Making Moderates See Red
Monday, August 27, 2001; Page A14
More and more, our Democratic chairman, Terry McAuliffe, reminds me of a sub-par golfer desperately in need of a mulligan.
The strength of our party has always been our big tent, but lately our chairman seems to be shrinking that tent to the size of one of those snow-cone cups turned upside down. Well, maybe a little bigger than that, say, a dunce cap.
I'll skip over his naming as the "rural" coordinator of our party a man from Massachusetts, but when he puts out statement after statement, TV ad after TV ad, railing against the tax cut, whom does he think he's hurting? Those 18 moderate Democrats who voted for the tax cut, that's who.
In case he forgot, nine are up for reelection next year. Folks such as Max Cleland, Tim Johnson, Mary Landrieu, Jean Carnahan, Max Baucus and others. Why ridicule them and imply they are dumb and wrong?
And now he labels Liddy Dole a "carpetbagger"? How Hillaryous can you get?

Down South, even if we vote against them, we are gracious to women or we suffer the consequences. Remember Clayton Williams's refusal to shake hands with Ann Richards in their 1990 governor's race? Southerners don't like that kind of stuff. New Yorkers must not either, as Rick Lazio found out.

Liddy Dole, as we say down South, was "born and bred" in North Carolina. She is no carpetbagger.

Many people whom I respect tell me that Mr. McAuliffe is a good man. I'm sure he is. But every time he speaks, it still sounds to me like fingernails across a blackboard. And he's making more and more moderates see red -- the color that dominated that 2000 election map.

ZELL MILLER
U.S. Senator (D-Ga.)
Washington

Democrat Senator Zell Miller writes the below piece in this morning's Washington Post where he excoriates DNC Chairman Terry McAuliffe for his attacks on the tax cut.

More and more, our Democratic chairman, Terry McAuliffe, reminds me of a sub-par golfer desperately in need of a mulligan.
The strength of our party has always been our big tent, but lately our chairman seems to be shrinking that tent to the size of one of those snow-cone cups turned upside down. Well, maybe a little bigger than that, say, a dunce cap.
I'll skip over his naming as the "rural" coordinator of our party a man from Massachusetts, but when he puts out statement after statement, TV ad after TV ad, railing against the tax cut, whom does he think he's hurting? Those 18 moderate Democrats who voted for the tax cut, that's who.
In case he forgot, nine are up for reelection next year. Folks such as Max Cleland, Tim Johnson, Mary Landrieu, Jean Carnahan, Max Baucus and others. Why ridicule them and imply they are dumb and wrong?
And now he labels Liddy Dole a "carpetbagger"? How Hillaryous can you get?

Down South, even if we vote against them, we are gracious to women or we suffer the consequences. Remember Clayton Williams's refusal to shake hands with Ann Richards in their 1990 governor's race? Southerners don't like that kind of stuff. New Yorkers must not either, as Rick Lazio found out.

Liddy Dole, as we say down South, was "born and bred" in North Carolina. She is no carpetbagger.

Many people whom I respect tell me that Mr. McAuliffe is a good man. I'm sure he is. But every time he speaks, it still sounds to me like fingernails across a blackboard. And he's making more and more moderates see red -- the color that dominated that 2000 election map.

ZELL MILLER
U.S. Senator (D-Ga.)
Washington

Democrat Senator Zell Miller writes the below piece in this morning's Washington Post where he excoriates DNC Chairman Terry McAuliffe for his attacks on the tax cut.

More and more, our Democratic chairman, Terry McAuliffe, reminds me of a sub-par golfer desperately in need of a mulligan.
The strength of our party has always been our big tent, but lately our chairman seems to be shrinking that tent to the size of one of those snow-cone cups turned upside down. Well, maybe a little bigger than that, say, a dunce cap.
I'll skip over his naming as the "rural" coordinator of our party a man from Massachusetts, but when he puts out statement after statement, TV ad after TV ad, railing against the tax cut, whom does he think he's hurting? Those 18 moderate Democrats who voted for the tax cut, that's who.
In case he forgot, nine are up for reelection next year. Folks such as Max Cleland, Tim Johnson, Mary Landrieu, Jean Carnahan, Max Baucus and others. Why ridicule them and imply they are dumb and wrong?
And now he labels Liddy Dole a "carpetbagger"? How Hillaryous can you get?

Down South, even if we vote against them, we are gracious to women or we suffer the consequences. Remember Clayton Williams's refusal to shake hands with Ann Richards in their 1990 governor's race? Southerners don't like that kind of stuff. New Yorkers must not either, as Rick Lazio found out.

Liddy Dole, as we say down South, was "born and bred" in North Carolina. She is no carpetbagger.

Many people whom I respect tell me that Mr. McAuliffe is a good man. I'm sure he is. But every time he speaks, it still sounds to me like fingernails across a blackboard. And he's making more and more moderates see red -- the color that dominated that 2000 election map.

ZELL MILLER
U.S. Senator (D-Ga.)

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.

- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.

- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.

- The President is focused on family budgets, not Washington budgets. The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.

- Democrats support the President's tax relief.

  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)

- The president will fight any attempt to increase taxes because tax increases would be the worst step we could take for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut is the key to jump-starting our economy. The best way to increase revenues is to spur economic growth.

- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.

- The President's budget funds key priorities:

  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.

- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.

- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.

- The President is focused on family budgets, not Washington budgets. The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.

- Democrats support the President's tax relief.

  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)

- The president will fight any attempt to increase taxes because tax increases would be the worst step we could take for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut is the key to jump-starting our economy. The best way to increase revenues is to spur economic growth.

- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.

- The President's budget funds key priorities:

  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.

- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.

- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.

- The President is focused on family budgets, not Washington budgets. The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.

- Democrats support the President's tax relief.

  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)

- The president will fight any attempt to increase taxes because tax increases would be the worst step we could take for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut is the key to jump-starting our economy. The best way to increase revenues is to spur economic growth.

- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.

- The President's budget funds key priorities:

  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

Budget Numbers Talking Points

- Both sets of numbers show that the surplus is the 2nd largest in history.

- The new numbers support the President's argument that the biggest threat to seniors and our economy is irresponsible spending. In recent years Congress has spent excessively. For example, last December Congress and the Clinton Administration spent $35 billion more than the budget they agreed to.

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare. The size of the surplus has no impact on Social Security benefits, the size of the trust funds or program solvency.

- The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.

- The President is focused on family budgets, not Washington budgets. The President cut taxes to boost our economy and get people money when they need it most – right now.

- Democrats support the President's tax relief.

  - ✓ 18 Democrats in the Senate voted for the President's tax relief.
  - ✓ Democrats -- including Senators Daschle, Conrad, Clinton and Kennedy – joined in a 94-3 vote against repealing the tax cut.
  - ✓ These same senators also voted for even more tax relief than became law (See attached votes)

- The president will fight any attempt to increase taxes because tax increases would be the worst step we could take for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut is the key to jump-starting our economy. The best way to increase revenues is to spur economic growth.

- The President will hold Congress accountable for living within the generous limits of the responsible budget they passed earlier this year. The President will oppose irresponsible spending, and will protect Medicare, Social Security, our armed forces, and the American taxpayer.

- The President's budget funds key priorities:

  - ✓ Protects Social Security and Medicare
  - ✓ Improves Medicare to help seniors get a prescription drug benefit.
  - ✓ Pays down historic amounts of debt -- the most ever and the maximum amount possible without incurring unnecessary premiums.
  - ✓ Improves the quality of life and training for our men and women in uniform.
  - ✓ Reforms education to focus on results and put accountability in schools.

HEADLINE: Del Rio magistrate recommended for border judge

BYLINE: Gary Martin

BODY: WASHINGTON - Texas' two senators have recommended a U.S. magistrate in Del Rio to fill a newly created judgeship to handle soaring immigration and drug smuggling caseloads on the state's border with Mexico.

The recommendation of Alia Moses Ludlum, 39, was forwarded to the White House on Wednesday for consideration by President Bush as he nominates applicants to the federal bench. Sens. Phil Gramm and Kay Bailey Hutchison, both Republicans, also recommended Texas District Judge David Godbey, 43, of Dallas for a position in the Northern Judicial District of Texas.

"These two professional judges meet the high standards that Texans expect of their federal jurists," Gramm said.

Ludlum has served as a U.S. magistrate in the Western Judicial District since 1997. She is a former assistant U.S. attorney and appellate division chief with the Travis County attorney's office in Austin.

She was born in the border town of Quemado and earned degrees from the Texas Woman's University in Denton and the University of Texas School of Law. She is secretary of the Judicial Council of the National Hispanic Bar Association and a former president of the Val Verde County Bar Association.

"Judge Ludlum's impressive record of public service as both prosecutor and federal magistrate makes her eminently qualified for the federal bench in Texas," Hutchison said.

"As a native of Quemado, she is aware that our cross-cultural border poses unique challenges to the law," she said.

The open judgeship in Del Rio is one of several seats created by Congress last year to deal with the skyrocketing immigration and drug cases.

The recommendations of Ludlum and Godbey now go to the White House for background checks and consideration by the president for nomination.

Dem Budget Chairman Conrad today hinted that tax increases may be in order. His comments follow on the heels of Minority Leader Gephardt's recent comments that tax increases are an option.

The President thinks tax increases are the last thing we need to consider right now. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families. The President cut taxes to help people get money when they need it most -- right now. Tax increases would take even more money out of the pockets of hard working Americans who created the surplus.

History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. For example, in 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates on the American peple and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

Senator Conrad voted against repeal of the tax rebates and voted for even larger tax relief than became law (see previous emails with Senate record votes)

Congress has passed the President's budget that protects Social Security and Medicare and funds key priorities like education, health care, defense, environmental protection and health care. Congress should stick to the budget that it passed and not try to raise taxes to fund irresponsible spending.

The President will blow the whistle on tax increases and irresponsible congressional spending.

Tax increases possible, Democrat says
Shrinking surplus may force use of Social Security funds for other programs
By Tom Curry, MSNBC

Aug. 28 * Opening the door to tax increases, a leading Senate Democrat said Tuesday that a plan to &raise revenue8 could be needed to make up any budget shortfalls. But Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said it is up to President Bush, not Democrats, to take the first step in proposing any tax increases or spending cuts.
THIS YEAR,S tax cut and the sluggish economy have shrunk projected budget surpluses, the Congressional Budget Office said in a report released Tuesday.
If the CBO forecasters are correct, $9 billion, or 0.45 percent, of this year,s total federal outlays of about $2 trillion will come from excess Social Security funds.
Conrad,s comments opened the door to tax increases * but only if Bush proposed them first.
&Let,s remember how we got here,8 Conrad told a Capitol Hill news conference. &This is not the Democrats, plan. This is a spending plan the Republicans passed. ... This is their spending plan, their tax plan * coupled with this economic downturn * that has put us in this position.8
Conrad said Republicans &now have the responsibility to come back and suggest how their plan be altered to solve a problem they have created.8
For starters, Conrad asked Bush to explain how he,d pay for the additional $18.4 billion in military spending that he wants this year. He said Bush was &putting us in a position for the next decade when we face either bigger benefit cuts, higher taxes or increased debt.8
RAISE TAXES?
Asked whether Democrats would favor cutting spending programs or borrowing Social Security funds to pay for current needs, Conrad replied, &Those aren,t the only choices. Obviously you can raise revenue, you can cut spending or you can engage in some combination.8
In reply to Democratic allegations that he had caused the surplus to vanish through &fiscal mismanagement,8 Bush asked Democrats last week, &If you,re against tax relief, are you then advocating you,re going to raise taxes on the American people?8
Using excess Social Security funds to help pay for other programs would break a vow by Republicans and Democrats alike not to use Social Security revenue to finance other federal priorities.
In a campaign speech on May 15, 2000, President Bush said, &all Social Security funds in the surplus must stay where they belong * dedicated to Social Security. ... For years, politicians in both parties have dipped into the trust fund to pay for more spending. And I will stop it.8
In another campaign speech on Dec. 1, 1999, Bush said his tax cut plan & reserves all the Social Security surplus for Social Security itself. None of it will be used for new spending or tax reductions.8
SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT ESTIMATES
The CBO estimates the total budget surplus for the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 will be $153 billion, while the White House Office of Management and Budget predicts it will be $158 billion.
In a note of optimism, the CBO report predicted &steadily increasing on-budget surpluses (will) re-emerge by the middle of the decade8 and said, &Although economic growth has slowed nearly to a standstill, CBO believes that the economy will narrowly avoid recession and recover gradually next year.8
In an interview on NBC,s Today program Tuesday, OMB director Mitch Daniels said his budget forecasters projected that all excess Social Security funds this year would be used to reduce the national debt and not for current spending. &The real issue here is the economy and whether we can keep it going * that ought to be our objective,8 he argued.

Daniels added, &the surplus started bigger than it has any right to be. Beyond some point the government really doesn,t have a right to take billions more from the taxpayers than it needs to pay its bills.... It,s the economy that produces surpluses, not vice versa.8
Until the last three years, it was the usual procedure for the government under both Republican and Democratic presidents to borrow excess Social Security funds to pay for other programs.
Democrats and Republicans alike have vowed that they would create a & lockbox8 and &wall off8 Social Security revenues.
Social Security, designed to be a pay-as-you-go system in which current revenues equal the cost of the benefits paid to current retirees, now has more money coming in than it needs to pay for benefits.
Last year Social Security collected $84.9 billion more in revenues than it needed.
Borrowing the Social Security money has no practical impact on the program, although it prevents the government from paying down public debt as quickly as it otherwise would.
+FISCAL STRAIGHTJACKET,
Bush argued last week that the dwindling federal surplus will have a healthy effect because it will deter increases in federal spending.
The president called the smaller surplus &a fiscal straightjacket for Congress. And that,s good for the taxpayers, and it,s incredibly positive news if you,re worried about a federal government that has been growing at a dramatic pace over the past eight years.8
The budget projections and the tax cut sparked a battle within the Democratic Party Monday with Georgia Sen. Zell Miller attacking Democratic National Committee chairman Terry McAuliffe.
&When he puts out statement after statement, TV ad after TV ad, railing against the tax cut, whom does he think he,s hurting?8 asked Miller in a letter to the Washington Post. &Those moderate Democrats who voted for the tax cut, that,s who.8
Miller was one of the 12 Senate Democrats who voted for the tax cut. Twenty-eight House Democrats also voted for it.
Asked about Miller,s criticism, McAuliffe said: &We,re a big party with a big tent. I,m not spending my time talking about the tax cut, just fiscal mismanagement.8
Bush,s top economic adviser said Sunday that a recession might justify stimulating growth by using Social Security surplus funds, which most Democrats and Republicans in Congress have declared off-limits.
&If we had two quarters of negative economic growth, my recommendation to the president would be that he might consider it,8 White House economic adviser Lawrence Lindsey said on &Fox News Sunday.8
&I don,t think we,re in a recession,8 Lindsey stressed.
He appeared on Sunday morning television talk shows to flesh out Bush,s comments at a news conference Friday, in which he listed two types of & emergencies8 that might warrant tapping into Social Security funds: &an economic recession or war.8
The Associated Press and Reuters contributed to this report.

Dem Budget Chairman Conrad today hinted that tax increases may be in order. His comments follow on the heels of Minority Leader Gephardt's recent comments that tax increases are an option.

The President thinks tax increases are the last thing we need to consider right now. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families. The President cut taxes to help people get money when they need it most -- right now. Tax increases would take even more money out of the pockets of hard working Americans who created the surplus.

History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. For example, in 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates on the American peple and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

Senator Conrad voted against repeal of the tax rebates and voted for even larger tax relief than became law (see previous emails with Senate record votes)

Congress has passed the President's budget that protects Social Security and Medicare and funds key priorities like education, health care, defense, environmental protection and health care. Congress should stick to the budget that it passed and not try to raise taxes to fund irresponsible spending.

The President will blow the whistle on tax increases and irresponsible congressional spending.

Tax increases possible, Democrat says
Shrinking surplus may force use of Social Security funds for other programs
By Tom Curry, MSNBC

Aug. 28 * Opening the door to tax increases, a leading Senate Democrat said Tuesday that a plan to &raise revenue8 could be needed to make up any budget shortfalls. But Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said it is up to President Bush, not Democrats, to take the first step in proposing any tax increases or spending cuts.
THIS YEAR,S tax cut and the sluggish economy have shrunk projected budget surpluses, the Congressional Budget Office said in a report released Tuesday.
If the CBO forecasters are correct, $9 billion, or 0.45 percent, of this year,s total federal outlays of about $2 trillion will come from excess Social Security funds.
Conrad,s comments opened the door to tax increases * but only if Bush proposed them first.
&Let,s remember how we got here,8 Conrad told a Capitol Hill news conference. &This is not the Democrats, plan. This is a spending plan the Republicans passed. ... This is their spending plan, their tax plan * coupled with this economic downturn * that has put us in this position.8
Conrad said Republicans &now have the responsibility to come back and suggest how their plan be altered to solve a problem they have created.8
For starters, Conrad asked Bush to explain how he,d pay for the additional $18.4 billion in military spending that he wants this year. He said Bush was &putting us in a position for the next decade when we face either bigger benefit cuts, higher taxes or increased debt.8
RAISE TAXES?
Asked whether Democrats would favor cutting spending programs or borrowing Social Security funds to pay for current needs, Conrad replied, &Those aren,t the only choices. Obviously you can raise revenue, you can cut spending or you can engage in some combination.8
In reply to Democratic allegations that he had caused the surplus to vanish through &fiscal mismanagement,8 Bush asked Democrats last week, &If you,re against tax relief, are you then advocating you,re going to raise taxes on the American people?8
Using excess Social Security funds to help pay for other programs would break a vow by Republicans and Democrats alike not to use Social Security revenue to finance other federal priorities.
In a campaign speech on May 15, 2000, President Bush said, &all Social Security funds in the surplus must stay where they belong * dedicated to Social Security. ... For years, politicians in both parties have dipped into the trust fund to pay for more spending. And I will stop it.8
In another campaign speech on Dec. 1, 1999, Bush said his tax cut plan & reserves all the Social Security surplus for Social Security itself. None of it will be used for new spending or tax reductions.8
SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT ESTIMATES
The CBO estimates the total budget surplus for the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 will be $153 billion, while the White House Office of Management and Budget predicts it will be $158 billion.
In a note of optimism, the CBO report predicted &steadily increasing on-budget surpluses (will) re-emerge by the middle of the decade8 and said, &Although economic growth has slowed nearly to a standstill, CBO believes that the economy will narrowly avoid recession and recover gradually next year.8
In an interview on NBC,s Today program Tuesday, OMB director Mitch Daniels said his budget forecasters projected that all excess Social Security funds this year would be used to reduce the national debt and not for current spending. &The real issue here is the economy and whether we can keep it going * that ought to be our objective,8 he argued.
Daniels added, &the surplus started bigger than it has any right to be.

Beyond some point the government really doesn,t have a right to take billions more from the taxpayers than it needs to pay its bills.... It,s the economy that produces surpluses, not vice versa.8
Until the last three years, it was the usual procedure for the government under both Republican and Democratic presidents to borrow excess Social Security funds to pay for other programs.
Democrats and Republicans alike have vowed that they would create a & lockbox8 and &wall off8 Social Security revenues.
Social Security, designed to be a pay-as-you-go system in which current revenues equal the cost of the benefits paid to current retirees, now has more money coming in than it needs to pay for benefits.
Last year Social Security collected $84.9 billion more in revenues than it needed.
Borrowing the Social Security money has no practical impact on the program, although it prevents the government from paying down public debt as quickly as it otherwise would.
+FISCAL STRAIGHTJACKET,
Bush argued last week that the dwindling federal surplus will have a healthy effect because it will deter increases in federal spending.
The president called the smaller surplus &a fiscal straightjacket for Congress. And that,s good for the taxpayers, and it,s incredibly positive news if you,re worried about a federal government that has been growing at a dramatic pace over the past eight years.8
The budget projections and the tax cut sparked a battle within the Democratic Party Monday with Georgia Sen. Zell Miller attacking Democratic National Committee chairman Terry McAuliffe.
&When he puts out statement after statement, TV ad after TV ad, railing against the tax cut, whom does he think he,s hurting?8 asked Miller in a letter to the Washington Post. &Those moderate Democrats who voted for the tax cut, that,s who.8
Miller was one of the 12 Senate Democrats who voted for the tax cut. Twenty-eight House Democrats also voted for it.
Asked about Miller,s criticism, McAuliffe said: &We,re a big party with a big tent. I,m not spending my time talking about the tax cut, just fiscal mismanagement.8
Bush,s top economic adviser said Sunday that a recession might justify stimulating growth by using Social Security surplus funds, which most Democrats and Republicans in Congress have declared off-limits.
&If we had two quarters of negative economic growth, my recommendation to the president would be that he might consider it,8 White House economic adviser Lawrence Lindsey said on &Fox News Sunday.8
&I don,t think we,re in a recession,8 Lindsey stressed.
He appeared on Sunday morning television talk shows to flesh out Bush,s comments at a news conference Friday, in which he listed two types of & emergencies8 that might warrant tapping into Social Security funds: &an economic recession or war.8

Dem Budget Chairman Conrad today hinted that tax increases may be in order. His comments follow on the heels of Minority Leader Gephardt's recent comments that tax increases are an option.

The President thinks tax increases are the last thing we need to consider right now. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families. The President cut taxes to help people get money when they need it most -- right now. Tax increases would take even more money out of the pockets of hard working Americans who created the surplus.

History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. For example, in 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates on the American peple and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

Senator Conrad voted against repeal of the tax rebates and voted for even larger tax relief than became law (see previous emails with Senate record votes)

Congress has passed the President's budget that protects Social Security and Medicare and funds key priorities like education, health care, defense, environmental protection and health care. Congress should stick to the budget that it passed and not try to raise taxes to fund irresponsible spending.

The President will blow the whistle on tax increases and irresponsible congressional spending.

Tax increases possible, Democrat says
Shrinking surplus may force use of Social Security funds for other programs
By Tom Curry, MSNBC

Aug. 28 * Opening the door to tax increases, a leading Senate Democrat said Tuesday that a plan to &raise revenue8 could be needed to make up any budget shortfalls. But Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said it is up to President Bush, not Democrats, to take the first step in proposing any tax increases or spending cuts.
THIS YEAR,S tax cut and the sluggish economy have shrunk projected budget surpluses, the Congressional Budget Office said in a report released Tuesday.
If the CBO forecasters are correct, $9 billion, or 0.45 percent, of this year,s total federal outlays of about $2 trillion will come from excess Social Security funds.
Conrad,s comments opened the door to tax increases * but only if Bush proposed them first.
&Let,s remember how we got here,8 Conrad told a Capitol Hill news conference. &This is not the Democrats, plan. This is a spending plan the Republicans passed. ... This is their spending plan, their tax plan * coupled with this economic downturn * that has put us in this position.8
Conrad said Republicans &now have the responsibility to come back and suggest how their plan be altered to solve a problem they have created.8
For starters, Conrad asked Bush to explain how he,d pay for the additional $18.4 billion in military spending that he wants this year. He said Bush was &putting us in a position for the next decade when we face either bigger benefit cuts, higher taxes or increased debt.8
RAISE TAXES?
Asked whether Democrats would favor cutting spending programs or borrowing Social Security funds to pay for current needs, Conrad replied, &Those aren,t the only choices. Obviously you can raise revenue, you can cut spending or you can engage in some combination.8
In reply to Democratic allegations that he had caused the surplus to vanish through &fiscal mismanagement,8 Bush asked Democrats last week, &If you,re against tax relief, are you then advocating you,re going to raise taxes on the American people?8
Using excess Social Security funds to help pay for other programs would break a vow by Republicans and Democrats alike not to use Social Security revenue to finance other federal priorities.
In a campaign speech on May 15, 2000, President Bush said, &all Social Security funds in the surplus must stay where they belong * dedicated to Social Security. ... For years, politicians in both parties have dipped into the trust fund to pay for more spending. And I will stop it.8
In another campaign speech on Dec. 1, 1999, Bush said his tax cut plan & reserves all the Social Security surplus for Social Security itself. None of it will be used for new spending or tax reductions.8
SLIGHTLY DIFFERENT ESTIMATES
The CBO estimates the total budget surplus for the fiscal year that ends Sept. 30 will be $153 billion, while the White House Office of Management and Budget predicts it will be $158 billion.
In a note of optimism, the CBO report predicted &steadily increasing on-budget surpluses (will) re-emerge by the middle of the decade8 and said, &Although economic growth has slowed nearly to a standstill, CBO believes that the economy will narrowly avoid recession and recover gradually next year.8

said his budget forecasters projected that all excess Social Security funds this year would be used to reduce the national debt and not for current spending. &The real issue here is the economy and whether we can keep it going * that ought to be our objective,8 he argued.
Daniels added, &the surplus started bigger than it has any right to be. Beyond some point the government really doesn,t have a right to take billions more from the taxpayers than it needs to pay its bills.... It,s the economy that produces surpluses, not vice versa.8
Until the last three years, it was the usual procedure for the government under both Republican and Democratic presidents to borrow excess Social Security funds to pay for other programs.
Democrats and Republicans alike have vowed that they would create a & lockbox8 and &wall off8 Social Security revenues.
Social Security, designed to be a pay-as-you-go system in which current revenues equal the cost of the benefits paid to current retirees, now has more money coming in than it needs to pay for benefits.
Last year Social Security collected $84.9 billion more in revenues than it needed.
Borrowing the Social Security money has no practical impact on the program, although it prevents the government from paying down public debt as quickly as it otherwise would.
+FISCAL STRAIGHTJACKET,
Bush argued last week that the dwindling federal surplus will have a healthy effect because it will deter increases in federal spending.
The president called the smaller surplus &a fiscal straightjacket for Congress. And that,s good for the taxpayers, and it,s incredibly positive news if you,re worried about a federal government that has been growing at a dramatic pace over the past eight years.8
The budget projections and the tax cut sparked a battle within the Democratic Party Monday with Georgia Sen. Zell Miller attacking Democratic National Committee chairman Terry McAuliffe.
&When he puts out statement after statement, TV ad after TV ad, railing against the tax cut, whom does he think he,s hurting?8 asked Miller in a letter to the Washington Post. &Those moderate Democrats who voted for the tax cut, that,s who.8
Miller was one of the 12 Senate Democrats who voted for the tax cut. Twenty-eight House Democrats also voted for it.
Asked about Miller,s criticism, McAuliffe said: &We,re a big party with a big tent. I,m not spending my time talking about the tax cut, just fiscal mismanagement.8
Bush,s top economic adviser said Sunday that a recession might justify stimulating growth by using Social Security surplus funds, which most Democrats and Republicans in Congress have declared off-limits.
&If we had two quarters of negative economic growth, my recommendation to the president would be that he might consider it,8 White House economic adviser Lawrence Lindsey said on &Fox News Sunday.8
&I don,t think we,re in a recession,8 Lindsey stressed.
He appeared on Sunday morning television talk shows to flesh out Bush,s comments at a news conference Friday, in which he listed two types of & emergencies8 that might warrant tapping into Social Security funds: &an economic recession or war.8
The Associated Press and Reuters contributed to this report.

Subject: Political Photo question

Noel:

The President attended the President's Dinner June 27, which, I believe, was a fund-raiser for the RNC. The film is restricted, but we have a request from the office of Management and Administration for a personal photo an attendee who met the President. They would like to send it to the President for signing and then send it to the person.

This is their second request for photos from this event. We ordered two photos for them previously.

My understanding is that if it's a political event, no photos can be ordered either for media or personal use.

questions:

Did we make a mistake when we initially ordered the photos?
Should we fulfill their second order for another photo?
Do I have a correct understanding of the policy?

thank you,
Lynden

I forgot to mention that, in fact, a ten-year old boy (who has spina bifida)
and his folks (who our group has flown several times for treatment) did get over to meet President Bush! There were at the event selling t-shirts and coffee mugs.

Good morning.

Every major paper this morning has quotes from economic experts and analysts extolling the virtues of the tax cut for economic growth. And Democrats continue to come forward to defend the tax cut, saying just how important it is for the economy.

Remember to make this point to everyone you talk to today -- The President has taken immediate action on his strong economic recovery plan to cut taxes to get working families immediate help, to pay off historic levels of debt, and to increase trade to create American jobs and sell more goods and services to the world. The President's partisan opponents have no economic recovery plan whatsover. They have done nothing to help the economy while the President has sided with working families and acted immmediately.

If you read the papers today you will see that conventional wisdom is beginning to cement out there that President Bush is in touch with working families who are suffering because of the economy while his partisan opponents are in touch with their consultants on how to best play partisan budget games. Conventional wisdom among the economic experts has also cemented that the tax cut is going to help spur economic recovery.

And once again yesterday, you had the President talking about his priorities while his partisan opponents were talking about the old way of doing business in Washington with partisan budget games.

Here's a few news bites you should know about this morning regarding the budget, the economy and tax relief.

In a front page piece, the USA Today writes, "Economists predicted the combination of tax rebates, lower interest rates and lower energy costs would boost consumer spending and spur growth."

In the NY Times today, Bruce Steinberg -- chief economist at Merrill Lynch -- says, "We have $40 billion in tax rebate checks to support the consumer in the coming weeks" -- making the point that consumer spending is going to help boost our economy.

Following on Dem Senator Zell Miller's piece on the Washington Post this week excoriating Democrats for their tax cut attacks, Democrats today in the Washington Times are defending their tax cut votes, arguing the President's point that the tax cut is the best medicine for the economy. Sen. Baucus, Senator Carnahan, Senator Blanche Lincoln, Senator Ben Nelson and Rep. Rick Larsen all defend the tax cut. Sen. Nelson's office says the tax cut is, "probably the best step we've taken to get the economy moving again." Nelson's office also says that the surplus has declined because, "the economy is faltering."

The WSJ has an editorial this morning discussing France and tax increases. According to the editorial, "It strikes us that if even a French Socialist can realize that reversing tax cuts would be deadly to his chances in next year's elections, surely there's hope for the DNC. Anyone know if Terry McAuliffe reads French?" The President yesterday made it clear that he opposes tax increases because they would hurt our economy. Dick Gephardt and Senator Conrad have said in recent days that tax increases are an option. Be sure to remind people that their economic recovery plan is to take more money out of the pockets of the American people.

The LA Times reports, "Consumer spending over the next year is receiving a powerful boost from three sources, according to a Merrill Lynch analysis: $40 billion in federal tax rebates, $50 billion in reduced interest payments...."

Yesterday Commerce Secretary Evans received great news coverage with his arguments that increased trade is important to getting our economy moving again. Evans' emphasis on how trade can help our economy gives the President's trade agenda new momentum as Congress returns and gets ready to consider it.

Have a great day.

Good morning.

Every major paper this morning has quotes from economic experts and analysts extolling the virtues of the tax cut for economic growth. And Democrats continue to come forward to defend the tax cut, saying just how important it is for the economy.

Remember to make this point to everyone you talk to today -- The President has taken immediate action on his strong economic recovery plan to cut taxes to get working families immediate help, to pay off historic levels of debt, and to increase trade to create American jobs and sell more goods and services to the world. The President's partisan opponents have no economic recovery plan whatsover. They have done nothing to help the economy while the President has sided with working families and acted immmediately.

If you read the papers today you will see that conventional wisdom is beginning to cement out there that President Bush is in touch with working families who are suffering because of the economy while his partisan opponents are in touch with their consultants on how to best play partisan budget games. Conventional wisdom among the economic experts has also cemented that the tax cut is going to help spur economic recovery.

And once again yesterday, you had the President talking about his priorities while his partisan opponents were talking about the old way of doing business in Washington with partisan budget games.

Here's a few news bites you should know about this morning regarding the budget, the economy and tax relief.

In a front page piece, the USA Today writes, "Economists predicted the combination of tax rebates, lower interest rates and lower energy costs would boost consumer spending and spur growth."

In the NY Times today, Bruce Steinberg -- chief economist at Merrill Lynch -- says, "We have $40 billion in tax rebate checks to support the consumer in the coming weeks" -- making the point that consumer spending is going to help boost our economy.

Following on Dem Senator Zell Miller's piece on the Washington Post this week excoriating Democrats for their tax cut attacks, Democrats today in the Washington Times are defending their tax cut votes, arguing the President's point that the tax cut is the best medicine for the economy. Sen. Baucus, Senator Carnahan, Senator Blanche Lincoln, Senator Ben Nelson and Rep. Rick Larsen all defend the tax cut. Sen. Nelson's office says the tax cut is, "probably the best step we've taken to get the economy moving again." Nelson's office also says that the surplus has declined because, "the economy is faltering."

The WSJ has an editorial this morning discussing France and tax increases. According to the editorial, "It strikes us that if even a French Socialist can realize that reversing tax cuts would be deadly to his chances in next year's elections, surely there's hope for the DNC. Anyone know if Terry McAuliffe reads French?" The President yesterday made it clear that he opposes tax increases because they would hurt our economy. Dick Gephardt and Senator Conrad have said in recent days that tax increases are an option. Be sure to remind people that their economic recovery plan is to take more money out of the pockets of the American people.

The LA Times reports, "Consumer spending over the next year is receiving a powerful boost from three sources, according to a Merrill Lynch analysis: $40 billion in federal tax rebates, $50 billion in reduced interest payments...."

Yesterday Commerce Secretary Evans received great news coverage with his arguments that increased trade is important to getting our economy moving again. Evans' emphasis on how trade can help our economy gives the President's trade agenda new momentum as Congress returns and gets ready to consider it.

Have a great day.

Good morning.

Not much in the news today about the budget. There are a couple of key points that you need to remember as you read the papers today and talk to people about the stimulative effects of the President's tax cut:

The Wall Street Journal reports this morning that while many Americans are spending their tax rebate checks, many Americans are also saving their checks or paying off debts. It is important to remember that all three options are good for America's economy.

Spending, saving, and paying off debt will all help the economy. Here's how:

Consumers that spend the money will boost consumption and provide an immediate boost to the economy.

Consumers who save their rebate checks will help raise America,s personal savings rate, which is currently at a historic low. The American current personal savings rate is actually negative. Increasing the personal savings rate will boost the economy in the medium and long-term because it will help spur more investment.

Consumers who say they plan to pay off personal debt will give another boost the economy because paying off their debt will free up more money for consumer spending. High personal debt is one of the largest factors that threatens to restrict consumer spending. Paying off those pesky credit card bills with sky-high interest rates will allow consumers to put that money to better use elsewhere in our economy.

Have a great day.

Jim

Good morning.

Not much in the news today about the budget. There are a couple of key points that you need to remember as you read the papers today and talk to people about the stimulative effects of the President's tax cut:

The Wall Street Journal reports this morning that while many Americans are spending their tax rebate checks, many Americans are also saving their checks or paying off debts. It is important to remember that all three options are good for America's economy.

Spending, saving, and paying off debt will all help the economy. Here's how:

Consumers that spend the money will boost consumption and provide an immediate boost to the economy.

Consumers who save their rebate checks will help raise America,s personal savings rate, which is currently at a historic low. The American current personal savings rate is actually negative. Increasing the personal savings rate will boost the economy in the medium and long-term because it will help spur more investment.

Consumers who say they plan to pay off personal debt will give another boost the economy because paying off their debt will free up more money for consumer spending. High personal debt is one of the largest factors that threatens to restrict consumer spending. Paying off those pesky credit card bills with sky-high interest rates will allow consumers to put that money to better use elsewhere in our economy.

Have a great day.

Jim

Yes, Litmus-Test Judges
By Joseph A. Califano Jr.

Friday, August 31, 2001; Page A23

In considering presidential nominees for district and appellate judgeships, professional qualification alone should no longer be considered a ticket to a seat on the bench.

For years partisan gridlock and political pandering for campaign dollars have led to failures of the Congress and White House, whether Democratic or Republican, to legislate and execute laws on a variety of matters of urgent concern to our citizens. As a result, the federal courts have become increasingly powerful architects of public policy, and those who seek such power must be judged in the spotlight of that reality.

Years ago battles of the bench were pretty much limited to the Supreme Court: FDR's effort to stack the court with New Dealers, Johnson's attempt to name Abe Fortas chief justice, Nixon's push to seat Clement Haynsworth and Harrold Carswell, and the in-your-face street fights over Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas. Senate scrutiny was painstaking because the nine justices have such a potent voice in setting national policy.

In those days, when it came to lower-court nominees, senators deferred to the wishes -- and litmus tests -- of their colleagues from the nominee's state and the president. Until Lyndon Johnson moved into the Oval Office, southern senators such as Mississippi's John Eastland, then Judiciary Committee chairman, insisted that presidents (including John F. Kennedy) nominate segregationist federal judges in their states. LBJ believed Kennedy had made a mistake in bowing to these senators. If there was to be a litmus test, it would be his.

As a result, in selecting judicial nominees, those of us who helped check them out and interviewed them nailed down their views on civil rights, desegregation and racial justice. LBJ's insistence on this cost him the friendship of his mentor, Georgia senator Richard Russell, over a federal appellate court seat.

The litmus test of recent years has focused on the pro-life or pro-choice views of nominees. It is as inconceivable that Ronald Reagan would have sent the Senate a decidedly pro-choice nominee as it was that Bill Clinton would have named a pro-life one.

Litmus tests are nothing new. What's new is the growing role of federal courts in crafting national policies once considered the exclusive preserve of the legislature and executive. As gridlock and big money have stymied the House and Senate and shaped the way laws are executed, concerned citizens have gone to court with petitions they once would have taken to legislators and executive appointees. As the federal courts have moved to fill the public policy vacuum, conservatives, liberals and a host of special interests have developed a sharp eye for those nominated to sit on the bench. So should the Senate.

The failure of Congress to enact sensible public health policies regarding tobacco to protect our children from nicotine pushers sent anti-smoking advocates to federal court to draft a settlement agreement with provisions that read like sections of a federal statute. While Republican and Democratic administrations and Congresses have been fiddling over a patients' bill of rights, patients have gone to federal court for relief likely to have at least as much impact on health maintenance organizations as anything the politicians at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue can cobble together.

Despairing of more effective legislative or executive action, many cities are asking federal district judges for damages and court orders to restrict the way manufacturers sell handguns and other firearms. Federal District Judge Colleen Kollar-Kotelly's final orders to remedy Microsoft's monopolization may have more to say about the development of the Internet economy that any president, House speaker or Senate majority leader.

When the executive does act, say on cigarette marketing or environmental protection, adversely affected businesses rush to court to overturn its actions and regulations. The big bankrollers of drug legalization like George Soros know the difference between a federal judge who can find a way to uphold state medical marijuana laws and one who will find that federal statutes preempt them.

Environmentalists, prison reformers and consumer advocates have learned that what can't be won in the legislature or executive may be achievable in a federal district court where a sympathetic judge sits.

Federal district judges are the lords of their realms, and unless they open the gates, it can be impossible for the litigating parties to get out once they enter the courtroom kingdom. These judges can hold cases for years, tying up businesses and regulating prisons, cities and schools with detailed court orders.

The battle over who fills the record number of judicial vacancies has taken on an importance unimaginable just a generation ago. Who sits in federal district and appellate courts is more important than the struggle over the budget, the level of defense spending, second-guessing the tax bill and whose fingers are poised to dip into the Social Security and Medicare cookie jars.

President Bush and Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch understand this as surely as Democratic Senate Judiciary Chairman Patrick Leahy and subcommittee Chairman Charles Schumer do. Both sides know that many of the individuals who fill these seats will have more power over tobacco policy, prison reform, control of HMOs, the death penalty, abortion, environmental issues, the constitutionality of redistricting for House elections, gun control and the rights of women and minorities than the president or congressional leaders, and for a longer period of time.

That's why professional qualifications should be only the threshold step in the climb of judicial nominees to Senate confirmation. There is not sufficient time to examine each lower federal court nominee with the penetrating policy MRI reserved for Supreme Court justices. But the Senate must take enough time to give these men and women the kind of searching review their sweeping power to make national policies deserves.

Back to School: U.S. Supreme Court Likely to Hear Challenge to Vouchers
Anne Gearan
The Associated Press

September 4, 2001

This could well be the year the U.S. Supreme Court turns to school vouchers and the question of whether spending government money on religious schools violates the separation between church and state.

The Court could say by late September whether it will hear a dispute over a pilot voucher program involving about 3,800 children in Cleveland. Supporters hope the justices will use that case to broaden a recent trend of approving limited use of taxpayer money at religious schools.

"We are optimistic the Court will take this case and will use it to lift the constitutional cloud from school choice," said Clint Bolick, vice president of the libertarian law firm Institute for Justice. The firm represents inner-city parents from Cleveland whose children are enrolled in the 6-year-old voucher program there.

Vouchers allow parents to use government subsidies to pay all or some of the tuition at private schools.

Supporters say that gives children a way out of hopeless or dangerous public schools, while giving parents power over school bureaucracies.

Teacher unions, most congressional Democrats and other political opponents say vouchers are fraught with constitutional problems and siphon scarce money from already struggling public schools.

Those who oppose vouchers on constitutional grounds say they are a clear violation of the guarantee that government will not promote or "establish" religion.

"People have every right to take their children out of public schools and put their children in private school or parochial school, but they should not be using public dollars for what is not only religious education but religion indoctrination," said Steven R. Shapiro, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The Court last ruled on vouchers directly in 1973, when it struck down a New York tuition reimbursement program because public money was used to "subsidize and advance the religious mission of sectarian schools."

The Court has become more conservative since then, and voucher supporters say the justices seem to be inching toward a full or partial reversal of that earlier ruling. In the meantime, the Court has passed on several voucher cases but in some instances has allowed pro-voucher lower court decisions to stand.

There are several features of the Cleveland case that make it a likely test case, Bolick as well as voucher opponents said.

The Cleveland program involves children already attending private and religious schools, who would lose their tuition help and very likely have to leave their classrooms this fall if the high court does not step in.

Two lower courts reviewed the program and came to opposite constitutional conclusions, and only the Supreme Court can resolve that split. The Ohio Supreme Court found the program constitutionally sound. But a federal appeals court ruled late last year that the voucher system is an impermissible government promotion of religion.

The Supreme Court itself intervened at an earlier stage of the case. In 1999, the Court dissolved a judge's order blocking the program and indicated it might revisit the case later on.

If so, the Court's answer may come as some of the air has gone out of the voucher idea. Although vouchers were a centerpiece of President Bush's education campaign platform, they were left out of Congress' education legislation.

Voters recently rejected voucher plans in California and Michigan.

"I think the public has overwhelmingly cast their vote on where they stand on this issue, and they do not support vouchers," said Marc Egan, director of the voucher strategy center at the National School Boards Association. "When you put it up for a vote people are saying we ought to be putting money into improving public schools and vouchers are a diversion."

The issue remains powerful among conservatives, and the Bush administration has not given up.

Bush's top Supreme Court lawyer told the Court it should hear the case "in the nation's interest."

Legislators and policy-makers need to know, "without further delay, whether such programs are a constitutionally permissible option for expanding education opportunity for children enrolled in failing public schools across America, or whether other solutions must be sought for this critical national problem," Solicitor General Theodore Olson wrote in an uninvited friend-of-the-court brief.

CQ WEEKLY - LAW & JUDICIARY

Unhurried Pace of Judicial Confirmations Is Typical of a President's First Year

By Elizabeth A. Palmer, CQ Staff

Listening to the latest rhetoric, it sounds as if the fight over confirming President Bush's judicial nominations could soon shut down the Senate.

And maybe it will. But even with control of the Senate switching hands midyear and partisanship on the issue raising tensions, the pace of hearings and confirmations of Bush's nominees to the federal bench is just about the same as it has been in the first year of the previous three presidents.

That is not to say that it has been fast. So far, four of Bush's picks for the federal courts have won confirmation: two appeals court judges and two district court judges. Only one of those, Roger L. Gregory, was among the first 11 appeals court nominations Bush sent to the Senate on May 9. (Background, CQ Weekly, p. 1071, 898)

/graphics/weekly/2001/09/01/wr20010901-33weblabor-cht.pdf
Where The Nominations Stand

But by the beginning of August in his first year, President Bill Clinton had won confirmation of none of his judicial nominations. In fact, Clinton did not send his first 13 nominees to the Senate until Aug. 6, 1993, just prior to the August recess.

President George Bush, father of the current president, had won confirmation of only four of the first eight nominations he sent the Senate by early August in 1989. And in 1981, President Ronald Reagan had won confirmation of two judges of the 11 he had sent the Senate before the summer recess.

The difference now is that the new Bush administration quickly ramped up its selection process for judges, which it made significantly shorter by dropping the traditional evaluation of the American Bar Association (ABA). By Aug. 3, Bush had sent 48 judicial nominations to the Senate, far more than his predecessors, and four of them were confirmed. Only a few of Bush's nominees had a hearing before the August recess. (CQ Weekly, p. 640)

Democrats say the delays can be attributed to the strange year in the Senate, which had trouble organizing as an institution split 50-50 between the parties, and then abruptly flipped into Democratic control in June.

In addition, the White House decision on the ABA has played a significant role in causing delays, Democrats argue. They will not act on a nominee without the ABA evaluation, which now does not begin until after the nomination is sent to the Senate, rather than before. As a result, Democrats said, a two-month lag has been built in between submission of a nomination and the ability of the committee to hold a hearing on the candidate.

The ABA has a special committee that conducts interviews with the nominee and those who know him, then evaluates the candidate's integrity, competence and judicial temperament. It rates each judge as "well-qualified," "qualified" or "unqualified." (Chart, p. 2027)

Partisanship, Old and New

But conservatives charge that Senate Democrats are deliberately delaying the process to keep Bush from putting his stamp on the federal judiciary.

"Senate Democrats obstruct Republican nominees," said Tom Jipping, the head of the conservative interest group Free Congress Foundation's Judicial Selection Monitoring Project. He said the delays follow a "long-term, committed, partisan pattern that Democrats have followed for the last 20 years."

"They're on track to set a record low" in the number of judges confirmed this year, Jipping said.

By the end of his first year, Clinton had won confirmation of 27 judges, Bush had won 15 (out of the 19 nominated) and Reagan had won 41.

In an Aug. 14 interview with CNN, White House Counsel Alberto R. Gonzales was pessimistic about the number of Bush's picks likely to be confirmed by the end of the year, saying he expected no more than five.

But Gonzales blamed the situation on what happened in the years before Bush became president, when Democrats say Republicans unfairly blocked Clinton's nominees and denied him his right to place judges on the bench.

"We are trying to work through some of the logjams, but there is a lot of bitterness," Gonzales said. "This is a bit of a payback. I can't argue with some of [the Democrats'] perceptions."

Talking about what had happened in the past, when nominees were held up for months, Gonzales said it was wrong and noted that in the current situation, "part of this is based on the conduct of the Republican senators in the past. We had nothing to do with this problem. But it does affect us."

So far, Democrats have worked only on the least controversial of Bush's nominees, holding rare recess confirmation hearings on one current and one former Judiciary Committee staffer, both of whom are virtually unopposed in their bid for judgeships.

But the road ahead will almost certainly be more difficult.

For one thing, there is a technical problem. Because of a squabble in the Senate on Aug. 3, the administration must resubmit all of the nominations that were pending when the Senate recessed. Traditionally, just before a recess the Senate approves a motion to hold over all pending nominations; otherwise they are returned to the president.

When Democrats made the motion this year, however, the list did not include two troubled nominations: Mary Sheila Gall, the administration's pick to head the Consumer Product Safety Commission, and Otto J. Reich, the nominee to be assistant secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs. (Reich, CQ Weekly p. 734)

Gall's nomination was defeated in the Senate Commerce Committee on Aug. 2.

And it is unclear whether Senate Democrats would have allowed the Foreign Relations Committee to take up Reich's nomination. (Background, CQ Weekly, p. 1927)

With Gall and Reich omitted from the list, Minority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., objected, so the motion failed. The White House must now renominate each name on the list when the Senate is back in session. The Senate returns the week of Sept. 3.

Qualified, and Conservative

Senate Democrats still have not figured out how to handle the Bush nominees, especially those chosen for appeals courts that render decisions on matters of constitutional law.

Most nominees have strong conservative backgrounds, which has the liberal interest community up in arms. "This administration has thrown down the gauntlet by nominating people that are so out of step with mainstream American values," said Nan Aron, president of the Alliance for Justice, a liberal interest group that monitors judicial selection.

Charles E. Schumer, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight and the Courts, held a hearing on whether the Senate should consider ideology when evaluating judicial nominations, and Democrats were roundly criticized by Republicans for even considering the question.

But Aron said nominees "need to be considered in light of the composition and direction of the circuit [court]" to which they would be appointed.

Currently, half of the 12 regular courts of appeal are dominated by GOP nominees. Three courts have a majority of Democratic nominees, and three are split.

Jipping and other conservatives, meanwhile, are fighting Democrats by using remarks they had made while complaining about delays for Clinton nominees. Jipping's group is keeping a database of such comments.

One of his favorites is a quote from Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick

J. Leahy, D-Vt., saying in 1998 that "any week in which the Senate does not confirm three judges is a week in which the Senate is failing to address the vacancy crisis."

When Leahy made that statement there were about 80 vacancies in the courts. As of early August this year, the number reached 107.

Jipping said Bush and Republicans must make an issue of the need to confirm judges. "The necessary ingredient is Senate Republican activity, and they're being fairly inert on this."

No one disputes that Bush has chosen qualified people. The ABA gave its highest rating of "well-qualified" to seven of his first 11 nominees.

I have an ergonomics meeting at 6 that will run for a while (probably one hour).

I leave in 5 minutes for HHS. Just leave me an email and I'll work it out with you.

Attached is a 1-pager that gives you the basic talking points for the budget debate as it stands today. Let me know if you need more information.

Budget Basics

THE ECONOMY:

- The President has an economic growth agenda to help jump-start our lagging economy:

  - ✓ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ✓ Paying off historic levels of debt -- $2 trillion over the next 10 years.
  - ✓ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.

- Those who oppose the tax cut argue for tax increases. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families by taking money from their pockets when they need it most. History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. In 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

THE SURPLUS:

- Both CBO and OMB show that America has the 2nd largest surplus in its history. And both CBO and OMB show that in FY 2002 under the President's budget, the federal government will run a surplus over and above the Social Security surplus.

- The surplus hasn't disappeared – it went back into the pockets of the hard working Americans who created it. Americans received a portion of their government overcharge back and the government still has the 2nd largest surplus in history.

TAX RELIEF:

- The President's tax relief was exactly the right medicine at the right time for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy.

- Roughly ½ of the tax rebate checks are still in the process of being sent to Americans where they can be used to boost our economy. The tax rebate checks are only the 1st installment of tax relief. The next chapters – lower rates, lower withholding and additional child credits – begin next January 1. More help is on the way.

SOCIAL SECURITY & MEDICARE:

- Nothing about the fall budget debate affects Social Security benefits or the Social Security trust fund in any way – Social Security benefits and the trust fund are both guaranteed.

- Every penny of Medicare is used for Medicare – and Medicare alone. The President's budget funds important improvements to Medicare, including a prescription drug benefit for seniors.

THE PRESIDENT'S BUDGET & FUNDING PRIORITIES:

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare, pays down historic levels of debt, and funds key priorities like education, defense, health care research, and environmental protection.

- Congress has passed the President's budget -- both CBO and OMB show that if Congress sticks to this budget, Social Security and Medicare are protected while priorities like education and defense receive important funding increases. Congress should stick to the blueprint it passed and not raise taxes or spend irresponsibly.

Attached is a 1-pager that gives you the basic talking points for the budget debate as it stands today. Let me know if you need more information.

Budget Basics

THE ECONOMY:

- The President has an economic growth agenda to help jump-start our lagging economy:

  - ✓ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ✓ Paying off historic levels of debt -- $2 trillion over the next 10 years.
  - ✓ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.

- Those who oppose the tax cut argue for tax increases. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families by taking money from their pockets when they need it most. History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. In 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

THE SURPLUS:

- Both CBO and OMB show that America has the 2nd largest surplus in its history. And both CBO and OMB show that in FY 2002 under the President's budget, the federal government will run a surplus over and above the Social Security surplus.

- The surplus hasn't disappeared – it went back into the pockets of the hard working Americans who created it. Americans received a portion of their government overcharge back and the government still has the 2nd largest surplus in history.

TAX RELIEF:

- The President's tax relief was exactly the right medicine at the right time for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy.

- Roughly ½ of the tax rebate checks are still in the process of being sent to Americans where they can be used to boost our economy. The tax rebate checks are only the 1st installment of tax relief. The next chapters – lower rates, lower withholding and additional child credits – begin next January 1. More help is on the way.

SOCIAL SECURITY & MEDICARE:

- Nothing about the fall budget debate affects Social Security benefits or the Social Security trust fund in any way – Social Security benefits and the trust fund are both guaranteed.

- Every penny of Medicare is used for Medicare – and Medicare alone. The President's budget funds important improvements to Medicare, including a prescription drug benefit for seniors.

THE PRESIDENT'S BUDGET & FUNDING PRIORITIES:

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare, pays down historic levels of debt, and funds key priorities like education, defense, health care research, and environmental protection.

- Congress has passed the President's budget -- both CBO and OMB show that if Congress sticks to this budget, Social Security and Medicare are protected while priorities like education and defense receive important funding increases. Congress should stick to the blueprint it passed and not raise taxes or spend irresponsibly.

Attached is a 1-pager that gives you the basic talking points for the budget debate as it stands today. Let me know if you need more information.

Budget Basics

THE ECONOMY:

- The President has an economic growth agenda to help jump-start our lagging economy:

  - ✓ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ✓ Paying off historic levels of debt -- $2 trillion over the next 10 years.
  - ✓ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.

- Those who oppose the tax cut argue for tax increases. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families by taking money from their pockets when they need it most. History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. In 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

THE SURPLUS:

- Both CBO and OMB show that America has the 2nd largest surplus in its history. And both CBO and OMB show that in FY 2002 under the President's budget, the federal government will run a surplus over and above the Social Security surplus.

- The surplus hasn't disappeared – it went back into the pockets of the hard working Americans who created it. Americans received a portion of their government overcharge back and the government still has the 2nd largest surplus in history.

TAX RELIEF:

- The President's tax relief was exactly the right medicine at the right time for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy.

- Roughly ½ of the tax rebate checks are still in the process of being sent to Americans where they can be used to boost our economy. The tax rebate checks are only the 1st installment of tax relief. The next chapters – lower rates, lower withholding and additional child credits – begin next January 1. More help is on the way.

SOCIAL SECURITY & MEDICARE:

- Nothing about the fall budget debate affects Social Security benefits or the Social Security trust fund in any way – Social Security benefits and the trust fund are both guaranteed.

- Every penny of Medicare is used for Medicare – and Medicare alone. The President's budget funds important improvements to Medicare, including a prescription drug benefit for seniors.

THE PRESIDENT'S BUDGET & FUNDING PRIORITIES:

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare, pays down historic levels of debt, and funds key priorities like education, defense, health care research, and environmental protection.

- Congress has passed the President's budget -- both CBO and OMB show that if Congress sticks to this budget, Social Security and Medicare are protected while priorities like education and defense receive important funding increases. Congress should stick to the blueprint it passed and not raise taxes or spend irresponsibly.

Attached is a 1-pager that gives you the basic talking points for the budget debate as it stands today. Let me know if you need more information.

Budget Basics

THE ECONOMY:

- The President has an economic growth agenda to help jump-start our lagging economy:

  - ✓ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ✓ Paying off historic levels of debt -- $2 trillion over the next 10 years.
  - ✓ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.

- Those who oppose the tax cut argue for tax increases. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families by taking money from their pockets when they need it most. History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. In 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

THE SURPLUS:

- Both CBO and OMB show that America has the 2nd largest surplus in its history. And both CBO and OMB show that in FY 2002 under the President's budget, the federal government will run a surplus over and above the Social Security surplus.

- The surplus hasn't disappeared – it went back into the pockets of the hard working Americans who created it. Americans received a portion of their government overcharge back and the government still has the 2nd largest surplus in history.

TAX RELIEF:

- The President's tax relief was exactly the right medicine at the right time for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy.

- Roughly ½ of the tax rebate checks are still in the process of being sent to Americans where they can be used to boost our economy. The tax rebate checks are only the 1st installment of tax relief. The next chapters – lower rates, lower withholding and additional child credits – begin next January 1. More help is on the way.

SOCIAL SECURITY & MEDICARE:

- Nothing about the fall budget debate affects Social Security benefits or the Social Security trust fund in any way – Social Security benefits and the trust fund are both guaranteed.

- Every penny of Medicare is used for Medicare – and Medicare alone. The President's budget funds important improvements to Medicare, including a prescription drug benefit for seniors.

THE PRESIDENT'S BUDGET & FUNDING PRIORITIES:

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare, pays down historic levels of debt, and funds key priorities like education, defense, health care research, and environmental protection.

- Congress has passed the President's budget -- both CBO and OMB show that if Congress sticks to this budget, Social Security and Medicare are protected while priorities like education and defense receive important funding increases. Congress should stick to the blueprint it passed and not raise taxes or spend irresponsibly.

Attached is a 1-pager that gives you the basic talking points for the budget debate as it stands today. Let me know if you need more information.

Budget Basics

THE ECONOMY:

- The President has an economic growth agenda to help jump-start our lagging economy:

  - ✓ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ✓ Paying off historic levels of debt -- $2 trillion over the next 10 years.
  - ✓ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.

- Those who oppose the tax cut argue for tax increases. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families by taking money from their pockets when they need it most. History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. In 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

THE SURPLUS:

- Both CBO and OMB show that America has the 2nd largest surplus in its history. And both CBO and OMB show that in FY 2002 under the President's budget, the federal government will run a surplus over and above the Social Security surplus.

- The surplus hasn't disappeared – it went back into the pockets of the hard working Americans who created it. Americans received a portion of their government overcharge back and the government still has the 2nd largest surplus in history.

TAX RELIEF:

- The President's tax relief was exactly the right medicine at the right time for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy.

- Roughly ½ of the tax rebate checks are still in the process of being sent to Americans where they can be used to boost our economy. The tax rebate checks are only the 1st installment of tax relief. The next chapters – lower rates, lower withholding and additional child credits – begin next January 1. More help is on the way.

SOCIAL SECURITY & MEDICARE:

- Nothing about the fall budget debate affects Social Security benefits or the Social Security trust fund in any way – Social Security benefits and the trust fund are both guaranteed.

- Every penny of Medicare is used for Medicare – and Medicare alone. The President's budget funds important improvements to Medicare, including a prescription drug benefit for seniors.

THE PRESIDENT'S BUDGET & FUNDING PRIORITIES:

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare, pays down historic levels of debt, and funds key priorities like education, defense, health care research, and environmental protection.

- Congress has passed the President's budget -- both CBO and OMB show that if Congress sticks to this budget, Social Security and Medicare are protected while priorities like education and defense receive important funding increases. Congress should stick to the blueprint it passed and not raise taxes or spend irresponsibly.

Attached is a 1-pager that gives you the basic talking points for the budget debate as it stands today. Let me know if you need more information.

ATT CREATION TIME/DATE: 0 00:00:00.00
File attachment <02829_p_a4fj3004_who.txt_1>

THE ECONOMY:

- The President has an economic growth agenda to help jump-start our lagging economy:

  - ✓ Cut taxes to put money back in people's pockets when they need it most – right now.
  - ✓ Paying off historic levels of debt -- $2 trillion over the next 10 years.
  - ✓ Working to open foreign markets to America's goods and services and to create new American jobs.

- Those who oppose the tax cut argue for tax increases. Tax increases would harm our economy, cost American jobs and hurt families by taking money from their pockets when they need it most. History has shown just how harmful tax increases can be when the economy is not growing. In 1932 President Herbert Hoover raised tax rates and doomed America to a decade of Depression.

THE SURPLUS:

- Both CBO and OMB show that America has the 2nd largest surplus in its history. And both CBO and OMB show that in FY 2002 under the President's budget, the federal government will run a surplus over and above the Social Security surplus.

- The surplus hasn't disappeared – it went back into the pockets of the hard working Americans who created it. Americans received a portion of their government overcharge back and the government still has the 2nd largest surplus in history.

TAX RELIEF:

- The President's tax relief was exactly the right medicine at the right time for our economy. Leading economists agree that the tax cut will boost economic growth and protect the long-term health of our economy.

- Roughly ½ of the tax rebate checks are still in the process of being sent to Americans where they can be used to boost our economy. The tax rebate checks are only the 1st installment of tax relief. The next chapters – lower rates, lower withholding and additional child credits – begin next January 1. More help is on the way.

SOCIAL SECURITY & MEDICARE:

- Nothing about the fall budget debate affects Social Security benefits or the Social Security trust fund in any way – Social Security benefits and the trust fund are both guaranteed.

- Every penny of Medicare is used for Medicare – and Medicare alone. The President's budget funds important improvements to Medicare, including a prescription drug benefit for seniors.

THE PRESIDENT'S BUDGET & FUNDING PRIORITIES:

- The President's budget protects Social Security and Medicare, pays down historic levels of debt, and funds key priorities like education, defense, health care research, and environmental protection.

- Congress has passed the President's budget -- both CBO and OMB show that if Congress sticks to this budget, Social Security and Medicare are protected while priorities like education and defense receive important funding increases. Congress should stick to the blueprint it passed and not raise taxes or spend irresponsibly.

Brett,
Mehlman & Schlapp wanted me to check in with you regarding RNC Desk Coordinators. The RNC is considering hiring from 3 to 5 individuals who would assist with political activities that would entail close coordination with our office. We wanted to check on a couple of fronts.
1. What activities would these individuals be allowed to participate in?
2. What activities would these individuals be prohibited from participating in?
3. Would there be any limitations in coordination between the OPA staff and these desk coordinators?

Some general activities in which they may be thinking about participating in, with approval from counsel include:
track down individuals who were helpful to the President/Republican Party during the last election for consideration for positions in the administration when they qualify assist with trips assist with the fundraising activities that the RNC coordinates coordination with political campaigns

Thank you for your guidance on this topic and either myself or Matt
Schlapp may stop by tomorrow to get your thoughts on the above.

Also, as discussed previously your guidance on list practices would be much appreciated.

-Doug

Thanks! Just checking since I'm new to OPD and don't like loose ends. I'll call if questions arise. I am assuming that the same rules as for the WH and NEC (OPD) apply also to the President's Commission to Strengthen Social Security of which Chuck is Executive Director even though it's an independent commission. Please let me know if I am mistaken in this assumption. Thanks again.

Screening Judges
Not the Senate?s role to micromanage.
By Douglas W. Kmiec, dean & St. Thomas More Professor of Law, the Catholic University of America, and former Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, in the Reagan administration
September 5, 2001 9:10 a.m.

Yesterday, the Senate again conducted a hearing on the appropriate manner to evaluate judicial nominees. After 200 years of experience, one would have thought this settled. Hamilton explained in the Federalist Papers that the Senate's role would not be to micromanage. Rather, "the necessity of their concurrence would have a powerful, though, in general a silent operation." In other words, since the president would know that his choices could be rejected, it "would be an excellent check upon the spirit of favoritism in the President, and would tend greatly to prevent the appointment of unfit characters from state prejudice, from family connection, from personal attachment, or from a view to popularity."

The latter remark outlines succinctly the nature of an appropriate Senate inquiry: integrity (to screen out improper cronyism or "family connection" in appointment); fitness (to eliminate those not possessing either the temperament or training); and fidelity to the rule of law (to ensure that rulings are not merely given with "a view to popularity"). So what's the point of belaboring the question today in hearings?

None. Or at least none envisioned by the Constitution. Democratic senators, newly energized by their majority status because of a party defection, want to "pay back" the Republicans for supposedly blocking Clinton nominees and a handful of academics have convinced Senator Schumer that partisan screening of judicial nominees is appropriate to bring greater balance to the federal courts.

Political rivalry aside, there is nothing to pay back. Mr. Clinton over his two terms appointed virtually the same number of judges as President Reagan (377 vs. 382). So too, the numbers of nominees left unexamined at the end of each term were comparable.

And as for the supposed need for balance, no one really has a fixed idea of what that means. A Supreme Court with a composition reflecting five presidential perspectives and yielding 5-4 decisions where the issues (federalism, affirmative action, religious participation in the public square) are sensitive and the people, themselves, rightly cautious is hardly unbalanced. And all the blather about there being too many former judges on the high bench (and not enough former politicians or people with other experience) either stands the Framers criteria for selection on its head or is untrue. Yes, Ruth Bader Ginsburg was an appellate judge, and so were Clarence Thomas, Antonin Scalia, and Stephen Breyer, but they also had distinguished careers as advocate for women's rights, senior legislative assistant, executive official, and teacher, respectively.

What the cry for balance really disguises is a desire for different outcomes in specific cases dealing with Congress' civil-rights enforcement power, the appropriate scope of federal commerce-clause authority, and the line between was is national and what is local. These are all important issues, but it is neither appropriate nor effective for the Senate to deal with them through the judicial confirmation process.

Attempting to do so indulges a host of erroneous suppositions not the least of which is that the courts are merely alternative policymaking venues. In the pages of the Washington Post last week, Joseph Califano Jr. contended for a partisan screening of federal judicial nominees because of Congress's failure to address, among other things, big tobacco and handguns. Whether or not one subscribes to Mr. Califano's take on such matters, it is certainly an odd prescription to try to save us from the "political pandering and gridlock" (Mr. Califano's words) of one branch by manipulating the composition of another.

And lest it be forgotten, the other branch ? the judicial one ? is intended to be independent. The significance of an independent judiciary is well known to every school child. The point was made plain in the bill of indictment included against the English King in our Declaration of Independence.

"He has made Judges dependent upon his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices," our founders complained.

Unfortunately, when times get rough we are inclined to forget the significance of judicial independence to the rule of law. FDR forgot it in trying to address the severity of the Depression. Yet, even under those dire circumstances, the idea of attempting to force judges to bend to the political will was overwhelmingly and loudly rejected. Wrote the Senate Judiciary Committee in rebuffing FDR's court-packing plan:

"if we may force the hand of the Court to secure our interpretation of the Constitution, then some succeeding Congress may repeat the process to secure another and a different interpretation and one which may not sound so pleasant in our ears as that for which we now contend. . . .[The] initial and ultimate effect [of undermining] the independence of the courts," and [violating] "all precedents in the history of our Government and would in itself be a dangerous precedent for the future."

One would think that the significance of an independent judiciary would be reasonably plain to us, less than a year distant from a disputed national election in which it took the courage of seven justices to highlight a fundamental breach of equal protection. However, it is the opposite. It seems that those calling most insistently for the partisan screening of judicial nominees are those wanting to relitigate Bush v. Gore. In his written testimony, one witness at the hearing stated: Bush v. Gore is "a patently illegitimate decision, . . . monumentally unpersuasive; and . . . its illegitimacy taints Mr. Bush's own status as our President."

This is not the place to reargue Bush v. Gore. However, it is clear that, unlike some academics, the overwhelming percentage of people (and not just a majority of the Supreme Court) accept the proposition that equal protection when applied to ballots means at least this: If you're asked to count votes, you have to know what you're counting. Even when the Florida supreme court reflected upon the matter after the High Court's disputed ruling, five of the state justices who had previously ordered the standardless recount affirmed that "the development of a specific, uniform standard necessary to ensure equal application and to secure the fundamental right to vote throughout the State of Florida should be left to the body we believe best equipped to study and address it, the Legislature."

Respect for the lawmaking enterprise, for legislatures ? especially the Congress ? is a salutary byproduct of the proper exercise of advice and consent. If the confirmation process reflects that the judicial function is limited to interpreting the Constitution, policymaking is kept in the hands of those who are most accountable to the people. The Senate's power of advice and consent is broad, but a fair interpretation of the qualities required of judicial nominees is legal capacity, personal integrity, and a commitment to abide by the Constitution.

The Constitution is not abided, but subverted, when the Senate seeks to obtain commitments for favored policy outcomes from those nominated.

Showtime at Senate Judiciary

The White House and Sen. Leahy have set the stage for a battle over the federal bench

By Jonathan Ringel and Jonathan Groner
Legal Times
By almost any measure, August is more pleasant in the Green Mountains than in the swampy heat of the nation's capital. Still, Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy left his Vermont farm last month to get started on what promises to be a tense season in the judicial confirmation process.
The Senate Judiciary Committee chairman called two nominations hearings in the dog days-at the first, he was the only senator present.
Leahy used the second hearing to defend himself in the debate over which party is the most slow-footed on judicial nominations. Reeling off dates and numbers, Leahy said the Senate is "ahead of the pace" this year on moving court of appeals judges.
Sen. Mike DeWine (R-Ohio) responded, "I'm not going to get into a statistical battle." With a knowing smile, he added, "I know you and I will have further discussions on this."
The exchange was telling. Behind the posturing, the process of confirming judges for the federal bench this year will turn-as ever-on a power struggle between the Democratic majority and the White House and its GOP allies in the Senate.
Both the Bush administration and Leahy have moved quickly into position. President George W. Bush has made 48 judicial nominations, and administration officials and GOP senators have called for all to be voted on before the Senate adjourns in a few months. Meanwhile, Leahy has shepherded four nominees to confirmation in the short time he has been committee chair and held hearings on three more.
But while moving forward on nominees that have drawn no controversy, Leahy and other players have taken their positions on the nominations that promise a fight.
In August, Leahy said the White House should consider offering Senate Democrats the same deference that former GOP Sen. Slade Gorton wrested from President Bill Clinton. Such a move could give Democratic senators greater power to block Bush nominees to several key circuit court seats.
In a famous 1997 deal, Gorton, then the senior senator from Washington state, muscled into the usual arrangement that grants senators from the same party as the White House the authority to help select judicial nominees. Though Sen. Patty Murray, a Democrat, nominally had the president's ear, Gorton was able to hold up the nomination of William Fletcher, a California-based nominee to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit, until Clinton also named a 9th Circuit judge in Washington whom Gorton liked.
Now, President Bush finds himself in a similar standoff with Michigan's two Democratic senators: Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow.
Levin and Stabenow have asked Leahy to hold up action on all nominees to the 6th Circuit because they want Bush to renominate two former Clinton nominees from Michigan, state Court of Appeals Judge Helene White and Detroit litigator Kathleen McRee Lewis. Originally blocked in a fight between then-Sen. Spencer Abraham and the White House, White waited more than four years without getting a hearing, while Lewis waited more than 18 months.

Bush's two 6th Circuit nominees from Ohio-states' rights expert Jeffrey Sutton and state Supreme Court Justice Deborah Cook-have been pending since May.

The Cincinnati-based 6th Circuit covers Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee. Seven of the court's 16 seats are vacant, and another will open up at the end of the year.

Leahy spokesman David Carle says that, despite the entreaty from the Michigan delegation, the chairman won't stop action on any nomination. However, Carle also says the Michigan matter is unresolved. At an Aug. 27 judicial nominations hearing, Leahy said, "We're trying to follow the same rule" suggested by Gorton's deal, which ultimately collapsed when Gorton's hand-picked nominee withdrew for personal reasons.

Leahy added, "The White House should consult with senators in the area" covered by a circuit court, not just senators from a nominee's home state. That notion does not please the White House. Administration officials and GOP senators have already been locked in battle with Leahy on the power of home state senators to nix judicial nominees, and White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales says that the disputed power of home-state senators certainly should not be expanded to senators from all states within a circuit.

"There's no reason this White House should be expected to do that," says Gonzales. He acknowledges that previous presidents have occasionally consulted with senators from neighboring states in a given circuit when considering appellate nominees, but adds that this has never been the consistent precedent.

In an Aug. 17 letter to Leahy, Gonzales argued that granting the Levin-Stabenow request would "distort the Senate's exercise of its advice and consent function by institutionalizing a practice whereby well-qualified nominees may be held hostage to the non-germane demands of individual Senators from other states."

Gonzales and Leahy held a previously scheduled meeting in Leahy's office on Aug. 27. Neither would discuss the details of the meeting.

Meanwhile, Leahy used the hearings in August, when three Bush judicial nominees experienced very mild, upbeat screenings, as evidence that he is trying in good faith to confirm nominees quickly. "I am attempting to go the extra mile to help fill the vacancies on the federal courts with qualified, consensus nominees," Leahy said.

The key word, though, is consensus.

Of the four Bush picks confirmed by the Senate this year, three were jointly recommended by Republican and Democratic senators from the nominee's home state. The fourth, Judge Roger Gregory of the 4th Circuit, was originally chosen by Clinton and backed by Virginia's two GOP senators.

Likewise, the nominees who had hearings last month-Sharon Prost for the Federal Circuit; Terry Wooten for a district court seat in South Carolina; and Reggie Walton for the District Court in Washington, D.C.-had support from both Democrats and Republicans.

Except for Gregory, Leahy has not scheduled hearings for any of the 11 circuit court nominees Bush unveiled at a White House event in May-several of whom have generated a loud outcry from the left. Among them are Sutton from the 6th Circuit, Michael McConnell from the 10th Circuit, and D.C. Circuit nominees John Roberts Jr. and Miguel Estrada.

Leahy has not announced when the next hearing will be or who will be on the agenda. But on Sept. 4, Judiciary Committee member Sen. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) will hold the second of his subcommittee hearings looking at the Senate confirmation process-hearings that Republicans argue merely provide academic cover for blocking nominees and take time away from confirmation hearings.

The process of filling seats on the courts has grown increasingly contentious since Robert Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court failed in 1987. Fights over legal ideology, Senate process, and political payback have become routine, even in a year when Bush has pledged to soften the harsh tones of partisanship.

Gilbert Merritt, a Nashville-based senior judge on the 6th Circuit, says he hopes Leahy can break the syndrome that has plagued the circuit's nominations. But he's not hopeful.
"What they really need between the White House and the Senate Judiciary Committee is a mediator," says Merritt, a 1977 appointee of President Jimmy Carter.
The vacancies present a problem for the court, says Merritt, who was the 6th Circuit's chief judge for seven years and took senior status in January.
"You obviously have to give the cases shorter shrift," he says. "The quality [of the written decisions] goes down as well."
When Michigan nominees White and Lewis were stuck in the Judiciary Committee, then under the control of Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), Merritt wrote the Senate to ask that the pair get up or down votes so as to either confirm them or open the process to nominees who could get confirmed. He says the same should occur today with Sutton and Cook. "They ought to vote on whoever's up there," says Merritt.

Three-Way Split

Paul Cassell, the University of Utah law professor who in 2000 led an unsuccessful challenge of the landmark Miranda v. Arizona decision, has received an odd three-way split rating from the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary.
Last month, the group announced that a "substantial majority" of the 14-member committee found Cassell "well qualified" for a district court judgeship in Utah. A minority of the committee found Cassell merely "qualified," while another minority found Cassell "not qualified."
The ABA defines "substantial majority" as 10 or more members of the committee. Since the committee doesn't reveal exact votes, it's not clear how many members registered less than the highest opinion.
"The ABA has an obligation to be forthright and explain this decision," says Assistant Attorney General Viet Dinh, who handles judicial nominations for the Justice Department.
Of the 28 Bush nominees so far rated by the ABA, Cassell is only the second to get a negative vote.
Nonetheless, Dinh says, "the inexplicable inconsistency" of Cassell's evaluation "suggests that something is awry with the committee's ratings process."
In March, the Bush administration ended a 50-year tradition of giving the ABA a special role in working closely with the administration in rating potential nominees. But after the Democrats took control of the Senate, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.) revived the group's role by saying the committee would look closely at ABA ratings.
Roscoe Trimmier Jr. of Boston's Ropes & Gray chairs the ABA committee. He says the process is "inherently subjective," given that they do not use a scorecard when evaluating a nominee's integrity, judicial temperament, and professional competence.
"That's why we have a committee," so the evaluation is based on more than one person's view.

Walton's Waltz

D.C. Superior Court Judge Reggie Walton had a smooth sail on Aug. 22 during a brief Senate Judiciary Committee hearing on his nomination to a District Court judgeship in Washington, D.C.
At the hearing, the committee chairman, Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), spent more time berating his Republican counterparts and justifying his own record on judicial nominations than he did querying the 52-year-old jurist.
"I have a guess that you're not going to have a lot of trouble [being confirmed] in the U.S. Senate," Leahy said to Walton. "I will urge the committee to move your nomination to the floor as soon as possible."
Leahy was the only senator present at the session, which he said was the first judiciary hearing held during the chamber's annual August recess since at least 1980. He said Walton's "prior service" had "prepared him abundantly for this position."
Leahy asked whether Walton, if confirmed, would feel bound by the precedents set by appeals courts. Walton said he had traveled in Russia a few years ago and had learned to his dismay "that they don't have that process" of adherence to precedent. "It is crucial to apply the rule of law," Walton said.

Walton received a glowing introduction from D.C. Democratic Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton. In addition to family members and friends, Walton was accompanied by a delegation from D.C. Superior Court: Chief Judge Rufus King III and Judges Anita Josey-Herring, Mary Gooden Terrell, and Lee Satterfield.

The Ninth Circuit held today that inmates have a substantive due process right to procreate by artificial insemination while incarcerated.
According to the dissent, this creates a circuit split and, hence, the case may be headed for the Supreme Court.

Noel:

The President attended the President's Dinner June 27, which, I believe, was a fund-raiser for the RNC. The film is restricted, but we have a request from the office of Management and Administration for a personal photo an attendee who met the President. They would like to send it to the President for signing and then send it to the person.

This is their second request for photos from this event. We ordered two photos for them previously.

My understanding is that if it's a political event, no photos can be ordered either for media or personal use.

questions:

Did we make a mistake when we initially ordered the photos?
Should we fulfill their second order for another photo?

Do I have a correct understanding of the policy?

thank you,

MEMORANDUM FOR THE DIRECTOR

FROM: Angela Styles

SUBJECT: Proposed Circular A-76 Transmittal Memorandum No. 25

The attached Federal Register notice and Transmittal Memorandum requests agency and public comments on proposed changes to the OMB Circular A-76 Revised Supplemental Handbook. The Handbook currently allows agencies to convert a commercial activity that is performed by Federal employees directly to contract performance - - without a cost comparison - - if the contract is awarded to a "preferential procurement source" at a fair market price. The Handbook somewhat ambiguously defines preferential procurement programs as "... special commercial source programs, such as [emphasis added] Federal Prison Industries and the workshops administered by the Committee for the Purchase from the Blind and Other Severely Handicapped under the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act.".

As currently written, the Handbook is unclear as to what other programs or sources would qualify for this expedited procedure. Also, the Handbook currently provides for an adjustment to the cost or price proposed by other offerors when a "procurement preference eligible organization" competes for work in an unrestricted solicitation. But, the Handbook does not define such an organization that would benefit from this cost or price adjustment.

The proposed changes would revise the Handbook to: (1) enumerate applicable "preferential procurement sources" (including minority businesses) that would qualify for an exemption from the cost comparison process; and (2) define the "procurement preference eligible organizations" that would qualify for a competitive cost or price adjustment. The first proposed change could be seen as an expansion of the exemption from cost comparisons, because, heretofore, contracts awarded only to Federal Prison Industries and to workshops administered by the Committee were specifically identified as exempt. The second proposed change would probably not be seen as an expansion, since there are similar cost or price adjustments (also known as price preferences) for minority firms and firms located in economically-depressed areas that are recognized in procurement law and regulations.

Both of the proposed changes should please agencies as well as the small and minority business communities and their Congressional supporters. The proposed changes would clarify and expand opportunities for agencies to convert work performed by Federal employees directly to contract performance. They would also clarify and expand opportunities for preferential offerors to compete for work. Because the number of small and minority businesses that receive relatively small-dollar A-76 awards is already high, we do not expect significant opposition from large businesses. For example, the Defense Department has awarded 79 percent of it's A-76 contracts to small business, even though the vast majority of the dollars have gone to large firms. The unions are expected to strongly oppose the changes, as they continue to seek competitions for all work.

OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET

AGENCY: Office of Management and Budget
Executive Office of the President

ACTION: Proposed changes to the OMB Circular A-76 Revised Supplemental Handbook

SUMMARY:. The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) publishes a request for agency and public comments on proposed changes to the OMB Circular A-76 Revised Supplemental Handbook. The proposed changes would clarify the definitions of preferential procurement sources and procurement preference eligible organizations, for purposes of conducting A-76 public-private competitions. OMB is requesting agency and public comments on these proposed revisions.

DATES: Public comments on the proposed changes are due to OMB not later than 45 days from the date of publication this notice.

ADDRESSES: Address all comments to the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, NEOB Room 9013, Office of Management and Budget, 725 17th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20503, FAX Number (202) 395-5105.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: David Childs or Michael Gerich, Office of Federal Procurement Policy, NEOB Room 9013, Office of Management and Budget, 725 17th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20503, Telephone No. (202) 395-6104 or (202) 395-

AVAILABILITY: Copies of the OMB Circular A-76, its Revised Supplemental Handbook, currently applicable Transmittal Memoranda and additional information regarding the FAIR Act and its implementation may be obtained at the OMB home page. The online address (URL) http://www.whitehouse.gov/OMB/procurement/fair-index.html Paper copies of this information can also be obtained by contacting the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, NEOB, Room 9013, Office of Management and Budget, 725 17th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20503, Telephone No. (202) 395-7579.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background.

The OMB Circular A-76 Supplemental Handbook (at Part 1, Chapter 1, paragraph D (8)) currently allows agencies to convert a commercial activity that is performed by Federal employees to contract performance - - without a cost comparison - - if the contract is awarded to a "preferential procurement source" at a fair market price. Appendix 1 of the Handbook somewhat ambiguously defines "preferential procurement programs" as "... special commercial source programs, such as [emphasis added] Federal Prison Industries and the workshops administered by the Committee for the Purchase from the Blind and Other Severely Handicapped under the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act.". As currently written, the Handbook is unclear as to what other programs or sources would qualify for this expedited procedure.

Also, the Handbook (at Chapter 3, B(4)) currently provides for an adjustment to the cost or price proposed by other offerors when a "procurement preference eligible organization" competes for work in an unrestricted solicitation. But, the Handbook does not define such an organization that would benefit from this cost or price adjustment.

OMB hereby proposes to revise the A-76 Supplemental Handbook. First, Part 1, Chapter 1, paragraph D (8) would be revised to make it clear that the covered conversion process must be in accordance with applicable provisions of the FAR that prescribe competition, small business, and other socio-economic policy and procedures. Second, Appendix 1 would be revised by striking the definition of "Preferential procurement programs"and replacing it with a definition for "Preferential procurement sources" that enumerates the sources that would qualify for an exemption from the cost comparison process to permit direct conversion from in-house to contract performance. Finally, Appendix 1 would be amended to add a definition to identify those "procurement preference eligible organizations" that are eligible to benefit from the cost or price adjustment described in Chapter 3, B(4) of the Handbook.

[Agencies are reminded that Federal employees and existing Federal support contract employees adversely affected by a decision to convert to contract performance have the right -of-first-refusal for jobs for which they are qualified that are created by the award of the conversion.]

Circular No. A-76 (Revised)
Proposed Transmittal Memorandum No. 25

TO THE HEADS OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES

FROM: Mitchell E. Daniels, Jr
Director

SUBJECT: Performance of Commercial Activities, Preferential Procurement Programs

To clarify the definitions of preferential procurement sources and procurement preference eligible organizations and the effect that such definitions have upon the cost comparison requirements of the OMB Circular A-76 process, OMB is making the following changes to the A-76 Revised Supplemental Handbook. First, Part 1, Chapter 1, paragraph D (8) is revised to read as follows:

"8. Preferential Procurement. — A commercial activity of any size that is performed by Federal employees may be converted to contract performance, without cost comparison — even if it results in adverse employee actions --- provided that the contract is awarded

(a) to a preferential procurement source at a fair market price,

(b) in accordance with Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR) Subpart 6.2 (Full and Open Competition After Exclusion of Sources), FAR Part 19 (Small Business Programs) and FAR Part 8 (Required Sources of Supplies and Services).

At the agency's discretion, a cost comparison may be conducted.".

Second, Appendix 1 is revised by striking the definition of "Preferential procurement programs"and replacing it with the following:

"Preferential procurement sources.--- Preferential procurement sources are HUBZone small businesses, small disadvantaged businesses, eligible contractors under the Small Business Administration's 8(a) Business Development Program, women-owned small businesses, small businesses owned by veterans, small businesses owned by service-disabled veterans, Native Alaskan and Indian owned businesses, Federal Penal and Correctional Institutions under the Federal Prison Industries Program and nonprofit agencies participating in the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Program.".

Third, Appendix 1 is revised by adding a new definition as follows:

"Procurement preference eligible organizations. — Procurement preference eligible organizations are eligible small disadvantaged business concerns determined by the Commerce Department in accordance with FAR Subpart 19.11 and FAR section 19.201(b) and qualified HUBZone small businesses determined by the Small Business Administration in accordance with 13 CFR Part 126 and FAR Subpart 19.13.".

These changes are effective immediately. Current A-76 and FAIR Act implementation guidance can be accessed at OMB's homepage at: http://www.whitehouse.gov/OMB/procurement/fair-index.html

PROST NOMINATION BREEZES THROUGH JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

By Amy Fagan, CQ Staff Writer

Sept. 6, 2001 - In a rare show of enthusiastic, unanimous support for a judicial nominee, members of the Senate Judiciary Committee delivered a standing ovation today for Sharon Prost after voting 19-0 to endorse her nomination to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. Prost, whose nomination now moves to the full Senate for confirmation, has been serving as the Judiciary Committee's chief GOP counsel for most of the past decade. Committee members also voted 19-0 to endorse the nomination of Reggie B. Walton to be a district judge for the District of Columbia and gave voice vote approval to the nominations of Deborah J. Daniels to be Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Justice Programs and Richard R. Nedelkoff to head the Bureau of Justice Assistance. The panel by voice vote also approved a bill (S 1233) that would punish people who insert offensive material into consumer product boxes and a measure (S 703) that would extend for 20 years an interstate commission charged with restoring salmon in the Connecticut River Basin.

AFL-CIO asks Senate not to confirm Eugene Scalia as Labor Department's top lawyer
LEIGH STROPE
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) _ Organized labor urged the Senate to defeat the nomination of Eugene Scalia as the Labor Department's top lawyer, contending that his views are extreme and hostile to workers.
AFL-CIO President John Sweeney, in a letter to senators that was released Thursday, said Scalia is ``simply the wrong person for the job.'' A confirmation hearing is set for Sept. 20.
The labor federation has considered for months whether to fight the nomination of Scalia, a Washington labor lawyer who is the son of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. Sweeney's letter is the first sign of labor's decision to oppose the nomination.
``The president has nominated an individual whose extreme views on key worker protections place him outside the mainstream and make him unsuited to hold this important position,'' Sweeney said.
Scalia as labor solicitor would provide advice and guidance on virtually every policy, legislative, regulatory and enforcement initiative of the department in areas such as safety and health, minimum wages and pension security. The position is regarded as a top lieutenant to Secretary Elaine Chao.
``The AFL-CIO did not make the decision to oppose Eugene Scalia's nomination lightly,'' Sweeney wrote. ``We recognize that the president has the authority to nominate individuals who reflect his policy views and that President Bush's policy views differ substantially from ours.''
The AFL-CIO's chief objection is Scalia's criticism of Clinton-era ergonomics regulations that Congress killed in the spring. He wrote in a 1999 Wall Street Journal column that the then-proposed rule ``relies on doubtful evidence that repeatedly has flunked the courts' `junk science' test.'' Chao is expected to decide later this month whether the department will pursue another regulation aimed at reducing workplace injuries or a voluntary approach.

On this strictly hypothetical question, I think this would be a Toner question because it would get to, I think, what the nature and amount of the contribution would be for FEC purposes.

I spoke to the Michigan GOP person who said the plan was to rent a seat on the energy company's plane (with, of course, the Washington rep on board.) I told her this was a no-go. When pressed about our approval standard, I suggested that any corporation with an interest in the WH (or significant Government action) would be disqualified. She said everybody was interested in the WH that she knew of; first class commercial would be the way to go.

The other thing that would be helpful to know is if an in-kind contribution to a political party - say for use of an airplane - is a flat amount of money or if the entity has to in-kind based on the number of people flying.

For example, the respective political RPDs typically travel with Karl. If someone in-kinds a plane to the Party to fly Karl home, can they also fly us home at no extra cost to either the entity making the in-kind contribution or the political organization?? That would be great for us, but we would fly commercial if it were going to cost a political organization several thousand additional dollars.
Thanks - please advise.

This does not sound right to me. CMS Energy has an air charter business? Why doesn't the Michigan GOP charter a plane from an air charter business instead?

The Michigan GOP will charter a plane from CMS Energy in Michigan. They will pay for the charter outright, but they were planning on having Norm Saari, Director of Govt. Affairs ride along (how convenient and nice of them to ask first??).

Moose, can you give us direction on this one? Thanks.

Brett:

This project is too extensive to be completed realistically by Monday. OFBCI has asked a series of complex questions, the answers to which are probably very important, and I won't have time to review the drafts I'm getting carefully enough to produce a well-considered and thoroughly vetted memorandum by Monday. Also, it would be helpful to know exactly what these questions and answers are for.

Thanks,

Pat

Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

President Bush – Putting Reading First

This Week's Presidential Action

- Today in Jacksonville, Florida, President Bush kicked off Putting Reading First – a weeklong effort to promote the importance of reading as the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America.

- President Bush also announced two new initiatives from the Department of Education to assist parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

  - Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

President Bush – Putting Reading First

This Week's Presidential Action

- Today in Jacksonville, Florida, President Bush kicked off Putting Reading First – a weeklong effort to promote the importance of reading as the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America.

- President Bush also announced two new initiatives from the Department of Education to assist parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

  - Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Presidential Action – Monday, September 10

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children.

School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package. This package holds schools accountable, increases flexibility, expands parental options and funds programs that work.

New Initiatives the President Will Announce Today

Today in Jacksonville, Florida, the President will announce two new Department of Education initiatives to help parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

- Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge on improving reading.

- "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

Bush Administration Launches Effort to Promote Effective Reading

Presidential Action:

- This week President Bush will highlight the importance of effective reading for children. Reading is the cornerstone of an effective education for every child in America. The President will also call on Congress to finish the job on his education reform package. The House and Senate have passed this education reform package and the President wants to sign it into law as soon as possible:

  - ✓ On Monday and Tuesday the President will travel to Jacksonville and Sarasota, Florida, to visit schools where reading scores have tended to be disproportionately low. The President will show how some schools are beginning to make progress in improving reading scores and will work with reading experts, parents and teachers to translate the latest reading research into classroom results.

  - ✓ First Lady Laura Bush has been recognized for her work on promoting reading. On Tuesday she will meet with congressional leaders to highlight the important role of reading, particularly early reading, in the long-term educational success of children.

  - ✓ On Wednesday the President will meet with high-tech leaders to highlight the important role of effective technology in reading instruction.

  - ✓ On Thursday, the President and First Lady will host the White House Assembly on Reading -- in conjunction with the Department of Education -- at the Library of Congress. The event will highlight the importance of evidence-based reading instruction in the early grades and preschool. Nationally recognized reading experts will focus on the importance of arming teachers with the right tools to better teach children how to read.

  - ✓ Throughout the week, Members of the President's Cabinet will also be taking time out of their schedules to highlight the importance of reading. Cabinet Secretaries and Administrators will visit schools, read with students, and talk with local educators, parents and community leaders about the importance of strong reading instruction based upon solid science. Eleven Cabinet Members will visit elementary schools stretching from California to New Jersey.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First

- There is a reading crisis in America. Among fourth graders, 40 percent could not read at basic level in 1998, as measured by the National Assessment of Education Progress (NAEP) reading exam. Even worse, in the highest-poverty schools, 68 percent of fourth-graders could not read at basic level. NAEP data released in April 2000 revealed that reading scores in the United States have remained stagnant for more than a decade.

- Research on reading instruction has clearly demonstrated effective ways to improve reading skills. Recent studies conducted by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development (NICHD), conclude that: (1) effective reading instruction involves a balanced approach, which includes explicit instruction in phonics and phonological awareness skills; and (2) an emphasis on phonics-based instruction is particularly important for disadvantaged children and others at risk for reading failure.

- The research community, as well as education leaders across the country, recognize it is time to promote full-scale systemic reform in reading based on the breakthrough research in methods of instruction.

The President's Reading Initiative

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms.

- The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.

  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains these key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. HEADLINE: Judge Alfred J. Lechner, Jr. Joins Morgan Lewis as Partner in Princeton;
US District Court Judge for 15 Years

DATELINE: PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10

BODY:
Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP announced today that Judge Alfred J. ("Jim") Lechner, Jr., will join the firm on October 1, 2001 as a partner in the Litigation Practice Group resident in the Princeton office. Judge Lechner has been a United States District Court Judge for the District of New Jersey sitting in Newark, New Jersey, for more than 15 years, having been appointed in 1986 at age 38. Prior to his appointment to the Federal bench, Judge Lechner spent two years as a judge of the New Jersey Superior Court.
"While on the bench Jim demonstrated those qualities most valued in a judge, namely, intelligence, integrity, fairness, and decisiveness," said

Robert A. White, Princeton office managing partner. "Now he'll be able to bring that expertise to Morgan Lewis. The addition of a top quality, high visibility partner such as Jim Lechner will expand the firm's capacity to provide superior litigation services to our clients. We are delighted to welcome him as a senior member of our litigation practice."

Commenting on his decision to join Morgan Lewis, Judge Lechner said, "It was a difficult decision to leave the bench, but it is the right decision for me personally and professionally. The opportunity to join a premier firm like Morgan Lewis, with a mandate to help shape a national litigation practice, is compelling. I look forward to the challenges ahead."

James D. Pagliaro, head of the firm's global litigation practice, added, "Jim is uniquely qualified to help us meet our strategic objectives in the firm's securities and intellectual property litigation practices. A trial lawyer who has served for nearly 20 years as a Federal and state judge is a rare commodity. Most lawyers don't get appointed as judges until they are the age Jim is now. The Federal bench in New Jersey is highly respected. His knowledge and understanding of the courthouse and of trial tactics are going to add a new dimension to our firm's capabilities."

Judge Lechner's practice will focus on securities, intellectual property, and other commercial litigation. As a Federal judge, he has more than 250 published opinions, including 35 securities law opinions and 21 intellectual property opinions. In addition to his judicial duties, he has participated in numerous panel discussions on securities and intellectual property litigation issues.

Judge Lechner graduated from Xavier University in 1969 and received his law degree from the University of Notre Dame in 1972 where he was the Note and Comment editor of the Notre Dame Law Review.

Fine. I had been dealing with Gene too but I think I will just let you do it, then. It doesn't make sense to have two people working on the same thing w/o coordinating.

Do we know these people will speak on Gene's behalf? Is Brett coordinating with Gene? (I just want to make sure we don't have too many cooks in the WHCO kitchen).

I mentioned it in passing to Brett as well and he sent me the names of two individuals who are former Solicitors at Labor.

The more names and numbers the better - I'm sure there will be additional stories coming.

To elaborate on a voice mail I left for you.

Barry wanted to make sure we go over privacy concerns surrounding sending e-mail to people that have opted in via the White House Website.
He also wanted to make sure specific processes get put in place regarding:
Counsel approval of all e-mail content.
Counsel review of all e-mail subject categories.
Counsel guidance on using the database and collected information.

I'm able to discuss these issues now, or we can go over them at the same time as the e-mail issues you're currently reviewing - whichever is more convenient for you.

Thanks for your help Brett,
NEIL

Presidential Action – Tuesday, September 11

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children. School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package.

The President supports increased funding for education – he gave the Department of Education an 11.5% increase and he tripled funding for reading programs. But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Increased funding must be coupled with real reforms that hold schools accountable, increase flexibility and expand parental options.

Alarming Statistics the President Will Discuss Today

Every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

- 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
- Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
- More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

The President's Initiative to Improve Reading Scores

Today's Presidential Action:

- Today the President will visit Emma Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Florida, where he will point out that every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

  - 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
  - Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
  - More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

- Increased funding for education is a top priority of the President. He has proposed a $4.6 billion (11.5%) increase in funding for the Department of Education, including a tripling of funding for reading instruction as part of his Reading First initiative.

- But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Governments spent $231 billion in combined expenditures on public education at the local, state, and federal level during the 1983-1984 school year (inflation-adjusted figure), and the average nine year-old received a score of 211 on the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) reading exam. During the 1998-1999 school year, more than $388 billion was spent at the local, state, and federal level -- a 68% increase over 1983-1984 -- and the average NAEP reading score among nine year-olds was 212. In other words, despite substantial funding increases, reading scores remained flat.

- More resources must be coupled with real reforms that focus on results for our nation's schoolchildren. Students at schools like Emma Booker Elementary School stand to gain the most from passage of the President's education reform bill – and have the most to lose from unnecessary delay. Most children at Emma Booker come from lower-income, minority background. Nationwide, almost 70% of urban and inner city 4th graders cannot read at a basic level.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First:

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms. The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.
  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

For more information on the President's initiatives please visit www.whitehouse.gov

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- Yesterday, in Jacksonville, the President announced two new initiatives from the Department of Education to assist parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

  - Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

- If Congress acts soon on the education bill, these important reading initiatives can be in place for America's school children when the next school year begins.

Presidential Action – Tuesday, September 11

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children. School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package.

The President supports increased funding for education – he gave the Department of Education an 11.5% increase and he tripled funding for reading programs. But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Increased funding must be coupled with real reforms that hold schools accountable, increase flexibility and expand parental options.

Alarming Statistics the President Will Discuss Today

Every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

- 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
- Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
- More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

The President's Initiative to Improve Reading Scores

Today's Presidential Action:

- Today the President will visit Emma Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Florida, where he will point out that every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

  - 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
  - Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
  - More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

- Increased funding for education is a top priority of the President. He has proposed a $4.6 billion (11.5%) increase in funding for the Department of Education, including a tripling of funding for reading instruction as part of his Reading First initiative.

- But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Governments spent $231 billion in combined expenditures on public education at the local, state, and federal level during the 1983-1984 school year (inflation-adjusted figure), and the average nine year-old received a score of 211 on the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) reading exam. During the 1998-1999 school year, more than $388 billion was spent at the local, state, and federal level -- a 68% increase over 1983-1984 -- and the average NAEP reading score among nine year-olds was 212. In other words, despite substantial funding increases, reading scores remained flat.

- More resources must be coupled with real reforms that focus on results for our nation's schoolchildren. Students at schools like Emma Booker Elementary School stand to gain the most from passage of the President's education reform bill – and have the most to lose from unnecessary delay. Most children at Emma Booker come from lower-income, minority background. Nationwide, almost 70% of urban and inner city 4th graders cannot read at a basic level.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First:

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms. The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.
  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

For more information on the President's initiatives please visit www.whitehouse.gov

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- Yesterday, in Jacksonville, the President announced two new initiatives from the Department of Education to assist parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

  - Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

- If Congress acts soon on the education bill, these important reading initiatives can be in place for America's school children when the next school year begins.

Presidential Action – Tuesday, September 11

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children. School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package.

The President supports increased funding for education – he gave the Department of Education an 11.5% increase and he tripled funding for reading programs. But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Increased funding must be coupled with real reforms that hold schools accountable, increase flexibility and expand parental options.

Alarming Statistics the President Will Discuss Today

Every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

- 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
- Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
- More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

The President's Initiative to Improve Reading Scores

Today's Presidential Action:

- Today the President will visit Emma Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Florida, where he will point out that every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

  - 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
  - Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
  - More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

- Increased funding for education is a top priority of the President. He has proposed a $4.6 billion (11.5%) increase in funding for the Department of Education, including a tripling of funding for reading instruction as part of his Reading First initiative.

- But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Governments spent $231 billion in combined expenditures on public education at the local, state, and federal level during the 1983-1984 school year (inflation-adjusted figure), and the average nine year-old received a score of 211 on the National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) reading exam. During the 1998-1999 school year, more than $388 billion was spent at the local, state, and federal level -- a 68% increase over 1983-1984 -- and the average NAEP reading score among nine year-olds was 212. In other words, despite substantial funding increases, reading scores remained flat.

- More resources must be coupled with real reforms that focus on results for our nation's schoolchildren. Students at schools like Emma Booker Elementary School stand to gain the most from passage of the President's education reform bill – and have the most to lose from unnecessary delay. Most children at Emma Booker come from lower-income, minority background. Nationwide, almost 70% of urban and inner city 4th graders cannot read at a basic level.

The Bush Administration -- Putting Reading First:

- President Bush believes that reading is the cornerstone of a good education, and he is committed to taking the latest research on effective reading programs and getting it into our nation's classrooms. The President has two key reading initiatives.

  - Reading First would provide $900 million a year to help states and local districts implement comprehensive reading instruction grounded in scientifically based reading research in kindergarten through third grade.
  - Early Reading First would provide $75 million to enhance pre-reading skills for children in model Head Start and other preschool programs.

For more information on the President's initiatives please visit www.whitehouse.gov

- Because reading is a critical skill, the President has also proposed that states administer reading assessments to all students in grades 3-8. The tests will enable parents and teachers to diagnose children that are at risk of falling behind in reading, and get them the help when it can be most helpful.

- Yesterday, in Jacksonville, the President announced two new initiatives from the Department of Education to assist parents, teachers, and school administrators in improving the quality of reading instruction in America:

  - Reading Leadership Academies: The Department of Education will sponsor Reading Leadership Academies in at least six regional locations across the country over the next year. The Reading Leadership Academies will be special conferences designed to equip state policymakers and key education leaders throughout the nation with the latest and best knowledge, based on high quality research findings, about effective teaching and learning in reading. The Academies will facilitate quicker and more effective implementation of the President's Reading First and Early Reading First initiatives – ensuring that needed reforms reach the classroom sooner.

  - "Put Reading First" Brochure for Parents: The Partnership for Reading -- a partnership between the U.S. Department of Education, the National Institute for Literacy, and the National Institute for Child Health and Human Development – has translated the findings of the National Reading Panel into an informative brochure to help parents better understand the process by which their children can learn to read. This publication will help parents to identify whether their child's reading program at school is based on solid reading principles – and gives them solid steps they can take to improve their child's ability to read.

- The House and Senate have passed education reform legislation that contains key elements of the President's reading initiative. But these reforms cannot be implemented – and this needed help cannot reach the classroom -- until Congress acts to complete its work on the education bill. The President will continue to urge Congress to complete its work on the education reform bill so America's schoolchildren and teachers can have the tools they need to succeed.

- If Congress acts soon on the education bill, these important reading initiatives can be in place for America's school children when the next school year begins.

Presidential Action – Tuesday, September 11

White House Office of Communications

Message

There is a reading crisis among America's children and President Bush has a bipartisan education reform package to help improve reading scores – especially for disadvantaged children. School has started and Congress needs to finish the job on the President's education reform package.

The President supports increased funding for education – he gave the Department of Education an 11.5% increase and he tripled funding for reading programs. But more funding without real reforms will not solve our nation's education challenges. Increased funding must be coupled with real reforms that hold schools accountable, increase flexibility and expand parental options.

Alarming Statistics the President Will Discuss Today

Every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

- 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
- Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
- More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

The President's Initiative to Improve Reading Scores

Today's Presidential Action:

- Today the President will visit Emma Booker Elementary School in Sarasota, Florida, where he will point out that every year that we fail to address the reading needs of our students, almost 1.4 million children in fourth grade alone will miss their best opportunity to learn to read well -- that's a number of children:

  - 26 times greater than the population of Sarasota, Florida (53,000)
  - Four times greater than the population of Miami, Florida (362,000)
  - More than the population of the states of Maine or Idaho (each approximately 1.2 million).

According to the latest NAEP data, nationwide:

- An estimated 1,385,500 out of 3.7 million 4th graders (37%) cannot read at a basic level
- Of approximately 525,400 African-American 4th graders, an estimated 328,900 cannot read at a basic level
- Roughly 328,400 of the approximately 562,400 Hispanic 4th graders enrolled in school cannot read at a basic level (58%).
- Among white 4th graders, 667,000 out of approximately 2,434,600 (27%) cannot read at a basic level.

- Increased funding for education is a top priority of the President. He has proposed a $4.6 billion (11.5%) increase in funding for the Department of Education, including a tripling of funding for reading instruction as part of his Reading First initiative.
