THE GLOBAL MESSENGER
Friday, April 25, 2003

KEY POINTS***

Key Points From The President's Remarks in Lima, Ohio, 4/24/03

- America has applied the might of our country to the cause of freedom. We gave our word that the threat from the Iraqi regime would be ended, and with the support of our allies, we have kept our word.

- American and Coalition forces still face danger in Iraq. Our enemy is now scattered but still capable of doing harm. We will not lose our focus, and will press on until our mission is complete.

- We value the lives and liberty of the Iraqi people, and we are pressing forward with the critical and difficult work of relief and reconstruction. Iraq is recovering not just from weeks of conflict, but from decades of totalitarian rule.

- We have faith in the Iraqi people. They have the resources, talent, and desire to live in peace and freedom - and they will have a consistent friend in the United States.

- Coalition forces and officials are working around the clock to deliver humanitarian aid, restore basic services, and put Iraq on the road to self government. America will stay as long as it takes to complete our mission, and then our military forces will leave.

- Step by step Iraqi citizens are reclaiming their own country. They are identifying former official guilty of crimes and volunteering for citizen patrols to provide security. Many are reviving religious rituals long-forbidden by the old regime, and speaking their mind in public - a sure sign that a new day has come.

- Freedom may not always be neat and orderly, but it is the right of every person in every nation. As new Iraqi leaders emerge, we will work with them. We will not impose a government upon Iraq, but will help that nation build a government of, by, and for the Iraqi people.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE***
All Times Eastern Daylight. Subject to Change

7:00 am CentCom Operations Update
12:00 pm Defense Department Briefing
12:15 pm White House Briefing

KEY QUOTES***

"We are aiding the advance of peace by seeking the advance of freedom. Free societies do not nurture bitterness, or the ideologies of terror and murder. Free societies are founded on the belief that every life has equal value. Free societies turn the creative gifts of men and women towards progress, and the betterment of their own lives.

"American interests and America's founding beliefs lead in the same direction:
We stand for human liberty."

Bush to nominate Raleigh lawyer

Selection would break impasse in 4th Circuit

By JOHN WAGNER, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON -- President Bush on Monday intends to nominate Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan to serve on the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, according to aides in North Carolina Senate offices who have been notified of the White House's plans.

Duncan's name first surfaced publicly in January in a news report in which U.S. Sen. John Edwards, a North Carolina Democrat, said he would likely support her nomination.

Duncan, a black Republican, is a former state appeals court judge and is president-elect of the N.C. Bar Association.

Her confirmation would end a long-running impasse that has kept North Carolina from having any judges on the 4th Circuit, which hears cases from five Southeastern states.

The court is the last stop for federal cases from those states before the U.S. Supreme Court.

In a letter sent this week both to Edwards and U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Dole, a North Carolina Republican, White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales said Bush plans Monday to nominate two African-Americans for the 4th Circuit, including "one who currently lives in North Carolina and has served on the state judiciary in North Carolina."

Mike Briggs, Edwards' press secretary, said his office has been notified that Duncan is Bush's choice.

Gonzales describes the second nominee as someone "who currently lives in Virginia and has strong roots in and ties to both Virginia and North Carolina." The identity of that individual could not be learned Thursday.

In his letter, Gonzales notes that ideally North Carolina should have four or five judges on the 15-member 4th Circuit and that he considers the panel "significantly out of geographic balance."

There are four vacancies on the court.

Feuding between North Carolina's senators has kept the state from having a judge on the panel since 1999. Under Senate tradition, senators have effective veto power over nominees from their states.

The nomination to the 4th Circuit of another North Carolinian, U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle, has been stalled since May 2001.

Edwards has not consented to the nomination, partly in response to the blockage of a string of North Carolina nominees by U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, Dole's Republican predecessor, during the Clinton administration.

After Duncan is nominated, it is unclear how quickly she will get a confirmation hearing.

Mary Brown Brewer, a spokeswoman for Dole, said the senator prefers that Boyle be granted a hearing first since he was nominated first.

Bush to nominate Raleigh lawyer
Selection would break impasse in 4th Circuit

By JOHN WAGNER, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON -- President Bush on Monday intends to nominate Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan to serve on the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, according to aides in North Carolina Senate offices who have been notified of the White House's plans.
Duncan's name first surfaced publicly in January in a news report in which U.S. Sen. John Edwards, a North Carolina Democrat, said he would likely support her nomination.
Duncan, a black Republican, is a former state appeals court judge and is president-elect of the N.C. Bar Association.
Her confirmation would end a long-running impasse that has kept North Carolina from having any judges on the 4th Circuit, which hears cases from five Southeastern states.

The court is the last stop for federal cases from those states before the U.S. Supreme Court.

In a letter sent this week both to Edwards and U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Dole, a North Carolina Republican, White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales said Bush plans Monday to nominate two African-Americans for the 4th Circuit, including "one who currently lives in North Carolina and has served on the state judiciary in North Carolina."

Mike Briggs, Edwards' press secretary, said his office has been notified that Duncan is Bush's choice.

Gonzales describes the second nominee as someone "who currently lives in Virginia and has strong roots in and ties to both Virginia and North Carolina." The identity of that individual could not be learned Thursday.

In his letter, Gonzales notes that ideally North Carolina should have four or five judges on the 15-member 4th Circuit and that he considers the panel "significantly out of geographic balance."

There are four vacancies on the court.

Feuding between North Carolina's senators has kept the state from having a judge on the panel since 1999. Under Senate tradition, senators have effective veto power over nominees from their states.

The nomination to the 4th Circuit of another North Carolinian, U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle, has been stalled since May 2001. Edwards has not consented to the nomination, partly in response to the blockage of a string of North Carolina nominees by U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, Dole's Republican predecessor, during the Clinton administration.

After Duncan is nominated, it is unclear how quickly she will get a confirmation hearing.

Mary Brown Brewer, a spokeswoman for Dole, said the senator prefers that Boyle be granted a hearing first since he was nominated first.

Forthcoming clash for the court

By James L. Swanson

At the Supreme Court of the United States, October Term 2002 is drawing to a close. The justices hear their last oral arguments on April 30, and in late June they will take to the bench for the last time to announce their final opinions of the term. Court watchers await decisions in several important cases, including free-speech and affirmative-action issues, which may not come down until the last day of the term. But that is not the only reason why court watchers have circled the last week in June on the calendar. That is when oddsmakers are betting on the retirement of at least one member of the court.

For months, pundits have speculated that Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor or Justice John Paul Stevens will step down this year. Why?

Because justices traditionally retire under the political party that appointed them, and this is the last chance for these three Republican appointees to retire during President Bush's first term with the assurance that he can fill a vacancy before the 2004 election.

Because, in the case of the chief justice, he has, in three decades of service, gone from lone dissenter to leader of the court's return to the first principles of limited government and federalism, and will go down as one of the most important chief justices in history.

Because, in the case of Justice O'Connor, the press spread rumors that she wanted to retire.

Because, in the case of Justice Stevens, he is 83 years old.

It is impossible to know whether these or any other members of the Supreme Court are planning to retire this year. Many self-styled experts have embarrassed themselves by attempting to predict a justice's vote in a single case, let alone a retirement from the bench. Nor is this to suggest that any of the nine justices should retire. The performance of the oldest justice (John Paul Stevens) to the youngest (Clarence Thomas), of the longest serving (William H. Rehnquist) to the briefest (Stephen Breyer) reveals that all remain able and engaged. Their written opinions confirm that none has suffered an intellectual decline. One may disagree with their views, but not their competence to serve. If a retirement comes, it will occur because the justice wants to step down, not because he or she has to.

It might not happen until the end of June. But it could also happen tomorrow. Justices Potter Stewart, Warren E. Burger and Thurgood Marshall waited until the end of their final terms and made June announcements. But Byron White and Harry Blackmun announced their retirements early, on March 3, 1993, and April 6, 1994, respectively, to give President Clinton ample time to nominate their successors, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen Breyer, and to win Senate confirmation by, in both cases, the beginning of August.

Although it is impossible to know if or when a vacancy will occur, one thing is easy to predict: how Democrats will respond to Mr. Bush's first nomination of a Supreme Court justice. Senate Democrats, in combination with a cabal of special interest groups, intend to politicize the Supreme Court and oppose any Bush nominee, regardless of who the nominee is. History, both recent and reaching back to the Reagan and first Bush presidencies, offers little encouragement that the Senate will conduct itself professionally and responsibly.

The pattern emerged over time: the Democrats' defeat of Judge Robert H. Bork's nomination to the court in 1987; their near-killing of Judge Clarence Thomas' nomination in 1991; their rage against the Supreme Court for "handing" the presidency to the Republicans in the 2000 election; the notorious Washington Post op-ed by Abner Mikva (former Clinton White House counsel and retired U.S. Court of Appeals judge) calling on the Senate to block any Supreme Court nominations by President Bush; their bottling up superbly qualified appellate court nominees for nearly two years on the Democratic-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee; their obsession with Roe vs. Wade and their imposition of ideological litmus tests; their celebration of the American Bar Association seal of approval as the "gold standard" - until the ABA began giving many of Mr. Bush's nominees the highest possible rating; their filibustering of the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington to prevent an up or down vote even after a majority of senators announced that they will vote to confirm him; their threatened filibuster against Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen for a seat on the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

That history, and more, exposes what Democrats will do to fight a Bush Supreme Court nomination. The attack will be waged on two fronts, one substantive, the other procedural.

The substantive attack will have six parts.

Retirement day blitzkrieg. If the retiring justice is a Republican, and gives the White House advance, confidential notice of his or her intention to retire, as Chief Justice Warren Burger did in 1986, the president will have an opportunity to announce a retirement and a nomination on the same day. Within one hour of that nomination, a leading Democratic senator, probably Tom Daschle, Edward Kennedy, Patrick Leahy or Chares Schumer, will attack the nominee's character, integrity or competence. (Recall Mr. Kennedy's outburst within 45 minutes of President Reagan's nomination of Judge Bork: "Robert Bork's America is a land in which women would be forced into back-alley abortions, blacks would sit at segregated lunch counters, rogue policemen could break down citizen's doors in midnight raids, school children could not be taught about evolution, writers and artists could be censured at the whim of government." Sundry left wing "public interest" (actually, special interest) groups will join the chorus. The purpose of the first day blitzkrieg is to set the president and the nominee reeling on their heels and destroy the momentum of the nomination. The blitzkrieg aims to spin that night's TV coverage and the next morning's newspaper stories.

The paper blizzard. Within hours of the nomination, senators and special interest groups will inundate the press with letters, reports, memos and even small books that purport to expose the unfitness of the nominee. In many cases, those scripts have already been written. For more than two years, Democrats have been doing "opposition research," as though preparing for a political campaign, to uncover damaging information on the 10 to 15 people rumored to be on the president's short list for the court. The purpose of the paper blizzard is to turn public opinion against the nominee long before the Senate Judiciary Committee even convenes a hearing on the nomination.

The indictment. The paper blizzard will include some or all of the following accusations: The nominee is not "sensitive" to the rights of women, children, black Americans and other racial minorities, the disabled, workers, unions, farmers, native Americans and others. The nominee is "out of the mainstream" of the American legal tradition; is too "right wing"; is even "radical." (Democrats perfected their use of those smear tactics against Judge Bork, stooping so low as to suggest he might not believe in God. Apparently a godless conservative is even more dangerous than a god-fearing one.) With much hand-wringing, Democrats will cry crocodile tears, sighing "if only the president had nominated a moderate conservative, we would be delighted to confirm him or her." If the nominee does not have an extensive body of scholarly writings, Democrats will tar him as a "stealth" candidate who possesses hidden and alarming views. If, on the other hand, the nominee has written extensively, those writings will be denounced as "out of the mainstream." (Remember that phrase). If the nominee believes in a color-blind society and equal treatment under the laws, and questions the constitutionality of race-conscious policies called affirmative action by some, then of course the nominee is a "racist" who will want to "turn back the clock" on civil rights, overturn Brown vs. Board of Education, repeal the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments, and reintroduce slavery.

Beyond attacking the nominee personally, the paper blizzard will suggest that he or she represents a so-called transformative appointment who will upset the alleged delicate balance of the court. Some Democrats will seek cover by claiming that they have nothing against the nominee, he or she is just the wrong person at the wrong time for the best interests of the court and the country.

Rancorous hearings. Mr. Bush's first nominee to the court should not expect a cordial reception from Democrats on the Judiciary Committee. They will attempt to grill the nominee for three to six days. They will ask hundreds of questions. Many hostile witnesses will be called. Special interest groups will haunt the hearing room and loiter in the halls, murmuring against the nominee and handing out attack literature.

The partisan committee vote. For the Democrats, the hearings are mainly for show and to posture before the cameras for their constituencies and the left-wing special interest groups. They will have already decided their vote before the hearing begins or the nominee speaks one word. Of course that vote is "no." Because Republicans are a majority on the committee, the nomination will be reported to the Senate favorably by a party-line vote.

The Senate vote. Once the Judiciary Committee reports the nomination to the full Senate, Democrats opposing the nomination will continue to fight it on the floor by insisting on a lengthy debate. Then they will try to persuade their colleagues to vote against the nominee. Ultimately they will lose. The president's nominee will be confirmed because the Republican majority, plus a number of responsible Democrats, will vote to confirm him. If there is a vote, that is.

Along with their substantive attack on the nominee, Democrats will mount a procedural attack. That plan has two elements.

Delay the Judiciary Committee hearing. Upon making a nomination, the president will ask Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch to schedule hearings by early July, with the goal of having a Senate floor vote by late July or early August. Democrats on the committee will vigorously oppose that goal and attempt to delay the hearing until September. They will bleat that there must be no "rush to judgment," and claim that they require months to "study" the nominee. Their ability to stall Judge Bork's hearings until September contributed to the nomination's defeat. Democrats and the special interest groups had all summer to mobilize their onslaught against Judge Bork. The White House failed to anticipate the viciousness of the assault and was taken off guard. Because the Republicans now control the committee, the Democrats will find it harder to stall the hearings.

The filibuster trump card. When all else fails to cow the president's nominee into withdrawing, when the Democrats have been unable to stall the Judiciary Committee hearing, when they can't stop the committee from reporting the nomination favorably to the full Senate, after they fail to turn mainstream America against the nominee, when they count heads and discover that a majority of senators, including many Democrats, intend to vote to confirm the president's nominee, look for the leaders of the opposition to play their favorite, anti-democratic, Democratic trump card - the filibuster. Democrats challenged the president on Miguel Estrada, and they believe they have found the president wanting. Although Mr. Bush has called Mr. Estrada one of his most important appellate nominees, the White House has, for the past two years, been unable to confirm him. The Democrats' successful filibuster against Miguel Estrada, the first ever against a nominee to a U.S. Court of Appeals, has emboldened them to challenge Mr. Bush when he makes his first nomination to the High Court. The Democrats have paid no price for their Estrada filibuster. Look for them to test the president again.

Yes, that is the worst-case scenario, and it may not unfold. In any event, if there is a vacancy on the court, the nominee must be treated civilly, fairly and allowed an up or down vote by the full Senate, as the Constitution contemplates. The president had better be prepared for a fight. His opponents are certainly ready. If the president prevents the politicization of nominations to the lower federal courts, and to the U.S. Supreme Court, he will win the most important domestic battle of his first term. If he loses that battle, he may not get a second chance.

James L. Swanson, editor in chief of the Cato Institute's "Supreme Court Review," was on the Department of Justice Office of Legal Counsel team that staffed the nomination and confirmation hearings of Judge Robert H. Bork for the Supreme Court.

Impasse on judges ending?
Federal judges from N.C. likely
TIM FUNK AND GARY L. WRIGHT

WASHINGTON -The White House plans to send nominations to the Senate on Monday that could elevate two Charlotte-based U.S. officials to the federal bench and place two black Republicans with strong N.C. connections on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

U.S. Attorney Bob Conrad and U.S. Magistrate Judge Brent McKnight are expected to be nominated as federal judges for the Western District of North Carolina, said Mike Briggs, a spokesman for U.S. Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C.

Briggs said the White House also intends to nominate Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan to the federal appeals court.

Other sources said Claude Allen, a onetime aide to former U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, would be the other appeals court nominee.

Duncan and Allen are African American.

Years of partisan wrangling in Washington have left North Carolina without a representative on the Richmond-based appeals court, which also covers South Carolina, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Each of those other states has at least two judges on the bench, which now has four vacancies.

President Bush's legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, mentioned this geographic imbalance in an April 23 letter to U.S. senators representing North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland. To begin to rectify it, he wrote, the president will nominate, on Monday, two African Americans -- one who lives in North Carolina, one with strong ties to the state -- whose confirmation would also "dismantle an historic (racial) barrier."

Blacks make up 22 percent of the population covered by the circuit court -- higher than any other federal jurisdiction. But only one African American judge, Virginia's Roger Gregory, serves on the 12-member court.

Duncan, 51, was the first black woman to serve on the N.C. Court of Appeals.

She has been a member of the state utilities commission and is the president-elect of the N.C. Bar Association.

In the 1980s she worked for the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and for a time was executive assistant to then-Chairman Clarence Thomas, now a U.S. Supreme Court justice.

Her nomination appears to have the support of both of North Carolina's senators, Edwards and Republican Elizabeth Dole. That's important because Senate rules have long given senators virtual veto power over home-state judicial nominees.

Allen, now a deputy secretary at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, could face opposition from Edwards.

The Democratic senator is already blocking Bush's nomination of Terrence Boyle to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Boyle, chief district judge in Eastern North Carolina, also used to work for Helms.

Allen was press secretary for Helms' 1984 re-election campaign, then worked as a deputy director on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He's been deputy attorney general and secretary of health and human services in Virginia.

In 2001, he was picked to manage food safety issues at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. He also has been the point person for Bush's campaign to sell teenagers on sexual abstinence.

Neither Allen nor Duncan could be reached Friday.

A long-standing battle

The political fighting over the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals goes back more than 10 years.After Democrats in the Senate blocked the nomination of Boyle by then-President Bush in 1991, Helms retaliated by blocking four N.C. nominations made later by President Clinton.

Then, when Boyle was nominated by the current President Bush, Edwards made it known he opposed the nomination because of Boyle's decisions regarding civil rights.

Edwards and Helms' successor, Republican Elizabeth Dole, have said they wanted to work together to break the impasse.

In a March 31 letter to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Edwards touted Duncan as a "consensus nominee" that he and Dole and the White House could support.

Dole spokeswomen Mary Brown Brewer said this week that Dole wants the vacancies on the appeals court to be filled as soon as possible, but would favor moving forward with Boyle first.

"Terry Boyle's been waiting (more than) 10 years," Brewer said. Asked about Duncan, Brewer would say only that "the president has put forward a number of well-qualified nominees."

Experienced prosecutors

Conrad, 44, and McKnight, 51, wouldn't talk about their potential nominations to the federal judgeships. But both have undergone FBI background checks for the job, sources said.

Conrad, a federal prosecutor since 1989, has been U.S. attorney for the Western District of North Carolina since 2001.

In the trial of two Lebanese brothers last year, Conrad's prosecutors obtained the first criminal conviction under a U.S. law banning material support to terrorist organizations. One of the brothers was sentenced in February to 155 years in prison.

In 1998, Conrad and then-Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Walker became the first federal prosecutors in North Carolina to obtain the death penalty since capital punishment for federal crimes was reinstated in 1988.

In 1999, then-Attorney General Janet Reno appointed Conrad, a Republican, to head a Justice Department task force investigating illegal campaign fund raising. Conrad went to the White House with FBI agents to question Clinton under oath for four hours.

Conrad wouldn't talk about who might replace him if he gets the lifetime federal judgeship. Sources in the legal community, however, are speculating that Assistant U.S. Attorney Gretchen Shappert might be selected to replace Conrad as the top federal prosecutor for the Western District of North Carolina.

McKnight, also a Republican, was a state prosecutor in Charlotte for six years in the 1980s. He handled Mecklenburg's first case under the state's tough 1985 obscenity law and worked to close adult bookstores.

He served as a Mecklenburg district judge from 1988 to 1993. In 1993, he was named a federal magistrate judge.

N.C. may get a nod for Court of Appeals

2 in Charlotte may get bench bids, too

Observer Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON -In a move that could finally put a North Carolinian on the federal bench in Richmond, the White House has notified Sen. John Edwards' office that it plans to nominate Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan, an African American Republican, to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday.

Mike Briggs, a spokesman for Edwards' Senate office, said Thursday that the White House also indicated it will nominate U.S. Attorney Bob Conrad and U.S. Magistrate Judge Brent McKnight, both of whom work in Charlotte, to two federal judgeships in the Western District of North Carolina.

Conrad declined comment Thursday night; McKnight could not be reached. White House spokesperson Jeanie Mamo said the White House has made no announcements.

But Briggs said Edwards' office got a call from the White House "saying they intended to send the nominations (to the Senate) on Monday."

Edwards has said he favors Duncan, and Briggs said "we're pleased with the cooperative manner in which the White House has worked with the senator in the nomination of (Duncan) and hope that this will be the model that can be used in the future."

Years of partisan wrangling have left North Carolina without a representative on the Richmond-based appeals court, which also covers South Carolina, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia. Every state but North Carolina has at least two judges on the bench.

Federal judges from N.C. likely

WASHINGTON -The White House plans to send nominations to the Senate on Monday that could elevate two Charlotte-based U.S. officials to the federal bench and place two black Republicans with strong N.C. connections on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

U.S. Attorney Bob Conrad and U.S. Magistrate Judge Brent McKnight are expected to be nominated as federal judges for the Western District of North Carolina, said Mike Briggs, a spokesman for U.S. Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C.

Briggs said the White House also intends to nominate Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan to the federal appeals court.

Other sources said Claude Allen, a onetime aide to former U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, would be the other appeals court nominee.

Duncan and Allen are African American.

Years of partisan wrangling in Washington have left North Carolina without a representative on the Richmond-based appeals court, which also covers South Carolina, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Each of those other states has at least two judges on the bench, which now has four vacancies.

President Bush's legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, mentioned this geographic imbalance in an April 23 letter to U.S. senators representing North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland. To begin to rectify it, he wrote, the president will nominate, on Monday, two African Americans -- one who lives in North Carolina, one with strong ties to the state -- whose confirmation would also "dismantle an historic (racial) barrier."

Blacks make up 22 percent of the population covered by the circuit court -- higher than any other federal jurisdiction. But only one African American judge, Virginia's Roger Gregory, serves on the 12-member court.

Duncan, 51, was the first black woman to serve on the N.C. Court of Appeals.

She has been a member of the state utilities commission and is the president-elect of the N.C. Bar Association.

In the 1980s she worked for the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and for a time was executive assistant to then-Chairman Clarence Thomas, now a U.S. Supreme Court justice.

Her nomination appears to have the support of both of North Carolina's senators, Edwards and Republican Elizabeth Dole. That's important because Senate rules have long given senators virtual veto power over home-state judicial nominees.

Allen, now a deputy secretary at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, could face opposition from Edwards.

The Democratic senator is already blocking Bush's nomination of Terrence Boyle to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Boyle, chief district judge in Eastern North Carolina, also used to work for Helms.

Allen was press secretary for Helms' 1984 re-election campaign, then worked as a deputy director on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. He's been deputy attorney general and secretary of health and human services in Virginia.

In 2001, he was picked to manage food safety issues at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. He also has been the point person for Bush's campaign to sell teenagers on sexual abstinence.

Neither Allen nor Duncan could be reached Friday.

A long-standing battle

The political fighting over the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals goes back more than 10 years.After Democrats in the Senate blocked the nomination of Boyle by then-President Bush in 1991, Helms retaliated by blocking four N.C. nominations made later by President Clinton.

Then, when Boyle was nominated by the current President Bush, Edwards made it known he opposed the nomination because of Boyle's decisions regarding civil rights.

Edwards and Helms' successor, Republican Elizabeth Dole, have said they wanted to work together to break the impasse.

In a March 31 letter to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Edwards touted Duncan as a "consensus nominee" that he and Dole and the White House could support.

Dole spokeswomen Mary Brown Brewer said this week that Dole wants the vacancies on the appeals court to be filled as soon as possible, but would favor moving forward with Boyle first.

"Terry Boyle's been waiting (more than) 10 years," Brewer said. Asked about Duncan, Brewer would say only that "the president has put forward a number of well-qualified nominees."

Experienced prosecutors

Conrad, 44, and McKnight, 51, wouldn't talk about their potential nominations to the federal judgeships. But both have undergone FBI background checks for the job, sources said.

Conrad, a federal prosecutor since 1989, has been U.S. attorney for the Western District of North Carolina since 2001.

In the trial of two Lebanese brothers last year, Conrad's prosecutors obtained the first criminal conviction under a U.S. law banning material support to terrorist organizations. One of the brothers was sentenced in February to 155 years in prison.

In 1998, Conrad and then-Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Walker became the first federal prosecutors in North Carolina to obtain the death penalty since capital punishment for federal crimes was reinstated in 1988.

In 1999, then-Attorney General Janet Reno appointed Conrad, a Republican, to head a Justice Department task force investigating illegal campaign fund raising. Conrad went to the White House with FBI agents to question Clinton under oath for four hours.

Conrad wouldn't talk about who might replace him if he gets the lifetime federal judgeship. Sources in the legal community, however, are speculating that Assistant U.S. Attorney Gretchen Shappert might be selected to replace Conrad as the top federal prosecutor for the Western District of North Carolina.

McKnight, also a Republican, was a state prosecutor in Charlotte for six years in the 1980s. He handled Mecklenburg's first case under the state's tough 1985 obscenity law and worked to close adult bookstores.

He served as a Mecklenburg district judge from 1988 to 1993. In 1993, he was named a federal magistrate judge.

President Bush's legal counsel, Alberto Gonzales, mentioned this geographic imbalance in an April 23 letter to U.S. senators representing North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland. To begin to rectify it, he wrote, the president will nominate, on Monday, two African Americans -- one who lives in North Carolina, one with strong ties to the state -- whose confirmation would also "dismantle an historic (racial) barrier."
Blacks make up 22 percent of the population covered by the circuit court -- higher than any other federal jurisdiction. But only one African American judge, Virginia's Roger Gregory, serves on the 12-member court.
Duncan, 51, was the first black woman to serve on the N.C. Court of Appeals.

She has been a member of the state utilities commission and is the president-elect of the N.C. Bar Association.
In the 1980s she worked for the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and for a time was executive assistant to then-Chairman Clarence Thomas, now a U.S. Supreme Court justice.
Her nomination appears to have the support of both of North Carolina's senators, Edwards and Republican Elizabeth Dole. That's important because Senate rules have long given senators virtual veto power over home-state judicial nominees.
Allen, now a deputy secretary at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, could face opposition from Edwards.
The Democratic senator is already blocking Bush's nomination of Terrence Boyle to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Boyle, chief district judge in Eastern North Carolina, also used to work for Helms.
Allen was press secretary for Helms' 1984 re-election campaign, then worked as a deputy director on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.
He's been deputy attorney general and secretary of health and human services in Virginia.
In 2001, he was picked to manage food safety issues at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. He also has been the point person for Bush's campaign to sell teenagers on sexual abstinence.
Neither Allen nor Duncan could be reached Friday.
A long-standing battle
The political fighting over the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals goes back more than 10 years.After Democrats in the Senate blocked the nomination of Boyle by then-President Bush in 1991, Helms retaliated by blocking four N.C. nominations made later by President Clinton.
Then, when Boyle was nominated by the current President Bush, Edwards made it known he opposed the nomination because of Boyle's decisions regarding civil rights.
Edwards and Helms' successor, Republican Elizabeth Dole, have said they wanted to work together to break the impasse.
In a March 31 letter to Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Edwards touted Duncan as a "consensus nominee" that he and Dole and the White House could support.
Dole spokeswomen Mary Brown Brewer said this week that Dole wants the vacancies on the appeals court to be filled as soon as possible, but would favor moving forward with Boyle first.
"Terry Boyle's been waiting (more than) 10 years," Brewer said. Asked about Duncan, Brewer would say only that "the president has put forward a number of well-qualified nominees."
Experienced prosecutors
Conrad, 44, and McKnight, 51, wouldn't talk about their potential nominations to the federal judgeships. But both have undergone FBI background checks for the job, sources said.
Conrad, a federal prosecutor since 1989, has been U.S. attorney for the Western District of North Carolina since 2001.
In the trial of two Lebanese brothers last year, Conrad's prosecutors obtained the first criminal conviction under a U.S. law banning material support to terrorist organizations. One of the brothers was sentenced in February to 155 years in prison.
In 1998, Conrad and then-Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Walker became the first federal prosecutors in North Carolina to obtain the death penalty since capital punishment for federal crimes was reinstated in 1988.
In 1999, then-Attorney General Janet Reno appointed Conrad, a Republican, to head a Justice Department task force investigating illegal campaign fund raising. Conrad went to the White House with FBI agents to question Clinton under oath for four hours.
Conrad wouldn't talk about who might replace him if he gets the lifetime federal judgeship. Sources in the legal community, however, are speculating that Assistant U.S. Attorney Gretchen Shappert might be selected to replace Conrad as the top federal prosecutor for the Western District of North Carolina.
McKnight, also a Republican, was a state prosecutor in Charlotte for six years in the 1980s. He handled Mecklenburg's first case under the state's tough 1985 obscenity law and worked to close adult bookstores.
He served as a Mecklenburg district judge from 1988 to 1993. In 1993, he was named a federal magistrate judge.

Hi Charlotte! Regarding the e-mail below, how do David and Brett's schedules look for 3:15-3:45pm on May 20th? They would each speak 15 min. on "Hatch Act/Ethics" (30 min. session). It's possible that Nanette might be the more appropriate person to speak on ethics...will you please discuss it with them? Feel free to contact me if you have any questions. Thanks!!

Subject: Regional Appointees Conference

David/Brett:

The Offices of Cabinet Affairs, Presidential Personnel, Intergovernmental Affairs, Political Affairs, and the Council for Excellence in Government are together sponsoring a two-day conference entitled "Regional Appointees: Challenges and Opportunities," scheduled for May 19-20, 2003 in Washington, DC.

This conference will be the first of its kind during this Administration and will include regional appointees from several Cabinet and sub-Cabinet agencies such as Education, Interior, Labor, EPA, HHS, FEMA, GSA, HUD and SBA. It will be held at the nearby Mayflower Hotel, with several sessions taking place in Room 450 EEOB.

Given your office's stake in such an event, we want to involve you in the conference's program workshops and plenary sessions. In working with the agencies, we have identified roughly 85 regional political appointees that we have invited to attend the conference. Other local agency personnel, including inter-governmental affairs staff, will also be invited.

The purpose of the conference is to better engage our regional appointees as representatives of the President around the country and to give them a chance to meet and hear from senior White House officials and agency leaders. Sessions will focus on a variety of vital issues including:

ú Management Results / President's Management Team

ú Building Support for the President's Agenda

ú Freedom Corps / Faith-Based Initiatives

ú Hatch Act / Ethics

ú Policy Perspectives

ú Homeland Security

ú Working Together for Greater Regional Impact

ú Legislative Update

ú Foreign Policy Update

We have tentatively scheduled your presentation for Tuesday afternoon, May 20 in Room 450 EEOB (exact time is TBD). We would hope you could discuss your insights on the Hatch Act and ethics in government. We would also hope you could join us for a reception to be held later that evening.

We would greatly appreciate your participation, and I know that the Regional Appointees would appreciate hearing from you and will be happy to take your perspectives back with them to their respective regions. Please feel free to contact me should you have additional questions or you may have your assistant contact Christie Parell (6-2343) to confirm your availability.

Many thanks in advance,

Brian Montgomery

Estrada filibuster may galvanize Latino voters
By Ruben Navarette

After several failed attempts by Senate Republicans to break a Democratic filibuster, it's starting to look as if Miguel Estrada may never make it to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The controversial Bush nominee may have to settle for the strangest of consolation prizes: his name plastered on bumper stickers in the 2004 election.
Interestingly enough, both parties seem convinced they can use the Estrada saga to help them impress Latino voters. And that would be no small thing. Now the nation's largest minority, Latinos have gone from loyal Democrats to up-for-grabs swing voters who can help decide close races in critical battleground states like Florida, Illinois and New Mexico.

Republicans are sure they can get political mileage out of the fact that Senate Democrats treated Estrada inhospitably. And, just to make sure they don't miss their chance, they're calling out the big guns. Former President George H.W. Bush recently hosted a fund-raiser at his home in Houston to collect money for the political equivalent of an air assault. Guests forked over a quarter of a million dollars to buy television commercials targeting Democratic senators who targeted Estrada and other Bush judicial nominees.

In fact, some of the spots are already airing in four states: Nevada, Arkansas, Indiana and North Carolina. All those states have significant and growing Latino populations -- and Democratic senators seeking re-election in 2004. There are more ads coming in Louisiana, Florida, South Carolina, North Dakota and South Dakota. And just to make sure Latino voters don't miss the point about Democrats and their opposition to Estrada, some Republican spots are in Spanish.

About now, I bet Democrats are having second thoughts about the years they spent fighting the English-only movement.

All Republicans need for their investment to pay off is for Latinos to start asking tough questions -- like why the party of John Kennedy, for all its professed progressivism, seems to have decided that the nation's second-most prominent court is not ready for its first Latino judge. Or why it is that Democrats, even while they insist their beef with Estrada is over his lack of judicial experience, were happy to green-light white nominees who also had never served on the bench. Or why President Bill Clinton, in his two opportunities to appoint a justice to the Supreme Court, failed to nominate a Latino. And why President George W. Bush now seems primed to do just that.

It also wouldn't hurt Republicans if Latinos remembered who went to bat for Estrada. It was a Republican president who first put Estrada's nomination in play, and a Republican-controlled Senate that rallied in support of it. And even when it was clear that the nomination was in trouble, the GOP didn't give up.

You can expect Democrats to answer with their own battery of television commercials, and don't be surprised if they are among the most innovative in recent memory. Democrats have to charge that they actually did the Latino community a favor when they went after Estrada. And to do that, they'll have to tag him an activist whose views (were they only better known) would be so conservative as to put him outside the Latino mainstream.

Shouldn't someone let these guys in on the joke and tell them that -- judging from its views on everything from abortion to vouchers -- the Latino mainstream is conservative?

Besides, whom do Democrats think they're kidding? They were against Estrada's nomination from the moment they realized they couldn't control him, intimidate him or take credit for his success. After all, what fun is it for liberals to put minorities in powerful positions if doing so doesn't leave the benefactors feeling somehow empowered?

To cover their tracks, Senate Democrats managed to convince a handful of Latino advocacy groups to join them in opposing Estrada. But Democrats still have to worry about the people these groups insist they represent -- Latino voters. You remember them? They're the sort of folks who have been known to swell up with pride when one of their own tries to advance and respond angrily when someone else tries to hold him back.

Bush picks N.C. judicial nominees

African Americans await hearings for seats on appellate bench

GARY L. WRIGHT AND TIM FUNK
Staff Writers

WASHINGTON -President Bush on Monday nominated an African American woman from Raleigh to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals -- a move that could end more than a decade of deadlock and finally land a North Carolinian on the Richmond-based court.

Republican Allyson Duncan, 51, who appears to have the backing of both of North Carolina's U.S. senators, would also be the first black woman to sit on the 4th Circuit, a court with jurisdiction over the Carolinas, Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia. Duncan is a former judge on the N.C. Court of Appeals, a former professor at N.C. Central University and president-elect of the state Bar Association.

To fill another vacancy on the 4th Circuit court, the president nominated Virginia-based Claude Allen, a former aide to U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms. Republican Allen, 42, now deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, is also African American, but may prove to be a more controversial nominee, partly because of his deeply conservative views.

Sen. Elizabeth Dole, R-N.C., lauded Allen's ties to North Carolina -- like Duncan, he got his law degree from Duke University -- but a spokesman for U.S. Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., who sits on the Senate Judiciary Committee, said Edwards "is interested in taking a good, close look at (Allen's) qualifications."

Less likely to face any Senate obstacles are two Charlotteans -- U.S. Attorney Bob Conrad and U.S. Magistrate Judge Brent McKnight -- who were also nominated Monday to federal judgeships.

Both said a lawyer with the White House counsel's office notified them about 4:30 p.m. that their nominations for the newly created U.S. District Court judgeships in the Western District of North Carolina had been sent to the Senate.

"I'm honored to be nominated by President Bush," Conrad said. "If confirmed, I would strive to pursue justice with integrity."

McKnight said: "It's humbling and a great honor to be nominated by President Bush. I look forward to continuing to serve the people of the Western District of North Carolina."

The nominations for the lifetime posts must now be confirmed by the Senate.

Conrad, 44, and McKnight, 51 are both Republicans.

Conrad has been a federal prosecutor since 1989. He has been the U.S. Attorney for the Western District of North Carolina since 2001.

McKnight is a former state prosecutor and state district court judge. He was named a federal magistrate judge in 1993.

Neither of the 4th Circuit nominees could be reached for comment Monday.

If confirmed, they would become the second and third African Americans on a 14-member court.

Blacks make up 22 percent of the population covered by the circuit court -- higher than any other federal jurisdiction.

The impasse that has kept North Carolinians off the 4th Circuit -- even though it is the biggest state in the circuit -- goes back more than 10 years.

After Democrats in the Senate blocked the nomination of Terrence Boyle, another aide to then-Sen. Helms, Helms retaliated by blocking four N.C. nominations made later by President Clinton.

Boyle, now chief district judge in Eastern North Carolina, was re-nominated by President Bush in 2001.

But Edwards has been blocking Senate consideration of him, partly because of his judicial opinions on civil rights.

Edwards has touted Duncan as a "consensus nominee." On Monday, a spokesperson for Dole called Duncan "well-qualified," but repeated the senator's position that "Judge Boyle, Allyson Duncan and Claude Allen should receive hearings in the order of their nominations and based upon how long they have been waiting for a hearing."

Bush names lawyer, ex-Helms aide to court

By JOHN WAGNER, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON - President Bush nominated a Raleigh lawyer and a former aide to U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms on Monday for seats on the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals, a federal panel that has been bereft of North Carolina judges because of a standoff between the state's senators.

The nomination of Allyson Duncan, a Raleigh lawyer with Kilpatrick Stockton, had been expected for months and drew praise Monday night from the offices of both U.S. Sen. John Edwards, a Democrat, and U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Dole, a Republican.

Bush also nominated Claude Allen, a top official at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services who attended college in North Carolina and served as Helms' press secretary during his 1984 re-election campaign.

Allen currently lives in Virginia, so neither North Carolina senator could block his nomination under a Senate tradition that has effectively allowed members to veto picks from their home states.

Edwards spokesman Mike Briggs said Edwards, who sits on the Judiciary Committee, will reserve judgment on Allen's nomination. Dole's office said that Allen deserves a confirmation hearing, and that Allen's "ties to North Carolina are as strong as his ties to Virginia."

The 4th Circuit, which hears appeals from five Southeastern states, is the last stop for federal cases before they reach the U.S. Supreme Court.

Both Duncan and Allen are Republicans. If confirmed, they would be just the second and third black judges to sit on a court that had been long criticized by Democrats as a conservative, all-white bastion.

Feuding between North Carolina's senators has kept the state from having a single judge on the 15-member panel since 1999. The nomination of another North Carolinian, U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle, has been stalled since May 2001. Edwards has not consented to the nomination, partly in response to the blockage of a string of North Carolina nominees by Helms, Dole's Republican predecessor, during the Clinton administration.

Briggs said that Edwards believes Duncan, a former state appeals court judge, is "the kind of mainstream North Carolinian that would be a good addition to the 4th Circuit."

Still, it remained unclear Monday how quickly the Senate would move to confirm her nomination. Edwards would prefer the Senate move first because both senators support her.

Dole spokeswoman Mary Brown Brewer said Monday night, though, "Senator Dole continues to believe that Judge Boyle, Allyson Duncan and Claude Allen should receive hearings in the order of their nominations and based upon how long they have been waiting for a hearing."

Duncan, a Duke University law school graduate, has also served stints at a professor at the N.C. Central University School of Law and on the N.C. Utilities Commission. A list of her supporters released by the White House includes Julius Chambers, N.C. Central's former chancellor who is serving as treasurer of Edwards' presidential campaign.

Allen, a Pennsylvania native, served as Helms' campaign press secretary shortly after graduating from UNC-Chapel Hill. After the 1984 campaign, he got his law degree from Duke University. He since has worked as a lawyer in private practice, for the Virginia attorney general's office and as secretary for Health & Human Resources in Virginia. Bush named him deputy secretary at the federal Department of Health and Human Services in 2001.

Allen has no previous experience as a judge.

On Monday, Bush also announced two nominees to the U.S. District Court for the Western District of North Carolina: Robert J. Conrad Jr., currently U.S. attorney for the Western District of North Carolina; and H. Brent McKnight, current a U.S. Magistrate Judge.

Estrada filibuster may galvanize Latino voters
By Ruben Navarette

After several failed attempts by Senate Republicans to break a Democratic filibuster, it's starting to look as if Miguel Estrada may never make it to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The controversial Bush nominee may have to settle for the strangest of consolation prizes: his name plastered on bumper stickers in the 2004 election.

Interestingly enough, both parties seem convinced they can use the Estrada saga to help them impress Latino voters. And that would be no small thing. Now the nation's largest minority, Latinos have gone from loyal Democrats to up-for-grabs swing voters who can help decide close races in critical battleground states like Florida, Illinois and New Mexico.

Republicans are sure they can get political mileage out of the fact that Senate Democrats treated Estrada inhospitably. And, just to make sure they don't miss their chance, they're calling out the big guns. Former President George H.W. Bush recently hosted a fund-raiser at his home in Houston to collect money for the political equivalent of an air assault. Guests forked over a quarter of a million dollars to buy television commercials targeting Democratic senators who targeted Estrada and other Bush judicial nominees.

In fact, some of the spots are already airing in four states: Nevada, Arkansas, Indiana and North Carolina. All those states have significant and growing Latino populations -- and Democratic senators seeking re-election in 2004. There are more ads coming in Louisiana, Florida, South Carolina, North Dakota and South Dakota. And just to make sure Latino voters don't miss the point about Democrats and their opposition to Estrada, some Republican spots are in Spanish.

About now, I bet Democrats are having second thoughts about the years they spent fighting the English-only movement.

All Republicans need for their investment to pay off is for Latinos to start asking tough questions -- like why the party of John Kennedy, for all its professed progressivism, seems to have decided that the nation's second-most prominent court is not ready for its first Latino judge. Or why it is that Democrats, even while they insist their beef with Estrada is over his lack of judicial experience, were happy to green-light white nominees who also had never served on the bench. Or why President Bill Clinton, in his two opportunities to appoint a justice to the Supreme Court, failed to nominate a Latino. And why President George W. Bush now seems primed to do just that.

It also wouldn't hurt Republicans if Latinos remembered who went to bat for Estrada. It was a Republican president who first put Estrada's nomination in play, and a Republican-controlled Senate that rallied in support of it. And even when it was clear that the nomination was in trouble, the GOP didn't give up.

You can expect Democrats to answer with their own battery of television commercials, and don't be surprised if they are among the most innovative in recent memory. Democrats have to charge that they actually did the Latino community a favor when they went after Estrada. And to do that, they'll have to tag him an activist whose views (were they only better known) would be so conservative as to put him outside the Latino mainstream.

Shouldn't someone let these guys in on the joke and tell them that -- judging from its views on everything from abortion to vouchers -- the Latino mainstream is conservative?

Besides, whom do Democrats think they're kidding? They were against Estrada's nomination from the moment they realized they couldn't control him, intimidate him or take credit for his success. After all, what fun is it for liberals to put minorities in powerful positions if doing so doesn't leave the benefactors feeling somehow empowered?

To cover their tracks, Senate Democrats managed to convince a handful of Latino advocacy groups to join them in opposing Estrada. But Democrats still have to worry about the people these groups insist they represent -- Latino voters. You remember them? They're the sort of folks who have been known to swell up with pride when one of their own tries to advance and respond angrily when someone else tries to hold him back.

It is irritating as I said because if these guys didn't do this, people like Mike Allen would be more likely to call the press office and at least hear our side. I know you know all of this - forgive my venting.

I'm interested in the issue of the 4th Circuit Md./Va. seat. Irrespective of Mr. Allen's merits, the moving of this seat seems pretty aggressive to me. On the other hand, I understand that y'all have had real trouble finding names the Md. senators would do business over. I know that both you and Keisler were discussed and that one or the other of the Md. senators said no. Are there others as well? Can you give me any kind of sense of why, in your judgment, this step was necessary?

Wendy,

Thanks for helping work out the details for Tucker's participation in our Founding Members Spring Retreat on Monday. The Senator appreciates Tucker's willingness to attend. A confirmation letter with all details will be faxed later today.

Attached is the only document with Tucker's name on it that is being distributed publicly. We are not sending out invitations, but the attached agenda is being sent to retreat participants. We would like to send this out this afternoon, so please confirm his name and title are listed correctly and get back to me ASAP.

Also attached is the list of attendees scheduled to participate in the retreat. We may add 1-2 more names by Monday, but this is the core of the list. In addition to the Founding Members, a combination of staffers from the Senator's office in Washington and campaign staff in South Carolina

also attend.

Thanks!

the earlier the better since they're only here for 1 day and would like a series of events.

a group of 7 women - bipartisan group - are flying into town tonight for a day of activity tomorrow.
right now - nothing is on the agenda except a press conf at 11am and a tentative mtg with cornyn.
we really need to put them to work since they carved out time in their schedules to do this.

i'm happy to arrange things, but was under the impression this was being handled by others - please let me know what we can do ASAP so i have an agenda!

right now = the only thing on the schedule is the 11am press conf.

i think it would be best to start the day with a briefing - kay may be the right person to do that (or cornyn - or do you think hatch can do something) - so the earlier the better.

barb - shall i set up appts or is your office?

KEY POINTS FROM THE PRESIDENT'S REMARKS ON GLOBAL HIV/AIDS***

*HIV/AIDS is a tragedy for millions of men, women and children, and a threat to stability of entire countries and of regions of our world. Confronting this tragedy is the responsibility of every nation.

*Since January 2001, America has increased total spending to fight AIDS overseas by nearly 100 percent. President Bush has asked Congress to enact the Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief to direct $15 billion to fight AIDS abroad over the next five years, beginning with $2 billion in 2004.

*The plan will create comprehensive systems that diagnose, treat and prevent AIDS in 14 African and Caribbean countries where the disease is heavily concentrated.

*Uganda began a comprehensive program in 1986 with a prevention strategy emphasizing abstinence and marital fidelity, and condoms to prevent HIV transmission. The results are encouraging.

*The AIDS infection rate in Uganda has fallen dramatically since 1990, and in places throughout the country, the percentage of pregnant women with HIV has been cut in half.

*Many past international efforts focused on prevention at the expense of treatment. Integrating care and treatment with prevention is the cornerstone of the President's plan.

*A new global AIDS coordinator will manage resources and help utilize and further develop successful clinical networks that link urban medical center staff with rural clinics, where HIV
tests can be preformed and medications distributed.

*Fighting AIDS on a global scale is a massive and complicated undertaking. Yet, this cause is rooted in the simplest of moral duties. When we see this kind of preventable suffering, we must act.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE***
All Times Eastern Daylight. Subject to Change

12:30 pm White House Briefing
5:20 pm President Bush meets with the President of Columbia

IRAQ RECONSTRUCTION UPDATE***

*In southern Iraq, the Al Basrah oil refinery restarted operations April 29 and will begin refining propane, benzene, and gasoline for the people of Iraq. Propane is the principal fuel
for cooking in Iraq.

*On April 29, USAID reported that repairs have improved the efficiency of two major water plants in Al Basrah from a pre-war level of 35 percent to 80 percent or greater.
*According to the Humanitarian Operations Center, water in Baghdad is reported to be flowing to 85 percent of the city.

*Power plants in Baghdad are currently generating 450 megawatts of electricity daily. This has enabled the operation of the substations at all sixteen water treatment plants,
24 of 26
wastewater treatment plants, and 11 of 12 major public hospitals. One quarter of Baghdad now has electricity.

IN THE PRESIDENT'S WORDS, FIGHTING GLOBAL AIDS/HIV, 4/29/03***

"Today, on the continent of Africa alone nearly 30 million people are living with HIV/AIDS, including 3 million people under the age of 15 years old...There are only
possible responses to suffering on this scale. We can turn our eyes away in resignation and despair, or we can take decisive, historic action to turn the tide against this disease and give the hope of life to millions who need our help now. The United States of America chooses the path of action and the path of hope."

United States Senate

WASHINGTON, DC 20510

April 30, 2003

Dear Senators Frist and Daschle,

As the ten newest members of the United States Senate, we write to express our concerns about the state of the federal judicial nomination and confirmation process. The apparent breakdown in this process reflects poorly on the ability of the Senate and the Administration to work together in the best interests of our country. The breakdown also disserves the qualified nominees to the federal bench whose confirmations have been delayed or blocked, and the American people who rely on our federal courts for justice.

We, the ten freshmen of the United States Senate for the 108th Congress, are a diverse group. Among our ranks are former federal executive branch officials, members of the U.S. House of Representatives, and state attorneys general. We include state and local officials, and a former trial and appellate judge. We have different viewpoints on a variety of important issues currently facing our country. But we are united in our commitment to maintaining and preserving a fair and effective justice system for all Americans. And we are united in our concern that the judicial confirmation process is broken and needs to be fixed.

In some instances, when a well qualified nominee for the federal bench is denied a vote, the obstruction is justified on the ground of how prior nominees – typically, the nominees of a previous President – were treated. All of these recriminations, made by members on both sides of the aisle, relate to circumstances which occurred before any of us arrived in the United States Senate. None of us were parties to any of the reported past offenses, whether real or perceived. None of us believe that the ill will of the past should dictate the terms and direction of the future.

Each of us firmly believes that the United States Senate needs a fresh start. And each of us believes strongly that we were elected to this body in order to do a job for the citizens of our respective states – to enact legislation to stimulate our economy, protect national security, and promote the national welfare, and to provide advice and consent, and to vote on the President's nominations to important positions in the executive branch and on our nation's courts.

Accordingly, the ten freshmen of the United States Senate for the 108th Congress urge you to work toward improving the Senate's use of the current process or establishing a better process for the Senate's consideration of judicial nominations. We acknowledge that the White House should be included in repairing this process.

All of us were elected to do a job. Unfortunately, the current state of our judicial confirmation process prevents us from doing an important part of that job. We seek a bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees, and leave the bitterness of the past behind us.

Yours truly,

Frist will talk to Stevens today or tomorrow about putting a "place holder" in the supplemental so a debt ceiling increase can be added in conference.;

Meanwhile, Treasury has the following draft prepared to declare a three month debt suspension period at the end of the week.; This would provide enough room to get us into late May or early June.; If Congress fails to act, Treasury GC is prepared to make a second declaration through the end of the session.

Dear Mr. Speaker:

;;;;;;;;;;; I am notifying you, as required under 5 U.S.C. õ;8348 (l)(2) that by reason of the public debt limit, it is my determination that I will be unable to invest fully the portion of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund (CSRDF) not immediately required to pay beneficiaries.; For purposes of this statute, I have determined that a "debt issuance suspension period" will begin as early as April 3, 2003; but no later than April 11, 2003and will last until July 11, 2003.; Therefore, during the debt issuance suspension period, the Treasury Department will suspend additional investments of amounts credited to the CSRDF and redeem a portion of the investments held by the CSRDF, as authorized by law.; Beneficiaries will be fully protected and will suffer no adverse consequences.; The governing statute requires that the Treasury restore all due interest and principal to these funds as soon as this can be done without exceeding the public debt limit.

;;;;;;;;;;; Even though the debt issuance suspension period will last until July 11th, the investment suspensions and redemptions may only provide debt issuance capacity under the statutory debt limit until the latter half of May or early June.; I know that you share the President's and my commitment to maintaining the full faith and credit of the U.S.government. Together we must continue working to enact an increase in the statutory debt limit as quickly as possible to avoid any negative repercussions at home or abroad during this critical time.

United States Senate

WASHINGTON, DC 20510

April 30, 2003

Dear Senators Frist and Daschle,

As the ten newest members of the United States Senate, we write to express our concerns about the state of the federal judicial nomination and confirmation process. The apparent breakdown in this process reflects poorly on the ability of the Senate and the Administration to work together in the best interests of our country. The breakdown also disserves the qualified nominees to the federal bench whose confirmations have been delayed or blocked, and the American people who rely on our federal courts for justice.

We, the ten freshmen of the United States Senate for the 108th Congress, are a diverse group. Among our ranks are former federal executive branch officials, members of the U.S. House of Representatives, and state attorneys general. We include state and local officials, and a former trial and appellate judge. We have different viewpoints on a variety of important issues currently facing our country. But we are united in our commitment to maintaining and preserving a fair and effective justice system for all Americans. And we are united in our concern that the judicial confirmation process is broken and needs to be fixed.

In some instances, when a well qualified nominee for the federal bench is denied a vote, the obstruction is justified on the ground of how prior nominees – typically, the nominees of a previous President – were treated. All of these recriminations, made by members on both sides of the aisle, relate to circumstances which occurred before any of us arrived in the United States Senate. None of us were parties to any of the reported past offenses, whether real or perceived. None of us believe that the ill will of the past should dictate the terms and direction of the future.

Each of us firmly believes that the United States Senate needs a fresh start. And each of us believes strongly that we were elected to this body in order to do a job for the citizens of our respective states – to enact legislation to stimulate our economy, protect national security, and promote the national welfare, and to provide advice and consent, and to vote on the President's nominations to important positions in the executive branch and on our nation's courts.

Accordingly, the ten freshmen of the United States Senate for the 108th Congress urge you to work toward improving the Senate's use of the current process or establishing a better process for the Senate's consideration of judicial nominations. We acknowledge that the White House should be included in repairing this process.

All of us were elected to do a job. Unfortunately, the current state of our judicial confirmation process prevents us from doing an important part of that job. We seek a bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees, and leave the bitterness of the past behind us.

Yours truly,

John Cornyn

- Yesterday, Senate Democrats announced that they will filibuster another one of the President's very qualified nominees - Priscilla Owen. (Texas Supreme Court Justice and nominee for the 5th Circuit)

- The Senate has a Constitutional responsibility to hold an up or down vote on all judicial nominees within a reasonable time, but some Senate Democrats have abandoned that responsibility in favor of partisan obstructionist tactics.

- Filibusters: The Constitution is clear; a majority is required to confirm judicial nominees. A minority of Senate Democrats are effectively changing the law with their obstructionist tactics.

- The judicial confirmation process is broken and the consequences for the American people are real.

- The President has proposed a plan that would ensure that all judicial nominees, no matter who is President or who controls the Senate, receive a timely up or down vote. The voice of every Senator deserves to be heard.

- The Presidents nominees are highly qualified and not only do they deserve a vote, they deserve to be confirmed.

- There are presently 51 vacancies out of the 862 authorized federal judgeships. The 12 regional federal appeals courts face a particularly serious crisis, with 24 vacancies out of 167 judgeships.

1984 comes to fore

By JOHN WAGNER, Washington Correspondent

North Carolina's 1984 Senate race is being revisited by current Senate aides and interest groups in the wake of President Bush's judicial nomination of Claude Allen, campaign press secretary for then-Sen. Jesse Helms.

Bush on Monday nominated Allen, now an official at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, for a seat on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Shortly after his name was announced, Democratic Senate staffers started pointing reporters to a comment Allen made about Helms' Democratic opponent, then-Gov. Jim Hunt.

During the campaign, Allen suggested that Hunt was vulnerable for his connections "with the queers." He later apologized.

Much attention focused on Allen in 1984, however, had to do with his race. At the time of his hiring, he faced a barrage of questions about why a black would work for Helms, whom many blacks saw as a nemesis.

In advance of the 1984 election, Allen spent the better part of two years traveling around North Carolina with the senator on weekends. In an interview with The News & Observer late last year, as Helms prepared to retire, Allen said the time the two spent together had a lasting impact.

"Knowing him has shaped me in many ways in terms of my values and how I conduct myself, all for the good," Allen said.

Allen, now a Virginia resident, acknowledged the experience was difficult at times. He left work early the day that Helms voted against the creation of a federal holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr., whom Allen said he grew up revering.

Helms called Allen at home that night to talk about his reasoning, which he said was influenced by the economic effects of establishing another holiday. "While I didn't necessarily agree with his vote, the senator had a reasoned position," Allen said.

Not on board

Walter Dellinger, a Duke University law school professor and former acting solicitor general in the Clinton administration, was among those included on a "supporter contact list" distributed by the White House this week following Allen's nomination.

Allen attended Duke law school, but Dellinger said he was puzzled by his presence on the list. "Claude Allen was a very able law student and one whom I enjoyed teaching," Dellinger said, "but I have not followed his career since law school and have not taken a position on his nomination."

In an interview with The News & Observer late last year, as Helms prepared to retire, Allen said the time the two spent together had a lasting impact. "Knowing him has shaped me in many ways in terms of my values and how I conduct myself, all for the good," Allen said.

Allen, now a Virginia resident, acknowledged the experience was difficult at times. He left work early the day that Helms voted against the creation of a federal holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr., whom Allen said he grew up revering.

Helms called Allen at home that night to talk about his reasoning, which he said was influenced by the economic effects of establishing another holiday. "While I didn't necessarily agree with his vote, the senator had a reasoned position," Allen said.

Not on board

Walter Dellinger, a Duke University law school professor and former acting solicitor general in the Clinton administration, was among those included on a "supporter contact list" distributed by the White House this week following Allen's nomination.

Allen attended Duke law school, but Dellinger said he was puzzled by his presence on the list. "Claude Allen was a very able law student and one whom I enjoyed teaching," Dellinger said, "but I have not followed his career since law school and have not taken a position on his nomination."

NOMINEE DOESN'T DESERVE CALUMNY HEAPED ON HER
Forum Column

By Vilma S. Martinez

As a member of Sen. Barbara Boxer's judicial screening committee during the Clinton administration, I was proud to recommend Judge Richard Paez for the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. President Clinton nominated Paez, but his nomination languished for four years, and he was subjected to a campaign of half-truths and cruel caricatures.

California Superior Court Judge Carolyn Kuhl, characteristic of her sense of fairness and respect for an independent judiciary, stepped up to the plate. She wrote letters, made phone calls and exhorted her fellow Republicans to confirm Paez and other Clinton nominees.
Now that President Bush has nominated Kuhl to the 9th Circuit, many of the groups that supported Paez, ironically, have turned their fire on Kuhl, apparently to exact payback against Senate Republicans. This turnabout is not fair play. It is the continuation of a vicious cycle that punishes worthy judicial candidates in a misguided effort to use the judiciary to further narrow political ends.
I generally identify myself as a Democrat, am a veteran of civil rights battles and testified against Judge Robert Bork's nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court (on the basis of his inadequate judicial temperament). Like others dedicated to the independence of our judiciary, I certainly do not want ideologues serving as judges on our federal courts. That is why I think that Kuhl would make a great addition to the 9th Circuit.
Kuhl has served for seven years on the Los Angeles County Superior Court. Before that, she and I were law partners for nine years. Kuhl is what I think of as an "old fashioned" judge. She cares about due process for everyone. In her seven years on the Superior Court, she has shown that she is careful to hear both sides. She does not try to influence the outcome of a case to favor one side or the other. She is serious about her oath to follow the law, whatever the result. Kuhl takes as her guide the words of Justice Felix Frankfurter that the highest calling of a judge is to subordinate the judge's personal views to the law.
Kuhl hardly can be described as being on "the fringe" of the Los Angeles legal community. She is the first woman to serve as the supervising judge of the civil departments of the Los Angeles Superior Court, a court system that is larger than the entire federal trial court nationwide. She served as the supervising judge of that court's very successful complex litigation program in its experimental phase.
Both the plaintiff and defense bars in Los Angeles actively support Kuhl, even though she primarily represented defendants when she practiced law. California Supreme Court Justice Carlos Moreno, more than a dozen justices of the Court of Appeal and almost 100 judges of the Superior Court (including more than 25 women) have signed letters in support of Kuhl. Many of these supporters are active Democrats. They know Kuhl and, like me, they know that she has not been, and would not be, a result-oriented judge.
Prof. Erwin Chemerinsky recently argued, in the pages of this publication, that the battle over judges that was so unfair to nominees of Clinton should continue against Bush's nominees. "Look Closely," Forum, April 17. He also takes the position that candidates for judicial office should be judged by who their clients are and what positions they took on behalf of those clients.
The Los Angeles County Bar Association strongly disagrees. In its March 28 letter to the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the County
Bar stated: "The recent trend in attacking the qualifications of judicial candidates on the basis of positions advocated on behalf of clients is misguided ... . [W]e urge that the Judiciary Committee give due consideration to those issues that are critical to assessing a nominees' qualifications - the nominees' professional abilities, intelligence, integrity, experience and judicial temperament - and not to those positions taken by nominees on behalf of their clients."
The letter explains that because of a lawyer's responsibility to explore and present all arguments that may advance a client's cause, "neither the identity of a lawyer's clients nor the zealous advocacy of their causes necessarily provides any insight into the lawyer's personal beliefs, nor do they necessarily provide any indication of how a nominee may view a particular case presented to him or her as a judge." The letter also notes that the type of personal attacks on candidates that have become common may discourage candidates from pursuing judicial nominations and discourage lawyers from taking on unpopular or controversial clients or causes.

I call on fellow members of the bar, both Democrats and Republicans, to step up to the plate to support Kuhl, just like she went to bat for Paez and other Clinton nominees. It is shameful that her generosity and dedication to an independent judiciary are being repaid with the same sort of calumny that Paez suffered. Until the politicians decide to play fair with judicial candidates, our system of justice will suffer grievously.

Vilma S. Martinez has been a partner at Munger, Tolles & Olson for 20 years.
Previously, she served as president and general counsel of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

PRESS RELEASE

April 29, 2003
Democratic Elected Officials Say:
Put LaRouche in ABC-TV Debate
South Carolina media reported on April 29 that the state's Democratic Party chairman had received a letter from nearly 40 current and former Democratic elected officials asking that Presidential pre-candidate Lyndon LaRouche be invited to the May 3 Presidential debate to be broadcast nationally by ABC-TV. At a press conference held by the representatives on April 28, Florence, S.C. City Councilman Edward Robinson released the letter, which had been sent to state chairman Richard Harpootlian on April 12. In it, the Democratic leaders*roughly half from South Carolina and the other half from other states, joined by former Surgeon-General Joycelyn Elders*pointed out that LaRouche now has more contributors to his Presidential campaign than any of the nine Democratic candidates invited to the debate, from which the Party is seeking to exclude him.
"It's outrageous. It's stupid" that LaRouche has not been invited, campaign spokesman Dr. Debra Freeman was quoted in a statewide AP wire. "The Democratic Party in the State of South Carolina has long been under the influence of Don Fowler," she said, adding the campaign did not plan legal action. "We will continue doing what we have been doing, and take the campaign directly to the people."
OPEN LETTER TO SOUTH CAROLINA DEMOCRATIC PARTY
April 28, 2003
The following letter was released today at a press conference held in Florence, S.C. by Florence City Councilman Edward Robinson.
April 12, 2003

Chairman Richard Harpootlian
South Carolina Democratic Party
1517 Blanding St.
Columbia, South Carolina 29201
Dear Sirs:
It has been brought to our attention that on May 1-3, you are hosting the annual Democratic Party State Convention and Jefferson-Jackson Day events. As part of that weekend, you are also sponsoring a forum for candidates seeking the Democratic Party nomination for President.
We call upon you to extend an invitation to Mr. Lyndon LaRouche to participate in the upcoming candidates' forum. Mr. LaRouche is a registered Democratic Party candidate, filed with the Federal Election Commission, has raised well over $3 million for the upcoming primaries, and qualified for Federal Matching Funds in the last several election campaigns on the Democratic side. According to the FEC, he now ranks fourth in total contributions raised and first in total contributors, among all major Democratic candidates.
Mr. LaRouche is an outspoken opponent of the policies of Donald Rumsfeld and Vice-President Cheney, and a proponent of policies like those of former President Franklin Roosevelt. Like FDR, Mr. LaRouche proposes to rebuild our nation's deteriorating economy. He has been spending significant sums of money on a radio campaign in Washington, D.C., and has been delivering speeches throughout the nation.

The attempt to limit the nominating process to an agreed-upon number of candidates, as designated by the news media and a handful of people in the national party, is discriminatory. Now is the time for fair and open debate on the critical issues facing our nation and our party. We urge you to extend an invitation to Mr. LaRouche to participate in the upcoming party weekend and candidate debate.

You can contact Mr. LaRouche's representatives in the Washington, D.C. area by calling Stuart Rosenblatt at 1-800-929-7566.

SECRETARY OF DEFENSE DONALD RUMSFELD PARTICIPATES IN TOWN HALL MEETING WITH U.S. TROOPS

BAGHDAD, IRAQ
9:28 A.M. EDT, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 30, 2003

SEC. RUMSFELD: (In progress) -- that fine welcome, and also for the absolutely superb job that you folks have done. The entire world has watched, impressed.

;;;;;; I have to admit, I'm surprised to see you folks at the Baghdad Airport. (Laughter.) The world was told there were no Americans here -- (cheers) -- over and over and over! But I guess that's the last time we heard from that fella. (Cheers, laughter.)

;;;;;; I do want to thank each of you for your courage, your dedication to duty, and for volunteering, stepping up to serve your country. What you have accomplished is truly remarkable. You've rescued a nation, you've liberated a people, you've deposed a cruel dictator, and you have ended his threat to free nations. You have braved death squads and dust storms, racing across hundreds of miles to reach Baghdad in less than a month. (Cheers of "Hoo-ah.") Some people call that a quagmire! (Laughter.) It was possibly the fastest march on a capital in modern military history. (Cheers of "Hoo-ah"; applause.)

;;;;;; And unlike many armies in the world, you came not to conquer, not to occupy, but to liberate. And the Iraqi people know this. And when you arrived in Baghdad, many of the Iraqi people came into the streets to welcome you, pulling down statues of Saddam Hussein, celebrating their new-found freedom, freedom that you helped restore. And what a sight that was. You've unleashed events that could -- will unquestionably shape the course of this country, a fate of a people, and very likely affect the future of this entire region.

;;;;;; Take great pride in your accomplishment, not only for what you've done but for how you've done it. You've done it well. While your adversary did everything in his power to put civilian lives at risk, you, our coalition partners, took such great care to protect the lives of innocent civilians. Indeed, in a real sense, many of the Iraqi people were hostages to that regime. We want the Iraqi people to live in freedom so that they can build a future where Iraqi leaders answer to the Iraqi people instead of killing them. And because of you, they will have a chance to do just that.

;;;;;; There's still work to be done. The remnants of that regime needs to be removed from every corner of this country. We still have to find and deal with the remaining elements of the former regime. We have to root out and eliminate terrorist networks operating in this country. We have to help Iraqis restore their basic services. And we have to help provide conditions of stability and security so that the Iraqi people can form an interim authority, an interim government, and then ultimately a free Iraqi government based on political freedom, individual liberty and the rule of law.

;;;;;; So, while you folks have accomplished a great deal, there is still some work to do. We're grateful for your service, but we're also grateful to your families. They worry about you. They endure long separations from you. And they also serve the cause of freedom. So we are grateful and proud of their service as well as your service. (Applause.)

;;;;;; So I thank you for all you've done. I thank you for what you will be doing. I thank your families from my heart. The American people are proud of you. And God bless each of you.

;;;;;; Thank you very much. (Applause.)

;;;;;; Now, are there microphones around here?

;;;;;; Q Yes! (Inaudible.) (Laughter.)

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: I'm not going to call on you! (Laughter.) You are too eager! (Laughter.)

;;;;;; I'll tell you what. If nobody will ask me when they can go home -- (laughter) -- I'm respond to a few questions.

;;;;;; I'll answer the ones I know the answers to, and I'll respond to the others. (Laughter.)

;;;;;; Who's got a mike? Raise your hand.

;;;;;; Q I do, Mr. Secretary.

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Where are you? (Laughter.) There you are, okay.

;;;;;; Q Pfc. Jugalina (ph), 54th Engineer Battalion, Bamberg, Germany. Mr. Secretary, is Iraq currently a member of OPEC? And if not, are they planning to join in the near future?

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: I don't know. (Laughter, applause.) The -- I suspect they're not, or if they are, they probably are on a very qualified basis. My guess is they're going to have to increase either -- I shouldn't get into -- this is diplomacy -- (chuckling) -- and I don't do diplomacy. (Laughter.) You may have noticed. (Laughter, cheers, applause.)

;;;;;; I think it's a complicated question, and they're going to have to see what kind of a quota or what kind of a role they want to play in the world oil markets, and that's something we've got some very bright people -- we have some excellent people from various countries outside of Iraq, we have some people who have a background in Iraqi oil, and they are beginning that process of working together to make the kinds of judgments that will be necessary.

;;;;;; The first task, as President Bush said, we need to get the sanctions lifted so that the people of this country can begin to see their lives improved.

;;;;;; Who's got a mike?

;;;;;; Q Mr. Secretary. (Pause.) Right here! (Laughter, applause.) Straight in front of you, sir.

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Wave it -- there it is! I see it.

;;;;;; Q Specialist Disart (ph), Fox Troop, 3-7 Cav, out of Fort Stewart, Georgia. (Cheers of "Hoo-ah.") My question is, I heard there is a possibility --

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: What did he say, he was in the Navy? (Laughter.)

;;;;;; AUDIENCE MEMBERS: No!

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Nooo! (Laughter.)

;;;;;; Q No, sir!

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Oh, I misunderstood! I thought -- I thought that's what he said. Excuse me.

;;;;;; Q In the 3-7 Cav, sir.

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Oh, okay! (Cheers.)

;;;;;; Q You may have heard of us.

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: You hit a button! (Laughter.)

;;;;;; Q (Off mike) -- possibility of combat time being used in exchange for military school, such as ANOC, BNOC and PLDC. Is this correct?

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: (Pause.) What do you all think? (Cheers.)

;;;;;; (Pause.)

;;;;;; General, do you know the answer to that? (Pause.) (Laughter, applause.)

;;;;;; One, two, three, four generals don't know the answer, and you ask me?! (Laughter.) It sounds to me like if it isn't, it ought to be. (Cheers.)

;;;;;; Who's got a mike? (Laughter.) And stay away from the young lady down here. We don't -- (laughter).

;;;;;; Q Sir, Mr. Secretary --

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Yes? (Laughter.)

;;;;;; Q Sir, Lieutenant Sean Barberis (sp) from 5th Corps, stationed out at Darmstadt, Germany. What is the proposed plan for --

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Where are you? (Laughter.) Okay. I see. I like to keep my eye on people. (Laughter.)

;;;;;; Q What is the proposed -- sir, what is the proposed plan for getting units out of Germany? And which units will be affected?

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: The situation is that the world has changed so much in this 21st century. The Cold War period is, of course, over. We've experienced September 11th. We have, as a result of Operation Enduring Freedom, made a whole set of new relationships in the world -- in Central Asia, in the Middle East.

;;;;;; What we're doing now is systematically working with our friends and allies around the world to examine our footprint, to see where we are, how we want to be arranged for the future. And there's no question in my mind but that we have a -- probably too large a number of folks in Western Europe that -- some of which is still a leftover from the Cold War and the fear of the Soviet Union coming across the North German plain. It was appropriate then. It's less appropriate now.

;;;;;; So General Jones, the European commander and the Supreme Allied Commander of NATO, is in the process of analyzing that. And there is no doubt in my mind that -- but that we will be making adjustments. As to what particular units he'll decide ought to be shifted and make a recommendation to me, we're just not at that point yet.

;;;;;; Needless to say, we're doing the same thing in this part of the world, we're doing the same thing in Asia, because it is necessary that we arrange ourselves for the future, rather than the past.

;;;;;; Question?

;;;;;; Q (Off mike) -- mike, sir?

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: There must be a mike somewhere.

;;;;;; Q I'll try and talk loud enough.

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Okay, we'll do you and come back. Someone will bring a mike over for you.

;;;;;; Go ahead.

;;;;;; Q My name is Lance Corporal Kelly (sp), 3rd LAR, 29 Palms, U.S. Marine Corps. (Cheers.) And I was wondering, if we find Saddam and his regime in surrounding countries, or maybe in Russia or wherever he may have fled, if he got away, will we go in and get him, or will we try to have the countries give them back to us, sir?

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Well, first of all, we are finding people in the top several dozen of the Saddam Hussein regime every two or three days. Mostly they're being -- some are stopped at a border as they try to get out, some have been picked up just through serendipity. Still others, in fact most have been the result of the fact that people have come up to us -- Iraqis have come up and said, "Down the block in that house is one of the people you're looking for." And we've been able, then, to find them. As I say, it's been like one or two every three or four days.

;;;;;; There's no doubt but that some people escaped, probably through Syria, earlier on. Some of those are probably still in Syria. Some have probably transited to other countries. We have asked other countries to return them, and we are using diplomatic efforts to try to encourage them to do that.

;;;;;; At least at the moment, my impression is that some of the countries that had been accepting them previously are no longer accepting them, which is a good start.

;;;;;; As an Iraqi government evolves and gets on its feet, it may very well be that they will want to have some of those folks brought back so that they can have a discussion with them.

;;;;;; Question. Yes?

;;;;;; Q Sir -- (microphone fails to work).

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: I'll tell you what, we'll take someone else, and you come up on the stage and we'll let you ask it up here. You're determined! (Cheers.)

;;;;;; Who's got one while we're waiting for him to get up here? Question. Right there. Do you have a mike?

;;;;;; Q Yes, sir.

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Good.

;;;;;; Q Sir, Major Joe Sammick (ph), V Corps Headquarters, engineer.

;;;;;; Sir, do you think that our experiences in Operation Iraqi Freedom has validated our efforts to transition to a more strategically mobile, lighter military force?

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: I think that the plan and the execution of the plan in Operation Iraqi Freedom has been superb. And what I want to see happen is I want to see those of you who have that experience in combined joint warfighting, and such successful experience, bring that knowledge back into your respective services. We have a long way to go for this defense establishment of ours to get itself fixed so that it can deal with the kinds of problems we're facing in the 21st century. We do need to be quicker on our feet. We need to be able to do things in hours and days instead of weeks and months. We need to be able to do things with somewhat smaller footprints. We need to be able to do a variety of things. We need to be able to function with the services in a completely interconnected way.

;;;;;; I think that the leadership, that some of the key leaders standing right behind me on this platform have fashioned an approach to warfare which will be critically important as we go forward. We've got to see that that gets put into the services so they're less service centered. We need to see that it's put in the schools so that the schools are teaching the kind of things that are going to be needed. We're going to have to have, in my view, more standing joint task force capability so that we don't have to start from a dead start and in fact are well down the way in the event that that kind of a capability is needed.

;;;;;; So I think what we've accomplished here is we've demonstrated == you've demonstrated what can be done, what can be done very well and very rapidly, what can be done in terms of working together. And I must say the relationships between the Army and the Marines on the ground and the naval and Marine and Air Force and Army Air I think has been truly impressive.

;;;;;; Where is this young fellow? There you are.

;;;;;; Q Sir, my question was --

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: Right up to the mike so they can all hear you. There you go.

;;;;;; Q Okay. How does this fight compare to the war in Afghanistan besides the fact that it shows our military can adapt to the various situations? And also, what images do you think America will remember about this war?

;;;;;; SEC. RUMSFELD: The differences are notable, in my view. In Afghanistan, we basically used large numbers of ground forces that were Afghans in the Northern Alliances and a few people from the tribes in the south. Embedded with them were special forces and special operation teams and superior and precision air power. Here, we had a much different circumstance. We had some support on the ground, but it was not of the same magnitude that we had in Afghanistan. and as a result, we used U.S. ground capability.

;;;;;; The effect of that was that by building up that force over a sustained period of time, we obviously lost strategic surprise. We flowed the forces as the president and Secretary Powell were working in the United Nations attempting to get the United Nations to be supportive and be helpful, and so strategic surprise was gone.

;;;;;; The fact that these gentlemen behind me and General Tom Franks and his team decided to start the ground war before the air war, in my view, helped to achieve tactical surprise. And the fact that the 4th ID was still up in the Mediterranean very likely left the Iraqi regime with the impression that it was not likely that the war would start, because they very likely were expecting sustained air war, which was the pattern of from '91. They very likely were not thinking that we would start the war without the 4th ID.

;;;;;; And when the ground war began -- it seems like four years ago, but I guess it was only six weeks.

;;;;;; When the ground war began, and then, instead of pausing, it moved forward at such amazing speed, it seems to me that all of those things that we had to worry about that could have gone wrong -- the risks of ballistic missiles being fired into Saudi Arabia and Jordan and Israel, as happened in 1991; the risk that the dams would be blown; the risk that the oil fields would all be set afire and a terrible environmental disaster which happened in 1991 in Kuwait; the risks that weapon(s) of mass destruction might be used, chemical weapons or biological weapons; the risks that there would be large numbers of refugees and internally displaced people in the hundreds of thousands, which had happened, again, in 1991 -- none of those things happened this time. And they happened (sic) because of the superb leadership, the superb plan, and the fact that you folks are so disciplined, so well-trained, so well-equipped, so courageous and so determined. And the loss of life, of innocent life, was minimal because of the precision and the speed.

;;;;;; So when people are writing the history books, you're going to be in it!

;;;;;; Thank you very much. (Cheers, applause.)

END.

NOMINEE DOESN'T DESERVE CALUMNY HEAPED ON HER
Forum Column

By Vilma S. Martinez

As a member of Sen. Barbara Boxer's judicial screening committee during the Clinton administration, I was proud to recommend Judge Richard Paez for the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. President Clinton nominated Paez, but his nomination languished for four years, and he was subjected to a campaign of half-truths and cruel caricatures.

California Superior Court Judge Carolyn Kuhl, characteristic of her sense of fairness and respect for an independent judiciary, stepped up to the plate. She wrote letters, made phone calls and exhorted her fellow Republicans to confirm Paez and other Clinton nominees.

Now that President Bush has nominated Kuhl to the 9th Circuit, many of the groups that supported Paez, ironically, have turned their fire on Kuhl, apparently to exact payback against Senate Republicans. This turnabout is not fair play. It is the continuation of a vicious cycle that punishes worthy judicial candidates in a misguided effort to use the judiciary to further narrow political ends.

I generally identify myself as a Democrat, am a veteran of civil rights battles and testified against Judge Robert Bork's nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court (on the basis of his inadequate judicial temperament). Like others dedicated to the independence of our judiciary, I certainly do not want ideologues serving as judges on our federal courts. That is why I think that Kuhl would make a great addition to the 9th Circuit.

Kuhl has served for seven years on the Los Angeles County Superior Court. Before that, she and I were law partners for nine years. Kuhl is what I think of as an "old fashioned" judge. She cares about due process for everyone. In her seven years on the Superior Court, she has shown that she is careful to hear both sides. She does not try to influence the outcome of a case to favor one side or the other. She is serious about her oath to follow the law, whatever the result. Kuhl takes as her guide the words of Justice Felix Frankfurter that the highest calling of a judge is to subordinate the judge's personal views to the law.

Kuhl hardly can be described as being on "the fringe" of the Los Angeles legal community. She is the first woman to serve as the supervising judge of the civil departments of the Los Angeles Superior Court, a court system that is larger than the entire federal trial court nationwide. She served as the supervising judge of that court's very successful complex litigation program in its experimental phase.

Both the plaintiff and defense bars in Los Angeles actively support Kuhl, even though she primarily represented defendants when she practiced law. California Supreme Court Justice Carlos Moreno, more than a dozen justices of the Court of Appeal and almost 100 judges of the Superior Court (including more than 25 women) have signed letters in support of Kuhl. Many of these supporters are active Democrats. They know Kuhl and, like me, they know that she has not been, and would not be, a result-oriented judge.

Prof. Erwin Chemerinsky recently argued, in the pages of this publication, that the battle over judges that was so unfair to nominees of Clinton should continue against Bush's nominees. "Look Closely," Forum, April 17. He also takes the position that candidates for judicial office should be judged by who their clients are and what positions they took on behalf of those clients.

The Los Angeles County Bar Association strongly disagrees. In its March 28 letter to the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the County
Bar stated: "The recent trend in attacking the qualifications of judicial candidates on the basis of positions advocated on behalf of clients is misguided ... . [W]e urge that the Judiciary Committee give due consideration to those issues that are critical to assessing a nominees' qualifications - the nominees' professional abilities, intelligence, integrity, experience and judicial temperament - and not to those positions taken by nominees on behalf of their clients."

The letter explains that because of a lawyer's responsibility to explore and present all arguments that may advance a client's cause, "neither the identity of a lawyer's clients nor the zealous advocacy of their causes necessarily provides any insight into the lawyer's personal beliefs, nor do they necessarily provide any indication of how a nominee may view a particular case presented to him or her as a judge." The letter also notes that the type of personal attacks on candidates that have become common may discourage candidates from pursuing judicial nominations and discourage lawyers from taking on unpopular or controversial clients or causes.

I call on fellow members of the bar, both Democrats and Republicans, to step up to the plate to support Kuhl, just like she went to bat for Paez and other Clinton nominees. It is shameful that her generosity and dedication to an independent judiciary are being repaid with the same sort of calumny that Paez suffered. Until the politicians decide to play fair with judicial candidates, our system of justice will suffer grievously.

Vilma S. Martinez has been a partner at Munger, Tolles & Olson for 20 years.
Previously, she served as president and general counsel of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

Subject: IKK43 - Revised Commerce Report on H.R. 49 - Internet Tax Nondiscrimination Act

Good afternoon,

I just want to let you know that Treasury had a discussion with Commerce to tell them that they want Secretary Snow to be added as a signatory to the letter, and Commerce is willing to add him. Please let me know if you have a problem with this.

- hr0049bomb.wpd <>

TREASURY COMMENTS RE REVISED COMMERCE REPORT ON H.R. 49, INTERNET TAX NONDISCRIMINATION ACT

We have discussed with Commerce our interest in adding Secretary Snow as a signatory to the letter, and Commerce has indicated that they are willing to do this.

We have also discussed with Commerce the following changes to the letter. We suggest that the letter commend Rep. Cox for his efforts generally (and not just for the introduction of the bill). In addition, we would like to change "additional taxation" in the penultimate sentence in the second paragraph to "multiple or discriminatory taxation".

Good afternoon,
I just want to let you know that Treasury had a discussion with Commerce to tell them that they want Secretary Snow to be added as a signatory to the letter, and Commerce is willing to add him. Please let me know if you have a problem with this.

TREASURY COMMENTS RE REVISED COMMERCE REPORT ON H.R. 49, INTERNET TAX NONDISCRIMINATION ACT

We have discussed with Commerce our interest in adding Secretary Snow as a signatory to the letter, and Commerce has indicated that they are willing to do this.

We have also discussed with Commerce the following changes to the letter. We suggest that the letter commend Rep. Cox for his efforts generally (and not just for the introduction of the bill). In addition, we would like to change "additional taxation" in the penultimate sentence in the second paragraph to "multiple or discriminatory taxation".

JUDICIAL NOMINATION PROCESS NEEDS "A FRESH START"

- Freshmen Senators seek a bipartisan solution; ask leadership to improve process for consideration of judicial nominations -

WASHINGTON ) U.S. Sens. John Cornyn (R-Texas) and Mark Pryor (D-Ark.), joined by all freshmen Senators, urged the Senate leadership Wednesday to seek a fresh start and create a better process for the Senate's consideration of judicial nominations. Cornyn, a member of the Judiciary Committee and chairman of the Subcommittee on the Constitution, led the group of new Senators in petitioning for timely consideration of all judicial nominees.

"The Senate needs to find an end to the downward spiral of accusations, obstruction and delay," Cornyn said. "The President's nominees, and in fact our entire judicial system, deserve no less."

In the letter, the Senators wrote that, "when a well qualified nominee for the federal bench is denied a vote, the obstruction is justified on the grounds of how a prior nominee -- typically, the nominees of a previous President -- was treated. All of these recriminations, made by members on both sides of the aisle, relate to circumstances which occurred before any of us arrived in the United States Senate."

The letter continued: "None of us were parties to any of the reported past offenses, whether real or perceived. None of us believe that the ill will of the past should dictate the terms and direction of the future."

Rather than continue the obstruction that has plagued nominees in the past, the ten Senators committed themselves to solutions for all nominees.
"We seek a bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees, and leave the bitterness of the past behind us."

The letter was sent to Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist of Tennessee, and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle. It was signed by Sens. Cornyn, Pryor, Lamar Alexander (R-Tenn.), Saxby Chambliss (R-Ga), Norm Coleman (R-Minn.),

Elizabeth Dole (R-NC), Lindsey Graham (R-SC), Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska), John Sununu (R-NH), and Jim Talent (R-Mo). Also copied on the letter were Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) and the panel's senior Democrat, Patrick Leahy (D-Vt).

Sen. Cornyn will hold a hearing of the Constitution subcommittee on May 6 to discuss reform of the broken judicial process. The hearing, titled Judicial Nominations, Filibusters, and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent, will be held in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, Room 226 at 2 p.m. The hearing will take place nearly two years after the President announced his first class of nominees to the federal courts of appeals, including Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen. Her nomination is currently being filibustered in the Senate.

Sen. Cornyn chairs the subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights & Property Rights, and is the only former judge on the committee. He also serves on the Armed Services, Environment and Public Works, and Budget Committees. He served previously as Texas Attorney General, Texas Supreme Court Justice, and Bexar County District Judge.

Nominee Doesn't Deserve Calumny Heaped on Her

By Vilma S. Martinez

As a member of Sen. Barbara Boxer's judicial screening committee during the Clinton administration, I was proud to recommend Judge Richard Paez for the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. President Clinton nominated Paez, but his nomination languished for four years, and he was subjected to a campaign of half-truths and cruel caricatures.

California Superior Court Judge Carolyn Kuhl, characteristic of her sense of fairness and respect for an independent judiciary, stepped up to the plate. She wrote letters, made phone calls and exhorted her fellow Republicans to confirm Paez and other Clinton nominees.

Now that President Bush has nominated Kuhl to the 9th Circuit, many of the groups that supported Paez, ironically, have turned their fire on Kuhl, apparently to exact payback against Senate Republicans. This turnabout is not fair play. It is the continuation of a vicious cycle that punishes worthy judicial candidates in a misguided effort to use the judiciary to further narrow political ends.

I generally identify myself as a Democrat, am a veteran of civil rights battles and testified against Judge Robert Bork's nomination to the U.S. Supreme Court (on the basis of his inadequate judicial temperament). Like others dedicated to the independence of our judiciary, I certainly do not want ideologues serving as judges on our federal courts. That is why I think that Kuhl would make a great addition to the 9th Circuit.

Kuhl has served for seven years on the Los Angeles County Superior Court. Before that, she and I were law partners for nine years. Kuhl is what I think of as an "old fashioned" judge. She cares about due process for everyone. In her seven years on the Superior Court, she has shown that she is careful to hear both sides. She does not try to influence the outcome of a case to favor one side or the other. She is serious about her oath to follow the law, whatever the result. Kuhl takes as her guide the words of Justice Felix Frankfurter that the highest calling of a judge is to subordinate the judge's personal views to the law.

Kuhl hardly can be described as being on "the fringe" of the Los Angeles legal community. She is the first woman to serve as the supervising judge of the civil departments of the Los Angeles Superior Court, a court system that is larger than the entire federal trial court nationwide. She served as the supervising judge of that court's very successful complex litigation program in its experimental phase.

Both the plaintiff and defense bars in Los Angeles actively support Kuhl, even though she primarily represented defendants when she practiced law. California Supreme Court Justice Carlos Moreno, more than a dozen justices of the Court of Appeal and almost 100 judges of the Superior Court (including more than 25 women) have signed letters in support of Kuhl. Many of these supporters are active Democrats. They know Kuhl and, like me, they know that she has not been, and would not be, a result-oriented judge.

Kuhl is what I think of as an 'old fashioned' judge. She cares about due process for everyone.

Prof. Erwin Chemerinsky recently argued, in the pages of this publication, that the battle over judges that was so unfair to nominees of Clinton should continue against Bush's nominees. "Look Closely," Forum, April 17. He also takes the position that candidates for judicial office should be judged by who their clients are and what positions they took on behalf of those clients.

The Los Angeles County Bar Association strongly disagrees. In its March 28 letter to the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the County Bar stated: "The recent trend in attacking the qualifications of judicial candidates on the basis of positions advocated on behalf of clients is misguided .... [W]e urge that the Judiciary Committee give due consideration to those issues that are critical to assessing a nominees' qualifications — the nominees' professional abilities, intelligence, integrity, experience and judicial temperament — and not to those positions taken by nominees on behalf of their clients."

The letter explains that because of a lawyer's responsibility to explore and present all arguments that may advance a client's cause, "neither the identity of a lawyer's clients nor the zealous advocacy of their causes necessarily provides any insight into the lawyer's personal beliefs, nor do they necessarily provide any indication of how a nominee may view a particular case presented to him or her as a judge." The letter also notes that the type of personal attacks on candidates that have become common may discourage candidates from pursuing judicial nominations and discourage lawyers from taking on unpopular or controversial clients or causes.

I call on fellow members of the bar, both Democrats and Republicans, to step up to the plate to support Kuhl, just like she went to bat for Paez and other Clinton nominees. It is shameful that her generosity and dedication to an independent judiciary are being repaid with the same sort of calumny that Paez suffered. Until the politicians decide to play fair with judicial candidates, our system of justice will suffer grievously.

 High Priority **

Brett, thank you for your email of yesterday in response to my voice message, informing us that you will extend the time line under section 6 of EO 13233 only as long as necessary for DOJ to complete review on this case. Since our notice to you of April 11, 2003, runs on this Friday, May 2, an extension will be necessary.

As you recall, the Clinton rep. has already signed off on the release. Caroline Wolverton of DOJ federal programs (who I'm cc'ing on this email) has been reviewing the records (approximately 5000 pages). As we understand it, she intends to assert litigation privileges over a good bit of the material, and will begin working on the privilege log shortly, but it will not be ready by this Friday, May 2.

Caroline believes she can finish all the review, including producing the privilege log, within two weeks (let's say Friday, May 16). She also believes that by this Friday, May 2, she can have ready for your review, if necessary, all the material over which she does not intend to assert privilege.

So, do you actually want to review what she is proposing to release, or are you willing to defer to DOJ's decision?

The same question goes to the privilege log: do you want to review it, and/or the records, or simply refer to DOJ? If you do want to review the withheld records, then you need to add whatever amount of time you will need for your own review in setting a new timeline (which also needs to include time to make copies).

Please let us know how you want to proceed and how much time you need in total. Thanks.

Rather than continue the obstruction that has plagued nominees in the past, the ten Senators committed themselves to solutions for all nominees. "We seek a bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees, and leave the bitterness of the past behind us."

The letter was sent to Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist of Tennessee, and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle. It was signed by Sens. Cornyn, Pryor, Lamar Alexander (R-Tenn.), Saxby Chambliss (R-Ga), Norm Coleman (R-Minn.), Elizabeth Dole (R-NC), Lindsey Graham (R-SC), Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska), John Sununu (R-NH), and Jim Talent (R-Mo). Also copied on the letter were Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) and the panel's senior Democrat, Patrick Leahy (D-Vt).

Sen. Cornyn will hold a hearing of the Constitution subcommittee on May 6 to discuss reform of the broken judicial process. The hearing, titled Judicial Nominations, Filibusters, and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent, will be held in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, Room 226 at 2 p.m. The hearing will take place nearly two years after the President announced his first class of nominees to the federal courts of appeals, including Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen. Her nomination is currently being filibustered in the Senate.

Sen. Cornyn chairs the subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights & Property Rights, and is the only former judge on the committee. He also serves on the Armed Services, Environment and Public Works, and Budget Committees. He served previously as Texas Attorney General, Texas Supreme Court Justice, and Bexar County District Judge.

JUDICIAL NOMINATION PROCESS NEEDS "A FRESH START"

- Freshmen Senators seek a bipartisan solution: ask leadership to improve process for consideration of judicial nominations -

WASHINGTON – U.S. Sens. John Cornyn (R-Texas) and Mark Pryor (D-Ark.), joined by all freshmen Senators, urged the Senate leadership Wednesday to seek a fresh start and create a better process for the Senate's consideration of judicial nominations. Cornyn, a member of the Judiciary Committee and chairman of the Subcommittee on the Constitution, led the group of new Senators in petitioning for timely consideration of all judicial nominees.

"The Senate needs to find an end to the downward spiral of accusations, obstruction and delay," Cornyn said. "The President's nominees, and in fact our entire judicial system, deserve no less."

In the letter, the Senators wrote that, "when a well qualified nominee for the federal bench is denied a vote, the obstruction is justified on the grounds of how a prior nominee -- typically, the nominees of a previous President -- was treated. All of these recriminations, made by members on both sides of the aisle, relate to circumstances which occurred before any of us arrived in the United States Senate."

The letter continued: "None of us were parties to any of the reported past offenses, whether real or perceived. None of us believe that the ill will of the past should dictate the terms and direction of the future."

Rather than continue the obstruction that has plagued nominees in the past, the ten Senators committed themselves to solutions for all nominees. "We seek a bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees, and leave the bitterness of the past behind us."

The letter was sent to Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist of Tennessee, and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle. It was signed by Sens. Cornyn, Pryor, Lamar Alexander (R-Tenn.), Saxby Chambliss (R-Ga), Norm Coleman (R-Minn.), Elizabeth Dole (R-NC), Lindsey Graham (R-SC), Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska), John Sununu (R-NH), and Jim Talent (R-Mo). Also copied on the letter were Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) and the panel's senior Democrat, Patrick Leahy (D-Vt).

Sen. Cornyn will hold a hearing of the Constitution subcommittee on May 6 to discuss reform of the broken judicial process. The hearing, titled Judicial Nominations, Filibusters, and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent, will be held in the Dirksen Senate Office Building, Room 226 at 2 p.m. The hearing will take place nearly two years after the President announced his first class of nominees to the federal courts of appeals, including Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen. Her nomination is currently being filibustered in the Senate.

Sen. Cornyn chairs the subcommittee on the Constitution, Civil Rights & Property Rights, and is the only former judge on the committee. He also serves on the Armed Services, Environment and Public Works, and Budget Committees. He served previously as Texas Attorney General, Texas Supreme Court Justice, and Bexar County District Judge.

Brett -- my heart is with you, but my head is not. The text of the Constitution is, to me, plain as day. I think it would be an absolute loser as a legal matter to argue that there is a constitutionally-implied time limit of "reasonableness" on how long the Senate can take in deciding whether to consent or not, or that there is a constitutional duty to someday have an up or down vote on a nominee. I think it is, however, a political winner, and I think we are perfectly within our rights to castigate the Senate for having taken far longer than any reasonable amount of time to consider our judge noms, and that it is downright cowardly to refuse to have up-or-down recorded votes on our noms. I just think we need to be precise in our distinction between "unconstitutional" and "outrageous," which are two different things -- and what the Senate is doing to our noms is the latter, but not the former.

By JESSE J. HOLLAND
The Associated Press
Thursday, May 1, 2003; 11:21 AM
WASHINGTON - Senate Democrats on Thursday blocked Texas Judge Priscilla Owen from being confirmed to the U.S. Appeals Court, the second time they've thwarted President Bush and majority Republicans in a confrontation over federal judgeships.
GOP senators were not able to get the 60 votes they needed to break the filibuster on Owen, a home-state favorite of the president who has been nominated to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. Their attempt to break the Democratic filibuster failed, 52-44.
The vote broke down along mostly party lines, with independent Sen. Jim Jeffords of Vermont voting with the Democrats and two Democrats - Sens. Zell Miller of Georgia and Ben Nelson of Nebraska -voting with the GOP. Four senators did not vote: Democrats Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, Joe Lieberman of Connecticut, Bob Graham of Florida and Republican James Inhofe of Oklahoma.
Republicans say Owen is more than qualified for the appellate bench and that Democrats misrepresented her positions and demonized her when they rejected her nomination last year when they controlled the Senate.
"I think that Justice Owen has been put in the political meat grinder in Washington, D.C.," said Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchinson, R-Texas.
But Democrats complain that Owen, who sits on the Texas Supreme Court, is an anti-abortion, pro-business judicial activist whose opinions and rulings are overly influenced by her personal beliefs. Bush forced them into this new filibuster by sending her name back for confirmation, they said.

"We are here because the president has picked another fight with the United States Senate by renominating a divisive and controversial activist to another circuit court, and that's regrettable," said Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the top Democrat on the Senate Judiciary Committee.
Democrats say they have more than enough votes in their 48-member caucus to keep Owen bottled up in the Senate for months to come.
"She seems to want to make law to fit her own ideological preconception rather than follow the law as written," said Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.
A successful filibuster on Owen for Democrats will mean that simultaneous filibusters will be going against Owen and Hispanic lawyer Miguel Estrada, nominated to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. It will be the first time two official filibusters against judicial nominees have occurred simultaneously in the Senate.
Republicans have lost four attempts to break the Estrada filibuster. If they're successful on Owen, Democrats say they're prepared to have three or even more judicial filibusters going simultaneously.
Democrats have threatened all year to filibuster against the nomination of U.S. District Judge Charles Pickering of Mississippi to the 5th Circuit.
"I think Pickering will have a very rough time," Schumer said. "And I think they'll be more" filibusters.
Schumer said another possible target could be California Judge Carolyn Kuhl, a former Reagan administration lawyer nominated to the San Francisco-based 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.
The Senate Judiciary Committee vote will indicate whether Democrats will try to filibuster a nominee, Schumer said. The committee has 10 Republicans and nine Democrats.
"If we don't get nine votes against them in the Judiciary Committee, it will be a difficult thing to hold it up on the floor of the Senate," said Schumer, who sits on the Senate Judiciary Committee. "That's our rule of thumb."
Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas, says he will hold hearings in his Senate Judiciary subcommittee in May to try to resolve the Senate logjam. Cornyn personally would prefer to ban filibusters and holds on judicial nominees.
"The Senate needs to find an end to the downward spiral of accusations, obstruction and delay," said Cornyn, who put together a letter from all 10 Senate freshmen calling for quicker confirmation of judges.
Schumer suggested setting up bipartisan nomination commissions in each state that would recommend a judicial candidate to the president for each empty judgeship. "It's our best hope for breaking the vicious cycle," Schumer said.

KEY POINTS FROM THE PRESIDENT'S REMARKS FROM USS LINCOLN, 5/1/03***

*Major combat operations in Iraq have ended. Our coalition is now engaged in securing and reconstructing that country. The United States and our allies have prevailed, and because of this our nation and the Middle East are more secure, a tyrant has fallen and Iraq is now free.

*The credit for our military's success goes to the men and women who went in harm's way. The gratitude of our nation goes to:
-The men and women of our military, particularly those who made the ultimate sacrifice for the country
-The commanders - especially Secretary Rumsfeld and General Tommy Franks
-Our coalition partners - particularly the Armed Forces of the UK, Australia, and Poland.

*Our 21st Century military carried out Operation Iraqi Freedom with a combination of speed, precision and boldness the enemy did not expect, and the world had not seen. With new tactics and precision weapons, coalition forces demonstrated that we can achieve military objectives while directing violence away from civilians.

*Difficult work lies ahead in Iraq:
-Bringing order and security to parts that remain dangerous
-Bringing to justice the leaders of and those who are loyal to the old regime
-Locating hidden chemical and biological weapons
-Rebuilding Iraq's infrastructure after 30 years of devastation
-Standing by the Iraqi people as they establish a government of, by and for the Iraqi people

*The Battle of Iraq is one victory in the broader war on terror that began on September 11th, 2001, and still goes on. The President detailed progress made in the war on terror and reaffirmed America's commitment to defending our homeland and hunting down terrorists before they can strike.

*America has a tradition of spreading liberty throughout the world. Our country is committed to freedom in Afghanistan, in Iraq, and in a peaceful Palestine. We make this commitment because the advance of freedom is the surest strategy to undermine the appeal of terror in the world.

"In the images of celebrating Iraqis, we have...seen the ageless appeal of human freedom. Decades of lies and intimidation could not make the Iraqi people love their oppressors or desire their own enslavement.

"Men and women in every culture need liberty like they need food, and water, and air. Everywhere that freedom arrives, humanity rejoices. And everywhere that freedom stirs, let tyrants fear."

GOP Frustrated by Dem Filibusters May Sue

By JESSE J. HOLLAND, Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - Stymied now on two of President Bush's judicial nominees, Republicans are considering an attempt to change Senate rules or suing to ban judicial filibusters, even against long odds.

"It certainly could be taken to court," Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., said after Democrats on Thursday successfully blocked Texas Judge Priscilla Owen from getting a federal appeals court seat.

The discussions reflect frustration among majority Republicans that Democrats have been able to sidestep Bush's popularity and undermine one of his platforms: putting more conservatives in key judgeships.

Bush called the Owen filibuster "shameful" and "unfair to this good woman and unfaithful to the Senate's own obligations."

"The Senate has a constitutional responsibility to exercise its advice and consent function and hold up or down votes on all judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination," he said in a statement.

Democrats are filibustering two nominees * Owen and Hispanic lawyer Miguel Estrada * and have promised more if divisive Bush nominees come to the Senate floor. It takes 60 votes to break a filibuster and Democrats showed Thursday with a 52-44 vote that they had a solid enough bloc to keep Owen off the bench. They say they will win again on Monday when Republicans try for the fifth time to force Estrada through.

"History will look kindly on us for doing so," said Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., "because never has a president of the United States been more ideological in his selection of judges."

The White House, GOP senators and advocates aides have been saying for months that they think filibustering judicial nominees is unconstitutional, but to test that theory someone would have to sue.

Republicans admit that they've thought about it. "One option that has been floated is the idea of a lawsuit," said Sen. John Cornyn, R-Texas on Wednesday.

Frist said he didn't know whether a lawsuit would be the right way to go.

"I can't predict whether that will be done or not, but ultimately I think the United States Senate will decide for itself" how to solve the problem, he told reporters.

Some observers say resorting to a lawsuit to ban filibusters would be futile.

"Even the thought that the courts would get involved in Senate business is mind-boggling," said Sheldon Goldman, a political science professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst who studies the federal appellate nomination process. "If this isn't a separation of powers issue, what is?"

Cornyn, a former Texas judge himself, agreed. "Another branch of the government * the judiciary * cannot come in and tell Congress how it must function."

Frist and other Republicans are also looking at changing the Senate rules to eliminate filibusters of judicial nominees.

Cornyn's Senate Judiciary subcommittee plans a whole hearing next week called "Judicial Nominations, Filibusters, and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent" to explore the issue and plans to change the nomination process.

"If filibusters are going to be made part of the judicial nominee process, I think you will see increasing discussion over whether the rules should be changed," Frist said.

The fact that the GOP's November takeover of the Senate has not made it any easier for Bush's appellate nominees to get confirmed only stokes Republican fury.

Democrats last year voted down Owen and Mississippi Judge Charles Pickering in committee and didn't hold hearings for others. The U.S. Appeals Courts are some of the most important courts in America, one step below the Supreme Court and deciding most of the nation's law.

Senate Judiciary Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah * who is on the front line of the judicial battles * finally boiled over a Wednesday hearing. Schumer was strongly questioning appellate nominee John Roberts at his second hearing for his nomination for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, when Hatch finally tired of the questions.

"Some I totally disagree with," Hatch said. "Some I think are dumb ... questions, between you and me. I am not kidding you. I mean, as much as I love and respect you, I just think that's true."

Unfortunately, they don't do it as often as we'd like. We've always asked that they update the info nightly. Instead it gets updated 2 - 3 times per week. If you guys can make them do it more quickly, have at it. I can't. Katja is the contact.

ok, if we can move tours to afternoon, we would be v. appreciative. From our perspective, this is a fairly significant event and particularly so for the Senators and bipartisan bar leaders in attendance, as well as being a very important event to convey the public message on the unprecedented Senate filibusters on Owen and Estrada (and important to set the stage on Senate process for the possible Supreme Court vacancy we could have in June). And 450 is obviously not nearly as good. Thanks!

We would, but as I am sure you are aware, the state floor opens up to tours next week. Having this event in the east room would mean cancelling tours (which is why you are ccing colleen, I assume). The president has an afternoon commencement that day and therefore we cannot move this event to the afternoon. The only 2 solutions I see are:
Move the event to another date (I know this is the anniversary)
Or
Move tours to the afternoon that day

Colleen - can you let us know if that is possible?
Thanks! And sorry for all of this brett!

Can we have East Room as backup for the Judges event in case of rain. Is that possible? We used East Room on May 9, 2001, for original judges event and on October 30, 2002 for other major judges event. And we have about 250 folks coming, including about 10 Senators, ABA President, etc. Thanks.

Brett/Nanette:

Per Brian's e-mail below, he hopes that you will both be able to speak to the regional appointees on May 20th at 1:30pm in EEOB 450. It would be a 30 min. session with Brett speaking for 15 min. on the Hatch Act, and Nanette for 15 min. on Ethics. Does this time work in your schedules??

Thank you!!

Subject: Regional Appointees Conference

David/Brett:

The Offices of Cabinet Affairs, Presidential Personnel, Intergovernmental Affairs, Political Affairs, and the Council for Excellence in Government are together sponsoring a two-day conference entitled "Regional Appointees: Challenges and Opportunities," scheduled for May 19-20, 2003 in Washington, DC.

This conference will be the first of its kind during this Administration and will include regional appointees from several Cabinet and sub-Cabinet agencies such as Education, Interior, Labor, EPA, HHS, FEMA,;GSA, HUD and SBA. It will be held at;the nearby Mayflower Hotel, with several sessions taking place;in Room 450 EEOB.

Given your office's stake in such an event, we want to involve you in the conference's program workshops and plenary sessions. In working with the agencies, we have identified roughly 85 regional political appointees that we;have invited to attend the conference.;;Other local agency personnel, including inter-governmental affairs staff, will also be invited.

The purpose of the conference is to better engage our regional appointees as representatives of the President around the country and to give them a chance to meet and hear from senior White House officials and agency leaders. Sessions will focus on a variety of vital issues including:

ú Management Results / President's Management Team

ú Building Support for the President's Agenda

ú Freedom Corps / Faith-Based Initiatives

ú Hatch Act / Ethics

ú Policy Perspectives

ú Homeland Security

ú Working Together for Greater Regional Impact

ú Legislative Update

ú Foreign Policy Update

We have tentatively scheduled your;presentation for Tuesday afternoon, May 20 in Room 450 EEOB (exact time is TBD).; We would hope you could;discuss your insights on;the Hatch Act and ethics in government.;;We would also hope you could join us for a reception to be held later that evening.

We would greatly appreciate your participation, and I know that the Regional Appointees would appreciate hearing from you and will be happy to take your perspectives back with them to their respective regions. Please;feel free to contact me should you have additional questions or you may have your assistant contact Christie Parell (6-2343); to confirm your;availability.;

Many thanks in advance,

Brian Montgomery

Dear /SALUTATION/,

This letters serves as a reminder of the upcoming Ohio Republican Party Executive Finance Committee Meeting on Thursday, May 22nd at the Columbus Club. You are among an elite group of strong Republican supporters invited to attend as we discuss the needs and challenges facing the Ohio Republican Party as we prepare for the 2004 Presidential Election.

Knowing that Ohio is a key battleground state, Ohio's 20 electoral votes will prove pivotal because it's a fact of political life that no Democrat can win the White House without carrying Ohio. That is why we must prepare right now.

Along with Chairman Bob Bennett, Finance Chairman Jim Dicke and myself, ~~Director of Strategic Initiatives for the White House~~ Barry Jackson – a longtime political advisor to both the state of Ohio and to George W. Bush - will be in attendance.

Karl Rove is expected to address the meeting via phone and Speaker Larry Householder and Senate President Doug White have been invited to present a legislative briefing. Statewide office holders have been invited to attend the dinner following the meeting.

I hope you will join me for this very important meeting. Please confirm your attendance with Annie Gardecki at (614) 228.2481 by May 16th.

Sincerely,

Governor Bob Taft

The Men Who Won the War
By Jim Lacey

Historian Stephen Ambrose said of the American soldier: "When soldiers from any other army, even our allies, entered a town, the people hid in the cellars. When Americans came in, even into German towns, it meant smiles, chocolate bars and C-rations." Ours has always been an army like no other, because our soldiers reflect a society unlike any other. Medics report that the Iraqi wounded they treated were astounded by our compassion. They expected they would be left to suffer or die. I witnessed Iraqi paramilitary troops using women and children as human shields, turning grade schools into fortresses, and defiling their own holy sites. Time and again, I saw Americans taking unnecessary risks to clear buildings without firing or using grenades, because it might injure civilians. I stood in awe as 19-year-olds refused to return enemy fire because it was coming from a mosque.

A Little Patience, Please
By David Pryce-Jones

Since the days of the British, every previous change of regime in Iraq has involved mayhem and murder. Nothing of the kind has occurred so far in Iraq. Under Saddam Hussein, Arabs massacred Kurds and drove them out of Mosul and Kirkuk, stealing their homes and property. Reclaiming what is rightfully theirs, the Kurds have not killed those who so maltreated them. In Basra, the mob caught a notorious secret-police chief; they did not lynch him as they might have, but handed him over to the British. The families of victims are often able to name and identify the Ba'athist secret policemen and torturers who committed crimes against them. Many of them expressed their feelings by looting whatever of the former regime's real or symbolic property was within reach, but they have not taken the law into their own hands in revenge killings. That is remarkable, and grounds for hope.

The View from Pluto
By Jeffrey Gedmin

Historian Arnulf Baring once wrote that the overwhelmingly positive view that Americans have of Germany stems from the fact that tens of thousands of servicemen and their families over the years have visited castles, enjoyed bratwurst, and cruised happily down the Rhine. If more had been able to read the editorial pages they might have had a different view. Americans probably underestimated Germany's frustration at having to play a subordinate role during the Cold War. The rest of Western Europe was dependent on us, too, but the divided, emasculated Germans probably felt it--and resented it--more than most. Today, they're tired of playing second fiddle. The Christian Democrats' foreign-policy spokesman, Karl Lamers, rejected missile defense several years ago on the grounds that it would make the Americans "masters of the universe." A television poll before the Iraq war asked Germans whether they should "give in" to the Americans over Iraq--a whopping 80 percent said no.

He, Gary Hart
By John J. Miller

The 66-year-old Hart never dropped totally out of sight. Since quitting elective office, he's written eight books, including three novels. He also completed a Ph.D. in philosophy at Oxford. The most important piece of his rehabilitation, however, came in 1998, when Bill Clinton appointed him co-chairman of the U.S. Commission on National Security/21st Century. Since the terrorist strikes, Hart has been a regular fixture on the cable-news talk shows, posing as an elder statesman and a prophet of the dangers to come. But how well does he fill this role? There can be no doubt that Gary Hart is an intelligent man. Yet he also confirms the saying that bright minds don't make little mistakes--they make huge ones, and sometimes many of them. Throughout his career, Hart has demonstrated nothing so much as an exquisite talent for big blunders. He's kept on doing it right through the recent war with Iraq.

Fighting AIDS Right
By Ramesh Ponnuru

Instead of focusing exclusively on the encouragement of condom use, Uganda and a few other countries have emphasized abstinence and monogamy. As Rod Dreher has reported in <I>NR</I>, that approach has dramatically reduced the spread of the disease. Respected academics believe that this success could be replicated in other countries--if so, it would be compassionate conservatism at its best. But social-conservative objections have grown as the president's proposal has taken legislative form. The bill that came out of the House International Relations Committee, which is scheduled to be debated on the House floor in early May, does not explicitly direct funds toward the promotion of abstinence and fidelity. Conservatives fear that without clear congressional guidance to that effect, the foreign-aid bureaucracy will just use the money on condoms. Michael Schwartz, a vice president of Concerned Women for America, says, "Anybody who thinks that there's any hope for the Uganda model under those circumstances is an extreme optimist."

Death Becomes Them

By Theodore Dalrymple

There has clearly been a change in the sensibility of the Chinese themselves. After a couple of decades of frantic economic growth, probably unequalled in the annals of history, the Chinese are no longer content to be, nor can be cowed into being, blue-clad workers in a hive, expected to place no special value on their own individual lives. Growing consumerism has taught them that what they want counts. No longer units in an army of forced labor, and moreover increasingly in possession of the means to exchange information--and misinformation, and rumor--that the government can no longer control, they are now given to panic when their individual existence seems to be threatened. Peking has been turned into a ghost city by a mere 39 deaths (let us multiply and call it 390), when only a few years ago a million deaths would have made as little impact on it as a stone on a pond.

An Army of Jessicas
By Kate O'Beirne

The successful integration of combat demands that men and women be treated exactly alike in the face of physical threats--but it was actually Lynch's particular vulnerability that prompted a chivalrous response from the Iraqi lawyer who was moved to help when he saw her being slapped by one of her captors. "Don't worry," Mohammed whispered to Lynch, before he walked six miles to find a U.S. Marine patrol to alert. We can all be grateful that Mohammed hadn't been trained in current notions of gender equality in the modern military, where male chivalry is seen as a risk to national security. At the military's survival, evasion, resistance, and escape (SERE) schools, concern about the well-being of women was so prevalent among male students that trainers now work to desensitize men to sexual assault and other enemy abuse of women.

The Reluctant Empire
By John O'Sullivan

The U.S. is, of course, militarily stronger than any previous power, whether imperial or national. It also has a greater share of the world's productive capacity than any previous "hegemon." And its dominance in everything from technology to popular culture dwarfs the combined efforts of most other major nations. But this does not necessarily make the U.S. an imperialist power--merely a dominant one. Nor are America's major allies, such as Britain and France, subordinate to its policies in anything like an imperial sense, though they may naturally choose to support the U.S. for their own interests. The U.S. can't even impose the commercial free-trade orthodoxy of the "Washington consensus" on countries in economic difficulties, unless the countries' own finance ministers judge that they have more to gain from the IMF's loans than from following a protectionist course. Malaysia's leader demonstrated this by rejecting the IMF's orthodox medicine and following his own unorthodox one. (He has done better than expected.)

We would, but as I am sure you are aware, the state floor opens up to tours next week. Having this event in the east room would mean cancelling tours (which is why you are ccing colleen, I assume). The president has an afternoon commencement that day and therefore we cannot move this event to the afternoon. The only 2 solutions I see are:

Move the event to another date (I know this is the anniversary)
Or
Move tours to the afternoon that day

Colleen - can you let us know if that is possible?
Thanks! And sorry for all of this brett!

Brett, thank you for your email of yesterday in response to my voice message, informing us that you will extend the time line under section 6 of EO 13233 only as long as necessary for DOJ to complete review on this case. Since our notice to you of April 11, 2003, runs on this Friday, May 2, an extension will be necessary.

As you recall, the Clinton rep. has already signed off on the release. Caroline Wolverton of DOJ federal programs (who I'm cc'ing on this email) has been reviewing the records (approximately 5000 pages). As we understand it, she intends to assert litigation privileges over a good bit of the material, and will begin working on the privilege log shortly, but it will not be ready by this Friday, May 2.

Caroline believes she can finish all the review, including producing the privilege log, within two weeks (let's say Friday, May 16). She also believes that by this Friday, May 2, she can have ready for your review, if necessary, all the material over which she does not intend to assert privilege.

So, do you actually want to review what she is proposing to release, or are you willing to defer to DOJ's decision?

The same question goes to the privilege log: do you want to review it, and/or the records, or simply refer to DOJ? If you do want to review the withheld records, then you need to add whatever amount of time you will need for your own review in setting a new timeline (which also needs to include time to make copies).

Please let us know how you want to proceed and how much time you need in total. Thanks.

The court just called. The opinion will be available for the parties on CD-ROM at 3:30. It's being announced to the press at 3:45. I was informed that the court's opinion is 1,600 pages long. I am not kidding.

I will go to the courthouse now and pick it up. (Anyone in Fed Programs who wants to join me is welcome.) We in Fed Programs will get the opinion distributed electronically and in hard copy as fast as we absolutely can.

David/Brett:

The Offices of Cabinet Affairs, Presidential Personnel, Intergovernmental Affairs, Political Affairs, and the Council for Excellence in Government are together sponsoring a two-day conference entitled "Regional Appointees: Challenges and Opportunities," scheduled for May 19-20, 2003 in Washington, DC.

This conference will be the first of its kind during this Administration and will include regional appointees from several Cabinet and sub-Cabinet agencies such as Education, Interior, Labor, EPA, HHS, FEMA,;GSA, HUD and SBA. It will be held at;the nearby Mayflower Hotel, with several sessions taking place;in Room 450 EEOB.

Given your office's stake in such an event, we want to involve you in the conference's program workshops and plenary sessions. In working with the agencies, we have identified roughly 85 regional political appointees that we;have invited to attend the conference.;;Other local agency personnel, including inter-governmental affairs staff, will also be invited.

The purpose of the conference is to better engage our regional appointees as representatives of the President around the country and to give them a chance to meet and hear from senior White House officials and agency leaders. Sessions will focus on a variety of vital issues including:

ú Management Results / President's Management Team

ú Building Support for the President's Agenda

ú Freedom Corps / Faith-Based Initiatives

ú Hatch Act / Ethics

ú Policy Perspectives

ú Homeland Security

ú Working Together for Greater Regional Impact

ú Legislative Update

ú Foreign Policy Update

We have tentatively scheduled your;presentation for Tuesday afternoon, May 20 in Room 450 EEOB (exact time is TBD).; We would hope you could;discuss your insights on;the Hatch Act and ethics in government.;;We would also hope you could join us for a reception to be held later that evening.

We would greatly appreciate your participation, and I know that the Regional Appointees would appreciate hearing from you and will be happy to take your perspectives back with them to their respective regions. Please;feel free to contact me should you have additional questions or you may have your assistant contact Christie Parell (6-2343); to confirm your;availability.;

Many thanks in advance,

Brian Montgomery

I think for now, our position is that we are generally not sympathetic to the goal, which is getting more money for the States in the growth bill.

Obviously, we need to see what this does for growth bill, which is the key objective.

But for now, we should certainly lie very low.

still digesting, but not many surprises -- and, more important, all pretty academic and irrelevant since Supreme Court Justices will not really care what these 3 judges said. On procedure, contrary to what some commentators said in papers today, I think Court will get on this quickly and hear and decide this over summer and early fall rather than waiting until next fall to tackle. Will be interesting to get Clement's take on that point.

Subject: from a web blog about Supreme Court confirmation process and this case

What if there are retirements on the Supreme Court? I have written about this frequently. The court is highly divided on these campaign finance issues. What if C.J. Rehnquist retires (a reliable vote for the existing Buckley framework), and no replacement is put in place because of the judicial confirmations stalemate in the Senate? Might we have the lower court opinion upheld in its entirety, because of a 4-4 split on the Supreme Court? It is not entirely fanciful to think so.

Law firms in tobacco suit seek $1.2b more
Move against Bay State rankles legal community
By Frank Phillips, Globe Staff, 5/4/2003
s Beacon Hill grapples with a fiscal crisis, the lawyers who worked on the state's lawsuit against the tobacco industry are demanding the state now pay them an additional $1.25 billion in legal fees.
In recent court filings, four law firms, led by Brown Rudnick Berlack Israels of Boston, asked a Superior Court judge to enforce a contract that called for the lawyers to be given 25 percent of whatever proceeds Massachusetts received in the case.
The $1.25 billion would be on top of the record $775 million the law firms were awarded in 1998, when a national settlement was reached between the tobacco industry and 46 states that had filed suit.
The lawyers' push to obtain more of the tobacco funds has roiled the legal community in Massachusetts and nationally, with some worrying that the case will reinforce an image of avarice that dogs trial lawyers. It comes at a dire time for the state, which is facing a $3 billion deficit next year.
The Brown Rudnick case is the only challenge by law firms that worked on the landmark multistate litigation against the tobacco industry. Other lawyers from around the country either accepted whatever fees they received in the 1998 settlement or have since reached agreement with their client states on what they will be paid.
The court has set a May 30 hearing date on the Brown Rudnick motion.
James Tierney, a former Maine attorney general who worked closely with the nation's attorneys general on the national settlement, said Brown Rudnick and the other firms have ''isolated themselves from the thinking community, at least those who think about the tobacco settlement.''
Tierney said none of the other law firms involved received fees as high as 25 percent for their work on the litigation.
''It is just wrong,'' Tierney said. ''They should be ashamed of themselves. They have no friends in the legal community, nor should they. This is completely outside the spirit of what this case was about. It was about bringing the tobacco industry to justice.''
In the mid-1990s, Massachusetts became one of the first states to file suit against the major cigarette makers - a pioneering effort to force the industry to pay for smoking-related health costs that states incurred through Medicaid. The states turned to private firms to help them with the complex case. The litigation was considered a long shot at the time, but eventually, almost every state in the country joined the effort.
After the lawsuits forced damaging disclosures of internal company documents, the tobacco industry decided to settle.
Under the multistate settlement, the industry agreed to pay the states $246 billion over 25 years, including $8.3 billion to Massachusetts.

The industry and states agreed that a special arbitration panel would decide the fees due to the private lawyers who assisted the states' efforts. That panel gave the lawyers who led the Massachusetts case $775 million, to be paid directly by the tobacco industry, also over 25 years.
But the firms say that is not enough. In addition to Brown Rudnick, the other law firms demanding the higher fees include San Francisco-based Lieff Cabraser Heimann; Bernstein, Ness, Motley, Loadholt, Richardson & Poole of South Carolina; and Thornton & Naumes of Boston. A fifth firm involved in the original case has not joined the suit.
R. Robert Popeo, the Boston lawyer hired by Brown Rudnick and Leiff Cabraser to seek enforcement of the contract, argues that the issue is a matter of contractual law, with the state government's integrity at stake. The lawyers took a huge risk, he said, investing more than $10 million of their own money and pursuing a case that most law firms wouldn't touch.
''If the state is permitted to walk away from this contractual obligation, then it can walk away from any contractual obligation,'' said Popeo, a partner at Mintz Levin Cohn Ferris Glovsky and Popeo. ''The integrity of the state's ability to contract will be permanently injured.''
Popeo compared the law firms' decision to take on the case to an extremely high-risk business venture. ''This is risk-based money. It is no different than a venture capital project.''
Popeo dismissed concerns by some in the legal comm unity that the law firms are being greedy and that the case, if successful, would deny the fiscally strapped state the ability to provide funding for its human services programs.
''Why is it greed to go out and do your job for the state and do it successfully, and then simply try to get what you contracted for?'' he said.
But Attorney General Thomas Reilly, who is fighting the law firms' demand, says there is a moral, as well as legal, dimension to this dispute.
He argues that the lawyers are seeking fees far beyond what courts have recognized as reasonable, and that the fees threaten to deny funding to state programs for children and adults, including services for those suffering from tobacco-related ilnesses.
''They were not hired guns; they were partners,'' Reilly said of the legal team assembled to pursue the case. ''We thought we stood shoulder-to-shoulder to protect kids and to fight the tobacco companies.''
The tobacco industry has estimated the hours put into the case by the plaintiffs' lawyers in the Massachusetts case at 90,000. If their lawsuit prevails, the law firms would collect a fee of about $22,000 an hour under that estimate.
The controversy comes at a time when the gains made against smoking and tobacco companies during the last decade are being threatened.
The attorneys general who filed the original lawsuits, including former Massachusetts attorney general Scott Harshbarger, had insisted that 25 percent of the industry payments to each state be used to fund antismoking effforts.
But legislatures and governors, including Massachusetts, are now ignoring or undoing those restrictions, as they struggle with fiscal problems.
Legislative leaders on Beacon Hill are also seeking to eliminate the state's Tobacco Control Program, which was created through a 1992 ballot referendum and called for a new 25-cent cigarette tax to be dedicated to antismoking efforts.
As Massachusetts' fiscal woes have mounted in recent years, State House budget writers have diverted the tax revenues to other programs and cut the antismoking budget from $56 million in 1993 to $4.8 million last year.
Governor Mitt Romney reduced that to $1.7 million in his spending plan.
But the House budget proposal that lawmakers are now debating eliminates the funding altogether.

GOOD PICK

In nominating Claude Allen to a seat on the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, President Bush has made an excellent choice. Allen very well could win approval for the wrong reason - he is black and the composition of the Fourth Circuit has been criticized as insufficiently diverse - but merits the appointment on the strength of his qualifications.

Democrats already are combing through Allen's record for material with which to paint him as an extremist - he supports home schooling and abstinence education, he once worked for (gasp) Jesse Helms. But Allen is no ideologue; as Virginia's Secretary of Health and Human Resources, he sought to expand the FAMIS program that offers subsidized health insurance to lower-middle-income families, and defended the effort against criticism from this newspaper.

From Washington law-firm work in the early 1990s, Allen has risen quickly through the Virginia Attorney General's office under Jim Gilmore and the state health secretariat to (currently) deputy secretary at the federal Department of Health and Human Services. An official with the Bush administration says Allen has been considered as a possible Cabinet Secretary. That background of legal expertise leavened with an understanding of the privation that besets those in need - combined with Allen's intelligence and strong grounding in traditional values - should make him a worthy addition to the court.

HEADLINE: OUR OPINION: Democrats use wrong route to win South

BODY:

U.S. Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.) brought his presidential aspirations to the South last week, promising in Alabama that he will make the national party competitive here once again.

Make competitive, he neglected to mention, a party that has positioned itself in opposition to the war in Iraq and anything other than token tax cuts, and as Democrats reminded the nation once again about the elevation of conservatives to the federal bench. While the White House may appeal to some as inside work with no heavy lifting, getting there through the South toting this party's agenda will be a task requiring Herculean labor.

Just this week, for example, Kerry's Democratic colleagues --- Georgia's Zell Miller excepted --- began to filibuster the nomination of Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen to the New Orleans-based 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Kerry and other Democrats are already filibustering the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals --- the first time simultaneous filibusters against judicial nominees have occurred in the U.S. Senate.

Both Owen and Estrada are superbly qualified in every respect. Yet on Owen, those who complain that a "glass ceiling" exists for women of achievement are busily constructing one to keep her in her place. And those who complain that the federal bench lacks "diversity" find Estrada to be too much diversity for their taste. He is considered to be a conservative, and the interest groups that drive the Democratic Party nationally fear Owen is, too, at least on their abortion litmus test.

The fear with Owen and Estrada is that one or both will be nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court should a vacancy occur. Senate Democrats are determined to keep off the Circuit Court bench any perceived conservative who has the credentials to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Kerry, then, and the legions of presidential soundalikes who campaign with him, have to come to a region where conservativism is the mainstream to explain how reducing federal taxes is bad and cheating exemplary women and minorities of the fair hearing they have earned before the U. S. Senate because they might be conservative is good.

"I can help you wage a fight down here and rebuild this party for the long run," Kerry said in Birmingham. Republicans have carried Alabama in all but three presidential elections in the past 50 years. Jimmy Carter in 1976 was the last Democrat to carry the state. George W. Bush carried every Southern state in 2000, including Tennessee, his Democratic opponent's home state. Al Gore Jr. thought so little of his Southern prospects that he actively campaigned in just three states --- Tennessee, Florida and West Virginia.

Some Democrats, said Kerry, were "surprised" that he visited Alabama.

No surprise that he visited. The real surprise is the party baggage he hauled.

Opposition to tax cuts is comprehensible. Politicians loathe interruptions in the flow of spendable revenues. Opposition to the war is, too. Too confrontational. Angers adversaries. Provokes understandable aggression, for which we bear unexpurgated sin.

While some positions are understandable, not so their party-line opposition to Owen and Estrada. Owen, the new filibusteree, drew the American Bar Association's highest rating. She is a cum laude graduate of the Baylor University Law School who scored the top grade in Texas on the bar exam. She practiced 17 years before becoming a judge and has been widely praised for her integrity and ability. Liberal groups say, unconvincingly except when they are talking to each other and Senate Democrats, that she is anti-abortion and pro-business.

Being a neighborly people, Southerners of course welcome Kerry to visit the region and to indulge himself in its hospitality. But the senator should not indulge himself into believing that a party that opposes tax cuts and filibusters nominees such as Owen and Estrada has the slightest chance of carrying this region.

BODY:
U.S. Sen. John Kerry (D-Mass.) brought his presidential aspirations to the South last week, promising in Alabama that he will make the national party competitive here once again.

Make competitive, he neglected to mention, a party that has positioned itself in opposition to the war in Iraq and anything other than token tax cuts, and as Democrats reminded the nation once again about the elevation of conservatives to the federal bench. While the White House may appeal to some as inside work with no heavy lifting, getting there through the South toting this party's agenda will be a task requiring Herculean labor.

Just this week, for example, Kerry's Democratic colleagues --- Georgia's Zell Miller excepted --- began to filibuster the nomination of Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen to the New Orleans-based 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Kerry and other Democrats are already filibustering the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals --- the first time simultaneous filibusters against judicial nominees have occurred in the U.S. Senate.

Both Owen and Estrada are superbly qualified in every respect. Yet on Owen, those who complain that a "glass ceiling" exists for women of achievement are busily constructing one to keep her in her place. And those who complain that the federal bench lacks "diversity" find Estrada to be too much diversity for their taste. He is considered to be a conservative, and the interest groups that drive the Democratic Party nationally fear Owen is, too, at least on their abortion litmus test.

The fear with Owen and Estrada is that one or both will be nominated to the U.S. Supreme Court should a vacancy occur. Senate Democrats are determined to keep off the Circuit Court bench any perceived conservative who has the credentials to serve on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Kerry, then, and the legions of presidential soundalikes who campaign with him, have to come to a region where conservativism is the mainstream to explain how reducing federal taxes is bad and cheating exemplary women and minorities of the fair hearing they have earned before the U. S. Senate because they might be conservative is good.

"I can help you wage a fight down here and rebuild this party for the long run," Kerry said in Birmingham. Republicans have carried Alabama in all but three presidential elections in the past 50 years. Jimmy Carter in 1976 was the last Democrat to carry the state. George W. Bush carried every Southern state in 2000, including Tennessee, his Democratic opponent's home state. Al Gore Jr. thought so little of his Southern prospects that he actively campaigned in just three states --- Tennessee, Florida and West Virginia.

Some Democrats, said Kerry, were "surprised" that he visited Alabama.

No surprise that he visited. The real surprise is the party baggage he hauled.

Opposition to tax cuts is comprehensible. Politicians loathe interruptions in the flow of spendable revenues. Opposition to the war is, too. Too confrontational. Angers adversaries. Provokes understandable aggression, for which we bear unexpurgated sin.

While some positions are understandable, not so their party-line opposition to Owen and Estrada. Owen, the new filibusteree, drew the American Bar Association's highest rating. She is a cum laude graduate of the Baylor University Law School who scored the top grade in Texas on the bar exam. She practiced 17 years before becoming a judge and has been widely praised for her integrity and ability. Liberal groups say, unconvincingly except when they are talking to each other and Senate Democrats, that she is anti-abortion and pro-business.

Being a neighborly people, Southerners of course welcome Kerry to visit the region and to indulge himself in its hospitality. But the senator should not indulge himself into believing that a party that opposes tax cuts and filibusters nominees such as Owen and Estrada has the slightest chance of carrying this region.

Churches promote faith; courtrooms promote justice

Attorney General Bill Pryor usually has been what few Alabama politicians seem to know how to be: principled. Though unabashedly a conservative Republican, Pryor has usually been more nonpartisan than partisan.

More than once, he has ignored the prevailing political winds to do what he thought was right. rying to reform the state's sentencing system is a prime example. one what he thought was right again. But this time Pryor has gotten it wrong.

In a "friend of the court" brief filed almost three months ago regarding the Texas sodomy case before the U.S. Supreme Court, Pryor compared homosexual acts to "prostitution, adultery, necrophilia, bestiality, possession of child pornography and even incest and pedophilia."

This is the same case, of course, that Pennsylvania Sen. Rick Santorum, another conservative Republican, made some similarly troubling remarks about.

The problem here is neither that Pryor has a certain point of view that others may not share, nor that he expressed it. In the United States, we all have a right to think and speak freely.

The problem is that as the attorney general of Alabama - and President Bush's nominee to the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals - Pryor did not separate his personal moral views from his public role as a promoter of justice.

Bill Pryor has championed causes that many Republicans and not a few Democrats would have probably walked away from:, such as the removal of the interracial marriage ban from the state constitution and the recruitment of mentors for underprivileged children, to mention a few.

Alabama has benefited from having him as attorney general, and would probably benefit if he decided to seek an even higher elected office one day.

Perhaps the nation would too, but not if Pryor plans to use a judicial appointment as a opportunity to give his moral points of view the heft of the law's brief seems to be part of a trend to infuse public policy and the law with a morality of an unabashedly religious strain.

Until God (or whoever or whatever it is you do or do not worship) decides to clarify the myriad matters of faith that have caused us to separate into different churches, temples, mosques, sects and beliefs, it would be best for those who believe to enjoy their beliefs in a way that allows others to enjoy theirs - or to enjoy not having any beliefs at all.

Churches are supposed to promote faith, and courtrooms, justice. If Pryor is confirmed to the 11th Circuit, he would do well to honor this distinction.

Ensign Submits Name Of Reid's Son For Federal Bench.

Roll Call 's (5/5, Henry) "Heard On The Hill" column reports, "Don't look now, but there's at least one sign of thaw in the partisanship roiling the judicial nomination process. Sen. John Ensign (R-Nev.) has submitted the name of Senate Minority Whip Harry Reid's (D-Nev.) son, Leif, for a lifetime federal judgeship. Hey, we may have actually found a nominee that Democrats won't filibuster. Leif Reid, 35, is one of four names that Ensign sent to the White House for an upcoming District Court vacancy in Nevada. The White House will have the final say over who gets the slot. Ensign and Reid have enjoyed a strangely close relationship over the past two years, considering how tough their 1998 race was, with Reid winning by a little more than 400 votes. It will be interesting see what the American Bar Association makes of this potential appointment. Leif Reid, a 1995 law school graduate of Stanford University, was admitted to the Nevada bar in 1996, nowhere near the minimum of 12 years of practice the ABA usually requires for nominees to get a 'qualified' rating."

The Real Environmental Crisis: Why Poverty, Not Affluence, Is the Environment's Number One Enemy
(University of California Press, 2003)

featuring the author
Jack M. Hollander
Professor Emeritus of Energy and Resources
University of California, Berkeley

Jack Hollander contends in his new book that our most critical environmental problem is global poverty. In the course of examining a wide range of energy, natural resource, and environmental issues, Hollander finds that economic development and technological advances can relieve such problems as food shortages, deforestation, air pollution, and land degradation, while providing clean water, adequate energy supplies, and improved public health.
The book also tackles such issues as global warming; genetically modified foods; automobile and transportation technologies; and the Endangered Species Act, which Hollander asserts never would have been passed in a poor country whose citizens struggle just to survive. Hollander asks us to look beyond the media's doomsday rhetoric about the state of the environment and to commit much more of our resources where they will do the most good ? to lifting the world's population out of poverty.

I think I mentioned to you a while ago that fear of future electoral pain was a primary motivating force for Senators and political parties. In that regard, this is good. Also, Bob Novak reported this weekend that current scenarios (admittedly too far in advance to predict with accuracy) have the Republicans picking up 4 Senate seats.

HEADLINE: OUR OPINION: Democrats use wrong route to win South

The Free Congress Commentary
How To End The Obstructionism Of President Bush's Judicial Nominees
By Paul M. Weyrich

The new freshman class of Senate Republicans is a brighter-than-usual class.
As proved to be the case with many of the members of the 1980 and 1994 classes, those Senators who come to power in watershed elections often do not fare well in their reelection campaigns because they were the product of a zeitgeist that no longer existed.

This freshman class, although they benefited from President Bush putting himself on the line, could have stood on their own. Two members, Elizabeth Dole (R-NC) and Lamar Alexander (R-TN), are former cabinet members. Alexander had also been a two term Governor of Tennessee. John Cornyn (R-TX) had been a judge and the Attorney General of a large state. Norm Coleman (R-MN) had been mayor of the second largest city in his state and four new Senators -- John Sununu (R-NH), Saxby Chambliss (R-GA), Lindsey Graham (R-SC) and Jim Talent (R-MO) -- had served in the House when Republicans were in the majority.

The last group is significant because they learned that it is possible for Republicans to exercise power. Considering the razor-thin margins Republicans had in the 105th , the 106th and the 107th Congresses, they did remarkably well thanks to the skilled leadership of now Majority Leader Tom DeLay (R-TX), who is intensely disliked by the minority Democrats precisely because he does not hesitate to use his power for the common good whenever it is necessary.

This freshman Senate class -- the four former House Members in particular -- is very frustrated with the Republican-controlled Senate. Senator Jim Talent of Missouri, by far the most cerebral member of his class, commented recently that it is the culture, rather than the rules, which is keeping the Senate's leadership from accomplishing meaningful things.

It is true that even the most solid conservatives have convinced themselves that nothing can be done about the current situation. They wring their hands and insist that it takes 60 votes to pass anything, and since Republicans can almost never muster that many votes, the ballgame is over. Right now the minority Democrats are filibustering two appeals court nominees and appear ready to filibuster a district court nominee for the first time in history. The Senate leadership has convinced itself that there is no way out of this situation. The most support that they have been able to muster is 55 votes. Some have suggested that what is needed is a round-the-clock filibuster, but that means all 51 Republicans have to be ready for quorum calls in the middle of the night. If as many as a single Senator were absent, Republicans could lose control of the floor.

I have suggested that President Bush make the blocked nominations his top priority and campaign hard in the states where Senators might be persuaded to switch their votes on cloture, thus allowing an up or down vote on the judicial nominees. But the White House is tied up with tax cuts now and isn't inclined to make judgeships top priority.

Talent suggests there is another way out if you could change the mindset of his caucus to the point where Republican senators would convince themselves that they could use their power to act.

The Talent solution goes like this: After a cloture vote is lost for lack of 60 votes, a senator would move to appeal the vote on the grounds that it is unconstitutional. Why unconstitutional? Because the minority is requiring 60 votes for judicial nominations, yet the Constitution is very clear about when super-majorities are required. Judges isn't one of them. The parliamentarian would most likely rule the motion out of order. (He is a real problem and should be fired by Majority Leader William Frist). His ruling would be appealed and if all 51 Republican Senators held together, his ruling would be overridden. Thus having taken back control of the process, the Senate Majority Leader would move to have the pending nominations considered, which would only need a simple majority vote for approval and which could be readily obtained. The GOP would have taken back control of the process and would be confirming the best of President Bush's nominees.

Now, of course, Republicans would have to be prepared for screams of anguish from the minority, echoed by the national media. But who cares? See, that's the problem. In their current mindset, many Republican Senators, and not just liberals, worry about what is written on the editorial page of the New York Times, or said on the CBS Evening News with Dan Rather. These guys don't yet get it. Fewer and fewer people rely on newspapers and the traditional print media for their information. Most people get their news about politics and government from the broadcast media. Conservatives dominate talk radio and the Fox News Channel is the fastest growing channel in news/ talk television. Then, there is the Internet. All the big web pages are conservative. The liberal media is in a state of significant decline. The Republican senators can get by with doing what Senator Talent suggests and survive politically.

The current culture of the Senate, however, says otherwise. That's why Sen. Talent says it's not the rules but the mindset that is holding back his fellow Republicans in the Senate. It's time Senate Republican caucus faced up to this problem. If they can finally get into the correct mindset, they can stop the whining about how powerless they are and at last use their power for the good of this country.

A Camera-Ready Candidate for the Maryland GOP
By Carol Arscott

Sunday, May 4, 2003; Page B08
There is a U.S. Senate race in Maryland in 2004, and leaders of the state Republican Party are doing what they traditionally do at this stage in the election cycle: They are courting candidates, mostly wealthy businessmen, hoping that one will pour millions of dollars into another fruitless effort to topple the entrenched incumbent. The incumbent this time is Barbara Mikulski, first elected in 1986 and never subject to a serious challenge.
The problem with the GOP's ritual is that Maryland politics have changed radically since the party's last Senate candidate took his customary drubbing. Maryland has a Republican governor now, so electing a Republican statewide is no longer a dream -- it's a distinct possibility.
The good news is that Maryland Republicans have a camera-ready candidate waiting in the wings, one with deep roots in the party and experience running -- and winning -- a statewide campaign. That candidate is Lt. Gov. Michael Steele.
Steele would be the ideal pick to run against Mikulski. He is battle-tested, smart and attractive. He has been vetted by the media, and his job allows him the freedom to travel. His Republican Party credentials are impeccable. Further, his public persona is well established and growing, thanks to the high-profile assignments given to him by his boss, Gov. Robert Ehrlich.
But there's more: Steele vs. Mikulski would give Marylanders a high-contrast contest that would boost the chances of a GOP victory. The 2002 gubernatorial election proved that a big contrast between candidates would not be fatal to the Republican challenger.
Harry S. Truman once said that when the people are given a choice between a Republican and a Republican, they'll vote for the Republican every time. The reverse is true in Maryland. The Free State has Democrats aplenty, so Republicans don't fare well when they edge toward the middle and try to convince the voters that they can be Democrats, too. There would be no danger of denying the voters a real alternative with Steele as the GOP candidate.
The differences between Steele and Mikulski could hardly be greater. Steele is an African American man; Mikulski is a Polish American woman. Steele hails from Prince George's County; Mikulski was born and bred in Baltimore.
Steele is uncommonly tall; Mikulski is unusually short.
Steele is a committed conservative; Mikulski is an unrepentant liberal.
Best for Steele, a U.S. Senate candidacy would have no downside for him:
He doesn't have to give up his current position to run.
He'd be a hero to his party and instantly end the debate about who the GOP candidate should be.
He'd be running with George W. Bush at the top of the ticket.
He'd be able to raise money hand over fist.
He'd be able to create a public identity separate from the governor's.
He'd attract the attention of national Republican leaders -- and national fundraisers.

And he'd have a job to go back to if he was unsuccessful.
So what are the lieutenant governor's chances?
My polling company ran Steele against Mikulski in a survey released last week. Mikulski enjoyed a 63 percent job approval rating and led Steele in this initial pairing 54 percent to 37 percent. But Steele's name already is recognized by 83 percent of Maryland voters, and in a September 2001 survey, then-Lt. Gov. Kathleen Kennedy Townsend was beating Ehrlich 54 percent to 31 percent.
The possibilities are tantalizing, but Republican leaders must realize that they stand no chance of upsetting Mikulski with an average opponent. They need star power.
Steele vs. Mikulski: It's a match-up made in heaven.

Title I of BCRA completely prohibits national party committees from raising, receiving, or spending "soft money" and also, as a general matter, prohibits state party committees from using soft money for so-called "Federal Election Activity." Federal Election Activity is defined, in the main, as (i) voter registration for federal elections; (ii) generic campaign activity (such as get-out-the-vote activities) associated with federal elections; and (iii) advertising that promotes or attacks candidates for federal office.

Judge Henderson determined that both the national and state party soft money bans are unconstitutional. Judge Kollar-Kotelly determined that the bans are constitutional. Judge Leon authored the controlling opinion on soft money, and determined that the state and national soft money bans are unconstitutional except for one application, the use of soft money for advertising that promotes, supports, opposes, or attacks a candidate for federal office. According to Judge Leon, the government had not demonstrated a sufficient risk or appearance of corruption of federal candidates and officeholders to justify a ban on soft money except with respect to soft money used to directly affect federal elections. Judge Leon found that the use of soft money for activities such as voter registration and get-out-the-vote had not been shown to directly affect federal elections. He did conclude, however, that advertisements promoting or attacking federal candidates do have a direct effect on federal elections, and so limited the state and national bans to the solicitation or use of soft money for such advertising.

Title I also prohibits federal candidates and officeholders from raising soft money for federal election purposes and, with respect to soft money raised for state election purposes, constrains federal candidates and officeholders from raising soft money from unions and corporations and in amounts that exceed federal hard money contribution limits. Judges Henderson and Kollar-Kotelly upheld this provision as constitutional. (Judge Leon agreed, except that he would have held the prohibition unconstitutional as applied to federal candidates' and officeholders' raising of soft money for uses that do not directly affect federal elections.) Thus, federal candidates and officeholders remain barred from raising soft money for federal election and many state election purposes.

Title II of BCRA, §§ 201, 203, prohibits corporations and labor unions from spending general treasury funds to finance "electioneering communications," which the statute principally defines as TV or radio broadcasts within 60 days of a general election, or 30 days of a primary, that refer to a candidate for federal office (and are targeted to that candidate's electorate).[1] The statute also contains a "backup" definition of electioneering communications, in case the principal definition is held unconstitutional, which defines electioneering communications as TV or radio broadcasts that promote, support, attack or oppose a candidate for office "and [are] suggestive of no plausible meaning other than an exhortation to vote for or against a specific candidate."

[1] Title II amends the longstanding prohibition against labor unions and corporations making independent expenditures (or contributions) from their general treasury funds for the purpose of influencing federal elections. 2 U.S.C. § 441b. Labor unions and corporations may, however, make contributions or expenditures in connection with federal elections from separate segregated accounts, containing funds donated by their officers, shareholders or members for that purpose. In FEC v. Massachusetts Citizens for Life, Inc., 479 U.S. 238 (1986), the Supreme Court limited this financing restriction to expenditures for communications that expressly advocate the election or defeat of a candidate for office. Congress enacted Title II in the belief that labor unions and corporations had been evading this restriction by sponsoring so-called "issue" ads that promote or attack candidates for office without expressly urging viewers to vote for or against them.

Judge Henderson determined that the restriction on electioneering communications by labor unions and corporations is unconstitutional under either definition. Judge Leon, while finding that the primary definition is unconstitutionally overbroad, nevertheless upheld the restriction under the backup definition, although he struck down the final clause, "and [are] suggestive of no plausible meaning other than an exhortation to vote for or against a specific candidate," as unconstitutionally vague, with the effect of making the backup definition broader than Congress had intended. Judge Kotelly concurred with Judge Leon's conclusion (in the alternative to her own conclusion that the restriction should be upheld as constitutional under the primary definition.) As a result, Judge Leon's is again the controlling opinion for the court.

Because the backup definition of electioneering communications does not include the time limits incorporated by the principal definition (60 days before a general election, and 30 days before a primary), but instead applies at all times of year, corporations and labor unions are, as a result of the district court's ruling, now immediately and at all times prohibited from financing TV or radio broadcasts that promote or attack candidates for federal office, except through separate segregated accounts (a.k.a. PACs) containing donations from their individual officers, shareholders or members.

Supreme Court Will Decide if Government Must Release Foster Photos

By Gina Holland

Associated Press Writer

Monday, May 5, 2003; 10:34 AM

The Supreme Court said Monday it would spell out when the public has a right to information in law enforcement files, like recordings of emergency calls and pictures from crime scenes.

The justices will consider next fall whether the government must release post-mortem pictures of former White House attorney Vincent Foster, resurrecting a 10-year-old controversy over Foster's suicide.

The high court will balance people's privacy interests, in this case involving Foster's family, against the rights of others under a public records law. The Bush administration had urged the court to review the case. At stake is "the privacy interest of millions of individuals, about whom personal and sensitive information is stored in government files," Solicitor General Theodore Olson told the court.

Foster's death, in the first year of Bill Clinton's presidency, spurred a legion of conspiracy theories that he was murdered in a White House cover-up. Foster was a kindergarten friend of Clinton and former law partner of Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Special prosecutor Kenneth Starr headed one of the many investigations that determined Foster killed himself on July 20, 1993, at a Civil War-era park near Washington.

The justices will decide if a California attorney has a right to pictures of Foster's body. The attorney, Allan Favish, already has been given more than 100 pictures, including photos of Foster's car and the Virginia park site. He has posted some on a Web site.

Lower courts have split over the release of more explicit pictures.

An appeals court in California said that four of the pictures could be made public. A court in Washington said they could not because there was not compelling evidence of government misconduct.

One of the pictures, which shows Foster's hand holding a gun, has already been published in Time magazine. None of the photos show his face or the bullet wounds. He died of a single shot to the head from an antique revolver.

The Supreme Court had scheduled arguments in another government records case involving a weapons database this spring. Justices dismissed the case, however, when Congress passed a provision restricting the release of the information which included names of gun shops and gun owners whose weapons were used in crimes.

Olson, the Bush administration's Supreme Court lawyer, said justices should use this case to clarify when lower courts should allow the release of information under the Freedom of Information Act. The law allows reporters and others to get unclassified government records that officials would not otherwise release.

Olson said that five investigations concluded that Foster, who was depressed, killed himself. He said a sixth probe "by an unsatisfied private citizen" seemed unnecessary.

The public information law allows officials to withhold information that could cause "an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

The attorney for the Foster family, James Hamilton, said the release of more photos would be damaging to the relatives, "invading their memory of a loved one, by subjecting them to harassment from any number of media outlets, and by leaving them vulnerable to the unwitting viewing of profoundly traumatic images."

He said that the rationale used to order the release of the photos could also be used to get information about the terrorist attacks, including voice mail messages left by people trapped in the World Trade Center.

The case is Office of Independent Counsel v. Favish, 02-954.

The Supreme Court said Monday it would spell out when the public has a right to information in law enforcement files, like recordings of emergency calls and pictures from crime scenes.
The justices will consider next fall whether the government must release post-mortem pictures of former White House attorney Vincent Foster, resurrecting a 10-year-old controversy over Foster's suicide.
The high court will balance people's privacy interests, in this case involving Foster's family, against the rights of others under a public records law. The Bush administration had urged the court to review the case. At stake is "the privacy interest of millions of individuals, about whom personal and sensitive information is stored in government files," Solicitor General Theodore Olson told the court.
Foster's death, in the first year of Bill Clinton's presidency, spurred a legion of conspiracy theories that he was murdered in a White House cover-up. Foster was a kindergarten friend of Clinton and former law partner of Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Special prosecutor Kenneth Starr headed one of the many investigations that determined Foster killed himself on July 20, 1993, at a Civil War-era park near Washington.

The justices will decide if a California attorney has a right to pictures of Foster's body. The attorney, Allan Favish, already has been given more than 100 pictures, including photos of Foster's car and the Virginia park site. He has posted some on a Web site.

Lower courts have split over the release of more explicit pictures.

An appeals court in California said that four of the pictures could be made public. A court in Washington said they could not because there was not compelling evidence of government misconduct.

One of the pictures, which shows Foster's hand holding a gun, has already been published in Time magazine. None of the photos show his face or the bullet wounds. He died of a single shot to the head from an antique revolver.

The Supreme Court had scheduled arguments in another government records case involving a weapons database this spring. Justices dismissed the case, however, when Congress passed a provision restricting the release of the information which included names of gun shops and gun owners whose weapons were used in crimes.

Olson, the Bush administration's Supreme Court lawyer, said justices should use this case to clarify when lower courts should allow the release of information under the Freedom of Information Act. The law allows reporters and others to get unclassified government records that officials would not otherwise release.

Olson said that five investigations concluded that Foster, who was depressed, killed himself. He said a sixth probe "by an unsatisfied private citizen" seemed unnecessary.

The public information law allows officials to withhold information that could cause "an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy."

The attorney for the Foster family, James Hamilton, said the release of more photos would be damaging to the relatives, "invading their memory of a loved one, by subjecting them to harassment from any number of media outlets, and by leaving them vulnerable to the unwitting viewing of profoundly traumatic images."

He said that the rationale used to order the release of the photos could also be used to get information about the terrorist attacks, including voice mail messages left by people trapped in the World Trade Center.

The case is Office of Independent Counsel v. Favish, 02-954.

"The confirmation clause example (also cited in the introduction) illustrates the ramifications outside the presentment clause context of a decision upholding Rule XXI(5)(c). See Bloch, note 2 supra. Professor Bloch provides a striking demonstration of how Congress could use the rulemaking clause to increase its own power at the expense of the executive. The Constitution states that the President "shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States." U.S. CONST. art. II, õ 2, cl. 2. The Constitution does not specify the number of votes required for confirmation, so if Rule XXI(5)(c) is constitutional, the Senate could use the rulemaking clause to require that three-fifths of its members, rather than one-half, vote in favor of confirmation of a presidential appointee. The Senate thereby could essentially take over the appointment process from the President. Acceptance of the Clerk's argument that Congress can use the rulemaking clause to change the number of votes required to pass a law amounts to acceptance of the proposition that each House of Congress can fundamentally alter the balance of power established by the Framers.

EDITORIAL: Filibuster two-fer
Senate Democrats kick judicial obstruction up a notch

The decision three months ago by Senate Democrats to filibuster the nomination of Miguel Estrada for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia was a first. Never before had a filibuster been launched to prevent the confirmation of federal appeals court or district court nominee. On Tuesday, the Democrats made it a two-fer ... pledging to also filibuster Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen's selection to an opening on the 5th Circuit.

Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., defended the repeated use of this heretofore unprecedented stalling tactic: "In her interpretation in the law on case after case, she has made the decisions that her own views are superior, her own views are the ones that have greater weight than the law itself."

Really? Why, then, does the American Bar Association's committee on judicial nominees -- certainly no conservative bastion -- consider Justice Owen "well qualified" for the federal bench?

Sen. Daschle's charge is nonsense, of course, ginned up by the hyper left-wing groups to whom the Democratic Party has sold its soul.

consider an appeals court judge who was confirmed this week: former Ohio solicitor general Jeffrey S. Sutton. Mr. Sutton was approved Tuesday for a vacancy on the 6th Circuit by a 52-41 margin -- fewer affirmative votes, it should be noted, than either Mr. Estrada or Ms. Owen would get should the Democrats' tactics be thwarted. Opponents focused on several cases Mr. Sutton successfully argued before the U.S. Supreme Court which placed limits on the ability of individuals to bring lawsuits, based on federal statutes, against state governments.

In other words, he's considered an out-of-the-mainstream ideologue by some advocacy groups because he has defended constitutional principles before the nation's highest court ... and won.

Beltway Democrats, led by Sen. Daschle and Nevada's Harry Reid, are playing with fire, here. The party suffered an unprecedented humiliation in last November's election, to a large degree because President Bush blamed Democratic obstructionism for a rash of judicial vacancies. With few judges available to hear cases, for countless litigants, justice has been delayed.

Sen. John Cornyn, who served with Justice Owen for three years on the Texas Supreme Court, plans to convene hearings next week on the judicial crisis titled "Judicial nominations, filibusters and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent." The hearings will examine why five of the 11 people Mr. Bush has nominated to federal appeals courts since May 2001 have never received a vote.

The hearings may spur much-needed reforms of the nomination process. Or the Democrats could render the hearings moot by living up to their sworn duties under the Constitution, and allowing all of Mr. Bush's judicial nominations to receive up or down votes without further delay.

BALANCE OF POWER

The Constitution and the Judiciary

Where's the check on Senate filibusters?

BY JOHN CORNYN

Tuesday, May 6, 2003 12:01 a.m. EDT

This week, the Senate marks a dismal political anniversary: Two years of partisan obstruction of President Bush's judicial nominees, culminating in two unprecedented filibusters. More are threatened. Never before has the judicial confirmation process been so broken, and the constitutional principles of judicial independence and majority rule so undermined.

It's time for a fresh start.

In that spirit, the Senate Subcommittee on the Constitution will hold a hearing today to consider proposals to restore both the confirmation process and our most cherished constitutional values.

The essence of our democratic system of government is beautiful in its simplicity: Majorities must be permitted to govern. As our nation's Founders explained in Federalist No. 22, "the fundamental maxim of republican government . . . requires that the sense of the majority should prevail." And as the Supreme Court has unanimously held, our Constitution is premised on the democratic doctrine of majority rule.

Today, a minority of obstructionist senators are forcing upon the confirmation process a supermajority requirement of 60 votes. They are using the filibuster not simply to ensure adequate debate, but actually to block many of our nation's numerous judicial vacancies from being filled.

The public's historic aversion to abusive filibusters is well grounded. These tactics not only violate democracy and majority rule, but arguably offend the Constitution as well. Indeed, prominent Democrats such as Lloyd Cutler and Sens. Tom Daschle, Joe Lieberman and Tom Harkin have condemned filibuster misuse as unconstitutional.

Moreover, abusive filibusters against judicial nominations uniquely threaten both presidential power and judicial independence--and are thus more dubious than filibusters of legislation, an area of pre-eminent congressional power.

Harry Edwards, a respected Carter-appointed appeals judge, wrote that the Constitution forbids the Senate from imposing a supermajority rule for confirmations. Otherwise, "the Senate, acting unilaterally, could thereby increase its own power at the expense of the President" and "essentially take over the appointment process from the President." He concluded: "the Framers never intended for Congress to have such unchecked authority to impose supermajority voting requirements that fundamentally change the nature of our democratic processes." (He expressed less concern with legislative filibusters.)

History confirms Judge Edwards's constitutional interpretation. A Senate majority has never been denied its constitutional right to confirm judicial nominees--until now. The obstruction is as unprecedented as it is harmful.

Some have cited, to justify the current filibusters, the example of Abe Fortas, whom President Lyndon Johnson nominated to be chief justice in 1968. But majority rule was not under attack in that case. Dogged by allegations of ethical improprieties and bipartisan opposition, Fortas was unable to obtain the votes of 51 senators to prematurely end debate. Three days later, Johnson withdrew the nomination altogether.

That is a far cry from the present situation. After extensive debate, Miguel Estrada, Priscilla Owen and countless others enjoy enthusiastic, bipartisan majority support, yet they face an uncertain future of indefinite debate. By brazenly insisting, as Nevada's Harry Reid--the Senate's second-ranking Democrat--has said, that "there is not a number [of hours] in the universe that would be sufficient" for debate on certain nominees, Democrat leaders admit they are using the filibuster not to ensure adequate debate, but to change the Constitution by imposing a supermajority requirement for judicial confirmations.

Whether unconstitutional or merely destructive to our political system, the current confirmation crisis cries out for reform. As all 10 freshman senators, myself included, stated last week in a letter to Senate leadership, "we are united in our concern that the judicial confirmation process is broken and needs to be fixed." Veteran senators from both parties express similar sentiments.

Accordingly, today's hearing will explore various reform proposals:

* Sen. Zell Miller suggests--as did Sens. Harkin, Lieberman and 17 other Democrats in 1995--that the 60-vote rule for ending debate be reduced incrementally with each succeeding vote, until the rule reaches 51 votes.

* President Bush and Sens. Arlen Specter and Patrick Leahy have urged the imposition of strict time deadlines for the Senate to hold hearings and vote on judicial nominees.

* Sen. Charles Schumer advocates an overhaul of the nomination process by eliminating the president's appointment power and instead giving President Bush and Sen. Daschle "equal roles in picking the judge-pickers."

These proposals will be debated. What's important is that these public officials acknowledge the crisis and urge reform.

* * *

The judicial confirmation process has reached the bottom of a decades-long downward spiral. Our current state of affairs is neither fair nor representative of the bipartisan majority of this body. For democracy to work, and for the constitutional principle of majority rule to prevail, this obstructionism must end, and we must bring matters to a vote. As Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge famously said of filibusters: "To vote without debating is perilous, but to debate and never vote is imbecile." Two years is too long. The Senate needs a fresh start.

Mr. Cornyn is a senator from Texas and chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on the Constitution. He served previously on the Supreme Court of Texas, and as the state's attorney general.

Dear Senator Feinstein:

On behalf of President Bush, I write in response to your letter of May 5.

You propose that the President and the opposite political party select in equal numbers members of citizen judicial nominating commissions in each State who would then select nominees for each judicial vacancy. The President would be required to nominate one of the individuals selected by the commission and the Senate required to vote up or down on that nominee. You propose this as a permanent change to the constitutional scheme for appointment of federal judges.

We appreciate and share your stated belief that the judicial confirmation process is &going in the wrong direction8 and is potentially &spiral[ing] out of control.8 But as explained more fully in my attached letter to Senator Schumer in response to his similar proposal, we respectfully believe that this proposal is inconsistent with the Constitution, with the history and traditions of the Nation,s federal judicial appointments process, and with the soundest approach for appointment of highly qualified federal judges, as the Founders determined. Rather, as President Bush and many other Senators of both parties have stated in the past, the solution to the broken judicial confirmation process is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility to vote up or down on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate. We thus agree with your statement of September 16, 1999 in which you stated: &A nominee is entitled to a vote. Vote them up; vote them down.8 As you said on October 4, 1999, moreover, the Senate,s &institutional integrity requires an up-or-down vote.8

We very much appreciate your open-minded approach to the President, s judicial nominees and what I know is your sincere desire to fix this

BALANCE OF POWER

The Constitution and the Judiciary

Where's the check on Senate filibusters?

BY JOHN CORNYN

Tuesday, May 6, 2003 12:01 a.m.

This week, the Senate marks a dismal political anniversary: Two years of partisan obstruction of President Bush's judicial nominees, culminating in two unprecedented filibusters. More are threatened. Never before has the judicial confirmation process been so broken, and the constitutional principles of judicial independence and majority rule so undermined.

It's time for a fresh start.
In that spirit, the Senate Subcommittee on the Constitution will hold a hearing today to consider proposals to restore both the confirmation process and our most cherished constitutional values.

The essence of our democratic system of government is beautiful in its simplicity: Majorities must be permitted to govern. As our nation's Founders explained in Federalist No. 22, "the fundamental maxim of republican government . . . requires that the sense of the majority should prevail." And as the Supreme Court has unanimously held, our Constitution is premised on the democratic doctrine of majority rule.

Today, a minority of obstructionist senators are forcing upon the confirmation process a supermajority requirement of 60 votes. They are using the filibuster not simply to ensure adequate debate, but actually to block many of our nation's numerous judicial vacancies from being filled.

The public's historic aversion to abusive filibusters is well grounded. These tactics not only violate democracy and majority rule, but arguably offend the Constitution as well. Indeed, prominent Democrats such as Lloyd Cutler and Sens. Tom Daschle, Joe Lieberman and Tom Harkin have condemned filibuster misuse as unconstitutional.

Moreover, abusive filibusters against judicial nominations uniquely threaten both presidential power and judicial independence--and are thus more dubious than filibusters of legislation, an area of pre-eminent congressional power.

Harry Edwards, a respected Carter-appointed appeals judge, wrote that the Constitution forbids the Senate from imposing a supermajority rule for confirmations. Otherwise, "the Senate, acting unilaterally, could thereby increase its own power at the expense of the President" and "essentially take over the appointment process from the President." He concluded: "the Framers never intended for Congress to have such unchecked authority to impose supermajority voting requirements that fundamentally change the nature of our democratic processes." (He expressed less concern with legislative filibusters.)

History confirms Judge Edwards's constitutional interpretation. A Senate majority has never been denied its constitutional right to confirm judicial nominees--until now. The obstruction is as unprecedented as it is harmful.

Some have cited, to justify the current filibusters, the example of Abe Fortas, whom President Lyndon Johnson nominated to be chief justice in 1968. But majority rule was not under attack in that case. Dogged by allegations of ethical improprieties and bipartisan opposition, Fortas was unable to obtain the votes of 51 senators to prematurely end debate. Three days later, Johnson withdrew the nomination altogether.

The judicial confirmation process has reached the bottom of a decades-long downward spiral. Our current state of affairs is neither fair nor representative of the bipartisan majority of this body. For democracy to work, and for the constitutional principle of majority rule to prevail, this obstructionism must end, and we must bring matters to a vote. As Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge famously said of filibusters: "To vote without debating is perilous, but to debate and never vote is imbecile." Two years is too long. The Senate needs a fresh start.

Mr. Cornyn is a senator from Texas and chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on the Constitution. He served previously on the Supreme Court of Texas, and as the state's attorney general.

Schumer's Latest Bit Of Trickery
EDITORIAL
Tampa Tribune
Published: May 6, 2003

N ew York's Sen. Charles Schumer, a particularly odious character, has suggested to President Bush that the Senate and president give up their constitutionally prescribed roles in the selection of federal judges.

Seizing on the president's description of the judicial nomination and confirmation process as ``broken,'' Schumer would turn to nominating commissions to ensure ``a true balance'' is achieved on the bench.

Each commission would be made up of an equal number of Democrats and Republicans chosen by the president and the Senate leader of the opposition party. The commissions would recommend one candidate whom the president would nominate and the Senate would confirm.

Well, setting aside the inconvenient fact that the Constitution requires the executive to select and nominate federal judges, commissions made up of men and women chosen for partisan reasons would not take the politics out of the judicial selection process, nor would they guarantee ``true balance,'' whatever that is.

Balance, whether pertaining to judicial philosophy or ideology or gender or race, is in theory achieved through periodic changes in the executive branch.

But even if we were to treat Schumer's proposal as not objectionable because we could amend the Constitution, the defining question must be whether it would result in a better court. And the answer is no.

Consider Florida. Judicial nominating commissions here were created to take the politics out of the selection process, but that cannot be done. As a result, no one is responsible.

At least under the present system of choosing federal judges, the politics are out front. We know where the president stands. We know where senators like Schumer stand. With committees, the political agendas would be hidden, and nobody would be responsible.

That Schumer would dispatch his constitutional role comes as no surprise. He is, after all, an architect of the Senate's ``filibuster'' policy, preventing a final vote on two Bush candidates and in effect requiring a supermajority for confirmation.

That the Democrats are using the filibuster (even though they continue to conduct other business) to keep Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen off the bench has led some commentators to suggest the president fill those seats and other judicial vacancies with appointments during the next congressional recess.

Better still, the president should take his case to the people and point out who the Senate Democrats' ``mainstream'' candidates are - intensely nontraditional eccentrics who would delete ``God'' from the Pledge of Allegiance and approve the horror of partial-birth abortion.

Bush should pound home the message that he won't have democracy thwarted.

He should force a true filibuster. Let the Democrats be responsible for bringing the Senate to a standstill, and then let us see who folds.

Jose,

Good morning. I have the video tapes you requested.

Additionally, our Executive Director, Ron Carroll, has made a donation to the Scouts endowment fund in honor of Sec Card. A letter was mailed in April regarding the donation. I have taken the liberty of cutting and pasting the letter below. The letter will better explain the recognition.

Question: It is possible for Mr Carroll to present the award to Sec Card in person? perhaps and excellent photo opportunity. Location to be determined as best for your schedule. (Sec Card's office is ideal)

Jose, many thanks for all of your time and support of the Scouting program!

Dear «Salutation»:

An integral part of the National Capital Area
Council's program to expand its endowment trust fund to ensure its future financial stability is the James E. West Fellowship Award. Named after the first Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, the award is a national recognition for those who contribute $1,000 or more in cash or securities to the local council endowment fund.

Our Scout Executive, Ron Carroll, has made a $1,000 donation to the National Capital Area Council Endowment fund in your honor.

As a James E. West Fellowship Award recipient you will be recognized with a personalized engraved brick, 8-by-10-inch certificate, distinctive lapel pin/charm, and an embroidered square knot.

We would like to formally present these items to you at The Alice S. Marriott Patio & The Robert & Dee Leggett Endowment Garden, Re-Dedication and Donor Recognition event. The event is April 26, 2003, 10:00am-11:00am at the Marriott Scout Service Center. Your personalized engraved brick will remain on permanent display in our endowment garden.

Simply put thank you for your support of the Scouting program.

Sincerely,

Dear Senator Schumer:

On behalf of President Bush, I write in response to your letter of April 30.

You propose that the President and Senate leader of the opposite party select in equal numbers members of citizen judicial nominating commissions in each State and circuit who would then select one nominee for each judicial vacancy. The President then would be required to nominate the individual selected by the commission and the Senate required to confirm that individual, at least absent "evidence" that the candidate is "unfit for judicial service." You propose this as a permanent change to the constitutional scheme for appointment of federal judges.

We appreciate and share your stated goal of repairing the "broken" judicial confirmation process and the "vicious cycle" of "delayed" Senate nominees. But we respectfully disagree with your proposal as inconsistent with the Constitution, with the history and traditions of the Nation's federal judicial appointments process, and with the soundest approach for appointment of highly qualified federal judges, as the Founders determined. Rather, as President Bush and many Senators of both parties have stated in the past, the solution to the broken judicial confirmation process is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility to vote up or down on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

I. The Constitution, the Current Problem, and the Solution

Article II of the Constitution provides: The President "shall nominate, and by with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint . . . Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States . . . ." During the first Congress and throughout most of this Nation's history, the Senate has both recognized and exercised its constitutional responsibility under Article II to hold majority, up-or-down votes on a President's nominees within a reasonable time after nomination. The Framers intended that the Senate vote on nominations would prevent Presidential appointment of "unfit characters from State prejudice, from family connection, from personal attachment, or from a view to popularity." Federalist 76.

Your proposal would effectively transfer the nomination power of the President and the confirmation power of the Senate to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens. As the Supreme Court has explained, however, the Appointments Clause is "more than a matter of etiquette or protocol; it is among the significant structural safeguards of the constitutional scheme. By vesting the President with the exclusive power to select the principal (noninferior) officers of the United States, the Appointments Claude prevents congressional encroachment upon the Executive and Judicial Branches. This disposition was also designed to assure a higher quality of appointments: the Framers anticipated that the President would be less vulnerable to interest-group pressure and personal favoritism than would a collective body." Edmond v.

United States, 520 U.S. 651, 659 (1997) (citations omitted). Importantly, as the Supreme Court has also explained, the Appointments Clause not only guards against encroachment "but also preserves another aspect of the Constitution's structural integrity by preventing the diffusion of the appointment power." Freytag v. CIR, 501 U.S. 868, 878 (1991). Therefore, "neither Congress nor the Executive can agree to waive this structural protection" afforded by the Appointments Clause. Id. at 880. These principles and precedents amply demonstrate the constitutional and structural problems with any proposal to transfer the constitutional responsibilities of the President and the Senate to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens.

That said, we very much appreciate your recognition that the Senate's judicial confirmation process is "broken." The precise problem, in our judgment, is that the Senate has too often failed in recent years to hold votes on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination (often because a minority of Senators has used procedural tactics to prevent the Senate from voting and expressing its majority will). Many appeals court nominees have waited years for votes; many others have never received votes. Today, for example, although the Senate never before has denied a vote to an appeals court nominee on account of a filibuster, a minority of Senators are engaged in unprecedented simultaneous filibusters to prevent up or down votes on two superb nominees, Priscilla Owen and Miguel Estrada, who were nominated two years ago and who have the support of a majority of the Senate.

The problem of the Senate not holding votes on certain judicial nominees is a relatively recent development, albeit not new to this Presidency. In the Administrations of both President George H.W. Bush in the 102nd Congress and President Clinton in the 106th Congress, for example, too many appeals court nominees never received up-or-down votes. As President Bush has explained, however, the problem has persisted and significantly worsened in the 107th and 108th Congresses during this President's tenure.

President Bush's commitment to solving this problem also is not new. In June 2000, during the Presidential campaign, then-Governor Bush emphasized that the Senate should hold up-or-down votes on all nominees within a reasonable time after nomination (60 days). Last fall, after two additional years of Senate delays that were causing a judicial vacancy crisis (an "emergency situation," in the words of the American Bar Association), the President proposed a comprehensive three-Branch plan to solve the problem. President Bush stated that this three-Branch plan should apply now and in the future, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate. In particular, he proposed that judges provide one-year advance notice of retirement where possible; in March 2003, the Judicial Conference adopted the President's recommendation. The President proposed that Presidents nominate judges within 180 days of learning of a vacancy; the President is complying with this part of the plan and already has submitted nominations, for example, for the 15 new judgeships created on November 2, 2002. The President also proposed that the Senate vote up or down on judicial nominees within 180 days of receiving a nomination, a generous period of time for all Senators to evaluate nominees and to have their voices heard and their votes counted.

In the past, you and Senators of both parties have publicly agreed with the need for timely Senate votes on judicial nominees. On March 7, 2000, for example, you stated: "The basic problem is it takes so long for us to debate those qualifications. It is an example of Government not fulfilling its constitutional mandate because the President nominates, and we are charged with voting on the nominees. . . . I also plead with my colleagues to move judges with alacrity – vote them up or down. But this delay makes a mockery of the Constitution, makes a mockery of the fact that we are here working, and makes a mockery of the lives of very sincere people who have put themselves forward to be judges and then they hang out there in limbo."

In the 2000 campaign, moreover, several Democrat Senators such as Senator Leahy and Senator Harkin publicly and expressly agreed with then-Governor Bush's proposal for timely votes on nominees. In addition, Senator Specter in 2002, Senator Leahy in 1998, and Senator Bob Graham in 1991 all introduced Senate proposals to ensure timely up-or-down votes on judicial nominees. The Chief Justice, speaking on behalf of the federal Judiciary, also has expressly asked the Senate to ensure prompt up-or-down votes on nominees. And the American Bar Association, for its part, adopted a resolution last summer asking the Senate to hold prompt votes on judicial nominations, stating: "Vote them up or down, but don't hang them out to dry."

In seeking to fix the broken Senate confirmation process, we respectfully ask that you and other Senators consider these past statements, a sample of which are listed below, advocating timely up-or-down Senate votes on judicial nominees and ensure such votes no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate:

- Senator Leahy on October 3, 2000, stated: "Governor Bush and I, while we disagree on some issues, have one very significant issue on which we agree. He gave a speech a while back and criticized what has happened in the Senate where confirmations are held up not because somebody votes down a nominee but because they cannot ever get a vote. Governor Bush said: You have the nominee. Hold the hearing. Then, within 60 days, vote them up or vote them down. Don't leave them in limbo. Frankly, that is what we are paid to do in this body. We are paid to vote either yes or no – not vote maybe. When we hold a nominee up by not allowing them a vote and not taking any action one way or the other, we are not only voting 'maybe,' but we are doing a terrible disservice to the man or woman to whom we do this."

- Senator Leahy on June 18, 1998, stated: "I have stated over and over again on this floor that I would refuse to put an anonymous hold on any judge; that I would object and fight against any filibuster on a judge, whether it is somebody I opposed or supported; that I felt the Senate should do its duty. If we don't like somebody the President nominates, vote him or her down. But don't hold them in this anonymous unconscionable limbo, because in doing that, the minority of Senators really shame all Senators."

- Senator Daschle on October 5, 1999, stated: "As Chief Justice Rehnquist has recognized, 'The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry it should vote him up or vote him down.' An up or down vote, that is all we ask for Berzon and Paez. And after years of waiting, they deserve at least that much. . . . I find it simply baffling that a Senator would vote against even voting on a judicial nomination."

- Senator Harkin on September 14, 2000, stated: "I'll just close by saying that Governor Bush had the right idea. He said the candidate should get an up or down vote within 60 days of their nomination."

    - Senator Harkin on October 6, 2000, stated that then-Governor Bush's proposal for an up-or-down vote within 60 days of nomination was a "great idea."

- Senator Biden on March 19, 1997, stated: "I respectfully suggest that everyone who is nominated is entitled to have a shot, to have a hearing and to have a shot to be heard on the floor and have a vote on the floor."

- Senator Bob Graham on April 24, 1991, introduced a bill that would require the Judiciary Committee to report a nomination within 90 days of nomination and would require an up-or-down vote on the floor within 120 days of nomination. Senator Graham stated: "I consider it a judicial emergency when a judgeship is vacant for one day more than necessary."

- Senator Kennedy on February 3, 1998, stated: "We owe it to Americans across the country to give these nominees a vote. If our Republican colleagues don't like them, vote against them. But give them a vote."

    - On September 21, 1999, Senator Kennedy stated: "It is true that some Senators have voiced concerns about these nominations. But that should not prevent a roll call vote which gives every Senator the opportunity to vote 'yes' or 'no.' . . . These delays can only be described as an abdication of the Senate's constitutional responsibility to work with the President and ensure the integrity of our federal courts."

- Senator Durbin on September 28, 1998, stated: "I am not suggesting that we would give our consent to all of these nominees. I am basically saying that this process should come to a close. The Senate should vote."

- Senator Feinstein on September 16, 1999, stated: "A nominee is entitled to a vote. Vote them up; vote them down."

    - Senator Feinstein on October 4, 1999, stated: "Our institutional integrity requires an up-or-down vote."

- Senator Harry Reid on June 9, 2001, stated: "I think we should have up-or-down votes in the committee and on the floor."

REV_00116801

- Senator Feingold on March 8, 2000, stated: "All Judge Paez has ever asked for was this opportunity: an up or down vote on his confirmation. Yet for years, the Senate has denied him that simple courtesy."

- Senator Kohl on September 21, 1999, stated: "These nominees, who have to put their lives on hold waiting for us to act, deserve an up or down vote."

    - Senator Kohl on May 15, 1997, stated: "[L]et's breathe life back into the confirmation process. Let's vote on the nominees who already have been approved by the Judiciary Committee, and let's set a timetable for future hearings on pending judges. Let's fulfill our constitutional responsibilities."

- Senator Lincoln on September 14, 2000, stated: "If we want people to respect their government again, then government must act respectably. It's my hope that we'll take the necessary steps to give these men and these women especially the up or down vote that they deserve."

- Senator Boxer on January 28, 1998, stated: "I think, whether the delays are on the Republican side or the Democratic side, let these names come up, let us have debate, let us vote."

    - Senator Boxer on May 14, 1997, stated: "According to the U.S. Constitution, the President nominates, and the Senate shall provide advice and consent. It is not the role of the Senate to obstruct the process and prevent numbers of highly qualified nominees from even being given the opportunity for a vote on the Senate floor."

- Senator Sarbanes on December 15, 1997, stated: "This politicization . . . has been extended to include the practice of denying nominees an up or down vote on the Senate floor or even in the Judiciary Committee. If the majority of the Senate opposes a judicial nominee enough to derail a nomination by an up or down vote, then at least the process has been served."

    - Senator Sarbanes on March 19, 1997, stated: "It is not whether you let the President have his nominees confirmed. You will not even let them be considered by the Senate for an up-or-down vote. That is the problem today."

- Senator Levin on September 14, 2000, stated: "The truth of the matter is that the leadership of the Senate has a responsibility to do what the Constitution says we should do, which is to advise and at least vote on whether or not to consent to the nomination of nominees for these courts."

REV_00116802

- Senator Levin on May 24, 2000, stated: "These Michigan candidates . . . deserve to have an up or down vote on their nominations. . . . The Senate slowdown has a serious impact on the administration of justice."

II. Additional Points Regarding Your Proposal

I also want to make three other points regarding your proposal.

First, contrary to an implicit suggestion in your proposal, the members of these citizen committees themselves will bring their own views about the best qualities for judicial candidates, and their own preferences and visions and ideologies. But there is an important difference between these private citizens, on the one hand, and the President and 100 Senators, on the other. The American people did not elect these citizens to exercise this critical constitutional responsibility and cannot hold them accountable for their exercise of it.

Moreover, the Framers of the Constitution expressly considered and rejected a committee nomination process, concluding that such a process was unlikely to focus on the "intrinsic merit of the candidate." Federalist 76. As Hamilton explained, "in every exercise of the power of appointing to offices by an assembly of men we must expect to see a full display of all the private and party likings and dislikes, partialities and antipathies, attachments and animosities, which are felt by those who compose the assembly." Id. It will "rarely happen that the advancement of the public service will be the primary object either of party victories or of party negotiations." Id.

By contrast, "[t]he sole and undivided responsibility of one man" – the President – "will naturally beget a livelier sense of duty and a more exact regard to reputation. He will, on this account, feel himself under stronger obligations, and more interested to investigate with care the qualities requisite to the stations to be filled, and to prefer with impartiality the persons who may have the fairest pretensions to them." Id. The Framers wanted the President alone to exercise the power of nomination, moreover, because the "blame of a bad nomination would fall upon the President singly and absolutely." Federalist 77. In a committee nomination process, by contrast, "all idea of responsibility is lost." Id.

For these reasons, the Framers concluded that the President alone was to nominate and the Senate as a body was to vote up or down on the President's nominations.

Second, you explain that your proposal would ensure the merit of federal judges. In your letter to President Bush of March 16, 2001, however, you and Senator Leahy expressed the view that the American Bar Association ratings provide "unique, unbiased and essential information" about judicial candidates, and provide an "independent, apolitical" evaluation of their qualifications. You referred to the ABA rating as the "gold standard" for evaluating nominees. All 42 of the President's appeals court nominees rated so far have received "well-qualified" or "qualified" ABA ratings. By the standard outlined in your letter of March 16, 2001, all of these appeals court nominees warrant your support.

Third, you explain that your proposal would avoid "extremist" judges. The Framers intended that the President would nominate judges and the Senate as a body would vote up-or-down on the nominations to express the majority will of the Senate. The constitutional scheme of Presidential appointment and majority vote in the Senate ensures that the nominees are not unfit. And your proposal would not preclude judges you might label as "extremist" from emerging from the citizen committees. Indeed, even more troubling is the fact that your proposal would not prevent judges whom both the President and a majority of the Senate might view as "extremist" from emerging from the citizen committees, yet the President and Senate would be essentially powerless to prevent the appointment.

One final point warrants mention. We assume that you include Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen in your description of "extremists" given the extraordinary ongoing filibusters of their nominations. But Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen represent the mainstream of American law and American values, as indicated by the fact that the President nominated them and a majority of the Senate supports them. Moreover, Miguel Estrada is supported by prominent Democrat lawyers such as Seth Waxman and Ron Klain and by a bipartisan group of 14 former colleagues in the Solicitor General's office, among many others. He worked for four years in the Clinton Administration. He was unanimously rated "well-qualified" by the American Bar Association. Priscilla Owen is supported by three former Democrat Justices on the Texas Supreme Court with whom she served and 15 past Presidents of the State Bar of Texas. She also received a unanimous "well-qualified" rating from the American Bar Association.

These two nominees are the mainstream. It bears note, moreover, that you and other Democrat Senators have supported nominees such as Jay Bybee and Michael McConnell who (unlike Mr. Estrada and Justice Owen) have taken strong public positions contrary to yours on significant issues of concern to you. We believe that an unfair double standard is being applied to both Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen.

* * *

We appreciate your desire to fix the broken judicial confirmation process. The President believes that the fix is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility and ensure that every judicial nominee receives an up-or-down Senate vote within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

Dear Senator Feinstein:

On behalf of President Bush, I write in response to your letter of May 5.

You propose that the President and the opposite political party select in equal numbers members of citizen judicial nominating commissions in each State who would then select nominees for each judicial vacancy. The President would be required to nominate one of the individuals selected by the commission and the Senate required to vote up or down on that nominee. You propose this as a permanent change to the constitutional scheme for appointment of federal judges.

We appreciate and share your stated belief that the judicial confirmation process is "going in the wrong direction" and is potentially "spiral[ing] out of control." But as explained more fully in my attached letter to Senator Schumer in response to his similar proposal, we respectfully believe that this proposal is inconsistent with the Constitution, with the history and traditions of the Nation's federal judicial appointments process, and with the soundest approach for appointment of highly qualified federal judges, as the Founders determined. Rather, as President Bush and many other Senators of both parties have stated in the past, the solution to the broken judicial confirmation process is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility to vote up or down on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate. We thus agree with your statement of September 16, 1999 in which you stated: "A nominee is entitled to a vote. Vote them up; vote them down." As you said on October 4, 1999, moreover, the Senate's "institutional integrity requires an up-or-down vote."

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

May 6, 2003

Dear Senator Schumer:

On behalf of President Bush, I write in response to your letter of April 30.

You propose that the President and Senate leader of the opposite party select in equal numbers members of citizen judicial nominating commissions in each State and circuit who would then select one nominee for each judicial vacancy. The President then would be required to nominate the individual selected by the commission and the Senate required to confirm that individual, at least absent "evidence" that the candidate is "unfit for judicial service." You propose this as a permanent change to the constitutional scheme for appointment of federal judges.

We appreciate and share your stated goal of repairing the "broken" judicial confirmation process and the "vicious cycle" of "delayed" Senate nominees. But we respectfully disagree with your proposal as inconsistent with the Constitution, with the history and traditions of the Nation's federal judicial appointments process, and with the soundest approach for appointment of highly qualified federal judges, as the Founders determined. Rather, as President Bush and many Senators of both parties have stated in the past, the solution to the broken judicial confirmation process is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility to vote up or down on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

I. The Constitution, the Current Problem, and the Solution

Article II of the Constitution provides: The President "shall nominate, and by with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint . . . Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States . . . ." During the first Congress and throughout most of this Nation's history, the Senate has both recognized and exercised its constitutional responsibility under Article II to hold majority, up-or-down votes on a President's nominees within a reasonable time after nomination. The Framers intended that the Senate vote on nominations would prevent Presidential appointment of "unfit characters from State prejudice, from family connection, from personal attachment, or from a view to popularity." Federalist 76.

Your proposal would effectively transfer the nomination power of the President and the confirmation power of the Senate to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens. As the Supreme Court has explained, however, the Appointments Clause is "more than a matter of etiquette or protocol; it is among the significant structural safeguards of the constitutional scheme. By vesting the President with the exclusive power to select the principal (noninferior) officers of the United States, the Appointments Claude prevents congressional encroachment upon the Executive and Judicial Branches. This disposition was also designed to assure a higher quality of appointments: the Framers anticipated that the President would be less vulnerable to interest-group pressure and personal favoritism than would a collective body." Edmond v. United States, 520 U.S. 651, 659 (1997) (citations omitted). Importantly, as the Supreme Court has also explained, the Appointments Clause not only guards against encroachment "but also preserves another aspect of the Constitution's structural integrity by preventing the diffusion of the appointment power." Freytag v. CIR, 501 U.S. 868, 878 (1991). Therefore, "neither Congress nor the Executive can agree to waive this structural protection" afforded by the Appointments Clause. Id. at 880. These principles and precedents amply demonstrate the constitutional and structural problems with any proposal to transfer the constitutional responsibilities of the President and the Senate to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens.

That said, we very much appreciate your recognition that the Senate's judicial confirmation process is "broken." The precise problem, in our judgment, is that the Senate has too often failed in recent years to hold votes on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination (often because a minority of Senators has used procedural tactics to prevent the Senate from voting and expressing its majority will). Many appeals court nominees have waited years for votes; many others have never received votes. Today, for example, although the Senate never before has denied a vote to an appeals court nominee on account of a filibuster, a minority of Senators are engaged in unprecedented simultaneous filibusters to prevent up or down votes on two superb nominees, Priscilla Owen and Miguel Estrada, who were nominated two years ago and who have the support of a majority of the Senate.

The problem of the Senate not holding votes on certain judicial nominees is a relatively recent development, albeit not new to this Presidency. In the Administrations of both President George H.W. Bush in the 102nd Congress and President Clinton in the 106th Congress, for example, too many appeals court nominees never received up-or-down votes. As President Bush has explained, however, the problem has persisted and significantly worsened in the 107th and 108th Congresses during this President's tenure.

President Bush's commitment to solving this problem also is not new. In June 2000, during the Presidential campaign, then-Governor Bush emphasized that the Senate should hold up-or-down votes on all nominees within a reasonable time after nomination (60 days). Last fall, after two additional years of Senate delays that were causing a judicial vacancy crisis (an "emergency situation," in the words of the American Bar Association), the President proposed a comprehensive three-Branch plan to solve the problem. President Bush stated that this three-Branch plan should apply now and in the future, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate. In particular, he proposed that judges provide one-year advance notice of retirement where possible; in March 2003, the Judicial Conference adopted the President's recommendation. The President proposed that Presidents nominate judges within 180 days of learning of a vacancy; the President is complying with this part of the plan and already has submitted nominations, for example, for the 15 new judgeships created on November 2, 2002. The President also proposed that the Senate vote up or down on judicial nominees within 180 days of receiving a nomination, a generous period of time for all Senators to evaluate nominees and to have their voices heard and their votes counted.

In the past, you and Senators of both parties have publicly agreed with the need for timely Senate votes on judicial nominees. On March 7, 2000, for example, you stated: "The basic problem is it takes so long for us to debate those qualifications. It is an example of Government not fulfilling its constitutional mandate because the President nominates, and we are charged with voting on the nominees. . . . I also plead with my colleagues to move judges with alacrity – vote them up or down. But this delay makes a mockery of the Constitution, makes a mockery of the fact that we are here working, and makes a mockery of the lives of very sincere people who have put themselves forward to be judges and then they hang out there in limbo."

In the 2000 campaign, moreover, several Democrat Senators such as Senator Leahy and Senator Harkin publicly and expressly agreed with then-Governor Bush's proposal for timely votes on nominees. In addition, Senator Specter in 2002, Senator Leahy in 1998, and Senator Bob Graham in 1991 all introduced Senate proposals to ensure timely up-or-down votes on judicial nominees. The Chief Justice, speaking on behalf of the federal Judiciary, also has expressly asked the Senate to ensure prompt up-or-down votes on nominees. And the American Bar Association, for its part, adopted a resolution last summer asking the Senate to hold prompt votes on judicial nominations, stating: "Vote them up or down, but don't hang them out to dry."

In seeking to fix the broken Senate confirmation process, we respectfully ask that you and other Senators consider these past statements, a sample of which are listed below, advocating timely up-or-down Senate votes on judicial nominees and ensure such votes no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate:

- Senator Leahy on October 3, 2000, stated: "Governor Bush and I, while we disagree on some issues, have one very significant issue on which we agree. He gave a speech a while back and criticized what has happened in the Senate where confirmations are held up not because somebody votes down a nominee but because they cannot ever get a vote. Governor Bush said: You have the nominee. Hold the hearing. Then, within 60 days, vote them up or vote them down. Don't leave them in limbo. Frankly, that is what we are paid to do in this body. We are paid to vote either yes or no – not vote maybe. When we hold a nominee up by not allowing them a vote and not taking any action one way or the other, we are not only voting 'maybe,' but we are doing a terrible disservice to the man or woman to whom we do this."

- Senator Leahy on June 18, 1998, stated: "I have stated over and over again on this floor that I would refuse to put an anonymous hold on any judge; that I would object and fight against any filibuster on a judge, whether it is somebody I opposed or supported; that I felt the Senate should do its duty. If we don't like somebody the President nominates, vote him or her down. But don't hold them in this anonymous unconscionable limbo, because in doing that, the minority of Senators really shame all Senators."

- Senator Daschle on October 5, 1999, stated: "As Chief Justice Rehnquist has recognized, 'The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry it should vote him up or vote him down.' An up or down vote, that is all we ask for Berzon and Paez. And after years of waiting, they deserve at least that much. . . . I find it simply baffling that a Senator would vote against even voting on a judicial nomination."

- Senator Harkin on September 14, 2000, stated: "I'll just close by saying that Governor Bush had the right idea. He said the candidate should get an up or down vote within 60 days of their nomination."

    - Senator Harkin on October 6, 2000, stated that then-Governor Bush's proposal for an up-or-down vote within 60 days of nomination was a "great idea."

- Senator Biden on March 19, 1997, stated: "I respectfully suggest that everyone who is nominated is entitled to have a shot, to have a hearing and to have a shot to be heard on the floor and have a vote on the floor."

- Senator Bob Graham on April 24, 1991, introduced a bill that would require the Judiciary Committee to report a nomination within 90 days of nomination and would require an up-or-down vote on the floor within 120 days of nomination. Senator Graham stated: "I consider it a judicial emergency when a judgeship is vacant for one day more than necessary."

- Senator Kennedy on February 3, 1998, stated: "We owe it to Americans across the country to give these nominees a vote. If our Republican colleagues don't like them, vote against them. But give them a vote."

    - On September 21, 1999, Senator Kennedy stated: "It is true that some Senators have voiced concerns about these nominations. But that should not prevent a roll call vote which gives every Senator the opportunity to vote 'yes' or 'no.' . . . These delays can only be described as an abdication of the Senate's constitutional responsibility to work with the President and ensure the integrity of our federal courts."

- Senator Durbin on September 28, 1998, stated: "I am not suggesting that we would give our consent to all of these nominees. I am basically saying that this process should come to a close. The Senate should vote."

- Senator Feinstein on September 16, 1999, stated: "A nominee is entitled to a vote. Vote them up; vote them down."

    - Senator Feinstein on October 4, 1999, stated: "Our institutional integrity requires an up-or-down vote."

- Senator Harry Reid on June 9, 2001, stated: "I think we should have up-or-down votes in the committee and on the floor."

REV_00116833

- Senator Feingold on March 8, 2000, stated: "All Judge Paez has ever asked for was this opportunity: an up or down vote on his confirmation. Yet for years, the Senate has denied him that simple courtesy."

- Senator Kohl on September 21, 1999, stated: "These nominees, who have to put their lives on hold waiting for us to act, deserve an up or down vote."

    - Senator Kohl on May 15, 1997, stated: "[L]et's breathe life back into the confirmation process. Let's vote on the nominees who already have been approved by the Judiciary Committee, and let's set a timetable for future hearings on pending judges. Let's fulfill our constitutional responsibilities."

- Senator Lincoln on September 14, 2000, stated: "If we want people to respect their government again, then government must act respectably. It's my hope that we'll take the necessary steps to give these men and these women especially the up or down vote that they deserve."

- Senator Boxer on January 28, 1998, stated: "I think, whether the delays are on the Republican side or the Democratic side, let these names come up, let us have debate, let us vote."

    - Senator Boxer on May 14, 1997, stated: "According to the U.S. Constitution, the President nominates, and the Senate shall provide advice and consent. It is not the role of the Senate to obstruct the process and prevent numbers of highly qualified nominees from even being given the opportunity for a vote on the Senate floor."

- Senator Sarbanes on December 15, 1997, stated: "This politicization . . . has been extended to include the practice of denying nominees an up or down vote on the Senate floor or even in the Judiciary Committee. If the majority of the Senate opposes a judicial nominee enough to derail a nomination by an up or down vote, then at least the process has been served."

    - Senator Sarbanes on March 19, 1997, stated: "It is not whether you let the President have his nominees confirmed. You will not even let them be considered by the Senate for an up-or-down vote. That is the problem today."

- Senator Levin on September 14, 2000, stated: "The truth of the matter is that the leadership of the Senate has a responsibility to do what the Constitution says we should do, which is to advise and at least vote on whether or not to consent to the nomination of nominees for these courts."

REV_00116834

- Senator Levin on May 24, 2000, stated: "These Michigan candidates . . . deserve to have an up or down vote on their nominations. . . . The Senate slowdown has a serious impact on the administration of justice."

II. Additional Points Regarding Your Proposal

I also want to make three other points regarding your proposal.

First, contrary to an implicit suggestion in your proposal, the members of these citizen committees themselves will bring their own views about the best qualities for judicial candidates, and their own preferences and visions and ideologies. But there is an important difference between these private citizens, on the one hand, and the President and 100 Senators, on the other. The American people did not elect these citizens to exercise this critical constitutional responsibility and cannot hold them accountable for their exercise of it.

Moreover, the Framers of the Constitution expressly considered and rejected a committee nomination process, concluding that such a process was unlikely to focus on the "intrinsic merit of the candidate." Federalist 76. As Hamilton explained, "in every exercise of the power of appointing to offices by an assembly of men we must expect to see a full display of all the private and party likings and dislikes, partialities and antipathies, attachments and animosities, which are felt by those who compose the assembly." Id. It will "rarely happen that the advancement of the public service will be the primary object either of party victories or of party negotiations." Id.

By contrast, "[t]he sole and undivided responsibility of one man" – the President – "will naturally beget a livelier sense of duty and a more exact regard to reputation. He will, on this account, feel himself under stronger obligations, and more interested to investigate with care the qualities requisite to the stations to be filled, and to prefer with impartiality the persons who may have the fairest pretensions to them." Id. The Framers wanted the President alone to exercise the power of nomination, moreover, because the "blame of a bad nomination would fall upon the President singly and absolutely." Federalist 77. In a committee nomination process, by contrast, "all idea of responsibility is lost." Id.

For these reasons, the Framers concluded that the President alone was to nominate and the Senate as a body was to vote up or down on the President's nominations.

Second, you explain that your proposal would ensure the merit of federal judges. In your letter to President Bush of March 16, 2001, however, you and Senator Leahy expressed the view that the American Bar Association ratings provide "unique, unbiased and essential information" about judicial candidates, and provide an "independent, apolitical" evaluation of their qualifications. You referred to the ABA rating as the "gold standard" for evaluating nominees. All 42 of the President's appeals court nominees rated so far have received "well-qualified" or "qualified" ABA ratings. By the standard outlined in your letter of March 16, 2001, all of these appeals court nominees warrant your support.

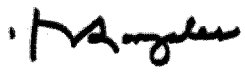
Third, you explain that your proposal would avoid "extremist" judges. The Framers intended that the President would nominate judges and the Senate as a body would vote up-or-down on the nominations to express the majority will of the Senate. The constitutional scheme of Presidential appointment and majority vote in the Senate ensures that the nominees are not unfit. And your proposal would not preclude judges you might label as "extremist" from emerging from the citizen committees. Indeed, even more troubling is the fact that your proposal would not prevent judges whom both the President and a majority of the Senate might view as "extremist" from emerging from the citizen committees, yet the President and Senate would be essentially powerless to prevent the appointment.



One final point warrants mention. We assume that you include Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen in your description of "extremists" given the extraordinary ongoing filibusters of their nominations. But Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen represent the mainstream of American law and American values, as indicated by the fact that the President nominated them and a majority of the Senate supports them. Moreover, Miguel Estrada is supported by prominent Democrat lawyers such as Seth Waxman and Ron Klain and by a bipartisan group of 14 former colleagues in the Solicitor General's office, among many others. He worked for four years in the Clinton Administration. He was unanimously rated "well-qualified" by the American Bar Association. Priscilla Owen is supported by three former Democrat Justices on the Texas Supreme Court with whom she served and 15 past Presidents of the State Bar of Texas. She also received a unanimous "well-qualified" rating from the American Bar Association.

These two nominees are the mainstream. It bears note, moreover, that you and other Democrat Senators have supported nominees such as Jay Bybee and Michael McConnell who (unlike Mr. Estrada and Justice Owen) have taken strong public positions contrary to yours on significant issues of concern to you. We believe that an unfair double standard is being applied to both Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen.

* * *

We appreciate your desire to fix the broken judicial confirmation process. The President believes that the fix is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility and ensure that every judicial nominee receives an up-or-down Senate vote within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

May 6, 2003

Dear Senator Schumer:

On behalf of President Bush, I write in response to your letter of April 30.

You propose that the President and Senate leader of the opposite party select in equal numbers members of citizen judicial nominating commissions in each State and circuit who would then select one nominee for each judicial vacancy. The President then would be required to nominate the individual selected by the commission and the Senate required to confirm that individual, at least absent "evidence" that the candidate is "unfit for judicial service." You propose this as a permanent change to the constitutional scheme for appointment of federal judges.

We appreciate and share your stated goal of repairing the "broken" judicial confirmation process and the "vicious cycle" of "delayed" Senate nominees. But we respectfully disagree with your proposal as inconsistent with the Constitution, with the history and traditions of the Nation's federal judicial appointments process, and with the soundest approach for appointment of highly qualified federal judges, as the Founders determined. Rather, as President Bush and many Senators of both parties have stated in the past, the solution to the broken judicial confirmation process is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility to vote up or down on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

I. The Constitution, the Current Problem, and the Solution

Article II of the Constitution provides: The President "shall nominate, and by with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint . . . Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States . . . ." During the first Congress and throughout most of this Nation's history, the Senate has both recognized and exercised its constitutional responsibility under Article II to hold majority, up-or-down votes on a President's nominees within a reasonable time after nomination. The Framers intended that the Senate vote on nominations would prevent Presidential appointment of "unfit characters from State prejudice, from family connection, from personal attachment, or from a view to popularity." Federalist 76.

Your proposal would effectively transfer the nomination power of the President and the confirmation power of the Senate to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens. As the Supreme Court has explained, however, the Appointments Clause is "more than a matter of etiquette or protocol; it is among the significant structural safeguards of the constitutional scheme. By vesting the President with the exclusive power to select the principal (noninferior) officers of the United States, the Appointments Claude prevents congressional encroachment upon the Executive and Judicial Branches. This disposition was also designed to assure a higher quality of appointments: the Framers anticipated that the President would be less vulnerable to interest-group pressure and personal favoritism than would a collective body." Edmond v. United States, 520 U.S. 651, 659 (1997) (citations omitted). Importantly, as the Supreme Court has also explained, the Appointments Clause not only guards against encroachment "but also preserves another aspect of the Constitution's structural integrity by preventing the diffusion of the appointment power." Freytag v. CIR, 501 U.S. 868, 878 (1991). Therefore, "neither Congress nor the Executive can agree to waive this structural protection" afforded by the Appointments Clause. Id. at 880. These principles and precedents amply demonstrate the constitutional and structural problems with any proposal to transfer the constitutional responsibilities of the President and the Senate to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens.

That said, we very much appreciate your recognition that the Senate's judicial confirmation process is "broken." The precise problem, in our judgment, is that the Senate has too often failed in recent years to hold votes on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination (often because a minority of Senators has used procedural tactics to prevent the Senate from voting and expressing its majority will). Many appeals court nominees have waited years for votes; many others have never received votes. Today, for example, although the Senate never before has denied a vote to an appeals court nominee on account of a filibuster, a minority of Senators are engaged in unprecedented simultaneous filibusters to prevent up or down votes on two superb nominees, Priscilla Owen and Miguel Estrada, who were nominated two years ago and who have the support of a majority of the Senate.

The problem of the Senate not holding votes on certain judicial nominees is a relatively recent development, albeit not new to this Presidency. In the Administrations of both President George H.W. Bush in the 102nd Congress and President Clinton in the 106th Congress, for example, too many appeals court nominees never received up-or-down votes. As President Bush has explained, however, the problem has persisted and significantly worsened in the 107th and 108th Congresses during this President's tenure.

President Bush's commitment to solving this problem also is not new. In June 2000, during the Presidential campaign, then-Governor Bush emphasized that the Senate should hold up-or-down votes on all nominees within a reasonable time after nomination (60 days). Last fall, after two additional years of Senate delays that were causing a judicial vacancy crisis (an "emergency situation," in the words of the American Bar Association), the President proposed a comprehensive three-Branch plan to solve the problem. President Bush stated that this three-Branch plan should apply now and in the future, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate. In particular, he proposed that judges provide one-year advance notice of retirement where possible; in March 2003, the Judicial Conference adopted the President's recommendation. The President proposed that Presidents nominate judges within 180 days of learning of a vacancy; the President is complying with this part of the plan and already has submitted nominations, for example, for the 15 new judgeships created on November 2, 2002. The President also proposed that the Senate vote up or down on judicial nominees within 180 days of receiving a nomination, a generous period of time for all Senators to evaluate nominees and to have their voices heard and their votes counted.

In the past, you and Senators of both parties have publicly agreed with the need for timely Senate votes on judicial nominees. On March 7, 2000, for example, you stated: "The basic problem is it takes so long for us to debate those qualifications. It is an example of Government not fulfilling its constitutional mandate because the President nominates, and we are charged with voting on the nominees. . . . I also plead with my colleagues to move judges with alacrity – vote them up or down. But this delay makes a mockery of the Constitution, makes a mockery of the fact that we are here working, and makes a mockery of the lives of very sincere people who have put themselves forward to be judges and then they hang out there in limbo."

In the 2000 campaign, moreover, several Democrat Senators such as Senator Leahy and Senator Harkin publicly and expressly agreed with then-Governor Bush's proposal for timely votes on nominees. In addition, Senator Specter in 2002, Senator Leahy in 1998, and Senator Bob Graham in 1991 all introduced Senate proposals to ensure timely up-or-down votes on judicial nominees. The Chief Justice, speaking on behalf of the federal Judiciary, also has expressly asked the Senate to ensure prompt up-or-down votes on nominees. And the American Bar Association, for its part, adopted a resolution last summer asking the Senate to hold prompt votes on judicial nominations, stating: "Vote them up or down, but don't hang them out to dry."

In seeking to fix the broken Senate confirmation process, we respectfully ask that you and other Senators consider these past statements, a sample of which are listed below, advocating timely up-or-down Senate votes on judicial nominees and ensure such votes no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate:

- Senator Leahy on October 3, 2000, stated: "Governor Bush and I, while we disagree on some issues, have one very significant issue on which we agree. He gave a speech a while back and criticized what has happened in the Senate where confirmations are held up not because somebody votes down a nominee but because they cannot ever get a vote. Governor Bush said: You have the nominee. Hold the hearing. Then, within 60 days, vote them up or vote them down. Don't leave them in limbo. Frankly, that is what we are paid to do in this body. We are paid to vote either yes or no – not vote maybe. When we hold a nominee up by not allowing them a vote and not taking any action one way or the other, we are not only voting 'maybe,' but we are doing a terrible disservice to the man or woman to whom we do this."

- Senator Leahy on June 18, 1998, stated: "I have stated over and over again on this floor that I would refuse to put an anonymous hold on any judge; that I would object and fight against any filibuster on a judge, whether it is somebody I opposed or supported; that I felt the Senate should do its duty. If we don't like somebody the President nominates, vote him or her down. But don't hold them in this anonymous unconscionable limbo, because in doing that, the minority of Senators really shame all Senators."

- Senator Daschle on October 5, 1999, stated: "As Chief Justice Rehnquist has recognized, 'The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry it should vote him up or vote him down.' An up or down vote, that is all we ask for Berzon and Paez. And after years of waiting, they deserve at least that much. . . . I find it simply baffling that a Senator would vote against even voting on a judicial nomination."

- Senator Harkin on September 14, 2000, stated: "I'll just close by saying that Governor Bush had the right idea. He said the candidate should get an up or down vote within 60 days of their nomination."

    - Senator Harkin on October 6, 2000, stated that then-Governor Bush's proposal for an up-or-down vote within 60 days of nomination was a "great idea."

- Senator Biden on March 19, 1997, stated: "I respectfully suggest that everyone who is nominated is entitled to have a shot, to have a hearing and to have a shot to be heard on the floor and have a vote on the floor."

- Senator Bob Graham on April 24, 1991, introduced a bill that would require the Judiciary Committee to report a nomination within 90 days of nomination and would require an up-or-down vote on the floor within 120 days of nomination. Senator Graham stated: "I consider it a judicial emergency when a judgeship is vacant for one day more than necessary."

- Senator Kennedy on February 3, 1998, stated: "We owe it to Americans across the country to give these nominees a vote. If our Republican colleagues don't like them, vote against them. But give them a vote."

    - On September 21, 1999, Senator Kennedy stated: "It is true that some Senators have voiced concerns about these nominations. But that should not prevent a roll call vote which gives every Senator the opportunity to vote 'yes' or 'no.' . . . These delays can only be described as an abdication of the Senate's constitutional responsibility to work with the President and ensure the integrity of our federal courts."

- Senator Durbin on September 28, 1998, stated: "I am not suggesting that we would give our consent to all of these nominees. I am basically saying that this process should come to a close. The Senate should vote."

- Senator Feinstein on September 16, 1999, stated: "A nominee is entitled to a vote. Vote them up; vote them down."

    - Senator Feinstein on October 4, 1999, stated: "Our institutional integrity requires an up-or-down vote."

- Senator Harry Reid on June 9, 2001, stated: "I think we should have up-or-down votes in the committee and on the floor."

REV_00116842

- Senator Feingold on March 8, 2000, stated: "All Judge Paez has ever asked for was this opportunity: an up or down vote on his confirmation. Yet for years, the Senate has denied him that simple courtesy."

- Senator Kohl on September 21, 1999, stated: "These nominees, who have to put their lives on hold waiting for us to act, deserve an up or down vote."

    - Senator Kohl on May 15, 1997, stated: "[L]et's breathe life back into the confirmation process. Let's vote on the nominees who already have been approved by the Judiciary Committee, and let's set a timetable for future hearings on pending judges. Let's fulfill our constitutional responsibilities."

- Senator Lincoln on September 14, 2000, stated: "If we want people to respect their government again, then government must act respectably. It's my hope that we'll take the necessary steps to give these men and these women especially the up or down vote that they deserve."

- Senator Boxer on January 28, 1998, stated: "I think, whether the delays are on the Republican side or the Democratic side, let these names come up, let us have debate, let us vote."

    - Senator Boxer on May 14, 1997, stated: "According to the U.S. Constitution, the President nominates, and the Senate shall provide advice and consent. It is not the role of the Senate to obstruct the process and prevent numbers of highly qualified nominees from even being given the opportunity for a vote on the Senate floor."

- Senator Sarbanes on December 15, 1997, stated: "This politicization . . . has been extended to include the practice of denying nominees an up or down vote on the Senate floor or even in the Judiciary Committee. If the majority of the Senate opposes a judicial nominee enough to derail a nomination by an up or down vote, then at least the process has been served."

    - Senator Sarbanes on March 19, 1997, stated: "It is not whether you let the President have his nominees confirmed. You will not even let them be considered by the Senate for an up-or-down vote. That is the problem today."

- Senator Levin on September 14, 2000, stated: "The truth of the matter is that the leadership of the Senate has a responsibility to do what the Constitution says we should do, which is to advise and at least vote on whether or not to consent to the nomination of nominees for these courts."

REV_00116843

- Senator Levin on May 24, 2000, stated: "These Michigan candidates . . . deserve to have an up or down vote on their nominations. . . . The Senate slowdown has a serious impact on the administration of justice."

II. Additional Points Regarding Your Proposal

I also want to make three other points regarding your proposal.

First, contrary to an implicit suggestion in your proposal, the members of these citizen committees themselves will bring their own views about the best qualities for judicial candidates, and their own preferences and visions and ideologies. But there is an important difference between these private citizens, on the one hand, and the President and 100 Senators, on the other. The American people did not elect these citizens to exercise this critical constitutional responsibility and cannot hold them accountable for their exercise of it.

Moreover, the Framers of the Constitution expressly considered and rejected a committee nomination process, concluding that such a process was unlikely to focus on the "intrinsic merit of the candidate." Federalist 76. As Hamilton explained, "in every exercise of the power of appointing to offices by an assembly of men we must expect to see a full display of all the private and party likings and dislikes, partialities and antipathies, attachments and animosities, which are felt by those who compose the assembly." Id. It will "rarely happen that the advancement of the public service will be the primary object either of party victories or of party negotiations." Id.

By contrast, "[t]he sole and undivided responsibility of one man" – the President – "will naturally beget a livelier sense of duty and a more exact regard to reputation. He will, on this account, feel himself under stronger obligations, and more interested to investigate with care the qualities requisite to the stations to be filled, and to prefer with impartiality the persons who may have the fairest pretensions to them." Id. The Framers wanted the President alone to exercise the power of nomination, moreover, because the "blame of a bad nomination would fall upon the President singly and absolutely." Federalist 77. In a committee nomination process, by contrast, "all idea of responsibility is lost." Id.

For these reasons, the Framers concluded that the President alone was to nominate and the Senate as a body was to vote up or down on the President's nominations.

Second, you explain that your proposal would ensure the merit of federal judges. In your letter to President Bush of March 16, 2001, however, you and Senator Leahy expressed the view that the American Bar Association ratings provide "unique, unbiased and essential information" about judicial candidates, and provide an "independent, apolitical" evaluation of their qualifications. You referred to the ABA rating as the "gold standard" for evaluating nominees. All 42 of the President's appeals court nominees rated so far have received "well-qualified" or "qualified" ABA ratings. By the standard outlined in your letter of March 16, 2001, all of these appeals court nominees warrant your support.

Third, you explain that your proposal would avoid "extremist" judges. The Framers intended that the President would nominate judges and the Senate as a body would vote up-or-down on the nominations to express the majority will of the Senate. The constitutional scheme of Presidential appointment and majority vote in the Senate ensures that the nominees are not unfit. And your proposal would not preclude judges you might label as "extremist" from emerging from the citizen committees. Indeed, even more troubling is the fact that your proposal would not prevent judges whom both the President and a majority of the Senate might view as "extremist" from emerging from the citizen committees, yet the President and Senate would be essentially powerless to prevent the appointment.

One final point warrants mention. We assume that you include Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen in your description of "extremists" given the extraordinary ongoing filibusters of their nominations. But Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen represent the mainstream of American law and American values, as indicated by the fact that the President nominated them and a majority of the Senate supports them. Moreover, Miguel Estrada is supported by prominent Democrat lawyers such as Seth Waxman and Ron Klain and by a bipartisan group of 14 former colleagues in the Solicitor General's office, among many others. He worked for four years in the Clinton Administration. He was unanimously rated "well-qualified" by the American Bar Association. Priscilla Owen is supported by three former Democrat Justices on the Texas Supreme Court with whom she served and 15 past Presidents of the State Bar of Texas. She also received a unanimous "well-qualified" rating from the American Bar Association.

These two nominees are the mainstream. It bears note, moreover, that you and other Democrat Senators have supported nominees such as Jay Bybee and Michael McConnell who (unlike Mr. Estrada and Justice Owen) have taken strong public positions contrary to yours on significant issues of concern to you. We believe that an unfair double standard is being applied to both Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen.

* * *

We appreciate your desire to fix the broken judicial confirmation process. The President believes that the fix is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility and ensure that every judicial nominee receives an up-or-down Senate vote within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

Senate Democrats prepare to delay more Bush judicial nominees

Spartanburg (SC)Herald-Tribune

EDITORIAL

Senate Democrats have launched another filibuster to make sure that a second Bush nominee never gets a vote by the full body.

Democrats have already held up the nomination of Miguel Estrada to a federal appeals court for months using a filibuster. Now they are using the same tactic against the nomination of Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Democrats don't have the votes necessary to defeat the nominations in an open vote, so they are trying to make sure the votes are never taken. They do so by filibustering, by continuing to debate the topic whenever it comes up, refusing to allow a vote to be taken. It takes 60 votes in the Senate to close debate and force a vote.

So what the Democrats are doing is using the rules to prevent the full Senate from carrying out its constitutional duty to vote on the president's judicial nominees.

Why? Why do Senate Democrats refuse to let their body carry out its duty?

Because they say Bush's nominees are too conservative for them. They say that Estrada is a stealth conservative because they have been unable to prove his ideology. They accuse Owen of being anti-abortion and pro-business.

Of course, the fact of the matter is that the Constitution gives the president the ability to appoint judges. The people vote for the president they want and the ideology they want used to select judges. As a check on that authority, the Senate is empowered to give advice and consent to the president, to confirm or reject his nominees.

If a vote of the full Senate were allowed, both Estrada and Owen would be confirmed.

So, in order to enforce their ideological blockade, Senate Democrats have short-circuited the constitutional process. They say they may also filibuster other nominees.

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., announced: "History will look kindly on us for doing so."

He is wrong. History will record that Democrats tried to assume a power they didn't have, that they tried to negate the effect of the democratic process, that they refused to allow a president elected by the people to exercise the power granted to him by the Constitution and that they corrupted their own body by refusing to allow it to fulfill its constitutional duty -- all because they insisted on pushing an ideology rejected by the voters.

JUSTICE GONZALES, joined by JUSTICE ENOCH, concurring.

I fully join in the Court's judgment and opinion. I agree that there is no evidence supporting the trial court's finding that Jane Doe was not sufficiently well informed. And I agree that the contrary position is established as a matter of law.

Only in this, an appeal after remand of the first of four Jane Doe cases, has the Court granted a minor's application to bypass notifying her parents before she consents to an abortion. n1 Yet in each case, the Court has struggled to render the correct decision, and some members of the Court have strongly disagreed. The tenor of the opinions have been unmistakably contentious. It has been suggested that the Court's decisions are motivated by personal ideology. See Jane Doe 4(I), 19 S.W.3d 322, 2000 Tex. LEXIS 27, <> *16 (HECHT, J., dissenting). To the contrary, every member of this Court agrees that the duty of a judge is to follow the law as written by the Legislature. n2 This case is no different. The Court's decision is based on the language of the Parental Notification Act as written by the Legislature and on established rules of construction. Any suggestion that something else is going on is simply wrong.

Legislative intent is the polestar of statutory construction. See City of LaPorte v. Barfield, 898 S.W.2d 288, 292 (Tex. 1995). <> Our role as judges requires that we put aside our own personal views of what we might like to see enacted, and instead do our best to discern what the Legislature actually intended. See Fitzgerald v. Advanced Spine Fixation Sys., Inc., 996 S.W.2d 864, 865-66 (Tex. 1999). <> We take the words of the statute as the surest guide to legislative intent. See id. at 866. <> Once we discern the Legislature's intent we must put it into effect, even if we ourselves might have made different policy choices. See id.

The starting point for understanding the Parental Notification Act is its provision that a medical professional may not perform an abortion on a minor without first notifying one of the parents. See TEX. FAM. CODE § 33.003(a) <> . The policy decision here is clear -- to protect parents' rights to involve themselves in their daughters' decisions and to encourage that involvement. But that is only the starting point. The Legislature did not make this parental right absolute. Instead, the Legislature created three exceptions, allowing a minor to avoid notifying her parents if she can show: (1) she is mature and sufficiently well informed to make the decision to have an abortion performed without [46] notification of either parent, (2) notification of the parents would not be in the minor's best interest, or (3) notification of the parents may lead to physical, sexual, or emotional abuse of the minor. See TEX. FAM. CODE § 33.003(i) <> .

The dissenting opinions suggest that the exceptions to the general rule of notification should be very rare and require a high standard of proof. I respectfully submit that these are policy decisions for the Legislature. And I find nothing in this statute to directly show that the Legislature intended such a narrow construction. As the Court demonstrates, the Legislature certainly could have written section 33.033(i) to make it harder to bypass a parent's right to be involved in decisions affecting their daughters. See 19 S.W.3d at 350. <> But it did not. Likewise, parts of the statute's legislative history directly contradict the suggestion that the Legislature intended bypasses to be very rare. See 19 S.W.3d at 352 <> (detailing legislative history). Thus, to construe the Parental Notification Act so narrowly as to eliminate bypasses, or to create hurdles that simply are not to be found in the words of the statute, would be an unconscionable act of judicial activism. As a judge, I hold the rights of parents to protect and guide the education, safety, health, and development of their children as one of the most important rights in our society. But I cannot rewrite the statute to make parental rights absolute, or virtually absolute, particularly when, as here, the Legislature has elected not to do so. The Court said in Doe 1(I) that a minor must make at least three showings before she may exercise the bypass rights the Legislature gave "mature and sufficiently well informed" minors under section 33.003(i). In re Doe 1(I), 19 S.W.3d 249, 2000 Tex. LEXIS 21 (Tex. 2000). <> These showings are to ensure that the minor can demonstrate the level of maturity and knowledge the Legislature seems to have intended when it passed a statute that primarily protects parental rights, but also confers judicial bypass rights to certain minors. Based on the evidence of Doe's maturity and knowledge, I conclude the limitations upon parental rights in section 33.003(i) apply here. Therefore, I am compelled to grant Doe's application.

It is important to appreciate that the Legislature adopted a statutory scheme that subordinates parental rights in the case of a mature and sufficiently well informed minor, even if the minor has an ideal relationship with her parents, and even if notifying the parents would not only not place the minor in emotional or physical danger, but may in fact be in her best interest. While the ramifications of such a law and the results of the Court's decision here may be personally troubling to me as a parent, it is my obligation as a judge to impartially apply the laws of this state without imposing my moral view on the decisions of the Legislature. JUSTICE HECHT charges that our decision demonstrates the Court's determination to construe the Parental Notification Act as the Court believes the Act should be construed and not as the Legislature intended. See 19 S.W.3d 346, 373-374, 2000 Tex. LEXIS 67, <> *115-120 (HECHT, J., dissenting). I respectfully disagree. This decision demonstrates the Court's determination to see to it that we discharge our responsibilities as judges, and that personal ideology is subordinated to the public will that is reflected in the words of the Parental Notification Act, including the provisions allowing a judicial bypass.

Because the majority opinion correctly applies the Act as written to the facts in this record, I concur.

JUSTICE GONZALES, joined by JUSTICE ENOCH, concurring.

I fully join in the Court's judgment and opinion. I agree that there is no evidence supporting the trial court's finding that ÿJane Doe was not sufficiently well informed. And I agree that the contrary position is established as a matter of law.

Only in this, an appeal after remand of the first of four Jane Doe cases, has the Court granted a minor's application to bypass notifying her parents before she consents to an abortion. n1 Yet in each case, the Court has struggled to render the correct decision, and some members of the Court have strongly disagreed. The tenor of the opinions have been unmistakably contentious. It has been suggested that the Court's decisions are motivated by personal ideology. See Jane Doe 4(I), 19 S.W.3d 322, 2000 Tex. LEXIS 27, *16 (HECHT, J., dissenting). To the contrary, every member of this Court agrees that the duty of a judge is to follow the law as written by the Legislature. n2 This case is no different. The Court's decision is based on the language of the Parental Notification Act as written by the Legislature and on established rules of construction. Any suggestion that something else is going on is simply wrong.

Legislative intent is the polestar of statutory construction. See City of LaPorte v. Barfield, 898 S.W.2d 288, 292 (Tex. 1995). Our role as judges requires that we put aside our own personal views ÿof what we might like to see enacted, and instead do our best to discern what the Legislature actually intended. See Fitzgerald v. Advanced Spine Fixation Sys., Inc., 996 S.W.2d 864, 865-66 (Tex. 1999). We take the words of the statute as the surest guide to legislative intent. See id. at 866. Once we discern the Legislature's intent we must put it into effect, even if we ourselves might have made different policy choices. See id.

The starting point for understanding the Parental Notification Act is its provision that a medical professional may not perform an abortion on a minor without first notifying one of the parents. See TEX. FAM. CODE õ 33.003(a). The policy decision here is clear -- to protect parents' rights to involve themselves in their daughters' decisions and to encourage that involvement. But that is only the starting point. The Legislature did not make this parental right absolute. Instead, the Legislature created three exceptions, allowing a minor to avoid notifying her parents if she can show: (1) she is mature and sufficiently well informed to make the decision to have an abortion performed without ý[46]ý notification of either parent, (2) notification of the parents would not be in the minor's best interest, or (3) notification of the parents may lead to physical, sexual, or emotional abuse of the minor. See TEX. FAM. CODE õ 33.003(i).

The dissenting opinions suggest that the exceptions to the general rule of notification should be very rare and require a high standard of proof. I respectfully submit that these are policy decisions for the Legislature. And I find nothing in this statute to directly show that the Legislature intended such a narrow construction. As the Court demonstrates, the Legislature certainly could have written section 33.033(i) to make it harder to bypass a ýparent's right to be involved in decisions affecting their daughters. See 19 S.W.3d at 350. But it did not. Likewise, parts of the statute's legislative history directly contradict the suggestion that the Legislature intended bypasses to be very rare. See 19 S.W.3d at 352 (detailing legislative history). Thus, to construe the Parental Notification Act so narrowly as to eliminate bypasses, or to create hurdles that simply are not to be found in the words of the statute, would be an unconscionable act of judicial activism. As a judge, I hold the rights of parents to protect and guide the education, safety, health, and development of their children as one of the most important rights in our society. But I cannot rewrite the statute to make parental rights absolute, or virtually absolute, particularly when, as here, the Legislature has elected not to do so. The Court said in Doe 1(I) that a minor must make at least three showings before she may exercise the bypass rights the Legislature gave "mature and sufficiently well informed" minors under section 33.003(i). In re Doe 1(I), 19 S.W.3d 249, 2000 Tex. LEXIS 21 (Tex. 2000). These showings are to ensure that the minor can demonstrate the level of maturity and knowledge the Legislature seems to have intended when it passed a statute that primarily protects parental rights, but also confers judicial bypass rights to certain minors. Based on the evidence of Doe's maturity and knowledge, I conclude the limitations upon parental rights in section 33.003(i) apply here. Therefore, I am compelled to grant Doe's application.

It is important to appreciate that the Legislature adopted a statutory scheme that subordinates parental rights in the case of a mature and sufficiently well informed minor, even if the minor has an ideal relationship with her parents, and even if notifying the parents would not only not place the minor in emotional or physical danger, but may in fact be in her best interest. While the ramifications of such a law and the results of the Court's decision here may be personally troubling to me as a parent, it is my obligation as a judge to impartially apply the laws of this state without imposing my moral view on the decisions of the Legislature. JUSTICE HECHT charges that our decision demonstrates the Court's determination to construe the Parental Notification Act as the Court believes the Act should be construed and not as the Legislature intended. See 19 S.W.3d 346, 373-374, 2000 Tex. LEXIS 67, *115-120 (HECHT, J., dissenting). I respectfully disagree. This decision demonstrates the Court's determination to see to it that we discharge our responsibilities as judges, and that personal ideology is subordinated to the public will that is reflected in the words of the Parental Notification Act, including the provisions allowing a judicial bypass.

Because the majority opinion correctly applies the Act as written to the facts in this record, I concur.

Ensign nominates son of Harry Reid as judge

By STEVE TETREAULT

STEPHENS WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON -- Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., has recommended that President Bush consider crossing party lines and bestow a federal judgeship on the son of a good friend, Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev.

In a move political and legal observers describe as highly unusual, Reno attorney Leif Reid was put forward to the White House this week as one of four possibilities to replace U.S. District Court Judge David Hagen, who is taking senior status later this year.

Ensign interviewed Leif Reid, a registered Democrat, and concluded he is &eminently qualified8 for the federal bench, Ensign spokesman Jack Finn said.

Leif Reid, 35, is a Stanford Law School graduate who was admitted to the Nevada Bar seven years ago.

Ensign did not disclose the names of the other three persons forwarded for Bush,s consideration. Ensign declined to be interviewed.

Harry Reid also had no comment. His spokeswoman, Tessa Hafen, said Reid played no role in engineering a recommendation for Leif Reid, one of his five children who are playing an increasingly visible role in Nevada law and politics.

&My understanding is that Ensign chose the four names, and Reid didn,t have a problem with any of them,8 Hafen said.

Shortly after Ensign became a senator in 2001, he and Reid disclosed an arrangement where Ensign would recommend three judicial nominees and then Reid would be allowed to choose the fourth.

Since then, U.S. District judges James Mahan and Larry Hicks, and 9th U.S. Circuit Court Judge Jay Bybee have been confirmed on Ensign,s recommendations.

That would appear to put the current vacancy in Reid,s court. But his chief of staff, Susan McCue, said, &That is absolutely not the case. When it came to Leif, that was entirely John Ensign.8

Other sources in the congressional delegation said the senators largely put the judge deal aside as they developed a working relationship.

It is not unheard of for senators to help their children achieve high appointments, experts said. Then- Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., in 2001 arranged the nomination of his 28--year old son Strom Jr. to be U.S. attorney in South Carolina. Sen. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., promoted his son David for a federal judgeship.

Carl Tobias, a professor at the William S. Boyd School of Law in Las Vegas, said he could name several federal judges who were appointed in their mid-30s, including Michael Luttig of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

&It,s unusual that someone with that level of experience might be appointed, but not unprecedented,8 Tobias said.

What makes this case stand out is that Ensign has recommended a Democrat, said Eric Herzik, acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at University of Nevada Reno.

&It,s not uncommon for politically connected sons to be recommended, but it,s very unusual to be recommended by a senator from the opposition party,8 Herzik said.

White House officials had no immediate comment Friday. From bashing Bush over the Yucca Mountain Project to engineering filibusters of his judicial nominees, Harry Reid, the Senate,s No. 2 Democratic leader, has been a thorn for the president.

While it would seem unlikely Bush would embrace the son of one of his congressional adversaries, observers said nothing should be ruled out.

&It might depend on what Bush thinks he could get, and there are a lot of things he,d like to get from Reid,8 one analyst said.8District court nominees are not considered as precious as appeals court nominees. They can be used politically and are sometimes.8

Since September 1999, Leif Reid has been an associate at Lionel, Sawyer and Collins, which also employs his brothers, Key, Rory and Josh, as attorneys. He received a Stanford law degree in 1995 and was admitted to the Nevada Bar a year later. Leif Reid clerked for Procter Hug Jr., chief judge of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and was a prosecutor under U.S. Attorney Kathryn Landreth, who was a Harry Reid appointee.

Harry Reid inadvertently disclosed the news during a breakfast Thursday with Ensign and visiting Nevadans. Within hours, word spread through political and legal circles in the state.

Attorneys contacted Friday declined to speak on the record, but their initial reaction focused on Leif Reid,s experience.

&He has no qualifications whatsoever to be a federal district judge, but he,s a man of character,8 said one assistant U.S. attorney who worked with Leif Reid in Las Vegas. &He,s a very nice guy.8

The assistant U.S. attorney, who asked not to be identified, knows of only one case Leif Reid tried during his time with the Las Vegas office: &a simple bank robbery.8 Reid lacks legal skills and should not have been hired as a federal prosecutor, his former colleague said.

&A lot of people felt his old man pulled a lot of strings for him,8 the source said.

But Landreth and her first assistant, Howard Zlotnick, said Leif Reid won the job on &outstanding credentials.8

&Whenever a politically connected offspring gets something, it,s often seen as the good-old-boy network, which is sometimes true but also unfair to the success of the child,8 UNR analyst Herzik said. &He may very well be deserving.8

Review-Journal writer Carri Geer Thevenot and Adam Ashton of the Stephens Washington Bureau contributed to this story.

Ensign puts Reid,s son on judge list
By Benjamin Grove

WASHINGTON -- In an intriguing political move, Sen. John Ensign, R-Nev., included Leif Reid, the son of Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., on a short list of recommendations for President Bush to consider for a federal judge post.

A judge will be needed to fill the spot of U.S. District Judge David Hagen of Reno, who will assume senior status, and fewer duties, later this year.

As the senator of the president,s party, Ensign last week forwarded the names of four potential judicial nominees to the White House. Bush will nominate one to the Senate, which confirms federal nominees. Ensign has not released the names of the other three recommendations.

Reid and Ensign declined comment. The two senators had said that they had an agreement that Ensign would recommend three judicial candidates and allow Reid to recommend the fourth. The Senate has confirmed Ensign,s first three recommendations.

But Reid had nothing to do with his son making Ensign,s short list, although Reid is honored that Ensign would nominate him, Reid spokewoman Tessa Hafen said.

&This was entirely Senator Ensign,s decision,8 Hafen said.

Hafen said Reid approved of all four of Ensign,s recommendations.

Reid and Ensign are friends, although their political views on most issues contrast sharply. The two have sided with their respective parties in recent, bitterly partisan Senate battles over federal judicial nominees.

Ensign,s move raised eyebrows in political circles in Nevada. But there haven,t been open complaints about it by Republicans, said Nevada Republican Party director Joe Brezny. Still Republicans seized on the Ensign recommendation to take a jab at Reid for adamantly opposing several of Bush,s GOP nominees.

Leif Reid &should be given the same consideration as Miguel Estrada,8 the embattled nominee whose nomination is stalled, Brezny said. &We need to be consistent in how we look at these candidates.8

In a carefully worded statement, Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-Nev., who is considering whether to challenge Reid for his Senate seat, said, &Clearly, Sen. Ensign believes that (Leif Reid) is prepared to take a lifetime appointment to the federal bench. As all future nominees are considered, I hope that the highly skilled, well qualified nominees currently before the Senate may be approved in a timely manner, without the unprecedented filibusters that continue to stonewall the advice and consent process.8

Leif Reid was not available for comment. Reid, 35, is a 1995 Stanford law school graduate and works as a lawyer in the Reno office of Lionel Sawyer & Collins. The firm is the largest in Nevada and also employs Sen. Reid,s three other sons, Rory, Josh and Key. Leif Reid focuses on commercial, energy, utilities and administrative law.

It,s not the first time a senator,s son has been considered for a federal post. In 2001 the Senate confirmed former Sen. Strom Thurmond,s son as U.S. attorney in South Carolina. Last year the Senate approved David Bunning, who was recommended by his father Sen. Jim Bunning, R-Ky., to be a federal judge.

There,s nothing improper about one lawmaker nominating the son of another lawmaker, said Georgetown University law professor David Cole, a federal courts expert.

&There,s no nepotism bar or anything like that,8 Cole said. &You apply the same standards that you would to any other nominee.8

Dear Ms. Nelson:

I am forwarding to your attention a list of suggested invitees to the White House Law Day event. I am sure that many of the individuals and/or legal organizations listed already have been included in your outreach. However, we thought we would share the list of organizations both legal and civic, that cooperate with us for Law Day. If I can be of further assistance, please feel free to contact me.

Hatch group may go +nuclear, on judges
Plan would limit use of Rule XXII in Dem filibusters
By Alexander Bolton and Geoff Earle
Several senior Republican senators are seeking wider party backing for a bold plan that would break the Democrats, filibuster of President Bush,s judicial nominees.
Their approach calls for employing a rarely used parliamentary tactic to overturn current Senate procedures.
Under the strategy envisioned by Senate Judiciary Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), among others, the Republicans would strip any Senate minority * currently the Democrats * of their ability to filibuster presidential nominees.

Approval by Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist (Tenn.), which is being sought, would all but assure that the plan would go forward.
Under the most likely scenario now under discussion, they would secure a ruling from the chair that Senate Rule XXII does not apply to executive submissions to the Senate * and that includes judicial nominees. Rule XXII provides for unlimited debate on all legislative issues that reach the floor unless three-fifths of the Senate calls a halt.
With such an approach, a favorable ruling from the chair on limiting the scope of Rule XXII could stand after only a simple majority approved it.
Anticipating these moves, Democrats have already asked the Senate parliamentarian to weigh in on the issue in their defense.
From the standpoint of the proponents, the appeal of this &silver-bullet8 strategy is that it would quash the Democratic blockade without requiring 60 votes, the number needed by current rules to halt such delaying tactics, or 67 votes, the number needed to change a filibustered Senate rule.
One drawback of this proposed tactic is that it might destroy whatever is left of the working relationship between Democrats and Republicans. That is why some legislative experts liken the parliamentary tool to a legislative nuclear bomb.
Under the most likely scenario, the presiding officer of the Senate * perhaps Vice President Dick Cheney * would rule that a filibuster of presidential nominees is unprotected by Rule XXII.
Democrats would need 51 votes to overturn that ruling. In practical terms, that means they would need the help of two GOP defectors * three if Sen. Zell Miller (D-Ga.) votes with Republicans, as he often has.
Another alternative would be to change the rule through the Senate Rules Committee. But that process would entail extensive hearings and negotiations, and would be unlikely to attract Democratic support.
Democrats would view any change of Senate rules that circumscribed the rights of the minority party and was not approved by two-thirds of the chamber as an abuse of majority power.
However, with few exceptions, Senate Republicans view the filibuster of circuit court nominees, a tactic that until recently was rarely used, as an abuse of minority power.
Democrats are filibustering Bush,s nominations of Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals, respectively. This has prompted an outcry from conservatives in Congress and around the country.
And Republicans on the Judiciary Committee expect Democrats soon to filibuster two more Bush nominees: Bill Pryor, nominated to the 11th Circuit Court, and Carolyn Kuhl, nominated to the 9th Circuit Court, said Margarita Tapia, spokeswoman for the panel.
However, what may be really at stake is the future makeup of the Supreme Court. The justices on the high tribunal have now served together for nearly a decade. Three of the nine justices are over 70 years old.
Although Senate Republican leaders have kept their parliamentary strategy close to the vest, Hatch offered an insight into it in during an interview Friday with The Hill.
Hatch said the Democratic filibuster is &violative of the Constitution8 and &totally politicizing of the judicial selection process,8 adding: &I know how to break it, and I will when the time comes.8

When asked how he would break the Democratic blockade, Hatch said: &You,ve got to deny Rule XXII on the executive calendar. I think you,ll see this in the not-too-distant future because the process is broken and it can,t continue like this.8
All regular Senate business*that is to say all public and private bills*is placed on the legislative calendar. Business sent to the Senate from the White House, such as treaties, executive branch nominees and judicial branch nominees, are placed on the executive calendar.
Hatch believes the Senate has a right to set its own rules * in this case the right to filibuster * for the legislative calendar but not for the executive calendar because that would entail imposing Senate rules on the executive branch and would violate the Constitution,s separation of powers.
&The executive branch and the judicial branch are co-equal [with the legislative branch],8 Hatch said.
However, when pressed later about how specifically he would curtail Rule XXII, Hatch said: &Rule XXII should not apply to the executive calendar. I, m not going to go into the plan. There are a variety of methodologies we, re looking at.8
The current Senate stalemate over nominees is the culmination of the increasingly intense battle over the ideological makeup of the federal judiciary, and a sign, many GOP lawmakers say, that the judicial nominating process is &broken.8
&I think it,s a big problem,8 said Sen. Trent Lott (R-Miss.), the chairman of the Senate Rules Committee. &I think it,s unconstitutional, but I would defer to Senator Hatch about what is the best way to deal with the problem. I don,t think we can let this stand. We cannot let the Democrats set this [precedent] in perpetuity for them and for us, requiring 60 votes to confirm a judge.8
Lott said the Senate Republican leadership &has to make the final call, but there are a number of us who think we,ve got to take some further action*I think Ted Stevens [of Alaska], Orrin Hatch and a number of others.8
Lott said that there are ways to change how the Senate does business without enlisting the support of 67 senators, the number needed for a filibustered rule change, but he would not reveal any specific details: &I don,t want to get into it right now. I don,t want to reveal our hand because if we say what exactly we are entertaining, the Democrats will try to find a way to block it.8
One GOP leadership aide said Frist is open to the suggestions of Hatch and others but will not make any hasty decisions.
&We,re not going to rule out any rules changes,8 said the aide. &Mr. Frist may do something later but he,s not going to tear up the rules book. He is going to proceed in a very slow and deliberative way.8
&We,ve learned in the past just because a member or aide says he knows the way to do something that may not be what the parliamentarian says,8 the aide added.
However, when asked if he has solicited the parliamentarian about curbing Rule XXII, Hatch said: &I know what the parliamentarian is going to say.8
A Senate Democratic leadership aide warned against an attempt by Hatch to exempt judicial nominees from the Senate,s filibuster rules. &Rule XXII obviously does apply to nominees, no matter how he wants to parse it.8
If Republicans were able to force a change by jamming through a procedural ruling, &It would be a nuclear winter in the Senate,8 said the aide. &This place would fall apart. It would be dire consequences if that happened, in my opinion.8
The aide said that Hatch doesn,t have the case he thinks he has to win a ruling of the chair, based on the Senate,s precedents, because Republicans have in effect already acknowledged the Democratic filibuster of Miguel Estrada.
&He,s got a precedent of five cloture votes on Estrada, so he doesn,t have a very good precedent,8 said the aide.

The aide also pointed to other times when there have been filibusters and cloture votes on judicial nominees. He called &ludicrous8 GOP claims that the ongoing Democratic filibusters of Estrada and Owen were unprecedented. Cloture was filed to end a filibuster against Abe Fortas,s elevation to chief justice of the Supreme Court. Cloture was also filed and invoked on Stephen Breyer when he was a federal appeals court nominee in 1980.
Those arguments aside, the aide conceded that it might be possible for Republicans to force a rules change by moving that Rule XXII does not apply to judicial nominees and then getting a favorable ruling from the chair.
Then the key question would be, &How would the chair rule, and how would the parliamentarian rule, and would the chair listen to his ruling?8 said the aide. The chair would not necessarily have to hew to that advice) although the aide said it would be extraordinary to ignore the parliamentarian,s ruling.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

May 6, 2003

Dear Senator Schumer:

On behalf of President Bush, I write in response to your letter of April 30.

You propose that the President and Senate leader of the opposite party select in equal numbers members of citizen judicial nominating commissions in each State and circuit who would then select one nominee for each judicial vacancy. The President then would be required to nominate the individual selected by the commission and the Senate required to confirm that individual, at least absent "evidence" that the candidate is "unfit for judicial service." You propose this as a permanent change to the constitutional scheme for appointment of federal judges.

We appreciate and share your stated goal of repairing the "broken" judicial confirmation process and the "vicious cycle" of "delayed" Senate nominees. But we respectfully disagree with your proposal as inconsistent with the Constitution, with the history and traditions of the Nation's federal judicial appointments process, and with the soundest approach for appointment of highly qualified federal judges, as the Founders determined. Rather, as President Bush and many Senators of both parties have stated in the past, the solution to the broken judicial confirmation process is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility to vote up or down on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

I. The Constitution, the Current Problem, and the Solution

Article II of the Constitution provides: The President "shall nominate, and by with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint . . . Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States . . . ." During the first Congress and throughout most of this Nation's history, the Senate has both recognized and exercised its constitutional responsibility under Article II to hold majority, up-or-down votes on a President's nominees within a reasonable time after nomination. The Framers intended that the Senate vote on nominations would prevent Presidential appointment of "unfit characters from State prejudice, from family connection, from personal attachment, or from a view to popularity." Federalist 76.

Your proposal would effectively transfer the nomination power of the President and the confirmation power of the Senate to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens. As the Supreme Court has explained, however, the Appointments Clause is "more than a matter of etiquette or protocol; it is among the significant structural safeguards of the constitutional scheme. By vesting the President with the exclusive power to select the principal (noninferior) officers of the United States, the Appointments Claude prevents congressional encroachment upon the Executive and Judicial Branches. This disposition was also designed to assure a higher quality of appointments: the Framers anticipated that the President would be less vulnerable to interest-group pressure and personal favoritism than would a collective body." Edmond v. United States, 520 U.S. 651, 659 (1997) (citations omitted). Importantly, as the Supreme Court has also explained, the Appointments Clause not only guards against encroachment "but also preserves another aspect of the Constitution's structural integrity by preventing the diffusion of the appointment power." Freytag v. CIR, 501 U.S. 868, 878 (1991). Therefore, "neither Congress nor the Executive can agree to waive this structural protection" afforded by the Appointments Clause. Id. at 880. These principles and precedents amply demonstrate the constitutional and structural problems with any proposal to transfer the constitutional responsibilities of the President and the Senate to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens.

That said, we very much appreciate your recognition that the Senate's judicial confirmation process is "broken." The precise problem, in our judgment, is that the Senate has too often failed in recent years to hold votes on judicial nominees within a reasonable time after nomination (often because a minority of Senators has used procedural tactics to prevent the Senate from voting and expressing its majority will). Many appeals court nominees have waited years for votes; many others have never received votes. Today, for example, although the Senate never before has denied a vote to an appeals court nominee on account of a filibuster, a minority of Senators are engaged in unprecedented simultaneous filibusters to prevent up or down votes on two superb nominees, Priscilla Owen and Miguel Estrada, who were nominated two years ago and who have the support of a majority of the Senate.

The problem of the Senate not holding votes on certain judicial nominees is a relatively recent development, albeit not new to this Presidency. In the Administrations of both President George H.W. Bush in the 102nd Congress and President Clinton in the 106th Congress, for example, too many appeals court nominees never received up-or-down votes. As President Bush has explained, however, the problem has persisted and significantly worsened in the 107th and 108th Congresses during this President's tenure.

President Bush's commitment to solving this problem also is not new. In June 2000, during the Presidential campaign, then-Governor Bush emphasized that the Senate should hold up-or-down votes on all nominees within a reasonable time after nomination (60 days). Last fall, after two additional years of Senate delays that were causing a judicial vacancy crisis (an "emergency situation," in the words of the American Bar Association), the President proposed a comprehensive three-Branch plan to solve the problem. President Bush stated that this three-Branch plan should apply now and in the future, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate. In particular, he proposed that judges provide one-year advance notice of retirement where possible; in March 2003, the Judicial Conference adopted the President's recommendation. The President proposed that Presidents nominate judges within 180 days of learning of a vacancy; the President is complying with this part of the plan and already has submitted nominations, for example, for the 15 new judgeships created on November 2, 2002. The President also proposed that the Senate vote up or down on judicial nominees within 180 days of receiving a nomination, a generous period of time for all Senators to evaluate nominees and to have their voices heard and their votes counted.

In the past, you and Senators of both parties have publicly agreed with the need for timely Senate votes on judicial nominees. On March 7, 2000, for example, you stated: "The basic problem is it takes so long for us to debate those qualifications. It is an example of Government not fulfilling its constitutional mandate because the President nominates, and we are charged with voting on the nominees. . . . I also plead with my colleagues to move judges with alacrity – vote them up or down. But this delay makes a mockery of the Constitution, makes a mockery of the fact that we are here working, and makes a mockery of the lives of very sincere people who have put themselves forward to be judges and then they hang out there in limbo."

In the 2000 campaign, moreover, several Democrat Senators such as Senator Leahy and Senator Harkin publicly and expressly agreed with then-Governor Bush's proposal for timely votes on nominees. In addition, Senator Specter in 2002, Senator Leahy in 1998, and Senator Bob Graham in 1991 all introduced Senate proposals to ensure timely up-or-down votes on judicial nominees. The Chief Justice, speaking on behalf of the federal Judiciary, also has expressly asked the Senate to ensure prompt up-or-down votes on nominees. And the American Bar Association, for its part, adopted a resolution last summer asking the Senate to hold prompt votes on judicial nominations, stating: "Vote them up or down, but don't hang them out to dry."

In seeking to fix the broken Senate confirmation process, we respectfully ask that you and other Senators consider these past statements, a sample of which are listed below, advocating timely up-or-down Senate votes on judicial nominees and ensure such votes no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate:

- Senator Leahy on October 3, 2000, stated: "Governor Bush and I, while we disagree on some issues, have one very significant issue on which we agree. He gave a speech a while back and criticized what has happened in the Senate where confirmations are held up not because somebody votes down a nominee but because they cannot ever get a vote. Governor Bush said: You have the nominee. Hold the hearing. Then, within 60 days, vote them up or vote them down. Don't leave them in limbo. Frankly, that is what we are paid to do in this body. We are paid to vote either yes or no – not vote maybe. When we hold a nominee up by not allowing them a vote and not taking any action one way or the other, we are not only voting 'maybe,' but we are doing a terrible disservice to the man or woman to whom we do this."

- Senator Leahy on June 18, 1998, stated: "I have stated over and over again on this floor that I would refuse to put an anonymous hold on any judge; that I would object and fight against any filibuster on a judge, whether it is somebody I opposed or supported; that I felt the Senate should do its duty. If we don't like somebody the President nominates, vote him or her down. But don't hold them in this anonymous unconscionable limbo, because in doing that, the minority of Senators really shame all Senators."

- Senator Daschle on October 5, 1999, stated: "As Chief Justice Rehnquist has recognized, 'The Senate is surely under no obligation to confirm any particular nominee, but after the necessary time for inquiry it should vote him up or vote him down.' An up or down vote, that is all we ask for Berzon and Paez. And after years of waiting, they deserve at least that much. . . . I find it simply baffling that a Senator would vote against even voting on a judicial nomination."

- Senator Harkin on September 14, 2000, stated: "I'll just close by saying that Governor Bush had the right idea. He said the candidate should get an up or down vote within 60 days of their nomination."

    - Senator Harkin on October 6, 2000, stated that then-Governor Bush's proposal for an up-or-down vote within 60 days of nomination was a "great idea."

- Senator Biden on March 19, 1997, stated: "I respectfully suggest that everyone who is nominated is entitled to have a shot, to have a hearing and to have a shot to be heard on the floor and have a vote on the floor."

- Senator Bob Graham on April 24, 1991, introduced a bill that would require the Judiciary Committee to report a nomination within 90 days of nomination and would require an up-or-down vote on the floor within 120 days of nomination. Senator Graham stated: "I consider it a judicial emergency when a judgeship is vacant for one day more than necessary."

- Senator Kennedy on February 3, 1998, stated: "We owe it to Americans across the country to give these nominees a vote. If our Republican colleagues don't like them, vote against them. But give them a vote."

    - On September 21, 1999, Senator Kennedy stated: "It is true that some Senators have voiced concerns about these nominations. But that should not prevent a roll call vote which gives every Senator the opportunity to vote 'yes' or 'no.' . . . These delays can only be described as an abdication of the Senate's constitutional responsibility to work with the President and ensure the integrity of our federal courts."

- Senator Durbin on September 28, 1998, stated: "I am not suggesting that we would give our consent to all of these nominees. I am basically saying that this process should come to a close. The Senate should vote."

- Senator Feinstein on September 16, 1999, stated: "A nominee is entitled to a vote. Vote them up; vote them down."

    - Senator Feinstein on October 4, 1999, stated: "Our institutional integrity requires an up-or-down vote."

- Senator Harry Reid on June 9, 2001, stated: "I think we should have up-or-down votes in the committee and on the floor."

REV_00116992

- Senator Feingold on March 8, 2000, stated: "All Judge Paez has ever asked for was this opportunity: an up or down vote on his confirmation. Yet for years, the Senate has denied him that simple courtesy."

- Senator Kohl on September 21, 1999, stated: "These nominees, who have to put their lives on hold waiting for us to act, deserve an up or down vote."

    - Senator Kohl on May 15, 1997, stated: "[L]et's breathe life back into the confirmation process. Let's vote on the nominees who already have been approved by the Judiciary Committee, and let's set a timetable for future hearings on pending judges. Let's fulfill our constitutional responsibilities."

- Senator Lincoln on September 14, 2000, stated: "If we want people to respect their government again, then government must act respectably. It's my hope that we'll take the necessary steps to give these men and these women especially the up or down vote that they deserve."

- Senator Boxer on January 28, 1998, stated: "I think, whether the delays are on the Republican side or the Democratic side, let these names come up, let us have debate, let us vote."

    - Senator Boxer on May 14, 1997, stated: "According to the U.S. Constitution, the President nominates, and the Senate shall provide advice and consent. It is not the role of the Senate to obstruct the process and prevent numbers of highly qualified nominees from even being given the opportunity for a vote on the Senate floor."

- Senator Sarbanes on December 15, 1997, stated: "This politicization . . . has been extended to include the practice of denying nominees an up or down vote on the Senate floor or even in the Judiciary Committee. If the majority of the Senate opposes a judicial nominee enough to derail a nomination by an up or down vote, then at least the process has been served."

    - Senator Sarbanes on March 19, 1997, stated: "It is not whether you let the President have his nominees confirmed. You will not even let them be considered by the Senate for an up-or-down vote. That is the problem today."

- Senator Levin on September 14, 2000, stated: "The truth of the matter is that the leadership of the Senate has a responsibility to do what the Constitution says we should do, which is to advise and at least vote on whether or not to consent to the nomination of nominees for these courts."

REV_00116993

- Senator Levin on May 24, 2000, stated: "These Michigan candidates . . . deserve to have an up or down vote on their nominations. . . . The Senate slowdown has a serious impact on the administration of justice."

II. Additional Points Regarding Your Proposal

I also want to make three other points regarding your proposal.

First, contrary to an implicit suggestion in your proposal, the members of these citizen committees themselves will bring their own views about the best qualities for judicial candidates, and their own preferences and visions and ideologies. But there is an important difference between these private citizens, on the one hand, and the President and 100 Senators, on the other. The American people did not elect these citizens to exercise this critical constitutional responsibility and cannot hold them accountable for their exercise of it.

Moreover, the Framers of the Constitution expressly considered and rejected a committee nomination process, concluding that such a process was unlikely to focus on the "intrinsic merit of the candidate." Federalist 76. As Hamilton explained, "in every exercise of the power of appointing to offices by an assembly of men we must expect to see a full display of all the private and party likings and dislikes, partialities and antipathies, attachments and animosities, which are felt by those who compose the assembly." Id. It will "rarely happen that the advancement of the public service will be the primary object either of party victories or of party negotiations." Id.

By contrast, "[t]he sole and undivided responsibility of one man" – the President – "will naturally beget a livelier sense of duty and a more exact regard to reputation. He will, on this account, feel himself under stronger obligations, and more interested to investigate with care the qualities requisite to the stations to be filled, and to prefer with impartiality the persons who may have the fairest pretensions to them." Id. The Framers wanted the President alone to exercise the power of nomination, moreover, because the "blame of a bad nomination would fall upon the President singly and absolutely." Federalist 77. In a committee nomination process, by contrast, "all idea of responsibility is lost." Id.

For these reasons, the Framers concluded that the President alone was to nominate and the Senate as a body was to vote up or down on the President's nominations.

Second, you explain that your proposal would ensure the merit of federal judges. In your letter to President Bush of March 16, 2001, however, you and Senator Leahy expressed the view that the American Bar Association ratings provide "unique, unbiased and essential information" about judicial candidates, and provide an "independent, apolitical" evaluation of their qualifications. You referred to the ABA rating as the "gold standard" for evaluating nominees. All 42 of the President's appeals court nominees rated so far have received "well-qualified" or "qualified" ABA ratings. By the standard outlined in your letter of March 16, 2001, all of these appeals court nominees warrant your support.

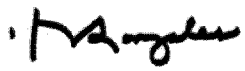
Third, you explain that your proposal would avoid "extremist" judges. The Framers intended that the President would nominate judges and the Senate as a body would vote up-or-down on the nominations to express the majority will of the Senate. The constitutional scheme of Presidential appointment and majority vote in the Senate ensures that the nominees are not unfit. And your proposal would not preclude judges you might label as "extremist" from emerging from the citizen committees. Indeed, even more troubling is the fact that your proposal would not prevent judges whom both the President and a majority of the Senate might view as "extremist" from emerging from the citizen committees, yet the President and Senate would be essentially powerless to prevent the appointment.



One final point warrants mention. We assume that you include Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen in your description of "extremists" given the extraordinary ongoing filibusters of their nominations. But Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen represent the mainstream of American law and American values, as indicated by the fact that the President nominated them and a majority of the Senate supports them. Moreover, Miguel Estrada is supported by prominent Democrat lawyers such as Seth Waxman and Ron Klain and by a bipartisan group of 14 former colleagues in the Solicitor General's office, among many others. He worked for four years in the Clinton Administration. He was unanimously rated "well-qualified" by the American Bar Association. Priscilla Owen is supported by three former Democrat Justices on the Texas Supreme Court with whom she served and 15 past Presidents of the State Bar of Texas. She also received a unanimous "well-qualified" rating from the American Bar Association.

These two nominees are the mainstream. It bears note, moreover, that you and other Democrat Senators have supported nominees such as Jay Bybee and Michael McConnell who (unlike Mr. Estrada and Justice Owen) have taken strong public positions contrary to yours on significant issues of concern to you. We believe that an unfair double standard is being applied to both Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen.

* * *

We appreciate your desire to fix the broken judicial confirmation process. The President believes that the fix is for the Senate to exercise its constitutional responsibility and ensure that every judicial nominee receives an up-or-down Senate vote within a reasonable time after nomination, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

Sincerely,

Alberto R. Gonzales

Michigan Republicans are blue over blue slips
By Sarita Chourey

Despite intense pressure from Michigan's nine Republican House members, their state is unlikely to win any new seats on the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, due to the opposition of Democratic Sens. Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow to four potential nominees from Michigan.

On Monday, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) indicated that the Michigan senators' opposition to the four conservative judicial hopefuls from their state is likely prevent Michigan from additional representation on the court.

JENNA THOMPSON
Sen. Carl Levin (D-Mich.)

"There's not much I can do," Hatch said Monday after Levin and Stabenow filed so-called "blue slips" to prevent President Bush's picks for the Sixth Circuit Court from being considered. "They probably deserve one or two judges, but I suspect they're going to have to go other states to fill those seats."

But on Tuesday, Hatch said he was undecided on how to respond to Levin and Stabenow's attempt to block all the president's nominees from Michigan by taking advantage of a procedure that allows senators to hold up consideration of any judicial nominee from their state.

Levin and Stabenow have also said they will oppose the nomination of Thomas Ludington of Michigan to a seat on the U.S. District Court.

There are 22 judges on the four-state Sixth Circuit Court, but only 10 are active, and only one of those is from Michigan.

Last week, Rep. Michael Rogers (R-Mich.) voiced frustration about the judicial holdup to President Bush during the president's trip to Dearborn, Mich., to speak to Iraqi-Americans.

Rogers also recently sent a letter, signed by all nine Michigan House Republicans, to Hatch urging him to hold hearings on the four Michigan judicial nominees.

Hatch said it's harder to overcome blue slips for district court nominees," adding, "There's a real question of whether blue slips should be honored, and I haven't resolved that question in my mind yet."

Citing Sen. Edward Kennedy's (D-Mass.) adherence to the blue slip rule when he chaired the Judiciary Committee, Hatch said blue slips have to be given serious consideration, but are not the final word. "In the case of the Michigan senators, I don't see a good reason why they should be holding up these very fine nominees," he said.

Rogers, who has conferred with the Department of Justice and met with several members of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said, "We're hearing that the White House will make appointments from other states, and not that they're not great jurors, but we'll lose Michigan's insights on that court. That would be extremely harmful."

Almost a year and a half ago, Michigan's Republicans conferred with 31 assistant U.S. attorneys for the eastern district of Michigan, which prompted the attorneys to write a letter to Levin, urging him to "resolve the current impasse."

The mixture of criminal and appellate lawyers wrote, "The large number of vacancies on the [Sixth Circuit] has made it more difficult for us to do our jobs well, and in some cases has prejudiced the position of the United States."

Levin and Stabenow's opposition of the president's nominees is rooted in the Sixth Circuit Court's history.

Stabenow's GOP predecessor, Secretary of Commerce Spencer Abraham, opposed President Clinton's nomination of Michigan Court of Appeals Judge Helene White to the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court. She waited four years and did not receive a hearing.

Another Clinton nominee, Kathleen McCree Lewis, from Michigan, met a similar fate.

Charles Tiefer, former deputy House counsel, said Democrats are not likely to feel any political fallout.

"I think many Democrats like Sen. [Dianne] Feinstein [D-Calif.] have taken a very measured stance of accommodating who the president and the Republican party want to pick. Against that background of major accommodation, a few blue slips show only adherence to Senate tradition, not obstruction."

Nine senators have not returned blue slips yet, but spokesmen for most of them said the senators are still reviewing the information provided on each of the nominees.

Four of the five nominees for the Sixth Circuit — which spans Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee — are designated for Michigan . The fifth nominee, Deborah Cook, from Ohio, was confirmed by the Senate on Monday.

Sen. Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.) is the only other senator who is opposing a home state nominee. Boxer was angered when Hatch held a hearing on the nomination of Los Angeles Circuit Court Judge Carolyn Kuhl's nomination to the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, even though Boxer did not return a positive blue slip on Kuhl.

As many of you know, Kristen Silverberg is shipping out this week for Baghdad. She will serve as policy advisor to the new Presidential Envoy to Iraq, Amb. Jerry Bremer, who will be the senior Coalition official in Iraq. We wish Kristen well in this important adventure, confident that the reconstruction operation is in good hands.

Filling in for Kristen during her absence will be Jeffrey Kupfer, on generous loan from the Treasury Department, where he is Deputy Chief of Staff. Jeff will be in the same COS office space on the first floor WW, at extension 6-5773. We're grateful to have Jeff in this role; please make him welcome.

There will be drinks in the Chief's office at 5:30 this afternoon, to celebrate Kristen and other departing soldiers in the armies of reconstruction.

FYI -- don't know if this means that other members of the nominations team -- Nathan et al. -- weren't invited, but if not, they really busted their butts meeting the 180 day standard so it would be nice to invite them.

REVISED BRIEFING PAPER

REMARKS ON JUDICIAL CONFIRMATIONS
Tuesday, October, 29, 2002
1:40 p.m. – 2:10 p.m.
East Room
Alberto R. Gonzales

I. PURPOSE

To speak about the judicial vacancy crisis and Senate confirmation process and to propose a specific plan for the timely consideration of judicial nominees.

II. BACKGROUND

The process for Senate confirmation of judges remains broken, exacerbating a judicial vacancy crisis that the Chief Justice of the United States has termed "alarming." The Senate's delay in holding hearings and up-or-down floor votes on judges has been a problem for many years, but is now worse than ever.

Many observers, including the Chief Justice and most recently the American Bar Association, have called for the Senate to give every judicial nominee a timely hearing and up-or-down vote. At your initial announcement of judicial nominees on May 9, 2001, you called for the Senate to ensure a timely hearing and vote for all judicial nominees, no matter who is President or which party controls the Senate.

III. PARTICIPANTS

Attorney General John Ashcroft
Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson
Solicitor General Ted Olson
Judge Alberto Gonzales
Bar leaders, Justice Department officials, lawyers, and others to be determined

IV. PRESS PLAN

Open

V. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS
You arrive State Floor and proceed to Blue Room
You and Judge Gonzales are introduced into East Room by WHCA and proceed to stage.
Judge Gonzales proceeds to podium and you stand to the side of the podium as he delivers brief remarks and introduces you.
Note: Judge Gonzales will take his seat on the front row after his remarks.
You deliver remarks.
You conclude remarks and depart.

VI. REMARKS

Provided by speechwriting.

Hypocrite!

"I find it simply baffling that a Senator would vote against even voting on a judicial nomination."

--Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle,
Congressional Record, Oct. 5, 1999

"Hispanic or non-Hispanic, African American or non-African American, woman or man, it is wrong not to have a vote on the Senate floor."

--Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle,
Congressional Record, Oct. 28, 1999

That was then. Now, Tom Daschle is preventing the full Senate from voting on not one, but two, "well-qualified"* judicial nominees, Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen.

Seeking a better way

U.S. Sen Elizabeth Dole, a North Carolina Republican, was among 10 Senate freshmen who signed a letter last week urging reforms in the way federal judges are nominated and confirmed.

The letter to congressional leaders, signed by nine Republicans and one Democrat, calls for an unspecified "bipartisan solution that will protect the integrity and independence of our nation's courts, ensure fairness for judicial nominees and leave the bitterness of the past behind us."

A long-running stalemate between North Carolina senators has kept the state from having a single judge on the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals since 1999.

Currently, two nominees from the state are pending before the Judiciary Committee. They are District Court Judge Terrence Boyle and Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan.

More nomination news

President Bush announced last week that he plans to nominate C.F. Shappert to be U.S. attorney for the Western District of North Carolina. Shappert, who attended Duke University as an undergraduate, is currently an assistant attorney in that office.

KEY POINTS: LIFTING U.S. SANCTIONS AGAINST IRAQ***
* President Bush has suspended the Iraq Sanctions Act of 1990 imposed by the United States against Iraq's old regime.
* The U.S. has also suspended certain unilateral economic sanctions against Iraq as they begin the process of rebuilding their lives after more than two decades of brutal dictatorship.
* At the President's request, the U.S. Treasury has issued four new general licenses permitting many transactions previously prohibited, including:
-Licenses allowing those interested in providing humanitarian aid to Iraq to begin doing so immediately;
-Personal remittances. Friends and family living in the U.S. are now able to contribute cash payments to any person in Iraq for up to $500 per month;
-Any activity paid for with U.S. government funds to fulfill our obligations under international law to the Iraqi people, including activities by contractors in support of those objectives;
-Privately funded Humanitarian activities by U.S. entities not specifically in support of government objectives are also permitted.
* The regime that was once target of our economic sanctions has been extinguished, and our mission is to now rebuild Iraq. Lifting sanctions is an essential step in providing for the humanitarian and reconstruction needs of Iraq.

Top Bush economic adviser stumped by dog question

WASHINGTON, May 7 (Reuters) - Chief White House economic adviser Stephen Friedman, prepared for hardball questions about President George W. Bush's tax cut plan, was stumped.

``Yvonne'' from Chelmsford, England, didn't seem to care much about the double taxation of dividends or rate cuts.

``My 15-month-old Scottie MacGregor wondered how old Barney was and what his favorite toy was? How did President Bush come to choose a Scottie?'' Yvonne asked Friedman, who on Wednesday hosted an online question-and-answer session on the White House's Web site, www.whitehouse.gov.

Barney is Bush's black Scottish terrier.

``I don't know, but please tell Scottie that I'll ask the president and we'll post later here on whitehouse.gov. I'd ask Barney, but he never wants to talk about dividends,'' Friedman wrote in response.

Yvonne's question was far from the norm during the weekly interactive forum, dubbed ``Ask the White House.''

``The president is concerned about deficits and believes that it is important to return to balanced budgets and budget surpluses. The best way to balance the budget is to grow our economy and control spending in Washington,'' Friedman wrote in response to one question.

A search of the White House Web site revealed that Barney will turn 3 on Sept. 30.

Attached please find a letter being sent around Capitol Hill by Joan Claybrook's Public Citizen, a Naderite "consumer" group. You should know that this and other Nader groups are funded by the trial lawyers -- they serve ATLA's agenda, not consumers'.

Pasted in below the Public Citizen email message is a link to a Capital Research Center story titled "ATLA: How it Works with Ralph Nader Against Tort Reform." Joan Claybrook, one of the authors of this letter, was instrumental in developing ATLA's links to "consumer" groups -- and she admits in this story that just her own group, Public Citizen, takes $200,000 a year from trial lawyers. Below the link is a relevant passage from the article, describing how Public Citizen and other Naderite groups redefine consumer interests as "what's good for ATLA."

Also attached is a basic information packet on ISCRAA (S.887), the Kyl-Cornyn bill, which rebuts the charges made by Claybrook. And if you don't believe that there are serious ethical abuses resulting from the tobacco settlement -- abuses that cost consumers and taxpayers billions, but which "Public Citizen" has been totally silent about -- read pages 3-7 of Senator Cornyn's speech (also attached), which describes the unbelievable corruption that infected the tobacco settlement fee awards in state after state. Also attached is a rebuttal of a "constitutional" analysis of ISCRAA that a local law firm was recently paid to do. Finally, for good measure, Senator Kyl's speech introducing ISCRAA also is attached.

Finally, remember that S.887 is not an "anti-trial lawyer" bill. It only applies to a small subset of cases where there have been gross ethical abuses, and it allows fees as high is 500% of reasonable hourly rates -- as liberal as the most liberal state courts (it is effectively the Florida Supreme Court standard), and much more liberal than what federal courts allows in cases of this size. When Claybrook says that federal courts don't use lodestar, she is wrong -- in high value cases, the courts have made clear that even when they formally apply a "percentage" fee, they base the percentage on what constitutes a reasonable multiple of the lodestar. And federal courts never give more than 300% of that lodestar in $100 million cases.

Dear Senate Staffer,

Please find a letter from Public Citizen urging your opposition to Senate Amendment S. 887 attached. Should you have any questions or require further information on this issue, please do not hesitate to contact Jackson Williams at (202)454-5135.

Thank you in advance for your time and consideration of the enclosed letter of mutual concern.

CJF's Nader Connection
In the mid-1980s, ATLA began to build closer contacts with consumer activists. The Coalition for Consumer Justice, an umbrella organization started by Joan Claybrook, showed ATLA how to create relationships with its "natural allies," i.e., special interest activists who are not afraid to sue. Claybrook had worked closely with Ralph Nader since the mid-1960s and was president of Public Citizen, a consumer group founded by Nader in 1971. She describes the Coalition's objective as lobbying for increased regulation of insurance companies (old foes of ATLA) and resisting insurance company demands for tort reform. Said Claybrook, "The insurance industry's real goal is to limit our right to hold wrongdoers responsible for the permanent injuries they inflict."
But when the trial lawyers met the consumer movement they discovered something about their "natural allies." Roxanne Barton Conlin, an ATLA member who worked on the relationship building effort, expressed it well. "We quickly learned," she recalled in 1992, "how close to the margin of existence many of these groups were...If these groups were to continue...they needed money." A grantmaking organization that could provide regular transfusions of funds to ATLA's new friends was essential. Conlin credits Claybrook for having "helped begin the foundation." She continues to serve as one of seven consumer activist representatives on CJF's 26-member board of trustees.

Since its 1986 founding CJF has contributed $1.3 million to more than 100 consumer advocacy groups. (See Sidebar on page 5.) Grant applications stream to CJF, ensuring that ATLA supports groups that help keep trial lawyers abreast of new developments in "consumer advocacy."
Public Citizen says it does not accept funding from ATLA. But trial lawyer contributions to Nader-backed groups reinforce the ties between them. In a 1999 interview Claybrook admitted that Public Citizen receives about $200,000 per year in donations from individual trial lawyers.
Chamber specifically endorsed arbitration as a less costly and contentious method to resolve disputes. ATLA and Public Citizen went ballistic. Public Citizen's Tyler Slocum cast doubt on arbitration's usefulness; he defended liability lawsuits as a way to force corporations to change their practices in ways "that benefited the consumer."
ATLA president Mary Alexander called the ads a "tragic misuse of our capitalist system."
Why the heated rhetoric? Perhaps because in 2001 the number of arbitration proceedings-200,000-exceeded the number of public jury trials. Arbitration clauses are increasingly used in many contract settlements, including employment, credit, insurance, and securities agreements. Under an arbitration clause, consumers agree to resolve a contract dispute in arbitration rather than through court litigation. An impartial individual or panel hears the issues and decides how to resolve the dispute. Arbitration is fast and cheap.
Killing arbitration is an ATLA priority. A July 2002 article in Trial describes arbitration as "the ultimate tort 'reform' tool" because it takes "away a person's right to trial."
Last year ATLA was disappointed when the U.S. Supreme Court refused to weaken arbitration, and it began looking for help from Congress. ATLA supported a number of bills that would make arbitration agreements unenforceable, and it found a vocal supporter for its position in Nader's Public Citizen. In May 2002, Public Citizen published a report attacking the practice of using mandatory arbitration in place of lawsuits. "This growing corporate maneuver is threatening the rule of law," said Public Citizen's Claybrook.

Miss. Rep. Changes Mind on Bush Judge Pick

43 minutes ago

JACKSON, Miss. - The head of the Mississippi Legislative Black Caucus says he no longer opposes U.S. District Judge Charles Pickering's appeals court nomination - a surprising turnabout that could cost him his position.

State Rep. Phillip West, a Democrat, said in a Tuesday statement that he was speaking only for himself and not for the full caucus. The 45-member caucus has vigorously opposed Pickering's nomination to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals (news <http://us.rd.yahoo.com/DailyNews/manual/*http://search.news.yahoo.com/search/news?p=%22U.S.%20Circuit%20Court%20of%20Appeals%22&c=&n=20&yn=c&c=news&cs=nw> - web <http://us.rd.yahoo.com/DailyNews/manual/*http://search.yahoo.com/bin/search?cs=nw&p=U.S.%20Circuit%20Court%20of%20Appeals> sites).

Pickering, nominated to the New Orleans-based court by President Bush (news <http://us.rd.yahoo.com/DailyNews/manual/*http://search.news.yahoo.com/search/news?p=%22President%20Bush%22&c=&n=20&yn=c&c=news&cs=nw> - web <http://us.rd.yahoo.com/DailyNews/manual/*http://search.yahoo.com/search/search?p=George+W.+Bush> sites), has been criticized by black organizations for his record on civil rights issues, including his decision to seek a lighter sentence for a convicted cross-burner.

In February, Pickering and his son, U.S. Rep. Chip Pickering, R-Miss., met privately with caucus members, most of whom had signed a petition stating their opposition to the nomination.

The judge explained how he took heat for testifying against a Ku Klux Klan imperial wizard Sam Bowers in a 1968 murder trial.

"That struck home with me because I know that feeling," said West, who has also been active in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (news <http://us.rd.yahoo.com/DailyNews/manual/*http://search.news.yahoo.com/search/news?p=%22National%20Association%20for%20the%20Advancement%20of%20Colored%20People%22&c=&n=20&yn=c&c=news&cs=nw> - web <http://us.rd.yahoo.com/DailyNews/manual/*http://search.yahoo.com/bin/search?cs=nw&p=National%20Association%20for%20the%20Advancement%20of%20Colored%20People> sites). "I have been ostracized and shunned by both blacks and whites and characterized as a racist myself."

West said he waited to take a public stance on the Pickering nomination because he wanted to persuade the caucus to drop its opposition. When the caucus didn't act, he said, he issued his own statement.

"It left me with the opportunity and the right to express my opinion," West said Wednesday.

Chip Pickering said the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee (news <http://us.rd.yahoo.com/DailyNews/manual/*http://search.news.yahoo.com/search/news?p=%22Judiciary%20Committee%22&c=&n=20&yn=c&c=news&cs=nw> - web <http://us.rd.yahoo.com/DailyNews/manual/*http://search.yahoo.com/bin/search?cs=nw&p=Judiciary%20Committee> sites) hearing on his father's nomination is tentatively scheduled for next Wednesday, and he is confident his father will survive the committee's vote.

The younger Pickering was not sure, however, that there are enough votes in the full Senate to break a filibuster by Democrats.

Bush renominated Charles Pickering this year after opposition from key Democrats derailed the nomination a year ago. The Republicans took back control of the Senate this year.

GOP Shifts Tactics on Judges
Weighs lawsuit, rule change to break nominee stalemate

By Anne Q. Hoy
WASHINGTON BUREAU

May 8, 2003

Washington - Frustrated by Democratic filibusters of two of President George W. Bush's judicial nominees, Senate Republicans are considering a major shift in tactics that some Democrats contend would only inflame partisan tensions over the stalemate.

Republicans are contemplating going to the Supreme Court to test the constitutionality of using a supermajority threshold of 60 votes to block judicial nominees from a final vote that would carry with a simple majority.

The legal route is being studied by Republican Sens. Saxby Chambliss of Georgia and Lindsey Graham of South Carolina, though neither has yet decided whether to file a lawsuit.

Other Republicans have floated a plan to try to change a Senate rule that requires 60 votes to end a filibuster before a troubled nomination can get a final vote, something that requires only a simple majority to prevail.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist (R-Tenn.) said yesterday he still prefers "an up or down vote" and is not advocating either proposal.

Democrats are blocking two appeals court nominations from final votes: Washington attorney Miguel Estrada for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen for the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on the Fifth Circuit based in New Orleans. They are prepared to block others they find extreme.

Republicans contend that the two nominees are mainstream and that Republicans have the votes to confirm them. Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah) says Democrats are pursuing obstructionist tactics.

Democrats counter that the two nominees are far too conservative. Sen. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.), a Judiciary Committee member, said that of the 123 judicial nominees Bush has proposed, the Senate has confirmed 121.

"If there was ever a view, 'We want everything,' it's shown by these temper tantrums," Schumer said.

Schumer has called on Bush to set up bipartisan nominating commissions in each state to select nominees, a proposal White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales dismissed as a transfer of Bush's constitutional powers "to a group of unelected and unaccountable private citizens."

The Judiciary Committee is expected today to send to the full Senate another controversial nominee: Carolyn Kuhl for the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit. Kuhl, a Los Angeles Superior Court judge, played a key role in supporting tax-exempt status for Bob Jones University during the Reagan administration. The university has since lost the tax status because of discriminatory practices.

CA Judicial Nominee Opposed By Both Home-State Senators. The Los Angeles Times (5/8, Savage, Weinstein) reports Carolyn Kuhl, a veteran of the Reagan Administration Justice Department, &called for the Justice Department to lead an attack on the US Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade ruling that legalized abortion. She also helped persuade President Reagan's attorney general to change sides and support a restored tax exemption for Bob Jones University and other racially discriminatory private schools.8 Now, &a wide array of civil rights, environmental, feminist and labor organizations is deeply opposed to Kuhl's nomination to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, which reviews cases from nine Western states, including California.8 Since &returning to Los Angeles in 1986, she has won many admirers as a lawyer and, more recently, as a Superior Court judge. She has been endorsed by more than 100 local judges - Democrats as well as Republicans - and by the former president of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund for a seat on the 9th Circuit, based in San Francisco.8 Kuhl is &likely to narrowly win approval8 by the Senate Judiciary Committee. Until recently, Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.) & had been officially undecided. But on Wednesday, her spokesman said she would oppose the nomination - a decision that heartened liberal activists who say Kuhl may still be blocked on the Senate floor.8 Kuhl's critics & emphasized that it would be highly unusual for the Senate to even hold a vote on - much less confirm - a nominee who is opposed by both of her home-state senators.8

I think the more press the better on the nucular option. Also, I think we should refute this Dem talking point (which is made everywhere, including in the article below): "of the 123 judicial nominees Bush has proposed, the Senate has confirmed 121" Not true. Some nominees, e.g. the Michigan Four, are not even being let out of committee.

Will the GOP "Go Nuclear" Over Judges?

Don't bet on it.

here's been a flurry of speculation in the Senate and in conservative circles about a so-called "nuclear option" to break through the current deadlock over judicial nominations.

The scenario envisions Republicans using parliamentary maneuvers either to declare the Democratic filibusters of Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen unconstitutional, or to decide that Senate rules forbid the minority party from using the filibuster in cases of judicial nominations. In either case, the scenario goes, a simple majority of 51 votes could then be held to uphold the parliamentary ruling. Then, the Senate could move on to a final confirmation vote for both nominees.

While some senators have indeed studied the strategy, sources say there is little or no chance it will be used by the Senate Republican leadership anytime soon. What is more likely is that the GOP will try to introduce a version of a filibuster-breaking plan outlined by Georgia Democratic Sen. Zell Miller.

The Miller proposal is based on an idea put forth in 1995 by Democratic senators Joseph Lieberman and Tom Harkin (which itself was based on still earlier proposals). The plan in effect makes it progressively more difficult for a minority party to stand in the way of the majority's will. Under the plan, when a filibuster is under way and the majority tries to break it by holding a cloture vote, the first vote would require, as it does today, 60 votes to break the filibuster. But if the first attempt fails, the next cloture vote would require just 57 votes to end debate. If a third cloture vote was needed, 54 votes would be needed to end debate. Finally, a fourth cloture vote would require just 51 votes, a simple majority, to move on to a final confirmation vote. At that point, the majority's will would prevail.

"This would preserve the Senate tradition," Miller said in written testimony on Tuesday, "while still giving the minority plenty of time to plead its case without blocking the majority forever."

The only problem with such a proposal, Republicans concede, is that it would require a change in Senate rules, a move that would run into stiff Democratic resistance. Miller himself notes that in 1995, the Lieberman-Harkin plan won just 19 votes. "I'm enough of a realist to know things haven't changed that much in eight years and my proposal wouldn't fare much better today," Miller said. "But at the very least...I would hope we would consider applying my proposal to judicial nominations."

Still, it's likely that Republicans will introduce some version of the Miller plan, even though they know it is unlikely to win early approval. "It's an argument that has to be rolled out, discussed, you build public attention to it, and then see what happens," says one Republican.

If the Miller plan fails, GOP leaders will then consider whether to move on to stronger measures, including a stepped-up political campaign against so-called moderate Democrats who have so far supported the Estrada and Owen filibusters. Whether Republicans will ever decide to use the "nuclear option" is not clear.

The strategizing on Capitol Hill comes amid yet another highly visible breakdown in relations between the parties over the judicial issue. This latest breakdown occurred, ironically, at a hearing called to explore ways to resolve the impasse.

The hearing, held Tuesday, was presided over by Texas Republican Sen. John Cornyn, who chairs the Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution. Cornyn, a freshman, arrived in the Senate in the midst of the judicial fight; having played no role in old conflicts, and having no scores to settle, he set about looking for ways to end the fighting.

The hearing was the result of that search. Cornyn began the session — entitled "Judicial Nominations, Filibusters, and the Constitution: When a majority is denied its right to consent" — by trying to reach out to Democrats, especially to Wisconsin Sen. Russell Feingold, the ranking member of the subcommittee. "Senator Feingold is an honorable and public-minded person," Cornyn said in his opening remarks, "and I'm glad that we've already developed what I believe to be a good, cooperative, bipartisan relationship." "I think we agree...that the current judicial confirmation process is broken and something needs to be done," Cornyn continued, "and the purpose of this hearing is to talk about ideas about what can done."

For the briefest of moments it appeared as if there might be some real energy behind an effort to find a solution to the confirmation crisis. Then came Feingold's chance to speak. His message, and that of his fellow Democrats, might be briefly summarized as: Forget it.

To begin with, Feingold didn't like the name Cornyn had given to the hearing. "Unfortunately, the title of the hearing suggests that it may be intended to turn up the hear rather than cool things down," Feingold said. "The argument recently advanced on the floor by a number of senators that filibusters of judicial nominees are unconstitutional seems to be part of a campaign of political intimidation launched by supporters of the president's nominees. If this hearing is a prelude to a floor effort to rewrite the Senate's rules, or circumvent them through parliamentary tactics, I doubt very much they will succeed, and I am sure they will be me with stiff resistance. The end result could be to take the tensions we feel in this committee and spread them to the floor of the Senate."

In addition, Feingold said that "those of us who take the Constitution seriously" were dismayed at Republican attempts to end the Democratic filibusters of Estrada and Owen. Feingold conceded that the filibuster was a highly unusual tactic in judicial nominations — "We do admit it's an extreme step," he said — but insisted that the real villain in the judicial conflict was the Bush administration. "So far, the White House seems intent on forging ahead with its efforts to push through as many nominees with the most extreme views as possible, in the shortest possible time," Feingold said. Just as bad, he added, Republicans on the committee have "participated in that strategy by pursuing a 'take no prisoners' approach."

And that, at least from a Democratic standpoint, was the end of any "good, cooperative, bipartisan relationship" that might have existed at the hearing.

In the next hour, Feingold's sentiments were repeated by Massachusetts Democrat Ted Kennedy, who revived the old Democratic charge that "President Bush has no mandate from the American people to stack the courts with judges who share his agenda." New York Democrat Charles Schumer, who has proposed that the president solve the confirmation crisis by simply giving up his constitutional responsibility to appoint judges, appeared as a witness, telling the panel, "Yes, we're sort of in deadlock, but this was not started by Democrats."

After opening remarks, the hearing moved on to a long round of testimony from six constitutional experts. Much of the discussion focused on the legal basis for the "nuclear option." Specifically, the experts analyzed Senate

Rule 22, which lays out the procedure for ending a filibuster. The rule reads, in relevant part:

> At any time a motion signed by sixteen Senators, to bring to a close the debate upon any measure, motion, other matter pending before the Senate, or the unfinished business, is presented to the Senate, the Presiding Officer, or clerk at the direction of the Presiding Officer, shall at once state the motion to the Senate, and one hour after the Senate meets on the following calendar day but one, he shall lay the motion before the Senate and direct that the clerk call the roll, and upon the ascertainment that a quorum is present, the Presiding Officer shall, without debate, submit to the Senate by a yea-and-nay vote the question: "Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate shall be brought to a close?" And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative by three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn — except on a measure or motion to amend the Senate rules, in which case the necessary affirmative vote shall be two-thirds of the Senators present and voting — then said measure, motion, or other matter pending before the Senate, or the unfinished business, shall be the unfinished business to the exclusion of all other business until disposed of.

The language of the rule, which was adopted in the late 1940s, seems quite clear: It takes 60 votes to end a filibuster. And if the majority tries to change Senate rules, and the minority launches a filibuster to stop that, an even greater majority — 67 votes — is required to end debate and move forward. At least on its face, Rule 22 is an immovable obstruction to the "nuclear option" solution to the Estrada and Owen filibusters.

Still, some Republicans are studying Senate precedents with an eye toward advancing the idea that Rule 22 does not apply to judicial nominations. But as attractive as that idea seems, many Republicans remain skeptical. "If they're going to do it [break the filibusters] by having the chair say X is really Y," says one, "that would be parliamentary activism."

Those in the GOP who oppose such a tactic find themselves in uncomfortable agreement with Schumer, who is the most outspoken opponent of President Bush's judicial nominees. At the Cornyn hearing, Schumer engaged the legal experts in a furious back-and-forth over the idea of changing Rule 22 or seeking a ruling that it is unconstitutional as applied to judicial nominations.

"I'm totally befuddled by the idea that it is unconstitutional to filibuster a judge but not unconstitutional to filibuster legislation," Schumer said. "This is taking the result you want and then twisting the legal argument to make it right. It's the most absurd thing I've ever seen, and I think it's almost a joke."

Schumer's position — and that of more than 40 of his fellow Democrats — leaves Republicans with a tough choice. They can either try to devise some parliamentary solution to the filibuster problem — a solution based on shaky grounds at best — or they can decide to escalate the political battle over nominations.

That would undoubtedly involve a high-profile effort by President Bush, both to put pressure on key Democrats in their home states and to nationalize the issue of Democratic obstruction. It would also involve returning the Senate spotlight to the Estrada nomination with a more rigorous effort than the off-and-on debate going on today. It might even involve Republicans forcing Democrats to mount an old-fashioned filibuster, that is, forcing them to talk without end to prevent votes on Estrada and Owen. "If people screwed up their moxie and hauled in the cots, it could be done," says one Republican.

But not easily. And it is entirely possible that none of those measures will produce a victory before the 2004 elections. But rather than rely on parliamentary sleight-of-hand, many Republicans believe the party must exercise raw political power to win the battle over judicial nominations. At the Cornyn hearing, Democrats made clear that they will not be persuaded to stop their filibuster. The question is whether President Bush and Senate Republicans can put enough political pressure on them to force the issue.

Russell Feingold, the ranking member of the subcommittee. "Senator Feingold is an honorable and public-minded person," Cornyn said in his opening remarks, "and I'm glad that we've already developed what I believe to be a good, cooperative, bipartisan relationship." "I think we agree...that the current judicial confirmation process is broken and something needs to be done," Cornyn continued, "and the purpose of this hearing is to talk about ideas about what can done."

For the briefest of moments it appeared as if there might be some real energy behind an effort to find a solution to the confirmation crisis. Then came Feingold's chance to speak. His message, and that of his fellow Democrats, might be briefly summarized as: Forget it.

To begin with, Feingold didn't like the name Cornyn had given to the hearing. "Unfortunately, the title of the hearing suggests that it may be intended to turn up the hear rather than cool things down," Feingold said. "The argument recently advanced on the floor by a number of senators that filibusters of judicial nominees are unconstitutional seems to be part of a campaign of political intimidation launched by supporters of the president's nominees. If this hearing is a prelude to a floor effort to rewrite the Senate's rules, or circumvent them through parliamentary tactics, I doubt very much they will succeed, and I am sure they will be me with stiff resistance. The end result could be to take the tensions we feel in this committee and spread them to the floor of the Senate."

In addition, Feingold said that "those of us who take the Constitution seriously" were dismayed at Republican attempts to end the Democratic filibusters of Estrada and Owen. Feingold conceded that the filibuster was a highly unusual tactic in judicial nominations * "We do admit it's an extreme step," he said * but insisted that the real villain in the judicial conflict was the Bush administration. "So far, the White House seems intent on forging ahead with its efforts to push through as many nominees with the most extreme views as possible, in the shortest possible time," Feingold said. Just as bad, he added, Republicans on the committee have "participated in that strategy by pursuing a 'take no prisoners' approach."

And that, at least from a Democratic standpoint, was the end of any "good, cooperative, bipartisan relationship" that might have existed at the hearing.

In the next hour, Feingold's sentiments were repeated by Massachusetts Democrat Ted Kennedy, who revived the old Democratic charge that "President Bush has no mandate from the American people to stack the courts with judges who share his agenda." New York Democrat Charles Schumer, who has proposed that the president solve the confirmation crisis by simply giving up his constitutional responsibility to appoint judges, appeared as a witness, telling the panel, "Yes, we're sort of in deadlock, but this was not started by Democrats."

After opening remarks, the hearing moved on to a long round of testimony from six constitutional experts. Much of the discussion focused on the legal basis for the "nuclear option." Specifically, the experts analyzed Senate Rule 22, which lays out the procedure for ending a filibuster. The rule reads, in relevant part:

At any time a motion signed by sixteen Senators, to bring to a close the debate upon any measure, motion, other matter pending before the Senate, or the unfinished business, is presented to the Senate, the Presiding Officer, or clerk at the direction of the Presiding Officer, shall at once state the motion to the Senate, and one hour after the Senate meets on the following calendar day but one, he shall lay the motion before the Senate and direct that the clerk call the roll, and upon the ascertainment that a quorum is present, the Presiding Officer shall, without debate, submit to the Senate by a yea-and-nay vote the question: "Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate shall be brought to a close?" And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative by three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn * except on a measure or motion to amend the Senate rules, in which case the necessary affirmative vote shall be two-thirds of the Senators present and voting * then said measure, motion, or other matter pending before the Senate, or the unfinished business, shall be the unfinished business to the exclusion of all other business until disposed of.

The language of the rule, which was adopted in the late 1940s, seems quite clear: It takes 60 votes to end a filibuster. And if the majority tries to change Senate rules, and the minority launches a filibuster to stop that, an even greater majority * 67 votes * is required to end debate and move forward. At least on its face, Rule 22 is an immovable obstruction to the "nuclear option" solution to the Estrada and Owen filibusters.

Still, some Republicans are studying Senate precedents with an eye toward advancing the idea that Rule 22 does not apply to judicial nominations. But as attractive as that idea seems, many Republicans remain skeptical. "If they're going to do it [break the filibusters] by having the chair say X is really Y," says one, "that would be parliamentary activism."

Those in the GOP who oppose such a tactic find themselves in uncomfortable agreement with Schumer, who is the most outspoken opponent of President Bush's judicial nominees. At the Cornyn hearing, Schumer engaged the legal experts in a furious back-and-forth over the idea of changing Rule 22 or seeking a ruling that it is unconstitutional as applied to judicial nominations.

"I'm totally befuddled by the idea that it is unconstitutional to filibuster a judge but not unconstitutional to filibuster legislation," Schumer said. "This is taking the result you want and then twisting the legal argument to make it right. It's the most absurd thing I've ever seen, and I think it's almost a joke."

Schumer's position * and that of more than 40 of his fellow Democrats * leaves Republicans with a tough choice. They can either try to devise some parliamentary solution to the filibuster problem * a solution based on shaky grounds at best * or they can decide to escalate the political battle over nominations.

That would undoubtedly involve a high-profile effort by President Bush, both to put pressure on key Democrats in their home states and to nationalize the issue of Democratic obstruction. It would also involve returning the Senate spotlight to the Estrada nomination with a more rigorous effort than the off-and-on debate going on today. It might even involve Republicans forcing Democrats to mount an old-fashioned filibuster, that is, forcing them to talk without end to prevent votes on Estrada and Owen. "If people screwed up their moxie and hauled in the cots, it could be done," says one Republican.

But not easily. And it is entirely possible that none of those measures will produce a victory before the 2004 elections. But rather than rely on parliamentary sleight-of-hand, many Republicans believe the party must exercise raw political power to win the battle over judicial nominations. At the Cornyn hearing, Democrats made clear that they will not be persuaded to stop their filibuster. The question is whether President Bush and Senate Republicans can put enough political pressure on them to force the issue.

Please make clear to everyone there that our intention from the get-go was to invite any and all comers from OLP for the precise purpose of expressing President's and WH appreciation of the hard work. The problem was that Cabinet Affairs does DOJ invites and does not usually make calls until 2-3 days before event. Meanwhile, Public Liaison handles outside groups and has to give more advance notice. Pub Liaison had called Fed Soc late last week and told them to round up 25-50 people. Fed Soc then stupidly called people in your office and some Senate staffers instead of calling people on the outside. Sorry for confusion, but please make sure people in OLP and FBI unit understand they always were to be invited by us.

It is still in play, although it has to be offered correctly because Lott (because of the situation with his brother) must vote present to avoid conflict of interest. If he votes present oin an amendment to add it, the amendment fails, if an amendment to strike it from something else, it stays in that vehicle. The proponents are working through that process right now.

Subject: interesting story about Kuhl in LA Times

Nominee Motivates Foes, Allies;

A conservative L.A. Superior Court judge in line to sit on the Court of Appeals finds herself the latest lightning rod in the federal judicial war.

BYLINE: David G. Savage and Henry Weinstein, Times Staff Writers

DATELINE: WASHINGTON

BODY:

As a 29-year-old lawyer in the Reagan administration, Carolyn B. Kuhl was one of the young conservatives determined to shift the law to the right.

She called for the Justice Department to lead an attack on the U.S. Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade ruling that legalized abortion. She also helped persuade President Reagan's attorney general to change sides and support a restored tax exemption for Bob Jones University and other racially discriminatory private schools.

Now, a wide array of civil rights, environmental, feminist and labor organizations is deeply opposed to Kuhl's nomination to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals, which reviews cases from nine Western states, including California.

Since returning to Los Angeles in 1986, she has won many admirers as a lawyer and, more recently, as a Superior Court judge. She has been endorsed by more than 100 local judges -- Democrats as well as Republicans -- and by the former president of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund for a seat on the 9th Circuit, based in San Francisco.

Listening to Kuhl's supporters and detractors, the chasm is so great it is hard to imagine they are talking about the same person.

In the latest battle in the partisan war over judges, a deeply split Senate Judiciary Committee is scheduled to vote today on whether Kuhl, 50, merits a lifetime seat on the 9th Circuit.

She is likely to narrowly win approval, because the panel has 10 Republicans and nine Democrats.

Until recently, Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.) had been officially undecided. But on Wednesday, her spokesman said she would oppose the nomination -- a decision that heartened liberal activists who say Kuhl may still be blocked on the Senate floor.

Both sides in the warring over President Bush's judicial nominees said this week that they see an escalation in the battle.

Never before, Republicans say, has a minority used the Senate's rules to filibuster a lower-court judge.

But Kuhl's critics emphasized that it would be highly unusual for the Senate to even hold a vote on -- much less confirm -- a nominee who is opposed by both of her home-state senators.

The Democrats have blocked a final Senate vote on two prospective Circuit Court judges, Washington attorney Miguel Estrada and Texas state Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen.

Filibustering judges is not entirely new; since Republicans used the filibuster in the summer of 1968 to prevent a vote on Justice Abe Fortas, President Lyndon B. Johnson's choice to become chief justice of the Supreme Court.

Nonetheless, angry Republican senators said this week the confirmation process is "broken."

Some were reportedly considering using a parliamentary maneuver to change the Senate rules and clear the way for a majority vote on Estrada and Owen.

Nominees' Progress

Both nominees have the support of more than 50 senators, but not the 60 votes that are required under the Senate rules to end debate.

For their part, Democrats are angered that Kuhl's nomination is moving forward.

Under the Judiciary Committee's rules, the president's proposed judges needed a signed "blue slip" signaling the approval of both home-state senators.

In the late 1990s, Republican former Sens. Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Phil Gramm of Texas refused to sign off on President Clinton's nominees to the appeals court in their region. Their refusal killed the nominations.

Two years ago, when Bush nominated Kuhl for the 9th Circuit, Sen. Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.) refused to give her approval. She called Kuhl "anti-choice" and "anti-civil rights."

But when the Republicans retook control of the Senate and the Judiciary Committee this year, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch (R-Utah) said he would no longer allow one home-state senator to block action on a Bush nominee.

The Democrats also complained this week about "GOP whining" over judges. They noted that despite the well-publicized filibusters, 121 of Bush's judges have won confirmation in the first two years and three months of his administration.

By that standard, his predecessors did not fare as well. President Clinton and the elder President Bush won approval of about 45 judges a year.

The Democrats also say the number of vacancies on the bench is the lowest in 13 years.

The 9th Circuit, with an allotment of 28 judges, has three vacancies.

Liberal activists remain determined to stop Kuhl from winning one, and they are urging Democrats to block a final vote on her nomination.

Kuhl has "repeatedly demonstrated a deep-seated hostility to the rights of women and minorities," says Nan Aron, executive director of the liberal Alliance for Justice.

The fact that Feinstein has joined Boxer in opposing the nomination means that there "absolutely is the possibility of a filibuster," Aron said Wednesday night.

Academic Record

Kuhl, who was raised in St. Louis, was a top student at Princeton and then at Duke Law School, earning a clerkship with then-9th Circuit Judge Anthony M. Kennedy, who is now a U.S. Supreme Court justice.

Kuhl does not have many controversial public writings, and critics have focused on the internal memos she wrote during the Reagan administration. At her hearing last month before the Judiciary Committee, she said her role in those controversies had been exaggerated but that she regretted her stand in the Bob Jones case. The Supreme Court later rebuffed the administration's position to restore the school's tax-exempt status by a vote of 8 to 1.

Among those supporting Kuhl are the chairwoman and chairman-elect of the Los Angeles County Bar's litigation section, Gretchen M. Nelson and Stephen R. English, who sent Hatch a letter April 28 voicing their support.

They emphasized that they are "life-long Democrats. We have first-hand, repeated knowledge of Judge Kuhl's integrity ... and commitment to improving the administration of justice."

Endorsement Push

Elizabeth A. Grimes, who was appointed to the Los Angeles County Superior Court by Gov. Pete Wilson in 1997, spearheaded the effort to get judges on that bench to endorse Kuhl. Grimes said she thought it was "important for the senators to know what high regard Carolyn is held in by her colleagues on the Superior Court, regardless of their political party affiliation."

In addition to the Superior Court judges, Kuhl has garnered letters of support from at least a dozen state appeals court judges, including Democrats Joan Dempsey Klein, Paul Boland and Dennis Perluss.

In a letter to Feinstein, Perluss emphasized that Kuhl was not a conservative ideologue who would "inject personal, social and political agendas into the judicial process."

Kuhl's backers -- including Vilma Martinez, former director of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund who later worked with Kuhl at Munger, Tolles & Olson, one of Los Angeles' most prestigious law firms -- also have cited Kuhl's support for Richard Paez, who waited nearly four years to be confirmed by the Senate to the 9th Circuit because of opposition from ultraconservatives.

But Kuhl's critics have hardly been pacified.

In late April, 200 law professors from around the country, including many from California, sent a letter to Hatch and Sen. Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.) expressing "strong opposition to the nomination."

"Judge Kuhl has spent her entire professional life -- in the government, in private practice, and on the state bench -- aggressively promoting an extremist agenda that is hostile to women, minorities, injured workers and the environment."

In support of this position, Kuhl's critics cite in particular an October 1999 ruling. Kuhl dismissed an invasion-of-privacy claim filed by Azucena Sanchez-Scott, a breast cancer patient whose doctor allowed a drug company representative to watch his physical examination of her while she was disrobed from the waist up without telling her who the man was.

Ruling from the bench, Kuhl said that since Sanchez-Scott did not specifically object to the presence of the man, "I think it cannot be said that there was a reasonable expectation of privacy." Sanchez-Scott said she only learned who the man was when she asked the doctor's receptionist after she was examined.

A state appellate court unanimously reversed Kuhl's ruling, citing an old precedent in Michigan and more recent ones in California.

Every patient has a "legally well-established expectation of privacy," the appeals court said, emphasizing that the defendants had failed to cite "any authority which permits a male drug salesperson to be present in an examination room during the examination of a partially disrobed woman." Writing for the court, Justice Paul Turner said no precedent supported Kuhl's ruling.

Kuhl was questioned about the ruling at her Judiciary Committee hearing in April. In response to a question from Sen. Richard Durbin (D-Ill.) about whether her views on privacy had changed, Kuhl did not offer a direct response. Rather, she said she did not object to the ruling rendered by the appeals court and emphasized that Turner is now supporting her.

After questioning Kuhl, Sen. Charles E. Schumer (D-N.Y.) said, "I think most Americans would be horrified to hear that your view of privacy rights, particularly in that situation, depended on someone who was scared and upset having to ask questions."

Eventually the case was settled. On Wednesday at a news conference in L.A., Sanchez-Scott criticized Kuhl.

AGENCY FOIA REQUESTS

DOJ

Todd W. Hutton, of Judicial Watch, Inc., has requested all records from the Office of the Attorney General pertaining to: the Islamic Association for Palestine; the InfoCom Corporation; the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development; and the American Middle Eastern League for Palestine.

Rob Evans, of the Guardian newspaper, has requested copies of all correspondence between August 1, 2002 and April 1, 2003 between Attorney General Ashcroft and British Home Secretary David Blunkett.

Rick Hind, of Greenpeace, has requested copies of all records between the United States Department of Justice and entities of the chemical industry regarding policy recommendations on the issue of chemical security or the vulnerability of chemical plants to terrorism for the period of October 1, 2001 to the present.

Connor Raso, an individual, has requested a complete schedule from June 1, 2001 through April 25, 2003 of Viet D. Dinh, Assistant Attorney General for the Office of Legal Policy.

Mark H. Drake, an individual, has requested copies of all correspondence between Senator John F. Kerry and the United States Department of Justice for the period of January 1, 1985 to the present.

John A. Farrell, of the Boston Globe, has requested copies of all correspondence, or records of communications, with Senator John F. Kerry of Massachusetts and/or any member of his staff.

EPA

During the week of April 28-May 2, 2003, the Agency received 254 FOIA requests. Of the total, 46 were received in Headquarters. Year-to-date totals are 1,411 for Headquarters and 7,555 agency-wide. Significant FOIA requests received this week include:

(1) Benjamin Coates of The Center for Public Integrity has requested records regarding compliance of Deputy Administrator Fisher with various ethics requirements, including letters of disqualification;

(2) Scott Slaughter of the Center for Regulatory Effectiveness has requested records regarding EPA=s use of the Integrated Planning Model in developing the President=s Clear Skies Initiative;

(3) Zahirah Washington of the Natural Resources Defense Council has requested documents relating to amendments to environmental and public health statutes proposed in the Readiness and Range Preservation Initiative by the Department of Defense. Through the National Defense Reauthorization Act for FY04, the Department of Defense is seeking exemptions from Clean Air Act, RCRA, and CERCLA;

(4) Rick Hind of Greenpeace has requested communications to and from the chemical industry regarding chemical security or chemical plant vulnerability;

(5) Dena Briscoe of Brentwood Exposed has requested information regarding the cleaning and fumigation of the Washington, DC mail processing and distribution center, commonly known as the Brentwood Facility;

(6) Randy Herschaft of the *Associated Press has requested transactions, communications, and contracts regarding Choicepoint, Inc. and EPA from January 2001 to present;

(7) Mark Drake, private citizen without an affiliation noted, has requested all correspondence between Senator John F. Kerry and EPA from January 1, 1985 to present;

(8) Congressman Robert A. Brady (D-PA) has requested the final report of the Logan site and any updated sampling of the site;

(9) Margaret Janes of the Appalachian Center for the Economy and the Environment has requested responses to EPA/Tetratech=s 2003 call for data related to selenium discharges into southern West Virginia streams in the Coal, Gauley, and Guyandotte watersheds;

(10) Kevin Buchan of the Western States Petroleum Association has requested correspondence between EPA Region 9, the US Fish and Wildlife Service, and the National Marine Fisheries Service regarding the 2002 draft criteria for selenium;

(11) Inger Brinck of The Women=s Foundation has requested FY 2000 to present records of environmental releases originating from five specified oil refineries in California, and;

(12) Geoff Koss of Inside Washington Publishers *(Inside EPA) has requested copies of recent public comment letters on the draft expanded site investigation for the Upper Columbia River, Washington.

OPM

- Jackie Salmon of the *Washington Post has been advised that she will have to submit a FOIA request to the Local Federal Coordinating Committee (LFCC) to obtain a copy of the proposal by Global Impact, which the Washington D.C.-area LFCC awarded the contract to administer the Combined Federal Campaign (CFC) in the national capital region (as would Global's competitors).

- Frank Joseph of the Key Communications Group submitted a FOIA request (5/5) for the orientation guide issued to all new OPM employees. Last week OPM provided information to Key's Janine Jackson on orientation programs run by OPM for its own employees, and informed her that each agency designs and implements its own program (although some have requested our guide as a model). Reporter never asked for a copy of the OPM guide. Following receipt of the FOIA request, the reporter was called and asked about her perceived need to file the request, and advised that OPM's orientation guide would be mailed on Tuesday (she did not want to send a courier).

DOL

Rick Hind, Legislative Director, Greenpeace Toxics Campaign, Greenpeace, Washington, D.C., is seeking:

copies of documents, not limited to but including all letters, notes, meeting times, places and agendas as well as other communications to and from chemical industry entities regarding policy recommendations on the issue of chemical security or the vulnerability of chemical plants to terrorism for the period of time beginning October 1, 2001 and extending to the present;

REQUEST: White House Briefing for the Corporate Council on Africa and Liberty Education Forum

BACKGROUND:

Corporate Council on Africa:

The Corporate Council on Africa (CCA), established in 1992, is at the forefront of strengthening and facilitating the commercial relationship between the United States and the African continent. CCA works closely with governments, multilateral groups and business to improve the African continent's trade and investment climate, and to raise the profile of Africa in the US business community.

CCA programs are designed to bring together potential business partners and raise Africa's investment profile in the US by developing critical contacts and business relationships and providing a forum for the exchange of information and ideas.

Liberty Education Forum

Liberty Education Forum (LEF) was originally established to provide a non-partisan education and research component to complement the work of the Log Cabin Republicans. But with a full-scale launching on July 21, 2001, the Liberty Education Forum is a brand new educational think tank - based in Washington, D.C. - that is dedicated to new ideas and new directions for the gay community, with a centrist approach. The mission of the Liberty Education Forum is to work toward achieving individual freedom and fairness for gay Americans by applying the principles of individual rights, individual responsibilities, free markets and limited government.

The Log Cabin Republicans are a part of the White House Judicial Coalition as well as the AIDS Coalition.

Brett M. Kavanaugh

Since January 2001, Brett Kavanaugh has served as Associate Counsel to President Bush in the office of Judge Alberto Gonzales, Counsel to the President.

Mr. Kavanaugh graduated from Yale College in 1987 and from Yale Law School in 1990. He clerked for Judge Walter Stapleton on the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and for Judge Alex Kozinski on the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. He worked in 1992-93 as an attorney in the Office of Solicitor General at the Department of Justice. Mr. Kavanaugh clerked for Justice Anthony M. Kennedy on the Supreme Court of the United States in 1993-94. After his clerkship with Justice Kennedy, Mr. Kavanaugh worked for the Office of Independent Counsel Kenneth W. Starr from 1994 to 1997 and again in 1998. Mr. Kavanaugh was a partner in the Washington office of Kirkland & Ellis from 1997 to 1998 and from 1999 to January 2001.

When you say "mixed" I assume you mean part political/part official. You can get per diem for the official portion of your trip. If you need guidance in how to figure out how much of it was official, ask WH Counsel and they will determine the percentage.

If we did your TA(s) already for the Asian outreach meetings, it probably gives you per diem for the whole trip. If we did a political TA for you, it will give you no per diem.

Hope this is helpful. I am taking off at 6 tonight to attend an event so let's talk tomorrow if you need help. Thanks. Kathy

- As the President has said – The Senate has a Constitutional responsibility to hold an up or down vote on all judicial nominees in a reasonable amount of time. He is supportive of efforts being made to ensure a fair up or down vote is held on every nominee. I'm not going to talk about specifics.

Subject: Miller Lite

The decision to go with this was made by WHF today.

Here are the points of contrast with S. Res. 85, the proposed change to Rule 22 tracks normal cloture procedure with exceptions:

1) Applies only to nominations.

2) Cloture cannot be filed until a nomination has been pending for 12 hours.

3) Cloture requirements decline on succeeding votes: 60, 57, 54, 51 and finally a simple majority of those present and voting. (This latter feature is based on the premise that the Constitution does not state a floor.

4) A follow-up cloture motion cannot be filed until disposition of the prior cloture motion.

S. Res 85 as introduced by Senator Miller

- applied to all debate, not just nominations
- did not provide a 12 hour wait
- stopped at 51

The ML intends to introduce this tomorrow. There are 9 GOP co-sponsors and we are waiting on Miller.

2 YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF LIBERAL DEMOCRAT OBSTRUCTIONISM TOMORROW MAJORITY NEEDS TO USE "NUCLEAR" OPTION TO BREAK UNCONSTITUTIONAL POWER PLAY

President Bush will be giving a speech in the White House Rose Garden tomorrow decrying the obstructionism by liberal Democrats in the Senate who have blocked some of his highly-qualified judicial nominees for 2 years as of tomorrow. Christian Coalition of America President Roberta Combs said, "It is outrageous that the left-wingers in the Democrat Party have blocked many of President Bush's judicial nominees for 2 years as of May 9th. They lost control of the Senate last November because of such obstructionism. Secondly, they are beginning to lose their Hispanic base. As Hispanics learn about the outrageous treatment of Miguel Estrada, an American success story, they are realizing their pro-family values are not shared by such left-wingers."

The Christian Coalition urges the majority to do what Vice President Nelson Rockefeller did in 1975 and change the Senate "standing rules" to make it easier to break a filibuster, i.e. what's being called the "nuclear" option, mentioned in a Senate hearing this week entitled: "Judicial Nominations, Filibusters and the Constitution: When a Majority is denied its right to consent." A clear majority of United States Senators want to vote and will vote for highly-qualified judicial nominees Miguel Estrada (filibustered for over 3 months) and Priscilla Owen (in her 2nd month of being filibustered.) The U.S. Constitution does not say 3/5 of Senators are required to confirm judges; just a simple majority.

Sixty votes are required to break a filibuster and the 5 additional votes to stop debate could come from any of the following Senators: Senator Mark Pryor (D-AR) 202-224-2353; Senator Blanche Lincoln (D-AR) 202-224-4843; Senator Joseph Lieberman (D-CT) 202-224-4041; Senator Thomas Carper (D-DE) 202-224-2441; Senator Bob Graham (D-FL) 202-224-3041; Senator Daniel Inouye (D-HI) 202-224-3934; Senator Evan Bayh (D-IN) 202-224-5623; Senator Mary Landrieu (D-LA) 202-224-5824; Senator Max Baucus (D-MT) 202-224-2651; Senator Jeff Bingaman (D-NM) 202-224-5521; Senator John Edwards (D-NC) 202-224-3154; Senator Kent Conrad (D-ND) 202-224-2043; Senator Byron Dorgan (D-ND) 202-224-2551; Senator Ernest Hollings (D-SC) 202-224-6121; Senator Tom Daschle (D-SD) 202-224-2321; Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD) 202-224-5842; Senator Robert Byrd (D-WV) 202-224-3954.

A C T I O N:

Please join the the "Obstructionism Day" Rally tomorrow at noon at the "Senate Swamp" which is located between the U.S. Capitol Building and the Russell Senate Office Building.

Please call your two Senators and ask them to vote to confirm President Bush's judicial nominees, most especially, Miguel Estrada, Justice Priscilla Owen, and Judge Charles Pickering. In addition, ask them to vote to STOP any filibuster, i.e. vote to stop endless debate on the Senate floor. October 24 Welcome Event in Charlotte

And speaking about benches, another reason we need Elizabeth Dole in the Senate -- besides the fact that she's going to do a great job for North Carolina -- is I've got to have United States senators who will work with me to make sure our federal judiciary is strong. The record -- (interrupted by cheers, applause). I'm picking -- I'm picking good people to be judges -- good, solid, honorable people to be the judges on the federal judiciary; people who will strictly interpret the Constitution of the United States, not people who will use the bench to write new legislation. (Cheers, applause.)

And the record of this United States Senate is a lousy record! (Cheers, applause.) They have politicized the process. They have distorted the records of many of our good candidates we put forward. They're playing petty politics with the candidates that I put up there. We're not getting a hearing fast enough. The percentage of judges is the worst in modern history -- percentage of judges approved -- and that's not right.

Let me tell you about one -- Terry Boyle from North Carolina, I nominated for the Fourth Circuit Court. I nominated him a long while ago. He can't even get a hearing.

For the sake of a good, sound judiciary, we need to change the United States Senate, and it can start by electing Elizabeth Dole to the Senate. (Cheers, applause.)

I put his name out there 14 months ago. And he can't get a hearing.

I nominated a fabulous woman from Texas named Priscilla Owen, a great jurist, ranked at the highest rating by the ABA, ran twice statewide in Texas and won. And yet, when you listen to the rhetoric up there, it's all politics in Washington, D.C. They're not willing to give these judges their fair shake in a fair do.

It's time to get the Senate in the hands of people who will approve the good jurists I send so we can have a federal bench that will not -- from which it will be -- will not legislate from, but will strictly interpret the Constitution of the United States of America.

REQUEST: White House Briefing for the Corporate Council on Africa and Liberty Education Forum

BACKGROUND:

Corporate Council on Africa:

The Corporate Council on Africa (CCA), established in 1992, is at the forefront of strengthening and facilitating the commercial relationship between the United States and the African continent. CCA works closely with governments, multilateral groups and business to improve the African continent's trade and investment climate, and to raise the profile of Africa in the US business community.

CCA programs are designed to bring together potential business partners and raise Africa's investment profile in the US by developing critical contacts and business relationships and providing a forum for the exchange of information and ideas.

Liberty Education Forum

Liberty Education Forum (LEF) was originally established to provide a non-partisan education and research component to complement the work of the Log Cabin Republicans. But with a full-scale launching on July 21, 2001, the Liberty Education Forum is a brand new educational think tank - based in Washington, D.C. - that is dedicated to new ideas and new directions for the gay community, with a centrist approach. The mission of the Liberty Education Forum is to work toward achieving individual freedom and fairness for gay Americans by applying the principles of individual rights, individual responsibilities, free markets and limited government.

The Log Cabin Republicans are a part of the White House Judicial Coalition as well as the AIDS Coalition.

Mr. President:

With regret but determination, and along with my Senate colleague, I introduce today a resolution to amend the Senate Rules. This amendment will change the way the Senate concludes debate on Presidential nominees. No longer will it be necessary to overcome a 60 vote barrier before Senators can exercise their power to consent to a nomination.

Five months into the 108th Congress, we confront multiple filibusters of highly qualified and intellectually superior judicial nominees, filibusters that are unfair to the nominees, unfair to the President, and unfair to the majority of Senators who stand ready to confirm them. I fully respect and honor the views of any Senator who differs with my assessment on the quality of these nominations, and think if he or she finds those nominees unfit for any reason, they should vote to reject. Because they have chosen to filibuster, they deny the Senate and each Senator the right to vote at all.

The remedy, Mr. President, is filibuster reform. Over time, many Democrats as well as many Republicans have proposed changes to introduce greater fairness in the Senate rules, and it is to those proposals I have looked in crafting this resolution.

Mr. President, my proposal is similar to S. Res. 85,introduced in March by my distinguished Democratic colleague from Georgia, Senator Zell Miller. It also tracks a recommendation offered in 1995 by the distinguished Democratic Senators from Iowa and Connecticut, Tom Harkin and Joe Lieberman. Both the Harkin-Lieberman and Miller resolutions provide for declining cloture requirements of 60,57, 54, and 51 on successive cloture motions. They represent a wholesale reform of the cloture rule, applying to every debatable proposition.

My resolution, by contrast, is more narrowly tailored to respond to the problem at hand. It applies to nominations alone, and leaves the rest of Rule XXII unamended. It addresses only a defect that needs repair. There are other differences, however minor, from these other cloture reform efforts. Unlike those proposals, mine would not allow a cloture motion to be filed until a nomination has been pending before the Senate for at least 12 hours. This provision tracks language that the distinguished Democratic Leader inserted in S. Res. 8, the power sharing resolution he introduced in the last Congress. I share his purpose to ensure there exists an adequate foundation of debate before cloture can be sought.

My resolution also provides for a step below the constitutional majority of 51 votes on the fourth cloture attempt. Under my proposal, further cloture motions will require a majority of all Senators present and voting. This provision is included in response to colleagues who believe that supermajority voting requirements on nominations are unconstitutional. If 95 Senators are present, a 51 vote threshold is still a supermajority.

Cloture by a majority of Senators present and voting has deep historical roots among Senate Democrats. In past years, such a change was offered by eminent and distinguished Senators such as Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, Paul Douglas of Illinois, and Wayne Morse of Oregon, and these Senators proposed to reach all Senate debate, not just nominations.

Under these new procedures, cloture cannot be precipitously invoked. Not only is there a 12 hour waiting period, the resolution tracks a provision from the Harkin-Lieberman and Miller initiatives that one cloture motion cannot be filed until disposition of a prior cloture vote. This is contrary to the present operation of Rule XXII, which permits multiple cloture motions to be advanced without waiting for the outcome of a cloture motion previously filed. Between the time a nomination is brought to the floor and the moment it can be confirmed by a simple majority vote, the elapsed time would be 13 session days.

Mr. President, I have stated that I regret having to introduce this resolution. The right to debate is not unlimited but it is precious and important. My first vote as a Senator was to table the Harkin-Lieberman resolution in 1995, even though I was a freshman in a newly elected majority and the cloture amendment they proposed would have advantaged our party. By contrast, nine Democratic Senators now sitting voted in favor of the sweeping Harkin-Lieberman reform. Will they now support this narrow remedy?

I was presiding when the distinguished Democratic Senator from West Virginia, Robert C. Byrd took to the floor to contend that Harkin-Lieberman was unnecessary because it was primarily aimed at controlling filibusters on motions to proceed. No need to change the rules, said the Senator, because a Leader could avoid such filibusters by offering non-debatable motions in the Morning Hour. The Senator did not argue the absence of a problem, but rather the presence of an alternative solution, a safety valve, so further limiting of debate was not required.

I was persuaded by his logic. I opposed then, and would oppose now, a comprehensive change in rules governing Senate debate.

In the case of nominations, Mr. President, the safety valve of an alternative solution is not as readily at hand. Under existing cloture rules, the filibuster of a nomination is the last word and it is fatal.

Filibustering nominations is a relatively new phenomenon, even as to nominees for the Executive Branch, and it has emerged in this Congress as a particular problem relative to federal judges. Prior to this year, the record number of cloture votes on any nominee was three, and on a judicial nominee, the record was two. Already, we have had six cloture votes on the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, two cloture votes on the nomination of Priscilla Owen to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, and threats from the minority of additional filibusters on other nominees. We have entered upon a new era, damaging to the Senate as an institution, where a majority will be denied its right to consent to a nomination because a minority will filibuster to hold that nomination hostage. The need to reform the filibuster on nominations is obvious and it is now urgent.

Many will contend that the Senate should not rubber stamp Presidential appointments. I fully concur. The Senate's responsibility under Article II to advise and consent is critical to maintaining the checks and balances of our constitutional system. For reasons sufficient unto itself, the Senate may reject any nominee. Brought forward to a vote, the Supreme Court nominations of Clement Haynsworth, G. Harrold Carswell, and Robert Bork all failed on the Senate floor, and not by filibuster. Scholars may argue whether these nominees should have been turned aside, but no one can dispute the Senate's right to reject them. The Senate's constitutional role must never be diminished.

In the case of Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen, it is plain that the votes to confirm are present. But the votes to confirm cannot be taken, because these debates have been tainted by filibuster. Without filibuster reform, a disciplined minority can cast an ever lengthening shadow over the confirmation process. Through reform, we will respect the right of all Senators to act upon a nomination brought to the floor. In doing this, we will strengthen the Senate as an institution and enhance its constitutional purpose.

Mr. President, it is unfortunate we have come to this point. I would have far preferred that nominations be given a floor vote after full and free debate. As the filibuster strategy emerged, I tried many times without success to secure agreements to vote at a time certain. Wanting to respect minority rights and, indeed, the rights of all Senators, I withheld filing for cloture until the Estrada nomination had been pending for 13 session days.

But just as I act with regret, I act with determination. For almost all our nation's history, filibustering nominations was unheard of and unknown. It was unknown when the cloture rule was adopted in 1917. It was unknown when the rule was extended to nominations in 1949. The renowned filibusters of the 1950's and 1960's never involved filibustering a judge. Senator Richard Russell of Georgia led those filibusters, but even in the face of growing judicial activism, neither he nor his allies ever filibustered a judge. Obviously, some respected traditions have changed.

Senate rules are not immutable. Senate norms have altered over time, and our rules have changed in response. The initial cloture rule of 1917 was a reaction to cumulative and growing consternation over years of uncontrolled filibusters. The 1949 expansion reflected frustration that the original rule was too narrow, and applied only to pending measures. In 1959 and 1975, the rule was amended because the hurdle for cloture was thought to be too high. In 1979, Senator Byrd successfully amended the rule to eliminate the abuse of the post-cloture filibuster.

Before the practice of filibustering nominations takes deeper root, and damages the Senate even more, it is time to amend our rules again. I act now as a first step to ensure we have a confirmation process that is fair to nominees, fair to the President, and fair to all Senators. If we achieve that, we will also be fair to the American people.

Mr. President:

With regret but determination, and along with Senators _____, I introduce today a resolution to amend the Senate Rules. This amendment will change the way the Senate concludes debate on Presidential nominees. No longer will it be necessary to overcome a 60 vote barrier before Senators can exercise their power to consent to a nomination.

Between the time a nomination is brought to the floor and the moment it can be confirmed by a simple majority vote, the elapsed time would be 13 session days.

Mr. President, I have stated that I regret having to introduce this resolution. The right to debate is not unlimited but it is precious and important. My first vote as a Senator was to table the Harkin-Lieberman resolution in 1995, even though I was a freshman in a newly elected majority and the cloture amendment they proposed would have advantaged our party. By contrast, nine Democratic Senators now sitting voted in favor of the sweeping Harkin-Lieberman reform. Will they now support this narrow remedy?

I was presiding when the distinguished Democratic Senator from West Virginia, Robert C. Byrd took to the floor to contend that Harkin-Lieberman was unnecessary because it was primarily aimed at controlling filibusters on motions to proceed. No need to change the rules, said the Senator, because a Leader could avoid such filibusters by offering non-debatable motions in the Morning Hour. The Senator did not argue the absence of a problem, but rather the presence of an alternative solution, a safety valve, so further limiting of debate was not required.

I was persuaded by his logic. I opposed then, and would oppose now, a comprehensive change in rules governing Senate debate.

In the case of nominations, Mr. President, the safety valve of an alternative solution is not as readily at hand. Under existing cloture rules, the filibuster of a nomination is the last word and it is fatal.

Filibustering nominations is a relatively new phenomenon, even as to nominees for the Executive Branch, and it has emerged in this Congress as a particular problem relative to federal judges. Prior to this year, the record number of cloture votes on any nominee was three, and on a judicial nominee, the record was two. Already, we have had six cloture votes on the nomination of Miguel Estrada to the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, two cloture votes on the nomination of Priscilla Owen to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, and threats from the minority of additional filibusters on other nominees. We have entered upon a new era, damaging to the Senate as an institution, where a majority will be denied its right to consent to a nomination because a minority will filibuster to hold that nomination hostage. The need to reform the filibuster on nominations is obvious and it is now urgent.

Many will contend that the Senate should not rubber stamp Presidential appointments. I fully concur. The Senate's responsibility under Article II to advise and consent is critical to maintaining the checks and balances of our constitutional system. For reasons sufficient unto itself, the Senate may reject any nominee. Brought forward to a vote, the Supreme Court nominations of Clement Haynsworth, G. Harrold Carswell, and Robert Bork all failed on the Senate floor, and not by filibuster. Scholars may argue whether these nominees should have been turned aside, but no one can dispute the Senate's right to reject them. The Senate's constitutional role must never be diminished.

In the case of Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen, it is plain that the votes to confirm are present. But the votes to confirm cannot be taken, because these debates have been tainted by filibuster. Without filibuster reform, a disciplined minority can cast an ever lengthening shadow over the confirmation process. Through reform, we will respect the right of all Senators to act upon a nomination brought to the floor. In doing this, we will strengthen the Senate as an institution and enhance its constitutional purpose.

Mr. President, it is unfortunate we have come to this point. I would have far preferred that nominations be given a floor vote after full and free debate. As the filibuster strategy emerged, I tried many times without success to secure agreements to vote at a time certain. Wanting to respect minority rights and, indeed, the rights of all Senators, I withheld filing for cloture until the Estrada nomination had been pending for 13 session days.

But just as I act with regret, I act with determination. For almost all our nation's history, filibustering nominations was unheard of and unknown. It was unknown when the cloture rule was adopted in 1917. It was unknown when the rule was extended to nominations in 1949. The renowned filibusters of the 1950's and 1960's never involved filibustering a judge.

Senator Richard Russell of Georgia led those filibusters, but even in the face of growing judicial activism, neither he nor his allies ever filibustered a judge. Obviously, some respected traditions have changed.

Senate rules are not immutable. Senate norms have altered over time, and our rules have changed in response. The initial cloture rule of 1917 was a reaction to cumulative and growing consternation over years of uncontrolled filibusters. The 1949 expansion reflected frustration that the original rule was too narrow, and applied only to pending measures. In 1959 and 1975, the rule was amended because the hurdle for cloture was thought to be too high. In 1979, Senator Byrd successfully amended the rule to eliminate the abuse of the post-cloture filibuster.

Before the practice of filibustering nominations takes deeper root, and damages the Senate even more, it is time to amend our rules again. I act now as a first step to ensure we have a confirmation process that is fair to nominees, fair to the President, and fair to all Senators. If we achieve that, we will also be fair to the American people.

The president shrewdly alluded to the fact that Democratic presidents have also had their problems getting nominees confirmed. "During the administration of former Presidents Bush and Clinton," Mr. Bush said, "many appeals court nominees never received votes. And today the situation is worse than ever, making the need for reform greater than ever."

Dole highlights Edwards' block of judicial nominee

By JOHN WAGNER, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON -- U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Dole on Friday tried to publicly pressure U.S. Sen. John Edwards to let the Senate consider a judicial candidate from North Carolina whose nomination has languished for two years.

Dole, a Republican, sent a letter to Edwards, a Democrat, and later held a conference call with reporters to highlight the plight of U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle, whom President Bush nominated to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in May 2001.

Edwards has refused to return a "blue slip" that would allow the Senate Judiciary Committee to convene a hearing on Boyle's nomination. Dole's Republican predecessor, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, employed the same tactic during the Clinton Administration to block a string of Democratic nominees from his home state.

"I'm calling on my colleague and friend to return the blue slips," Dole said. "It's time for the cycle of blame and recriminations to end."

Feuding between North Carolina's senators has kept the state from having a single judge on the 15-member panel since 1999. The 4th Circuit, which hears appeals from five Southeastern states, is the last stop for federal cases before they reach the U.S. Supreme Court.

Boyle is now one of two pending nominees from North Carolina. Last month, Bush nominated Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan to the 4th Circuit as well.

Edwards spokes-man Mike Briggs urged "quick action" by the Senate on the Duncan nomination. Though Duncan is a Republican, he said Edwards considers her "a consensus nominee."

Dole, however, said she thinks Boyle should get a hearing first because he was nominated first.

Dole said the federal judiciary is facing a "vacancy crisis" created by "a handful of Democratic senators for political and partisan reasons."

But when asked about Helms' actions during the Clinton administration, she declined several times to characterize them.

Briggs noted Friday that in a previous letter to Dole, Edwards proposed setting up a bipartisan commission to recommend judges from North Carolina. Dole did not accept the proposal.

GOP senators try to free jam of judge nominees

Bush, Dole have had enough of what they see as stalling tactics

TIM FUNK
Observer Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON - Frustrated by Democrats blocking of votes on key conservative judicial nominations, President Bush, Sen. Elizabeth Dole and GOP Senate leaders went on the offensive Friday in hopes of ending what Bush called the "obstructionist tactics of a small group of senators."

One of their targets: Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., who has been standing in the way of Senate consideration of North Carolina's Terrence Boyle, a onetime legislative assistant to former N.C. Sen. Jesse Helms whose nomination to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has been languishing for years.

On Friday, Dole, R-N.C., said she had sent a letter to Edwards asking that he return the "blue slip" for Boyle -- Senate lingo for telling the Judiciary Committee to go ahead with a hearing and vote on a judicial nomination from the senator's home state.

"Our country deserves better than petty politics, and it's time for a bipartisan solution," Dole told N.C. reporters, adding that years of "blame and recriminations" have left the 16-member federal appeals court in Richmond, Va., without a judge from North Carolina even though it's the biggest state in the circuit.

Edwards was in Atlanta campaigning for president Friday, but his Senate office issued a statement saying there was a bipartisan solution: Go forward now with "consensus nominee" Allyson Duncan, a former state appeals court judge in Raleigh who was nominated to the 4th Circuit by President Bush last month.

"(Edwards) looks forward to quick action on her nomination," the statement said.

But Dole insisted again Friday that judicial candidates deserve hearings in the order they were nominated. That position, coupled with Edwards' continuing opposition to Boyle, left little prospect Friday that either N.C. nomination would move ahead without further negotiations.
Boyle, 57, who is now a U.S. district judge in Elizabeth City, was first nominated to the 4th Circuit Court in 1991. When Democrats blocked his path then, Helms retaliated throughout the 1990s by vetoing four N.C. nominations to the 4th Circuit offered by President Clinton.
Boyle's name was re-submitted on May 9, 2001 -- exactly two years ago Friday -- as one of President Bush's first 11 nominees to the federal appeals court. Besides Boyle, that initial batch of nominees included Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen.
Both are still awaiting floor votes as Democratic senators continue to filibuster their nominations to, respectively, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia and the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.
Those filibusters were the focus of a coordinated campaign attack by Bush, his Senate allies and even Republican Party offices around the country, who dubbed Friday "Democrat Obstruction Day" in a flurry of e-mails to reporters.
Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., kicked off the offensive by introducing a bill that would force a vote on a judicial nomination within two weeks. Then, if the filibuster survived three votes, only 51 votes would be needed to end it on the fourth tally.
Next up was Bush, who gave a Rose Garden speech to an audience of lawyers from around the country. Among the North Carolinians on hand: N.C. Supreme Court justices I. Beverly Lake Jr. and Bob Orr; Jeff Hunt, the Hendersonville-based president-elect of the N.C. Conference of District Attorneys; and A.P. Carlton of Raleigh, president of the American Bar Association, the group that rates the qualifications of judicial candidates.
Later, Hunt, a Republican, said the slowdown in confirming federal appeals court judges has created a crisis situation in North Carolina, where drug cases are often handled in federal rather than state courts.
But Carlton, a Democrat, said that the Senate has been moving quickly on nominations other than some of those for the federal appeals court. "We're close to an all-time low on (overall federal judicial) vacancies," he said.
What could undercut the Republicans' offensive is their own history when Democrats held the White House -- and judicial appointments -- under Clinton.
Despite Friday's claims of crisis, Helms said as recently as 2001 he agreed with a statement by 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson that the court did not need another judge.
And then there are those Clinton nominations blocked by Helms.
Asked about those Friday, Dole said, "I'm not going to go back over past history about Senator Helms. This is a new Congress, a new day."

Dole, Edwards feuding over judicial nominees
SCOTT MOONEYHAM
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) _ North Carolina's two U.S. senators are feuding over appointments to the federal judiciary, just months after pledging to cooperate on the issue.
Republican Sen. Elizabeth Dole sent a letter to Democratic Sen. John Edwards on Friday urging him to allow hearings to proceed on judicial nominees, particularly those to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.
``There is no question that when North Carolina has the largest population in the circuit and we don't have a single person on the court, something is wrong,'' Dole said.
Dole's letter and comments came as Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist on Friday proposed changing Senate rules that for 28 years has allowed parliamentary tactics to block nominations. Democrats responded that the Senate has approved 124 of Bush's 126 judicial nominations that have reached the chamber's floor.
In North Carolina, Edwards has blocked the nomination of Terrence Boyle of Edenton, chief judge of the District Court for Eastern North Carolina, since 2001.
Prior to Bush's election, former Sen. Jesse Helms blocked North Carolina nominees to the court made by President Clinton.
The disputes have left the 15-member court with no North Carolina judges since 1999. The court has three vacancies.
During a news conference held by telephone, Dole said Friday it was time to stop the partisan maneuvering over judicial nominees. She said the disagreements ``weaken the federal judiciary and endanger the administration of justice.''
``I just think it is time for the cycle of blame and recriminations to end,'' Dole said.
Through a spokesman, Edwards responded that he had worked with Bush and Dole to reach consensus on one nominee to the federal appeals court, Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan.
``Senator Edwards believes we need a bipartisan process to get mainstream consensus nominees for the federal bench,'' the spokesman said.
The Republican leadership has held up a hearing on Duncan's nomination, pushing first for a hearing for Boyle.
Dole said she believed that the nominees deserved hearings in the order in which they were nominated.
Besides Boyle and Duncan, Bush also nominated former Helms aide Claude Allen, a top official at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services who now lives in Virginia.
Under Senate traditions and rules, senators can hold up judicial nominees from their home state by blocking a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Edwards is a member of the judiciary committee, giving him more power to block Bush nominees.

Edwards endorsed a proposal by the North Carolina Bar Association last year to create a bipartisan nominating commission, with three members chosen by each senator. For each court vacancy, the commission would nominate three candidates from among whom the president would be urged to choose.

Dole eventually rejected the proposal, saying it was the responsibility of elected officials, not the bar association, to manage the nomination process.

In her letter to Edwards, Dole said individual senators were never intended to have a veto over a presidential nomination.

``The proper place to stop a nominee is on the Senate floor by convincing enough senators that the nominee should not be confirmed. Regardless of the outcome, every nominee deserves the courtesy of a vote,'' she said.

Democrats, though, have responded that Republicans are trying to force them to rubber stamp Bush's nominees.

During a news conference held by telephone, Dole said Friday it was time to stop the partisan maneuvering over judicial nominees. She said the disagreements ``weaken the federal judiciary and endanger the administration of justice.''

``I just think it is time for the cycle of blame and recriminations to end,'' Dole said.

Through a spokesman, Edwards responded that he had worked with Bush and Dole to reach consensus on one nominee to the federal appeals court, Raleigh lawyer Allyson Duncan.

``Senator Edwards believes we need a bipartisan process to get mainstream consensus nominees for the federal bench,'' the spokesman said.

The Republican leadership has held up a hearing on Duncan's nomination, pushing first for a hearing for Boyle.

Dole said she believed that the nominees deserved hearings in the order in which they were nominated.

Besides Boyle and Duncan, Bush also nominated former Helms aide Claude Allen, a top official at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services who now lives in Virginia.

Under Senate traditions and rules, senators can hold up judicial nominees from their home state by blocking a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Edwards is a member of the judiciary committee, giving him more power to block Bush nominees.

Edwards endorsed a proposal by the North Carolina Bar Association last year to create a bipartisan nominating commission, with three members chosen by each senator. For each court vacancy, the commission would nominate three candidates from among whom the president would be urged to choose.

Dole eventually rejected the proposal, saying it was the responsibility of elected officials, not the bar association, to manage the nomination process.

In her letter to Edwards, Dole said individual senators were never intended to have a veto over a presidential nomination.

``The proper place to stop a nominee is on the Senate floor by convincing enough senators that the nominee should not be confirmed. Regardless of the outcome, every nominee deserves the courtesy of a vote,'' she said.

Democrats, though, have responded that Republicans are trying to force them to rubber stamp Bush's nominees.

Judges Beyond the Pale

By BOB HERBERT

few years ago Azucena Sanchez-Scott, a resident of Los Angeles, underwent chemotherapy for breast cancer. On one occasion a man she had never seen before joined her doctor in the examination room.

The doctor said the man would be observing the examination. The doctor told Ms. Sanchez-Scott to undress to the waist and lie down on the examination table with her feet in the stirrups. The other man watched as the doctor examined her upper body.

According to court papers, "During the examination [Ms. Sanchez-Scott] began to feel extremely hot and flushed." She took a pocket fan from her purse and, her distress increasing, began to fan herself.

The doctor took the fan from her and gave it to the other man. The stranger began fanning the patient and both men began to laugh. Ms. Sanchez-Scott tried to take the fan back, but the stranger would not relinquish it.

Ms. Sanchez-Scott dressed as quickly as she could when the examination ended. She later learned that the stranger was not a medical person. He was a drug company salesman.

Ms. Sanchez-Scott went to court, asserting that her privacy had been violated. A judge, Carolyn Kuhl, dismissed the case. She ruled that because Ms. Sanchez-Scott had not openly objected to the man's presence in the examination room, she lost whatever right to privacy she may have had. In Judge Kuhl's view, at least from a legal standpoint, this humiliation of a seriously ill woman in the supposed sanctity of her doctor's office was quite O.K.

A three-judge Court of Appeals panel disagreed and unanimously overturned Judge Kuhl's ruling. The opinion stated emphatically: "A breast cancer patient who goes into an oncologist's office to be examined does not, nor should she, take a risk that what goes on in the examination room will be seen or heard by anyone other than medical personnel."

President Bush does not appear to be troubled by Carolyn Kuhl's way-out-of-the-mainstream judgment in this case, and in a number of others. He's nominated her to a seat on the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, which is one step down from the Supreme Court.

As a Justice Department lawyer in the Reagan administration, Ms. Kuhl aggressively argued for a return to the good old days before the Supreme Court's Roe v. Wade abortion decision. She co-wrote a Supreme Court brief that said Roe was "so far flawed that this court should overrule it and return the law to the condition in which it was before that case was decided."

Last week the Republican-controlled Senate Judiciary Committee, in a strict 10-to-9 party-line vote, sent Judge Kuhl's nomination to the Senate floor. Democrats are fighting the nomination as part of their thankless task of trying to block at least the worst of Mr. Bush's judicial appointments.

Senator Charles Schumer, a Democrat from New York who is on the Judiciary Committee, has been trying (along with many others) to sound the alarm about the succession of ideologues and extremists that the president has been attempting to install in the courts. During an interview last week, he discussed several "troubling" nominations, including that of James Leon Holmes to a federal judgeship in Arkansas.

Mr. Holmes has a problem with women. He doesn't see them as equals. "The wife is to subordinate herself to her husband," he has written. The woman, in Mr. Holmes's view, "is to place herself under the authority of the man."

Those who adopt the "feminist principle" of the equality of the sexes, he has said, "are contributing to the culture of death."

Mr. Holmes, a lawyer, is an absolute opponent of abortion, even in cases of rape. He once said that "conception from rape occurs with approximately the same frequency as snowfall in Miami."

He has since expressed regret for that remark.

"Even assuming they want to nominate conservative Republicans," said Senator Schumer, "can't they do better than these nominations? This president has selected judges through an ideological prism to a far greater extent than any other president in history."

The fight over the most extreme of President Bush's judicial nominations is not a fight against his right to appoint conservatives to the bench. It's a fight to keep the courts within some kind of boundary that is reasonably close to the mainstream of American life.;

Pickering is good man, fine jurist

Give Judge Charles Pickering a fair hearing.

This is our plea to members of the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee.

Pickering, who is President Bush's nominee to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, is tentatively scheduled to meet with the committee some time before Memorial Day.

Liberal Democrats on the committee blocked Pickering's confirmation last year. And if recent judiciary proceedings are any indication of what might befall the nominee, Pickering could be in for another rough ride.

This would be unfortunate - and highly unfair.

The nominee is a skilled jurist and a man of character.

Whether he is confirmed or not, Pickering deserves what every judicial nominee is entitled to: A fair, impartial hearing.

Liberals Democrats have twisted Pickering's record and a few of his legal decisions to suit their political biases. In recent weeks, they've used this modus operandi to sack two of the president's other judicial appointees: Texas Judge Priscilla Owen to the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals, and Hispanic lawyer Miguel Estrada to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Pickering's opponents have attempted to portray the judge as a racist. (Case in point: Pickering's opponents cite the judge's "lenient" decision in a cross-burning case as evidence. Pickering says he reduced the sentence for a man convicted of cross burning because others involved in the case received lighter sentences.)

Pickering is not a racist.

In fact, nothing could be further from the truth.

And let it be noted that some key members of Mississippi's African American community who have studied Pickering's record and his character concur with this conclusion.

Just last week, state Rep. Phillip West, D-Natchez, the head of the 45-member Mississippi Legislative Black Caucus, created a stir when he reversed his previous position and threw his support behind Pickering - a decision that puts West at odds with the black caucus, which opposes the Pickering nomination.

"He struck me as a sincere person," said West.

Others who've given Pickering a fair hearing have reached a similar conclusion.

Unfortunately, the liberal bias against the conservative Pickering is already rearing its ugly head - even in the media.

Last week, George Clark, the Hattiesburg American's chief photographer, was contacted by representatives at the New York Times, the Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times and other media outlets.

Each of these publishing giants sought the same thing - a photograph of the cross-burning incident cited above.

When Clark told them the Hattiesburg American didn't have a photograph of the cross-burning incident - but that we did have other file art of Pickering - they told him "thanks but no thanks."

Apparently the cross-burning case, the facts of which liberals have skewed to fit their presuppositions and validate their conclusions, constitutes the sine qua non ("without which there is none") of their interest in the nominee.

Why didn't these media outlets ask whether the American had any file art of Pickering testifying against Ku Klux Klansman Sam Bowers in 1968? Or of Pickering's efforts as a state lawmaker to bring about racial reconciliation in Mississippi?

Alas, we already know the answer to these questions.

Give Pickering a fair hearing.

To do anything less would be an injustice to a good and decent man.

Miguel Estrada Wants Name Withdrawn From Nomination, CNBC Says

By Patricia Azer

Washington, May 9 (Bloomberg) -- Miguel Estrada has ``raised the possibility'' with the White House of withdrawing his name from the appeals court nomination, financial news network CNBC reported, citing unidentified people close to Estrada.

Estrada, President George W. Bush's choice for a federal judgeship, will likely not withdraw his name because the White House ``would like to continue the fight to break that Democratic filibuster threat up on Capitol Hill,'' CNBC said.

Daschle: Not All Judge Picks Merit Vote

WASHINGTON - Not every one of a president's judicial nominees has the right to a straight up-or-down vote in the Senate, Democratic leader Tom Daschle said Sunday.

Democrats have held up votes on two of President Bush's picks, leading majority Republicans to propose last week a change in Senate rules to restrict the use of delaying tactics to block nominations.

In theory and practice, senators should have the chance to cast a direct vote on all nominees for the federal bench, said Daschle, D-S.D.

"That should be the rule but sometimes there are ... exceptions to the rule," he said. "There are extreme cases when extreme judges deserve no more than a cloture vote and these two cases fit that category."

A cloture vote is one to end debate and move to an immediate vote. Under current Senate rules, it takes 60 votes to end a filibuster blocking final action on legislation or a nomination.

Republicans have failed to reach that number in six cloture votes on appeals court nominees Miguel Estrada and two on Priscilla Owen, both opposed by Democrats for what they say is their conservative judicial activism.

"We have made all kinds of offers to the administration on Judge Estrada. If he just fills out his job application, there would be no filibuster," Daschle said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

"He refuses to do it. You wouldn't hire somebody that wouldn't fill out their job application. It's unprecedented that he would deny us the right to the information that so many of his predecessors have provided."

President Bush last week deplored the delays, saying the current Senate process was "a disgrace."

Changing the Senate rules would take two-thirds of voting senators.

Democrats note that the Senate had approved 124 of Bush's 126 judicial nominations that have reached the full Senate, and that Republicans prevented 60 of President Clinton's nominees from ever coming to a vote.

While Sen. John Breaux, D-La., said he had not seen two simultaneous filibusters before, "I've seen Republicans who have neglected to even have a hearing on nominees in the Clinton administration. It's the same effect."

Breaux said presidents are entitled to direct votes on their judicial picks.

"I think that what we're trying to say is that, look, give us the information on the judges and we'll have a record vote," Breaux told "Fox News Sunday."

Breaux said he thinks the Senate will get a chance to vote on Estrada's nomination.

"And on nominees that you do not like their philosophy, and I think there's a real argument on some of them, I think eventually you get to a vote," he said.

Democrats, who want more information about Estrada, have asked him to answer more questions and have urged the White House to release memos Estrada wrote while working for the Justice Department.

The Bush administration has refused to release those memos. Republicans have accused Democrats of treating Estrada unfairly because he is a conservative Hispanic.

Frist, R-Tenn., said changes in the rules that have governed the Senate the past 28 years were the only way to resolve an issue that has disrupted other Senate business and intensified partisan discord in the body.

BODY:

Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts was chatting up other Democrats on the Senate floor Monday during the vote to confirm Deborah L. Cook to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, when Sen. Mike DeWine, R-Ohio, sauntered over.

"Sweet talker!" thundered Kennedy, as he and the other Democrats laughed. "Don't come over here. You've done enough damage with your sweet talking!"

DeWine's response was inaudible to the group in the press gallery, but his broad grin told the story even before the votes were counted, 66-25 in Cook's favor.

The nomination had been held captive for two years in partisan gridlock over President Bush's judicial choices, but Cook ended up winning over 17 Democrats, despite opposition from organized labor and Kennedy, a master at blocking nominations. He claimed that as an Ohio Supreme Court justice, Cook has been overly friendly to business interests and too often against workers' rights.

Cook can thank DeWine and, to a lesser extent, Columbus lawyer Jeffrey S. Sutton, for her extraordinary change of fortune. Sutton, former Ohio solicitor, also had been in Senate limbo before he was confirmed the previous week to another 6th Circuit seat.

DeWine isn't publicizing his achievement, but several Senate Democrats who serve with him on the Judiciary Committee gave him his due. DeWine's quiet maneuvering and ability to capitalize on the mutual trust he's developed with many Democrats freed Cook from the gridlock.

Democrats were charging that Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the committee, broke Senate rules in forcing a final committee vote on Cook and John Roberts, Bush's nominee to the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals. Democrats were angry enough to block both from getting a vote before the full Senate; Republicans, who needed 60 votes to stop a filibuster, have just a 51-49 majority.

But DeWine and a close friend, Sen. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., got together in search of a compromise. Durbin, also a Judiciary Committee member, realized Democrats couldn't block all Bush nominees from getting a vote, and DeWine knew the GOP had to give Democrats a fair procedural shake.

The pair approached Hatch and the committee's top Democrat, Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, and proposed a compromise: Allow a vote on Cook but send Roberts back to committee for another hearing before letting his nomination go forward.

Meanwhile, DeWine argued Cook's case to Democratic senators, pledging she was a mainstream Republican who would be a fair and restrained federal judge, not a radical judicial activist looking to reshape the laws from the appeals bench.

"Mike DeWine's credibility is entwined in her judicial future," Durbin said. "He did a lot for her."

Another Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, Sen. Russell Feingold of Wisconsin, said DeWine "was instrumental in causing the Cook nomination to get a better reception than it might have."

Sutton was a more controversial choice than Cook, because disability-rights advocates and other groups claimed that Sutton's states' rights stands would undermine federal laws. Sutton did himself a great deal of good when he persuaded the committee's Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., that he can separate his advocacy from his role as a judge.

Even at that, Feingold and Durbin said DeWine's consensus-building helped ensure Sutton wasn't blocked from receiving a floor vote.

And Sutton's harshest critic in the hearings, Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa, said DeWine's reputation for moderation helped ease through a nomination of a man Harkin views as an extremist.

"I thought his . . . defense of Mr. Sutton was informed and reasoned, and I thought very good," Harkin said. "Mike DeWine is sort of moderating in any area."

DeWine's response was inaudible to the group in the press gallery, but his broad grin told the story even before the votes were counted, 66-25 in Cook's favor.

The nomination had been held captive for two years in partisan gridlock over President Bush's judicial choices, but Cook ended up winning over 17

Democrats, despite opposition from organized labor and Kennedy, a master at blocking nominations. He claimed that as an Ohio Supreme Court justice, Cook has been overly friendly to business interests and too often against workers' rights.

Cook can thank DeWine and, to a lesser extent, Columbus lawyer Jeffrey S. Sutton, for her extraordinary change of fortune. Sutton, former Ohio solicitor, also had been in Senate limbo before he was confirmed the previous week to another 6th Circuit seat.

DeWine isn't publicizing his achievement, but several Senate Democrats who serve with him on the Judiciary Committee gave him his due. DeWine's quiet maneuvering and ability to capitalize on the mutual trust he's developed with many Democrats freed Cook from the gridlock.

Democrats were charging that Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the committee, broke Senate rules in forcing a final committee vote on Cook and John Roberts, Bush's nominee to the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals. Democrats were angry enough to block both from getting a vote before the full Senate; Republicans, who needed 60 votes to stop a filibuster, have just a 51-49 majority.

But DeWine and a close friend, Sen. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., got together in search of a compromise. Durbin, also a Judiciary Committee member, realized Democrats couldn't block all Bush nominees from getting a vote, and DeWine knew the GOP had to give Democrats a fair procedural shake.

The pair approached Hatch and the committee's top Democrat, Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, and proposed a compromise: Allow a vote on Cook but send Roberts back to committee for another hearing before letting his nomination go forward.

Meanwhile, DeWine argued Cook's case to Democratic senators, pledging she was a mainstream Republican who would be a fair and restrained federal judge, not a radical judicial activist looking to reshape the laws from the appeals bench.

"Mike DeWine's credibility is entwined in her judicial future," Durbin said. "He did a lot for her."

Another Democrat on the Judiciary Committee, Sen. Russell Feingold of Wisconsin, said DeWine "was instrumental in causing the Cook nomination to get a better reception than it might have."

Sutton was a more controversial choice than Cook, because disability-rights advocates and other groups claimed that Sutton's states' rights stands would undermine federal laws. Sutton did himself a great deal of good when he persuaded the committee's Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., that he can separate his advocacy from his role as a judge.

Even at that, Feingold and Durbin said DeWine's consensus-building helped ensure Sutton wasn't blocked from receiving a floor vote.

And Sutton's harshest critic in the hearings, Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa, said DeWine's reputation for moderation helped ease through a nomination of a man Harkin views as an extremist.

"I thought his . . . defense of Mr. Sutton was informed and reasoned, and I thought very good," Harkin said. "Mike DeWine is sort of moderating in any area."

N.Ky. lawyers push Bush nominees

<mailto:pcrowley@enquirer.com>
Yes, those were two Northern Kentucky lawyers hanging out with President Bush Friday in the White House Rose Garden.

Fort Mitchell's Rick Robinson and Jeff Landen of Edgewood - both partners with Graydon Head & Ritchey - were in Washington as part of an effort to pressure Senate Democrats into voting on Bush's 11 nominees for the federal bench.

"Because of the Senate's failure to hold timely votes, the number of judicial vacancies has become unacceptably high," Bush said in a statement released by the White House. "When the federal courts are understaffed, they cannot act in a timely manner to resolve disputes that affect the lives and liberties of Americans."

Robinson and Landen, both active in local GOP politics, are members of a group called Progress for America, which supports the president's agenda.

"We've been involved with the battle to try and get the Senate to confirm appellate court judges, in particular the 6th Circuit (Court of Appeals in Cincinnati)," Robinson said. "The Rose Garden event was a part of that effort, and it was great, very exciting."

Robinson attended two Rose Garden ceremonies while working in the early 1990s as legislative director for then-U.S. Rep. Jim Bunning, the Southgate Republican elected to the Senate in 1998.

Both of those events were sports-related - one to honor the 1990 Cincinnati Reds World Series team, the other when the White House honored baseball legends Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio.

"I've been to Rose Garden ceremonies before, but this was the first time I was there for a public policy speech," he said. "It was nice to see the president really tee up the issue ... because I really think this is one of the most important policy and constitutional battles of our time.

"It's the legislative branch holding up the judicial branch. What the Senate Democrats are doing is unconscionable."

Landen has visited the White House, but Friday was his first Rose Garden event.

"It was fascinating," he said. "It was obviously very interesting to be in the Rose Garden, but it was also exciting to see the president and hear what he said about getting his judicial nominations confirmed. Justice delayed is justice denied, and in this case justice is being denied."

The left-leaning People for the American Way called Bush's comments "Orwellian doublespeak."

"First, (Bush) claims that there is a judicial vacancy crisis when vacancies are actually at their lowest level in 13 years," Ralph G. Neas, the president of the organization, said in a statement.

"Second, he claims that the Senate has been obstructionist when it has confirmed more than 120 judges since July 2001 and has only filibustered two. The opportunity for senators to engage in unlimited debate on important national issues and nominations has often served the nation well."

Later in the day, Robinson and Landen were invited to watch Bush leave the White House lawn via Marine One, the presidential helicopter - which is a huge invite among the Washington power crowd.

Please make clear to everyone there that our intention from the get-go was to invite any and all comers from OLP for the precise purpose of expressing President's and WH appreciation of the hard work. The problem was that Cabinet
Affairs does DOJ invites and does not usually make calls until 2-3 days before event. Meanwhile, Public Liaison handles outside groups and has to give more advance notice. Pub Liaison had called Fed Soc late last week and told them to round up 25-50 people. Fed Soc then stupidly called people in your office and some Senate staffers instead of calling people on the outside. Sorry for confusion, but please make sure people in OLP and FBI unit understand they always were to be invited by us.

Gay GOP Group Readies for 2004 Elections

Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A gay Republicans group says it is trying to get beyond the flap over Sen. Rick Santorum's derogatory remarks about homosexual behavior, yet it is that very controversy that helped double the attendance at its annual convention.

Comments by the conservative Republican from Pennsylvania, the GOP takeover of the Senate last year and the upcoming presidential race were the main topics that lured more than 200 people to the Log Cabin Republicans' annual convention, which ends here Saturday night. That's more than twice the attendance of last year's meeting.

Santorum has been a center of attention since an April 7 interview with The Associated Press in which he brought up a pending Supreme Court case over a Texas sodomy law and likened gay behavior to incest and polygamy.

"It was a reminder to all that we had work to do," Patrick Guerriero, director of the group, said Saturday about the increased attendance.

On Friday, about 200 gay members of the GOP met for more than an hour with three White House officials at the Eisenhower Executive Office Building - Joseph O'Neill, the White House AIDS czar, Brett Kavanaugh, associate White House counsel, and Holly Kuzmich, associate director of the White House domestic policy council.

Ken Lisaius, a White House spokesman, downplayed the meeting, saying it was one of many policy meetings requested by groups looking for ways to further the president's initiatives. The group talked about AIDS, education and judicial nominees for the federal bench, he said.

Guerriero said the Bush administration has invited gay Republicans to discussions about AIDS, judicial nominations and other policy issues. Still, the Log Cabin Republicans believe the White House could have distanced itself further from the Santorum controversy.

"If we were completely satisfied that the Republican Party was as inclusive as we wished, we would cease to exist," Guerriero said. "It's obvious that the issue of inclusiveness in the Republican Party is going to be a major issue."

An estimated 1 million gay and lesbian Americans voted for President Bush in 2000, he said. The gay Republicans attending the annual convention, complete with get-out-the-vote workshops and congressional briefings, are convinced that gays and lesbians, if they don't vote for Bush, could be partly responsible for "losing the White House," he said.

Bush already stumping for Daniels

;By Mary Beth Schneider

May 11, 2003

Indianapolis Star

Mitch Daniels isn't even officially running for Indiana governor yet, but he's already become the man to beat.

Last Tuesday, Daniels announced he will step down June 6 as the White House budget director, all but guaranteeing that his next move will be to step into the race for governor.

The news completely overshadowed the other political news of that day -- a primary election so boring that fewer than 10 percent of Marion County voters bothered to cast a ballot.

Daniels will be entering a field of Republicans that includes former U.S. Rep. David McIntosh, trying for a comeback after losing the governor's race in 2000; conservative activist Eric Miller; state Sens. Murray Clark and Luke Kenley; and Petersburg Mayor Randy Harris.

Daniels has some baggage. Democrats and even some Republicans will point out that the federal surplus that was blossoming when he became budget director is now a burgeoning federal deficit. And Daniels is among 30 former IPALCO directors and officers subpoenaed as part of an Indiana Securities Division investigation into the unloading of stock by company insiders about the time the utility was sold to a company whose stock plummeted.

But Daniels will have on his side the biggest heavy lifter in American politics today -- President Bush.

On Tuesday, Daniels demurred to discuss the race for governor as long as he is still a federal employee. Bush wasn't so shy.

"This administration's loss is the gain of the people of Indiana," said Bush.

The next day, the White House announced Bush was coming to Indianapolis.

The reason is to tout his plan to eliminate the taxes on stock dividends.

But the dividend for Daniels is immeasurable.

He'll be with the president as several thousand Hoosiers fill the Pepsi Coliseum. They'll hear Bush praise the men and women in uniform. They'll hear his case that eliminating the tax on dividends will help senior citizens who live on pensions and investments.

And how much do you bet that they'll also hear what a great guy Mitch Daniels is and how lucky the state is to have him coming back?

As they say, you can't buy publicity like that.

Just as important for Daniels, Bush will be making a private endorsement Monday night. He'll arrive in Indianapolis that evening and meet with a couple dozen of the deep-pocketed business leaders who have bankrolled Republican candidates in the past.

It's a meeting Bush personally asked for. It's not a fund-raiser. It's a chance for the kind of people who support Bush to meet both him and Daniels -- paving the way for them to financially back Daniels once he launches a campaign.

"This is not the 'Frugal Hoosiers for Mitch' crowd," one Republican familiar with the event said with a laugh.

The "Frugal Hoosiers" are a grass-roots group of Hoosiers -- who think $10 is a deep financial commitment -- who have been urging Daniels to run.

The question Daniels is asked most often: "When will you announce?" The question his GOP opponents are asked most often -- by reporters, anyway: "When will you get out?"

Kenley says he is weighing whether to continue, while the others say they are in the race to stay. The test for them is how they withstand the blast from Air Force One.

"This administration's loss is the gain of the people of Indiana," said Bush.

The next day, the White House announced Bush was coming to Indianapolis.

The reason is to tout his plan to eliminate the taxes on stock dividends.

But the dividend for Daniels is immeasurable.

He'll be with the president as several thousand Hoosiers fill the Pepsi Coliseum. They'll hear Bush praise the men and women in uniform. They'll hear his case that eliminating the tax on dividends will help senior citizens who live on pensions and investments.

And how much do you bet that they'll also hear what a great guy Mitch Daniels is and how lucky the state is to have him coming back?

As they say, you can't buy publicity like that.

Just as important for Daniels, Bush will be making a private endorsement Monday night. He'll arrive in Indianapolis that evening and meet with a couple dozen of the deep-pocketed business leaders who have bankrolled Republican candidates in the past.

It's a meeting Bush personally asked for. It's not a fund-raiser. It's a chance for the kind of people who support Bush to meet both him and Daniels -- paving the way for them to financially back Daniels once he launches a campaign.

"This is not the 'Frugal Hoosiers for Mitch' crowd," one Republican familiar with the event said with a laugh.

The "Frugal Hoosiers" are a grass-roots group of Hoosiers -- who think $10 is a deep financial commitment -- who have been urging Daniels to run.

The question Daniels is asked most often: "When will you announce?" The question his GOP opponents are asked most often -- by reporters, anyway: "When will you get out?"

Kenley says he is weighing whether to continue, while the others say they are in the race to stay. The test for them is how they withstand the blast from Air Force One.

Is Graham Charge of 911 'Cover-up' Politics as Usual?

Florida Sen. Bob Graham, Democratic candidate for president, is a low key politician not typically given to wild allegations. So eyebrows went up when he charged the Bush administration with conducting a "cover up" by refusing to declassify an 800-page congressional intelligence report on the Sept. 11th terrorist attacks. Sen. Graham hints darkly that, as a member of the Senate Intelligence Committee, he has special knowledge that the 911 attacks could and should have been prevented. Is this true, or just posturing for political advantage? It's impossible to say. Other members of the House and Senate intelligence committees express frustration with the CIA's slow pace of clearing the report for public release, but they do not confirm Sen. Graham's serious allegations. Sen. Graham, of course, has made terrorism his key campaign issue. He opposed the war in Iraq because, he charges, it diverted resources from counterterrorism. Sen. Graham alleges the U.S. is more vulnerable to a terrorist attack today than it was on 911. This charge seems unsupportable in view of the progress that has been made on improving national security and the destruction of the Taliban in Afghanistan and Saddam Hussein's regime in Iraq. Osama bin Ladin is in hiding and al-Qaeda is being dismantled. Still, it would be in the interest of the Bush administration to expedite the release of the 911 report so that Sen. Graham's serious charges can either be substantiated or discredited.

The High Price of Abortion

A new study reports that women who have abortions are 65 percent more likely to experience clinical depression than those who carry their pregnancies to term. The results of this study fly in the face of abortion advocates who blithely dismiss the idea that terminating a pregnancy has any emotional, psychological, or spiritual impact on women. The study by the Elliot Institute was based on data from an Ohio State University study funded by the federal government that spanned 21 years and involved 1,884 women. Abortion is the taking of an innocent human life. Common sense suggests that making such a "choice" would have a profound impact on women. Women contemplating abortion deserve to make fully informed decisions by having all available information on its physical and psychological consequences. On a related note, FRC has just produced a new resource to help illustrate the devastating loss of life since abortion was legalized in 1973. Click the link below to see a map of the U.S. with 17 states highlighted in red. The current population of these states is equivalent to the 43 million children lost to abortion since the Roe decision. I encourage you to view this map, show it to friends and order copies for crisis pregnancy centers, churches, and schools in your community.

Filibuster: Change the Rules or 'Go Nuclear'

The Constitution specifies the five instances in which a supermajority vote is required and confirming judges is not one of them. Requiring 60 votes to confirm judges, as the Senate's segregation-era rules require, is unconstitutional. Majority Leader Bill Frist has proposed changing the rules to allow all judicial nominees to get up-or-down confirmation votes after a series of votes to cut off debate. Despite past opposition to the filibuster--Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa first proposed this rule change--Democrats promise to block the proposal. This leaves only the so-called "nuclear option," that is, forcing a simple majority vote on confirmation by invoking a parliamentary point-of-order. This could succeed, but it would require all 52 Republicans to support it, a doubtful prospect at present. Sen. Frist should keep up the pressure for the rule change and President Bush should keep making the constitutional case to the American people.

Please make clear to everyone there that our intention from the get-go was to invite any and all comers from OLP for the precise purpose of expressing President's and WH appreciation of the hard work. The problem was that

Cabinet
Affairs does DOJ invites and does not usually make calls until 2-3 days before event. Meanwhile, Public Liaison handles outside groups and has to give more advance notice. Pub Liaison had called Fed Soc late last week and told them to round up 25-50 people. Fed Soc then stupidly called people in your office and some Senate staffers instead of calling people on the outside. Sorry for confusion, but please make sure people in OLP and FBI unit understand they always were to be invited by us.

Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002, Pub. L. 107-155.....passim

TEXTS

WRIGHT & MILLER, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE.....4

REV_00118094

Defendants and Intervenors have moved for a stay, pending appeal to the United States Supreme Court, of this Court's judgment permanently enjoining enforcement of major provisions of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002 ("BCRA"), Pub. L. No. 107-155. Defendants have also moved for an "administrative stay" while this Court considers the pending motions for a stay pending appeal. The Republican National Committee ("RNC"), Republican Parties of Colorado, New Mexico, and Ohio, Dallas County (Iowa) Republican County Central Committee, and Michael Duncan (the "RNC Plaintiffs") urge this Court to deny these motions, insofar as they relate to Title I of the BCRA.[1]

For six months, the RNC Plaintiffs have operated in compliance with a regime that deprives them of their First Amendment rights of speech and association. This Court's judgment invalidates at least some of those restrictions. Now, in less than six months -- on November 4 of this year -- five states will hold state and local elections, and three of those five will elect governors. In addition, citizens in numerous other states will go to the polls to vote for their local governments -- mayors, city councils, school boards, and other officials that have an immediate effect on their daily lives. Plaintiff Republican Parties of Colorado, New Mexico, and Ohio all have mayoral elections scheduled to take place in their states on November 4. Since its founding in 1856, the RNC has been intimately and continuously involved in these state and local elections, but under Title I of BCRA its ability to assist state and local parties and candidates was restricted at best and prohibited at worst. Remarkably, despite extensive briefing by the RNC Plaintiffs on this very issue of national party participation in off-year elections, Defendants completely ignore the issue in seeking full enforcement of Title I at a time when there is simply no cognizable federal interest in doing so. Once again, Defendants have confirmed their world view that all election activity -- state and local, as well as federal -- is subject to total federal regulation.

[1] The RNC and its co-plaintiffs have not challenged the "electioneering communications" provisions of BCRA's Title II and therefore do not address herein the separate motions filed by various plaintiffs in the other consolidated actions that seek a stay limited to those provisions.

Having won from this Court their freedom once again to associate freely with state and local parties and candidates as well as to engage in core political speech without fear of criminal prosecution, the RNC Plaintiffs oppose in the strongest terms any effort to continue BCRA's infringements of these precious freedoms.

FACTS

As found by this Court, five states -- Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Jersey, and Virginia -- have state and local elections in odd-numbered years when there are no federal candidates on the ballot, including this November. See Op. of Henderson, J. at 151, Findings ¶ 71(c)(2)(A); Op. of Leon, J. at 151, Findings ¶ 58. All of the money raised and spent by the state and local parties and candidates in those elections is raised, spent, and reported consistent with state, not federal, law. This money is, accordingly, "nonfederal money."

A critical part of the mission of the national party committees is to work with state and local parties, and state and local candidates, to design and implement voter mobilization programs (called "Victory Plans" by the Republicans and "Coordinated Campaigns" by the Democrats) in these off-year elections. Yet Section 323(a) severely impedes the ability of national party personnel to work with state and local parties and candidates on these voter mobilization plans without fear of civil or even criminal liability. It is far too easy for a zealous prosecutor or a political opponent to allege that advising and providing direction in the construction and implementation of such a "Victory Plan" constitutes "direct[ing]" or "spend[ing]" nonfederal money. It is noteworthy indeed that Defendants in this action have never denied that RNC participation in these plans is severely curtailed by new Section 323(a). These voter mobilization plans for the November 2003 election are being developed right now, and under this Court's ruling there is no question that the RNC may cooperate fully with and assist Republican state and local parties, and state and local candidates in implementing them. In all likelihood, these plans will be completed and perhaps even fully implemented before the Supreme Court is able to act.

This Court's decision largely ameliorates concerns about whether national party personnel can legally work with state and local parties and candidates on their voter mobilization plans, without fear of committing a federal crime. As the RNC Plaintiffs understand the decision, RNC personnel may freely meet with state and local party officials and candidates to advise them on how to spend, allocate and raise their resources in these upcoming elections, just as they did before BCRA became effective. Whereas such consultation would, under Section 323(a) as drafted, subject RNC personnel to possible felony prosecution for "direct[ing] . . . [or] spend[ing]" nonfederal money, the Court's decision will allow political parties to participate fully in the November 2003 state and local election campaigns without fear of prosecution. The RNC Plaintiffs respectfully submit that there can be no countervailing justification favoring a return to BCRA's oppressive restrictions that would be weighty enough to preclude unfettered national party participation in these imminent state and local elections. This concern alone strongly militates against entry of the requested stay.

ARGUMENT

The granting of a stay pending appeal is "an extraordinary remedy." Cuomo v. U.S. Nuclear Reg. Comm'n, 772 F.2d 972, 978 (D.C. Cir. 1985). The moving party bears a "heavy burden" to establish its entitlement to a stay. See In re Verizon Internet Services, Inc.,

REV_00118097

2003 WL 1946489, at *19 (D.D.C. Apr. 24, 2003) (denying stay pending appeal); see WRIGHT & MILLER, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 2904 ("Because the burden of meeting this standard is a heavy one, more commonly stay requests will not meet this standard and will be denied.").

Under the familiar rules of this Circuit, to obtain a stay pending appeal, Defendants and Intervenors must show (1) that they have a substantial likelihood of success on the merits, (2) that they will suffer irreparable injury if the stay is denied, (3) that issuance of the stay will not cause substantial harm to other parties, and (4) that the public interest will be served by issuance of the stay. See United States v. Philip Morris, 314 F.3d 612, 617 (D.C. Cir. 2003). For the reasons described below, they cannot meet this heavy burden here.

I. DEFENDANTS' EFFORT TO REARGUE THE MERITS CANNOT JUSTIFY A STAY.

Defendants' and Intervenors' arguments for a stay largely reiterate the arguments this Court has already carefully considered and rejected. Moreover, it is highly unlikely that the claimed public cynicism would be exacerbated by allowing the RNC Plaintiffs to exercise their rights of association and speech in formulating and implementing voter mobilization plans together with state and local parties and candidates in the five states and numerous localities holding off-year elections. As the majority of this Court recognized, participation in nonfederal elections during an off year presents no prospect of corruption or apparent corruption of federal officials. Since the Supreme Court will undoubtedly decide this case well before the 2004 federal elections, a ruling by the Supreme Court reviving Title I (however unlikely) would come in time for the 2004 elections when both federal and state candidates will be on the same ballot.

This Court's decision clearly establishes that the RNC Plaintiffs, not Defendants, enjoy a substantial likelihood of success on the merits, with regard to Title I. The RNC Plaintiffs incorporate herein by reference their briefing on the merits. It suffices to note that after careful consideration of the elaborate record in this case, the Court found that Title I's interference with political parties' participation in state and local elections through unified party building programs for all its candidates restricts their First Amendment rights in a manner that is not closely drawn to serve the government's interest in preventing corruption or apparent corruption of federal candidates or officeholders. Judge Henderson would have gone further and struck down Title I in its entirety. (Neither Judge Henderson nor Judge Leon needed to address the RNC's substantial arguments based on federalism or equal protection; Defendants will, of course, need to overcome these hurdles, as well as this Court's First Amendment rulings, in the Supreme Court in order to resurrect Title I.) In light of the Court's decision, and the ample support for that decision as recounted at length by Judges Henderson and Leon, it can hardly be claimed that Defendants and Intervenors are likely to succeed on the merits. To the contrary, all indications are that they are likely to fail.

II. DEFENDANTS CANNOT MEET THE REMAINING REQUIREMENTS FOR A STAY.

A. A Stay Will Impose Immediate and Irreparable Injury on the RNC Plaintiffs.

It is the RNC Plaintiffs, not the Government or the Intervenors, who will suffer irreparable injury if this Court stays its judgment enjoining enforcement of Title I. This year's state and local election campaigns are already underway. State and local parties and candidates are looking to the RNC for the strategic advice and assistance the national party historically provides in devising and implementing effective plans for registering and turning out Republican voters. It is well-settled that "[t]he loss of First Amendment freedoms, for even minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury." See Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 373 (1976). Every day that the RNC is constrained from speaking freely and closely associating with state and local parties and candidates, the RNC Plaintiffs and their millions of supporters suffer irreparable injury. Because a stay would "cause substantial harm" to the RNC Plaintiffs, Defendants and Intervenors cannot satisfy the third prong of the standard for issuance of a stay.

Nor would denial of a stay cause Defendants and Intervenors irreparable injury. Notwithstanding their claim that absent issuance of a stay, "uncertainty" would result and the FEC's job of administering the Federal Election Campaign Act would be complicated, neither of these exaggerated concerns could possibly outweigh the immediate injury to political parties' First Amendment freedoms and the irreparable effect of that injury on this year's state and local elections -- an effect that Defendants and Intervenors studiously ignore in their papers. To the extent that the FEC believes it must reinstate its pre-BCRA reporting and "allocation" regulations, nothing is stopping the FEC from doing so, whether by formal, interim rulemaking or by issuance of a policy statement. Indeed, as Intervenors note, the Chairman of the FEC is already on record as stating that the FEC would likely issue "guidelines to the political community" and that the FEC "will try to get guidance out as quickly as possible." See Intervenors' Motion for Stay, at 4 n. 3 (quoting BNA Today, May 6, 2003). The interim administrative action apparently already planned by the FEC would address Defendant's purported concerns without reinstating BCRA's oppressive restrictions on political speech in the heat of state and local election campaigns. Intervenors' suggestion that a stay would, in fact, be helpful to Plaintiffs by obviating "the prospect of adjusting to several separate sets of campaign finance laws in roughly a year's time," (Intervenors' Motion for Stay, ¶ 9), is a nonsensical makeweight. This purported concern did not dissuade the Intervenors from filing their challenges to the Federal Election Commission's ("FEC") regulations implementing BCRA, even though those very challenges ensured that some uncertainty would surround enforcement of federal election laws by the FEC. More fundamentally, although it is true that Section 323(a) could not be more clear in its extreme breadth and unforgiving scope, it is perverse to rely upon that clarity and overbreadth as a basis for justifying the continued abridgment of First Amendment rights.

B. The Public Interest Disfavors a Stay.

The public interest here strongly favors denial of a stay. Enforcement of First Amendment rights is always in the public interest, especially so when political speech at the heart of the First Amendment is at issue. See People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, Inc. v. Gittens, 215 F. Supp. 2d 120, 127 (D.D.C. 2002) (granting preliminary injunction enforcing First Amendment rights because "the public interest favors a preliminary injunction whenever First Amendment rights have been violated."); Freethought Soc'y v. Chester County, 194 F. Supp.2d 437, 441 (E.D. Pa. 2002); Gay Lesbian Bisexual Alliance v. Sessions, 917 F. Supp. 1558 (M.D. Ala. 1996) (denying stay pending appeal of judgment enforcing First Amendment rights, and noting public interest served because "vital First Amendment speech principles are at stake here"). Here issuance of a stay would preclude the political parties from playing their traditional role in this year's state and local elections. Neither in their merits briefing nor in their stay papers have Defendants been able to postulate -- much less prove -- any adverse effect on the public interest from the RNC's participation in the development and implementation of Victory Plans in this year's nonfederal elections. The public interest favors allowing the elections to proceed unfettered by the artificial and unconstitutional associational and speech constraints imposed by BCRA.

REV_00118101

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the RNC Plaintiffs respectfully urge this Court to deny the motions for stay with regard to Title I.

not yet; heard about it. It's wrong as described because says something about Estrada withdrawing, which is not accurate, and does not mention that there are 2 other vacancies still on DC Circuit.

Y'all,

Just got word that House Judiciary wants me to testify on class action reform on Thursday. This is easy, as we have a previously cleared letter of support for the bill in the 107th, and we will base the testimony on that letter. Just wanted to give you a heads up and ask for you help in clearing the testimony (going to OMB tomorrow morning) by Wednesday morning. thanks,

KEY POINTS FROM THE PRESIDENT: PEACE IN THE MIDDLE EAST, 5/9/03***

*A dictator in Iraq has been removed from power, reformers in the Middle East are gaining influence, and the momentum of freedom is growing. The United States will seize this moment for the sake of peace.

*The Middle East presents many obstacles to the advance of freedom. America is working with governments and reformers to strengthen ties through our Middle East partnership initiative, and pursuing an agenda of economic, political, and social progress.

*Now with a liberated Iraq, with new leadership for the Palestinian people, with efforts of leaders like President Mubarak and Crown Prince Abdallah, the hope of peace is renewed.

*All sides of the conflict have duties. The Palestinian people must take concrete steps to crack down on terror, and continue on a path of peace, reform and democracy.

*Israel must take tangible steps now to ease the suffering of the Palestinians and to show respect for their dignity.

*As progress is made toward peace, Israel must stop settlement activity in the occupied territories. Arab nations must fight terror in all forms, and recognize and state once and for all: Israel has a right to exist as a Jewish state at peace with its neighbors.

*We're determined to help build a Middle East that grows in hope instead of resentment. Because of the ideals and resolve of this nation, we will not live in an age of terror, but in an age of liberty.

THE LATEST ON WMD

- President Bush has made identifying and eliminating Iraq's weapons of mass destruction a top priority.
- We've had a major development in finding the biological weapons lab, which looks like the sketch that Secretary Powell talked about at the United Nations. There will be other breakthroughs.
- The Coalition is taking a comprehensive approach by:

- A new team working on weapons discovery and other surveys is entering Iraq to take advantage of the documentation and interviews with Iraqi personnel. This long-planned rotation enhances our WMD verification program. This team is larger and will have more experience in document exploitation, intelligence, and other key elements.
- The process of identifying and verifying WMD is complicated and lengthy. The U.S. government has always expected this to be a difficult and time-consuming process.
  - Based on intelligence, the U.S. has compiled a list of roughly 600 sites related to WMD.
  - Thus far, special teams have visited 70 sites on the original list and another 40 sites that came from leads developed in country.
- The Iraqi regime devised many concealment and deception tools. Iraq's "just-in-time inventory" allowed them to put together weapons at the last moment. It was inspections-proof.
- They embedded as much as they could in the "dual-use infrastructure," allowing them – for example -- to make as much as 50 percent more chlorine than needed. The making of chlorine looks perfectly innocent, but it is a precursor for some chemical weapons.

As you know, on Friday DOJ asked the district court to stay its decision pending the Supreme Court's final disposition of the case. DOJ also filed for administrative stay of the decision pending resolution of the stay motions.

Today, DOJ filed with the district court a response to the other parties' stay motions (which had sought stays of only parts of the district court's decision). DOJ argued that the whole decision, not just part, should be stayed pending the Supreme Court's final disposition.

Today, DOJ also filed its jurisdictional statement with the Supreme Court, which gets the appeal process underway.

Also today, worried that the district court will not grant the requested stay, the NRA asked the Chief Justice for a temporary emergency stay of the decision on Title II, pending the district court's resolution of the stay motions.

If by tomorrow the district court has not ruled on the stay motions, DOJ may also file with the Chief a motion for a temporary emergency stay of the district court's decision, pending resolution of the stay motions, except DOJ will ask to have the entire decision, not just the Title II part, stayed.

I will let you know as things continue to develop.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you all, very much. (Applause.) Please be seated. Thanks. (Applause.) Thanks a lot for coming, thanks for the warm welcome. Welcome to the White House and the Rose Garden. I'm pleased all of you could be here to stand for a truly independent federal judiciary. The framers of the Constitution knew that freedom and justice depend on fair and impartial judges. To ensure judges of the highest quality, integrity, they designed a system in which the President would nominate judges and the Senate would vote up or down on the nominees.

Today, we are facing a crisis in the Senate, and therefore, a crisis in our judiciary. Highly qualified judicial nominees are waiting years to get an up-or-down vote from the United States Senate. They wait for years while partisans search in vain for reasons to reject them. The obstructionist tactics of a small group of senators are setting a pattern that threatens judicial independence. Meanwhile, vacancies on the bench and overcrowded court dockets are causing delays for citizens seeking justice. The judicial confirmation is broken, and it must be fixed for the good of the country. (Applause.)

Every person nominated to the federal bench deserves a timely vote. I want to appreciate Al Gonzales' introduction. I appreciate his good sound legal advice. He's been my friend for a long time. I'm really pleased he left Austin, Texas to come up here and serve our country. I also want to thank the Attorney General for serving our country, as well. He is doing a fabulous job for our nation. (Applause.) And we wish him a happy 60th birthday today. (Applause.)

I'm so pleased the leaders of the United States Senate are here. Bill Frist is ably leading the United States Senate. Thank you for coming, Senator. (Applause.) I want to thank Senator Orrin Hatch for being here, as well. The Chairman is going to lead the efforts to reform our process. And, Mr. Chairman, I support your work to make sure we increase judicial pay across the United States. Thank you for your leadership. (Applause.)

I'm also grateful that Senators Cornyn, from Texas, Dole -- and Graham, of South Carolina -- Mitch McConnell, Zell Miller and Arlen Specter are with us. These folks represent the best of the United States Senate, and thank you for coming. (Applause.)

I appreciate the fact that members of John Aschcroft's staff from the Justice Department are here, in particular Larry Thompson, Bobby McCallum, and Ted Olson. Thank you all, for your good work and service. (Applause.)

I know we've got a lot of distinguished lawyers who are here. A.P. Carlton is the President of the American Bar Association. A.P., I appreciate you coming and lending your efforts to make sure that the system works on behalf of the American people. Duard Bradshaw is the President of the Hispanic National Bar Association -- is here, as well. Welcome to you both. Thank you for your concern. (Applause.) And welcome to all.

Exactly two years ago, I announced my first 11 nominees to the federal appeals court. I chose men and women of talent and integrity, highly qualified nominees who represent the mainstream of American law and American values. Eight of them waited more than a year without an up-or-down vote in the United States Senate. As of today, three of that original group have waited two years. Their treatment by a group of senators is a disgrace.

Overall, I have sent to the Senate 42 superb nominees for federal courts of appeal. Eighteen of them are still waiting for a vote in the Senate; and eight of those 18 have been waiting more than a year. More appeals court nominees have had to wait over a year for a hearing in my presidency than in the last 50 years combined. This is not just business as usual; this is an abnication of constitutional responsibility, and it is hurting our country. (Applause.)

As President, I have the constitutional responsibility to nominate excellent judges. And I take that responsibility seriously. The men and women I have nominated are an historically diverse group, whose character and credentials are impeccable.

This group includes Miguel Estrada, my selection for the D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals. Miguel Estrada has served in the Justice Department under Presidents from both political parties. He has argued 15 cases before the U.S. Supreme Court. He has earned the American Bar Association's highest mark, a unanimous rating of well qualified. If confirmed, Miguel would be the first Hispanic American ever to serve on the court that is often considered the second highest in the land. Miguel Estrada's nomination has strong support from citizens and leaders in both political parties. And he has support from a majority in the United States Senate. Yet, after two years, he still cannot get an up-or-down vote on the floor of the Senate. A group of Democratic senators has insisted that Mr. Estrada answer questions that other nominees were not required to answer. These senators have sought confidential Justice Department memos not sought for other appeal court nominees -- a request opposed by all living former Solicitor Generals because of the damage it would do to our legal system. These senators have also filibustered for three months to prevent a vote on Miguel Estrada's nomination. Never before has there been a successful filibuster to prevent an up-or-down vote on an appeals court nominee. This is an unprecedented tactic that threatens judicial independence and adds to the vacancy crisis in our courts. And it is wrong. (Applause.)

Justice Priscilla Owen, whom I have nominated to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, also has the support of the majority of United States senators. And she, too, has become the target of a filibuster. Justice Owen is an extraordinarily well qualified nominee, who has served with distinction on the Texas Supreme Court since 1995. Like Miguel Estrada, she has earned the American Bar Association's unanimous rating of well qualified. She has strong bipartisan support, including endorsements from three Democrats who served with her on the Texas Supreme Court; and endorsements from 15 past presidents of the Texas bar. Yet, Justice Owen has been waiting two years -- two years -- for an up-or-down vote on the Senate floor.

The list goes on. And the trend is clear: Of the 18 appeals court nominees awaiting a vote, all who have been rated by the American Bar Association have received well qualified or qualified ratings. Some Democratic senators have referred to those ratings as the gold standard. But those same senators have ignored those high marks, and instead of applying the gold standard, have applied a double standard to some of my nominees. The Senate has a constitutional responsibility to hold an up-or-down vote. (Applause.)

Throughout most of our history, the Senate has exercised this responsibility and voted promptly on judicial nominees. During the administration of former Presidents Bush and Clinton, however, too many appeals court nominees never received votes. And today the situation is worse than ever, making the need for reform greater than ever.

While senators stall and hold on to old grudges, American justice is suffering. Dockets are overcrowded, judges are overworked, and citizens are waiting too long for their cases to be heard. The regional appeals courts have a 12 percent vacancy rate. And filings in those courts have reached an all-time high, again last year. The Sixth Circuit, which covers Ohio and Michigan and Kentucky and Tennessee has four vacancies on a 16-judge court. The D.C. Circuit has three vacancies on a 12-judge court. Of the eighteen open seats that could be filled by the nominees waiting for Senate confirmation, 15 have been classified as judicial emergencies by the Judicial Conference of the United States. The American Bar Association has called this an emergency situation. And the Chief Justice recently said that these vacancies and rising caseloads threaten the proper functioning of federal courts and asked the Senate to give every nominee a prompt up-or-down vote.

The bitterness and partisanship that have taken over the judicial confirmations process, also threaten judicial independence. Some senators have tried to force nominees to take positions on controversial issues before they even take the bench. This is contrary to the constitutional design of a separate and independent judicial branch.

Six months ago, I proposed a plan to end the vacancy crisis and make the process work again. This plan would apply no matter who lives in the White House or no matter which party controls the United States Senate. Here's how it works: Judges on the federal appellate and district courts would notify the President of their intentions to retire at least a year in advance whenever that is possible. The President would then submit a nomination to the U.S. Senate within 180 days of receiving notice of a vacancy or intended retirement. The Senate Judiciary Committee would hold a hearing within 90 days of receiving a nomination. And the full Senate would vote on a nominee no longer than 180 days after the nomination is submitted. The goal is to have a new judge ready to take the bench on the same day the sitting judge retires.

Since I announced this plan, the Judicial Conference has done its part by strongly urging judges to give a one-year advance notice of retirement. I've done my part with an executive order issued today formalizing my commitment to submit nominations within 180 days after notification of a vacancy. And now we're waiting for the Senate to do its duty and ensure timely up-or-down votes for every single nominee. (Applause.)

Majority Leader Frist and Judiciary Chairman Hatch are pushing hard for progress on this issue. They are reformers. And I thank you for your hard work. (Applause.) U.S. Senator Arlen Specter and U.S. Senator Zell Miller have proposed reforms to fix the problem. And I thank you for your leadership. (Applause.) I'm very pleased that 10 freshmen senators of both parties have come together to demand the return of dignity and civility to the process. As newcomers, they see the futility of endless bickering that blocks good judges from the bench.

Under the leadership of John Cornyn and Democrat Mark Pryor, these senators sent a letter to the Senate leadership last week. And this is what it said: None of us were parties to any of the reported past offenses, whether real or perceived. None of us believe that the ill will of the past should dictate the terms and direction of the future. Each of us firmly believes the United States Senate needs a fresh start.

I completely agree, and so do the American people. (Applause.) I believe a fresh start is possible. And we will stand with these senators to bring needed reform on behalf of the American people. And I ask for your help -- I ask for your help to make sure our judiciary functions in a way that will make the people proud. I ask for your help in talking to senators as we convince them that obstructionist policies harm the American people. It hurts the justice system that makes us the envy of the world. I know we can move forward. I look forward to the day when a good nominee gets a vote -- up or down, in timely fashion -- on the floor of the United States Senate. Thank you all for coming. And God bless. (Applause.) Thank you all for coming. (Applause.)

The Politics Of Filibusters (WSJournal)

Editorial

The Wall Street Journal, May 13, 2003

Where's Jimmy Stewart when you need him? Two historic filibusters are currently under way in the Senate -- one's been going on for months -- but next to no one outside the Beltway has noticed.

Senate business proceeds as usual, the Members get to sleep in their own beds at night, and Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen's names come up only when repeated motions to close debate and bring their judicial nominations to a vote are defeated. Hollywood is not remaking "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." All of which is exactly the way Democrats want it: They can defeat two Bush judges, and more down the road, without paying a political price.

So one can hardly blame Majority Leader Bill Frist for trying to shine a little light on the problem. The Democrats are imposing an extraordinary new standard for confirming judges -- not a simple majority of 51 votes but a super-majority of 60, the number required to shut off debate. Both filibustered nominees have the support of a bipartisan majority, yet they are being denied the confirmation votes to which they are entitled under the advice-and-consent clause of the U.S. Constitution.

Mr. Frist's proposed solution is to change the procedure under which debate ends and a vote is taken, a process known as "cloture." He would amend Senate Rule XXII so that the number of votes needed to end a filibuster would fall from 60 to 57 to 54 to 51 on successive votes. This would preserve the essential purpose of the filibuster -- which is to give the minority a chance to make their case -- but not let them abuse the system by holding confirmable nominees hostage forever.

Georgia Democrat Zell Miller made an even more ambitious reform proposal on this page in March, when he called for new cloture rules for nominations and legislation -- not just nominations, as Mr. Frist proposes. Mr. Miller's proposal was in turn based on one in 1995 by Democrats Tom Harkin and Joseph Lieberman.

That last one had the support of none other than Tom Daschle, who said at the time that "Democracy means majority rule, not minority gridlock." Mr. Daschle hewed to a different principle on Sunday, when he told NBC's "Meet the Press" that Mr. Estrada and Judge Owen are "exceptions to the rule" that every nominee deserves an up or down vote in the Senate. Apparently he doesn't believe the Constitution should be applied equally to every American.

Under current practice no Senate rule, including the 60-vote cloture rule, can be changed except by a two-thirds majority. Which is where things get interesting, constitutionally speaking. Many legal scholars -- liberal and conservative -- argue that Rule XXII is unconstitutional because it binds future Senates to rules made by a past Senate. "It is an ancient principle of Anglo-American law that one legislature cannot bind a succeeding legislature," Steven Calabresi of Northwestern Law School, told the Senate last week.

Catholic University's Douglas Kmiec made a similar point on this page in March, and Lloyd Cutler, White House Counsel to Presidents Carter and Clinton, wrote in 1993 that "the Senate rule requiring a super-majority vote to cut off debate is unconstitutional." Vice Presidents Nixon, Humphrey and Rockefeller, while presiding over the Senate, have all held that Senate rules can be changed by a simple majority.

If the current Senate did that with Rule XXII -- obtain a majority vote to change the cloture rules for nominations -- Vice President Cheney would presumably agree. That would leave the Democrats with the option of going to court, where the Supreme Court could take the case or, more likely, decide it was a political dispute best left to the Senate to resolve. The President's nominees would be seated.

We've said it before, but it's worth repeating that the Democrats' judicial filibusters are unprecedented in Senate history. Filibustering nominations wasn't even permitted until 1949 and the sole judicial nominee stopped by a filibuster was Abe Fortas, LBJ's nominee for Supreme Court Chief Justice, who faced charges of corruption. Meanwhile, the Democrats are just warming up. A third appeals-court filibuster looks likely this spring, and a Supreme Court filibuster could be next if there's a vacancy this summer.

The system for confirming judges is clearly broken. Democrats are playing politics with Senate rules, but they now profess shock and outrage that Republicans want to play politics too and reform the filibuster rules being abused. Sounds to us as if Republicans are on to something.

MAY 13, 2003
Reid's son to become latest chip in Judiciary standoff
By Geoff Earle

Sen. John Ensign (R-Nev.) has injected a new personal element into the fight over judicial nominations by recommending the son of his Democratic colleague, Senate Minority Whip Harry Reid, for a federal judgeship.

Senate insiders say that if President Bush decides to nominate Leif Reid as a federal district judge in Nevada, it would present Republicans with a bargaining chip - one they could use either to go along with his nomination or push back with the kind of obstructionist tactics they say Democrats have used to thwart two of Bush's U.S. appellate court nominees.

Several Republican senators have spoken glowingly about Leif Reid, 35, a former assistant U.S. attorney and graduate of Stanford Law School.

"He's a very competent young man," said Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch (R-Utah). "He'd make an excellent judge." Hatch said he has "weighed in" for Reid, whom he has met. "I can't speak for the Senate, but I will do everything in my power, within reason, to get him through."

Several GOP stalwarts who have tried to break the Democratic filibusters of U.S. circuit court nominees Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen expressed conditional support for Reid.

"We'd like to show the Democrats that we're true to our word," said Sen. Larry Craig (R-Idaho). "I would not oppose him if he comes through the process clean."

But a GOP aide predicted that if nominated, Reid would not sail through the confirmation process.
The aide predicted that some Republicans would "play games" with the nomination because they believe Democrats have unfairly blocked presidential nominees based solely on ideological considerations.

Another GOP aide raised two questions about the move. "Will the White House do this? And why did John Ensign do this?"

Although some Republicans expressed surprise that Ensign would make such a gesture to a Democratic leader in view of the partisan backdrop of the judicial-nominations fight, several members pointed to Sen. Reid's high regard within the chamber. As minority whip, he is constantly troubleshooting problems and vetting procedural agreements with Republicans, sometimes clearing obstacles to move legislation and nominations.

"They really trust him," Sen. Jay Rockefeller (D-W.Va.) said.

Sen. Trent Lott (R-Miss.) called Leif Reid a "very impressive young man," and Lott said he had reason to believe the White House would nominate him: "I think it would just be a sign that the administration is prepared to go with [a nominee], even if he's the son of a Democratic leader."

Lott added, "He understands - and a lot of other Democrats understand - that we've got to stop ratcheting up the animosity in how we deal with federal judges."

Reid's name was among four candidates for the vacant judgeship that Ensign submitted to the White House. He said he relies on an informal panel of about a dozen people in Nevada to advise him on nominations.

Ensign and Reid's father have a close working relationship, despite having faced off in a bitter Senate contest won by Reid in 1998. They collaborated to try to fight a permanent nuclear-waste storage facility at Yucca Mountain in Nevada.

Ensign said he alone forwards nominations to the White House and recalled that Reid has bragged about his son before. "So when we were talking, I said, 'You think he'd be interested?'"

An Ensign spokesman said Ensign's decision was unprompted. "That list is ours alone," he said. A Democratic aide said Reid and Ensign have an informal arrangement where Reid suggests every third or fourth nominee, although that was not the case regarding Reid's son.

Ensign said his staff interviewed and vetted Leif Reid and saw no problem with recommending the son of a powerful senator for the post. "The fact that he was Harry's son, I don't think, should disqualify him," Ensign said.

Ensign said he elevates "one or two" listed candidates as the preferred choice but declined to say if he had endorsed Leif Reid overall for the nomination.

Asked about his son's nomination, the elder Reid said, "It's out of our hands. The president has to pick one."

Although Republicans have been contemplating a series of aggressive maneuvers to force the president's stalled nominees through the Senate - including litigation and controversial rules changes and procedural maneuvers - there is still the outside chance of a negotiated solution. In that case, someone like Reid, with his low-key temperament and trust on the Republican side, could play a leading role. Even so, a GOP aide warned that Reid's son could easily share the fate of Ellen Weintraub, whom then-Majority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D.) picked to serve on the Federal Election Commission. Her nomination was held up during another deadlock over nominations, when Democrats controlled the Senate. Weintraub didn't reach the FEC until last December, through a recess appointment.

Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), the ranking member on Judiciary, said he assumes Republicans would allow a Reid nomination to move - just as they supported sons of then-Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) and Sen. Jim Bunning (R-Ky.) for nominations in the last Congress.

Reid's high regard within the chamber. As minority whip, he is constantly troubleshooting problems and vetting procedural agreements with Republicans, sometimes clearing obstacles to move legislation and nominations.

;"They really trust him," Sen. Jay Rockefeller (D-W.Va.) said.

;Sen. Trent Lott (R-Miss.) called Leif Reid a "very impressive young man," and Lott said he had reason to believe the White House would nominate him: "I think it would just be a sign that the administration is prepared to go with [a nominee], even if he's the son of a Democratic leader."

;Lott added, "He understands - and a lot of other Democrats understand - that we've got to stop ratcheting up the animosity in how we deal with federal judges."

; Reid's name was among four candidates for the vacant judgeship that Ensign submitted to the White House. He said he relies on an informal panel of about a dozen people in Nevada to advise him on nominations.

;Ensign and Reid's father have a close working relationship, despite having faced off in a bitter Senate contest won by Reid in 1998. They collaborated to try to fight a permanent nuclear-waste storage facility at Yucca Mountain in Nevada.

;Ensign said he alone forwards nominations to the White House and recalled that Reid has bragged about his son before. "So when we were talking, I said, 'You think he'd be interested?'"

;An Ensign spokesman said Ensign's decision was unprompted. "That list is ours alone," he said. A Democratic aide said Reid and Ensign have an informal arrangement where Reid suggests every third or fourth nominee, although that was not the case regarding Reid's son.

;Ensign said his staff interviewed and vetted Leif Reid and saw no problem with recommending the son of a powerful senator for the post. "The fact that he was Harry's son, I don't think, should disqualify him," Ensign said.

; Ensign said he elevates "one or two" listed candidates as the preferred choice but declined to say if he had endorsed Leif Reid overall for the nomination.

;Asked about his son's nomination, the elder Reid said, "It's out of our hands. The president has to pick one."

;Although Republicans have been contemplating a series of aggressive maneuvers to force the president's stalled nominees through the Senate - including litigation and controversial rules changes and procedural maneuvers - there is still the outside chance of a negotiated solution. In that case, someone like Reid, with his low-key temperament and trust on the Republican side, could play a leading role.; Even so, a GOP aide warned that Reid's son could easily share the fate of Ellen Weintraub, whom then-Majority Leader Tom Daschle (D-S.D.) picked to serve on the Federal Election Commission. Her nomination was held up during another deadlock over nominations, when Democrats controlled the Senate. Weintraub didn't reach the FEC until last December, through a recess appointment.

;Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), the ranking member on Judiciary, said he assumes Republicans would allow a Reid nomination to move - just as they supported sons of then-Sen. Strom Thurmond (R-S.C.) and Sen. Jim Bunning (R-Ky.) for nominations in the last Congress.

Subject: Congressional Questions for the Record

Below is the note I plan to send to all personnel that are assigned questions.

Yesterday, we received 169 Congressional Questions for the Record on the EOP FY 2004 Budget Request. The answers are due to Congress on May 23rd. So that we are able to obtain all required clearances in a timely manner, we ask that you provide draft responses to the questions assigned to you no later than COB Wednesday, May 14th.

The questions assigned to you are listed below. Please answer the questions completely, consisely and accurately. Be able to produce all supporting documentation since Congress will often ask follow up questions based on our responses. Several questions refer to last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. I will provide those references in a separate email shortly. It is important that you do not share the questions or answers with anyone or any organization outside of the EOP.

Send your responses directly to me with a copy to Jim Daniel. As always, contact me if you need any clarification.

Questions for the Record
Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

Question 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

Question 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

Question 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an "EOP average" rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

REV_00118213

EOP Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OA Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 7: By OA office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 113 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OMB Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich/Brian Gillis)

Question 8: By OMB office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 114 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

Question 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

Question 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

Question 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

Question 12: How many positions in the office are filled today, and how many are vacant?

Question 13: Please provide a table comparing the number of detailees to OHS, by federal agency, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004 (estimated).

Question 14: How many detailees are on board today?

Question 15: Please provide a list of all positions in OHS, showing the incumbent's name, rate of annual salary, and position title. Please annotate any positions which are currently vacant.

Question 16: Please update the OHS organizational chart found on page 50 of last year's hearing record.

REV_00118214

Question 17: Please update the information shown on pages 44 through 47 of last year's hearing record concerning Office of Homeland Security travel. In addition to the information provided last year, please provide a brief descriptor of the travel purpose.

Question 18: Currently, OHS costs are included in both the WHO and OA appropriations. Is that also the case in the FY 2004 request? If so, please provide a table, by appropriation, showing total OHS budgeted costs, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 19: Last year, it was stated that one MOU existed between OHS and other EOP entities (p. 51). Please provide a copy of the MOU between MOU and the Office of Science and Technology Policy.

Question 20: Have any other MOUs been signed since that time?

Question 21: At this time last year, OHS planned to establish a coordination center which would function 24 hours a day, 7 days a week; a communications room; and two incident management rooms. At the same time, the Administration made clear that the role of OHS was to establish and coordinate policy, and not to conduct operational activities. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, have these specific activities been descoped or eliminated?

Question 22: How many positions support these activities in the FY 2004 request, and what is the total budgeted amount?

Question 23: How are such activities appropriate for a policymaking body, when DHS now exists to coordinate and execute operational activities related to specific homeland security incidents and activities?

Question 24: At the time of last year's hearing, the permanent location and amount of space for the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board had not been determined (p. 77). Have these requirements been determined today?

Question 25: Likewise, total CIPB staffing had not been determined. Do you have an estimate today? What staffing assumptions were made in the FY 2004 budget submission?

Question 26: How much funding is included in the FY 2004 request for CIPB, and how does that compare to the current estimate for FY 2003?

Question 27: Please provide a breakdown showing how those funds would be used.

Question 28: Please provide details on any government-industry partnerships that have been created in support of cyber security initiatives coordinated by, or carried out, through EOP or the CIPB.

REV_00118215

National Security Council (POC – Katherine Fertakis)

Question 29: Your request includes a 10.8 percent increase to cover reimbursable detailee costs and additional support staff for the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please explain the need for these increases in detail.

Question 30: What are the dollar and percentage increases for each of the above items, compared to the FY 2003 estimated levels?

Question 31: The justifications indicate that 11 additional positions are being added to this office in FY 2003, raising the estimated from 60 in FY 2002 to an estimated 71 in FY 2003. What specific positions are being created?

Question 32: The FY 2004 request includes funds for a new GS-14 administrative manager for the PFIAB. Why is this new position needed at this time?

Office of National Drug Control Policy (POC – Michelle Marx)

Question 33: You are requesting 10 additional FTE in FY 2004 to replace 10 non-reimbursable detailees who are no longer available. Why are these positions no longer available, and what are the specific positions?

Renovation of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 34: What is the status of funding provided in FY 2002 and 2003? Please provide a breakdown of funding by the type of activity or renovation performed.

Question 35: How much remains unobligated, by appropriation?

Question 36: Please provide a detailed breakdown showing how funds requested in the GSA budget for FY 2004 would be used.

Question 37: Please provide a detailed schedule for activities planned in FY 2004.

Question 38: How much are you currently paying GSA for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB, and how much rental cost are you incurring for the new locations where relocated employees are working?

Executive Residence (POC – Worthington White)

Question 39: Please provide a table, corresponding to the projects on page 81 of last year's hearing record, showing the original appropriation for each project, the amount obligated to date, and the project status. This involves projects funded in fiscal year 2002.

REV_00118216

Question 40: Please provide a listing of the 95 FTE positions at the Executive Residence requested for funding in FY 2004, showing the position title and the annual salary level.

Question 41: The justifications (p. 67) indicate an estimated unobligated balance of $7,023,000 in this appropriation at the beginning of FY 2003. Please explain the sources of this balance, and provide a schedule for obligation of increments of those funds.

White House Repair and Restoration (POC – Dennis Freemyer)

Question 42: You are requesting $4.225,000 for repairs and restoration of the White House. Is there additional funding in the National Park Service budget or elsewhere in the President's budget request for FY 2004 for similar activities at the White House?

Question 43: Of this request, $3,500,000 is for restoration of the east and west wing exterior. Please provide a detailed discussion and breakdown of this request.

Pennsylvania Avenue Improvements (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 44: What is the total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, for which funds were provided in FY 2003?

Question 45: What is the status of that project? When will FY 2003 funds be obligated?

Question 46: How much funding is requested for this project in FY 2004, and where is it located in the budget?

Question 47: What is the schedule for studies of traffic congestion mitigation alternatives in the vicinity of the White House, as funded in FY 2003?

Remote Data Center (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 48: What is the status of establishment today of the remote data center?

Question 49: Last year, you estimated annual operating costs of this facility to be $7,500,000 (p. 88). Is that your current estimate?

Question 50: Your FY 2004 request includes $8,403,000 to transition the remote data center to full operational status (p. 75). What specific activities are required in FY 2004 to accomplish this? Can you provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request consistent with these activities?

REV_00118217

President's Travel (POC - Rothley Howard)

Question 51: Please update the information on pages 89 through 94 of last year's hearing record concerning travel by the President and the First Lady by continuing data from the final entry of last year's record to the present time.

Presidential Staff Travel (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 52: Please provide a listing of staff travel not in support of the President for fiscal year 2002 and thus far in fiscal year 2003. For each entry, please include the name of traveler, the destination and purpose of trip, the number of days in travel status, and the trip cost.

Consulting Services (POC – Kathleen O'Halloran)

Question 53: Updating the information on page 115 of last year's hearing record, please provide actual and estimated amounts for consulting services for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Freedom Corps (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 54: Please provide EOP budgeted funding for the Freedom Corps for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 55: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request for the Freedom Corps, and a brief description of the work to be accomplished under each item.

Question 56: Last year, funds were requested for Freedom Corps information dissemination and recognition materials (p. 239). Are similar activities funded in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 57: Are additional funds requested in FY 2004 outside the EOP?

Question 58: Please provide a listing of the staff in the USA Freedom Corps Office, showing the incumbent name and position. Please designate any detailees.

Sensitive Compartmented Information Facilities (POC – Jeff Thompson)

Question 59: Are any funds requested in any EOP office in the FY 2004 President's request for the construction of sensitive compartmented information facilities (SCIFs)?

Question 60: How many such facilities have been built within EOP offices since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001?

REV_00118218

Data Center Relocation (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 61: What is the status of efforts to relocate the existing EOP data center, and what are plans for the coming year?

Question 62: Are funds requested in the FY 2004 budget for this project?

White House Communications Agency (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 63: Updating the information on page 133 of last year's hearing record, please provide estimated reimbursements for the White House Communications Agency for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Office of Administration (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 64: Updating the information on page 134 of last year's hearing record, please provide a current organizational chart for the Office of Administration, including the associated numbers of FTEs requested for each office in the FY 2004 President's budget.

Question 65: Last year, it was estimated that 4 FTE were needed to provide administrative services to the Office of Homeland Security. Since that office is substantially smaller due to establishment of the DHS, is there a lesser requirement for OA support? If so, is that reflected in FY 2004 staffing figures?

Question 66: Your salary and expenses request includes a transfer of $1,500 from Homeland Security for information technology services. What are these services?

Question 67: You are requesting additional funding for victim rescue units, which would be distributed to all White House staff (p. 82). What are these units, and what is the unit cost?

Question 68: How is the requirement for additional safes and emergency evacuation chairs documented?

Financial Audits (POC – Al Muhlbauer)

Question 69: Last year, you advised us that EOP would plan to address the findings of the recent auditability assessment no later than FY 2003. What is the status of that effort today?

Question 70: When will you be able to produce an auditable financial statement?

Question 71: Last year, you stated that you had identified best practices for documented policies and procedures based upon one federal agency which has been recognized as one of the best in the Federal Government (p. 136). Which agency are you using as a model, and what are some examples of the specific best practices you intend to use?

REV_00118219

White House Office (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 72: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 budget request for the White House Office by office or activity, as itemized on pages 137 and 138 of last year's hearing record. Please compare those amounts to corresponding amounts for FY 2002 (actual) and FY 2003 (estimated), similar in format to that shown on pages 246 and 247 of last year's hearing record.

Question 73: Please provide a corresponding breakdown for FTE staffyears and OGE, similar in format to that shown on pages 152 through 154 of last year's hearing record.

Historically Provided White House Office Positions (POC – Eric Lanman/Jon Laurich)

Question 74: Updating the information on page 235 of last year's hearing record, please provide a listing of historically provided White House Office positions.

Other Services (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 75: Similar to the information on page 236 et seq. of last year's hearing record, please provide a detailed description of each project, program, or initiative proposed to be funded in FY 2004 under object class 25.2 ("other services").

Salaries and Expenses (POC – Dilworth)

Question 76: Please provide a detailed description of any expenses in the FY 2004 budget under "salaries and expenses" which are not directly related to personnel compensation and benefits.

Security Guard Services for OSTP (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 77: In FY 2003, you budgeted $1,798,000 for security guard services for the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Are similar funds requested in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 78: Why aren't such funds in the OSTP budget?

Political Appointees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 79: Please update the information on political appointees within EOP as shown on page 268 of last year's hearing record, using the same criteria and assumptions as last year.

REV_00118220

Detailees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 80: Please update the information on reimbursable and non-reimbursable detailees with EOP as shown on pages 268 and 269 of last year's hearing record.

Office of the Vice President (POC – Kristen Savercool)

Question 81: You are requesting an additional $70,000 (+1.7 percent) for the Vice President's travel, due to increased travel to undisclosed locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. Weren't these type of increases baselined in FY 2002 and FY 2003, and if so, why are further increases needed in FY 2004?

Unanticipated Needs (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 82: Please provide a listing of the uses of Unanticipated Needs funds in FY 2002.

Questions for the Record
Ranking Member, John Olver
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Account Consolidation and Transfer Proposals (POC – Al Muhlbauer/Jim Daniel)
When we centralized the funds within the Office of Administration, Congress intended that each agency would continue to receive a similar share of support and assistance under the consolidation.

Question 83: Are any agencies going to receive diminished services or resources under the consolidation?

Question 84: Are any agencies to receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed as part of the consolidation?

Question 85: Under the procurement consolidation pilot approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are IT or database services for any EOP agency going to be paid for by funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 86: In general, are the funds appropriated for this centralized procurement program going to be used to supplement the appropriation made to individual agencies?

Question 87: If so, which agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions?

Question 88: You recently submitted a very cursory report on the procurement pilot. When will you provide us with specific details on the progress of the pilot program?

Your budget also proposes a change that would permit EOP agencies to transfer up to 10% into our out any agency's budget. Coupled with your account consolidation proposal, that would allow you to transfer in up to $18 million more into (or out of) the White House's budget.

Question 89: Under the procurement consolidation program that we approved in the FY03 bill, don't you have a similar type of flexibility already? What other flexibility is needed?

Question 90: What protection is there for smaller EOP agencies under this proposal? Don't they stand to lose critical resources if the White House or Vice President's Office decide to take 10% of their resources?

REV_00118222

Office of Homeland Security Questions (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts. The source of these funds would come from the Office of Homeland Security.

The Office of Homeland Security has gone from an initial $25m stated need when the initial FY03 bills passed the House and Senate to $11m when the FY03 Omnibus was passed to what will be $9m if the reprogramming is approved.

Question 91: What exactly does the Office of Homeland Security do now that the Department of Homeland Security is in place?

Question 92: Does OHS still have a presence at Nebraska Avenue?

Question 93: Does the Office of Administration provide any support to agencies at Nebraska Avenue? If so, please describe the specific types of support provided. Is this support on a reimbursable basis?

Question 94: How many personnel and detailees now work for OHS?

Question 95: What is the actual operational budget need for OHS in FY03?

Question 96: For the record, please provide us a breakout by object class of the Office of Homeland Security's FY03 remaining budget.

Question 97: Any likelihood that these estimates will be revised downward again?

Question 98: I understand that the President named General Gordon as his new Homeland Security Adviser. Does he support the latest $2 million cut to his office's resources?

Question 99: Have you validated the FY04 request recently to ensure it is an accurate figure?

Budget Questions:

After the FY03 enacted levels are adjusted to reflect the transfer of $9 million to the Office of Homeland Security, the Executive Office of the President's FY04 budget request reflects an 8% increase over FY03 levels. Your agency, the Office of Administration requests a 10% increase between FY03 and FY04.

When the budget was introduced, Mitch Daniels said that the overall growth of Federal programs would be pegged to the expected 4% growth in inflation. The administration also said the President wanted to "match government's growth with the growth of American family income."

Question 100: When the rest of the government is forced to live with 4% growth, how can you justify an almost 10% increase in your office and an overall Executive Office of the President increase of 8%? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

The White House Office's increase of 3.6% looks smaller because of a realignment of $1.85m in rent to the Office of Administration's account. Without the realignment, the White House Office's increase would be around 6.6%. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 101: What is the justification for this realignment? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 102: How could the White House have been paying the bill for space that wasn't theirs? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 103: Which EOP agencies occupied this space on which the White House Office has been paying rent? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 104: Are these costs that had historically been paid by the White House Office? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 105: If so, why make the change this year? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Travel

The White House Office's request includes a decrease of $400,000 in Presidential Travel. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 106: Was the FY03 estimate too high? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 107: If so, how do you intend to use the surplus funds? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 108: Are you planning less travel in FY04 or will more of the travel just be paid for by political entities? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 109: Please provide a list of all White House Office, Office of Homeland Security and Office of Vice President official staff travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). Include a brief description of the official purpose of the trip. For FY04 estimates, provide estimated number of trips and trip purpose. (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 110: Please provide a list of all Presidential, First Lady and Vice Presidential travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). For each trip, please provide the trip date, destination, designation (i.e., political, official), number of official EOP staff supporting the Principal and, the official cost of the trip. (POC – Rothley Howard)

REV_00118224

Question 111: How much did OMB reimburse the White House Office for use of White House motorpool vehicles in FY02? How much is OMB projecting to reimburse in FY03 and FY04? (POC – Brian Gillis)

In the hearing, Mr. Daniel mentioned that the FY03 vehicle lease and IT support contracts came in significantly below the original budget estimates.

Question 112: Do you intend to return the unused funds to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 113: For these areas in which savings were realized, what are your plans for the funds? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Political Travel (POC – Andy Kalnins)

Question 114: Please explain the reimbursement procedures the White House intends to follow during the Presidential election season.

Question 115: Exactly when will the presidential-campaign procedures take effect?

Question 116: How do you determine who the official travelers are on a campaign or political trip? Does the list of positions vary from trip to trip?

Question 117: On trips with political and official components, what is the procedure for determining which events are paid for using official funds and which events are reimbursed by the political entity?

Question 118: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, what criteria is used to determine whether an event is "political" or "official"?

Question 119: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, does the political entity reimburse the White House for the Speechwriters time?

Question 120: Have events been classified as "official" even if only members of the President's political party are invited to share the stage with the President?

Question 121: If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events?

Question 122: Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03. For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill.

Question 123: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photographic equipment purchased for use by the White House photographers?

Question 124: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photo lab equipment purchased for use by the WHCA photo lab?

Question 125: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total travel cost associated with travel of White House Photographers?

Question 126: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab?

Question 127: Please explain the procedures for determining when and how the government is to be reimbursed for photos released for non-official purposes. If these procedures have changed from those followed by the previous administration, please explain any changes that have been made.

Question 128: For FY02 and the first seven months of FY03, please provide the following information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos or photo lab services that were provided:

- date reimbursement was made
- name of reimbursing organization
- amount of payment
- number of photos purchased by reimbursing organization
- size of photos purchased by reimbursing organization

Remote Delivery Site Reprogramming Request (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts.

Question 129: What is the status of remediation efforts?

Question 130: Please provide the total budget estimate for this project.

Question 131: Please provide the anticipated schedule for this effort.

Question 132: What caused this $2 million overrun?

REV_00118226

Question 133: Why have you stopped providing the monthly reports on the remediation efforts?

Previously the Remote Delivery Site was used to screen incoming mail. It also used to serve as an off-site supply depot. With the Department of Homeland Security now assuming the mail processing function and with supply operations now established on the White House Complex, I'm curious about future plans for the RDS.

Question 134: What will the facility be used for when remediation is finished?

Question 135: Will the DHS use the facility to screen the White House's mail?

Question 136: Will you close the on-site supply stores and revert back to running the supply operation out of the Remote Delivery Site?

White House Access (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 137: For the record, please provide the total number of visitors who passed through the White House as part of tours in 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 (to date).

Question 138: Why are White House tours currently not open to the general public?

Question 139: What is the status of the report on the status of White House Tours that was due to the Subcommittee by March 22nd?

Question 140: Who has the lead on the efforts to decide whether public tours can be resumed?

Question 141: Does the USSS do a background check on all individuals attending events and meetings at the White House Complex before access can be granted?

Question 142: During this administration, have White House aides ever overruled a building-access recommendation made by the USSS?

Off-site EOP Support (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 143: How many EOP employees are based in Crawford, TX?

Question 144: How much space does the EOP pay rent for in Crawford, TX?

Question 145: How many trailers were acquired for Crawford, TX?

Question 146: What was the cost to purchase and renovate these trailers?

REV_00118227

Question 147: What are the expected FY04 operating costs of facilities and staff permanently deployed to Crawford, TX?

Rent (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 148: Please provide an accounting of all space on which the EOP currently pays rent. The list should include the number of staff in each building, the agencies which occupy space in each facility, the total square footage by agency in each facility, the total square footage of vacant space on which the EOP is currently paying rent in each facility and the GSA rent rates for each facility.

Question 149: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, is the rent for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 150: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are after hours utilities charges for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Travel Office (POC – Mayra Segovia)

Question 151: Please describe the current role the White House Travel Office plays in managing and arranging the financial aspects of White House Press Corps travel. Does the White House Travel Office operate as a "dollar-for-dollar" operation?

Question 152: How many EOP staff work in the White House Travel Office?

Question 153: How many contractor travel agents support the White House Travel Office?

Question 154: Please include the most recent independent financial statement audit of the White House Travel Office's accounts for the record.

Question 155: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Corps travelers on the Press Charter?

Question 156: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Pool travelers on Air Force One?

Question 157: Please explain the formula used to identify the reimbursement rate that the Travel Office billed Press Corps travelers accompanying the President's travel to the USS Abraham Lincoln. In your response, please include the actual rate billed to individual press corps travelers on this trip.

Bonuses

Question 158: Why did this administration reinstate the payments of bonuses to political appointees? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 159: Have any EOP political staff been given bonuses since the policy was reinstated in March of 2002? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 160: Have any EOP political staff been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY02 or FY03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Eisenhower Executive Office Building

Question 161: Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? [this question does not apply to the White House residence.] (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 162: Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilitles) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 163: For the record, please provide the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 164: For the record, please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 165: Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 166: Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings?

Question 167: Please provide a list of all EOP and EOP-support-related agencies that occupied space in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building on 1/20/01 that have since been relocated to locations outside the EEOB. For each agency that relocated, please identify the agency that paid the move-related costs. (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 168: What is the status of the vacant space on the 17th Street side of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building? (POC – Steve Beattie)

REV_00118229

EOP Staffing Levels:

Question 169: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2002 (actual) and FY03-FY04 (estimates). Please provide a list of the "historically provided" White House Office positions, the office to which these positions are assigned and the agency that pays the salary for each of these positions. (POC – Jon Laurich)

Attached for your review are the questions we received from the Congress... we have assigned the questions to the appropriate EOP staff and are in the process of issuing specific questions to specific staff members. Given the short suspense, we plan to forward the answers to you for review and approval as we receive the answers then coordinate the final consolidated package for approval. thanks

Below is the note I plan to send to all personnel that are assigned questions.

Yesterday, we received 169 Congressional Questions for the Record on the EOP FY 2004 Budget Request. The answers are due to Congress on May 23rd. So that we are able to obtain all required clearances in a timely manner, we ask that you provide draft responses to the questions assigned to you no later than COB Wednesday, May 14th.

The questions assigned to you are listed below. Please answer the questions completely, consisely and accurately. Be able to produce all supporting documentation since Congress will often ask follow up questions based on our responses. Several questions refer to last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. I will provide those references in a separate email shortly. It is important that you do not share the questions or answers with anyone or any organization outside of the EOP.

Send your responses directly to me with a copy to Jim Daniel. As always, contact me if you need any clarification.

Questions for the Record
Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

Question 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

Question 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

Question 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an "EOP average" rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

REV_00118234

EOP Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OA Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 7: By OA office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 113 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

OMB Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich/Brian Gillis)

Question 8: By OMB office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on page 114 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

Question 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

Question 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

Question 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

Question 12: How many positions in the office are filled today, and how many are vacant?

Question 13: Please provide a table comparing the number of detailees to OHS, by federal agency, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004 (estimated).

Question 14: How many detailees are on board today?

Question 15: Please provide a list of all positions in OHS, showing the incumbent's name, rate of annual salary, and position title. Please annotate any positions which are currently vacant.

Question 16: Please update the OHS organizational chart found on page 50 of last year's hearing record.

REV_00118235

Question 17: Please update the information shown on pages 44 through 47 of last year's hearing record concerning Office of Homeland Security travel. In addition to the information provided last year, please provide a brief descriptor of the travel purpose.

Question 18: Currently, OHS costs are included in both the WHO and OA appropriations. Is that also the case in the FY 2004 request? If so, please provide a table, by appropriation, showing total OHS budgeted costs, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 19: Last year, it was stated that one MOU existed between OHS and other EOP entities (p. 51). Please provide a copy of the MOU between MOU and the Office of Science and Technology Policy.

Question 20: Have any other MOUs been signed since that time?

Question 21: At this time last year, OHS planned to establish a coordination center which would function 24 hours a day, 7 days a week; a communications room; and two incident management rooms. At the same time, the Administration made clear that the role of OHS was to establish and coordinate policy, and not to conduct operational activities. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, have these specific activities been descoped or eliminated?

Question 22: How many positions support these activities in the FY 2004 request, and what is the total budgeted amount?

Question 23: How are such activities appropriate for a policymaking body, when DHS now exists to coordinate and execute operational activities related to specific homeland security incidents and activities?

Question 24: At the time of last year's hearing, the permanent location and amount of space for the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board had not been determined (p. 77). Have these requirements been determined today?

Question 25: Likewise, total CIPB staffing had not been determined. Do you have an estimate today? What staffing assumptions were made in the FY 2004 budget submission?

Question 26: How much funding is included in the FY 2004 request for CIPB, and how does that compare to the current estimate for FY 2003?

Question 27: Please provide a breakdown showing how those funds would be used.

Question 28: Please provide details on any government-industry partnerships that have been created in support of cyber security initiatives coordinated by, or carried out, through EOP or the CIPB.

REV_00118236

National Security Council (POC – Katherine Fertakis)

Question 29: Your request includes a 10.8 percent increase to cover reimbursable detailee costs and additional support staff for the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please explain the need for these increases in detail.

Question 30: What are the dollar and percentage increases for each of the above items, compared to the FY 2003 estimated levels?

Question 31: The justifications indicate that 11 additional positions are being added to this office in FY 2003, raising the estimated from 60 in FY 2002 to an estimated 71 in FY 2003. What specific positions are being created?

Question 32: The FY 2004 request includes funds for a new GS-14 administrative manager for the PFIAB. Why is this new position needed at this time?

Office of National Drug Control Policy (POC – Michelle Marx)

Question 33: You are requesting 10 additional FTE in FY 2004 to replace 10 non-reimbursable detailees who are no longer available. Why are these positions no longer available, and what are the specific positions?

Renovation of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 34: What is the status of funding provided in FY 2002 and 2003? Please provide a breakdown of funding by the type of activity or renovation performed.

Question 35: How much remains unobligated, by appropriation?

Question 36: Please provide a detailed breakdown showing how funds requested in the GSA budget for FY 2004 would be used.

Question 37: Please provide a detailed schedule for activities planned in FY 2004.

Question 38: How much are you currently paying GSA for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB, and how much rental cost are you incurring for the new locations where relocated employees are working?

Executive Residence (POC – Worthington White)

Question 39: Please provide a table, corresponding to the projects on page 81 of last year's hearing record, showing the original appropriation for each project, the amount obligated to date, and the project status. This involves projects funded in fiscal year 2002.

REV_00118237

Question 40: Please provide a listing of the 95 FTE positions at the Executive Residence requested for funding in FY 2004, showing the position title and the annual salary level.

Question 41: The justifications (p. 67) indicate an estimated unobligated balance of $7,023,000 in this appropriation at the beginning of FY 2003. Please explain the sources of this balance, and provide a schedule for obligation of increments of those funds.

White House Repair and Restoration (POC – Dennis Freemyer)

Question 42: You are requesting $4.225,000 for repairs and restoration of the White House. Is there additional funding in the National Park Service budget or elsewhere in the President's budget request for FY 2004 for similar activities at the White House?

Question 43: Of this request, $3,500,000 is for restoration of the east and west wing exterior. Please provide a detailed discussion and breakdown of this request.

Pennsylvania Avenue Improvements (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 44: What is the total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, for which funds were provided in FY 2003?

Question 45: What is the status of that project? When will FY 2003 funds be obligated?

Question 46: How much funding is requested for this project in FY 2004, and where is it located in the budget?

Question 47: What is the schedule for studies of traffic congestion mitigation alternatives in the vicinity of the White House, as funded in FY 2003?

Remote Data Center (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 48: What is the status of establishment today of the remote data center?

Question 49: Last year, you estimated annual operating costs of this facility to be $7,500,000 (p. 88). Is that your current estimate?

Question 50: Your FY 2004 request includes $8,403,000 to transition the remote data center to full operational status (p. 75). What specific activities are required in FY 2004 to accomplish this? Can you provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request consistent with these activities?

REV_00118238

President's Travel (POC - Rothley Howard)

Question 51: Please update the information on pages 89 through 94 of last year's hearing record concerning travel by the President and the First Lady by continuing data from the final entry of last year's record to the present time.

Presidential Staff Travel (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 52: Please provide a listing of staff travel not in support of the President for fiscal year 2002 and thus far in fiscal year 2003. For each entry, please include the name of traveler, the destination and purpose of trip, the number of days in travel status, and the trip cost.

Consulting Services (POC – Kathleen O'Halloran)

Question 53: Updating the information on page 115 of last year's hearing record, please provide actual and estimated amounts for consulting services for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Freedom Corps (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 54: Please provide EOP budgeted funding for the Freedom Corps for fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Question 55: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request for the Freedom Corps, and a brief description of the work to be accomplished under each item.

Question 56: Last year, funds were requested for Freedom Corps information dissemination and recognition materials (p. 239). Are similar activities funded in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 57: Are additional funds requested in FY 2004 outside the EOP?

Question 58: Please provide a listing of the staff in the USA Freedom Corps Office, showing the incumbent name and position. Please designate any detailees.

Sensitive Compartmented Information Facilities (POC – Jeff Thompson)

Question 59: Are any funds requested in any EOP office in the FY 2004 President's request for the construction of sensitive compartmented information facilities (SCIFs)?

Question 60: How many such facilities have been built within EOP offices since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001?

REV_00118239

Data Center Relocation (POC – Carlos Solari)

Question 61: What is the status of efforts to relocate the existing EOP data center, and what are plans for the coming year?

Question 62: Are funds requested in the FY 2004 budget for this project?

White House Communications Agency (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 63: Updating the information on page 133 of last year's hearing record, please provide estimated reimbursements for the White House Communications Agency for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

Office of Administration (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 64: Updating the information on page 134 of last year's hearing record, please provide a current organizational chart for the Office of Administration, including the associated numbers of FTEs requested for each office in the FY 2004 President's budget.

Question 65: Last year, it was estimated that 4 FTE were needed to provide administrative services to the Office of Homeland Security. Since that office is substantially smaller due to establishment of the DHS, is there a lesser requirement for OA support? If so, is that reflected in FY 2004 staffing figures?

Question 66: Your salary and expenses request includes a transfer of $1,500 from Homeland Security for information technology services. What are these services?

Question 67: You are requesting additional funding for victim rescue units, which would be distributed to all White House staff (p. 82). What are these units, and what is the unit cost?

Question 68: How is the requirement for additional safes and emergency evacuation chairs documented?

Financial Audits (POC – Al Muhlbauer)

Question 69: Last year, you advised us that EOP would plan to address the findings of the recent auditability assessment no later than FY 2003. What is the status of that effort today?

Question 70: When will you be able to produce an auditable financial statement?

Question 71: Last year, you stated that you had identified best practices for documented policies and procedures based upon one federal agency which has been recognized as one of the best in the Federal Government (p. 136). Which agency are you using as a model, and what are some examples of the specific best practices you intend to use?

REV_00118240

White House Office (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 72: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 budget request for the White House Office by office or activity, as itemized on pages 137 and 138 of last year's hearing record. Please compare those amounts to corresponding amounts for FY 2002 (actual) and FY 2003 (estimated), similar in format to that shown on pages 246 and 247 of last year's hearing record.

Question 73: Please provide a corresponding breakdown for FTE staffyears and OGE, similar in format to that shown on pages 152 through 154 of last year's hearing record.

Historically Provided White House Office Positions (POC – Eric Lanman/Jon Laurich)

Question 74: Updating the information on page 235 of last year's hearing record, please provide a listing of historically provided White House Office positions.

Other Services (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 75: Similar to the information on page 236 et seq. of last year's hearing record, please provide a detailed description of each project, program, or initiative proposed to be funded in FY 2004 under object class 25.2 ("other services").

Salaries and Expenses (POC – Dilworth)

Question 76: Please provide a detailed description of any expenses in the FY 2004 budget under "salaries and expenses" which are not directly related to personnel compensation and benefits.

Security Guard Services for OSTP (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 77: In FY 2003, you budgeted $1,798,000 for security guard services for the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Are similar funds requested in FY 2004? If so, how much?

Question 78: Why aren't such funds in the OSTP budget?

Political Appointees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 79: Please update the information on political appointees within EOP as shown on page 268 of last year's hearing record, using the same criteria and assumptions as last year.

REV_00118241

Detailees (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 80: Please update the information on reimbursable and non-reimbursable detailees with EOP as shown on pages 268 and 269 of last year's hearing record.

Office of the Vice President (POC – Kristen Savercool)

Question 81: You are requesting an additional $70,000 (+1.7 percent) for the Vice President's travel, due to increased travel to undisclosed locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. Weren't these type of increases baselined in FY 2002 and FY 2003, and if so, why are further increases needed in FY 2004?

Unanticipated Needs (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 82: Please provide a listing of the uses of Unanticipated Needs funds in FY 2002.

Ranking Member, John Olver
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Account Consolidation and Transfer Proposals (POC – Al Muhlbauer/Jim Daniel)
When we centralized the funds within the Office of Administration, Congress intended that each agency would continue to receive a similar share of support and assistance under the consolidation.

Question 83: Are any agencies going to receive diminished services or resources under the consolidation?

Question 84: Are any agencies to receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed as part of the consolidation?

Question 85: Under the procurement consolidation pilot approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are IT or database services for any EOP agency going to be paid for by funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 86: In general, are the funds appropriated for this centralized procurement program going to be used to supplement the appropriation made to individual agencies?

Question 87: If so, which agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions?

Question 88: You recently submitted a very cursory report on the procurement pilot. When will you provide us with specific details on the progress of the pilot program?

Your budget also proposes a change that would permit EOP agencies to transfer up to 10% into our out any agency's budget. Coupled with your account consolidation proposal, that would allow you to transfer in up to $18 million more into (or out of) the White House's budget.

Question 89: Under the procurement consolidation program that we approved in the FY03 bill, don't you have a similar type of flexibility already? What other flexibility is needed?

Question 90: What protection is there for smaller EOP agencies under this proposal? Don't they stand to lose critical resources if the White House or Vice President's Office decide to take 10% of their resources?

REV_00118243

Office of Homeland Security Questions (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts. The source of these funds would come from the Office of Homeland Security.

The Office of Homeland Security has gone from an initial $25m stated need when the initial FY03 bills passed the House and Senate to $11m when the FY03 Omnibus was passed to what will be $9m if the reprogramming is approved.

Question 91: What exactly does the Office of Homeland Security do now that the Department of Homeland Security is in place?

Question 92: Does OHS still have a presence at Nebraska Avenue?

Question 93: Does the Office of Administration provide any support to agencies at Nebraska Avenue? If so, please describe the specific types of support provided. Is this support on a reimbursable basis?

Question 94: How many personnel and detailees now work for OHS?

Question 95: What is the actual operational budget need for OHS in FY03?

Question 96: For the record, please provide us a breakout by object class of the Office of Homeland Security's FY03 remaining budget.

Question 97: Any likelihood that these estimates will be revised downward again?

Question 98: I understand that the President named General Gordon as his new Homeland Security Adviser. Does he support the latest $2 million cut to his office's resources?

Question 99: Have you validated the FY04 request recently to ensure it is an accurate figure?

Budget Questions:

After the FY03 enacted levels are adjusted to reflect the transfer of $9 million to the Office of Homeland Security, the Executive Office of the President's FY04 budget request reflects an 8% increase over FY03 levels. Your agency, the Office of Administration requests a 10% increase between FY03 and FY04.

When the budget was introduced, Mitch Daniels said that the overall growth of Federal programs would be pegged to the expected 4% growth in inflation. The administration also said the President wanted to "match government's growth with the growth of American family income."

Question 100: When the rest of the government is forced to live with 4% growth, how can you justify an almost 10% increase in your office and an overall Executive Office of the President increase of 8%? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

The White House Office's increase of 3.6% looks smaller because of a realignment of $1.85m in rent to the Office of Administration's account. Without the realignment, the White House Office's increase would be around 6.6%. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 101: What is the justification for this realignment? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 102: How could the White House have been paying the bill for space that wasn't theirs? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 103: Which EOP agencies occupied this space on which the White House Office has been paying rent? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 104: Are these costs that had historically been paid by the White House Office? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 105: If so, why make the change this year? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Travel

The White House Office's request includes a decrease of $400,000 in Presidential Travel. (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 106: Was the FY03 estimate too high? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 107: If so, how do you intend to use the surplus funds? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 108: Are you planning less travel in FY04 or will more of the travel just be paid for by political entities? (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 109: Please provide a list of all White House Office, Office of Homeland Security and Office of Vice President official staff travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). Include a brief description of the official purpose of the trip. For FY04 estimates, provide estimated number of trips and trip purpose. (POC – Rothley Howard)

Question 110: Please provide a list of all Presidential, First Lady and Vice Presidential travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). For each trip, please provide the trip date, destination, designation (i.e., political, official), number of official EOP staff supporting the Principal and, the official cost of the trip. (POC – Rothley Howard)

REV_00118245

Question 111: How much did OMB reimburse the White House Office for use of White House motorpool vehicles in FY02? How much is OMB projecting to reimburse in FY03 and FY04? (POC – Brian Gillis)

In the hearing, Mr. Daniel mentioned that the FY03 vehicle lease and IT support contracts came in significantly below the original budget estimates.

Question 112: Do you intend to return the unused funds to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Question 113: For these areas in which savings were realized, what are your plans for the funds? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

Political Travel (POC – Andy Kalnins)

Question 114: Please explain the reimbursement procedures the White House intends to follow during the Presidential election season.

Question 115: Exactly when will the presidential-campaign procedures take effect?

Question 116: How do you determine who the official travelers are on a campaign or political trip? Does the list of positions vary from trip to trip?

Question 117: On trips with political and official components, what is the procedure for determining which events are paid for using official funds and which events are reimbursed by the political entity?

Question 118: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, what criteria is used to determine whether an event is "political" or "official"?

Question 119: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, does the political entity reimburse the White House for the Speechwriters time?

Question 120: Have events been classified as "official" even if only members of the President's political party are invited to share the stage with the President?

Question 121: If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events?

Question 122: Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03. For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill.

Photographic Services (POC – Eric Lanman)

Question 123: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photographic equipment purchased for use by the White House photographers?

Question 124: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photo lab equipment purchased for use by the WHCA photo lab?

Question 125: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total travel cost associated with travel of White House Photographers?

Question 126: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab?

Question 127: Please explain the procedures for determining when and how the government is to be reimbursed for photos released for non-official purposes. If these procedures have changed from those followed by the previous administration, please explain any changes that have been made.

Question 128: For FY02 and the first seven months of FY03, please provide the following information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos or photo lab services that were provided:

- date reimbursement was made
- name of reimbursing organization
- amount of payment
- number of photos purchased by reimbursing organization
- size of photos purchased by reimbursing organization

Remote Delivery Site Reprogramming Request (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts.

Question 129: What is the status of remediation efforts?

Question 130: Please provide the total budget estimate for this project.

Question 131: Please provide the anticipated schedule for this effort.

Question 132: What caused this $2 million overrun?

REV_00118247

Question 133: Why have you stopped providing the monthly reports on the remediation efforts?

Previously the Remote Delivery Site was used to screen incoming mail. It also used to serve as an off-site supply depot. With the Department of Homeland Security now assuming the mail processing function and with supply operations now established on the White House Complex, I'm curious about future plans for the RDS.

Question 134: What will the facility be used for when remediation is finished?

Question 135: Will the DHS use the facility to screen the White House's mail?

Question 136: Will you close the on-site supply stores and revert back to running the supply operation out of the Remote Delivery Site?

White House Access (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 137: For the record, please provide the total number of visitors who passed through the White House as part of tours in 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 (to date).

Question 138: Why are White House tours currently not open to the general public?

Question 139: What is the status of the report on the status of White House Tours that was due to the Subcommittee by March 22nd?

Question 140: Who has the lead on the efforts to decide whether public tours can be resumed?

Question 141: Does the USSS do a background check on all individuals attending events and meetings at the White House Complex before access can be granted?

Question 142: During this administration, have White House aides ever overruled a building-access recommendation made by the USSS?

Off-site EOP Support (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 143: How many EOP employees are based in Crawford, TX?

Question 144: How much space does the EOP pay rent for in Crawford, TX?

Question 145: How many trailers were acquired for Crawford, TX?

Question 146: What was the cost to purchase and renovate these trailers?

REV_00118248

Question 147: What are the expected FY04 operating costs of facilities and staff permanently deployed to Crawford, TX?

Rent (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 148: Please provide an accounting of all space on which the EOP currently pays rent. The list should include the number of staff in each building, the agencies which occupy space in each facility, the total square footage by agency in each facility, the total square footage of vacant space on which the EOP is currently paying rent in each facility and the GSA rent rates for each facility.

Question 149: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, is the rent for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Question 150: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are after hours utilities charges for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

Travel Office (POC – Mayra Segovia)

Question 151: Please describe the current role the White House Travel Office plays in managing and arranging the financial aspects of White House Press Corps travel. Does the White House Travel Office operate as a "dollar-for-dollar" operation?

Question 152: How many EOP staff work in the White House Travel Office?

Question 153: How many contractor travel agents support the White House Travel Office?

Question 154: Please include the most recent independent financial statement audit of the White House Travel Office's accounts for the record.

Question 155: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Corps travelers on the Press Charter?

Question 156: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Pool travelers on Air Force One?

Question 157: Please explain the formula used to identify the reimbursement rate that the Travel Office billed Press Corps travelers accompanying the President's travel to the USS Abraham Lincoln. In your response, please include the actual rate billed to individual press corps travelers on this trip.

REV_00118249

Bonuses

Question 158: Why did this administration reinstate the payments of bonuses to political appointees? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 159: Have any EOP political staff been given bonuses since the policy was reinstated in March of 2002? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Question 160: Have any EOP political staff been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY02 or FY03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus? (POC – Jon Laurich)

Eisenhower Executive Office Building

Question 161: Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? [this question does not apply to the White House residence.] (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 162: Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilitles) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 163: For the record, please provide the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 164: For the record, please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 165: Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? (POC – Eric Pelletier)

Question 166: Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings?

Question 167: Please provide a list of all EOP and EOP-support-related agencies that occupied space in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building on 1/20/01 that have since been relocated to locations outside the EEOB. For each agency that relocated, please identify the agency that paid the move-related costs. (POC – Steve Beattie)

Question 168: What is the status of the vacant space on the 17th Street side of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building? (POC – Steve Beattie)

REV_00118250

EOP Staffing Levels:

Question 169: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2002 (actual) and FY03-FY04 (estimates). Please provide a list of the "historically provided" White House Office positions, the office to which these positions are assigned and the agency that pays the salary for each of these positions. (POC – Jon Laurich)

HEADLINE: EDITORIALS : How to bork a nominee Leon Holmes gets the treatment

BODY:
BORK IS no longer a proper noun in Washington, as in Judge Robert Bork, but a verb. It means to launch a vicious, irrelevant, roundhouse campaign against a judicial nominee, throwing in everything, including a couple of kitchen sinks.

The term stems from the treatment of Judge Bork when he was nominated to the Supreme Court. Not satisfied with relevant criticisms, the judge's more partisan critics reached back to criticize everything he'd said or done from approximately the age of three, and quite a few things he hadn't.

That borking has become a Washington tradition by now-indeed, an addiction-is illustrated by the sharp but impressively mean-spirited editorial we reprint on today's page from the Washington Post. It's a textbook example of borking; students in political science classes should cut it out and save it, like a ripe specimen of that low art.

Notice that, unable to find anything contemporary to criticize about Little Rock's Leon Holmes-an outstanding scholar, advocate and thinker who has just been nominated to the federal bench-the Posthas had to go back years and even decades to dig up any utterance it could use against him, including one that went back to 1980-yes, 1980-and for which he apologized as soon as it was brought to his attention.

The other citation-a quote from Scripture in an article co-written with his wife in April of 1997-is so wrenched out of context that you might never guess it was a philosophical rumination on the Book of Ephesians.

As any smear artist knows, there's no need to go into detail. Especially relevant detail. In this case the innocent reader would be left with no idea of what kind of nominee, or man, Leon Holmes really is. Which is the whole purpose of borking: to make the nominee look like the biggest, scariest menace that ever came down confirmation road. Instead, to quote an informal recommendation from a colleague, Leon Holmes is the kind of guy he'd be willing to shoot dice with over the phone.

The charge that Mr. Holmes is in favor of the subjugation of women would amuse anyone who's ever met Susan Holmes, his wife and co-author, or any of the women in the law for whom he has been mentor, role model, supporter and encourager.

But we're glad to see that the Post has not lost its talent for irony. Alas, in this case it's unintended irony.

For the Post accuses the president of radicalizing judicial nominations by his choice of Leon Holmes for the bench, when it is the one being radical, going back or decades to find words from a much younger Leon Holmes that fail to show the proper reverence for the politically correct gods of today.

In the process, the Post has ignored the legal acumen and philosophical learning that the mature Leon Holmes has demonstrated day after day, year after year, in his career and life. Forget all that; the Post is determined to crucify this nominee even if it has to use old, rusty nails. It takes a couple of stray quotes and equates them with the man's whole career. A neat trick, if a low one.

A confession: In recent years we've found ourselves growing soft on the Post's editorial page; on its good days it started to look like one of those old-fashioned liberal organs not beyond the reach of reason. Clearly we were mistaken.

When the chance to do a little borking came up, the Post has leaped at it. As if it couldn't help itself. Even if it means using low means to attain a purely ideological end. Which may be the worst thing about borking; it's habit-forming. Once it becomes ingrained in a paper's character, there's no telling when it will seep out again.

TERRORISM IN SAUDI ARABIA***

Excerpt from the President's Remarks, 5/13/03

"Today's attacks in Saudi Arabia, the ruthless murder of American citizens and other citizens, remind us that the war on terror continues. My thoughts and prayers and those of our fellow citizens are with the families of the victims of yesterday's murder in Saudi Arabia. We pray for them. We mourn the loss of life. These despicable acts were committed by killers whose only faith is hate. And the United States will find the killers and they will learn the meaning of American justice."

Excerpts from Secretary Powell's Remarks, 5/13/03

"These are people who are determined to try to penetrate facilities like this for the purpose of killing people in their sleep, killing innocent people, killing people who would try to help others.

"...[I]t will not deter the United States, and I am sure will not deter Saudi Arabia, in our mutual effort to go after this kind of terrorism and roll it up: go after their finances; go after their information systems, their intelligence systems; make sure we take full advantage of our law enforcement assets, both in the United States and Saudi Arabia and around the world."

U.S., Other Nations Act to Support Innovation in Agriculture***

The United States on Tuesday announced the U.S., Argentina, Canada, and Egypt will file a World Trade Organization case against the European Union over its illegal five-year moratorium on approving agricultural biotech products.

Agricultural biotechnology continues the practice of innovation that has boosted productivity, quality and choices and nourished the hungry.

Other countries expressing support for this case by joining it as third parties include: Australia, Chile, Colombia, El Salvador, Honduras, Mexico, New Zealand, Peru and Uruguay.

Frequently asked questions include:

Are biotech crops safe?
Yes. More than 300 million North Americans have been eating biotech foods for several years. No adverse health consequences have been reported. A number of biotech products have been shown safe by both the U.S. and EU food safety approval systems.

What countries grow biotech products?
In addition to the U.S., with 96.3 million acres currently under cultivation, other leading biotech food producers are Argentina (33.3 million acres); Canada, (8.6 million acres); and China, (5.2 million acres).

12 other countries grow more than 2.5 million acres of biotech crops each year: South Africa, India, Spain, Mexico, Indonesia, Honduras, Australia, Romania, Uruguay, Bulgaria, Colombia, and Germany.

FYI, the latest on the campaign finance litigation. The district court's ruling on the stay motions is expected tomorrow at the earliest, according to this article. I am awaiting an update from Paul.

Supreme Court Denies Request to Stay Campaign Finance Ruling

Tuesday, May 13, 2003

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court declined to intervene Tuesday to block part of a lower court's long-delayed ruling on the new campaign finance law, but the move is almost certainly not the high court's last word on the subject.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist turned down a request from the National Rifle Association, which had asked the high court to suspend what it calls unconstitutional restrictions on political advertisements by interest groups.

Rehnquist's action was not a ruling on the merits of the NRA's argument, or on the entire lower court pronouncement on the campaign finance law.

The Supreme Court is expected to rule eventually on whether the entire law violates the constitutional principle of free speech. Because of unexplained delays in the lower court, that ruling is now unlikely to come before this fall.

Rehnquist did not give a reason for rejecting the NRA's emergency request for a stay, or suspension of a May 2 ruling by lower court judges. Numerous groups with a stake in campaign fund raising have asked the lower court to put part or all of its ruling on hold, pending a full review by the Supreme Court. The lower court is not expected to rule on those requests until Wednesday at the earliest.

The NRA tried to jump ahead on Monday by asking the Supreme Court to get involved. Rehnquist said the NRA could renew the high court request if the lower court has not acted by May 20.

The NRA says the lower court isn't moving quickly enough, and it has ads it wants to air now.

The lower court ruled unconstitutional a provision of the law barring a range of interest groups, including those financed with corporate and union money, from airing political ads mentioning federal candidates in those candidates' districts the month before a primary and within two months of a general election.

It upheld fallback rules that bar the same groups from airing ads that promote, support, attack or oppose a candidate at any time. It's unclear how far interest groups can go when featuring candidates in ads because the law doesn't define what it means to promote, support, attack or oppose.

If the NRA wins a stay from either court, the 30-60 day ad restrictions would be in effect. The group opposes those too, but says it prefers them to the fallback rules because it's not a congressional election year.

PRESS STAKEOUT WITH SENATOR BOB GRAHAM (D-FL) FOLLOWING SENATE POLICY LUNCHEON

THE OHIO CLOCK CORRIDOR, THE CAPITOL BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D.C. TUESDAY, MAY 13, 2003

SEN. GRAHAM: Hello. How are you?

;;;;;; Q (Off mike) -- believe that al Qaeda is severely crippled. In light of yesterday's attack, how would you assess al Qaeda's capabilities?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: We essentially ended the war on terror about a year ago, and since that time, al Qaeda has been allowed to regenerate. To carry out the series of attacks that they did last fall, from Yemen to Bali, and now today in Saudi Arabia, possibly with a linkage to the tragedy in Chechnya as well, indicates that they have significant capability to carry out complicated operations in a simultaneous manner.

;;;;;; Q Where do you think al Qaeda is primarily regrouped right now?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: They're regrouping, certainly, in the Afghanistan-Pakistan area, but no doubt also in other areas where al Qaeda has a significant presence. The declassified information is that al Qaeda has that significant presence in some 30 to 40 countries, including the United States.

;;;;;; Q (Off mike) -- in terms of targeting al Qaeda, Hezbollah, and other terror groups?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Right. Hezbollah has the greater presence in the United States, so it deservedly should get the major attention. But I believe we are not going to win the war on terror by trying to build a fortress in every neighborhood in the United States. We're going to win the war on terror by taking it to the terrorists, defeating them where they live. And that's what we have not been doing for the last year.

;;;;;; Q Where are the weaknesses in our terror fighting that allowed something like yesterday to happen?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, because we have allowed the basic structure of al Qaeda to continue. Yes, we've been engaged in a manhunt to find their past leadership, but what we're also finding is that al Qaeda has a deep farm team and they're able to replace those who are killed or detained.

;;;;;; Q Would you say that al Qaeda is 50 percent less powerful than it was around September 11th, 25 percent? How would you assess al Qaeda's strength now compared to then?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: I would say that al Qaeda had been substantially weakened and was on the ropes about 12 to 14 months ago. And the fact that we have backed away from a war and reduced it down to a manhunt, that we moved military and intelligence resources out of Afghanistan and Pakistan to get ready for the war in Iraq, has allowed them to regenerate. They probably are not back to the level that they were before September the 11th, but they're a lot closer to that level of capability than they were a year ago.

;;;;;; Q How cooperative do you think the Saudis will be in cooperating with us on this, the latest attack?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: I would say they probably will be very cooperative on this particular incident.

;;;;;; Q So, more than they have in the past?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: I hope so.

;;;;;; Q Why do you think that is?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Because I think they would like to be in our favor and good graces.

;;;;;; Q So, will this be a new degree of sort of U.S. -- a test of U.S.-Saudi cooperation on the war on terror?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: This will be another test, and it comes in a climate of a very mixed Saudi role in the war on terror, which we know, and they know we know. So, I would imagine this tragedy will be used as an opportunity for them to try to ingratiate themselves with us by being very cooperative.

;;;;;; Q Secretary Powell said this had the fingerprints of al Qaeda all over it. It was also said that this was a well-planned and well- executed plan. Was there anything out there that could have let us know that this was coming? Is there anything that you would see in your investigation?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, if there's one thing about al Qaeda, Hezbollah, the other highly organized terrorist groups, is they tend to do what they say they're going to do. And over two weeks ago, a message that allegedly came from Osama bin Laden said they were about to start another series of terrorist attacks aimed at Americans. They have now done what they said they were doing to do.

;;;;;; Q So what does this say about the administration's war on terror?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, as I said last fall, I thought the priority for the United States should be to win the war on terror before we took on other evils in the Middle East and Central Asia. If we had done that, al Qaeda would not have had the opportunity to regenerate; Hezbollah would not have been given the continued sanctuary for it to strengthen.

;;;;;; Q Are we winning the war?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: No, I -- if the question is -- Are we more or less secure from terrorists today than we were a year ago? -- the answer is we are less secure.

;;;;;; Q So, Senator, you're saying that the negligence --

;;;;;; Q You're saying the war weakened the war -- the war against Iraq weakened the war on al Qaeda?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: I'm saying that the war on Iraq was a distraction. It took us off the war on terror, which we were on a path to win, but we've now let it slip away from us.

;;;;;; Q Specifically, what do you mean by "took us off the war"? What military or other action would you have taken?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, the first thing I would -- what I would not have done is I would not have relocated military and intelligence capabilities from Afghanistan and Pakistan to begin the war on Iraq.

;;;;;; Second, I would have pursued aggressively a war, not a manhunt, to break the backbone of al Qaeda, not just pick off its toes and fingers.

;;;;;; And third, I would have moved out of Afghanistan and Pakistan to other areas where there is a substantial al Qaeda presence.

;;;;;; Q Such as? Which countries?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, Yemen is the one that comes most to mind.

;;;;;; Q Senator, do you believe that had those steps been taken, that what happened in Saudi Arabia might not have happened?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, it could have been avoided, if you had actually crushed the basic infrastructure of al Qaeda, that they would not have had the capability to launch such a sophisticated attack.

;;;;;; Q What do you think are the most vulnerable al Qaeda targets now?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Americans, wherever they are, here in the United States or abroad.

;;;;;; Q Senator, can you clarify -- there has been some speculation that you have some knowledge of Bush administration weakness or failure to act in the days up to 9/11. Is that the case?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Yes.

;;;;;; Q Face the cameras --

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Do I have knowledge to that effect?

;;;;;; Q Yes.

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Yes.

;;;;;; Q (Off mike) -- cameras.

;;;;;; Q Can you tell us what that is?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: No, that's -- that is one of the many pieces of information which the American people should have access to, which is currently classified and does not appear that it's going to be declassified.

;;;;;; Q So you --

;;;;;; Q Do you have information on -- for the cameras, do you have information that the administration -- that the Bush administration failed to act on certain information?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: There was information which was known to the administration and its agencies before September the 11th, which did not -- I'll start over. There was information known to the administration or its agencies which was not acted upon.

;;;;;; That same information has not been acted upon today. I want to underscore we're not talking solely about history, we're talking about the threats to the American people today because signals, information that could have been used was not used before September the 11th and continues to go unused.

;;;;;; Q Senator, you're saying that -- this is a pretty strong charge of negligence here and --

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Yeah, yeah. Excuse me. I inappropriately used -- I meant to signal, not signals. Can I take one more shot at that question?

;;;;;; Q (Off mike.)

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Okay. Going to ask it again?

;;;;;; Q Okay. Sure.

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Yeah.

;;;;;; Q So you have information that basically -- that there was information out there that the Bush administration did not act on?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: There was information which the administration and its agencies knew before September 11th that was not acted upon. That same information is available today. It's not being acted upon today. That failure to act contributed to September the 11th, and the failure to act today continues Americans in a vulnerable circumstance.

;;;;;; Q So this -- is this a charge of negligence on the administration, do you think?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Others can characterize it. I can just state the facts.

;;;;;; Q Senator, how could they have differently -- you said there's -- we missed the opportunity to cripple the basic infrastructure of al Qaeda, that we were somehow close. What --

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Yeah, I think from the beginning of the war in Afghanistan, which was in early October of 2001, until about February or March of 2002, we were making good progress in dismantling the basic structure of al Qaeda.

;;;;;; Then we started to redirect our attention to Iraq, and al Qaeda has regenerated. They not only apparently conducted a terrorist raid in Saudi Arabia yesterday, their fingerprints appear to be on the attack in Chechnya, as well as the whole string of terrorist attacks from Bali to Yemen that took place last fall. All that indicates that they are an institution that has got considerable capabilities.

;;;;;; Q In regard to the information before the 9/11 attacks, are you talking about information that specifically pointed to the attacks, or more general information about the overall danger of al Qaeda?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: I cannot comment on that. I hope that that information will soon be made available to the American people.

;;;;;; Q And you had mentioned before about a link with the -- you tied this in with the bombing in Chechnya. Why do you feel that they're associated?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, first, al Qaeda's had a long presence in Chechnya. Second, some of the ways in which this was conducted: A well-planned, orchestrated car bombing, and the fact that it occurred on the same day as the attacks in Saudi Arabia. All of those are the kind of characteristics that has identified al Qaeda.

;;;;;; Q And do you feel that the warning that had been issued last week or the week before about al Qaeda attacks, do you think that that provided enough information that the attacks that occurred yesterday could have been prevented?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: I don't know whether there was any specific omission which contributed to yesterday's tragedy.

;;;;;; Q (Off mike) -- the White House, and beyond, who would say that this particular criticism now is politically motivated somehow.

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: It's the same criticism that I made last fall when I voted against the resolution to go to war against Iraq. I said our number one enemy is not Saddam Hussein, it's international terrorism; that if we get diverted into Iraq, we're going to allow the international terrorist to strengthen others like Hezbollah to go on unaffected by our actions.

;;;;;; Q You've said the administration is engaging in a cover-up by refusing to declassify the report. Why do you think it's a cover-up?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Because I don't -- I do not believe this information is of a national security nature. I think that it is not being released because it is, frankly, embarrassing, both embarrassing as to what happened before September the 11th, but maybe even more so the fact that the lessons of September the 11th are not being applied today to reduce the vulnerability to the American people.

;;;;;; Q An embarrassment to any one particular, you know, agency, the president, the vice president, anyone in particular?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, I would say the administration, and specifically the CIA and the FBI.

;;;;;; Q Can you -- can you just tell us where you are on the report, the joint inquiry?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, next week will be five months since this report has been submitted for declassification. There is no light at the end of the tunnel. It's hard to believe that intelligence agencies can't read a report of approximately 600 to 800 pages in a five-month period.

;;;;;; Q And, Senator -- (off mike) -- there might not be anyone held responsible for the lack of attention -- connecting the dots, as --

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Well, the administration could certainly hold people responsible, because they know everything and more that I know.

;;;;;; Q Do you think jobs could be lost?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Yes. I think that there should be accountability: accountability from the highest level, accountability to the leadership of the agencies that were involved, and to the individuals who had specific responsibility.

;;;;;; Q So when do you think the report will come out?

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: I have no idea.

;;;;;; Q Thank you.

;;;;;; Q Thank you.

;;;;;; SEN. GRAHAM: Certainly.

END.

In case you missed (I did):

FEDERAL JUDGES DESERVE A PAY RAISE

New York Times

May 9, 2003

In a rare show of bipartisan unity, Senator Orrin Hatch, a Republican who is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, and Senator Patrick Leahy, the committee's ranking Democrat, have introduced a measure to increase the salaries of federal judges.

This is clearly the right step. Yet even with the backing of President Bush, the proposed 16.9 percent increase may prove a hard sell, given these economic hard times. The increase is warranted to make up for the erosion in judicial pay caused by inflation and Congress's repeated withholding of cost-of-living adjustments that are supposed to be routine.

A report in January by the National Commission on the Public Service, a study group led by Paul Volcker, the former chairman of the Federal Reserve, said that the purchasing power of federal judicial salaries had dropped 24 percent since 1969. It said the decline was "arguably inconsistent with the Constitutional provision that judicial salaries may not be reduced by Congress." A year ago, the Supreme Court declined to accept a case raising that issue. But it should not take a lawsuit to persuade members of Congress to treat the judiciary fairly.

The government cannot match the salaries offered by big-time law firms. But to recruit and retain quality judges — and for the sake of fairness — Congress needs to provide salaries that bear a reasonable relationship to other professional opportunities.

As part of the package, judges should be required to forgo privately financed junkets that cast an ethical cloud on the courts, as Senator Leahy has previously proposed. These are matters that transcend the ongoing partisan battle over President Bush's hard-right judicial nominees.

Subject: Class Action Testimony

Y'all,

Just got word that House Judiciary wants me to testify on class action reform on Thursday. This is easy, as we have a previously cleared letter of support for the bill in the 107th, and we will base the testimony on that letter. Just wanted to give you a heads up and ask for you help in clearing the testimony (going to OMB tomorrow morning) by Wednesday morning. thanks,

TESTIMONY OF THE HONORABLE VIET D. DINH,
ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, OFFICE OF LEGAL POLICY,
BEFORE THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE OF THE UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
ON THE "CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003."

May 15, 2003

Mr. Chairman, it is a pleasure for me to be here this morning to present the views of the Department of Justice on H.R. 1115, the "Class Action Fairness Act of 2003." The Department of Justice supports this bill, which is nearly identical to H.R. 2341 passed by the House of Representatives in the 107th Congress, also with our strong support. Mr. Chairman, we appreciate your leadership on this important legislation, and the leadership of the bill's bi-partisan group of sponsors.

Let me emphasize at the outset that the problem is not the class action device itself. If that were the case, then we could simply repeal Rule 23 and all go home. Everyone recognizes that class actions can serve a very important goal. As one former Solicitor General has stated, "their true purpose is noble – to vindicate the rights of large groups of individuals who sought justice for civil rights violations and other wrongs, but who could not achieve such justice individually."

Class action abuses, however, have taken a toll on our legal system. All too often, class actions represent a lawyer's rush to the courthouse in order to select the most favorable State forum before duplicative actions purporting to represent the same victims with the same claims are filed in other States. In essence, it becomes a race to the courthouse for the attorneys to see who among them can file and then settle his or her case the fastest and thereby collect attorney's fees. The losers in this race are the consumers who often gain little or nothing through the settlement, yet are bound in perpetuity.

As explained by committees of the Judicial Conference, overlapping and duplicative class actions in federal and state courts threaten the resolution and settlement of such actions on terms that are fair to victims, burden both plaintiffs and defendants with the expenses of multiple litigation of the same issues, and place conscientious class counsel at a potential disadvantage. Certainly we can all agree that consumers such as Bank of Boston account holders do not benefit when plaintiffs are each awarded $8.76, but then each must pay $90 to the attorneys who purportedly brought the action on their behalf. The goal of class action reform, then, must be to stop the abuses which have frustrated the class action device's noble purpose.

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2003 contains three distinct, but necessary components: (1) a "Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights" which addresses the administration of class actions in Federal courts, which have been collectively dubbed (2) expanded federal diversity jurisdiction to ensure that class actions with national implications can be heard in federal courts; and (3) expedited appellate review of decisions whether to certify a class. I would like to briefly address each in turn.

Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights

Section 3 of H.R. 1115, entitled the "Class Action Bill of Rights and Improved Procedures for Interstate Class Actions," would establish long needed protections for consumers whose rights are often adjudicated by lawyers not of their choosing in fora with which they have no connection, and where settlements are, in practical effect, imposed on those consumers. Too often victims receive notices of class action settlement proposals that are too confusing to provide any meaningful information about the proposed settlement. This section appropriately would guard against settlements that were unreasonable or even harmful to individual class members by providing for thorough review by the courts. To ensure that victims receive adequate information, this section would require settlement notices be in plain English and in a standardized, easy-to-read format.

Federal Court Jurisdiction for National Class Actions

In addition to the problem of duplicative class actions being filed in numerous states, certain local courthouses have become known for particularly generous awards. The threat of these large awards often coerces defendants to agree to disproportionately high settlement amounts. Often, these tiny jurisdictions are the first to adjudicate a class action claim and impose their laws on class members from other States and on those States themselves, where similar actions may be pending. Such interstate litigation is exactly why the Founders created diversity jurisdiction: to provide a Federal forum preventing bias against out-of-State defendants and out-of-State plaintiffs.

H.R. 1115 would close the gap in diversity jurisdiction that has resulted from the interpretation and application of diversity and jurisdictional amount requirements in the unique class action world. The bill would prevent attorneys from avoiding removal through artful pleading that eliminates full diversity or minimizes the claimed damages of the individual class members – actions that fail to serve the victims and prejudice the defendants. Specifically, sections 4 and 5 of H.R.1115 provide much needed amendments to Federal diversity jurisdiction by relaxing the "complete diversity" rule. The Act would permit, but not require, removal by any class member and any defendant, so long as there is "minimal diversity," the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $2 million, and the lawsuit is not primarily intra-state in nature.

Importantly, H.R. 1115 also contains an anti-circumvention measure. Section 4 provides that – regardless of the label placed on a lawsuit by the State court – an action will be "deemed" a class action if: (1) the named plaintiff (exclusive of a State attorney general) purports to act for the interests of its members who are not named parties to the action; or (2) the monetary relief claims of 100 or more other persons are proposed to be tried jointly in the action on the grounds the claims involve common questions of law or fact. This definition would appropriately encompass "private attorney general suits" in which an individual seeks to recover on behalf of the general public, as well as "mass actions" brought on behalf of plaintiffs who claim that their suits present common questions of law or fact that should be resolved in a single proceeding.

The Department fully supports these changes to Federal diversity jurisdiction and removal procedures, which recognize the Federal interest in significant class action litigation that truly involves multiple interstate plaintiffs and defendants. In addition, providing for consistent and uniform Federal adjudication of these claims will protect each State and its citizens from other State courts' legal rulings from which there is no recourse.

Prior witnesses before this committee have described the multi-billion dollar judgment awarded in Madison County, Illinois against State Farm Insurance for repairing automobiles with "aftermarket parts" as distinguished from original manufacturers' parts. That decision applied Illinois law to plaintiffs in all 50 states, even though such a ruling was contrary to state insurance regulations in New York, Massachusetts, and Hawaii among other places. The State Farm case is not an isolated example. Right now, for instance, we are following with interest a case in Oklahoma where a nationwide class has been certified against DaimlerChrylser Corporation. The Oklahoma courts plan to apply Michigan law to adjudicate, on behalf of residents of all 50 states, claims that Chrysler should not have installed certain airbags that comply with federal safety standards.

Expansion of Federal diversity jurisdiction, of course, will shift some state class actions to the Federal courts. However, Federal courts have significant interests in cases that involve interstate commerce and parties from many States, and federal adjudication avoids costly and inefficient duplication in State courts. The Constitution's provision for diversity jurisdiction was intended to prevent just the sort of local biases that have resulted from State court class actions that often award higher settlements to in-State victims and award excessive damages against out-of-State defendants. The unique circumstances of class actions, a modern phenomenon, have outstripped the original conception of 28 U.S.C. § 1332, when that provision was initially enacted.

Interlocutory Appeal of Class Certification Decision

Because a district court's decision whether to certify a class often is decisive — a decision to certify may place insurmountable pressure on the defendant to settle, while a refusal to certify may force the plaintiffs to abandon their claims — the bill permits immediate appeal of certification decisions as a matter of right. Immediate appeals of certification decisions can be crucial to efficient management of class actions, preventing the nightmare situation where parties engage in years of expensive litigation under a ruling on the class certification, only to have the appeals court reverse the class certification determination. Contrary to concerns voiced about previous legislative proposals, H.R. 1115 would not encourage or permit the destruction of documents or other evidence during the appeal of the certification decision. On the contrary, discovery would be stayed under this section unless the court finds that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice.

Conclusion

REV_00118303

In sum, H.R. 1115 is an important step in returning common sense to the nation's class action system and providing greater protections for the victims the system originally was designed to benefit. The bill would update diversity jurisdiction appropriately to account for class action litigation, while permitting State court actions to proceed in cases where no party sought removal and in specified circumstances such as where the class is relatively small or where the primary plaintiffs and defendants are within the State. Thus, State courts would be able to offer redress and provide a convenient forum for their citizens, while Federal courts would provide a forum for truly interstate class actions.

Thank you for this opportunity to present our views. We greatly appreciate your efforts in support of meaningful class action reform. I would be pleased to answer any questions that the Committee may have on this subject.

Pirates We Be Rule of Law
By STEPHEN G. CALABRESI

Last Friday marked the two-year anniversary of President Bush's nominations of Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen as federal appellate judges. The nominations, supported by a majority of senators, are being filibustered to death by a posse of Senate Democrats. Tom Daschle, the Senate minority leader who has previously attacked filibusters as unconstitutional, is spearheading the effort. He growls that the current disruption is but a preview of what's to come.

The stakes in this particular nomination battle are even higher than usual. With Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor getting ready to retire, a minority of Senate Democrats are threatening to filibuster anyone to the right of David Souter. On the merits, Antonin Scalia should be nominated as chief justice and Judges Michael Luttig or Michael McConnell as the new associate justice. But the fear of endless Senate filibusters may deter Mr. Bush from picking the best candidate if it means wading into another fetid nomination swamp. Fortunately, Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist and 10 other senators, including Democrat Zell Miller, have proposed a resolution to prevent indefinite filibusters of judicial nominations. The Frist-Miller proposal would gradually reduce the number of senators required to invoke cloture on a nomination from 60 votes, to 57, to 54, to 51 to a majority of senators present and voting. The basis for their proposal is well supported in history and constitutional law. The Constitution was originally written to empower Congress to make most decisions by majority rule. A major defect in the Constitution's precursor, the Articles of Confederation, was that it required supermajorities for many important decisions. That difference was deliberately remedied by the Framers. Exceptions to the constitutional principle of majority rule exist, but they are enumerated in seven express situations where a two-thirds vote is required. The bar for requiring a super-majority is high: removing an official who has been impeached, expelling a member of Congress, passing a constitutional amendment, or overriding a presidential veto. Confirming one of the nearly 1,000 lower federal court judges is not the sort of serious action that the Framers thought or said required a super-majority.

Both houses of Congress have the power by majority vote to establish the "Rules of its Proceedings." But as an original matter, there is no evidence this clause was meant to authorize indefinite filibusters. Nor is there evidence I am aware of that indefinite filibusters were allowed in 1787 in the state legislatures or in the British Parliament, although legislative committees and more ordinary rules governing debate were common. In fact, from 1789 to 1806 -- during the critical first eight Senates to sit under the Constitution -- the Senate's rules allowed for cutting off debate by a simple majority vote. This strongly suggests what the text of the Constitution already implies: the Senate filibuster is on very shaky ground as a matter of text and original constitutional history.

The traditional Senate filibuster of legislation has an ignominious history. It got its start in the 1840s when Sen. John C. Calhoun first employed a rule adopted in 1806 to defend slavery. He was called a "filibusterer," a term taken from a Dutch word for pirates who sought to overthrow Latin American governments to hasten the spread of slavery. From 1841 to the present, the filibuster was primarily used to defend Jim Crow laws. Today it stands in the way of vouchers, school choice, tort reform, and tax cuts.

Now for the first time in 214 years of American history a minority of senators is seeking to extend the tradition of filibustering from legislation to judicial nominees who they know enjoy the support of a majority of the Senate. This is a change of constitutional dimensions and amounts to a kind of coup d'etat. While a filibuster was briefly used in 1968 against chief justice nominee Abe Fortas -- he was supported by fewer than 50 senators -- there was only one cloture vote on his nomination.

The unprecedented extension of the filibuster to judicial nominees supported by a majority of the Senate threatens to raise the vote required for confirmation from 51 to 60 in violation of the Advice and Consent Clause. Were the Democrats to succeed in this pattern, it would greatly weaken the intended power of the president to appoint federal judges who are supported by a Senate majority. It would also undermine judicial independence by giving a minority of senators -- led by special interest groups -- a veto over who can become a judge.

Senate Rule XXII purports to require a two-thirds vote of the Senate to end debate on amendments of the Senate rules. Constitutional scholars of all political persuasions, however, agree that the Senate can always change its rules by a simple majority vote. Three vice presidents and law professors from Erwin Chemerinsky on the left to John McGinnis on the right agree. Even Lloyd Cutler, White House Counsel to Presidents Carter and Clinton, has written in the Washington Post that Senate Rule XXII "is plainly unconstitutional."

To the extent that the rule purports to require a two-thirds majority for cloture on rules changes, it is unconstitutional. It is an ancient principle of Anglo-American constitutional law that a legislature cannot bind a succeeding legislature. A two-thirds requirement for cloture on rules changes allows the Senate that adopted Rule XXII unconstitutionally to bind this Republican Senate, elected in 2002, after a campaign in which judicial confirmations figured prominently.

Fidelity to the text of the Constitution, the original understanding, and 214 years in which there wasn't a single sustained filibuster of judicial nominees, is ample evidence that the Democrats' plan to thwart Republican nominees from entering the judicial system must be stopped. Republicans were voted into control of the House, the Senate and the White House. It is time for them to govern.

STATE DEPARTMENT FOREIGN PRESS CENTER BRIEFING
SUBJECT: NATIONAL SECURITY ISSUES
BRIEFER: CONDOLEEZZA RICE, NATIONAL SECURITY ADVISER

THE FOREIGN PRESS CENTER, WASHINGTON, D.C.
1:51 P.M. EDT, WEDNESDAY, MAY 14, 2003

MS. RICE: Thank you very much. I'm very happy to be here. It's my first visit to the Foreign Press Center, but I assume it won't be my last, if I'm invited back.

;;;;;; I just want to talk for a few minutes about the fact that we look forward tonight to welcoming President Roh of South Korea. He will meet with President Bush late this afternoon, and then they will have a private dinner together in the White House residence. President Bush is looking forward to his first face-to-face meeting with the new South Korean president. It's a very timely meeting, coming in the year of the 50th anniversary of the alliance between our two nations. It is a strong, vital, multifaceted alliance that is of mutual benefit.

;;;;;; President Bush will take this opportunity to thank President Roh for his support during the liberation of Iraq. The two leaders will also discuss issues of mutual interest, including the situation with North Korea, and multilateral issues, like the war on terrorism and issues of the world economy.

;;;;;; The president will look forward to this meeting. He has a number of other meetings coming up. This is a time of intensive diplomacy for the president and for the United States.

;;;;;; But with those opening remarks about the meeting today, I am happy to take your questions.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: Very good. Let's start right over here with Italy.

;;;;;; Q Giampiero Gramaglia, Italian news agency, ANSA. Dr. Rice, are you satisfied with the level of cooperation you received in the past, and you are receiving now, from Saudi Arabia in the fight against terrorism?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: We have, indeed, very good cooperation with Saudi Arabia in the war on terrorism, very good cooperation in a number of aspects of it. We have been intensifying our cooperation, for instance, on stopping the financing of terrorism. And we expect to have even more intensive discussions and relations with Saudi Arabia.

;;;;;; It was just a reminder, the other day, that the war on terrorism goes on, that our work is not done, that there is hard work ahead. I might mention that we had also, this week, bombings in Chechnya, which remind us that the war on terrorism is not done.

;;;;;; This is a worldwide and global effort, and everybody must participate and participate to the fullest.

;;;;;; But we've had good cooperation with the Saudi government, and I'm sure that in the wake of this terrible incident in Riyadh, that we will seek to intensify our cooperation. We can always do better. All of us can always do better. And we look forward to working with the Saudi government.

;;;;;; Q Parasuram of the Press Trust of India. Recently you met Mr. Mishra. So did the president. And also the foreign minister of India met the secretary of State. I was wondering; recently Mr. Mishra made a suggestion that India, United States and Israel should join together in the war against terrorism. I was wondering whether you view that as a feasible thing, and how you generally view the war on terrorism. There has been a feeling in India that the United States does not take the war on terrorism against India as seriously as it takes the war against terrorism against Americans. Is it a legitimate thing to say, or how do you react to it?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Thank you for the question.

;;;;;; The president is very firm in his commitment that terrorism, wherever it is carried out, against whom it is carried out, is not a legitimate means for advancing a political agenda. All terrorism is wrong. And in fact, we have had very good cooperation with the Indian government in the war on terrorism. At the time of the attack on the Indian Parliament, more than a year ago now, the United States spoke out very strongly about that terrorism. The United States also has listed a number of organizations that have been involved in terrorism against India, including Kashmiri-based organizations that have been involved in terrorism. And we will continue to speak out about terrorism wherever it might occur.

;;;;;; Let me just use the opportunity, though, to say that our relationship with India is a broad and deepening relationship. It goes beyond security matters. It goes beyond proliferation issues. It goes beyond regional issues.

;;;;;; And this president has been dedicated to strengthening and broadening the Indian relationship to make it in accordance with the fact that India is the world's largest democracy, that it is a country that has a potentially very important role to play as a stabilizing force in the region. We've had good cooperation and consultations on Afghanistan, for instance, and we intend to continue to have this very good relationship.

;;;;;; The recent steps by Prime Minister Vajpayee and the reciprocal steps by Pakistan are to be welcomed for what they may mean for a diminution of tensions and hopefully a road to peace for the two parties. And we have had discussions about that, and we stand ready to help in any way that we can as the two parties try to reenter dialogue.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: Okay. The lady in white, second row.

;;;;;; Q Thank you. Dolia Estevez with El Financiero from Mexico City. Good afternoon, Dr. Rice.

;;;;;; I have a quick question for you. After your meetings last week with the foreign minister of Mexico, are you now counting with Mexico's vote for -- in the Security Council for the new resolution on Iraq? And can you confirm reports that President Bush will be traveling to Mexico in November, meeting with Fox to -- and also to attend the special Summit of the Americas? And how would you describe at this point the status of the bilateral relation with Mexico?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: One question. Right. (Laughs.)

;;;;;; Q (Off mike.)

;;;;;; MS. RICE: It's one -- yeah. No, I agree. I understand.

;;;;;; Q (Off mike.)

;;;;;; MS. RICE: I understand. First of all, on a trip to Mexico, we've not yet finalized the presidential schedule for the fall. We are in discussions with countries about what might be done to give a little push to the Summit of the Americas agenda in the interim, but nothing has been planned yet.

;;;;;; As to U.S.-Mexican relations, Mexico is a friend. The president and President Fox have had a good relationship and continue to have a good relationship.

;;;;;; It is important to recognize that we've been through a difficult period. Obviously, the U.N. process did not work out in a way that we would have hoped, given the importance of this issue as a security matter for the United States. It was unfortunate that we were not able to get an 18th resolution against Saddam Hussein. We believe that there was more than enough authority in Resolution 1441 and the previous resolutions. But it would have been good, had the Security Council been able to affirm once again its willingness to defend its resolutions.

;;;;;; But that is now behind us.

;;;;;; And we are now in a U.N. process -- the U.N. Security Council process that really has to be aimed at helping the Iraqi people. That is all that we should be worried about at this point in time. The coalition is on the ground. The coalition has certain responsibilities, as well as certain authorities, to help the Iraqi people get back on their feet and move toward their future.

;;;;;; And we expect all U.N. Security Council members, including Mexico, to react positively to the need to lift sanctions. It cannot possibly be said that it was all right to lift sanctions against Saddam Hussein, but now that he is gone, it is not a good thing to lift sanctions. This simply makes no sense. And so, we have put forward a resolution for the lifting of sanctions. We put forward a resolution that is pretty minimalist in terms of what we need to be able to do to help the Iraqi people to establish a democratic path. And so, we expect cooperation from all Security Council members, and including from Mexico.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: (Off mike.)

;;;;;; Q (Name inaudible) -- from Russia's -- (affiliation inaudible) -- newspaper. How genuine is the statement by the American administration for Syria to withdraw its troops from Lebanon? And where do you put the relation between USA and Syria?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Well, the relationship between the United States and Syria has been problematic because the policies and behavior of Syria have been problematic. The Syrian support for terrorism, particularly for Hezbollah, but also other rejectionist organizations where it comes to peace in the Middle East. The Syrian occupation of Lebanon, which we -- it has long been U.S. policy that it should end. And the Syrian relationship has been very difficult.

;;;;;; Now, it doesn't have to remain difficult. There is a path that could create conditions in which this could be a much better relationship, but we are not there. We were very concerned about Syrian activities at the closing in on the end of the Iraq conflict. The -- it was obvious that people were escaping into Syria. It was obvious that they were not being stopped. There was some improvement in that in -- after we raised the issue, but there is a lot of work to be done. Syrian weapons of mass destruction programs have to be accounted for, and Syria should stand up and renounce those and make it possible to verify that they've given up any aspirations to weapons of mass destruction.

;;;;;; But it is, frankly, a very difficult relationship, and it is not one that is likely to improve without some major changes in Syrian behavior.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: The gentleman from Turkey, right there.

;;;;;; Q This is Umit Enginsoy with Turkey's NTV Television. Dr. Rice, we are aware of the difficulties between Turkey and the United States with regard to the Iraq war. From this point on, what would you -- what measures -- what specific measures would you advise the Turkish government to take to re-improve relations with the United States? Thank you.

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Well, I'm not in the habit of advising the Turkish government, but I can tell you that we are certainly aware of our joint strategic interests with Turkey. This is a long-time ally. It is an alliance that is based on friendship and interests, and I expect that it will be well into the future. We have a lot of work to do. Turkey has a very strong interest in the establishment of a stable and unified Iraq. The United States has a strong interest in the establishment of a stable and unified Iraq. This is an area in which we can work together. We actually have worked together pretty effectively at the end of the conflict, and I expect that we will in the future. Turkey, I would hope. would be involved in the reconstruction effort in Iraq, giving -- lending support to that, because a stable Iraq will be a good neighbor for Turkey, and I'm sure that that is what Turkey wants.

;;;;;; We obviously are NATO partners, and the evolution that is going on in NATO, which is really quite dramatic, as we bring in more new states, as NATO has to redefine its mission in terms of the threats of the 21st century, which are terrorism, weapons of mass destruction, potentially the nexus between them, Turkey is an important member of NATO and ought to be very involved in carrying out that agenda.

;;;;;; We obviously have interest in dealing with the Cyprus problem. We had made some progress on Cyprus. The U.N. general secretary has made heroic efforts to try and resolve that, and we would hope that Turkey would put its weight behind a settlement of the Cyprus issue.

;;;;;; So we have many, many goals ahead of us together. Turkey is important as a message to the world that democracy and Islam can exist side by side; that they can exist in a way that is organic and is to the good of its people.

;;;;;; And so we will be working with Turkey. Yes, we went through some difficult periods of time, but this is a strong relationship, it's going to remain a strong relationship, and we look forward to continuing to work with it. As a matter of fact, the president talked with President Sezer the other day to express his condolences on the earthquake. And I believe that Prime Minister Erdogan and the president are speaking today about the matter of the bombing in Riyadh. So contacts continue.

;;;;;; Q Patrick Jarreau, Le Monde. Dr. Rice, what is the purpose of the discussions in Geneva between the U.S. and Iran? What is the scope of those discussions? Is it on Iraq, is it proliferation, terrorism? And is Iraq still a member of the axis of evil?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Iraq or Iran?

;;;;;; Q Iran.

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Yes, right. Iraq, I think, is quickly not going to be a member of the axis of evil any longer.

;;;;;; Iran continues to engage in behavior that is deeply troubling and antithetical to American interests. Iran's weapons of mass destruction program, its nuclear program, the United States has raised alarms about this nuclear program over a long period of time. And now, with the IAEA visit to Iran, which seemed to raise a lot of questions about what the Iranians were doing under so-called civil nuclear uses measures, really those concerns have got to be addressed. The IAEA needs to be very tough in making sure that those questions are answered, because we believe that this is a disguise for a nuclear weapons program. We have lots of evidence of that. And now the suspicions that are there as a result of the IAEA visit, I think really give to the world new impetus to want to know fully what is going on in Iran, and Iran should be responsive to that.

;;;;;; It is also the case that Iran is one of the chief sponsors of terrorism -- Hezbollah operating out of Iran. And Iran cannot continue to support rejectionist organizations as we try to pursue peace in the Middle East.

;;;;;; Clearly, the Iranian government, also, which was elected, elected by the Iranian people in overwhelming numbers to fulfill their aspirations for liberalism and democracy and for rights, has done nothing but frustrate those aspirations of their people.

;;;;;; And we stand firmly with the Iranian people in their aspirations for freedom.

;;;;;; Finally, we are concerned about al Qaeda operating in Iran, and we've made that clear on -- from time to time to the Iranians. And we expect Iran to behave toward the new Iraqi government as a good neighbor, in a transparent way. We understand Iran is a neighbor of Iraq, just like Iran is a neighbor of Afghanistan, and of course it's going to have relations with those countries, but they need to be transparent, state-to-state relations, not relations that are aimed surreptitiously at importing the Iranian form of government into Iraq. So we have a wide range of issues that are very difficult with Iran.

;;;;;; We are not, in the discussions in Geneva, in discussions about broad relations between the United States and Iraq -- Iran. These are only discussions about very specific matters having to do with Afghanistan. And we expanded those at a point in time to do very specific discussions having to do with matters in Iraq. We are in the same neighborhood, so to speak, at this point in time, and so it's important not to have any misunderstandings. But nobody should construe the discussions that are going on in Geneva as discussions that are meant to lead somehow to broad improvement or normalization of relations with Iran. That is not their purpose. These are very, very narrow in scope.

;;;;;; Q Dr. Rice --

;;;;;; MODERATOR: The gentleman against the wall there, please.

;;;;;; Q (Off mike) -- the front.

;;;;;; Q My question is --

;;;;;; (Cross-talk.)

;;;;;; MS. RICE: (Laughs.) Well, I don't know who you were pointing to. He's got the (pen ?).

;;;;;; Q Yes.

;;;;;; MS. RICE: All right. Okay.

;;;;;; Q Dr. Rice, thank you. My name is Daniel Rosha (ph), fromr Worldnet. I have a question on Colombia. How is the U.S. government cooperating with the Colombian government to rescue the three Americans kidnapped by the FARC? And after the meeting with the President Uribe, is there any new plan to help the Colombian government to resolve that problem of the narco-guerrilla?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Well, we are very impressed with the administration of President Uribe. There have been a couple of meetings. We've had wide-ranging meetings with ministers there, minister of defense, minister of foreign affairs, of course. The president is just immensely impressed with the courage and the resolve of President Uribe to take his country back on behalf of the Colombian people from the narcoterrorists who operate there. And we are doing everything that we can to support that effort through more effective sharing of intelligence, through more effective coordination.

;;;;;; The problem in Colombia is a problem of terrorism against a democratic state. And that means that a state, like the United States, that is devoted to the war on terrorism has got to be an active partner with a country that is trying to fight off that attack on democracy by terrorism.

;;;;;; As to the hostages, we are hopeful that they will -- that we will be able to do something about that, but we stay in very close contact with the Colombian government about how to handle that situation. The one thing that we expect no one to do is to somehow negotiate with terrorists. It only emboldens them.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: The gentleman in the center.

;;;;;; Q My name is Ogata (sp) with Kyodo News. Dr. Rice, one quick question about North Korea. Did the United States already decide to continue the three-way talks with North Korea? And if not, what kind of economic sanctions are you preparing on the table right now?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Our policy toward North Korea is -- can really be summed up as follows. No one should be willing to give in to the kind of blackmail that the North Koreans have been practicing on the world for a number of years now, especially not the United States.

;;;;;; And in order not to give in to blackmail, in order to do something that is this time effective, the president believes that we have to have a multilateral approach to this. This cannot just be the United States. The North Koreans would like nothing better than to have the United States and North -- this be a problem between the United States and North Korea. This is not a problem between the United States and North Korea, this is a problem between North Korea and the world, because North Korea has completely shunted aside its international obligations not to do certain things. Announcing from time to time that it's getting out of this agreement, or that agreement is null and void -- this kind of behavior simply cannot be tolerated.

;;;;;; So this is an issue between North Korea and the world, and that's why we've insisted on multilateral talks -- multilateral talks that include the neighbors and the most affected states.

;;;;;; So the Beijing talks, we believe, were useful. We were specially appreciative of China's role. China, after all, has very big interest in a non-nuclear Korean peninsula.

;;;;;; China has said that a -- the nuclearization of the Korean peninsula would not be in China's interests. And so we were able to make common cause with China to create a place at which we could begin this discussion. Now, we believe that those talks will only be really effective and fruitful when South Korea, Japan, and possibly Russia, are involved in them so that -- and others who are interested.

;;;;;; If there are to be further talks, though, the attitude ought to be more constructive. The North Koreans used the trilateral talks to posture, and to threaten, and to try and blackmail. That is not the spirit in which we would expect to conduct any further talks. But we are not fearful of talks, and if we believe that they're useful at some point in time, we would be more than willing to reenter them.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: The gentleman in the yellow shirt there. (Off mike.)

;;;;;; Q Ki-Yon Kuk with the Segye Times. President Roh Moo Hyun of South Korea strongly objects to the idea of a preemption targeting North Korea. But I hear you keep saying that all options are on the table. So how can you reconcile the different perspectives on the North Korean issue?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Well, the United States and South Korea agree that a non-nuclear Korean peninsula is in the best interest of stability in Asia. And they're not the only ones that agree; Japan agrees, Russia agrees, China agrees. There is broadscale agreement on this matter.

;;;;;; We believe, and have communicated to all of our partners, that there is a peaceful resolution of this that is possible, if we are all strong in insisting that North Korea live up to its obligations. So we, too, believe that a peaceful resolution is possible and, of course, preferable.

;;;;;; The president never takes his options off the table in any circumstance. And we have always said on -- just going to the broader matter of preemption -- that preemption says only that you will not allow a threat necessarily to hit you before you hit it. It has never been the first option for the United States. This is after other things have been tried.

;;;;;; We do believe that this can be resolved peacefully, but that is going to require everybody to be firm, and to be strong and not to allow the North Koreans to blackmail us. It is going to require that the North Koreans understand that their only way into the international system is by peaceful means.

;;;;;; It's really rather sad, because last summer, North Korea was doing rather well. It had the Japanese prime minister there, who was talking about a path to normalization. You had intensification of the North-South dialogue, the opening of rail lines and the like. You had the president or Russia there. You had the president -- the foreign minister of North Korea meet Secretary Powell in Brunei. North Korea was really doing very well in trying to enter the international system. And then all of a sudden, because they were confronted with the fact that they were violating the agreed framework, the North Koreans decided they were going to go back to blackmailing people into letting them engage in peaceful relations. It's not the way to behave, and the North Koreans have got to be told that in no uncertain circumstances.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: Back here please.

;;;;;; Q Canada News Service. Dr. Rice, could you comment on a report that the person -- the commander behind the attacks on Riyadh may have been Abdul Rahman Jabara, a Canadian citizen of Kuwaiti origin, whose younger brother, Muhammad Mansour Jabara (ph), was arrest in Amman last year, returned to Canada and is currently being interrogated in the U.S.?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: I'm sorry, I can't comment on those specific reports. Obviously, this is an unfolding story. We are going to do everything that we can in cooperation with the Saudi government to find the perpetrators, to find not just those who carried out the attack, but those who planned this attack. Al Qaeda is obviously still operative. It has been hurt. There's no doubt that pulling out important field generals like Khalid Sheik Mohammed and Abu Zubaida and others hurts the organization. But we've always known that they were still capable of striking, and we've got a lot of work to do, and we'll continue to do that.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: In the second row.

;;;;;; Q Dobriav Kasavic (ph), Belgrade Daily -- (inaudible) -- on the Balkans. Given the fact that there is a presence, U.S. and NATO presence in Serbia and Montenegro and that country is not part of any structures like Partnership for Peace, how do you see prospects for that to happen?

And also, how do you see overall engagement -- U.S. engagement in the Balkans?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: In the Balkans. Well, first of all, the Balkans is in many ways the beginning of a success story. Let me put it that way. If you look at where we were several years ago in the Balkans, we have seen the coming of democratic states; we have -- the violence has stopped; there is no longer civil war, and the civil presence is beginning to make some difference in the lives of the people. But there is an awful lot of work still to be done, particularly on the economic reconstruction. And I was reading some material the other day about the need to really intensify the economic reconstruction in these places, because people are still without work. And you want people to have hope, and on the basis of that hope, then to commit to a peaceful future.

;;;;;; And so, there's still a lot of work to be done.

;;;;;; I would not despair that the Balkans are not yet a part of the structures that Europe has. I'm sure that they will be in time. I think that there have been contact groups that have been very effective in making certain that there are channels of communication about security and other issues. I expect that through NATO -- the fact that there are new NATO members who make their homes in the Balkans will make a difference to the Balkans' contact and proximity to NATO. And eventually, all of these countries should recognize that President Bush's Warsaw dream that all democratic states should expect that NATO would welcome them, that that is something to aspire to. But it is an aspiration that has to be satisfied through actually making changes on the ground.

;;;;;; And so, what I would say to countries like Macedonia is that not yet; however, that does not mean not ever. And if the hard work is done of reform in the way that countries like Slovenia and Slovakia, the Baltic states that have just come into NATO, took on that mantle and did the hard work -- they're now members of NATO; NATO is an open organization -- and when those countries are ready, I'm sure NATO will be ready for them.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: (Off mike.)

;;;;;; Q Samir Nader (ph) -- (affiliation inaudible). President Assad of Syria said in an interview in the Washington Post last Sunday that he is not willing to withdraw Syrian troops from Lebanon until the achieving of a comprehensive peace in the Middle East. Is this acceptable to the U.S.?

;;;;;; MS. RICE: I think this is something that we should not think of as a sequence, you know. It is important that Syria be willing and ready to end its occupation of Lebanon.

;;;;;; The Middle East peace, if I can use the question as an opportunity to talk a little bit about that -- we do have a tremendous opportunity now. We have an opportunity thanks to the victory of the coalition forces in Iraq, which removed one of the really terrible tyrants and one of the destabilizing forces in the Middle East. We have an opportunity because there is a new Palestinian leadership emerging that will, we hope, be dedicated to rolling back terrorist organizations and recognizing that a Palestinian state can never be founded on a foundation of terror, but only on a foundation of democracy and peace.

;;;;;; And the president is intending to seize this opportunity to push the process forward. We've published the roadmap. We are getting comments from the parties. It's a good thing to get comments from the parties because ultimately the parties have to own the roadmap and have to implement it. But we -- we don't want to spend time negotiating it, we really want to get people moving forward. But in that context we would hope that Syria would recognize that it is Syria's responsibility to become a contributing power to peace rather than one that detracts from peace by its position in Lebanon and by what it does in the support of terror.

;;;;;; Q (Off mike)

;;;;;; MODERATOR: (Off mike) -- in the front, please?

;;;;;; Q My name is Andrei Sitov. I am with the Russian News Agency TASS. Thank you, Dr. Rice, thank you, WFPC, for this opportunity. Obviously, the question about Russia's upcoming summit in St. Petersburg. Will this be strictly fence mending after Iraq, or do you expect to move forward on a positive agenda? What specifically would you have in mind? And do you expect any high level contacts before the summit and after the -- Secretary Powell's visit to Moscow? Thank you.

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Thank you. Well, of course, we've already had a number of contacts. I was in Moscow, Secretary Powell is now in Moscow, the presidents have talked on the telephone, and I'm sure that they will again, and there may be other high level contacts as well.

;;;;;; The -- St. Petersburg will be yet another opportunity to move the relationship forward. Now, it's true that we don't have that much time in St. Petersburg. We are principally there to celebrate the glorious 300th anniversary of St. Petersburg, and we all look very much forward to that, especially I as a Russian specialist. To be at the 300th anniversary of St. Petersburg is going to be like a dream. So that's the primary reason that we will be there. But we will also advance the agenda, I am quite certain of it. I might note that the Moscow Treaty I believe was ratified by the Duma today. It was ratified a little over a month ago by the American Senate. So we are moving the relationship forward. We continue to work hard in the war on terrorism and to have very fruitful cooperation there.

;;;;;; We have common security problems. And yes, we had difficulties over Iraq. It's unfortunate. But I'm hopeful that the Russian government, as I said about the Security Council, is now ready to move forward in a way that helps to do what we need to do for the Iraq people.

;;;;;; That's really the key. We all owe it now to the Iraqi people to get a U.N. Security Council resolution that is in their interest. And I have to say that the atmosphere in New York thus far, and the atmosphere in capitals as we've discussed the resolution, has been quite good. It doesn't mean that there won't be continued discussions, but the atmosphere has been good.

;;;;;; And so we look forward to St. Petersburg. We expect it to, indeed, advance the agenda. And the U.S.-Russian strategic partnership we believe is on track.

;;;;;; Thank you very much.

;;;;;; MODERATOR: Thank you very much.

;;;;;; MS. RICE: Thank you. Thank you very much.

END.

Roll Call - EDITORIAL

'Fresh Start?' Nah!

14 May 2003

It would be great if, as President Bush recommended last week, Republicans and Democrats made a "fresh start" on the issue of judicial nominations. Unfortunately, his call for new procedures for nominating and confirming federal judges came on what Republicans were calling "Obstruction Day," and his Rose Garden remarks clearly were designed to put pressure on Democrats who are filibustering two of his appellate court nominees. For these, and other reasons, the chance of a "fresh start" is zero.

The blame for the current impasse rests more heavily on Democrats than on Republicans. It's the Democrats who have escalated the judicial war by making it party policy to filibuster nominations they oppose. So far, they've used the tactic against two Bush selections, Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen, but they've indicated they may do so against two more, Carolyn Kuhl and Charles Pickering. Moreover, they defend their right to do so, indicating that what once was regarded as an extraordinary step now will be regular policy.

There's no question that Republicans also bear a share of the blame for politicizing the judicial nomination process. They blocked 60 Clinton nominees by denying them hearings in the Judiciary Committee or by placing "holds" on them to prevent a floor vote. In two cases, some Republicans tried to filibuster but lost cloture votes. Bush, if he were truly interested in making peace in the Senate, could have covered this history in more than one sentence of his Rose Garden statement.

Part of what Bush has proposed to do about what he called "a crisis in the Senate" and "a crisis in our judiciary" makes some sense: Judges planning to retire would give a year's notice, the president would nominate a successor within 180 days and the Senate would process the nomination within another 180 days. However, other procedural reforms being put forward - mainly by Republicans - make no sense in the present environment.

Some GOP Senators want to sue the Senate on the grounds that filibustering nominees is an unconstitutional imposition of a "super-majority" requirement. The courts will never accept the case. Republicans wisely dropped the so-called "nuclear" option of changing Senate rules on the filibuster question not by the two- thirds vote called for in the rules, but by a majority vote on a ruling from the Parliamentarian. That would have led to total chaos, with Democrats blocking action on any legislation. Republicans now are pushing a third option - a rules change allowing the number of votes required to end a filibuster to fall from 60 to 51 on a fourth cloture vote.

The 60-vote requirement for cloture is not sacrosanct. It was adopted in 1949 to replace a two-thirds requirement. But in the present Senate atmosphere, no rules change will be passed. So, this crisis will continue. It's going to take a decisive election to break it - or a genuine agreement between the parties to make a "fresh start."

N.Ky. lawyers pushing for Bush's federal bench picks

By Patrick Crowley

Yes, those were two Northern Kentucky lawyers hanging out with President Bush Friday in the White House Rose Garden.

Fort Mitchell's Rick Robinson and Jeff Landen of Edgewood - both partners with Graydon Head & Ritchey - were in Washington as part of an effort to pressure Senate Democrats into voting on Bush's 11 nominees for the federal bench.

"Because of the Senate's failure to hold timely votes, the number of judicial vacancies has become unacceptably high," Bush said in a statement released by the White House. "When the federal courts are understaffed, they cannot act in a timely manner to resolve disputes that affect the lives and liberties of Americans."

Robinson and Landen, both active in local GOP politics, are members of a group called Progress for America, which supports the president's agenda.

"We've been involved with the battle to try and get the Senate to confirm appellate court judges, in particular the 6th Circuit (Court of Appeals in Cincinnati)," Robinson said. "The Rose Garden event was a part of that effort, and it was great, very exciting."

Robinson attended two Rose Garden ceremonies while working in the early 1990s as legislative director for then-U.S. Rep. Jim Bunning, the Southgate Republican elected to the Senate in 1998.

Both of those events were sports-related - one to honor the 1990 Cincinnati Reds World Series team, the other when the White House honored baseball legends Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio.

"I've been to Rose Garden ceremonies before, but this was the first time I was there for a public policy speech," he said. "It was nice to see the president really tee up the issue because I really think this is one of the most important policy and constitutional battles of our time.

"It's the legislative branch holding up the judicial branch. What the Senate Democrats are doing is unconscionable."

Landen has visited the White House, but Friday was his first Rose Garden event.

"It was fascinating," he said. "It was obviously very interesting to be in the Rose Garden, but it was also exciting to see the president and hear what he said about getting his judicial nominations confirmed. Justice delayed is justice denied, and in this case justice is being denied."

The left-leaning People for the American Way called Bush's comments "Orwellian doublespeak."

"First, (Bush) claims that there is a judicial vacancy crisis when vacancies are actually at their lowest level in 13 years," Ralph G. Neas, the president of the organization, said in a statement.

"Second, he claims that the Senate has been obstructionist when it has confirmed more than 120 judges since July 2001 and has only filibustered two. The opportunity for senators to engage in unlimited debate on important national issues and nominations has often served the nation well."

Later in the day, Robinson and Landen were invited to watch Bush leave the White House lawn via Marine One, the presidential helicopter - which is a huge invite among the Washington power crowd.

Trey rakes it in. Lost in all of the fund-raising stories about gubernatorial and congressional candidates was an item about Trey Grayson, the Park Hills Republican and lawyer running unopposed in the GOP primary for secretary of state.

Grayson has raised more than $100,000, a big take for a first-time candidate running statewide.

He still trails Democratic front-runner Russ Maple, who has raised more than $300,000. But Maple has a contested primary and has had to spend, while Grayson has been able to hit the fund-raising circuit.

Grayson also gets a boost from his Democrat dad, Merwin Grayson, a retired banker and former University of Kentucky trustee who has connections all across the state. Look for Trey to raise a big wad of dough for the fall race.

Hunter not in the hunt. Hunter Bates, the former aide to Kentucky U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell, won't be running for Congress in the 4th District next year.

Bates, an Oldham County Republican, has briefly flirted with running for the seat now held by Boone County Democrat Ken Lucas. But when Northern Kentucky Republicans got miffed that McConnell was pushing his protempty setgempty set for the race, Bates backed off and jumped on the gubernatorial ticket of Ernie Fletcherof Lexington.

That, of course, ended badly when a state court ruled that Bates did not qualify for the ballot because he did not meet residency requirements to run for state office.

Although Bates and others maintained he would have prevailed on appeal, Bates left the ticket to spare Fletcher the political grief.

There had been speculation that Bates would run for the congressional seat. But during last week's Kentucky Derby, Bates said he has no plans to seek the office.

David/Brett:

The Offices of Cabinet Affairs, Presidential Personnel, Intergovernmental Affairs, Political Affairs, and the Council for Excellence in Government are together sponsoring a two-day conference entitled "Regional Appointees: Challenges and Opportunities," scheduled for May 19-20, 2003 in Washington, DC.

This conference will be the first of its kind during this Administration and will include regional appointees from several Cabinet and sub-Cabinet agencies such as Education, Interior, Labor, EPA, HHS, FEMA,;GSA, HUD and SBA. It will be held at;the nearby Mayflower Hotel, with several sessions taking place;in Room 450 EEOB.

Given your office's stake in such an event, we want to involve you in the conference's program workshops and plenary sessions. In working with the agencies, we have identified roughly 85 regional political appointees that we;have invited to attend the conference.;;Other local agency personnel, including inter-governmental affairs staff, will also be invited.

The purpose of the conference is to better engage our regional appointees as representatives of the President around the country and to give them a chance to meet and hear from senior White House officials and agency leaders. Sessions will focus on a variety of vital issues including:

ú Management Results / President's Management Team

ú Building Support for the President's Agenda

ú Freedom Corps / Faith-Based Initiatives

ú Hatch Act / Ethics

ú Policy Perspectives

ú Homeland Security

ú Working Together for Greater Regional Impact

ú Legislative Update

ú Foreign Policy Update

We have tentatively scheduled your;presentation for Tuesday afternoon, May 20 in Room 450 EEOB (exact time is TBD).; We would hope you could;discuss your insights on;the Hatch Act and ethics in government.;;We would also hope you could join us for a reception to be held later that evening.

We would greatly appreciate your participation, and I know that the Regional Appointees would appreciate hearing from you and will be happy to take your perspectives back with them to their respective regions. Please;feel free to contact me should you have additional questions or you may have your assistant contact Christie Parell (6-2343); to confirm your;availability.;

Many thanks in advance,

Brian Montgomery

Sen. Ron Wyden announced his support for Mosman, too.
The backing in both quarters testifies to the legal talent and judicial current U.S. attorney for Oregon. But the bipartisan support also shows Mosman has allayed concerns about his positions regarding gays or privacy rights.

This probably won't stop questions still being raised, judicial politics being what they are. But anyone who had such questions -- and we initially did -- couldn't help but be assured by Mosman's answers about his work as a Supreme Court clerk for Justice Lewis Powell 17 years ago. All this should be an issue of the past -- and Powell's past, not his clerk's.
As for the future, we have no doubt that now that justice has been done in

N.Ky. lawyers push Bush nominees

<mailto:pcrowley@enquirer.com>
Yes, those were two Northern Kentucky lawyers hanging out with President Bush Friday in the White House Rose Garden.

Fort Mitchell's Rick Robinson and Jeff Landen of Edgewood - both partners with Graydon Head & Ritchey - were in Washington as part of an effort to pressure Senate Democrats into voting on Bush's 11 nominees for the federal bench.

"Because of the Senate's failure to hold timely votes, the number of judicial vacancies has become unacceptably high," Bush said in a statement released by the White House. "When the federal courts are understaffed, they cannot act in a timely manner to resolve disputes that affect the lives and liberties of Americans."

Robinson and Landen, both active in local GOP politics, are members of a group called Progress for America, which supports the president's agenda.

"We've been involved with the battle to try and get the Senate to confirm appellate court judges, in particular the 6th Circuit (Court of Appeals in Cincinnati)," Robinson said. "The Rose Garden event was a part of that effort, and it was great, very exciting."

Robinson attended two Rose Garden ceremonies while working in the early 1990s as legislative director for then-U.S. Rep. Jim Bunning, the Southgate Republican elected to the Senate in 1998.

Both of those events were sports-related - one to honor the 1990 Cincinnati Reds World Series team, the other when the White House honored baseball legends Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio.

"I've been to Rose Garden ceremonies before, but this was the first time I was there for a public policy speech," he said. "It was nice to see the president really tee up the issue ... because I really think this is one of the most important policy and constitutional battles of our time.

"It's the legislative branch holding up the judicial branch. What the Senate Democrats are doing is unconscionable."

Landen has visited the White House, but Friday was his first Rose Garden event.

"It was fascinating," he said. "It was obviously very interesting to be in the Rose Garden, but it was also exciting to see the president and hear what he said about getting his judicial nominations confirmed. Justice delayed is justice denied, and in this case justice is being denied."

The left-leaning People for the American Way called Bush's comments "Orwellian doublespeak."

"First, (Bush) claims that there is a judicial vacancy crisis when vacancies are actually at their lowest level in 13 years," Ralph G. Neas, the president of the organization, said in a statement.

"Second, he claims that the Senate has been obstructionist when it has confirmed more than 120 judges since July 2001 and has only filibustered two. The opportunity for senators to engage in unlimited debate on important national issues and nominations has often served the nation well."

Later in the day, Robinson and Landen were invited to watch Bush leave the White House lawn via Marine One, the presidential helicopter - which is a huge invite among the Washington power crowd.

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

JUDICIAL WATCH, INC. 501 School Street, S.W., Suite 500 Washington, DC 20024, Plaintiff, v. THE UNITED STATES SENATE The Capitol Building Washington, DC 20510, and EMILY REYNOLDS, in her official capacity as SECRETARY OF THE UNITED STATES SENATE, The Capitol Building Washington, DC 20510, and WILLIAM H. PICKLE, in his official capacity as SERGEANT AT ARMS OF THE U.S. SENATE, The Capitol Building Washington, DC 20510, Defendants.	)	Civil Action No.:

COMPLAINT FOR DECLARATORY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Plaintiff, Judicial Watch, Inc., hereby sues the United States Senate, the Secretary of the United States Senate and the Sergeant at Arms of the United States for declaratory and injunctive relief, and as grounds therefor alleges as follows:

REV_00118435

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

1. The Court has jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331, as this action arises under the United States Constitution.

2. Venue is proper in this district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1391(b) and (e).

PARTIES

3. Judicial Watch, Inc. is a non-profit educational foundation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia and having its principal place of business at 501 School Street, S.W., Suite 725, Washington, DC 20024.

4. Defendant United States Senate is one of two legislative chambers that comprise the United States Congress and, as such, is an integral part of the United States Government. The United States Senate has its principal place of business at The Capitol in Washington, DC. The United States Senate is required by the United States Constitution to give its advice and consent to the President of the United States on the appointment of judges to the Courts of the United States.

5. Defendant Emily Reynolds is the Secretary of the United States Senate. Ms. Reynold's principal place of business is at The Capitol in Washington, DC. She is being sued in her official capacity. The duties and responsibilities of the Secretary of the United States Senate include legislative, financial and administrative functions.

6. Defendant William H. Pickle is the Sergeant at Arms of the United States Senate. Mr. Pickle's principal place of business is at The Capitol in Washington, DC. He is being sued in his official capacity. The Sergeant at Arms of the United States Senate serves as the executive officer of the Senate for enforcement of all Senate Rules.

REV_00118436

COUNT I

5. Judicial Watch, Inc. is a non-profit, tax-exempt educational foundation organized to increase public understanding of the operations of government and to restore ethics and morality to our nation's public life. Judicial Watch, Inc. utilizes the civil litigation process to obtain and disseminate information to the public in furtherance of its educational mission.

6. Judicial Watch, Inc. also utilizes the civil litigation process as a means of exercising its First Amendment rights. Judicial Watch, Inc. prosecutes lawsuit, on its own behalf and on behalf of clients, to highlight and inform the public about issues Judicial Watch, Inc. believes are of public importance and to hold public officials accountable.

7. Since its inception in 1994, Judicial Watch, Inc. has filed more than one hundred lawsuits in state and federal courts across the country in furtherance of its educational mission. Judicial Watch, Inc. thus has a concrete and particularized interest in the timely and efficient functioning of the judiciary, including the appointment of the full number of judges provided for by 28 U.S.C. § 44.

8. Headquartered in Washington, DC, Judicial Watch, Inc. files the majority of its lawsuits in federal court in the District of Columbia. It currently has approximately forty-five (45) lawsuits pending in the federal courts of the District of Columbia, including at least eight matters pending before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit ("D.C. Circuit"). It also has had a substantial number of matters pending before the D.C. Circuit in the past.

9. On information and belief, Judicial Watch, Inc. is second only to the United States Government as the entity with the largest number of cases pending before the federal courts of the District of Columbia.

10. Judicial Watch, Inc. also has a significant number of lawsuits pending in federal courts across the United States, including Stephens v. Haliburton, No. 3-02CV1442-L, pending in the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas, and Wilt v. Fastow, No. H-02-0576, pending in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas. Both district courts are within the jurisdiction of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit ("Fifth Circuit").

11. The federal courts of the United States currently are experiencing a significant number of vacancies in federal judgeships. On or about November 7, 2002, President George W. Bush warned that nine percent (9%) of all federal judgeships were vacant and that seventeen percent (17%) of federal appellate court judgeships were vacant. See Edwin Chen and Henry Weinstein, "Liberals Bracing for Quick Judicial Action by Bush," The Los Angeles Times, November 7, 2002.

12. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist also commented on the significant number of vacancies in the federal courts and their impact on the federal court system in his 2002 Year-End Report on the Federal Judiciary:

> The 2002 Year-End Report on the Federal Judiciary is my 17th. As I look back on these reports, I am struck by the number of issues that seem regularly to crop up, or perhaps never go away -- judicial vacancies, the need for additional judgeships, judges' salaries, judicial appropriations . . . I spoke to delays in the confirmation process in my Year-End Report in 1997 and again last year. As I have noted in my previous reports, to continue functioning effectively and efficiently, our federal courts must be appropriately staffed. This means that judicial vacancies must be filled in a timely manner with well-qualified candidates. We appreciate the fact that the Senate confirmed 100 judges during the 107th Congress. Yet when the Senate adjourned, there were still 60 vacancies and 31 nominations pending.

13. In addition, according to the 2002 Annual Report of Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, appellate filings remained at a record level in 2002, increasing to 57,555 appellate filings that year and breaking a prior record of 57,464 appellate filings in 2001. "Judicial vacancies continue to be a serious concern," according to the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts.

14. As recently as May 9, 2003, President Bush described the vacancies in federal judgeships as a "crisis in our judiciary," as "vacancies on the bench and overcrowded court dockets are causing delays for citizens seeking justice." See Charles Hurt, Judicial Filibuster Rule Change Faces High Hurdle in Senate," The Washington Times, May 10, 2003.

15. Judicial Watch, Inc. has experienced substantial delays in the disposition of matters pending before the federal courts, and before the D.C. Circuit in particular. In 2002, the median time necessary to complete an appeal in the federal system, measured from the filing of a notice of appeal to final disposition, was 10.7 months. However, appeals to the D.C. Circuit in which Judicial Watch, Inc. has been involved during this same time period have taken much longer, as the following examples of Judicial Watch, Inc. cases demonstrate:

a. Dolly Kyle Browning v. William Jefferson Clinton, Appeal No. 01-5050 (D.C. Cir.): notice of appeal filed on or about February 16, 2001; appeal concluded on or about August 1, 2002, a period of approximately 17.5 months.

b. W.L. Meng v. Bernard L. Schwartz, Appeal No. 01-5275 (D.C. Cir.): notice of appeal filed on or about August 7, 2001; appeal concluded on or about December 23, 2002, a period of approximately 17 months;

c. Johnny Chung v. U.S. Department of Justice, Appeal No. 01-5365 (D.C. Cir.): notice of appeal filed on or about October 11, 2001; no ruling to date, despite matter being pending for approximately 18 months;

d. United We Stand America v. Internal Revenue Service, Appeal No. 02-5266 (D.C. Cir.): notice of appeal filed on or about August 26, 2002; no oral argument or ruling to date, despite matter being pending for approximately 8 months;

e. In re Richard B. Cheney, Vice President of the United States, Appeal No. 02-5354 (D.C. Cir.); petition for writ of mandamus filed by Vice President Cheney on or about November 7, 2002; no ruling issued to date despite matter being pending for approximately 6 months; and

f. Sonya G. Stewart v. Donald Evans, Appeal No. 02-5391 (D.C. Cir.): notice of appeal filed on or about December 2, 2002; no briefing schedule issued to date, despite matter being pending for more than 5 months.

16. The D.C. Circuit is experiencing a particularly severe shortage of judges. One-third of the D.C. Circuit's judgeships remain vacant. Of the twelve (12) judgeships allotted to the D.C. Circuit (see 28 U.S.C. § 44), only eight (8) of these positions are occupied by active, full-time judges. Two (2) of the seventeen (17) judges allotted to the Fifth Circuit are vacant. See 28 U.S.C. § 44.

17. The U.S. Congress has plainly expressed its intent that the timely and efficient administration of justice in the D.C. Circuit requires twelve (12) judges be appointed to that court, having set forth its intent in 28 U.S.C. § 44. The U.S. Congress also has plainly expressed its intent that the timely and efficient administration of justice in the Fifth Circuit requires seventeen (17) judges be appointed to that court, again having set forth its intent in 28 U.S.C. § 44. However, Congress's intent is being unconstitutionally thwarted, to Judicial Watch, Inc.'s substantial detriment, by a minority of U.S. Senators attempting to block President Bush's judicial nominees. 18. On or about May 9, 2001, President Bush nominated former Assistant Solicitor General Miguel Estrada and Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla R. Owen to vacant judgeships on the D.C. Circuit and the Fifth Circuit, respectively.

19. The judgeship to which President Bush nominated former Assistant Solicitor General Estrada has been vacant since approximately November 16, 1999, when former Circuit Judge Patricia M. Wald retired. The judgeship to which President Bush nominated Justice Owen has been vacant since approximately January 23, 1997, when Circuit Judge William L. Garwood took on senior status.

20. Both former Assistant Solicitor General Estrada and Justice Owen were rated "well qualified" by the American Bar Association.

REV_00118440

21. Nonetheless, the U.S. Senate failed to confirm both nominees. The Senate Judiciary Committee rejected Justice Owen's nomination in 2002, and the U.S. Senate as a whole failed to vote on the merits of former Assistant Solicitor General Estrada's nomination at any point during that year.

22. On or about January 7, 2003, President Bush renominated Justice Owen. Assistant Solicitor General Estrada's nomination remains pending before the U.S. Senate by reason of the Senate's failure to vote on the merits of the nomination.

23. Article II, Section 2 of the U.S. Constitution requires a simple majority of only fifty-one (51) votes for the U.S. Senate to confirm a judicial nominee.

24. Based upon published reports, at least a simple majority of fifty-one (51) U.S. senators intend to vote in favor of the Estrada and Owen nominations.

25. However, a minority of U.S. senators have employed and are continuing to employ Senate rules and procedures to prevent the U.S. Senate from confirming former Assistant Solicitor General Estrada and Justice Owen to federal judgeships. Specifically, these senators have used and are continuing to use Senate Rule XXII to prevent Estrada's and Owen's confirmations. The use of Senate Rule XXII to block judicial nominees is highly unusual, if not historically unprecedented.

26. Rule XXII requires a supermajority of sixty (60) votes to end debate on a topic, a process known as "cloture." By refusing to end debate on the two nominations, a minority of between thirty-nine (39) and forty-five (45) senators have prevented and are continuing to prevent former Assistant Solicitor General Estrada and Justice Owen from being confirmed.

27. The application of Rule XXII to these nominations thus imposes an additional, unconstitutional requirement that judicial nominees be confirmed by a supermajority of sixty (60) votes rather than the simple majority of fifty-one (51) votes required by Article II, Section 2 of the United States Constitution.

28. As recently as May 8, 2003, forty-three (43) senators voted against cloture on the Estrada nomination and forty-five (45) senators voted against cloture on the Owen nomination.

29. Importantly, Senate Rule XXII was amended in 1959 to require an even larger supermajority of sixty-seven (67) votes for cloture on any motion to amend the Senate Rules. In addition, Senate Rule V preserves all Senate Rules from one session to the next. Consequently, the current session of the U.S. Senate can only amend Senate Rule XXII by a two-thirds supermajority.

30. Given that thirty-nine (39) to forty-five (45) U.S. senators have voted against cloture on the Estrada and Owen nominations, it is extremely unlikely that any cloture vote on a motion to amend the sixty (60) vote requirement of Senate Rule XXII would ever succeed. Senate Rules XXII and V thus unconstitutionally deprive the current session of the U.S. Senate of the same jurisdiction and powers to establish rules governing its processes and procedures that its predecessor session had in 1959, when it enacted the two-thirds supermajority requirement for ending debate on motions to amend the rules.

31. Judicial Watch, Inc. has suffered and is continuing to suffer significant, irreparable harm by reason of the unconstitutional application of Senate Rule XXII and Senate Rule V to the Estrada and Owen nominations. But for the efforts of a minority of U.S. senators to use Senate Rules XXII and V to prevent the confirmation of former Assistant Solicitor General Estrada and Justice Owen to federal judgeships, these well-qualified judicial nominees would have been confirmed, and will be confirmed, for appointments to the D.C. Circuit and Fifth Circuit, respectively, and their confirmations would have lessened, and will lessen, the high vacancy rates and resulting significant and prejudicial delays experienced by Judicial Watch, Inc. in litigating in the federal courts. The application of Senate Rule XXII and Senate Rule V to the Estrada and Owen nominations has thus impaired, and is continuing to impair, both Judicial Watch, Inc.'s public interest mission and the exercise of its First Amendment Rights.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff Judicial Watch, Inc. respectfully requests that the Court enter judgment against Defendants:

(1) declaring that Senate Rules XXII and V are unconstitutional as applied to judicial nominees, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201;

(2) enjoining Defendants from continuing to prevent votes on the nominations of former Assistant Solicitor General Estrada and Justice Owen; and

(3) granting any and all other relief the Court deems just and proper.

Is there anyone we can get to write an op-ed for the P-I to counter this column by Joel Connelly.....

In the Northwest: Bush working to tilt federal bench toward the right

By JOEL CONNELLY

SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER COLUMNIST

A faded button carrying the two-word slogan "FREE WILLY" sits in my dusty collection of campaign memorabilia. It has nothing to do with the movie killer whale of the same name.

The "Willy" here mentioned is William Fletcher, a University of California law professor whose nomination to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals by President Clinton was kept in limbo for 2 1/2 years by Senate Republicans.

The example of Fletcher, and two long-delayed 9th Circuit nominees out of Seattle, came to mind last week as cable-TV news channels gave President Bush time to fulminate over Senate Democrats' decision to block two of his most controversial appellate court nominees.

Delays in confirming nominees Priscilla Owen and Miguel Estrada were a "disgrace," Bush intoned. He decried "obstructionist tactics" that "threaten judicial independence."

What is this man so angry about? After all, the Senate has confirmed more than 120 of his judicial nominees. The vacancy rate in the federal court system stands at just 5.7 percent, the lowest in 11 years.

By contrast, just a few years back, as many as 10 of the 28 judgeships on the 9th Circuit went vacant as the GOP-controlled Senate held up a Democratic president's nominations.

The court, with jurisdiction over nine Western states, had a backlog of more than 600 cases.

Could be that Bush is beholden to his political guru. White House political strategist Karl Rove was paid more than $250,000 in 1994 to oversee Owen's campaign for a seat on the Texas Supreme Court.

Or the president could be displaying stage anger.

Talking up conservative judges is a tried-and-true tactic to get blood and saliva flowing in the right wing of the Republican Party: These elephants never forget and still feel mightily wronged by the Supreme Court confirmation battles of Robert Bork and Clarence Thomas.

The real reason, though, could be a characteristic piece of (to use Rove's joke nickname) Bush "strategery." The more this president demands, the more insistent he is, the more he gets.

The ordinary citizen ought to tune in to this battle. Basic rights are at stake, from an injured consumer's ability to haul corporations into court, to a citizen's right to due process, to obtaining information from an intensely secretive administration in our capital.

On rare occasions when it is covered by our supine and superficial national media, the fight over judicial nominations is depicted as part of the Washington, D.C., "power game" and an example of "hardball."

So it was a half-dozen years back: GOP Sen. Slade Gorton wanted a voice in filling vacancies to the local federal bench. He played it rough with the Clinton administration, and eventually won a judicial screening committee, its members named equally by Gorton and Democratic Sen. Patty Murray.

The held-up Clinton appointees were anything but ideologues. Margaret McKeown and Ron Gould were partners in the state's largest law firm. Gould was a former president of the Washington State Bar Association. McKeown was an intellectual-property specialist who spent much of her time arguing cases for Nintendo and The Boeing Co.

Fletcher, too, was eventually confirmed to the 9th Circuit, after Republicans insisted that his mother first retire from her seat on the court.

The Bush administration, by contrast, seems out to recast the federal judiciary in an ideological mold with judges picked for their records in upholding state power and overruling corporate accountability. It is nominating younger judges -- the 73-year-old Slade Gorton can't get himself named to the 9th Circuit -- so the imprint will be lasting.

We've yet to see it here. Washington has an outstanding federal bench. Elsewhere, however, conservative judicial activism is very much in vogue.

One of Bush's earliest appointments to the federal bench in Washington, D.C., went to a one-time aide to Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr: The intense Starr subordinate once wanted to hit the White House with sweeping subpoenas to search for Hillary Clinton's old law-firm records.

With his side in power, the new judge ruled that Vice President Dick Cheney was under no obligation to disclose lists of lobbyists and executives who met at the White House with Cheney's energy task force.

The conservative media celebrate Miguel Estrada as a Honduran emigre who rose by his bootstraps. Perhaps so, but he has declined to answer senators' questions on his legal views.

The Bush administration refuses to provide documents on Estrada's legal work, which reportedly show views as far to the right as those of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia.

On a Republican-run Texas Supreme Court, Owen not infrequently dissented against fellow justices, including Alberto Gonzales, now Bush's White House counsel. She delivered a series of opinions advocating restriction of abortion.

It is once life begins, however, that Owen's rulings deserve closest scrutiny.

She took 16 months to write an opinion that reversed a $30 million damage award to the family of a quadriplegic teenager. The family had argued that negligent seat-belt construction caused his head to be severed from his spine.

In this case, Ford Motor Co. v. Miles, Owen based her decision to order a new trial on a finding of improper venue. The issue of where the case was brought was neither raised nor argued by either side on appeal.

The boy, Willie Searcy, died while awaiting his new trial.

In the legal world of Priscilla Owen, the right to life may begin at conception. It seems, however, to end at birth.

- For several years, Dave Campbell has represented Honeywell in dealings with ADEQ concerning Honeywell's airport facility.

- In 1999, Honeywell and ADEQ signed an Administrative Order on Consent ("AOC") that called for Honeywell to produce a research report describing historical operations and potential contamination sources at the airport facility.

- When Honeywell produced the report to ADEQ in December of 1999, it withheld two categories of information – laboratory analysis of subsurface fuel and internal sump samples – as attorney work product under State v. Ybarra, 161 Ariz. 188, 777 P.2d 686 (1989).

- Honeywell informed ADEQ that the report did not include work product and cited the Ybarra case.

- Eight months after the research report was submitted, Honeywell voluntarily disclosed the subsurface fuel analysis to ADEQ after the analysis had been used by Honeywell's expert witnesses in litigation (and therefore no longer qualified as confidential work product).

- Ten months after the research report was submitted, Honeywell disclosed the internal sump analysis when ADEQ requested that Honeywell disclose all lab analysis.

- ADEQ has taken the position that Honeywell violated the AOC by withholding the fuel analysis and sump samples as work product. Honeywell disagrees.

- While the fuel analysis was being withheld as work product, ADEQ requested that Honeywell produce a portion of the analysis. Honeywell produced the requested portion and retained the rest as work product. ADEQ has taken the position that Honeywell should have disclosed all of the analysis and not retained a portion as work product. Honeywell disagrees.

- If ADEQ and Honeywell are unable to resolve their differences by agreement, ADEQ has stated that it will bring a civil penalty action against Honeywell for violating the AOC by withholding the work product and for other civil penalties unrelated to the work product issue.

SECTION: ARKANSAS; Pg. 14

LENGTH: 613 words

HEADLINE: EDITORIALS : How to bork a nominee Leon Holmes gets the treatment

BODY:
BORK IS no longer a proper noun in Washington, as in Judge Robert Bork, but a verb. It means to launch a vicious, irrelevant, roundhouse campaign against a judicial nominee, throwing in everything, including a couple of kitchen sinks.

The term stems from the treatment of Judge Bork when he was nominated to the Supreme Court. Not satisfied with relevant criticisms, the judge's more partisan critics reached back to criticize everything he'd said or done from approximately the age of three, and quite a few things he hadn't.

That borking has become a Washington tradition by now-indeed, an addiction-is illustrated by the sharp but impressively mean-spirited editorial we reprint on today's page from the Washington Post. It's a textbook example of borking; students in political science classes should cut it out and save it, like a ripe specimen of that low art.

Notice that, unable to find anything contemporary to criticize about Little Rock's Leon Holmes-an outstanding scholar, advocate and thinker who has just been nominated to the federal bench-the Posthas had to go back years and even decades to dig up any utterance it could use against him, including one that went back to 1980-yes, 1980-and for which he apologized as soon as it was brought to his attention.

The other citation-a quote from Scripture in an article co-written with his wife in April of 1997-is so wrenched out of context that you might never guess it was a philosophical rumination on the Book of Ephesians.

As any smear artist knows, there's no need to go into detail. Especially relevant detail. In this case the innocent reader would be left with no idea of what kind of nominee, or man, Leon Holmes really is. Which is the whole purpose of borking: to make the nominee look like the biggest, scariest menace that ever came down confirmation road. Instead, to quote an informal recommendation from a colleague, Leon Holmes is the kind of guy he'd be willing to shoot dice with over the phone.

The charge that Mr. Holmes is in favor of the subjugation of women would amuse anyone who's ever met Susan Holmes, his wife and co-author, or any of the women in the law for whom he has been mentor, role model, supporter and encourager.

But we're glad to see that the Post has not lost its talent for irony. Alas, in this case it's unintended irony.

For the Post accuses the president of radicalizing judicial nominations by his choice of Leon Holmes for the bench, when it is the one being radical, going back or decades to find words from a much younger Leon Holmes that fail to show the proper reverence for the politically correct gods of today.

In the process, the Post has ignored the legal acumen and philosophical learning that the mature Leon Holmes has demonstrated day after day, year after year, in his career and life. Forget all that; the Post is determined to crucify this nominee even if it has to use old, rusty nails. It takes a couple of stray quotes and equates them with the man's whole career. A neat trick, if a low one.

A confession: In recent years we've found ourselves growing soft on the Post's editorial page; on its good days it started to look like one of those old-fashioned liberal organs not beyond the reach of reason. Clearly we were mistaken.

When the chance to do a little borking came up, the Post has leaped at it. As if it couldn't help itself. Even if it means using low means to attain a purely ideological end. Which may be the worst thing about borking; it's habit-forming. Once it becomes ingrained in a paper's character, there's no telling when it will seep out again.

We are holding a White House briefing for folks attending the Legatus Pro-Life Pilgrimage in Washington D.C. from May 20 – 22, 2003 The briefing is an opportunity for this important group of lay Catholics to hear about Administration priorities.

Briefing Date: Thursday, May 22, 2003

Time: 9:00 a.m. – 11:00 a.m.

Location: EEOB Room 450

Invited Speakers:

Jay Lefkowitz Subject: Cloning Ban, Global AIDS (if applicable)

Karl Rove Subject: Update on the President

Elliott Abrams Subject: Iraq

Jim Towey Subject: Faith-based and Community Initiative

Brett Kavanaugh Subject: Judicial Nominations

Brian Reardon Subject: Economic Package

Background:

Legatus members are business leaders - men and women with varying interests and diverse talents who all share one overriding goal: to become better Catholics and, in turn, positively impact their business and personal lives.

Legatus currently has over 37 chapters throughout the United States serving close to 1500 members. Legatus members are typically Chairman, President, CEO, Controlling Owner, Managing Director, Managing Partner, or Executive Vice President's of businesses with at least 30 employees or ten employees with a one million-dollar payroll. The businesses must also achieve three million dollars annually or have a net value of ten million dollars.

Legatus is the Latin word for "ambassador". Their members don't typically wear their faith on their shirtsleeves. They spread the faith through good example, good deeds and high ethical standards.

An encounter between Pope John Paul II and Tom Monaghan in May 1987, served as the inspiration for Legatus. As former owner of Domino's Pizza and the Detroit Tigers baseball franchise, Tom valued his experience in the Young Presidents' Organization. Tom wanted to capture the YPO dynamic for Catholic CEOs and their spouses by combining business, faith and family in one package.

Legatus members are in Washington from May 20 through May 22, 2003 for their third annual Legatus Life Issues Pilgrimage. Legatus members are very active pro-life Catholics and will be hearing from speakers, Members of Congress, and prominent Washington-based pro-life leaders.

Secretary Martinez received the annual Ambassador of the Year award from Legatus in February 2001 at their annual convention held in Naples, Florida.

Attorney General Ashcroft was their keynote speaker for this event in 2001.

And a good puff piece too:

Michael Mosman: Years in court and now the court of public opinion

The Portland Oregonian

05/12/03

FRED LEESON

Since the judges were on vacation, the new U.S. Supreme Court law clerk wore a golf shirt the first day he bounded up the massive granite stairway.

A fellow clerk noticed "Belhaven," an Idaho golf course, embroidered on Michael Mosman's shirt.

"Belhaven," the clerk said. That's the name of my house.."

"Your house?" Mosman asked. "Where I come from houses have numbers.

That was Mosman's introduction to a world where many of the brightest East Coast law grads had already known one another for years, competing in prestigious prep schools, Ivy League law schools and judicial clerkships.

Mosman had grown up swimming in the Clearwater River, hiking in the Seven Devils Wilderness and playing baseball all day in his baseball-mad hometown, Lewiston, Idaho. College was Utah State University and Brigham Young Law School.

"I had never met anyone like them, and they had never met anyone like me," recalled Mosman, Oregon's U.S. attorney and nominee for a U.S. District Court judicial vacancy.

"Turned out we got along fine."

That's how things seem to turn for Mosman, 46. From the time he started reading Tarzan books aloud to his mother on the kitchen counter at age 4, he's been a voracious learner lurking behind a seemingly calm and low-key personality.

Mosman's comforting demeanor will get its severest test when the U.S. attorney faces Senate hearings on his nomination to a U.S. District Court seat. Confirmations have turned increasingly rancorous on Capitol Hill and some old comments by Mosman on such hot-button subjects as gay rights and abortion will attract scrutiny from Democrats wary of President Bush's appointees.

Eager for the courtroom

Mosman took little time making an impression on the Miller Nash law firm in Portland, where he started work in 1987 after his Supreme Court clerkship with Justice Lewis Powell Jr.

"He was a quick study," said Judy Vacura, who was a first-year associate in the next office." "Prominent attorneys vied for his time. You don't see that with first year associates. He was that good.

But in big firms, even brilliant young associates in big firms don't get to try many cases. After two years, Mosman found an opening in the U.S. attorney's office. He knew he'd find the emotional highs and lows of the courtroom.

"There's nothing like sitting there trying to look calm while your witness has just said something that sends your case down the toilet," he said.

"You're sweating through your suit, trying to look unruffled and knowing you have 20 seconds to ask a question that will save your case."

A case could be made that it was in Mosman's genes. His father, Roy Mosman, was a prosecuting attorney in Lewiston with a civil practice on the side and spent five years as a trial judge. In Roy's early years, he sold cars and worked as a physical therapist on the side to make ends meet.

Michael Mosman planned to be a marriage counselor. But by the time he'd completed his undergraduate psychology degree, he concluded that counseling it was more art than science. "I didn't feel I had much art within me." he said.

Having married his college sweetheart, Suzanne Hogan, after his sophomore year, Mosman needed to settle on a career. His thoughts drifted to law.

"I had seen the law through my father's career and others as an honorable career," he said. "I still think it's an honorable career. On average, I think lawyers pay more attention to honesty than most people because they have to confront it regularly with their clients.

Value of loving the job

Mosman looks the picture of professionalism as he strides about the Mark O. Hatfield U.S. Courthouse. Nary a razor-scut hair is out of place, hekkps his desktop shiny clean.

As a prosecutor, Mosman displayed an even-tempered, low-key style, eschewing the quick wit that relatives and co-workers attribute to him.

Defense lawyers who have appeared against him many times say they know little him personally. When defense g younger nominees with shorter track records to scrutinize.

"If there is a powerful voice against you, it will not be overridden by powerful voices in your favor," Jones said. "Nobody can make you a federal judge, but a lot of people can prevent it. The downside is you wind up picking people nobody knows anything about. "

As Mosman has learned, "It doesn't take much of a track record to create a firestorm. One bench memo can do it."

The memo, one he wrote during his Supreme Court year as a clerk for Powell involved a case that challenged a Georgia making sodomy a crime. Powell asked Mosman to study the impact of striking down the sodomy prohibition in relation to the murky area of constitutional privacy guarantees.

Mosman's memo argued against expanding privacy rights to include sodomy. Powell ultimately sided with that view in a controversial 5-4 decision.

Mosman doubts whether the 1986 memo affected Powell's thinking at all, but gay rights groups said they feared it reflected a personal anti-gay bias.

Like selling greeting cards as a kid to pay for a banana-seat bicycle or carrying out his pledge to date every high school cheerleader his senior year, Mosman faced the challenge with tempered determination.

He met privately with representatives of the state's largest gay-rights group, Basic Rights Oregon. "He came across as thoughtful, careful and a good listener," said Roey Thorpe, executive director.

Politically, Thorpe said it was riskier for Basic Rights to accept Mosman's nomination than to oppose it. But she said Mosman convinced her that he cares deeply about being seen as a person who is fair.

Abortion also could be a hot potato for Mosman because he once said he would "trim back" the Roe vs. Wade ruling. Abortion proponents are concerned that his legal views might be colored by his religious beliefs as a Mormon.

As a trial judge, Mosman says he'd have no problem following legal precedents, even those that differ with his religious views. "One of my strongest religious views is the important principle of separation of church and state," he said. "That is vital for the state, and it is vital for religion."

Mosman's ability to follow the law and to provide fair hearings has never been doubted by prominent local legal minds who have watched him. "He's a real class person," said Multnomah County District Attorney Michael Schrunk. "He"sr's genes. His father, Roy Mosman, definitely going to be an asset to the U.S. District Court."

Sid Lezak, a former U.S. attorney who still pays close attention to his former office, said he's seen no whiff of political partisanship in Mosman's office management that would suggest a hidden agenda as he heads to the bench.

"There's nothing in his background to indicate he would not be an excellent appointment to a federal judgeship," Lezak said.

No matter where Mosman goes next, he will always be grounded in Lewiston, says his mother, Barbara Mosman, who now resides in Moscow, Idaho. During a visit with his parents last year, she said their conversation turned to a childhood of swimming and hiking and baseball and a driveway full of kids shooting baskets.

She recalls him asking, "Mom, were the summers in Lewiston really endless?"

Asked and answered

The Portland Oregonian

05/14/03

T he Bush administration's nomination of Michael Mosman to a U.S. District Court seat shows that a measure of justice still remains in the increasingly contentious business of filling judicial vacancies. Not only did President Bush make the pick for the federal judgeship, but Democratic Sen. Ron Wyden announced his support for Mosman, too.

The backing in both quarters testifies to the legal talent and judicial temperament that people from Oregon to Washington, D.C., have seen in the current U.S. attorney for Oregon. But the bipartisan support also shows Mosman has allayed concerns about his positions regarding gays or privacy rights.

This probably won't stop questions still being raised, judicial politics being what they are. But anyone who had such questions -- and we initially did -- couldn't help but be assured by Mosman's answers about his work as a Supreme Court clerk for Justice Lewis Powell 17 years ago. All this should be an issue of the past -- and Powell's past, not his clerk's.

As for the future, we have no doubt that now that justice has been done in Mosman's case, he'll soon be dispensing it from the bench.

Kristi,

Tomorrow morning I will collect two email lists as we discussed for conference calls on Monday, that you might respond to with call in codes. This email is a preliminary notice just to lock in times for those few listed.

Monday 10:00 (30 Minutes) – inter-staff call
Monday 12:00 (45 minutes) – groups and communications call

If anyone has suggestions as to who should be on the second call, use tomorrow to recruit.

Thanks
Manny

Hi Kate! We are looking forward to Ken speaking at the Regional Appointees Conference on May 20th. Attached is a tentative agenda for your reference. Again, he will speak from 2:30-3:00pm (20 min + 10 min. Q&A), giving his general "Building Support for President's Agenda" speech. He should arrive 10 min. early in case the program is running ahead of schedule. Will you please send me a copy of his bio for introduction purposes and also just a few simple bullet points on what he will speak about? I assume he will not need a PowerPoint projector or tech equipment other than a podium? Thanks a lot!

Ashcroft?s U-Turn: Suing Big Tobacco for a Quarter Trillion Bucks

Featuring

William B. Schultz
Partner, Zuckerman Spaeder LLP

Robert A. Levy
Senior Fellow in Constitutional Studies, Cato Institute

Kenneth N. Bass
Partner, Kirkland & Ellis

Ten months after the tobacco giants and the states settled their differences for a skimpy $246 billion, the federal government decided that it wanted a piece of the pie. So the Clinton Justice Department filed suit, alleging that industry executives conspired to lie about their product, manipulate nicotine content, and target kids with cigarette ads. Then the Republicans took over. Attorney General John Ashcroft, who opposed the suit as a senator, was reluctant to fund litigation that he deemed too weak for trial. But he's changed his mind. In an astonishing about-face, the Justice Department has now decided to seek an additional $289 billion in damages, with a trial planned for next year if the industry doesn?t cave. Why the reversal? Is the multi-billion-dollar pot just too enticing for the cash-strapped feds? Or is there a real need for one more round in the government?s anti-tobacco campaign? Please join us for a vigorous debate on health, public policy, and the rule of law.

Subject: Leon Holmes item

Liberals For Leon Holmes

Thu, May 15, 2003

Column By John Brummett

Arkansas News Bureau

Kent Rubens of West Memphis and Nate Coulter of Little Rock belong on anyone's list of the half-dozen leading liberal lawyers in Arkansas. Both have written letters endorsing the Bush administration's federal judgeship nomination of Leon Holmes of Little Rock, the anti-abortion zealot who escaped the Senate Judiciary Committee without an actual vote, but a mere referral to the Senate floor without comment.

He'll be confirmed since neither of your nominally Democratic senators, Blanche Lincoln and Mark Pryor, has the nerve to oppose him.

The committee's oddly neutral disposition came after revelations that Holmes once wrote that getting pregnant from rape was as likely as snowfall in Miami. It also was revealed that he and his wife had co-authored an article seeming to say the wife must be subservient to the husband.

Asked by Lincoln to explain himself, Holmes apologized for the reference to weather and impregnation, which he offered 23 years ago. He explained that his religious belief is that a wife is to be to a husband as the church is to Christ. But he explained that his religious view of the scriptural family structure does not have anything to do with society at large or the work place, where he fully supports women's rights.

Rubens said in his letter that he'd roll dice with Holmes over the phone. He told me last week that he'd had occasion to encounter Holmes in the legal arena and found him a man strictly of his word. He said he couldn't excuse what Holmes had written, but that considering other conservative lawyers the Bush administration might be inclined to nominate, he'd take Holmes and trust his integrity.

Rubens even speculated that Holmes might not mind resisting the death penalty, at least to the extent that the legal process would properly allow him.

Coulter said he'd gone up against Holmes a half-dozen times — as a plaintiff's attorney with Holmes defending the insurance industry — and found him sensible enough to settle in all cases. "At root, except for his religion that is out of the mainstream, I think Leon's a populist," Coulter said. "To that extent I think he's a better choice than some Little Rock Country Club Republican."

By Alberto Gonzales

On May 9, President Bush addressed the American people from the Rose Garden on the subject of judicial nominees. The process, he explained, is broken. In the past three administrations, too many nominees to the federal appeals courts have languished for years without a vote; other nominees never received votes at all. The president called for the Senate to perform its constitutional responsibility to hold timely up or down votes on judicial nominees. That should hold, he emphasized, no matter who is president or which party controls the Senate.

Democrat Leader Tom Daschle quickly responded to the president's call by claiming that the Senate's judicial confirmation process "ain't broke." We respectfully disagree.

To begin with, Sen. Daschle's statements are flatly inconsistent with the views of many other Democrat senators. For example:

* New York Sen. Chuck Schumer in his April 30 letter to the president stated that he "could not agree more" with President Bush that the process is "broken" and that we are in a "vicious cycle" of "delayed" confirmations.

* California Sen. Diane Feinstein in her May 5 letter to the president stated that she believes the judicial confirmation process is "going in the wrong direction" and is potentially "spiral\[ing\] out of control."

* Arkansas Sen. Mark Pryor in his April 30 letter to Tennessee Sen. Bill Frist agreed-together with all 10 of the new senators-that the "judicial confirmation process is broken and needs to be fixed" and that the "United States Senate needs a fresh start."

* Georgia Sen. Zell Miller in his May 9 statements to the media said the Senate was becoming the "world's greatest obstructionist body" because a minority of senators was denying votes on judicial nominees.

These Democrat senators are not alone. Speaking on behalf of the federal judiciary, Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist said in January that the judicial confirmation process does not work as it should. The American Bar Association made the same point last August.

The Senate's actions in the last two years amply demonstrate the problems in the process. Senate Democrats are currently engaged in unprecedented simultaneous filibusters to block votes on Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen-nominees who have the support of a majority of senators and whose nomination have been pending for more than two years without a vote. More filibusters are apparently likely, according to Democrat senators.

The filibusters are occurring despite statements like Sen. Daschle's on Oct. 5, 1999 that "I find it simply baffling that a Senator would vote against even voting on a judicial nomination."

Beyond the filibusters, some senators are seeking access to confidential Justice Department information never before demanded for appeals-court nominees even though every living former solicitor general including four Democrats opposes this request as harmful to the U.S. What's more, these senators are demanding such memos only for select nominees like Mr. Estrada and not for similarly situated nominees like John Roberts-even though both men have spent their careers as advocates for clients, including for the U.S., and were nominated to the same D.C. Circuit Court.

In addition, by demanding answers to questions about nominees' personal views on legal questions, some senators are threatening to compromise judicial independence, as Justice Anthony Kennedy recently warned and as justices like Ruth Bader Ginsburg have explained in the past.

The overall delays in holding hearings and votes on appeals-court nominees have also risen to new and extraordinary levels: The 107th Congress was the least efficient in modern history in holding hearings and votes on appeals court nominations, according to a recent independent study by leading judicial historian Sheldon Goldman. In this presidency, more appeals-court nominees have had to wait at least a year for a hearing than in the last 50 years combined. Today, as a result of these delays, 12% of the federal appeals-court seats are vacant, and 9% are classified as judicial emergencies.

As President Bush has repeatedly explained since June 2000 when President Clinton was still in office, excessive delays in the judicial confirmation process need to be corrected. The delays harm the courts and the American people, and deter good people from being willing to be considered for service on the bench.

The solution to the problem should be very simple. As the ABA said, "Vote them up or down, but don't hang them out to dry."

A system with timely up or down votes for all nominees is fair to all senators, allowing each to have his voice heard and vote counted. It also is fair to the president, the judiciary, the nominees, and the American people who depend on a fully staffed judiciary. As Senator Bob Graham said in 1991, "I consider it a judicial emergency when a judgeship is vacant for one day more than necessary." A Senate majority vote is the approach that our Founders established in the Constitution and that the Senate has followed for most of the nation's history.

The judicial confirmation system will remain broken and subject to abuse until judicial nominees are ensured a prompt up or down vote within a reasonable and set time after nomination. It is time for the Senate to do so for the benefit of the country.

[SHIRT]Mr. Gonzales is counsel to the president.

We are pleased to report that more than 100 regional appointees and local senior agency leaders will attend Tuesday's regional appointees conference.; ;We also anticipate a good crowd at the evening receptions scheduled for Monday (Mayflower Hotel);and Tuesday (EEOB Indian Treaty Room).;You of course are invited to both receptions.
As part of the pre-planning leading up to the conference, we asked each attendee to answer several questions related to issues such as the President's Management Agenda, local best practices, and communicating with their home office and White House staff, to name a few.
To help you better prepare for your presentation we have attached a summary of some of those responses, which I think should give you a sense of what their concerns/issues are.; While we have not attributed any of the responses, we still ask that you keep them;confidential.
Also, remember that we have you slated for a 30 minute time slot, which includes 5-10 minutes for Q&A.; Again, thank you helping us better promote the President's agenda with our regional appointees.; Let me add, they are ecstatic to be invited;to the White House and participate in this first-of-its-kind event.
We have also included the near final conference agenda with a brief summary of your presentation topic.; If you have any changes or corrections to the summaries please let us know as soon as possible.

Please contact me or Christie Parell if you need additional information.

Regional Appointees Conference Questionnaire Summary

Office of Cabinet Affairs – Not for Distribution

As part of the process of facilitating the Regional Appointees Conference, attendees were asked to complete a confidential questionnaire covering various topics. Provided below are summaries of some of their comments (not for attribution) and general themes found in the responses to the questionnaire. Please keep these thoughts in mind as you prepare your remarks.

Communication:

How do you communicate with your agency, how well is that working, and what improvements can be made?

The channels of communication are designed to 1) deliver the Administration message to all appropriate staff and 2) listen, discuss, and respond to suggestions/concerns from our regional partners. All responses to the questionnaire felt the communication channels were adequate. Some say there is a lack of two-way communication.

The President's Management Agenda:

What is your role in implementing the President's Management Agenda?

All regional appointees have a role with implementing the President's Management Agenda. Some respondents feel that they do not have a direct role, but recognize they serve aspects of communication and facilitation.

One agency seemed to have the biggest disconnect.

Challenges:

What are the most difficult challenges you face in doing your job as a Regional Appointee?

Management: Managing complex operations with few resources, problems with career staff attitude, challenges in HR procedures such as hiring staff, taking disciplinary actions, and compensating good performers.

Political: Lack of Federal involvement in States/regions to help implement policy and affect media coverage (ex. No Child Left Behind), time management with external constituencies, inability to stay involved with the developments in Washington D.C.

Communication: Lack of timely access to information.

Best Practices:

What are the best practices that you have developed or discovered to make your job more effective?

Communication: Build relationships with other Federal agencies in the region to regularly share information on regional issues, ongoing agency activities and regional activities of common interest (Create a Federal agency working group or utilize Federal Regional Councils). Maintain a constant focus on developing and maintaining relationships with state and local stakeholders and constituent groups through regular contact (visits, telephone calls, e-mails etc.).

Management: Regular, constant two-way communication on all issues with staff, from Administration goals and objectives to office policies and security and safety matters. Get out of office to meet with top managers and staff as much as possible. Public support of career staff, particularly when unduly criticized. Reminders 1.) that staff is valued key to agency success and 2.) the office represents the President and the Secretary.

Communication with The White House:

Describe how you communicate with White House offices, how well it is working, and what improvements can be made?

Many have no direct communication with The White House and would like more. Most communicate with The White House through their agencies.

What is working: Many receive regular e-mails from White House Liaisons forwarding information from the White House. Some have been contacted by White House IGA.

Ways to improve/What can improve: Annual or semi-annual regional meetings with White House personnel. Need better coordination and communication on Presidential visits to the area.

Regional Appointees Conference Questionnaire Summary

Office of Cabinet Affairs – Not for Distribution

As part of the process of facilitating the Regional Appointees Conference, attendees were asked to complete a confidential questionnaire covering various topics. Provided below are summaries of some of their comments (not for attribution) and general themes found in the responses to the questionnaire. Please keep these thoughts in mind as you prepare your remarks.

Communication:

How do you communicate with your agency, how well is that working, and what improvements can be made?

The channels of communication are designed to 1) deliver the Administration message to all appropriate staff and 2) listen, discuss, and respond to suggestions/concerns from our regional partners. All responses to the questionnaire felt the communication channels were adequate. Some say there is a lack of two-way communication.

The President's Management Agenda:

What is your role in implementing the President's Management Agenda?

All regional appointees have a role with implementing the President's Management Agenda. Some respondents feel that they do not have a direct role, but recognize they serve aspects of communication and facilitation.

One agency seemed to have the biggest disconnect.

Challenges:

What are the most difficult challenges you face in doing your job as a Regional Appointee?

Management: Managing complex operations with few resources, problems with career staff attitude, challenges in HR procedures such as hiring staff, taking disciplinary actions, and compensating good performers.

Political: Lack of Federal involvement in States/regions to help implement policy and affect media coverage (ex. No Child Left Behind), time management with external constituencies, inability to stay involved with the developments in Washington D.C.

Communication: Lack of timely access to information.

Best Practices:

What are the best practices that you have developed or discovered to make your job more effective?

Communication: Build relationships with other Federal agencies in the region to regularly share information on regional issues, ongoing agency activities and regional activities of common interest (Create a Federal agency working group or utilize Federal Regional Councils). Maintain a constant focus on developing and maintaining relationships with state and local stakeholders and constituent groups through regular contact (visits, telephone calls, e-mails etc.).

Management: Regular, constant two-way communication on all issues with staff, from Administration goals and objectives to office policies and security and safety matters. Get out of office to meet with top managers and staff as much as possible. Public support of career staff, particularly when unduly criticized. Reminders 1.) that staff is valued key to agency success and 2.) the office represents the President and the Secretary.

Communication with The White House:

Describe how you communicate with White House offices, how well it is working, and what improvements can be made?

Many have no direct communication with The White House and would like more. Most communicate with The White House through their agencies.

What is working: Many receive regular e-mails from White House Liaisons forwarding information from the White House. Some have been contacted by White House IGA.

Ways to improve/What can improve: Annual or semi-annual regional meetings with White House personnel. Need better coordination and communication on Presidential visits to the area.

All:

We are pleased to report that more than 100 regional appointees and local senior agency leaders will attend Tuesday's regional appointees conference. We also anticipate a good crowd at the evening receptions scheduled for Monday (Mayflower Hotel) and Tuesday (EEOB Indian Treaty Room). You of course are invited to both receptions.

As part of the pre-planning leading up to the conference, we asked each attendee to answer several questions related to issues such as the President's Management Agenda, local best practices, and communicating with their home office and White House staff, to name a few.

To help you better prepare for your presentation we have attached a summary of some of those responses, which I think should give you a sense of what their concerns/issues are. While we have not attributed any of the responses, we still ask that you keep them confidential.

Also, remember that we have you slated for a 30 minute time slot, which includes 5-10 minutes for Q&A. Again, thank you helping us better promote the President's agenda with our regional appointees. Let me add, they are ecstatic to be invited to the White House and participate in this first-of-its-kind event.

We have also included the near final conference agenda with a brief summary of your presentation topic. If you have any changes or corrections to the summaries please let us know as soon as possible.

Please contact me or Christie Parell if you need additional information.

Thank you!

FYI, this article from the upcoming issue of The New Republic is an escalation in the arguments against the President's judicial nominees, as it alleges with some particularity that his district court nominees are out of the mainstream, and not just Mr. Holmes. -- sjd

The New Republic

Bush packs the lower courts.
By Clay Risen

This January, the Bush administration nominated James Leon Holmes, a Little Rock lawyer, to sit on Arkansas's Eastern District Court. On April 10, however, Holmes's nomination was delayed indefinitely in the Judiciary Committee after a group of Democrats, along with moderate Republican Arlen Specter, balked at his religious-right provenance. (As the former president of Arkansas Right to Life and a longtime anti-abortion activist, Holmes had authored articles arguing that "the woman is to place herself under the authority of the man" and comparing the pro-choice movement to Nazi Germany.) In an almost unprecedented move, on May 1, Republicans sent Holmes to the Senate floor without the Judiciary Committee's imprimatur.

Ultimately, though, what makes Holmes an anomaly among President Bush's district court nominees is neither his far-right provenance nor the fact that he has made it to the Senate floor. What's anomalous about Holmes is that Democrats slowed his nomination down at all, even temporarily. While Democratic senators have waged a few high-profile battles over Bush's nominees to higher courts--for instance, Miguel Estrada, Priscilla Owen, and Charles Pickering--they have put up little resistance to the administration's steady politicization of the lower federal courts. "What has been noticed at the appellate level is also happening at the district court level," says one aide to a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee. "It's just no one pays attention."

District courts are the lowest and most numerous in the federal judicial system, and as such they are often deemed politically irrelevant--concerned with, as one staffer to a member of the Judiciary Committee puts it, "making widgets." But those widgets are the building blocks of much of U.S. law. Because, in most instances, district courts are the first courts to hear a case, they set the tone for later appeals. "District courts make, in most cases, the most important decisions and the decisions that appellate courts defer to," says Peter Rubin, a lawyer and president of the American Constitution Society. "Should we verify a class action, should we grant summary judgment--and that's the end of the case for a lot of people." District courts can also provide political cover for more conservative judges at the appellate and Supreme Court level by reducing the chances that those courts will be forced to reverse decisions. "One of the problems," says Michael Gerhardt, a professor at the William and Mary School of Law, "is, if you don't take ideology into account in the lower-court nominations, then your higher judges are forced to reverse more often."

In Louisiana, for example, a recent Bush appointee to the Eastern District Court, Jay Zainey--who was unanimously confirmed by the Senate last year despite a record as an anti-abortion activist--ruled against a woman who claims she was denied access to abortion services while in prison. The woman, known to the court as Victoria W., had been sent to prison for a parole violation and soon after learned from the prison doctor that she was pregnant. She requested an abortion but was denied; by the time of her release, it was too late to obtain one. Victoria W. contacted a lawyer and filed suit in federal court, and the case came before Zainey in April 2002. Zainey dismissed the case in a three-page order, refusing even to hear it. The decision was unprecedented. "No federal court in the country," said Victoria W.'s lawyer, Linda Rosenthal, "has ever held constitutional a prison policy that intentionally obstructed a prisoner's right to terminate her pregnancy." Victoria W. is appealing the verdict, but that appeal will be heard by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, which is already overwhelmingly conservative and will only grow more so if Bush succeeds in placing Owen and Pickering on it. By making a controversial ruling at the district level, Zainey gives the higher-profile appellate court room to uphold his ruling while avoiding the taint of right-wing judicial activism.

The flip side works as well. A recent ruling by Sam Haddon, a Bush appointee in Montana, in favor of an oil- and natural-gas-exploration company accused of violating the Clean Water Act (CWA) was overturned in April by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. In doing so, the appeals court expanded the CWA's list of pollutants and opened up the possibility of further suits--which reinforces its image as an excessively liberal bench. And, paradoxically, Haddon's ruling, which experts say represents an almost unprecedentedly narrow interpretation of the CWA, will likely receive much less public scrutiny because it took place at the district level.

Another reason district court benches matter is that they serve as "farm teams" for higher courts. Because appellate nominees who come from the district courts have federal judiciary experience, district courts make excellent places to cultivate future appellate court nominees and to park potentially controversial nominees. Take William Steele. An Alabama magistrate judge, he was nominated in 2001 to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. But he soon came under withering fire from a bevy of civil rights groups, who charged him with "racial insensitivity" in a number of anti-discrimination suits. His nomination was withdrawn, but, in January, Bush nominated him to Alabama's Southern District Court; he was confirmed by voice vote in March. After a few years building a federal judicial record at the district level, he could be an almost unstoppable appellate court nominee.

So far, the administration has filled 100 district court seats, and, while most of the nominations have not been controversial, as a whole they have been at least as ideologically oriented as the more high-profile names at the appellate level. On the list is Paul Cassell, confirmed to the Utah District Court in May 2002, who previously led a campaign to overturn the Supreme Court's landmark Miranda ruling; Michael Mills, a Mississippi nominee known for his anti-abortion views while on the state supreme court; and Nebraska's Laurie Smith Camp, who has been an outspoken abortion-rights opponent. Another frequently cited appointment is that of Ron Clark, who recently began his judgeship on Texas's Eastern District Court. As a member of the Texas House of Representatives, Clark put forward a series of bills to limit access to reproductive-health services, including placing zoning restrictions on clinics and instituting mandatory 24-hour waiting periods. Despite his record on abortion and his lack of judicial experience, he was approved by a voice vote in October 2002. However, Clark was also running for reelection to the narrowly divided Texas House, and, if he had immediately accepted the administration's appointment, he would have likely ceded the closely contested race to a Democrat. So, with Bush's blessing, Clark refused the appointment until after the election--winning and then promptly resigning, an unheard of step that blurs the line between the White House's political interests and its duty to promote an independent judiciary.

There is no formal requirement for how the president nominates district court nominees; nevertheless, there are traditional checks and balances that have evolved over the last 50 years, practices that are being either rewritten or discarded by the administration. These include ignoring state judicial nominating committees, rejecting American Bar Association ratings, placing Justice Department political appointees in positions related to judicial selection, and refusing to cooperate with home-state senators. Says one former Justice staffer, "They have systematically ignored bipartisan commissions $(and$) ignored traditions of consultation that were in place when we got there and have been in place for years in order to make these ideological appointments and political rewards for jobs well done."

Bush has come under especially heavy fire for ignoring home-state senators when making his judicial picks, reversing a tradition that had held since the Eisenhower administration. In the past, administrations have either allowed senators from a district's state to make nominations or have given them broad sway in the selection, even when the senators are both from the opposing party. Several states have even organized bipartisan nominating committees in an attempt to institutionalize this coordination. But, in a number of instances--in Washington, Hawaii, Wisconsin, and Florida among others--the administration has ignored both the senators and, in many cases, the commissions. In the case of Florida's Southern District Court, the White House not only overlooked nominees put forward by the state's Judicial Nominating Commission, it also rebuffed concerns about the process from Democratic Senators Bob Graham and Bill Nelson. Both senators criticized the administration publicly for going ahead with its own nominee, Cecilia Altonaga (though, neither voted against her when she was confirmed on May 6). "It's a stunning lack of consultation with the home-state senators," says one former Justice staffer. "For years, there was fabulous cooperation between the senators in Florida no matter what the party. ... We had no trouble filling Florida judgeships with very qualified, nonpolitical people, and $(Bush $) just ripped it up."

Democrats, for their part, say they are so busy fighting at the appellate level that a number of controversial nominees have slipped through virtually unopposed. "The groups on the progressive side of the House are battling this furiously, but there just aren't enough resources," says a former Justice Department official. Even many nominees who should have been controversial slipped through. As an example, several Democratic staffers cite John Bates, whom Bush appointed to the D.C. District Court. A former independent counsel's office lawyer under Kenneth Starr, Bates was nominated to the court in June 2001 and received unanimous Senate approval in December of that year. Soon after coming to the bench, he was assigned to hear Walker v. Cheney, in which the General Accounting Office (GAO) sued the vice president for access to documents detailing meetings with energy-industry officials. In December, Bates ruled against the GAO. That ruling, in addition to effectively closing off public inquiry into the energy task force, could have a disastrous long-term impact on congressional oversight of the executive branch. And it proves definitively that a district court judge can have a powerful impact on the nation's political and legal battles--something the Bush administration understands all too well.

Floyd nominated to be federal judge

By LAUREN MARKOE

Washington Bureau

Washington State judge Henry Floyd of Pickens is President Bush's choice to be South Carolina's next federal judge.

U.S. Sen. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C., recommended Floyd to Bush and knows the judge from his own days as a young Pickens lawyer.

Floyd, 55, is now a circuit judge on the state's 13th Judicial Circuit, which includes Greenville and Pickens counties.

The White House sent his nomination to the Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday. He would join the U.S. District Court for the District of South Carolina.

Floyd, with the Senate's approval, would fill the seat vacated by U.S. District Court Judge Dennis Shedd of Columbia, who earlier this year was promoted to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Floyd's confirmation hearing has not been scheduled. When he does go to Washington, Graham said, he should sail through.

"Given his judicial record, If Henry Floyd has any problem, then the system is beyond repair," said Graham, who sits on the Judiciary Committee that would first consider the nomination. The Senate would then have to give its approval.

Republicans and Democrats in the Senate are in an ongoing battle over several Bush nominees, but the partisan rancor typically does not apply to district court nominees.

"He will be an outstanding jurist," Graham said. "He's fair. He's conservative. He comes highly recommended from all those who have practiced before him."

Floyd said Thursday the federal bench has long been his goal.

"It's always been my ambition to try some really good and complex cases and most will be in federal court," said Floyd, who has tried his share of complicated South Carolina cases.

As a trial court judge for the past 12 years, Floyd was widely praised for keeping a complicated insurance lawsuit in 1998 out of partisan politics.

The state in that case had sued to recover more than $80 million for S.C. businesses.

Floyd also presided over the highly publicized 1996 trial of Steve Beckham, the son of a retired Episcopal bishop, who was convicted of murdering his estranged wife, Vickie Lander Beckham -- the daughter of then-state Sen. Jim Lander, D-Newberry.

Floyd is known for keeping lawyers in line. In the Beckham trial, he addressed both the prosecuting and defense attorneys: "Gentlemen, this is not a place to hash and rehash."

Jean Toal, chief justice of the S.C. Supreme Court and former longtime Democratic state legislator, called Floyd's nomination "a grand day for South Carolina and for Pickens County."

"Apart from that," she added, "he is a man of uncommon intellect and deep compassion. There is not an arena of law in which Henry Floyd has not distinguished himself. He will do President Bush and Senator Graham proud."

The Republican president and senator are behind Floyd even though the now-unaffiliated judge was once a Democrat and won his three terms in the State House, from 1973 to 1979, as a member of that party.

"The important thing is that he's someone you can trust to decide cases," said Graham.

Asked how he was celebrating his nomination Thursday night, Floyd said his wife, Libba, a curriculum director for Pickens County Schools, was in Columbia and that he was home baby-sitting the family's two Boston terriers -- Ben and Hearsay.

PICKENS — Thirteenth Circuit Judge Henry Floyd of Pickens has been nominated by President George Bush to fill a federal court vacancy in South Carolina.

Floyd, 55, has been a circuit judge serving Greenville and Pickens counties for nearly 12 years and was Pickens County's first resident circuit judge since the death of Thomas Joab Mauldin in 1931.

Floyd said this is "an opportunity to do something different," saying he always wanted to be a federal judge.

"The federal system has some interesting issues. You see things in federala court that you don't see in state court, so it's just kind of a challenge."

Floyd previously has been county attorney for Pickens, commissioner on the South Carolina Forestry Commission and a three-term member of the state House of Representatives.

Floyd was nominated for a vacancy created by the recent promotion of U.S. District Judge Dennis Shedd of Columbia to the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond.

In announcing the nomination, U.S. Sen. Lindsey Graham said, "The president could not have selected a more qualified candidate or a better person.

The two have known each other since Graham returned to Oconee County and started practicing law after military service in the U.S. Air Force, Floyd said.

"He is a dedicated public servant and is well respected among his peers. He has consistently received praise from the South Carolina Bar and those who have practiced before him," Graham said.

"Judge Floyd has an exceptional legal mind, impeccable character and a legacy of fair application of the law."

When Floyd was sworn in as circuit judge in 1992, he promised the people who packed a Pickens County Courthouse courtroom that he would put two signs in his office: one that reads "Patience," and a second telling him, "Remember that you were once a trial lawyer."

The signs still are in his office, and they will go with him if he moves to the federal bench. "I've always lived by those two mottoes," Floyd said. "That's good advice no matter where you are."

Graham said he expects the nomination to go smoothly because of Floyd's judicial record.

Filibusters multiply as senators frustrate democracy

Senate Democrats should change the name of their party. Their goal is to frustrate and twist rather than to support the democratic process.

Democracy, as we all know, means putting issues up for a vote. The votes are counted, and the majority rules. That's the process that senators who call themselves Democrats are determined to interrupt.

It started with a filibuster on one of President Bush's judicial nominees. Democratic senators are now filibustering two nominees and threatening to do so to more. The tactic is an unprecedented partisan attack on the constitutional method for selecting judges.

This week, they threw another filibuster into the mix. They don't like a bill that would protect firearm manufacturers and dealers from frivolous lawsuits.

So they are determined to not allow the Senate to vote on the bill.

That's what a filibuster is. It's a tactic to keep debate open forever, so the body never has a chance to vote on the issue. It takes 51 votes to settle an issue in the Senate, but it takes 60 votes to end debate and call for the vote.

Senate Democrats know that Bush's nominees would be confirmed if the Senate voted on them, so they don't allow the vote. They also know that the firearm litigation bill would be approved by the full Senate, so they are filibustering to prevent a vote.

These are not principled stands. Democratic senators oppose Bush's nominees because they suspect them of being too conservative. They oppose the firearm litigation bill because the trial lawyers' lobby opposes it, and trial lawyers give huge sums of money to Democratic campaigns.

But the bill should pass. It would stop the crazy lawsuits in which cities and crime victims sue firearm manufacturers for the cost of gun-related crime.

It would not prevent someone from suing when a defective gun injures someone. It would not prevent legitimate lawsuits. It would simply prohibit cities and gun-control groups from blaming gun manufacturers for the crimes committed by individuals.

This minority rule in the Senate should end. The Senate should change its rules regarding filibusters and restore the ability of the entire body to vote on the issues before it.

Bush driver plans to be with president, on new bus, for next ÿ

campaign

dewleb

ÿÿ ENFIELD, N.H.(AP) _ The New Hampshire man who drove President

Bush all around the state during his primary campaign in 2000 plans a new road trip with Bush, in a new bus, for his re-election campaign.

ÿÿ John LaBombard, 59, of Enfield, offered his 1995 bus to the Bush campaign as a mobile headquarters for the last campaign, with him at the wheel.

ÿÿ Next month, LaBombard is putting the bus on eBay, the Internet auction site.

ÿÿ ``It's time to get a new one,'' said LaBombard. He's got his eye set on a 2002 bus in Tennessee, and more campaigning.

ÿÿ ``I plan on going six states or more with the president'' in the 2004 campaign, he said.

ÿÿ LaBombard met the Bush family through an old friend, and now considers himself part of the Bush team.

ÿÿ ``I went down to a Christmas party (in Washington) last year,'' he explained. ``(Presidential adviser) Karl Rove gives me a hug and a kiss every time he sees me. It's a tradition of the Bush people.'' ÿÿ He said Rove told him Bush wants to go back on the road with him.

ÿÿ ``Mention New Hampshireto the president,'' said LaBombard, ``and the first thing he thinks of is 'Big John'.'' That's him.

ÿÿ Bush thought enough of LaBombard and the bus, that he included them in his inaugural parade.

ÿÿ LaBombard figures the bus has enough special perks to fetch between $1 million and $5 million.

ÿÿ He had it built originally so he and his wife could live in it in Alaska. An old friend who knew the Bush family suggested using it to help out on state campaigns, and eventually Bush hopped aboard after he announced his candidacy and made the bus his campaign headquarters, said LaBombard.

MEMORANDUM FOR ANDREW CARD

THROUGH: Mitchell E. Daniels, Jr.

FROM: John D. Graham

SUBJECT: Heads-Up on DOT's Interim Final Rule on the Transportation of Household Goods

We have concluded review of a Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration (FMCSA) interim final rule that will amend and update FMCSA's regulations governing the interstate transportation of personal property for use in a private residence (i.e., household goods). The regulations would specify how movers of household goods must assist their customers.

The rule is intended to make the current regulations easier to understand and to assist consumers. Specifically, the rules will enhance consumer protections by (1) clarifying mover liability disclosure requirements; (2) requiring movers to disclose the identity of subcontractors used to conduct moves; (3) requiring movers to relinquish delivered property and defer those charges not included in the estimate that they could have reasonably determined at the time of pick-up; and (4) mandating a three-day grace period for customers to cancel service orders without penalty.

Although this rule preempts all State regulations intended to govern interstate transportation of household goods, DOT and the States appear willing to coordinate their efforts to protect individuals who hire movers. The American Moving and Storage Association supported DOT's 1998 proposal, so we do not expect serious industry objections to the final rule.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

An Unfair Double Standard

Last week, the Senate confirmed John Roberts to be a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. Roberts has served as Principal Deputy Solicitor General of the United States, Associate Counsel to President Reagan, and Law Clerk to then-Justice Rehnquist. He has argued numerous cases before the U.S. Supreme Court and is widely recognized as one of the very best appellate lawyers in America. The American Bar Association unanimously rated him well qualified. In short, John Roberts exemplifies the kind of judge President Bush has nominated to the federal courts, and will be a distinguished judge on the D.C. Circuit.

The Senate's confirmation of Roberts is noteworthy for two additional reasons, however, both of which demonstrate the breakdown in the Senate confirmation process for federal appeals court nominees about which President Bush and many Senators of both parties have spoken in recent years.

First, the long road from Roberts' initial nomination to his confirmation vote was unfair and is impossible to defend. Roberts was first nominated to the D.C. Circuit in January 1992, yet did not receive a hearing before the end of President George H.W. Bush's term a year later. President George W. Bush then nominated Roberts on May 9, 2001, shortly after taking office. But the Senate Judiciary Committee did not hold a hearing on Roberts' nomination during the entire last Congress, even though no serious objections were lodged against him. President Bush then re-nominated Roberts on January 7, 2003. After two hearings this year, Roberts received his Senate vote on May 8, 2003 -- two years after nomination by President George W. Bush and more than 11 years after his first nomination. And when Roberts finally received that elusive vote, the Senate unanimously confirmed him, which makes the many years of delay all the more difficult to explain and justify.

The Senate's delays and denials of votes on appeals court nominees) which have been too common in recent Administrations -- flout the intention of the Constitution and the tradition of the Senate. No judicial nominee ever should have to wait years for a vote in the Senate. So that the federal courts are fully staffed to do their jobs for the American people and in order to attract the best and brightest to judicial service, the Senate should fulfill its constitutional responsibility and ensure that every judicial nominee receives an up-or-down Senate vote within a reasonable period of time after nomination.

Second, the confirmation of John Roberts also dramatically exposes the double standard being applied to the President,s other D.C. Circuit nominee, Miguel Estrada. The career records of Roberts and Estrada are strikingly similar. Both Estrada and Roberts were unanimously rated well-qualified by the ABA. Both have argued numerous cases before the Supreme Court, including as attorneys in the Solicitor General's office. Both have devoted large portions of their legal careers to public service and also been partners at major Washington law firms. Both have clerked for Supreme Court Justices. Both have the very strong support of prominent Democrat attorneys who served in high-ranking positions in the Clinton Administration. Neither has served previously as a judge or a professor and therefore neither has written widely about their personal views on legal issues. Both have served instead as superb and well-respected lawyers for public and private clients throughout their careers.

Despite the similarities between Roberts and Estrada, 45 Senate Democrats have treated them very differently. Senate Democrats never requested confidential case memoranda written by Roberts during his time in the Solicitor General's office. Yet they are insisting on reviewing memoranda written by Estrada during his tenure in the Solicitor General's office as a condition of ending a 3-month filibuster of his nomination. Consistent with judicial independence and the traditional practice of judicial nominees, Senate Democrats also did not demand that Roberts answer questions about his personal views on legal and policy issues before they voted on him. Yet these Senators are demanding that Estrada answer the same questions as a condition of ending the filibuster on Estrada.

The 45 Senate Democrats who are filibustering Estrada's nomination are applying a double standard. There is no rational or legitimate justification for the disparate treatment of Roberts and Estrada -- particularly by means of the extraordinary and unprecedented filibuster of Estrada, who would be the first Hispanic to serve on the D.C. Circuit and has the clear support of a majority of Senators. The President has asked that the Senate Democrats halt the filibuster and allow an up-or-down vote on Estrada. As the President has said, let each Senator vote as he or she thinks best, but end the double standard, stop the unfair treatment, and give the man a vote.

You Too Can Be a Judge;
If you get the nod from Bush, just follow one of the right -- far right -- roads to confirmation.

BYLINE: Nan Aron

BODY:
It pays decently, you make your mother proud and, best of all, you never have to polish up your resume again. Even if you lack the qualities you think a president would look for in a judicial nominee -- real intellect, unquestionable integrity and a career-long commitment to equal justice for all -- there are other ways to get the attention of Karl Rove and the Bush administration judge pickers. Here's how:

* Support Bob Jones University. Remember Bob Jones, the South Carolina university that once excluded African Americans and banned interracial dating? Candidate George W. Bush, bruised by his New Hampshire primary defeat, sought comfort at the school, where a spirited campaign rally let him flaunt his "Southern" credentials.

Carolyn Kuhl's aggressive persuasion convinced the Reagan administration to try to restore tax-exempt status for the university. Although her argument was too radical for the Supreme Court, which ruled against her 8 to 1, it has helped earn her a Bush nomination to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

Since then, however, Bob Jones lifted its interracial dating ban after Bush's visit, succumbing to the weight of bad PR for the school and the candidate, so it may not need as much help now.

* Fight against reproductive freedom. Administration officials cry "litmus test" whenever Democrats suggest they want judges who would uphold Roe vs. Wade. Yet Bush's nominees share a remarkable consistency in their opposition to choice. Alabama Atty. Gen. William H. Pryor, a Bush nominee to the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals, says the day the case was decided was "the day seven members of our highest court ... ripped out the life of millions of unborn children."

Arkansas district court nominee James Leon Holmes, while supporting a constitutional amendment banning abortion, rejected a rape and incest exception as unnecessary, saying "the concern for rape victims is a red herring because conceptions from rape occur with the same frequency as snow in Miami."

Texas Supreme Court Justice Priscilla Owen was accused in a judicial opinion by Alberto Gonzales, her former colleague and now Bush's own White House counsel, of engaging in "an unconscionable act of judicial activism" for her tortured readings of the state's parental notification statute in abortion cases.

* Work for a right-wing partisan. If you helped Ken Starr investigate President Clinton, step to the head of the line. You'd be joining John Bates, who now holds the gavel in district court in Washington, and 8th Circuit nominee Steve Colloton, who honed his lawyering skills investigating phony "Filegate" allegations that Clinton officials sought confidential FBI checks of GOP appointees.

Working for senators such as Strom Thurmond and Orrin Hatch is a sure-fire path to a judgeship. Thurmond staffer Terry Wooten became a judge despite claims that he leaked an FBI file to discredit Anita Hill's allegations against Clarence Thomas, and Thurmond counsel Dennis W. Shedd now sits on the 4th Circuit. Because of her lack of trial experience, Sharon Prost, former counsel to Judiciary Committee Chairman Hatch, elicited consternation when she was nominated to the federal circuit.

Don't despair, though, if you missed the scandal and Senate boats. You can always befriend presidential consigliere Karl Rove, who pulled rank on White House counsel Gonzales to get his old client Owen (who paid Rove $250,000 for consulting during her 1994 Texas Supreme Court campaign) nominated over Gonzales' choice of Deborah Hankinson. Hankinson is, not surprisingly, considered a moderate on abortion issues.

* Oppose gay rights. If other options fail, demean gays and lesbians. When campaigning for his old boss, Jesse Helms, 4th Circuit nominee Claude Allen said Helms' opponent had links "with the queers." Bush judicial nominee Pryor warned that if the Supreme Court recognized a right to privacy for gay sex, it would have to do the same for necrophilia, bestiality, child pornography and even pedophilia.

A final note on "confirmation conversions." Although you might be tempted at your Judiciary Committee hearing to express regret for your past conduct, to plead youthful indiscretion or to blame clients for outlandish arguments you made on their behalf, don't bother. Committee Republicans will still vote for you, even as they express "concern" about your behavior. The hard part is getting picked by the president in the first place.

So study the resumes of some of the 124 Bush judges now on the bench. Or just follow one of these four options.

Please welcome Lori Raad, the new Director of White House Personnel. Before joining us, Lori served as White House Liaison at the Department of Commerce (DOC) where she managed the hiring process for all DOC political appointees.

In her role as Director of Personnel, Lori will be able to provide the following important services to each of you:

Gather resumes and make suggestions to fill vacancies
Conduct preliminary and courtesy interviews on your behalf
Serve as a clearing house for all incoming resumes - collect resumes and respond to them on your behalf
Serve as a source of information on staff plans and budgets
Assist with any personnel related questions or issues as they arise

If there are other services you would like the Personnel Office to consider offering to meet your needs, please let us know. Lori can be reached at 6-5979. Her new Personnel Assistant, Jamie Van Riper, can be reached at 6-2310.

Thanks!

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) ADMINISTRATOR.—The term ''Administrator'' means the Administrator of the Office of Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution appointed under section 221(c).

(2) ASBESTOS.—The term ''asbestos'' includes—

(A) chrysotile;

(B) amosite;

(C) crocidolite;

(D) tremolite;

(E) winchite;

(F) richterite;

(G) anthophyllite;

(H) actinolite;

(I) any of the minerals listed under subparagraphs (A) through (H) that has been chemically treated or altered, and any variety, type, or component thereof; and

(J) asbestos-containing material, such as asbestos-containing products, automotive or industrial parts or components, equipment, improvements to real property, and any other material that contains asbestos in any physical or chemical form.

(3) ASBESTOS CLAIM.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term ''asbestos claim'' means any personal injury claim for damages or other relief presented in a civil action or bankruptcy proceeding, arising out of, based on, or related to the health effects of exposure to asbestos, including loss of consortium, wrongful death, and any derivative claim made by, or on behalf of, any exposed person or any representative, spouse, parent, child or other relative of any exposed person.

(B) EXCLUSION.—The term does not include claims for benefits under a workers' compensation law or veterans' benefits program, or claims brought by any person as a subrogee by virtue of the payment of benefits under a workers' compensation law.

(4) ASBESTOS CLAIMANT.—The term "asbestos claimant" means an individual who files an asbestos claim under section 111.

(5) ASBESTOS COURT; COURT.—The terms "Asbestos Court" or "Court" means the United States Court of Asbestos Claims established under section 101.

(6) CIVIL ACTION.—The term "civil action" means all suits of a civil nature in State or Federal court, whether cognizable as cases at law or in equity or in admiralty, but does not include an action relating to any workers' compensation law, or a proceeding for benefits under any veterans' benefits program.

(7) COLLATERAL SOURCE.—The term "collateral source" means all collateral sources, including—

(A) disability insurance;

(B) health insurance;

(C) medicare;

(D) medicaid;

(E) death benefit programs;

(F) defendants;

(G) insurers of defendants; and

(H) compensation trusts.

(8) ELIGIBLE DISEASE OR CONDITION.—The term ''eligible disease or condition'' means, to the extent that the illness meets the medical criteria requirements established under subtitle C of title I, asbestosis/pleural disease, severe asbestosis disease, mesothelioma, lung cancer I, lung cancer II, other cancers, and qualifying non-malignant asbestos-related diseases.

(9) FUND.—The term ''Fund'' means the Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Fund established under section 223.

(10) LAW.—The term ''law'' includes all law, judicial or administrative decisions, rules, regulations, or any other principle or action having the effect of law.

(11) PARTICIPANT.—The term ''participant'' means any person subject to the funding requirements of title II, including—

(A) any defendant participant subject to an assessment for contribution under subtitle A of that title; and

(B) any insurer participant subject to an assessment for contribution under subtitle B of that title.

(12) PERSON.—The term ''person''—

(A) means an individual, trust, firm, joint stock company, partnership, association, insurance company, reinsurance company, or corporation; and

(B) does not include the United States, any State or local government, or subdivision thereof, including school districts and any general or special function governmental unit established under State law.

(13) STATE.—The term ''State'' means any State of the United States and also includes the District of Columbia, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin islands, Guam, American Samoa, and any other territory or possession of the United States or any political subdivision of any of the entities under this paragraph.

(14) VETERANS' BENEFITS PROGRAM.—The term ''veterans' benefits program'' means any program for benefits in connection with military service administered by the Veterans' Administration under title 38, United States Code.

(15) WORKER'S COMPENSATION LAW.—The term ''worker's compensation law''—

(A) means a law respecting a program administered by a State or the United States to provide benefits, funded by a responsible employer or its insurance carrier, for occupational diseases or injuries or for disability or death caused by occupational diseases or injuries;

(B) includes the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (33 U.S.C. sections 901 et seq.) and chapter 81 of title 5, United States Code; and

(C) does not include the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Employers' Liability Act, or damages recovered by any employee in a liability action against an employer.

TITLE I—ASBESTOS CLAIMS RESOLUTION

Subtitle A—United States Court of Asbestos Claims

SEC. 101. ESTABLISHMENT OF ASBESTOS COURT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part I of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 7 the following:

"CHAPTER 9—UNITED STATES COURT OF ASBESTOS CLAIMS

"Sec.
"201. Establishment of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.
"202. Magistrates.
"203. Retirement of judges of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.

"§ 201. Establishment of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT AND APPOINTMENT OF JUDGES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, 5 judges, who shall constitute a court of record known as the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.

"(2) ARTICLE I COURT.—The Court of Asbestos Claims is declared to be a court established under article I of the Constitution of the United States.

"(b) TERM; REMOVAL; COMPENSATION.—

"(1) TERM.—Each judge appointed under subsection (a) shall serve for a term of 15 years, except that judges initially appointed shall serve for staggered terms as the President shall determine appropriate to assure continuity.

"(2) REMOVAL.—Judges may be removed by the President only for good cause.

"(3) COMPENSATION.—Each judge shall receive a salary at the rate of pay, and in the same manner, as judges of the district courts of the United States.

"(c) CHIEF JUDGE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall designate 1 of the judges appointed under subsection (b)(1), who is less than 70 years of age, to serve as chief judge.

"(2) TERM.—The chief judge may continue to serve as such until—

"(A) he or she reaches the age of 70 years;

"(B) another judge is designated as chief judge by the President; or

"(C) the expiration of his or her term under subsection (b)(1).

"(3) CONTINUITY OF SERVICE.—Upon the designation by the President of another judge to serve as chief judge, the former chief judge may continue to serve as a judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims for the balance of the term to which he or she was appointed.

"(4) POWERS OF CHIEF JUDGE.—The chief judge is authorized to—

"(A) prescribe rules and procedures for hearings and appeals of the Court of Asbestos Claims and its magistrates;

"(B) appoint magistrates;

"(C) appoint or contract for the services of such personnel as may be necessary and appropriate to carry out the responsibilities of the Court of Asbestos Claims; and

"(D) make such expenditures as may be necessary and appropriate in the administration of the responsibilities of the Court of Asbestos Claims and the chief judge under this chapter and the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003.

"(d) TIME AND PLACES OF HOLDING COURT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The principal office of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be in the District of Columbia, but the Court of Asbestos Claims may hold court at such times and in such places as the chief judge may prescribe by rule.

"(2) LIMITATION.—The times and places of the sessions of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be prescribed with a view to securing reasonable opportunity to citizens to appear before the Court of Asbestos Claims.

"(e) OFFICIAL DUTY STATION; RESIDENCE.—

"(1) DUTY STATION.—The official duty station of each judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims is the District of Columbia.

"(2) RESIDENCE.—After appointment and while in active service, each judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall reside within 50 miles of the District of Columbia.

"§ 202. Magistrates

"(a) APPOINTMENT.—The chief judge shall appoint such magistrates as necessary to facilitate the expeditious processing of claims.

"(b) COMPENSATION.—The compensation of magistrates shall be determined by the chief judge, but shall not exceed the annual rate of basic pay of level V of the Executive Schedule, as prescribed by section 5316 of title 5.

"(c) RETIREMENT.—For purposes of Federal laws relating to retirement, including chapters 83 and 84 of title 5, magistrates appointed under this section shall be deemed to be appointed under section 631 of this title.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—Except as provided under subsection (c), chapter 43 shall not apply to magistrates appointed under this chapter, except the chief judge may prescribe rules similar to the provisions of chapter 43 to apply to magistrates.

"§ 203. Retirement of judges of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of Federal laws relating to retirement, judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be treated in the same manner and to the same extent as judges of the Court of Federal Claims.

"(b) REGULATIONS.—In carrying out this section—

"(1) the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall promulgate regulations to apply provisions similar to section 178 of this title (including the establishment of a Court of Asbestos Claims Judges Retirement Fund) to judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims; and

"(2) the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall promulgate regulations to apply chapters 83 and 84 of title 5 to judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims.".

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part I of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to chapter 9, and inserting after the item relating to chapter 7 the following:

"9. United States Court of Asbestos Claims.".

Subtitle B—Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Procedures

SEC. 111. FILING OF CLAIMS.

(a) WHO MAY SUBMIT.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—Any individual who has suffered from an eligible disease or condition that is believed to meet the requirements established under subtitle C (or the spouse, parent, child, or other relative of such individual in a representative capacity, or the executor of the estate of such individual) may file a claim with the Asbestos Court for compensation with respect to such injury.

(2) RULES.—The Asbestos Court may issue procedural rules to specify individuals who may file an asbestos claim as a representative of another individual.

(3) LIMITATION.—An asbestos claim may not be filed by any person seeking contribution or indemnity.

(b) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—To be valid, an asbestos claim filed under subsection (a) shall be notarized and include—

(1) the name, social security number, gender, date of birth, and, if applicable, date of death of the claimant;

(2) information relating to the identity of dependents and beneficiaries of the claimant;

(3) a detailed description of the work history of the claimant, including social security records or a signed release permitting access to such records;

(4) a detailed description of the asbestos exposure of the claimant, including information on the identity of any product or manufacturer, site, or location of exposure, plant name, and duration and intensity of exposure;

(5) a detailed description of the tobacco product use history of the claimant, including frequency and duration;

(6) an identification and description of the asbestos-related diseases of the claimant, including a written report by the claimant's physician with medical diagnoses and test results necessary to make a determination of medical eligibility that complies with the applicable requirements of this subtitle and subtitle C;

(7) a description of any prior or pending civil action or other claim brought by the claimant for asbestos-related injury, including an identification of any recovery of compensation or damages through settlement, judgment, or otherwise; and

(8) any other information that is required to be included under procedural rules issued by the Court.

(c) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), if an individual fails to file an asbestos claim with the Asbestos Court under this section within 2 years after the date on which the individual first—

(A) received a medical diagnosis of an eligible disease or condition as provided for under this subtitle and subtitle C; or

(B) discovered facts that would have led a reasonable person to obtain a medical diagnosis with respect to an eligible disease or condition, any claim relating to that injury, and any other asbestos claim related to that injury, shall be extinguished, and any recovery thereon shall be prohibited.

(2) EFFECT ON PENDING CLAIMS.—If an asbestos claimant has any claim for an asbestos-related injury that is pending in a Federal or State court or with a trust established under title 11, United States Code, on the date of enactment of this Act, such claimant shall file an asbestos claim under this section within 2 years after such date of enactment or be barred from receiving any compensation under this title.

(3) EFFECT OF MULTIPLE INJURIES.—An asbestos claimant who receives compensation under this title for an eligible disease or condition, and who subsequently develops another such injury, shall be eligible for additional compensation under this title (subject to appropriate setoffs for such prior recovery of compensation under this title and from any other collateral source) and the statute of limitations under paragraph (1) shall not begin to run with respect to such subsequent injury until such claimant obtains a medical diagnosis of such other injury or discovers facts that would have led a reasonable person to obtain such a diagnosis.

(4) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Paragraph (2) shall be interpreted as a statute of limitations and be construed to the benefit of the Fund and of any person who might otherwise have been made subject to an asbestos claim to which such paragraph is applied.

SEC. 112. GENERAL RULE CONCERNING NO-FAULT COMPENSATION.

An asbestos claimant shall not be required to demonstrate that the asbestos-related injury for which the claim is being made resulted from the negligence or other fault of any other person.

SEC. 113. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ELIGIBLE ASBESTOS CLAIM.

To be eligible for compensation under this subtitle for an asbestos-related injury, an individual shall—

(1) file an asbestos claim in a timely manner in accordance with section 111; and

(2) prove, by a preponderance of the evidence that—

(A) the claimant suffers from an eligible disease or condition, as demonstrated by evidence (submitted as part of the claim) that meets the medical criteria requirements and diagnostic criteria requirements established under subtitle C; and

(B) the claimant meets the latency criteria requirements and the exposure criteria requirements established under subtitle C.

SEC. 114. ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS AND CLAIM AWARDS.

(a) CLAIMS EXAMINERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Asbestos Court shall appoint, or contract for the services of, qualified individuals to assist magistrates by conducting eligibility reviews of asbestos claims filed with the Court.

(2) CRITERIA.—The Asbestos Court shall establish criteria with respect to the qualifications of individuals who are eligible to serve as claims examiners and, in developing such criteria, shall consult with such experts as the Court determines appropriate.

(b) REFERRAL OF ASBESTOS CLAIM.—Not later than 20 days after the filing of an asbestos claim with the Asbestos Court, the Court shall refer such claim to a magistrate.

(c) INITIAL REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Under the direction of a magistrate, a claims examiner shall make an initial review of an asbestos claim to determine whether all required information has been submitted by the claimant.

(2) NOTICE OF INCOMPLETE CLAIM.—If the claims examiner determines that all required information has not been submitted, the examiner—

(A) shall notify the claimant of such determination and require the submission of additional information necessary for a determination of eligibility;

(B) may compel the submission of any additional information;

(C) may request that the claimant undergo additional medical examinations and tests if information from such examinations or tests is necessary to enable the examiner to make a determination of medical eligibility; and

(D) may require any releases necessary to enable the examiner to obtain medical or other information relevant to the determination of eligibility.

(d) EXPEDITIOUS DETERMINATIONS.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules to expedite claims for asbestos claimants with exigent circumstances.

(e) AUDIT AND PERSONNEL REVIEW PROCEDURES.—The Asbestos Court shall establish audit and personnel review procedures for evaluating the accuracy of eligibility recommendations of magistrates.

(f) ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the receipt by a magistrate of all required information and requested medical advice with respect to an asbestos claim, the magistrate shall transmit a recommendation of the compensation to which the claimant is entitled and findings of fact to a judge of the Asbestos Court.

(2) ADMISSIBILITY OF FINDINGS OF FACT.—A determination under paragraph (1) shall include relevant findings of fact and shall be admissible as evidence in any judicial review.

(g) DECISION OF JUDGE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after receipt of a recommendation of a magistrate, a judge of the Asbestos Court shall make a final decision of any compensation to which the claimant is entitled.

(2) WAIVER OF JUDICIAL REVIEW.—The final decision under paragraph (1) shall include an acceptance form by which the claimant may waive the right to judicial review and expedite payment of compensation from the Fund.

(h) AWARDING OF COMPENSATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If a judge of the Asbestos Court determines that an asbestos claimant is entitled to compensation, the Court shall notify the Administrator to award the claimant compensation from the Fund in the amount of the judge's decision.

(2) CLAIM EXTINGUISHED.—The acceptance of a payment under this Act shall extinguish all claims related to such payment.

SEC. 115. MEDICAL EVIDENCE AUDITING PROCEDURES.

(a) DEVELOPMENT.—The Asbestos Court shall develop methods for auditing the medical evidence submitted as part of an asbestos claim, including methods to ensure the independent reading of x-rays and results of pulmonary function tests. The Court may develop additional methods for auditing other types of evidence or information received by the Court.

(b) REFUSAL TO CONSIDER CERTAIN EVIDENCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Asbestos Court determines that an audit conducted in accordance with the methods developed under subsection (a) demonstrates that the medical evidence submitted by a specific physician or medical facility is not consistent with prevailing medical practices or the applicable requirements of this Act, the Court shall notify claims examiners and the magistrates that any medical evidence from such physician or facility shall be unacceptable for purposes of establishing eligibility for compensation under this Act.

(2) NOTIFICATION.—Upon a determination by the Asbestos Court under paragraph (1), the Court shall notify the physician or medical facility involved of the results of the audit. Such physician or facility shall have a right to appeal the determination of the Court under procedures issued by the Court.

SEC. 116. CLAIMANT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Asbestos Court shall establish an asbestos claimant assistance program to provide assistance to claimants in preparing and submitting asbestos claim applications and in responding to claimant inquiries.

(b) LEGAL ASSISTANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As part of the program established under subsection (a), the Asbestos Court shall establish a legal assistance program to provide assistance to asbestos claimants concerning legal representation issues.

(2) LIST OF QUALIFIED ATTORNEYS.—As part of the program, the Court shall maintain a roster of qualified attorneys who have agreed to provide pro bono services to asbestos claimants under rules established by the Court. The claimants shall not be required to use the attorneys listed on such roster.

Subtitle C—Medical Criteria

SEC. 121. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ELIGIBLE ASBESTOS CLAIM.

To be eligible for compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, an individual shall—

(1) file an asbestos claim under this title in a timely manner; and

(2) prove, by a preponderance of the evidence that—

(A) the claimant suffers from an eligible disease or condition, as demonstrated by evidence (submitted as part of the claim) that meets the diagnostic criteria requirements described in section 122 and the medical criteria requirements described in section 124; and

(B) the claimant meets the latency criteria requirements described in section 123 and the exposure criteria requirements described in section 125.

SEC. 122. DIAGNOSTIC CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall demonstrate a medical diagnosis that meets the requirements of this section.

(b) DIAGNOSIS.—A medical diagnosis meets the requirements of this section if the diagnosis—

(1) is made by a physician who—

(A) treated, or is treating, the claimant;

(B) conducted an in-person medical examination of the claimant; and

(C) is licensed to practice medicine in the State in which the examination occurred and in which the diagnosis is rendered;

(2) includes a review by the physician of the work history, asbestos exposure pattern, and smoking history of the claimant, or other factors determined appropriate by the Asbestos Court;

(3) is independently verified with respect to the duration, proximity, regularity, and intensity of the asbestos exposure involved; and

(4) has excluded other more likely causes of the injury of the claimant.

(c) RESULTS OF MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS AND TESTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In making the demonstration required under subsection (a), an asbestos claimant shall submit—

(A) x-rays (including both films and B-reader reports);

(B) detailed results of pulmonary function tests (including spirometric tracings);

(C) laboratory tests; and

(D) the results of medical examination or reviews of other medical evidence.

(2) PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS.—A submission under paragraph (1) shall comply with the requirements of this Act and recognized medical standards regarding equipment, testing methods, and procedures to ensure that such medical evidence is reliable.

(d) SUFFICIENCY OF MEDICAL EVIDENCE.—In making determinations under this section, a magistrate shall not make a determination unless the medical evidence provided in support of the asbestos claim is credible and consistent with this section, the medical criteria described in section 124, and recognized medical standards.

(e) ATTORNEY RETENTION AGREEMENTS.—An attorney retention agreement shall not be required as a prerequisite to a medical examination or medical screening for purposes of obtaining a medical diagnosis or other medical information under this section.

(f) RULES.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules to implement the diagnostic criteria requirements to be used in applying this section.

SEC. 123. LATENCY CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall demonstrate that the claimant was exposed to asbestos—

(1) in a manner that meets the exposure requirements of sections 124 and 125;

(2) within the United States or its territories or possessions; and

(3) for at least 10 years before the initial diagnosis of any asbestos-related injury.

(b) CONSISTENCY WITH MEDICAL CRITERIA.—An asbestos claimant shall be required to demonstrate that any delay between asbestos exposure and the asbestos-related injury is consistent with medical criteria concerning the latency periods typically associated with the disease category for which the claim is being made.

(c) VARIATIONS IN LATENCY PERIODS.—Latency periods under this section may vary based on the eligible disease or condition involved.

(d) RULES.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules, based on the medical literature or other appropriate medical evidence concerning latency periods, for the purpose of implementing the criteria used in applying this section.

SEC. 124. MEDICAL CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) BILATERAL ASBESTOS-RELATED NONMALIGNANT DISEASE.—The term ''bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease'' means a diagnosis of bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease based on—

(A) an x-ray reading of 1/0 or higher on the ILO scale; or

(B) an x-ray showing bilateral pleural plaques or pleural thickening, bilateral interstitial fibrosis, or bilateral interstitial markings.

(2) BILATERAL PLEURAL DISEASE OF B2.—The term ''bilateral pleural disease of B2'' means a chest wall pleural thickening or plaque with a maximum width of at least 5 millimeters and a total length of at least ¼ of the projection of the lateral chest wall.

(3) FEV1.—The term ''FEV1'' means forced expiratory volume (1 second), which is the maximal volume of air expelled in 1 second during performance of the spirometric test for forced vital capacity.

(4) FVC.—The term ''FVC'' means forced vital capacity, which is the maximal volume of air expired with a maximally forced effort from a position of maximal inspiration.

(5) ILO GRADE.—The term ''ILO grade'' means the radiological ratings for the presence of lung or pleural changes as determined from a chest x-ray, all as established from time to time by the International Labor Organization.

(6) PATHOLOGICAL EVIDENCE OF ASBESTOSIS.—The term ''pathological evidence of asbestosis'' means proof of asbestosis based on the pathological grading system for asbestosis described in the Special Issue of the Archives of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, ''Asbestos-associated Diseases'', Vol. 106, No. 11, App. 3 (October 8, 1982).

(7) PULMONARY FUNCTION TESTING.—The term ''pulmonary function testing'' means spirometry testing that is in compliance with the quality criteria established from time to time by the American Thoracic Society and is performed on equipment which is in compliance with the standards of the American Thoracic Society for technical quality and calibration.

(8) SIGNIFICANT OCCUPATIONAL EXPOSURE.—The term ''significant occupational exposure'' means employment for a cumulative period of at least 5 years, in an industry and an occupation in which the claimant—

(A) handled raw asbestos fibers on a regular basis;

(B) fabricated asbestos-containing products so that the claimant in the fabrication process was exposed on a regular basis to raw asbestos fibers;

(C) altered, repaired, or otherwise worked with an asbestos-containing product such that the claimant was exposed on a regular basis to asbestos fibers; or

(D) was employed in an industry and occupation such that the claimant worked on a regular basis in close proximity to workers engaged in the activities described under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

(9) TLC.—The term ''TLC'' means total lung capacity, which is the volume of air in the lung after maximal inspiration.

(b) REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible for compensation or medical monitoring reimbursement under this title, a claimant shall establish that the claimant meets the medical criteria for 1 of the following categories:

(1) For Level I: Asymptomatic Exposure, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease or an asbestos-related malignancy; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) 5 years cumulative occupational exposure to asbestos.

(2) For Level II: Asbestosis/Pleural Disease A, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade 1/0 or greater, or showing bilateral pleural disease of B2 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(3) For Level III: Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade 1/0 or greater, or showing bilateral pleural disease of B2 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis;

(B) pulmonary function testing that shows—

(i) TLC less than 80 percent of predicted; or

(ii) FVC less than 80 percent of predicted, and a FEV1/FVC ratio of not less than 65 percent; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(4) For Level IV: Severe Asbestosis, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade

2/1 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis;

(B) pulmonary function testing that shows—

(i) TLC less than 65 percent of predicted; or

(ii) FVC less than 65 percent of predicted, and a FEV1/FVC ratio greater than 65 percent; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(5) For Level V: Other Cancer, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary laryngeal, esophageal, pharyngeal, or stomach cancer;

(B) evidence of an underlying bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(6) For Level VI: Lung Cancer One, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary lung cancer; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982.

(7) For Level VII: Lung Cancer Two, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary lung cancer;

(B) evidence of an underlying bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease;

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure; and

(D) supporting medical documentation and certification by or on behalf of the claimant establishing asbestos exposure as a contributing factor causing the relevant lung cancer.

(8) For Level VIII: Mesothelioma, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of mesothelioma; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of exposure to asbestos.

SEC. 125. EXPOSURE CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall contain information to demonstrate that the claimant meets the minimum exposure requirements under this subtitle.

(b) BURDEN OF PROOF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant has the burden of demonstrating meaningful and credible exposure to asbestos for purposes of this subtitle.

(2) EVIDENCE.—The demonstration under paragraph (1) may be established by—

(A) an affidavit submitted by the claimant, a coworker of the claimant, or a family member, in the case of a deceased claimant;

(B) employment records;

(C) invoices;

(D) construction or other similar records; or

(E) other credible evidence.

(c) RULES.—

(1) EXPOSURE INFORMATION.—The Asbestos Court shall issue rules prescribing specific exposure information that shall be submitted to permit the Court to process an asbestos claim and prescribing a proof of claim form. Such rules may provide that a claims examiner or magistrate, as applicable, may require the submission of other or additional evidence of exposure when determined to be appropriate and necessary.

(2) REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS.—The Asbestos Court may prescribe rules identifying specific industries, occupations within those industries, time periods, and employment periods for which significant occupational exposure (as defined under section 124) may be a rebuttable presumption for asbestos claimants who provide meaningful and credible evidence that the claimant worked in that industry and occupation for the requisite period of time. The Administrator may provide evidence to rebut this presumption.

Subtitle D—Awards

SEC. 131. AMOUNT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant who meets the requirements of section 113 shall be entitled to compensation in an amount determined by reference to the benefit table contained in subsection (b).

(b) BENEFIT TABLE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant with an eligible disease or condition established in accordance with section 124, other than an injury described in paragraph (2), shall be eligible for compensation according to the following schedule:

Level	Scheduled Condition or Disease	Scheduled Value
I	Asymptomatic Exposure	$0
II	Asbestosis/Pleural Disease A	$0
III	Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B	$40,000
IV	Severe Asbestosis	$400,000
V	Other Cancer	$200,000
VI	Lung Cancer I (smoker)	$50,000
VII	Lung Cancer II (non-smoker)	$400,000
VIII	Mesothelioma	$750,000

(2) MEDICAL MONITORING.—An asbestos claimant with asymptomatic exposure or asbestosis/pleural disease A, based on the criteria under section 124(b)(1), shall only be eligible for medical monitoring reimbursement.

SEC. 132. MEDICAL MONITORING.

(a) RELATION TO STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—The filing of an asbestos claim that seeks reimbursement for medical monitoring shall not be considered as evidence that the claimant has discovered facts that would otherwise commence the period applicable for purposes of the statute of limitations under section 111(c).

(b) COSTS.—Reimbursable medical monitoring costs shall include the costs of a claimant not covered by health insurance for x-ray tests and pulmonary function tests every 3 years.

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Administrator shall promulgate regulations that establish—

(1) the reasonable costs for medical monitoring that is reimbursable; and

(2) the procedures applicable to asbestos claimants.

SEC. 133. PAYMENTS.

(a) STRUCTURED PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant who is entitled to compensation shall receive such compensation through structured payments from the Fund, made over a period of not less than 3 years.

(2) ACCELERATED PAYMENTS.—The Administrator shall develop guidelines to provide for accelerated payments to asbestos claimants who are mesothelioma victims and who are alive on the date on which the administrator receives notice of the eligibility of the claimant. Such payments shall be credited against the first regular payment under the structured payment plan for the claimant.

(3) EXPEDITED PAYMENTS.—The Administrator shall develop guidelines to provide for expedited payments to asbestos claimants in cases of exigent circumstances or extreme hardship caused by asbestos-related injury.

(4) ANNUITY.—An asbestos claimant may elect to receive any payments to which they are entitled under this title in the form of an annuity.

(b) LIMITATION ON TRANSFERABILITY.—An asbestos claim shall not be assignable or otherwise transferable under this Act.

(c) CREDITORS.—An award of compensation under this title shall be exempt from all claims of creditors and from levy, execution, and attachment or other remedy for recovery or collection of a debt, and such exemption may not be waived.

(d) TREATMENT FOR INTERNAL REVENUE PURPOSES.—All compensation received under this subtitle shall be deemed to be compensation for personal physical injuries or physical sickness under section 104 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(e) MEDICARE AS SECONDARY PAYER.—No award of compensation under this title shall be deemed a payment for purposes of section 1862 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395y).

SEC. 134. REDUCTION IN BENEFIT PAYMENTS FOR COLLATERAL SOURCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amount of compensation otherwise available to an asbestos claimant under this title shall be reduced by the amount of collateral source compensation that the claimant received, or is entitled to receive, for the asbestos-related injury that is the subject of the compensation.

(b) EXCLUSIONS.—In no case shall statutory benefits under workers' compensation laws and veterans benefits programs be deemed as collateral source compensation for purposes of this section.

Subtitle E—En Banc Review

SEC. 141. EN BANC REVIEW.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) EN BANC PANELS.—The chief judge of the Asbestos Court shall—

(A) establish en banc panels to carry out this subtitle; and

(B) assign 3 judges of the Asbestos Court to each en banc panel.

(2) FILING OF APPEAL.—Not later than 30 days after receiving notice of the decision of a judge under section 114, a claimant may file an appeal for review with an en banc panel of the Asbestos Court.

(b) DE NOVO REVIEW.—An Asbestos Court panel shall provide a de novo review of the magistrate's determination and the judge's decision.

(c) REPRESENTATION OF THE ADMINISTRATOR.—The Administrator may appoint counsel to represent the interests of the Fund and the Administrator in all proceedings before a panel, including oral arguments and the submission of briefs.

(d) FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE.—An Asbestos Court panel shall apply the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedures to all proceedings before the panel.

(e) DECISION OF PANEL.—An Asbestos Court panel shall enter a final decision on an appeal on the earlier date occurring—

(1) not later than 30 days after the date of the conclusion of oral arguments; or

(2) not later than 60 days after an appeal is filed under this section.

TITLE II—ASBESTOS INJURY CLAIMS RESOLUTION FUND

Subtitle A—Asbestos Defendants Funding Allocation

SEC. 201. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) AFFILIATED GROUP.—The term ''affiliated group'' means—

(A) with respect to any nonbankrupt defendant participant that is an ultimate parent or a person whose entire beneficial interest is owned on the date of enactment of this Act, directly or indirectly, by an ultimate parent, that set of nonbankrupt persons including the ultimate parent and all of the nonbankrupt persons whose entire beneficial interest shall be owned on December 31, 2002, directly or indirectly, by that ultimate parent; or

(B) with respect to any bankrupt defendant participant, the debtor and all of its direct and indirect majority owned subsidiaries, whether or not such subsidiaries are debtors.

(2) DEBTOR.—The term ''debtor''—

(A) means all entities that are subject to a case pending under any chapter of title 11,

United States Code, on the date of enactment of this Act; and

(B) shall not include an entity—

(i) subject to chapter 7 of title 11, United States Code, if a final decree closing the estate shall have been entered before the date of enactment of this Act; or

(ii) subject to chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, if a plan of reorganization for such entity shall have been confirmed by a final judgment.

(3) INDEMNIFIABLE COST.—The term ''indemnifiable cost'' means a cost, expense, debt, judgment, or settlement incurred with respect to an asbestos claim that, at any time before December 31, 2002, was or could have been subject to indemnification, contribution, surety, or guaranty.

(4) INDEMNITEE.—The term ''indemnitee'' means a person against whom any asbestos claim has been asserted before December 31, 2002, who has received from any other person, or on whose behalf a sum has been paid by such other person to any third person, in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity in connection with an alleged duty with respect to the defense or indemnification of such person concerning that asbestos claim, other than under a policy of insurance or reinsurance.

(5) INDEMNITOR.—The term ''indemnitor'' means a person who has paid under a written agreement at any time before December 31, 2002, a sum in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity to or on behalf of any person defending against an asbestos claim, in connection with an alleged duty with respect to the defense or indemnification of such person concerning that asbestos claim, except that payments by an insurer or reinsurer under a contract of insurance or reinsurance shall not make the insurer or reinsurer an indemnitor for purposes of this subtitle.

(6) PRIOR ASBESTOS EXPENDITURES.—The term ''prior asbestos expenditures''—

(A) means the gross total amount paid by or on behalf of a person at any time before December 31, 2002, in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity costs related to all asbestos claims against that person;

(B) includes payments made by insurance carriers to or for the benefit of such person or on such person's behalf with respect to such asbestos claims, except as provided in section 204(g);

(C) shall not include any payment made by a person in connection with any activities or disputes related to insurance coverage matters for asbestos-related liabilities; and

(D) shall not include any payment made by or on behalf of persons who are common carriers by railroad for asbestos claims brought under the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Employers' Liability Act, including settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity costs associated with these claims.

(7) TRUST.—The term ''trust'' means all persons or affiliated groups that formed under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, or formed under any plan under section 1129 of title 11, United States Code, for the purpose of administering and paying asbestos claims.

(8) ULTIMATE PARENT.—The term ''ultimate parent'' means a person—

(A) that owns, on the date of enactment of this Act, the entire beneficial interest, directly or indirectly, of at least 1 other person; and

(B) whose entire beneficial interest is not owned, on December 31, 2002, directly or indirectly, by any other single person.

SEC. 202. AUTHORITY AND TIERS.

(a) ASSESSMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assess from defendant participants contributions to the Fund in accordance with this section based on tiers and subtiers assigned to defendant participants.

(2) AGGREGATE CONTRIBUTION LEVEL.—The total contribution required of all defendant participants over the life of the Fund shall be equal to $45,000,000,000.

(b) TIER I.—The Administrator shall assign to Tier I all persons that are debtors or affiliated groups that include a person that—

(1) is a debtor on the date of enactment of this Act or at any time during the 1-year period preceding that date; and

(2) have paid a prior asbestos expenditure, irrespective of whether a related case under title 11, United States Code, is dismissed.

(c) TREATMENT OF TIER I BUSINESS ENTITIES IN BANKRUPTCY.—

(1) DEFINED TERM.—In this subsection, the term ''bankrupt business entity'' means a person that is not a natural person that—

(A) filed under chapter 11, of title 11, United States Code, before January 1, 2003;

(B) has not confirmed a plan of reorganization as of the date of enactment of this Act; and

(C) the Chief Executive Officer, Chief Financial Officer, or Chief Legal Officer of that business entity certifies in writing to the bankruptcy court presiding over the business entity's case, that asbestos liability was neither the sole nor precipitating cause for the filing under chapter 11.

(2) PROCEEDING WITH REORGANIZATION PLAN.—A bankrupt business entity may proceed with the filing, solicitation, and confirmation of a plan of reorganization that does not comply with the requirements of this Act, including a trust and channeling injunction under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, notwithstanding any other provisions of this Act, if—

(A) the bankruptcy court presiding over the chapter 11 case of the bankrupt business entity determines that—

(i) confirmation is necessary to permit the reorganization of that entity and assure that all creditors and that entity are treated fairly and equitably; and

(ii) confirmation is clearly favored by the balance of the equities; and

(B) an order confirming the plan of reorganization is entered by the bankruptcy court within 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act or such longer period of time approved by the bankruptcy court for cause shown.

(3) APPLICABILITY.—If the bankruptcy court does not make the required determination, or if an order confirming the plan is not entered within 9 months of the effective date of this Act or such longer period of time approved by the bankruptcy court for cause shown, the provisions of the Act shall apply to the bankrupt business entity notwithstanding the certification. Any timely appeal under title 11, United States Code, from a confirmation order entered during the applicable time period shall automatically extend the time during which this Act is inapplicable to the bankrupt business entity, until the appeal is fully and finally resolved.

(4) OFFSETS.—

(A) PAYMENTS BY INSURERS.—To the extent that a bankrupt business entity successfully confirms a plan of reorganization, including a trust under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, and channeling injunction that involves payments by insurers who are otherwise subject to this Act, an insurer who makes payments to the trust under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, shall obtain a dollar for dollar reduction in the amount otherwise payable by that insurer under this Act to the Fund.

(B) CONTRIBUTIONS TO FUND.—Any cash payments by a bankrupt business entity, if any, to a trust under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, may be counted as a contribution to the Fund.

(d) TIERS II THROUGH VI.—Except as provided in sections 202(b), 204(b), and 204(g), persons or affiliated groups shall be assigned to Tier II, III, IV, V, or VI according to the prior asbestos expenditures paid by such persons or affiliated groups as follows:

(1) Tier II: $75,000,000 or greater.

(2) Tier III: $50,000,000 or greater but less than $75,000,000.

(3) Tier IV: $10,000,000 or greater but less than $50,000,000.

(4) Tier V: $5,000,000 or greater but less than $10,000,000.

(5) Tier VI: $1,000,000 or greater but less than $5,000,000.

(e) ASSIGNMENTS AND COSTS.—

(1) PERMANENT ASSIGNMENT.—Subject to section 204(d), after the Administrator has assigned a person or affiliated group to a tier under this section, such person or affiliated group shall remain in that tier throughout the life of the Fund, regardless of subsequent events, including—

(A) the filing of a petition under a chapter of title 11, United States Code;

(B) a discharge from bankruptcy;

(C) the confirmation of a plan of reorganization; or

(D) the sale or transfer of assets to any other person or affiliated group.

(2) COSTS.—The payment of contributions to the Fund by all persons or affiliated groups that include a person that is a debtor that is the subject of a case under a chapter of title 11, United States Code, after the date of enactment of this Act—

(A) shall constitute costs and expenses of administration of the case under section 503 of that title 11 and shall be payable in accordance with the payment provisions under this subtitle notwithstanding the pendency of the case under that title 11;

(B) shall not be stayed or affected as to enforcement or collection by any stay or injunction power of any court; and

(C) shall not be impaired or discharged in any current or future case under title 11, United States Code.

(f) SUPERSEDING PROVISIONS.—Any plan of reorganization with respect to any debtor assigned to Tier I and any agreement, understanding, or undertaking by any such debtor or any third party with respect to the treatment of any asbestos claim filed before the date of enactment of this Act and subject to confirmation of a plan under chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, shall be superseded in their entirety by this Act. Any such plan of reorganization, agreement, understanding, or undertaking by any debtor or any third party shall be of no force or effect, and no person shall have any rights or claims with respect to any of the foregoing.

SEC. 203. SUBTIER ASSESSMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) ASSESSMENTS.—Except as provided under subsections (a), (b), (d), (f), and (g) of section 204, the Administrator shall assess contributions to persons or affiliated groups within Tiers I through VII in accordance with this section.

(2) 2002 REVENUES.—The audited consolidated revenue for the year 2002 of each debtor (in this section referred to as "2002 revenues") shall include the revenues for year 2002 of the debtor and all of its affiliated groups. The pro forma revenues of a person or affiliated group that are assigned to Subtier 3 shall not be included in calculating the 2002 revenues of any debtor that is a direct or indirect majority owner of such Subtier 3 person or affiliated group.

(3) GROSS REVENUES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, gross revenues shall be determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, consistently applied, using the amount reported as gross revenues in the annual report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in accordance with section 13(a)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78m(a)(2)) for the year ending December 31, 2002, or, if applicable, the earlier fiscal year that ends during calendar year 2002, if such fiscal year is principally employed by the defendant participant.

(B) INSURANCE PREMIUMS.—Any portion of gross revenues of a defendant participant that is derived from insurance premiums shall not be used to calculate the contribution of that defendant participant under this subtitle.

(C) PRIVATELY-HELD COMPANIES.—If the defendant participant is not required to file an earnings report with the Securities and Exchange Commission, gross revenues shall be the amount that the defendant participant would have reported as gross revenues in the event that it had been required to file the report described under subparagraph (A).

(b) TIER I SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided under subsections (a), (b), (d), (f), and (g) of section 204, the Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier I to 1 of 4 Subtiers. Each person or affiliated group shall make contributions to the Fund as provided under this section.

(2) SUBTIER 1.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are debtors or affiliated groups, which include a debtor with prior asbestos expenditures of $10,000,000 or greater, shall be assigned to Subtier 1.

(B) ASSIGNMENT.—Each debtor assigned to Subtier 1 shall make annual payments based on a percentage of its 2002 revenues.

(C) PAYMENT.—Each debtor assigned to Subtier 1 shall pay on an annual basis the following with respect to the year of the establishment of the Fund:

(i) Years 1 through 5, 1.4533 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(ii) Years 6 through 8, 1.3080 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(iii) Years 9 through 11, 1.1772 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(iv) Years 12 through 14, 1.0595 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(v) Years 15 through 17, 0.9535 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(vi) Years 18 through 20, 0.8582 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(vii) Years 21 through 23, 0.7723 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(viii) Years 24 through 25, 0.6951 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(3) SUBTIER 2.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are debtors or affiliated groups which include a debtor that have no material continuing business operations but hold cash or other assets that have been allocated or earmarked for asbestos settlements shall be assigned to Subtier 2.

(B) ASSIGNMENT OF ASSETS.—Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, each person or affiliated group assigned to Subtier 2 shall assign all of its assets to the Fund.

(4) SUBTIER 3.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are debtors or affiliated groups that include a debtor, other than those included in Subtier 2, which have no material continuing business operations and no cash or other assets allocated or earmarked for the settlement of any asbestos claim, shall be assigned to Subtier 3.

(B) ASSIGNMENT OF UNENCUMBERED ASSETS.—Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, each person or affiliated group assigned to Subtier 3 shall contribute an amount equal to 50 percent of its total unencumbered assets.

(C) CALCULATION OF UNENCUMBERED ASSETS.—Unencumbered assets shall be calculated as the Subtier 3 person or affiliated group's total assets, excluding insurance related assets, less—

(i) all allowed administrative expenses;

(ii) allowed priority claims under section 507 of title 11, United States Code; and

(iii) allowed secured claims.

(c) TIER II SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier II to 1 of 5 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with—

(A) those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 1;

(B) those persons or affiliated groups with the next highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 2;

(C) those persons or affiliated groups with the lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 5;

(D) those persons or affiliated groups with the next lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 4; and

(E) those persons or affiliated groups remaining assigned to Subtier 3.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $25,000,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $22,500,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $20,000,000.

(D) Subtier 4: $17,500,000.

(E) Subtier 5: $15,000,000.

(d) TIER III SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier III to 1 of 5 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with—

(A) those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 1;

(B) those persons or affiliated groups with the next highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 2;

(C) those persons or affiliated groups with the lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 5;

(D) those persons or affiliated groups with the next lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 4; and

(E) those persons or affiliated groups remaining assigned to Subtier 3.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $15,000,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $12,500,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $10,000,000.

(D) Subtier 4: $7,500,000.

(E) Subtier 5: $5,000,000.

(e) TIER IV SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier IV to 1 of 4 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in Subtier 4. Those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues among those remaining will be assigned to Subtier 2 and the rest in Subtier 3.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $3,500,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $2,250,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $1,500,000.

(D) Subtier 4: $500,000.

(f) TIER V SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier V to 1

of 3 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in Subtier 3, and those remaining in Subtier 2.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $1,000,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $500,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $200,000.

(g) TIER VI SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier VI to 1 of 3 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in Subtier 3, and those remaining in Subtier 2.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $500,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $250,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $100,000.

(h) TIER VII.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any assignment to Tiers II, III, IV, V, and VI based on prior asbestos expenditures under section 204(g), a person shall be assigned to Tier VII if the person—

(A) is a common carrier by railroad subject to asbestos claims brought under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.); and

(B) have paid not less than $5,000,000 in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity costs relating to such claims.

(2) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT.—The contribution requirement for persons assigned to Tier VII shall be in addition to any applicable contribution requirement that such person may be assessed under Tiers II through VI.

(3) SUBTIER 1.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with gross revenues of not less than $5,000,000,000 to Subtier 1 and shall require each such person or affiliated group to make annual payments of $10,000,000 into the Fund.

(4) SUBTIER 2.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with gross revenues of less than $5,000,000,000, but not less than $3,000,000,000 to Subtier 2, and shall require each such person or affiliated group to make annual payments of $5,000,000 into the Fund.

(5) SUBTIER 3.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with gross revenues of less than $3,000,000,000, but not less than $500,000,000 to Subtier 3, and shall require each such person or affiliated group to make annual payments of $500,000 into the Fund.

(6) JOINT VENTURE REVENUES AND LIABILITY.—

(A) REVENUES.—For purposes of this subsection, the revenues of a joint venture shall be included on a pro rata basis reflecting relative joint ownership to calculate the revenues of the parents of that joint venture. The joint venture shall not be responsible for a contribution amount under this subsection.

(B) LIABILITY.—For purposes of this subsection, the liability under the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Employers' Liability Act, shall be attributed to the parent owners of the joint venture on a pro rata basis, reflecting their relative share of ownership. The joint venture shall not be responsible for a contribution amount under this provision.

SEC. 204. ASSESSMENT ADMINISTRATION.

(a) REDUCTION ADJUSTMENTS.—The Administrator shall assess contributions based on amounts provided under this subtitle for each person or affiliated group within Tiers II, III, IV, V, VI, and VII for the first 5 years of the operation of the Fund. Beginning in year 6, and every 3 years thereafter, the Administrator shall reduce the contribution amount for each defendant participant in each of these tiers by 10 percent of the amount assessed in the prior year.

(b) SMALL BUSINESS EXEMPTION.—A person or affiliated group that is a small business concern (as defined under section 3 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 632)), on December 31, 2002, is exempt from any contribution requirement under this subsection.

(c) PROCEDURES.—The Administrator shall prescribe procedures on how contributions assessed under this subtitle are to be paid.

(d) EXCEPTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Under expedited procedures established by the Administrator, a defendant participant may seek adjustment of the amount of its contribution based on severe financial hardship or demonstrated inequity. The Administrator may determine whether to grant an adjustment and the size of any such adjustment, in accordance with this subsection. Such determinations shall not prejudice the integrity of the Fund and shall not be subject to judicial review.

(2) FINANCIAL HARDSHIP ADJUSTMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A defendant may apply for an adjustment based on financial hardship at any time during the life of the Fund and may qualify for such adjustment by demonstrating that the amount of its contribution under the statutory allocation would constitute a severe financial hardship.

(B) TERM.—A hardship adjustment under this subsection shall have a term of 3 years.

(C) RENEWAL.—A defendant may renew its hardship adjustment by demonstrating that it remains justified.

(D) LIMITATION.—The Administrator may not grant hardship adjustments under this subsection in any year that exceed, in the aggregate, 3 percent of the total annual contributions required of all defendant participants.

(3) INEQUITY ADJUSTMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A defendant may qualify for an adjustment based on inequity by demonstrating that the amount of its contribution under the statutory allocation is exceptionally inequitable when measured against the amount of the likely cost to the defendant of its future liability in the tort system in the absence of the Fund.

(B) TERM.—Subject to the annual availability of funds in the Orphan Share Reserve Account established under section 223(e), an inequity adjustment granted by the Administrator under this subsection shall remain in effect for the life of the Fund.

(C) LIMITATION.—The Administrator may grant inequity adjustments only to the extent that—

(i) the financial condition of the Fund is sufficient to accommodate such adjustments;

(ii) the Orphan Share Reserve Account is sufficient to cover such adjustments for that year; and

(iii) such adjustments do not exceed 2 percent of the total annual contributions required of all defendant participants.

(4) ADVISORY PANELS.—

(A) APPOINTMENT.—The Administrator shall appoint a Financial Hardship Adjustment Panel and an Inequity Adjustment Panel to advise the Administrator in carrying out this subsection.

(B) MEMBERSHIP.—The membership of the panels appointed under subparagraph (A) may overlap.

(C) COORDINATION.—The panels appointed under subparagraph (A) shall coordinate their deliberations and recommendations.

(e) LIMITATION ON LIABILITY.—The liability of each defendant participant to contribute to the Fund shall be limited to the payment obligations under this subtitle, and no defendant participant shall have any liability for the payment obligations of any other defendant participant.

(f) CONSOLIDATION OF CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining the contribution levels of defendant participants, any affiliated group including 1 or more defendant participants may irrevocably elect, as part of the submission to be made under subsection (i), to report on a consolidated basis all of the information necessary to determine the contribution level under this subtitle and contribute to the Fund on a consolidated basis.

(2) ELECTION.—If an affiliated group elects consolidation as provided in this subsection—

(A) for purposes of this Act other than this subsection, the affiliated group shall be treated as if it were a single participant, including without limitation with respect to the assessment of a single annual contribution under this subtitle for the entire affiliated group;

(B) the ultimate parent of the affiliated group shall prepare and submit the submission to be made under subsection (i), on behalf of the entire affiliated group and shall be solely liable, as between the Administrator and the affiliated group only, for the payment of the annual contribution assessed against the affiliated group, except that, if the ultimate parent does not pay when due any contribution for the affiliated group, the Administrator shall have the right to seek payment of all or any portion of the entire amount due from any member of the affiliated group;

(C) all members of the affiliated group shall be identified in the submission under subsection (i) and shall certify compliance with this subsection and the Administrator's regulations implementing this subsection; and

(D) the obligations under this subtitle shall not change even if, after the date of enactment of this Act, the beneficial ownership interest between any members of the affiliated group shall change.

(g) DETERMINATION OF PRIOR ASBESTOS EXPENDITURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining a defendant participant's prior asbestos expenditure, the Administrator shall prescribe such rules as may be necessary or appropriate to assure that payments by indemnitors before December 31, 2002, shall be counted as part of the indemnitor's prior asbestos expenditure, rather than the indemnitee's prior asbestos expenditure, in accordance with this subsection.

(2) INDEMNIFIABLE COSTS.—If an indemnitor has paid or reimbursed to an indemnitee any indemnifiable cost or otherwise made a payment on behalf of or for the benefit of an indemnitee to a third party for an indemnifiable cost before December 31, 2002, the amount of such indemnifiable cost shall be solely for the account of the indemnitor for purposes under this Act.

(3) INSURANCE PAYMENTS.—When computing the prior asbestos expenditure with respect to an asbestos claim, any amount paid or reimbursed by insurance shall be solely for the account of the indemnitor, even if the indemnitor would have no direct right to the benefit of the insurance, if—

(A) such insurance has been paid or reimbursed to the indemnitor or the indemnitee, or paid on behalf of or for the benefit of the indemnitee, any indemnifiable cost related to the asbestos claim; and

(B) the indemnitor has either, with respect to such asbestos claim or any similar asbestos claim, paid or reimbursed to its indemnitee any indemnifiable cost or paid to any third party on behalf of or for the benefit of the indemnitee any indemnifiable cost.

(h) MINIMUM CONTRIBUTIONS.—Minimum aggregate contributions of defendant participants to the Fund in any calendar year shall be as follows:

(1) For each of the first 5 years of the Fund, the aggregate contributions of defendant participants to the fund shall be at least $2,500,000,000.

(2) After the 5th year, the minimum aggregate contribution shall be reduced by $250,000,000 every 3 years as follows:

(A) For years 6 through 8, $2,250,000,000.

(B) For years 9 through 11, $2,000,000,000.

(C) For years 12 through 14, $1,750,000,000.

(D) For years 15 through 17, $1,500,000,000.

(E) For years 18 through 20, $1,250,000,000.

(F) For years 21 through 23, $1,000,000,000.

(G) For years 24 through 26, $750,000,000.

(i) PROCEDURES TO DETERMINE FUND CONTRIBUTION ASSESSMENTS.—

(1) NOTICE TO PARTICIPANTS.—Not later than 60 days after his or her initial appointment, the Administrator shall—

(A) directly notify all reasonably identifiable defendant participants of the requirement to submit information necessary to calculate the amount of any required contribution to the Fund; and

(B) publish in the Federal Register a notice requiring any person who may be a defendant participant (as determined by criteria outlined in the notice) to submit such information.

(2) RESPONSE REQUIRED.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Any person who receives notice under paragraph (1)(A), and any other person meeting the criteria specified in the notice published under paragraph (1)(B), shall respond by providing the Administrator with all the information requested in the notice at the earlier of—

(i) 30 days after the receipt of direct notice; or

(ii) 30 days after the publication of notice in the Federal Register.

(B) CERTIFICATION.—The response submitted under subparagraph (A) shall be signed by a responsible corporate officer, general partner, proprietor, or individual of similar authority, who shall certify under penalty of law the completeness and accuracy of the information submitted.

(3) NOTICE OF INITIAL DETERMINATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after receiving a response under paragraph (2), the Administrator shall send the participant a notice of initial determination assessing a contribution to the Fund, which shall be based on the information received from the participant in response to the Administrator's request for information.

(B) NO RESPONSE; INCOMPLETE RESPONSE.—If no response is received from the participant, or if the response is incomplete, the initial determination assessing a contribution from the participant shall be based on the best information available to the Administrator.

(4) CONFIDENTIALITY.—Any Person may designate any information submitted under this subsection as confidential commercial or financial information for purposes of the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552). The Administrator shall adopt procedures for designating such information as confidential.

(5) NEW INFORMATION.—

(A) EXISTING PARTICIPANT.—The Administrator shall adopt procedures for revising initial assessments based on new information received after the initial assessments are calculated.

(B) ADDITIONAL PARTICIPANT.—If the Administrator, at any time, receives information that an additional person may qualify as a participant, the Administrator shall require such person to submit information necessary to determine whether an initial determination assessing a contribution from that person should be issued, in accordance with the requirements of this subsection.

(6) PAYMENT SCHEDULE.—Any initial determination issued under this subsection may allow for periodic payments, provided that the full annual amount assessed is paid each year. Each participant shall pay its contribution to the Fund in the amount specified it the initial determination of assessment from the Administrator, according to the schedule specified in the initial determination.

(7) SUBPOENAS.—The Administrator may request the Attorney General to subpoena persons to compel testimony, records, and other information relevant to its responsibilities under this section. The Attorney General may enforce such subpoena in appropriate proceedings in the United States district court for the district in which the person to whom the subpoena was addressed resides, was served, or transacts business.

(8) REHEARING.—A Participant has a right to obtain rehearing of the Administrator's initial determination pursuant to section 202.

Subtitle B—Asbestos Insurers Commission

SEC. 211. ESTABLISHMENT OF ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established the Asbestos Insurers Commission (referred to in this subtitle as the "Commission") to carry out the duties described in section 212.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 5 members who shall be appointed by the President, after consultation with—

(A) the majority leader of the Senate;

(B) the minority leader of the Senate;

(C) the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and

(D) the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

(2) QUALIFICATIONS.—

(A) EXPERTISE.—Members of the Commission shall have sufficient expertise to fulfill their responsibilities under this subtitle.

(B) CONFLICT OF INTEREST.—No member of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1) may be an employee, former employee, or shareholder of any insurer participant, or an immediate family member of any such individual.

(C) FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT.—A member of the Commission may not be an officer or employee of the Federal Government, except by reason of membership on the Commission.

(3) DATE.—The appointments of the members of the Commission shall be made not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(4) PERIOD OF APPOINTMENT.—Members shall be appointed for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy in the Commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment.

(6) CHAIRMAN.—The Commission shall select a Chairman from among its members.

(c) MEETINGS.—

(1) INITIAL MEETING.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which all members of the Commission have been appointed, the Commission shall hold its first meeting.

(2) SUBSEQUENT MEETINGS.—The Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman as necessary to accomplish the duties under section 212.

(3) QUORUM.—No business may be conducted or hearings held without the participation of all of the members of the Commission.

SEC. 212. DUTIES OF ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

(a) DETERMINATION OF INSURER LIABILITY FOR ASBESTOS INJURIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall determine the amount that each insurer participant will be required to pay into the Fund to satisfy their contractual obligation to compensate claimants for asbestos injuries.

(2) ALLOCATION AGREEMENT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the Commission issues its initial determination, the insurer participants may submit an allocation agreement, approved by all of the insurer participants, to—

(i) the Commission;

(ii) the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate; and

(iii) the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives.

(B) CERTIFICATION.—The authority of the Commission under this subtitle shall terminate on the day after the Commission certifies that an allocation agreement submitted under subparagraph (A) meets the requirements of this subtitle.

(3) GENERAL PROVISIONS.—

(A) AGGREGATE CONTRIBUTION LEVEL.—The total contribution required of all insurer participants over the life of the Fund shall be equal to $45,000,000,000.

(B) DECLINING PAYMENTS.—Since the payments from the Fund are expected to decline over time, the annual contributions from insurer participants is also expected to decline over time. The proportionate share of each insurer participant's contributions to the Fund will remain the same throughout the life of the Fund.

(C) SEVERAL LIABILITY.—Each insurer participant's obligation to contribute to the Fund is several. There is no joint liability and the future insolvency of any insurer participant shall not affect the assessment assigned to any other insurer participant.

(4) ASSESSMENT CRITERIA.—

(A) MANDATORY PARTICIPANTS.—Insurers that have paid, or been assessed by a legal judgment or settlement, at least $1,000,000 in defense and indemnity costs before the date of enactment of this Act in response to claims for compensation for asbestos injuries shall be mandatory participants in the Fund. Other insurers shall be exempt from mandatory payments.

(B) PARTICIPANT TIERS.—Contributions shall be determined by assigning mandatory insurer participants into tiers, which shall be determined and defined based on—

(i) net written premiums received from policies covering asbestos that were in force at any time during the period beginning on January 1, 1940 and ending on December 31, 1986;

(ii) net paid losses for asbestos injuries compared to all such losses for the insurance industry;

(iii) net carried reserve level for asbestos claims on the most recent financial statement of the insurer participant; and

(iv) future liability.

(C) PAYMENT SCHEDULE.—Any final determination of assessment issued under subsection (b) may allow for periodic payments, provided that the full annual amount assessed is paid each year. Each insurer participant shall pay its contribution to the Fund in the amount specified in the final determination of assessment from the Commission, according to the schedule specified in the final determination.

(b) PROCEDURE.—

(1) NOTICE TO PARTICIPANTS.—Not later than 30 days after the initial meeting of the Commission, the Commission shall—

(A) directly notify all reasonably identifiable insurer participants of the requirement to submit information necessary to calculate the amount of any required contribution to the Fund; and

(B) publish in the Federal Register a notice requiring any person who may be an insurer participant (as determined by criteria outlined in the notice) to submit such information.

(2) RESPONSE REQUIRED.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Any person who receives notice under paragraph (1)(A), and any other person meeting the criteria specified in the notice published under paragraph (1)(B), shall respond by providing the Commission with all the information requested in the notice at the earlier of—

(i) 30 days after the receipt of direct notice; or

(ii) 30 days after the publication of notice in the Federal Register.

(B) CERTIFICATION.—The response submitted under subparagraph (A) shall be signed by a responsible corporate officer, general partner, proprietor, or individual of similar authority, who shall certify under penalty of law the completeness and accuracy of the information submitted.

(3) NOTICE OF INITIAL DETERMINATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 120 days after the initial meeting of the Commission, the Commission shall send each insurer participant a notice of initial determination assessing a contribution to the Fund, which shall be based on the information received from the participant in response to the Commission's request for information.

(B) NO RESPONSE; INCOMPLETE RESPONSE.—If no response is received from an insurer participant, or if the response is incomplete, the initial determination assessing a contribution from the insurer participant shall be based on the best information available to the Commission.

(4) REVIEW PERIOD.—

(A) COMMENTS FROM INSURER PARTICIPANTS.—Not later than 30 days after receiving a notice of initial determination from the Commission, an insurer participant may provide the Commission with additional information to support limited adjustments to the assessment received to reflect exceptional circumstances.

(B) ADDITIONAL PARTICIPANTS.—If, before the final determination of the Commission, the Commission receives information that an additional person may qualify as an insurer participant, the Commission shall require such person to submit information necessary to determine whether a contribution from that person should be assessed, in accordance with the requirements of this subsection.

(C) REVISION PROCEDURES.—The Commission, shall adopt procedures for revising initial assessments based on information received under subparagraphs (A) and (B). Any adjustments to assessment levels shall comply with the criteria under subsection (a).

(5) SUBPOENAS.—The Commission may request the Attorney General to subpoena persons to compel testimony, records, and other information relevant to its responsibilities under this section. The Attorney General may enforce such subpoena in appropriate proceedings in the United States district court for the district in which the person to whom the subpoena was addressed resides, was served, or transacts business.

(6) NOTICE OF FINAL DETERMINATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the notice of initial determination is sent to the insurer participants, the Commission shall send each insurer participant a notice of final determination.

(B) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—A participant has a right to obtain judicial review of the Commission's final determination under title III.

(c) DETERMINATION OF RELATIVE LIABILITY FOR ASBESTOS INJURIES.—The Commission shall determine the percentage of the total liability of each participant identified under subsection (a).

(d) REPORT.—

(1) RECIPIENTS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Commission shall submit a report, containing the information described under paragraph (2), to—

(A) the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate;

(B) the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives; and

(C) the Court of Asbestos Claims.

(2) CONTENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall contain the amount that each insurer participant is required to contribute to the Fund, including the payment schedule for such contributions.

SEC. 213. POWERS OF ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—The Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence as the Commission considers advisable to carry out this Act.

(b) INFORMATION FROM FEDERAL AGENCIES.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal department or agency such information as the Commission considers necessary to carry out this Act. Upon request of the Chairman of the Commission, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(c) POSTAL SERVICES.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the Federal Government.

(d) GIFTS.—The Commission may not accept, use, or dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

SEC. 214. PERSONNEL MATTERS.

(a) COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS.—Each member of the Commission shall be compensated at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including travel time) during which such member is engaged in the performance of the duties of the Commission.

(b) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—The members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, while away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Commission.

(c) STAFF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Chairman of the Commission may, without regard to the civil service laws and regulations, appoint and terminate an executive director and such other additional personnel as may be necessary to enable the Commission to perform its duties. The employment of an executive director shall be subject to confirmation by the Commission.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Chairman of the Commission may fix the compensation of the executive director and other personnel without regard to chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, relating to classification of positions and General Schedule pay rates, except that the rate of pay for the executive director and other personnel may not exceed the rate payable for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of such title.

(d) DETAIL OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.—Any Federal Government employee may be detailed to the Commission without reimbursement, and such detail shall be without interruption or loss of civil service status or privilege.

(e) PROCUREMENT OF TEMPORARY AND INTERMITTENT SERVICES.—The Chairman of the Commission may procure temporary and intermittent services under section

3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals which do not exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of such title.

SEC. 215. NONAPPLICATION OF FOIA AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 552 of title 5, United States Code (commonly referred to as the Freedom of Information Act) shall not apply to the Commission.

(b) CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.—All information submitted to the Commission shall be privileged and confidential information and shall not be disclosed to any person outside the Commission, unless such privilege is knowingly and intentionally waived by the person submitting the information. An appeal of an assessment to the Fund under this subtitle shall be deemed a waiver for the purposes of this subsection unless the appellee participant makes a motion for an in camera review of its appeal.

SEC. 216. TERMINATION OF ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

The Commission shall terminate 60 days after the date on which the Commission submits its report under section 212(c).

SEC. 217. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Commission such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2004 to carry out the provisions of this subtitle.

(b) AVAILABILITY.—Any sums appropriated under the authorization contained in this section shall remain available, without fiscal year limitation, until expended.

Subtitle C—Office of Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution

SEC. 221. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE OFFICE OF ASBESTOS INJURY CLAIMS RESOLUTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is established the Office of Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution.

(b) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Office shall be responsible for—

(1) administering the Fund;

(2) providing compensation from the Fund to asbestos claimants who are determined to be eligible for such compensation; and

(3) carrying out other applicable provisions of this title and other activities determined appropriate by the Administrator.

(c) ADMINISTRATOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Office shall be headed by an Administrator who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(2) TERM; REMOVAL.—The Administrator shall serve for a term of 5 years and may be removable by the President only for good cause.

SEC. 222. POWERS OF THE ADMINISTRATOR AND MANAGEMENT OF THE FUND.

(a) GENERAL POWERS.—The Administrator shall have the following general powers:

(1) To promulgate such regulations as the Administrator determines to be necessary to implement the provisions of this subtitle.

(2) To appoint employees or contract for the services of other personnel as may be necessary and appropriate to carry out the provisions of this subtitle, including entering into cooperative agreements with other Federal agencies.

(3) To make such expenditures as may be necessary and appropriate in the administration of this subtitle.

(4) To take all actions necessary to prudently manage the Fund, including—

(A) administering, in a fiduciary capacity, the assets of the Fund for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to asbestos claimants and their beneficiaries;

(B) defraying the reasonable expenses of administering the Fund;

(C) investing the assets of the Fund in accordance with subsection (b)(2); and

(D) retaining advisers, managers, and custodians who possess the necessary facilities and expertise to provide for the skilled and prudent management of the Fund, to assist in the development, implementation and maintenance of the Fund's investment policies and investment activities, and to provide for the safekeeping and delivery of the Fund's assets.

(5) To have all other powers incidental, necessary, or appropriate to carrying out the functions of the Office.

(b) REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO FUND ASSETS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Amounts in the Fund shall be held for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to asbestos claimants and their beneficiaries and to otherwise defray the reasonable expenses of administering the Fund.

(2) INVESTMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Amounts in the Fund shall be administered and invested with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence, under the circumstances prevailing at the time of such investment, that a prudent person acting in a like capacity and manner would use.

(B) STRATEGY.—The Administrator shall invest amounts in the Fund in a manner that enables the Fund to make current and future distributions to or for the benefit of asbestos claimants. In pursuing an investment strategy under this subparagraph, the Administrator shall consider, to the extent relevant to an investment decision or action—

(i) the size of the Fund;

(ii) the nature and estimated duration of the Fund;

(iii) the liquidity and distribution requirements of the Fund;

(iv) general economic conditions at the time of the investment;

(v) the possible effect of inflation or deflation on Fund assets;

(vi) the role that each investment or course of action plays with respect to the overall assets of the Fund;

(vii) the expected amount to be earned (including both income and appreciation of capital) through investment of amounts in the Fund; and

(viii) the needs of asbestos claimants for current and future distributions authorized under this Act.

SEC. 223. ASBESTOS INJURY CLAIMS RESOLUTION FUND.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Office of Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution, the Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Fund, which shall be available to pay—

(1) claims for compensation for an eligible disease or condition determined under title I;

(2) claims for reimbursement for medical monitoring determined under title I;

(3) principal and interest on borrowings under subsection (c); and

(4) administrative expenses to carry out this subtitle.

(b) LIMITATIONS ON CONTRIBUTIONS BY MANDATORY PARTICIPANTS.—The aggregate contributions of all mandatory participants to the Fund may not exceed $5,000,000,000 in any calendar year.

(c) BORROWING AUTHORITY.—The Administrator is authorized to borrow, in any calendar year, an amount not to exceed anticipated contributions to the Fund in the following calendar year for purposes of carrying out the obligations of the Fund under this Act.

(d) GUARANTEED PAYMENT ACCOUNT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall establish a guaranteed payment account within the Fund to insure payment of the total amount of contributions required to be paid into the Fund by all participants.

(2) SURCHARGE.—The Administrator shall impose, on each participant required to pay contributions into the Fund under this Act, in addition to the amount of such contributions, a reasonable surcharge to be paid into the guaranteed payment account in an amount that the Administrator determines appropriate to insure against the risk of nonpayment of required contributions by any such participant.

(3) PROCEDURE.—The surcharge required under this section shall be paid in such manner, at such times, and in accordance with such procedures as the Administrator determines appropriate.

(4) USES OF GUARANTEED PAYMENT ACCOUNT.—Amounts in the guaranteed payment account shall be used as necessary to pay claims from the Fund, to the extent that amounts in the Fund are insufficient to pay such claims due to nonpayment by any participant.

(5) ENFORCEMENT.—The enforcement of the payment of a surcharge under this subsection may be enforced in the same manner and to the same extent as the enforcement of a contribution under section 224.

(e) ORPHAN SHARE RESERVE ACCOUNT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To the extent the total amount of contributions of the participants in any given year exceed the minimum aggregate contribution under subsection (h), the excess monies shall be placed in an orphan share reserve account established within the Fund by the Administrator.

(2) USE OF ACCOUNT MONIES.—Monies from the orphan share reserve account shall be preserved and administered like the remainder of the Fund, but shall be reserved and may be used only—

(A) in the event that a petition for relief is filed and not withdrawn for the participant under title 11, United States Code, after the date of enactment of this Act and the participant cannot meet its obligations under this subtitle; and

(B) to the extent the Administrator grants a participant relief for severe financial hardship or exigent circumstances under this section.

SEC. 224. ENFORCEMENT OF CONTRIBUTIONS.

(a) DEFAULT.—If any participant fails to make any payment in the amount and according to the schedule specified in a determination of assessment, after demand and 30 days opportunity to cure the default, there shall be a lien in favor of the United States for the amount of the delinquent payment (including interest) upon all property and rights to property, whether real or personal, belonging to such participant.

(b) BANKRUPTCY.—In the case of a bankruptcy or insolvency proceeding, the lien imposed under subsection (a) shall be treated in the same manner as a lien for taxes due and owing to the United States for purposes of the provisions of title 11, United States Code, or section 3713(a) of title 31, United States Code.

(c) CIVIL ACTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which there has been a refusal or neglect to pay the liability imposed by the final determination under section 202 or 212, the Administrator may bring a civil action in the Federal district court for the District of Columbia to—

(A) enforce such liability and the lien of the United States under this section; or

(B) subject any property, of whatever nature, of the participant, or in which the participant has any right, title, or interest, to the payment of such liability.

(2) DEFENSE LIMITATION.—In any proceeding under this subsection, the participant shall be barred from bringing any challenge to the assessment if such challenge could have been made during the review period under section 202(b)(4) or 212(b)(4), or a judicial review proceeding under title III.

SEC. 225. ADDITIONAL CONTRIBUTING PARTICIPANTS.

(a) DEFINED TERM.—In this section, the term ''additional contributing participant'' means any defendant in an asbestos claim that is not a mandatory participant under subtitle A and is likely to avoid future civil liability as a result of this Act.

(b) ASSESSMENT.—In addition to contributions assessed under subtitle A, the Administrator may assess additional contributing participants for contributions to the Fund. Any additional contributing participant assessed under this section shall be treated as a defendant participant for purposes of procedures and appeals under this Act.

(c) ASSESSMENT LIMITATIONS.—The Administrator may assess under subsection (b), over the life of the Fund, an amount not to exceed $10,000,000,000 from all additional contributing participants.

TITLE III—JUDICIAL REVIEW

SEC. 301. JUDICIAL REVIEW OF DECISIONS OF THE ASBESTOS COURT.

(a) EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION.—The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any action to review a final decision of the Asbestos Court.

(b) PROCEDURE FOR APPEALS.—

(1) PERIOD FOR FILING APPEAL.—An appeal under this section shall be filed not later than 30 days after the issuance of a final decision by the Asbestos Court.

(2) TRANSMITTAL OF RECORD.—Upon the filing of an appeal, a copy of the filing shall be transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Asbestos Court, and the Asbestos Court shall file in the court the record in the proceeding, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

(3) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The court shall uphold the decision of the Asbestos Court if the court determines, upon review of the record as a whole, that the decision is not arbitrary and capricious.

(B) EFFECT OF DETERMINATION.—If the court determines that a final decision of the Asbestos Court is arbitrary and capricious, the court shall remand the case to the Asbestos Court.

(4) FINALITY OF DETERMINATION.—The decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States, as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

SEC. 302. JUDICIAL REVIEW OF FINAL DETERMINATIONS OF THE ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

(a) EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION.—The United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any action to review a final determination by the Asbestos Insurers Commission regarding the assessment of a contribution to the Fund from a participant.

(b) PROCEDURE FOR APPEAL.—

(1) PERIOD FOR FILING APPEAL.—An appeal under this section shall be filed not later than 30 days after the issuance of a final determination by the Commission.

(2) TRANSMITTAL OF RECORD.—Upon the filing of an appeal, a copy of the filing shall be transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Commission.

(c) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall uphold the final determination of the Commission with respect to the assessment of a contribution to the Fund from a participant if such determination is not arbitrary and capricious.

(2) EFFECT OF DETERMINATION.—If the court determines that a final determination with respect to the amount of a contribution to the Fund by a participant may not be upheld, the court shall remand the decision to the Commission, with instructions to modify the final determination.

(3) NO STAYS.—The court may not issue a stay of payment into the Fund pending its final judgment.

(4) FINALITY OF DETERMINATION.—The judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court, as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

SEC. 303. EXCLUSIVE REVIEW.

(a) EXCLUSIVITY OF REVIEW.—An action of the Asbestos Court or the Asbestos Insurers Commission for which review could have been obtained under section 301 or 302 shall not be subject to judicial review in any other proceeding, including proceedings before the Asbestos Court.

(b) CONSTITUTIONAL REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any interlocutory or final judgment, decree, or order of a Federal court holding this Act, or any provision or application thereof, unconstitutional shall be reviewable as a matter of right by direct appeal to the Supreme Court.

(2) PERIOD FOR FILING APPEAL.—Any such appeal shall be filed not more than 30 days after entry of such judgment, decree, or order.

SEC. 304. PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION AGAINST REINSURERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any insurer participant may file a claim in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia against any reinsurer that is contractually obligated to reimburse such insurer participant for a portion of costs incurred as a result of payment of asbestos related claims.

(b) EXPEDITED PROCEDURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A claim filed under subsection (a) shall be subject to expedited procedures, as prescribed by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

(2) EVIDENTIARY STANDARD.—The plaintiff shall not recover in a claim under subsection (a) unless the plaintiff demonstrates the right to recover by a preponderance of the evidence.

(3) FINAL JUDGMENT.—A final judgment shall be issued on a claim filed under subsection (a) not later than 30 days after such filing.

(c) APPEALS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An appeal from a decision under subsection (b) may be filed with the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

(2) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—The final judgment of the district court shall be upheld unless the court of appeals finds the judgment to be arbitrary and capricious.

(3) FINAL JUDGMENT.—A final judgment shall be issued on an appeal filed under paragraph (1) not later than 30 days after such filing.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. FALSE INFORMATION.

Any person who knowingly provides false information in connection with an assessment of contributions, a claim for compensation, or an audit under this Act shall be subject to—

(1) criminal prosecution under section 1001 of title 18, United States Code; and

(2) civil penalties under section 3729 of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 402. EFFECT ON BANKRUPTCY LAWS.

(a) NO AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (17), by striking "or" at the end;

(2) in paragraph (18), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (18) the following:

"(19) of the enforcement of any payment obligations under section 204 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003, against a debtor, or the property of the estate of a debtor, that is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of that Act).".

(b) ASSUMPTION OF EXECUTORY CONTRACTS.—Section 365 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(q) If a debtor is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003), the trustee shall be deemed to have assumed all executory contracts entered into by the participant under section 204 of that Act. The trustee may not reject any such executory contract.".

(c) ALLOWED ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Section 503 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c)(1) Claims of the United States, the Attorney General, or the Administrator (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003) based upon the asbestos payment obligations of a debtor that is a Participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of that Act), shall be paid as an allowed administrative expense. The debtor shall not be entitled to either notice or a hearing with respect to such claims.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term "asbestos payment obligation" means any payment obligation under subtitle B of title II of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003.".

(d) NO DISCHARGE.—Section 523 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f) A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1228, or 1328 of this title does not discharge any debtor that is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003) of the payment obligations of the debtor under subtitle B of title II of that Act.".

(e) PAYMENT.—Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(i) PARTICIPANT DEBTORS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraphs (2) and (3) shall apply to a debtor who—

"(A) is a participant that has made prior asbestos expenditures (as such terms are defined in the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003); and

"(B) is subject to a case under this title that is pending—

"(i) on the date of enactment of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003; or

"(ii) at any time during the 1 year period preceding the date of enactment of that Act.

"(2) TIER I DEBTORS.—A debtor that has been assigned to tier I under section 202 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 shall make payments in accordance with sections 202 and 203 of that Act.

"(3) TREATMENT OF PAYMENT OBLIGATIONS.—All payment obligations of a debtor under sections 202 and 203 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 shall—

"(A) constitute costs and expenses of administration of a case under section 503 of this title;

"(B) notwithstanding any case pending under this title, be payable in accordance with section 202 of that Act;

"(C) not be stayed;

"(D) not be affected as to enforcement or collection by any stay or injunction of any court; and

"(E) not be impaired or discharged in any current or future case under this title.".

(f) TREATMENT OF TRUSTS.—Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(j) ASBESTOS TRUSTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A trust shall assign a portion of the corpus of the trust to the Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Fund (referred to in this subsection as the 'Fund') as is required under section 202 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 if—

"(A) the trust was formed prior to October 22, 1994; and

"(B) the trust qualifies as a "trust" under section 201 of that Act.

"(2) TRANSFER OF TRUST ASSETS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided under subparagraphs (B) and (C), the assets in any trust established to provide compensation for asbestos claims (as defined in section 3 of the FAIR Act of 2003) shall be transferred to the Fund not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of the FAIR Act of 2003. Except as provided under subparagraph (B), the Administrator of the Fund shall accept such assets and utilize them for any purposes of the Fund under section 223 of such Act, including the payment of claims for compensation under such Act to beneficiaries of the trust from which the assets were transferred. After such transfer, each trustee of such trust shall have no liability to any beneficiary of such trust.

"(B) AUTHORITY TO REFUSE ASSETS.—The Administrator of the Fund may refuse to accept any asset that the Administrator determines may create liability for the Fund in excess of the value of the asset.

"(C) ALLOCATION OF TRUST ASSETS.—If a trust under subparagraph (A) has beneficiaries with claims that are not asbestos claims, the assets transferred to the Fund under subparagraph (A) shall not include assets allocable to such beneficiaries. The trustees of any such trust shall determine the amount of such trust assets to be reserved for the continuing operation of the trust in processing and paying claims that are not asbestos claims. Such reserved amount shall not be greater than 3 percent of the total assets in the trust and shall not be transferred to the Fund.

"(D) SALE OF FUND ASSETS.—The investment requirements under section 222 of the FAIR Act of 2003 shall not be construed to require the Administrator of the Fund to sell assets transferred to the Fund under subparagraph (A).

"(E) LIQUIDATED CLAIMS.—A trust shall not make any payment relating to asbestos claims unless such claims were liquidated before the date of enactment of the FAIR Act of 2003.

"(3) INJUNCTION.—Any injunction issued as part of the formation of a trust described in paragraph (1) shall remain in full force and effect until the assignment required under paragraph (1) has been made.".

(g) NO AVOIDANCE OF TRANSFER.—Section 546 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(h) Notwithstanding the rights and powers of a trustee under section 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, and 550

of this title, if a debtor is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003), the trustee may not avoid a transfer made by the debtor pursuant to its payment obligations under sections 202 or 203 of that Act.''.

(h) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN.—Section 1129(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(14) If the debtor is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003), the plan provides for the continuation after its effective date of payment of all payment obligations under title II of that Act.''.

SEC. 403. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS AND EXISTING CLAIMS.

(a) EFFECT ON FEDERAL AND STATE LAW.—The provisions of this Act shall supersede any and all State and Federal laws insofar as they may relate to any asbestos claim filed under this Act.

(b) EXCLUSIVE REMEDY.—The remedies provided under this Act shall be the exclusive remedy for any asbestos claim under any Federal or State law.

(c) BAR ON ASBESTOS CLAIMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No asbestos claim may be pursued in any State or Federal court, except for enforcement of claims for which a final judgment is entered before the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) PREEMPTION.—Any action asserting an asbestos claim in a court of any State, except actions for which final judgment are entered before the date of enactment of this Act, is preempted by this Act.

(3) DISMISSAL.—No judgment other than a judgment of dismissal may be entered in any such action, including an action pending on appeal, or on petition or motion for discretionary review, on or after the date of enactment of this Act. A court may dismiss any such action on its motion. If the district court denies the motion to dismiss, it shall stay further proceedings until final disposition of any appeal taken under this Act.

(4) REMOVAL.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—If an action under paragraph (2) is not dismissed, or if an order entered after the date of enactment of this Act purporting to enter judgment or deny review is not rescinded and replaced with an order of dismissal within 30 days after the filing of a motion by any party to the action advising the court of the provisions of this Act, any party may remove the case to the district court of the United States for the district in which such action is pending.

(B) TIME LIMITS.—For actions originally filed after the date of enactment of this Act, the notice of removal shall be filed within the time limits specified in section 1441(b) of title 28, United States Code.

(C) PROCEDURES.—The procedures for removal and proceedings after removal shall be in accordance with sections 1446 through 1450 of title 28, United States Code, except as may be necessary to accommodate removal of any actions pending (including on appeal) on the date of enactment of this Act.

(D) JURISDICTION.—The jurisdiction of the district court shall be limited to—

(i) determining whether removal was proper; and

(ii) ruling on a motion to dismiss based on this Act.

Also:

- I introduce you and Nanette
- You guys are on from 1:30-2 in Room 450, EEOB; try to arrive 10 minutes early
- John Bridgeland follows you
- Ask for Christie Parell, Carmen Ingwell or me (at check-in table)
- 75 regional political appointees, mostly SES or GS-13-15
- Another 15-20 senior agency personnel
- Average age is 40+ (definitely a seasoned group)
- 20 minutes for presentation, 10 minutes for Q&A

I appreciate your participation!

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) ADMINISTRATOR.—The term ''Administrator'' means the Administrator of the Office of Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution appointed under section 221(c).

(2) ASBESTOS.—The term ''asbestos'' includes—

(A) chrysotile;

(B) amosite;

(C) crocidolite;

(D) tremolite;

(E) winchite;

(F) richterite;

(G) anthophyllite;

(H) actinolite;

(I) any of the minerals listed under subparagraphs (A) through (H) that has been chemically treated or altered, and any variety, type, or component thereof; and

(J) asbestos-containing material, such as asbestos-containing products, automotive or industrial parts or components, equipment, improvements to real property, and any other material that contains asbestos in any physical or chemical form.

(3) ASBESTOS CLAIM.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term ''asbestos claim'' means any personal injury claim for damages or other relief presented in a civil action or bankruptcy proceeding, arising out of, based on, or related to the health effects of exposure to asbestos, including loss of consortium, wrongful death, and any derivative claim made by, or on behalf of, any exposed person or any representative, spouse, parent, child or other relative of any exposed person.

(B) EXCLUSION.—The term does not include claims for benefits under a workers' compensation law or veterans' benefits program, or claims brought by any person as a subrogee by virtue of the payment of benefits under a workers' compensation law.

(4) ASBESTOS CLAIMANT.—The term "asbestos claimant" means an individual who files an asbestos claim under section 111.

(5) ASBESTOS COURT; COURT.—The terms "Asbestos Court" or "Court" means the United States Court of Asbestos Claims established under section 101.

(6) CIVIL ACTION.—The term "civil action" means all suits of a civil nature in State or Federal court, whether cognizable as cases at law or in equity or in admiralty, but does not include an action relating to any workers' compensation law, or a proceeding for benefits under any veterans' benefits program.

(7) COLLATERAL SOURCE.—The term "collateral source" means all collateral sources, including—

(A) disability insurance;

(B) health insurance;

(C) medicare;

(D) medicaid;

(E) death benefit programs;

(F) defendants;

(G) insurers of defendants; and

(H) compensation trusts.

(8) ELIGIBLE DISEASE OR CONDITION.—The term ''eligible disease or condition'' means, to the extent that the illness meets the medical criteria requirements established under subtitle C of title I, asbestosis/pleural disease, severe asbestosis disease, mesothelioma, lung cancer I, lung cancer II, other cancers, and qualifying non-malignant asbestos-related diseases.

(9) FUND.—The term ''Fund'' means the Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Fund established under section 223.

(10) LAW.—The term ''law'' includes all law, judicial or administrative decisions, rules, regulations, or any other principle or action having the effect of law.

(11) PARTICIPANT.—The term ''participant'' means any person subject to the funding requirements of title II, including—

(A) any defendant participant subject to an assessment for contribution under subtitle A of that title; and

(B) any insurer participant subject to an assessment for contribution under subtitle B of that title.

(12) PERSON.—The term ''person''—

(A) means an individual, trust, firm, joint stock company, partnership, association, insurance company, reinsurance company, or corporation; and

(B) does not include the United States, any State or local government, or subdivision thereof, including school districts and any general or special function governmental unit established under State law.

(13) STATE.—The term ''State'' means any State of the United States and also includes the District of Columbia, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin islands, Guam, American Samoa, and any other territory or possession of the United States or any political subdivision of any of the entities under this paragraph.

(14) VETERANS' BENEFITS PROGRAM.—The term ''veterans' benefits program'' means any program for benefits in connection with military service administered by the Veterans' Administration under title 38, United States Code.

(15) WORKER'S COMPENSATION LAW.—The term ''worker's compensation law''—

(A) means a law respecting a program administered by a State or the United States to provide benefits, funded by a responsible employer or its insurance carrier, for occupational diseases or injuries or for disability or death caused by occupational diseases or injuries;

(B) includes the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (33 U.S.C. sections 901 et seq.) and chapter 81 of title 5, United States Code; and

(C) does not include the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Employers' Liability Act, or damages recovered by any employee in a liability action against an employer.

TITLE I—ASBESTOS CLAIMS RESOLUTION

Subtitle A—United States Court of Asbestos Claims

SEC. 101. ESTABLISHMENT OF ASBESTOS COURT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part I of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 7 the following:

"CHAPTER 9—UNITED STATES COURT OF ASBESTOS CLAIMS

"Sec.
"201. Establishment of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.
"202. Magistrates.
"203. Retirement of judges of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.

"§ 201. Establishment of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT AND APPOINTMENT OF JUDGES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, 5 judges, who shall constitute a court of record known as the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.

"(2) ARTICLE I COURT.—The Court of Asbestos Claims is declared to be a court established under article I of the Constitution of the United States.

"(b) TERM; REMOVAL; COMPENSATION.—

"(1) TERM.—Each judge appointed under subsection (a) shall serve for a term of 15 years, except that judges initially appointed shall serve for staggered terms as the President shall determine appropriate to assure continuity.

"(2) REMOVAL.—Judges may be removed by the President only for good cause.

"(3) COMPENSATION.—Each judge shall receive a salary at the rate of pay, and in the same manner, as judges of the district courts of the United States.

"(c) CHIEF JUDGE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall designate 1 of the judges appointed under subsection (b)(1), who is less than 70 years of age, to serve as chief judge.

"(2) TERM.—The chief judge may continue to serve as such until—

"(A) he or she reaches the age of 70 years;

"(B) another judge is designated as chief judge by the President; or

"(C) the expiration of his or her term under subsection (b)(1).

"(3) CONTINUITY OF SERVICE.—Upon the designation by the President of another judge to serve as chief judge, the former chief judge may continue to serve as a judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims for the balance of the term to which he or she was appointed.

"(4) POWERS OF CHIEF JUDGE.—The chief judge is authorized to—

"(A) prescribe rules and procedures for hearings and appeals of the Court of Asbestos Claims and its magistrates;

"(B) appoint magistrates;

"(C) appoint or contract for the services of such personnel as may be necessary and appropriate to carry out the responsibilities of the Court of Asbestos Claims; and

"(D) make such expenditures as may be necessary and appropriate in the administration of the responsibilities of the Court of Asbestos Claims and the chief judge under this chapter and the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003.

"(d) TIME AND PLACES OF HOLDING COURT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The principal office of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be in the District of Columbia, but the Court of Asbestos Claims may hold court at such times and in such places as the chief judge may prescribe by rule.

"(2) LIMITATION.—The times and places of the sessions of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be prescribed with a view to securing reasonable opportunity to citizens to appear before the Court of Asbestos Claims.

"(e) OFFICIAL DUTY STATION; RESIDENCE.—

"(1) DUTY STATION.—The official duty station of each judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims is the District of Columbia.

"(2) RESIDENCE.—After appointment and while in active service, each judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall reside within 50 miles of the District of Columbia.

"§ 202. Magistrates

"(a) APPOINTMENT.—The chief judge shall appoint such magistrates as necessary to facilitate the expeditious processing of claims.

"(b) COMPENSATION.—The compensation of magistrates shall be determined by the chief judge, but shall not exceed the annual rate of basic pay of level V of the Executive Schedule, as prescribed by section 5316 of title 5.

"(c) RETIREMENT.—For purposes of Federal laws relating to retirement, including chapters 83 and 84 of title 5, magistrates appointed under this section shall be deemed to be appointed under section 631 of this title.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—Except as provided under subsection (c), chapter 43 shall not apply to magistrates appointed under this chapter, except the chief judge may prescribe rules similar to the provisions of chapter 43 to apply to magistrates.

"§ 203. Retirement of judges of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of Federal laws relating to retirement, judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be treated in the same manner and to the same extent as judges of the Court of Federal Claims.

"(b) REGULATIONS.—In carrying out this section—

"(1) the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall promulgate regulations to apply provisions similar to section 178 of this title (including the establishment of a Court of Asbestos Claims Judges Retirement Fund) to judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims; and

"(2) the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall promulgate regulations to apply chapters 83 and 84 of title 5 to judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims.".

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part I of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to chapter 9, and inserting after the item relating to chapter 7 the following:

"9. United States Court of Asbestos Claims.".

Subtitle B—Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Procedures

SEC. 111. FILING OF CLAIMS.

(a) WHO MAY SUBMIT.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—Any individual who has suffered from an eligible disease or condition that is believed to meet the requirements established under subtitle C (or the spouse, parent, child, or other relative of such individual in a representative capacity, or the executor of the estate of such individual) may file a claim with the Asbestos Court for compensation with respect to such injury.

(2) RULES.—The Asbestos Court may issue procedural rules to specify individuals who may file an asbestos claim as a representative of another individual.

(3) LIMITATION.—An asbestos claim may not be filed by any person seeking contribution or indemnity.

(b) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—To be valid, an asbestos claim filed under subsection (a) shall be notarized and include—

(1) the name, social security number, gender, date of birth, and, if applicable, date of death of the claimant;

(2) information relating to the identity of dependents and beneficiaries of the claimant;

(3) a detailed description of the work history of the claimant, including social security records or a signed release permitting access to such records;

(4) a detailed description of the asbestos exposure of the claimant, including information on the identity of any product or manufacturer, site, or location of exposure, plant name, and duration and intensity of exposure;

(5) a detailed description of the tobacco product use history of the claimant, including frequency and duration;

(6) an identification and description of the asbestos-related diseases of the claimant, including a written report by the claimant's physician with medical diagnoses and test results necessary to make a determination of medical eligibility that complies with the applicable requirements of this subtitle and subtitle C;

(7) a description of any prior or pending civil action or other claim brought by the claimant for asbestos-related injury, including an identification of any recovery of compensation or damages through settlement, judgment, or otherwise; and

(8) any other information that is required to be included under procedural rules issued by the Court.

(c) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), if an individual fails to file an asbestos claim with the Asbestos Court under this section within 2 years after the date on which the individual first—

(A) received a medical diagnosis of an eligible disease or condition as provided for under this subtitle and subtitle C; or any claim relating to that injury, and any other asbestos claim related to that injury, shall be extinguished, and any recovery thereon shall be prohibited.

(B) discovered facts that would have led a reasonable person to obtain a medical diagnosis with respect to an eligible disease or condition,

(2) EFFECT ON PENDING CLAIMS.—If an asbestos claimant has any claim for an asbestos-related injury that is pending in a Federal or State court or with a trust established under title 11, United States Code, on the date of enactment of this Act, such claimant shall file an asbestos claim under this section within 2 years after such date of enactment or be barred from receiving any compensation under this title.

(3) EFFECT OF MULTIPLE INJURIES.—An asbestos claimant who receives compensation under this title for an eligible disease or condition, and who subsequently develops another such injury, shall be eligible for additional compensation under this title (subject to appropriate setoffs for such prior recovery of compensation under this title and from any other collateral source) and the statute of limitations under paragraph (1) shall not begin to run with respect to such subsequent injury until such claimant obtains a medical diagnosis of such other injury or discovers facts that would have led a reasonable person to obtain such a diagnosis.

(4) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Paragraph (2) shall be interpreted as a statute of limitations and be construed to the benefit of the Fund and of any person who might otherwise have been made subject to an asbestos claim to which such paragraph is applied.

SEC. 112. GENERAL RULE CONCERNING NO-FAULT COMPENSATION.

An asbestos claimant shall not be required to demonstrate that the asbestos-related injury for which the claim is being made resulted from the negligence or other fault of any other person.

SEC. 113. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ELIGIBLE ASBESTOS CLAIM.

To be eligible for compensation under this subtitle for an asbestos-related injury, an individual shall—

(1) file an asbestos claim in a timely manner in accordance with section 111; and

(2) prove, by a preponderance of the evidence that—

(A) the claimant suffers from an eligible disease or condition, as demonstrated by evidence (submitted as part of the claim) that meets the medical criteria requirements and diagnostic criteria requirements established under subtitle C; and

(B) the claimant meets the latency criteria requirements and the exposure criteria requirements established under subtitle C.

SEC. 114. ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS AND CLAIM AWARDS.

(a) CLAIMS EXAMINERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Asbestos Court shall appoint, or contract for the services of, qualified individuals to assist magistrates by conducting eligibility reviews of asbestos claims filed with the Court.

REV_00119070

(2) CRITERIA.—The Asbestos Court shall establish criteria with respect to the qualifications of individuals who are eligible to serve as claims examiners and, in developing such criteria, shall consult with such experts as the Court determines appropriate.

(b) REFERRAL OF ASBESTOS CLAIM.—Not later than 20 days after the filing of an asbestos claim with the Asbestos Court, the Court shall refer such claim to a magistrate.

(c) INITIAL REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Under the direction of a magistrate, a claims examiner shall make an initial review of an asbestos claim to determine whether all required information has been submitted by the claimant.

(2) NOTICE OF INCOMPLETE CLAIM.—If the claims examiner determines that all required information has not been submitted, the examiner—

(A) shall notify the claimant of such determination and require the submission of additional information necessary for a determination of eligibility;

(B) may compel the submission of any additional information;

(C) may request that the claimant undergo additional medical examinations and tests if information from such examinations or tests is necessary to enable the examiner to make a determination of medical eligibility; and

(D) may require any releases necessary to enable the examiner to obtain medical or other information relevant to the determination of eligibility.

(d) EXPEDITIOUS DETERMINATIONS.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules to expedite claims for asbestos claimants with exigent circumstances.

(e) AUDIT AND PERSONNEL REVIEW PROCEDURES.—The Asbestos Court shall establish audit and personnel review procedures for evaluating the accuracy of eligibility recommendations of magistrates.

(f) ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the receipt by a magistrate of all required information and requested medical advice with respect to an asbestos claim, the magistrate shall transmit a recommendation of the compensation to which the claimant is entitled and findings of fact to a judge of the Asbestos Court.

(2) ADMISSIBILITY OF FINDINGS OF FACT.—A determination under paragraph (1) shall include relevant findings of fact and shall be admissible as evidence in any judicial review.

(g) DECISION OF JUDGE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after receipt of a recommendation of a magistrate, a judge of the Asbestos Court shall make a final decision of any compensation to which the claimant is entitled.

(2) WAIVER OF JUDICIAL REVIEW.—The final decision under paragraph (1) shall include an acceptance form by which the claimant may waive the right to judicial review and expedite payment of compensation from the Fund.

(h) AWARDING OF COMPENSATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If a judge of the Asbestos Court determines that an asbestos claimant is entitled to compensation, the Court shall notify the Administrator to award the claimant compensation from the Fund in the amount of the judge's decision.

(2) CLAIM EXTINGUISHED.—The acceptance of a payment under this Act shall extinguish all claims related to such payment.

SEC. 115. MEDICAL EVIDENCE AUDITING PROCEDURES.

(a) DEVELOPMENT.—The Asbestos Court shall develop methods for auditing the medical evidence submitted as part of an asbestos claim, including methods to ensure the independent reading of x-rays and results of pulmonary function tests. The Court may develop additional methods for auditing other types of evidence or information received by the Court.

(b) REFUSAL TO CONSIDER CERTAIN EVIDENCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Asbestos Court determines that an audit conducted in accordance with the methods developed under subsection (a) demonstrates that the medical evidence submitted by a specific physician or medical facility is not consistent with prevailing medical practices or the applicable requirements of this Act, the Court shall notify claims examiners and the magistrates that any medical evidence from such physician or facility shall be unacceptable for purposes of establishing eligibility for compensation under this Act.

(2) NOTIFICATION.—Upon a determination by the Asbestos Court under paragraph (1), the Court shall notify the physician or medical facility involved of the results of the audit. Such physician or facility shall have a right to appeal the determination of the Court under procedures issued by the Court.

SEC. 116. CLAIMANT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Asbestos Court shall establish an asbestos claimant assistance program to provide assistance to claimants in preparing and submitting asbestos claim applications and in responding to claimant inquiries.

(b) LEGAL ASSISTANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As part of the program established under subsection (a), the Asbestos Court shall establish a legal assistance program to provide assistance to asbestos claimants concerning legal representation issues.

(2) LIST OF QUALIFIED ATTORNEYS.—As part of the program, the Court shall maintain a roster of qualified attorneys who have agreed to provide pro bono services to asbestos claimants under rules established by the Court. The claimants shall not be required to use the attorneys listed on such roster.

Subtitle C—Medical Criteria

SEC. 121. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ELIGIBLE ASBESTOS CLAIM.

To be eligible for compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, an individual shall—

(1) file an asbestos claim under this title in a timely manner; and

(2) prove, by a preponderance of the evidence that—

(A) the claimant suffers from an eligible disease or condition, as demonstrated by evidence (submitted as part of the claim) that meets the diagnostic criteria requirements described in section 122 and the medical criteria requirements described in section 124; and

(B) the claimant meets the latency criteria requirements described in section 123 and the exposure criteria requirements described in section 125.

SEC. 122. DIAGNOSTIC CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall demonstrate a medical diagnosis that meets the requirements of this section.

(b) DIAGNOSIS.—A medical diagnosis meets the requirements of this section if the diagnosis—

(1) is made by a physician who—

(A) treated, or is treating, the claimant;

(B) conducted an in-person medical examination of the claimant; and

(C) is licensed to practice medicine in the State in which the examination occurred and in which the diagnosis is rendered;

(2) includes a review by the physician of the work history, asbestos exposure pattern, and smoking history of the claimant, or other factors determined appropriate by the Asbestos Court;

(3) is independently verified with respect to the duration, proximity, regularity, and intensity of the asbestos exposure involved; and

(4) has excluded other more likely causes of the injury of the claimant.

(c) RESULTS OF MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS AND TESTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In making the demonstration required under subsection (a), an asbestos claimant shall submit—

(A) x-rays (including both films and B-reader reports);

(B) detailed results of pulmonary function tests (including spirometric tracings);

(C) laboratory tests; and

(D) the results of medical examination or reviews of other medical evidence.

(2) PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS.—A submission under paragraph (1) shall comply with the requirements of this Act and recognized medical standards regarding equipment, testing methods, and procedures to ensure that such medical evidence is reliable.

(d) SUFFICIENCY OF MEDICAL EVIDENCE.—In making determinations under this section, a magistrate shall not make a determination unless the medical evidence provided in support of the asbestos claim is credible and consistent with this section, the medical criteria described in section 124, and recognized medical standards.

(e) ATTORNEY RETENTION AGREEMENTS.—An attorney retention agreement shall not be required as a prerequisite to a medical examination or medical screening for purposes of obtaining a medical diagnosis or other medical information under this section.

(f) RULES.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules to implement the diagnostic criteria requirements to be used in applying this section.

SEC. 123. LATENCY CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall demonstrate that the claimant was exposed to asbestos—

(1) in a manner that meets the exposure requirements of sections 124 and 125;

(2) within the United States or its territories or possessions; and

(3) for at least 10 years before the initial diagnosis of any asbestos-related injury.

(b) CONSISTENCY WITH MEDICAL CRITERIA.—An asbestos claimant shall be required to demonstrate that any delay between asbestos exposure and the asbestos-related injury is consistent with medical criteria concerning the latency periods typically associated with the disease category for which the claim is being made.

(c) VARIATIONS IN LATENCY PERIODS.—Latency periods under this section may vary based on the eligible disease or condition involved.

(d) RULES.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules, based on the medical literature or other appropriate medical evidence concerning latency periods, for the purpose of implementing the criteria used in applying this section.

SEC. 124. MEDICAL CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) BILATERAL ASBESTOS-RELATED NONMALIGNANT DISEASE.—The term ''bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease'' means a diagnosis of bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease based on—

(A) an x-ray reading of 1/0 or higher on the ILO scale; or

(B) an x-ray showing bilateral pleural plaques or pleural thickening, bilateral interstitial fibrosis, or bilateral interstitial markings.

(2) BILATERAL PLEURAL DISEASE OF B2.—The term ''bilateral pleural disease of B2'' means a chest wall pleural thickening or plaque with a maximum width of at least 5 millimeters and a total length of at least ¼ of the projection of the lateral chest wall.

(3) FEV1.—The term ''FEV1'' means forced expiratory volume (1 second), which is the maximal volume of air expelled in 1 second during performance of the spirometric test for forced vital capacity.

(4) FVC.—The term ''FVC'' means forced vital capacity, which is the maximal volume of air expired with a maximally forced effort from a position of maximal inspiration.

(5) ILO GRADE.—The term ''ILO grade'' means the radiological ratings for the presence of lung or pleural changes as determined from a chest x-ray, all as established from time to time by the International Labor Organization.

(6) PATHOLOGICAL EVIDENCE OF ASBESTOSIS.—The term ''pathological evidence of asbestosis'' means proof of asbestosis based on the pathological grading system for asbestosis described in the Special Issue of the Archives of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, ''Asbestos-associated Diseases'', Vol. 106, No. 11, App. 3 (October 8, 1982).

(7) PULMONARY FUNCTION TESTING.—The term ''pulmonary function testing'' means spirometry testing that is in compliance with the quality criteria established from time to time by the American Thoracic Society and is performed on equipment which is in compliance with the standards of the American Thoracic Society for technical quality and calibration.

(8) SIGNIFICANT OCCUPATIONAL EXPOSURE.—The term ''significant occupational exposure'' means employment for a cumulative period of at least 5 years, in an industry and an occupation in which the claimant—

(A) handled raw asbestos fibers on a regular basis;

(B) fabricated asbestos-containing products so that the claimant in the fabrication process was exposed on a regular basis to raw asbestos fibers;

(C) altered, repaired, or otherwise worked with an asbestos-containing product such that the claimant was exposed on a regular basis to asbestos fibers; or

(D) was employed in an industry and occupation such that the claimant worked on a regular basis in close proximity to workers engaged in the activities described under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

(9) TLC.—The term ''TLC'' means total lung capacity, which is the volume of air in the lung after maximal inspiration.

(b) REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible for compensation or medical monitoring reimbursement under this title, a claimant shall establish that the claimant meets the medical criteria for 1 of the following categories:

(1) For Level I: Asymptomatic Exposure, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease or an asbestos-related malignancy; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) 5 years cumulative occupational exposure to asbestos.

(2) For Level II: Asbestosis/Pleural Disease A, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade 1/0 or greater, or showing bilateral pleural disease of B2 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(3) For Level III: Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade 1/0 or greater, or showing bilateral pleural disease of B2 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis;

(B) pulmonary function testing that shows—

(i) TLC less than 80 percent of predicted; or

(ii) FVC less than 80 percent of predicted, and a FEV1/FVC ratio of not less than 65 percent; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(4) For Level IV: Severe Asbestosis, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade

2/1 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis;

(B) pulmonary function testing that shows—

(i) TLC less than 65 percent of predicted; or

(ii) FVC less than 65 percent of predicted, and a FEV1/FVC ratio greater than 65 percent; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(5) For Level V: Other Cancer, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary laryngeal, esophageal, pharyngeal, or stomach cancer;

(B) evidence of an underlying bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(6) For Level VI: Lung Cancer One, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary lung cancer; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982.

(7) For Level VII: Lung Cancer Two, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary lung cancer;

(B) evidence of an underlying bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease;

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure; and

(D) supporting medical documentation and certification by or on behalf of the claimant establishing asbestos exposure as a contributing factor causing the relevant lung cancer.

(8) For Level VIII: Mesothelioma, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of mesothelioma; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of exposure to asbestos.

SEC. 125. EXPOSURE CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall contain information to demonstrate that the claimant meets the minimum exposure requirements under this subtitle.

(b) BURDEN OF PROOF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant has the burden of demonstrating meaningful and credible exposure to asbestos for purposes of this subtitle.

(2) EVIDENCE.—The demonstration under paragraph (1) may be established by—

(A) an affidavit submitted by the claimant, a coworker of the claimant, or a family member, in the case of a deceased claimant;

(B) employment records;

(C) invoices;

(D) construction or other similar records; or

(E) other credible evidence.

(c) RULES.—

(1) EXPOSURE INFORMATION.—The Asbestos Court shall issue rules prescribing specific exposure information that shall be submitted to permit the Court to process an asbestos claim and prescribing a proof of claim form. Such rules may provide that a claims examiner or magistrate, as applicable, may require the submission of other or additional evidence of exposure when determined to be appropriate and necessary.

(2) REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS.—The Asbestos Court may prescribe rules identifying specific industries, occupations within those industries, time periods, and employment periods for which significant occupational exposure (as defined under section 124) may be a rebuttable presumption for asbestos claimants who provide meaningful and credible evidence that the claimant worked in that industry and occupation for the requisite period of time. The Administrator may provide evidence to rebut this presumption.

Subtitle D—Awards

SEC. 131. AMOUNT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant who meets the requirements of section 113 shall be entitled to compensation in an amount determined by reference to the benefit table contained in subsection (b).

(b) BENEFIT TABLE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant with an eligible disease or condition established in accordance with section 124, other than an injury described in paragraph (2), shall be eligible for compensation according to the following schedule:

Level	Scheduled Condition or Disease	Scheduled Value
I	Asymptomatic Exposure	$0
II	Asbestosis/Pleural Disease A	$0
III	Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B	$40,000
IV	Severe Asbestosis	$400,000
V	Other Cancer	$200,000
VI	Lung Cancer I (smoker)	$50,000
VII	Lung Cancer II (non-smoker)	$400,000
VIII	Mesothelioma	$750,000

(2) MEDICAL MONITORING.—An asbestos claimant with asymptomatic exposure or asbestosis/pleural disease A, based on the criteria under section 124(b)(1), shall only be eligible for medical monitoring reimbursement.

SEC. 132. MEDICAL MONITORING.

(a) RELATION TO STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—The filing of an asbestos claim that seeks reimbursement for medical monitoring shall not be considered as evidence that the claimant has discovered facts that would otherwise commence the period applicable for purposes of the statute of limitations under section 111(c).

(b) COSTS.—Reimbursable medical monitoring costs shall include the costs of a claimant not covered by health insurance for x-ray tests and pulmonary function tests every 3 years.

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Administrator shall promulgate regulations that establish—

(1) the reasonable costs for medical monitoring that is reimbursable; and

(2) the procedures applicable to asbestos claimants.

SEC. 133. PAYMENTS.

(a) STRUCTURED PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant who is entitled to compensation shall receive such compensation through structured payments from the Fund, made over a period of not less than 3 years.

(2) ACCELERATED PAYMENTS.—The Administrator shall develop guidelines to provide for accelerated payments to asbestos claimants who are mesothelioma victims and who are alive on the date on which the administrator receives notice of the eligibility of the claimant. Such payments shall be credited against the first regular payment under the structured payment plan for the claimant.

(3) EXPEDITED PAYMENTS.—The Administrator shall develop guidelines to provide for expedited payments to asbestos claimants in cases of exigent circumstances or extreme hardship caused by asbestos-related injury.

(4) ANNUITY.—An asbestos claimant may elect to receive any payments to which they are entitled under this title in the form of an annuity.

(b) LIMITATION ON TRANSFERABILITY.—An asbestos claim shall not be assignable or otherwise transferable under this Act.

(c) CREDITORS.—An award of compensation under this title shall be exempt from all claims of creditors and from levy, execution, and attachment or other remedy for recovery or collection of a debt, and such exemption may not be waived.

(d) TREATMENT FOR INTERNAL REVENUE PURPOSES.—All compensation received under this subtitle shall be deemed to be compensation for personal physical injuries or physical sickness under section 104 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(e) MEDICARE AS SECONDARY PAYER.—No award of compensation under this title shall be deemed a payment for purposes of section 1862 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395y).

SEC. 134. REDUCTION IN BENEFIT PAYMENTS FOR COLLATERAL SOURCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amount of compensation otherwise available to an asbestos claimant under this title shall be reduced by the amount of collateral source compensation that the claimant received, or is entitled to receive, for the asbestos-related injury that is the subject of the compensation.

(b) EXCLUSIONS.—In no case shall statutory benefits under workers' compensation laws and veterans benefits programs be deemed as collateral source compensation for purposes of this section.

Subtitle E—En Banc Review

SEC. 141. EN BANC REVIEW.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) EN BANC PANELS.—The chief judge of the Asbestos Court shall—

(A) establish en banc panels to carry out this subtitle; and

(B) assign 3 judges of the Asbestos Court to each en banc panel.

(2) FILING OF APPEAL.—Not later than 30 days after receiving notice of the decision of a judge under section 114, a claimant may file an appeal for review with an en banc panel of the Asbestos Court.

(b) DE NOVO REVIEW.—An Asbestos Court panel shall provide a de novo review of the magistrate's determination and the judge's decision.

(c) REPRESENTATION OF THE ADMINISTRATOR.—The Administrator may appoint counsel to represent the interests of the Fund and the Administrator in all proceedings before a panel, including oral arguments and the submission of briefs.

(d) FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE.—An Asbestos Court panel shall apply the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedures to all proceedings before the panel.

(e) DECISION OF PANEL.—An Asbestos Court panel shall enter a final decision on an appeal on the earlier date occurring—

(1) not later than 30 days after the date of the conclusion of oral arguments; or

(2) not later than 60 days after an appeal is filed under this section.

TITLE II—ASBESTOS INJURY CLAIMS RESOLUTION FUND

Subtitle A—Asbestos Defendants Funding Allocation

SEC. 201. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) AFFILIATED GROUP.—The term ''affiliated group'' means—

(A) with respect to any nonbankrupt defendant participant that is an ultimate parent or a person whose entire beneficial interest is owned on the date of enactment of this Act, directly or indirectly, by an ultimate parent, that set of nonbankrupt persons including the ultimate parent and all of the nonbankrupt persons whose entire beneficial interest shall be owned on December 31, 2002, directly or indirectly, by that ultimate parent; or

(B) with respect to any bankrupt defendant participant, the debtor and all of its direct and indirect majority owned subsidiaries, whether or not such subsidiaries are debtors.

(2) DEBTOR.—The term ''debtor''—

(A) means all entities that are subject to a case pending under any chapter of title 11,

United States Code, on the date of enactment of this Act; and

(B) shall not include an entity—

(i) subject to chapter 7 of title 11, United States Code, if a final decree closing the estate shall have been entered before the date of enactment of this Act; or

(ii) subject to chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, if a plan of reorganization for such entity shall have been confirmed by a final judgment.

(3) INDEMNIFIABLE COST.—The term ''indemnifiable cost'' means a cost, expense, debt, judgment, or settlement incurred with respect to an asbestos claim that, at any time before December 31, 2002, was or could have been subject to indemnification, contribution, surety, or guaranty.

(4) INDEMNITEE.—The term ''indemnitee'' means a person against whom any asbestos claim has been asserted before December 31, 2002, who has received from any other person, or on whose behalf a sum has been paid by such other person to any third person, in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity in connection with an alleged duty with respect to the defense or indemnification of such person concerning that asbestos claim, other than under a policy of insurance or reinsurance.

(5) INDEMNITOR.—The term ''indemnitor'' means a person who has paid under a written agreement at any time before December 31, 2002, a sum in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity to or on behalf of any person defending against an asbestos claim, in connection with an alleged duty with respect to the defense or indemnification of such person concerning that asbestos claim, except that payments by an insurer or reinsurer under a contract of insurance or reinsurance shall not make the insurer or reinsurer an indemnitor for purposes of this subtitle.

(6) PRIOR ASBESTOS EXPENDITURES.—The term ''prior asbestos expenditures''—

(A) means the gross total amount paid by or on behalf of a person at any time before December 31, 2002, in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity costs related to all asbestos claims against that person;

(B) includes payments made by insurance carriers to or for the benefit of such person or on such person's behalf with respect to such asbestos claims, except as provided in section 204(g);

(C) shall not include any payment made by a person in connection with any activities or disputes related to insurance coverage matters for asbestos-related liabilities; and

(D) shall not include any payment made by or on behalf of persons who are common carriers by railroad for asbestos claims brought under the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Employers' Liability Act, including settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity costs associated with these claims.

(7) TRUST.—The term ''trust'' means all persons or affiliated groups that formed under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, or formed under any plan under section 1129 of title 11, United States Code, for the purpose of administering and paying asbestos claims.

(8) ULTIMATE PARENT.—The term ''ultimate parent'' means a person—

(A) that owns, on the date of enactment of this Act, the entire beneficial interest, directly or indirectly, of at least 1 other person; and

(B) whose entire beneficial interest is not owned, on December 31, 2002, directly or indirectly, by any other single person.

SEC. 202. AUTHORITY AND TIERS.

(a) ASSESSMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assess from defendant participants contributions to the Fund in accordance with this section based on tiers and subtiers assigned to defendant participants.

(2) AGGREGATE CONTRIBUTION LEVEL.—The total contribution required of all defendant participants over the life of the Fund shall be equal to $45,000,000,000.

(b) TIER I.—The Administrator shall assign to Tier I all persons that are debtors or affiliated groups that include a person that—

(1) is a debtor on the date of enactment of this Act or at any time during the 1-year period preceding that date; and

(2) have paid a prior asbestos expenditure, irrespective of whether a related case under title 11, United States Code, is dismissed.

(c) TREATMENT OF TIER I BUSINESS ENTITIES IN BANKRUPTCY.—

(1) DEFINED TERM.—In this subsection, the term ''bankrupt business entity'' means a person that is not a natural person that—

(A) filed under chapter 11, of title 11, United States Code, before January 1, 2003;

(B) has not confirmed a plan of reorganization as of the date of enactment of this Act; and

(C) the Chief Executive Officer, Chief Financial Officer, or Chief Legal Officer of that business entity certifies in writing to the bankruptcy court presiding over the business entity's case, that asbestos liability was neither the sole nor precipitating cause for the filing under chapter 11.

(2) PROCEEDING WITH REORGANIZATION PLAN.—A bankrupt business entity may proceed with the filing, solicitation, and confirmation of a plan of reorganization that does not comply with the requirements of this Act, including a trust and channeling injunction under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, notwithstanding any other provisions of this Act, if—

(A) the bankruptcy court presiding over the chapter 11 case of the bankrupt business entity determines that—

(i) confirmation is necessary to permit the reorganization of that entity and assure that all creditors and that entity are treated fairly and equitably; and

(ii) confirmation is clearly favored by the balance of the equities; and

(B) an order confirming the plan of reorganization is entered by the bankruptcy court within 9 months after the date of enactment of this Act or such longer period of time approved by the bankruptcy court for cause shown.

(3) APPLICABILITY.—If the bankruptcy court does not make the required determination, or if an order confirming the plan is not entered within 9 months of the effective date of this Act or such longer period of time approved by the bankruptcy court for cause shown, the provisions of the Act shall apply to the bankrupt business entity notwithstanding the certification. Any timely appeal under title 11, United States Code, from a confirmation order entered during the applicable time period shall automatically extend the time during which this Act is inapplicable to the bankrupt business entity, until the appeal is fully and finally resolved.

(4) OFFSETS.—

(A) PAYMENTS BY INSURERS.—To the extent that a bankrupt business entity successfully confirms a plan of reorganization, including a trust under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, and channeling injunction that involves payments by insurers who are otherwise subject to this Act, an insurer who makes payments to the trust under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, shall obtain a dollar for dollar reduction in the amount otherwise payable by that insurer under this Act to the Fund.

(B) CONTRIBUTIONS TO FUND.—Any cash payments by a bankrupt business entity, if any, to a trust under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, may be counted as a contribution to the Fund.

(d) TIERS II THROUGH VI.—Except as provided in sections 202(b), 204(b), and 204(g), persons or affiliated groups shall be assigned to Tier II, III, IV, V, or VI according to the prior asbestos expenditures paid by such persons or affiliated groups as follows:

(1) Tier II: $75,000,000 or greater.

(2) Tier III: $50,000,000 or greater but less than $75,000,000.

(3) Tier IV: $10,000,000 or greater but less than $50,000,000.

(4) Tier V: $5,000,000 or greater but less than $10,000,000.

(5) Tier VI: $1,000,000 or greater but less than $5,000,000.

(e) ASSIGNMENTS AND COSTS.—

(1) PERMANENT ASSIGNMENT.—Subject to section 204(d), after the Administrator has assigned a person or affiliated group to a tier under this section, such person or affiliated group shall remain in that tier throughout the life of the Fund, regardless of subsequent events, including—

(A) the filing of a petition under a chapter of title 11, United States Code;

(B) a discharge from bankruptcy;

(C) the confirmation of a plan of reorganization; or

(D) the sale or transfer of assets to any other person or affiliated group.

(2) COSTS.—The payment of contributions to the Fund by all persons or affiliated groups that include a person that is a debtor that is the subject of a case under a chapter of title 11, United States Code, after the date of enactment of this Act—

(A) shall constitute costs and expenses of administration of the case under section 503 of that title 11 and shall be payable in accordance with the payment provisions under this subtitle notwithstanding the pendency of the case under that title 11;

(B) shall not be stayed or affected as to enforcement or collection by any stay or injunction power of any court; and

(C) shall not be impaired or discharged in any current or future case under title 11, United States Code.

(f) SUPERSEDING PROVISIONS.—Any plan of reorganization with respect to any debtor assigned to Tier I and any agreement, understanding, or undertaking by any such debtor or any third party with respect to the treatment of any asbestos claim filed before the date of enactment of this Act and subject to confirmation of a plan under chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, shall be superseded in their entirety by this Act. Any such plan of reorganization, agreement, understanding, or undertaking by any debtor or any third party shall be of no force or effect, and no person shall have any rights or claims with respect to any of the foregoing.

SEC. 203. SUBTIER ASSESSMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) ASSESSMENTS.—Except as provided under subsections (a), (b), (d), (f), and (g) of section 204, the Administrator shall assess contributions to persons or affiliated groups within Tiers I through VII in accordance with this section.

(2) 2002 REVENUES.—The audited consolidated revenue for the year 2002 of each debtor (in this section referred to as "2002 revenues") shall include the revenues for year 2002 of the debtor and all of its affiliated groups. The pro forma revenues of a person or affiliated group that are assigned to Subtier 3 shall not be included in calculating the 2002 revenues of any debtor that is a direct or indirect majority owner of such Subtier 3 person or affiliated group.

(3) GROSS REVENUES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, gross revenues shall be determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, consistently applied, using the amount reported as gross revenues in the annual report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission in accordance with section 13(a)(2) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78m(a)(2)) for the year ending December 31, 2002, or, if applicable, the earlier fiscal year that ends during calendar year 2002, if such fiscal year is principally employed by the defendant participant.

(B) INSURANCE PREMIUMS.—Any portion of gross revenues of a defendant participant that is derived from insurance premiums shall not be used to calculate the contribution of that defendant participant under this subtitle.

(C) PRIVATELY-HELD COMPANIES.—If the defendant participant is not required to file an earnings report with the Securities and Exchange Commission, gross revenues shall be the amount that the defendant participant would have reported as gross revenues in the event that it had been required to file the report described under subparagraph (A).

(b) TIER I SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided under subsections (a), (b), (d), (f), and (g) of section 204, the Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier I to 1 of 4 Subtiers. Each person or affiliated group shall make contributions to the Fund as provided under this section.

(2) SUBTIER 1.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are debtors or affiliated groups, which include a debtor with prior asbestos expenditures of $10,000,000 or greater, shall be assigned to Subtier 1.

(B) ASSIGNMENT.—Each debtor assigned to Subtier 1 shall make annual payments based on a percentage of its 2002 revenues.

(C) PAYMENT.—Each debtor assigned to Subtier 1 shall pay on an annual basis the following with respect to the year of the establishment of the Fund:

(i) Years 1 through 5, 1.4533 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(ii) Years 6 through 8, 1.3080 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(iii) Years 9 through 11, 1.1772 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(iv) Years 12 through 14, 1.0595 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(v) Years 15 through 17, 0.9535 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(vi) Years 18 through 20, 0.8582 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(vii) Years 21 through 23, 0.7723 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(viii) Years 24 through 25, 0.6951 percent of the debtor's 2002 revenues.

(3) SUBTIER 2.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are debtors or affiliated groups which include a debtor that have no material continuing business operations but hold cash or other assets that have been allocated or earmarked for asbestos settlements shall be assigned to Subtier 2.

(B) ASSIGNMENT OF ASSETS.—Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, each person or affiliated group assigned to Subtier 2 shall assign all of its assets to the Fund.

(4) SUBTIER 3.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—All persons that are debtors or affiliated groups that include a debtor, other than those included in Subtier 2, which have no material continuing business operations and no cash or other assets allocated or earmarked for the settlement of any asbestos claim, shall be assigned to Subtier 3.

(B) ASSIGNMENT OF UNENCUMBERED ASSETS.—Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, each person or affiliated group assigned to Subtier 3 shall contribute an amount equal to 50 percent of its total unencumbered assets.

(C) CALCULATION OF UNENCUMBERED ASSETS.—Unencumbered assets shall be calculated as the Subtier 3 person or affiliated group's total assets, excluding insurance related assets, less—

(i) all allowed administrative expenses;

(ii) allowed priority claims under section 507 of title 11, United States Code; and

(iii) allowed secured claims.

(c) TIER II SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier II to 1 of 5 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with—

(A) those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 1;

(B) those persons or affiliated groups with the next highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 2;

(C) those persons or affiliated groups with the lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 5;

(D) those persons or affiliated groups with the next lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 4; and

(E) those persons or affiliated groups remaining assigned to Subtier 3.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $25,000,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $22,500,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $20,000,000.

(D) Subtier 4: $17,500,000.

(E) Subtier 5: $15,000,000.

(d) TIER III SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier III to 1 of 5 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with—

(A) those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 1;

(B) those persons or affiliated groups with the next highest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 2;

(C) those persons or affiliated groups with the lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 5;

(D) those persons or affiliated groups with the next lowest gross revenues assigned to Subtier 4; and

(E) those persons or affiliated groups remaining assigned to Subtier 3.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $15,000,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $12,500,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $10,000,000.

(D) Subtier 4: $7,500,000.

(E) Subtier 5: $5,000,000.

(e) TIER IV SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier IV to 1 of 4 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in Subtier 4. Those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues among those remaining will be assigned to Subtier 2 and the rest in Subtier 3.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $3,500,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $2,250,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $1,500,000.

(D) Subtier 4: $500,000.

(f) TIER V SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier V to 1

of 3 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in Subtier 3, and those remaining in Subtier 2.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $1,000,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $500,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $200,000.

(g) TIER VI SUBTIERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier VI to 1 of 3 subtiers, based on the person's or affiliated group's gross revenues. Such subtiers shall each contain as close to an equal number of total persons and affiliated groups as possible, with those persons or affiliated groups with the highest gross revenues in Subtier 1, those with the lowest gross revenues in Subtier 3, and those remaining in Subtier 2.

(2) PAYMENT.—Each person or affiliated group within an assigned subtier shall pay, on an annual basis, the following:

(A) Subtier 1: $500,000.

(B) Subtier 2: $250,000.

(C) Subtier 3: $100,000.

(h) TIER VII.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any assignment to Tiers II, III, IV, V, and VI based on prior asbestos expenditures under section 204(g), a person shall be assigned to Tier VII if the person—

(A) is a common carrier by railroad subject to asbestos claims brought under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.); and

(B) have paid not less than $5,000,000 in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity costs relating to such claims.

(2) ADDITIONAL AMOUNT.—The contribution requirement for persons assigned to Tier VII shall be in addition to any applicable contribution requirement that such person may be assessed under Tiers II through VI.

(3) SUBTIER 1.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with gross revenues of not less than $5,000,000,000 to Subtier 1 and shall require each such person or affiliated group to make annual payments of $10,000,000 into the Fund.

(4) SUBTIER 2.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with gross revenues of less than $5,000,000,000, but not less than $3,000,000,000 to Subtier 2, and shall require each such person or affiliated group to make annual payments of $5,000,000 into the Fund.

(5) SUBTIER 3.—The Administrator shall assign each person or affiliated group in Tier VII with gross revenues of less than $3,000,000,000, but not less than $500,000,000 to Subtier 3, and shall require each such person or affiliated group to make annual payments of $500,000 into the Fund.

(6) JOINT VENTURE REVENUES AND LIABILITY.—

(A) REVENUES.—For purposes of this subsection, the revenues of a joint venture shall be included on a pro rata basis reflecting relative joint ownership to calculate the revenues of the parents of that joint venture. The joint venture shall not be responsible for a contribution amount under this subsection.

(B) LIABILITY.—For purposes of this subsection, the liability under the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Employers' Liability Act, shall be attributed to the parent owners of the joint venture on a pro rata basis, reflecting their relative share of ownership. The joint venture shall not be responsible for a contribution amount under this provision.

SEC. 204. ASSESSMENT ADMINISTRATION.

(a) REDUCTION ADJUSTMENTS.—The Administrator shall assess contributions based on amounts provided under this subtitle for each person or affiliated group within Tiers II, III, IV, V, VI, and VII for the first 5 years of the operation of the Fund. Beginning in year 6, and every 3 years thereafter, the Administrator shall reduce the contribution amount for each defendant participant in each of these tiers by 10 percent of the amount assessed in the prior year.

(b) SMALL BUSINESS EXEMPTION.—A person or affiliated group that is a small business concern (as defined under section 3 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 632)), on December 31, 2002, is exempt from any contribution requirement under this subsection.

(c) PROCEDURES.—The Administrator shall prescribe procedures on how contributions assessed under this subtitle are to be paid.

(d) EXCEPTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Under expedited procedures established by the Administrator, a defendant participant may seek adjustment of the amount of its contribution based on severe financial hardship or demonstrated inequity. The Administrator may determine whether to grant an adjustment and the size of any such adjustment, in accordance with this subsection. Such determinations shall not prejudice the integrity of the Fund and shall not be subject to judicial review.

(2) FINANCIAL HARDSHIP ADJUSTMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A defendant may apply for an adjustment based on financial hardship at any time during the life of the Fund and may qualify for such adjustment by demonstrating that the amount of its contribution under the statutory allocation would constitute a severe financial hardship.

(B) TERM.—A hardship adjustment under this subsection shall have a term of 3 years.

(C) RENEWAL.—A defendant may renew its hardship adjustment by demonstrating that it remains justified.

(D) LIMITATION.—The Administrator may not grant hardship adjustments under this subsection in any year that exceed, in the aggregate, 3 percent of the total annual contributions required of all defendant participants.

(3) INEQUITY ADJUSTMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A defendant may qualify for an adjustment based on inequity by demonstrating that the amount of its contribution under the statutory allocation is exceptionally inequitable when measured against the amount of the likely cost to the defendant of its future liability in the tort system in the absence of the Fund.

(B) TERM.—Subject to the annual availability of funds in the Orphan Share Reserve Account established under section 223(e), an inequity adjustment granted by the Administrator under this subsection shall remain in effect for the life of the Fund.

(C) LIMITATION.—The Administrator may grant inequity adjustments only to the extent that—

(i) the financial condition of the Fund is sufficient to accommodate such adjustments;

(ii) the Orphan Share Reserve Account is sufficient to cover such adjustments for that year; and

(iii) such adjustments do not exceed 2 percent of the total annual contributions required of all defendant participants.

(4) ADVISORY PANELS.—

(A) APPOINTMENT.—The Administrator shall appoint a Financial Hardship Adjustment Panel and an Inequity Adjustment Panel to advise the Administrator in carrying out this subsection.

(B) MEMBERSHIP.—The membership of the panels appointed under subparagraph (A) may overlap.

(C) COORDINATION.—The panels appointed under subparagraph (A) shall coordinate their deliberations and recommendations.

(e) LIMITATION ON LIABILITY.—The liability of each defendant participant to contribute to the Fund shall be limited to the payment obligations under this subtitle, and no defendant participant shall have any liability for the payment obligations of any other defendant participant.

(f) CONSOLIDATION OF CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining the contribution levels of defendant participants, any affiliated group including 1 or more defendant participants may irrevocably elect, as part of the submission to be made under subsection (i), to report on a consolidated basis all of the information necessary to determine the contribution level under this subtitle and contribute to the Fund on a consolidated basis.

(2) ELECTION.—If an affiliated group elects consolidation as provided in this subsection—

(A) for purposes of this Act other than this subsection, the affiliated group shall be treated as if it were a single participant, including without limitation with respect to the assessment of a single annual contribution under this subtitle for the entire affiliated group;

(B) the ultimate parent of the affiliated group shall prepare and submit the submission to be made under subsection (i), on behalf of the entire affiliated group and shall be solely liable, as between the Administrator and the affiliated group only, for the payment of the annual contribution assessed against the affiliated group, except that, if the ultimate parent does not pay when due any contribution for the affiliated group, the Administrator shall have the right to seek payment of all or any portion of the entire amount due from any member of the affiliated group;

(C) all members of the affiliated group shall be identified in the submission under subsection (i) and shall certify compliance with this subsection and the Administrator's regulations implementing this subsection; and

(D) the obligations under this subtitle shall not change even if, after the date of enactment of this Act, the beneficial ownership interest between any members of the affiliated group shall change.

(g) DETERMINATION OF PRIOR ASBESTOS EXPENDITURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of determining a defendant participant's prior asbestos expenditure,

the Administrator shall prescribe such rules as may be necessary or appropriate to assure that payments by indemnitors before December 31, 2002, shall be counted as part of the indemnitor's prior asbestos expenditure, rather than the indemnitee's prior asbestos expenditure, in accordance with this subsection.

(2) INDEMNIFIABLE COSTS.—If an indemnitor has paid or reimbursed to an indemnitee any indemnifiable cost or otherwise made a payment on behalf of or for the benefit of an indemnitee to a third party for an indemnifiable cost before December 31, 2002, the amount of such indemnifiable cost shall be solely for the account of the indemnitor for purposes under this Act.

(3) INSURANCE PAYMENTS.—When computing the prior asbestos expenditure with respect to an asbestos claim, any amount paid or reimbursed by insurance shall be solely for the account of the indemnitor, even if the indemnitor would have no direct right to the benefit of the insurance, if—

(A) such insurance has been paid or reimbursed to the indemnitor or the indemnitee, or paid on behalf of or for the benefit of the

indemnitee, any indemnifiable cost related to the asbestos claim; and

(B) the indemnitor has either, with respect to such asbestos claim or any similar asbestos claim, paid or reimbursed to its indemnitee any indemnifiable cost or paid to any third party on behalf of or for the benefit of the indemnitee any indemnifiable cost.

(h) MINIMUM CONTRIBUTIONS.—Minimum aggregate contributions of defendant participants to the Fund in any calendar year shall be as follows:

(1) For each of the first 5 years of the Fund, the aggregate contributions of defendant participants to the fund shall be at least $2,500,000,000.

(2) After the 5th year, the minimum aggregate contribution shall be reduced by $250,000,000 every 3 years as follows:

(A) For years 6 through 8, $2,250,000,000.

(B) For years 9 through 11, $2,000,000,000.

(C) For years 12 through 14, $1,750,000,000.

(D) For years 15 through 17, $1,500,000,000.

(E) For years 18 through 20, $1,250,000,000.

(F) For years 21 through 23, $1,000,000,000.

(G) For years 24 through 26, $750,000,000.

(i) PROCEDURES TO DETERMINE FUND CONTRIBUTION ASSESSMENTS.—

(1) NOTICE TO PARTICIPANTS.—Not later than 60 days after his or her initial appointment, the Administrator shall—

(A) directly notify all reasonably identifiable defendant participants of the requirement to submit information necessary to calculate the amount of any required contribution to the Fund; and

(B) publish in the Federal Register a notice requiring any person who may be a defendant participant (as determined by criteria outlined in the notice) to submit such information.

(2) RESPONSE REQUIRED.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Any person who receives notice under paragraph (1)(A), and any other person meeting the criteria specified in the notice published under paragraph (1)(B), shall respond by providing the Administrator with all the information requested in the notice at the earlier of—

(i) 30 days after the receipt of direct notice; or

(ii) 30 days after the publication of notice in the Federal Register.

(B) CERTIFICATION.—The response submitted under subparagraph (A) shall be signed by a responsible corporate officer, general partner, proprietor, or individual of similar authority, who shall certify under penalty of law the completeness and accuracy of the information submitted.

(3) NOTICE OF INITIAL DETERMINATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after receiving a response under paragraph (2), the Administrator shall send the participant a notice of initial determination assessing a contribution to the Fund, which shall be based on the information received from the participant in response to the Administrator's request for information.

(B) NO RESPONSE; INCOMPLETE RESPONSE.—If no response is received from the participant, or if the response is incomplete, the initial determination assessing a contribution from the participant shall be based on the best information available to the Administrator.

(4) CONFIDENTIALITY.—Any Person may designate any information submitted under this subsection as confidential commercial or financial information for purposes of the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552). The Administrator shall adopt procedures for designating such information as confidential.

(5) NEW INFORMATION.—

(A) EXISTING PARTICIPANT.—The Administrator shall adopt procedures for revising initial assessments based on new information received after the initial assessments are calculated.

(B) ADDITIONAL PARTICIPANT.—If the Administrator, at any time, receives information that an additional person may qualify as a participant, the Administrator shall require such person to submit information necessary to determine whether an initial determination assessing a contribution from that person should be issued, in accordance with the requirements of this subsection.

(6) PAYMENT SCHEDULE.—Any initial determination issued under this subsection may allow for periodic payments, provided that the full annual amount assessed is paid each year. Each participant shall pay its contribution to the Fund in the amount specified it the initial determination of assessment from the Administrator, according to the schedule specified in the initial determination.

(7) SUBPOENAS.—The Administrator may request the Attorney General to subpoena persons to compel testimony, records, and other information relevant to its responsibilities under this section. The Attorney General may enforce such subpoena in appropriate proceedings in the United States district court for the district in which the person to whom the subpoena was addressed resides, was served, or transacts business.

(8) REHEARING.—A Participant has a right to obtain rehearing of the Administrator's initial determination pursuant to section 202.

Subtitle B—Asbestos Insurers Commission

SEC. 211. ESTABLISHMENT OF ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established the Asbestos Insurers Commission (referred to in this subtitle as the "Commission") to carry out the duties described in section 212.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Commission shall be composed of 5 members who shall be appointed by the President, after consultation with—

(A) the majority leader of the Senate;

(B) the minority leader of the Senate;

(C) the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and

(D) the minority leader of the House of Representatives.

(2) QUALIFICATIONS.—

(A) EXPERTISE.—Members of the Commission shall have sufficient expertise to fulfill their responsibilities under this subtitle.

(B) CONFLICT OF INTEREST.—No member of the Commission appointed under paragraph (1) may be an employee, former employee, or shareholder of any insurer participant, or an immediate family member of any such individual.

(C) FEDERAL EMPLOYMENT.—A member of the Commission may not be an officer or employee of the Federal Government, except by reason of membership on the Commission.

(3) DATE.—The appointments of the members of the Commission shall be made not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(4) PERIOD OF APPOINTMENT.—Members shall be appointed for the life of the Commission.

(5) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy in the Commission shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment.

(6) CHAIRMAN.—The Commission shall select a Chairman from among its members.

(c) MEETINGS.—

(1) INITIAL MEETING.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which all members of the Commission have been appointed, the Commission shall hold its first meeting.

(2) SUBSEQUENT MEETINGS.—The Commission shall meet at the call of the Chairman as necessary to accomplish the duties under section 212.

(3) QUORUM.—No business may be conducted or hearings held without the participation of all of the members of the Commission.

SEC. 212. DUTIES OF ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

(a) DETERMINATION OF INSURER LIABILITY FOR ASBESTOS INJURIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall determine the amount that each insurer participant will be required to pay into the Fund to satisfy their contractual obligation to compensate claimants for asbestos injuries.

(2) ALLOCATION AGREEMENT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after the Commission issues its initial determination, the insurer participants may submit an allocation agreement, approved by all of the insurer participants, to—

(i) the Commission;

(ii) the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate; and

(iii) the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives.

(B) CERTIFICATION.—The authority of the Commission under this subtitle shall terminate on the day after the Commission certifies that an allocation agreement submitted under subparagraph (A) meets the requirements of this subtitle.

(3) GENERAL PROVISIONS.—

(A) AGGREGATE CONTRIBUTION LEVEL.—The total contribution required of all insurer participants over the life of the Fund shall be equal to $45,000,000,000.

(B) DECLINING PAYMENTS.—Since the payments from the Fund are expected to decline over time, the annual contributions from insurer participants is also expected to decline over time. The proportionate share of each insurer participant's contributions to the Fund will remain the same throughout the life of the Fund.

(C) SEVERAL LIABILITY.—Each insurer participant's obligation to contribute to the Fund is several. There is no joint liability and the future insolvency of any insurer participant shall not affect the assessment assigned to any other insurer participant.

(4) ASSESSMENT CRITERIA.—

(A) MANDATORY PARTICIPANTS.—Insurers that have paid, or been assessed by a legal judgment or settlement, at least $1,000,000 in defense and indemnity costs before the date of enactment of this Act in response to claims for compensation for asbestos injuries shall be mandatory participants in the Fund. Other insurers shall be exempt from mandatory payments.

(B) PARTICIPANT TIERS.—Contributions shall be determined by assigning mandatory insurer participants into tiers, which shall be determined and defined based on—

(i) net written premiums received from policies covering asbestos that were in force at any time during the period beginning on January 1, 1940 and ending on December 31, 1986;

(ii) net paid losses for asbestos injuries compared to all such losses for the insurance industry;

(iii) net carried reserve level for asbestos claims on the most recent financial statement of the insurer participant; and

(iv) future liability.

(C) PAYMENT SCHEDULE.—Any final determination of assessment issued under subsection (b) may allow for periodic payments, provided that the full annual amount assessed is paid each year. Each insurer participant shall pay its contribution to the Fund in the amount specified in the final determination of assessment from the Commission, according to the schedule specified in the final determination.

(b) PROCEDURE.—

(1) NOTICE TO PARTICIPANTS.—Not later than 30 days after the initial meeting of the Commission, the Commission shall—

(A) directly notify all reasonably identifiable insurer participants of the requirement to submit information necessary to calculate the amount of any required contribution to the Fund; and

(B) publish in the Federal Register a notice requiring any person who may be an insurer participant (as determined by criteria outlined in the notice) to submit such information.

(2) RESPONSE REQUIRED.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Any person who receives notice under paragraph (1)(A), and any other person meeting the criteria specified in the notice published under paragraph (1)(B), shall respond by providing the Commission with all the information requested in the notice at the earlier of—

(i) 30 days after the receipt of direct notice; or

(ii) 30 days after the publication of notice in the Federal Register.

(B) CERTIFICATION.—The response submitted under subparagraph (A) shall be signed by a responsible corporate officer, general partner, proprietor, or individual of similar authority, who shall certify under penalty of law the completeness and accuracy of the information submitted.

(3) NOTICE OF INITIAL DETERMINATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 120 days after the initial meeting of the Commission, the Commission shall send each insurer participant a notice of initial determination assessing a contribution to the Fund, which shall be based on the information received from the participant in response to the Commission's request for information.

(B) NO RESPONSE; INCOMPLETE RESPONSE.—If no response is received from an insurer participant, or if the response is incomplete, the initial determination assessing a contribution from the insurer participant shall be based on the best information available to the Commission.

(4) REVIEW PERIOD.—

(A) COMMENTS FROM INSURER PARTICIPANTS.—Not later than 30 days after receiving a notice of initial determination from the Commission, an insurer participant may provide the Commission with additional information to support limited adjustments to the assessment received to reflect exceptional circumstances.

(B) ADDITIONAL PARTICIPANTS.—If, before the final determination of the Commission, the Commission receives information that an additional person may qualify as an insurer participant, the Commission shall require such person to submit information necessary to determine whether a contribution from that person should be assessed, in accordance with the requirements of this subsection.

(C) REVISION PROCEDURES.—The Commission, shall adopt procedures for revising initial assessments based on information received under subparagraphs (A) and (B). Any adjustments to assessment levels shall comply with the criteria under subsection (a).

(5) SUBPOENAS.—The Commission may request the Attorney General to subpoena persons to compel testimony, records, and other information relevant to its responsibilities under this section. The Attorney General may enforce such subpoena in appropriate proceedings in the United States district court for the district in which the person to whom the subpoena was addressed resides, was served, or transacts business.

(6) NOTICE OF FINAL DETERMINATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the notice of initial determination is sent to the insurer participants, the Commission shall send each insurer participant a notice of final determination.

(B) JUDICIAL REVIEW.—A participant has a right to obtain judicial review of the Commission's final determination under title III.

(c) DETERMINATION OF RELATIVE LIABILITY FOR ASBESTOS INJURIES.—The Commission shall determine the percentage of the total liability of each participant identified under subsection (a).

(d) REPORT.—

(1) RECIPIENTS.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Commission shall submit a report, containing the information described under paragraph (2), to—

(A) the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate;

(B) the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives; and

(C) the Court of Asbestos Claims.

(2) CONTENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall contain the amount that each insurer participant is required to contribute to the Fund, including the payment schedule for such contributions.

SEC. 213. POWERS OF ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

(a) HEARINGS.—The Commission may hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, take such testimony, and receive such evidence as the Commission considers advisable to carry out this Act.

(b) INFORMATION FROM FEDERAL AGENCIES.—The Commission may secure directly from any Federal department or agency such information as the Commission considers necessary to carry out this Act. Upon request of the Chairman of the Commission, the head of such department or agency shall furnish such information to the Commission.

(c) POSTAL SERVICES.—The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the Federal Government.

(d) GIFTS.—The Commission may not accept, use, or dispose of gifts or donations of services or property.

SEC. 214. PERSONNEL MATTERS.

(a) COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS.—Each member of the Commission shall be compensated at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including travel time) during which such member is engaged in the performance of the duties of the Commission.

(b) TRAVEL EXPENSES.—The members of the Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, at rates authorized for employees of agencies under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, while away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Commission.

(c) STAFF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Chairman of the Commission may, without regard to the civil service laws and regulations, appoint and terminate an executive director and such other additional personnel as may be necessary to enable the Commission to perform its duties. The employment of an executive director shall be subject to confirmation by the Commission.

(2) COMPENSATION.—The Chairman of the Commission may fix the compensation of the executive director and other personnel without regard to chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, relating to classification of positions and General Schedule pay rates, except that the rate of pay for the executive director and other personnel may not exceed the rate payable for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of such title.

(d) DETAIL OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.—Any Federal Government employee may be detailed to the Commission without reimbursement, and such detail shall be without interruption or loss of civil service status or privilege.

(e) PROCUREMENT OF TEMPORARY AND INTERMITTENT SERVICES.—The Chairman of the Commission may procure temporary and intermittent services under section

3109(b) of title 5, United States Code, at rates for individuals which do not exceed the daily equivalent of the annual rate of basic pay prescribed for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of such title.

SEC. 215. NONAPPLICATION OF FOIA AND CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 552 of title 5, United States Code (commonly referred to as the Freedom of Information Act) shall not apply to the Commission.

(b) CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.—All information submitted to the Commission shall be privileged and confidential information and shall not be disclosed to any person outside the Commission, unless such privilege is knowingly and intentionally waived by the person submitting the information. An appeal of an assessment to the Fund under this subtitle shall be deemed a waiver for the purposes of this subsection unless the appellee participant makes a motion for an in camera review of its appeal.

SEC. 216. TERMINATION OF ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

The Commission shall terminate 60 days after the date on which the Commission submits its report under section 212(c).

SEC. 217. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Commission such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2004 to carry out the provisions of this subtitle.

(b) AVAILABILITY.—Any sums appropriated under the authorization contained in this section shall remain available, without fiscal year limitation, until expended.

Subtitle C—Office of Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution

SEC. 221. ESTABLISHMENT OF THE OFFICE OF ASBESTOS INJURY CLAIMS RESOLUTION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—There is established the Office of Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution.

(b) RESPONSIBILITIES.—The Office shall be responsible for—

(1) administering the Fund;

(2) providing compensation from the Fund to asbestos claimants who are determined to be eligible for such compensation; and

(3) carrying out other applicable provisions of this title and other activities determined appropriate by the Administrator.

(c) ADMINISTRATOR.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Office shall be headed by an Administrator who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(2) TERM; REMOVAL.—The Administrator shall serve for a term of 5 years and may be removable by the President only for good cause.

SEC. 222. POWERS OF THE ADMINISTRATOR AND MANAGEMENT OF THE FUND.

(a) GENERAL POWERS.—The Administrator shall have the following general powers:

(1) To promulgate such regulations as the Administrator determines to be necessary to implement the provisions of this subtitle.

(2) To appoint employees or contract for the services of other personnel as may be necessary and appropriate to carry out the provisions of this subtitle, including entering into cooperative agreements with other Federal agencies.

(3) To make such expenditures as may be necessary and appropriate in the administration of this subtitle.

(4) To take all actions necessary to prudently manage the Fund, including—

(A) administering, in a fiduciary capacity, the assets of the Fund for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to asbestos claimants and their beneficiaries;

(B) defraying the reasonable expenses of administering the Fund;

(C) investing the assets of the Fund in accordance with subsection (b)(2); and

(D) retaining advisers, managers, and custodians who possess the necessary facilities and expertise to provide for the skilled and prudent management of the Fund, to assist in the development, implementation and maintenance of the Fund's investment policies and investment activities, and to provide for the safekeeping and delivery of the Fund's assets.

(5) To have all other powers incidental, necessary, or appropriate to carrying out the functions of the Office.

(b) REQUIREMENTS RELATING TO FUND ASSETS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Amounts in the Fund shall be held for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to asbestos claimants and their beneficiaries and to otherwise defray the reasonable expenses of administering the Fund.

(2) INVESTMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Amounts in the Fund shall be administered and invested with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence, under the circumstances prevailing at the time of such investment, that a prudent person acting in a like capacity and manner would use.

(B) STRATEGY.—The Administrator shall invest amounts in the Fund in a manner that enables the Fund to make current and future distributions to or for the benefit of asbestos claimants. In pursuing an investment strategy under this subparagraph, the Administrator shall consider, to the extent relevant to an investment decision or action—

(i) the size of the Fund;

(ii) the nature and estimated duration of the Fund;

(iii) the liquidity and distribution requirements of the Fund;

(iv) general economic conditions at the time of the investment;

(v) the possible effect of inflation or deflation on Fund assets;

(vi) the role that each investment or course of action plays with respect to the overall assets of the Fund;

(vii) the expected amount to be earned (including both income and appreciation of capital) through investment of amounts in the Fund; and

(viii) the needs of asbestos claimants for current and future distributions authorized under this Act.

SEC. 223. ASBESTOS INJURY CLAIMS RESOLUTION FUND.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established in the Office of Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution, the Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Fund, which shall be available to pay—

(1) claims for compensation for an eligible disease or condition determined under title I;

(2) claims for reimbursement for medical monitoring determined under title I;

(3) principal and interest on borrowings under subsection (c); and

(4) administrative expenses to carry out this subtitle.

(b) LIMITATIONS ON CONTRIBUTIONS BY MANDATORY PARTICIPANTS.—The aggregate contributions of all

mandatory participants to the Fund may not exceed $5,000,000,000 in any calendar year.

(c) BORROWING AUTHORITY.—The Administrator is authorized to borrow, in any calendar year, an amount not to exceed anticipated contributions to the Fund in the following calendar year for purposes of carrying out the obligations of the Fund under this Act.

(d) GUARANTEED PAYMENT ACCOUNT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall establish a guaranteed payment account within the Fund to insure payment of the total amount of contributions required to be paid into the Fund by all participants.

(2) SURCHARGE.—The Administrator shall impose, on each participant required to pay contributions into the Fund under this Act, in addition to the amount of such contributions, a reasonable surcharge to be paid into the guaranteed payment account in an amount that the Administrator determines appropriate to insure against the risk of nonpayment of required contributions by any such participant.

(3) PROCEDURE.—The surcharge required under this section shall be paid in such manner, at such times, and in accordance with such procedures as the Administrator determines appropriate.

(4) USES OF GUARANTEED PAYMENT ACCOUNT.—Amounts in the guaranteed payment account shall be used as necessary to pay claims from the Fund, to the extent that amounts in the Fund are insufficient to pay such claims due to nonpayment by any participant.

(5) ENFORCEMENT.—The enforcement of the payment of a surcharge under this subsection may be enforced in the same manner and to the same extent as the enforcement of a contribution under section 224.

(e) ORPHAN SHARE RESERVE ACCOUNT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To the extent the total amount of contributions of the participants in any given year exceed the minimum aggregate contribution under subsection (h), the excess monies shall be placed in an orphan share reserve account established within the Fund by the Administrator.

(2) USE OF ACCOUNT MONIES.—Monies from the orphan share reserve account shall be preserved and administered like the remainder of the Fund, but shall be reserved and may be used only—

(A) in the event that a petition for relief is filed and not withdrawn for the participant under title 11, United States Code, after the date of enactment of this Act and the participant cannot meet its obligations under this subtitle; and

(B) to the extent the Administrator grants a participant relief for severe financial hardship or exigent circumstances under this section.

SEC. 224. ENFORCEMENT OF CONTRIBUTIONS.

(a) DEFAULT.—If any participant fails to make any payment in the amount and according to the schedule specified in a determination of assessment, after demand and 30 days opportunity to cure the default, there shall be a lien in favor of the United States for the amount of the delinquent payment (including interest) upon all property and rights to property, whether real or personal, belonging to such participant.

(b) BANKRUPTCY.—In the case of a bankruptcy or insolvency proceeding, the lien imposed under subsection (a) shall be treated in the same manner as a lien for taxes due and owing to the United States for purposes of the provisions of title 11, United States Code, or section 3713(a) of title 31, United States Code.

(c) CIVIL ACTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In any case in which there has been a refusal or neglect to pay the liability imposed by the final determination under section 202 or 212, the Administrator may bring a civil action in the Federal district court for the District of Columbia to—

(A) enforce such liability and the lien of the United States under this section; or

(B) subject any property, of whatever nature, of the participant, or in which the participant has any right, title, or interest, to the payment of such liability.

(2) DEFENSE LIMITATION.—In any proceeding under this subsection, the participant shall be barred from bringing any challenge to the assessment if such challenge could have been made during the review period under section 202(b)(4) or 212(b)(4), or a judicial review proceeding under title III.

SEC. 225. ADDITIONAL CONTRIBUTING PARTICIPANTS.

(a) DEFINED TERM.—In this section, the term ''additional contributing participant'' means any defendant in an asbestos claim that is not a mandatory participant under subtitle A and is likely to avoid future civil liability as a result of this Act.

(b) ASSESSMENT.—In addition to contributions assessed under subtitle A, the Administrator may assess additional contributing participants for contributions to the Fund. Any additional contributing participant assessed under this section shall be treated as a defendant participant for purposes of procedures and appeals under this Act.

(c) ASSESSMENT LIMITATIONS.—The Administrator may assess under subsection (b), over the life of the Fund, an amount not to exceed $10,000,000,000 from all additional contributing participants.

TITLE III—JUDICIAL REVIEW

SEC. 301. JUDICIAL REVIEW OF DECISIONS OF THE ASBESTOS COURT.

(a) EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION.—The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any action to review a final decision of the Asbestos Court.

(b) PROCEDURE FOR APPEALS.—

(1) PERIOD FOR FILING APPEAL.—An appeal under this section shall be filed not later than 30 days after the issuance of a final decision by the Asbestos Court.

(2) TRANSMITTAL OF RECORD.—Upon the filing of an appeal, a copy of the filing shall be transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Asbestos Court, and the Asbestos Court shall file in the court the record in the proceeding, as provided in section 2112 of title 28, United States Code.

(3) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The court shall uphold the decision of the Asbestos Court if the court determines, upon review of the record as a whole, that the decision is not arbitrary and capricious.

(B) EFFECT OF DETERMINATION.—If the court determines that a final decision of the Asbestos Court is arbitrary and capricious, the court shall remand the case to the Asbestos Court.

(4) FINALITY OF DETERMINATION.—The decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court of the United States, as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

SEC. 302. JUDICIAL REVIEW OF FINAL DETERMINATIONS OF THE ASBESTOS INSURERS COMMISSION.

(a) EXCLUSIVE JURISDICTION.—The United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any action to review a final determination by the Asbestos Insurers Commission regarding the assessment of a contribution to the Fund from a participant.

(b) PROCEDURE FOR APPEAL.—

(1) PERIOD FOR FILING APPEAL.—An appeal under this section shall be filed not later than 30 days after the issuance of a final determination by the Commission.

(2) TRANSMITTAL OF RECORD.—Upon the filing of an appeal, a copy of the filing shall be transmitted by the clerk of the court to the Commission.

(c) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall uphold the final determination of the Commission with respect to the assessment of a contribution to the Fund from a participant if such determination is not arbitrary and capricious.

(2) EFFECT OF DETERMINATION.—If the court determines that a final determination with respect to the amount of a contribution to the Fund by a participant may not be upheld, the court shall remand the decision to the Commission, with instructions to modify the final determination.

(3) NO STAYS.—The court may not issue a stay of payment into the Fund pending its final judgment.

(4) FINALITY OF DETERMINATION.—The judgment and decree of the court shall be final, except that the same shall be subject to review by the Supreme Court, as provided in section 1254 of title 28, United States Code.

SEC. 303. EXCLUSIVE REVIEW.

(a) EXCLUSIVITY OF REVIEW.—An action of the Asbestos Court or the Asbestos Insurers Commission for which review could have been obtained under section 301 or 302 shall not be subject to judicial review in any other proceeding, including proceedings before the Asbestos Court.

(b) CONSTITUTIONAL REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any interlocutory or final judgment, decree, or order of a Federal court holding this Act, or any provision or application thereof, unconstitutional shall be reviewable as a matter of right by direct appeal to the Supreme Court.

(2) PERIOD FOR FILING APPEAL.—Any such appeal shall be filed not more than 30 days after entry of such judgment, decree, or order.

SEC. 304. PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION AGAINST REINSURERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any insurer participant may file a claim in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia against any reinsurer that is contractually obligated to reimburse such insurer participant for a portion of costs incurred as a result of payment of asbestos related claims.

(b) EXPEDITED PROCEDURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A claim filed under subsection (a) shall be subject to expedited procedures, as prescribed by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

(2) EVIDENTIARY STANDARD.—The plaintiff shall not recover in a claim under subsection (a) unless the plaintiff demonstrates the right to recover by a preponderance of the evidence.

(3) FINAL JUDGMENT.—A final judgment shall be issued on a claim filed under subsection (a) not later than 30 days after such filing.

(c) APPEALS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An appeal from a decision under subsection (b) may be filed with the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

(2) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—The final judgment of the district court shall be upheld unless the court of appeals finds the judgment to be arbitrary and capricious.

(3) FINAL JUDGMENT.—A final judgment shall be issued on an appeal filed under paragraph (1) not later than 30 days after such filing.

TITLE IV—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. FALSE INFORMATION.

Any person who knowingly provides false information in connection with an assessment of contributions, a claim for compensation, or an audit under this Act shall be subject to—

(1) criminal prosecution under section 1001 of title 18, United States Code; and

(2) civil penalties under section 3729 of title 31, United States Code.

SEC. 402. EFFECT ON BANKRUPTCY LAWS.

(a) NO AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (17), by striking "or" at the end;

(2) in paragraph (18), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (18) the following:

"(19) of the enforcement of any payment obligations under section 204 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003, against a debtor, or the property of the estate of a debtor, that is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of that Act).".

(b) ASSUMPTION OF EXECUTORY CONTRACTS.—Section 365 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(q) If a debtor is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003), the trustee shall be deemed to have assumed all executory contracts entered into by the participant under section 204 of that Act. The trustee may not reject any such executory contract.".

(c) ALLOWED ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Section 503 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c)(1) Claims of the United States, the Attorney General, or the Administrator (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003) based upon the asbestos payment obligations of a debtor that is a Participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of that Act), shall be paid as an allowed administrative expense. The debtor shall not be entitled to either notice or a hearing with respect to such claims.

"(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term "asbestos payment obligation" means any payment obligation under subtitle B of title II of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003.".

(d) NO DISCHARGE.—Section 523 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f) A discharge under section 727, 1141, 1228, or 1328 of this title does not discharge any debtor that is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003) of the payment obligations of the debtor under subtitle B of title II of that Act.".

(e) PAYMENT.—Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(i) PARTICIPANT DEBTORS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraphs (2) and (3) shall apply to a debtor who—

"(A) is a participant that has made prior asbestos expenditures (as such terms are defined in the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003); and

"(B) is subject to a case under this title that is pending—

"(i) on the date of enactment of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003; or

"(ii) at any time during the 1 year period preceding the date of enactment of that Act.

"(2) TIER I DEBTORS.—A debtor that has been assigned to tier I under section 202 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 shall make payments in accordance with sections 202 and 203 of that Act.

"(3) TREATMENT OF PAYMENT OBLIGATIONS.—All payment obligations of a debtor under sections 202 and 203 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 shall—

"(A) constitute costs and expenses of administration of a case under section 503 of this title;

"(B) notwithstanding any case pending under this title, be payable in accordance with section 202 of that Act;

"(C) not be stayed;

"(D) not be affected as to enforcement or collection by any stay or injunction of any court; and

"(E) not be impaired or discharged in any current or future case under this title.".

(f) TREATMENT OF TRUSTS.—Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(j) ASBESTOS TRUSTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A trust shall assign a portion of the corpus of the trust to the Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Fund (referred to in this subsection as the 'Fund') as is required under section 202 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 if—

"(A) the trust was formed prior to October 22, 1994; and

"(B) the trust qualifies as a "trust" under section 201 of that Act.

"(2) TRANSFER OF TRUST ASSETS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided under subparagraphs (B) and (C), the assets in any trust established to provide compensation for asbestos claims (as defined in section 3 of the FAIR Act of 2003) shall be transferred to the Fund not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of the FAIR Act of 2003. Except as provided under subparagraph (B), the Administrator of the Fund shall accept such assets and utilize them for any purposes of the Fund under section 223 of such Act, including the payment of claims for compensation under such Act to beneficiaries of the trust from which the assets were transferred. After such transfer, each trustee of such trust shall have no liability to any beneficiary of such trust.

"(B) AUTHORITY TO REFUSE ASSETS.—The Administrator of the Fund may refuse to accept any asset that the Administrator determines may create liability for the Fund in excess of the value of the asset.

"(C) ALLOCATION OF TRUST ASSETS.—If a trust under subparagraph (A) has beneficiaries with claims that are not asbestos claims, the assets transferred to the Fund under subparagraph (A) shall not include assets allocable to such beneficiaries. The trustees of any such trust shall determine the amount of such trust assets to be reserved for the continuing operation of the trust in processing and paying claims that are not asbestos claims. Such reserved amount shall not be greater than 3 percent of the total assets in the trust and shall not be transferred to the Fund.

"(D) SALE OF FUND ASSETS.—The investment requirements under section 222 of the FAIR Act of 2003 shall not be construed to require the Administrator of the Fund to sell assets transferred to the Fund under subparagraph (A).

"(E) LIQUIDATED CLAIMS.—A trust shall not make any payment relating to asbestos claims unless such claims were liquidated before the date of enactment of the FAIR Act of 2003.

"(3) INJUNCTION.—Any injunction issued as part of the formation of a trust described in paragraph (1) shall remain in full force and effect until the assignment required under paragraph (1) has been made.".

(g) NO AVOIDANCE OF TRANSFER.—Section 546 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(h) Notwithstanding the rights and powers of a trustee under section 544, 545, 547, 548, 549, and 550

of this title, if a debtor is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003), the trustee may not avoid a transfer made by the debtor pursuant to its payment obligations under sections 202 or 203 of that Act.''.

(h) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN.—Section 1129(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(14) If the debtor is a participant (as that term is defined in section 3 of the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003), the plan provides for the continuation after its effective date of payment of all payment obligations under title II of that Act.''.

SEC. 403. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS AND EXISTING CLAIMS.

(a) EFFECT ON FEDERAL AND STATE LAW.—The provisions of this Act shall supersede any and all State and Federal laws insofar as they may relate to any asbestos claim filed under this Act.

(b) EXCLUSIVE REMEDY.—The remedies provided under this Act shall be the exclusive remedy for any asbestos claim under any Federal or State law.

(c) BAR ON ASBESTOS CLAIMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No asbestos claim may be pursued in any State or Federal court, except for enforcement of claims for which a final judgment is entered before the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) PREEMPTION.—Any action asserting an asbestos claim in a court of any State, except actions for which final judgment are entered before the date of enactment of this Act, is preempted by this Act.

(3) DISMISSAL.—No judgment other than a judgment of dismissal may be entered in any such action, including an action pending on appeal, or on petition or motion for discretionary review, on or after the date of enactment of this Act. A court may dismiss any such action on its motion. If the district court denies the motion to dismiss, it shall stay further proceedings until final disposition of any appeal taken under this Act.

(4) REMOVAL.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—If an action under paragraph (2) is not dismissed, or if an order entered after the date of enactment of this Act purporting to enter judgment or deny review is not rescinded and replaced with an order of dismissal within 30 days after the filing of a motion by any party to the action advising the court of the provisions of this Act, any party may remove the case to the district court of the United States for the district in which such action is pending.

(B) TIME LIMITS.—For actions originally filed after the date of enactment of this Act, the notice of removal shall be filed within the time limits specified in section 1441(b) of title 28, United States Code.

(C) PROCEDURES.—The procedures for removal and proceedings after removal shall be in accordance with sections 1446 through 1450 of title 28, United States Code, except as may be necessary to accommodate removal of any actions pending (including on appeal) on the date of enactment of this Act.

(D) JURISDICTION.—The jurisdiction of the district court shall be limited to—

(i) determining whether removal was proper; and

(ii) ruling on a motion to dismiss based on this Act.

the president saw mrs. janet ashcroft (wife of the atty general) last night in the state dinner receiving line. president asked about her twin sister, whom he had met in the oval ofc once. mrs ashcroft reported that her sister had just received her doctorate, and the president said he would like to send her a note.

her name is anne giddings. according to the ag, she received her e.d.d. at university of hartford on sunday, 5/18. she was a math teacher for a long time, then a school principal, and is now in school administration; she is considering - with the new degree - becoming a superintendent.

orm should have her mailing address on file, since we have sent pictures to her in the past. if not, pls let me know - and we can contact the ag's ofc.

thanks,

A motion to waive germaneness and attach a modified Kyl-Cornyn attorneys fee bill to the tax package was defeated, 37-61. We had modified the bill so that it only applies to fees received after enactment, and so that it guarantees the tobacco lawyers $20,000 an hour (the bill wouldn't apply to their fees until they reach that level).

We didn't have much of a chance once it became clear that we couldn't get Hatch. His vote gives cover to all of the trial-lawyer friendly Republicans - we have no leverage with them without Hatch. And for another half dozen Republicans, Hatch is a bellwether on tort-reform issues. We also lost a few guys who are a mystery - Crapo of Idaho, Allen of Virginia. We didn't work the issue hard enough, and the other side worked it very hard. (Al D'Amato visited with at least two Senators that we know of to lobby against the bill. ATLA came out in full fury.)

We did everything that we could to get Hatch. And his staff was very helpful to us. (Kevin O'Scannlain in particular made heroic efforts to persuade Hatch to join us.) We even offered to carve out Hatch's friends from the bill's scope (distasteful as that would be). But he said that he wouldn't support the bill no matter how high an hourly rate the tobacco lawyers were guaranteed. The one ray of hope with Hatch is that he indicated that he wouldn't have voted to strike the provision if it had been in the Chairman's mark of the tax bill, as a part of the state aid package. Why this would have made a difference isn't entirely clear, but it does suggest some flexibility.

Hatch is still critical for any prospects for any version of this bill. Even if this got into a House tax bill in the future in some form, Hatch would almost certainly be on the conference.

One of the arguments that was used against us with some effect is that courts have approved the tobacco fees. This isn't true - no court has approved the actual MSA fee awards, and although courts approved the MSA itself (before the fee awards were made), they did so with a gun to their heads: the MSA has a provision reducing a state's MSA payments by 35% if that state's court strikes down part of the MSA. No state really had an option whether to join the MSA, either. All states' smokers pay the higher cigarette costs to fund the MSA, whether their state joins or not. The states' only option was whether or not to collect MSA payments.

In order to address factual arguments about whether courts have approved the fees and what they would do if they did review the fees, we are considering changing the bill to provide that, with regard to the tobacco MSA, any fee payment that has not yet been judicially reviewed shall be subject to review in federal court. The court would be directed to ask whether the fees are legal in light of the lawyers' ethical and fiduciary obligations, and would have discretion to return any improper fee payments to the states. (The MSA currently bars judicial review of fee awards.) Such a provision would at least preempt the argument that courts have approved the MSA awards. It might be worth voting the bill out of Finance with such a change if it can win over Hatch.

What Happens When Chief Justice

Rehnquist Decides To Hang Up His Robes?

By Paul M. Weyrich

A little over a week ago, I was in a meeting where a well-known journalist insisted that the White House had received what they consider to be a clear signal that Chief Justice William Rehnquist is going to retire. I challenged that assertion, but the journalist insisted that the White House was preparing for a confirmation fight later this year.

Then, last Thursday, I attended a social gathering where a well-known jurist said he had attended a meeting with people who are supposedly in the know about such things. There were those in attendance at that meeting who believed that Sandra Day O'Connor is a shoo-in for chief justice on the grounds she could be confirmed by this otherwise recalcitrant United States Senate.

I often wonder where some people get their information. First, friends of Chief Justice Rehnquist say that if he is planning to retire then he certainly is keeping it a deep, dark secret. Even relatives of his say he has given no indication of retirement. We know he is feeling a lot better now than he had been last November after suffering an injury from a bad fall.

But for the sake of argument, let's suppose my information is wrong, and Rehnquist is indeed going to hang up his robes.

Let's look at what President George W. Bush has said about the Supreme Court. I look to what Bush has said because he is, rather more than is usual for a Washington politician, a man of his word. So over and over again, during the 2000 campaign he said that his two favorite justices were Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas. He suggested that if given the opportunity, he would appoint justices such as those to the nation's highest court.

So if the Chief, as he is known by his colleagues, does retire, what will Bush do? While I would love nothing more than to see Justice Thomas promoted as Chief Justice Rehnquist's successor, it is unlikely to happen. Although Thomas is striking in his ability to handle controversial cases, he was only confirmed by a vote of 52 to 48 when George Herbert Walker Bush, the current President's father, still retained much of his post-Gulf War popularity.

While the Senate is now in Republican hands and ideologically it must be considered a bit better than the 101st Congress, it is almost certain that the whole Anita Hill business would be fought all over again. President Bush doesn't need that.

So what about Justice Scalia? When Chief Justice Warren Burger told the Reagan White House he was going to resign, they were prepared. As soon as the resignation was public, Reagan proposed promoting Associate Justice William Rehnquist (who had been appointed to the Supreme Court by President Richard Nixon in 1971) as Burger's replacement. And to fill the vacancy that nomination created, he proposed Judge Antonin Scalia, who had been on the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. Whereas the Rehnquist nomination drew fire and a fair number of opposition votes, Scalia sailed through. The Italian community, which had never had a Supreme Court justice before, put out the word that they didn't want any trouble. Even then-governor Mario Cuomo of New York spoke in Scalia's favor. It was clear from his rulings that Judge Scalia was at least as conservative as Justice Rehnquist, but that didn't seem to bother the Senate at the time.

I suspect that if the President nominated Scalia as chief justice, there would be some fireworks this time and a goodly number of no votes, but I highly doubt he would be filibustered, for the same reason that he was easily confirmed in 1986.

It would be a very prudent appointment for two reasons. First, because Scalia has a stellar intellect and has the ability to influence others. Bush would never have to apologize for a Scalia appointment. Second, because Scalia has told friends that if he is not named chief justice, he will almost certainly resign from the court. He would have served seventeen years on the court, yet he is still young enough to make a good living to support his family. If Scalia is lost, Bush almost certainly could not get someone of his caliber through this Senate. Another high-quality candidate is likely to be filibustered.

Sandra Day O'Connor brings the President problems. She was the swing vote that kept Roe vs. Wade legal. Many of her votes over the years are highly unpopular with President Bush's base. If the President is seen as breaking his word, it would be very hurtful to him in 2004 with the evangelical and conservative Catholic and Eastern Orthodox voters.

If the President nominates someone with rock-solid values and this Senate won't confirm him (or her), whether for chief justice or for associate justice or both, it won't hurt the President and may actually help him in 2004. It almost certainly would defeat some obstructionist senators. On the other hand, if the President makes an appointment such as Justice O'Connor, so he can avoid a confirmation fight and get her through the Senate with ease, he could well suffer at the polls for it. Survey research may currently say that she has a good image and most would approve of the appointment, but that is before the talk radio shows and talk television shows and the webpages of news organizations and concerned groups would discuss her record in detail. He clearly would be seen as breaking an implied promise with that appointment.

My betting is, if the President does get the chance to nominate justices for the Supreme Court, it won't be until his second term, if indeed there is one. In a second term, the President could likely do as he wishes. If I am wrong and those appointments come soon, the President's choices may make or break his presidency.

Subject: Reviewing Presidential Messages

In a recent meeting with Staff Sec Office - I have been asked to find out "what is the process that our messages go through when we send to your office for White House Staff to review our messages and requests."

Does your office review content and grammar of our draft only?
Or
Does your office review content and grammar of our draft AND check the organization requesting the message?

Please discuss these questions with your staff members that review our Presidential messages and let me know asap.

Thanks again for all your help! Please call me at 65503 if you have any questions.

Civil rights guardian, outstanding nominee
05/20/03
By WILLIE J. HUNTLEY JR.
Special to the Register
T he Washington-headquartered, liberal witch-hunt against President Bush's federal judicial nominees has targeted its next victim, and it is one of our own: Bill Pryor, the attorney general of Alabama.
Among those leading the charge against Pryor is the mis-named group People For the American Way. This should be no surprise; PFAW has led vicious attacks against Attorney General John Ashcroft, Justice Clarence Thomas, Priscilla Owen, Miguel Estrada and numerous other Republican nominees.
PFAW is a radical leftist group that has supported broad court protection for child pornography, burning the American flag, and publicly funded art portraying the Virgin Mary splattered with elephant dung. Most recently, PFAW helped coordinate protests against the war in Iraq -- the war in which some Alabamians gave their lives for their country.
PFAW is funded by the pornography industry and Hollywood radicals, including Playboy magazine, the Screen Actors Guild, and the Center for Alternative Media & Culture. (And they call Bill Pryor an extremist.)
PFAW asserts that Pryor's appointment would devastate civil rights. What its people don't say is that after about 100 years of inaction by other leaders, Bill Pryor led a coalition that included the NAACP to rid the Alabama Constitution of its racist ban on inter-racial marriage.
Pryor then defended the repeal against a court challenge by a so-called Confederate heritage organization.
Our attorney general also took the side of the NAACP in successfully defending majority-minority voting districts -- all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court -- against a challenge by white Alabama Republicans.
Bill Pryor further opposed a white Republican redistricting proposal that would have hurt African-American voters. He did not back down to criticism from his own party -- not one inch.
He then played a key role in the successful prosecution of former Ku Klux Klansmen Bobby Frank Cherry and Thomas Blanton Jr. for the 1963 bombing of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church in Birmingham. In fact, he will personally argue to uphold Blanton's murder conviction before the Alabama Court of Criminal Appeals later this month.
Pryor started a mentoring program for at-risk kids, and regularly goes to Montgomery public schools to teach African-American kids to read.
Because Bill Pryor has a civil rights record that very few can equal, it is no wonder that African-American leaders who know and have worked with him -- like Artur Davis, Joe Reed, Cleo Thomas and Alvin Holmes -- support his nomination to the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals.
Ignoring Pryor's defense of voting rights for African-Americans, PFAW charges that he opposes the landmark Voting Rights Act. The truth is, he has dutifully enforced all of the Voting Rights Act every time a case has come up.
Pryor has simply stated that a procedural part of the Voting Rights Act --

Section 5 -- has problems that Congress should fix. Section 5 requires federal officials in Washington to approve even minor changes in voting practices that have nothing to do with discrimination.

For example, last year, Pryor issued an opinion that required a white replacement candidate for a deceased white state legislator to get Washington approval under Section 5 to use stickers to put his name on the ballot over the name of the deceased candidate.

Thurbert Baker, the African-American Democratic attorney general of Georgia, has voiced similar concerns about Section 5 before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Undeterred, PFAW and its allies also charge that Pryor believes in "states' rights" -- their code words for racism. The truth is that he believes in the Constitution. He has fought to protect the state's treasury from lawsuits that would have taken our tax dollars away from the state -- away from salaries for teachers and medical care for poor people. It is the job of an attorney general to defend his client -- the state. In fact, the key Supreme Court case on defending a state from lawsuits was won not by Pryor, but by Democratic Attorney General Bob Butterworth of Florida.

Democratic attorneys general like Eliot Spitzer of New York, Jim Doyle of Wisconsin and others have all made the same arguments to defend their state budgets. I guess they are all "right-wing extremists," too.

PFAW and its allies have also attacked Pryor for being extremist on abortion rights. As a dedicated Roman Catholic, Bill Pryor loves kids and is against abortion, no doubt about it.

But even though he disagrees with abortion, he instructed Alabama's district attorneys to apply Alabama's partial-birth abortion law in a moderate way that was consistent with U.S. Supreme Court precedent. Again, he was criticized by Republicans; pro-life activists accused him of gutting the statute. Again, he didn't back down.

Not surprisingly, PFAW and its allies have attacked Pryor for supporting the display of the Ten Commandments in courthouses. But Pryor simply took the position that if a representation of the Ten Commandments can be carved into the wall of the U.S. Supreme Court's courtroom, it can be placed in an Alabama courtroom.

PFAW also has attacked Pryor for the position he took in the Alexander vs. Sandoval case, in which a person who didn't speak English sued to force Alabama to spend its money on printing driver's license tests in foreign languages.

As broke as our state is, there are better things to spend our money on -- like teaching kids to read English so they can take the test and read road signs, and also paving the roads for them to drive on. Pryor fought this attempt to drain our state budget, and the U.S. Supreme Court agreed with him.

The truth and the record show that Bill Pryor has fought for the civil rights and voting rights of African-Americans in Alabama when PFAW was nowhere to be found. Now that President Bush has nominated Pryor to a federal judgeship, PFAW assumes that it can come here and attack him.

I, for one, suggest that PFAW pack up its pro-pornography, flag-burning, anti-religious, attack-dog tactics and go back to Hollywood and Washington.

We who actually know Bill Pryor support him 100 percent.

Willie Huntley is a former assistant U.S. attorney for the Southern District of Alabama. An African-American, he now has a private law practice in Mobile.

Brett -
Just following up on that memo I sent you earlier this week re. Weirton Steel's meeting with Karl.
The memo pointed out a letter that Weirton had sent after the meeting which talked about "assurances" the company had received re. upcoming steel policy by the Admin. As noted in the memo, no such assurance were given at the meeting.
Would like your guidance on how to handle this, especially considering that the letter was copied to Sen. Byrd and that Weirton just filed for bankruptcy (see below) -

Weirton Steel Goes Bankrupt

CLICK THE ???LIVE AUDIO??? ICON ABOVE TO HEAR COMMENTS FROM WEIRTON STEEL PRESIDENT AND CEO JOHN WALKER. (AUDIO COURTESEY WTOV-TV)

What once was West Virginia's largest private employer has fallen onto financial hard times. Monday, Weirton Steel could no longer stand the pressure and filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in U.S. District Bankruptcy Court in Wheeling.

Company President and CEO John Walker made the difficult announcement to employees and the media during a press conference at the mill in Weirton Monday.

"This is a start of a new chapter in our history, but we believe it is not the final chapter.??? said Walker putting the best face on the difficulties as possible. "Our goal is to emerge from the reorganization process as quickly as possible as a stronger company, better positioned to compete in the rapidly consolidating steel industry."

The company, like many in the U.S. steel industry, has been struggling for years to overcome obstacles. Walker blames those obstacles like skyrocketing legacy costs, increased consolidation of competitors, and illegal foreign dumping as the leading reasons for this decision. Weirton Steel has over $760 Million in retiree liabilities. Other companies have shed the retirement pension liabilities in bankruptcy; Walker promises that Weirton Steel will not. Walker says they'll seek to form a retiree board through the bankruptcy product to protect those pensions.

Walker says their plans are to keep the Hancock County mill up and running and to save the 3,000 jobs at the facility.

"I want to emphasize that Weirton Steel is still in business, we're still making high-quality steel, serving our customers like we were yesterday. We will continue to do that."

Walker says they are not unlike others in the industry.

"The American Steel industry is in a state of siege and transformation. The challenges facing our company are the same as those facing the entire industry."

The bankruptcy filing gives the company 180 days to work out a plan to emerge from bankruptcy. Walker says in the meantime they've secured a $200 Million line of credit and a $25 Million loan to keep the company operating during the period.

Walker says they remain committed through the process to keep the company a viable part of the region and part of the United State steel industry.

"We have no plans to liquidate the assets or close our mill. In fact our plan is to continue to make investments and upgrade our mill as cash flow improves. That is encouraging news for the community and for the Ohio Valley."

(11) PARTICIPANT.—The term ''participant'' means any person subject to the funding requirements of title II, including—

(A) any defendant participant subject to an assessment for contribution under subtitle A of that title; and

(B) any insurer participant subject to an assessment for contribution under subtitle B of that title.

(12) PERSON.—The term ''person''—

(A) means an individual, trust, firm, joint stock company, partnership, association, insurance company, reinsurance company, or corporation; and

(B) does not include the United States, any State or local government, or subdivision thereof, including school districts and any general or special function governmental unit established under State law.

(13) STATE.—The term ''State'' means any State of the United States and also includes the District of Columbia, Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin islands, Guam, American Samoa, and any other territory or possession of the United States or any political subdivision of any of the entities under this paragraph.

(14) VETERANS' BENEFITS PROGRAM.—The term ''veterans' benefits program'' means any program for benefits in connection with military service administered by the Veterans' Administration under title 38, United States Code.

(15) WORKER'S COMPENSATION LAW.—The term ''worker's compensation law''—

(A) means a law respecting a program administered by a State or the United States to provide benefits, funded by a responsible employer or its insurance carrier, for occupational diseases or injuries or for disability or death caused by occupational diseases or injuries;

(B) includes the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act (33 U.S.C. sections 901 et seq.) and chapter 81 of title 5, United States Code; and

(C) does not include the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Employers' Liability Act, or damages recovered by any employee in a liability action against an employer.

TITLE I—ASBESTOS CLAIMS RESOLUTION

Subtitle A—United States Court of Asbestos Claims

SEC. 101. ESTABLISHMENT OF ASBESTOS COURT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part I of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 7 the following:

"CHAPTER 9—UNITED STATES COURT OF ASBESTOS CLAIMS

"Sec.
"201. Establishment of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.
"202. Magistrates.
"203. Retirement of judges of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.

"§ 201. Establishment of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT AND APPOINTMENT OF JUDGES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, 5 judges, who shall constitute a court of record known as the United States Court of Asbestos Claims.

"(2) ARTICLE I COURT.—The Court of Asbestos Claims is declared to be a court established under article I of the Constitution of the United States.

"(b) TERM; REMOVAL; COMPENSATION.—

"(1) TERM.—Each judge appointed under subsection (a) shall serve for a term of 15 years, except that judges initially appointed shall serve for staggered terms as the President shall determine appropriate to assure continuity.

"(2) REMOVAL.—Judges may be removed by the President only for good cause.

"(3) COMPENSATION.—Each judge shall receive a salary at the rate of pay, and in the same manner, as judges of the district courts of the United States.

"(c) CHIEF JUDGE.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall designate 1 of the judges appointed under subsection (b)(1), who is less than 70 years of age, to serve as chief judge.

"(2) TERM.—The chief judge may continue to serve as such until—

"(A) he or she reaches the age of 70 years;

"(B) another judge is designated as chief judge by the President; or

"(C) the expiration of his or her term under subsection (b)(1).

"(3) CONTINUITY OF SERVICE.—Upon the designation by the President of another judge to serve as chief judge, the former chief judge may continue to serve as a judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims for the balance of the term to which he or she was appointed.

"(4) POWERS OF CHIEF JUDGE.—The chief judge is authorized to—

"(A) prescribe rules and procedures for hearings and appeals of the Court of Asbestos Claims and its magistrates;

"(B) appoint magistrates;

"(C) appoint or contract for the services of such personnel as may be necessary and appropriate to carry out the responsibilities of the Court of Asbestos Claims; and

"(D) make such expenditures as may be necessary and appropriate in the administration of the responsibilities of the Court of Asbestos Claims and the chief judge under this chapter and the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003.

"(d) TIME AND PLACES OF HOLDING COURT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The principal office of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be in the District of Columbia, but the Court of Asbestos Claims may hold court at such times and in such places as the chief judge may prescribe by rule.

"(2) LIMITATION.—The times and places of the sessions of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be prescribed with a view to securing reasonable opportunity to citizens to appear before the Court of Asbestos Claims.

"(e) OFFICIAL DUTY STATION; RESIDENCE.—

"(1) DUTY STATION.—The official duty station of each judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims is the District of Columbia.

"(2) RESIDENCE.—After appointment and while in active service, each judge of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall reside within 50 miles of the District of Columbia.

"§ 202. Magistrates

"(a) APPOINTMENT.—The chief judge shall appoint such magistrates as necessary to facilitate the expeditious processing of claims.

"(b) COMPENSATION.—The compensation of magistrates shall be determined by the chief judge, but shall not exceed the annual rate of basic pay of level V of the Executive Schedule, as prescribed by section 5316 of title 5.

"(c) RETIREMENT.—For purposes of Federal laws relating to retirement, including chapters 83 and 84 of title 5, magistrates appointed under this section shall be deemed to be appointed under section 631 of this title.

"(d) REGULATIONS.—Except as provided under subsection (c), chapter 43 shall not apply to magistrates appointed under this chapter, except the chief judge may prescribe rules similar to the provisions of chapter 43 to apply to magistrates.

"§ 203. Retirement of judges of the United States Court of Asbestos Claims

"(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of Federal laws relating to retirement, judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims shall be treated in the same manner and to the same extent as judges of the Court of Federal Claims.

"(b) REGULATIONS.—In carrying out this section—

"(1) the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall promulgate regulations to apply provisions similar to section 178 of this title (including the establishment of a Court of Asbestos Claims Judges Retirement Fund) to judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims; and

"(2) the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall promulgate regulations to apply chapters 83 and 84 of title 5 to judges of the Court of Asbestos Claims.".

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part I of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to chapter 9, and inserting after the item relating to chapter 7 the following:

"9. United States Court of Asbestos Claims.".

Subtitle B—Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Procedures

SEC. 111. FILING OF CLAIMS.

(a) WHO MAY SUBMIT.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—Any individual who has suffered from an eligible disease or condition that is believed to meet the requirements established under subtitle C (or the spouse, parent, child, or other relative of such individual in a representative capacity, or the executor of the estate of such individual) may file a claim with the Asbestos Court for compensation with respect to such injury.

(2) RULES.—The Asbestos Court may issue procedural rules to specify individuals who may file an asbestos claim as a representative of another individual.

(3) LIMITATION.—An asbestos claim may not be filed by any person seeking contribution or indemnity.

(b) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—To be valid, an asbestos claim filed under subsection (a) shall be notarized and include—

(1) the name, social security number, gender, date of birth, and, if applicable, date of death of the claimant;

(2) information relating to the identity of dependents and beneficiaries of the claimant;

(3) a detailed description of the work history of the claimant, including social security records or a signed release permitting access to such records;

(4) a detailed description of the asbestos exposure of the claimant, including information on the identity of any product or manufacturer, site, or location of exposure, plant name, and duration and intensity of exposure;

(5) a detailed description of the tobacco product use history of the claimant, including frequency and duration;

(6) an identification and description of the asbestos-related diseases of the claimant, including a written report by the claimant's physician with medical diagnoses and test results necessary to make a determination of medical eligibility that complies with the applicable requirements of this subtitle and subtitle C;

(7) a description of any prior or pending civil action or other claim brought by the claimant for asbestos-related injury, including an identification of any recovery of compensation or damages through settlement, judgment, or otherwise; and

(8) any other information that is required to be included under procedural rules issued by the Court.

(c) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), if an individual fails to file an asbestos claim with the Asbestos Court under this section within 2 years after the date on which the individual first—

(A) received a medical diagnosis of an eligible disease or condition as provided for under this subtitle and subtitle C; or any claim relating to that injury, and any other asbestos claim related to that injury, shall be extinguished, and any recovery thereon shall be prohibited.

(B) discovered facts that would have led a reasonable person to obtain a medical diagnosis with respect to an eligible disease or condition,

(2) EFFECT ON PENDING CLAIMS.—If an asbestos claimant has any claim for an asbestos-related injury that is pending in a Federal or State court or with a trust established under title 11, United States Code, on the date of enactment of this Act, such claimant shall file an asbestos claim under this section within 2 years after such date of enactment or be barred from receiving any compensation under this title.

(3) EFFECT OF MULTIPLE INJURIES.—An asbestos claimant who receives compensation under this title for an eligible disease or condition, and who subsequently develops another such injury, shall be eligible for additional compensation under this title (subject to appropriate setoffs for such prior recovery of compensation under this title and from any other collateral source) and the statute of limitations under paragraph (1) shall not begin to run with respect to such subsequent injury until such claimant obtains a medical diagnosis of such other injury or discovers facts that would have led a reasonable person to obtain such a diagnosis.

(4) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Paragraph (2) shall be interpreted as a statute of limitations and be construed to the benefit of the Fund and of any person who might otherwise have been made subject to an asbestos claim to which such paragraph is applied.

SEC. 112. GENERAL RULE CONCERNING NO-FAULT COMPENSATION.

An asbestos claimant shall not be required to demonstrate that the asbestos-related injury for which the claim is being made resulted from the negligence or other fault of any other person.

SEC. 113. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ELIGIBLE ASBESTOS CLAIM.

To be eligible for compensation under this subtitle for an asbestos-related injury, an individual shall—

(1) file an asbestos claim in a timely manner in accordance with section 111; and

(2) prove, by a preponderance of the evidence that—

(A) the claimant suffers from an eligible disease or condition, as demonstrated by evidence (submitted as part of the claim) that meets the medical criteria requirements and diagnostic criteria requirements established under subtitle C; and

(B) the claimant meets the latency criteria requirements and the exposure criteria requirements established under subtitle C.

SEC. 114. ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS AND CLAIM AWARDS.

(a) CLAIMS EXAMINERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Asbestos Court shall appoint, or contract for the services of, qualified individuals to assist magistrates by conducting eligibility reviews of asbestos claims filed with the Court.

(2) CRITERIA.—The Asbestos Court shall establish criteria with respect to the qualifications of individuals who are eligible to serve as claims examiners and, in developing such criteria, shall consult with such experts as the Court determines appropriate.

(b) REFERRAL OF ASBESTOS CLAIM.—Not later than 20 days after the filing of an asbestos claim with the Asbestos Court, the Court shall refer such claim to a magistrate.

(c) INITIAL REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Under the direction of a magistrate, a claims examiner shall make an initial review of an asbestos claim to determine whether all required information has been submitted by the claimant.

(2) NOTICE OF INCOMPLETE CLAIM.—If the claims examiner determines that all required information has not been submitted, the examiner—

(A) shall notify the claimant of such determination and require the submission of additional information necessary for a determination of eligibility;

(B) may compel the submission of any additional information;

(C) may request that the claimant undergo additional medical examinations and tests if information from such examinations or tests is necessary to enable the examiner to make a determination of medical eligibility; and

(D) may require any releases necessary to enable the examiner to obtain medical or other information relevant to the determination of eligibility.

(d) EXPEDITIOUS DETERMINATIONS.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules to expedite claims for asbestos claimants with exigent circumstances.

(e) AUDIT AND PERSONNEL REVIEW PROCEDURES.—The Asbestos Court shall establish audit and personnel review procedures for evaluating the accuracy of eligibility recommendations of magistrates.

(f) ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 60 days after the receipt by a magistrate of all required information and requested medical advice with respect to an asbestos claim, the magistrate shall transmit a recommendation of the compensation to which the claimant is entitled and findings of fact to a judge of the Asbestos Court.

(2) ADMISSIBILITY OF FINDINGS OF FACT.—A determination under paragraph (1) shall include relevant findings of fact and shall be admissible as evidence in any judicial review.

(g) DECISION OF JUDGE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 30 days after receipt of a recommendation of a magistrate, a judge of the Asbestos Court shall make a final decision of any compensation to which the claimant is entitled.

(2) WAIVER OF JUDICIAL REVIEW.—The final decision under paragraph (1) shall include an acceptance form by which the claimant may waive the right to judicial review and expedite payment of compensation from the Fund.

(h) AWARDING OF COMPENSATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If a judge of the Asbestos Court determines that an asbestos claimant is entitled to compensation, the Court shall notify the Administrator to award the claimant compensation from the Fund in the amount of the judge's decision.

(2) CLAIM EXTINGUISHED.—The acceptance of a payment under this Act shall extinguish all claims related to such payment.

SEC. 115. MEDICAL EVIDENCE AUDITING PROCEDURES.

(a) DEVELOPMENT.—The Asbestos Court shall develop methods for auditing the medical evidence submitted as part of an asbestos claim, including methods to ensure the independent reading of x-rays and results of pulmonary function tests. The Court may develop additional methods for auditing other types of evidence or information received by the Court.

(b) REFUSAL TO CONSIDER CERTAIN EVIDENCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Asbestos Court determines that an audit conducted in accordance with the methods developed under subsection (a) demonstrates that the medical evidence submitted by a specific physician or medical facility is not consistent with prevailing medical practices or the applicable requirements of this Act, the Court shall notify claims examiners and the magistrates that any medical evidence from such physician or facility shall be unacceptable for purposes of establishing eligibility for compensation under this Act.

(2) NOTIFICATION.—Upon a determination by the Asbestos Court under paragraph (1), the Court shall notify the physician or medical facility involved of the results of the audit. Such physician or facility shall have a right to appeal the determination of the Court under procedures issued by the Court.

SEC. 116. CLAIMANT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Asbestos Court shall establish an asbestos claimant assistance program to provide assistance to claimants in preparing and submitting asbestos claim applications and in responding to claimant inquiries.

(b) LEGAL ASSISTANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As part of the program established under subsection (a), the Asbestos Court shall establish a legal assistance program to provide assistance to asbestos claimants concerning legal representation issues.

(2) LIST OF QUALIFIED ATTORNEYS.—As part of the program, the Court shall maintain a roster of qualified attorneys who have agreed to provide pro bono services to asbestos claimants under rules established by the Court. The claimants shall not be required to use the attorneys listed on such roster.

Subtitle C—Medical Criteria

SEC. 121. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF ELIGIBLE ASBESTOS CLAIM.

To be eligible for compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, an individual shall—

(1) file an asbestos claim under this title in a timely manner; and

(2) prove, by a preponderance of the evidence that—

(A) the claimant suffers from an eligible disease or condition, as demonstrated by evidence (submitted as part of the claim) that meets the diagnostic criteria requirements described in section 122 and the medical criteria requirements described in section 124; and

(B) the claimant meets the latency criteria requirements described in section 123 and the exposure criteria requirements described in section 125.

SEC. 122. DIAGNOSTIC CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall demonstrate a medical diagnosis that meets the requirements of this section.

(b) DIAGNOSIS.—A medical diagnosis meets the requirements of this section if the diagnosis—

(1) is made by a physician who—

(A) treated, or is treating, the claimant;

(B) conducted an in-person medical examination of the claimant; and

(C) is licensed to practice medicine in the State in which the examination occurred and in which the diagnosis is rendered;

(2) includes a review by the physician of the work history, asbestos exposure pattern, and smoking history of the claimant, or other factors determined appropriate by the Asbestos Court;

(3) is independently verified with respect to the duration, proximity, regularity, and intensity of the asbestos exposure involved; and

(4) has excluded other more likely causes of the injury of the claimant.

(c) RESULTS OF MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS AND TESTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In making the demonstration required under subsection (a), an asbestos claimant shall submit—

(A) x-rays (including both films and B-reader reports);

(B) detailed results of pulmonary function tests (including spirometric tracings);

(C) laboratory tests; and

(D) the results of medical examination or reviews of other medical evidence.

(2) PROCEDURAL REQUIREMENTS.—A submission under paragraph (1) shall comply with the requirements of this Act and recognized medical standards regarding equipment, testing methods, and procedures to ensure that such medical evidence is reliable.

(d) SUFFICIENCY OF MEDICAL EVIDENCE.—In making determinations under this section, a magistrate shall not make a determination unless the medical evidence provided in support of the asbestos claim is credible and consistent with this section, the medical criteria described in section 124, and recognized medical standards.

(e) ATTORNEY RETENTION AGREEMENTS.—An attorney retention agreement shall not be required as a prerequisite to a medical examination or medical screening for purposes of obtaining a medical diagnosis or other medical information under this section.

(f) RULES.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules to implement the diagnostic criteria requirements to be used in applying this section.

SEC. 123. LATENCY CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall demonstrate that the claimant was exposed to asbestos—

(1) in a manner that meets the exposure requirements of sections 124 and 125;

(2) within the United States or its territories or possessions; and

(3) for at least 10 years before the initial diagnosis of any asbestos-related injury.

(b) CONSISTENCY WITH MEDICAL CRITERIA.—An asbestos claimant shall be required to demonstrate that any delay between asbestos exposure and the asbestos-related injury is consistent with medical criteria concerning the latency periods typically associated with the disease category for which the claim is being made.

(c) VARIATIONS IN LATENCY PERIODS.—Latency periods under this section may vary based on the eligible disease or condition involved.

(d) RULES.—The Asbestos Court shall prescribe rules, based on the medical literature or other appropriate medical evidence concerning latency periods, for the purpose of implementing the criteria used in applying this section.

SEC. 124. MEDICAL CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) BILATERAL ASBESTOS-RELATED NONMALIGNANT DISEASE.—The term ''bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease'' means a diagnosis of bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease based on—

(A) an x-ray reading of 1/0 or higher on the ILO scale; or

(B) an x-ray showing bilateral pleural plaques or pleural thickening, bilateral interstitial fibrosis, or bilateral interstitial markings.

(2) BILATERAL PLEURAL DISEASE OF B2.—The term ''bilateral pleural disease of B2'' means a chest wall pleural thickening or plaque with a maximum width of at least 5 millimeters and a total length of at least ¼ of the projection of the lateral chest wall.

(3) FEV1.—The term ''FEV1'' means forced expiratory volume (1 second), which is the maximal volume of air expelled in 1 second during performance of the spirometric test for forced vital capacity.

(4) FVC.—The term ''FVC'' means forced vital capacity, which is the maximal volume of air expired with a maximally forced effort from a position of maximal inspiration.

(5) ILO GRADE.—The term ''ILO grade'' means the radiological ratings for the presence of lung or pleural changes as determined from a chest x-ray, all as established from time to time by the International Labor Organization.

(6) PATHOLOGICAL EVIDENCE OF ASBESTOSIS.—The term ''pathological evidence of asbestosis'' means proof of asbestosis based on the pathological grading system for asbestosis described in the Special Issue of the Archives of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine, ''Asbestos-associated Diseases'', Vol. 106, No. 11, App. 3 (October 8, 1982).

(7) PULMONARY FUNCTION TESTING.—The term ''pulmonary function testing'' means spirometry testing that is in compliance with the quality criteria established from time to time by the American Thoracic Society and is performed on equipment which is in compliance with the standards of the American Thoracic Society for technical quality and calibration.

(8) SIGNIFICANT OCCUPATIONAL EXPOSURE.—The term ''significant occupational exposure'' means employment for a cumulative period of at least 5 years, in an industry and an occupation in which the claimant—

(A) handled raw asbestos fibers on a regular basis;

(B) fabricated asbestos-containing products so that the claimant in the fabrication process was exposed on a regular basis to raw asbestos fibers;

(C) altered, repaired, or otherwise worked with an asbestos-containing product such that the claimant was exposed on a regular basis to asbestos fibers; or

(D) was employed in an industry and occupation such that the claimant worked on a regular basis in close proximity to workers engaged in the activities described under subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

(9) TLC.—The term ''TLC'' means total lung capacity, which is the volume of air in the lung after maximal inspiration.

(b) REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible for compensation or medical monitoring reimbursement under this title, a claimant shall establish that the claimant meets the medical criteria for 1 of the following categories:

(1) For Level I: Asymptomatic Exposure, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease or an asbestos-related malignancy; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) 5 years cumulative occupational exposure to asbestos.

(2) For Level II: Asbestosis/Pleural Disease A, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade 1/0 or greater, or showing bilateral pleural disease of B2 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(3) For Level III: Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade 1/0 or greater, or showing bilateral pleural disease of B2 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis;

(B) pulmonary function testing that shows—

(i) TLC less than 80 percent of predicted; or

(ii) FVC less than 80 percent of predicted, and a FEV1/FVC ratio of not less than 65 percent; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(4) For Level IV: Severe Asbestosis, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of asbestosis by chest x-rays for which a B-reader report is furnished showing small irregular opacities of ILO Grade

2/1 or greater, or by pathological evidence of asbestosis;

(B) pulmonary function testing that shows—

(i) TLC less than 65 percent of predicted; or

(ii) FVC less than 65 percent of predicted, and a FEV1/FVC ratio greater than 65 percent; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(5) For Level V: Other Cancer, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary laryngeal, esophageal, pharyngeal, or stomach cancer;

(B) evidence of an underlying bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease; and

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure.

(6) For Level VI: Lung Cancer One, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary lung cancer; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982.

(7) For Level VII: Lung Cancer Two, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of a primary lung cancer;

(B) evidence of an underlying bilateral asbestos-related nonmalignant disease;

(C) meaningful and credible evidence of—

(i) 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos before December 31, 1982; and

(ii) significant occupational exposure; and

(D) supporting medical documentation and certification by or on behalf of the claimant establishing asbestos exposure as a contributing factor causing the relevant lung cancer.

(8) For Level VIII: Mesothelioma, the claimant shall provide—

(A) a diagnosis that meets the requirements of section 122 of mesothelioma; and

(B) meaningful and credible evidence of exposure to asbestos.

SEC. 125. EXPOSURE CRITERIA REQUIREMENTS.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—To be eligible to receive compensation under this title for an asbestos-related injury, the claim submitted by the asbestos claimant shall contain information to demonstrate that the claimant meets the minimum exposure requirements under this subtitle.

(b) BURDEN OF PROOF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant has the burden of demonstrating meaningful and credible exposure to asbestos for purposes of this subtitle.

(2) EVIDENCE.—The demonstration under paragraph (1) may be established by—

(A) an affidavit submitted by the claimant, a coworker of the claimant, or a family member, in the case of a deceased claimant;

(B) employment records;

(C) invoices;

(D) construction or other similar records; or

(E) other credible evidence.

(c) RULES.—

(1) EXPOSURE INFORMATION.—The Asbestos Court shall issue rules prescribing specific exposure information that shall be submitted to permit the Court to process an asbestos claim and prescribing a proof of claim form. Such rules may provide that a claims examiner or magistrate, as applicable, may require the submission of other or additional evidence of exposure when determined to be appropriate and necessary.

(2) REBUTTABLE PRESUMPTIONS.—The Asbestos Court may prescribe rules identifying specific industries, occupations within those industries, time periods, and employment periods for which significant occupational exposure (as defined under section 124) may be a rebuttable presumption for asbestos claimants who provide meaningful and credible evidence that the claimant worked in that industry and occupation for the requisite period of time. The Administrator may provide evidence to rebut this presumption.

Subtitle D—Awards

SEC. 131. AMOUNT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant who meets the requirements of section 113 shall be entitled to compensation in an amount determined by reference to the benefit table contained in subsection (b).

(b) BENEFIT TABLE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant with an eligible disease or condition established in accordance with section 124, other than an injury described in paragraph (2), shall be eligible for compensation according to the following schedule:

Level	Scheduled Condition or Disease	Scheduled Value
I	Asymptomatic Exposure	$0
II	Asbestosis/Pleural Disease A	$0
III	Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B	$40,000
IV	Severe Asbestosis	$400,000
V	Other Cancer	$200,000
VI	Lung Cancer I (smoker)	$50,000
VII	Lung Cancer II (non-smoker)	$400,000
VIII	Mesothelioma	$750,000

(2) MEDICAL MONITORING.—An asbestos claimant with asymptomatic exposure or asbestosis/pleural disease A, based on the criteria under section 124(b)(1), shall only be eligible for medical monitoring reimbursement.

SEC. 132. MEDICAL MONITORING.

(a) RELATION TO STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—The filing of an asbestos claim that seeks reimbursement for medical monitoring shall not be considered as evidence that the claimant has discovered facts that would otherwise commence the period applicable for purposes of the statute of limitations under section 111(c).

(b) COSTS.—Reimbursable medical monitoring costs shall include the costs of a claimant not covered by health insurance for x-ray tests and pulmonary function tests every 3 years.

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Administrator shall promulgate regulations that establish—

(1) the reasonable costs for medical monitoring that is reimbursable; and

(2) the procedures applicable to asbestos claimants.

SEC. 133. PAYMENTS.

(a) STRUCTURED PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An asbestos claimant who is entitled to compensation shall receive such compensation through structured payments from the Fund, made over a period of not less than 3 years.

(2) ACCELERATED PAYMENTS.—The Administrator shall develop guidelines to provide for accelerated payments to asbestos claimants who are mesothelioma victims and who are alive on the date on which the administrator receives notice of the eligibility of the claimant. Such payments shall be credited against the first regular payment under the structured payment plan for the claimant.

(3) EXPEDITED PAYMENTS.—The Administrator shall develop guidelines to provide for expedited payments to asbestos claimants in cases of exigent circumstances or extreme hardship caused by asbestos-related injury.

(4) ANNUITY.—An asbestos claimant may elect to receive any payments to which they are entitled under this title in the form of an annuity.

(b) LIMITATION ON TRANSFERABILITY.—An asbestos claim shall not be assignable or otherwise transferable under this Act.

(c) CREDITORS.—An award of compensation under this title shall be exempt from all claims of creditors and from levy, execution, and attachment or other remedy for recovery or collection of a debt, and such exemption may not be waived.

(d) TREATMENT FOR INTERNAL REVENUE PURPOSES.—All compensation received under this subtitle shall be deemed to be compensation for personal physical injuries or physical sickness under section 104 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(e) MEDICARE AS SECONDARY PAYER.—No award of compensation under this title shall be deemed a payment for purposes of section 1862 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395y).

SEC. 134. REDUCTION IN BENEFIT PAYMENTS FOR COLLATERAL SOURCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amount of compensation otherwise available to an asbestos claimant under this title shall be reduced by the amount of collateral source compensation that the claimant received, or is entitled to receive, for the asbestos-related injury that is the subject of the compensation.

(b) EXCLUSIONS.—In no case shall statutory benefits under workers' compensation laws and veterans benefits programs be deemed as collateral source compensation for purposes of this section.

Subtitle E—En Banc Review

SEC. 141. EN BANC REVIEW.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) EN BANC PANELS.—The chief judge of the Asbestos Court shall—

(A) establish en banc panels to carry out this subtitle; and

(B) assign 3 judges of the Asbestos Court to each en banc panel.

(2) FILING OF APPEAL.—Not later than 30 days after receiving notice of the decision of a judge

under section 114, a claimant may file an appeal for review with an en banc panel of the Asbestos Court.

(b) DE NOVO REVIEW.—An Asbestos Court panel shall provide a de novo review of the magistrate's determination and the judge's decision.

(c) REPRESENTATION OF THE ADMINISTRATOR.—The Administrator may appoint counsel to represent the interests of the Fund and the Administrator in all proceedings before a panel, including oral arguments and the submission of briefs.

(d) FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE.—An Asbestos Court panel shall apply the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedures to all proceedings before the panel.

(e) DECISION OF PANEL.—An Asbestos Court panel shall enter a final decision on an appeal on the earlier date occurring—

(1) not later than 30 days after the date of the conclusion of oral arguments; or

(2) not later than 60 days after an appeal is filed under this section.

TITLE II—ASBESTOS INJURY CLAIMS RESOLUTION FUND

Subtitle A—Asbestos Defendants Funding Allocation

SEC. 201. DEFINITIONS.

In this subtitle, the following definitions shall apply:

(1) AFFILIATED GROUP.—The term ''affiliated group'' means—

(A) with respect to any nonbankrupt defendant participant that is an ultimate parent or a person whose entire beneficial interest is owned on the date of enactment of this Act, directly or indirectly, by an ultimate parent, that set of nonbankrupt persons including the ultimate parent and all of the nonbankrupt persons whose entire beneficial interest shall be owned on December 31, 2002, directly or indirectly, by that ultimate parent; or

(B) with respect to any bankrupt defendant participant, the debtor and all of its direct and indirect majority owned subsidiaries, whether or not such subsidiaries are debtors.

(2) DEBTOR.—The term ''debtor''—

(A) means all entities that are subject to a case pending under any chapter of title 11,

United States Code, on the date of enactment of this Act; and

(B) shall not include an entity—

(i) subject to chapter 7 of title 11, United States Code, if a final decree closing the estate shall have been entered before the date of enactment of this Act; or

(ii) subject to chapter 11 of title 11, United States Code, if a plan of reorganization for such entity shall have been confirmed by a final judgment.

(3) INDEMNIFIABLE COST.—The term ''indemnifiable cost'' means a cost, expense, debt, judgment, or settlement incurred with respect to an asbestos claim that, at any time before December 31, 2002, was or could have been subject to indemnification, contribution, surety, or guaranty.

(4) INDEMNITEE.—The term ''indemnitee'' means a person against whom any asbestos claim has been asserted before December 31, 2002, who has received from any other person, or on whose behalf a sum has been paid by such other person to any third person, in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity in connection with an alleged duty with respect to the defense or indemnification of such person concerning that asbestos claim, other than under a policy of insurance or reinsurance.

(5) INDEMNITOR.—The term ''indemnitor'' means a person who has paid under a written agreement at any time before December 31, 2002, a sum in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity to or on behalf of any person defending against an asbestos claim, in connection with an alleged duty with respect to the defense or indemnification of such person concerning that asbestos claim, except that payments by an insurer or reinsurer under a contract of insurance or reinsurance shall not make the insurer or reinsurer an indemnitor for purposes of this subtitle.

(6) PRIOR ASBESTOS EXPENDITURES.—The term ''prior asbestos expenditures''—

(A) means the gross total amount paid by or on behalf of a person at any time before December 31, 2002, in settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity costs related to all asbestos claims against that person;

(B) includes payments made by insurance carriers to or for the benefit of such person or on such person's behalf with respect to such asbestos claims, except as provided in section 204(g);

(C) shall not include any payment made by a person in connection with any activities or disputes related to insurance coverage matters for asbestos-related liabilities; and

(D) shall not include any payment made by or on behalf of persons who are common carriers by railroad for asbestos claims brought under the Act of April 22, 1908 (45 U.S.C. 51 et seq.), commonly known as the Federal Employers' Liability Act, including settlement, judgment, defense, or indemnity costs associated with these claims.

(7) TRUST.—The term ''trust'' means all persons or affiliated groups that formed under section 524(g) of title 11, United States Code, or formed under any plan under section 1129 of title 11, United States Code, for the purpose of administering and paying asbestos claims.

(8) ULTIMATE PARENT.—The term ''ultimate parent'' means a person—

(A) that owns, on the date of enactment of this Act, the entire beneficial interest, directly or indirectly, of at least 1 other person; and

(B) whose entire beneficial interest is not owned, on December 31, 2002, directly or indirectly, by any other single person.

SEC. 202. AUTHORITY AND TIERS.

(a) ASSESSMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall assess from defendant participants contributions to the Fund in accordance with this section based on tiers and subtiers assigned to defendant participants.

(2) AGGREGATE CONTRIBUTION LEVEL.—The total contribution required of all defendant participants over the life of the Fund shall be equal to $45,000,000,000.

(b) TIER I.—The Administrator shall assign to Tier I all persons that are debtors or affiliated groups that include a person that—

(1) is a debtor on the date of enactment of this Act or at any time during the 1-year period preceding that date; and

(2) have paid a prior asbestos expenditure, irrespective of whether a related case under title 11, United States Code, is dismissed.

(c) TREATMENT OF TIER I BUSINESS ENTITIES IN BANKRUPTCY.—

(1) DEFINED TERM.—In this subsection, the term ''bankrupt business entity'' means a person that is not a natural person that—

(A) filed under chapter 11, of title 11, United States Code, before January 1, 2003;

(B) has not confirmed a plan of reorganization as of the date of enactment of this Act; and
