is very effective with clients, he has built a large social circle of clients, he is an aggressive marketer, he has very strong execution skills and he is a pleasure to work with. His balance with business development, execution and leadership is rare, in my opinion.

Spence, John F. (N)	Bill has done it all in 1998. He has delivered outstanding financial results, furthered MSDW relationships, effectively managed the regional offices, taken the time to work with individuals on professional and career development and actively participated in recruiting. He works as hard as anyone at the Firm. He sacrifices vacation days for client meetings (when they are important enough) and does an outstanding job of making each client feel that they are his most important priority.

Describe Strengths

Leadership

* Bill is, by some distance, the best manager, leader and all-around banker I've worked for or with. He leads a number of different ways. He leads by example-he is extremely dedicated, hard working and continually ssacrifices for the firm. He leads through communication whether it be in a group setting, individually or even on voicemail. He leads with compassion-he has a genuine interest in the lives, careers and dreams of everyone one of us. ~Bill has been particularly effective in what is (at least from an org. chart perspective) is a peculiar position in overseeing the regional offices yet he does it with charm and style. I am very comfortable saying that none of the regional office heads if given a chance would change anything about the role Bill plays. In an industry not known for management Bill is a unique character. ~Bill leads one other way which to me is most important, that is through trust. This has been an exceptionally frustrating year for me in that I've had multiple experiences on different matters with certain of my partners at the firm that havecaused me to realize that I can not trust them. These incidents have troubled me substantially and made me realize more than ever how critically important it is to work for someone you trust. I trust Bill thoroughly and totally. I always will.
* Leads by Example: Bill is clearly an extremely accomplished banker who can generate significant revenues for the firm. More importantly however, he is one of those rare individuals who consistently increases the quality and performance of his colleagues by setting a good example. Bill has a few qualities that truly distinguish him. First, his work ethic is unparalleled. Few people at Morgan Stanley, even professionals quite a bit junior, work as hard as Bill. He manages to schedule an incredible number of substanative face-to-face meetings and phone conversations with both clients and co-workers. Secondly, Bill works hard at teaching junior bankers how to interact, not only with clients, but in the general community. He is constantly asking me if I am meeting with prominent lawyers and accountants and whether I am entertaining enough or have joined any new opera board type situations. He is clearly focused on creating the type of officer at Morgan Stanley who is well positioned both professionally and socially to generate significant business for the firm. ~Builds Commitment: I have always found being on an execution or business development team with Bill a real pleasure. He does a superb job of including both junior and senior members ofa team in all aspects of each assignment. For example, as senior banker on a recent proposed high yield debt financing for Kendall-Jackson, Bill made sure to solicit judgements from high yield, credit, corporate finance and even, when appropriate M&A.~Overall Leadership Capabilities: The categories suggested by the IBD Performance Criteria do not, in my opinion, allow for the appropriate review of Bill's leadership capabilities. The business that he manages (leads) - the branch offices have been phenomenally sucessful due to his involvement. He has (i) set the right work ethic, (ii) demanded excellence and integrity from his people, (iii) allowed the right amount of autonomy so people could develop but not so much that dramatic mistakes were made. The net result of his leadership has been revenues that have grown dramatically and offices staffed with capable, independent bankers. The success of the branch offices is the true measure of Bill's leadership capabilities.
* Bill is truly a leader. He leads by example. He sets a fast pace and is totally committed to his clients and the job.~Bill has broad and deep knowledge of the products offered and is creative in applying them to best meet his clients' needs.~Bill has tremendous presence with clients. He has the ability to walk in to a new situation and get business based on his presence, knowledge and confidence that he instills in clients.
* Bill leads by example: he has a strong work ethic, is committed to the success of the firm and has very strong technical/product knowledge skills.~Bill is a good team leader. He is inclusive, respectful and builds mutual trust and respect among team members.~
* Bill is the complete leader. He leads by direction and he leads by example. He leads by example in that his work ethic is simply unsurpassed. He conducts his business with a disciplined approach and a high standard of ethics and integrity. I have never had Bill ask anything of me which he wasn't prepared to do himself. Bill leads by direction in that he is always well informed and on top of developments in our market. He asks the right questions and devotes his time whenever it is needed. He is extraordinarily supportive while at the same time appropriately demanding that I and my team reach and maintain the high standard that he sets for us all.~Bill made a concerted effort this year to bring the managing directors from all the regional officesto Chicago for a regional summit. This turned out to be an extremely fruitful and worthwhile endeavor. Discovering and communicating common frustrations as well as best practices has resulted in a better understanding of the Firm and what each group istrying to accomplish. I have noticed a greater amount of communication since that summit and we've already begun to incorporate several of the best practices lessons learned at the summit. I found that this type of smaller working session of managing directors significantly more valuable than many of our larger group sessions. Bill deserves the credit for not only organizing this effort but also for drafting the ultimate report.~In summary, Bill is a leader because of his effective direction that he provides, the example that he sets and the fact that he is prepared to be innovative in his management approach.
* Bill's dedication and commitment to the franchise builds commitment~Bill has been sensitive to the dynamics in the leadership of the Canadian franchise and has spent quality time addressing the issue~The meeting of branch heads was an excellent exercise in identifying issues unique to the branches and providing a forum for finding answers
* Bill is a complete banker with a strong skill set in every facet of the business. As such, he is an individual who leads by example in dealing with younger professionals.~Cross selling - Bill works hard and effectively at selling all the products of theFirm and maximizing the revenue stream from each client.~Bill is aggressive in seeking new business. He has heightened the focus and efforts of the office and intensity level at which people perform. He deserves great credit for the achievements of theregional office.
* Bill leads by example. He is exceptionally diligent, dedicated and hardworking, and he communicates this work ethic typically not by direct exhortation but by example.~Vision: Bill has a clear vision of where the regional offices should be going, and has done a good job of soliciting the input of the various office heads to get consensus on this vision. He listens well and is open to new ideas.~
* Bill is a very strong and capable leader. Bill very clearly establishes direction both for a project and as well as the team members involved in a project. He is very organized and imposes that framework on everything he works on. He builds commitmentthrough thoughtful and consistent behavior and communication. Bill is the consummate communicator. He does not leave things hanging and provides very clear timely feedback.~Bill leads by example in many ways, including his unwavering passion for the business and excellence in everything that he is involved in. He hates to lose and is willing to make real sacrifice to improve the chances of a team win. He involves the whole team and is very responsive to input from all team members.~Bill drives the people who work for him to deliver the best possible product and to dig deep into their capabilities to develop into better bankers and better professionals. Bill is also the consummate professional in every regard.

Comments

* Bill has taught me many things over the years mostly just by watching him in action. He has an insatiable appetite for business. He wants to have 100% markets share and goes after business aggressively and passionately. He is extremely productive andcan juggle dozens of initiatives at the same time. He works very long hours and uses his time with pinpoint accuracy. That combination of traits means that in the course of a year he is able to pack in more value added interaction with clients than sometimes seems humanly possible. I strive to do the same thing but I must honestly say that I'm not sure I can keep up with the guy. He has perfected the senior banker role and I mean that in the most positive sense. Our working relationship is like a well oiled machine at this point. I know just when and how to get him involved and I am very conscious of not overusing his time. At the same time, he jumps in when needed and is always well prepared and makes informed judgments. Bill never tries to attach himself unnecessarily to revenues and is always willing to help. —
* Coaches for Development: One of the greatest aspects of working for Bill is that he is so helpful in improving performance. First, he sets a great example. He is the classic marine that will not ask anyone to do something he is not willing to do himself. Thus, his work ethic is incredibly strong. Second, it is so obvious that the client come first in everything that Bill does that one cannot help but pick up that perspective when working with Bill. Finally, Bill is so thoughtful about every aspect of client relationships. He leaves nothing to chance. He spends an inordinate amount of time planning bake-offs, including what will go into the presentation, who will give, who should attend etc. That is why he is so successful at winning new mandates and developing truly strong and lasting relationships with his clients. Besides simply setting a great example, Bill actively coaches those bankers working for him. He is constantly reminding me of the importance of entertaining, of being involved in charitable situations like the opera. Bill is a great coach both because he takes an active role in developing the bankers he is responsible for but also because he consistently sets a great example of how the consummate senior Morgan Stanley banker should think and act. ~Provides Feedback: Bill is very good at giving immediate feedback. I have never left a client situation without a lengthy conversation with Bill regarding what was done exactly right and what could be improved upon in the future. Importantly, these conversations are always helpful and positive. ~Defines Expectations: Bill is very good at articulating his performance expectations. Most importantly, Bill always has been extremely clear with me where he would like meto spend my time. For example, when Bill and others asked me to cover financial buyers for the first time this year, Bill spent an enourmous amount of his time working with me to figure out what was the right coverage universe, the right mix between financial and industrial clients etc. Bill did a great job of helping me establish what our priorities were going to be related to this effort.
* Bill sets high standards for himself and those who work for him. He sets very clear goals and completely adheres to them. He sets the example. He is always on time, well thought through and correct.~Bill sets the tone for the office. He always take the time to discuss problems or issues with people. He is quick to give positive feedback and encouragement to people.~
* Bill does a good job of keeping abreast of the Canadian business without excessive 'checking up'. He is always available and willing to help with the internal battles and played a critical role in developing and implementing the CFD staffing model for Toronto and played and key role in getting the 'buy in' from the equity division for the Canadian research strategy which will include stand alone Toronto analysts in 4 sectors.~Bill is a good team player.~Bill is a good manager and is particularly attentive to the requirements of building a successful regional office.
* Bill gives clear and specific guidance as to what his goals and expectations are for those that report to him. He makes every effort to have subordinates buy in and agree to those goals and to lay out in very specific and concrete terms how those goals are to be achieved.—
* Bill has a relentless work ethic which sets an example for all~For what it's worth, I'm higher on Bill this year then in past; people recognize his decency and he seems more comfortable in his role as head of North American branch offices~
* Keeps abreast of key activities without excessive checking up. Bill believes in giving people 'room to grow' and yet he is knowledgeable and helpful on all projects in the office.~Is interested in and spends time discussing people's career objectives. He has been helpful to junior members in this regard.~Promotes Firm priorities in his own actions and what he demands of others.
* Bill takes his responsibilities in terms of evaluations, reviews, etc. quite seriously and executes them 'by the book'.—
* Bill actively manages performance. He sets goals and he measures performance against those goals. Bill provides active and frequent feedback and is not afraid to offer candid responses, both positive and negative, as required.~Bill uses his charisma tocreate a sense of bonding among team members. This dynamic engenders tremendous loyalty and drives people to work hard for him and for themselves. Bill is a very effective mentor as well and is always willing to provide personal coaching or advice whenneeded. In those instances he goes out of his way to do so.~

Describe Development Needs

Leadership

* As I mentioned earlier, I believe Bill is a truly phenomenal banker. He has great technical skills, an incredible work ethic and consistently displays good judgement. He always makes sure that his subordinates are focused on developing strong client relationships and a high level of revenue. I believe that Bill's highest and best use is sourcing new opportunities and fixing the difficult situations that invariable arise in any execution assignment. However, I further believe that Bill's first love is to roll up his sleeves and do deals. He could be more effective were he not so involved in the day-to-day details of each transaction. —
* The regional coverage officers within the United States cover hundreds of companies in dozens of industries. I suspect that there could be greater communication between those regional coverage officers and that their clients have a great deal of shared interest, perhaps even strategic combinations could result from greater communication. Bill has started the effort to increase the communication between the regional offices. I think that this process should be formalized so that regional officers communicate with each other as often and as effectively as they do with their industry group counterparts in New York. ~I for one would be pleased if Bill would spend more time either formally or informally discussing how he sees my career path developing overthe next five years. In our present markets, it is hard to anticipate staffing and levels of activity five weeks out much less five years but I would welcome and be encouraged to know that there is a specific career path and vision for his subordinates which Bill can articulate.~
* As a manager, Bill is very effective at setting goals or defining strategies; he should then spend more time on follow-up~As a manager, Bill should know more about our market~Suggest Bill spend more time with the juniors to get their view on the office strategy and its execution

- Uses information selectively - often times does not disclose information which I may view important or will disclose some information on a subject, but not all.-I would like to see Bill be more direct and open in dealing with conflict issues. At times Bill will react to and believe 'hearsay' without discussion with the relevant party.-
- Is Bill a strong and forceful advocate for his people internally? Third party comments suggest not. This raises issues of credibility and trust.—
- Bill's only leadership issue is his tendency to lose sight of the effort required to produce some of the things he asks for. I am convinced that if he better understood the effort it takes to do some of the marginal tasks he requests, he would rethink some of them. For example, Bill regularly asks for things to put into memos when a phone call or voice mail would suffice. In doing so, he multiplies the amount of work required to get it done, particularly given the scrutiny that he applies to any work product with his name on it.—

- Bill connects very well with the officers but needs to spend more time with the Associates and analysts in the office. I think this would be good for morale and would allow him to have a greater positive impact on their performance.-Bill has a tendency to exaggerate. He often does so when it doesn't appear necessary. In doing so he intends to impress his clients but often puts his team members into awkward or difficult situations, particularly if a reversal or recharacterization is later required.-

Exceptional Performance Description

- Bill is a fantastic role model and the primary reason I joined and stay in the Chicago Office. While Frank English, Frank Oelerich, and John Adams are all important to the success of our office, Bill is the force that accelerates our momentum. He is both the motivator and regulator on the business and is doing a superb job running the business and enhancing our franchise. He provides an outstanding platform for younger professionals. He is focused on teaching, always available, and there when times aretough. I could fill the page with his positive attributes and examples to illustrate them. Bill is not perfect but he is closer than any of the senior MD's with whom I have worked closely. I have tremendous loyalty to Bill and view his success as my success. In my view, Bill is critical to our continued success in the Chicago Office and critical to my continued growth and excitement about the business.
- Bill is the consumate senior banker. For example, MS historically has not worked with Kendall-Jackson Winery. Through a long-standing relationship, Bill heard of a potential transaction at KJ. He then successfully quarterbacked the bake-off by marchalling the appropriate high yield, M&A, equity research and corporate finance resources. After being awarded the mandate, Bill stayed very involved in the overall execution of the assignement. He was available when necessary but was not overbearing to his team. He consistently demonstrated both his technical skills and his good judgment in what turned out to be a very difficult transaction. In summary, as a result of Bill's efforts MS has developed a an extremeley strong new relationship with a company that will generate significant revenue in the future.
- In my opinion, Bill is one of the truly outstanding professionals in this industry. He is incredibly productive. He is a proven new business generator. He has tremendous respect from his clients. He works unbelievably hard. He helps foster the careers of younger professionals. He sets a standard and an example that makes people strive harder to increase performance.
- Bill is one of the best bankers I have worked with, His clients respect him tremendously. His peers within the firm respect him immensely. He generates tremendous amounts of business and sets the standard consistently in terms of work quality and commitment to his job.

Review of 1998 Firmwide Performance E Performance

I. 1998 PERFORMANCE SUMMARY

Summarize the individual's performance in 1998 relative to the objectives set for the year. The Performance Criteria Definitions provide a useful framework for your comments.

Bill can generally be pleased with his performance in 1998. From a personal commercial standpoint, Bill called on 25 companies for the first time in 1998 and generated business from 6 of these companies. Furthermore, Bill helped guide the regional offices to over $600MM in revenues. From an organizational standpoint, Bill played an important role in developing the effectiveness of the regional offices. Specifically, Bill held a first annual regional office head meeting that produced several important issues that must be addressed to enhance the effectiveness of the regional offices, counseled a number of bankers to stay with the Firm after they contemplated leaving the Firm and was an active participant in recruiting Associates and Analysts. His undivided and thoughtful participation in the year-end DRP process should also get specific mention.

II. PRIMARY STRENGTHS

Client Skills/Business Development

Very commercial: Is an extremely commercial banker and a tenacious competitor. Highly focused on money making opportunities, sometimes to a fault. Takes nothing for granted. His intense focus and analytical approach to winning a piece of business is reflected in his wins. Successfully markets the entire range of the Firm's products. Despite grasp of entire product array, still strives to expand his knowledge base. Will inquire about specific technical details or implementation steps.	Use instincts to increasingly play senior banker role.
Impact with clients: Clients trust and respect his judgment. Has built the trust through a combination of consistent hard work on their behalf and excellent judgment. His network of relationships is very broad, allowing him to leverage off of board contacts as well as management relationships.	Leverage impact with clients to introduce junior bankers to accounts and build their credibility with the client.
Recognized in industry: Has established a high profile reputation within Chicago business community, and is proactively sought out because of his stature and referrals, from both clients and other professionals such as attorneys.	See previous comment.

Professional & Execution Skills/Mgmt/Teamwork

Strong team leader/advocate of his people: Has continued to be highly focused on developing the careers of those around him, both as a part of the formal year-end process but also on a regular, ongoing career management basis. Does a very good job building a team that wants to produce the most possible. Leads by example, working extremely hard himself so he sets a standard for the entire team. Is very good about acknowledging where people have made a contribution, building strong loyalty.	Continue to mentor mid-level bankers. Establish greater rapport with Associates and Analysts.

Review of 1998 Firmwide Performance E Performance

Good technical skills: Excellent product knowledge. Solid grounding in all aspects of banking: M&A, debt, equity, etc. Very quick study-able to pick up the key issues in a transaction right away.	Use ability to do quick study to focus on high impact situations; delegate all other situations to junior bankers.

III. DEVELOPMENT NEEDS

Client Skills/Business Development

Overly commercial: Can be overly aggressive in terms of trying to capture transactional opportunities. Makes some judgments which are sometimes very close to if not over the line. Needs to avoid over committing and maintain the efficacy of M&A fee scale.	Exercise increase vigilance here. Stop, look, listen.
Intense style: Has a very intense style which can be off putting to some clients.	Adjust style in certain circumstances.

Professional & Execution Skills/Mgmt/Teamwork

Communication: Although he has made progress (and is acutely aware of the concerns), he continues to suffer the consequences of less than a straightforward approach. Some colleagues feel he gives people the impression that he is not completely upfront and uses information selectively. Often times does not disclose information which others may view important or will disclose some information on a subject, but not all. Also, there is the perception that he does not properly balance the issues of his people/his region with the best overall interests of the Firm.	You say that you have not meaningfully changed your operating style in '98. Think of discussing with Tom Delong for ways to address these concerns.
Management: Should let his junior professionals manage the day to day relationships with his clients at the more junior levels. Connects very well with the officers but needs to spend more time with the Associates and Analysts in the office.	Focus whenever possible on delegation. Also, work to identify a thoughtful successor to your role as regional head as well as in Chicago.

IV. 1999 OBJECTIVES

A. Business Goals (Develop three to four goals. Focus should differ for Associates and Officers. Associates: focus on improving execution skills. Officers: focus on strengthening client/business development skills).

Progress on issues raised in regional officers meeting. Assist Trauber in building out Houston office. Increase mentoring of Associates and Analysts. Continue to mentor Peter Dey/Brad Crompton managerial roles. Assist in solving research issues for Canada.

B. Professional Development Goals (List development goals to help the individual improve and specify action steps that can be taken in 1999).

Try to tone down the aggressiveness. Focus on being the strong role model which you are. Take things less seriously and become more of a listener.

V. EVALUATEE'S COMMENTS

I substantially agree with this evaluation. I do not know what making "over the line" judgment means. I very much endeavor to be open and straight with my colleagues. There is no intention not to do so, but with some there is the impression that I am not open. I will focus on this in 1999. I welcome and respect the review process and I appreciate the comments.

CONTINUED EXAMINATION

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Mr. Tyree, you understand you're still under oath today?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Mr. Tyree, have you ever met with any representatives of Coleman (Parent) Holdings on any occasion?

A. I don't recall meeting with members of Coleman management.

Q. Well, I'm referring to Coleman (Parent) Holdings, not Coleman the operating company, Coleman (Parent) Holdings, the Plaintiff in our lawsuit.

A. I don't recall meeting with them either.

Q. Have you ever met on any occasion with any representatives of MacAndrews & Forbes?

A. No. Not that I recall.

Q. On any occasion?

A. Again, not that I recall.

Q. Did you ever communicate in any way with representatives of Coleman (Parent) Holdings relating to the Sunbeam transaction?
A. I don't recall communicating with them about the Sunbeam transaction.
Q. Did you ever communicate in any way with any representatives of MacAndrews & Forbes relating to the Sunbeam transaction?
A. Again, the same: not that I recall.
Q. Do you recall any communications with any of the professionals representing Coleman (Parent) Holdings or MacAndrews & Forbes relating to the Sunbeam acquisition?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever participate in any conference calls where, whether you were a speaker or not, there were representatives of Coleman (Parent) Holdings or MacAndrews & Forbes participating in the phone call?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. So as far as you can recall today, you've had no communications relating to the Sunbeam transaction with Coleman (Parent) Holdings' representatives, MacAndrews & Forbes' representatives, or the professionals representing either of those companies?

Tyree

MR. CLARE: Objection to form.
A. The way I characterize it, I don't recall any dialogue with any of the parties that you mentioned.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Or any communications of any sort?
A. No, I don't recall any communication of any sort with those parties.
Q. We were last together on September 15.
Since that time, what have you done to prepare yourself for today's testimony?
A. I reviewed my previous deposition, and I've met with counsel for a short period of time. That's pretty much it.
Q. When you say "that's pretty much it," is there anything else?
A. Not that I recall, no.
Q. With whom did you meet?
A. With Tom Clare and with Jim Doyle.
Q. How many times did you meet with Mr. Clare?

Tyree

A. Over what period?
Q. I'm focusing now on preparation for today's deposition since September 15th.
A. I believe I met with Mr. Clare once.
Q. How many times did you meet with Mr. Doyle in that same context?
A. I believe I met with Mr. Doyle once.
Q. Were those two separate meetings or one single meeting with the two of them?
A. It was one single meeting with the both of them.
Q. Was anyone else present?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. When was that?
A. Yesterday.
Q. Where was that?
A. Morgan Stanley's legal offices.
Q. How long was the meeting?
A. It lasted for a couple of hours.
Q. Did you review any documents?
MR. CLARE: It's a yes-or-no question.
A. Yes.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Tyree

Q. Did you review any testimony of any other individuals?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Did you meet with anyone else from the law department while you were present there?
A. No.
Q. You didn't meet with Mr. Kempf, for example?
A. No.
Q. Did you do anything, apart from reviewing your testimony and your meeting yesterday with Mr. Clare and Mr. Doyle, to prepare for today?
MR. CLARE: Objection; asked and answered.
A. Not that I recall.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Other than reviewing your testimony -- I take it you reviewed your testimony separately from your meeting with Mr. Clare and Mr. Doyle?
A. Yes.
Q. Other than reviewing your deposition testimony and reviewing documents with Mr. Clare and Mr. Doyle, did you look at any materials to prepare for today?

A. No.
Q. Other than Mr. Doyle and Mr. Clare, have you discussed any aspect of your September 15 testimony with anyone?
A. No.
Q. You didn't discuss it with any of your colleagues back in London in any way?
A. I didn't discuss the substance of my testimony, no.
Q. What did you discuss?
A. That I needed to go to New York to be deposed.
Q. Anything else?
A. No.
Q. You didn't make any comment to them about the deposition?
A. I mean, I can't recall the exact substance of the conversation, but what I do recall was that I mentioned to one or two colleagues that I was going to New York to be deposed relating to Morgan Stanley litigation. And that's all I remember.

Page 292

Tyree
Q. You don't remember making any other comment relating to the September 15th session?
A. No.
Q. Is this your first trip to the United States since September 15th?
A. Give me a moment. I just want to think back. I made one trip to Canada, but -- and I routed through Boston on my way back to a meeting in London. But that's the only trip I've made during that period of time.
Q. Do you have any plans to return to the United States between now and the end of the year?
A. No.
Q. Did anything that you've done since September 15th, Mr. Tyree, refresh your recollection on the events relating to the involvement you had with Sunbeam in 1998?
A. No.
Q. Your testimony is that your recollection today is no different than it was when you testified on September 15 with respect to the matters that you addressed in that first deposition session?

Page 293

Tyree
A. My testimony is that I haven't recalled anything additional relative to the Sunbeam transaction since I was last deposed.
Q. Did you use email back in the first quarter of 1998 in connection with your work at Morgan Stanley?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Did you communicate by email, either receive something, messages or sending messages, in connection with any of the work you did relating to Sunbeam?
A. I don't recall if I did or did not use email in relation to the Sunbeam transaction.
Q. Was it common for you in the first quarter of '98 to use email to communicate with colleagues in connection with the work you were doing?
A. Yes.
Q. Although you don't specifically recall any communications relating to the work on Sunbeam, as I understand it. Is that right? You don't specifically recall any email communications relating to your Sunbeam work?
A. That's correct.

Page 294

Tyree
Q. Is there any reason to believe -- strike that.
Do you have any reason to believe you did not communicate by email in connection with the work you did on Sunbeam?
MR. CLARE: Objection to form.
A. Again, I have no recollection one way or the other whether I used email in the context of the Sunbeam transactions.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. What I'm trying to understand is whether you can recall whether there is something specific about the Sunbeam work that causes you to believe it was unlikely that you would have used email in connection with your work on that transaction even though it was your normal practice to use email.
MR. CLARE: Objection to form; misstates the prior testimony.
A. How I would characterize it is there is nothing that I can recall that was unique to the Sunbeam transaction that would dictate whether I used email on that transaction or not.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Tyree

Q. Do you recall printing out any email communications relating to the Sunbeam work?
A. No.
Q. Was it your practice on occasions to print out email communications and save them for some period of time back in '98?
A. It was not my practice to, as a matter of course or habit, print out emails and maintain them for a period of time for record-keeping or what have you, no.
Q. Was it your practice not to print out email communications?
A. No.
Q. What would dictate whether you printed out an email communication?
A. A host of different factors.
Q. Can you give me the factors that you can recall.
A. One factor would be was I going to need that document, need to have that document in a place where I did not have access to email. That would be one.
Q. I want you to give me all the factors that you can recall.

Tyree

A. I can't give you all of the factors. There are numerous factors that would dictate whether I printed out an email or not.
Q. All I'm asking you to do is to give me all the factors that you can identify at the moment.
A. Is the substance of the email such that I would want to be able to review it on a moment's notice would be one factor; is the substance of the email such that I would need it in terms of having a dialogue with an individual at a time when I didn't have access to email; is it a lengthy document that I would want to keep with me for review at a later time. Those are probably three of the more important factors.
Q. Are there any Morgan Stanley policies that come into play with respect to whether or not you preserve certain kinds of email communications?
MR. CLARE: Objection; lack of foundation.
A. Are you asking about the policies as I understand that exist today?
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Tyree

Q. No. I'm focusing on 1998.
A. I can't recall any specific policies in place in 1998 that related to email file maintenance.
Q. Or preserving particular kinds of email communications for purposes of having a record of that particular communication?
A. Again, I just can't recall any specific mandates from the firm about email file maintenance.
Q. Did you have a practice of preserving email communications on your personal computer back in 1998?
A. In 1998, I don't recall having any specific policy, be it a Morgan Stanley policy or my own policy, about maintaining emails in any form or fashion.
Q. Let me lay a predicate for this.
Back in '98, I assume you had a personal computer at your office location -- is that correct? -- that you used?
A. Yes.
Q. And your email messages would come directly to you at your computer at your desk, I assume, correct?

Tyree

A. Yes.
Q. When an email message came in, I assume you would read it when you had an opportunity to do so, correct?
A. I would read email files at different times depending on if I was in the office or not.
Q. Did you have a practice of leaving all received emails in the in-box on your personal computer at work, or would you delete them as you read them?
A. It varied.
Q. So you would delete some and save some; is that correct?
A. Again, my recollection was I didn't follow any specific rote process in terms of saving or deleting emails. I just don't recall whether I would do one thing or the other in particular.
Q. Well, the two extreme alternatives are to leave all the email messages in the box versus deleting them as you completed your use of them, correct? Those are the two extremes?
A. Those are two extremes, yes.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015088

Tyree

Q. Do you recall whether you followed one or the other of those two extremes with respect to email communications back in '98?

A. I don't recall following either of those two extremes back in 1998.

Q. Do you recall whether you had created archives of one sort or another on your computer so you could preserve certain kinds of email communications for a lengthy period?

MR. CLARE: Objection to form.

A. Again, I don't recall having any process where I archived or did not archive emails.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Assuming that you did receive email communications relating to Sunbeam or that you authored email communications relating to Sunbeam back in 1998, do you know where the record of those communications would be?

MR. CLARE: Objection; no foundation; and improper incomplete hypothetical.

A. I mean, it's difficult for me to opine on what you just laid out, because there a number of different factors that would dictate what I would or would not do in the context of email communication.

Tyree

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. I'm not sure I follow your response. Let me ask a different question.

I want you to assume that you either did author or did receive email communications relating to Sunbeam during your work in 1998. If that was the case, do you have any knowledge today where any of those email communications might exist?

MR. CLARE: Same objection.

A. Again, I can't say one way or another. Because when you predicate this with an assumption, I don't know what all the other variables are. So I don't know what I would or would not have done or did or did not do based on those presumptions.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Let me ask a more general question.

Do you have any idea where email communications that you may have received or authored back in 1998 are today?

MR. CLARE: Objection; foundation.

Tyree

A. Can you repeat the question one more time.

MR. MARKOWSKI: Can you read that.

(Record read.)

A. Is your question where those files are maintained or printed out somewhere or --

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. I'm asking -- I suppose -- let me focus the question again.

Back in 1998, you do recall that you authored and received email messages in connection with your work at Morgan Stanley, correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. Do you have any idea where the electronic record of those communications would exist today?

A. No.

Q. Do you have any copies of any printed out versions of email communications from 1998 in your possession today?

A. No.

Q. By "in your possession today," I don't mean present here but in your control anywhere in Morgan Stanley's offices.

Tyree

A. I don't recall having any email communications that I control in regards to the Sunbeam transaction as of today.

Q. The computer that you're currently using, Mr. Tyree -- your office is in London; is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. That's still true today?

A. That's correct.

Q. I assume you have a computer in your offices in London that you have access to, correct?

A. No. Actually, I have a laptop that I keep with me and is with me here in New York now.

Q. And you use that for purposes of email communications?

A. Among other things, yes.

Q. Do you have any emails archived on that computer that go back as far as 1998?

A. Not that I recall. But I don't believe so.

Q. Did anyone ask you to inspect your laptop to see whether or not you had any email

Page 303

Tyree
communications going back to 1998?
A. I don't recall anyone asking me that question. But, again, you know, it's been five years. So certainly not within the last year. I don't recall ever having heard that.
Q. Have you determined there are no email communications archived on your personal laptop computer relating to your work on Sunbeam?
A. I haven't gone through my laptop to audit it, if that's what you are asking, but I don't believe there are any emails in regards to the Sunbeam transaction.
Q. But you have not specifically conducted that search?
A. I don't recall having done that search.
Q. I'm going to turn your attention to something we talked about the last time we were together, the press release that Sunbeam issued on March 19, 1998.
A. Yes.
Q. Let me give you a copy of that. Take a moment to refresh your memory about it.
MR. CLARE: What number was that?

Page 304

Tyree
MR. MARKOWSKI: CPH 14.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Have you had a chance to review it, Mr. Tyree?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. Who had responsibility for reviewing the substance of Morgan -- excuse me -- Sunbeam's March 19th press release to determine the accuracy of the factual statements contained in it?
MR. CLARE: Objection; lack of foundation; and asked and answered.
A. To my recollection, the company did.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Do you know what specific individuals at the company had responsibility for reviewing the March 19th press release to determine its factual accuracy?
A. No.
Q. Did Morgan Stanley have any responsibility, in your view, to review the substance of the March 19th press release to determine the factual accuracy of the statements being made in it?

Page 305

Tyree
MR. CLARE: Same objection.
A. Can you repeat the question, please.
MR. MARKOWSKI: Can you read that back, please.
(Record read.)
A. That's not how I would characterize it.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Is the answer "no"?
A. No. The answer is that's not how I would characterize it.
Q. Let me ask my question again, because I think it's susceptible to a yes-or-no answer.
In your view, did Morgan Stanley have any responsibility in connection with Sunbeam's issuance of the March 19th press release to determine the factual accuracy of the statements that are made in it?
MO MR. CLARE: Object. And I move to strike counsel's preamble to the question.
A. I understand your question. And my response to that remains the same, which is I would not characterize it in the way that you've characterized it.

Page 306

Tyree
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Well, Mr. Tyree, do you agree or disagree with the statement -- let me ask a different question.
Mr. Tyree, do you agree with me that Morgan Stanley had a responsibility to determine the factual accuracy of the statements contained in the March 19th press release?
A. And, again, I'm going to give you the same response I gave before, which is that's not how I would characterize the responsibility of Morgan Stanley.
Q. I think I'm entitled to an answer to my question. It's a yes-or-no question.
MR. CLARE: I object --
MR. MARKOWSKI: Excuse me.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Do you agree that Morgan Stanley had a responsibility in connection with the work it was doing on the Sunbeam transactions to determine the factual accuracy of the statements being made in the March 19th press release?
MR. CLARE: I object.
Bob, his answer is what it is. He's

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree
answered it now several times. If you want to follow up on his answer, that's fine. I object to your preamble to your question.
MR. MARKOWSKI: He hasn't answered the question.
MR. CLARE: The record will show that he did.
A. Again, just to repeat, I don't believe it's a yes-or-no answer because I don't agree with your characterization of the responsibility of Morgan Stanley one way or the other.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I'm asking you, Did Morgan Stanley have a responsibility in connection with the work it was doing on the Sunbeam transaction to determine the factual accuracy of the statements made in the March 19th press release?
MR. CLARE: Same objection.
A. And I understand. And that's not how I would characterize Morgan Stanley's responsibility in the context of the Sunbeam transaction or this press release.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Tyree
Q. So you disagree?
A. No.
Q. Morgan Stanley wasn't responsible, in your view, for determining the factual accuracy of the statements contained in the press release?
MR. CLARE: Objection; misstates the testimony.
A. No, I do not disagree.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. So then you agree?
A. No, I do not agree.
Q. If you don't agree or you don't disagree, what's your view, Mr. Tyree?
A. I disagree with your characterization of Morgan Stanley's responsibility.
Q. I've asked it both ways. Your statement is that you neither agree nor disagree with the proposition that Morgan Stanley was responsible for determining the factual accuracy of the press release, correct?
A. Sorry. Can you repeat that again.
Q. Your testimony is that you neither agree nor disagree with the statement that Morgan Stanley had a responsibility to determine the factual accuracy of the statements made in the March 19th press release; is that correct?

Tyree
A. No. My testimony is that I would not characterize Morgan Stanley's responsibility in the way that you described it one way or the other.
Q. What is your testimony concerning Morgan Stanley's responsibility with respect to the statements contained in the press release?
A. My testimony is that Morgan Stanley had, and has, a wide array of responsibilities in the context of this transaction. When you look at the press release, my recollection is that we did see the press release before it was published. In terms of our responsibility, I don't recall, you know, anything dictating what responsibility we did or did not have in regards to this press release.
Q. Well, if Morgan Stanley -- Morgan Stanley was acting as Sunbeam's investment banker in connection with these transactions, correct?
MR. CLARE: Objection to form.
A. Morgan Stanley did act as an underwriter on the Sunbeam convertible bond issuance, yes.

Tyree
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Sunbeam was also Morgan Stanley's client with respect to three acquisitions that Sunbeam was hoping to complete in the first quarter of '98, correct? Do you recall that?
A. I do recall that, yes.
Q. And, in addition, Morgan Stanley was acting as an underwriter in connection with the convertible debenture offering that Sunbeam was attempting to complete in order to finance a portion of those acquisitions, correct?
A. To my recollection, that is correct.
Q. And this press release was issued in connection with the activities relating to those transactions, correct?
A. No. That's not how I would characterize it.
Q. Your testimony is this press release was not issued as a result of the state of Sunbeam's efforts to complete the convertible debenture offering?
A. Again, that is not how I would characterize it, no.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

Q. Your view is the events relating to the planned debenture offering had no relationship to the issuance of this press release?

A. Not -- that's not what I said. It's just -- the way you've asked the question, you focused on one issue, which is the issuance of the convertible notes. I think there were a number of factors that caused this press release to be published as to my recollection.

Q. One of them was the convertible debenture offering, correct?

A. When you say "one of them was the convertible debenture offering," can you be a little more --

Q. One of the reasons Sunbeam issued this press release on March 19 related to the planned debenture offering, correct?

A. The way I would characterize it is this press release was issued in advance, as I recall, of the pricing of the convertible transaction -- the Sunbeam convertible transaction. There were discussions between ourselves and Sunbeam about the press release in advance of that. But what I would not say is that the causal factor for the printing of this press release was the convertible note offering -- the convertible bond offering.

Q. We'll have an easier time today if you listen to the questions I ask and try to respond directly to them. Because that wasn't the question I asked.

The question I asked was: Do you agree that one of the factors that caused Sunbeam to issue this press release on March 19th was the status of the planned debenture offering in the first quarter of 1998?

MO MR. CLARE: Object. Move to strike counsel's preamble to the question.

A. Again, no. I don't think it was the status of the planned convertible transaction that was one of the major factors that drove the publishing of this press release. That's not how I would characterize it.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Of course, again that wasn't the question I asked.

Is it your testimony, Mr. Tyree, the issuance of the March 19, 1998, press release was completely unrelated to Sunbeam's planned debenture offering in the first quarter of '98?

Tyree

MR. CLARE: Objection to form; misstates the prior testimony.

A. I would characterize it as, to my recollection, a press release -- and this looks similar to it (indicating) -- was issued to communicate to the public markets, among other things, what the expectations should be for Sunbeam's financial performance for -- I believe it was the next quarter, I believe. That was the -- you know, the purpose of the press release. It did happen, the press release was issued in advance of the pricing of the convertible bonds.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Are you finished?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Morgan Stanley was involved in discussions with Sunbeam relating to the substance of this press release, correct, before it was issued?

A. Morgan Stanley had discussions with Sunbeam management about certain of the contents of this press release in advance of its being published.

Tyree

Q. And had discussions with Sunbeam concerning whether the press release would in fact be issued, correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And the reason why Morgan Stanley was a participant in those discussions before the issuance of the press release on March 19th is that Morgan Stanley is acting as the investment banker for Sunbeam in connection with three acquisitions and is acting as the underwriter for Sunbeam in connection with the convertible debenture offering that was planned, correct?

MR. CLARE: Objection to form and foundation.

A. Again, I'm sorry. If you can just read the question one more time.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. I'll restate it.

You've testified that Morgan Stanley was involved in participation with Sunbeam in discussions relating to whether this press release would be issued, correct?

015092

Page 315

Tyree
A. That's correct.
Q. The reason why Morgan Stanley is a participant in those discussions is that Morgan Stanley is acting as Sunbeam's investment banker with respect to three pending acquisitions and is acting as the underwriter in connection with Sunbeam's planned convertible debenture offering, correct?
MR. CLARE: Same objection.
A. I would characterize it differently, because I was focused on the financing part of the transaction. So what I can comment on is in our role relative to the issuance of the convertible bonds, we did interact with management in regards to their issuance of this press release.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. So at least, as far as you're concerned, one of the reasons why Morgan Stanley is participating in discussions about the substance of the issuance of the press release is that Morgan Stanley is acting as an underwriter in connection with the planned convertible debenture offering, correct?

Page 316

Tyree
A. One of the reasons why we participated in that, yes, that I agree with you.
Q. And in that regard, in your view, did Morgan Stanley have responsibility for determining the factual accuracy of the statements contained in the March 19th press release?
MR. CLARE: Objection; asked and answered several times now.
A. I have nothing to add to my previous testimony.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. And that previous testimony, as I understand it, is that you don't have an opinion one way or the other on that issue, correct?
A. I've commented on it many times now. I have nothing to add to what I said before.
Q. I am entitled to an answer to this question unless your lawyer instructs you not to answer. That's the way this works.
A. Okay. But I think I --
Q. So you don't have the option of saying, "I really don't care to respond."
MR. CLARE: He's answered your

Page 317

Tyree
question now multiple times. You've asked him for his view. He's given it to you in his own words. You've asked it 13 different ways. And now he says he doesn't have anything else to add. He's answered your question.
I object; asked and answered.
A. You're asking me to characterize this in one way and to apply a yes-or-no answer to it, correct?
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. That's exactly right.
A. And I don't think it's a yes-or-no question. I think there are a number of factors that you might characterize as Morgan Stanley's responsibility and other ones that I would characterize as Morgan Stanley's responsibility, which is why I hesitate to say yes or no about one specific responsibility without a broader discussion about it.
Q. I'm focusing on a single issue --
A. I understand that.
Q. -- factual statements contained in the March 19th press release. And my views are really not what I'm inquiring about. I'm inquiring about your views.

Page 318

Tyree
And my question of you is whether, in your personal view, Morgan Stanley had responsibility for determining the factual accuracy of the statements contained in the March 19 press release.
A. And, again, I've answered this before. So I don't have anything to add to what I said before.
Q. So you are not going to respond to my question?
A. No. I just object to the way you phrased the question. If you want to phrase it more specifically, if you want to ask what we did, the factual issues of what we did, I'm happy to opine on that. But I don't think this is a factual question.
Q. It's a factual question concerning your personal views. And I'm entitled to an answer, and you're not entitled to object. That's his job today.
MR. CLARE: And I am objecting because I do think we are now beyond the realm of repetitive and badgering questioning. He's answered the question multiple times. He's given you his view.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

I object; asked and answered.

MR. MARKOWSKI: No. What he's done, he's told me he objects to my question. I'm entitled to an answer to it.

MR. CLARE: He's given you his answer.

A. I feel I've answered it to the extent that I'm comfortable answering your question.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Your level of comfort really isn't pertinent. I'm entitled to a direct answer to my question.

A. I feel I've given you an answer.

Q. And you refuse to answer the question beyond what you've stated?

A. I have already given you an answer to the question.

MR. CLARE: Bob, you may not like the answer that he's given you, but that's not the standard. The question is whether or not he's answered your question. He has answered it multiple times in multiple iterations. And now we're just wasting time arguing about semantics.

Tyree

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. I suppose we'll have to take this up with the judge if you're not going to give me a direct answer to a direct question. I'm asking you for your personal views as of March 1998 concerning whether Morgan Stanley had a responsibility for determining the factual accuracy of the statements contained in the March 19th press release.

What's the answer to that?

A. Again, I've given you my answer already.

Q. And that's that you object to my question?

MR. CLARE: No. That's not his answer --

A. No. That's not my answer.

MR. MARKOWSKI: I think the record will speak for itself.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Did Morgan Stanley in fact take steps to determine the factual accuracy of the statements contained in the March 19th press release before it was issued?

Tyree

MR. CLARE: Object to the extent you are asking him to opine on what Morgan Stanley did. You can ask him what he did. To the extent you are asking him beyond what Mr. Tyree's involvement was, I object on the lack of foundation.

A. Are you asking me about what I did personally or what --

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. We'll go back to the question again. It's very simple. If you'll listen to the questions and respond to them without making up different questions or having Mr. Clare suggest different questions, this will proceed a lot more quickly. Okay. That's my objective, to get through this.

A. I feel I'm being cooperative.

Q. Someone else will make that determination, Mr. Tyree.

MR. MARKOWSKI: Can you read the question back, please.

Tyree

(Record read.)

A. To my recollection, I was in the room when several of my colleagues questioned -- extensively questioned Sunbeam management about their financial performance over the quarter and the following year.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Anything else?

A. Yes. We conducted -- correction. I conducted bring-down due diligence where we judged the progress of the company against the commitments that it had made on that call that I mentioned earlier. And there may have been ongoing discussions that my colleagues had that I was not present at.

Q. Before the press release was issued on March 19, other than questions that were put to management during the course of conversations that day on March 18 -- let me take a step back. Let's lay a little bit of foundation.

You've identified three things that Morgan Stanley either did or may have done in connection with determining the factual accuracy of the statements contained in the March 19 press

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 323

Tyree
release; is that correct?
A. What's correct is what I've said, but --
Q. Let me try to identify them. You said that your colleagues put questions to Sunbeam management in conference calls; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And did that happen on March 18th?
A. To my recollection, I believe it was March 18th or thereabouts.
Q. Those are the conversations that you are referring to?
A. Yes.
Q. And you indicated that you conducted bring-down due diligence. I assume that's subsequent to March 19th; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And you indicated that other people may have done other things that you are not correctly aware of; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. So there are two things of which you are aware: conversations on March 18th with Sunbeam management and your work after March 19th

Page 324

Tyree
in connection with bring-down due diligence. Correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. Other than the conversations that took place with Sunbeam management on March 18th, are you aware of anything that Morgan Stanley did prior to the issuance of the March 19th press release to determine the factual accuracy of the statements contained in it?
MR. CLARE: Same objection as to foundation and personal knowledge.
A. I don't personally recall having any other discussions in regards to the contents of this press release other than what I've mentioned prior to its being issued.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Mr. Tyree, did Morgan Stanley have any responsibility, in your view, to determine whether or not the press release issued on March 19th was misleading because it omitted other material facts relating to the subjects that are addressed?
MR. CLARE: Object to form; calls for a legal conclusion.

Page 325

Tyree
A. I think we're going back to the same kind of question you were asking before -- correct me if I'm wrong -- about Morgan Stanley's responsibility in terms of determining the accuracy of the press release.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. It's a little different. Let me state it again.
Did Morgan Stanley, in your view, have any responsibility for determining whether or not the March 19th press release was misleading because it omitted facts that related to the issues addressed in the press release?
MR. CLARE: Same objection.
A. I want to try to answer your question as best I can. Morgan Stanley conducted due diligence during this process, which is part of their responsibility. In the end, however, this is the company's press release (indicating). So the key responsible party in regards to this press release is the company. And I'm trying to answer your question as best I can.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Anything else?

Page 326

Tyree
A. No. .
Q. I'm not asking about Sunbeam's responsibility; I'm asking about Morgan Stanley's.
And my question is: In your view, back in 1998 did Morgan Stanley have responsibility for determining whether or not the March 19th press release was misleading because it omitted facts that related to the subjects that were addressed in the press release?
A. Yes. And my response to that is that Morgan Stanley, in my mind, has responsibility to conduct due diligence with a healthy dose of scepticism in the context of transactions such as this one. And as part of the due diligence process, we did engage in due diligence in regards to the numbers laid out in this press release. And I do view that as part of our responsibility. And that's how I would characterize it, which is perhaps slightly different than what you said.
Q. If Morgan Stanley, Mr. Tyree, was aware of material facts relating to the substance or the statements made in the March 19th press

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015095

Page 327

Tyree
release that caused Morgan Stanley to conclude that the March 19th press release was materially misleading, what, in your view, were the responsibilities of Morgan Stanley under those circumstances?
MR. CLARE: Objection to form, and incomplete hypothetical. It assumes facts not in evidence.
You can answer.
A. I can speak for me.
If I was aware of material misstatements in this or any other document, I would have, I believe, barring all the other variables that might affect this -- that I would have a dialogue with the company to try and understand if, in fact, those were what I perceived to be misstatements were misstatements and how to solve the problem. That's how I would approach it as a member of the firm.
Now, other people may have a different approach. But that's what I would do.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. In the context of this specific event, the issuance of this March 19th press

Page 328

Tyree
release, if Morgan Stanley was in fact aware of information that was omitted from this press release, and that caused the press release to be materially misleading, what, in your view, were the responsibilities of Morgan Stanley in connection with its work, both as the underwriter on the Sunbeam convertible debenture offering and as investment banker, in the three pending acquisitions?
MR. CLARE: Objection to form and asked and answered. He answered that exact same question.
A. I really do feel I answered that question.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Well, you indicated that you'd have a dialogue. My hypothetical that I'm positing is, in fact, you've concluded that the press release omitted material information that is causing the press release to be materially misleading.
What, in your view, are the responsibilities of Morgan Stanley under those circumstances?
MR. CLARE: Same objection.

Page 329

Tyree
A. I understand your hypothetical question. And, look, I think I've answered it to the extent I'm comfortable under oath, okay, given the fact that there are many other variables that could impact the situation that you've laid out.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Did Morgan Stanley have a responsibility not to proceed with the pending transactions in which it was involved?
A. I'm sorry. I didn't understand that question.
Q. If Morgan Stanley concluded that the statements contained in the March 19th press release were materially misleading, either because they weren't accurate, they weren't reasonable or they omitted material facts that caused the press release to be misleading, did Morgan Stanley have a responsibility to withdraw as the underwriter on the convertible debenture offering and as the investment banker in connection with the three pending acquisitions?
MR. CLARE: Object to the hypothetical and object as to form; also

Page 330

Tyree
assumes facts not in evidence.
A. Again, in the hypothetical you laid out, I don't want to give you any conclusion. Because there's a number of factors that would influence what Morgan Stanley would do in that situation.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. What are they?
A. There are numerous factors. Among them, what is this misrepresentation that you've described? Can it be communicated to the market? There are a number of issues too numerous for me to go through.
Q. Why are they too numerous for you to go through?
A. Because this is a complicated business. And making judgments about what is or is not a misstatement, as you put, is unto itself a complicated business. It's not as clear-cut as you are trying to make it out to be.
Q. We've got time to go through it. It's an important matter. There's a lot involved here. And we're going to take the time to go through it. So don't worry about how much time

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

16div-020962

Page 331

Tyree
it will take for you to explain your views concerning this.
A. Okay.
Q. If Morgan Stanley, in fact, concluded that the March 19th press release was materially misleading, what were Morgan Stanley's obligations, in your view?
MR. CLARE: Same objections.
A. And I will tell you again, you're positing a hypothetical to me without going through all the other variables that might dictate what Morgan Stanley's responsibility would be in that situation.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. What are those variables?
A. When was the press release published; what was the substance of this supposed misstatement that you laid out; is there any way to communicate that misstatement to the market; was it a mistake or was it deliberate.
Those are, what, four of them, four of the variables?
Q. Some of those variables we know the answer to, right?

Page 332

Tyree
MR. CLARE: Objection.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. The press release -- we're not dealing in complete isolation here. This is a press release issued on March 19th. Sunbeam was attempting to close four transactions between March 19 and the end of the quarter -- the first quarter of '98, which would end on March 28th. Those transactions were the convertible debenture offering and the closing of the three acquisitions, including the acquisition of Coleman (Parent) Holdings' interest in Coleman Company. So those facts are part of the hypothetical.
If, in fact, Morgan Stanley was aware that the March 19 press release relating to the subjects that are addressed in this press release was in fact materially misleading, what, in your view, were Morgan Stanley's obligations under those circumstances?
MR. CLARE: Objection; asked and answered. And you are asking this lay witness to give you a legal conclusion about legal responsibilities, to which I object.

Page 333

Tyree
A. I think that is exactly the question. I think you just repeated the question that I just answered and laid out the variables that would impact the situation -- a couple of the many variables that would impact it.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I want you to tell me -- my question is --
MR. MARKOWSKI: Could you read the question back, please.
(Record read.)
A. And my answer is, as I think I gave before was, there are a number of other variables that could impact that hypothetical. I think you asked me to list some of them, and I listed some of them.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. What are those variables?
MR. CLARE: Objection; asked and answered.
A. I just listed four of them.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Tell me what all the variables are that you think affects the responsibility that

Page 334

Tyree
Morgan Stanley would have under the circumstances that I've just described to you.
A. In addition to the four that I've just mentioned?
Q. I want you to list them all so that we have a complete list of all of the thoughts that you have on this subject.
A. I don't think it's practical for me to list them all, because there may be some that I don't remember at this juncture.
Q. I want you to testify to the best of your recollection to the factors that would have affected your thinking back in March of 1998 on the circumstances that I've just described to you.
A. Beyond what I've mentioned, the four variables, I really don't have anything to add to that.
Q. The four variables again are what, Mr. Tyree?
A. Okay. The -- whether the misstatement was deliberate or not; whether the supposed misstatement was deliberate or not; the ability to communicate to the marketplace to

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

16div-020963

Page 335

Tyree

correct the problem. The two other, I can't recall again.

Q. Do you agree with me that the only options that Morgan Stanley had under the circumstances that I've described would be either to withdraw from its engagements with Morgan Stanley and not proceed to the closing of the four transactions in which Morgan Stanley has been retained by Sunbeam or to ensure that Sunbeam communicated corrected information to the marketplace in advance of the closing of those transactions?

MR. CLARE: Object to form.

A. Look, I think that there might be other alternatives within that spectrum of options, and I can't opine on what they are, because you need to know what the answers are to these variables that I've described.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Other than the two alternatives that I've just described, withdrawing or ensuring that corrected information was communicated to the marketplace in advance of the closing of the four transactions, what other alternatives would

Page 336

Tyree

Morgan Stanley have had?

A. Morgan Stanley could have potentially delayed the transaction.

Q. What would the purpose of delaying have been?

A. Could be to -- a number factors. Could be to find out how material this supposed misstatement was; could be to communicate to the marketplace the misstatement. I mean, there are a number of reasons you might want to delay a transaction.

Q. Other than withdrawing, delaying or communicating corrected information in the marketplace in advance of the closing of the transactions, can you think of any other alternatives that Morgan Stanley would have had under the circumstances that I've described?

A. I can't think of any, but that's not to say that there aren't.

Q. Those are the only three that you can think of as you sit here?

A. As I sit here, yes.

Q. If Sunbeam had announced on March 19, 1998, in advance of the closing of the four transactions we've been talking about that it was unlikely to exceed in the first quarter of 1998 the net sales that Sunbeam had accomplished in the first quarter of 1997, what do you think the effect would have been on those four transactions?

MR. CLARE: Objection; no foundation; and incomplete hypothetical; and calls for speculation.

A. I don't know.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. You don't know whether the transactions would have been delayed?

A. I don't know what would have happened.

Q. Do you know whether the transactions might have failed as a result of that announcement?

MR. CLARE: Same objections.

A. I just don't know. I don't know what might have happened had that announcement been made.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Do you know whether Coleman (Parent)

Page 338

Holdings would have proceeded with the closing of its sale of its interests in Coleman Company under those circumstances?

MR. CLARE: Calls for speculation.

A. I can't opine, because I would not be making that decision.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. If Sunbeam had announced on March 19, 1998, that the reason why it was likely to fail to accomplish its sales in the first quarter of 1998 that exceeded its sales for the first quarter of 1997 was that it had accelerated a substantial volume of sales that otherwise would have occurred in the first quarter into the fourth quarter of 1997, what do you think the effect would have been on the four transactions in which Morgan Stanley was representing Sunbeam?

MR. CLARE: Same objections.

A. Again, I don't know. And just so you know, I wasn't part of the team that managed the M&A side of this transaction. So I don't have a place to even guess.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. You don't have any opinion on that?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 339

Tyree
A. No, I don't.
Q. Do you have any opinion with respect to the effect on the convertible debenture offering of a disclosure on March 19th of that sort?
A. No, I don't.
Q. Did you ever hear anyone from Morgan Stanley advise anyone from Sunbeam or any of Sunbeam's representatives that it was important to the completion of any of the four transactions in which Morgan Stanley was representing Sunbeam that Sunbeam continue to make its numbers for the reporting periods, the financial reporting periods?
A. I don't recall hearing anyone from Morgan Stanley make that comment to members of Sunbeam's management team.
Q. Would it surprise you if someone from Morgan Stanley made that statement to Sunbeam?
MR. CLARE: Object to form.
A. I don't think I'd have a reaction one way or the other.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Would it be, in your view,

Page 340

Tyree
inappropriate for Morgan Stanley to say to Sunbeam management that in connection with the four transactions in which Morgan Stanley was representing Sunbeam, that it was important that Sunbeam continue to achieve Wall Street expectations for Sunbeam's financial performance at least up through the closing of those transactions?
A. I would not characterize that as inappropriate, as you put it.
Q. Would it -- would that, in your view, be an appropriate thing for Sunbeam to be advised by Morgan Stanley?
MR. CLARE: Object to form.
A. Again, I'd stick with the characterization earlier, which is it's not inappropriate.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. In internal discussions at Morgan Stanley relating to either convertible debenture offering or any of the other three transactions in which Morgan Stanley was representing Sunbeam, did you hear any discussion concerning the importance of Sunbeam continuing to achieve Wall Street expectations with respect to its financial performance?

A. I don't recall hearing a conversation of the type you just described.
Q. Did you ever make that comment to anyone?
A. Not that I can recall.
Q. And you can't recall anyone making that comment in your presence?
A. No.
THE WITNESS: When we get to a break here, can I just visit the rest room?
MR. CLARE: Sure. Do you want to go now?
THE WITNESS: In a couple of minutes.
MR. MARKOWSKI: Actually, this is a breaking point. So we can break now.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Mr. Tyree, let me focus you on the events leading up to the issuance of the March 19 press release. You indicated that there were conference calls or telephone calls that you participated in -- I believe on March 18th concerning the substance and issuance of the March 19th press release?

A. I recall a conference call with Sunbeam management and a number of other parties in regards to the forward-looking financial performance of Sunbeam.
Q. Do you know how that conference call came to occur?
A. Yes.
Q. How?
A. My recollection was that an individual -- and it may have been an individual from Sunbeam management -- spoke to my colleague Ruth Porat -- I believe it was on that day, the 18th -- and discussed with her the financial performance of Sunbeam in the next quarter and that that triggered the call, as I recall.
Q. You said, discussed the financial performance of Sunbeam in the next quarter. At that point, Sunbeam's first quarter was almost completed.

Are you referring to Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter?
A. I wasn't at the discussion, but I would assume -- I shouldn't assume -- the substance of the call that occurred was about their performance both in that quarter as well as the following performance. That I do remember.
Q. How do you know that Ms. Porat was approached by someone from Sunbeam management on these subjects?
A. I don't think I said that I was sure it was a member of Sunbeam's management team; I believe it was. And my recollection was that I was at a company investor presentation. Ruth was there. And she spoke to someone and then spoke to me immediately after that suggesting we go back to the office and discuss the forward-looking financial performance of Sunbeam.
Q. When you testified on March -- excuse me -- on September 15th, you said that you thought you were present for one of the Sunbeam road show presentations that took place in New York.

Page 344

Tyree
Do you recall that?
A. I'm sorry. Do I recall --
Q. Let me ask a better question. That was a pretty crummy question.
Do you recall that you attended the Sunbeam road show presentation in New York on March 18th?
A. I believe that I did.
Q. And the portion of that road show presentation that you recall attending was the luncheon portion of that day, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And it's at that luncheon road show presentation that you recall having a conversation with Ms. Porat on this subject?
A. I vaguely recall that it was at the end of the luncheon.
Q. Who else from Morgan Stanley was present at that luncheon presentation?
A. The only individual I have a vague recollection of being there was Andy Savarie. I think was there. But there were a number of other employees who I didn't know or don't recall who were there from Morgan Stanley.

Page 345

Tyree
Q. Do you remember Jim Stynes being there?
A. I don't remember him specifically being there.
Q. Do you remember Bram Smith or Michael Hart being there?
A. Again, I don't remember. It doesn't mean they weren't there. I just don't remember them being there.
Q. Did you know those gentlemen back then?
A. Yes.
Q. You would have recognized them if you saw them?
A. Back then, yes.
Q. And you don't remember having seen them that day at the New York luncheon?
A. I don't remember. But I have a very vague recollection at the time.
Q. Who were you seated with for the lunch?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Were you seated with Morgan Stanley people?

Page 346

Tyree
A. I do remember that there were some potential investors at my table, but I don't know if there were also Morgan Stanley employees there.
Q. Were you sitting with Ms. Porat?
A. I don't believe so.
Q. Tell me what you recall concerning Ms. Porat coming up to you toward the end of the luncheon.
A. I recall her approaching me and saying or indicating to me that she had spoken to someone -- and, again, I can't remember exactly if it was Sunbeam management, but I think it was someone from the company -- and that we needed to go back to the office and have some dialogue internally as well as with the company about their financial performance for the quarters that I described.
Q. Do you recall that Ms. Porat told you with whom she had spoken? Did she give you the name of someone?
A. I don't recall if she did or did not.
Q. Did Ms. Porat seem concerned about what she had been told?

A. She, as I recall, seemed to feel that we just needed to get back to the office and talk about it. I don't know if I would characterize it as being overly concerned.
Q. I didn't ask you whether she seemed overly concerned. I asked you if she seemed concerned about what she had been told.
A. Yes, she seemed concerned.
Q. Do you recall any of the words that Ms. Porat used in telling you about her conversation or her reaction to it?
A. No. I don't recall any of words.
Q. Do you recall whether Ms. Porat was speaking to you alone? Or was there someone else from Morgan Stanley participating in your conversation with her?
A. I don't recall if anyone was there or not.
Q. Do you recall anyone from Sunbeam management being present when Ms. Porat advised you of her conversation?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Do you recall if anyone from Davis Polk was present when she did that?

Page 348

Tyree
A. Again, not that I recall.
Q. Had there been any discussion before Ms. Porat coming up to you at the end of the road show luncheon in New York on March 18th concerning the question of Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of 1998?
THE WITNESS: Could you just read back the first part of the question.
(Record read.)
A. I have a vague recollection of a due diligence session we conducted where we discussed, among other things, Sunbeam's financial performance.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Other than that due diligence session, do you recall any discussions with anyone at Morgan Stanley or at Sunbeam or with anyone else relating to Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of 1998?
A. I don't recall any additional discussions on that topic.
Q. When did this due diligence session that you alluded to take place?
A. I don't remember the exact date.

Page 349

Tyree
Q. Do you recall where it took place?
A. I believe it took place at Sunbeam's headquarters in Florida.
Q. Were you physically present for that due diligence session?
A. Yes, I was.
Q. Who else was there?
A. I can't remember exactly who was present at the session.
Q. Do you remember anyone who was present?
A. I remember that Andy Savarie was either present or on by phone; and one of either Bram Smith or Michael Hart were also either present or on by phone during parts of the session, I believe.
Q. Can you recall anyone else?
A. There were a number of other people. I just can't recall exactly what their names were.
Q. Were there Sunbeam participants?
A. Yes, there were.
Q. Can you remember the names of any of those people?

Page 350

Tyree
A. What I remember there were a number of Sunbeam participants. I believe at some point we had a discussion with Al Dunlap. I can't be sure if it was on that trip or not, but I think it was. And Russ Kersh may have been there. But I don't remember the names of the other participants.
Q. Do you remember Deborah MacDonald participating in this due diligence session?
A. I don't remember her particularly participating in the session.
Q. Do you know who Deborah MacDonald is?
A. I recall the name vaguely, but I don't know what role she played.
Q. Do you recall meeting her at some time?
A. I don't remember meeting her.
Q. What do you recall being advised during that due diligence session in Florida concerning Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of 1998?
A. I don't recall being advised anything specifically in regards to their financial performance.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 351

Tyree

Q. Well, do you recall anything about what you were told relating to Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of 1998 during that due diligence session in Florida?

A. No. I don't recall anything, any statements being made, exactly what was said about their financial performance. I mean, I know we had the discussion. And my recollection is there was nothing out of the ordinary that occurred. But I don't have any specific recollection about what was said.

Q. Whether you remember something specifically or not, do you recall any of the substance -- strike that.

Do you recall, in substance, what you were told relating to the status of Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance at that due diligence session?

A. No. I recall that management was broadly, you know, in agreement with the projections that were out in the research analyst community and that they went through a degree of specificity at the due diligence session. There was support for that contention. But beyond that, that's about all I recall.

Tyree

Q. Do you recall whether management advised Morgan Stanley at that session that its January sales results were 60 percent below its January 1997 sales results?

A. I don't recall anything like that.

Q. Do you recall that you were advised that the combined performance of Sunbeam in January and February of 1998 resulted in net sales that were approximately 50 percent below net sales in January and February 1997?

A. I'm sorry. When you say "the combined" --

Q. The combination of -- let me rephrase it.

Do you recall being advised in the due diligence session in Florida that you've been testifying about by Sunbeam management that Sunbeam's net sales in the first two months of 1998 were approximately 50 percent of Sunbeam's net sales in the first two months of 1997?

A. I don't recall anything like that.

Q. If you had been advised by Sunbeam management at that due diligence session that its sales results in January and February of 1998 were approximately half of its sales results in January and February of 1997, is that something that you think would stick with you today?

Page 353

Tyree

MR. CLARE: Objection to the hypothetical.

A. I don't know. I don't know if it would stick with me or not.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. You are not sure if that would have been sufficiently meaningful to you, that you would still recall it today?

A. It was five six years ago. I just don't know if it would have stuck with me or not.

Q. Did you take notes of the substance of the information you received from Sunbeam management during the due diligence session in Florida?

A. I don't recall if I did or did not take notes during the session.

Q. Would it be your practice to take notes when you are briefed by management in connection with due diligence sessions?

A. I don't know if I'd call it my practice. I have in certain situations done that before.

Page 354

Tyree

Q. Do you know if you did that in connection with any of the due diligence you did relating to Sunbeam?

A. I don't remember if I did or did not.

Q. So it's possible that you took no notes of any of the due diligence information that you gathered in connection with the work that you did on Sunbeam?

A. It's possible.

Q. If you did take notes, do you know whether you maintained those notes after the transaction was concluded?

A. I'm sorry?

Q. If you did take notes of the information that you received from Sunbeam management or from others in connection with the due diligence work that you did relating to Sunbeam, do you know whether or not you made an effort to preserve those notes after the closing of the transactions in which Morgan Stanley was involved?

A. I don't recall making any special

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

16div-020968

Page 355

Tyree
effort to retain those notes after the due diligence session.
Q. What was Morgan Stanley's policy back in the first quarter of 1998 with respect to due diligence notes? Do you know if there was one?
A. I honestly can't recall if there was a policy back then about maintaining or not maintaining due diligence notes.
Q. Has there been a Morgan Stanley policy that you're familiar with at some point in time on that subject?
A. I recollect that a couple of years ago, there was a policy in regards to not due diligence notes per se, but, you know, at the conclusion of a transaction, you would put together a file book with certain substance, you know, prospectus and that sort of thing, and everything else we would typically throw away unless there was some reason to keep it. But I don't know if that was Morgan Stanley policy or just keeping up files so people have reference materials.
Q. Would due diligence notes under that policy have been something that was discarded or preserved?

Page 356

Tyree
A. I just don't know. I mean, I personally -- I can comment on what I personally would do. And at the end of a transaction, I would typically keep some of the major documents, like commitment committee memos and prospectuses and things of that nature, and then I would just discard things that didn't have utility going forward.
Q. Would that include due diligence notes?
A. In some cases it would.
Q. Were there ever occasions where you did make a special effort to preserve due diligence notes?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Why is that?
A. I'm sorry? Why is what?
Q. You say your personal practice would be to discard your due diligence notes at the end of your work on a project.
And my question is why that is.
A. I guess for the sake of efficiency in terms of keeping files. I mean, if I kept all of

Page 357

Tyree
the documents relating to every transaction that I had done, it would become somewhat untenable.
Q. You don't view due diligence notes as something especially important to preserve?
A. I don't view it as more or less important than maintaining other documents in the course of a transaction.
Q. Well, you keep final deal documents, correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Are due diligence notes important to preserve for record-keeping purposes?
A. If you're asking me personally? Not as important as some of the other documents that I keep.
Q. Why isn't it important, in your mind, to have a written record of the substance of the information that you obtained in connection with due diligence?
MR. CLARE: Object to the form of the question. It misstates the testimony.
A. For me personally, I -- sometimes I would take extensive notes. For whatever reason, sometimes I wouldn't. It's a process that is very specific to the situation; whereas in every transaction, you would have -- if it were an equity transaction, equity commitment committee memo, prospectus or what have you. And those are just standard documents that I do on every transaction, which is why I keep them.

Page 358

Tyree
So that's a long-winded way of answering the question, which is the degree to which I kept notes varied. So it's hard to have a personal policy of maintaining them or not maintaining them.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Were you ever told by anyone supervising your due diligence work to preserve the notes that you took in connection with your due diligence?
A. As a general matter?
Q. Yes.
A. No.
Q. In connection with your work on Sunbeam, were you ever told specifically to preserve your notes of the due diligence work that you did?
A. Not that I recall.

Q. Do you recall being instructed in connection with your work on Sunbeam to discard any due diligence notes that you had generated?
A. No.
Q. Were you ever instructed as a general matter to discard due diligence notes at the end of your work on a project?
A. I don't recall anyone telling me to discard or there being a policy that says discard your due diligence notes after every transaction. I can't recall that.
Q. But that is your general practice, correct?
A. Me personally?
Q. Yes.
A. Generally, when I finish a transaction, I clean up my files. And in some cases, I will throw away notes that are associated with due diligence.
Q. Let me take you back to the conversation that you had with Ms. Porat at that New York luncheon.
Was the -- was she specific with respect to what she had been told by Sunbeam -- strike that.

Your recollection is that you believe that she told you she had had a side conversation with someone from Sunbeam management, correct?
A. It may have been someone from management. I just can't exactly remember.
Q. Whoever it was, they shared some information with her relating to Sunbeam's performance in the current financial reporting period, correct? The first quarter of 1998?
A. That is my recollection.
Q. Was she specific with you while you were still at the luncheon in telling you what she was told?
A. I just can't recall exactly what she told me at the luncheon or the degree of specificity that she provided them. I really don't remember the conversation.
Q. Do you recall her saying, in substance, I've just been told that there's a problem with Sunbeam's first quarter performance?
MR. CLARE: Object to the form.
A. I don't remember that exact dialogue.

Page 361

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I'm asking whether you recall that she told you that in substance; I'm not asking whether she told you that in those words.
Did she advise you, in substance, that she had just been told by someone, perhaps someone in Sunbeam management, that there was a problem with respect to Sunbeam's first quarter performance?
A. I don't remember that even in substance. What I remember is her saying that she had spoken to someone, and I thought it was someone from Sunbeam's management, about their performance this quarter and on a forward-looking basis and that we needed to go back to the firm to discuss it. That's what I remember.
Q. Do you recall any other conversation on this subject during the course of the New York road show meeting at the hotel?
A. No.
Q. Did you before you got back to the Sunbeam office -- excuse me.
Did you before you got back to Morgan Stanley's offices after that luncheon have any discussion with anyone other than the one you've described with Ms. Porat concerning this matter?

A. Yes.
Q. Who did you talk to?
A. A number of people, in particular when we were on this conference call that I discussed earlier.
Q. That happened before you got back to Morgan Stanley's office?
A. Oh, I'm sorry. My mistake. No. That happened after we got to Morgan Stanley's offices. Prior to our arrival at Morgan Stanley's offices, I don't recall having a discussion with any additional Morgan Stanley employees about this issue.
Q. You don't recall having a discussion with someone else from Morgan Stanley who may have been present at the road show?
A. I don't recall that.
Q. Did you travel back to Morgan Stanley's offices with Ms. Porat?
A. I don't remember if I went with her or not.
Q. What do you recall happening next that day relating to the matter that Ms. Porat had raised with you at the luncheon?

A. My recollection is after getting back to the office, I went down to the capital market floor, which is where Ruth and several of our colleagues work, and we sat around a conference table and discussed Sunbeam's financial performance for the quarter and then later had this conference call that I described.
Q. Was Ms. Porat there? I'm focusing now on the discussion that you've just described with Morgan Stanley colleagues before the conference call takes place.
A. I believe that Ruth was there for that conversation. I believe she was there.
Q. Do you recall anyone else who was there?
A. I think there were a number of people in and out, and there were also people at different times on the phone. I just can't remember exactly who was present versus who was on the phone for that call.
Q. I want to separate this out so we cover this thoroughly. And I want to focus first on the time period before you began to have discussions later that day with Sunbeam management.

Page 364

A. Yes.
Q. I want to understand all of the discussions that took place internally at Morgan Stanley before those discussions with Sunbeam management occurred. So all of my questions at the moment relate to that segment of the day.
A. I understand.
Q. Other than Ms. Porat, who do you remember during this phase of your activities that day discussing Sunbeam's first quarter performance with?
A. I don't have a recollection of any specific people that I had a conversation with about Sunbeam's financial performance.
Q. Or participating in conversations that you were listening to?
A. Same answer for that.
Q. Do you remember that Bill Strong participated during these internal Morgan Stanley discussions that day?
A. This is in advance of the call?

Page 365

Tyree
Q. Right.
A. I don't recall if he did or did not.
Q. You don't recall Mr. Strong being tied in by telephone?
A. I don't recall. It doesn't mean it didn't happen. I just don't recall it.
Q. You said a number of people were coming in and out, and there were a number of people who were participating by telephone.
Other than Ms. Porat, you can't remember the identities of any of those people?
A. Not to the extent that I'm sure. And I just want to be sure before I throw out names of people who might or might not have been there.
Q. I don't want you to speculate. But if you have a belief that certain people were involved, I'm entitled to that information as well as part of the discovery we're taking in this case. And so if there were other people other than Ms. Porat who you believe were involved in those conversations, I need to know their names.
A. In advance of the conference call, I just don't remember any of the specific names of people who were there.

Q. Do you remember how many, approximately, people were involved either in person or by telephone internally at Morgan Stanley discussing the subject of Sunbeam's first quarter performance in advance of the conversation starting with Sunbeam management later that day?
A. Including myself and Ruth, there were at least two others.
Q. How do you remember there were at least two?
A. I just have a recollection of being in a room with Ruth and different people coming in and out as we discussed this issue.
Q. When you got back to Sunbeam -- you indicated -- strike that.
You indicated that when you got back to Morgan Stanley's offices, that there was discussion relating to Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter, correct?
A. Yes.

first quarter performance that she shared with you when you got back to Morgan Stanley's offices?
A. I don't recall that she did or didn't have specific information at that point in time other than that she had this dialogue with the individual I mentioned earlier.
Q. Do you remember her saying something more expansive about the conversation she had at the road show meeting on that subject?
A. I don't recall that.
Q. Did someone else have information that they brought to bear relating to Sunbeam's first quarter performance?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. That you learned before you got on the phone with management?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Do you recall having available to you during the course of the internal discussions that afternoon information relating to Sunbeam's first quarter performance from the comfort letter that Morgan Stanley had asked Arthur Andersen to provide?

A. I don't recall anything like that.

But I've got a particular entry I want refer you to on the second page of the document.
A. Can I just take a minute to read it?
Q. Sure.
A. Okay.
Q. Have you had a chance to read the document?
A. Yes, I have.
Q. Let me ask a background question. Davis Polk was serving as an outside counsel to Morgan Stanley in connection with the work Morgan Stanley was doing for Sunbeam, correct?

A. To my recollection, yes.
Q. Let me direct your attention to the entry in this document from March 18, 1998. It's on the second page. It reads, "telephone conference calls re Sunbeam first quarter results and proposed press release; review of draft comfort letters from Arthur Andersen and KPMG."
Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. Does this refresh your recollection that on March 18th, Morgan Stanley had in its possession the Arthur Andersen comfort letter?
A. No.
Q. Can you think of any reason why, if Davis Polk had the draft Andersen comfort letter on March 18, Davis Polk would not have shared that comfort letter with Morgan Stanley?
MR. CLARE: Objection; lack of foundation; calls for speculation.
A. I don't know what Davis Polk would or could have done.

Q. Before -- can you remember anything else about the discussions internally at Morgan Stanley between the time of your conversation with Ms. Porat at the New York road show luncheon and the time of the initial conference calls, including Sunbeam management later that day that you have not testified to?
A. No. I can't recall anything specific about it.
Q. I'm still focusing on this time period before the conversation with management started up later that day.
A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall concluding there is already something I was aware of?

A. I don't recall thinking that.

Q. Do you recall thinking this is a new piece of information that I was not previously aware of?

A. I just don't recall what exactly my feeling what was at that time.

Q. Do you recall believing that -- and I'm still focusing on the time period before conversations started up with Sunbeam management later that day -- that somehow, in words or substance, Sunbeam management had created a false impression concerning its performance in the first quarter of 1998 in its communications with Morgan Stanley?

A. Again, I just don't remember exactly how I felt, because I don't even remember the substance of what came up in those conversations with Ruth --

(Cell phone interruption.)

A. I just don't remember the substance of those conversations with Ruth. So it's hard for me to remember my reaction.

Tyree

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. The information that Ms. Porat said we need to go back to the office and talk about, was it your understanding that this was good news --

MR. CLARE: Object to the form.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. -- relating to Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of '98?

A. I don't recall that it was good news, bad news or other, just news that we have to do some work on.

Q. Let me go back. You indicated that Ms. Porat seemed concerned that her reaction was of concern when she first spoke to you at the luncheon, correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. Was it your conclusion based on her demeanor that the information that was being shared with her wasn't that Sunbeam was doing better than expected in the first quarter but, instead, that Sunbeam was doing worse than expected in the first quarter?

Tyree

A. My recollection was, yes, that it was relating to Sunbeam performing not as well as we had expected in that quarter.

Q. So is it your understanding that -- strike that.

Is it your testimony that prior to this conversation that you had with Ms. Porat at the New York luncheon, that your personal understanding was that Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of '98 was on track with Wall Street's expectations for the quarter?

A. I'm sorry. Can you say the first part of that again?

Q. I'll restate it.

Is it your testimony that prior to your conversation with Ms. Porat at the New York road show luncheon on March 18, that your personal understanding was that Sunbeam was on track to accomplish Wall Street's expectations for its financial performance in the first quarter of 1998?

A. My recollection was in advance of that conversation you mentioned with Ruth that I had had no indication from -- personally from

Tyree

Sunbeam management that they were not going to achieve the financial performance targets that were in the marketplace held by equity research analysts up to that point in time.

Q. Given your responsibilities and the work that you had done up until that point in connection with due diligence on the convertible debenture offering, if there was an expectation on Sunbeam's part that it was going to fall significantly short of Wall Street's expectations for the first quarter of 1998, would you have expected Sunbeam management to bring that to your attention so that you could evaluate it?

MR. CLARE: Objection to form. It's a hypothetical.

A. In the context of my role in due diligence, as you say, I would expect Sunbeam management to be honest and forthright and answer all of our questions in that manner. The rest of your question is, effectively, more of a hypothetical in terms of what would I do.

THE WITNESS: Can you read the question back, please.

(Record read.)

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree
A. It's a hypothetical.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. It is a hypothetical.
I'm asking, under the circumstances in which you were operating and the responsibilities that you had had and the previous communications that you had had with Sunbeam management, would you have expected Sunbeam management to bring a problem to your attention relating to Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance so that you could evaluate it?
A. What I'm saying is in the context of my role in terms of due diligence, I would expect Sunbeam management to be up front and honest with all of my questions. And, you know, when you talk about your hypothetical here, you mentioned earnings. I think it was substantially below. If their earnings were 50 percent below market expectations or 60 percent market expectations, and there are a number of factors -- other factors that played into a decision, maybe I would have made that decision. If their numbers were a small percentage point, and they stood a very good chance of achieving their targets, then maybe I wouldn't have. It all depends on a number of different variables that would dictate what I would have done in that situation.

Q. I think you lost the thread of my question. Let me try again.
A. Okay.
Q. You were involved in conducting due diligence for Morgan Stanley in connection with the convertible debenture offering, correct?
A. I was involved in it.
Q. And you've testified, one of the things that you participated in was a due diligence session where Sunbeam had briefed you on Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of '98, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And I think -- we'll pin down later the timing of that presentation. But whenever it happened, you were apprised at that point of the status of Sunbeam's first quarter performance, correct?
A. During the due diligence session?
Q. Correct.
A. My recollection is we went through their historical financial performance and their financial performance for that period that they were in.

Tyree
Q. And you don't recall being advised during that session that Sunbeam's January and February sales were half of what the sales had been in the first two months of 1997, correct?
A. I don't recall that.
Q. If that was the case, would you have expected Sunbeam management to bring that to your attention so that you could evaluate its significance?
A. I would expect Sunbeam management to bring to my attention any material issues that we needed -- Morgan Stanley needed to represent Sunbeam appropriately in the market.
Q. I'm specifying a particular situation. And I'm asking you whether or not it meets that test.
A. Right.
Q. The hypothetical that I'm giving you is that Sunbeam's sales in January and February of 1998 are about half of what Sunbeam's sales had been in January and February of 1997.

Tyree
Would you have expected Sunbeam management to bring that piece of information to the attention of John Tyree so you could evaluate it in connection with the due diligence work you were doing on the convertible debenture offering?
A. And I'm comfortable saying what I just said, which is, in general, I would expect Sunbeam management, management of any company, to bring to my attention material information that I needed to do my job.
Q. Well, is that information that you would have needed at that point to do your job: Our sales for the first two months of 1998 are half of what our sales had been in the first two months of 1997?
A. In this hypothetical situation, it could be. I just don't want to opine on exactly what I would do in a hypothetical.
Q. I'm not asking what you would do. I'm asking whether or not you would have expected Sunbeam management to bring that information to your attention so that you could evaluate its significance.
A. And again -- you're right. I

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree
wouldn't -- I wouldn't want to opine on my expectations in terms of a hypothetical situation without knowing the other variables surrounding it.
Q. Well, it's not a hypothetical. You know from the documents we reviewed when we were together last time that Sunbeam's financial performance in the first two months of 1998 were -- for net sales were half of Sunbeam's net sales in the first two months of 1997, right?
We've already established in this deposition?
A. I believe we have, yes.
Q. So that's a reality?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Would you, given the responsibilities you had in connection with due diligence on the convertible debenture offering, have expected Sunbeam management to bring that decline in net sales performance to your attention so you could evaluate its significance?
A. And what I said before was I would expect them to bring any material development to my attention that impacted my ability as an individual to do my job.

Q. Does this fall into that category?
That's my question. That's what I'm trying to understand.
A. It certainly could have been, depending on a number of other factors.
Q. You need to understand what the information is in order to evaluate that, right?
My question is whether you would have expected Sunbeam to bring to your attention 50 percent decline net sales in the first two months of the first quarter of '98 so you could understand its significance in relationship to other matters.
A. Uh-huh.
MR. CLARE: Objection; asked and answered.
A. I think I've answered that already.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I'm entitled to an answer to my question. Objections are for him. The Court will rule on them later. Your job is to answer questions unless he instructs you not to.
A. But it's fair that I answer questions without speculating, correct?

Tyree
Q. I'm asking whether you thought something. That doesn't call for speculation.
My question is whether or not, in connection with the work you did in due diligence on this transaction, you would have expected Sunbeam management to bring to your attention a 50 percent decline in net sales in the first two months of '98 so you could evaluate its significance in connection with an offering that was going to close before the end of the first quarter.
A. I understand. You're asking me to tell you what I would have done.
Q. No. I'm asking whether you would have expected them to bring it to your attention.
A. What I would have expected them to do?
Q. Correct.
A. To speculate on what I would have expected them to do, which is just something I'm not comfortable doing.
Q. You said you expected Sunbeam management to bring to your attention any material information necessary for you to do your job, correct?

Tyree
A. That's right.
Q. My question to you is whether or not a 50 percent decline in net sales in the first two months of a quarter would meet that test, in your mind.
MR. CLARE: Objection; asked and answered.
A. I really do think I've answered this to the extent I can without speculating.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. You don't know one way or another whether or not a 50 percent decline in Sunbeam's net sales in the first two months of 1998 would have been something significant that you needed to evaluate in connection with the closing of the debenture offering before the close of the first quarter?
A. I just -- what I don't know is exactly what I would have done, because I don't know all the variables surrounding the situation at that time.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 383

Tyree
Q. I'm not asking what you would have done, sir.
A. Or what I would have expected them to do not knowing all the variables surrounding the situation at that time.
Q. My question is this. It's not what you would have done. It's not what somebody else would have done. My question is the significance of a piece of information to you in connection with the work you personally were doing.
Would a 50 percent decline in Sunbeam's net sales in the first two months of 1998 have been a significant piece of information that you would have wanted to know in connection with the due diligence work that you were doing prior to the close of the $750 million debenture offering that Morgan Stanley was underwriting for Sunbeam?
A. I understand the question. And my answer just hasn't changed from what I said. It could very well be a material piece of information that would have to be taken into consideration with a number of other factors that were happening at that time.

Page 384

Tyree
Q. My question is whether or not it's a piece of information you would have wanted to know.
A. I would like to know everything that I could possibly know about a transaction of a financial situation of a company.
Q. Do you think that a 50 percent decline in net sales for the Sunbeam corporation under the circumstances that I've described is a significant piece of information that someone conducting due diligence in connection with a $750 million debt offering should know?
A. I think it's a piece of information. And as I said before, I'd like to have as much information as I possibly could have in the course of any transaction. So I'm not going to opine on how material it is or not. If it's information, I'll take it in and make a judgment at the time.
Q. My question is whether it's a piece of information you would have wanted to know.
A. I'd like to know all information I could. So if that -- to answer your question, if you are saying, you know, if this is happening,

Page 385

Tyree
if this event was happening at that time, would I like to know that information. If that's your question, yes, I would like to know that information.
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 11:30. This completes tape number one.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 11:34. This is tape number two of the videotaped deposition of Mr. John Tyree.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Mr. Tyree, I want to expand the time period that we're focusing on.
A. Yes.
Q. Up until now we've been focusing on the time period between the conversation that you had with Ms. Porat at the road show and the start of conversations with Sunbeam management. I want to expand the period now from the time of your conversation with Ms. Porat up until the time Sunbeam's press release is issued on March 19th.
A. Yes.
Q. Between those two points in time, with whom at Morgan Stanley do you recall there being discussions relating to the status of Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance?

Page 386

Tyree
A. This period includes the conference call?
Q. It includes everything.
A. Okay. I recall speaking with Ruth, as we discussed. I believe that I either spoke to or was on a conference call that Bill Strong was on. I could be wrong, but I think so. From Morgan Stanley, those are the only people that I specifically recollect.
Q. Are there others that you believe were involved who you don't specifically recall at this point?
A. I have a vague recollection that maybe I spoke to Jim Stynes about this at some point; but beyond that, those are the only three that I can remember.
Q. Sticking with the same time period, do you recall any involvement on the part of Bob Kitts relating to the status of Sunbeam's first quarter performance?
A. Over this period of time?
Q. Right. I'm talking about from the lunch presentation on March 18th to the issuance of the press release on March 19th.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Do you recall Bob Stynes [sic] being involved in any discussion relating to the status of Sunbeam's first quarter performance during that period?
A. Sorry. Bob Kitts or Jim Stynes?
Q. I'm sorry. Bob Kitts.
A. I don't recall interacting with Bob Kitts over that time.
Q. Alex Fuchs?
A. I don't recall interacting with Alex either over that time.
Q. Whether you interacted with him or not, do you recall him being involved in discussions relating to this subject during that time period?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Bram Smith?
A. I don't recall specific discussions with Bram.
Q. My question again is a little bit different.
Do you recall Mr. Smith being

Tyree
involved in any way in the time period we're talking about between the lunch on the 18th and the issuance of the press release on the 19th in discussions relating to Sunbeam's first quarter performance?
A. No. I don't recall that.
Q. What about Michael Hart?
A. No. I don't recall that.
Q. Do you recall whether any in-house Morgan Stanley attorneys were involved in those discussions?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. What's your opinion of Mr. Strong?
MR. CLARE: Object to the form.
A. Can you be a little more specific?
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. In terms of his business capabilities.
A. I think Bill Strong is an extremely capable professional.
Q. How experienced was he in March of 1998, in your view?
A. He's experienced.
Q. How sophisticated in the business

Tyree
sense was he, in your opinion, back in March of 1998?
A. He -- my experience with Bill, he exhibits a degree of sophistication commensurate with his position at the time.
Q. What was his position back in March of 1998?
A. I believe he was a managing director at the time.
Q. What does that mean in Morgan Stanley parlance?
A. It means you are a relatively senior banker with the firm.
Q. Do you recall any administrative responsibilities Mr. Strong had back in March of 1998 at Morgan Stanley?
A. I don't recall what his administrative responsibilities were in that period.
Q. What was his involvement in the Sunbeam transaction?
MR. CLARE: Objection; calls for speculation.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Tyree
Q. To your knowledge.
A. I'm sorry?
Q. What was Mr. Strong's involvement in the Sunbeam transaction, to your knowledge?
A. Sorry. Just in what way?
Q. What were his responsibilities? What was his role?
MR. CLARE: Objection to the form.
A. What I recall was that Bill knew the client senior management at Sunbeam. He participated on a number of conference calls. I believe he may have participated in part of the road show presentation. Those were kind of his duties as I recall them.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Would he have been the most senior Morgan Stanley person involved in the Sunbeam transactions?
A. I don't -- I hesitate because I don't recall if, for example, there were members of the senior management of the firm that may have participated at different points. I just don't remember. He was one of the senior -- most senior people who participated in the transaction.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

Q. In terms of who you can recall, is he the most senior person from Morgan Stanley involved in the transaction?

A. Again, I wouldn't characterize it that way. Because I believe Jim Stynes was managing director then, as well as even Bob Kitts might have been. I just don't recall if he was senior to those individuals.

Q. You're not sure at this point?

A. Not at this point, no.

Q. But he was an experienced and senior person in Morgan Stanley's management, right?

A. He was a senior and experienced professional. I don't know if he at that point was in a management role.

Q. How about Ruth Porat? How would you characterize her level of experience and sophistication back in March of 1998?

A. Again, Ruth was and is a seasoned professional.

Q. Would you characterize her as sophisticated in a business sense?

A. Sophisticated to the degree she should have -- should be for her position.

Tyree

Q. Well, what is that? I guess I don't know.

Did you consider her to have a great deal of business sophistication or not?

A. I considered Ruth at that point to be a solid capital markets professional.

Q. Did that position require that she have a high degree of business sophistication?

MR. CLARE: Objection; lack of foundation.

A. I wouldn't characterize it that way. I would characterize it as the position Ruth was in required her to be very knowledgable about her specific area of investment banking.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. And what would that area involve?

A. My recollection was that it was capital markets focused, meaning the issuance of debt and equity and the market judgments associated with that.

Q. And the debt offering that she was involved with in this context was the sale of $2 billion in zero coupon convertible debentures, correct?

Tyree

A. I believe that is correct.

Q. And that's a significant amount of debt to -- for a company to be offering, correct?

MR. CLARE: Objection to form.

A. Again, it depends on the size of the company.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Between you and me, $2 billion is a significant debt offering, correct?

MR. CLARE: Objection to form; calls for speculation.

A. I view $2 billion to be a significant amount of money. Put it that way.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. Other than the Morgan Stanley personnel that you've identified for me, between the time of the conversation you had with Ms. Porat at the road show and the issuance of the press release, what other individuals do you recall being involved in any discussions relating to the subject of Sunbeam's first quarter performance or the issuance of the press release on March 19th?

Tyree

A. Including the telephone --

Q. Including everything -- every other person outside of Morgan Stanley who was involved in discussions on either of those two subjects.

A. During the course of the entire transaction or up to the --

Q. Let me be clear. I want the record to be clear. I'm focusing on the time period from your conversation with Ms. Porat at the road show luncheon on March 18th and issuance of the press release the next day by Sunbeam on March 19th. That's the time period we're focusing on. And I want you to identify for me any individuals other than the Morgan Stanley personnel that you've already identified who were involved in any way in the discussions relating to Sunbeam's first quarter performance in 1998 or the issuance of the press release on March 19th.

A. There were lawyers, as I recall, from both Davis Polk and -- I believe it was Skadden Arps. I can't remember their names. If you gave me some names, I could potentially remember them. It's on the tip of my tongue. There were a number of individuals from Sunbeam management.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0151112

Tyree
Included in that, I believe, were Al Dunlap, Russ Kersh, and then a number of other Sunbeam individuals, whose names I can't recall. Those were the people that I recall at this point in time.
Q. Do you remember any discussion during that time period with any in-house Morgan Stanley lawyers?
A. I do not.
Q. Take me now through the sequence of the conversations that you recall following the internal discussions at Morgan Stanley that day relating to Sunbeam's first quarter performance.
What's the first conversation that you recall involving someone from outside of Morgan Stanley?
A. The first conversation that I recall involving someone from outside of Morgan Stanley was in fact that conference call that we discussed on, I believe, the evening of the 18th, I think.
Q. Do you recall when in the day that conversation took place?
A. I recall that it was between midafternoon and late evening. That could be wrong. It could have been early in the afternoon. But that's my recollection.

Tyree
Q. Did you have any involvement in the arrangements for that telephone call?
A. Not that I remember.
Q. Do you recall how long that telephone conversation lasted?
A. I recall that it wasn't necessarily one telephone call. I think there were periods of time where we had a conversation; then people dropped off and got back on. And I can't recall if those were separate conference calls or we just kept the line open. But there were kind of periods of time in which people adjourned off the call and then rejoined.
Q. I want to try to -- to the extent you can, to parse that out. So if you can remember an initial telephone conversation, an adjournment and resumption, that's the kind of sequence I'd like to try to develop here today, if you're capable of doing that.
A. Honestly, I just don't remember what the substance was in these separate dialogues.

Tyree
And I was in and out myself. So I couldn't -- I wouldn't be comfortable laying out for you a time line for it, because I either wasn't there or don't remember.
Q. So you remember an initial conference call that included, I take it, the various groups you've identified: Morgan Stanley personnel, Davis Polk, Skadden Arps and Sunbeam management. Correct?
A. No. I actually recall those parties having participated in -- could be one or all of these parsed, as you put it, conference calls. So I can't recall if, for example, all of those entities were present on the first call.
Q. And you're not sure if that first call was really a first call or whether it was several calls with some interruptions?
Here's what I'm trying to understand. You've indicated that there was a conference call that began after the internal discussion at Morgan Stanley took place. And Sunbeam management is on this initial conference call, correct?
Let me establish that clearly.

Tyree
A. I don't recall if they were or not.
Q. Who do you recall being on the initial phone conversation with someone outside of Morgan Stanley?
A. I don't remember who was on that phone call.
Q. Do you have a clear memory of -- let me start over here and make sure we have this straight.
The first conversation that takes place involving someone outside of Morgan Stanley, you said, was a conference call that took place, you believe, beginning in the midafternoon, correct?
A. Yes. And just to be clear, when I made that statement, I wasn't thinking of there being one conference call and then a series. I was thinking of this being a continuous series of conversations that occurred on the same line. Whether they did or not, I can't remember. But that's what I was referring to. So I didn't mean to say there was one specific call, and everyone joined, and then we went on from there. That's not what I meant to imply.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

Q. Who do you recall being involved in that sequence of phone conversations, whether it was a single one or multiple calls that were resumed during the course of the afternoon?

A. It's the same list that I gave you before. So it's representatives of Skadden Arps, representatives of Davis Polk, the individuals that I mentioned from Morgan Stanley, and the individuals that I mentioned from Sunbeam management.

Q. And this either single call or series of closely related calls that you're recalling, over what period of time did they take place that day?

A. As I said before, they started sometime either between early afternoon and midevening. And they continued, as I recall, fairly late into the evening.

Q. Is there something then that happens after that that you can clearly distinguish from this either long telephone conference or a series of related phone calls?

Is there another clearly separate conversation that you can distinguish from the telephone conversations that you're describing?

Tyree

A. No. My recollection is just in regards to that series of telephone conversations that occurred.

Q. So what you're describing are the events that you can recall that took place during the course of that day at this point, and you can't distinguish any of these conversations as being part of one or more separate telephone calls?

A. No, I cannot.

Q. In terms of internal communications at Morgan Stanley, were there points during the day where you conferred separately with your Morgan Stanley colleagues relating to those subjects apart from the phone calls that you participated in?

A. My recollection is that we were constantly conferring among ourselves. I don't recall a formal time where we adjourned to confer and then get back on the call. It was more fluid dialogue than that.

Q. Who was present with you when you were participating in these phone calls? Who was physically in the room with you?

Tyree

A. Again, the only one I remember specifically was Ruth.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Strong's participation was by telephone; that he was not in New York that evening?

A. You know, it could have been, but I don't remember exactly.

Q. But you don't remember him being physically present with you, correct?

A. I don't remember that.

Q. Do you remember there being any separate conversations that either you or Ms. Porat had during the course of the day after these conversations with Sunbeam management began with Mr. Strong?

A. A conversation between myself, Ms. Porat and Mr. Strong?

Q. Conversations either between you and Ms. Porat and Mr. Strong or either one of you and Mr. Strong apart from his participation in the calls with Sunbeam management?

A. I don't recall any specific conversations apart from that fluid dialogue that

Tyree

I described.

Q. What do you recall relating to the conversations that you participated in that day or listened in on that day involving Davis Polk, Skadden Arps and members of Sunbeam management relating to those discussions?

A. Well, I recall, as I said, there was a lengthy period of time over which we had the conversations. I recall Ruth Porat having the management of Sunbeam go through their projection for the quarter in great detail. I recall -- I don't know if it was Ruth or who it was, but I recall specific requests made of Sunbeam to, you know, clarify the ensurability of the financial performance by breaking it down in the document that we've already looked through. I recall Ruth going through that in great detail.

I recall Sunbeam management getting off the phone to kind of -- to gather additional support from what I believe was junior -- more junior managers and salespeople for an effective guarantee of those financial results. And I recall associated conversations with counsel and Ruth and, as I said, with others about the press release and the timing of the press release.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree
That's what I remember.
Q. Mr. Tyree, let me show you what we marked at your last -- the last session of your deposition. This is CPH Exhibit 16. It's a one-page document that bears Bates number Morgan Stanley confidential 28858.
Do you recall this being a document that was used in connection with the telephone conversations on March 18?
A. You said 28858?
Q. Morgan Stanley confidential --
A. Oh, yes. I'm sorry. Your question?
Q. Do you recall this being a document that you had in front of you in connection with the March 18th telephone conversations that you've just testified about?
A. I recall there being a document in front of us or that I had seen that ticked through the projected sales -- net sales for the company. But beyond that, I don't know if this is the document.
MR. CLARE: Let me take a quick time out. I think my exhibit that I have from the prior deposition does not match those same Bates numbers. Can I review the exhibit, please?

Tyree
THE WITNESS: (Handing.)
MR. CLARE: The exhibit that we marked is different than the one that was provided to me at the prior deposition.
Do you have an extra copy of this one?
MR. O'CONNOR: No.
MR. CLARE: I suggest that we take a short break. I would just like to be able to have this in front of me while you're questioning the witness about it.
MR. MARKOWSKI: Sure.

resumed, having been previously duly sworn, was examined and testified further as follows:
EXAMINATION (Cont'd.)
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Mr. Tyree, do you have CPH Exhibit 16 in front of you?
A. Actually, I do not. I guess they're all the same.
Q. Is it your testimony that you don't recall this specific piece of paper being a document that you received from Sunbeam management on March 18th in connection with the conference calls you've been testifying about?
A. It's my testimony that there was a document that was not dissimilar to this that I had at that time, but I can't confirm this is in fact a copy of that document.
Q. Ms. Porat in other proceedings has testified this is the document that she received from Sunbeam management on March 18th.
Do you have any reason to agree or disagree with that testimony?
A. I have no reason to agree or disagree with that.

Tyree
Q. There's nothing about this document that would cause you to say, This is not what I was looking at on March 18th?
A. Again, there is nothing here to say that it is or is not what I was looking at on that date.
Q. Do you recall that the document you received from Sunbeam management on March 18th included a list of potential orders?
A. Yes, I do recall that.
Q. And this document, CPH 16, contains a list of potential orders; is that correct?
A. Yes, it does.
Q. Were you at any time asked to do any due diligence with respect to any of the specific customers listed on the list of potential orders provided to Morgan Stanley on March 18?
A. I don't recall if I was asked to do due diligence or not on the specific customers.
Q. Do you recall contacting any of the customers listed on the list of potential customers that Morgan Stanley received on March 18?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 407

Tyree
A. I don't recall contacting any of these specific customers. That's not to say it didn't happen; I just don't recall it.
Q. Do you recall any communication that you were involved in on or after March 18 with any of the companies listed on CPH Exhibit 16 relating to their business activities with Sunbeam?
A. Again, I don't recall it. That doesn't mean it didn't happen. I just don't remember.
Q. As you sit here right now, you have no recollection of having such contact, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. Do you recall having any communications with any of those customers related to your Sunbeam due diligence prior to March 18?
A. I don't have any recollection of that one way or the other.
Q. As you sit here, you don't have any memory of having done that before March 18 either, correct?
A. No.

Page 408

Tyree
Q. Did the document that you received – let me take a step back.
Did you have in front of you on March 18th the same piece of paper that Ms. Porat received from Sunbeam management? Did she share that with you?
A. I recall that Ruth and I both had a piece of paper that was similar to this one during the conference call on the 18th.
Q. You both had the same piece of paper, I take it, right?
A. That's my recollection, yes.
Q. When you saw it, did that document appear to you to be a reasonable business plan for accomplishing the sales figure for the first quarter of 1998 that analysts were expecting Sunbeam to accomplish?
MR. CLARE: Objection to the form.
A. I don't recall, you know, five years ago having a sense for its reasonableness or it not being reasonable at the time.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Did you think it was your responsibility to evaluate the reasonableness of

Page 409

Tyree
the information that was being provided to you on March 18 from Sunbeam management concerning its ability to achieve street expectations for first quarter sales?
THE WITNESS: I'm sorry. Could you repeat the question.
(Record read.)
A. I don't think I would characterize it that way.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. How would you it characterize it?
A. As I recall, I viewed it as my responsibility and, in fact, the responsibility of the entire Morgan Stanley team to conduct the appropriate level of due diligence in regards to all finance forecasts that were provided to us by Sunbeam.
Q. I'm focusing specifically on the information that was being provided on March 18 concerning Sunbeam's ability to accomplish the street expectations for net sales.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Sunbeam management provided you with information on March 18 concerning that, correct?

Page 410

Tyree
A. They did. That's correct.
Q. Did you think it was your responsibility to evaluate the reasonableness of Sunbeam's plan to accomplish street expectations for first quarter sales?
A. I would characterize it a little bit differently.
Q. Can you answer my question yes or no?
A. Similar to our discussion before, I would prefer to characterize it in my own way from what I remember.
Q. My question is: Can you answer my question yes or no?
A. I could answer it yes or no, but it would not be an accurate response.
Q. In what way would it be inaccurate for you to answer my question yes or no?
A. Because it's dependent on the way you described the situation. I think it probably would be better for me to just describe my feelings about our approach to these numbers and our dialogue with Sunbeam.
Q. Go ahead.
A. The way I would characterize it is

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 411

Tyree
Sunbeam provided this document to us. As part of our role as underwriters in the context of the Sunbeam transaction, we reviewed this document; we asked, with, I'd say, a very strong and healthy degree of skepticism, numerous questions of the management team, about the achievability of these net sales numbers; received assurances from them to that effect.

And that was really what our role was. And I think it was the appropriate role at the time.

Q. Other than talking to Sunbeam management about their opinions relating to the achievability of the sales figures set forth on CPH Exhibit 16, did Morgan Stanley do anything else to determine whether or not Sunbeam had a reasonable prospect of achieving analysts' expectations for first quarter 1998 net sales?

A. Other than talking to management?

MR. CLARE: I object. Lack of foundation as to what Morgan Stanley did.

A. Other than talking to management? Is that your question?

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Page 412

Tyree
Q. Yes.

A. Yes. We did do something other than that.

Q. What did you do other than that?

A. Well, I shouldn't say we. I should say I. I participated in a call where, in addition to just talking to management, as it were, as I recall, we received assurances from management and I believe -- and I don't recall exactly who it was -- some additional more junior level managers who joined the conference call -- and I can't recall who they were -- about assurances that these were going to be achieved. That's point number one.

Point number two is -- forgive me if this goes beyond the scope of your question. But after this fact, after we had the conference call, we had very detailed bring down due diligence about the progress that they had made in regards to achieving the numbers that were laid out on that document at the time.

Q. My question, Mr. Tyree, was whether Morgan Stanley did anything other than discussing the issue with Sunbeam management. And as I understand it, the two things that you've described both involve discussions with Sunbeam management and nothing additional.

Page 413

Tyree

Am I mistaken about that?

MR. CLARE: Objection. That misstates the testimony.

A. They involved discussions, but I don't necessarily characterize discussions and receiving guarantees or assurances as the same thing.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. How are they different?

A. Well, my view is when you're having discussions, it's more of a relatively informal back-and-forth process. When you're receiving some assurances, direct assurances, and in fact requiring those assurances, it's much more of a formal dialogue and, in fact, gives you a degree of comfort that you might not otherwise have.

Q. Other than obtaining statements from Sunbeam management relating to its views on the progress of Sunbeam's first quarter sales, did Morgan Stanley do anything else to determine whether or not Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance would equal the street expectations for the quarter?

Tyree

MR. CLARE: Objection. Lack of foundation as to what Morgan Stanley did.

A. Again, I can't opine on what the firm did; I can only opine on what I did.

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. No. What you can testify to is what you know, whether it's something you did or what you know about somebody else's activity. And that's what I'm asking you about. I'm asking you what you know.

Based on your personal knowledge, did Morgan Stanley do anything to confirm the reasonableness of Sunbeam's claim that it would achieve first quarter sales equal to the street expectations for the first quarter of 1998 other than obtain oral statements from Sunbeam management on that subject?

A. Other than what I've mentioned up to this point, we may have. I just don't recall if we did or not.

Q. When you say other than what you've mentioned -- what I'm trying to figure out,

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 415

Tyree
Mr. Tyree, is this. It's very simple.
Other than talking to Sunbeam management, did Morgan Stanley do anything else to determine whether or not it was reasonable to expect that Sunbeam in first quarter of 1998 would equal street expectations for first quarter sales?
A. I understand the question. To be more clear on what I said before, other than having discussions with Sunbeam management, other than requiring them to get assurances from their more junior level employees as to the assurances of these numbers, and other than the bring down due diligence that I discussed earlier, there may have been other things that were done. I just don't recall them.
Q. So the only thing that you're aware of were communications with Sunbeam management on that subject, correct?
MR. CLARE: Objection. That misstates his testimony.
A. That is the only thing that I recall.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Page 416

Tyree
Q. At any point, Mr. Tyree, did you request that Sunbeam management provide you with documentation to support any of the statements being made to Morgan Stanley relating to the company's expectations for first quarter 1998 sales?
A. Again, that's covered in your last question. I don't recall that we did that, although it might have happened.
Q. You don't have any recollection of it, as you sit here today, correct?
A. I have no specific recollection of it.
Q. Do you have any general recollection of requesting and receiving documentation from Sunbeam supporting the statements being made to you by the company's management concerning the company's prospects for first quarter sales?
A. I don't have any recollection of what you just described.
Q. Did anyone in Morgan Stanley management direct you to obtain documentation from Sunbeam management on that subject?
A. I don't recall if they did or did

Page 417

Tyree
not.
Q. Did anyone tell you not to do that?
A. Again, I don't recall if they did or did not.
Q. So it's possible, in your mind, that somebody at Morgan Stanley management would have instructed you to not request any documentation from Sunbeam supporting statements being made to Morgan Stanley relating to its first quarter sales?
MR. CLARE: Object to form.
A. As I said, given that I don't have a clear recollection of five years ago, you know, I just don't know.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. You can't rule that out?
A. I can't rule that out. I can't say it did happen.
Q. What do you recall Sunbeam -- do you recall who in Sunbeam management went through the information contained on CPH 16 during the conference call on the 16th -- on the 18th of March?
A. I don't recall if there was one person who went through this. What I recall was a conference call or a series of calls where a number of people at Sunbeam opined on this document (indicating) and the assurances that I described before.

Page 418

Tyree
Q. Can you recall the names of those people who opined on this document?
A. I recall Al Dunlap commenting on it, I believe Russ Kersh as well; and then there were other people who joined the call at different times who spoke to this document. I just can't remember their names.
Q. Were you finished?
A. Yes.
Q. What do you remember Mr. Dunlap saying about the information contained on CPH 16?
A. I don't remember exactly what he said about that.
Q. Do you remember, in substance, what Mr. Dunlap said about CPH 16?
A. What I recall -- and it was either Al Dunlap or Russ Kersh commenting that it was important -- and this is the substance of it -- for Morgan Stanley to understand that the numbers

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 419

Tyree
laid out there here were these assurances, or however you want to phrase it, guarantees from the salespeople and that they typically undershoot, because, among other things, they are compensated on these numbers.
Q. Do you remember Mr. Dunlap saying anything else?
A. I don't remember him -- in terms of substance, I just remember him being extremely confident in their ability to achieve these sales numbers.
Q. Do you remember anything else that Mr. Dunlap said at any point during the various conversations that took place on March 18?
A. No.
Q. What do you recall Mr. Kersh commenting on?
A. You know, I don't recall Mr. Kersh commenting on anything in particular. He was commenting throughout a number of those conference calls that I described on a number of topics.
Q. Do you remember, in substance, any of the information, statements or opinions that

Page 420

Tyree
Mr. Kersh offered during the course of the conversation on March 18th?
A. Unfortunately, I do not.
Q. Whether you can remember the speaker or not, do you remember any other statements or the substance of any other statements made by Sunbeam management during the course of the phone conversation on March 18?
A. The only additional thing that I recall is Sunbeam management, to use the term broadly, because I don't know who said it, but wanted to be very clear that they weren't completely convinced that a press release needed to be issued because of the reason I said before. These were effectively guarantees, if you want to call it that. I don't know the term they used. And by putting out the press release, you're creating the sense that this is potentially -- this is the best they are going to do.
Q. Do you remember anything else?
A. That's all I remember.
Q. Do you remember any statements being made by any of the Skadden Arps participants in

Page 421

Tyree
the phone calls of March 18?
A. I remember that Skadden Arps representatives were active participants in the call, but I don't remember any specific comments or even general substantive comments that they made.
Q. And I take it you don't remember who from Skadden Arps participated?
A. I do not.
Q. Do you recall if Fin Fogg was on the phone from Skadden Arps on March 18?
A. I'm familiar with Fin Fogg's name. He may have been on the call. I just don't have a specific recollection.
Q. That does not refresh your recollection that he was on the call?
A. No. It refreshes my memory that he participated actively in the transaction, but I don't remember him specifically being on the call.
Q. Do you remember any of the statements, opinions, comments being made by Davis Polk participants?
A. No.

Page 422

Tyree
Q. Do you remember who participated from Davis Polk?
A. I don't recall the names. But if you have a list of names, I could probably tell you one or two of them. I just can't recall the specific names.
Q. Is there anything that you've not testified to that you recall happening on March 18 relating to either the subject of Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance or the issuance of the press release that you have not testified to?
A. No.
Q. When the conference call concluded on the evening of March 18, what happened next in terms of your activities relating to the issuance of the press release?
A. I don't remember exactly. I remember -- I remember having discussions with Ruth -- I can't remember the substance of them -- for maybe 10, 15 minutes; heading back up into my office and staying there for another -- for that period of time. I don't recall how long. I remember going home. I remember it was late. That's really all I remember.

Q. Did you and Ms. Porat work together on the draft press release?
A. I don't remember working with Ruth on the press release.
Q. Do you recall commenting on the press release?
A. No, I don't recall that.
Q. Do you recall receiving drafts of the press release?
A. I have a vague recollection that the company was going to show us a copy of the press release in advance of its being published or announced. But beyond that, I don't remember much more about the press lease itself.
Q. During the course of the phone conversations on March 18, did anyone raise the question of what the effect would be on Sunbeam's second quarter 1998 performance of the efforts that the company planned to undertake to maximize net sales in the first quarter of 1998?
A. They may have. I just don't recall that.
Q. You don't recall someone from Morgan Stanley inquiring into that?

Tyree

A. I just don't recall it. That doesn't mean it didn't happen.
Q. But as you sit here, you don't have any recollection of Morgan Stanley inquiring into that?
A. I don't have any recollection of us inquiring into that issue specifically.
Q. Do you recall considering that as being an issue that Morgan Stanley needed to obtain information about?
A. I just don't remember that time in detail. So I can't recall what my, you know, predisposition was in terms of the due diligence we needed to do at that point in time.
Q. Do you recall any discussion, whether it was internal at Morgan Stanley or during the course of these phone calls, with people outside of Morgan Stanley prior to the issuance of the press release about the possibility of deferring the transactions or delaying the transaction that Sunbeam was attempting to close before the end of the first quarter?
A. No, I don't recall that.
Q. Do you recall Morgan Stanley

Tyree

suggesting that to Sunbeam?
A. I'm sorry. Suggesting?
Q. Do you recall Morgan Stanley during the events preceding the March 19th press release suggesting to Sunbeam that in light of the company's sales in January and February of 1998, that an alternative the company should consider would be deferring the three acquisitions or any one of them and deferring the convertible debenture offering until after the first quarter was completed?
A. I do not recall that.
Q. Mr. Tyree, what, in your mind, was the purpose for the due diligence that Morgan Stanley conducted of Sunbeam?
A. There are a number of reasons for -- were a number of reasons for the due diligence that we conducted for Sunbeam. Among those, to gain an understanding of the company; gain an understanding of management's strategic intentions; to clarify the strategic environment in which the company operated. Those are three.
Q. Any others that you can think of?
A. There are many. To, among other things, assure that the company's fixed assets that they represented to be there are in fact there; to ensure that there aren't going to be any material changes to the management team in the near term that might impact the health of the company; and a number of others.

Tyree

Q. Any that you can think of?
A. To enhance our understanding of the financial drivers and the performance drivers of the company. I think that pretty much does it.
Q. Why would Morgan Stanley want to obtain information that would provide it with greater knowledge on the six topics that you've identified? For what purpose would Morgan Stanley want that information?
A. There are numerous reasons why we want that information.
Q. What are those?
A. To more fully understand the appropriate pricing of the securities; to be able to advise the company appropriately in regards to their position in the capital markets; to be able to, I should say, provide the right level -- the appropriate level of -- correction -- to be able to shape the advice that we provide to this company by using the right resources of Morgan Stanley. Those are three examples.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 427

Tyree
Q. Was one of the reasons Morgan Stanley conducted due diligence of Sunbeam was so that Morgan Stanley would be able to confirm the factual accuracy of statements being made by Sunbeam in connection with the convertible debenture offering in the offering memorandum?
A. I'm sorry. Can you repeat that one more time.
Q. Let me say it again.
Was one of the reasons Morgan Stanley conducted due diligence so that Morgan Stanley could confirm the factual accuracy of statements made in the debenture offering that you were working on?
A. I would characterize it a little differently.
Q. How would you characterize it?
A. One of the reasons for conducting due diligence on Sunbeam is to -- or was to satisfy an institutional need to become comfortable with, among others things, the publicly made statements of the management team in regards to their financial performance, the viability of the strategy going forward of the company, you know, the more mundane topics involving the size of the company, the assets of the company, the liabilities of the company, and a number of associated topics.

Page 428

Tyree
Q. Sunbeam had made a number of public statements concerning the success of Al Dunlap's turnaround plan for the company, correct?
A. I don't recall what -- reading the statements that you described.
Q. Do you recall that Sunbeam -- do you recall that Al Dunlap made public statements relating to the success of his plan for turning Sunbeam around?
A. My recollection was Al Dunlap was reasonably well known in the press, given his role in Scott Paper. I don't know if I -- I have a specific recollection of him making announcements in regards to Sunbeam. He may have, but I just don't recall those specifically.
Q. Do you recall that Al Dunlap's reputation was as a turnaround specialist?

Page 429

Tyree
A. Among other things, yes, I do.
Q. You were aware of that in March of 1998 when you were working on the convertible debenture offering, correct, that that was his reputation?
A. Again, among other aspects of his reputation, that was part of it; and, yes, I did have that sense of his reputation. He had just published a book about it.
Q. Did you consider it part of your due diligence objectives to attempt to confirm whether or not Sunbeam's claims of improved performance in '97 were real or not?
A. I can't recall exactly what my due diligence goals were.
Q. Do you recall whether that was one of them?
A. No. Because I don't recall what they were at that time.
Q. So you don't recall whether it was part of your due diligence objectives to determine whether or not Sunbeam's claims of improved financial performance in 1997 were real or false?

Page 430

Tyree
A. Again, I just don't remember. It's not to say that that wasn't a goal, but I don't remember having that as a discrete goal for my due diligence conduct.
Q. Who was at Morgan Stanley responsible for the due diligence activity that Morgan Stanley conducted in connection with its work for Sunbeam?
A. There wasn't one person.
Q. There was no one person responsible for due diligence?
A. No. At Morgan Stanley it's very much a team approach.
Q. There was no one senior person responsible for the work being completed in an appropriate way?
A. I'm sorry. The work being the due diligence work?
Q. Right.
A. I couldn't point to one person. It was a team effort.
Q. Were there senior members on the Morgan Stanley team who were responsible for confirming that appropriate due diligence was done?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 431

Tyree

A. I can't recall one person being assigned to oversee, you know, the due diligence process. That's not typically how we approach those things.
Q. Was Mr. Strong responsible for confirming that appropriate due diligence was done on any aspect of Morgan Stanley's work?
A. That's not how I would characterize it.
Q. Was Ruth Porat responsible in any way for assuring that appropriate due diligence was done on any aspect of Morgan Stanley's work?
A. Again, I wouldn't characterize her as the point person -- senior point person on due diligence.
Q. I'm talking about any aspect of it.
A. Well, I'm sorry. In terms of any aspect of due diligence, I think that both Ruth and Bill Strong were involved. They provided a degree of an oversight function. But as I said, it was a cooperative team effort.
Q. Was Jim Stynes responsible for assuring that appropriate due diligence was done on any aspect of Morgan Stanley's work?

Page 432

Tyree

A. My recollection is that Jim Stynes was more involved in the three strategic transactions. I mean, what I've been speaking about are the financing transactions. So in terms of the financing transactions, I don't recall Jim being actively involved in an oversight capacity in that aspect of the due diligence.
Q. What about Bob Kitts? Did he have responsibility for making sure that Morgan Stanley conducted appropriate due diligence on any aspect of Morgan Stanley's work?
A. Excuse me. As it relates to the funding transactions or as it relates to the strategic transactions?
Q. As it relates to either Morgan Stanley's work as the underwriter on the debenture offering or as the investment banker for the three acquisitions.
A. Bob Kitts, similar to Jim Stynes, was, to my recollection, active on the strategic side. But I can't really opine on that because I didn't participate in it. He was, to my recollection, less involved on the financing side of due diligence.

Page 433

Tyree

Q. Who were the people involved in conducting the due diligence that Morgan Stanley performed on any aspect of the engagement?
A. I'll name a couple of them. Ruth Porat, Bram Smith, Michael Hart; Bill Strong; Jim Stynes; Bob Kitts, myself. There was either a vice president or executive director of M&A, whose name escapes me -- oh, Andy Savarie. There were a number of junior people. I just can't recall their names right now.
Q. What did Ruth Porat do in terms of due diligence?
A. I don't know, because I wasn't with Ruth the whole time.
Q. I'm only asking for what your knowledge is.
What due diligence work did Ruth Porat do, to your knowledge?
A. The only specific thing I recall was going through the due diligence process of these or the documents we had at the time (indicating) that reviewed net sales for the quarter that we discussed.

Page 434

Tyree

Q. You're referring to the activity on March 18th?
A. That's correct. Ruth was also, I mean, involved in this transaction or these transactions well before I was involved. So she may have played a role on the strategic side of the M&A transactions, but I'm just not aware of what it was.
Q. So the only due diligence activity on Ruth Porat's part that you're aware of is her participation in the conversation that took place on March 18th?
A. That's the only one that I can recommend. She may well have participated in other aspects of it. I just can't remember.
Q. What about Bram Smith? What due diligence work did Bram Smith do, to your knowledge?
A. My recollection was that Bram may have participated by phone or in person in the due diligence session in Florida. I just can't remember. Either him or Michael Hart. Bram had ongoing dialogue with the company in the context of asking questions as it related to the debt financing side of this. I know he had those conversations. I know there were due diligence issues discussed. I just don't know exactly what they were. That's what sticks out in my mind.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

Q. What about Michael Hart? What did Michael Hart do in terms of due diligence?

A. Similar to what I said about Bram. That's my recollection. They kind of worked together, as I recall.

Q. What due diligence did Bill Strong do, to your knowledge?

A. Bill was present in, you know, a lot of different places during the course of the transaction. I know he was present during an initial conference call that we had, which was, I guess, almost like an introductory call to the transaction -- the transactions, plural. This being when I became involved post, you know, a lot of the work being done on the M&A transactions and pre the financing transactions. There was a conference call there that he participated in. There were elements of due diligence discussed there. And then I just had on-and-off dialogues with Bill Strong. I can't remember the specific additional due diligence discussions that he had. As I said before, I also think he may have participated in discussions on the 18th -- the call on the 18th.

Q. I'm sorry. I may have missed it. But other than participating in the March 18 telephone calls relating to Sunbeam's first quarter performance, is there any other due diligence work you recall Mr. Strong doing himself?

A. Doing himself? If what you are getting at is did Bill Strong conduct a due diligence session with the company that was designated a due diligence session with the company, I don't recall him doing that -- doing that, but I recall him participating in dialogues which had characteristics of due diligence associated with them.

Let me just be clear here. Due diligence is a fluid process, as you know, and it's not just one session in time. You're constantly asking questions of the company seeking clarity. And Bill was part of, you know, certain of those dialogues.

Tyree

Q. From the company, who was Mr. Strong involved in obtaining information about that related to Morgan Stanley's due diligence activity?

A. Again, I don't remember exactly who he asked specific questions of. I know that Bill had a fairly fluid dialogue with Al. He had a fairly fluid dialogue with Russ. I don't know the extent to which he asked them questions or not.

Q. Al is Al Dunlap, and Russ is Russ Kersh?

A. Yes. That's correct.

Q. And it's your understanding that Mr. Strong was in fairly regular contact with both of them?

A. I don't know if I call it regular, but I'll call it that he had a fluid dialogue.

Q. Fluid dialogue means -- what does that mean? More than -- you explain to me --

A. I'm sure during the course of my involvement in the transaction, he spoke to them multiple times.

Tyree

Q. Jim Stynes -- what due diligence work did Jim Stynes do?

A. I really don't know, because that was before I was involved.

Q. What due diligence work did Bob Kitts do?

A. Similar to Jim Stynes, I don't recall. It was before I was involved.

Q. Did you interview, in connection with your due diligence work, any of the people involved in what you've described as the strategic parts of the deal, the three acquisitions, to find out what they could tell you about their due diligence work?

A. I would not characterize it as an interview. I would characterize it as extensive dialogue during the course of the transaction about a number of topics, including the due diligence that they had done.

Q. So they were sharing information with you. And I take it you were sharing information with them that you were learning about the company?

A. Again, I have a vague recollection,

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 439

Tyree
but I think so, yes.
Q. Andy Savarie -- what due diligence work did he do?
A. I have a vague recollection that Andy participated in the due diligence discussions either in person or on the phone at Sunbeam's headquarters.
Q. Is that that one Florida meeting that you referred to?
A. That's correct. And, again, I don't know if it was one or multiple meetings that took place over a period of time.
Andy, similar to Bill Strong, was involved in a number of discussions during the course of the transaction where due diligence issues may or may not have come up. I don't have any specific recollection of that, though.
Q. How do you know he was involved in a number of discussions?
A. Because I talked to Andy frequently, as I recall, talked to a number of people, during the course of this transaction together fairly frequently.
Q. What was his general responsibility?

Page 440

Tyree
Do you have an understanding of that on the Sunbeam work?
A. His general responsibility was both, as was mine, to assist in the completion of the financing transactions; to -- to maintain an ongoing dialogue with the client. That's pretty much it.
Q. How would you characterize the extent of Morgan Stanley's overall due diligence of Sunbeam company?
A. I would characterize our due diligence, as I recall, as one which approached these financing transactions with a healthy degree of skepticism and covered a number of different areas in the course of our due diligence, as I think we've already described. That's how I characterize it.
Q. Would you characterize it as being thorough?
A. I would characterize it as being appropriate.
Q. What does appropriate mean in this content? I don't know if appropriate is thorough or superficial or what.

Page 441

Tyree
A. Appropriate is appropriate for the situation. That's the best way from my standpoint to look at due diligence. Because different situations require different kinds of due diligence. And, to my mind, the due diligence that we did was appropriate for the situation.
Q. What extent -- to what extent was due diligence necessary in connection with Morgan Stanley appropriately completing its assignments for the Sunbeam company?
MR. CLARE: Object to the form.
A. I just didn't understand that question.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Let me try to rephrase it.
Your telling me that the due diligence that Morgan Stanley did was appropriate is not very informative to me, because that's a conclusion on your part. And what I'm trying to understand is whether or not you believe that Morgan Stanley did a substantial amount of due diligence here that was thoroughly done and completed or whether or not your view of Morgan

Page 442

Tyree
Stanley's due diligence here was not in-depth; it was done in a short period of time or where you didn't have a sense of confidence with respect to understanding the performance of Sunbeam company.
MR. CLARE: I object to the form of the question.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. So my question, Mr. Tyree, in that context is whether or not you believe that the due diligence investigation done by you and the other individuals that you've identified for me in the context of the four transactions that Morgan Stanley was engaged in to accomplish for Sunbeam was thorough?
A. And just so I'm clear on your question, in the beginning you said by my using the term "appropriate," it implies a conclusion on my part, correct, implying you don't want me to conclude? Well, "thorough" is a conclusion as well.
My view is that appropriate is the right way to characterize the due diligence that we did for this transaction. And I'm comfortable with it.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

Q. Would you characterize it as extensive?
A. I would characterize it as appropriate.
Q. Would you characterize it as superficial?
A. Again, I'm not going to change the way I characterize this. I feel strongly this was an appropriate level of due diligence, given the situation and given the transaction.
Q. Do you deny that Morgan Stanley's due diligence was superficial?
A. I'm not denying anything. I'm saying that the level of due diligence that we pursued on this transaction was appropriate for the situation.
Q. So you don't deny that Morgan Stanley's due diligence was superficial?
A. My response stands.
Q. And your response is that you don't deny that?
MR. CLARE: Objection. That misstates his testimony.
A. No, that was not my response.

Tyree

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Well, then, I misunderstood you. I thought you said that you did not deny the characterization that Morgan Stanley's due diligence was superficial.
A. Then I must have misspoken. Just to be very clear, my view as to the due diligence that the -- myself and the broader Morgan Stanley team, to the extent I know it executed on the Sunbeam transaction, was appropriate for the situation.
Q. Do you characterize it as extensive?
A. Are you asking me to change from "appropriate" to your terminology --
Q. No. I assume there is more than one way to characterize something, and "appropriate" is one way. I'm asking you whether you would also consider it to be extensive or whether you consider it to be superficial.
A. I believe that "appropriate" is the right descriptor for the work that we did on the Sunbeam due diligence transaction.
Q. There is no other characterization that you're willing to commit to with respect to the extent of Morgan Stanley's due diligence activity concerning Sunbeam other than "appropriate"; is that correct?

Tyree

A. To my mind, it's not an issue of willingness. It's an issue of what I -- you're asking me a question what I believe. And I believe that the right term to use is "appropriate."
Q. There's no other term that you would consider to be a correct term to use in describing the extent of Morgan Stanley's due diligence?
A. No, there is not.
Q. Did you supervise any due diligence activity?
A. Can you clarify what you mean by "due diligence activity"?
Q. In connection with Sunbeam, you were involved in due diligence activity. You already testified to that.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. I want to understand if you supervised the completion of due diligence activity being performed by other Morgan Stanley personnel.

Tyree

A. And just to be clear, when you say "due diligence activity," there's the activity of your assistant who's setting up the due diligence trips to go down there, and there is the activity of actually sitting around a table and asking -- running through a Q and A.
Are you talking about through that whole spectrum?
Q. Sure. Why not.
A. Yes, I did exercise some oversight, as it were.
Q. Who did you supervise in that context?
A. While I exercised oversight -- just to be clear, this was more of a team effort. And the teammates who helped me in this process ran from my assistant, who, you know, helped me manage a lot of the logistical issues, to -- and I'm forgetting their names now -- I believe a junior associate and an analyst who helped with things as mundane as collecting publicly available information on the company for me and for the rest of the team to analyze. And they

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 447

Tyree
additionally would help put together exhibits that would help me to guide the discussion in the context of due diligence and a number of other things.
Q. Did you supervise the activities of anyone involved in obtaining information from Sunbeam in connection with Morgan Stanley's due diligence activities?
A. I may have. I just don't recall exactly, you know, if one of those juniors that I mentioned, you know, were making periodic requests for data from Sunbeam. I have no exact memory of it.
Q. Did you consider someone to be your supervisor with respect to any of the due diligence activities that you were engaged in?
A. I wouldn't characterize them as supervisors.
Q. Did you consider someone to be responsible for monitoring your due diligence activity and assuring that your due diligence activity was done appropriately in connection with the work you did for Sunbeam?
A. I would again characterize it

Page 448

Tyree
differently. If you like me to, I will --
Q. Go ahead.
A. I would characterize it that in this broad team that executed due diligence were senior people, managing directors and whatnot who would periodically provide me with advice, who I could go to with questions, who would help me in the context of my interaction with the clients, among other things.
Q. Were there senior people who tasked you with particular due diligence projects in connection with the work you did?
A. I don't recall any specific tasking by senior members of the team to do specific things in the context of due diligence. I just don't recall it.
Q. Is it fair, in your mind, for me to characterize your due diligence with respect to the debenture offering as being the person responsible at Morgan Stanley for the proper completion of that due diligence?
A. No.
Q. How would you characterize your due diligence responsibility with respect to the

Page 449

Tyree
debenture offering?
A. I'm sorry. We're moving now to -- we're sticking with the convertible?
Q. Yes.
A. My role, as I recall it, was to help manage the due diligence process in the context of everything from setting up meetings, making sure the appropriate people from Morgan Stanley and from the company attended those meetings, and basically helping to shepherd the process along, is how I would characterize it.
Q. Other than -- I would characterize that primarily as an administrative activity.
Is that a fair characterization, in your mind?
A. No.
Q. How am I misperceiving, then, the extent of your responsibility?
A. Well, shepherding, for example, the process along, to my mind, is a very important role. It moves far beyond, as you put it, administration. Because, among other things, with the advice of your teammates, you have to make judgments; and you have to make recommendations, and you have to discuss those recommendations with the right teammates. And then you have to communicate those in an appropriate fashion to the client. And that is not always an easy thing to do. And it requires thought, and it requires judgment; and, most importantly, it requires the ability to bring the right people, the right teammates, together.

Page 450

Tyree
Q. So you disagree with my characterization of you as being the person in charge of making sure that the due diligence was done properly on the debenture offering, correct?
A. That is not how I would characterize it.
Q. But you would be comfortable characterizing you as being the person responsible for acting as the shepherd with respect to the completion of the due diligence activity?
A. I would be comfortable in saying, among other things, I helped to shepherd the process along.
Q. Who else was involved in playing that role?

Q. On the debenture offering?
A. On the debenture offering, yes.
Q. I'm going to mark as CPH Exhibit 25, Mr. Tyree, a document that has as its cover page a fax cover sheet from Skadden Arps. It's dated March 3, 1998.
(CPH Exhibit 25, fax cover sheet from Skadden Arps dated 3/3/98, marked for identification, as of this date.)
THE WITNESS: Are you going to ask specific comments about the contents --
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I'm going to have a couple of very general comments, but I want you to take a moment to see if it refreshes your memory, to review it.
A. Okay.
Q. The fax cover sheet indicates that Mr. Easton at Skadden Arps is forwarding to you and Alan Dean at Davis Polk a list of documents relating to Sunbeam Company; is that correct?
A. This appears to indicate that,

Page 452

Tyree
although I don't have any recollection of this document.
Q. That was my next question.
Do you remember receiving this fax from Mr. Easton?
A. I do not.
Q. This document was not produced to us from Morgan Stanley's document production in this case. It was instead produced by Davis Polk.
Do you know, if you had received this document on March 3, 1998, or thereabouts from Mr. Easton, what would have happened to it at Morgan Stanley?
A. Sorry. What would have happened to it?
Q. Right.
A. I don't know what would have happened to it. I don't really understand the question.
Q. Well, it wasn't produced to us. So I'm assuming that Morgan Stanley no longer has this document. And I'm wondering if you can explain that.
A. Given the fact that I don't recall ever seeing it before, the answer to your question is I have no idea what might or might not have happened to this document.

Page 453

Tyree
Q. Is this the kind of document that if you had it in your personal file at the end of Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam, that you would have discarded it?
A. I mean, as I was saying before, my own files, I typically keep documents such as commitment committee memos and prospectuses. A list of documents such as this one is not one that I, as a matter of course, keep in my files.
Q. Is this typically the kind of document that you would ordinarily throw away at the end of your work on a project?
A. No. It's just a document that I wouldn't necessarily keep or discard as a matter of course.
Q. Well, that's what I'm trying to understand.
Is it your personal practice -- or was it your personal practice back in 1998 if at the end of your work on a project, a due diligence project, you had in your possession a list such as this of due diligence documents that you would either make an effort to preserve it or make an effort to clean the file by discarding it?

Page 454

Tyree
A. Again, as we said before, I'd rather not comment on a hypothetical and what I would have done back then. I will say that if I were to go to the office today and look at some of the files from old transactions, I don't necessarily know if a document like this, which is, frankly, fairly unique, would be in those files.
Q. Do you know why Mr. Easton would have faxed this document to you?
MR. CLARE: Objection; calls for speculation.
A. I do not know.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Do you know -- well, Mr. Easton's cover sheet suggests that contact be made with Todd Freed at Skadden Arps' New York office to make arrangements to review the documents contained on the attached list, correct?
A. That's what this document implies.
Q. Do you know -- did you got to -- did you go to Skadden Arps' offices to review documents of the sort listed on the attachment to CPH Exhibit 25?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

A. Again, I have no recollection of this document or going to their offices to review the contents of this or, you know, what they had available at their offices.
Q. Do you recall assigning to someone else the responsibility to review documents at Skadden Arps?
A. No, I don't recall that.
Q. Do you recall whether anyone else from Morgan Stanley in fact did go to Skadden Arps to review documents of this sort listed in CPH Exhibit 25?
A. I do not recall that.
Q. Mr. Tyree, how were the results of your due diligence work communicated to other people at Morgan Stanley?
A. Are you referring to the Sunbeam transaction?
Q. Yes, I'm talking about Sunbeam.
A. My recollection is my due diligence findings were communicated in a number of different ways. Verbally, I have a recollection of a brief discussion about due diligence in our commitment committee meeting.

Page 456

Tyree
We've already talked a lot about the due diligence done on the call on the 18th. I have a vague recollection of after the bring-down-due-diligence call leaving a voice mail for the team that that had been completed and a number of different ways that I just can't recall today.
Q. Did you memorialize in some way, the substance of the due diligence information that you obtained?
A. Not to my recollection.
Q. Is that typical on your part not to memorialize in some way the facts that you're obtaining from a company in connection with due diligence activity?
A. I don't recall having memorialized due diligence in a memo format for other team members of the firm. I don't recall ever having done that. If that answers your question.
Q. And you don't recall doing that in this case?
A. No, I don't recall doing that in this

Page 457

Tyree
case.
Q. You indicated that you may have made some statement relating to due diligence activity in the commitment committee meeting?
A. Just to clarify, I mean, we had an equity commitment committee meeting. I believe I was there. And I think due diligence may have come up. I don't remember the substance of that dialogue.
Q. Do you remember if you were asked questions about the due diligence work that you had done?
A. I don't remember getting asked specific questions about due diligence.
Q. Do you remember in general being asked questions, whether you can remember the specific questions or not?
A. I don't have any -- I don't have any general or specific recollection about the questions that may have been asked about due diligence.
Q. Do you remember the substance of any of the information you provided to the members of the commitment committee when the subject of due diligence came up?

Page 458

Tyree
A. No.
Q. Do you remember the substance of the voice mail message that you left after the bring-down-due-diligence call?
A. My recollection was that, among other things I mentioned, that we had had a discussion with senior management of Sunbeam that they had gone through in detail buildup similar to the one that we discussed on the call on the 18th and that they were -- after reviewing that, were comfortable and more on track in terms of achieving those numbers. Beyond that, I don't have a recollection.
Q. Do you recall who you left that message for?
A. I do not.
Q. Do you recall any communications that you had with Bill Strong where you reported to him on your due diligence work?
A. No.
Q. Do you remember any communications with Ruth Porat where you communicated to her regarding your due diligence work?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015128

Tyree

A. I don't have -- no.
Q. How often did you speak with Bill Strong relating to the work that you were doing on the Sunbeam engagement?
A. I don't remember exactly.
Q. I'm not asking exactly.
Do you recall approximately how frequently you would communicate with Bill Strong relating to your Sunbeam work?
A. I think we spoke, at a minimum, several times a week during my involvement in the transaction.
Q. How frequently did you communicate with Ruth Porat relating to your Sunbeam-related work?
A. I don't think I communicated with Ruth Porat as much at the beginning of my role in the transaction. But that accelerated towards the end, during the road show and pricing, during that period of time, barring for a moment the conference call that we discussed. I give it a couple of times a week.
Q. Of the managing directors from Morgan Stanley who were involved in the various aspects of the Sunbeam engagements, is it fair to say that your communications with Bill Strong were more frequent than they were with the other individuals?

A. No. I wouldn't necessarily say that, but primarily, just because I can't remember. So I wouldn't want to specify.
Q. Well, you indicated that you spoke at least several times a week with Bill Strong.
Do you think there are other managing directors with whom you spoke as frequently?
A. Again, during my involvement, I spoke to a number of managing directors. And the number of times that I spoke to them depended on really what was going on with the transaction at the time. So, for example, as you mentioned earlier, when I first got on the transaction, I needed to be briefed by some of the members of the M&A team.
So during that period, we had a fairly extensive number of discussions, and that then tailed off. So it's hard for me to generalize who I had more or less conversations with during the course of my work in the transaction.

Q. Were your conversations with Bill Strong fairly frequent throughout the entire course of your work on the transaction?
A. Again, at least a couple of times a week.
Q. Who at Morgan Stanley was responsible for evaluating the significance of the information that was being learned in the course of the due diligence?
A. The team that I described.
Q. That list of several people that you provided to me earlier were the people that were involved in the due diligence. Is that the team that you're referring to?
A. Let's be clear. Individuals such as Ruth, myself, Bill Strong and others.
Q. I want to make sure I understand your reference. Maybe you can list them for me again.
Who did you understand to be responsible at Morgan Stanley for evaluating the significance of information being learned about Sunbeam during the course of Morgan Stanley's work for Sunbeam?

Tyree

A. Just to be clear, I don't view there is one person who is responsible for that. I view it as the responsibility of the whole team who participated in the due diligence process. And so as we said there, people such as Ruth Porat, Bram Smith, Michael Hart, myself, Bill Strong would be a sample group of those people.
Q. Well, who else? I guess I'm interested in more than a sample.
A. I mean, I don't mean to be facetious, but I just can't tell you. Those are the only people. Because there may have been other people I had discussions with that I don't remember or that they had discussions with that I'm not aware of. Those are the key people who I remember. And Andy Savarie as well.
Q. Maybe it doesn't work this way. But what I'm trying to understand, Mr. Tyree, is whether, in your mind, there was one or more individuals at Morgan Stanley who had responsibility on behalf of the firm for evaluating the significance of the information that was learned about Sunbeam in connection with the due diligence activity that was being conducted.

0151129

Tyree
A. And to answer that, I don't think there is one or two, as you said. I think it's that whole group that I laid out.
Can I give you one other example? During the equity commitment committee meeting, you can meet with a number of people at the firm who opine on a number of issues. And I can't remember who was on the committee. But one could say they played a role in evaluating the company and the issues facing the company and whatnot.
So it's a very team-oriented process which uses a number of different people. And I just can't remember all of their names.

MR. MARKOWSKI: No. Whatever you prefer.

Tyree
THE WITNESS: Okay.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Mr. Tyree, I put in front of you something we've identified as CPH Exhibit 26. The cover page reads "Project Laser Financing Structure Discussion February 27, 1998."
Have you seen this document before?
A. Let me review it to see if it triggers my memory. I recall seeing a document similar to this one.
Q. Let me direct your attention to the page that's Bates-numbered CPH 1412974. The title on that page is "Project Laser 144A Zero Coupon Convertible Check List," correct?
A. That's what's on the page, yes.
Q. The 144A Zero Coupon Convertible Check List is a reference to the convertible debenture offer, correct?
A. The convertible debenture offering being the Sunbeam?
Q. Correct.
A. It's not -- it looks that way. But, again, I can't remember this page in particular.
Q. Let me direct your attention to the first major bullet point, "Before Launch."

Tyree
Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you see the second item? Can you read that for me into the record.
A. Starting with "Due diligence"?
Q. Right.
A. "Due diligence laser and targets may be able to piggyback on prior due diligence."
Q. Do you recall that "laser" was the code name for Sunbeam in connection with Morgan Stanley's work on Sunbeam?
A. Laser was either the name for the series of transactions or for Sunbeam. I think it was actually a project name. But looking at this, that may have been used also to refer to Sunbeam.
Q. What do you understand the reference to piggybacking on prior due diligence in connection with zero coupon offering to refer to?
A. I don't know if I have anything to add to this. And, you know, the concept of piggybacking kind of is what it is.
Q. Did you do that in connection with due diligence on the debenture offering?

Tyree
Did you piggyback on other due diligence activity?
A. Myself personally?
Q. Right.
A. I wouldn't characterize it that way.
Q. Did you -- do you know if anyone else in connection with the due diligence on the convertible debt offering piggybacked on other due diligence?
A. Again, to my knowledge, I wouldn't characterize what the team did in the context of due diligence as just piggybacking.
Q. Well, this note is "due diligence laser and targets may be able to piggyback on prior due diligence."
Is it your testimony that was not done in connection with the due diligence on the convertible debenture offering?
A. No. It's just my testimony. I think you asked me -- I think you asked me what I did. And I don't know if I would characterize what I did, or the members of the team what they did, as piggybacking. I would use a different term --

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

Q. So, in your view, Morgan Stanley did not, in connection with the due diligence on the convertible debenture offering, piggyback on prior due diligence; is that correct?

A. In my view, what Morgan Stanley did was build on prior due diligence done as opposed to using the term "piggybacking."

Q. How do you distinguish the two notions?

A. I distinguish it primarily through the fact that when you've already done due diligence on an asset and have a base understanding of it, you can build on that by refining your understanding as opposed to being in a situation where you don't know the asset at all and have to start from ground zero.

Q. How do you distinguish what you've just described as building on from piggybacking?

A. Well, because I think piggybacking can be misconstrued. It's not that precise a term.

Q. So you think piggybacking would be a poor term to use to describe the due diligence activity that Morgan Stanley did on the debenture offer?

Tyree

A. No. I think it would be an inappropriate term to describe what I personally did and what I witnessed in the context of the due diligence in the context of the transaction.

(CPH Exhibit 27, Project Laser Fast Track Due Diligence, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. Mr. Tyree, you have in front of you CPH Exhibit Number 27. It bears Bates number Morgan Stanley confidential 26219. I'd like you to take a moment to review this one-page document.

A. Okay.

Q. The title is "Project Laser Fast Track Due Diligence."

Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. Did you ever hear -- have you seen this document before?

A. I don't recall seeing this document before.

Q. Did you ever hear the term "fast track due diligence" before?

Tyree

A. I've heard people use that term.

Q. Did you ever hear the term used in connection with any aspect of due diligence done by Morgan Stanley on the Sunbeam engagement?

A. I don't recall hearing that term back then.

Q. What do you understand "fast track due diligence" to mean?

THE WITNESS: Did we go through this last time?

A. But in terms of what fast track due diligence means --

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. It could be one of your twenty hours of preparation for today.

MR. CLARE: No. I think he was referring to the prior deposition whether this was covered or not.

A. But, anyway --

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. That may be why it's familiar.

A. Sorry. Your question is what did you understand fast track due diligence to mean. I don't really have any understanding above what one would translate that to mean as written on the page.

Tyree

Q. Well, I don't understand what that means. You are an investment banker. Can you explain it to me?

A. No. It's not what I would characterize as a term of art.

Q. So -- although you've heard the term used at Morgan Stanley, I take it, correct?

A. No.

Q. You've never heard someone at Morgan Stanley use the term "fast track due diligence"?

A. I don't recall anyone using it as a term of art, no.

Q. I'm not referring to it as a term of art. I'm asking if you've heard someone use the phrase "fast track due diligence."

A. I don't recall before hearing anyone at Morgan Stanley use the term "fast track due diligence." You know, I don't recall that.

Q. Is this -- does the term have a prejorative connotation to you?

A. No. It has no connotation to me.

Q. So fast track does not necessarily mean good, bad or indifferent in terms of due diligence, in your mind?
A. Absolutely not. It doesn't mean anything -- it doesn't imply anything to me per se.
Q. Why would you use "fast track due diligence"? Do you have any understanding of that?
MR. CLARE: I object to the characterization. I don't think he's testified that he did use that term.
A. I'm sorry. Why would I use that --
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Why would someone use the term "fast track due diligence"?
Let me take the question back. Why would an investment banking firm employ fast track due diligence?
A. I don't know why an investment banking firm would employ fast track due diligence.
Q. Do you know if Morgan Stanley ever employed fast track due diligence?

Page 472

Tyree
A. You're implying again it's some kind of term of art or process that people understand. I don't really know what you mean or what this means by fast track due diligence as a process.
Q. That's what I'm trying to understand. It's on a document produced to us by Morgan Stanley. It says, fast track due diligence relating to project laser. I'm trying to understand what it means and why it would be employed as an approach to due diligence.
Can you shed any light on any of that?
A. I cannot.
Q. The first item on the list of numbered entries is access to CPAs and work papers.
Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. In connection with the due diligence you did of Sunbeam, did you get access to the work papers of Arthur Andersen?
A. I don't remember if I did or not.
Q. Do you have any recollection, as you sit here, of having asked for Andersen's work papers?

A. Again, I don't remember. Although that doesn't mean it didn't happen.
Q. Do you have any memory of seeing any Arthur Andersen work papers in connection with the work that you did for Sunbeam?
A. I don't have any recollection of that.
Q. The thirteenth entry, "meet with sales executives and customers" --
A. Yes.
Q. -- do you see that?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you have any recollection of having any communications at any point with any Sunbeam customers?
MR. CLARE: I'm going to -- the transaction by asking questions about due diligence that was done on Sunbeam when there are indications on the document that that's not what it was created for.

If you want to ask him questions independent of the document, that's fine. But I object to the characterization of the document, the implication that the document was in the manner that you're suggesting.

A. Do you want to repeat the question?
Q. I'll ask it again.
Do you recall, in connection with the due diligence you did with Sunbeam in connection with Sunbeam, having any contact with Sunbeam's customers?

Tyree

Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. And the third bullet under that is "high dependence of repeat sales growth on grills."
Do you see that?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Do you recall, in connection with your due diligence activity, that an important due diligence issue for Morgan Stanley was the nature of Sunbeam sales growth and the extent to which it depended on grill sales?
MR. CLARE: Object to form.
A. As I mentioned earlier, I don't have a clear recollection of these key issues, as you put it, in terms of our due diligence review. I just don't remember it.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Do you remember particular emphasis being placed on -- in connection with Morgan Stanley's due diligence work on Sunbeam's grill business?
A. No. No. The only thing I remember in the context of due diligence and grills, I remember us seeing one of the facilities. And among other white goods, we saw some grills. But that's all I recall specifically about that time.

Q. You don't recall any concern that Sunbeam's recorded sales growth in its grill business wasn't sustainable?

(CPH Exhibit 29, Financial and Advisory Services Equity Offering Memo Table of Contents December 1993, marked for identification, as of this date.)
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Mr. Tyree, let me show you what we've marked as CPH Exhibit 29. This is a document that we have assembled from the document that you brought to the first session of your deposition. Rather than mark the entire document as an exhibit, we marked the cover page, included the cover page and a couple of selected documents that are contained in this.
I've got a couple of general questions about it. We've got the entire document here if anybody wants to take a look at it. The cover page is Bates-numbered Morgan

Tyree

Stanley confidential 89440. And that's the table of contents entitled "Financial and Advisory Services Equity Offering Memo Table of Contents December 1993."
Do you see that?
A. Equity offering manual, yeah -- yes, I do.
Q. Did you consult, Mr. Tyree, in connection with the due diligence work that you did for Morgan Stanley, in connection with the Sunbeam engagements, any materials contained in this document relating to the manner in which due diligence should be conducted?
A. First of all, I don't recall consulting this memo or this memorandum one way or another. It's the first time I've seen this other than when we were talking in our previous discussion. So I haven't gone through it in detail. But, no, I don't recall consulting this in the context of Sunbeam.
Q. Have you ever consulted this document?
MR. CLARE: Let's just be clear. For the record, when you're talking about "this document," counsel has represented that this is not the document -- this is not a document --

THE WITNESS: A full document.
MR. CLARE: -- a full or complete document. This is a compilation that counsel has selected for purposes of facilitating a conversation.
So I'll object to the extent that questions aren't clear or answers -- I would just, for the sake of clarity, make sure that we're clear about what we're talking about.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I'm referring to the entire document that we've taken this excerpt from.
Do you recall consulting that document in connection with the work that you did on the Sunbeam engagement?
A. No, I do not.
Q. Do you recall ever seeing this document before?
A. You mean -- I do not recall seeing this document per se before -- you know, before seeing it now in the context of these discussions. That's not to say I haven't seen it. It's just I don't have a direct recollection of it or using it on transactions.

Page 480

Tyree
Q. Do you recall this is a document that was used in connection with the training that you received at Morgan Stanley?
A. It may have been, but I don't recall using it as a matter of rote every time I did a transaction.
Q. It's not a document that you have a personal copy of?
A. I don't believe I have a personal copy of it in my office.
Q. Let me direct your attention to one of the memos that we've included in this excerpt. It's about fifteen pages in. The Bates number on the bottom right-hand corner is 80756.
A. Yes.
Q. It's a February 7, 1992, memorandum from R. W. Matschullat to IBD Professionals regarding due diligence.
Do you see that?
A. I do.

Page 481

Tyree
Q. Who is Mr. Matschullat? Do you know?
A. It's Bob Matschullat. As I recall, when I first joined the firm, I believe he was the head of investment banking. I could be wrong, but I believe that was his position.
Q. IBD is a reference to what?
A. The investment banking division.
Q. Mr. Matschullat's memo indicates that he's forwarding a copy of a memorandum written by Frank Quattrone at his request.
Do you see that?
A. That is what this says.
Q. Let me ask you to page a couple of pages further into our document. It's Bates-numbered 87059. It's a February 5, 1992, memorandum from F. P. Quattrone to R. W. Matschullat re minuscribe (phonetic)/due diligence.
Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. Have you ever seen Mr. Quattrone's February 5 memorandum before?
A. Have I seen this memorandum before?
Q. Yes. Have you ever seen

Page 482

Tyree
Mr. Quattrone's February 5, 1999, memorandum concerning minuscribe (phonetic) due diligence before?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. This is not a document that you recall receiving in connection with any training that you received at Morgan Stanley?
A. I don't recall. I may have. I just don't remember.
Q. Let me direct your attention to another document a couple of pages further into this.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. It's a March 29, 1993, letter from W. Reece Bader at Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe to Jonathan Clark, Managing Director and General Counsel, Morgan Stanley & Company Incorporated.
Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. This is Bates-numbered Morgan Stanley confidential 80765.
It indicates that Mr. Bader is forwarding a recent memorandum prepared by his partner Bill Alderman. And if you turn to the next page, there's a March 1993 article by William Alderman, Gary Weiss, John Canberg (phonetic) of Orrick, Herrington & Sutcliffe entitled "Don't and Due Diligence: Some Practical Tips From Litigators on Effective Conduct and Documentation of Underwriter Investigation."

Do you see that?
A. I do see that.
Q. Have you ever seen this memorandum before?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. It's not a document that you recall being provided in connection with any training that you received at Morgan Stanley?
A. I don't know. I just don't recall having seen it.
Q. Let me direct your attention to Page 16 of the memorandum.
A. Page 16?
MR. CLARE: Of the Alderman article?
MR. MARKOWSKI: Right.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. It's Bates Number 80782.

Page 484

Tyree
A. Okay.
Q. Let me direct your attention to the last paragraph on the page.
A. Yes.
Q. I'm going to read two or three statements and ask you if you agree or disagree: "Providing organized in-house or other training to junior bankers or lawyers on appropriate due diligence techniques, and documentation can expel any future claim that they were insufficiently experienced to perform assigned roles."
Do you agree or disagree with that?
A. It's a little bit of a legal thing in terms of dispelling of future claim, but I guess I agree with the fact that providing organized in-house training to junior bankers in regards to due diligence is a good thing.
Q. Let me direct your attention to the next statement: "In addition, thorough documentation by the junior team members will facilitate review and supervision by more experienced senior members thereby not only helping to catch and correct any shortcomings in the work, but enabling the underwriter to point to the careful nature of the process which was used."

Tyree
Do you agree or disagree with that statement in connection with due diligence work by underwriters?
A. I agree that if junior members of a team document extensively their due diligence discussions, that, you know, the ability for other team members to review that and track the process more closely is a true statement.
Q. Did you thoroughly document your due diligence activities in connection with the Sunbeam due diligence investigation?
A. It depends on your definition of document.
Q. Well, in what way did you document your due diligence work?
A. As I recall, we discussed at length due diligence topics we discussed, "we" being the team and senior team members; what kind of information we were going to request from the client. Although I don't have the documents in front of me, I believe that we put together a series of checklists designed to lay out what kind of questions we were going to ask and the follow-up we were going to do.

Page 486

Tyree
So in the context of shaping and, as I said, shepherding the process along, I thought that was an appropriate approach to documentation.
Q. But you didn't memorialize, you've already testified, the substance of any of the information that you obtained from Sunbeam, correct?
MR. CLARE: I object. Misstates the prior testimony.
A. What I did not do, I did not copy down every response that I received from the client in the context of due diligence and then provide that to the broader team. No, I did not do that.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Did you memorialize any of the due diligence information that you obtained from Sunbeam?
A. Yes. As I said, I mean, we documented a number of the questions that we asked, the topics that we covered. We distributed the information to various members of the team during the process we used -- well, it's not memorialized in terms of written form, but we used voice mail extensively. So I think we communicated appropriately the context of our due diligence.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 487

Tyree
Q. My question relates to documentation. You did not document any of the information you obtained from Sunbeam in connection with the due diligence work that you, John Tyree, did; isn't that correct?
MR. CLARE: Objection; misstates prior testimony, and asked and answered.
A. What I recall that I did not do, I did not copy down every response that came from Sunbeam due diligence discussions with management and whatnot and then distribute that around to the team. I did not do that, nor is that a normal process in the context of our due diligence.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I'm not asking about every; I'm asking about any.
You didn't document any of the

Page 488

Tyree
information that you obtained from Sunbeam management in connection with the due diligence work that you personally conducted?
A. I don't recall if I did or did not.
Q. You have no recollection of doing that, do you?
A. I don't have a recollection of, as I said before, putting together memoranda that reviewed all of our dialogue with the team and sending that around to the broader group. No, I don't recall doing that.
Q. I'm not asking about all; I'm asking about any.
You didn't document any of the due diligence information that you obtained from Sunbeam, did you?
A. No. I'll say it again: I don't recall doing it.
Q. In connection with the due diligence work that you did, did you contact Sunbeam's internal auditors?
A. As I recall, we had discussions with Arthur Andersen in regards to due diligence.
Q. Internal auditors, I'm asking about,

Page 489

Tyree
not outside.
A. Sorry. When you say "internal auditors," you mean their internal Sunbeam employees?
Q. Correct.
A. I don't recall if we did or not.
Q. Did you even determine the identity of the members of the Sunbeam internal audit department?
A. I don't know. I just don't recall.
Q. Did you meet Tom Hartschorne or communicate with Tom Hartschorne in connection with your due diligence work?
A. I don't recall meeting him.
Q. Do you recall communicating with a Diedra DenDanto in connection with your due diligence work?
A. Again, I don't recall the name one way or another.
(CPH Exhibit 30, memo dated 3/12/98 from Diedra DenDanto to Al Dunlap and others, marked for identification, as of this date.)
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Page 490

Tyree
Q. Mr. Tyree, let me show you what we've marked as CPH Exhibit 30. It's a two-page document Bates-numbered CPH 1122102 to '103. And it's a memorandum from Diedra DenDanto dated March 12, 1998, to Al Dunlap, Russ Kersh, Don Uzzie, T. Hartschorne, and the board of directors. Take a moment to look at that.
My first question is whether you've ever seen this before.
A. I'm just going to read through it, but I have not seen the document before.
Q. Go ahead. Read it.
A. Okay.
Q. Do you agree with me that in this memorandum, Ms. DenDanto states her strong objection to Sunbeam's accounting for its bill-and-hold sales?
MR. CLARE: Object. The document speaks for itself.
A. That's what the written words say.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. March 12, 1998, was right in the middle of the time that you were doing due diligence of Sunbeam, correct?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0151136

Page 491

Tyree
A. I don't know if it was in the middle of the time that we were conducting due diligence. It was prior to that phone call that we discussed.
Q. It was in the midst of it, correct? March 12, 1998, you had started your due diligence by that point, correct?
A. I believe we had.
Q. You personally had started due diligence before March 12, correct?
A. I believe that I had.
Q. But you have no recollection of contacting Diedra DenDanto or Tom Hartschorne in connection with the due diligence activity you engaged in, correct?
A. I don't have any recollection of it.
Q. Is that standard, that in connection with doing due diligence in connection with a major equity or debt offering, not to contact internal audit of the issuing company --
MR. CLARE: Object --
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. -- as part of the due diligence process?

Page 492

Tyree
MR. CLARE: Object to the form of the question. And I also object to the premises.
A. As I've said before, there is really no standard due diligence process. Myself -- speaking for myself, it is certainly and pretty much all the transactions that I've worked on, you have extensive dialogue with the third-party auditors. I have spoken to internal auditors before, but I don't know if I characterized one thing as standard or not standard.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Did you think, in connection with the Sunbeam due diligence, that would have been important to talk to the Sunbeam internal audit group as part of the due diligence process?
A. Is your question did I think it would -- at the time, did I think it was important then?
Q. Right.
A. I don't recall what my impressions were in terms of having dialogue with the internal auditors in addition to the third-party auditors.

Page 493

Tyree
Q. Were you aware at any time during the period that you were conducting due diligence of the objections made by Sunbeam's internal auditors to the company's bill-and-hold accounting practices?
A. I don't recall being aware of that, no.
Q. No one advised you that Sunbeam's internal auditors strongly objected to Sunbeam's bill-and-hold transactions?
A. No.
Q. Or to the accounting treatment the company gave to those transactions?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. You indicated that you had extensive -- strike that.
Do you recall as part of your due diligence activity speaking to Arthur Andersen?
A. I have a vague recollection of it, yes.
Q. What do you remember?
A. I recall having a -- it was either a due diligence call or a due diligence meeting with them on accounting issues. I recall having

Page 494

Tyree
a bring-down due-diligence discussion with representatives of Arthur Andersen at the printers. And then, you know, they were -- they were typically present in several different meetings where we did drafting and things of that nature (CPH Exhibit 31, memo dated 3/7/98 from Mr. Tyree to Sunbeam financing team, marked for identification, as of this date.)
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Let me show you, Mr. Tyree, what we've marked as CPH Exhibit Number 31. It's a one-page memorandum Bates-numbered CPH 635893. It's a Morgan Stanley memorandum from you to the Sunbeam financing team dated March 7, 1998. The subject is accounting due diligence call.
Do you recall this document?
A. I do not.
Q. Do you recall that you were the person at Morgan Stanley responsible for setting up due diligence conference calls with the Sunbeam outside auditors and the outside auditors for the three companies that Sunbeam was acquiring?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 495

Tyree
A. I wouldn't characterize it as I was responsible for setting it up. I certainly played a role in accounting due diligence.
Q. What was that role?
A. My recollection -- it's been a long time, but I participated in the call and I had ongoing dialogue with the auditors. I believe I conducted bring-down due diligence at the printers. I think it was on the 19th. And I was just in general involved in these discussions.
Q. Do you recall that Morgan Stanley allocated thirty minutes for its due diligence telephone conversations with each of the outside accounting firms?
A. No, I don't recall that.
Q. Would you consider thirty minutes to be an adequate amount of time to conduct thorough due diligence discussions with the outside accounting firm --
A. It very much depends.
Q. -- corporation?
A. It very much depends.
Q. On what?
A. A number of factors.

Page 496

Tyree
Q. Such as?
A. Among others, the extent to which it is bring-down due diligence versus initial due diligence; the extent to which the company may have recently conducted a transaction with your firm, say, in the past quarter. There's a number of factors.
Q. Well, the call referenced here the March 12, 1998, call. That was not the bring-down due diligence call, was it?
A. I don't know what this call was.
Q. Well, the transaction, the debenture offering, didn't close until toward the end of March; is that correct?
A. I believe that's correct.
Q. You wouldn't have been doing the bring-down due diligence call March 12, then, would you?
A. No. I don't think we would have.
Q. So let's assume this was the initial discussion with the outside accounting firms.
Would you consider thirty minutes of time to be adequate to do thorough due diligence of the outside accounting firm for Sunbeam?

Page 497

Tyree
A. I wouldn't assume this was necessarily the first and/or only call with the auditors. I would assume it was -- it appears to be one call to the auditors.
Q. Let's assume it was the only one.
Would you consider thirty minutes to be adequate?
MR. CLARE: Objection; assumes facts not in evidence.
A. Again, it very much depends on the situation.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. In what context?
A. I think I've given you three of them.
Q. Well, one of then was if it's the bring-down call. This wasn't the bring-down call. Another was whether your firm had recently done a transaction with the same company.
Morgan Stanley had not recently done another transaction with Sunbeam, had it?
A. With Sunbeam, to my knowledge, it had not at that time.
Q. So my question is: Under those circumstances -- it's not the bring-down call,

Page 498

Tyree
you had not previously done another transaction with Sunbeam Company in recent times -- in your view, would thirty minutes be adequate to do thorough due diligence with Sunbeam's outside accounting firm?
MR. CLARE: Objection to the incomplete hypothetical.
Are you still asking him to assume this is the only call?
MR. MARKOWSKI: Yeah.
A. I would just note here that you have signature brands, First Alert and Coleman, represented, correct, on this? Which are, I think, I believe at the time, were companies where I would imagine, although I didn't participate in it -- and that our M&A team would have conducted due diligence on them as well.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I'm focusing on Sunbeam. At twelve noon on this memorandum, it appears to me that thirty minutes has been allocated to the due diligence call with Arthur Andersen.
Do you read the document the same way?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 499

Tyree
A. That's what this document says.
Q. Did you consider thirty minutes of discussion time with Arthur Andersen to be sufficient for Morgan Stanley to do the necessary due diligence with Sunbeam's outside accounting firm?
A. Again, I don't remember this document. So I don't remember if I considered thirty minutes at all.
Q. Well, that's what's allocated here. So my question is whether you recall believing that thirty minutes was all of the time necessary to conduct due diligence with Sunbeam's outside accounting firm.
MR. CLARE: I object to the premise.
A. I understand the question. And, again, this is a document that I don't recall seeing. It has times listed here that I don't recall dictating. So I think the logical follow-on is I don't remember making a judgment about whether thirty minutes would be sufficient or not for accounting due diligence with Sunbeam.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Page 500

Tyree
Q. Put aside what you recall about the document for a minute.
As you sit here today, do you recall believing that thirty minutes was sufficient to conduct due diligence with Andersen in connection with the Sunbeam transactions?
A. I don't recall thinking one way or the other that there was necessarily a time limit placed on accounting due diligence one way or another.
Q. So you don't recall thinking thirty minutes was adequate?
A. I don't recall thinking it was adequate or inadequate.
Q. Based on your experience, generally, do you think thirty minutes is sufficient time to conduct due diligence with an outside accounting firm on a $750 million debt offer?
A. It very much depends.
Q. So it's conceivable, in your mind, that would be sufficient in that kind of transaction?
MR. CLARE: You're still asking him to assume that that's the only due diligence

Page 501

Tyree
that was conducted.
A. As I said, I'm not going to opine on a vague situation. I've been involved in due diligence sessions that take a very long time. Some of them are shorter, some are big transactions, some are small transactions. It depends on a number of different issues.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Do you remember devoting any more than the time set forth on this exhibit, the thirty minutes on March 12, to due diligence with Sunbeam's outside accounting firm?
A. I believe that we had discussions with Sunbeam's auditors for -- yes, for more time than just one meeting in regards to the accounting issues and policies and procedures of Sunbeam.
Q. What time do you recall other than this session on March 12?
A. I recall speaking to the auditors at the printer a couple of times face-to-face. As I said, I recall an actual formal due diligence session that was either telephonic or in person. As I said before, I recall bring-down due diligence. You know, there were several occasions when different parts of -- or follow-up, as it were, of accounting due diligence was conducted during the transaction.

Page 502

Tyree
Q. Well, the discussion at the printer related to the Andersen comfort letter, correct?
MR. CLARE: Objection; asked and answered.
A. Can you clarify that, the discussion at the printer?
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. You said you had discussion with Arthur Andersen at the printer, correct?
A. I did say that, yes.
Q. That discussion related to Arthur Andersen's comfort letter, correct?
A. To my recollection, it related to bring-down due diligence.
Q. At the printer?
A. At the printer.
Q. It's your testimony that you had a bring-down due diligence conversation with Arthur Andersen at the printer independent of a discussion of Andersen's comfort letter?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

A. I don't recall a conversation about Andersen's comfort letter. I recall asking very specific questions which, to me, were effectively bring-down-due-diligence-related questions.

Q. Let me show you what we're going to mark as CPH Exhibit Number 32.

(CPH Exhibit 32, Project Laser Accounting Due Diligence, marked for identification, as of this date.)

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. CPH Exhibit 32 is a two-page document Bates-numbered CPH 635894 to '95 F. It's entitled "Project Laser Accounting Due Diligence."

Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. And it bears at the top a fax line dated March 10, 1998. Do you see that?

A. I do.

Q. Do you recall this document?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Do you recall using this document in connection with the -- this list of questions in connection with the due diligence that you conducted with Arthur Andersen relating to Sunbeam?

Tyree

A. Again, I don't recall this document.

Q. Do you recall using a document like this that contained questions for Arthur Andersen in connection with the due diligence call you had with Arthur Andersen?

A. I could have. I just don't remember if I used one or not.

Q. What do you remember about your initial -- let me take a step back.

Do you remember participating on or about March 12th in a series of due diligence telephone calls with Arthur Andersen and the outside auditors for the companies that Sunbeam was attempting to acquire?

A. I don't remember the accounting due diligence process as specifically as you just described.

Q. Do you remember being involved in a series of telephone conversations with the outside auditors for these companies?

A. I remember that we conducted accounting due diligence with both Sunbeam and the other companies involved in the M&A transactions. I believe it was -- at least part of that was done on a conference call basis. And as I said before, I believe there were follow-up discussions at the printers. And there was the due diligence dialogue at the printers session on the 19th that I discussed. But beyond that, I don't have a specific recollection of what happened on those calls.

Tyree

Q. What I'm trying to focus on were the conference calls that seemed to be scheduled in CPH Exhibit Number 31.

Do you remember there was a day set aside for a series of phone conversations with the outside auditors for each of the four firms listed on Exhibit 31?

A. I recall us scheduling accounting due diligence with Sunbeam and the three other companies we've been discussing. I don't recall specifically whether it was a conference call or whether it happened on one day or multiple days.

Q. Do you remember who participated in that aspect of the accounting due diligence?

A. I don't remember exactly who participated.

Tyree

Q. Do you remember anyone?

A. Well, I believe I participated. I believe Andy Savarie might have been on one of the calls. There were other people involved, but I just don't recall their names.

Q. Do you remember if there was anyone from Sunbeam management participating in the call?

A. Again, I just don't recall.

Q. Would it have been inconsistent with Morgan Stanley's due diligence policies to include company management in a due diligence conversation with the company's outside auditors?

A. I don't know if -- you mean back then in '98?

Q. Right.

A. I don't know if there was a policy back then about inclusion or exclusion of company management from these discussions. So I just -- so when you ask if it's standard or not, I just don't remember if it was.

Q. I was asking if it violated Morgan Stanley's policy to do that.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree
A. In 1998? I don't remember.
Q. Would it violate Morgan Stanley's policy today to have company management participate in the due diligence call with outside auditors?
A. I don't recall that there is a -- that Morgan Stanley has mandated that in no circumstances can management participate in accounting due diligence. I don't recall them mandating that.
Q. Is that their recommendation?
A. I'm sorry?
Q. Is that the recommended practice?
A. The recommended practice? I don't know if there is a policy that recommends one process over the other.
Q. Do you remember if there was a recommended practice on that subject back in 1998?
A. I don't recall if there was one in 1998. What I do recall is on other transactions that I worked on, there were times when management was present, and there were times when management was not present.

Tyree
Q. Let me direct you back to CPH Exhibit 29.
A. Yes.
Q. And in particular the page that's Bates-numbered 80739.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you see that "Financial and Advisory Services Due Diligence Topics for Review with Accountants"?
A. Yes.
Q. Let me direct your attention to the second paragraph in the text: "Prior to discussion with the accountants' request from the company and review the last three years' management letters and the company's responses to those letters" --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- "the discussion with the accountants should be conducted without the company present."
Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. Does that refresh your memory that Morgan Stanley's policy back in 1998 was that accounting due diligence should be conducted outside of the presence of company management?

Tyree
A. In terms of refreshing my memory, I don't know if it refreshes my memory. That's what it says on the page.
Q. But you don't recall that, as you sit here, being the policy back in 1998?
A. The policy that we have to conduct due diligence without the company present?
Q. That that's the recommended practice?
A. I don't recall what the policy was in '98.
Q. No one told you in setting up the due diligence calls in connection with the Sunbeam due diligence that management should not be included?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Let me direct your attention back to Exhibit 32 -- CPH Exhibit 32. Let me refer you to Item Number 8, "how aggressive is the company in its accounting policies."
Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. First off, let me start with Item 3:

Tyree
"Anything peculiar to the company that is not generally the way the industry accounts for (a) revenue recognition; (b) capitalizing cost versus expensing/deferring costs."
Do you see that?
A. I do.
Q. Do you recall asking that question of Arthur Andersen in connection with the due diligence that you conducted?
A. As I said, I don't recall the exact questions that we asked during accounting due diligence.
Q. Do you recall asking Arthur Andersen, in substance, is there anything peculiar about the way Sunbeam accounts for revenue?
A. Again, I just don't recall five years ago exactly what questions that we asked of Arthur Andersen.
Q. Do you recall that Mr. Harlow identified Sunbeam's bill-and-hold accounting practices as an unusual revenue recognition practice?
A. I don't recall anything like that.
Q. Do you recall, in response to

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 511

Tyree
questions about how aggressive Sunbeam was in recognizing revenue, that Mr. Harlow identified several transactions in which Sunbeam management recognized revenue where Arthur Andersen objected to that treatment?
A. No. I don't recall anything like that.
Q. Do you recall that in the course of your due diligence, you learned that Sunbeam used bill-and-hold accounting?
A. I don't recall one way or the other whether I did.
Q. Do you know what bill-and-hold accounting is?
A. I have a general idea, but I haven't spent a lot of time studying it.
Q. What's your general understanding of what that means?
A. Effectively, it allows for -- it's been a long time. But, effectively, it allows for the selling of a given product -- correction -- the booking of the sales of a given product while holding it and, hence, create inventory, so to speak. That's my recollection.

Page 512

Tyree
Q. Is it your understanding that's different from the way most companies recognize revenue?
MR. CLARE: Objection to form and foundation.
A. I'm not an accountant.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. So if someone said to you, Sunbeam engages in bill-and-hold accounting, that would not be significant to you in terms of alerting you to potential issues with respect to Sunbeam's revenue recognition policy?
A. It depends very much on who says it, in the context in which it's said, and the degree of materiality it has, among other things.
Q. If Arthur Andersen -- if you asked Arthur Andersen, "Is there anything unusual about Sunbeam's revenue recognition practices?" and Arthur Andersen said to you, "Sunbeam uses bill-and-hold accounting," and you had heard that back in March of 1998, would that have been something that you would have inquired further about?
MR. CLARE: Object to the form;

incomplete hypothetical.
A. It could have been.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. And what would you have been interested in knowing?
A. I don't know. I mean, this is another hypothetical where I don't want to speculate about what I would or would not have been interested in hearing more about.
Q. Would it have caused you some concern with respect to Sunbeam's accounting?
MR. CLARE: Objection to form.
A. Again, it could have, but I don't want to speculate.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Would it have caused you some concern with respect to whether Sunbeam's turnaround claims were, in fact, truthful?
MR. CLARE: Objection.
A. And my same comment: It could have, but I don't want to speculate.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Would it have caused you any concerns with respect to whether or not Sunbeam would have

Page 514

Tyree
accelerated the sale of -- the recognition of sales revenue into 1997 in a way that would have damaged the company's performance in 1998?
MR. CLARE: Same objection.
A. I don't want to speculate.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. So you don't know one way or the other whether, in the course of doing your due diligence, Arthur Andersen advised you that Sunbeam engaged in bill-and-hold accounting whether that would have caused you to inquire further into whether or not that practice may have had negative effects on Sunbeam's prospects for 1998?
A. No. I said that I just don't want to speculate because other variables could have impacted what I would have done in that situation.
MR. MARKOWSKI: Could you read my question back, please.
(Record read.)
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. What variables would have affected whether you would have even made a further inquiry on that subject?

MR. CLARE: Asked and answered.
A. Numerous variables would have dictated what I would have done in terms of follow-up.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. What are those?
A. Among others, the potential impact of the policy that you described; the materiality of that impact; the degree to which it was common in the industry; probably most importantly -- most important, the degree to which the auditors were uncomfortable with the policy.
Q. Did you know that Arthur Andersen had recommended that Sunbeam discontinue the bill-and-hold accounting?
A. Not that I recall, no.
Q. You recall that you received the Arthur Andersen comfort letter that identified the acceleration of sales revenue into the fourth quarter of 1997 as the main reason for Sunbeam's poor performance in January and February of '98, correct?
MR. CLARE: Object to the

Tyree
characterization of the document.
A. Are you saying I did receive that?
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Right.
A. Is that a statement or a question?
Q. It's a question. It's true, isn't it?
MR. CLARE: Same objection.
A. I don't know what the date is that you're talking about in terms of receiving a comfort letter. I don't know what the document is you're referring to.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. You don't recall that Morgan Stanley was advised by Arthur Andersen in the comfort letter that Morgan Stanley requested from Arthur Andersen that the main reason for Sunbeam's poor sales performance in January and February of 1998 was Sunbeam's acceleration of sales into the fourth quarter of 1997 through the use of bill-and-hold accounting?
MR. CLARE: Objection to the mischaracterization of the document.
A. If I had the document in front of me,

Tyree
I could opine a little more on it. I mean, I looked at a lot of documents today, but I don't recall when I got this comfort letter that you're talking about. And right now I don't recall the exact substance of the comfort letter.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. If you had been advised on March 12 that Sunbeam was engaged in bill-and-hold accounting, and you were advised on March 18th that Sunbeam's sales in January and February are half of what they had been in 1998, would you have related those two pieces of information to each other?
A. I think we've addressed this before. And, again, you're asking me what I would have done. And I don't want to speculate on what I would have done. I need to have a little bit more detail about what the situation was or could be.
Q. I'm asking about your level of sophistication here, sir.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. If on March 12 you're advised that Sunbeam's auditors have identified Sunbeam's

Tyree
bill-and-hold accounting practice as an unusual revenue recognition practice, and on March 19 or March 18, you're advised that Sunbeam's sales in January and February of 1998 are half of what they had been in the same two months of 1997, whether you would have understood that Sunbeam's bill-and-hold accounting practices were inflating Sunbeam's results in '97 and damaging Sunbeam's reported performance in 1998.
MR. CLARE: Objection to form.
A. I understand your question.
In terms of my level of sophistication, my level of sophistication tells me that -- among other things, that you can't make judgments on just one piece of data. You need a number of pieces of data to make a judgment and to take action. So I don't want to tell you, and I don't think it's unreasonable, what I would or would not do with just one or two facts that you outlined. I'd want to know a lot more detail. And that would dictate what I would do at that point in time.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Well, what did you do? Because those are the facts.

On March 12, Sunbeam's auditors advised you that Sunbeam engaged in bill-and-hold accounting. And on March 18, as we spent a lot of time talking about today, you were aware of the fact that Sunbeam's performance in January and February was half of what it had been in those two months in 1997.
What did you do to understand the significance of that information with respect to the four transactions in which Morgan Stanley was acting as Sunbeam's investment banker?
MO MR. CLARE: I object and move to strike counsel's preamble to the question. Also, object to form.
A. If you don't mind, the first part of your question said I knew something. Would you just tell me what I knew?
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. On March 12, Sunbeam auditors advised you that Sunbeam engaged in bill-and-hold accounting on March 18th. You're aware that Sunbeam's sales in the first two months of 1998 are half of what they had been in the first two months of 1997.

My question to you, sir, as the person very involved in conducting due diligence on the debenture offering, is what you, John Tyree, did to investigate those facts and their materiality.
MR. CLARE: I'm going to object. He's already testified he doesn't even remember being advised of these things. And your recitation of -- the premise of your question is inconsistent with his testimony. And to that extent, I object.
A. I want to answer your question, but I want to understand how you come to the viewpoint of what I knew and when. So if you could just humor me and tell me, first of all, when I admitted or said that the accountants had told me something on the 12th, I believe you said, because I don't recall making that statement that I knew something then.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. There are other witnesses who have testified to that.

Page 521

Tyree
A. Well, I can't opine on what other witnesses say. I can opine on what I know and what I remember and what the facts were of the situation. And I've done that.
Q. Is it your testimony, sir, that you were oblivious to the fact after conducting the accounting due diligence of Sunbeam company, that Sunbeam in 1997 had extensively used bill-and-hold accounting --
MR. CLARE: Objection to form and argumentative --
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Is that your testimony?
MR. CLARE: Objection; argumentative.
A. No.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. So, then, you were aware of that?
MR. CLARE: Objection; argumentative.
A. Okay. No. That's not my testimony.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Were you aware or were you oblivious to the fact that Sunbeam in 1997 had extensively engaged in bill-and-hold accounting after you had conducted the accounting due diligence that you say was appropriate for the circumstances?

Page 522

Tyree
MR. CLARE: Objection to form.
A. My answer to the question is I don't remember what I knew on, I guess, the 12th of March in 1998. I just do not remember. And that's not, I don't think, unreasonable.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Do you know, as you sit here today, sir, that Sunbeam engaged in extensive bill-and-hold accounting in 1997 --
MR. CLARE: Object to the premise.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. -- and has had to restate its financial statements as a result of those transactions being viewed as inappropriately accounted for?
MR. CLARE: Object to the form.
A. I do now know that Sunbeam did have to restate their financials, yes.

A. As of that, today I have been through this process and other processes. I understand that to have been a part of the cause of the restatement.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. And is it your testimony that in connection with the due diligence you did of Sunbeam's accounting in 1998, that you do not recall knowing that Sunbeam engaged in extensive bill-and-hold accounting transactions?
MR. CLARE: Objection to form.
A. Excuse me. My -- I think I've already commented on this, but my recollection -- I'm trying to answer your question -- is that I just don't recall knowing or having had something highlighted to me from the auditors, as you, I think, have claimed, that Sunbeam participated in extensive bill-and-hold procedures, you know, in advance of the work that we did on the transaction. No, I don't recall that.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Do you recall asking Arthur Andersen, in connection with your accounting due diligence, how aggressive Sunbeam was in connection with

Page 524

Tyree
revenue recognition?
Do you recall that general subject coming up?
A. I don't recall having a specific discussion with Sunbeam's auditors about the aggressiveness of their policy and procedures.
Q. Is revenue recognition a question that you would always ask in connection with accounting due diligence?
A. I would characterize it differently. I'd say, looking at the transactions I've looked at historically, I have in many situations asked about accounting policy and procedures. And in some situations, that includes revenue recognition policies.
Q. Do you have a recollection of doing that in connection with your Sunbeam investigation?
A. I don't have that specific recollection, no.
Q. Do you have any reason to believe that you didn't ask that question?
A. I have no reason to believe one way or the other.

Page 525

Tyree
Q. So it's possible that you did not ask, in your mind, Sunbeam's auditors any questions about Sunbeam's -- their views of Sunbeam's revenue recognition practices?
A. Is it possible? Anything is possible.
Q. Do you recall Phil Harlow? Do you recall speaking to Phil Harlow?
A. I recall the name. I don't recall his face.
Q. Do you recall speaking to him on the telephone?
A. Not specifically.
Q. Do you know that Mr. Harlow is the Arthur Andersen engagement partner for Sunbeam?
A. I believe that was right.
Q. He was the audit partner, correct?
A. I believe that's correct.
Q. Do you recall that Mr. Harlow advised you that Arthur Andersen objected to Sunbeam's revenue recognition in connection with various transactions?
A. No, I don't recall that.
Q. Do you recall asking for an opportunity to review Arthur Andersen's list of proposed audit adjustments for the 1997 audit?

Page 526

Tyree
A. I'm sorry. Do I recall asking for that?
Q. Did you ask Mr. Harlow or anyone else from Arthur Andersen for an opportunity to review Arthur Andersen's list of proposed audit adjustments in connection with Arthur Andersen's 1997 audit of Sunbeam?
A. I don't recall if I did or did not.
Q. Do you recall Arthur Andersen ever refusing an information request that you put to them?
A. No. I don't have a recollection of that.
THE WITNESS: When we reach a break point, do you want to take a break?
MR. MARKOWSKI: We're going on to a new topic. So if you need to take a break, this is the time to do it.

We're back on the record.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Mr. Tyree, after the Sunbeam press release on March 19, did you think it was important to closely monitor Sunbeam's sales results up until the time of the debenture offering -- closing?
A. I recall after that, the 18th and the episode of the 18th and then on the 19th, focusing very much on the need for bring-down due diligence and getting clarification in terms of the progress that Sunbeam was making in terms of its net sales.
Q. Why was that important?
A. Because it was a topic that we spent a good amount of time on, on the previous phone call or conference call. So in addition to all the other topics that you cover in accounting due diligence, bring-down due diligence, as it were, that was one of the points that I wanted to make sure that I went through in detail.
Q. I don't quite understand from your answer why you wanted to know as of March 19 what Sunbeam's sales results were.

Page 528

Tyree
A. Because if there had been a change from the time they had discussed with us their net sales figures on the 18th and the time of the bring-down due diligence, that would be important for us to know.
Q. Important for what reason?
A. To determine whether or not they were on track to meet those guaranteed targets.
Q. What if they weren't on track to meet those targets?
A. I'm sorry? What if?
Q. You said it was important to know if they were on target to meet those guaranteed targets.
Why was it important?
A. It was important because, as a number of topics in bring-down due diligence are important, we wanted to be able to judge as best as we could at that point the progress that they had made relative to the targets that had been put out in the press releases, among other things.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. In what way would it have affected

Page 529

Tyree
Morgan Stanley's activities if Sunbeam was falling short of meeting the targets that were set forth in the March 19th press release?
A. Well, first of all, if you can define what you mean by Morgan Stanley's activities.
Q. Let me take a step back, because I don't know that I'm tracking here with you.
You said it was important after March 19th as a part of bring-down due diligence to determine where Sunbeam's performance stood in relationship to what had been guaranteed to Morgan Stanley during the course of the March 18 telephone calls, correct?
A. I would characterize it as the progress they had made towards those guaranteed targets.
Q. And I'm trying to understand what would have happened if Sunbeam was not making progress satisfactory to Morgan Stanley in meeting the targets that Sunbeam had promised.
MR. CLARE: Objection; calls for speculation.
A. I don't know what would have happened.

Page 530

Tyree
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Had you been told by anyone that it was important for you to stay current with respect to Sunbeam's sales activities after the March 19 press release was issued; or did you take that upon yourself?
A. I don't recall anyone specifically saying to me that that was my responsibility. I just viewed it as something that the team needed to continue to monitor going forward.
Q. Ruth Porat didn't say, for example, "John, it's important that you stay on top of the sales results"?
A. I don't recall her saying that to me.
Q. Bill Strong didn't say that?
A. I don't recall him saying that to me.
Q. What did you do after March 19 to track Sunbeam sales results?
A. I don't remember exactly what we did. I have, as I mentioned before, a clear recollection of bring-down due diligence. As I mentioned before, we had a bring-down accounting due diligence at the printers. And other things may have happened during that interim time. I just don't recall what they were.

Q. Do you recall what information you sought from Sunbeam relating to its sale results after March 19?
A. I don't know exactly what we required from Sunbeam at that point.
Q. Did you ask Sunbeam for any documents relating to its sales results after March 19?
A. We may have. I just don't remember.
Q. As you sit here today, do you have recollection of requesting any sort of sales reports in writing from Sunbeam after the March 19 press release was issued?
A. I don't recall me personally making that request of Sunbeam.
Q. Do you recall asking anyone else to do that?
A. I don't recall asking someone to make that request for me.
Q. Do you recall if anyone at Morgan Stanley did do that?
A. They may have, but I just don't recall.
Q. How did you get information from

Tyree
Sunbeam relating to its sales results after March 19?
A. You mean in addition to the two due diligence discussions?
Q. No. I'm including any source of information that you had after March 19. I want to make sure that I understand it all.
A. Well, this is after the printers? It's after the press release but before the printers on the 19th?
Q. No. It's after the press release and any time subsequent to that. I want to understand what you did to obtain information from Sunbeam relating to its sales results after March 19, when the press release was issued.
A. I'm sorry. I'm probably not being clear, but we had the call on the 18th, and then I think the press release went out on the morning of the 19th. And then we went to the printer that night, I believe.
Are you asking me to include in your question that period of time when we were at the printer?
Q. Well, did you get information from

Tyree
Sunbeam while you were present at the printer on March 19th relating to its sales results subsequent to March 18th?
A. My vague recollection was, in addition to other things, that may or may not have happened that we conducted bring-down due diligence with the auditors where we asked about the broader comfort level with the content of the prospectus -- that's one thing -- which included the press release.
I believe that we spoke -- there was a Sunbeam representative at the printer that night who I believe I spoke to about their forward-looking financial results. There was the bring-down due diligence after the 19th, which was an extensive conference call, as I said, with -- I believe it was Russ Kersh. And there may have been other activities, but those are the three that I remember.
Q. At the printer you didn't get any new information relating to Sunbeam's sales results updating the information that you received on March 18, did you?
A. I don't recall getting any

Tyree
information that would bring me more up to date from that page that we discussed earlier at the printer other than I believe we got a degree of assurance from the management they were on track. I can't recall how detailed that discussion was.
Q. When did you first after March 18 get information from Sunbeam updating you on Sunbeam's sales results subsequent to March 18?
A. And I believe it was at the printer on the evening of the 19th.
Q. Well, I'm not -- then you and I are not communicating well.
A. Okay.
Q. The conference call with Sunbeam management where they told you where they were at in the first quarter performance took place on March 18, correct?
A. That's right.
Q. Is it your testimony, sir, that on March 19 you received additional information from Sunbeam relating to its sales results subsequent or more current or more complete than the information that you had received on March 18?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

A. My recollection is that we received assurances from Sunbeam. I don't know if we received written papers or contracts, as you described, but assurances that they continued to be on track at the printers on the 19th.

Q. So they reported on the results of the 19th.

Is that what your testimony is? They told you that they had sold that day?

A. I don't know what they told me in that session.

Q. Your testimony is that you obtained additional information relating to Sunbeam's first quarter sales results at the printer from Sunbeam management on March 19?

A. No. What I recollect is getting additional assurances from the company. What I don't remember if they give me additional information such as revised numbers or something to that effect. That I don't recall.

Q. When is the first time you recall getting any additional sales numbers from Sunbeam after the press release issue?

A. I don't recall getting additional written materials in terms of the sales numbers going up to the bring-down due diligence that I discussed. It may have happened, but I just don't recall it.

Tyree

Q. Is it your testimony that Sunbeam gave you at any time updated sales numbers after the March 19th press release was issued?

A. I can't remember. My recollection was we did bring-down down diligence, not the one at the printer but the later one, that we went by account by account. And they listed the progress that they had made relative to their targets and then gave us -- reasserted their assurance they were going to meet those targets.

Now, what I don't recall is if they gave us a piece of paper that did that. I just don't recall that.

Q. Other than the bring-down due diligence call with Sunbeam management that you just referred to, was there any other occasion where you believe you received updated sales numbers from Sunbeam management after the March 19 press release?

A. There may have been. I just don't recall.

Q. I'm going to mark three different documents as exhibits at this point. They'll be CPH Exhibit 33, 34 and 35.

(CPH Exhibit 33, memo dated 3/19/98 from Mr. Tyree and Johannes Groeller to Bob Gluck and others, marked for identification, as of this date.)

(CPH Exhibit 34, memo dated 3/20/98 from Ruth Porat and others, marked for identification, as of this date.)

(CPH Exhibit 35, memo dated 3/23/98 from Mr. Tyree, Mr. Groeller and Shani Boone, marked for identification, as of this date.)

BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Q. I give you all three of these exhibits, Mr. Tyree, at the same time.

Exhibit 33 is a one-page document dated March 19, 1998. It bears Bates numbers Morgan Stanley confidential 29176. It's a March 19, 1998, memorandum from you and Johannes Groeller to Bob Gluck, Alan Dean and Greg Fernicola, subject bring-down due diligence.

Tyree

Exhibit Number 34 is a two-page document. It bears Bates number CPH 520973 to '974. It's a memorandum dated March 20, 1998, from Ruth Porat, Brooks Harris, John Tyree and Johannes Groeller, subject bring-down due diligence.

And Exhibit 35 is a March 35 -- excuse me. Exhibit 35 is a March 23, 1998, memorandum. It bears Bates numbers CPH 1257351 from you, Johannes Groeller and Shani Boone, subject Sunbeam bring-down due diligence.

I ask you to take a moment to look at all three of these documents.

My first question is, Can you explain to me or shed any light on why there are three such similar versions of this bring-down due diligence list of questions?

A. No.

Q. Let's work our way through them. The first one is dated March 19, 1998, from you and Johannes Groeller. The next one is dated the following day and has on its list of authors, in addition to you and Mr. Groeller, Ruth Porat and Brooks Harris.

Do you know why that change was made?
A. The 19th versus the 20th, you mean --
Q. Right. Adding on Ruth Porat and Brooks Harris as additional authors.
A. I don't know if this necessarily indicates that a change was made. It may be that these were for different purposes -- I don't know -- meaning incremental bring-down due diligence discussions.
Q. How many bring-down due diligence conversations do you recall having with Sunbeam?
A. The ones I recall, in addition to the 18th, which was effectively a bring-down, was on the 19th. As I discussed earlier, this is a kind of bring-down due diligence discussion with both the auditors and with management there. And there was one later with Russ Kersh and his team on the phone which happened a couple of days after that. That's what I remember. There may have been others.
MR. MARKOWSKI: Could you read the answer back for me, please.

Q. Do you recall on March 19 that you sat down with somebody from Sunbeam management and reviewed the questions that are listed on CPH Exhibit 33?
A. I'm sorry. On what date did you ask?
Q. We're talking about the printer. You said March 19th. You're including that within the bring-down due diligence communications that you think you may have had with Sunbeam management.
Do you recall that on March 19th you had this memorandum with you, CPH Exhibit 33, and that you reviewed these items with Sunbeam management while you were at the printer?
A. I don't recall having this document with me at the printer, no.
Q. Now, the first item on the March 19th version of this document, CPH Exhibit 30, could you read that into the record?
MR. CLARE: 30 or --
MR. MARKOWSKI: 33.
A. The first bullet point item?
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Page 541

Tyree
Q. Right.
A. "A top and bottom line outlook for first quarter first half and the year."
Q. So this called for the company to provide information to Morgan Stanley relating to Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter, the first and second quarter combined, the first half, and for the full year of 1998, correct? Am I interpreting this right?
A. Again, I don't remember drafting up this document, but that would appear to be what the text implies.
Q. Let me turn your attention to Exhibit 34, the March 20 version, with a list of bring-down due diligence questions.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you see any question on this list of -- included with this list of questions related to Sunbeam's outlook for the second quarter of 1998?
A. Do I see that on this list?
Q. Right.
A. I don't see any mention on this page of the second quarter.

Page 542

Tyree
Q. Can you explain to me why that subject was dropped from the March 19 version of the bring-down due diligence memo?
A. No. I can't explain that to you.
Q. Let me turn your attention now to Exhibit Number 35, the March 23 version.
A. Yes.
Q. The recipients of the March 23 version are identical to the recipients of the March 20 version; is that correct?
A. That's what it says on the page.
Q. The authors are different, though, correct?
A. Again, yes. That's what it says on the page.
Q. Ruth Porat's name had been dropped, right?
A. That's correct.
Q. Why?
A. I couldn't tell you, since I don't remember sending off or drafting up these documents.
Q. Do you see anything on CPH Exhibit 34 that inquires into Sunbeam's prospects for the second quarter of 1998?

MR. CLARE: Are you asking 34 or 35 now?
MR. MARKOWSKI: I'm sorry. I was on 35.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Let me ask a question so the record is clear.
Do you see anything on CPH Exhibit Number 35, the March 23 version of the list of bring-down due diligence topics, relating to Sunbeam's views of its prospects for the second quarter of 1998?
A. No. But I would make the point that on this document, you have the comment "Are you still comfortable with your '98 earnings estimate of 180?" which, obviously, would have to incorporate into it a view on the second quarter.
Q. I'm asking specifically about the second quarter.
A. Okay. No. That's not written on this page.
Q. Do you know why that topic was dropped from the March 23 version of the

Page 544

Tyree
bring-down due diligence list of topics?
A. No, I do not.
Q. Do you recall if you were the person responsible for making that change?
A. No. I don't recall that.
Q. Do you recall if someone instructed you to drop from the list of due diligence topics inquiry into Sunbeam's views of its prospects for the second quarter of '98?
A. I don't recall anyone dictating to me one way or the other what I should or should not include in bring-down due diligence. As I can't remember this document per se -- I don't remember anyone telling me to change something. I don't even remember.
Q. Well, put the documents aside for a moment.
My question is: Do you remember after March 18 someone instructing you to drop from the list of questions you asked Sunbeam in connection with your bring-down due diligence inquiry into Sunbeam's prospects for the second quarter of 1998?
A. I don't recall anything like that.

Page 545

Tyree
Q. Does Exhibit 35, the March 23 version of this document, sir, suggest to you that your bring-down due diligence call with Mr. Kersh would have occurred either on March 23 or sometime after that?
A. Does this document?
Q. Right.
A. I don't think this document necessarily refreshes my memory as to the date at which that call occurred.
Q. Do you infer from its date, March 23, 1998, that you had not had the bring-down due diligence call with Mr. Kersh that you've referred to prior to the time of this memorandum?
A. Because I don't recall this document, I can't really opine on whether it gives me a sense for if I did or did not have the call with Mr. Kersh on -- before, on or after the 23rd of March.
Q. Well, the text of the memo says here are some topics -- here are some areas we would like to cover during our bring-down due diligence call, correct?
A. That's what this document says, yes.

Page 546

Tyree
Q. Is it a fair reading of that that the bring-down due diligence call had not occurred yet?
A. That's what this document would imply.
Q. Can you identify for me all the participants in the bring-down due diligence call that you had with Mr. Kersh?
A. I just don't remember everybody who was on that call.
Q. Do you remember anything other than you and Mr. Kersh?
A. My recollection was that there were representatives of both counsels, Davis Polk and Skadden on the call. I can't remember exactly who was on it. I was on it. As you mentioned, Russ Kersh was on it. I believe there may have been other Sunbeam representatives on the call, but I can't recall who.
Q. Do you remember that Don Uzzie was on the call?
A. He may have been. I just don't remember.
Q. Do you recall who Don Uzzie was?

Page 547

Tyree

A. I don't like to speculate. Don may have had something to do with sales at the organization, but I could be wrong.
Q. Did you ever meet Mr. Uzzie in connection with your due diligence in person?
A. I might have. I don't remember.
Q. Do you recall that Mr. Uzzie was the person from Sunbeam that primarily presented the sales information during the course of the phone conversations on March 18th?
A. On the phone conversation on March 18, my recollection was there was extensive dialogue on sales as a general matter and that a number of different people commented on it from Sunbeam. So what I don't recall is one person kind of taking through the sales position and that being it. I recall a number of different players from Sunbeam speaking to the sales issue.
Q. You don't remember Mr. Uzzie being the primary speaker with respect to Sunbeam's result in January, February and the first half of March and Sunbeam's views of its prospects for the balance of the quarter?
A. He could have been. I just don't remember who covered what topics at what time.

Page 548

Tyree

Q. And your testimony is you don't remember whether Mr. Uzzie was a participant in the bring-down call, correct?
A. I don't recall if he was on it or not.
Q. An important topic for you in connection with the bring-down call was how Sunbeam has performed in terms of movement toward accomplishing the sales results that are the subject of the March 19 press release, correct?
A. To my recollection, that is correct.
Q. Would you have wanted to have Mr. Uzzie participate in that phone call in order to get information from the most knowledgable Sunbeam --
A. Would I have wanted?
Q. -- managers?
A. You know, again, hypothetical question. I would have wanted as much information as I could possibly get. But I don't recall in this situation whether I felt strongly or didn't that Mr. Uzzie had to be on that call.
Q. Do you recall that Mr. Uzzie in fact

Page 549

Tyree

was on the call but didn't speak?
A. I don't have that recollection.
Q. Do you recall that Mr. Uzzie was on the call but didn't say anything relating to the status of Sunbeam's sales for the period subsequent to March 19?
A. Again, I don't recall if he had been on the call or not.
Q. What do you recall being said on the subject of Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 performance during the bring-down due diligence call?
A. My recollection was spending a fairly lengthy period of time with Sunbeam walking through -- and I don't know who the representative was. It may have been Russ Kersh. -- walking through in detail their comfort level with different customers, in particular, their key customers, and then, you know, getting, I guess I'd say, a reiteration of their commitment that, in fact, the numbers they had laid out on the previous call on the 18th were, in fact, kind of the low end limit, as it were. But, you know, I don't have any specific recollection about comments on individual accounts or numbers per se.

Q. So as you sit here, you don't remember -- well, do you remember whether Sunbeam -- whether you remember the number or not, do you remember that Sunbeam provided you with an updated total for Sunbeam's sales through that point, the first quarter?
A. I don't remember exactly what the quantitative numbers were that they provided on the call -- the numbers were that they provided on the call.
Q. I'm not sure I understand what you are saying.
A. You're asking me if they provided us with a total; is that correct --
Q. Right. That's what I'm trying to understand.
A. And what I'm telling you is I don't recall what the specific numbers were that they provided to us on the call, be it individual, account specific revenue numbers or net sales numbers or a total. I just don't remember.
Q. Do you remember whether you were

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree
given any numbers?
A. On the call?
Q. Uh-huh. For net sales results or gross sales results?
A. I believe that we were, but I just don't remember exactly what those numbers were.
Q. Is it possible that you were provided with no updated sales numbers during that bring-down due diligence call?
A. I don't -- again, I don't want to opine on what's possible and what's not possible. Anything is possible. But my recollection was that we had reasonably detailed comfort on the individual sales numbers and the progress that they had made.
Q. Did you ask Mr. Kersh for anything in writing so that you could confirm that, for example, any daily sales reports or things of that sort?
A. I don't recall if I did or did not.
Q. Do you think it would have been a prudent thing to do?
A. At that point in time when I conducted the bring-down due diligence call, I felt that the questioning that we had done was prudent and appropriate for the situation at that point in time. And I think that's what you're asking, at that point time, whether I thought it was prudent to insist that he provide us with something in writing. And my view was and my vague recollection of the call, the detail that he gave us -- and it was pretty specific, very specific -- and the other information he gave us was both appropriate and prudent for where we were on the transaction.

Q. In hindsight, do you think you made a mistake in not asking Sunbeam management during the course of the bring-down due diligence phase to provide you with corroboration for its statements relating to Sunbeam's sales results for the first quarter?
MR. CLARE: Objection to form.
A. I would not call it a mistake.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. In hindsight, do you wish you had done that?
MR. CLARE: Same objection.
A. I wish a number of things in hindsight. So I think it's kind of a silly question.

Tyree
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. I'm asking something very specific.
In hindsight, do you wish you had asked that Sunbeam after March 19th provide you with written documentation corroborating management's statements concerning Sunbeam's sales results in the first quarter of 1998?
A. When I think about in hindsight, what I wish is that management had told us the truth.
Q. Do you think that Mr. Kersh misled you in connection with the bring-down due diligence call?
A. I don't know. I don't know the details of the litigation or his situation.
Q. Do you think you might have been in a position to learn the truth had you asked for documentation?
MR. CLARE: Objection; calls for speculation.
A. I think I would have been in a position to -- how did you phrase it?
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:

Tyree
Q. Learn the truth had you asked for documentation.
A. I think I would have been in a position to learn the truth if the company senior management had told me the truth.
Q. Did you think you had any responsibility to ask for information from the company by way of documentation that would have allowed you to corroborate management's oral representations?
MR. CLARE: Objection; asked and answered.
A. I think that I had a responsibility, along with the rest of the team, to conduct a prudent and appropriate due diligence process. And I think we did that.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. You don't think you had any obligation to ask for documents that would have allowed you to evaluate the truthfulness of management's statements to you?
A. I think I've already answered that. I think broadly that the due diligence process that we conducted was prudent and appropriate in the entire process the whole way along. That's how I feel.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 555

Q. And you don't think that Morgan Stanley's due diligence was flawed because of the failure to ask the company to provide documentation corroborating the statements made to you?
A. I think the due diligence process that I was involved in and that I conducted was both prudent and appropriate for this transaction.
Q. And you don't think it was flawed because of your failure to ask for documentation?
MR. CLARE: Asked and answered.
A. I really think I've answered that.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Have you ever seen recommendations relating to conduct of due diligence that statements made by management should be corroborated by obtaining written documentation?
A. Have I ever seen that?
Q. Yes. Have you ever seen that as a recommendation relating to the manner in which due diligence should be conducted in a securities

Page 556

Tyree
or a debt offering?
A. I just want clarity on this question. Sorry. But your question is, have I seen a document or a recommendation at Morgan Stanley that implies or says that we should -- Morgan Stanley professionals should -- seek written confirmation from management teams of the contentions that they give to us in due diligence?
Q. Right.
A. I don't recall ever seeing anything like that.
Q. So it's your understanding that you're entitled in connection with performing due diligence to rely exclusively on statements made by management?
A. No. I wouldn't say that either.
Q. How have I misstated it?
A. Well, I guess I would say that investment bankers are not auditors. That's not what we do. What we do, we conduct -- and I hate to go back on this terminology again, but a prudent and appropriate due diligence process that allows companies to access the capital market while also analyzing the number of issues that I've already told you in the context of due diligence. But we're not auditors. It's an important point.

Tyree
Q. Is there anything else? Are you done with your answer?
A. I thought that was your question.
Q. I'm just wondering if you're done with your answer. I don't want to interrupt.
A. Yes.
Q. So is it your testimony, Mr. Tyree, that because Morgan Stanley wasn't, in your words, the auditor with respect to Sunbeam, that it had the right to rely exclusively on oral statements made by management in connection with completing its due diligence of Sunbeam Company?
A. No. That's not my testimony.
Q. So it's your testimony that Morgan Stanley had an obligation to do more than rely on the statements made to it by management in order to complete appropriate due diligence?
A. I think that's -- that is correct.
Q. What here beyond relying on the statements made by Sunbeam management did Morgan

Page 558

Tyree
Stanley do with respect to conducting due diligence relating to Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 results?
A. Well, number one in the due diligence process, we -- and I think I've gone through this already -- we went down and inspected their facilities and their headquarters. That's one thing. We conducted the due diligence that you and I have already described where we asked for a significant amount of written information that we analyzed in the context of due diligence, whether it be 10-Ks, 10-Qs, just a number of different documents. We analyzed what the research analyst community was saying about the company. We did a number of different things other than just, as you put it, rely on what management told us.
Q. I think you lost the thread of my question. I was focusing on due diligence relating to Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of 1998.
Other than relying on the statements made to you by Sunbeam management relating to its results and its views of the prospects for the balance of the first quarter of 1998, what did

015153

Page 559

Tyree
Morgan Stanley do in connection with its due diligence? On that topic.
A. Oh, okay. I'm sorry. Again, I can't recall exactly what we did in particular post the conference call on the 18th. But that doesn't mean that we didn't, you know, conduct other due diligence processes.
Q. As far as you can recall at this point on that topic, what you did was you had a telephone conversation with Russ Kersh and perhaps others at Sunbeam, correct?
A. We did have that telephone call, but I just can't recall the other things that we did in the context of further due diligence on those -- on those numbers.
Q. The only thing you can recall as you sit here is the phone conversation with Russ Kersh, correct?
A. No. I mean, there were other discussions that you and I have already talked about, bring-down due diligence, and whatnot.
Q. I'm talking about updating the information that you received on March 18 relating to Sunbeam's sales in the first quarter of 1998. The only thing that you can recall on that topic where you obtained additional information from Sunbeam was your telephone conversation with Russ Kersh sometime on or after March 23, correct?

Page 560

A. No. We also spoke to the auditors at the printers, their third-party auditors, and got assurances that they were comfortable with the offering circular, which included the press release, which, by definition, had incorporated those numbers in it. We conducted, as I said, more than one bring-down due diligence. There was the discussion that we had with management at the printer. And then there could have been other things which I may not recollect. But that doesn't mean they didn't happen.
Q. We can go back through it again, and we're going to have to. I'm trying to find out on what occasions you obtained updated sales results information from Sunbeam after you received the report from Sunbeam management on March 18.
Is it your testimony that on March 19 at the printer, Sunbeam gave you updated sales

Page 561

Tyree
results beyond the information provided to you on the 18th?
A. No. That's not my testimony.
Q. Is it your testimony that there was some occasion other than the bring-down due diligence call with Russ Kersh where you obtained information on that topic from Sunbeam management?
A. No. My testimony is that we conducted that call with Russ Kersh, and there may have been other discussions with Sunbeam or related parties in terms of their forward -- I'm sorry -- their first quarter financial results, but I just don't recall them.
Q. The only thing you can recall that meets the definition that I have given you is the bring-down due diligence call with Russ Kersh sometime on or after March 23, correct?
A. The only thing I can recall is what I've already mentioned in terms of the due diligence that we did on those financial results.
Q. Let's go back through it. And I'll stay here as long as it takes.
You didn't get any updated sales

Page 562

Tyree
numbers from Sunbeam on March 19 at the printer, did you?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Do you think you did?
A. I said, "I don't recall."
Q. And I'm only asking what you can recall.
You do recall a bring-down due diligence call with Russ Kersh sometime after March 19, correct?
A. And a bring-down due diligence call at the printer, yes.
Q. No. That's March 19, sir.
A. I know.
Q. I already talked about March 19. I'm trying to move beyond March 19.
On March 19 you didn't get any updated sales information from Sunbeam management that you can recall, correct?
A. I can't recall whether I got updated sales information or not on the 19th.
Q. Then the answer to my question is no, I can't recall that?
A. No. The answer to your question is what I just said.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Somebody else will determine the reasonableness of your approach here, Mr. Tyree.
A. Okay.
Q. I'm getting tired of it after two days.
MR. CLARE: Objection.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. After the meeting at the printer, other than the bring-down due diligence call with Russ Kersh sometime after March 23, do you recall personally getting any updated sales information relating to Sunbeam from Sunbeam management?
A. I don't have a recollection as to whether or not we did receive updated financial reports from Sunbeam post that period.
Q. The only time you can recall, as you sit here today, getting any updated information from Sunbeam relating to its sales results after the briefing on March 18 is the bring-down due diligence call with Russ Kersh, correct?
A. I've answered the question.
Q. I'm entitled to a yes-or-no answer to my question, sir.

Tyree
MR. CLARE: You're entitled to the witness' answer. You are not entitled to get it in the form that you want it.
A. I've answered the question the way I'm comfortable.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. "I'm answering the question" is not an answer to the question. I'm entitled to an answer to that question other than "go read the transcript," all right?
A. I've answered the question the way I'm comfortable.
Q. Other than the bring-down due diligence call with Russ Kersh on March 23 or after, you can recall no other occasion after March 18 where you got updated sales information from Sunbeam, correct?
If you do, I want to inquire into it.
Can you recall any such occasion?
A. I've already answer this question.
Q. I'm entitled to know whether or not there is something else that you recall where after March 18, other than the bring-down due diligence call with Russ Kersh, where you got updated sales information from Sunbeam as part of the discovery I'm taking in the case, okay?

Tyree
A. I understand.
Q. So I want an answer to that question.
A. What I'm comfortable answering to you is after the 18th, I don't recall one way or the another whether we received additional specific numerical, quantitative data in terms of the progress that Sunbeam had made towards the targets that they laid out on the 18th.
Q. So other than March 23 or after, when you spoke to Mr. Kersh, you have no recollection of receiving such information, correct?
A. I think I've answered the question.
Q. Do you recall that shortly after the end of Sunbeam's first quarter, Sunbeam issued a press release in which it said it would not accomplish the results that were described in the March 19 press release?
A. I have a vague recollection of that.
Q. Do you recall that you got a draft of that before this was issued to the public?
A. I may have. I just don't recall.

A. I recall seeing a fax from Sunbeam that had a press release on it sent to me back in the late '90s, not dissimilar to this one.

Q. Did that announce that Sunbeam had failed to exceed its first quarter 1997 sales and the first quarter of 1998?

A. Something similar to that.

Q. What do you recall doing after -- well, let me ask an initial question.

What was your reaction when you read that fax when you received it?

A. I don't remember exactly what my reaction was.

Q. Did you -- were you disturbed by it?

A. I didn't expect it.

Q. It was a surprise to you. Is that your testimony?

A. I guess it was a surprise to me at the time. Again, I don't really remember it that well.

Q. But do you recall whether you were disturbed by it in addition to being surprised?

A. I don't remember one way or the other.

Tyree

Q. I assume it wasn't good news, right?

A. My recollection was that, no, I wouldn't characterize it as good news.

Q. Did you consider it to be bad news?

A. Again, I just don't recall exactly what my reaction was at the time.

Q. Well, as you sit here today, do you think this was a bad piece of information that Sunbeam was announcing?

A. As I sit here today and I look at this press release, my reaction is it is what it is. It indicates they're revising what their previous thought had been to the market.

Q. But you don't recall when you saw it back in April of 1998 that you viewed this as unfavorable information?

A. I just don't remember how I reacted at the time.

Q. Do you remember having any discussions with anyone at Morgan Stanley relating to the press release?

A. The only discussion that I recall having, and I may very well have had others, was having a discussion with Andy Savarie about it.

Tyree

Q. When was that?

A. I can't recall exactly. It was some point after I saw the press release.

Q. Was it close in time to when you received that?

A. It could have been. I just don't remember.

Q. Was it approximately the time when you received it, or was it months later?

A. I don't think it was months later. I think it was generally around that time.

Q. What do you recall about your conversation with Mr. Savarie?

A. Oh, just that I had received this and that he had seen it. And I don't really recall anything more than that, just discussing it.

Q. Did he have a view about the press release?

A. I don't remember what his view was.

Q. What thoughts did he express?

A. I don't recall if he expressed anything more than probably surprise, similar to my own.

Q. Did he indicate he found the announcement disturbing?

Tyree

A. I don't remember him indicating that to me.

Q. Did he share with you anything concerning Mr. Strong's reaction to the press release?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Do you know what Mr. Strong's reaction to the press release was?

A. No.

Q. Other than the conversation you had with Mr. Savarie, do you recall any other discussion at Morgan Stanley relating to Sunbeam's failure to exceed in the first quarter of 1998 its first quarter 1997 sales?

A. At the time of this press release? I don't recall having other discussions about what you just described at or around the time of this press release.

Q. Let me direct your attention to the first paragraph on the second page of Exhibit 36.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you see that? Read to yourself the last sentence.

A. I apologize. The first or second paragraph?
Q. First paragraph, the last sentence. It begins with the words "due to."
A. Yes. Uh-huh.
Q. That sentence advises that Sunbeam is going to show a loss for the first quarter of 1998, correct?
A. That's what it says.
Q. The March 19 press release didn't address the question of Sunbeam's expected earnings for the first quarter.
Do you recall that?
A. I can't recall exactly what was in that press release.
Q. Let me show it to you.
MR. CLARE: I think it's Exhibit 14.
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Let me show you a copy of CPH Exhibit 14, the March 19 press release.
Is there anything in that press release that advises that Sunbeam may show a loss for the first quarter?

Page 572

Tyree
A. No, not in this press release.
Q. In connection with your due diligence relating to Sunbeam's performance in the first quarter of 1998, did you make any inquiry of management relating to management's expectations with respect to first quarter earnings?
A. I don't recall if I discussed that with them or not.
Q. You did make inquire relating to the company's expectations concerning first quarter sales, correct?
A. Well, my recollection was we had an extensive dialogue surrounding the company's -- the entire income statement. I just don't have a specific recollection of asking, you know, what you just described. I wouldn't be surprised if we did have that discussion with management.
Q. On March 18th, do you remember any discussion of Sunbeam earnings?
A. Oh, I'm sorry. On the 18th? On the 18th, I can't recall if we discussed earnings with them or not. Previously, I was talking about the earlier due diligence --
Q. Subsequent to that, in connection

Page 573

Tyree
with the bring-down due diligence, do you remember inquiring of Sunbeam management where the company expected to conclude the quarter with respect to --
A. Earnings?
Q. -- earnings?
A. I remember talking about earnings for the year, and I believe we talked about earnings for the quarter. I remember specifically talking about earnings for the year. And I believe we talked about the quarter as well.
Q. Do you know what the street's expectations were in March of 1998 for Sunbeam's earnings for the quarter?
A. Off the top of my head, no.
Q. Would it refresh your recollection that the street was expecting Sunbeam to earn a profit of something in excess of 25 cents per share?
A. Are you asking if that triggers my memory?
Q. Right.
A. Honestly, not really, it doesn't.
Q. During the bring-down due diligence

Page 574

Tyree
call that you had with Mr. Kersh on or after March 23, did Mr. Kersh advise you that Sunbeam expected to book a loss for the quarter?
A. I don't recollect that, no.
Q. Were you surprised to see the statement in the press release that Sunbeam was going to incur a loss for the first quarter of 1998?
A. In this press release?
Q. Uh-huh.
A. Again, I reiterate, I was somewhat surprised with this press release as a general matter. That's what I remember.
Q. I'm focusing on the earnings matter.
A. Yeah. I just don't remember what my reaction was to individual parts of the press release.
Q. Do you recall when you read the April 3 press release, Exhibit 36, that you felt as though Sunbeam management had misled you with respect to the earnings for the company for the first quarter of '98?
A. Again, my recollection was just being surprised by the press release. I don't recall anything more specific than that.

Q. You don't recall any particular reaction to the information contained in the press release relating to earnings for the first quarter?

Mr. Tyree, let me show you what we've marked as CPH Exhibit 37. It's two-page document entitled "Itinerary John Tyree" bearing Morgan Stanley Bates number 0045317 to '318.
A. Yes.
Q. You testified previously that you recall attending one set of meetings at Sunbeam headquarters in Florida, correct?

Tyree
A. That's correct.
Q. Does this document appear to reflect the itinerary for that trip?
A. It could be. Although I just don't remember the exact dates.
(CPH Exhibit 38, receipts and expense reports, marked for identification, as of this date.)
BY MR. MARKOWSKI:
Q. Mr. Tyree, I have a limited number of questions related to Exhibit 38. So I'm not going to ask you to look at the whole thing.
But do you recognize in general the documents that comprise Exhibit 38? It bears Bates number Morgan Stanley confidential 41766 through 41858.
A. Again, I have not read through it all, but they appear to be receipts and expense reports.
Q. For you, correct?
A. They appear to be, yes.
Q. Relating to work that you performed in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?

Tyree
A. Again, having not gone through the whole thing, the dates here imply that some of these expenses were incurred in the context of the Sunbeam transactions.
Q. Let me direct your attention to a page that has -- well, I'm going to refer to a different set of Bates numbers on this. The document also bears the Bates number confidential Morgan Stanley 05062 through 05123, at least through the first portion of the document. And I want to direct your attention to the page that's labeled 05091.
A. Mine seems to be in an odd order. Sorry. 05091. Just give me a second.
Q. Right. Here we go. Got it?
A. Here we go. Got it.
Q. It's a page entitled "Expense Report Detail."
Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recognize the handwriting on this page?
A. No, I do not.

Tyree
Q. That's not your handwriting?
A. It doesn't appear to be, no.
Q. Maybe you can interpret the handwriting a little bit better than I can. Date of departure. Can you tell me what that number is?
A. It looks like March 4th.
Q. The date of return is March 5, 1998?
A. That's what it says, yes.
Q. Cities visited, Palm Beam, correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. Does this appear to be the expense report that relates to the itinerary we have in CPH Exhibit 37?
A. It certainly could be. It looks that way.
Q. Do you see the entry at the bottom relating to miscellaneous details?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you read the text set forth there out loud.
A. "In order to attend a morning meeting in Palm Beach, Florida, due to a last minute decision by client, John Tyree was unable to leave the office and get a change of clothing. He had to rush to the airport to catch his flight. He bought shirt, T-shirt, socks. See attached receipt $90."

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Tyree

Q. Does this bring back a memory of rushing from the office without a change of clothing for an overnight trip to Palm Beach in connection with the Sunbeam work you were doing?

A. No.

Q. So you don't recall that happening, having to buy clothes and charge expenses to the client while you were down in Palm Beach in connection with the trip to Florida that you've testified about?

A. I don't recall it happening. But this sort of thing has happened to me before, so it certainly could have.

Q. Can you recall why you were suddenly required to travel to Florida for the meeting on March 5?

Do you recall something about a change of plans or the meeting coming up at the last minute that caused you to have to leave unexpectedly?

Tyree

A. No. But I would make the point that sometimes it's not the meeting that drives the situation that you're going to. Sometimes it's the meeting you came from. And that runs over, and you don't have time to go home. So there could be a whole number of reasons as to why this happened.

Q. But you don't recall there being something unusual with respect to the scheduling of the meeting down in Florida that caused you to leave unexpectedly for it?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Now, your itinerary, CPH Exhibit 37 --

A. Yes.

Q. -- first line indicates, "John will meet Andy Savarie on Thursday morning."

Do you remember meeting Andy Savarie in Florida in connection with this visit to Sunbeam's headquarters on March 4 and 5?

A. You know, I may have. I just don't remember it exactly.

Q. Do you remember meeting additional Morgan Stanley team members once you arrived at

Tyree

Sunbeam?

A. I'm fairly confident that there were other Morgan Stanley team members both there and on the phone, although I can't recall exactly who was there versus was on the phone.

Q. This lists here on the third line MS team members Bram Smith, Seth Eischun (phonetic), Thomas Bertschom (phonetic), Michael Hart.

Does that refresh your memory that those four gentlemen were present at the meeting at Sunbeam on March 4 and 5?

A. I don't recall all of them being present. And I have a vague recollection that they all may not have attended. Some may have been on by conference call.

Q. The contact person on the itinerary is Debra McDonald.

Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection that Debra Donald is one of the people that you met with from Sunbeam when you traveled to Florida on March 4 and 5?

A. It really does not.

MR. MARKOWSKI: I'm going to adjourn the deposition at this point for today for reasons that I don't want to put on the record. I have to make sure I catch my flight back to Chicago tonight. My position is that the deposition is not concluded. And I have additional questions I'd like to put to Mr. Tyree at a future date. And we're prepared to discuss the scheduling of the continuation of Mr. Tyree's deposition with counsel for Morgan Stanley.

MR. CLARE: My position is, as previously described in correspondence with counsel for Coleman parent, that you had a more than adequate opportunity to examine Mr. Tyree for two full days of deposition testimony, including this trip, for which Mr. Tyree made a special trip back from the United Kingdom to testify.

We will deal with this at another time. You're free to take whatever position you want, and we can deal with it off the record. I do have, based on the two days of questioning, some very short questions for

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

16div-021025

Tyree

Mr. Tyree which I'd like to ask now before we conclude for the day consistent with our position that the deposition is concluded.

EXAMINATION BY MR. CLARE:

Q. Mr. Tyree, within the last year, do you recall being asked to search for and turn over materials related to any work that you had done in connection with Sunbeam?

A. Not that I recall in the last year.

Q. Do you recall ever being asked to search for materials in your possession related to work that you had done for Sunbeam?

A. Yes. I recall there was a time when we were asked to provide to -- I think it was the legal department of Morgan Stanley basically all of our documents involved in this transaction. Yes, I'm sure it was. As a matter of fact, I'm sure that happened.

Q. Do you have a recollection of the time period in which you were asked?

A. It happened at least once. And my recollection was it was a couple of years ago. I just can't remember exactly the date.

Tyree

Q. Did the request include that you search the electronic as well as hard copy documents?

A. I believe that it did.

Q. Did you comply with that request?

A. Yes. I believe that I did.

Q. Did you search documents both electronic and hard copy in your possession in all places where they would reasonably likely to be?

MR. MARKOWSKI: Object to the form of the question. It's leading.

A. As I recall, I conducted a comprehensive search in terms of my computer and hard copy files, that sort of thing.

BY MR. CLARE:

Q. Do you have any reason to believe that there are electronic documents, whether emails or other electronic documents on your computer now, that have not been previously searched for Sunbeam-related documents?

A. No. In particular, given the fact that my computer is new, our software system is new, I moved to London, I probably switched computers three to four times since this transaction took place.

Q. Since 1998?

A. That's right.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Markowski asked you a series of questions about the March 18 telephone conference calls?

A. Yes.

Q. And I'm not going to go through that in any great detail, but I did have one question relating to a statement that you attributed to Mr. Kersh or Mr. Dunlap. I believe you testified that Mr. Kersh or Mr. Dunlap stated on that call that the sales force at Sunbeam typically would undershoot.

Do you recall that?

A. I recall saying that, yes, and I recall that discussion.

Q. What did you understand Mr. Kersh or Mr. Dunlap to mean by that?

A. Well, as I recall, they actually spent some time describing it. And what I recall they said was that, for a number of reasons, including the fact that the salespeople are compensated based on these targets, and if you don't achieve those targets, you don't get compensated well, they tend to create what I would call achievable targets. And that has the effect of causing them to understate what the truly achievable revenue or target numbers might be for that given salesman or that given customer.

Tyree

MR. CLARE: That's all I have.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 5:06. This videotaped deposition will be adjourned. This is the end of tape number four.

Services.

Will counsel please introduce themselves.

MR. JOHNSON: Yes, Clark Johnson and Susan Prysak, Jenner & Block, Chicago, for plaintiff Coleman Parent Holdings and defendants in the senior funding case.

MS. BROWN: Zhonette Brown, Kirkland & Ellis on behalf of Morgan Stanley and the witness.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Will the court reporter please swear in the witness.

LILY RAFII, called as a witness, having been duly sworn by a Notary Public, was examined and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION BY
MR. JOHNSON:

Q. Good morning, Ms. Rafii.

A. Good morning.

Q. I introduced myself as Clark Johnson this morning.

Would you be kind enough to state your name for the record.

Page 7

A. Yes. Lily Rafii.

Q. Where do you reside, Ms. Rafii?

A. I currently reside at 57th Street, 146 West 57th Street in New York.

Q. How long have you been at that address?

A. I've been at that address for the last five years.

Q. Did you live in Manhattan prior to that time?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. How long have you lived in New York?

A. For about seven years.

Q. Have you ever given a deposition before?

A. No, I haven't.

Q. Well, as you can see, we have a court reporter here who is taking down what everyone says. As a result, you need to give answers to my questions orally or verbally so that she can take down the dialog.

If you don't understand any of my questions at any time, just let me know, and I'll try and rephrase them.

A. OK.

Q. And if you want to take a break for any reason, let me know that, and we can do that.

A. OK.

Q. Have you testified in any kind of a proceeding before?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Have you ever given an affidavit in connection with any type of legal proceeding?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Do you understand the oath that you just took to testify truthfully is the same oath that you'd give in a court of law?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Are you represented by counsel today?

A. I'm represented by Kirkland & Ellis, Zhonette Brown.

Q. How did it come about that you would be represented by Kirkland & Ellis?

A. I, actually, probably a month ago or so I got a call from Kirkland & Ellis in conjunction with Morgan Stanley.

Rafii

Q. Who was on that telephone call?

A. I spoke with Tom Clare.

Q. Was anyone else on the phone?

A. No. About a week ago was the first time I spoke to Zhonette.

Q. Have you spoken with any in-house lawyers at Morgan Stanley?

A. Very briefly on one of the first calls just to --

MS. BROWN: I don't. That's sufficient.

Q. That's one of the calls with Tom Clare?

A. Actually, I got a call from an in-house lawyer who directed me to Tom Clare.

Q. What was the name of that in-house lawyer?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Is that the only conversation you've had with an in-house lawyer at Morgan Stanley?

A. Yes. It was an introductory call.

Rafii

Q. Have you met with Tom Clare in person at any time?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Have you met with any lawyers from Kirkland & Ellis in person other than Ms. Brown?

A. No, I have not.

Q. When was the first time you met Ms. Brown in person?

A. Yesterday.

Q. You had spoken to her on the phone prior to that, I assume?

A. Yes, briefly.

Q. To make arrangements to meet?

A. Yes.

Q. Did anyone ever ask you for any documents you might have relating to Sunbeam in connection with the deposition that you're giving today?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any materials relating to Sunbeam?

A. No.

Q. When was the first time anyone ever asked you for materials relating to Sunbeam?

Rafii

A. Just, again, probably a week ago.

Q. So in March?

A. Yes.

Q. Of 2004?

A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. What are the arrangements for Kirkland & Ellis representing you here today?

A. Can you please clarify?

Q. Sure. Who's paying for your representation?

A. I believe it's Morgan Stanley.

Q. Other than meeting with Ms. Brown yesterday, what have you done to prepare for the deposition today?

A. Really nothing.

Q. How long was your meeting with Ms. Brown yesterday?

A. Several hours.

Q. More than half a day?

A. Several hours. Probably about half a day. Excuse me.

Q. Did anyone attend the meeting besides you and Ms. Brown?

Rafii

A. No.

Q. Did you look at any documents that refreshed your memory about events relating to Sunbeam?

A. Yes, because I hadn't seen any documents before that.

Q. So your memory was refreshed by some of those documents?

A. A little bit.

Again, it was such a long time ago that.

Q. Do you remember any documents that helped you remember some of the events in the past?

A. It refreshed my memory to a limited extent.

Q. Which documents refreshed your memory?

A. Just mostly the presentation things that I had contributed to.

Q. Anything else?

A. An itinerary.

Q. An itinerary for a trip to Florida?

A. Yes.

There was a -- yeah.
Q. Anything else?
A. There was a chronology of events that I just didn't look over at length but.
Q. Had you ever seen that chronology of events before?
A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. Do you know who prepared that chronology that you looked at?
A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. Do you have any idea who did?
A. I can't say specifically.
Q. Do you have a general idea of who did it?
A. I really don't. There was so many people on the deal team that.
Q. It could have been any of them?
A. It could have.
Q. Are you still in contact with anyone from your days at Morgan Stanley?
A. No.
Q. When did you leave Morgan Stanley?
A. I left in 2000.
Q. What point in 2000 did you leave?

Rafii

A. In July of 2000, towards the end of July.
Q. Do you know whose given testimony in this lawsuit so far?
A. I'm not sure exactly.
Q. Do you have an idea of anyone whose given testimony?
A. Not specifically. I've heard that a couple of people have. I don't know specifically who has and who hasn't.
Q. Do you know who from Morgan Stanley has?
A. I've heard -- I don't know specifically. I've heard that some of the top-level people have so.
Q. Who in your mind are the top-level people?
A. On this deal specifically, the M.D.s on the deal were Jim Stynes and Bob Kitts.
Q. Do you know the gist of what their testimony has been?
A. No.
Q. Do you know what they've said about any topic so far?

Rafii

A. No, not at all.
Q. Do you know what they said about your involvement in the transaction?
A. Not at all.
Q. Have you discussed the fact that you're giving this deposition with anyone other than your counsel?
A. No. I mean, in passing to my sister, who I live with, but just close relatives.
Q. When did you first hear that there was litigation relating to Sunbeam?
A. Again, probably about a month ago.
Q. When you were at Morgan Stanley did you ever hear that there were lawsuits relating to the acquisitions that you'd worked on?
A. No, I didn't.
Q. While you were at Morgan Stanley no one asked you to preserve any materials you had relating to Sunbeam?
A. No.
Q. Do you know what happened to the materials that you had relating to the Sunbeam engagement after you were done with the engagement?

Rafii

A. No, I don't.
Q. Did you use e-mail while you worked at Morgan Stanley?
A. To a limited extent. Definitely not like we use it today. I don't think it was our main form of communication at that time.
Q. Do you know what your e-mail address was?
A. It changed a couple times at Morgan Stanley. When I left it was LilyRafii@, I think at MSDW.com. I don't think it originally was that. I can't recall. We didn't use it like we do today.
Q. What do you mean by that? You just used it less frequently?
A. Less frequently.
Q. Did you have a laptop computer while you worked at Morgan Stanley?
A. No, not my own.
Q. Did you have one you could basically loan out?

A. From what I recall there wasn't that many and it was a difficult process to actually garner one for use. I think there was a couple for the M&A department that they actually lent out sometimes.
Q. That's a little surprising.
A. Yeah. I think it's a different territory today.
Q. Well, we're talking about 1998. Hardly the stone age.
MS. BROWN: Is there a question pending?
MR. JOHNSON: Sure.
A. I was actually --
MS. BROWN: What's the question?
MR. JOHNSON: Well, she obviously knows. She's answering.
A. There wasn't many. No one had their individual laptops and it was only for trip purposes that you could actually reserve one so.
Q. You mentioned looking at an itinerary.

Page 18

Rafii

Did you take a laptop with you to Florida to visit Sunbeam?
A. I don't remember doing so.
Q. So the first time you heard about any litigation relating to the Sunbeam acquisitions was within the past month?
A. Yes. Directly, yes. In the -- probably through like newspaper articles I had, you know, caught a glimpse of something but I can't recall specifically.
Q. So you may have seen something in say the Wall Street Journal indicating that there was litigation?
A. Perhaps.
Q. When you say the first direct contact or knowledge you had about the litigation was the call within the past month.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Did you have an e-mail account with Bloomberg?
A. I don't remember.
Q. You may have?
A. I don't think it was an e-mail account.

Q. What kind of --
A. There may have been like a Bloomberg password to access information, but I don't recall specifically. I don't remember having an e-mail account with Bloomberg.
Q. Did you use Bloomberg for any type of messaging with other people?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. You have a college degree, I assume.
A. Yes, I do.
Q. When did you receive that?
A. In 1997.
Q. From what institution?
A. Georgetown University.
Q. What was your degree?
A. A B -- bachelors from the School of Foreign Service.
THE WITNESS: I'm sorry. Do you mind if I just refill my glass of water?
MR. JOHNSON: That's fine.

Page 20

Rafii

THE WITNESS: Would anyone like anything?
MS. BROWN: No, thank you.
MR. JOHNSON: Quite all right.
Q. Do you have any graduate education?
A. No, I don't.
Q. So after you finished Georgetown in 1997 that was the end of your schooling?
A. Yes, it was the end of my schooling.
Q. Did you go to work immediately at Morgan Stanley after graduating?
A. Yes, I did, about a month to six weeks after I graduated.
Q. A little vacation perhaps in between graduating and starting?
A. I don't remember much of a vacation. I think it was more of trying to find a place in New York.
Q. How did you decide to start working at Morgan Stanley with a foreign service degree?
A. My major was actually international economics, finance and commerce, and the investment banks recruited heavily at Morgan Stanley, so I interviewed with many investment banks.

Q. Why did you pick Morgan Stanley?

A. For a number of reasons, primarily its reputation and I really enjoyed the people that I met.

Q. While you were in college did you have any jobs?

A. Sorry?

Q. Summer internships, things of that sort?

A. Uh-huh, I did. I had internships at a few banking corporations, mostly private banking though. And I worked at CNN Financial News while I was at school.

Q. Did you go straight from high school into Georgetown or did you work between high school and undergraduate?

A. No, I went straight to Georgetown after high school.

Q. Obviously, we're going to spend a lot of time talking about your work at Morgan

Rafii

Stanley today, but lets fast forward to what you've been doing since you left Morgan Stanley.

A. OK.

Q. I think you said you left in late July of 2000?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What did you do when you left Morgan Stanley?

A. I -- right after I left Morgan Stanley I was consulting and writing business plans for small companies, and during that time I started my own company which I've been involved in ever since.

Q. Other than consulting and running your own business, have you done any work of any kind professionally since July of 2000?

A. Can you clarify in light of what I said?

Q. Sure.

I'm just trying to understand whether you've done any work other than consulting and running your own business since July of 2000.

Rafii

A. No. That's about it.

Q. Can you tell me any entities you've provided consulting to.

MS. BROWN: Objection. I don't know what relevance this has.

MR. JOHNSON: You can answer the question.

A. One was a company called Loco Beverages. They were trying to launch a soft drink. Another company was called Aphora that worked -- basically it was trying to do rapid HIV testing devices and mad cow, develop a mad cow testing device and then, again, I started my own business.

Q. What kind of business did you start?

A. It's a handbag company, so the design, manufacturing, marketing of handbags.

Q. Do you have a title in your company?

A. Uh-huh. I'm co-president.

Q. Who's the other co-president?

A. My partner. Her name is Sulaika Zarrouk.

Rafii

Q. Maybe you could spell that for the court reporter.

A. S-u-l-a-i-k-a Z-a-r-r-o-u-k.

Q. Is your partner someone you met at Morgan Stanley?

A. No.

Q. What is the name of your company?

A. Felix Rey, LLC. F-e-l-i-x R-e-y.

Q. Van Gogh's physician?

A. Yes, exactly. Not many people know that.

Q. I guess Van Gogh's physician is not as good a name as Felix Rey.

A. Yeah.

Q. Why did you decide to leave Morgan Stanley?

A. I had really wanted to start my own business.

Q. Any other reason?

A. To just, again, part of that is doing something more creative than what I had done, and the analyst training program typically ends after two or three years so.

Q. So it would have been a transitional point in your career anyway?

A. Yes.
Q. Did the Sunbeam engagement have any role in your deciding to leave Morgan Stanley?
A. No.
Q. Did the Sunbeam engagement leave a bad taste in your mouth in any way?
A. No.
Q. The hours were reasonable and the demands were acceptable?
A. For the job at that time it was fairly normal.
Q. Was there any suggestion that your future at Morgan Stanley was anything other than bright?
A. No.
Q. What was your pay at Morgan Stanley, your base pay in say '98 and '99?
A. That's such a long time ago. I don't remember a specific number. I mean, maybe within the 50, 60,000 ballpark. I don't remember specifically.
Q. How about bonuses, do you remember

Rafii

what bonuses you received at Morgan Stanley?
A. Which year are you?
Q. Lets start with '98.
A. The end of '98?
Q. Correct.
A. I don't remember specifically. Maybe -- I don't know -- 20-to -- 20 maybe to 25.
Q. So something between say 50 percent of your base salary?
A. Approximately.
Q. Do you know what your base salary was when you left Morgan Stanley in 2000?
A. Again, an approximate number is probably 70. 65, 70.
Q. Did you have any titles at Morgan Stanley other than analyst?
A. No.
Q. So you were an analyst from June or July of 1997 until July 2000?
A. That's correct.
Q. What's the next title up the chain, is it associate?
A. Associate.

Rafii

Q. Did you receive favorable evaluations while you were at Morgan Stanley?
A. I think for the most part.
Q. Do you recall any constructive criticisms or other more negative comments about any of your work?
A. That was definitely part of the review process.
Q. What were some of those comments?
A. I remember after my first year it was, one of the comments may have been to the quantitative, need to work on the quantitative skills.
Q. What does that mean?
A. I mean, however you want to interpret it. I don't.
Q. Did you interpret it in any way?
A. Again, the constructive criticism is an integral part of any review so.
Q. Did anyone comment that you were too shy?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Or that you should speak up more often?

Rafii

A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. Did any of your evaluations during your time at Morgan Stanley mention your work for Sunbeam?
A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. You would expect Sunbeam to be mentioned though; is that fair to say?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A. I mean, probably because your teammates are the ones who evaluate you, so I don't know if Sunbeam was specifically reference.
Q. You spent a lot of time on the Sunbeam engagement in '97 and '98; is that fair to say?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. In '97 when I started I did. In '98 I believe I was, I was working on other deals in February of '98, so I didn't spend a lot of time in '98 on Sunbeam.
Q. Did you prepare any type of a self-evaluation at Morgan Stanley?
A. That was part of the review process.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Did you mention your work on the Sunbeam engagement in any way in your self-evaluation?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Was the Sunbeam engagement a successful one for Morgan Stanley?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. I can't speak for Morgan Stanley.
Q. Go ahead, I'm sorry.
A. No. I can't speak for Morgan -- what does that mean, successful?
Q. Well, I'm just asking whether in your view Morgan Stanley was pleased with the way the Sunbeam engagement turned out.
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Again, I don't know. I was a junior member of the deal team. I don't know what Morgan Stanley's perception of the deal was.
Q. Well, lets start with you personally then.
Were you happy with the way the Sunbeam engagement turned out?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

Time frame.
A. Again, I don't -- if you're asking if I was happy with my work, then I say yes.
Q. You thought you did a good job on the engagement?
A. Yes. I mean, we all worked very hard and did the best that we could so.
Q. Did you ever hear any internal discussions at Morgan Stanley where anyone voiced their own views as to the success of the engagement?
MS. BROWN: Again, vague.
A. No.
Q. You don't view the Sunbeam engagement as a professional embarrassment for you in any way?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. No.
Q. Did you ever hear anyone at Morgan Stanley voice the view that the Sunbeam engagement was an embarrassment for Morgan Stanley?
A. No.
Q. Do you have the view with the benefit of hindsight that Morgan Stanley should have done something differently in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. No.
Q. Did you ever hear anyone at Morgan Stanley articulate the view that Morgan Stanley should have done something differently in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Asked and answered.
A. No, not -- no. Not that I recall.
Q. Do you know what fees Morgan Stanley earned in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
A. No.
Q. Did you understand that Morgan Stanley would not earn any fees unless some sort of transaction were consummated?
A. No.
Q. Can you describe how you were first assigned into an analyst job at Morgan Stanley.

A. Can you clarify?
Is it my role on the deal or?
Q. I guess that's what I'm trying to understand. Let me see if I can clarify.
You accepted a job at Morgan Stanley and you showed up for work --
A. Yes.
Q. -- and you were given a desk of some sort.
A. We had training for, I believe it was four-to-five weeks, maybe a little longer and then after training each analyst is assigned to a specific deal.
Q. Was the Sunbeam deal the first deal that you were assigned to?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. So you were assigned to that sometime in July of 1997?
A. No, it was in -- I believe I started in August. I was in training in July.
Q. How did you learn that you would be assigned to the Sunbeam engagement?
A. I don't remember specifically.

There are staffers that assign you deals.
Q. What did you understand the engagement to involve when you were first assigned to it?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Yeah.
Again, I don't remember specifically. I don't remember specifically.
Q. Who else from Morgan Stanley was on the team when you were first assigned to it?
A. There was Bob Kitts, who was a managing director; Jim Stynes, who was also a managing director; Alex Fuchs, who was either a senior associate or a vice president, I don't recall exactly. Gene Yoo was an associate and Tyrone Chang was another analyst on the deal. So it was a fairly large deal team. This was within M&A so.
Q. And you presented those people kind of in the order of seniority as well, I think.
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Did you record your time in any way in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?

Page 34

Rafii

A. Yes.
Q. Tell me how that process worked.
A. Basically we had time sheets, I believe it was weekly, and you basically write the deal that you've been working on and how many hours you've spent on it during the week or two weeks, I don't remember specifically.
Q. Would you be surprised if the time sheets showed time entries for you in July of 1997?
A. I would be surprised because I thought I was in training during that time.
Q. What was the purpose of, to the best of your knowledge, the purpose of writing down time spent on certain transactions?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. To keep track of what projects you're working on for the staffer to know how much time you're working on what deal for the most part.
Q. Was it a fairly informal or lax process?

Page 35

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Not that I remember.
Q. Would you be surprised if, for example, Mr. Fuchs billed zero hours to the Sunbeam engagement in 1997?
A. I don't know.
MR. JOHNSON: Lets look at the '97 hours.
I'm going to mark a document as Exhibit 162 or 3. This will be CPH 163.
Do you have stickers I could borrow?
(CPH Exhibit 163, Morgan Stanley Confidential 0080427 through 30, marked for identification, as of this date.)
Q. Here's your very own copy, Ms. Rafii.
A. Thank you. Thanks.
Q. I've given you a document we've marked as CPH Exhibit 163.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Which has the Bates stamp Morgan Stanley Confidential 0080427 through 30, and

Page 36

Rafii

if you just take a minute to look through that, I'd appreciate it.
Ms. Rafii, have you ever seen a document like this before?
A. Not before -- before yesterday.
Q. So you looked at this yesterday?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Doesn't this show on the third page of the Exhibit which has the ending Bates numbers 429 that you billed 96 hours to the Project Laser in July of 1997?
A. Yes, it does show that.
Q. Do you think that's an error?
A. I'm not sure. That may -- I don't recall again specifically. There could be a possibility that I started at the end of July, but while being in training at the same time so.
Q. Do you know why Mr. Fuchs' name is not on this hour sheet?
A. No.
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. No, I don't, but this doesn't -- from what I recall these other people aren't -- weren't necessarily on the deal so.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. I was just about to ask about some of them.
A. Yeah.
Q. Andreas Boquist, for example, do you know what he was doing on Project Laser?
A. No, I don't.
Q. You understand that Project Laser is the code name for the Sunbeam engagement?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. How about Robert Lee?
A. No, I don't remember him.
Q. Is Mr. Lee or Mr. Boquist even a familiar name to you?
A. Mr. Boquist is a familiar name. Mr. Lee isn't.
Q. How about Mr. Hui or Hui, H-u-i?
A. His name is familiar but not in conjunction with Sunbeam.
Q. Well, if I understand Exhibit 163 it shows that you had the greatest number of hours in fiscal 1997 devoted to Project Laser; is that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

Page 38

Rafii

The document speaks for itself. To the extent he's asking beyond that, I object on foundation.
A. From what I see here that's what it looks like.
Q. Is that surprising to you?
A. Not very surprising.
Q. You were working pretty hard on the engagement.
A. Yes, I was.
And I was the most junior person on that team so typically --
Q. Work flows downhill?
Who was your primary contact within Morgan Stanley on the Sunbeam engagement when you first got involved?
A. Just by nature of my role it -- I would have to say it was Tyrone Chang who was the other analyst. I mean, again, I was the most junior member so it's not like the M.D.s would come and report to me so.
Q. You didn't keep Mr. Kitts up to date on a --
A. No.

Page 39

Rafii

Q. -- on a daily basis?
A. No, I didn't. No.
I would say Tyrone and then Gene Yoo.
Q. Did you understand that Bill Strong from Morgan Stanley Chicago was also on the Sunbeam team?
A. Yes, I remember vaguely.
Q. Did you ever have any telephone calls or meetings with Mr. Strong about Sunbeam?
A. I don't remember and it wouldn't have been me directly.
Q. How about Andrew Sevari, does that name ring a bell?
A. I don't remember.
Q. What were your duties and responsibilities as you understood them when you were assigned to the Sunbeam engagement?
A. During the course of the Sunbeam or as the inception of the deal?
Q. Lets take it from the day you were assigned through the time you were finished working on Sunbeam.

Page 40

Rafii

A. Again, my task primarily as a junior member of the team was mostly gathering public information and a lot of the administrative work in putting the presentations together from an administrative and clerical standpoint. Again, there were so many deal team members that as the junior member of the team you kind of assume those kinds of responsibilities.
Q. Did you gain any understanding as to how Morgan Stanley obtained Sunbeam as a client for the engagement?
A. No.
Q. Did you have any responsibility for preparing any analyses of any types of deals?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Can you clarify. Types of deals?
Q. Sure.
Did you prepare or help prepare any analyses of possible transactions involving Sunbeam?
A. I must have contributed to the analyses.
Q. Did you assist in preparing materials to distribute to third parties who were possible transaction candidates?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. I don't remember specifically.

Q. Were you involved in discussions at Morgan Stanley about strategic options available to Sunbeam?

A. Again, I don't remember the specifics. I may have sat in on, you know, some of the group discussions.

Q. How about due diligence, did you perform any due diligence relating to the Sunbeam engagement and possible transactions?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Due diligence is a very broad term.

Again, I contributed in terms of information gathering, publicly traded, like what I said before, publicly traded company information and such.

Q. Did you do any due diligence other than gathering publicly available information?

A. Due diligence is such a broad term and everything you're doing is kind of due diligence so.

Rafii

Q. So that would be a yes?

A. Part of your role really is due diligence so.

Q. Were you involved in any way in preparing to address market reaction to the transactions that ultimately came to fruition for Sunbeam?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. I don't remember.

Q. What role did you have in connection with the financing of the transactions?

A. I don't remember specifically. Again, as part of my role I don't think I was much exposed to that aspect of it.

Q. What was the overall goal of the Sunbeam engagement?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation and vague.

A. That's a very vague question. Again, as the most junior member of the team I wasn't making strategic decisions per se.

Rafii

Q. Do you know what your client's goal was in retaining Morgan Stanley?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

A. No, not specifically.

Q. Do you have a general idea of what Morgan Stanley was supposed to be doing?

A. Not specifically. I know they were exploring a lot of options so.

Q. Those involved selling Sunbeam to a third party?

A. I don't remember specifically.

Q. That was one of the possible transactions being explored, wasn't it?

A. Again, I don't remember specifically. I remember there was, you know, a lot of different options so.

Q. And selling Sunbeam to a third party was one of the options, wasn't it?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Asked and answered.

A. It could have been.

Q. You just don't remember?

A. No. I mean, logically I can say it could have been.

Rafii

Q. Lets talk about the fourth quarter of 1997.

What percentage of your time was devoted to the Sunbeam engagement?

A. I think I was solely working on the Sunbeam deal in the third quarter of '97. Sorry, the fourth quarter of '97.

Q. How about the first quarter of '98, were you working on any other engagements at that time?

A. Yes, I was.

Q. What was that?

A. I don't remember specifically. I mean, I worked on so many deals since then that it's vague to me now.

Q. You were still spending some of your time on the Sunbeam engagement in the first quarter of 1998?

A. I believe in the very early portion of that I was.

Q. And then it dropped off after that?

A. For me it did. Again, it was a very big deal team so.

Q. Have you ever had any conversations

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Rafii

with Ruth Porat concerning Sunbeam?
A. No. Not that I remember.
Q. How about Michael Heart, have you ever had any conversations with Michael Heart concerning Sunbeam?
A. I don't believe so.
Q. How about Bram Smith, any conversations with him at any time concerning Sunbeam?
A. I don't believe so. Maybe in a conference call in a group setting, but not me specifically.
Q. How about John Tyree, did you ever have any conversations with him concerning Sunbeam?
A. Not me personally.
Q. When you say "not me personally," does that mean --
A. Not me uniquely. I don't think we ever had like a phone conversation directly. Again, it may have been in a group setting or on a conference call or, you know, with various members of the deal team there but.
Q. Do you ever remember anyone at

Rafii

Morgan Stanley soliciting your view concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales?
A. No.
Q. So, for example, Mr. Tyree never asked you your view as to Sunbeam's projection for the first quarter of 1998?
A. Not that I recall.
THE WITNESS: Do you mind if I refill my water again?
MR. JOHNSON: Yeah, that's fine.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
MR. JOHNSON: Sure.
Q. In the fall of 1997 you assisted in preparing materials to give to possible acquirers of Sunbeam; isn't that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Misstates.
A. Again, I contributed to probably the presentations. I don't know specifically if it was for potential acquirers.
MR. JOHNSON: This will be Exhibit 164.
MS. PRYSAK: 165.
MR. JOHNSON: No, the first one was 163.

Rafii

(CPH Exhibit 164, Morgan Stanley Confidential 0045133 through 139, marked for identification, as of this date.)
Q. Ms. Rafii, I've given you what we've marked as CPH Exhibit 164 which bears Bates stamp Morgan Stanley Confidential 0045133 through 139.
Does this document look familiar to you?
A. This type of document looks familiar. Not this one specifically.
Q. Does this appear to be an assessment of a possible transaction between Sunbeam and Whirlpool?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. Not -- I mean, not necessarily. It doesn't necessarily have to be that. It can be an exploratory kind of document.
Q. Well, exploratory specifically as to Sunbeam and Whirlpool?
A. Well, yes, because it says Whirlpool so.

Rafii

Q. Did you assist in preparing this document?
A. I don't recall specifically. I may have done, again, I gathered publicly available information on a number of companies, so Whirlpool could have been one of them.
Again, I don't remember specifically.
Q. Do you remember any of the other companies like Whirlpool who were looked at as possible candidates for a transaction with Sunbeam?
A. Off the top of my head, again, I don't know if it's specific to a combination with Sunbeam or a transaction with Sunbeam, but in terms of comparable companies, I remember Black & Decker, Rubbermaid, for instance. Gathering information on Coleman, obviously, First Stewarts signature brands, Newell.
Q. Did you assist in preparing materials to distribute to third parties relating to each of those possible or any of those possible combinations?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Rafii

A. I don't remember specifically. Again, I -- we acquired -- I acquired publicly available information on a lot of these companies so not one stands out over any other and I don't recall specifically how it was distributed or to who it was distributed to.
Q. With respect to this Whirlpool then you don't recall whether you were involved in preparing what's been marked as Exhibit 164?
MS. BROWN: Asked and answered.
A. Yeah. I mean, specifically, again, I don't remember.
MR. JOHNSON: Lets mark this one as Exhibit 165.
(CPH Exhibit 165, Version of CPH Exhibit 164 with metadata exposed, marked for identification, as of this date.)
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
Q. I've given you what we've marked as CPH Exhibit 165, which I will represent for the record is a version of CPH Exhibit

Rafii

164 with the metadata on the document exposed and appearing at the first two pages of Exhibit 165.
Are you familiar with the term "metadata," Ms. Rafii?
A. No.
Q. Did you discuss metadata with counsel yesterday?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
I'm going to instruct her not to answer that.
Q. Do you see on the first page of Exhibit 165 it reflects under the bold heading built in document properties author: R-a-f-i-i-L-i. That signifies you, doesn't it?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Excuse me. Is someone buzzing or vibrating?
THE WITNESS: It may be me.
MS. BROWN: Lets go off the record.
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 10:39 and we are off the record.

Rafii

(Discussion off the record.)
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 10:46 and we are back on the record.
Q. Did you have a user name for computer purposes at Morgan Stanley?
A. I'm sure I did. I must have.
Q. Wasn't it R-a-f-i-i-L-i?
A. This could have been it, yeah.
Q. Under the next heading on the first page of Exhibit 165 doesn't it signify that you last saved this document on November 6, 1997 at 10:34 p.m.?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. I'm sorry, can you direct where it says that?
Q. Sure.
Under the heading "Document Statistics." Do you see that?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. If you look at several of the criteria there they seem to indicate together that you last saved this document on November 6, 1997 at 10:34 p.m.
Do you see that?

Rafii

A. I do see that. I don't recall whether I specifically did or not. It's, again, hypothetically I could have edited this document or typed it out.
Q. We can go back to Exhibit 164, if we could. The first bullet point provides that, "Sunbeam represents an attractive growth story and investment opportunity for Whirlpool."
What's the basis for that statement?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. In looking at this document it's probably what the bullet points underneath describe it to be.
Q. So you're referring to the three dashes underneath the bullet?
A. Yes.
Q. Was Sunbeam in fact the market share leader in all of the product segments noted in the parenthetical as of November 1997?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. I don't remember.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015187

Rafii

Q. The third bullet point provides, "tremendous intrinsic value in the company."
What's the basis for that statement?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. Again, because I don't recall this document specifically, probably what the dashes attribute it to be.
Q. Lets look at the first dash again that provides, "Growth and profitability that outpace the nearest competitors."
Was that an accurate statement in November 1997?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation and vague.
A. Yeah, I mean, I don't remember specifically.
Q. So it may have been a false statement in November of 1997?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Argumentive. Misstates.
A. No, that's not what I said. I just don't recall the research specifically.
Q. Was there research done by Morgan

Rafii

Stanley to determine whether the statements contained on the first page of Exhibit 164 were accurate?
A. Again, I don't remember specifically but probably.
Q. Why do you say that?
A. Again, data is compiled from a lot of different sources and from my experience, I can't speak for Morgan Stanley, you strive to be thorough and as accurate as possible and, again, derive information from various sources so.
Q. Why does Morgan Stanley strive to do that?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Foundation.
A. That is a very vague question. I mean, again, reputation is one of the leading investment banks and it has a certain obligation to its regulators and investors, clients, everybody, so it's vague. I mean, from my point of view.
Q. When you say that Morgan Stanley would typically gather information from a variety of sources when it's preparing a document like Exhibit 164, can you tell me what types of information Morgan Stanley would typically gather?

Rafii

A. I mean, I can speak for, you know, what I remember I did on this --
Q. That's even better.
A. -- project. And, again, it's acquiring publicly available information in the form of equity research reports, newspaper articles, available market data. I can't speak to these details here in specific because I don't recall this document specifically.
Q. Did Morgan Stanley obtain any other information other than publicly available information in connection with preparing a document like Exhibit 164?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation and vague.
A. I'm sorry. Can you repeat that.
MR. JOHNSON: Sure. We can actually have the reporter read it.
(Record read.)

Rafii

MS. BROWN: My objection stands.
A. Again, I don't recall this specifically, but typically company information, the information the company provides is an integral part of presentations such as this or information. Again, I can't speak for these pages or this specifically so.
Q. But as a general matter it's publicly available information and information from the client?
A. No. I mean, I'm just speaking for my role here. So I use publicly traded information because that was from what I recall, you know, the crux of the information I gathered.
Q. Do you recall gathering any other information besides the publicly available information you gathered that you've already talked about?
A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. Do you have any general recollection?
A. Again, not specifically. I

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0151188

Rafii

remember doing extensive work on publicly traded companies and gathering information.

Q. You may have already detected every time you answer with a question not specifically, I ask you whether you generally recall something.

A. Yeah. I'm -- that's a question of semantics. It's very hard to remember this six years ago, you know, with so many deals in between. I mean, these documents are all familiar because you see them, types of this document on many deals, so I can't remember the specific details.

Q. I want you to look at pages 45136 and 137 of Exhibit 164 for me. Those pages are subtitled, "Analysis of Synergies and Sources of Synergies."

Do you see that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What is synergies referred to there?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

A. I mean, here it alludes to the benefits of -- potential benefits of a combination.

Q. The last bullet point on page 137 provides total potential synergies of over $150 million from Sunbeam with 50 percent recognized in year one and the remainder by year two.

Do you know what the basis of that statement is?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Who at Morgan Stanley was involved with analyzing synergies in connection with possible Sunbeam transactions?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

A. I don't remember exactly. Again, it was a large deal team so.

Q. Did you have any role in analyzing synergies in connection with possible transactions?

A. No.

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Do you remember preparing a handout to Electrolux concerning a possible transaction between Sunbeam and Electrolux?

Rafii

A. Not specifically. I may have done research on Electrolux and contributed to a handout or a presentation or whatnot.

MR. JOHNSON: This will be Exhibit 166.

(CPH Exhibit 166, Morgan Stanley Confidential 0045102 through 108, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. Ms. Rafii, I've given you CPH Exhibit 166 which has the Bates stamp Morgan Stanley Confidential 0045102 through 108.

Does this appear to be materials prepared by Morgan Stanley concerning the transaction with Electrolux?

A. Again, it's similar to the last document and, yeah, it looks like an exploratory document like the last one.

Q. Can you tell me what you mean when you say exploratory?

A. Again, it doesn't necessarily mean a potential combination. It's looking at the -- it looks like a general overview.

Q. An overview of the pros and cons of a possible transaction?

Rafii

A. That's what it appears to be, yes.

Q. Did you assist in preparing this material, Exhibit 166?

A. I don't recall specifically. I may have done. Again, it could have been in, you know, typing this out or editing context. Again, I wasn't responsible for the strategic information.

Q. Who at Morgan Stanley was responsible for the strategic information?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and foundation.

A. I mean, I don't remember specifically. There was many members on the team so.

MR. JOHNSON: Lets go ahead and mark 167, I guess.

(CPH Exhibit 167, Copy of CPH 166 with metadata exposed, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. Ms. Rafii, I've given you a document we've marked as CPH Exhibit 167, which I'll represent, for the record, is a

0151189

Page 61

Rafii

copy of CPH Exhibit 166 with the metadata exposed at the first two pages of Exhibit 167.

Doesn't this exhibit identify you as the author of the materials concerning the possible transaction with Electrolux?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation. Asking about metadata they created or displayed.

A. Again, I could have edited this document or even typed it out. I don't remember specifically.

Q. But you see that you are listed as the author of the document in the metadata?

A. Again, I could have been.

Q. Do you know what the basis for any of the statements contained on the Executive Summary page of Exhibit 167 is?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and compound.

A. That is a broad question.

Is there anything in specific that you're referring to?

Q. Well, we've already covered some of

Page 62

Rafii

these, haven't we?

A. Yeah. I mean, again, I'll have to -- it's -- I have the same responses as I did to the last one. I don't know specifically where any of these statements specifically come from so.

Q. But they generally come from publicly available information or the company?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Misstates.

A. Yeah. I didn't, I mean, the publicly traded information is, again, I was attesting to my role in acquiring what I remember from my role in contributing to presentations and handouts and such so.

Q. So can you just give me, to the best of your own knowledge, the sources of the information that appear on the Executive Summary page of Exhibit 167.

MS. BROWN: Objection. Compound and foundation.

A. I mean, I don't remember specifically. This -- do you want me to give you hypotheticals, is that what -- where information could have come from because that's not very concrete.

Page 63

Rafii

Q. No, I don't want that.

What I want is just to understand why Morgan Stanley is making the statements that it makes on the Executive Summary page of Exhibit 167.

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

A. I mean, I don't know. I can't give you an exact source of information so.

Q. Can you give me a category of type of information like publicly available information or SEC filings?

A. I was just going to say SEC filings or a 10K perhaps in terms of the leadership information. Again, this is hypothetical. I don't know exactly where this was extracted from.

Q. Lets look back at Exhibit 166 again because I think we can navigate better with the Bates pages. If you'd look at pages 105 and 106, again, we have subheadings, "Synergies Analysis and Sources of Synergies."

Page 64

Rafii

Do you see that?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And, again, Morgan Stanley is showing potential synergies of over $150 million for a transaction between Sunbeam and Electrolux.

Do you see that?

MS. BROWN: Objection. It mischaracterizes.

A. Yes, under sources of synergies, the last bullet point.

Q. Correct.

And that's the same synergy amount that was shown in the materials concerning Whirlpool, is that correct?

A. It appears to be so.

Q. With respect to the Electrolux synergies, do you know where the $150 million figure came from?

A. No, I don't recall.

MR. JOHNSON: Folder 8. I'm going to try and save a step here, if we can. This will be CPH 168.

(CPH Exhibit 168, Strategic Rationale for Leggett & Platt, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. Ms. Rafii, can you identify CPH Exhibit 168 for the record.

A. The title is "Strategic Rationale for Leggett & Platt."

Q. And the metadata listed at page two again identify you as the author; is that correct?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A. I could have been, again, in an editing or potentially typing out this document.

Q. And the metadata indicates a creation date of October 25, 1997; is that correct?

A. Apparently that's what it says, yes.

Q. What is Leggett & Platt?

A. I mean, the name is familiar. It's probably a comparable company to Sunbeam. I don't remember specifically what Leggett & Platt did.

Q. If you'd look at the first page of the document excluding the metadata which has the subheading "Strategic Rationale for Leggett & Platt."

Rafii

A. Uh-huh.

Q. The first dash under the first bullet states, "Sunbeam top and bottom line growth both outpace the market significantly."

What does that refer to?

MS. BROWN: Foundation objection.

A. I mean, I believe it refers to sales and income numbers.

Q. So Morgan Stanley is representing here that Sunbeam's sales growth outpaced the market?

MS. BROWN: Objection to the characterization of the document purpose. Foundation.

A. Yeah. I mean, I don't, I don't remember, recall specifically. These are, I mean, these look like general statements so.

Q. Well, did you have the understanding in the fall of 1997 that Sunbeam was representing itself to have a dramatic sales growth?

Rafii

A. I don't remember specifically.

Q. At that time did Sunbeam have the reputation as being a stagnant company?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Reputation.

A. When you say at that time, in the fall of '97?

Q. '97.

A. Not that I remember.

Q. In fact, it had the opposite reputation, didn't it?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A. I'm not sure. I don't think it was a stagnant company. I mean, all of these documents -- I don't remember specifically. I don't recall it being a stagnant company.

Q. Is it fair to say there was a fair amount of hype over Sunbeam in the fall of 1997?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Hype in the sense of press or?

Q. In any sense.

A. I mean, I remember there was quite a few articles about Sunbeam and Al Dunlap is a high profile CEO at the time.

Rafii

Q. And its stock price was taking off as well; isn't that true?

A. I don't remember specifically. I mean, there was a lot of talk around Dunlap and turnaround so it could have been.

Q. If you look at the last two pages of Exhibit 168, again, we have Synergies Analysis and Sources of Synergies. This Morgan Stanley document, again, indicates synergies in a transaction with Leggett & Platt of over $150 million; is that correct?

A. That's what it indicates here.

Q. Do you know where that number came from?

A. No, I don't remember specifically.

Q. Is it just coincidence that Whirlpool, Electrolux and Leggett & Platt all presented possible synergies of $150 million?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Argumentive and foundation.

A. Again, a lot of this is it seems like preliminary exploratory documents and a lot of these statements are just broad statements or information.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Rafii

Q. Well, the synergies number there is a specific number, isn't it?

A. Yeah, I mean, with the exception of that. It says potential synergies so.

Q. So what's the significance of the potential synergies language that you just noted?

A. I mean, potential isn't a concrete. It's not a concrete number.

Q. Morgan Stanley though wouldn't put $150 million down if it didn't believe that was a reasonably attainable synergy number, would it?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Argumentative. Foundation.

A. I mean, I can't speak for Morgan Stanley. From what I recall of this type of document these are very broad kind of exploratory handouts.

Q. I guess I'm not sure that I understand that answer.

Do you have any reason to believe that Morgan Stanley believed that the $150 million synergy number was not a realistic expectation?

Rafii

A. I don't know any of the synergy information or details of it, so I don't recall anything.

Q. I think when you're suggesting this is a broad and --

A. For instance, if you look at the bullet point above SGNA Savings, I mean, most M&A transaction aim at reducing sales force functions or marketing functions, distribution and warehousing, so elimination of duplicate administrative costs.

Q. So are you saying that a --

A. I'm saying it's not odd that.

MS. BROWN: Hold on. Let him ask his question.

Q. Yeah, I think we're getting at the same result here.

The fact that each of the three possible transactions we've looked at now indicate $150 million in synergies is not odd because at least a substantial subset of the synergies is the same no matter what the combination is going to be?

Rafii

A. No, not at all. Actually, I wasn't referring to the actual number indicated. I was just drawing an example from SGNA Savings. It's not odd that you draw SGNA Savings, for instance, between three companies. It's -- I mean, that's part of the reason to even enter into a combination so.

Q. Well, then I guess I don't understand what you were getting at with respect to the fact that each of these transactions presents $150 million of synergies.

MS. BROWN: I don't know if that's a question, but if it is, it's vague.

A. Again, I can't speak for the 150 million. I don't know what the source is and I don't recall that number so.

Q. Maybe I'm just confused here. What are you trying to convey by referring to the SGNA Savings?

A. It was just an example. You asked me about the -- you asked me about me saying these are broad statements, right. So I'm pulling SGNA Savings, for example, is the bullet point above. That could be applicable to any kind of transaction.

Rafii

Q. OK. But the $150 million number, you agree, is not a broad statement?

A. I didn't -- I don't know where that number came from and I don't recall that number so. No, it's not as broad as the other statements.

And, again, I actually -- it's potential synergies so.

Q. So what?

A. I'm just -- it's -- it doesn't look like a concrete number when it says potential.

Q. Well, would you ever know with certainty what the synergy number would be in a transaction?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Hypothetical.

A. I mean, I don't know if you know specifically until a combination is forged,

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

01792

Rafii

so from my experience.
Q. Until after the combination is forged?
A. Probably.
Q. Morgan Stanley was unable to find a buyer of Sunbeam; isn't that true?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Well, no one bought Sunbeam in connection with Morgan Stanley's work, did it?
A. I mean, that's not what resulted in the deal.
Q. In fact, Sunbeam ended up acquiring several companies; is that correct?
A. From what I recall, yes.
Q. Do you know why those transactions resulted as opposed to Sunbeam being sold to a third party?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and foundation.
A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. It's true that Morgan Stanley contacted a variety of potential acquirers of Sunbeam in the fall of 1997, isn't it?

Rafii

A. I don't remember.
MR. JOHNSON: Lets look at folder 7.
(CPH Exhibit 169, Morgan Stanley Confidential 0044556 through 573, marked for identification, as of this date.)
Q. Ms. Rafii, I've given you a document we've marked as CPH Exhibit 169 which has the Bates stamp Morgan Stanley Confidential 0044556 through 573.
Have you ever seen this document before?
A. A document, this type of document is familiar.
Q. The first 17 pages or so of this document are subtitled "Potential Acquirers;" is that correct?
A. Yes, that's what it says.
Q. And then the last three pages I guess are potential targets.
A. Uh-huh. That's what it says here.
Q. And that's potential acquirers of Sunbeam, isn't it?

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. Possibly. That's what it appears to be.
Q. Did you look at this document yesterday?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
Instruction not to answer.
Q. If you would look at page 561 for me. Actually, why don't we go ahead to 562.
Both of those pages concern the Gillette Company, do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. In the comments column under comments for October 24, 1997 the first bullet provides "Concern with sustainable profitability of 20 percent EBIT margins."
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you know what that refers to?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. No, I don't recall specifically.
Q. The last bullet provides, "Another concern is the restructuring charge and quality sustainability of earnings issues."
Do you know what the phrase

Rafii

"sustainability of earnings" refers to there?
MS. BROWN: Same objection. Foundation.
A. No. I mean, I don't recall specific to this document but exactly what it says, what I can draw from it now, sustainability of earnings.
Q. Which is that Gillette was worried about Sunbeam's ability to sustain the earnings growth that it had reported?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation. Assumes facts not in evidence.
A. Again, I don't remember specifically. However it's interpreted here is all I can speak for.
Q. If you flip over to page 565. That page is directed to contacts with Newell Company; is that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. It appears to be so.
Q. In the comments column under October 14, 1997 there's a bullet that provides some concerns over quality of earnings.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0151193

Rafii

Do you see that?
A. The last dash?
Q. Correct.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you know what that refers to?
A. Again, I don't recall in this case, but whatever we can extract from it based on reading this now.
Q. Lets go to the next page, 566.
Do you see comments from Premark International?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Again, Premark was raising issues about the sustainability of earnings and revenues; is that correct?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation. Assumes facts not in evidence.
A. I don't recall. What I read here is what it is so.
Q. The next bullet point which is the second bullet point under Premark International comments provides, "Also concerned about Al's reputations, and how turnarounds are sustained after he leaves."

Rafii

Do you know what that refers to?
MS. BROWN: Foundation. Objection.
A. Not specifically. I don't recall specifically.
Q. Were you aware of any discussions at Morgan Stanley in the fall of 1997 concerning the quality or sustainability of Sunbeam's revenues?
A. No, I don't remember.
Q. Were you involved in any discussions at Morgan Stanley concerning the authenticity of Mr. Dunlap's turnaround stories?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. To your knowledge, did Morgan Stanley ever share with anyone questions about the sustainability of Sunbeam's revenues?
A. I don't recall.
THE WITNESS: Do you mind if I take a break to go to the lady's room?
MR. JOHNSON: That's fine.
MS. BROWN: Go off the record
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now

Rafii

11:49 and we are off the record.
(Recess taken.)
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 11:36 and we are back on the record.
Q. Before the break we were looking at CPH Exhibit 169 and in particular most recently we were looking at comments of Premark International on page 566.
To your knowledge, did Morgan Stanley ever share with any third parties questions about the sustainability of Mr. Dunlap's turnaround efforts?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Were you aware of those questions at any time while you worked on the Sunbeam engagement?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. I don't remember.
Q. You may have been?
A. I don't think so.
Q. Why do you say that?
A. I really don't remember. I don't think so.
Q. Is that the type of thing you think

Rafii

you would remember?
A. No, not necessarily.
Q. You think questions about the authenticity of Dunlap's turnaround stories are something that would be of interest to third parties?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Calls for speculation.
A. Again, I can't speak for that in specific. It's up to the third parties to draw their own conclusions, any kind of conclusions.
Q. Do you think that's information that should be conveyed to third parties?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. I mean, I don't -- are we speaking about this case or?
Q. Well, we're speaking in particular about questions concerning the authenticity of the turnaround stories that Mr. Dunlap's reputation was built on?
MS. BROWN: Hold on.
Objection to the extent that he was clarifying or reasking the question. I'm going to object again as vague. Calls for speculation.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015194

Rafii

MR. JOHNSON: Lets get a clean record.

Q. Do you personally believe that questions concerning the authenticity of Dunlap's turnarounds is information that should be provided to third parties who may be engaging in a transaction with Sunbeam?

MS. BROWN: I'm also going to object. Vague. Also object to the extent that he's calling for any sort of a legal conclusion.

A. I mean, that's a very hypothetical question considering I don't remember anything about the authenticity of this turnaround so.

Q. You say the question is hypothetical in the sense that you don't know whether you're aware of that information at the time?

A. I don't recall any conversations as such or discussion as you called it.

Q. So is it your testimony that you don't have an opinion as to whether that type of information, that is, the authenticity of the turnarounds, should be provided to third parties?

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Again, objection. Vague. Also argumentive. And objection to the extent he's calling for a legal conclusion.

A. Again, it's a hypothetical question considering that I don't remember any question to the authenticity of this turnaround so.

Q. Let me phrase it in that context then and acknowledging that it's hypothetical.

Assuming you were aware of questions concerning the authenticity of the turnarounds in fall of 1997, is that information that should be provided to third parties who are considering a transaction with Sunbeam?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Improper hypothetical. And objection to the extent that he's calling for a legal conclusion.

Rafii

A. Again, I'll have to say it's hypothetical and if you want me to speak to that it won't be regarding this case, but it's up to the third party to kind of gather their own information and due diligence and extract what they want from it.

Q. So Morgan Stanley has no responsibility to provide accurate information to third parties?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Argumentive and misstates testimony.

A. Yeah. I didn't say that at all.

Q. Let me ask the question again.

If it's up to third parties to get their own information then why does Morgan Stanley prepare information to give to third parties?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and hypothetical.

A. I'm just saying it's part of the responsibility of third parties to gather their own information. And from my personal opinion Morgan Stanley, again, we talked about their reputation and, yeah, they could potentially express their views on of any company to a potential acquirer, if that's what we're talking about.

Rafii

MR. JOHNSON: Can I hear that question and answer back.

(Record read.)

Q. Is it part of the responsibility of Morgan Stanley to provide full and accurate information about companies that it's describing?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Objection to the extent he's calling for a legal conclusion.

A. Again, hypothetically people do their best.

Q. I don't want to interrupt you, but that's a yes or no question.

A. The reason why I keep saying hypothetically is because you keep drawing it back to this and I don't recall specifically any --

Q. Lets be clear.

I'm not referring to an exhibit right now.

A. OK.
Q. I'm asking you a simple question and that is without regard to a specific exhibit or a specific fact.
Is it part of the responsibility of Morgan Stanley to provide full and accurate information about a company that Morgan Stanley is describing to third parties?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague again. And also objection to the extent that he's calling for a legal conclusion.
A. You asked about accuracy. I think Morgan Stanley tries to be as accurate as possible from my point of view and from my experience there.
Q. Can you answer the question that I asked.
MS. BROWN: Objection. She has answered the question. She doesn't have to answer it the way that you want to answer. She's given an answer. If you don't like it, that's unfortunate, but this is the answer that she has given, so objection.

Page 86

Rafii

Q. So your testimony is that Morgan Stanley tries to provide accurate information; is that what you're saying?
A. Yes, they try to be as accurate as possible.
Q. And they do that for purposes of their own reputation?
A. At least partly.
Q. And for what other reasons does Morgan Stanley strive to provide accurate information about companies that it's describing to third parties?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and foundation.
A. Again, from my perspective and from my experience it has -- it tries its best as a responsible entity to provide accurate information for its regulators, clients, investors, etcetera.
Q. Did you ever have occasion to meet Mr. Dunlap personally?
A. I don't remember ever meeting him

Page 87

Rafii

personally.
Q. By all accounts it's something that people remember.
A. That's why I don't specifically remember. I don't specifically remember the details. I may have been -- I may have been in a meeting with him, but I never met him personally.
Q. Did you gain any understanding as to his personality while you were working on the Sunbeam engagement?
A. Just by hearsay. I mean, he was a brash kind of guy in terms of character.
Q. By brash you mean hot headed, overbearing?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Misstates.
A. Not necessarily. More an aggressive type of person.
Q. Did his reputation or personality inform the way that Morgan Stanley went about the way in any way?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. No. Not that I recall.
Q. Did you understand that several of the executive officers at Sunbeam had worked with Mr. Dunlap at other companies?

Page 88

Rafii

A. I'm vaguely aware of that. I don't specifically remember who it was.
Q. Did you prepare any biographies or other material about Mr. Dunlap as part of your work on the Sunbeam engagement?
A. I don't remember specifically, but I could have prepared like a brief summary probably extracted from a 10K, if I did at all.
MR. JOHNSON: Let me show you one of these. This will be folder 12, I guess.
(CPH Exhibit 170, Morgan Stanley Confidential 0042538 through 540, marked for identification, as of this date.)
Q. I've given you CPH Exhibit 170 which has the Bates stamp Morgan Stanley Confidential 0042538 through 540. If you could just take a second and read through that for me.
MR. JOHNSON: Why don't we change the tape. We can go off the record for a second.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 11:52 and we have reached the end of tape number one and we are off the record.

(Recess taken.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 11:54 and this is tape number 2 and we are back on the record.

Q. Ms. Rafii, have you had an opportunity to review the document we've marked as CPH Exhibit 170?

A. Yes, over the last couple of minutes.

Q. Have you ever seen this document before?

A. I don't recall ever seeing this.

Q. Can you tell whether this is a document prepared by Morgan Stanley?

A. I can't tell. It doesn't look like it, but I can't tell.

Q. Why do you say it doesn't look like it?

Rafii

A. It's not or Morgan Stanley -- it's not in a Morgan Stanley format. It could be a Morgan Stanley document, it just -- it doesn't appear to be. It could be.

Q. I believe you testified earlier that Morgan Stanley may have prepared biographical information about Sunbeam's officers; is that correct?

A. Yeah, they may have done. Yes, they may have done.

Q. What's the purpose of Morgan Stanley preparing biographical information about officers of its client?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Yeah. For the most part just to get a brief overview of management.

Q. Again, not talking about Exhibit 170, but as a general matter, have you prepared biographical information about officers of Morgan Stanley clients?

A. I probably have in the past. I don't know if specifically on this deal. I may have done.

Q. Could you tell me as a general matter how you would go about preparing the biographical information.

Rafii

A. From what I recall it's mostly brief biographical overviews and specifically I recall just gathering information that's in the 10K which is publicly available. Sometimes for more information you can look into newspaper articles and such so.

Q. If you look at the last page of Exhibit 170 it gives the names of Mr. Dunlap's dogs there.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. That's not information you would expect to find in a 10K, is it?

A. Not necessarily.

Q. Have you ever seen a 10K that has pet names in it?

A. I don't recall. I mean, not that I remember.

Q. I've seen a lot of 10K's and I've never seen dogs' names.

MS. BROWN: Objection.

Q. How about on page 2 there's a subheading that states, "Wake-up call for corporate America."

Rafii

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you think that a 10K for Sunbeam included that phrase?

A. Probably not.

Again, you can extract information from newspaper articles.

MR. JOHNSON: Let me mark Exhibit 171, if I could.

(CPH Exhibit 171, Exhibit 170 plus two pages of metadata, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. I've given you what we've marked as CPH Exhibit 171 which I'll represent for the record is Exhibit 170 plus two pages of metadata. And, again, this metadata lists you as an author and the last saver of the document.

Do you see that?

A. Based on what it says here I see that.

Q. So this document would indicate that Morgan, excuse me, the metadata would indicate that Morgan Stanley was involved in preparing this biographical information?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015197

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
She didn't prepare the metadata so she can't testify what it indicates.
MR. JOHNSON: Well, actually, she did, just not consciously.
A. Not necessarily.
Again, this could have been edited or this could have been typed out based on something the company gave us. It doesn't mean that Morgan Stanley compiled this information. I don't remember this document.
Q. I may have asked this but, can you tell me what the purpose of documents like this is?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. From my experience to get an overview of management at companies.
Q. This type of document would be provided to third parties who might be involved in a potential transaction?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Foundation.
A. I don't remember.

Rafii

Q. Maybe? Maybe not?
A. I don't remember this document. Yeah, maybe, maybe not.
MR. JOHNSON: Can I have folder 15 please.
This is a document that's already been marked as Exhibit 68, and Exhibit 68, I'll represent for the record, is a printout of a Business Week article which was produced from Morgan Stanley's files.
Q. Have you ever seen this article before?
A. I don't recall this document in conjunction with this deal or at that time.
Q. Do you recall this document in any way?
A. I may have looked at it when I met with Zhonette, but I don't specifically remember this article.
Q. Is Business Week the type of publication that Morgan Stanley analysts might research in determining what was being said about a company?

Rafii

A. It definitely could be a source among other sources.
Q. If you look at the third paragraph there's a subheading, "Wake-up call".
Do you see that?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Would it be a fair assumption that that subheading provided the basis for the subheading in what we marked as Exhibit 170?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Calls for speculation. Foundation.
A. I don't know. Maybe it is. Maybe it isn't.
Q. If you look at Exhibit 68 again which is the Business Week article, on page 2 of the article, the second full paragraph which begins, "But critics inside and outside Scott say Dunlap is leaving the company at Scott in a much less healthy position than he claims."
Do you see that?
A. Yes, I do see that.
Q. Did you or, to your knowledge, anyone at Morgan Stanley investigate whether in fact Dunlap had left Scott in a less healthy position than he claimed?

Rafii

A. I don't remember.
Q. If you look at the next paragraph down there's a phrase, an M dashes that states, "Pumping up short-term results at the expense of long-term health."
Did you or, to your knowledge, anyone at Morgan Stanley investigate whether Mr. Dunlap had in fact pumped up short-term results at the expense of long-term health at Scott Paper?
A. Again, I don't recall.
Q. If you turn to the page which has the Bates stamped 998, the second full paragraph which begins, "While Dunlap's cuts." The last sentence contains a quote, "By the end of 1998 it just became a volume driven plan to pretty up the place for sale."
Do you see that?
A. I do see that.
Q. Did you or, to your knowledge, anyone at Morgan Stanley investigate whether Dunlap had just prettied up Scott Paper for sale?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015198

Rafii

A. Again, I don't recall.
Q. Did you or anyone at Morgan Stanley, to your knowledge, investigate whether Sunbeam had been simply prettied up for sale by Mr. Dunlap?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. No. I don't recall.
Q. So Morgan Stanley may not have investigated whether Sunbeam was just prettied up for sale?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Misstates. Argumentative.
A. That's not what I said. I just don't remember any discussions as such.
Q. So Morgan Stanley didn't have skepticism about Sunbeam's results?
A. I didn't say that either. Again, it was a big deal team and I was the most junior member so I wasn't.
Q. Just so we're clear, I'm only asking about what you know, so that's a running assumption here.
By the way, when she objects on the basis of foundation, do you know what that means?

Rafii

A. I vaguely know what it means.
Q. What do you think that means?
MS. BROWN: Objection. This is not relevant. I'm going to instruct her not to answer, and whatever she -- if to the basis she knows anything on the basis of our preparation yesterday, it's not proper for testimony here today or inquiry.
MR. JOHNSON: Unless it's a signal for coaching the witness and --
MS. BROWN: That's offensive.
MR. JOHNSON: Well, I'm sorry you're offended, but the record will reflect a remarkable correlation between that objection and her answers.
Q. Do you recall any discussion within Morgan Stanley concerning whether Sunbeam had just been prettied up for sale?
A. Again, I don't recall, and I have to reiterate that as a junior member of the team it's not like people would come to me and report anything to me or report directly to me so.

Rafii

Q. Were you ever asked to investigate whether Sunbeam's results were prettied up in order to help sell the company?
A. I don't recall.
Q. You would agree that Exhibit 170 doesn't contain any information about questions over the Scott Paper turnaround?
A. It doesn't appear to be so.
Q. Do you know why that information wasn't included in Exhibit 170?
A. Again, I don't recall this document, so I don't know exactly what the sources are.
Q. Is it fair to say that both Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley touted Mr. Dunlap's turnaround expertise?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. From -- no, I don't think it's fair to say that. I don't -- I don't specifically recall.
Q. Do you think Exhibit 170 touts Mr. Dunlap's turnaround expertise?

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Yeah, it is vague, and from my perspective it's a positive article. It's a positive information, not article.
Q. Would you agree that Morgan Stanley would have greater difficulty assisting in the consummation of a transaction if questions about Scott Paper had been included in materials concerning Mr. Dunlap's turnaround expertise?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Hypothetical. Calls for speculation.
A. Again, that's a hypothetical question. Can you repeat it.
Are you looking for my personal?
Q. Well, lets make sure it's hypothetical.
To your knowledge, Morgan Stanley never disclosed to anyone questions about the authenticity of the Scott Paper turnaround?
A. I didn't say that. I just don't recall.
Q. So you can't recall an instance when that was ever disclosed?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015199

Rafii

A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. You don't remember any instance when that information was disclosed?
A. No. I mean, I, I don't remember Morgan Stanley in conjunction with that question and from what I heard or my involvement I don't remember.
Q. Did Morgan Stanley dig down in any way in it's due diligence of Sunbeam in light of the questions about Scott Paper?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Again, I don't remember and that wasn't necessarily my role so.
Q. But you were involved in due diligence, weren't you?
A. Due diligence is a very broad term and everybody on the deal team is involved in due diligence.
Q. But with respect to your own involvement in due diligence, you didn't dig down as a result of hearing questions about the Scott Paper turnaround?
MS. BROWN: Objection. I think he's assuming facts not in evidence.

Rafii

A. Not that I remember.
MR. JOHNSON: Can I have folder 14, please.
This has previously been marked as Exhibit CPH 148.
Q. Ms. Rafii, have you ever seen what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 148 before?
A. Not in conjunction with this time frame of this deal.
Q. Without invading privilege, if you've seen it, it's been within the past week?
A. That's correct, if I've seen it it's been within the past week.
Q. Do you know whose handwriting this is?
A. I don't know whose handwriting it is.
Q. In the column under Scott Paper, about two thirds of the way down there's a note that states, "Volume driven plan. Prop up for sale."
A. I see that.
Q. Do you know what that refers to?

Rafii

A. No, I don't know specifically what that refers to.
Q. Well, it refers to Scott Paper, doesn't it?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A. I mean, it's under the Scott Paper column.
Q. Do you know what Mr. Chang's handwriting looks like?
A. Excuse me?
Q. Do you know Mr. Chang? Do you know what his handwriting looks like?
A. I don't remember what his handwriting looks like.
MR. JOHNSON: Can I see folder 16, please. This is a document that's previously been marked as Exhibit 92.
Q. Have you seen this document before?
A. I've seen a similar type of document. It's reminiscent. But, again, I don't recall it contemporaneous to this time frame.
Q. Lets look at page 412 if we could, which is towards the back of the exhibit. That page has the subtitle Scott Paper Restructuring and Growth Plans.

Rafii

Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you ever seen that page before?
A. I don't recall, but I highly doubt I was even working on this deal when this document was generated. It has the date of July 18.
Q. Although you had perhaps 92 hours in July, you think that was in the last half of the month?
A. If I did, I'm pretty sure it had to be the last, the latter half of the month.
Q. By the way, lets go back to that hour sheet for a second if we could, which is Exhibit 163 and probably at the bottom of your stack. If you look at the last page of that Exhibit 163 which has the Bates stamped ending 430. That shows that no one spent any time on Project Laser in November.
Do you think that's accurate?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015200

Rafii

A. I don't recall. I mean, I don't really recall what happened specifically at that time.
Q. Are you surprised by that in any way?
A. I don't know. Surprise is just more curious as to -- I mean, is the document accurate?
Q. I guess that's what I'm asking.
A. I don't know. I can't.
Q. Were you given any background reading materials on Sunbeam when you joined the Sunbeam team in late July '97?
A. I don't recall specifically.
Q. Were there any types of meetings or other sessions to get you up to speed on the engagement?
A. Again, I don't recall specifically. I vaguely remember primarily having discussions with Tyrone, the other analyst.
Q. That's Tyrone Chang?
A. Yes, sorry, Tyrone Chang.
Q. I believe you mentioned earlier today you looked at an itinerary for a trip to Florida; is that right?

Rafii

A. Yes, that's correct.
Q. How many trips did you make to Florida in the course of the Sunbeam engagement?
A. I only remember taking one trip.
Q. When was that trip?
A. I didn't -- I don't recall specifically.
MR. JOHNSON: This is going to be folder 3.
This will be CPH Exhibit 172.
(CPH Exhibit 172, Itinerary for travel to Sunbeam on October 28, 1997, marked for identification, as of this date.)
Q. Ms. Rafii, Exhibit 172 appears to be an itinerary for you to travel to Sunbeam on October 28, 1997.
Do you see that?
A. Yes, I do see that.
Q. Is this the trip that you recall?
A. I don't recall. I remember taking one trip. I don't know exactly when it was.

Rafii

Q. Do you remember who from Morgan Stanley went with you, if anyone, on the trip?
A. I remember the trip that I went on that specifically that Gene Yoo was there.
Q. Anyone else?
A. I don't recall anyone specifically.
Q. Well, I guess do you remember there were other Morgan Stanley people there you just can't remember their identity or it was just the two of you?
A. I don't even remember that. I know that -- I remember Gene Yoo was there.
MR. JOHNSON: Let me give you one more document here. This will be Exhibit 173.
(CPH Exhibit 173, Itinerary reflecting trip on January 4, 1998, marked for identification, as of this date.)
Q. Exhibit 173 appears to be an affidavit for Gene Yoo reflecting a trip to Sunbeam on January 4, 1998, and you and Mr. Fuchs and Mr. Stynes are listed as MS

Rafii

Professional.
Does that help you recall which trip you made to Florida?
A. Not really. I mean, I do remember a trip where Gene Yoo specifically was there and maybe that's because I worked more closely with him and Tyrone Chang versus anyone else.
Q. Is it your testimony that you recall only one trip?
A. I do only recall one trip. It could have been two. I recall one trip. I mean, this was very early on in my -- what it says here, if I actually did go on this October trip, it was very early on in my career and there was many trips from this deal to when I left Morgan Stanley, so it gets very blurry.
Q. Well, maybe we can save some time. Tell me what you remember about the trip that you made to Sunbeam.
A. I remember very little. Again, I remember Gene Yoo being there. I don't remember the purpose of the trip or what we specifically did there. I remember going to headquarters, but I don't remember what we extracted or what we talked about or what we did.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Rafii

Q. Can you identify any Sunbeam officer that you met with in Florida?

A. No, I can't. I don't remember.

Q. Did you meet with any Sunbeam officers?

A. I'm sure we met with Sunbeam people. I can't tell you who they were.

Q. Can you tell me how many Sunbeam people you met with?

A. No, I don't remember.

Q. Did you review any Sunbeam documents when you were at headquarters?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you discuss 1997 year-end results?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did you discuss 1998 sales or EPS projections?

A. Again, I don't remember.

Q. Did you travel in connection with

Page 110

Rafii

the Sunbeam engagement to anyplace other than this one trip to Florida that you remember?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. So you never visited any of their facilities or plants other than headquarters?

A. Not that I remember. I just remember one trip to Sunbeam headquarters. That's all I remember.

Q. During the course of the Sunbeam engagement did you ever contact any Sunbeam customers to talk about their relationship with Sunbeam?

A. Not that I remember. Not me personally I don't think.

Q. Do you know if anyone on the Morgan Stanley team spoke to Sunbeam customers about the Sunbeam relationship?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Would you expect that type of inquiry to be made?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. I'm not sure. It could have been made. I don't remember.

Q. Have you in connection with other

Page 111

Rafii

transactions talked to customers of Morgan Stanley's clients?

A. I may have done so.

Q. As a general matter can you tell me what the purpose of those types of conversations is?

MS. BROWN: Objection. I don't know if we're speaking about concrete, hypothetical.

She said may have. I don't know what the -- objection.

A. Yeah.

Again, maybe as a part of due diligence. I can't point out any specific instance or any other deal.

Q. Did you ever speak with any outside auditors of Sunbeam?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Can you identify any of Sunbeam's outside auditors by name?

A. I can't remember who it was. It's vague. It could have been any of the big auditors. I can't -- I don't know specifically.

Page 112

Rafii

Q. I'm going to go through a series of names here and I'm just going to see if you recall speaking with any of them, either on the phone, by e-mail or in person.

A. OK.

Q. Deb McDonald?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Scott Yales?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Kyle Kaiser?

A. I don't remember the name.

Q. Kyle Sinclair?

A. I don't remember that name either.

Q. Dixon Thayer?

A. The name is vaguely familiar. I don't remember anything beyond that.

Q. Lee Griffith?

A. Again, the name is familiar. I don't -- I doubt I ever had a direct conversation with him.

Q. Diedra Dendanto?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Tom Hartshorne?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Chuck Myers?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Bill Bloomfield?
A. I don't recall that name either.
Q. To your knowledge, did Sunbeam ever withhold any information that Morgan Stanley requested of it?
A. Not to my knowledge, but I don't recall.
Q. To your knowledge, Morgan Stanley had full access to the company?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Yeah.
Again, I wouldn't completely know that as the most junior member of the team.
Q. Which is why I said, to your knowledge.
A. No, not to my knowledge.
Q. To your knowledge, did Morgan Stanley attempt to determine whether Sunbeam's distribution channels were stuffed with product?
A. I don't recall. Not to my knowledge.

Rafii

Q. To your knowledge, did Morgan Stanley ever attempt to determine whether Sunbeam was accelerating recognition of income from future quarters into current quarters?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Did, to your knowledge, did Morgan Stanley ever attempt to determine whether Sunbeam was micromanaging its earnings results?
A. I don't recall.
Q. Did you ever get the sense that there was undue pressure at Sunbeam for the sales staff to make its numbers?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Did Morgan Stanley have a due diligence plan before due diligence started on the transactions?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. I don't remember specifically. I mean, it's different for every deal so.
Q. You just don't remember one way or the other whether there was a game plan for due diligence?

Rafii

A. I don't recall specifics.
Q. Did you submit expense reports for your trip to Florida?
A. I probably did. I don't recall specifically. I mean, every trip you -- if you, if you have expenses, you submit them.
Q. And it's fair to say you have expenses on every trip?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A. You probably do.
MR. JOHNSON: This is probably as good a time as any to take a lunch break.
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 12:32 and we are off the record.
(A lunch recess was taken.)

Rafii

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 1:20 and we are back on the record.
AFTERNOON SESSION
(Time noted: 1:20 p.m.)
LILY RAFII, resumed and testified as follows:
EXAMINATION BY
MR. JOHNSON:
Q. Ms. Rafii, you've already testified that you received several weeks of training when you joined Morgan Stanley.
A. That's correct.
Q. Could you tell me what was involved with that training?
A. As I remember accounting classes and such.
Q. These were classes attended by other new analysts at the firm?
A. That's right.
Q. Who taught the classes?
A. From what I recall I think there was an ex-Wharton professor who was our accounting professor in specific.
Q. Other than accounting, do you

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015203

Rafii

remember any other areas that were addressed in the training?

A. I remember that, depending on what group you were going to as an analyst, for instance, I had M&A specific training as an M&A analyst.

Q. What was the content of the M&A specific training?

A. What I remember specifically is valuation training. And beyond that I haven't looked at the training documents or remember the training, I mean, in years so.

Q. Was there any training directed to the way in which due diligence should be conducted?

A. I don't remember specifically. It could have been a part of our training materials. I remember computer classes as well like Excel proficiency, familiarity with Word and some of the other common applications we used.

Q. When you say due diligence could have been one of the subjects of training --

A. Yes.

Rafii

Q. Do you have any better recollection of whether it was or wasn't?

A. I don't specifically. Again, due diligence is so broad and subjective. I can't recall specifically at that time seven years ago in July what documents or what material related specifically to due diligence training.

Q. Do you recall any information along the lines of here are steps that you should consider conducting when you're doing due diligence?

A. Not specifically in conjunction with training materials. I don't recall specific documents. I do recall due diligence lists from other deals but.

Q. Due diligence lists from other deals being circulated in the training sessions?

A. No.

Again, not in conjunction with training. I just don't recall.

Q. When you say you recall due diligence lists, what are you referring to there?

Rafii

A. From my recollection just bullet point style due diligence areas. Again, different for every deal so I, I don't have specifics that I remember.

Q. Did you receive any manuals or guides on how to conduct due diligence?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Did you receive any training in how to document the due diligence work that Morgan Stanley performs?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Putting aside whether you received training in it, do you have any understanding as to Morgan Stanley's practices for documenting its due diligence work?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Again, I don't recall specifically. Due diligence is like a very broad topic. It envelops many things so.

Q. Why don't you tell us some of the things it envelops.

A. From my experience there's different aspects of due diligence. There's qualitative analysis and quantitative analysis.

Rafii

Q. What do you mean by qualitative analysis?

A. Anything from publicly available information such as news, 10Ks, SEC filings, market information, to discussions with management on a -- I'm broadly speaking so.

Q. How about quantitative analysis, what are you referring to there?

A. Probably the same thing. Publicly traded, public information, publicly available market information, analyst's reports, research reports, company information.

Q. Is the qualitative analysis directed to something different than the quantitative analysis?

A. Again, I mean, that's very subjective. It's so different for every deal and depending on what kind of transaction you're conducting so.

Q. I guess what I'm trying to get at is how you're using the terms qualitative and

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015204

Page 121

Rafii

quantitative and the difference between the terms.
A. Well, qualitative is in relation to how I'm using it now, is more -- is not the hard financial facts.
Q. So in that sense it's more subjective?
A. Not necessarily subjective, but just, for instance, strategic information on a company or, you know, their strengths and weaknesses, company description.
Q. Whereas quantitative would be sales figures, for example?
A. As an example, yes.
MR. JOHNSON: I'll show you folder 5.
This has previously been marked as CPH Exhibit 29.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
Q. If you could just take a few minutes to thumb through, I'm going to ask you whether you've seen any of the materials that are contained in this exhibit.
A. I don't specifically remember

Page 122

Rafii

seeing this document during my time on this deal.
Q. So if you've seen it, it's been in connection with your meetings with counsel?
A. That's right.
Q. Other than what you may have seen in meetings with counsel, none of this material looks familiar to you?
A. I don't recall this, this document specifically.
Q. Do you have any general recollection of this document?
A. I mean, I would have to read it at length, but not specifically this document, no.
Q. Is this akin to due diligence materials that you received during the course of your work at Morgan Stanley?
A. It could have been or aspects of it.
Q. I guess I'm getting confused now.
My understanding is that you couldn't recall any due diligence training manuals that you received; is that correct?

Page 123

Rafii

A. No, not during training. I can't recall specific documents.
Q. Did you receive any manuals at any time?
A. I don't recall specific manuals.
Q. Do you recall any manuals generally?
MS. BROWN: Relating to due diligence?
MR. JOHNSON: Correct.
A. I recall just general due diligence, just information and lists that I've already spoken to. I don't remember the specific contents of none of those.
Q. The lists that you're referring to were ones prepared in connection with other transactions?
A. From what I remember, yes.
Q. Can you tell me what the purpose of due diligence is?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. That's a very broad question. Again, it's subjective for every deal. It's different and it depends, you know, what you're trying to do and what kind of transaction you're trying to conduct.

Page 124

Rafii

In this case in particular I have to point out that I was never involved in underwriting or equity offerings so this looks like its equity specific which is a different -- it's not related to M&A work so.
Q. Did you perform due diligence of any sort in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
A. Again, due diligence is a broad statement. I would probably attribute most of what you do is due diligence in terms of information gathering.
Q. So the purpose of due diligence is to gather information?
A. It's not the purpose. It's one of the aspects of it.
Q. Can you tell me what the purpose is?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Asked and answered.
A. Again, it depends on what deal and what your ends are, what kind of transaction

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Rafii

it is, what you're trying to compile.
Q. Lets put it in the context of the Sunbeam engagement and the M&A transaction.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. What was the purpose of due diligence in the context of the M&A transaction?
A. I can speak for what I did and, again, gathering information, public information that's readily available like market information, research reports, news articles. That's all part of due diligence.
Q. I understand that's what you did, but what was the purpose of that is my question.
A. I mean, part of that work was put into presentations, presentation work. Me specifically, I did comparable company analysis work that I gathered from various sources, again, research reports, market information, etcetera.
Q. When you refer to presentations there, you mean presentations to among other entities third parties?

Rafii

A. Again, I don't remember specifically what kind of presentations we did and who they were presented to necessarily. And, yeah, I don't remember what specific presentations we did but that's fairly standard in presentation work so.
Q. So let me see if I understand what you're saying.
From your perspective due diligence on the M&A transaction was directed to gathering information for presentation to any number of persons or entities?
MS. BROWN: Objection to the extent that that misstates.
MR. JOHNSON: I guess that's what I'm trying to get it.
Q. How does that misstate your testimony, if it does?
A. In terms of my role and what I did that I recall specifically, that was an aspect that I, that was part of due diligence that I personally conducted so.
Q. Again, focusing on what you personally conducted, were there any other aspects of due diligence that you personally conducted?

Rafii

A. Again, due diligence is so broad. I don't, I mean, specifically that was what I recall the crux of what I did in relation to this deal so.
Q. Did you test any of the information that you gathered?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Test in what sense, in what kind of information?
Q. Did you make any effort to independently verify information that you received from public sources of the company?
A. In terms of my work, when comparable company analysis, for instance, is an aspect of getting an objective or benchmark for valuing, for instance, a company or it's comparables, like where it stands in terms of market data. So that in itself is a test when you kind of look at all different kinds of companies.
Q. Did you in connection with the comparables analysis examine Sunbeam's margins as compared to those of its competitors?

Rafii

A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. Do you recall anything anomalous that came out in connection with the comparison of Sunbeam to it's competitors?
A. I don't recall.
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. I don't recall anything anomalous.
Q. Did you have an understanding as to whether anyone else on the Morgan Stanley team was making any effort to independently verify any of the information that was presented to Morgan Stanley by the company?
A. I don't recall. Again, I was the most junior member of the team so.
Q. Did you view it as Morgan Stanley's responsibility in connection with M&A due diligence to determine whether Sunbeam was making unduly optimistic statements?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and objection to the extent it's calling for a legal conclusion.
A. I can't speak for Morgan Stanley,

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015206

Rafii

but, again, I -- in terms of it's standards, everyone tries to be as accurate as possible. I don't know what any one person on the deal team was doing at any particular time.

Q. Are you aware of any instance when someone on the Morgan Stanley team attempted to determine whether Sunbeam was making unduly optimistic statements?

A. I don't recall.

Q. In the M&A context, is it your view that Morgan Stanley was serving as an intermediary between Sunbeam and potential third parties?

A. In what capacity?

Q. Sure. I tried to define that by saying in the M&A context. Let me see if I can be more specific.

Is it your view that Morgan Stanley was serving as an intermediary between Sunbeam and say potential acquirers of Sunbeam?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Yeah. I don't quite understand. I think it's -- from what I understand, you know, a classic banking relationship as, yeah.

Rafii

Q. What is a classic banking relationship?

A. I just think, again, it depends on what deal and what kind of transaction. Again, I'm not very clear on your question. It was an advisor to Sunbeam, so I don't know. Like intermediary in what sense?

Q. Was Morgan Stanley a matchmaker in any way?

A. I don't recall specifically. I mean, based on the documents we've looked at it looks like they were exploring a number of options in conjunction with the company. I can't speak beyond that.

Q. Morgan Stanley helped Sunbeam present itself to possible candidates for transactions; is that correct?

A. It appears to be so based on the documents we looked at.

Q. You drew a distinction a few minutes ago between due diligence in the M&A context and due diligence in an underwriting context.

Rafii

Can you tell me what the difference between those two contexts would be?

A. I don't quite know. I'm just saying in terms of this document specifically. I may have never seen this because this looks like it's an equity offering document and it is very separate divisions so. So I wouldn't know its specific differences between the two.

Q. Did you ever have any responsibility for assisting in due diligence in a public offering while you were at Morgan Stanley?

A. Equity underwriting, not that I recall.

Q. Do you have any understanding of the difference between due diligence in the underwriting context and due diligence in the M&A context?

A. No, not specifically.

Q. Do you have a general understanding of the difference?

A. During my time there, I mean,

Rafii

there's certain fire walls between the two so we wouldn't necessarily be exposed to equity offering manuals and such, so I wouldn't be able to tell you specific differences, no.

Q. So you don't know what is done in underwriting due diligence that's different than what's done in M&A due diligence?

A. Not specifically.

Q. Do you have any general idea of difference in the standards?

A. No. I would have to review these documents. No, I wouldn't know exactly.

Q. In the M&A context do you think that the investment banker should serve as a devil's advocate for its client?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Can you rephrase that?

Q. Have you ever heard of the phrase "devil's advocate"?

A. I have but it seems very subjective in this case.

Q. Well, let me back up, I guess. That's probably a shorthand way of saying is it the investment banker's role to keep its

0152017

Page 133

Rafii

client honest in connection with an M&A transaction?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and objection to the extent it's calling for a legal conclusion.

A. It is. From my perspective, again, one tries to be as accurate and thorough as possible and to provide all kinds of information so.

Q. Does that depend on whether you're in the M&A context or another context in your experience at Morgan Stanley?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

A. Probably not. Again, I can't speak to -- my exposure was -- in terms of investment banking was solely to M&A transactions, so I can't attest to anything else here.

Q. In the M&A context, is it fair for an investment banker to rely solely on a company to provide information about the company?

A. Do you mean using the company as the primary source?

Page 134

Rafii

Q. The sole source.

A. The sole source. Again, that's a subjective question. From what my experience you typically -- that's why you use publicly available information and comparable company analysis data and kind of look at a broad range of information.

MR. JOHNSON: Can I have the question and answer back, please.

(Record read.)

MR. JOHNSON: We're two ships passing in the night here, I think.

Q. Is it your testimony that it's not reasonable for an investment banker to rely on information solely from the company it's representing?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Misstates.

A. No, that's not what I said. It's just -- from my experience you use supportive information such as comparable company analysis, such as equity research reports, etcetera.

Q. So you verify what the company's telling by looking at other materials?

Page 135

Rafii

A. From my experience you use multiple sources, that being one of them.

Q. What are the other sources that an investment banker typically would consult in verifying the information a company provides to it?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Asked and answered.

A. Again, from my experience and from my role specifically on this deal, again, acquiring information that's available, SEC documents, market information, equity research reports. Looking at a number of different companies.

Q. How about speaking with lower level employees, is that something that often occurs when an investment banker is trying to verify what a company is telling it?

MS. BROWN: Objection to form.

A. It's an aspect, speaking to company employees or officers is an aspect of due diligence, if that's what you're asking. Every deal is different. Depends, again, what kind of transaction you're trying to conduct.

Page 136

Rafii

Q. Do you know who the lowest level employee was at Sunbeam, who Morgan Stanley interviewed in connection with it's M&A due diligence?

A. No, I don't.

Q. I believe you've already testified that you couldn't identify any customers that Morgan Stanley contacted in connection with its M&A due diligence?

MS. BROWN: Asked and answered.

A. That's correct. I couldn't.

Q. In the M&A context, is it fair for a third party to expect the investment banker to protect its interests?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Calls for a legal conclusion.

A. Again, it's the third party, I believe, from my experience the third party is responsible for its own due diligence and own research and investigation.

Q. So lets put it in the context of this case, if we can.

Is it your testimony that it would

015208

Page 137

Rafii

be unreasonable for the owners, the former owners of the Coleman Company, to rely on information that Morgan Stanley was providing to it concerning Sunbeam?

A. Can you repeat that because I'm --

MR. JOHNSON: Lets see if we can have it read.

(Record read.)

A. From my point of view, not specific to this because I recall so few facts of this deal in specific. It is a third parties' I would say responsibility to do it's own due diligence and as much research as they could and, you know, they have their -- they probably have their own financial advisors as well.

Q. So the goal of accuracy that you've described is one that should not inure to the former owners of Coleman in any way?

A. I'm sorry. Can you repeat the latter half of your question?

MR. JOHNSON: Sure. Let me just start over. I'll strike that one.

Q. You've testified already today

Page 138

Rafii

that at least from a professional reputation standpoint Morgan Stanley strives to convey accurate information about its clients.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And my question is, doesn't that goal of accuracy inure to the benefit of people like the former owners of Coleman?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Calls for speculation. Also objection to the extent it calls for a legal conclusion.

A. Again, just from my personal perspective, I believe it's up to the third party, whoever we're talking about, to conduct its own due diligence and rely on its own counsel to a certain extent and do its own due diligence, however broad that term is so.

Q. But for Morgan Stanley's professional reputation, Morgan Stanley could present false information knowingly?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Argumentative. Misstates.

A. No, I didn't say that at all. I'm

Page 139

Rafii

just --

Q. Tell me what you disagree with in that statement.

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Compound.

A. The statement you just made?

Q. Correct.

A. I don't think, from my experience I don't think Morgan Stanley -- I think Morgan Stanley would strive to be, again, as accurate as possible and not to misinform people.

Q. But I think you've testified that it would do that just for its own sake. Not for the benefit of third parties.

MS. BROWN: Objection. Misstates.

A. Yeah. I didn't say that. I said for its reputation as well as its investors, its clients, etcetera.

Q. Wouldn't that include someone like the former owners of Coleman?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and also to the extent it calls for a legal conclusion.

Page 140

Rafii

A. Yeah, I mean I, I can't draw any conclusions based on this case in specific. Again, I don't recall many of the details so, and you're asking me hypothetical questions.

Q. Well, actually, lets put a little more meat on it so it's not so hypothetical.

Lets say that the former owners of the Coleman Company relied on information provided to it by Morgan Stanley concerning Sunbeam.

Is that an unfair or unrealistic act by the former owners of Coleman?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Assuming facts not in evidence. It's a hypothetical as posed and objection to the extent that it calls for a legal conclusion.

A. I have to restate what I said before. It can use, and I don't want to be specific to Coleman here. In general, the third party can use Morgan Stanley information supported by most third parties have their own counsel/financial advisory. And, you know, public information is just as available to them as it is to anyone else so. All aspects of that is important.

0052009

Rafii

Q. So the fact that third parties have their own financial advisors and lawyers gives Morgan Stanley some kind of a pass in connection with representation that it makes to those third parties?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Misstates and argumentive.

A. Not at all. That's not what I'm saying.

Q. Can you explain what you mean. You have referred to the fact that third parties have their own financial advisors.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What's the significance of that fact?

A. Doing what Morgan Stanley does for its client for its own client and being a kind of getting from their point of view, if it's valuation that they're concerned with or anything else, conducting their own analysis.

Q. Are you suggesting in any way that the third party's retention of its own advisors and counsel obviates Morgan Stanley's obligations, whatever they may be, to provide accurate information?

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and hypothetical. And objection to the extent he's calling for a legal conclusion.

A. No. I'm not saying that. I'm saying as another source you have your own advisors who supposedly are meant to do analysis for you as well so.

Q. So what?

A. So it's an important aspect. So -- you're primary question was Coleman using Morgan Stanley as its primary source of information, and me in my response not speaking specifically toward this deal, from my experience, there's a number of sources of information and verification, that being one of them.

Q. And my question based on your testimony is: Does that in any way alleviate Morgan Stanley's duties?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Asked and answered for about the 50th time.

Rafii

MR. JOHNSON: Asked. Not answered.

MS. BROWN: Objection. My objection remains and also vague.

A. Yeah.

I mean, no, I didn't say that.

Again, Morgan Stanley tries to be as -- from my experience, as accurate as possible and as thorough as possible so.

Q. Is one of the reasons for that goal because Morgan Stanley knows that at least to some extent third parties are going to rely on the information Morgan Stanley is conveying?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation. Speculation.

A. Again, it's different and subjective because it's different for every deal. Morgan Stanley, from my experience, has a responsibility to many parties so, regulators, investors, clients, etcetera.

Q. Would that etcetera or any of those other terms you've used, include third parties such as the former owners of Coleman?

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague and also to the extent he's calling for a legal conclusion.

A. I mean, from my personal experience I think it takes many parties into consideration. Perhaps third parties being one of them so.

Q. Does Morgan Stanley have any obligation to perform due diligence in connection with an M&A transaction?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Again, due diligence is broad. I think a lot of what one does is due diligence.

Q. My question was is there an obligation to perform due diligence in an M&A transaction. Whether due diligence is broad or a number of acts constitute due diligence doesn't answer the question.

MS. BROWN: My same objection.

A. From my experience due diligence is an integral part of any deal.

Q. Should due diligence continue until

0151210

Page 145

Rafii

the last minute of before a transaction closes?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. I mean, I have to say, again, due diligence is a very broad term and you can classify many things as due diligence. Like a phone call is due diligence, new market information is due diligence, new stock price is due diligence.

Q. Does the due diligence obligation end at any time prior to the closing of the transaction?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Again, it's -- that's subjective. Due diligence is different for every transaction and every circumstance. It depends on what kind of information you're trying to gather.

Q. So there may be transactions where it would be appropriate to cease due diligence prior to the closing of the transaction?

MS. BROWN: Again, objection. Vague.

Page 146

Rafii

A. No, that's not what I said. Again, what type of due diligence are you specifically referring to? There's many things that can be considered due diligence.

Q. And I'm not referring to a specific type of due diligence.

What I'm trying to understand is whether from your perspective the due diligence has a terminable point that could be any time other than the closing of a transaction?

MS. BROWN: Same objection.

A. Yeah. I mean, not necessarily.

Q. So they may not necessarily have the same end date?

A. I have to give my same response. Again, it depends on the deal. It depends what kind of transaction you're conducting, what type of information you're trying to gather.

Q. How about information that your client's sales are half of projections, is that something that would require additional due diligence prior to the closing of any type of transaction?

Page 147

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Are you asking me hypothetically or?

Q. I gave you the facts that I'd like you to address.

MS. BROWN: Same objection.

A. Again, I don't recall specific figures or information or, you know, sales numbers, projections, whatnot.

Q. The question doesn't have anything to do with that. The question has to do with -- I've asked you about whether the obligation of due diligence has an end date. And you said you can't answer that question because due diligence is broad, and I'm stipulating to that fact now.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. The point is, and you asked for more specifics, and so the specific example I gave you was learning information that your client's sales were half of projections.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Would it be permissible to cease

Page 148

Rafii

due diligence prior to the consummation of a transaction when you were aware of that fact?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Again, what do you mean by due diligence? Is it gathering information? Is it --

Q. Well, let me ask you this.

A. At what point does due diligence end?

Q. That's what I'm asking you.

A. And it depends on the deal. It depends what kind of information you're trying to gather. It depends on the transaction you're trying to conduct.

Q. So you can't give me an answer that additional due diligence is required when you learn information that your client's sales are half of its projections?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. I mean, apparently not in the manner that you're asking me.

Q. Well, let me ask you this.

If you learned information that you deemed material immediately prior to the

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 149

Rafii

closing of a transaction, what do you think an appropriate course of action is?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Calls for speculation and vague.

A. Again, you would have to clarify the context. What kind of deal it is? What we're trying to accomplish. Everything I referred to before.

Q. So lets try to put it in the context of this transaction.

Do you recall that the M&A transaction was announced in early March of 1998?

A. I don't recall specifically.

Q. Lets stipulate. Let me represent for the record that the transactions were announced on March 2, 1998.

A. OK.

Q. And they were expected to close within 60 days.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. No later than March 19 Morgan Stanley learned that Sunbeam's sales for the first quarter were half of projections.

Page 150

Rafii

In your view, what would be appropriate courses of action for Morgan Stanley when it received that information?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. I don't recall those facts and I wasn't working on the deal at the time so I don't have a specific response or reaction or hypothetical course of action, especially as the most junior person on that team.

Q. Well, I'm not asking you whether you knew those facts yet. We'll get to that.

If you had known those facts, what do you think an appropriate course of action is?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Calls for speculation.

A. Again, I can't speak for Morgan Stanley. I can't tell you what an appropriate course of action was. I'm not --

Q. You have no idea of what an appropriate course of action would be based on the information that we're discussing?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Argumentive. Asked and answered. Also

Page 151

Rafii

the question was vague.

A. Yeah. I mean, it's -- you're asking me hypothetically.

Q. Absolutely. I recognize that.

A. I don't know exactly. Again, Morgan Stanley, from my experience, tries to be as accurate and thorough as possible and has a certain obligation to its -- everybody, regulators, investors, clients, etcetera.

Q. Would delaying the consummation of the transaction be a potentially appropriate course of action?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Calls for speculation.

A. I have no idea. I don't know. I don't recall what transpired. Again, I wasn't part of the deal at that time. I don't -- I.

Q. This was the first deal that you were assigned to when you joined Morgan Stanley?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you don't really know what happened with the deal?

Page 152

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. I don't know.

A. I don't recall the specifics, and if you're referring to March, I was entrenched in other deals. I don't know specifically the course of events that ensued.

Q. Did you ever understand that there was an SEC investigation and penalties associated with Sunbeam?

A. Again, it's very vague to me. I don't remember specifics. I don't recall exactly.

Q. You don't recall ever hearing that Sunbeam was described as one of the largest financial frauds in American history?

A. I don't recall that specifically.

Q. Its since been surpassed, of course.

What were you doing in connection with the Sunbeam engagement in the first quarter of 1998?

MS. BROWN: Asked and answered.

A. From what I recall I think January

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015212

Page 153

Rafii

of 1998 was the last time I was involved in the deal. And, again, are you asking me specifics of what I did or?

Q. I'm just trying to get anything you can recall about what you were doing the first quarter of 1998 for Sunbeam.

A. From what I recall it's what I've expressed before, compiling information, contributing to the presentations and a lot of administrative and clerical work to a certain extent.

Q. Did you make any inquiries of anyone in the first quarter of 1998 concerning Sunbeam's sales or earnings per share for the first quarter of 1998?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did you work on any synergies analyses in the first quarter of 1998?

A. Not that I recall.

MR. JOHNSON: Lets get folder 24. Where are we, 170?

MS. BROWN: I think you need 172 next.

MS. PRYSAK: No, 174.

Page 154

Rafii

(CPH Exhibit 174, Morgan Stanley Confidential 0042570, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. I've given you a one-page document which we've marked as CPH Exhibit 174 which is Bates stamped Morgan Stanley Confidential 0042570.

Does this document look familiar to you?

A. I don't recall this document in conjunction with the time frame we're talking about.

Q. Do you recall a downward revision of the synergies figures by Morgan Stanley?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Again, I don't recall this document or what it's representing.

Q. So looking at Exhibit 174, you don't have an idea of what this signifies?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. I don't recall this document. From the project, I mean, we can. Based on what it says here from me looking at it right now it's Key Synergies Assumptions and it looks like -- it appears to be a downward revision in synergies.

Page 155

Rafii

Q. Do you understand that you worked on this document which we've marked as Exhibit CPH 174?

A. I don't recall working on this.

Q. I think you indicated that your efforts ended largely in January 1998; is that what you said?

A. I believe so.

Yeah, I believe so. Again, it's vague because it was such a long time ago.

MR. JOHNSON: Could I have a few more stickers, please.

THE WITNESS: Do you mind if I take a quick break?

MR. JOHNSON: Sure. Fine

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 11 minutes after 2:00 and we are off the record.

(Recess taken.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 2:16 and we are back on the record.

MS. BROWN: Just as an

Page 156

Rafii

administrative matter, for the record, Morgan Stanley produced this morning before the deposition here, at this deposition Morgan Stanley Confidential 0085777 through 783.

MR. JOHNSON: I'm going to mark another exhibit as CPH 175.

(CPH Exhibit 175, Version of Exhibit 174 with metadata exposed, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. Ms. Rafii, I'm going to represent to you that CPH Exhibit 175 is a version of Exhibit 174 with the metadata exposed, and ask you whether that metadata refreshes your recollection in any way as to whether you worked on the document we've marked as Exhibit 174?

A. Again, I don't recall this document, and based on the previous metadata documents I could have edited this or had to type it out for a presentation.

Q. Does the metadata reflected in CPH Exhibit 175 refresh your recollection in any way concerning the time period in which you were working on the Sunbeam engagement?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Rafii

A. I mean, it says February here. I don't recall the specifics of when I -- when my involvement in the deal kind of stopped. I thought it was January. Maybe it was February. It's very unclear to me.

Q. Did you attend the presentation to Sunbeam's board of directors concerning the Coleman acquisition?

A. I don't recall specifically. I may have. I don't remember specifically.

MR. JOHNSON: Let me see if I can help you remember. This has been marked previously as Exhibit 89.

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

Q. Have you ever seen Exhibit 89 before, excluding the handwriting on it?

A. The document looks familiar in terms of the type of information we used to put together.

Q. Does this look like what you would refer to as a board book?

A. It's called presentation to the board of directors, so it probably is a board presentation.

Rafii

Q. Looking at this, the date on it, does that help you recall whether you attended the presentation to Sunbeam's board?

A. A presentation to Sunbeam's board you said?

Q. Correct.

A. I remember vaguely being in some kind of board meeting. I don't remember if it's specific to this or the presentation represented hear. This type of information looks familiar.

Q. If you would look at -- I'm going to use the numbering in the document itself rather than the Bates numbers, pages 18 through 21.

Those pages represent valuations under different sets of assumptions; is that correct?

A. That's what it appears to be.

Q. Did you have any role in preparing these valuations?

A. I don't recall. I could have contributed.

Rafii

Q. The differences among the pages is the synergies figures. There is one scenario without synergies; one with 100 million of synergies; one with 150 million of synergies and one with 200 million of synergies.

How were those synergy values selected?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

A. I don't recall specifically.

Q. Do you have any general idea on why those numbers were chosen?

A. No, I don't recall specifically.

Q. Do those represent the range of synergies that Morgan Stanley believed were attainable in the transaction?

A. I don't recall specifically.

Q. Do you have any general knowledge as to the synergies that Morgan Stanley expected to be realized in the transactions?

A. I don't remember.

Q. In connection with the Sunbeam engagement, did you ever have any conversation with anyone from McAndrews &

Rafii

Forbes?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Were you ever at any meetings where any individuals from McAndrews & Forbes attended?

A. Not that I recall. I could have been, I just don't remember.

Q. Were you on any telephone calls with anyone from McAndrews & Forbes?

A. I can't remember. It could have been some kind of conference call or something, but I don't remember.

Q. Do you remember the name of anyone from McAndrews & Forbes who you dealt with at all during the Sunbeam engagement?

A. No. I don't remember the names.

Q. Have you ever dealt with anyone from McAndrews & Forbes in any context?

A. I don't recall. Not that I remember.

Q. Did you ever hear that there was softness in Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 results?

A. I don't recall.

Page 161

Rafii

Q. You may have heard that, you just don't remember or you don't recall hearing that?
A. I don't recall hearing that and at what time frame?
Q. Good clarification.
At any time during the first quarter of 1998 did you hear that there was softness in Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 results?
A. I don't remember. From what I remember I had limited involvement after January on the deal.
Q. Do you have a recollection of anyone from Morgan Stanley contacting you to discuss Sunbeam's first quarter sales?
A. No, not that I remember.
MR. JOHNSON: This has been marked already as CPH Exhibit 9.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
Q. Have you ever seen Exhibit 9 prior to yesterday?
A. I don't recall this specific document, but this type of document is

Page 162

Rafii

familiar to me.
Q. What type of document is it?
A. Just the information presented.
Q. This is information that would be given to third parties?
A. I don't know specifically who it was given to or who saw it.
Q. Do you know why information of this type is prepared?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Again, it's -- it depends on what kind of transaction, what kind of deal.
Q. This is dated February 1998.
Do you see that on the front?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you know who prepared this draft?
A. In what capacity? The information provided in it or?
Q. Well, lets talk about describe the scribner first.
Do you know whose document, excuse me, on whose computer this document resided before it was printed?

Page 163

Rafii

A. I don't know. It could have been mine, it could have been Tyrone's. I don't know specifically. It could have been Gene's. I don't know, recall specifically. Again, this type of document is familiar.
Q. Would you agree with me that the information in this document should be accurate?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Compound.
A. I mean, as accurate as possible.
Q. Can you think of any limitations on the accuracy of material like this?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Not specifically. You'd have to be more specific about what kind of -- this is a large document with a lot of information.
Q. You testified a minute ago that this should be as accurate as possible and what I'm trying to get at is, well, what would prevent it from being perfectly accurate?
A. Again, you would have to clarify

Page 164

Rafii

like what aspect of it. It could be anything from like a typo to.
Q. Lets take a specific example then. If you'd flip to the Bates page CP 026290.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. We've looked at this previously. Under the third major bullet point there's a representation that Sunbeam has growth and profitability that outpaced the nearest competitors.
What would prevent Morgan Stanley from providing accurate information as to the growth and profitability of Sunbeam?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Calls for speculation.
A. I'm not sure in what context. I can't put that in context based on this information.
Q. Was this information and that is the specific dash that we just referenced, was that information correct when it was made?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Again, I don't recall details of this.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Do you know whether it was correct when it was made?
A. I don't really recall this information so.
Q. So you don't recall one way or the other whether you knew this was correct when it was made?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. I don't recall this information in specific, so I can't.
Q. So you can't testify that it was correct when it was made because you don't recall it being made?
A. I don't recall this specific information here, so I can't comment, but, again, strive to be as accurate as possible.
Q. But referring to this specific provision, you can't comment on whether it was accurate when it was made?
A. No, I don't recall this information.
Q. If you could dig through the stack there and find Exhibit 164 for me. That's

Page 166

Rafii

it.
Do you see that the substantive information contained on the first page of Exhibit 164 is the same as is conveyed on the page we were just looking at in Exhibit 9, that is page 26290.
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. It appears to be the same information.
Q. Can you identify -- let me back up. The Exhibit 164 included metadata that indicated that it had been prepared in I believe late October or early November. Exhibit 9 in contrast is prepared in February of 1998.
Can you tell me what, if anything, Morgan Stanley did to confirm that the representations that are contained on the first page of 164 were still true and accurate as of February 1998?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Go ahead.
A. I don't recall, but, I mean, these are broad statements. I don't recall specifically.

Page 167

Rafii

Q. So you can't identify a specific thing that Morgan Stanley did to confirm that the statements were still true?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Argumentive.
A. Again, I don't recall this information in specific or the statements that it puts forward so.
Q. So you can't identify a specific act that Morgan Stanley did to confirm the accuracy of the information?
A. I don't recall and I don't know what any one member of the team was doing at any particular time so.
Q. Can you recall anything that you did to confirm the accuracy of the information?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.
A. Yeah. I don't recall.
MR. JOHNSON: Can I see folder 19, please.
Q. I think we touched on this at the beginning of the day, but did you have any involvement in connection with preparing for market reaction to the announcement of the transactions that you had worked on?

Page 168

Rafii

A. I don't recall.
MR. JOHNSON: Let me see if I can jog your memory here. This will be Exhibit 176.
(CPH Exhibit 176, three-page document with two pages of metadata, marked for identification, as of this date.)
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
MR. JOHNSON: I'm not going to mark this but as a courtesy I'll give you the Bates stamped version of the document so you can have it.
Q. Ms. Rafii, we've given you Exhibit CPH 176 which is two pages of metadata and then what appears to be a document in Morgan Stanley format. It's a three-page document.
Does that document look familiar to you in any way?
A. I don't recall this document.
Q. The metadata reflects your authorship and a last save time by you on March 2, 1998.

Do you see that?
A. I do see that. That's what it says here.
Q. And March 2, I'll represent is the day the transactions were announced.
Were you involved in any type of public relations aspects of the announcement of the transaction?
A. I don't recall.
Again, this could have been a document that I edited or typed out for somebody.
Q. The first page of the document states, "Potential market reaction to Project Laser."
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Did you have any discussions with anyone in the first quarter of 1998 as to how the market would react to the transactions?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Do you know how the market did react to the transactions?
A. Again, I don't remember

Page 170

specifically. My involvement with the deal at the time was very limited, if I had any involvement at all.
Q. Were you involved in any other publicity aspects of the transaction?
A. Not that I recall.
Q. Do you know who Hill & Nolton is?
A. It sounds vaguely familiar. I can't tell you specifically who they are.
Q. In connection with your work at Morgan Stanley did you ever work with publicists or public relations firms in connection with the announcement of the transaction?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Did you prepare a script of questions and answers for use in connection with press conferences surrounding the announcement of the transactions?
A. I don't remember.
MR. JOHNSON: Let me see the first of those. 20.
This has been marked as Exhibit 140 previously.

Page 171

THE WITNESS: Thank you.
Q. Putting aside the handwriting and marginalia, does this document look familiar to you?
A. I don't remember this document.
Q. Who at Morgan Stanley was involved in the public relations aspects of the announcement of the transactions?
A. I don't remember specifically. Again, it was a large deal team. I don't know.
Q. Do you have any idea who was involved?
A. I really couldn't say.
Q. Was Bob Kitts involved?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Asked and answered.
A. I don't know.
Q. When was the last time you spoke with anyone at Sunbeam?
A. Wow. I'm not sure. I don't recall.
Q. Do you think it was even in 1998 or do you think it was probably 1997 was the last time?

Page 172

Rafii

A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. Did you speak with anyone from Sunbeam after the announcement of the acquisitions?
A. Not that I remember.
Q. Do you know the term "fast track due diligence"?
A. No.
Q. You've never heard that term in connection with your employment at Morgan Stanley?
A. I don't recall that term. No.
Q. This has been marked previously as CPH Exhibit 27.
A. Thank you.
Q. Ms. Rafii, does CPH Exhibit 27 refresh your recollection in any way as to the term "fast track due diligence"?
A. No. Not specific to fast track due diligence.
Q. Would you be surprised if metadata revealed that you had authored what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 27?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

0-5217

Rafii

A. Based on previous information I'm not surprised, per se. Again, I could have edited the document or typed it up for someone so.

Q. But even with that, that doesn't help you understand the term "fast track due diligence"?

A. No. I don't recall that specifically.

Q. Was there any urgency to completing the transactions that Sunbeam was contemplating?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did you have a secretary while you worked at Morgan Stanley?

A. I did, but not one that would do -- I mean, I think between four or more analysts we shared an assistant so.

Q. Did the assistant work on documents for you?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. What did he or she do?

A. Answer phone calls sometimes when we weren't there, order supplies. I don't really remember them ever typing things out. They may have done, but I don't remember specifically.

Rafii

Q. What was your assistant's name in fourth quarter '97, first quarter '98?

A. I don't remember her name.

Q. Was it just one during that time period?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever learn that Sunbeam issued an earnings warning during the first quarter of 1998?

A. I don't recall.

MR. JOHNSON: Why don't we get that out, folder 28.

Why don't we change tapes.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 2:46 and we have reached the end of tape number 2 and we are off the record.

(Recess taken.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: This is tape number 3 and the time is 2:49 and we are back on the record.

Rafii

Q. I'm going to show you what's been marked previously as CPH 14.

Ms. Rafii, have you ever seen this document before?

A. I don't recall this document.

Q. Do you recall Sunbeam issuing this press release?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Did anyone from Morgan Stanley contact you in connection with the release identified in Exhibit 14?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. What was the other deal or deals you were working on in March of 1998?

A. I don't remember specifically.

Q. But Sunbeam was your first engagement?

A. That's correct.

Q. Do you know who, if anyone, at Morgan Stanley was involved in drafting Exhibit 14?

A. No, I don't know.

Q. Did you ever have any discussions with anyone at Morgan Stanley concerning this press release?

Rafii

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Do you have an opinion as to whether Morgan Stanley had an obligation to convey fully and accurately the information in its possession at the time this press release was issued?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Also object to the extent it calls for a legal conclusion.

A. In relation to this document or, I mean, this is public information, right?

Q. Well, I guess by definition a press release is public information.

A. Yeah.

Q. Did Morgan Stanley have any obligation to make sure that the public information that, the information being released to the public, was true and accurate?

MS. BROWN: Same objection as before.

A. Again, I wasn't involved on this deal at this time, to my knowledge, and I

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015218

Page 177

Rafii

really don't know what the events were. I can't speak to that.

Q. I'm not asking whether the press release is true and accurate. I'm asking whether Morgan Stanley had an obligation to ensure the truthfulness and accuracy of the press release.

MS. BROWN: Same objections.

Q. Just so we can avoid any further question on this, I think the answer is not dependant upon whether you were involved in the transaction at the time.

A. OK.

MS. BROWN: Objection. Move to strike that. My other objections remain.

A. Again, from my experience Morgan Stanley tried to be as accurate as possible and that's as much as I can say or I know.

Q. So you don't know whether Morgan Stanley had an obligation to do so?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague. Argumentive. Misstates.

A. I reiterate what I said before.

Page 178

Rafii

Morgan Stanley in it's obligations. It's a personal point of view.

Q. What you said before was that Morgan Stanley has obligations to entities beyond just its client and itself; is that correct?

MS. BROWN: Objection to the extent that it's out of context and it's mischaracterizing.

A. From my perspective and my experience it has obligations to many parties including regulators, investors, clients and so forth.

Q. I show you what's been marked previously as Exhibit 17.

I'm going to ask you to look at at least several portions of Exhibit 17, but as an initial matter I'll ask whether you've ever seen the document before.

A. I don't recall having ever seen this document at the time.

Q. So if you've seen it, it's been in connection with meetings with counsel?

MS. BROWN: You've got Exhibit 17

Page 179

Rafii

and 36 here together.

MR. JOHNSON: What's 36?

Thank you.

Mine was the only one that was.

MS. BROWN: Usually is.

MR. JOHNSON: I think there was a pending question. Maybe I didn't hear your answer.

A. You had asked me if I had seen this document.

Q. Other than in meetings with counsel.

A. No, I don't recall this document.

Q. If you would look at in particular paragraphs 5B, 6B and 6C, and I'm going to have a few questions about that.

A. You said 5B, 6B and --

Q. 6C. Let me back up for one second.

You understand that Exhibit 17 is a comfort letter?

A. I guess that's what it is.

Q. I understand you haven't seen Exhibit 17 previously.

Did you ever see any comfort

Page 180

Rafii

letters in connection with your work at Morgan Stanley?

A. I don't recall it. Not that I recall.

Q. Do you know what the purpose of a comfort letter is?

A. Not specifically. I can extract what the purpose is.

Q. Could you do that for me.

MS. BROWN: So you're asking her to say what the purpose is based on the content of the document?

Q. If what you're saying is you can read the letter and extract from it the purpose, I don't think I need you to do that.

A. No. I mean, I was just going to define it based on what I see here or what I could.

Q. Well, I guess I will ask you to do that.

A. OK.

It looks like an auditor's reviewed to confirm certain numbers or look into certain numbers as an auditor would do for everyone to feel comfortable with the transaction, is that right?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Q. Well, unfortunately, I'm the only one who asks questions.

The paragraphs that I directed your attention to specifically, 5B, 6B and 6C, those paragraphs indicate a substantial decline in sales and income, do they not?

MS. BROWN: Objection. She's testified she's never seen this before, so the document speaks for itself.

A. The document does speak for itself. That's what I see here.

Q. Would you describe the sales fall off described in 6B and 6C as substantial?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Vague.

A. Based on this document it accounts at least to a certain extent to the decline in sales. I mean, 6B it says, "Primarily due to the company's new early buy company for outdoor grills." I mean, I only know what I can read here so.

Q. I guess I'm asking whether in your professional judgment whether the quantitative information, that is the sales numbers, illustrate a significant fall off in sales?

Rafii

MS. BROWN: Same objection.

A. It's supported by qualitative data so there's at least a partial explanation based on what I read here.

Q. Putting aside the explanation, do those numbers trouble you in any way?

A. I can't have an opinion before I read the qualitative data that supports this.

Q. Does the qualitative data make you feel better about the sales figures presented in 5B and 6C?

A. Again, I would have to read this in further detail. I mean, I'm just pulling out a line I see from 6B, so I don't recall exactly what happened or why, for what reasons.

Q. So the mere fact that as stated in 6C for the first two months of '98 sales were half for the same period for '97 that fact alone doesn't cause you trouble by itself?

A. Again, I don't think one can extrapolate by looking at numbers. You have to see what's happening at the companies, changing anything, acquiring anything, eliminating any sales channel. I don't really know unless I read this at least.

Rafii

Q. So the information doesn't trouble you?

A. No, that's not the answer. I think this probably needs supporting information based on this document.

MR. JOHNSON: Can I have the question and answer back, please.

(Record read.)

Q. So the information presented in paragraph 6C by itself would not trouble you in any way?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Asked and answered.

A. Again, I don't recall this, the specific data so I can only read what I have in front of me and kind of look at it and extrapolate based on your questions.

As I read 6B further they indicate another reason which is decrease in consolidated net sales during the period as compared to the corresponding period, in part from a recurring sale in January. I mean, there's a number of factors I think to take into consideration so.

Q. One of those factors I think we've already touched on in 6B, the first part of that paragraph refers to acceleration of sales into the fourth quarter of fiscal '97 and that explains the decrease in first quarter '98 results, do you see that? Does that fact make you more or less comfortable with the overall decline in sales as described in 6C?

A. Again, they have another information as you read, another something else that attributed to the decrease in consolidated net sales, so it looks like a number of factors. I don't --

Q. Putting aside whatever factors cause the decrease, the fact of the decrease is not a troubling fact for you; is that correct?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015220

Page 185

Rafii

A. Again, I think you need to look at the backup data. If you're asking me if it's a large decrease, it looks like a large decrease, but they seem to provide some kind of justification. I don't -- that's as far as I can answer based on this information.

Q. Do you have an opinion as to whether the magnitude of the decrease is information that should be provided to third parties?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Form and to the extent it calls for a legal conclusion.

A. Yeah. Again, I can't speak for Morgan Stanley. I reiterate what I've said before regarding obligations. You know, this wasn't -- I'm -- I was the most junior member of this team and it's not an analyst's territory to kind of make hypothetical conclusions like that or draw any kind of -- I don't know.

Q. So you don't have an opinion?

A. I mean, not based on this data I don't.

Page 186

Rafii

Q. This has been marked previously as Exhibit 16.

Have you ever seen this document prior to yesterday?

A. No, I don't recall this document.

Q. Do you know what the document represents?

A. Are these Sunbeam sales to its biggest customers? I don't know exactly what it is.

Q. Did you, in connection with your work on the Sunbeam engagement, ever gain an understanding as to the magnitude of product that Sunbeam could ship on a given day?

A. No, I don't recall.

Q. Did anyone ever ask you how much product Sunbeam could ship on a given day?

A. Not that I remember.

Q. Can you tell me how the transactions that you were involved in were financed?

MS. BROWN: You mean the Sunbeam transactions?

MR. JOHNSON: Correct.

Page 187

Rafii

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you recall that there was an offering of debt?

A. I vaguely remember. Again, I wasn't, I wasn't really involved on this deal at the time and if I was, it was to a very limited extent and definitely not the offering.

Q. So you never reviewed the offering memorandum for debt?

A. I don't recall having done so.

Q. Did you ever gain any knowledge as to any events that occurred at the printer where the offering memorandum was finalized?

A. No, not to my recollection.

Q. Did you ever talk to John Tyree about Sunbeam ever?

A. I don't remember having done so.

Q. Have you ever talked to John Tyree in any connection?

A. I don't recall. If I had done so, I don't think it was ever directly.

Q. Do you know what he looks like?

A. I couldn't tell you what he looks

Page 188

Rafii

like. I don't recall.

Q. Do you know who Morgan Stanley's counsel was in connection with the Sunbeam transactions?

A. I don't remember specific to this deal.

Q. Do you have an understanding as to who Morgan Stanley generally uses in its transactions?

MS. BROWN: At that time?

Q. At that time.

A. I remember some vaguely, some of the other deals I worked on they used Skadden Arps. I don't know if they did for this deal or not.

Q. Do you know how Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 numbers actually turned out?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you have any understanding that Sunbeam's 1998 first quarter results were lower than first quarter 1997 results?

A. I mean, based on what the Arthur Anderson document, that's all I can. I don't recall at the time, no.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015921

Rafii

Q. What does the Arthur Anderson document say about that?

A. I mean, what we just talked about, a decrease in sales versus the same period in the preceding year.

Q. And so from your perspective the Anderson letter indicates that first quarter '98 results would be less than first quarter '97 results?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Mischaracterizes.

A. I mean, it doesn't specifically say that. It's just showing, I see it shows December 29, '97 to February 1.

Q. If you look at 6C, I think it goes up to March 1 as well.

A. Yeah. It says March 1.

Q. So based on that information you wouldn't be surprised that first quarter '98 results were less than first quarter '97 results?

A. I mean, just based on the information I see here, otherwise, I don't recall exactly.

Rafii

Q. Did you ever come to learn that Mr. Dunlap had been fired by Sunbeam's board?

A. I don't remember specifically. I mean, I think, again, just rumor/articles. I don't remember specifically at the time or when exactly it happened.

Q. When you say "rumors," what do you mean by that?

A. Just things you hear in the papers or CNBC or I don't remember specifically anyone saying anything in particular.

Q. Did you have any discussions with any of your colleagues at Morgan Stanley about the developments at Sunbeam after your work was finished?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. Did you hear any surprise or disappointment voiced by anyone at Morgan Stanley concerning the events after the transaction was completed?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. This has already been marked as Exhibit 76.

A. Thank you.

Rafii

Q. Exhibit 76, Ms. Rafii, has a cover memo and then a more detailed memo. On the more detailed memo you're listed as one of the authors.

Have you ever seen either of these memos before?

A. The top two memos, I don't recall them. And you name me as an author. I mean, I'm on the distribution list. That doesn't necessarily mean I'm an author.

Q. Looking at page 25830, doesn't this indicate that the memo is from you among many other persons?

A. I mean, it's not necessarily from me. Again, I think it's protocol to kind of list the different members of the teams and I was part of the M&A team. That doesn't mean I drafted the memo or was or even contributed to it.

Q. Do you know one way or the other whether you did contribute to it?

A. I don't recall this memo specifically and the date indicates that I had very limited, if any, involvement at the deal at the time so I highly doubt it.

Rafii

Q. On the front page of the document do you know what any of that handwriting signifies?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Do you know whose handwriting it is?

A. No, I don't know whose handwriting it is.

MR. JOHNSON: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is now 3:18 and we are off the record.

(Recess taken.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 3:25 and we are back on the record.

Q. Ms. Rafii, I may have asked this already, but I apologize if I have, but I'm wondering if you're aware of any efforts by Morgan Stanley to monitor Sunbeam's sales in the last half of March of 1998?

A. Last half of March of 1998?

Q. Correct.

A. I don't remember specifically.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015222

Rafii

Q. Do you have any general recollection of any efforts in that nature?

A. Again, I don't recall and specifically to that time frame I think I had limited involvement on the deal at the time.

Q. So you can't identify an effort made by Morgan Stanley to monitor sales in the second half of March of 1998?

A. Not that I recall.

Q. I'm going to show you what we've marked as CPH 177.

(CPH Exhibit 177, Self-evaluation, marked for identification, as of this date.)

Q. Ms. Rafii, can you identify Exhibit 177 for the record.

A. It looks like my firm self-evaluation.

MR. JOHNSON: For the record, that has -- it's a single-page document with Bates stamp Morgan Stanley Confidential 0085779.

Q. Do you know approximately when you completed this form?

Rafii

A. I don't remember specifically. Probably closer to mid '98 sometime. I don't remember exactly.

Q. Mid '98 would be about your one year anniversary with the firm?

A. That's right.

Q. You note in response to both the first and second questions that you did not have a finance background prior to joining Morgan Stanley.

Do you see that?

A. Yes, I see that in the first sentence.

Q. Do you see it also in the last sentence of the second response?

A. Yes, I do see that.

Q. Did you view your lack of a finance background as an impediment to your work at Morgan Stanley?

A. I wouldn't categorize it as impediment. I, obviously, expressed, I mean, lack of a finance background in terms of an M&A context is where your environment is highly quantitative. It's kind of not that surprising that I said that.

Rafii

Q. But you didn't view it as an impediment?

A. No, I don't think necessarily. I don't know what I thought at the time. I don't recall, but I don't know if impediment is the right word.

Q. I'm going to hand you what we've marked as Exhibit 84, and I believe at the beginning of the day you referred to a chronology that you used to refresh your memory when meeting with counsel.

Is this that chronology?

A. It appears to be. I don't know if it's specifically the same document but.

Q. If you would turn to the page ending in Bates stamp 33258 there's an entry for October 29. There's actually two entries for October 29. I'm going to ask about the second one. That reflects a trip to Florida by you, Mr. Chang and Mr. Yoo, do you see that?

A. Yes, I do see that.

Q. And the event assigned to that date

Rafii

reads, "MS Due Diligence Re Growth Strategies, Strategic Plan."

Does that help you to remember in any way which trip, whether the October trip or the January trip, you made to Florida?

A. I really don't remember which trip it was that I recall.

Q. Looking at the chronology, do you find anything unusual about the fact that the three most junior members of the team were sent on that trip?

A. Not necessarily. Again, I don't know specifically what was discussed or what the purpose of the trip is.

Q. So it's possible that you didn't actually attend the trip that's listed on this chronology on October 29?

A. I'm not sure. I remember one trip and, again, I don't remember what was discussed or who we met with. I remember Gene Yoo being on the trip. I don't remember details of it.

Q. If you look on the chronology on the next page, there's a January 5 entry and that entry includes Mr. Fuchs and also suggests the meeting was directed to the presentation, sell side presentation to Phillips.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

01523

Rafii

Does that help your memory in any way as to which trip you made to Florida?

A. No. I don't remember.

Q. So it's possible that the October 29 trip never happened?

A. Again, I'm not sure. I remember one trip. It could have been two. October is very early in my career at Morgan Stanley. I don't know.

Q. Do you recall any trip directed specifically to due diligence on growth strategies and strategic plan?

A. Again, I don't remember the content of what was discussed or the purpose of the trips.

Q. So you can't, as a result, identify any trip you made to Florida specifically to conduct due diligence on the strategic plan or growth?

A. I don't recall specifically.

Rafii

Q. Can you identify any trip to Florida by any member of the Morgan Stanley team that was directed primarily to due diligence on Sunbeam's growth and strategic plans?

A. Again, I don't recall specifically for that purpose.

MR. JOHNSON: I think that's all I've got.

MS. BROWN: Just two questions.

EXAMINATION BY
MS. BROWN:

Q. Ms. Rafii, during this deposition you've been shown a number of presentations by Mr. Johnson.

As you sit here today, do you know whether any of those presentations were the final copies or whether they were draft versions?

A. I'm not exactly sure. I can't tell.

Q. As you sit here today, do you know if any of the presentations that you've been shown during the course of your deposition were actually disclosed to third parties at any time in 1997 and 1998, based on your own knowledge?

Rafii

A. I'm not sure exactly.

MS. BROWN: I have no further questions.

MR. JOHNSON: Nothing further.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 3:37 and that concludes the deposition of Lily Rafii and we are off the record.

EUGENE YOO

EUGENE YOO,

called as a witness, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

EXAMINATION

BY MR. O'CONNOR:

Q. Mr. Yoo, could you please state your full name and spell it for the record.
A. Full name is Eugene Kim Yoo, E-u-g-e-n-e, middle name is K-i-m, the last name is spelled Y-o-o.
Q. And what is your current address?
A. 99 Waltham Street, Unit Number 1, Boston, Mass., 02118.
Q. Mr. Yoo, have you ever been deposed before?
A. No, I have not.
Q. Let's go over some of the basic ground rules. First, if you don't understand any of the questions that I ask you just let me know and I'll try and rephrase or help you out. If you need to take a break, that's fine, I just ask that you don't take breaks while a question is pending. Are those acceptable?
A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And also, if you could not answer questions until I've completed the question, it will just make the job easier for the court reporter --
A. Sure.
Q. -- so she can get our answers and our questions. Have you ever given testimony under oath before?
A. No, I have not.
Q. Okay. And do you realize that you're under oath today?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. You're represented today by the law firm of Kirkland and Ellis?
A. Yes, I am.
Q. Are you paying for that representation?
A. No, I am not.
Q. Are you aware of who is paying for that representation?
A. I am not.
Q. Do you understand that they, that Miss Brown represents Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley Senior Funding in this case?
A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. Did those attorneys ever ask you to search for documents in your possession that might --
A. Yes.
Q. I'm sorry. -- that might relate to Sunbeam or the Sunbeam and Coleman transaction?
A. Yes, they did.
Q. Did you have any documents in your possession?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Before we get started on some of the more interesting questions, I would like to go through some of your personal background. Not that that's not interesting. But I would like to ask you a few questions about your education after high school.
A. Sure.
Q. Where did you attend college?
A. I went to Boston College for my undergrad degree.
Q. And what was your degree in?
A. Computer science and business.
Q. What year did you graduate from Boston College?
A. 1990.
Q. Upon graduation what did you do?

A. I started at Goldman Sachs Co. in New York, I was in their operations group for four years.
Q. So until 1994?
A. Correct.
Q. And where did you go after Goldman Sachs?
A. I attended Columbia Business School.
Q. Did you graduate from Columbia?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. And in what year?
A. 1996.
Q. With an M.B.A.?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Any specialization in that program?
A. I concentrated in finance.
Q. Upon graduation what did you do?
A. I started work full-time at Morgan Stanley in their investment banking division.
Q. Was that directly after graduation?
A. Yes.
Q. You no longer are currently employed with Morgan Stanley?
A. That's correct.
Q. Okay. When did your employment with Morgan Stanley cease?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

A. In February of 2000.
Q. When you left Morgan Stanley what did you do?
A. I went to work at Bank of America in their investment banking group.
Q. Was that in New York?
A. Yes, it was.
Q. Are you still employed with Bank of America?
A. No, I am not.
Q. When did you leave Bank of America?
A. In January of 2002.
Q. And what did you do when you left Bank of America?
A. I was an independent consultant for about three years. I should say two years.
Q. Is that your current employment?
A. No, I'm currently a small business owner.
Q. And what type of business do you own?
A. It's a retail shop.
Q. Any other education other than what you've testified to this morning?
A. No.
Q. Okay. In 1996 when you first joined Morgan Stanley what was your position at that time?
A. I actually started as an intern while I was at

EUGENE YOO

Columbia and I worked there during my second semester in their debt capital markets group. Then I started full-time in August in the investment banking division, I was an associate at that time.
Q. That's August of 1996?
A. Yes.
Q. And I'm sorry, your first position was associate?
A. First full-time position was associate.
Q. Okay. Did you ever receive a promotion at Morgan Stanley?
A. No. I left prior to being up for promotion.
Q. Can you explain the duties and responsibilities of an associate in the investment banking division at Morgan Stanley back in 1996?
A. Well, I guess it's hard to explain because there are a lot of different positions for associates within the investment banking division.
Q. I'll make it easier. What were your responsibilities in 1996 as an associate?
A. My responsibilities were to manage the deal team, at least manage the analyst at the lower level members of the team and to work as a liaison between the lower level team and the managing directors or the senior members of the team.

EUGENE YOO

Q. And the same responsibilities in 1997?
A. Yes.
Q. And in 1998 did your responsibilities change?
A. Well, the description probably is the same, but the scope probably expanded a little bit.
Q. And what would -- what did it expand to?
A. Well, in 1996 my, during my first year I was rotating through different groups so I was essentially riding alongside with other associates and learning from them and as we moved into 1997 and 1998 I began to take more of that on my own.
Q. Okay. I'm sorry, the analysts that you supervised, those typically were college graduates without an M.B.A.?
A. Yes.
Q. What -- who did you report to in 1997 when you were working as an associate?
A. There were several people. The ones that I can remember specifically, Bob Kitts, Jim Stynes; I don't remember anybody else.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Alex Fuchs?
A. Alex Fuchs. David Mcreary (ph.). that's it.
Q. In 1997 do you recall the names of the analysts that you supervised?
A. I remember some of them. Tyrone Chang, Lilly Rafii, Andreas Boquist. It's been awhile. I don't remember anybody else, actually.
Q. Okay. Why did you leave Morgan Stanley in February of 2000?
A. I decided to change my career direction a little bit. I was going down a generalist path at Morgan Stanley and I wanted to focus a little bit more on a particular industry. And an opportunity came up with a friend to go to Bank of America and work in the telecom group, which I was very interested in.
Q. Your departure from Morgan Stanley was unrelated to the Sunbeam transaction?
A. It was not related at all.
Q. Okay. Mr. Yoo, when I refer to the Sunbeam transaction do you understand that to mean Morgan Stanley's engagement with Sunbeam Corporation in 1997 and 1998 and Sunbeam's efforts to sell the company or acquire other businesses?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

A. Yes.
Q. Sir, are you familiar with, with my client Coleman Parent Holdings, Inc. which prior to the sale to Sunbeam owned approximately 82 percent of the stock of Coleman Company, Inc.?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Are you familiar, sir, with my client's claims against Morgan Stanley and Company?
A. I am somewhat familiar with them.
Q. What is your understanding of that lawsuit?
MS. BROWN: I'm going to object and instruct you not to answer to the extent that your answer would reveal any communications that you had with counsel.
A. I guess I can't answer that.
Q. Okay. Are you aware, sir, that Morgan Stanley -- let me ask you. Are you familiar with the entity Morgan Stanley Senior Funding?
A. Somewhat familiar.
Q. Okay. What is your understanding of that entity?
A. From what I understand it is an organization set up within Morgan Stanley to provide senior lending to clients.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Were you ever employed, sir, by Morgan Stanley Senior Funding?
A. No, I was not.
Q. Are you aware that Morgan Stanley Senior Funding has filed a lawsuit against Coleman Parent Holdings and MacAndrews and Forbes Holdings?
A. Yes, I was.
Q. Are you familiar with that lawsuit?
A. Not very familiar.
Q. Okay. What is your understanding of that lawsuit?
A. From what I understand Morgan Stanley Senior Funding is suing in an effort to recover some of the loan proceeds it had lent out.
Q. Have you read that Complaint?
A. No, I have not.
Q. Did anyone consult you about that Complaint prior to its filing?
A. No.
Q. Mr. Yoo, when you left Morgan Stanley in February of 2000 did you take any documents with you?
A. No.

EUGENE YOO

Q. What happened to your documents when you left the company?
A. All of my deal-related documents were left in my office. They were in my files on my, in my bookshelf. I don't know what happened to them after that.
Q. Were you told to leave your deal documents in your office?
A. I was never really told anything specifically about them, but I just assume that they were documents that I shouldn't be taking with me.
Q. Mr. Yoo, when was the first time that you were contacted by attorneys for Morgan Stanley or Morgan Stanley Senior Funding in connection with these lawsuits?
A. I don't remember precisely. I believe it was sometime in early 2004.
Q. Do you remember who you spoke with?
A. Tom Clare.
Q. Did you speak with any other attorneys for Morgan Stanley?
A. No.
Q. Did any in-house attorneys from Morgan Stanley contact you concerning this case?

EUGENE YOO

A. No.
Q. Mr. Yoo, do you have any continuing contact with your former colleagues at Morgan Stanley?
A. I keep in touch with a few folks on a sporadic basis but I don't really talk to anyone on a regular basis. Just whoever I happen to run into.
Q. Do you recall any of those people; the names of those people?
A. Xavier Stationberg (ph.). Who else did I run into? Davis Mcreary, Tyrone Chang. That's probably about it.
Q. When is the last time that you spoke with Mr. Change?
A. Let's see, almost a year ago now. It was late spring of last year when I was in Los Angeles.
Q. Have you spoken to any current or former Morgan Stanley employees concerning these lawsuits or your testimony here today?
A. No.
Q. Sir, do you have any business relationships, existing business relationships with Morgan Stanley as a result of any of your prior deals or current business relationships?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

A. No, nothing.
Q. What did you do to prepare for your deposition today?
A. I met yesterday with Zhonette Brown and she filled me in on the details of the case and what was --
MS. Brown: You don't need to reveal communications between counsel.
A. Right.
Q. Did you review any documents?
A. Yes.
Q. Did any of those documents refresh your recollection of any of the facts or events concerning the Sunbeam/Coleman transaction?
A. Not really.
Q. Did you review any deposition testimony?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Was any deposition testimony read to you or described to you?
A. No.
Q. How long did you meet with Miss Brown?
A. Just a few hours.
Q. Have you ever been contacted by any state or federal regulators in connection with your employment at Morgan Stanley?

EUGENE YOO

A. No.
Q. While you were employed at Morgan Stanley did you use e-mail?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Did you ever print out any of the e-mail messages that you sent or received?
A. I'm sure I printed some at some point.
Q. Did you personally create any documents in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. What did you do with those documents?
A. It depends on what documents you're talking about specifically.
Q. Well, the deal, the deal documents, --
A. I mean.
Q. -- other than keeping them in your office when you walked out?
A. The original files I guess were at Morgan Stanley still in electronic format; I don't have any of the hard copies.
Q. While you were employed at Morgan Stanley were you aware of any document retention or destruction policies?

EUGENE YOO

A. There was a document retention policy which, at least for the MNA group; I don't recall what it was now.
Q. Did you file those policies?
A. I hope I did.
Q. Did you receive any specific instructions on preserving e-mail?
A. No, not really.
Q. Mr. Yoo, I'm going to show you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 6. Mr. Yoo, have you seen this document before?
A. No, I haven't seen this one.
MS. Brown: Just for the record, when you ask him whether he's seen documents before, he will exclude any documents that he saw during his preparation.
MR. O'CONNOR: Correct. That's fine.
Q. Sir, could I point your attention to the first paragraph under file maintenance or it reads, "file should be kept lean and unnecessary material should be discarded on a regular basis." Do you see that?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Do you recall that being part of the document retention policy at Morgan Stanley while you were employed at the company?

EUGENE YOO

A. I do recall that, yes.
Q. Do you have an understanding of why files should be kept lean at Morgan Stanley?
A. I don't know precisely why.
Q. Did you keep your files lean in accordance with this policy, sir?
A. Well, I mean, I would throw out things that I thought were unnecessary on an ongoing basis. You know, paper tends to pile up pretty quickly.
Q. How would you make the decision whether to retain or keep documents in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
A. I don't know what my -- I don't know if there was a methodology. Anything that I considered to be a finished product I usually kept anything that was a work in progress or if there were final versions of it I usually through out.
Q. Were you instructed by anyone to discard documents that were not in their final form?
A. No. I was never instructed in any way to discard anything, or not to discard anything.
Q. You can set that aside.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

Mr. Yoo, do you recall that Morgan Stanley began working with Sunbeam in the spring of 1997 to identify opportunities for the sale of Sunbeam Corporation?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. When was your first involvement on the Sunbeam engagement?

A. I was involved nearly from the beginning when we first began to pitch for the business with Sunbeam, when Al became, Al Dunlap became CEO.

Q. Do you recall who asked you to join the team to prepare that pitch?

A. At the time I was an associate in the associate pool and I was doing my MNA rotation and I was next up for the assignment when it came up.

Q. What do you recall doing to assist Morgan Stanley in preparing the pitch to Sunbeam?

A. Do you want me to go through all of it?

Q. Sure.

A. We, we, from what I can remember we went through the history of, you know, where Sunbeam was at that time and the difficulties that it was in. The reasons they had brought on Al Dunlap as CEO. We did some research on Al Dunlap's prior, prior work at places like Kimberly-Clark or Scott Paper, I guess, to just kind of get a sense of who he was and what he had done. We did quite a bit of analysis on Sunbeam itself; financial analysis.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Anything else that you can recall?

A. No, not really.

Q. Okay. What was the purpose of this research into Sunbeam and Al Dunlap in connection with this pitch to Sunbeam?

A. Well, it was really just to make sure that we knew all of the facts before we went into the meeting, to make sure that we knew the situation, knew everything about who it was that we were presenting to and making sure that the presentation was, you know, on top of everything.

Q. Do you recall when this presentation occurred?

A. I don't know specifically. It was sometime in the spring of 1997.

Q. Who else worked with you on preparing this pitch?

A. Alex Fuchs, Bob Kitts, Jim Stynes, Tyrone Chang.

Q. Anyone else?

EUGENE YOO

A. No.

Q. Were you aware at that time, sir, that Morgan Stanley was in competition with other investment banks for the Sunbeam engagement?

A. I didn't have any firsthand knowledge about who else was in competition for the business.

Q. But part of this exercise -- part of this exercise, sir, was to show Sunbeam why Sunbeam should choose Morgan Stanley as its investment bankers as opposed to another company; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall when Sunbeam formally engaged Morgan Stanley as its advisers?

A. Again, I don't know the exact date; I believe it was somewhere around September or October of '97.

Q. Do you recall, sir, how many hours you worked on the Sunbeam matter prior to that formal engagement?

A. I don't know exactly how many.

Q. Would it be in the hundreds of hours?

A. That's most likely correct.

Q. Okay. Did you ever keep track of your time working on Sunbeam, the Sunbeam matter?

EUGENE YOO

A. We kept time sheets as a regular process in our time keeping process in the U.S. banking group.

Q. What information did you record on those time sheets?

A. Just the hours that we, we would bill our hours for different clients. That's about it.

Q. You wouldn't provide descriptions, general or detailed descriptions of the work that you performed?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Was that time submitted on a regular basis? Like a weekly basis?

A. I don't remember exactly. I think it was either weekly or biweekly.

Q. Okay. I'm going to show you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 163. My first question, sir, is have you ever seen this document before?

A. No, I have not.

Q. You'll notice on the first page of Exhibit 163 is a listing of employees at Morgan Stanley and you'll see that the second to the last is your name, Gene Yoo?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

01528

EUGENE YOO

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. If you follow the line over to year-to-date hours there's an entry for 356?
A. Okay.
Q. And it appears that this document reflects as you'll see in the right hand, just below the upper right-hand corner for fiscal year 1997?
A. Yes.
Q. Does that number seem accurate for your work on the Sunbeam engagement in 1997?
A. I couldn't tell. But it seems right.
Q. Okay. If you would flip, sir, to the last page of this document. You'll see that there are entries across from your name for August, September and October of 147 in August, 115 in September and 94 in October. Do you see those, sir?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Okay. And if you flip to the page previous to that which is 80429. And across from your name for April, May, June and July there are no hours entered?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you know why there would be no hours entered in for those months in 1997?

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't know.
Q. Did you work on the Sunbeam engagement in April through July of 1997?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. Okay. So then on the first page of CPH Exhibit 163 the year-to-date hours of 356 probably is not an accurate representation of the hours that you worked on the Sunbeam engagement in 1997?
A. I couldn't tell. I'm not sure how the, the time keeping department allocated the hours to the months.
Q. Set that aside. I'm trying to get a sense of an overview of the scope of your involvement on the Sunbeam engagement. You testified that you were involved in preparing the pitch to Sunbeam; after that assignment what did you work on?
A. For Sunbeam?
Q. Yes.
A. After the pitch I guess it was just continuing to try to come up with ideas for Sunbeam and seeing if there were any other situations that came up that might peak their interests. But we weren't really formally engaged for I think about five or six months between.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Between the time that you, that Morgan Stanley provided the pitch to Sunbeam and the formal engagement agreement, did you continue to work on the Sunbeam transaction identifying these ideas?
A. I don't recall specifically. But, you know, I would think that, I think -- I'm pretty sure I did work on it somewhat. I don't know how much.
Q. When you say you worked on ideas for Sunbeam, what do you mean by that?
A. Well, in coming out of, coming out of the initial meeting, you know, the idea was that they were either looking to sell the company or to find targets, at least, you know, that was the thought. And so were trying to come up with ideas that might turn into something more tangible in terms of a transaction.
Q. Did you attend that pitch to Sunbeam?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Okay. Do you know what Morgan Stanley's primary mission was coming out of that meeting with Sunbeam?
MS. Brown: Object to form.

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't know exactly what came out of the meeting. I wasn't there. I didn't hear what they said.
Q. Did anyone tell you that the primary focus in 1997 was to find a buyer for Sunbeam to sell Sunbeam Corporation?
A. They never said that that was the primary focus.
Q. Other than identifying these other potential ideas for Sunbeam what else did you do on the engagement?
A. From what I remember, before being formally engaged most of the work was really just keeping up with current events on the company or the industry, making sure that we were, you know, on top of getting all of the latest financial filings or earnings releases, any news that came out, any announcements that they made.
Q. Did you ever attend any meetings with potential buyers or acquisition targets?
A. I personally did not attend any of those meetings.
Q. Did you prepare any documents for other members of the Morgan Stanley team in connection with exploring strategic alternatives for Sunbeam?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

A. Yes, I did.
Q. What are the types of documents that you recall drafting?
A. Again, I don't recall specifically, but the documents mostly were descriptive materials about Sunbeam, describing the company, financials, that's about it.
Q. Did you prepare any of the transaction documents related to the acquisition of the Coleman Company?
MS. Brown: Object to the form.
A. I'm not sure what you mean by --
Q. Purchase agreement.
A. No, I did not.
Q. Were you involved in preparing any of the financing documents in connection with that deal?
A. No, I was not.
Q. Were you involved in preparing any documents analyzing potential synergies of a combination involving Sunbeam and another company?
MS. Brown: Object to form.
A. I'm not sure what documents you're referring to.
Q. Are you aware of the concept of synergies?

EUGENE YOO

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Did you personally prepare any documents that sought to analyze potential synergies, assuming the transaction would occur between Sunbeam and another company?
MS. Brown: Object to form.
Q. Or perform a synergies analysis.
A. I'm sure we did some that were part of the standard investment banking analysis. I don't recall specifically which documents we did.
Q. Did you perform any due diligence of Sunbeam?
A. The Morgan Stanley team did.
Q. What did you do personally, if anything, to conduct due diligence on Sunbeam?
A. From what I remember we had, we had done interviews of the management team, the senior management team, and we also visited their headquarters in Florida. We also met with the heads of all of the different divisions. We were given a presentation on their new business plan. We spent some time with Russ Kirsch the CFO and Don Oosi, I believe he was the COO, and they spent a good deal of time giving us a lot of the detail on the turn around plan and the growth plan going forward.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Any other aspects of due diligence that you recall that you performed?
A. And then just the standard, you know, MNA type of due diligence, going through financial filings, public documents.
Q. As part of that financial due diligence did you look at anything other than publicly filed documents?
MS. Brown: Object to form.
A. I'm not sure what you mean.
Q. Well, what types of public documents would you look at in conducting the MNA due diligence that you spoke of?
A. For -- again, for this transaction, from what I remember, the types of things we looked at were filings with the SEC, any press releases that the company put out or any other, any of the other companies in its industry, any new stories that came out on any of the relevant companies. Any, you know, any publicly available equity research.
Q. In addition to those sources of information did you look at any non-public information in conducting this MNA financing due diligence?

EUGENE YOO

A. Again, I'm not sure what you mean by.
Q. Documents that someone on the street wouldn't have access to. Not filed with the SEC or otherwise publicly available.
A. I can't think of anything.
Q. Were you involved on the roadshow for the debenture offering?
A. No.
Q. Do you recall that happening?
A. I sort of recall, you know, the time it was happening. But I wasn't part of it at all. I wasn't part of the financing process.
Q. Do you recall when the deal closed, the Coleman deal closed?
A. I think it was spring of 2000. I'm sorry. Spring of 1998.
Q. After that transaction closed did you continue to work on the Sunbeam engagement?
MS. Brown: Object to the form.
A. It depends on how you define Sunbeam engagement.
Q. I'm just trying to get a sense of every aspect of the engagement that you worked on. After Sunbeam acquired the Coleman Company did you

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015240

EUGENE YOO

continue to work for Sunbeam in developing strategic options for the company?
A. No.
Q. Did you work on any other deals other than Sunbeam when you were an associate in 1997 and 1998?
A. Yes.
Q. What were those deals?
A. I can't recall specifically what was happening at the time. We were -- I think the only two that I can remember specifically we were working on a sale of a division for General Motors and we were looking at strategic alternatives for a technology client on the west coast.
Q. In 1997 what percentage of your time did you devote to the Sunbeam engagement?
A. In 1997?
Q. Yes.
A. My best guess, somewhere between a third and a half.
Q. In the first three months of 1998 do you recall what percentage of your time was devoted to the Sunbeam engagement?
A. Again, my best guess is about the same.

EUGENE YOO

Q. A third to a half of your time?
A. (Witness nods in the affirmative.)
MR. O'CONNOR: I'll ask the court reporter to mark the next exhibit as CPH 217.
(Deposition Exhibit 217 marked for identification.)
Q. Mr. Yoo, you've been handed what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 217. This is what appears to be a 1998 fiscal year hours report.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. You'll see again that your name is listed as an employee with year-to-date hours of 1,286. And if you turn, sir, to the second page of this document. For your hours report for December indicates 361; January, 289; February, 123; in March, 106. Do you believe, sir, that to be an accurate representation of the time that you worked on the Sunbeam engagement in those months?
A. And I -- I couldn't tell you for sure.
Q. And if you could turn then to page 80433 of Exhibit 217. You'll see across from your name for April it reflects 169 hours. The same for May and then 69 hours in June. Do you recall, sir, what you were working on in April, May and June of 1998 for Sunbeam?

EUGENE YOO

A. From what I can remember I believe what this is was we were looking at, or we were in the middle of selling one of the Coleman divisions.
Q. And that was after Sunbeam acquired the Coleman Company?
A. That was post closing, yes.
Q. Do you recall why Sunbeam was, attempted to sell divisions of Coleman after the transaction was closed in March?
A. I don't know the reasons behind it. They were very small, though.
Q. Small divisions?
A. Very small divisions, yes.
Q. In the spring of 1997 while you were preparing the pitch to Sunbeam, did you know why Sunbeam intended to pursue these strategic alternatives?
MS. Brown: Objection. Foundation.
A. I have no idea.
Q. No one ever expressed Sunbeam's intentions to you in the spring of 1997?
MS. Brown: Objection. Form.
A. I'm not sure what you mean by that.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Mr. Kitts or Mr. Stynes never advised the team at Morgan Stanley why they were preparing a pitch to Sunbeam other than to get the business from Sunbeam?
A. For me at the time? I was a first year associate and it was my first MNA transaction. And I was more concerned with just getting the work done.
Q. Did you have a lot of contact, sir, with Mr. Kitts or Mr. Stynes?
A. Not in the spring of 1997.
Q. When did you begin to have more contacts with those individuals?
A. It sort of grew over the year. Probably came more regular by the end of 1997.
Q. Who did you regularly report to in 1997?
A. For the Sunbeam transaction?
Q. Correct.
MS. Brown: Asked and answered.
A. For the most part it was Alex Fuchs.
Q. So if you had a question typically would you go see Mr. Fuchs?
A. Typically.
Q. Okay. Sir, I'm handing you what's been

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

previously marked as CPH Exhibit 77. It's a one-page document that appears to be a news release dated April 4th of 1997. Have you seen this document before? Or this press release. Not necessarily in this form.

A. I don't recall exactly.

Q. In the first paragraph you'll see that it states, "that Sunbeam Corp. has begun interviewing investment bankers to consider options that include making hostile takeovers of as much as five billion or selling the company, chairman Al Dunlap said." Does that refresh your recollection of Sunbeam's intention in the spring of 1997 in pursuing strategic alternatives?

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. Again, I don't really remember. I don't really remember much about, you know, the reasoning behind a lot of what we were doing at the time.

Q. If you look at the last paragraph where it lists the names of some companies. Chase Manhattan, Goldman Sachs, JP Morgan and Company; does that refresh your recollection, sir, of the other banks that were competing with Morgan Stanley for the Sunbeam engagement?

A. At the time, like I said, I really didn't know who else was competing for the business.

Q. Set that aside. I'm going to show you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 78. CPH Exhibit 78 is a, it's a two part e-mail, the first is dated April 13th of 1997, authored by Tyrone Chang and the second is dated April 15th of 1997. Have you seen this e-mail before?

A. No, I've never seen this.

Q. You did not direct Mr. Chang to send out this e-mail?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Did Mr. Chang report to anyone else besides yourself on the Sunbeam engagement?

A. He also reported directly to Alex Fuchs on occasion. Alex and Tyrone were part of a subgroup called business development. And I was on loan on my rotation to business development.

Q. Okay. Set that aside. In 1997 what was your understanding of Al Dunlap's business reputation?

A. I didn't know much about him prior to being brought onto the assignment.

EUGENE YOO

Q. You testified earlier this morning that you researched Al Dunlap and his history with other companies; --

A. (Witness nods in the affirmative.)

Q. -- is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. What did you learn about Mr. Dunlap in conducting that research?

A. It's a long time ago. I don't remember much about the specifics of what we learned. Generally speaking he had a reputation for turning around troubled companies.

Q. Did you understand that his involvement at Sunbeam as the CEO was intended by the board of Sunbeam to utilize his turn around capabilities?

A. I don't know anything about what the board intended.

Q. In your review of Sunbeam's historical financial information did you learn that Sunbeam prior to Mr. Dunlap's arrival was in need of financial or business restructuring?

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. I'm not sure -- can you be a little more specific with that?

EUGENE YOO

Q. Do you have any recollection, sir, of why Mr. Dunlap was hired by the Sunbeam board to be the CEO of Sunbeam in 1996?

MS. Brown: Objection. Foundation.

A. I don't recall.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. I don't recall -- I don't recall anything about that.

Q. Did you review any documents or speak to anyone in order to determine whether Mr. Dunlap was performing a turn around of Sunbeam?

MS. Brown: Objection. Form.

A. I, as far as what Al was brought in to do at Sunbeam, again, we didn't, you know, until we had started working on the project I didn't really know much about it. I had just, I knew there was a headline about it, but that was about it.

Q. And my question was once you started digging into the information about Sunbeam's historical and anticipated growth, did you come to learn that Al Dunlap was touting the turn around of the Sunbeam Corporation under his leadership?

MS. Brown: Object to form.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 42

EUGENE YOO

A. I'm not sure what he was touting.
Q. Let me show you, sir, what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 170. My first question, Mr. Yoo, is whether you've seen this document before?
A. I don't believe I have.
Q. Do you know if anyone at Morgan Stanley was involved in drafting this document?
A. I don't know.
Q. I'm going to show you what's previously been marked as CPH Exhibit 80. This is a document entitled Memorandum Regarding the Information Request. Subject: Allen Dunlap's track record. Have you seen this document before?
A. I don't think so. It doesn't look familiar.
Q. Did you read Mr. Dunlap's book Mean Business in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
A. Actually, I did not.
Q. Did you read any portions of that book?
A. I think I did read portions of it. But I didn't think there was much in there to gain so I didn't really read much, most of it.
Q. Did you ask Mr. Chang to research Mr. Dunlap's track record?

Page 43

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't remember if it was me specifically who asked him or if it was something that Bob or Alex had asked.
Q. In the second paragraph there's a reference to a Cavenham Forest Industries?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And, quote, the turn around orchestrated by Albert Dunlap and completed under his leadership culminating in the sale of the company in 1990. Do you see that, sir?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you investigate the -- did you investigate Dunlap's turn around of Cavenham Forest Industries in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
A. Could you be a little bit more specific when you say "investigate."
Q. Did you do anything to review the financial or business condition of that company before and after Al Dunlap's arrival at that company to orchestrate a turn around?
A. I don't remember specifically what analysis we had done on his prior tenures.
Q. Mr. Yoo, when you testified earlier that you conducted research on Mr. Dunlap, who he was and what he did, what did you do?

Page 44

EUGENE YOO

A. Mostly from what I remember it was, again, going through prior financials from his past companies or pulling up news articles from, from his prior deals.
Q. But you don't recall doing that for Cavenham?
A. Again, I don't remember specifically what we did for Cavenham.
Q. If you could turn back to CPH Exhibit 170. The second paragraph. There's a discussion of Mr. Dunlap's tenure at Scott Paper Company?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Take a second to read that, please.
A. (Witness reviewing.) Okay.
Q. Do you recall reviewing Scott Paper's financial condition or news reports about Scott Paper in connection with your work on the Sunbeam engagement?
A. I do recall that we did do some, some work on looking at Scott. I think that was the, the biggest of the, or the most notable of his turn around.
Q. Did you confirm, sir, that Mr. Dunlap indeed conducted a successful turn around of Scott Paper Company?

Page 45

EUGENE YOO

MS. Brown: Object to form.
A. How do you define successful?
Q. Well, what do you recall doing to review Dunlap's turn around of Scott Paper Company?
A. The only thing I can remember for sure was sort of a before and after look at the financials of Scott before Dunlap had arrived. And Scott after it had arrived. And the return to the Scott shareholders.
Q. What do you recall learning?
A. I'm sorry.
Q. What do you recall learning from that exercise?
A. At the time it seemed like it was a good deal for the Scott shareholders. I don't know how it turned out now, but.
Q. Do you recall why you believed that at the time?
A. I don't know any specifics. I don't remember anything.
Q. Have you come across any information subsequent to that investigation of Scott Paper that leads you to believe that Dunlap did not complete a successful turn around of the company?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

MS. Brown: Object to the form.

A. I haven't really, you know, I haven't really looked at it since.

Q. What was the purpose of Morgan Stanley's research into Mr. Dunlap's background and his performance in turning around companies prior to Sunbeam?

MS. Brown: Asked and answered.

A. I'm sorry, could you repeat that again.

Q. Sure. Could you read back the question.

(Prior testimony read back.)

"What was the purpose of Morgan Stanley's research into Mr. Dunlap's background and his performance in turning around companies prior to Sunbeam?"

A. I think as I said before we were trying to make sure that we understood, you know, we fully understood all of the aspects of the meeting, of the company and the situation and Al before going into the meeting.

Q. Were you also trying to understand whether Dunlap's turn around of companies, where he was CEO prior to Sunbeam were in fact true turn arounds of those companies?

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. I don't know.

Q. No one ever mentioned to you that there might be some question as to whether his turnaround at Scott Paper was successful or real?

A. No, not as far as I can remember, that never came up.

Q. What did you do with the information that you learned about Mr. Dunlap beyond preparing the pitch to Sunbeam?

A. All of the information pretty much went to Alex and Bob and Jim.

Q. That's Mr. Fuchs, Mr. Kitts and Mr. Stynes?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what they did with that information?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you know, Mr. Yoo, that Morgan Stanley had a prior relationship with Mr. Dunlap before his arrival at Sunbeam?

A. I didn't know.

Q. Do you know Bill Strong at Morgan Stanley?

A. I met him a few times.

Q. So you were not aware at the time that Bill

Strong had a relationship with Mr. Dunlap prior to Dunlap's arrival at Sunbeam?

A. No, I didn't know that.

Q. I'm handing you what's previously been marked as CPH Exhibit 68. Have you seen this document before, Mr. Yoo?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. When do you recall seeing this document?

A. I don't know exactly, but it was maybe a few weeks after the article was published.

Q. So that would be a few weeks after January 15th of 1996?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recall why you saw this document?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Did you read this document in connection with the Sunbeam engagement or did you read it outside of your work at Morgan Stanley?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Did you read the entire article in 1996?

A. In 1997?

Q. In 1996.

A. No.

Q. Just so we're clear, sir, the, it appears the article was written in January of 1996, in the upper left-hand corner.

A. Oh, okay.

Q. There's also a date on the bottom right-hand corner of July 16th of 1997. Just so we're clear, sir, do you recall reading this document a couple of weeks after January 15th of 1996 or a couple of weeks after July 16th of 1997?

A. I don't know, I don't remember exactly when I read it. But probably sometime around the time that it was published.

Q. Did you have any discussions with anyone at Morgan Stanley about the contents of this article?

A. I don't remember anything specifically.

Q. Anything generally?

A. Not about this article itself.

Q. What do you recall discussing with members at Morgan Stanley about Mr. Dunlap's performance at Scott Paper?

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. Other than the analysis that we had done there wasn't really much other discussion on that. After the first meeting we didn't really spend a lot of time looking back at Scott.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

Q. You don't recall any discussions about the accuracy of the information in this article?
A. Not, there were no discussions about the accuracy of the article.
Q. Do you recall what your reaction was after reading this article?
A. I recall thinking that it was humorous at the time. And I don't know who I was talking to, but the only thing I can remember talking about the article was how people who went into turn around situations tended to get a bad reputation. But that was the only thing I could remember.
Q. Why did you think that the article was humorous?
A. The, some of the outrageous, I think if this is the one I'm thinking about, some of the outrageous numbers or some of the things that they were saying about Al seemed to be funny.
Q. When you say "outrageous numbers" are you referring to the numbers relating to Scott Paper in the turn around?
A. No, just the, you know, they're talking about, for instance, here, 225 percent stock gain and adding 6.3 billion of company value; it was just kind of funny that, you know, it was all being linked to one event, so.

EUGENE YOO

Q. And why was that funny to you?
A. I don't know. The -- there are a lot of things that can take place over a long period. I just thought it was funny they were putting it all on one thing.
Q. What was that one thing?
A. It seemed like they were attributing it all to Al.
Q. Did you believe that Mr. Dunlap was not responsible for the stock price increase?
A. I mean, I didn't know either way. It seemed like that was the assumption that they were making in the article.
Q. Did you ever investigate whether Mr. Dunlap had indeed added 6.3 billion in value in stock, or to Scott Paper?
MS. Brown: Object to form.
A. I don't, I don't remember -- I didn't really know either way, you know.
Q. So other than thinking that it was funny that they had attributed these increases to

EUGENE YOO

Mr. Dunlap, you don't recall ever seeking out information to confirm or deny that information?
A. I don't think there was any way we could prove either way.
Q. Did you ask Mr. Dunlap?
A. I didn't really talk to him about this.
Q. Did you ever speak to Mr. Dunlap?
A. I did speak to him probably once or twice.
Q. Did you ever discuss his performance at Scott Paper?
A. No.
Q. What did you discuss with Mr. Dunlap?
A. Nothing, really. It was just, he would walk into a meeting that I was attending and we would say hello. He would ask how things were going and that's it.
Q. Did you discuss with anyone the information contained in the Shredder article?
MS. Brown: Object to form.
A. Again, I don't remember ever talking to anyone specifically about this article. You know, just talking about Sunbeam in general and that's part of the deal.
Q. Did you ever tell anyone at Morgan Stanley that you thought that this article was humorous?

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't remember. I don't remember who I was talking to.
Q. Do you recall talking to anyone at Morgan Stanley about the outrageous numbers in this article?
MS. Brown: Object to form. Mischaracterization.
A. No, I don't really. I just remember, again, I think this was -- I don't recall where -- I don't recall when exactly I read this in relation to the time line. Yeah, I don't recall ever talking about this article specifically, or bringing this up or anything about this article before.
Q. You also said that after reviewing this article you thought that people who did turn around work, received bad reputations; why is that?
MS. Brown: Objection. Vague sentence, mischaracterizes his testimony.
A. I don't remember exactly who it was, but I just remember, I think there were a few articles that came out at that time about people who were involved in, you know, difficult situation at companies. That's the only thing I can remember about that connection or that aspect of it. For some reason I just happened to read a few articles at the time that talked about different people doing, or working in similar situations. And they all seemed to be very negative about those people.

01525

EUGENE YOO

Q. Did you believe that Mr. Dunlap was receiving a bad reputation as a result of his turn around work?

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. I didn't really know. I mean, I didn't really know, at least at the time I was reading the article I wasn't really thinking about, I wasn't concentrating on the specifics of his work.

Q. Was that information you sought to acquire in your review of his performance at companies prior to Sunbeam?

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. I'm not sure what you mean.

Q. Well, as part of your research into Mr. Dunlap's history did you feel that it was important for you to determine whether Mr. Dunlap received, unfairly received a bad reputation for his turn around work?

EUGENE YOO

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. As part of our work at Morgan Stanley, you know, we weren't really looking at his reputation, you know, whether, we weren't looking really at that angle of it, we were just looking at his results and what had he actually done.

Q. Was his reputation immaterial to your work in connection with Sunbeam, the Sunbeam engagement?

MS. Brown: Object to form. Argumentative.

A. I mean, I don't know what it related to in terms of the engagement with Morgan Stanley and Sunbeam. My part of it was just, you know, my focus at that time in that deal was just to perform the analysis on what we looked at at Scott.

Q. What was your conclusion after performing that analysis?

A. As I said before, I think at the time it looked like the numbers were pretty good.

Q. And what do you mean by "pretty good"? That they were accurate?

A. I don't know what you mean by "accurate."

Q. Whether Mr. Dunlap truly turned around Scott

EUGENE YOO

Paper prior to its sale?

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. That's his opinion.

Q. Did you ever reach that opinion one way or the other?

A. Did I personally reach that opinion?

Q. Right.

A. Like I said, at the time I thought he had done a good job. You know, the numbers seemed to work out.

Q. Did anyone at Morgan Stanley disagree with that opinion to your knowledge?

A. Not that I can remember.

MS. Brown: Let's take a break.

MR. O'CONNOR: Can I go for about two more minutes?

MS. Brown: Okay.

Q. Sir, I'm going to show you a copy of an exhibit previously marked CPH 148. Have you seen this document, sir?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. When did you first see this document?

A. I believe I wrote it.

Q. This is your handwriting?

EUGENE YOO

A. I think so.

Q. Do you recall why you prepared this document?

A. I don't know exactly. It looks like I'm taking notes on something.

Q. It appears that you're taking notes on Mr. Dunlap's performance at Scott Paper; is that fair to say, --

MS. Brown: Objection.

Q. -- in the left hand column?

MS. Brown: Object to form. Mischaracterization.

A. I think I was actually taking notes on the article, from the news article.

Q. If you flip back to CPH Exhibit 68. The next to the last paragraph which appears on Morgan Stanley 3996. There's information in that paragraph concerning 11,000 people that were eliminated, 11,000 jobs eliminated at Scott Paper, 71 percent headquarter staff, 50 percent of the managers and 20 percent of the hourly workers. That information is also contained in your handwriting notes on CPH Exhibit 148; is that correct?

A. Which page are you on? I'm sorry.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

Q. It's page 2 of the Shredder article, CPH Exhibit 68.
A. Okay.
Q. It's the next to the last paragraph.
A. Okay. Okay.
Q. And my question, sir, was the information contained in this article in that paragraph that's also reflected in your handwritten notes in CPH 148 correct?
A. It appears to be.
Q. Do you recall, sir, why when thinking that this information was humorous you were taking notes of that information as reflected in CPH Exhibit 148?
MS. Brown: Object to form. Mischaracterization. Assumes facts not in evidence.
A. I don't know, again, I don't recall when I read the article the first time. And I don't know when I wrote this.
Q. Do you have any general recollection of when you wrote the information on CPH Exhibit 148?
A. I don't know specifically. I would have to guess.

EUGENE YOO

Q. You also see on Exhibit CPH Exhibit 148 fourth from the bottom there is an asterisk which states "volume driven plan, arrow, prop up for sale."
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you know what that refers to?
A. Again, I don't know. I think it was just something that I had written from the news article.
Q. You don't recall whether you investigated, whether Dunlap pursued a volume driven plan at Scott Paper to prop it up for sale?
A. There's nothing here. There was no discussion of that kind of, that I know of.
Q. On CPH Exhibit 148 there is a column entitled Kimberly-Clark. Do you recall, sir, that Scott Paper was sold to Kimberly-Clark?
A. Yes.
Q. And you'll see there's a hand notation of 600 million in synergies and cost reductions?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Synergies and cost reductions appear in quotes. Do you recall why you made that notation?
A. Which -- why did I write that line?

EUGENE YOO

Q. Correct.
A. Again, I think I was just taking notes from the article. I think that's what actually happened or what they were saying they had achieved.
Q. Did you ever investigate whether there were 600 million in synergies and cost reductions as a result of that transaction?
A. Again, I don't remember the specifics of how we did the analysis on Scott Paper, I would think that we went back and looked at, you know, some of the financial performance of both. But I don't remember exactly what we did.
Q. And you don't recall why you prepared this document which has been marked as CPH Exhibit 148?
A. No. I think that, you know, I don't remember why exactly.
Q. Do you remember what was done with this document?
A. No.
Q. Did you provide it to anybody?
A. No. I wouldn't have given something like this to anyone.
Q. Was it used to create any documents in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?

EUGENE YOO

A. Not that I know of. I'm sure some of the factual information went into some documents. But, you know.
Q. Okay. This is a good time to take a break.
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is ten fifty-eight, we're off the record.
(Short break taken.)
VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record, this is tape number two and the time is seven minutes after eleven.
Q. Mr. Yoo, I'm going to show you what's previously been marked as CPH Exhibit 81. This is a document titled, Project Laser, Laser Corporation, Restructuring and Growth Plans. Do you recall, sir, that the code name for the Sunbeam engagement was Project Laser?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Okay. Have you seen this document before?
A. I think I have.
Q. When did you see this document?
A. I think at the time that we, it was prepared.
Q. Did you prepare it?
A. I didn't personally prepare this, no.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

Q. Do you know who did?
A. I don't know.
Q. What was the purpose of preparing this document?
A. I don't remember.
Q. If you look at the document page 36394, where it says "restructuring plan." Do you know where this information -- do you know where the person that drafted this document obtained this information?
A. No, I don't.
Q. And the same question for the growth targets; do you know the source of that information?
A. No.
Q. Under "growth targets" the first bullet point says "doubling of 1996 sales of about 984 million to almost 2 billion by 1999 without acquisitions; do you see that, sir?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you ever investigate how Sunbeam was going to achieve that growth goal?
MS. Brown: Object to form.
A. I'm not sure what you mean.
Q. Well, do you recall that Sunbeam had a growth target which included doubling its 1996 sales to almost 2 billion by 1999 without acquisitions?

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't remember any of their growth targets or what their plans were. It was such a long time ago.
Q. Do you remember conducting any investigation to determine whether Sunbeam's growth targets were attainable?
A. We did talk to several people at Sunbeam about the numbers they had given us. We talked to Russ Kirsch and Rich Goudis. Again, I think we spent a day at their office talking to the different division heads about the, their budget plan for the year.
Q. Did the information you received from these individuals comport with the growth plans that are indicated in CPH Exhibit 81?
A. Again, I don't know if they matched up with this. But I do remember that we were very comfortable with the detailed information they had given us behind their growth plans.
Q. Do you recall how you became comfortable with that information?
MS. Brown: Object to form.
A. How we became comfortable?

EUGENE YOO

Q. Right.
A. I'm not sure what you mean.
Q. Did you take it on face value what they were saying; did you do something to investigate those statements to confirm you were comfortable with their growth plans?
A. We did our investigation as far as we typically do. I mean, there's only so far that we go on an MNA transaction, at some point we're relying on the company and the information they give us to be accurate.
Q. And in this respect what, what did you do to become comfortable with the information they were providing you? Do you recall any specific things that you did?
MS. Brown: Object to form.
A. I don't remember specifically what we did.
Q. What typically does Morgan Stanley do in a deal like this to become comfortable with the growth plans provided to them by the company?
A. It depends on the company and it depends on the transaction.
Q. Okay. In a transaction of this magnitude what does Morgan Stanley typically do?

EUGENE YOO

A. Again, my experience has only been with, and for me this was probably one of the larger transactions that I worked on. So, you know, I can only speak about what I had done.
Q. What have you done in the past on deals similar to Sunbeam to determine whether Morgan Stanley is comfortable with the growth plans given to them by the company that's retained them to provide investment counseling or acquisition counseling for the sale of the company?
MS. BROWN: Object to form and foundation.
A. I guess, it's been a long time since I've done it. I can only really talk about what I've done. But from what I remember on this, as I said, we went through the growth plan, tried to get the detail behind the numbers they were giving us with Russ and with Rich Goudis and we met with the division heads and they walked through how they were going to achieve their numbers. And that's probably pretty typical for any investment bank on an MNA transaction.
Q. Is there any independent analysis that Morgan Stanley conducts to confirm the information provided to them by the company?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

MS. Brown: Object to form.

A. I don't know what else they do.

Q. You indicated that you spoke with division heads at Sunbeam, who were the individuals that you spoke with?

A. I don't remember specifically.

Q. Did you speak with Don Oosi?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Mr. Oosi provide you with any documents to back up the growth targets that are indicated in CPH Exhibit 81?

A. I believe he did.

Q. Do you recall the form of those documents?

A. No. I don't remember what he gave us.

Q. Other than Mr. Kirsch and Mr. Goudis did you meet with anyone else in senior management at Sunbeam to determine whether the growth targets were attainable?

MS. Brown: Object to form. Mischaracterization testimony.

A. Our primary contact was with Russ and Rich on almost anything that was deal related, on almost anything that was Sunbeam related, I should say. And, you know, the managing directors had contact with Al, it was -- I don't recall if there was anyone else in senior management that we talked with, you know, above the division heads.

EUGENE YOO

Q. If you turn to page 2 of that document which is Morgan Stanley 36395. This is a slide entitled Scott Paper Restructuring and Growth Plans. If you take a look at the information under restructuring plan; do you recall the source of this information?

A. (Witness shakes head in the negative.) I don't know specifically, no.

Q. If you look at the fourth bullet point where it reads, "reduce work force by over 35 percent with approximately 11,000 layoffs, --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- 71 percent of headquarter staff, 50 percent managers, 20 percent hourly workers and 60 percent R and D." Do you recall, sir, that that information is contained in CPH Exhibit 148 and CPH Exhibit 68 that we looked at a few moments ago?

A. Yeah, they appear to be the same.

Q. Your testimony is that you did not draft this document; is that correct?

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't know for sure. I don't think I did.

Q. Do you know what was done with this document, CPH Exhibit 81?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you recall if this document was provided to any potential buyers?

A. I couldn't say for sure, I don't know.

Q. Or its potential acquisition targets?

A. Again, I don't know. I didn't attend any of those meetings.

Q. Handing you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 69, the cover page reads "Project Laser Discussion Materials, September 11, 1997, Conference Call." Setting aside the handwriting on this document, Mr. Yoo, do you recall seeing this document?

A. I may have seen this. I couldn't say for sure, but it's possible.

Q. Do you recall seeing the document with the handwriting?

A. No.

Q. You'll notice in the upper right-hand corner there's the notation MS and then a list of names and the fifth name down appears to be Yoo, Y-o-o?

EUGENE YOO

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you recall attending a September 11, 1997 conference call?

A. I don't remember specifically, but it's possible.

Q. Do you recall who -- I'm sorry. Withdrawn. Do you recognize the handwriting on this document?

A. No, I'm not sure who it is.

Q. On the first page in handwriting off to the left-hand side right above "Morgan," there's a handwritten notation "Coopers and Lybrand to calibrate synergies"?

A. Oh, okay, yeah.

Q. Do you see that. Do you recall, sir, that Coopers and Lybrand was providing synergy analysis to Sunbeam and Morgan Stanley in connection with the Sunbeam engagement in 1997?

MS. BROWN: Object to form.

A. I don't remember exactly what it was that they were providing us. I do know that they had worked with Al in the past and I don't remember their exact role in this transaction. But from what I remember I think they were working with Al on the turn around plan. On developing a plan, I think, but I don't remember for sure.

EUGENE YOO

Q. That's the turnaround plan at Sunbeam?

A. At Sunbeam, right.

Q. If you could turn to page 3 of the document which is Morgan Stanley 3897. It's a slide entitled Overview of Proposed Selling Process?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you see on the left-hand side, sir, handwriting, it says "just get it done"? To the left of Overview of Proposed Selling Process.

A. Okay. Yeah.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection, sir, of participating in this conference call? Someone making the statement "just get it done"?

A. No. I don't know.

Q. You don't know what that means?

A. No.

Q. In about the middle of the page looking at the handwriting again there is two asterisks, the second asterisk says "Kimberly/Scott - won't see anything." Do you recall anyone making that statement at Morgan Stanley?

EUGENE YOO

A. No, I don't, I don't recall anything about that.

Q. You don't know what that means?

A. No. I, I don't know what that means.

Q. If you can turn to page 12 of the document which is Morgan Stanley 3906. In much larger handwriting on the top left of that page it says "amateurs" and it's underlined; do you see that?

A. Okay.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection of this September 11th conference call?

A. No.

Q. Do you know what -- do you know what that refers to?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Speculation.

A. No. I'm not sure.

Q. To the right-hand side in handwriting there's an asterisk with 20 to 25 pages, Strat Plan; possibly strategic plan. Does that --

A. Okay.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection of this call and discussion of a Sunbeam strategic plan?

A. No.

Q. Were you aware, sir, that Sunbeam and Morgan

EUGENE YOO

Stanley prepared a document entitled Strategic Plan or contained the words strategic plan in the title of the document?

A. I don't know for sure. I mean, we produced a lot of documents.

Q. I'm sorry. How about long range strategic plan; do you recall that document?

A. No.

Q. And then in the middle of page 3906 of CPH Exhibit 69 there's a box around some handwriting, and the handwriting states "beef up sex appeal." And there's an arrow to "future growth opportunities." Do you know what that refers to?

A. I couldn't say for sure.

Q. Do you recall anyone at Morgan Stanley discussing beefing up the sex appeal of Sunbeam by touting future growth opportunities?

MS. BROWN: Object to form.

A. No. I mean, there was really no discussion about that.

Q. Did anyone at Morgan Stanley refer to Sunbeam management as amateurs?

A. Not that I can remember, no.

EUGENE YOO

Q. If you take a moment, sir, to flip through the rest of the document. My question for you is whether you recall preparing any portions of this document?

A. (Witness reviewing.) I don't know specifically where, but I'm sure I had a hand in helping to prepare this somewhere.

Q. You mean you don't recall any specific pages that you have a recollection of preparing?

A. No.

Q. Did anyone at Morgan Stanley or Sunbeam advise Morgan Stanley to not contact Kimberly-Clark in connection with Morgan Stanley's work in trying to find a buyer or an acquisition target for Sunbeam?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

A. No, there was no discussion of that kind.

Q. That you recall?

A. That I recall.

(Deposition Exhibit 218 marked for identification.)

Q. Sir, you've been handed what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 218.

A. Uh-huh.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

Q. Do you recall this document?
A. I think I do, yeah. It's sort of familiar.
Q. Did you draft this document?
A. I think I helped write it up.
Q. Who assisted you in writing up this document?
A. I think it was Alex Fuchs and Tyrone Chang.
Q. What was the purpose of drafting this document?
A. I don't know what the end goal or the end product was to be, but I think this was part of our due diligence on Sunbeam. Just understanding their growth plan.
Q. Why was it important for Morgan Stanley personnel to understand Sunbeam's growth plan?
MS. BROWN: Object to form. Characterization.
A. I don't remember what the end product was to be or the end goal was here.
MR. O'CONNOR: Mark this.
(Deposition Exhibit 219 marked for identification.)
Q. Do you know if CPH Exhibit 218 was ever sent to Mr. Fannin and Mr. Goudis?
A. I don't know for sure.
Q. Sir, I'm handing you what's been marked as CPH

EUGENE YOO

Exhibit 219. It's a document bearing Bates label Morgan Stanley 36347 through 36349; do you recall this document?
A. Uh-huh. Yes.
Q. This appears to be a later version of CPH Exhibit 218, does that refresh your recollection that you may have changed Exhibit 218 in a matter reflected in CPH Exhibit 219?
A. I, again, I don't remember exactly what the reasoning was. I think we were just reorganizing the questions into categories to make it easier for them to gather the information.
(Deposition Exhibit 220 marked for identification.)
Q. Do you recall drafting that document, CPH Exhibit 219 or revising the document that we marked as CPH Exhibit 218?
A. I don't remember that specifically, no.
Q. I'm handing you what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 220. CPH Exhibit 220 bears Bates labels CPH 467090 through 467126. I'll represent to you that this is the way the document appears in the files, I'm not sure if the first three pages of CPH Exhibit 220 were physically attached to the following document. But do you know, sir, whether that was the case? Whether these two documents were in fact attached?

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't know.
Q. Does your handwriting appear on the first page, the fax cover sheet on CPH Exhibit 220?
A. No, that's not my handwriting.
Q. Is that Mr. Chang's handwriting?
A. I don't know whose that is.
Q. But you're listed as the author of the fax?
A. Yes.
Q. On page 2 of that document, CPH 220, under Financial Projections; do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. First bullet point reads "please provide backup numbers to all the new revenue stream graphical charts." Do you see that?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. What was the purpose of attaining that information?
A. Again, I don't know if there was any other reasoning behind it other than just typical due diligence and trying to make sure that we fully understand and are comfortable with their projections.

Q. Do you recall whether you received materials that were responsive to the request under "financial projections"?
A. I do know we received some documents from them, I don't know for sure we got all of them or not.
Q. Did you ever make an effort to determine whether they provided you with all of the information requested in this September 19, 1997 memo?
A. I believe we did follow up with them on some outstanding items, yeah. I don't recall if those were ever followed through or not.
Q. Looking at the product development R and D pipeline section, the third bullet point. The second dash reads, "is 30 new products a year a reasonable number to achieve." Do you recall receiving any comfort or a response to that inquiry?
A. I don't remember specifically.
Q. Did you believe that 30 new products a year was an unreasonable number to achieve?
A. I had no idea. I didn't really know the industry.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 78

EUGENE YOO

Q. On the third page of the document, CPH 467092, there's a category entitled, not category, /channel/pricing; do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. And the fourth bullet point it reads "definition of category management? Does it differ from channel management?" Do you recall inquiring into Sunbeam's channel management?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I'm not sure. I mean, I still don't fully know what channel management is. That's part of the question was trying to work through their terminology, understanding what it is they were talking about.
Q. Did you ever come to an understanding of Sunbeam's channel management practices?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. Again, I'm not really sure, you know, what channel management, you know, it's more of a marketing term, I believe. I'm not really sure what channel management is.
Q. There's another category entitled Other at the bottom of that same page. And next to the fourth bullet point it reads "provide examples of how the company has repositioned itself (manufacturing, shipping and billing, R and D and other systems and processes.) For growth as opposed to being viewed as a cost cutter." Do you recall obtaining information in response to this inquiry?

Page 79

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't remember specifically what we got back on this one.
Q. Do you recall whether you received any comfort on whether the company repositioned itself for growth as opposed to simply cost cutting?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I don't recall.
Q. The following document is a list of documents in data room, CPH 467093?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And it appears that this document runs through the rest of this exhibit through CPH 467126. Do you recall seeing that document?
A. No, I don't think I've seen this before.
Q. Did you ever go into a data room in connection with your due diligence of Sunbeam?
A. Not that I can remember.
Q. Do you know if anyone did?

Page 80

EUGENE YOO

A. As far as I remember there was, at least for the Morgan Stanley due diligence, I don't believe there was a formal data room set up. I don't recall if there was ever one set up during the transaction, during the actual consummation of the transaction.
Q. Did you, did you ever have any contact with the law firm Skadden Arps in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. Do you recall that Skadden represented Sunbeam in the transaction?
A. That sounds familiar, yeah.
Q. Okay. Did you have any discussions with Skadden in connection with the due diligence that you performed?
A. I don't think we talked about that, no.
Q. Do you recall when you started your due diligence of Sunbeam?
A. I mean, for a client -- I'm sorry.
Q. No, go ahead.
A. For a client I don't think it's a one time event. It's sort of an ongoing thing. As I said, we were learning about the company when we did our first pitch and then from then it was sort of an ongoing process of trying to stay on top of the progress of the company.

Page 81

EUGENE YOO

Q. Is September 19, 1997 a significant date to you in connection with your due diligence work? When the memo that's attached to CPH Exhibit 220 was faxed to Mr. Goudis and Mr. Fannin at Sunbeam?
A. I don't recall anything specific or anything special about that day.
Q. Did Sunbeam ever refuse to provide any information that you requested in connection with your due diligence work?
A. No. Not as far as I can remember.
Q. Did Sunbeam limit Morgan Stanley's access to any of Sunbeam's customers or employees?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. There was no -- there was no attempt on Sunbeam's part to limit our access to any of the customers.
Q. Did you interview any customers at Sunbeam?
A. I did not personally, no.
Q. Do you know if anyone did?
A. I don't believe anyone did. But I don't think

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

that's -- it's not really part of the normal due diligence process for an MNA transaction.

Q. You've never contacted companies' customers as part of due diligence?

A. I haven't personally and I don't know of anyone that has. I can't think of anybody that has.

Q. Okay. How about lower level employees, employees below the division heads, did you have any contact with those employees in connection with your due diligence?

A. Occasionally here and there. I don't remember anyone directly.

Q. Do you recall any of those employees that you spoke with?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall the subjects of your conversations with those employees?

A. No. It was mainly in the context of when we would request information or specific documents most of our contact was with senior or mid level management and they would have some of their subordinates do the actual work to provide us the information. That was really the main context of our contact with them.

EUGENE YOO

Q. So is it your testimony that you never spoke to those employees, you just obtained information from them through their superiors?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Mischaracterizes.

A. I don't recall the nature our conversations with them. You know, there was some contact, I don't really remember what it was.

MR. O'CONNOR: Mark the next exhibit.

(Deposition Exhibit 221 marked for identification.)

Q. Mr. Yoo, you've been handed what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 221; do you recall this document?

A. No, I don't think I've seen this one.

Q. Do you recall traveling to Sunbeam's headquarters in Florida on September 22nd through the 24th, 1997?

A. I don't know the dates that I was down there. I made several trips down there.

Q. How many trips do you think you made to Florida in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?

A. I have to guess. Maybe four or five.

Q. And each time you traveled to Florida did you, did you go to Sunbeam's headquarters in Del Ray Beach?

EUGENE YOO

A. Yes, I believe so.

Q. What were the purposes of your trips to Florida?

A. They were all different. We were down there for different reasons.

Q. Did you go to the beach?

A. No.

Q. Was this a part of your due diligence of Sunbeam?

A. Some of it was for due diligence, yes.

Q. Besides due diligence why else did you go to Sunbeam?

A. Some of it was, I believe there was one meeting or one presentation we made to them and I think one was a, I remember we went down there for a, sort of a preparation session. I think they were having a meeting with someone, I don't recall who.

Q. Was this a potential buyer?

A. I don't remember who it was. It was really -- Jim Stynes was the one that went with me in that meeting and they were asking for Jim's help in just preparing for a meeting.

Q. In the presentation, of the trip for the presentation was that for the pitch to Sunbeam?

EUGENE YOO

A. No. What was that about? I think it was --

Q. That's my next question.

A. I think it was just an update of the progress to that point. Where we were in our discussions.

Q. Do you recall when that trip occurred?

A. I think it was in the fall sometime that I remember.

Q. Do you recall Mr. Dunlap being unhappy with Morgan Stanley because Morgan Stanley could not find a buyer for Sunbeam?

A. I never knew, I mean, I never, like I said, I never talked to him.

Q. You never talked to him ever?

A. About the transaction. It was really just formalities and greetings.

Q. Does CPH Exhibit 221 read in connection with CPH Exhibit 220, refresh your recollection that your trip to Florida from September 22nd to the 24th of 1997 was in connection with the information that you requested in the September 19, 1997 memo?

A. Okay. I believe we did go down there for that trip for a due diligence session.

Q. What do you recall about that trip?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 86

EUGENE YOO

A. It was pretty nondescript. I mean, it was just information gathering, going through documentation they had given us, a few presentations. Actually, this may have been the trip where we met with the various division heads and they were giving us their growth plan for the year.
Q. Do you recall any of the information they provided you on those growth plans?
A. No.
Q. Do you recall looking at any documents during this trip that you requested in the September 19, 1997 memo?
A. We did go through quite a few documents during this time. I don't, again, I couldn't tell you specifically what.
Q. Did you find any information in those documents that caused you any concern about Sunbeam's turn around or the future growth projections?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. No. At the time there was nothing really that raised any red flags for us.
Q. Was there anything that raised any yellow flags?
A. No.

Page 87

EUGENE YOO

Q. Did Mr. Chang accompany you on this trip to Florida in September?
A. I believe he did.
Q. Did anyone else go to Florida with you on this trip, or did you meet anyone from Morgan Stanley down in Florida on this trip?
A. I don't remember. I don't think so, but I'm not sure.
Q. CPH Exhibit 221 indicates that you spent Tuesday, September 23rd, at Sunbeam?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And you were to see Rich Goudis. And it shows your departure on Wednesday, September 24th, six fifteen flight.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Does that refresh your recollection on how much time you spent at Sunbeam's headquarters reviewing documents and meeting with division heads?
MS. BROWN: On this trip?
Q. On this trip. Thanks.
A. I thought we were there for a few days, maybe two days or three days. And -- I've got to look at the time line here. Yeah, it looks like that, it was probably two days.

Page 88

EUGENE YOO

Q. Do you recall whether this trip in late September of 1997 preceded this presentation that you spoke about earlier?
A. Which presentation?
Q. The trip to Florida where you were involved in a presentation to Sunbeam to update them on the progress?
MS. BROWN: With Mr. Stynes.
A. I don't remember the exact chronology.
Q. How long were you in Florida for that presentation?
A. I think it was just a day.
Q. In that preparation session?
A. I think it was just a day.
Q. Other than the trip to Florida on September 22nd, do you recall any other trips to Florida in 1997 during which time you performed due diligence of Sunbeam?
A. I couldn't say for sure. I don't know.
Q. I'm handing you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 71.
A. (Witness reviewing.)
Q. Have you seen this document before?

Page 89

EUGENE YOO

A. Yes, I have.
Q. When did you see this document?
A. I actually helped put this together.
Q. Okay. The first two pages of CPH Exhibit 71 are contents of an e-mail authored by Tyrone Chang dated October 23, 1997, attaching an October 22, 1997 memo to worldwide IBD Professionals; do you see that?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Do you recall the purpose of sending this e-mail and the attached documents at this time? At that time.
A. This was a standard announcement that we would send out when we were engaged by a client.
Q. What's the purpose of sending out that announcement?
A. I think it was just informative for the rest of the investment banking division.
Q. You said that you prepared the materials that are attached to that e-mail?
A. Well, I helped put this together.
Q. When you say you helped put it together, what does that mean?
A. I think most of the actual documentation on the project, the person who actually physically sat there and drafted these was Tyrone, and I was overseeing that and then Alex was overseeing us, Alex Fuchs.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

Q. Did you physically type the information that's contained on Morgan Stanley 5986?

A. 86? No, I didn't type this.

Q. Do you know who did?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you recall reading the investment rationale that appears on this page at this point in time?

A. I believe I did read this.

Q. The first bullet point reads, "Sunbeam represents an attractive growth story and investment opportunity"?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you know the basis for that statement?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did you do anything in connection with your due diligence of Sunbeam to confirm that Sunbeam in fact represented an attractive growth story and investment opportunity?

MS. BROWN: Object to form.

A. Well, all of these I think are just opinion about the quality of the company. I think the growth aspect was coming out of the growth plan that Sunbeam had.

EUGENE YOO

Q. So the statements, the four bullet point statements that appear on Morgan Stanley 5986 are Morgan Stanley's opinion of the condition of Sunbeam Corporation at this time?

MS. BROWN: Object. Mischaracter --

Q. I'm sorry. At the time that the document was circulated to the worldwide IBD Professionals?

MS. BROWN: Objection. Mischaracterization. Foundation.

A. At the time that this was drafted based on the information that we had from the company and what we knew about the company, you know, we felt that these were reasonably accurate.

Q. Do you recall anything specifically that you did to confirm that Sunbeam had undergone a profound transformation since the arrival of new management in July of 1996?

A. I don't remember specifically.

Q. For the next bullet point "tremendous intrinsic value, outpacing nearest competitors"?

A. Uh-huh.

EUGENE YOO

Q. You testified earlier as part of your due diligence you were keeping an eye on other companies in the industry?

A. (Witness nods in the affirmative.)

Q. Is that part of what you did to confirm that Sunbeam presented a tremendous intrinsic value?

A. I can't say for sure, but that's a possibility.

Q. If you turn, sir, to page 5991, a few pages back in CPH Exhibit 71. There's a summary of recent analyst commentary.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And that spans for several pages. Did you draft those pages of this document?

A. Actually, I don't think that I worked on this part of it.

Q. Did you perform any research into analyst commentaries on Sunbeam or did someone else take care of that?

A. Most of that was actually done by the, by our, our financial analysts, Tiruse (ph.), Tyrone and Louie.

Q. You can set that aside. During your trip to Sunbeam in September, late September of 1997 did you ever meet with any of the company's internal auditors?

EUGENE YOO

A. No, I don't think we did.

Q. You never spoke to Tom Hartshorn?

A. Harshorn?

Q. Thank you.

A. I don't recall ever meeting him face to face. I think I may have spoken to him on the phone once or twice.

Q. What did you discuss with him?

A. I don't recall.

Q. How about Deirdre Dadando, did you ever speak with her on the phone?

A. I don't recall that name.

Q. Did you ever review Sunbeam's internal audit papers?

A. I don't believe we did.

Q. Did you ever review the audit work papers prepared by Arthur Andersen, Sunbeam's accountant?

A. I don't think we did. We typically don't review the audit papers.

Q. Why is that?

A. We rely on the auditors who provide us with a comfort on the financials. We couldn't do that

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

on every transaction to go in and review their work.

Q. Did you ever speak to anyone at Arthur Andersen in connection with your due diligence?

A. I don't think we did.

Q. You don't recall speaking to Larry Bornstein?

A. No. I may have on the phone once, but I don't really remember. I didn't really deal with Larry.

Q. Do you know who Larry Bornstein is? Have you met him?

A. I've never met him, no.

Q. Phil Harlow?

A. Phil I think I've spoken to. I think he was the person I talked to more.

Q. You don't recall what you discussed with Mr. Bornstein?

A. No.

Q. Do you recall what you discussed with Mr. Harlow?

A. I don't remember specifically. It was more in connection with the acquisitions that Sunbeam was making.

Q. Was part of your due diligence of Sunbeam and its financial condition you didn't have conversation with Mr. Harlow or Mr. Bornstein?

EUGENE YOO

MS. BROWN: Objection. Mischaracterizes.

A. I don't believe we did.

Q. Sir, I'm handing you what's previously been marked as CPH Exhibit 84. Have you seen this document?

A. I don't believe I have.

Q. This is a document that was produced by Morgan Stanley and it appears to be the chronology of the events, some of the events, Project Laser. On page 2 of the chronology next to the date of September 23rd and 24th, the event reads "MS due diligence at SOC"?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. First, SOC refers to Sunbeam's stock ticker symbol; correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And the participants of that due diligence session at Sunbeam are listed as yourself and Mr. Chang --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- at Sunbeam's headquarters? Do you recall traveling to Sunbeam on September 23rd and 24th as part of your due diligence? I'm sorry. I withdraw that question.

EUGENE YOO

Is that the same -- does that refer to the trip that we discussed in CPH Exhibit 221?

A. I believe that's the same trip, yes.

Q. And then the next page lists October 29th?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. "MS due diligence regarding growth strategies and strategic plan at Sunbeam's headquarters in Florida" and your name, Mr. Chang's name and Miss Rafii's name are listed there. Do you recall traveling to Sunbeam in Florida on October 29th to conduct due diligence on Sunbeam's growth strategies and strategic plan?

A. I vaguely remember making the trip.

Q. Do you recall what you did on that trip?

A. I just remember part of it being sitting with Rich Goudis and with Russ and some of the backup financials they had to the growth plan, understanding how they built up to their final, final numbers. I don't recall what else we did on that trip.

Q. Did they provide you with documents reflecting that build up?

EUGENE YOO

A. Yes, I believe they did.

Q. Do you recall what those documents contained?

A. I don't remember now, no.

Q. Did you speak with anyone besides Mr. Goudis and Mr. Kirsch during that trip?

A. I may have. I think there was somebody else that worked for Russ that we actually dealt with on a more regular basis for the financials. And we may have talked to, we may have talked to Don as well, Don Oosi.

Q. Did you speak with anyone below senior management on that trip to discuss the back up for the strategic plan or the growth strategies?

A. I don't recall.

Q. Do you recall anything else about that trip or the information you learned?

A. No. I don't recall anything else about that.

Q. Did anyone else from Morgan Stanley go down to Florida for that trip other than yourself and Mr. Chang and Miss Rafii?

A. I don't know. I don't remember.

Q. Handing you what's been previously marked as Exhibit CPH 173. Do you recall traveling to Sunbeam's headquarters in Florida on January

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

5th?
A. January 5th? I don't remember what the trip was for.
Q. You don't recall going down to Florida shortly after New Year's, 1998?
A. I may have. I mean....
Q. If you turn to CPH Exhibit 84, --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- page 33259.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Next to January 5th there's an entry that states "meeting with SOC to prepare for potential sell side management presentation to Phillips." Does that refresh your recollection of your trip to Florida on January 5th?
A. I'm sorry, I'm drawing a blank on that. I don't remember.
Q. Mr. Yoo, did you create any documents to reflect the information that you learned during the due diligence trips to Sunbeam?
MS. BROWN: Object to the form.
A. The, I mean, on which trip? On --
Q. Any of the trips.
A. I may have taken notes. That's all I know.

Q. Was it your practice to take handwritten notes while you were conducting due diligence while reviewing documents and speaking with people?
A. Generally I took notes, yeah.
Q. But you don't recall doing so in this case?
A. Again, I'm speculating. I'm assuming I did but I don't have anything.
Q. Nobody at Morgan Stanley was designated as the point person who was responsible for keeping notes of the due diligence activities?
A. Typically the analysts were the ones that were responsible for making sure that any and all information that we gathered on a due diligence trip made it back with us to New York. Whether that was notes or physical documents that we received or discs or anything like that.
Q. Did the analysts on the Sunbeam engagement do that?
A. I believe they did.
Q. Do you know where those notes or documents were stored once they were carried back to New York?
A. No.
Q. Did you ever look at those documents at a subsequent time after the due diligence trip?

A. I'm pretty sure we went through some of them again at some point.
Q. You didn't create any summaries of your due diligence findings?
A. No.
Q. In 1997 and 1998 did Morgan Stanley have any policies documenting due diligence?
A. Not that I knew of.
Q. Did you receive any training at Morgan Stanley on conducting due diligence or documenting due diligence?
A. There was no formal training class on due diligence. You know, just like almost anything else on the job it's sort of learning on the job, learning with somebody else who knows what they're doing. In this case, especially in this case because it was my first MNA transaction, I was working with Alex and also Tyrone who had actually more experience than I did in the MNA group.
Q. Were you ever given a manual at Morgan Stanley which provided policies and recommendations on conducting due diligence?
A. I don't think we ever received anything like that. I don't remember anything like that.

Q. Other than the trips that we've looked at on your itineraries or in this chronology, do you recall any other trips to Sunbeam in 1997 where you performed due diligence?
A. No. I don't recall any, anything specific.
Q. Mr. Yoo, did you prepare presentation books for potential acquisition targets in the Sunbeam engagement?
A. I believe we did.
Q. Did you personally?
A. I am pretty sure that I helped work on them.
Q. Who else was involved in preparing presentation books?
A. I guess it depends on the book.
(Deposition Exhibit 222 marked for identification.)
Q. You've been handed what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 222, which is a Morgan Stanley document Bates labeled 3431 through 3464. Have you seen this document before, sir?
A. Yes, I believe I have.
Q. Did you draft this document?
A. I helped put it, I helped put it together.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

Q. Do you recall when you did that?
A. No, I don't remember.
Q. If you look on the lower left-hand corner of the document there's a computer file stamp and a date; do you see that?
A. Uh-huh. Yes.
Q. It appears that the date is December 11, 1997. Does that refresh your recollection as to the time that you helped prepare this document?
A. Yes, a little bit.
Q. What's the purpose of this document?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. Who were we presenting this to, or?
Q. Why was that document created?
A. I can't be certain but I think it might have been to inform or, I guess, educate Sunbeam on the Coleman Company.
Q. Do you know if this document was given to Sunbeam?
A. I don't know that for sure.
Q. If you turn back, sir, to CPH Exhibit 84, the chronology.
A. Okay.
Q. There's an entry there for December 11th.

EUGENE YOO

"Meeting with Sunbeam management to discuss potential Coleman transaction. Sunbeam --
A. Okay.
Q. -- initiated talks with Coleman without MS knowledge background presentation on Coleman and preliminary financial analysis presented"?
A. Okay.
Q. Does that refresh your recollection, sir, on what was done with this document?
A. Well, I wasn't actually at the meeting, I don't know what they used this for. It could have either been to inform Sunbeam or sometimes our own team use it to make sure we knew all of the answers if anybody had any questions on Coleman, if they asked us what the sales were last year or anything like that.
Q. Do you recall when you first started researching the Coleman Company in connection with the Sunbeam engagement?
A. No. I mean, there were so many things happening at the time, I don't remember.
Q. If you could turn, sir, to the third page of CPH Exhibit 222. In the overview of the Coleman Company the section entitled Overview of the

EUGENE YOO

Coleman Company. There's a document entitled the Coleman Company, Inc. Transaction Rationale. Did you prepare this page?
A. I don't think I did. It doesn't look familiar.
Q. There's a column entitled Issues and there's a bullet point, second bullet point under that column indicates "research earnings, estimates already include 50 million of cost savings"?
A. Okay.
Q. Do you have any recollection of looking into that information?
A. "Looking into" meaning what?
Q. Determining whether that was in fact the case.
A. I don't know. I don't remember looking into it.
Q. If you flip ahead, sir, to Morgan Stanley 3452. That page is entitled Synergy and Price Analysis; did you prepare this page?
A. No. This was part of the model that Tyrone was working on.
Q. This page in the upper left-hand corner indicates that this is, this purports to be a chart relating to Sunbeam's acquisition of Coleman with synergies; do you see that?
A. Yes.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Is it your testimony that you were not involved in preparing model outputs that analyzed an acquisition of the Coleman Company and the synergies that are assumed in such an acquisition?
MS. BROWN: Objection to form. Mischaracterizes.
A. No, that's not what I am saying. I certainly helped work on a good portions of the model. This particular one, though, is one I didn't really work on.
Q. When you say you worked on portions of the model, what do you mean by that?
A. Well, I was overseeing Tyrone as he would run various analyses.
Q. Did you tell Tyrone what data to input into the model?
MS. BROWN: Object to the form.
A. I didn't, I didn't give him the specific numbers to put in, but I would help him tell, you know, help him figure out where the sources were.
Q. What were the sources of that data?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I mean, the data for the inputs?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

Q. Correct. For the synergy analysis.
A. I don't know what the data for the synergy analysis was. Generally for the model we used publicly available financials.
Q. Did you ask Mr. Tyrone where he obtained the data to perform synergy and price analysis that appears on Morgan Stanley 3452?
A. No. I think this was something that he was running with Alex. But I can't be certain. But I don't really recall anything about this page.
Q. Flip ahead to Morgan Stanley 3454. This is a chart entitled Transaction Structure Analysis?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And the upper left-hand corner indicates "SOC acquires Coleman without synergies"?
MS. BROWN: Coleman, SOC.
Q. Thank you. Did you prepare this document?
A. I don't know if I helped prepare this specific one. This is again a page from our standard model which we've run hundreds of times. I don't know if this specific version is one that I worked on.
Q. Again, you don't know the source of the data -- I'll withdraw that.

EUGENE YOO

If you turn to the next page, Morgan Stanley 3455. It's another transaction structure analysis. This time it says, "SOC acquires CLN with synergies." Do you see that?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And the synergies assumptions in the bottom left-hand corner states, "includes synergies of 95.1 million." Do you know where that number came from?
A. No, I don't know.
Q. Turn to the next page. Morgan Stanley 3456. That analysis includes synergies of 126.8 million. Do you see that?
A. Yes, I do.
Q. Do you know where that number came from?
A. I can take a guess but it's just a guess. I don't know for certain.
Q. Well, where do you believe it came from? What's your guess?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Calls for speculation.
A. And just, it looks like it comes off of this chart you first showed me, the synergy and price analysis.

EUGENE YOO

Q. What page is that?
A. 3452.
Q. And that page you don't recall where those, that synergy data came from?
A. I don't know.
MS. BROWN: Chris, are we going to take a lunch break?
MR. O'CONNOR: Yeah, I'm close to moving on so let's finish this up. I would like that marked the next document.
(Deposition Exhibit 223 marked for identification.)
Q. Sir, you've been handed what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 223; do you recall this document?
A. I think I do, yes.
Q. Did you draft this document?
A. I can't be certain. I don't know.
(Deposition Exhibit 224 marked for identification.)
Q. Sir, you've been handed what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 224.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. I'll represent to you, sir, that the first two pages of this document contain meta data from file produced to us by Morgan Stanley. Are you familiar with the concept of meta data?

EUGENE YOO

A. Not very, no.
Q. Okay. Information contained in the file that was provided to us indicates that you created this document on December 11, 1997, as indicated by your name after author, y-o-o-g?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And under Document Statistics, Creation Date. Does this refresh your recollection of your drafting of this document?
A. Again, I can't be certain, but it's possible I drafted it.
Q. Do you know why this document was drafted on December 11, 1997?
A. On the 11th? I don't remember exactly why.
Q. Did you attend a December 12, 1997 meeting between Sunbeam management and MacAndrews and Forbes Holdings Company to discuss a potential transaction involving those two companies?
A. No. I never met with MacAndrews and Forbes.
Q. At anytime?
A. I met with somebody from MacAndrews and Forbes after the acquisition when we were selling the

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015259

EUGENE YOO

spa business.
Q. Were you aware of the meeting on December 12th?
A. Sure. I'm pretty sure I was.
Q. Do you know if Sunbeam used Exhibits 222, 223 and 224 in connection with their meeting with MacAndrews and Forbes?
A. I don't know.
MS. BROWN: Hold on. 224?
MR. O'CONNOR: I'm sorry, Exhibit 222 and Exhibit 223. Thank you.
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. I don't know.
Q. Do these documents refresh your recollection, sir, that Morgan Stanley was analyzing potential synergies of a Sunbeam/Coleman transaction prior to the first meeting between Sunbeam and MacAndrews and Forbes on December 12, 1997?
MS. BROWN: Object to form. Object to foundation. And also I believe mischaracterizes the facts in evidence.
A. I mean, I don't know. I mean, which synergies, which?
Q. We looked at two documents that indicated that someone at Morgan Stanley, perhaps Mr. Chang, perhaps yourself, were compiling information analyzing potential transaction between Sunbeam and Coleman; correct?

EUGENE YOO

A. It appears that way, yes.
Q. And those documents are dated December 11, 1997; right?
A. Okay, yeah.
Q. Okay. My question for you is do you recall yourself or Mr. Chang or anyone else at Morgan Stanley analyzing the potential synergies of a transaction between Coleman and Sunbeam before December 12, 1997?
MS. BROWN: Object to the form. Compound. And also foundation.
A. Again, I don't remember specifically what we were looking at with Coleman prior to the meeting. I don't really remember the chronology of the meetings with Coleman.
Q. But although you don't know the source of the synergy data that appears in CPH Exhibit 222 that document reveals that someone at Morgan Stanley was inputting synergy assumptions into models to determine a potential transaction with the Coleman Company; correct?

EUGENE YOO

A. It appears that way.
Q. A good time to take a lunch break?
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is twelve thirty, we're off the record.
(Lunch break taken.)
VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record. This is tape number 3, the time is eleven minutes after one.
Q. Mr. Yoo, before the lunch break you testified that you had no contacts with representatives of MacAndrews and Forbes Holdings until, except for after the transaction closed; is that correct?
A. As far as I can remember that's correct.
Q. If you can turn back to CPH Exhibit 84, the chronology.
A. Okay.
Q. And on page 33259 of that document there's an entry for January 23rd. And next to that entry there is a description, "meeting with Mavco, reinitiate talks, Ray Coleman." The location it says Emco headquarters, I believe that to be Mavco headquarters in New York. Your name is listed as an attendee. Is that an error or do you recall meeting with Mavco on January 23rd?

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't recall that meeting at all. I don't think I've ever been to their headquarters.
Q. If you turn to the next page there's an entry for January 29th, there are a lot of names listed there, yours is not among them.
A. Okay.
Q. Reflecting another meeting with Coleman and Mavco. You were not present in that meeting as well, at Revlon's headquarters?
A. I was not there.
Q. And again, on February 6th there's an entry for a meeting with Mavco to negotiate the Coleman transaction at Mavco's headquarters. Mr. Chang's name is listed but yours is not, you did not attend that meeting?
A. Again, I don't believe I ever went there. I don't think I've ever been to the Mavco headquarters.
Q. If you can turn to the next page, Morgan Stanley 33261. There's an entry dated February 23rd, "strategic due diligence meeting with Coleman, review strategic plan in 1998 projections, arrange for facility visits, due diligence on Sunbeam by Coleman and CSFB." Again, your name is not listed there, do you have any recollection of any meetings on February 23rd involving those individuals?

A. No, I don't.

Q. You don't recall any discussions involving MacAndrews and Forbes or anyone from Coleman with members of Morgan Stanley or Sunbeam concerning any details of the transaction such as the price, the timing, the consideration that would be paid?

A. No, I don't remember being part of any of those meetings.

Q. I'm handing you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 9. Do you recall this document, sir?

A. Yes, I think I do.

Q. What is this document?

A. I think this was our, our company description of Sunbeam and its current situation.

Q. Do you call this a presentation book?

A. I guess -- what do you mean by presentation book? It appears to be in presentation format.

Q. Do you know if this document was provided to Coleman Company representatives or MacAndrews and Forbes representatives in February of 1998?

A. I don't know what they were given.

Q. If you could turn to page 26290, which is the fifth page in on Exhibit 9.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you recognize that document, sir, as the same document that was circulated to Worldwide IBD Professionals at Morgan Stanley back on October 22nd of 1997?

MS. BROWN: What's the Exhibit number?

MR. O'CONNOR: CPH Exhibit 71.

(Prior testimony read back.)

"Do you recognize that document, sir, as the same document that was circulated to Worldwide IBD Professionals at Morgan Stanley back on October 22nd of 1997?"

A. Okay, they look to be the same page?

Q. And this particular page it was prepared by you?

A. You know, again, I don't remember if I prepared this one specifically.

Q. But you recall -- you recall that document being prepared in connection with attempting to find a buyer or acquisition targets for Sunbeam?

MS. BROWN: Document or page?

MR. O'CONNOR: Page.

A. This page, yes. I do recall that.

Q. What's the purpose of preparing this document, the discussion materials marked as CPH Exhibit 9?

A. I don't know specifically what meeting this is for or who the audience was.

Q. Was this document an effort by Morgan Stanley to in essence sell Sunbeam Corporation -- I withdraw.

Is this document in essence materials prepared to provide prospective buyers or acquisition targets with information concerning Sunbeam's existing financial and business condition?

A. I don't know if that was the purpose here.

Q. Do you know of any other purpose --

A. It could have been. I'm sorry.

Q. Do you know of any other purpose this document would serve?

A. February of '98. It could have been given, again, just speculating, it could have been given to anyone just to update them or inform them about Sunbeam. Just their current situation.

Q. For what purpose?

A. Oh, I don't know.

Q. As you flip through this document, Mr. Yoo, did you prepare, do you recognize any pages in this document that you prepared?

A. I didn't put any of these pages together myself. But I worked with Tyrone and Lilly in putting them together.

Q. Did Mr. Chang and Miss Rafii provide you with the materials that they were preparing for your review?

MS. BROWN: Object to the form.

A. They provided me with these pages, you mean?

Q. Were you asked to review the work product of Mr. Chang and Miss Rafii?

A. Yes, I did review their work.

Q. And if there were any errors or inconsistencies would you correct those or send the document back to them to change?

MS. BROWN: Are you referring specifically to this document?

Q. Generally the documents that they were

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

preparing.
A. I'm sorry, what was the question?
Q. In general the documents that were prepared by Mr. Chang and Miss Rafii for your review, if you found any inconsistencies or errors in those documents did you change those documents or did you send them back down to those individuals for editing?
A. I would give them the changes to make.
Q. Showing you what has been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 187. Do you recognize that document?
A. I think I do.
Q. When do you recall seeing that document?
A. I don't know the exact date. But I think I saw this or some version of this presentation in the fall of 1997.
Q. Did you prepare any of the pages in this document?
A. I don't think so.
Q. Do you know who did?
A. I don't know.
Q. The same question for CPH Exhibit 9, do you know who compiled the materials to create this discussion material packet?

EUGENE YOO

A. CPH 9?
Q. Correct.
A. The raw data and information that was used to produce this was probably collected by Lilly and Tyrone.
Q. What did you do to confirm that the information contained in CPH Exhibit 9 and CPH Exhibit 187 was accurate?
A. Accurate meaning?
Q. True.
A. Was it actually -- okay. Not that these and this were the same, or?
Q. Correct. Let's take them one at a time.
A. Okay.
Q. CPH Exhibit 9. What did you do to confirm that the information contained in CPH Exhibit 9 was accurate?
A. Okay. Again, I couldn't give you specific examples, but for the most part we would go back or I would go back and check the file output of the product, a page like this versus whatever source data I could get my hands on. Mostly looking for accuracy and figures and text.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Do you recall any instance where you found inaccuracies in their materials that you had to change?
A. There were a few instances of typographical errors or just misinterpreting of some numbers, maybe. But not many.
Q. And again, with CPH Exhibit 187, what did you do to confirm that the statements contained in this document were accurate?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Assumes facts not in evidence.
Q. I'm sorry, what was the --
(Prior testimony read back.)
"And again, with CPH Exhibit 187, what did you do to confirm that the statements contained in this document were accurate?"
A. I don't remember the specific steps that we took. Many of the things in here are just statements that, I don't think anybody can verify one way or the other. The financials, to the extent they're in here, I don't believe we really even used because they're too general and too broad.

EUGENE YOO

Q. If someone -- I'm sorry.
A. We may have used some of these but I don't really think we relied on these very much.
Q. If somebody outside of Morgan Stanley or somebody wanted to confirm the accuracy of these statements, what would they do?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Hypothetical. Calls for speculation.
A. Well, I mean, in the few cases that I had where we had questions with a company's numbers we would ask for any kind of backup data that they had to support the final numbers that they were showing us and how did they arrive at that particular number, what was the methodology.
Q. So if an individual investor wanted to confirm the accuracy of these statements they would have to ask somebody for the backup information; is that your testimony?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Mischaracterizes. Also a hypothetical.
A. I don't think an individual investor would ever see this presentation, but I don't know. I don't know who it's given to.
Q. If you can turn to page CPH 254636 in Exhibit

EUGENE YOO

187.

A. Okay.

Q. That page is entitled Long Range Strategic Objectives Earnings From Continuing Operations. At the bottom of that table there's EPS, earnings per share, estimated at two dollars and twenty cents in 1998; do you see that?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do to confirm that that estimate was accurate?

A. I don't remember specifically what we did on that.

Q. The same question for 1999 and 2000; do you recall what you did to confirm the accuracy of two seventy-five a share and three thirty a share?

A. Again, on these financials and this presentation I'm not sure if we relied on these numbers as much. Generally speaking, going back to what I said before, if there were numbers in any of the financials we got back from a client that we had questions on or were unsure of we would go back and ask for the backup data and then we would try to rebuild that to try to see if we agreed with their conclusions on their numbers.

Q. Do you recall if in 1998 you believe that Sunbeam's plan to achieve EPS of two twenty a share in 1998 was attainable?

A. I can't remember any reason why we thought it was not attainable.

Q. But you can't recall what you did to confirm that it was attainable?

A. Not specifically, no. I mean, we had our own models that we ran.

Q. Where did you obtain the data to run those models?

MS. BROWN: Object to form.

A. For the models that we ran here on Sunbeam, some of the information was again from public information, some of the information was from analysts reports, equity analyst reports.

Q. Was the data also provided by Sunbeam itself?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

A. It depends on when.

Q. I'm sorry?

A. It depends on what time period you're talking about.

Q. In the first quarter of 1998.

EUGENE YOO

A. In 1998 we may have been using some financials from Sunbeam.

Q. How about 1997?

A. Definitely not before we were engaged.

Q. But after -- well, do you mean formally engaged in the fall of 1997 or starting in April of 1997 when Morgan Stanley began preparing materials in connection with the pitch and the engagement?

A. Before the formal engagement.

Q. If you could turn to page CPH 254639. It's entitled net sales growth analysis. At the bottom it indicates a net sales plan of 1.6 billion in 1998, 2.0 billion in 1999, 2.4 billion in 2000; do you see those numbers?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you do to confirm that Sunbeam -- withdrawn.

What did you do to confirm that these net sales were attainable?

A. I don't remember about this page specifically. Or these specific numbers. But in confirming their growth plan in general, when we went through the backup financials that they had to build up to the sales, and we also met with the division heads to talk about the growth plans that they had for each individual, each individual division, how they were going to get that.

Q. Were their plans for sales consistent with what's reflected on page CPH 254639?

A. Were whose plans?

Q. Sunbeam. Sunbeam management. The folks that you spoke to.

A. These numbers came from them, so I don't remember exactly what the numbers were at the time.

Q. If you turn to the next page, CPH 254640. What did you do, if anything, to confirm the attainability of first quarter 1998 earnings as indicated on this page?

A. I think it was the same process. For our first quarter '98 we were probably also able to compare the numbers to analyst reports at the time and their projections for the 1998 first quarter.

Q. Did you ever speak to any analysts about their reports?

A. We never spoke to any research analysts. At least I did not.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 126

EUGENE YOO

Q. You don't know anyone else who did?
A. I don't believe anyone did.
Q. Did Morgan Stanley attempt to verify or challenge any of the statements made by the analysts?
MS. BROWN: Object. Foundation.
A. I don't know.
Q. And, again, you don't recall if either of these documents were provided to Coleman or MacAndrews and Forbes?
A. I don't know.
Q. Mr. Yoo, I'm handing you what's previously been marked as CPH Exhibit 92. My first question for you, Mr. Yoo, actually is not related specifically to that document, but other than reviewing the work performed by Mr. Chang and Miss Rafii, were you involved in assessing or estimating the potential synergies of contemplated a transaction involving Sunbeam and Coleman?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I, you know, I was not involved in developing any kind of estimates or coming up with any kind of projections on synergies. Our role was simply using synergy numbers that others were providing to us.

Page 127

EUGENE YOO

Q. Who provided you with those synergy numbers?
A. I don't remember specifically who. But I think generally synergy numbers were provided by Sunbeam or Coopers and Lybrand.
Q. And Coopers was retained by Sunbeam or Morgan Stanley to assist with preparing synergy analyses?
MS. BROWN: Object? Facts not in evidence.
A. I don't know -- I'm pretty sure they weren't retained by Morgan Stanley. I don't think they were working for us.
Q. Other than Sunbeam and Coopers who else provided synergy numbers for Morgan Stanley's models?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
Q. If any.
A. Well, as far as I knew for the potential transactions we were contemplating there were, I don't think there were any other sources for the synergy numbers.
Q. Who was involved at Morgan Stanley with taking that data and reviewing it or manipulating it or entering it into financial models?

Page 128

EUGENE YOO

MS. BROWN: Object. Compound.
A. The actual handling of the models was done by the analysts, mostly Tyrone. But all of his work was then ultimately reviewed by either myself or Alex.
Q. Other than Mr. Chang do you know of anyone else that was involved with preparing synergy models?
A. Preparing models using the synergy numbers?
Q. Correct.
A. Not that I can think of, no.
Q. Turning to the document that I handed you, CPH Exhibit 92. Do you recall this document?
A. I think I do, yes.
Q. Do you recall reviewing this document in 1997 in connection with proposed transactions involving Black and Decker, any other companies listed in here?
A. I do recall that.
Q. In the second paragraph on the first page of Exhibit 92, it states, "enclosed please find our initial attempts at determining the likely synergies associated with the change of control. For each targeted company we have made estimates as to the range of attainable synergies and their ensuing financial impact on the combined company." Is that consistent with what Morgan Stanley was doing in connection with the potential transaction with Coleman?

Page 129

EUGENE YOO

A. I'm not sure what you mean by that.
Q. Well, in analyzing a potential transaction involving Sunbeam and Coleman, did Morgan Stanley make estimates as to the range of attainable synergies in their financial impact as is indicated in CPH Exhibit 92?
MS. BROWN: Object to form and foundation.
A. The analysis here is a little different from what might have been done in the Coleman transaction. This is a preliminary look before we had any contact with any company before we have any potential transaction even showing any signs. These were just ideas. And these synergies were also flushed out. We made guesses here at this point and then talked with the Sunbeam management team to make sure that they were reasonable and they adjusted our estimates, our original estimates to what they thought were, you know, at least on a first broad brush, reasonable assumptions. You know, at the point with, where we were with Coleman it was a much more, I don't want to use the word precise, but it was a different kind of synergy estimate. It wasn't something that we were coming up with. At that point we were relying on Sunbeam or Coopers to give us a more refined number. Where there was an actual tangible transaction. At this point there were just too many companies we were considering.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 130

EUGENE YOO

Q. Okay. In the last sentence of that second paragraph it states, "we have also included the background on Scott Paper and Sunbeam which we used as templates for our analysis"?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Do you recall if Morgan Stanley used the background information it possessed on Scott Paper in analyzing potential synergies in a transaction involving Sunbeam and Coleman?

A. I don't recall that happening.

Q. Do you know why Morgan Stanley was using Scott Paper as a template for potential synergies?

MS. BROWN: Objection.

Q. Involving the companies that are listed in these materials?

Page 131

EUGENE YOO

MS. BROWN: Object to form. "These materials" being CPH 92?

MR. O'CONNOR: Yes. Thank you.

MS. BROWN: I still object to form.

A. From what I can recall I'm not sure if this is the only reason behind it, but. It was one of the more recent transactions that Al Dunlap had been involved with and one of the bigger ones, and it was a closer fit to the transactions that we were contemplating at the time. But other than that I can't, I don't recall any other reasons.

Q. Is Sunbeam's restructuring and growth plans relevant to analyzing potential synergies in a transaction involving Sunbeam and another company?

MS. BROWN: Can I hear that question back.

(Prior testimony read back.)

"Is Sunbeam's restructuring and growth plans relevant to analyzing potential synergies in a transaction involving Sunbeam and another company?"

Page 132

EUGENE YOO

MS. BROWN: Object to form.

A. I'm not sure I understand the question.

Q. Well, if you turn to page Morgan Stanley 3414. Included in this package that was sent to Sunbeam was the Sunbeam restructuring and growth plans which we've seen before. Two pages prior to that are Scott paper restructuring plans and growth projects. Is that information important for Morgan Stanley to consider in attempting to estimate a range of attainable synergies in a potential transaction involving Sunbeam and another company?

MS. BROWN: Object to form.

Q. Such as the companies that are analyzed in CPH Exhibit 92?

MS. BROWN: The same objection.

A. For this analysis I don't know how relevant they are or not. I'm trying to remember what we were doing here. I can't read the numbers. Again, I don't know specifically what we were doing. I can't remember what we were doing on this analysis. I would think that's, the restructuring plan and the growth targets might have some impact on potential synergies, but I wouldn't know how to incorporate that into an analysis.

Page 133

Q. I show you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 93. The first two pages are meta data for the attached document which is entitled Sunbeam Corporation Executive Summary. The third page in which is entitled Sunbeam Corporation Synergies Analysis, do you recognize this document? This page of this document.

A. Yes, I think I do.

Q. Did you prepare this or review this page?

A. I believe I did review this page.

Q. And then the following page is entitled Sunbeam Corporation Sources of Synergies.

A. Okay.

Q. Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. And the last bullet point on that page reads, "total potential synergies of over one hundred and 50 million from Sunbeam with 50 percent recognized in year one and the remainder by year two." Do you recall reviewing that statement back in 1997?

A. Again, I think I do. I'm not sure exactly what

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

presentation this was in.
Q. Looking at those two pages, the synergy analysis and sources of synergies, is that information, is the information contained on those pages relevant to Morgan Stanley's analysis of potential synergies involving Sunbeam and the transaction involving Sunbeam and another company?
MS. BROWN: Object to form and foundation.
A. Some of these are somewhat useful. But most of this is not something that we could use in a quantitative form for a model or any kind of quantitative analysis.
Q. Do you recall how Morgan Stanley came up with the total potential synergies of 150 million dollars involving Sunbeam?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation. Form.
A. No, I don't recall where the 150 million dollar figure came from.
Q. Do you recall asking Mr. Chang? I'll represent to you that the meta data on the first page of CPH Exhibit 93 indicates that Mr. Chang drafted this document in October of 1997.
A. Okay.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Do you ever recall -- do you recall ever speaking with Mr. Chang about where he obtained the information that's contained in this, on the pages entitled Synergies Analysis and Sources of Synergies?
A. I don't recall ever having that conversation with him.
(Deposition Exhibit 225 marked for identification.)
Q. You've been handed what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 225, this is a letter from Coopers and Lybrand addressed to yourself dated October 3, 1997. Do you recognize this document?
A. I think I've seen the matrix before.
Q. Do you recall the purpose of, the purpose behind Coopers sending you this information?
A. I believe this was the initial response back from Coopers and Lybrand from our request for more detail and backup on synergies.
Q. So as of October 3rd of 1997 Coopers was actively engaged in providing its expertise on analyzing synergies to Morgan Stanley or potential transaction involving Sunbeam?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.

EUGENE YOO

Mischaracterization.
A. I don't know what the relationship with Coopers was. There was no formal relationship that I knew of between Coopers and Morgan Stanley and I wasn't aware of what the relationship was between Coopers and Sunbeam. I didn't know when they were brought on board or what the arrangement was with them.
Q. But you knew why they were sending you this document on October 3rd; right?
A. At the time I knew, yeah. I knew they were sending it to us, I knew that they were working on a project with us.
Q. And that project was a potential transaction involving Sunbeam; right?
A. Right.
Q. And analyzing potential synergies that might arise from those transactions; correct?
MS. BROWN: Object to form. Characterization.
A. Well, for, we were trying to narrow down the field of potential companies that we would consider to begin looking at potential transactions. I think at this point it was a little too premature, we weren't looking at transactions with all of these companies.

Q. Do you recall when Coopers first started providing information to Morgan Stanley concerning potential synergies?
A. No. I didn't know when they were signed by, or when they were brought on board by Sunbeam. I didn't know what their role was.
Q. All you knew is that they were providing you with information on potential synergies involving other companies?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I don't remember the first contact I had with them or knew about them. We just started receiving information from them one day.
Q. You had no advanced notice that they were going to start working in --
A. I don't remember.
Q. Working on providing you with information on potential synergies involving a transaction with Sunbeam and another company?
A. I don't remember what we knew about Coopers; we weren't really focusing on them.
(Deposition Exhibit 226 marked for identification.)

Q. Mr. Yoo, you've been handed what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 226 which is a fax cover sheet for Coopers and Lybrand to Gene Yoo dated October 23, 1997 attaching several pages of documents. Do you recall receiving this fax?

A. I think I do recall this.

Q. Do you recall the purpose behind this information?

A. I don't remember specifically what we requested this for.

Q. Is this the type of information that Coopers was providing Morgan Stanley in 1997 on various potential strategic alternatives for Sunbeam?

MS. BROWN: Object to form.

A. I couldn't say if this was typical or not.

Q. Do you recall if they prepared a similar document for a potential acquisition of the Coleman Company?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you recall Al Dunlap ever stating that he believed the transaction -- strike that.

Do you recall Al Dunlap ever saying that Sunbeam could attain 2 hundred million dollars in synergies as a result of an acquisition of the Coleman Company?

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't recall anything like that at all.

Q. Do you recall any statements made by any Sunbeam personnel regarding their beliefs on the potential to obtain synergies in a transaction involving the acquisition of the Coleman Company?

A. I can't remember specifically what anybody said.

Q. Generally?

A. I think the only thing that I can remember was that some of the potential cost savings were already implemented on the Coleman side. I don't remember the amount, but that's the only thing that I can remember about the Coleman situation.

Q. How did you know that?

A. I didn't know it; I remember somebody saying that.

Q. You remember someone telling you that some cost savings had already been implemented at Coleman?

A. I don't know if it was cost savings or if it was some of the restructuring plan in place at Coleman were already underway.

EUGENE YOO

Q. As compared to what?

A. As compared to Sunbeam coming in and implementing their own restructuring plan and a target company.

Q. Were those potential savings that were identified by Morgan Stanley?

A. No. We didn't identify any savings that I can remember.

Q. Were the savings that had already been implemented at Coleman part of the synergies estimates provided by Sunbeam?

MS. BROWN: Object to foundation.

A. From what I remember of the synergy estimates we actually segregated out, I thought, the cost savings that were already achieved or part of the restructuring plan that was already in place. I thought we had done that.

Q. Do you recall ever receiving any synergy estimates or ideas from the Coleman Company?

A. I don't recall what we got from Coleman.

Q. You don't recall any particular number, an amount of synergies thought to be attainable, where that information came from Coleman or MacAndrews and Forbes?

EUGENE YOO

A. No. I don't remember any specific numbers.

Q. I show you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 95. Do you recall this document?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Did you prepare this document?

A. I don't remember if I did this document or not.

Q. Where do you recall seeing this document?

A. I think this came up somewhere during the negotiations with Coleman, but I don't remember exactly at what point in time.

Q. The first column is entitled Item and there are 15 items listed under that column. Do you know where those items came from?

A. I don't remember the source of the data, no.

Q. And the same question with respect to the column entitled original and the numbers listed in that column, do you know the source of those numbers?

A. No, I don't. I don't recall.

Q. And then with the revision count, do you know the source of those revised numbers?

A. Nope. I don't remember.

Q. Do you know what was done with this document, if anything?

A. I don't remember what we did this for.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 142

EUGENE YOO

Q. You can't recall if Morgan Stanley relied on this document in preparing any synergies analysis?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Form and foundation.
A. I don't remember what the ultimate use of this was for.
Q. Do you recall any conversations that you had with people at Morgan Stanley or Sunbeam concerning the items or the dollar amounts on CPH Exhibit 95?
A. No, we never really had any discussions that I can remember about this.
Q. Okay. Showing you what's previously been marked as CPH Exhibit 97. Do you recall seeing this document?
A. I'm not sure if I've seen this one.
Q. In this document there's an additional column, a second revised column. You don't know where those numbers came from?
A. No.
Q. And on the far right-hand side there's a column entitled Comments. Did you draft any of those comments for this particular document?

Page 143

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't believe I did.
Q. Do you know who did?
A. No.
Q. Let me ask a better question. Do you know anyone involved in analyzing potential synergies involving these items that would provide these types of comments?
MS. BROWN: Can you....
(Prior testimony read back.)
"Do you know anyone involved in analyzing potential synergies involving these items that would provide these types of comments?"
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. At this level of detail we most likely were relying on Sunbeam and/or Coopers for this information.
Q. Do you recall having any conversations with anyone at Morgan Stanley or Sunbeam involving these types of comments or issues related to these potential synergy ideas?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I don't recall any conversations.
Q. Do you recall if Morgan Stanley or Sunbeam used CPH Exhibit 97 in connection with the Sunbeam and Coleman transaction?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.

Page 144

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't know.
Q. I'm handing you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 62. Do you recall seeing this document with this handwriting?
A. No, I don't think I've seen this before.
Q. Do you recognize the handwriting?
A. No, I'm not sure who it is.
Q. Okay. Set that aside. I'm handing you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 139. Do you recognize this document?
A. The first page is familiar, the second page is familiar. I'm not sure I've seen the last two pages.
Q. You did not prepare the last two pages on CPH Exhibit 139?
A. I don't think I did. They're not familiar.
Q. If you look at the last page which is labeled Morgan Stanley 26544.
A. Okay.
Q. It's a page entitled Project Laser Overview of Synergy Analysis Camper. Do you recall the code

Page 145

EUGENE YOO

name for Coleman Company was Camper?
A. I believe that was the case, yes.
Q. And on this chart there are three boxes, the first box on the left next to the words estimated annual synergies reflects 100 million dollars in the top of the box; do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. And the middle box shows 150 million and the third box shows 200 million?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Do you recall the source of those synergy estimates?
A. No. I don't, no.
Q. You don't recall any conversations with Sunbeam or Morgan Stanley in which the synergy estimates were discussed? The 100, 150 and 200 million dollar estimates?
A. Those numbers aren't familiar to me, I don't recall anything about them.
Q. Do you recall anyone at Morgan Stanley reaching a decision on the amount of potential synergies that could be attained as a result of Sunbeam's acquisition of the Coleman Company?
MS. BROWN: Object to form and foundation.

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

Page 146

EUGENE YOO

A. As far as I knew we really didn't make any conclusions or decisions on what the synergies were going to be.
Q. Do you recall if anyone at Sunbeam came to any conclusion on the amount of potential synergies that could be attained in the acquisition of the Coleman Company by Sunbeam?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. I don't recall who, I don't recall if Sunbeam came up with any definitive answers on the synergies.
Q. Do you recall whether anyone at Sunbeam came to a decision as to a range of synergies?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. For the most part as far as any synergy discussions we were relying on Russ and it was from the Sunbeam side. We were relying on Russ Kirsch.
Q. Relying on him for what?
A. For guidance on synergies or potential synergies in a transaction.
Q. Why were you relying on Mr. Kirsch for that?
A. He seemed to have the , from our position, he seemed to have the best knowledge of what potential synergies could be with these different target companies.

Page 147

EUGENE YOO

Q. Why did you believe that to be true?
A. He seemed to have a level of knowledge of the companies that was deeper than our view as an outside adviser.
Q. Knowledge of Sunbeam?
A. Of Sunbeam and of the industry in general.
Q. Other than Mr. Kirsch anyone else that Morgan Stanley relied on in obtaining guidance on potential synergies?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Form and foundation.
A. From Sunbeam, you mean?
Q. Correct.
A. From the Sunbeam side?
Q. Correct.
A. Russ was our main point of contact. I don't know if there was anyone else at Sunbeam who was working on coming up with the numbers.
Q. I'm handing you what's previously been marked as CPH Exhibit 205. Do you recall this document?
A. I'm not sure if I've seen this before or not.
Q. The top of CPH Exhibit 205 contains a fax line

Page 148

EUGENE YOO

where it says "sent by C and L" and then across the top it reads "Coopers and Lybrand, dated 2/27/98." Does that refresh your recollection with respect to who created this document?
A. No. I don't remember this. I may have seen it but I don't remember.
Q. I'm sorry. Were you aware that Coopers estimated potential synergies of 118 million with respect to an acquisition of the Coleman Company by Sunbeam?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Form, foundation. Assumes facts not in evidence.
A. I did know that Coopers was working in some form on developing the synergy estimates. I didn't know, or at least I don't remember now what the ultimate number was that they came up with.
Q. Did you have any conversations with anyone at Coopers concerning potential synergies involving an acquisition of Coleman by Sunbeam?
A. I don't remember.
Q. Do you know if anyone at Morgan Stanley had communications with Coopers on that issue?
A. I couldn't say for sure.
Q. Do you know if anyone at Coleman or MacAndrews

Page 149

EUGENE YOO

and Forbes came to any conclusion on the synergies that could be attained in an acquisition of the Coleman Company by Sunbeam?
MS. BROWN: Can I have that question back.
(Prior testimony read back.)
"Do you know if anyone at Coleman or MacAndrews and Forbes came to any conclusion on the synergies that could be attained in an acquisition of the Coleman Company by Sunbeam?"
MS. BROWN: Objection. Foundation.
A. I don't know any conclusions or anything about what they decided or concluded.
Q. Did anyone at Morgan Stanley offer to you their opinion on the level of synergies that could be attained in an acquisition of Coleman by Sunbeam?
A. Not that I can recall.
Q. Mr. Chang didn't ever give you his opinion on the synergies that might be attained?
A. I don't remember. No, I don't remember.
Q. Mr. Yoo, did you attend the meeting of the Sunbeam board of directors on February 27, 1998

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

EUGENE YOO

where the issue of acquisition of Coleman was discussed?

A. I was present for a part of the meeting. I was not there for the first half of the meeting.

Q. Why did you arrive after the start of the meeting?

A. There were, I believe, five presentations that Morgan Stanley put together for that meeting and I was finishing the last two while the meeting began.

Q. What do you recall being discussed at the board meeting while you were in attendance?

A. At the point that I walked in I think Jim Stynes was talking about the details of either FirstAlert or Signature Brands in an acquisition. And then I think, I think after that Bill Strong was talking about financing alternatives. After that I think it was just a general Q and A, or open discussion with the board, I don't remember any of the details after that.

Q. Do you recall any of the specifics, anything specific that Mr. Strong told the board in regard to financing alternatives?

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't remember any specifics. Mostly it was just laying out alternatives and views from our capital market people.

Q. Anything else you can remember being discussed at the meeting?

A. No. I was pretty tired at that point.

Q. Do you recall any discussion of Sunbeam's financial performance in January and February of 1998?

A. No.

Q. Any discussions of Sunbeam's projected financial performance, for example, second quarter of 1998?

A. No, I don't remember anything like that.

Q. Mr. Yoo, I'm handing you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 89. Do you recall this document, sir?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. What is this document?

A. This is the presentation that we put together for the Sunbeam board outlining the potential acquisition of Coleman.

Q. On the first page of CPH Exhibit 89 up in the upper right-hand corner there's a designation of preliminary draft, do you have any knowledge if there was drafts subsequent to this that would have been presented to the board or if this was in fact the final version?

EUGENE YOO

A. I couldn't say definitively if this was the final version or not. Yeah, I don't know.

Q. If you could just take a moment to flip through it. My question would be do you have any reason to believe this was not the final version?

A. No, there's no reason to believe it's not the final version.

Q. If you could please turn to page 16 of the presentation, which is Morgan Stanley 83982.

A. Okay.

Q. This page is entitled Summary of Camper Evaluation Analyses. Section 4 on this page is entitled Estimated Value of Synergies, and below this there's 100 million pre tax, 150 million pre tax and 200 million pre tax. Do you see that?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you recall any discussions about the potential for Sunbeam to realize between 100 and 200 million in pre tax synergies at this board meeting?

A. No, I don't recall. I don't think I was even there for the presentation on Coleman.

Q. Would you please turn to page Morgan Stanley 84007. That page is entitled Review of Anticipated Combination Synergies. The next page appears to be the same document that I showed you earlier. Does that refresh your recollection with respect to who created that document or the use of that document?

A. No, not really. I don't really remember this page.

Q. And then the next page, Morgan Stanley 840009. It appears to be the same document we looked at earlier?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Does that refresh your recollection with respect to who prepared that document or what the document was to be used for?

A. No. Again, I don't really remember this page.

Q. If you turn to page 84011, entitled Scott Paper Restructuring Growth Plans. Does the inclusion of this page in the board book refresh your recollection with respect to Morgan Stanley's use of Scott Paper restructuring in estimating potential synergies in a transaction involving Coleman?

MS. BROWN: Object to form. Assumes facts not in evidence.

A. As far as Scott Paper I think the only time we actually ever used it to develop any kind of synergy estimates was at the very beginning when we were first pitching for Al's business. From what I remember this was placed here only as a reference point just to show that he has done similar types of restructurings at other places, that it wasn't completely out of the ballpark that he could try to do something similar at Coleman.

Q. So Dunlap's ability to restructure companies was important to determining the anticipated combination of synergies of this transaction?

MS. BROWN: Object to the form. Mischaracterizes.

A. I'm not sure if we used it to develop the numbers. But it was to show that the idea of Al Dunlap and his team going in and trying to restructure a company was not something that was unfathomable. It was really more the use here. It's something that they've been through before and they may or may not be successful again, but it's something that they've done before. They had a track record.

Page 155

EUGENE YOO

Q. Can you recall anything else from board of directors meeting on February 27th on the issue of synergies?

A. No, not synergies.

Q. Was there any discussion of the value of the Coleman Company and the price that Sunbeam was paying for the acquisition of the Coleman Company?

A. No, I, as far as I can remember I wasn't present for that part of the discussion.

Q. Did you participate at all in the discussion that day at the board meeting?

A. No, I didn't.

Q. What was your role at that board meeting?

A. I was there simply to observe.

Q. Do you recall working with a public relations firm in connection with announcing the transactions that the board approved on February 27, 1998?

Page 156

EUGENE YOO

A. I, I didn't work with a, anyone from a public relations firm that I can remember. There may have been one that was retained at some point prior to the announcement, but I don't know for sure.

Q. Does the name Hilden Knowlton (ph.) ring a bell?

A. I know the company but I don't recall if they were specifically involved in this or not.

Q. Okay. Were you involved in preparing any statements or responses to potential questions that may be asked at the public announcement of the transaction involving the Coleman Company?

A. No. Not that I can recall.

Q. I'm handing you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 142. Do you recall seeing this document?

A. I don't think I've seen this before.

Q. If you turn to page 3 of the document which is CPH 253549.

A. Okay.

Q. Paragraph 13 reads, "what's your first quarter going to look like? Are you comfortable with analyst estimates?" Do you remember discussing the response that should be given to that question upon the announcement of the transaction?

Page 157

EUGENE YOO

A. No, I don't think I was ever part of any discussion on this.

Q. Okay. Between the board meeting on February 27, 1998 and the announcement, were you involved in any discussions or meetings concerning Sunbeam's first quarter 1998 sales?

A. No, not that I can recall.

Q. I show you one more previously marked as CPH 143. Page 3 of 12. Paragraph 15. If you can just read that to yourself.

A. (Witness reviewing.)

Q. Do you have any knowledge of why the response changed from CPH Exhibit 142 to what's shown on CPH Exhibit 143?

A. No, I don't know why it changed.

Q. Okay. Set those aside. Mr. Yoo, did you ever speak to John Tyree in connection with your work on the Sunbeam engagement?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you discuss with Mr. Tyree?

A. John was taking over on the Sunbeam project once they moved into the financing phase and I was handing off to him.

Q. What were you handing off to Mr. Tyree?
A. Mostly, I think the only involvement I had with him was with regard to gathering company information and industry information. They were putting some of the standard descriptions into, I guess, the offering document and he was looking to me to help him fill it in.
Q. And the reason for that was because you were the one who had been working with Sunbeam --
A. Right
Q. -- all along, gathering the information about the company?
A. Right. So I had some of that information readily available and I could give it to him rather than having him look it up himself.
Q. Were you involved in drafting any portion of the debenture offering memorandum?
A. No.
Q. And you understand what the debenture offering memorandum was in this deal?
A. The convertible notes?
Q. Correct.
A. Yes.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Other than Mr. Tyree do you know who was involved in drafting that memo?
A. No. I wasn't involved with that.
Q. Okay. Did you ever speak to Mr. Tyree in connection with any due diligence that may have been performed on Sunbeam's accounting?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I never really spoke to him about the financials as far as I can remember.
Q. Let me show you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 31. This is a memo from John Tyree to the Sunbeam financing team dated March 7, 1998 referencing an accounting due diligence conference call on March 12th; you did not participate in that call; correct?
A. I don't believe I did.
Q. And you had no conversations with Mr. Tyree or Shani Boone concerning the accounting due diligence call?
A. Not that I can remember, no.
Q. You don't recall seeing any documents summarizing what was discussed on that call or the information they learned on that call?
A. No.

EUGENE YOO

Q. You don't remember that ever being discussed at Morgan Stanley in any meetings, the results of that conference call?
A. No. My involvement with Sunbeam after the announcement was limited and then once the transaction closed it was really only focused on the sale of the spa business coming out of Coleman.
Q. Okay.
VIDEOGRAPHER: Can we take a break for one second? The time is two thirty-seven, we're off the record.
(Short break taken.)
VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record. This is tape number four, the time is two forty-two.
MR. O'CONNOR: I'll ask the court reporter to please mark the next exhibit.
(Deposition Exhibit 227 marked for identification.)
Q. Mr. Yoo, take a few minutes to look at what's been marked as CPH Exhibit 227. Do you recognize this document, sir?
A. Yes, I do.

EUGENE YOO

Q. What was the purpose of Skadden Arps sending you this document?
A. I believe this was part of the due diligence process as we were trying to, I don't know if we were just -- this was post announcement or pre announcement? We were trying to get to a closure on the deal.
Q. Were you responsible for conducting legal due diligence of Sunbeam?
A. I personally was not responsible for legal due diligence, but one of my roles was helping to make sure that the due diligence process moved forward smoothly.
Q. Do you know who was responsible for legal due diligence?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I believe it was Skadden. I don't remember who specifically at Skadden.
Q. Do you know why Skadden would be sending this document to you if they were responsible for conducting legal due diligence?
A. In this case I think they were asking for any documents that we may have collected already in our work so they didn't have to go gather it again.

Q. Are they asking you to request documents from Sunbeam for the due diligence review?

MS. BROWN: Object to form. And foundation.

A. In this case, no, I don't believe so. As far as I can remember we were just assisting them, but they were the ones ultimately responsible for the due diligence, for the legal due diligence.

Q. Okay. I guess I'm confused by the first sentence of her memo. Which states, "the following items should be included as part of your due diligence request for Project Laser." Do you have any understanding of what that means?

A. Oh, I do, actually. We were compiling a master list for the due diligence and we were getting lists from the legal team, from, I believe it was Arthur Andersen and our own, we had included our own prior list that we had sent to Sunbeam so that we could, rather than sending four or five different lists from different sources we were going to send them one list for the due diligence.

EUGENE YOO

Q. Okay. Who were you sending the list to, the master list?

A. Let's see, I think this was going to, I think this was going to Coleman or somebody from the Coleman side.

Q. Okay. And what exactly were you compiling for this master list, what would this master list include?

A. I'm not sure what you mean.

MS. BROWN: Object to form.

Q. Well, maybe we're miscommunicating. You referred to a master list, what is the master list?

A. A list of all of the items that we would be requesting as part of the due diligence for the MNA transaction. And rather than sending a list for the legal due diligence and a list for the accounting due diligence and a list for any other due diligence, financing, whatever, we were going to send them one list that they could use to compile their information. We were trying to make the process as easy for the other side as possible.

Q. Okay. And part of this master list was this due diligence, legal due diligence list?

A. I believe that was the case, if I remember correctly.

Q. What else was included in the list?

A. I think there was a section that came from Arthur Andersen, I don't recall whether or not there was a section that came from Coopers. We had a -- I believe we had a list that Morgan Stanley worked with Sunbeam to compile for their portion of the due diligence.

Q. What materials did you obtain from Arthur Andersen?

A. We -- I'm not sure what you mean by "materials."

Q. When you said you believe they provided a section?

A. Well, they provided a list for us to give to the other side.

Q. Okay. My question is what was that list?

A. I don't know now.

Q. Is it one document?

A. I think it was just a few pages they sent us of items that they were looking for from the other side.

Q. Looking for from who?

EUGENE YOO

A. From the Coleman side.

Q. Seeking information from Coleman?

A. Right.

Q. Okay. I'm handing you what's been previously marked as CPH Exhibit 28. Do you recognize this document?

A. I think I do. I think I've seen this.

Q. Where do you recall seeing this document?

A. I don't remember the specific instance when I had seen this, but I think this was part of our update process with Sunbeam, just making sure that we were current on company events.

Q. And why was that important to you?

MS. BROWN: Object. Characterization.

A. Again, I don't remember the specific impetus for this meeting, but generally, especially if we're going to go out and talk to other companies about Sunbeam, which I think this is when it was happening. I don't remember.

Q. There's a reference there in paragraph 1 to "recent developments review." And in the third line down is "high dependence of recent sales growth on grilles." Do you recall why that was an issue to explore?

NOT A CERTIFIED COPY

015279

Page 166

EUGENE YOO

A. The only thing I can think of was that the sales mix had changed a little bit and we were just curious as to why.
Q. Do you recall what response you received from Sunbeam on this issue?
A. I don't remember the response.
Q. Do you know who was responsible for obtaining the information that is listed in this agenda?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. I'm not sure if there was anyone responsible, or any single person responsible for getting this information. I think this was just a guide for us to hold a discussion with them.
Q. Do you know who created this document?
A. No, I don't know.
Q. Do you recall any discussions with anyone at Morgan Stanley about the contents of this document?
A. No.
Q. Paragraph 5, "financial forecast review" lists five items --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- for inquiry. Do you remember obtaining any information on those issues?

Page 167

EUGENE YOO

A. I think we did get most of this at some point. I don't know if it was directly as a result of this. Other than maybe the sensitivity analysis, I don't seem to remember anything about that.
Q. Why is this information important to Morgan Stanley?
A. In this case, or?
Q. Correct.
A. I'm not sure when it was. You know, I think it was really just part of our making sure that our financial models were accurate, that we were representing the company and our analyses in the right way.
Q. And why is that important?
MS. BROWN: Objection.
A. We need to make sure we're presenting accurate data.
Q. Who were you presenting the accurate data to?
MS. BROWN: Objection to form.
A. I'm not sure who it was in this case.
Q. Is this the type of information that was being provided to potential acquisition targets?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.

Page 168

EUGENE YOO

A. I don't know. I don't know if any of this information was presented to them.
Q. Were you concerned about ensuring the accuracy of the presentation books that were being prepared by Morgan Stanley?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. What do you mean by "concern"?
Q. Was one reason why you were performing this due diligence -- withdrawn.
Was it important to you that the information contained in presentation statements, or presentation materials provided to third parties was accurate?
A. Generally speaking, I mean, that was, I guess, part of my job was to make sure that to the best of our knowledge what we were presenting was accurate.
Q. And one way to do that is to conduct due diligence of the company; correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And does this agenda reflect the issues that Morgan Stanley needed to explore in order to ensure that the information it had about the company that it was providing to third parties

Page 169

EUGENE YOO

was accurate?
MS. BROWN: Object to form. Can I hear that back, actually.
(Prior testimony read back.)
"And does this agenda reflect the issues that Morgan Stanley needed to explore in order to ensure that the information it had about the company that it was providing to third parties was accurate?"
A. Again, I don't remember the specific instance when we were using this, but this seems like something we would use more, not to verify accuracy, but more just to stay updated on the company. It wasn't really -- this didn't seem to be a matter of going back and questioning anything that we thought was wrong. This is just trying to make sure that we were as current on the company as possible.
Q. If in attempting to remain current on the company you discovered information that was inconsistent with what you were communicating to third parties, what would you do?
MS. BROWN: Object to form. Improper

Page 170

EUGENE YOO

hypothetical.
A. I don't know. I haven't been in that situation. I haven't had to deal with that yet.
Q. In this transaction you never came across any information about Sunbeam's business or financial condition that was inconsistent with what was being presented to third parties by Morgan Stanley?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. As far as I knew there were no inconsistencies between what we were presenting and information that we were getting from Sunbeam.
Q. And had you come across that information what would you have done?
MS. BROWN: Objection. Asked and answered. Improper hypothetical.
A. Again, I don't know. I haven't been in that situation before, so I don't know.
Q. You may have answered this question as well; you don't recall who was responsible for obtaining this information from Sunbeam?
A. I don't think it was any single person. Again, I don't think this was really a list of items to gather, it was really more just talking points for a meeting or a discussion with them.

Page 171

EUGENE YOO

Q. Who was responsible for ensuring that all the appropriate due diligence was completed by Morgan Stanley?
MS. BROWN: Object to form.
A. On the MNA side? Or --
Q. We can start there.
