White House: Enron Official Phoned

By KAREN GULLO, Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) - Enron Chairman Kenneth L. Lay reached out to two of President Bush's Cabinet officers when the energy company was collapsing, the White House disclosed Thursday as the Justice Department opened a criminal investigation of Enron's bankruptcy.
Bush, who received significant campaign contributions from Lay and other Enron executives, said he himself has never discussed Enron's financial problems with its embattled corporate chairman. The president said he last saw Lay in Texas at spring fund-raiser for former first lady Barbara Bush's literacy foundation.
Lay also was among a group of some 20 business leaders who came to the White House early in the Bush administration to discuss the state of the economy, Bush said.
Many Enron employees lost their life savings when the company filed for bankruptcy Dec. 2.
``What anybody's going to find out is that this administration will fully investigate issues such as the Enron bankruptcy, to make sure we can learn from the past and make sure workers are protected,'' Bush said.
But Lay did seek the ear of other top-level administration officials last fall. According to White House press secretary Ari Fleischer, Lay telephoned Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill amid Enron's collapse ``to advise him about his concern about the obligations of Enron and whether they would be able to meet those obligations.''
Lay also told O'Neill that Enron ``was heading to bankruptcy,'' Fleischer said.
O'Neill received calls from Lay on Oct. 28 and Nov. 8, said Treasury spokeswoman Michele Davis. It was on Oct. 16 that Enron made its stunning disclosure of a $638 million third-quarter loss.
In a separate phone call to Commerce Secretary Don Evans, Lay similarly worried that the company might have to default on its obligations. He brought to the secretary's attention ``that he was having problems with his bond rating and he was worried about its impact on the energy sector,'' Fleischer said.
After that conversation, Evans spoke to O'Neill ``and they both agreed no action should be taken to intervene with their bond holders,'' Fleischer said.
The spokesman had said Wednesday he did not know of anyone in the White House who discussed Enron's financial situation.
Fleischer also brushed aside talk of any conflict in the Justice Department investigation and said there was no reason to turn the probe over to a special counsel.

Lay gave $25,000 to a leadership committee headed by then-senator and now Attorney General John Ashcroft, according to the Center for Public Integrity. An attorney for Enron welcomed Ashcroft's inquiry, the latest in a series of governmental probes into the company's demise, saying the investigation would ``bring light to the facts.''
``We want to get to the bottom of this too,'' said Robert Bennett, a Washington attorney representing the Houston-based company. ``A lot of decent and honorable people work at Enron and we should wait until the facts are out.''
Bush ordered a separate review Thursday of pension and corporate disclosure rules that could jeopardize workers' savings. ``There has been a wave of bankruptcies that have caused many workers to lose their pensions and that is deeply troubling to me,'' Bush said.
The Justice Department is forming a national task force to look into the company's dealings. The group will be headed by lawyers at the department's criminal division and include prosecutors in Houston, San Francisco, New York and several other cities, said a Justice Department official, speaking on condition of anonymity.
The official declined to say when the investigation began. Enron faces civil investigations by the Labor Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission and subpoenas from congressional committees.
All are looking into the energy trading company's collapse, the largest bankruptcy filing in U.S. history.
The failure hit employees and investors hard. Workers were prohibited from selling company stock from their Enron-heavy 401(k) retirement accounts as the company's stock plummeted. Many lost their life's savings.
Enron executives cashed out more than $1 billion in stock when it was near its peak.
Former Enron chief executive Jeffrey Skilling, who left the helm nearly two months before the company's swift descent, welcomes the investigation, said spokeswoman Judy Leon. Skilling has said he had no idea, despite Enron's falling stock values, that the company was on the brink of failure.
Formed in 1985, Enron had 20,000 employees and was once the world's top buyer and seller of natural gas and the largest electricity marketer in the United States. It also marketed coal, pulp, paper, plastics, metals and fiber-optic bandwidth.
One likely focus of the Justice Department investigation is possible fraud based on Enron's heavy reliance on off-balance-sheet partnerships which took on Enron debt. The partnerships masked Enron's financial problems and left its credit ratings healthy so it could obtain the cash and credit crucial to running its trading business.
The Houston-based company went bankrupt after its credit collapsed and its main rival, Dynegy Inc., backed out of an $8.4 billion buyout plan late last year.
Just a year ago, stock of Enron, the nation's largest buyer and seller of natural gas, traded at $85 per share. Today it is less than $1.
Lay has close ties to Bush and his father, the former president. Lay was a top contributor to the younger Bush's 2000 presidential campaign.
The company played a key role earlier this year when a White House task force met with business executives and other interests to fashion a national energy policy. The task force was headed by Vice President Dick Cheney.

PRESS BRIEFING BY ARI FLEISCHER

The James S. Brady Briefing Room

12:05 P.M. EST

MR. FLEISCHER: Good afternoon. Let me walk you a little bit through the schedule, and I'll be happy to take questions.

The President this morning had breakfast with a bipartisan congressional leadership to discuss the remaining issues that Congress has on its plate for the rest of the year. He urged the Congress to continue to work together so that the economic stimulus package could be approved by the Congress, be signed this year, he hopes, so that we can help America's unemployment workers.

Following the breakfast, the President met with the CIA for his intelligence briefing; met with the FBI for an update on the domestic front. And then he convened a meeting of the National Security Council.

Throughout the afternoon, the President will meet with members of Congress on trade promotion authority. The House of Representatives is scheduled to take a very important vote tomorrow on whether or not President Bush will have the authority to enter into trade agreements around the world. The President urges members of Congress to vote for that. It will be a very interesting vote, to see whether or not Congress or the House will go along.

The President also early this afternoon will have an event in the Oval Office, where he will announce a new Chairman of the Republican National Committee. And the President will meet with the Prime Minister of Norway this afternoon to discuss cooperation on the war on terrorism.

One update. As a result of the action the President took yesterday in the fight against international terrorism on the financial front, I want to report to you this morning that over $5 million has been blocked in assets belonging to the Holy Land Foundation. And as a result of the freezes and blocking orders the President has implemented on the financial front worldwide against the war on terrorism, more than $61 million has been either frozen or blocked around the world.

Q Ari, what makes the President -- I'm taking note of his wide-swinging threats in speeches recently. What makes him think that he has the right to go into a sovereign country and bomb the people?

MR. FLEISCHER: His threats?

Q Any country. Yes, he's --

MR. FLEISCHER: Would you like to be more specific?

Q Does he think he can go beyond Afghanistan or anywhere else?

MR. FLEISCHER: The President has made it clear to the American people that the United States, in the wake of an attack on our country, will defend itself. And as a result of defending ourselves, you can see what is happening in Afghanistan. The President has said that this is a war against terrorism because terrorists continue to pose a threat to the United States and to others around the world, and that he is involved in phase one of defending this country against terrorists, and he will continue to do so.

Q What gives him the authority to go into other countries and bomb them, which is what he is threatening to do?

MR. FLEISCHER: The right as the Commander-in-Chief to protect and defend the American people.

Q Ari, what's the White House reaction to the agreement signed in Bonn by the parties who have been negotiating a future for the Afghan government? Does it meet the standards that the White House has set out -- broad-based, ethnically diverse, women involved?

MR. FLEISCHER. The President is very pleased with the agreement that's been reached on Bonn concerning the future of the Afghanistan government. He believes it is a positive agreement that bodes well for the people of Afghanistan. This vote will allow the people of Afghanistan to take -- this development will allow the people of Afghanistan to take their country back, and the President is very pleased by that. He's pleased by the multiethnic nature of the agreement. He's pleased by the role that women will play in the future government of Afghanistan. He wants to express his congratulations and praise to Secretary General Annan, as well as to Ambassador Brahimi, for their hard work in delivering this accord.

But much more work remains ahead. This is an important development in the future of Afghanistan, but it's only, in many ways, the beginning. A lot of hard work remains for Afghanistan now to have a stable government that represents and respects the people of Afghanistan. It still will be difficult because Afghanistan is still a nation that is the middle of a war.

Q Ari, on the Middle East, since last weekend's suicide bombings, has Mr. Arafat done anything to impress the President that, in fact, he is making a commitment to peace and to rooting out terrorists?

MR. FLEISCHER: I think if you listen to what the President said yesterday -- now, it's about 16 hours after what he said -- it's too soon to say. The President will keep a very close eye on the events in the Middle East and on the actions that Chairman Arafat takes, to make certain that Chairman Arafat is dedicated to the cause of peace and to making sure that he takes action against the terrorists who are challenging not only the security of Israel, but the authority of Chairman Arafat.

Q But what's the timetable here? Because, I mean, day after day, the President keeps calling on him to do something. I'm wondering when the timetable, when the deadline is for Yasser Arafat.

MR. FLEISCHER: The President has not established it in such a manner. I think that, as always, the President wants to allow events to develop over time in a way that he hopes will be fruitful to convincing the parties in the Middle East that their best interest is to work together, Chairman Arafat and Israel, to forge meaningful peace. And one of the best tests of that will be to see whether Chairman Arafat will take meaningful, long-term, enduring action against the terrorists who are operating out of Palestinian territory.

Q But for now the peace process is dead, is it not, in the President's mind?

MR. FLEISCHER: I think you heard the President address that yesterday, when he said that he has a dream that peace will be achieved in the Middle East. And as I indicated earlier, the Middle East has historically been a cycle between violence and hope. And even in the midst of the violence, the President has not given up hope and he will remain committed to achieving peace.

Q What has President Bush been told about the death of the two Americans in Afghanistan under friendly fire this morning and how it happened?

MR. FLEISCHER: Upon his arrival into the White House, shortly before 7:00 a.m. this morning, the President was informed about the deaths of the Americans and the injuries in Afghanistan that affected people of Afghanistan, as well. And the President offers his condolences to the families and the loved ones of those who have been killed, and he regrets the loss of life very much and also wishes that the injured will have a full and speedy recovery.

Q And what caused it? Does he know anything about what went wrong?

MR. FLEISCHER: The Department of Defense will have more information about any of the specifics, and I'll refer you over to DOD on it.

Q What do you think your chances are in the trade vote tomorrow?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, I think it's risky business, always, to predict what a congressional vote will be. It has historically been an uphill fight, at least over the last some 10 years, for the President to be given this authority. But the President thinks it is crucial that he be given the authority to enter into trade agreements around the world, one, to help protect the economy long-term; but, two, to help other nations around the world so they have opportunities to grow and prosper.

Q With the people he's meeting today, are they leaners or how do you see them?

MR. FLEISCHER: They fall into a variety of categories. Clearly, he won't meet with people whose minds are already made up and there's no use talking to them. So the President is going to meet with people where he thinks it can make a difference.

I can report to you that the President has held, prior to today and not including yesterday's flight, six meetings with members of Congress, exclusively on the topic of trade promotion authority. He's met with 41 members of the House, 8 members of the Senate, 19 Republicans and 30 Democrats.

Q Are those large meetings, or one-on-one, or --

MR. FLEISCHER: A variety of forums.

Q Is this over recent, Ari, or --

Q Has he been on the phone with them also?

MR. FLEISCHER: The President may be making some phone calls.

Q Spread over the last six months?

MR. FLEISCHER: Yes, if you recall, in anticipation of this, because the President is such a dedicated believer in the importance of free trade, the President over the summer started having meetings with members of Congress to talk about trade promotion authority. He had a few additional ones, and now, of course, on the eve of a major vote, the efforts are accelerated.

Q This is over that whole period?

MR. FLEISCHER: That's correct.

Q Has the President talked to Sharon or Admiral Zinni? What has been the President's activity in terms of the Mideast?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, as you know, the President met directly with Prime Minister Sharon here at the White House on Sunday. No, to my knowledge, the President has not had any additional conversations.

Q Has the President had a chance to look at this new proposal by Chairman Thomas that provides additional assistance to workers who lose their jobs?

MR. FLEISCHER: TIA? The President is aware of the proposal by Chairman Thomas and the President is hopeful that as a result of a series of conversations that are taking place, that members of Congress will agree to grant the President the authority to enter into trade agreements around the world.

Q Does he support the Thomas proposal?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, the President does believe in TIA, the program of trade adjustment assistance. He thinks it is a very helpful way to help people who in individual sectors might lose their jobs as a result of trade agreements. Having said that, the President, as you know, believes that trade agreements create a net increase in jobs. But the President supports the program. The President hopes that in negotiations and discussions they will be successful.

Q Chairman Arafat is saying that he can't get to General Zinni to return any calls to him. Are you aware of that? Has that been a directive to General Zinni?

MR. FLEISCHER: I'd refer you to the State Department.

Q Ari, in light of the Army's decision to reverse itself on Captain Burlingame, can you tell us how and when the President was advised of that situation? Also, the President's thoughts on that?

MR. FLEISCHER: Yes. As I indicated this morning, this is a matter for the Department of Defense, the Department of Army, specifically. And I don't have anything beyond that.

00800000000311

REV_00166771

Q Do you know if the President was at least aware of it?

MR. FLEISCHER: As I say, I don't have anything beyond that.

Q Ari, why do we have to be referred to the State Department on that? I mean why can't we -- can't we know if the administration is having conversations with Yasser Arafat?

MR. FLEISCHER: Because I think you'll get -- well, if you ask me about the President, I can report to you the President has not. If you ask about Ambassador Zinni --

Q -- the Security Council? I mean, obviously, everybody around here knows, don't they?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, I don't have a phone list of everything that Zinni is doing. He's in the Mideast --

Q That's not the issue. Are there -- do you know of any contacts with Yasser Arafat?

MR. FLEISCHER: His direct report is to the State Department, which is why I said refer you to the State Department.

Q But everybody reports to the President, don't they? I'm asking you as the President's spokesman why you can't comment on whether the administration has contact with Yasser Arafat when they're in the middle of war over there.

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, if you ask me about the President, I'll give you that answer.

Q Ari, following up on this situation at Arlington, we just spoke with the spokesman for the Army Secretary who says there has been no reversal, that they can bury this man in an existing family plot, but not in a separate grave as his family has requested. What are the prospects that the President might get involved and overrule this?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, again, I said this is a matter for the Department of Defense, the Department of Army. If there's anything further to be added to it, you will know from the White House.

But these are always very sensitive and difficult matters. Arlington National Cemetery is the final resting place where countless numbers of Americans want to be buried. Arlington National Cemetery is also a place that is running out of space. It makes for some of the most difficult emotional issues for the families of loved ones who have been lost in any type of military or any other type of action, having served in the military, also with a nation that wants to honor its promises to people who will be able to be buried into Arlington in the future.

It is always a very emotional and difficult issue, and the military has very stringent rules that they try to comply with, because it makes it easier for everybody to understand what the criteria are. So that's why the Department of the Army is the one who is charged with this. They worked very hard at it, and they understand the sensitivities involved.

Q So are we to take the initial part of your response as an indication that the President might get involved? You said --

MR. FLEISCHER: No, I just said to you -- you asked me and I told you, you know where it stands, that the Department of the Army made the announcement made this morning, and that's where it stands.

Q To follow up on Ken's question and the point he was making on the Middle East, why can't you tell us as the White House spokesman, what, if any, contacts White House officials -- Card, Karl Rove -- has had on this issue with the Department of the Army?

00800000000312

REV_00166772

MR. FLEISCHER: Oh, I thought you were asking about, again, Zinni and Arafat. The Department of the Army?

Q Well, again, I'm asking you to tell us what contact --

MR. FLEISCHER: Ron, I'm not aware of any. If I had something to report, I would report it.

Q Can you check to see whether or not there has been any contact or if the White House is involved in this?

MR. FLEISCHER: I raised it this morning, and I had nothing to advise you of. If I had something to advise you of involving the President or the White House's involvement in this case at Arlington, I would advise you of it.

Q So you're saying the White House hasn't been involved as far as you know?

MR. FLEISCHER: There is nothing that I've been made aware of.

Q Ari, two things, real quick. On Ann's question, is the President planning, or has he talked to the families of those soldiers who were killed?

MR. FLEISCHER: I'll try to let you know. And as you know, the President's habit has been to send notes to the families. But if there is anything, I'll let you know.

Q And a second question, quickly. The President, since September the 11th, has showed extreme patriotism, brandishing his flag, talking about this country, the love of this country. What are his thoughts about the American who has fought for the Taliban and his patriotism?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, the President's first thought is that we need to collect the facts about what has taken place. But I think until then, the President hasn't really entered into the realm of conjecture. I think that -- I would just leave it right there, until the facts can be ascertained about if it's all true what we've read, and why somebody may have done this. But beyond that, I don't think it's fair to speculate.

Q From the initial facts, is it treason?

MR. FLEISCHER: I think Secretary Rumsfeld was asked that question yesterday, and I'm not going to go beyond what he said.

Q I'm asking you, the White House.

MR. FLEISCHER: This is a matter for the people who were involved to ask the appropriate questions, to gather the appropriate information. It's not a time for people in the government to guess or to speculate. These are important matters.

Q But he's fighting against the American government, basically --

MR. FLEISCHER: I understand.

Q Ari, after the breakfast, Speaker Hastert and Leader Gephardt both said that they believe Congress is right to engage in a broad investigation of Enron. And both said that they were open to the idea of having some remedial legislation drafted to protect shareholders, such as those of Enron's, who were affected when their 401(k)s were frozen as the stock value of the company plummeted.

Question one, does the White House support any kind of inquiry into legislation like that? And, two, Mr. Gephardt said the entire Enron situation raises questions anew about the President's ideas about privatizing, even partially, Social Security, because assets held in those funds are subject to all sorts of market pressures, they could disappear overnight. And the Enron situation adds more evidence, the Democrats complain, you just simply cannot and should not privatize Social Security. Your reaction?

MR. FLEISCHER: Okay. On the two points -- on the first point, as you know, right from the beginning I announced that the Department of Treasury and other government agencies are monitoring the events in the wake of the announcement about Enron. And since I said that, Enron has, of course, filed for bankruptcy.

You may want to talk to the Department of Labor. The Department of Labor has jurisdiction over pension issues. It is not uncommon for the Department of Labor, in a time like this, to keep a watchful eye over people's pensions to make sure that any consequences are fairly and adequately dealt with. So they are the agency that would be involved. They have their own criteria to determine whether or not they will have any type of investigation. But the President wants to make certain that all agencies are monitoring events and will take action as their criteria warrant.

On the second point about markets, you know, one of the things about our country is that unfortunately, we can be a land of haves and have-nots. And one of the things that distinguishes the have-nots and the haves is the haves have access to ownership of stock and mutual funds. And, therefore, they have a little piece of a rock that can grow and allow them to enjoy more wealth and a better life.

There are many people in society who would like to have access to markets, so that way they can accumulate wealth. And often, they can't. Social Security is one of the reasons they can't. Young people have all this money taken out of their paychecks, and often they do not receive any return on it, specifically people who are young today pay taxes for a system that is scheduled to go broke before they have any return.

So one of the ways the President sees as helping workers who have a low income is to allow them to have the same market access that upper-income and middle-income people have, so they, too, can accumulate wealth.

Q That doesn't do anything for the Enron 401K.

Q Yesterday, the President and Secretary O'Neill went out of their way to talk about Hamas as a terrorist group with global reach. Is that the first time that that definition has been applied to a Palestinian group? And secondly, this was the first time the President had acted against a group not associated with al Qaeda. What significance should we attach to that?

MR. FLEISCHER: On the first point, I couldn't tell you if that's the first time. I think you would have to take a review of that and see what you -- I can't tell you from everybody in every government -- branch of the government if people have ever used such language. But as you know, Hamas was added to the executive order that the President issued on November 2, allowing the United States to block or to freeze the assets of groups.

The announcement yesterday was on top of that. It was built on the foundation of his November 2 announcement. And I think it shows the world that the President is sincere and will act when he ways that this is a multi-front war and financing of terrorist organizations is one of the fronts at which the United States and others will actively engage.

Q When he first began the war on terrorism, they used terrorist groups with a global reach to apply specifically to al Qaeda. And as part of the rationale for going after these groups, militarily if necessary, should we apply the same criteria to what is now happening in the Middle East? Would the U.S., for instance, consider military action against Middle Eastern terrorist groups?

MR. FLEISCHER: Again, as you know, the President has repeatedly said he's focused on phase one on the war against terrorism, and that's where I think I'll leave it.

Q Ari, two questions on Afghanistan. As part of the agreement today, there was discussion of having some kind of a U.N. force in Kabul, at least for a while. How long -- I know the President has expressed reluctance to have American forces there for long What kind of contribution is he willing to make, and with what range of time parameters? And, secondly, in order to reach this agreement, were there any American commitments made on aid?

MR. FLEISCHER: The principal contribution the United States is making is creating an environment in which peace can take place in Afghanistan. And if there are to be any international security forces put into Afghanistan, it will only be as a result of winning a war against al Qaeda and the destruction of the Taliban. So I think events are still somewhat fluid involving what type of steps will come next with any international security force. You know, the President is unchanged in what he has always said, that the American military should be used for the purpose of fighting and winning wars, and the President has not changed his opinion on that.

Q On the aid issue?

MR. FLEISCHER: On the which one?

Q On the aid issue, were there any further commitments of American aid for Afghanistan made as part of this agreement?

MR. FLEISCHER: Nothing that I'm aware of, David.

Q Democrats are still, as far as I know, trying to add $15 billion in spending on homeland security to the defense bill. As I understand it, Republicans, in order to stop that, may end up involving stalling the defense appropriations bill. Does the President think it's worth it to end up doing that in order to keep this money, extra money, off of the bill?

MR. FLEISCHER: In the meeting with the members of Congress this morning, the President made it as plain as day that if the Senate were to send the President a bill that complicates our nation's defense needs, he will veto it. And by "complicate," he means if they try to attach extra spending beyond what has already been promised and agreed to by the Congress to a Defense Department appropriation bill at a time of war, the President will immediately veto it, send it back so Congress can back to work on something that can indeed be done.

There is also a letter that is now circulating up on Capitol Hill, and Senator Lott's office is distributing, that has a sufficient number of senators to sustain any presidential veto. So why on Earth would the Senate go through this exercise when it clearly won't go anywhere, other than to delay America's national defense needs.

America is at war and the war should not be fought on last year's budget. And that's why the President feels so strongly that Congress should send him a defense appropriation bill that has the funding increases for the Pentagon to fight a war and that that bill should not get bogged down by other issues beyond what has already been agreed to by the Congress.

Q Do you want Republicans to vote against that bill?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, it has yet to be attached on the floor. It passed in the committee with the extraneous spending that the President has said goes beyond how much is necessary to immediately take care of the needs we have on the homeland. And so let's see what happens on the Senate floor.

It's unclear yet whether or not this proposal will actually make it through the Senate floor. But the President has sent Congress as direct a message as you can about the need to pass a defense bill that can get quickly signed into law so our troops can have the resources they need.

Q Ari, in front of the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday, Senator Hatch said that he saw an element of partisanship in the oversight hearings that are taking place over the way the Justice Department is carrying out its investigation. Does the White House share that view that partisanship is creeping into the Congress's oversight role on the investigation?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, the President understands very clearly and welcomes Congress's legitimate oversight of all the activities that the Executive Branch engages in. That is how our Constitution is built, and the President is keenly respectful of it. And I don't think it should surprise anybody that the Senate will exercise that review. But I think the President has also noted that there have been some positive statements by many Democrats about the actions that the President has taken on the home front, military tribunals, et cetera, to fight and to win the war on terrorism.

Now, clearly, the American people are overwhelmingly with the President on this. But there very well may be people who represent a small minority and they have that right to do so.

Q Just to follow up. Do you think that there are people that are trying to score political points against the Attorney General or against the President in their criticism of his handling of the situation?

MR. FLEISCHER: You know, there very well may be. But that doesn't bother the President. The President understands that -- he came to Washington from a very different background than many people who have been here for a while. The President came from a state government where you'll see -- not only in Austin, Texas, but throughout many of the states -- less partisanship, less strife. And that's the spirit that the President has been trying to bring to the Congress. I think many people accept that new spirit that has come to Washington. There may be some who won't.

Q Going back to Holy Land Funding, there are many other groups who are raising funds from this country and sending overseas, including many groups in Kashmir and funding terrorists' activities. Do you think the President is going to go now after all those groups who are raising funds from this land?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, yesterday's announcement was one announcement in a series of announcements the President has been making on the financial front in the war on terrorism. And I really urge you to look at this as a front in a war. And given that fact -- and that's the President's approach to it and that's the message that he has given the Secretary of Treasury and the government investigators and the law enforcement community -- you need to look at this as an ongoing series of events designed to protect this country by drying up the money that's available to those who would do us harm or engage in terrorism around the world. So, as the President has always said, there very well may be more actions to be taken.

Q Just to follow, because the Prime Minister of India when he was here at the White House and met with the President, and also, the Foreign Minister of India, they all said that there are groups here who are funding terrorist groups in Kashmir. And they urged the President and this administration to take action on this --

MR. FLEISCHER: And I think the President is putting groups on notice that no one is going to be safe, no one is going to be immune; if they practice terrorism, the war will be brought to them on a number of fronts.

Q Ari, despite philosophical differences between Democrats and Republicans on the economic stimulus package, it's already December 5th. Does the President feel he will get an agreement?

MR. FLEISCHER: He just doesn't know. No one can say what Congress will do. It's up to Congress, finally. The President will continue to be helpful, but obviously, the Senate was not even able to pass a bill. Unlike the House of Representatives, which was able to pass a stimulus bill, the Senate could not. Now the administration is going -- taking the extra step of working with the Senate in a way that really is unprecedented, it's not common that one branch of the Congress passes a bill -- or one House in the Congress passes a bill, the other doesn't. But the President thinks it's so important to help the economy that a new -- an entirely new procedure has been put in place to help the Senate to complete its work.

Q Let me ask you about fast track authority, which, as you said, is an uphill fight, hasn't been approved for a President since 1994. Dick Gephardt is the leader of the House, a Democrat. He opposed it then, he hasn't stopped opposing it. What makes the President believe that this time he'll get the votes? He needs at least 30 Democratic votes.

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, that's why I make no predictions about how votes will go. This has been in modern times a very difficult issue. But because the President believes in it so strongly, because of the points I made earlier about its ability to create jobs on the home front and give the President the authority he needs when he meets with heads of state and others to negotiate trade agreements, the President is hopeful that the power of reason and the principle behind free trade will convince enough members of Congress to put it over the top. We'll see.

Q Ari?

MR. FLEISCHER: Lester?

Q All nine Republican members of the Senate Judiciary Committee have charged that Chairman Patrick Leahy has used what they termed, quote, "misleading statistics," to try to defend what they charge is a disgraceful effort to block President Bush's judicial nominees. And my question: Does the President agree with these nine fellow Republicans, and what does he think of Leahy's objections to military tribunals?

MR. FLEISCHER: You're asking two questions, one on judicial nominees and the other on tribunals.

Q Make it one. (Laughter.) Does he agree with the other Republicans?

MR. FLEISCHER: I'm not sure how to make that one. Well, military tribunals, I think you've heard that directly from the President himself, and as I said earlier, the President is respectful of those who represent the minority point of view, but that is their right. The President clearly disagrees.

Q He disagrees with Leahy, doesn't he, and he agrees with the nine Republicans?

MR. FLEISCHER: I would ask you for further amplification. Mischievous two-part, one question.

Q U.S. Attorney for the southern district of New York, Mary Jo White, was assigned the criminal investigation of last January's Clinton pardons. But she is now retiring, and there has not been even a report after 11 months. And my question: Can you assure us, Ari, that the President is neither considering a Jerry Ford-type pardon of the presidential predecessor, nor planning that this criminal investigation, so long out of the news, will just expire and kind of let bygones be bygones?

MR. FLEISCHER: Lester, I have no information for you on any presidential pardons. And anything dealing with a matter that's under investigation by the Department of Justice needs to be --

Q Will it continue? Who is going to continue it? She's leaving.

MR. FLEISCHER: Anything involving investigations with the Department of Justice are sensitive matters that need to be addressed to the Department of Justice.

Q On trade promotion, as the President meets with members of the House who are on the fence, is he prepared to do some horse trading?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, again, as I indicated, the President believes that trade is right on principle and that is the -- in all the meetings that I have been in, that has been the argument that he's been making with members of Congress, about the need to address trade because on principle, he thinks it helps create jobs.

00800000000317

Having said that, there are certain elements of trade that are always up for discussion; that there are valid points that members can make that typically do get discussed. And there is a lot of consultation that goes on in the trade process; many members of Congress, in exchange for giving up their right to amend an agreement that is submitted to them, seek an additional role in the negotiations. And so that is not an uncommon request from members of Congress. So the President will continue to at on principle as he works with members of Congress and listens to their ideas.

Q Ari, the President is going to be announcing a new Party Chairman this afternoon. How active is the President going to be in next year's campaigns?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, I think that the President will make his determination about that. But politics, elections are an ongoing part of a democracy, even a democracy that's at war. So I think as the President sees fit, he will increasingly play a role as the election year rolls around and we'll duly report that.

Q Ari, can I follow on that? Some Democrats are raising the question if Governor Racicot will continue in his role as a lobbyist next year, as he heads the Republican Party. What is the President's position? Does he believe that the Governor should no longer be a lobbyist next year as he heads the Party?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, again, I think the President has made no such announcement yet. So I think until an announcement is made, it's a premature discussion. But there has been an ample history on both the Democrat and Republican side of chairmen being involved in other lobbying or having outside sources of income; that's not an uncommon practice for both parties.

Q Ari, on the principles the President outlined in the stimulus package back on October 5th, it seems there is progress being made on all of them, except accelerating individual tax rates. You said this morning that you consider that one of the more stimulative aspects of a package. Does that mean that the President will not sign a package if it does not contain individual acceleration rates?

MR. FLEISCHER: Well, the President has been very clear about what he thinks Congress needs to do. And one of the centerpieces of what Congress needs to do is accelerate the tax cuts so that it can have an impact on the economy, so people have more money to spend and so that the economy can get the boost that it needs. That is a core component of what the President has proposed.

Q But is it a deal-breaker?

MR. FLEISCHER: No, the President is right now in the middle of discussions with members of Congress about how to reach agreement, not how to reach disagreement. So he'll focus on that.

Q What can you tell us about the EPA decision to force GE to engage in, I think, a $500 million cleanup of the Hudson River?

MR. FLEISCHER: Let me take another one, then I'll come right back to that.

Q Ari, does the President believe Osama bin Laden has been making a dirty bomb? And, if so, does he think it has been smuggled into the United States? Defense Secretary Rumsfeld is not sure.

MR. FLEISCHER: As you know, the President, himself, several weeks ago raised this very issue. And he said that Osama bin Laden has said it's a religious duty of his adherence to develop such weaponry and to use it if they can. So it is something that the President is concerned about and takes seriously and every precaution is being in place. And that's one of the reasons it's so important to fight and to win this war against the terrorists. So it's a source of concern.

On your question about the Hudson River, EPA Administrator Whitman and the EPA are moving forward on this cleanup of the Hudson River. The Administrator has made it clear the EPA will continue to have an open process that involves all the interested parties, including the people in the affected communities. So that's really the only information I have on it. You may want to talk to EPA. But they are moving forward.

- 19 -

Q She has not said yet, she is waiting to hear from those who are protesting?

MR. FLEISCHER: She's listening to the various parties as she moves forward, and you may want to get more specific information from her.

Thank you.

Bush Renews Push for Expanded Trade

By SCOTT LINDLAW, Associated Press Writer

EAST MOLINE, Ill. (AP) - President Bush renewed his push Monday for expanded trade as a cure for recession, undeterred by a fainting incident that left him with a scraped cheek and bruised lip. He vowed anew to oppose repeal or delay of the tax cuts enacted last year.

Bush opened the two-day, three-state push with a series of jokes about the fainting spell he suffered Sunday after a pretzel went down the wrong way while he was watching television in the White House. He told 1,500 workers and supporters at a John Deere plant that he expected to receive a pretzel from union workers - ``those kind that are easy to chew.''

The president, who seeks broader powers to negotiate trade pacts, said, ``I'm confident we need to open up markets, not close them down.''

``What this nation needs is to level the playing field and have trade that'll create jobs all across America,'' he said.

Congress last year passed Bush's long-term tax cut but some Democrats now say that in the face of budget deficits, some of those cuts should be deferred.

Monday, Bush pledged to fight any such effort. ``If you have more money in your pocket, you buy more things, which encourages more production,'' he said. ``I've made up my mind - the tax relief plan we passed, which you're now beginning to feel the effects of, is going to be permanent.''

Bush left the White House with a bruised lip and a half-dollar-sized abrasion on his cheek after his fainting spell.

During the flight from Washington, Bush made light of his fainting spell by sending a large bag of pretzels to the press cabin with a scribbled warning to ``chew slowly.'' Later, touring a John Deere plant here, Bush said of a welder's mask, ``I need this all the time around the pretzels.''

``I feel great,'' Bush told reporters as he left the White House. Spokesman Ari Fleischer said the president, fighting a head cold, reported having a runny nose but was otherwise fine.

During the flight, Bush called Crown Prince Abdullah of Saudi Arabia and President Bashar Assad of Syria to talk about peace efforts in the Middle East and the anti-terrorism campaign.

The president's itinerary had him tracing the flow of farm goods south through the Midwest en route to overseas markets.

After East Moline, he was to visit a feed mill in Aurora, Mo., and on Tuesday the Port of New Orleans, the last stop for many agricultural goods destined for export markets.

The president badly wants authority to negotiate ``fast-track'' trade agreements, which Congress could reject but not change.

REV_00166780

The Republican-controlled House passed such trade promotion authority by a deeply partisan 215-214 vote last month after the White House and Republican leaders persuaded GOP holdouts to change sides. The Democratic-controlled Senate is due to vote early this year.

On agricultural business, the Senate was unable to agree on a Democratic plan to reauthorize farm programs through 2006. Most of the money in that bill would continue to go to grain, cotton and soybean farms but also offer new subsidies for a variety of additional commodities, including milk, honey and lentils. It also would double spending on conservation.

The administration criticized both that bill and one passed by the House in October and urged Congress to delay finishing work on them until this year. It said both measures risk exceeding levels set in an international trade agreement and provide too much money to big farms that least need the assistance.

Bush focused on the economy at a time his administration's contacts with now-bankrupt Enron Corp. are under intense scrutiny, and as the war on terrorism continues.

''The economy is a concern for all Americans, especially for those out of work,'' the president said in his weekly radio address Saturday. He outlined his plan to extend unemployment and health benefits for Americans who have lost their jobs.

Fax: (202) 395-3891

Dear David:

As we discussed last week, Azurix Corp. which is a subsidiary of Enron, is involved in a half a billion dollar investment dispute with the Province of Buenos Aires. Attached is a confidential briefing paper that provides a history of the dispute; our efforts to resolve it amicably; the lack of good will on the part of the Provincial authorities to find a resolution, and some suggestions to break the impasse to the benefit of all parties concerned.

John Garrison, President and CEO of Azurix Corp., and I would be available to be in Washington on either December 10 or 11 to meet with government officials who are handling U.S. foreign policy relations (State and NSC) with Argentina, as well as economic/investment relations (USTR and Treasury). I would like to take advantage of your kind offer to organize a meeting at USTR with the various offices that have various levels of involvement in this type of investment dispute. I'll give you a call to discuss how you want to proceed. Meanwhile, I can be reached on (713) 345-5956 or keith.miceli@enron.com.

Sincerely,

Keith

Subject: NSC revision of Dabhol points for demarche

(See attached file: TP - Dabhol rev2 nsc.doc)

Folks, please take a look at the attached draft talking points. I believe that we have addressed everybody's concerns. Please also ensure that all relevant people within your agency get a copy of this -- not sure whether addressees above capture everybody. If there are major issues remaining, call me at 456-9247 or email, by 3 pm Wednesday (7/18). Please, only one representation per agency, so coordinate internally first.

Let's consider this closed by COB tomorrow. I'll coordinate with State, who'll send the demarche cable.

Thanks, everybody. Laurent

President Bush Pushes Economic Security Agenda to Create Jobs and Opportunity for America's Workers

Today's Presidential Action:

- As his first order of business upon returning to Washington, President Bush today met with his top economic advisors and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan to discuss the economy and ways to ensure the recovery happens sooner rather than later. The President also announced that he will include his economic security package in the 2003 budget.

Economic Growth Is Needed Now To Help Workers:

- The Senate Should Pass An Economic Security Plan Immediately: Given the uncertain economic outlook, we need an economic security package to boost growth now and get people back to work. President Bush called on Congress to pass an economic security bill months ago. The House acted quickly but the Senate failed to act, despite support for a bipartisan compromise that a majority of Senators supported. In the meantime, more than 900,000 Americans have lost their jobs. And, without action by the Senate, more than 300,000 workers will not find work this year.

- Economic Growth and Job Creation Boost Surpluses -- Not Tax Increases: The federal government is not responsible for budget surpluses. America's workers are the engines of economic growth that create surpluses. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases –are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.

President Bush - Providing Critical Leadership On The Economy:

- The President's Tax Relief Plan Will Help End the Recession Quicker: The President's tax cut was exactly the right medicine at the right time. It became law in May and workers began receiving checks in late August -- pumping $40 billion back into the economy and supporting consumer spending at a critical time. Had it not been for the September 11th attack, many economists believe our economy would have already recovered.

- While Some Blame Tax Cuts for Recession, the Facts Tell a Different Story: The recession began in March, two months before the tax cut even became law, and at least seven months before workers started receiving rebate checks. Despite Senator Daschle's claims, it is impossible that tax cuts made the recession worse.

- Democrats and Republicans Came Together Because the Tax Cut Was Needed: Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for the tax cut bill. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

The War and Recession Drained the Budget Surplus:

- While some in Washington have attempted to blame the tax cut for the declining budget surplus, the facts tell a different story:
  - The Recession Erased Two-Thirds of the Surplus: The recession and declining tax revenues drained roughly two-thirds of the budget surplus between April 2000 and today.
  - Homeland Security and War Spending Used 19% of the Surplus: Immediately following the terrorist attacks, President Bush and Congress rightly passed significant spending increases for the war against terrorism, homeland security, airline security, and emergency response. This necessary spending accounted for approximately 19% of the surplus.
  - The Tax Cut Only Used 15% of the Surplus: Despite the claims of some in Washington, the tax cut used less than 15% of the surplus.

- The events of September 11 weakened an already slowing economy:
  - Unemployment rose by almost 1% after September 11.
  - The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down, costing thousands of jobs.
  - The tourism industry was especially hard-hit, costing even more jobs.
  - Wall Street closed for a week, investment dried up, and the markets dropped.
  - Anthrax attacks shut down large portions of commercial mail and shipping industries.

- Despite the terrorist attacks and the slowing economy, the budget remains effectively in balance: The miniscule shortfall in the budget represents less than 1% of GDP, meaning that the budget is effectively in balance.

- While some in Washington use partisan politics as an excuse for inaction, President Bush will continue to work toward a real, effective economic security package for America's workers.

RE: Enron

All three major credit rating agencies downgraded Enron's debt to junk status today over liquidity concerns. Also, Dynegy announced that its takeover agreement with Enron was terminated due to inadequate disclosure of Enron's total indebtedness. As a result, Enron said it will temporarily suspend all payments other than those necessary to maintain its core operations. Enron's online trading platform was shutdown this afternoon.

TESTIMONY OF THE HONORABLE VIET D. DINH,
ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, OFFICE OF LEGAL POLICY,
BEFORE THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE
OF THE UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
ON THE "CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003."

May 15, 2003

Mr. Chairman, it is a pleasure for me to be here this morning to present the views of the Department of Justice on H.R. 1115, the "Class Action Fairness Act of 2003." The Department of Justice supports this bill, which is nearly identical to H.R. 2341 passed by the House of Representatives in the 107th Congress, also with our strong support. Mr. Chairman, we appreciate your leadership on this important legislation, and the leadership of the bill's bi-partisan group of sponsors.

Let me emphasize at the outset that the problem is not the class action device itself. If that were the case, then we could simply repeal Rule 23 and all go home. Everyone recognizes that class actions can serve a very important goal. As one former Solicitor General has stated, "their true purpose is noble – to vindicate the rights of large groups of individuals who sought justice for civil rights violations and other wrongs, but who could not achieve such justice individually."

Class action abuses, however, have taken a toll on our legal system. All too often, class actions represent a lawyer's rush to the courthouse in order to select the most favorable State forum before duplicative actions purporting to represent the same victims with the same claims are filed in other States. In essence, it becomes a race to the courthouse for the attorneys to see who among them can file and then settle his or her case the fastest and thereby collect attorney's fees. The losers in this race are the consumers who often gain little or nothing through the settlement, yet are bound in perpetuity.

As explained by committees of the Judicial Conference, overlapping and duplicative class actions in federal and state courts threaten the resolution and settlement of such actions on terms that are fair to victims, burden both plaintiffs and defendants with the expenses of multiple litigation of the same issues, and place conscientious class counsel at a potential disadvantage. Certainly we can all agree that consumers such as Bank of Boston account holders do not benefit when plaintiffs are each awarded $8.76, but then each must pay $90 to the attorneys who purportedly brought the action on their behalf. The goal of class action reform, then, must be to stop the abuses which have frustrated the class action device's noble purpose.

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2003 contains three distinct, but necessary components: (1) a "Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights" which addresses the administration of class actions in Federal courts, which have been collectively dubbed (2) expanded federal diversity jurisdiction to ensure that class actions with national implications can be heard in federal courts; and (3) expedited appellate review of decisions whether to certify a class. I would like to briefly address each in turn.

Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights

Section 3 of H.R. 1115, entitled the "Class Action Bill of Rights and Improved Procedures for Interstate Class Actions," would establish long needed protections for consumers whose rights are often adjudicated by lawyers not of their choosing in fora with which they have no connection, and where settlements are, in practical effect, imposed on those consumers. Too often victims receive notices of class action settlement proposals that are too confusing to provide any meaningful information about the proposed settlement. This section appropriately would guard against settlements that were unreasonable or even harmful to individual class members by providing for thorough review by the courts. To ensure that victims receive adequate information, this section would require settlement notices be in plain English and in a standardized, easy-to-read format.

Federal Court Jurisdiction for National Class Actions

In addition to the problem of duplicative class actions being filed in numerous states, certain local courthouses have become known for particularly generous awards. The threat of these large awards often coerces defendants to agree to disproportionately high settlement amounts. Often, these tiny jurisdictions are the first to adjudicate a class action claim and impose their laws on class members from other States and on those States themselves, where similar actions may be pending. Such interstate litigation is exactly why the Founders created diversity jurisdiction: to provide a Federal forum preventing bias against out-of-State defendants and out-of-State plaintiffs.

H.R. 1115 would close the gap in diversity jurisdiction that has resulted from the interpretation and application of diversity and jurisdictional amount requirements in the unique class action world. The bill would prevent attorneys from avoiding removal through artful pleading that eliminates full diversity or minimizes the claimed damages of the individual class members – actions that fail to serve the victims and prejudice the defendants. Specifically, sections 4 and 5 of H.R.1115 provide much needed amendments to Federal diversity jurisdiction by relaxing the "complete diversity" rule. The Act would permit, but not require, removal by any class member and any defendant, so long as there is "minimal diversity," the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $2 million, and the lawsuit is not primarily intra-state in nature.

Importantly, H.R. 1115 also contains an anti-circumvention measure. Section 4 provides that – regardless of the label placed on a lawsuit by the State court – an action will be "deemed" a class action if: (1) the named plaintiff (exclusive of a State attorney general) purports to act for the interests of its members who are not named parties to the action; or (2) the monetary relief claims of 100 or more other persons are proposed to be tried jointly in the action on the grounds the claims involve common questions of law or fact. This definition would appropriately encompass "private attorney general suits" in which an individual seeks to recover on behalf of the general public, as well as "mass actions" brought on behalf of plaintiffs who claim that their suits present common questions of law or fact that should be resolved in a single proceeding.

The Department fully supports these changes to Federal diversity jurisdiction and removal procedures, which recognize the Federal interest in significant class action litigation that truly involves multiple interstate plaintiffs and defendants. In addition, providing for consistent and uniform Federal adjudication of these claims will protect each State and its citizens from other State courts' legal rulings from which there is no recourse.

Prior witnesses before this committee have described the multi-billion dollar judgment awarded in Madison County, Illinois against State Farm Insurance for repairing automobiles with "aftermarket parts" as distinguished from original manufacturers' parts. That decision applied Illinois law to plaintiffs in all 50 states, even though such a ruling was contrary to state insurance regulations in New York, Massachusetts, and Hawaii among other places. The State Farm case is not an isolated example. Right now, for instance, we are following with interest a case in Oklahoma where a nationwide class has been certified against DaimlerChrylser Corporation. The Oklahoma courts plan to apply Michigan law to adjudicate, on behalf of residents of all 50 states, claims that Chrysler should not have installed certain airbags that comply with federal safety standards.

Expansion of Federal diversity jurisdiction, of course, will shift some state class actions to the Federal courts. However, Federal courts have significant interests in cases that involve interstate commerce and parties from many States, and federal adjudication avoids costly and inefficient duplication in State courts. The Constitution's provision for diversity jurisdiction was intended to prevent just the sort of local biases that have resulted from State court class actions that often award higher settlements to in-State victims and award excessive damages against out-of-State defendants. The unique circumstances of class actions, a modern phenomenon, have outstripped the original conception of 28 U.S.C. § 1332, when that provision was initially enacted.

Interlocutory Appeal of Class Certification Decision

Because a district court's decision whether to certify a class often is decisive — a decision to certify may place insurmountable pressure on the defendant to settle, while a refusal to certify may force the plaintiffs to abandon their claims — the bill permits immediate appeal of certification decisions as a matter of right. Immediate appeals of certification decisions can be crucial to efficient management of class actions, preventing the nightmare situation where parties engage in years of expensive litigation under a ruling on the class certification, only to have the appeals court reverse the class certification determination. Contrary to concerns voiced about previous legislative proposals, H.R. 1115 would not encourage or permit the destruction of documents or other evidence during the appeal of the certification decision. On the contrary, discovery would be stayed under this section unless the court finds that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice.

Conclusion

REV_00166833

In sum, H.R. 1115 is an important step in returning common sense to the nation's class action system and providing greater protections for the victims the system originally was designed to benefit. The bill would update diversity jurisdiction appropriately to account for class action litigation, while permitting State court actions to proceed in cases where no party sought removal and in specified circumstances such as where the class is relatively small or where the primary plaintiffs and defendants are within the State. Thus, State courts would be able to offer redress and provide a convenient forum for their citizens, while Federal courts would provide a forum for truly interstate class actions.

Thank you for this opportunity to present our views. We greatly appreciate your efforts in support of meaningful class action reform. I would be pleased to answer any questions that the Committee may have on this subject.

and (3) expedited appellate review of decisions whether to certify a class. I would like to briefly address each in turn.

Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights

Section 3 of H.R. 1115, entitled the "Class Action Bill of Rights and Improved Procedures for Interstate Class Actions," would establish long needed protections for consumers whose rights are often adjudicated by lawyers not of their choosing in fora with which they have no connection, and where settlements are, in practical effect, imposed on those consumers. Too often victims receive notices of class action settlement proposals that are too confusing to provide any meaningful information about the proposed settlement. This section appropriately would guard against settlements that were unreasonable or even harmful to individual class members by providing for thorough review by the courts. To ensure that victims receive adequate information, this section would require settlement notices be in plain English and in a standardized, easy-to-read format.

Federal Court Jurisdiction for National Class Actions

In addition to the problem of duplicative class actions being filed in numerous states, certain local courthouses have become known for particularly generous awards. The threat of these large awards often coerces defendants to agree to disproportionately high settlement amounts. Often, these tiny jurisdictions are the first to adjudicate a class action claim and impose their laws on class members from other States and on those States themselves, where similar actions may be pending. Such interstate litigation is exactly why the Founders created diversity jurisdiction: to provide a Federal forum preventing bias against out-of-State defendants and out-of-State plaintiffs.

H.R. 1115 would close the gap in diversity jurisdiction that has resulted from the interpretation and application of diversity and jurisdictional amount requirements in the unique class action world. The bill would prevent attorneys from avoiding removal through artful pleading that eliminates full diversity or minimizes the claimed damages of the individual class members – actions that fail to serve the victims and prejudice the defendants. Specifically, sections 4 and 5 of H.R.1115 provide much needed amendments to Federal diversity jurisdiction by relaxing the "complete diversity" rule. The Act would permit, but not require, removal by any class member and any defendant, so long as there is "minimal diversity," the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $2 million, and the lawsuit is not primarily intra-state in nature.

Importantly, H.R. 1115 also contains an anti-circumvention measure. Section 4 provides that – regardless of the label placed on a lawsuit by the State court – an action will be "deemed" a class action if: (1) the named plaintiff (exclusive of a State attorney general) purports to act for the interests of its members who are not named parties to the action; or (2) the monetary relief claims of 100 or more other persons are proposed to be tried jointly in the action on the grounds the claims involve common questions of law or fact. This definition would appropriately encompass "private attorney general suits" in which an individual seeks to recover on behalf of the general public, as well as "mass actions" brought on behalf of plaintiffs who claim that their suits present common questions of law or fact that should be resolved in a single proceeding.

The Department fully supports these changes to Federal diversity jurisdiction and removal procedures, which recognize the Federal interest in significant class action litigation that truly involves multiple interstate plaintiffs and defendants. In addition, providing for consistent and uniform Federal adjudication of these claims will protect each State and its citizens from other State courts' legal rulings from which there is no recourse.

Prior witnesses before this committee have described the multi-billion dollar judgment awarded in Madison County, Illinois against State Farm Insurance for repairing automobiles with "aftermarket parts" as distinguished from original manufacturers' parts. That decision applied Illinois law to plaintiffs in all 50 states, even though such a ruling was contrary to state insurance regulations in New York, Massachusetts, and Hawaii among other places. The State Farm case is not an isolated example. Right now, for instance, we are following with interest a case in Oklahoma where a nationwide class has been certified against DaimlerChrylser Corporation. The Oklahoma courts plan to apply Michigan law to adjudicate, on behalf of residents of all 50 states, claims that Chrysler should not have installed certain airbags that comply with federal safety standards.

Expansion of Federal diversity jurisdiction, of course, will shift some state class actions to the Federal courts. However, Federal courts have significant interests in cases that involve interstate commerce and parties from many States, and federal adjudication avoids costly and inefficient duplication in State courts. The Constitution's provision for diversity jurisdiction was intended to prevent just the sort of local biases that have resulted from State court class actions that often award higher settlements to in-State victims and award excessive damages against out-of-State defendants. The unique circumstances of class actions, a modern phenomenon, have outstripped the original conception of 28 U.S.C. § 1332, when that provision was initially enacted.

Interlocutory Appeal of Class Certification Decision

Because a district court's decision whether to certify a class often is decisive — a decision to certify may place insurmountable pressure on the defendant to settle, while a refusal to certify may force the plaintiffs to abandon their claims — the bill permits immediate appeal of certification decisions as a matter of right. Immediate appeals of certification decisions can be crucial to efficient management of class actions, preventing the nightmare situation where parties engage in years of expensive litigation under a ruling on the class certification, only to have the appeals court reverse the class certification determination. Contrary to concerns voiced about previous legislative proposals, H.R. 1115 would not encourage or permit the destruction of documents or other evidence during the appeal of the certification decision. On the contrary, discovery would be stayed under this section unless the court finds that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice.

Conclusion

REV_00166839

In sum, H.R. 1115 is an important step in returning common sense to the nation's class action system and providing greater protections for the victims the system originally was designed to benefit. The bill would update diversity jurisdiction appropriately to account for class action litigation, while permitting State court actions to proceed in cases where no party sought removal and in specified circumstances such as where the class is relatively small or where the primary plaintiffs and defendants are within the State. Thus, State courts would be able to offer redress and provide a convenient forum for their citizens, while Federal courts would provide a forum for truly interstate class actions.

Thank you for this opportunity to present our views. We greatly appreciate your efforts in support of meaningful class action reform. I would be pleased to answer any questions that the Committee may have on this subject.

STATEMENT

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL
OFFICE OF LEGAL POLICY

BEFORE THE

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY
UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

CONCERNING

H.R. 1115, THE "CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003"

PRESENTED ON

MAY 15, 2003

REV_00166849

TESTIMONY OF VIET D. DINH,
ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, OFFICE OF LEGAL POLICY,
BEFORE THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE
OF THE UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
ON THE "CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003."

May 15, 2003

Mr. Chairman, it is a pleasure for me to be here this morning to present the views of the Department of Justice on H.R. 1115, the "Class Action Fairness Act of 2003." The Department of Justice supports this bill, which is ~~virtually~~nearly identical to H.R. 2341 passed by the House of Representatives in the 107th Congress, also with our strong support. Mr. Chairman, we appreciate your leadership on this important legislation, and the leadership of the bill's bi-partisan group of sponsors.

Let me emphasize at the outset that the problem is not the class action device itself. If that were the case, then we could simply repeal Rule 23 and all go home. Everyone recognizes that class actions can serve a very important goal. As one former Solicitor General has stated, "their true purpose is noble – to vindicate the rights of large groups of individuals who sought justice for civil rights violations and other wrongs, but who could not achieve such justice individually."

Class action abuses, however, have taken a toll on our legal system. All too often, class actions represent a lawyer's rush to the courthouse in order to select the most favorable State forum before duplicative actions purporting to represent the same ~~class~~victims with the same claims are filed in other States. In essence, it becomes a race to the courthouse for the attorneys to see who among them can file and then settle his or her case the fastest and thereby collect ~~millions in~~ attorney's fees. The losers in this race are the ~~class members~~consumers who often gain little or nothing through the settlement, yet are bound in perpetuity.

As explained by committees of the Judicial Conference, overlapping and duplicative class actions in federal and state courts threaten the resolution and settlement of such actions on terms that are fair to victims, burden both plaintiffs and defendants with the expenses of multiple litigation of the same issues, and place conscientious class counsel at a potential disadvantage. Certainly we can all agree that consumers such as Bank of Boston account holders do not benefit when plaintiffs are each awarded $8.76, but then each must pay $90 to the attorneys who purportedly brought the action on their behalf. The goal of class action reform, then, must be to stop the abuses which have frustrated the class action device's noble purpose.

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2003 contains three distinct, but necessary components: (1) a ~~number~~"Consumer Class Action Bill of ~~provisions relating to~~Rights" which addresses the administration of class actions in Federal courts, which have been collectively dubbed ~~a "Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights;"~~ (2) expanded federal ~~court~~ diversity jurisdiction to ensure that class actions with national implications can be heard in federal courts; and (3) expedited appellate review of ~~class certification decision~~decisions whether to certify a class. I would like to briefly address each in turn.

Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights

Section 3 of H.R. 1115, entitled the "Class Action Bill of Rights and Improved Procedures for Interstate Class Actions," would establish long needed protections for ~~class members~~consumers whose rights are often adjudicated by lawyers not of their choosing in fora with which ~~the class members~~they have no connection, and where settlements are, in practical effect, imposed on ~~class members~~those consumers. Too often ~~class members~~victims receive notices of class action settlement proposals that are too confusing to provide any meaningful information about the proposed settlement. This section appropriately would guard against settlements that were unreasonable or even harmful to individual class members by providing for thorough review by the courts. To ensure that ~~class members~~victims receive adequate information, this section would require settlement notices ~~provided to class members to~~ be in plain English and in a standardized, easy-to-read format.

Federal Court Jurisdiction for National Class Actions

In addition to the problem of duplicative class actions being filed in numerous states, certain local courthouses have become known for particularly generous awards. The threat of these large awards often coerces defendants to agree to disproportionately high settlement amounts. Often, these tiny jurisdictions are the first to adjudicate a class action claim and impose their laws on class members from other States and on those States themselves, where similar actions may be pending. Such interstate litigation is exactly why the Founders created diversity jurisdiction: to provide a Federal forum preventing bias against out-of-State defendants and out-of-State ~~plaintiff class members~~plaintiffs.

H.R. 1115 would close the gap in diversity jurisdiction that has resulted from the interpretation and application of diversity and jurisdictional amount requirements in the unique class action world. The bill would prevent attorneys from avoiding removal through artful pleading that eliminates full diversity or minimizes the claimed damages of the individual class members – actions that fail to serve the ~~plaintiff class~~victims and prejudice the defendants. Specifically, sections 4 and 5 of H.R.1115 provide much needed amendments to Federal diversity jurisdiction by relaxing the "complete diversity" rule. The Act would permit, but not require, removal by any class member and any defendant, so long as there is "minimal diversity," the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $2 million, and the lawsuit is not primarily intra-state in nature.

Importantly, H.R. 1115 also contains an anti-circumvention measure. Section 4 provides that – regardless of the label placed on a lawsuit by the State court – an action will be "deemed" a class action if: (1) the named plaintiff (exclusive of a State attorney general) purports to act for the interests of its members who are not named parties to the action; or (2) the monetary relief claims of 100 or more other persons are proposed to be tried jointly in the action on the grounds the claims involve common questions of law or fact. This definition would appropriately encompass "private attorney general suits" in which an individual seeks to recover on behalf of the general public, as well as "mass actions" brought on behalf of plaintiffs who claim that their suits present common questions of law or fact that should be resolved in a single proceeding.

The Department fully supports these changes to Federal diversity jurisdiction and removal procedures, which recognize the Federal interest in significant class action litigation that truly involves multiple interstate plaintiffs and defendants. In addition, providing for consistent and uniform Federal adjudication of these claims will protect each State and its citizens from other State courts' legal rulings from which there is no recourse.

Prior witnesses before this committee have described the multi-billion dollar judgment awarded in Madison County, Illinois against State Farm Insurance for repairing automobiles with "aftermarket parts" as distinguished from original manufacturers' parts. That decision applied Illinois law to plaintiffs in all 50 states, even though such a ruling was contrary to state insurance regulations in New York, Massachusetts, and Hawaii among other places. The State Farm case is not an isolated example. Right now, for instance, we are following with interest a case in Oklahoma where a nationwide class has been certified against DaimlerChrylser Corporation. The Oklahoma courts plan to apply Michigan law to adjudicate, on behalf of residents of all 50 states, claims that Chrysler should not have installed certain airbags that comply with federal safety standards.

~~Opponents of class action reform similar to H.R. 1115, incorrectly assert that the~~ eExpansion of Federal diversity jurisdiction ~~infringes on State courts and will result in a flood of class action litigation in~~, of course, will shift some state class actions to the Federal courts. ~~Such criticism overlooks both the valid interest~~However, Federal courts have significant interests in cases that involve interstate commerce and parties from many States, a~~s well as the inefficiency that~~nd federal adjudication avoids costly and inefficient duplication in State courts ~~causes in the current system~~. The Constitution's provision for diversity jurisdiction was intended to prevent just the sort of local biases that have resulted from State court class actions that often award higher settlements to in-State ~~class members~~victims and award ~~unsupportable~~excessive damages against out-of-State defendants. The unique circumstances of class actions, a modern phenomenon, ~~could not have been foreseen when~~outstripped the original conception of 28 U.S.C. § 1332, when that provision was initially enacted.

Interlocutory Appeal of Class Certification Decision

Because ~~the~~a district court's ~~certification~~ decision whether to certify a class often is decisive — a decision to certify may place insurmountable pressure on the defendant to settle, while a refusal to certify may force the plaintiffs to abandon their claims — the bill permits immediate appeal of certification decisions as a matter of right. Immediate appeals of certification decisions can be crucial to efficient management of class actions, preventing the nightmare situation where parties engage in years of expensive litigation under a ruling on the class certification, only to have the appeals court reverse the class certification determination. Contrary to concerns voiced about previous legislative proposals, H.R. 1115 would not encourage or permit the destruction of documents or other evidence during the appeal of the certification decision. On the contrary, discovery would be stayed under this section unless the court finds that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice.

Conclusion

In sum, H.R. 1115 is an important step in ~~reforming class action litigation. It~~returning common sense to the nation's class action system and providing greater protections for the victims the system originally was designed to benefit. The bill would update diversity jurisdiction appropriately to account for class action litigation, while permitting State court actions to proceed in cases where no party sought removal and in specified circumstances such as where the class is relatively small or where the primary plaintiffs and defendants are within the State. Thus, State courts would be able to offer redress and provide a convenient forum for their citizens, while Federal courts would provide a forum for truly interstate class actions.

Thank you for this opportunity to present our views. We greatly appreciate your efforts in support of meaningful class action reform. I would be pleased to answer any questions that the Committee may have on this subject.

TESTIMONY OF VIET D. DINH,
ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, OFFICE OF LEGAL POLICY,
BEFORE THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE
OF THE UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
ON THE "CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003."

May 15, 2003

Mr. Chairman, it is a pleasure for me to be here this morning to present the views of the Department of Justice on H.R. 1115, the "Class Action Fairness Act of 2003." The Department of Justice supports this bill, which is ~~virtually~~nearly identical to H.R. 2341 passed by the House of Representatives in the 107th Congress, also with our strong support. Mr. Chairman, we appreciate your leadership on this important legislation, and the leadership of the bill's bi-partisan group of sponsors.

Let me emphasize at the outset that the problem is not the class action device itself. If that were the case, then we could simply repeal Rule 23 and all go home. Everyone recognizes that class actions can serve a very important goal. As one former Solicitor General has stated, "their true purpose is noble – to vindicate the rights of large groups of individuals who sought justice for civil rights violations and other wrongs, but who could not achieve such justice individually."

Class action abuses, however, have taken a toll on our legal system. All too often, class actions represent a lawyer's rush to the courthouse in order to select the most favorable State forum before duplicative actions purporting to represent the same ~~class~~victims with the same claims are filed in other States. In essence, it becomes a race to the courthouse for the attorneys to see who among them can file and then settle his or her case the fastest and thereby collect ~~millions in~~ attorney's fees. The losers in this race are the ~~class members~~consumers who often gain little or nothing through the settlement, yet are bound in perpetuity.

As explained by committees of the Judicial Conference, overlapping and duplicative class actions in federal and state courts threaten the resolution and settlement of such actions on terms that are fair to victims, burden both plaintiffs and defendants with the expenses of multiple litigation of the same issues, and place conscientious class counsel at a potential disadvantage. Certainly we can all agree that consumers such as Bank of Boston account holders do not benefit when plaintiffs are each awarded $8.76, but then each must pay $90 to the attorneys who purportedly brought the action on their behalf. The goal of class action reform, then, must be to stop the abuses which have frustrated the class action device's noble purpose.

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2003 contains three distinct, but necessary components: (1) a ~~number~~"Consumer Class Action Bill of ~~provisions relating to~~Rights" which addresses the administration of class actions in Federal courts, which have been collectively dubbed ~~a "Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights;"~~ (2) expanded federal ~~court~~ diversity jurisdiction to ensure that class actions with national implications can be heard in federal courts; and (3) expedited appellate review of ~~class certification decision~~decisions whether to certify a class. I would like to briefly address each in turn.

Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights

Section 3 of H.R. 1115, entitled the "Class Action Bill of Rights and Improved Procedures for Interstate Class Actions," would establish long needed protections for ~~class members~~consumers whose rights are often adjudicated by lawyers not of their choosing in fora with which ~~the class members~~they have no connection, and where settlements are, in practical effect, imposed on ~~class members~~those consumers. Too often ~~class members~~victims receive notices of class action settlement proposals that are too confusing to provide any meaningful information about the proposed settlement. This section appropriately would guard against settlements that were unreasonable or even harmful to individual class members by providing for thorough review by the courts. To ensure that ~~class members~~victims receive adequate information, this section would require settlement notices ~~provided to class members to~~ be in plain English and in a standardized, easy-to-read format.

Federal Court Jurisdiction for National Class Actions

In addition to the problem of duplicative class actions being filed in numerous states, certain local courthouses have become known for particularly generous awards. The threat of these large awards often coerces defendants to agree to disproportionately high settlement amounts. Often, these tiny jurisdictions are the first to adjudicate a class action claim and impose their laws on class members from other States and on those States themselves, where similar actions may be pending. Such interstate litigation is exactly why the Founders created diversity jurisdiction: to provide a Federal forum preventing bias against out-of-State defendants and out-of-State ~~plaintiff class members~~plaintiffs.

H.R. 1115 would close the gap in diversity jurisdiction that has resulted from the interpretation and application of diversity and jurisdictional amount requirements in the unique class action world. The bill would prevent attorneys from avoiding removal through artful pleading that eliminates full diversity or minimizes the claimed damages of the individual class members – actions that fail to serve the ~~plaintiff class~~victims and prejudice the defendants. Specifically, sections 4 and 5 of H.R.1115 provide much needed amendments to Federal diversity jurisdiction by relaxing the "complete diversity" rule. The Act would permit, but not require, removal by any class member and any defendant, so long as there is "minimal diversity," the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $2 million, and the lawsuit is not primarily intra-state in nature.

Importantly, H.R. 1115 also contains an anti-circumvention measure. Section 4 provides that – regardless of the label placed on a lawsuit by the State court – an action will be "deemed" a class action if: (1) the named plaintiff (exclusive of a State attorney general) purports to act for the interests of its members who are not named parties to the action; or (2) the monetary relief claims of 100 or more other persons are proposed to be tried jointly in the action on the grounds the claims involve common questions of law or fact. This definition would appropriately encompass "private attorney general suits" in which an individual seeks to recover on behalf of the general public, as well as "mass actions" brought on behalf of plaintiffs who claim that their suits present common questions of law or fact that should be resolved in a single proceeding.

The Department fully supports these changes to Federal diversity jurisdiction and removal procedures, which recognize the Federal interest in significant class action litigation that truly involves multiple interstate plaintiffs and defendants. In addition, providing for consistent and uniform Federal adjudication of these claims will protect each State and its citizens from other State courts' legal rulings from which there is no recourse.

Prior witnesses before this committee have described the multi-billion dollar judgment awarded in Madison County, Illinois against State Farm Insurance for repairing automobiles with "aftermarket parts" as distinguished from original manufacturers' parts. That decision applied Illinois law to plaintiffs in all 50 states, even though such a ruling was contrary to state insurance regulations in New York, Massachusetts, and Hawaii among other places. The State Farm case is not an isolated example. Right now, for instance, we are following with interest a case in Oklahoma where a nationwide class has been certified against DaimlerChrylser Corporation. The Oklahoma courts plan to apply Michigan law to adjudicate, on behalf of residents of all 50 states, claims that Chrysler should not have installed certain airbags that comply with federal safety standards.

~~Opponents of class action reform similar to H.R. 1115, incorrectly assert that the~~ eExpansion of Federal diversity jurisdiction ~~infringes on State courts and will result in a flood of class action litigation in~~, of course, will shift some state class actions to the Federal courts. ~~Such criticism overlooks both the valid interest~~However, Federal courts have significant interests in cases that involve interstate commerce and parties from many States, a~~s well as the inefficiency that~~nd federal adjudication avoids costly and inefficient duplication in State courts ~~causes in the current system~~. The Constitution's provision for diversity jurisdiction was intended to prevent just the sort of local biases that have resulted from State court class actions that often award higher settlements to in-State ~~class members~~victims and award ~~unsupportable~~excessive damages against out-of-State defendants. The unique circumstances of class actions, a modern phenomenon, ~~could not have been foreseen when~~outstripped the original conception of 28 U.S.C. § 1332, when that provision was initially enacted.

Interlocutory Appeal of Class Certification Decision

Because ~~the~~a district court's ~~certification~~ decision whether to certify a class often is decisive — a decision to certify may place insurmountable pressure on the defendant to settle, while a refusal to certify may force the plaintiffs to abandon their claims — the bill permits immediate appeal of certification decisions as a matter of right. Immediate appeals of certification decisions can be crucial to efficient management of class actions, preventing the nightmare situation where parties engage in years of expensive litigation under a ruling on the class certification, only to have the appeals court reverse the class certification determination. Contrary to concerns voiced about previous legislative proposals, H.R. 1115 would not encourage or permit the destruction of documents or other evidence during the appeal of the certification decision. On the contrary, discovery would be stayed under this section unless the court finds that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice.

Conclusion

In sum, H.R. 1115 is an important step in ~~reforming class action litigation. It~~returning common sense to the nation's class action system and providing greater protections for the victims the system originally was designed to benefit. The bill would update diversity jurisdiction appropriately to account for class action litigation, while permitting State court actions to proceed in cases where no party sought removal and in specified circumstances such as where the class is relatively small or where the primary plaintiffs and defendants are within the State. Thus, State courts would be able to offer redress and provide a convenient forum for their citizens, while Federal courts would provide a forum for truly interstate class actions.

Thank you for this opportunity to present our views. We greatly appreciate your efforts in support of meaningful class action reform. I would be pleased to answer any questions that the Committee may have on this subject.

Opponents of class action reform similar to H.R. 1115, incorrectly assert that the eExpansion of Federal diversity jurisdiction infringes on State courts and will result in a flood of class action litigation in, of course, will shift some state class actions to the Federal courts. Such criticism overlooks both the valid interestHowever, Federal courts have significant interests in cases that involve interstate commerce and parties from many States, as well as the inefficiency thatnd federal adjudication avoids costly and inefficient duplication in State courts causes in the current system. The Constitution=s provision for diversity jurisdiction was intended to prevent just the sort of local biases that have resulted from State court class actions that often award higher settlements to in-State class membersvictims and award unsupportable excessive damages against out-of-State defendants. The unique circumstances of class actions, a modern phenomenon, could not have been foreseen whenoutstripped the original conception of 28 U.S.C. ' 1332, when that provision was initially enacted.

Interlocutory Appeal of Class Certification Decision

Because thea district court's certification decision whether to certify a class often is decisive C a decision to certify may place insurmountable pressure on the defendant to settle, while a refusal to certify may force the plaintiffs to abandon their claims C the bill permits immediate appeal of certification decisions as a matter of right. Immediate appeals of certification decisions can be crucial to efficient management of class actions, preventing the nightmare situation where parties engage in years of expensive litigation under a ruling on the class certification, only to have the appeals court reverse the class certification determination. Contrary to concerns voiced about previous legislative proposals, H.R. 1115 would not encourage or permit the destruction of documents or other evidence during the appeal of the certification decision. On the contrary, discovery would be stayed under this section unless the court finds that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice.

Conclusion

In sum, H.R. 1115 is an important step in reforming class action litigation. Itreturning common sense to the nation=s class action system and providing greater protections for the victims the system originally was designed to benefit. The bill would update diversity jurisdiction appropriately to account for class action litigation, while permitting State court actions to proceed in cases where no party sought removal and in specified circumstances such as where the class is relatively small or where the primary plaintiffs and defendants are within the State. Thus, State courts would be able to offer redress and provide a convenient forum for their citizens, while Federal courts would provide a forum for truly interstate class actions.

Thank you for this opportunity to present our views. We greatly appreciate your efforts in support of meaningful class action reform. I would be pleased to answer any questions that the Committee may have on this subject.

Pirates We Be
Rule of Law
By STEPHEN G. CALABRESI
Last Friday marked the two-year anniversary of President Bush's nominations of Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen as federal appellate judges. The nominations, supported by a majority of senators, are being filibustered to death by a posse of Senate Democrats. Tom Daschle, the Senate minority leader who has previously attacked filibusters as unconstitutional, is spearheading the effort. He growls that the current disruption is but a preview of what's to come.
The stakes in this particular nomination battle are even higher than usual. With Chief Justice William Rehnquist and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor getting ready to retire, a minority of Senate Democrats are threatening to filibuster anyone to the right of David Souter. On the merits, Antonin Scalia should be nominated as chief justice and Judges Michael Luttig or Michael McConnell as the new associate justice. But the fear of endless Senate filibusters may deter Mr. Bush from picking the best candidate if it means wading into another fetid nomination swamp. Fortunately, Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist and 10 other senators, including Democrat Zell Miller, have proposed a resolution to prevent indefinite filibusters of judicial nominations. The Frist-Miller proposal would gradually reduce the number of senators required to invoke cloture on a nomination from 60 votes, to 57, to 54, to 51 to a majority of senators present and voting. The basis for their proposal is well supported in history and constitutional law. The Constitution was originally written to empower Congress to make most decisions by majority rule. A major defect in the Constitution's precursor, the Articles of Confederation, was that it required supermajorities for many important decisions. That difference was deliberately remedied by the Framers. Exceptions to the constitutional principle of majority rule exist, but they are enumerated in seven express situations where a two-thirds vote is required. The bar for requiring a super-majority is high: removing an official who has been impeached, expelling a member of Congress, passing a constitutional amendment, or overriding a presidential veto. Confirming one of the nearly 1,000 lower federal court judges is not the sort of serious action that the Framers thought or said required a super-majority. Both houses of Congress have the power by majority vote to establish the "Rules of its Proceedings." But as an original matter, there is no evidence this clause was meant to authorize indefinite filibusters. Nor is there evidence I am aware of that indefinite filibusters were allowed in 1787 in the state legislatures or in the British Parliament, although legislative committees and more ordinary rules governing debate were common. In fact, from 1789 to 1806 -- during the critical first eight Senates to sit under the Constitution -- the Senate's rules allowed for cutting off debate by a simple majority vote. This strongly suggests what the text of the Constitution already implies: the Senate filibuster is on very shaky ground as a matter of text and original constitutional history. The traditional Senate filibuster of legislation has an ignominious history. It got its start in the 1840s when Sen. John C. Calhoun first employed a rule adopted in 1806 to defend slavery. He was called a

"filibusterer," a term taken from a Dutch word for pirates who sought to overthrow Latin American governments to hasten the spread of slavery. From 1841 to the present, the filibuster was primarily used to defend Jim Crow laws. Today it stands in the way of vouchers, school choice, tort reform, and tax cuts.

Now for the first time in 214 years of American history a minority of senators is seeking to extend the tradition of filibustering from legislation to judicial nominees who they know enjoy the support of a majority of the Senate. This is a change of constitutional dimensions and amounts to a kind of coup d'etat. While a filibuster was briefly used in 1968 against chief justice nominee Abe Fortas -- he was supported by fewer than 50 senators -- there was only one cloture vote on his nomination.

The unprecedented extension of the filibuster to judicial nominees supported by a majority of the Senate threatens to raise the vote required for confirmation from 51 to 60 in violation of the Advice and Consent Clause. Were the Democrats to succeed in this pattern, it would greatly weaken the intended power of the president to appoint federal judges who are supported by a Senate majority. It would also undermine judicial independence by giving a minority of senators -- led by special interest groups -- a veto over who can become a judge.

Senate Rule XXII purports to require a two-thirds vote of the Senate to end debate on amendments of the Senate rules. Constitutional scholars of all political persuasions, however, agree that the Senate can always change its rules by a simple majority vote. Three vice presidents and law professors from Erwin Chemerinsky on the left to John McGinnis on the right agree. Even Lloyd Cutler, White House Counsel to Presidents Carter and Clinton, has written in the Washington Post that Senate Rule XXII "is plainly unconstitutional."

To the extent that the rule purports to require a two-thirds majority for cloture on rules changes, it is unconstitutional. It is an ancient principle of Anglo-American constitutional law that a legislature cannot bind a succeeding legislature. A two-thirds requirement for cloture on rules changes allows the Senate that adopted Rule XXII unconstitutionally to bind this Republican Senate, elected in 2002, after a campaign in which judicial confirmations figured prominently.

Fidelity to the text of the Constitution, the original understanding, and 214 years in which there wasn't a single sustained filibuster of judicial nominees, is ample evidence that the Democrats' plan to thwart Republican nominees from entering the judicial system must be stopped. Republicans were voted into control of the House, the Senate and the White House. It is time for them to govern.

The Politics Of Filibusters (WSJournal)

Editorial

The Wall Street Journal, May 13, 2003

Where's Jimmy Stewart when you need him? Two historic filibusters are currently under way in the Senate -- one's been going on for months -- but next to no one outside the Beltway has noticed.

Senate business proceeds as usual, the Members get to sleep in their own beds at night, and Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen's names come up only when repeated motions to close debate and bring their judicial nominations to a vote are defeated. Hollywood is not remaking "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." All of which is exactly the way Democrats want it: They can defeat two Bush judges, and more down the road, without paying a political price.

So one can hardly blame Majority Leader Bill Frist for trying to shine a little light on the problem. The Democrats are imposing an extraordinary new standard for confirming judges -- not a simple majority of 51 votes but a super-majority of 60, the number required to shut off debate. Both filibustered nominees have the support of a bipartisan majority, yet they are being denied the confirmation votes to which they are entitled under the advice-and-consent clause of the U.S. Constitution.

Mr. Frist's proposed solution is to change the procedure under which debate ends and a vote is taken, a process known as "cloture." He would amend Senate Rule XXII so that the number of votes needed to end a filibuster would fall from 60 to 57 to 54 to 51 on successive votes. This would preserve the essential purpose of the filibuster -- which is to give the minority a chance to make their case -- but not let them abuse the system by holding confirmable nominees hostage forever.

Georgia Democrat Zell Miller made an even more ambitious reform proposal on this page in March, when he called for new cloture rules for nominations and legislation -- not just nominations, as Mr. Frist proposes. Mr. Miller's proposal was in turn based on one in 1995 by Democrats Tom Harkin and Joseph Lieberman.

That last one had the support of none other than Tom Daschle, who said at the time that "Democracy means majority rule, not minority gridlock." Mr. Daschle hewed to a different principle on Sunday, when he told NBC's "Meet the Press" that Mr. Estrada and Judge Owen are "exceptions to the rule" that every nominee deserves an up or down vote in the Senate. Apparently he doesn't believe the Constitution should be applied equally to every American.

Under current practice no Senate rule, including the 60-vote cloture rule, can be changed except by a two-thirds majority. Which is where things get interesting, constitutionally speaking. Many legal scholars -- liberal and conservative -- argue that Rule XXII is unconstitutional because it binds future Senates to rules made by a past Senate. "It is an ancient principle of Anglo-American law that one legislature cannot bind a succeeding legislature," Steven Calabresi of Northwestern Law School, told the Senate last week.

Catholic University's Douglas Kmiec made a similar point on this page in March, and Lloyd Cutler, White House Counsel to Presidents Carter and Clinton, wrote in 1993 that "the Senate rule requiring a super-majority vote to cut off debate is unconstitutional." Vice Presidents Nixon, Humphrey and Rockefeller, while presiding over the Senate, have all held that Senate rules can be changed by a simple majority.

If the current Senate did that with Rule XXII -- obtain a majority vote to change the cloture rules for nominations -- Vice President Cheney would presumably agree. That would leave the Democrats with the option of going to court, where the Supreme Court could take the case or, more likely, decide it was a political dispute best left to the Senate to resolve. The President's nominees would be seated.

We've said it before, but it's worth repeating that the Democrats' judicial filibusters are unprecedented in Senate history. Filibustering nominations wasn't even permitted until 1949 and the sole judicial nominee stopped by a filibuster was Abe Fortas, LBJ's nominee for Supreme Court Chief Justice, who faced charges of corruption. Meanwhile, the Democrats are just warming up. A third appeals-court filibuster looks likely this spring, and a Supreme Court filibuster could be next if there's a vacancy this summer.

The system for confirming judges is clearly broken. Democrats are playing politics with Senate rules, but they now profess shock and outrage that Republicans want to play politics too and reform the filibuster rules being abused. Sounds to us as if Republicans are on to something.

An Unfair Double Standard

Last week, the Senate confirmed John Roberts to be a judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. Roberts has served as Deputy Solicitor General of the United States, Associate Counsel to President Reagan, and Law Clerk to then-Justice Rehnquist. He has argued numerous cases before the U.S. Supreme Court and is widely recognized as one of the very best appellate lawyers in America. The American Bar Association unanimously rated him well qualified. In short, John Roberts exemplifies the kind of judge President Bush has nominated to the federal courts, and will be a distinguished judge on the D.C. Circuit.

The Senate's confirmation of Roberts is noteworthy for two additional reasons, however, both of which demonstrate the serious breakdown in the Senate confirmation process about which President Bush and many Senators of both parties have spoken in recent years.

First, the long road from Roberts' initial nomination to his confirmation vote was unfair and is impossible to defend -- and is an excellent example of the broken state of the Senate's judicial confirmation process. Roberts was first nominated to the D.C. Circuit in January 1992, yet did not receive a hearing before the end of President George H.W. Bush's term a year later. President George W. Bush then nominated Roberts on May 9, 2001, shortly after taking office. But the Senate Judiciary Committee did not hold a hearing on Roberts' nomination during the entire last Congress, even though no serious objections were lodged against him. President Bush then re-nominated Roberts on January 7, 2003. After two hearings this year, Roberts received his Senate vote on May 8, 2003 -- two years after nomination by President George W. Bush and more than 11 years after his first nomination. And when Roberts finally received that elusive vote, the Senate unanimously confirmed him, which makes the many years of delay all the more difficult to explain and justify.

The Senate's delays and denials of votes on judicial nominees) which have been all too common in recent years -- flout the intention of the Constitution and the tradition of the Senate. No judicial nominee ever should have to wait years for a vote in the Senate. So that the federal courts are fully staffed to do their jobs for the American people and in order to attract the best and brightest to judicial service, the Senate should fulfill its constitutional responsibility and ensure that every judicial nominee receives an up-or-down Senate vote within a reasonable period of time after nomination.

Second, the confirmation of John Roberts also dramatically exposes the double standard being applied to the President,s other D.C. Circuit nominee, Miguel Estrada. The career records of Roberts and Estrada are strikingly similar. Both Estrada and Roberts were unanimously rated well-qualified by the ABA. Both have argued numerous cases before the Supreme Court, including as attorneys in the Solicitor General's office. Both have devoted large portions of their legal careers to public service and also been partners at major Washington law firms. Both have clerked for Supreme Court Justices. Both have the very strong support of prominent Democrat attorneys who served in high-ranking positions in the Clinton Administration. Neither has served previously as a judge or a professor and therefore neither has written widely about their personal views on legal issues. Both have served instead as superb and well-respected lawyers for public and private clients throughout their careers.

Despite the similarities between Roberts and Estrada, the Senate Democrats have treated them very differently. Senate Democrats never requested memoranda written by Roberts from his time in the Solicitor General's office. Yet they are insisting on reviewing memoranda written by Estrada from his tenure in the Solicitor General's office as a condition of ending a 3-month filibuster of a vote on his nomination. Consistent with judicial independence and the traditional practice of judicial nominees, Senate Democrats also did not demand that Roberts answer questions about his personal views on legal and policy issues. Yet these Senators are demanding that Estrada answer the same questions that Roberts did not answer as a condition of ending the filibuster on Estrada.

The 45 Senate Democrats who are filibustering Estrada's nomination are applying a double standard. There is no rational or legitimate justification for the disparate treatment of Roberts and Estrada, particularly by means of an extraordinary and unprecedented filibuster when Estrada has the clear support of a majority of Senators. These 45 Senate Democrats should halt the filibuster and allow an up-or-down vote on Estrada. As the President has said, let each Senator vote as he or she thinks best, but end the double standard, stop the unfair treatment, and give the man a vote.

American victims of international terrorism are currently compensated through a patchwork system that allows a small group of victims to receive enormous judgments in court, but provides no avenue for relief for the vast majority of victims and victims' families. In cases of international terrorism, plaintiffs are usually unable to recover against the terrorists or terrorist-supporting states, either because they have no assets in the United States or because the assets have been blocked or frozen by the United States. Congress has, on an ad hoc basis, provided for use of taxpayer funds to compensate in full a small group of individual plaintiffs who have obtained very large, but uncollectible, judgments in court ($386 million for 14 victims so far). But the vast majority of victims' families still have no means of obtaining compensation.

Recently, there have been proposals in Congress to provide relief on a broader scale. Congress included in the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act of 2002 a provision that provides plaintiffs with access to certain blocked assets of foreign states to satisfy judgments that the plaintiffs obtain in court. That provision is objectionable because it infringes upon the President's ability to conduct foreign affairs. In addition, there are two categories of pending legislative proposals that are objectionable. First, there have been proposals to expand further the access to frozen assets to include assets that are protected by international agreements. For example, one proposal would allow hostages who were held at the American Embassy in Tehran to sue, despite the fact that the 1981 international agreement that obtained their release precludes suit. This violation of the 1981 agreement could permit Iran to recover damages from the United States at the Iran-U.S. Claims Tribunal in The Hague. Second, there have been several recent proposals to expand the September 11th Victim Compensation Fund to cover additional terrorist attacks. Such an expansion would provide several high-income families with multimillion dollar awards while leaving lower-income families with much smaller awards. Such an approach would be inequitable and would impose enormous costs upon the U.S. taxpayers.

While the Administration has successfully opposed many of these objectionable proposals thus far, it will be difficult to continue to defeat them without an alternative proposal, especially in light of the increased congressional interest in compensating victims due to the most recent terrorist attack in Saudi Arabia. There will likely be objectionable proposed amendments to the pending State Department Authorization bill. In addition, Rep. Frank Wolf plans to include a taxpayer-funded compensation program in the upcoming Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill. Rep. Wolf has expressed interest in including a proposal drafted by the Administration if one is provided to him informally in the next few days.

In June 2002, Deputy Secretary of State Armitage sent a letter to Congress stating that any proposal to compensate victims of international terrorism should be based upon a uniform, lump-sum payment comparable to the federal benefit provided to families of public safety officers who are killed in the line of duty (currently $262,000, indexed for inflation). The State Department now requests clearance of a draft bill that is consistent with the Armitage letter. The State Department, with assistance from an interagency working group, has developed a draft bill to compensate victims along the following lines:

- The families of U.S. victims who were killed in any act of international terrorism since 1979 would each be entitled to a lump-sum payment from the federal government equal to the current federal benefit for families of public safety officers who are killed in the line of duty (currently $262,000, indexed for inflation).
- U.S. victims who have been physically injured or held hostage as a direct result of any act of international terrorism since 1979 would be entitled to a payment up to, but not exceeding, the amount of the death benefit described above.
- The State Department would administer the program, which would be funded through discretionary appropriations.
- Those who opt into the compensation program would be barred from also filing suit against foreign states or the United States.
- The bill would prospectively repeal the provisions in the Terrorism Risk Insurance Act that allowed access to blocked assets of foreign states, but the bill would not affect claims that are currently pending in court.

RECOMMENDATION:

That you approve (1) having Secretary Powell share the draft bill on an informal basis with select Members of Congress and (2) having Secretary Powell and others in the Administration state that the Administration will support the bill as long as it is not substantially modified by Congress.

OLC opined in 1995: Because this definition [in 5 USC 7322(1)] includes all employees in "Executive agenc(ies)," it includes in its scope (but is not limited to) all Executive Branch employees and officers, with the exception of the President, the Vice President, persons employed in or under the United States Postal Service or the Postal Rate Commission, and members of the uniformed services. /3/ Section 603 by its terms does not bar the President and the Vice President from making contributions to their own campaign committee, and Section 603(c) explicitly includes within the scope of its exception persons "employed in or under the United States Postal Service or the Postal Rate Commission." Therefore, Section 603(c) applies to the entire Executive Branch with the possible exception of members of the uniformed services.

This opinion remains in effect and is binding on the entire executive branch, including the Criminal Division. The entire text of the opinion is set forth below.

By Alberto Gonzales

On May 9, President Bush addressed the American people from the Rose Garden on the subject of judicial nominees. The process, he explained, is broken. In the past three administrations, too many nominees to the federal appeals courts have languished for years without a vote; other nominees never received votes at all. The president called for the Senate to perform its constitutional responsibility to hold timely up or down votes on judicial nominees. That should hold, he emphasized, no matter who is president or which party controls the Senate.

Democrat Leader Tom Daschle quickly responded to the president's call by claiming that the Senate's judicial confirmation process "ain't broke." We respectfully disagree.

To begin with, Sen. Daschle's statements are flatly inconsistent with the views of many other Democrat senators. For example:

* New York Sen. Chuck Schumer in his April 30 letter to the president stated that he "could not agree more" with President Bush that the process is "broken" and that we are in a "vicious cycle" of "delayed" confirmations.

* California Sen. Diane Feinstein in her May 5 letter to the president stated that she believes the judicial confirmation process is "going in the wrong direction" and is potentially "spiral\[ing\] out of control."

* Arkansas Sen. Mark Pryor in his April 30 letter to Tennessee Sen. Bill Frist agreed-together with all 10 of the new senators-that the "judicial confirmation process is broken and needs to be fixed" and that the "United States Senate needs a fresh start."

* Georgia Sen. Zell Miller in his May 9 statements to the media said the Senate was becoming the "world's greatest obstructionist body" because a minority of senators was denying votes on judicial nominees.

These Democrat senators are not alone. Speaking on behalf of the federal judiciary, Supreme Court Chief Justice William Rehnquist said in January that the judicial confirmation process does not work as it should. The American Bar Association made the same point last August.

The Senate's actions in the last two years amply demonstrate the problems in the process. Senate Democrats are currently engaged in unprecedented simultaneous filibusters to block votes on Miguel Estrada and Priscilla Owen-nominees who have the support of a majority of senators and whose nomination have been pending for more than two years without a vote. More filibusters are apparently likely, according to Democrat senators.

The filibusters are occurring despite statements like Sen. Daschle's on Oct. 5, 1999 that "I find it simply baffling that a Senator would vote against even voting on a judicial nomination."

Beyond the filibusters, some senators are seeking access to confidential Justice Department information never before demanded for appeals-court nominees even though every living former solicitor general including four Democrats opposes this request as harmful to the U.S. What's more, these senators are demanding such memos only for select nominees like Mr. Estrada and not for similarly situated nominees like John Roberts-even though both men have spent their careers as advocates for clients, including for the U.S., and were nominated to the same D.C. Circuit Court.

In addition, by demanding answers to questions about nominees' personal views on legal questions, some senators are threatening to compromise judicial independence, as Justice Anthony Kennedy recently warned and as justices like Ruth Bader Ginsburg have explained in the past.

The overall delays in holding hearings and votes on appeals-court nominees have also risen to new and extraordinary levels: The 107th Congress was the least efficient in modern history in holding hearings and votes on appeals court nominations, according to a recent independent study by leading judicial historian Sheldon Goldman. In this presidency, more appeals-court nominees have had to wait at least a year for a hearing than in the last 50 years combined. Today, as a result of these delays, 12% of the federal appeals-court seats are vacant, and 9% are classified as judicial emergencies.

As President Bush has repeatedly explained since June 2000 when President Clinton was still in office, excessive delays in the judicial confirmation process need to be corrected. The delays harm the courts and the American people, and deter good people from being willing to be considered for service on the bench.

The solution to the problem should be very simple. As the ABA said, "Vote them up or down, but don't hang them out to dry."

A system with timely up or down votes for all nominees is fair to all senators, allowing each to have his voice heard and vote counted. It also is fair to the president, the judiciary, the nominees, and the American people who depend on a fully staffed judiciary. As Senator Bob Graham said in 1991, "I consider it a judicial emergency when a judgeship is vacant for one day more than necessary." A Senate majority vote is the approach that our Founders established in the Constitution and that the Senate has followed for most of the nation's history.

The judicial confirmation system will remain broken and subject to abuse until judicial nominees are ensured a prompt up or down vote within a reasonable and set time after nomination. It is time for the Senate to do so for the benefit of the country.

[SHIRT]Mr. Gonzales is counsel to the president.

CONFIDENTIAL

Regional Appointees Conference Questionnaire Summary

Office of Cabinet Affairs – Not for Distribution

As part of the process of facilitating the Regional Appointees Conference, attendees were asked to complete a confidential questionnaire covering various topics. Provided below are summaries of some of their comments (not for attribution) and general themes found in the responses to the questionnaire. Please keep these thoughts in mind as you prepare your remarks.

Communication:

How do you communicate with your agency, how well is that working, and what improvements can be made?

The channels of communication are designed to 1) deliver the Administration message to all appropriate staff and 2) listen, discuss, and respond to suggestions/concerns from our regional partners. All responses to the questionnaire felt the communication channels were adequate. Some say there is a lack of two-way communication.

The President's Management Agenda:

What is your role in implementing the President's Management Agenda?

All regional appointees have a role with implementing the President's Management Agenda. Some respondents feel that they do not have a direct role, but recognize they serve aspects of communication and facilitation.

One agency seemed to have the biggest disconnect.

Challenges:

What are the most difficult challenges you face in doing your job as a Regional Appointee?

Management: Managing complex operations with few resources, problems with career staff attitude, challenges in HR procedures such as hiring staff, taking disciplinary actions, and compensating good performers.

Political: Lack of Federal involvement in States/regions to help implement policy and affect media coverage (ex. No Child Left Behind), time management with external constituencies, inability to stay involved with the developments in Washington D.C.

Communication: Lack of timely access to information.

Best Practices:

What are the best practices that you have developed or discovered to make your job more effective?

Communication: Build relationships with other Federal agencies in the region to regularly share information on regional issues, ongoing agency activities and regional activities of common interest (Create a Federal agency working group or utilize Federal Regional Councils). Maintain a constant focus on developing and maintaining relationships with state and local stakeholders and constituent groups through regular contact (visits, telephone calls, e-mails etc.).

Management: Regular, constant two-way communication on all issues with staff, from Administration goals and objectives to office policies and security and safety matters. Get out of office to meet with top managers and staff as much as possible. Public support of career staff, particularly when unduly criticized. Reminders 1.) that staff is valued key to agency success and 2.) the office represents the President and the Secretary.

Communication with The White House:

Describe how you communicate with White House offices, how well it is working, and what improvements can be made?

Many have no direct communication with The White House and would like more. Most communicate with The White House through their agencies.

What is working: Many receive regular e-mails from White House Liaisons forwarding information from the White House. Some have been contacted by White House IGA.

Ways to improve/What can improve: Annual or semi-annual regional meetings with White House personnel. Need better coordination and communication on Presidential visits to the area.

Regional Appointees Conference Questionnaire Summary

Office of Cabinet Affairs – Not for Distribution

As part of the process of facilitating the Regional Appointees Conference, attendees were asked to complete a confidential questionnaire covering various topics. Provided below are summaries of some of their comments (not for attribution) and general themes found in the responses to the questionnaire. Please keep these thoughts in mind as you prepare your remarks.

Communication:

How do you communicate with your agency, how well is that working, and what improvements can be made?

The channels of communication are designed to 1) deliver the Administration message to all appropriate staff and 2) listen, discuss, and respond to suggestions/concerns from our regional partners. All responses to the questionnaire felt the communication channels were adequate. Some say there is a lack of two-way communication.

The President's Management Agenda:

What is your role in implementing the President's Management Agenda?

All regional appointees have a role with implementing the President's Management Agenda. Some respondents feel that they do not have a direct role, but recognize they serve aspects of communication and facilitation.

One agency seemed to have the biggest disconnect.

Challenges:

What are the most difficult challenges you face in doing your job as a Regional Appointee?

Management: Managing complex operations with few resources, problems with career staff attitude, challenges in HR procedures such as hiring staff, taking disciplinary actions, and compensating good performers.

Political: Lack of Federal involvement in States/regions to help implement policy and affect media coverage (ex. No Child Left Behind), time management with external constituencies, inability to stay involved with the developments in Washington D.C.

Communication: Lack of timely access to information.

Best Practices:

What are the best practices that you have developed or discovered to make your job more effective?

Communication: Build relationships with other Federal agencies in the region to regularly share information on regional issues, ongoing agency activities and regional activities of common interest (Create a Federal agency working group or utilize Federal Regional Councils). Maintain a constant focus on developing and maintaining relationships with state and local stakeholders and constituent groups through regular contact (visits, telephone calls, e-mails etc.).

Management: Regular, constant two-way communication on all issues with staff, from Administration goals and objectives to office policies and security and safety matters. Get out of office to meet with top managers and staff as much as possible. Public support of career staff, particularly when unduly criticized. Reminders 1.) that staff is valued key to agency success and 2.) the office represents the President and the Secretary.

Communication with The White House:

Describe how you communicate with White House offices, how well it is working, and what improvements can be made?

Many have no direct communication with The White House and would like more. Most communicate with The White House through their agencies.

What is working: Many receive regular e-mails from White House Liaisons forwarding information from the White House. Some have been contacted by White House IGA.

Ways to improve/What can improve: Annual or semi-annual regional meetings with White House personnel. Need better coordination and communication on Presidential visits to the area.

Any ideas what we would put for 122 if we don,t answer. I can have Kim pull the info, but didn't think that was the direction you would want to go.

yes on 119, 120, and 121. I think Kim would have 122 but I wonder whether we should be producing such info. (Is this Istook's committee?)

How to Bork a nominee
Paul Greenberg - May 19, 2003

Bork is no longer a proper noun in Washington, as in Judge Robert Bork, but a verb. It means to launch a vicious, irrelevant, roundhouse campaign against a judicial nominee, throwing in everything, including a couple of kitchen sinks.

The term stems from the treatment of Judge Bork when he was nominated to the Supreme Court. Not satisfied with relevant criticisms, and there were some, the judge's more partisan critics reached back to assail everything he'd said or done from approximately the age of 3, and quite a few things he hadn't.

That borking has become a Washington tradition by now -- indeed, an addiction -- is illustrated by an impressive editorial in the Washington Post the other day. Impressive for its sheer, twisted, mean-spirited irrelevance. It is, in a short, a prime example of borking.

This time the victim's name is Holmes. Leon Holmes, Esq., and he's just been nominated to a district judgeship here in Arkansas. Unable to find anything recent or relevant to criticize about Mr. Holmes -- an outstanding advocate, scholar and thinker -- the Post went back years and even decades to dig up a couple of quotes from his writings to use against him.

One of the quotes dates back to 1980 -- yes, 1980, or 23 years ago -- and Mr. Holmes apologized for it as soon as it was brought to his attention. It was a youthful pamphleteer's remark in the heat of a debate about abortion -- something about rape's seldom resulting in pregnancy. He was wrong 23 years ago, and says so. For that, the Post sounds ready to condemn him to the judicial equivalent of outer darkness.

The other citation -- a reference to Scripture in an article co-written with his wife in April of 1997 -- is so wrenched out of context that you might never guess it was a philosophical rumination on the Book of Ephesians. Published in a Catholic newspaper. As a comment on a Sunday School lesson.

The quote itself was the usual, controversial passage about the husband being head of the household as Christ is head of the church. The Post didn't mention the preceding paragraph in which the Holmeses note that neither man nor woman is inferior to the other in Christian doctrine.

As any smear artist knows, there's no need to go into detail. Especially relevant detail. In this case an innocent reader would be left with no idea of what kind of nominee, or man, Leon Holmes really is. Which is the whole purpose of borking: to make the nominee look like the biggest, scariest menace that ever came down confirmation road. Actually, to quote an informal recommendation from a colleague, Leon Holmes is the kind of guy he'd be willing to shoot dice with over the phone.

The charge that Leon Holmes is in favor of the subjugation of women would amuse anyone who's ever met Susan Byrd Holmes, his outspoken wife and co-author, or any of the women in the law for whom he has been mentor, role model, supporter and encourager.

But I was glad to see that The Washington Post hadn't lost its talent for irony. Alas, in this case it's unintended irony. This editorial accuses the president of radicalizing judicial nominations by his choice of Leon Holmes for the bench, when it's the Post that's being radical, willing to go back into history to find any snippet penned by Mr. Holmes -- or his wife -- that might fail to show the proper reverence for today's politically correct gods.

In the process, the Post ignored the legal acumen and philosophical learning that the mature Leon Holmes has demonstrated day after day, year after year, in his career and life. Forget all that; the object is to crucify this nominee even if the Post has to use old, rusty nails. It's taken a couple of stray quotes and equated them with the man's whole career. A neat trick, if a low one. Joe McCarthy would be proud.

A confession: In recent years I'd started to grow soft on the Post's editorial page; on its good days it had started sound like one of those earnest, old-fashioned liberals not beyond the reach of reason. Clearly I was mistaken. For when the chance to do a little borking came along, the Post leaped at it, using the flimsiest of evidence and twisting even that. As if it couldn't help itself. Which may be the worst thing about borking; it's habit-forming. Once it becomes ingrained in a paper's character, there's no telling when it will seep out again.

Attached are the order and opinion granting a stay of the district court's entire campaign finance decision pending final disposition by the Supreme Court . In short, the majority of the 3-judge panel agreed with the government's "regulatory chaos" theory for getting a stay. The court granted the stay, with the following short explanation: "The Court's desire to prevent the litigants from facing potentially three different regulatory regimes in a very short time span, and the Court's recognition of the divisions among the panel about the constitutionality of the challenged provisions of BCRA, counsel in favor of granting a stay of this case."

Judge Leon concurred in part and dissented in part, on the grounds that the moving parties had "failed to demonstrate irreparable injury" and that granting a stay of the entire judgment would "violate the First Amendment rights of vaiours political parties, donors, broadcasters, interest groups, and minors." He would have not stayed the rulings on Title I and on the provisions affecting minors and requiring record productions from broadcaster, and would have limited the stay on the rulings on Title II until the FEC could promulgate regulations implementing the backup definition of "electioneering communications."

MEMORANDUM OPINION
(May 19, 2003)

Presently before the Court are a number of motions to stay all or part of this Court's May 1, 2003, Final Judgment. On May 7, 2003, the NRA Plaintiffs moved, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 62(c), to stay this Court's decision with respect to Title II pending review by the Supreme Court. NRA Mem. at 1. On May 8, 2003, this Court issued an Order requiring that any other motions requesting to stay all or part of this Court's May

1, 2003, Final Judgment Order be filed by noon on Friday, May 9, 2003. McConnell v. FEC, No. 02cv582 (D.D.C. May 8, 2003) (briefing order). The Court also required that any and all oppositions to the motions for stay be filed by noon on Monday, May 12, 2003, and that any and all replies to the motions for stay be filed by noon on Wednesday, May 14, 2003. Id.

In accordance with that schedule, on May 9, 2003, Plaintiff ACLU filed a stay motion joining Plaintiff NRA's request to stay this Court's decision with respect to Title II. ACLU Mot. at 3. The NRA and ACLU stay motions have been opposed by the Madison Center Plaintiffs,[1] who along with the AFL-CIO Plaintiffs have each moved for injunctive relief requesting that the Court not restore any definition of "electioneering communication." Madison Center Mem. at 1; AFL-CIO Mem at 2. The Madison Center Plaintiffs and the AFL-CIO Plaintiffs' motions have been opposed by the Government Defendants[2] and Intervenor Defendants.[3]

[1] Madison Center Plaintiffs include the National Right to Life Committee, Inc., National Right to Life Educational Trust Fund, National Right to Life PAC, Libertarian National Committee, Inc., Club for Growth, Inc., Indiana Family Institute, Inc., U.S. Representative Mike Pence, Alabama Attorney General William H. Pryor, Barret Austin O'Brock, and Trevor M. Southerland.

[2] The Government Defendants include the Federal Election Commission, the United States of America, the United States Department of Justice, John Ashcroft, Attorney General of the United States, and the Federal Communications Commission.

[3] The Intervenor Defendants include Senator John McCain, Senator Russell Feingold, Representative Christopher Shays, Representative Martin Meehan, Senator Olympia Snowe, and Senator James Jeffords.

The Government Defendants and Intervenor-Defendants also move pursuant to Rule 62(c) to stay the Court's entire Final Judgment pending disposition of the parties' appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States. Gov't Mem. at 4; Intervenor Defs.' Mem. at 1. These motions are opposed by certain of the McConnell Plaintiffs,[4] who argue that the Court's Final Judgment with respect to Sections 201(5), 213, 318, and 504 of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act ("BCRA"), the positions unanimously struck down by the three judge court, should not be stayed. McConnell Opp'n at 3. These McConnell Plaintiffs also contend that the Court's ruling with regard to Title I should not be stayed. Id. at 3-4. These McConnell Plaintiffs join the NRA and ACLU in requesting, however, that the Court's Title II ruling be stayed. Id. at 4-6. Defendants' motions are also opposed by Plaintiff National Association of Broadcasters which requests that the Court not stay its ruling with regard to Section 504 of BCRA. NAB Mem. at 5. Plaintiff National Association of Broadcasters takes no position with respect to any of the other stay requests. Id. at 1. Similarly, Plaintiffs in Civil Action Number 02-633, the Echols Plaintiffs, oppose Defendants' motions, particularly with respect to staying the Court's ruling on Section 318 of BCRA. Echols' Opp'n at 2. Additional oppositions to the Government Defendants and Intervenor

[4] These McConnell Plaintiffs include Senator Mitch McConnell, Southeastern Legal Foundation, Inc., Representative Bob Barr, Center for Individual Freedom, National Right to Work Committee, 60 Plus Association, Inc., U.S. d/b/a Pro English, and Thomas McInerney.

Defendants' motions have been filed by Republican National Committee Plaintiffs[5] and Plaintiffs California Democratic Party and California Republican Party,[6] opposing the stay motions only with respect to staying this Court's ruling on Title I of BCRA. CDP/CRP Opp'n at 2; RNC Opp'n at 1. The Madison Center Plaintiffs and the AFL-CIO also each oppose these motions and argue, as discussed supra, that the Court should not reinstate either definition of electioneering communication.

Two motions for "administrative" stays filed by the NRA Plaintiffs and the Government Defendants (joined by the Intervenor Defendants) are also pending before this Court. These requests are to stay all (Defendants' position) or part (NRA's position) of the Court's ruling until the Court can make a ruling on the present Rule 62(c) motions. Given that the Court is ruling on the Rule 62(c) motions in the attached order, the administrative stay requests are denied as moot.

After due consideration of the motions, the oppositions, and replies, the relevant case law, and the pertinent Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Court is satisfied that a stay should be granted pending final disposition of these eleven actions in the Supreme Court of the United States. This Court's desire to prevent the litigants from facing potentially three

RICHARD J. LEON, District Judge, dissenting in part and concurring in part: Because the moving parties have failed to demonstrate irreparable injury and because granting a stay to this Court's judgment in its entirety will violate the First Amendment rights of various political parties, donors, broadcasters, interest groups, and minors, I respectfully dissent in part from, and concur in part in, my colleagues' decision.

After months of painstaking analysis, this Court found unconstitutional, in whole or in part, nine of the twenty provisions of BCRA challenged by the plaintiffs. Four of those provisions were struck down unanimously (i.e., 201(5), 213, 318, and 504), and four were struck down in their entirety (i.e., 213, 318, 504, and new FECA Section 323(d)). While our reasoning may have differed in some instances, at least two members of this Court in each instance found that the unconstitutional section of the statute (or its subpart) unjustifiably infringed upon the constitutional rights of one or more of the various parties' impacted by the BCRA campaign finance regime. Indeed, because "the loss of First Amendment freedom for even minimal periods of time unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury," Elrod v. Burns, 427 U.S. 347, 374 (1976), the moving parties' arguments must be scrutinized by this Court with extreme care to ensure that they meet the high standards for this "extraordinary remedy." *Cuomo v. their arguments, for the most part, cannot withstand such scrutiny.

With regard to Title I, two members of this Court found that the defendants could not justify Congress's sweeping soft money restrictions in new FECA Sections 323(a) and 323(b) that require political parties to fund nonfederal and mixed-purposed activities with only federal money. Such restrictions, in our judgment, placed an impermissible burden on the associational rights of parties and their donors. Thus, every day these BCRA provisions remain in effect donors are restricted from using donations to amplify their voices through their political parties, thereby suffering irreparable injury. It is difficult to fathom how granting a stay on these Title I provisions could possibly be in the public interest, or be justified by the relatively minor inconvenience to the FEC of having to reinstate, for the most part, its all-too-familiar pre-BCRA rules. Moreover, the defendants' argument that this Court's judgment is "likely to create the appearance or fact of corruption" by allowing political parties and others to raise and use nonfederal funds (i.e., soft money) is similarly unavailing. Gov't Mot. for Stay at 9, 13-14. As long as soft money cannot be used for federal purposes, which is after all the majority holding of this Court, the risk of actual or apparent corruption is nonexistent. Simply stated, the public interest is much better served by protecting the public's First Amendment freedoms and by ensuring that the political

With regard to Title II, I similarly do not believe the moving parties have demonstrated sufficient irreparable harm, alone, to warrant a stay—particularly as to Sections 201(5) and 213 which were unanimously struck down by this Court. However, I do believe that the FEC's unfortunate failure to promulgate regulations for the backup definition, as it did for the primary definition,[8] has sufficiently deprived the parties of guidance regarding the contours of the backup definition to warrant a stay of the primary definition portion of our judgment on Section 201. Doing so, at this time, is palatable since the primary definition does not take effect as a practical matter until thirty days before the first primary election and will therefore not immediately injure the plaintiffs. Unlike my colleagues, however, I would limit that stay to the period of time necessary for the FEC to issue regulatory guidance on the backup definition, and thereby minimize the negative consequences of reinstating the primary definition.

Finally, with respect to Sections 318 and 504, which are conceptually distinct from

They further argued that the [backup] definition's application to the entire election cycle, and not just the 30- or 60-day periods to which the current definition is limited, exacerbates the timing issue." To me, including these flawed sections in a statute-wide stay would be like a fisherman retaining whatever the ocean yields to a net with undersized mesh. It increases his "catch," but the public interest dictates against it. Suffice it to say, continuing such unconstitutional restrictions on minors and demanding such unconstitutional record production from broadcasters is, in my judgment, inconsistent with both the public interest and the spirit of the First Amendment.

Attached are the order and opinion granting a stay of the district court's entire campaign finance decision pending final disposition by the Supreme Court . In short, the majority of the 3-judge panel agreed with the government's "regulatory chaos" theory for getting a stay. The court granted the stay, with the following short explanation: "The Court's desire to prevent the litigants from facing potentially three different regulatory regimes in a very short time span, and the Court's recognition of the divisions among the panel about the constitutionality of the challenged provisions of BCRA, counsel in favor of granting a stay of this case."

Judge Leon concurred in part and dissented in part, on the grounds that the moving parties had "failed to demonstrate irreparable injury" and that granting a stay of the entire judgment would "violate the First Amendment rights of vaiours political parties, donors, broadcasters, interest groups, and minors." He would have not stayed the rulings on Title I and on the provisions affecting minors and requiring record productions from broadcaster, and would have limited the stay on the rulings on Title II until the FEC could promulgate regulations implementing the backup definition of "electioneering communications."

(May 19, 2003)

Presently before the Court are a number of motions to stay all or part of this Court's May 1, 2003, Final Judgment. On May 7, 2003, the NRA Plaintiffs moved, pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 62(c), to stay this Court's decision with respect to Title II pending review by the Supreme Court. NRA Mem. at 1. On May 8, 2003, this Court issued an Order requiring that any other motions requesting to stay all or part of this Court's May

1, 2003, Final Judgment Order be filed by noon on Friday, May 9, 2003. McConnell v. FEC, No. 02cv582 (D.D.C. May 8, 2003) (briefing order). The Court also required that any and all oppositions to the motions for stay be filed by noon on Monday, May 12, 2003, and that any and all replies to the motions for stay be filed by noon on Wednesday, May 14, 2003. Id.

In accordance with that schedule, on May 9, 2003, Plaintiff ACLU filed a stay motion joining Plaintiff NRA's request to stay this Court's decision with respect to Title II. ACLU Mot. at 3. The NRA and ACLU stay motions have been opposed by the Madison Center Plaintiffs,[1] who along with the AFL-CIO Plaintiffs have each moved for injunctive relief requesting that the Court not restore any definition of "electioneering communication." Madison Center Mem. at 1; AFL-CIO Mem at 2. The Madison Center Plaintiffs and the AFL-CIO Plaintiffs' motions have been opposed by the Government Defendants[2] and Intervenor Defendants.[3]

[1] Madison Center Plaintiffs include the National Right to Life Committee, Inc., National Right to Life Educational Trust Fund, National Right to Life PAC, Libertarian National Committee, Inc., Club for Growth, Inc., Indiana Family Institute, Inc., U.S. Representative Mike Pence, Alabama Attorney General William H. Pryor, Barret Austin O'Brock, and Trevor M. Southerland.

[2] The Government Defendants include the Federal Election Commission, the United States of America, the United States Department of Justice, John Ashcroft, Attorney General of the United States, and the Federal Communications Commission.

[3] The Intervenor Defendants include Senator John McCain, Senator Russell Feingold, Representative Christopher Shays, Representative Martin Meehan, Senator Olympia Snowe, and Senator James Jeffords.

The Government Defendants and Intervenor-Defendants also move pursuant to Rule 62(c) to stay the Court's entire Final Judgment pending disposition of the parties' appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States. Gov't Mem. at 4; Intervenor Defs.' Mem. at 1. These motions are opposed by certain of the McConnell Plaintiffs,[4] who argue that the Court's Final Judgment with respect to Sections 201(5), 213, 318, and 504 of the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act ("BCRA"), the positions unanimously struck down by the three judge court, should not be stayed. McConnell Opp'n at 3. These McConnell Plaintiffs also contend that the Court's ruling with regard to Title I should not be stayed. Id. at 3-4. These McConnell Plaintiffs join the NRA and ACLU in requesting, however, that the Court's Title II ruling be stayed. Id. at 4-6. Defendants' motions are also opposed by Plaintiff National Association of Broadcasters which requests that the Court not stay its ruling with regard to Section 504 of BCRA. NAB Mem. at 5. Plaintiff National Association of Broadcasters takes no position with respect to any of the other stay requests. Id. at 1. Similarly, Plaintiffs in Civil Action Number 02-633, the Echols Plaintiffs, oppose Defendants' motions, particularly with respect to staying the Court's ruling on Section 318 of BCRA. Echols' Opp'n at 2. Additional oppositions to the Government Defendants and Intervenor

Defendants' motions have been filed by Republican National Committee Plaintiffs[5] and Plaintiffs California Democratic Party and California Republican Party,[6] opposing the stay motions only with respect to staying this Court's ruling on Title I of BCRA. CDP/CRP Opp'n at 2; RNC Opp'n at 1. The Madison Center Plaintiffs and the AFL-CIO also each oppose these motions and argue, as discussed supra, that the Court should not reinstate either definition of electioneering communication.

Two motions for "administrative" stays filed by the NRA Plaintiffs and the Government Defendants (joined by the Intervenor Defendants) are also pending before this Court. These requests are to stay all (Defendants' position) or part (NRA's position) of the Court's ruling until the Court can make a ruling on the present Rule 62(c) motions. Given that the Court is ruling on the Rule 62(c) motions in the attached order, the administrative stay requests are denied as moot.

After due consideration of the motions, the oppositions, and replies, the relevant case law, and the pertinent Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Court is satisfied that a stay should be granted pending final disposition of these eleven actions in the Supreme Court of the United States. This Court's desire to prevent the litigants from facing potentially three

RICHARD J. After months of painstaking analysis, this Court found unconstitutional, in whole or in part, nine of the twenty provisions of BCRA challenged by the plaintiffs. Four of those provisions were struck down unanimously (i.e., 201(5), 213, 318, and 504), and four were struck down in their entirety (i.e., 213, 318, 504, and new FECA Section 323(d)). While our reasoning may have differed in some instances, at least two members of this Court in each instance found that the unconstitutional section of the statute (or its subpart) unjustifiably infringed upon the constitutional rights of one or more of the various parties' impacted by the BCRA campaign finance regime. Indeed, because "the loss of First Amendment freedom for even minimal periods of time unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury," *Elrod v. Lawyers' party hits a new low

Published May 16, 2003

Perhaps they are just isolated incidents. But if the aren't, Democrats ought to seriously consider the long-term damage they may be doing to our political system with their ends-justify-the-means mentality.

I'm talking about Democrats in the U.S. Senate using a parliamentary device to block confirmation of federal judges who have the number of votes needed for confirmation, and the laughable -- if it weren't so serious -- decision by Texas House members to flee the state to stop the Legislature from doing its business.

In both cases, Democrats are making a mockery of majority rule. Say what you want about Republicans giving Bill Clinton's nominees a hard time, but the GOP held the congressional majority then.

Throw in the Democrats' threat earlier this year that unless they were given equal committee membership and staffing -- virtually unheard of for a minority party -- they would shut down U.S. Senate business. And what about the case of Robert Torricelli, a scandal-tainted U.S. senator from New Jersey? Last fall he was forced off the ballot by his party on the correct assumption that a Democratic court would ignore filing deadlines and let the party substitute a candidate more electable than Torricelli.

You have to wonder if there's more legal sleight of hand and disdain for democracy to come from a party that has sold its soul to trial lawyers. When "Larry and Laurie Lawyer" replace "Joe and Jill Sixpack" as the Democrats' driving force, chicanery is no surprise.

Obviously, unrelenting partisanship has increased on both sides of the aisle in recent years. But the Democrats' actions take it to a whole new level and threaten our government's ability to function.

For those screaming "What about the 2000 election?", remember that it was Al Gore's campaign that began the court fight. And Democrats insisted on a recount only in Florida's four largest Democratic counties, not statewide. If they had wanted the truth, not just victory, they would have sought a statewide recount.

The U.S. Supreme Court, a narrow majority of whose members were appointed by Republican presidents, merely reversed the decision of the Florida Supreme Court, six of whose seven members were Democratic appointees.

Senate Democrats are holding up the confirmations of Miguel Estrada and Patricia Owen to the U.S. Court of Appeals. They can't defeat the nominees, but they have the 41 senators needed to make sure no vote is taken.

Democratic senators acknowledge that their tactics -- and the likelihood they will filibuster more of Bush's nominees, perhaps even his eventual Supreme Court choice -- are not about qualifications. Both judges-in-waiting have the stamp of approval of the American Bar Association, not exactly a GOP-friendly body.

This is all about politics. Democrats are candid that they don't like the ideology of the Bush nominees. But so what. When the American people elected George Bush, they didn't mean for Teddy Kennedy to decide who sits on the federal bench.

In Texas, where Republicans now control both the Legislature and govenorship for the first time in 130 years, Democrats ruled with an iron fist for a century. During their reign, they treated Republicans like dirt. Until 20 years ago, Republicans could caucus in a phone booth.

But with Texas Republicans trying to implement their policies -- as presumably voters who elected them desire -- virtually all House Democrats skipped the state to deny the quorum necessary to do business. They holed up in an Oklahoma hotel, beyond the jurisdiction of state troopers empowered to arrest them and return them to the Capitol.

Since the deadline for the Texas House to pass legislation was Thursday, their plan was to thwart the House's ability to function. Of course, Republican Gov. Rick Perry has promised to call special sessions to do the business not dealt with.

The Democratic tactics reek of the "win-at-all-costs" trial-lawyer mentality. Not only are they the largest source of Democratic campaign contributions, but whether it's governors or state or federal lawmakers, you see lawyers much more dominating party ranks than among Republicans. Four of the last five Democratic presidential candidates were lawyers, but just one of the five Republican candidates was.

Sen. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., a filibuster leader, claims "history will look kindly on us."

You have to wonder whether he actually believes that horse manure.

Probably not.

He's a lawyer.

He'll say and do whatever he needs to get his way.

Let's hope he and his fellow Democrats don't damage the country in the process.

THE HONORABLE JEFFREY W. RUNGE, M.D.
ADMINISTRATOR
NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION
Before the
SUBCOMMITTEE ON HIGHWAYS, TRANSIT AND PIPELINES
COMMITTEE ON TRANSPORTATION AND INFRASTRUCTURE
U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

May 21, 2003

Chairman Petri, Congressman Lipinski, Members of the Subcommittee, thank you for the opportunity to appear before you today to discuss the Administration's proposal to reauthorize our highway safety programs in the "Safe, Accountable, Flexible and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2003" or "SAFETEA."

Through this Subcommittee's leadership, and in conjunction with our State, local and private sector partners, NHTSA has worked to realize the goals of TEA-21. We are grateful to this Subcommittee for its continuing leadership by scheduling this hearing. My staff and I look forward to working with you and the rest of Congress in shaping the proposals that will reauthorize TEA-21. Working together, we will assure the successful reauthorization of this legislation and address the highway safety challenges facing the nation.

Motor vehicle crashes are responsible for 95 percent of all transportation-related deaths and 99 percent of all transportation-related injuries. They are the leading cause of death for Americans ages 2 to 33. NHTSA's portion of SAFETEA focuses exclusively on highway safety. Although we are seeing improvements in vehicle crash worthiness and crash avoidance technologies, the rate and numbers of fatalities and injuries on our highways are staggering. In 2002, an estimated 42,850 people were killed in motor vehicle crashes, up slightly from 42,116 in 2001.

Traffic injuries in police-reported crashes decreased by four percent in 2002. While this is encouraging, we still are faced with the overwhelming fact that nearly 3 million people were injured in these crashes in 2002.

The economic costs associated with these crashes are unacceptable as well. In fact, they constitute a grave public health problem and serious fiscal burden for our nation. The total annual economic cost to our economy of all motor vehicle crashes is an astonishing $230.6 billion in 2000 dollars, or 2.3 percent of the U.S. gross domestic product. This translates in to an average of $820 for every person living in the United States. Included in this figure is $81 billion in lost productivity, $32.6 billion in medical expenses, and $59 billion in property damage. The average cost for a critically injured survivor is estimated at $1.1 million over a lifetime. As astounding as this figure is, it does not even begin to reflect the physical and psychological suffering of the victims and their families.

The fatality rate for 100 million vehicle miles traveled (VMT) remained unchanged at 1.51, according to these estimates. Secretary Mineta has given us the goal of reducing the fatality rate to no more than 1.0 fatality for every 100 VMT by 2008. This is not just a NHTSA goal; it is a goal of the entire Department of Transportation.

For these reasons, President Bush and Secretary Mineta have made reducing highway fatalities the number one priority for the Department and for the reauthorization of TEA-21.

While Washington has many complex problems, reducing highway deaths is not one of them. The solution is simple: passengers must buckle their safety belts. It is that easy. Safety belt use cuts the risk of death in a crash in half. Most passenger vehicle occupants killed in motor vehicle crashes continue to be totally unrestrained. If safety belt use were to increase from the national average of 75 percent to 90 percent -- an achievable goal for states that have a primary safety belt law – over 4,000 lives would be saved each year. For every one percentage point increase in safety belt use -- that is 2.8 million more people "buckling up" -- we would save hundreds of lives, suffer significantly fewer injuries, and reduce economic costs by hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

In addition to the economic obligation, more importantly, we have a moral obligation to address immediately the problem of highway safety. The Bush Administration remains committed to reducing highway fatalities, and our bill offers proposals to increase safety belt use and to take those and other actions that can make the achievement of this goal possible.

Thanks in large part to the hard work of many of you and your predecessors, SAFETEA builds on the tremendous successes of the previous two pieces of surface transportation legislation. Both the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (ISTEA), a bill with which the Secretary is proud to have played a role, and TEA-21, provided an excellent framework to tackle the surface transportation challenges that lie ahead.

ISTEA set forth a new vision for the implementation of the Nation's surface transportation programs. Among other things, ISTEA gave State and local officials unprecedented flexibility to advance their own goals for transportation capital investment. Instead of directing outcomes from Washington, DC, the Department shifted more of its focus to giving State and local partners the necessary tools to solve their unique problems while still pursuing important national goals. SAFETEA not only maintains this fundamental ISTEA principle, it goes further by giving States and localities even more discretion in key program areas. To meet the significant highway safety challenges the States face, we have designed SAFETEA's highway safety title to create a safer, simpler and smarter program.

President Bush and this Administration are committed to fostering the safest, most secure national transportation system possible, even as we seek to enhance mobility, reduce congestion, and expand our economy. These are not incompatible goals. Indeed, it is essential that the Nation's transportation system be both safe and secure while making our economy both more efficient and productive.

While formulating the Department's reauthorization proposal, the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) and NHTSA came together on a different approach to addressing the Nation's substantial highway safety problems. Under that approach, States would receive more resources to address their own, unique transportation safety issues; would be strongly encouraged to increase their overall safety belt usage rates; and would be rewarded for performance with increased funds and greater flexibility to spend those funds on either infrastructure safety or behavioral safety programs. The following are the major programmatic elements of the Administration's highway safety reauthorization proposal.

SAFETEA establishes a new core highway safety infrastructure program, in place of the existing Surface Transportation Program safety set-aside. This new program, called the Highway Safety Improvement Program, will more than double funding over comparable TEA-21 levels. This new program would provide $7.5 billion for safety projects over the six-year authorization period. In addition to increased funding, States would be encouraged and assisted in their efforts to formulate comprehensive highway safety plans.

In an attempt to streamline NHTSA's grant programs and make them more performance-based, we have proposed a major consolidation of NHTSA's Section 402 safety programs. While the basic formula grant program for Section 402 would provide $1.05 billion over the six-year authorization period, two important elements of this revised Section 402 are a General Performance Grant and a Safety Belt Performance Grant. The Safety Belt Performance Grant provides up to $100 million each year to reward States for passing primary safety belt laws—meaning drivers and passengers can be cited for failure to wear a safety belt—or achieving 90% safety belt usage rates in their States. A State that enacts new primary belt laws will receive a grant equal to 5 times the amount of its current formula grant for highway safety. This significant incentive is intended to prompt State action needed to save lives. In 2002, States with primary safety belt laws averaged 80% use, 11 percentage points higher than those with secondary laws—laws preventing police from issuing a citation unless another traffic law was broken. States achieve high levels of belt use through primary safety belt laws, public education using paid and earned media, and high visibility law enforcement programs, such as the Click it or Ticket campaign.

Any State that receives a Safety Belt Performance Grant for the enactment of a primary safety belt law is permitted to use up to 100% of those funds for infrastructure investments eligible under the Highway Safety Improvement Program in accordance with the State's comprehensive plan. Also, States can receive additional grants by improving their safety belt use rates. This incentive would provide $182 million over the six-year authorization period. Any State that receives a grant for improved safety belt usage rates or a General Performance Grant for the achievement of other key safety performance measures is permitted to use up to 50% of those funds for activities eligible under the new Highway Safety Improvement Program.

Overall, this groundbreaking proposal offers States more flexibility than they have ever had before in how they spend their Federal-aid safety dollars. It reduces State administrative burdens by consolidating multiple categorical grant programs into one. It would reward them for accomplishing easily measurable goals and encourage them to take the most effective steps to save lives. It is exactly the kind of proposal that is needed to more effectively address the tragic problem of highway fatalities.

The General Performance Grant component of our revised Section 402 program that I mentioned earlier, which would provide $340 million over the six-year authorization period, not only eases the administrative burdens of the States but also rewards States with increased Federal funds for measurable improvements in their safety performance for reducing (i) overall motor vehicle fatalities, (ii) alcohol-related fatalities; and (iii) motorcycle, bicycle, and pedestrian crash fatalities.

SAFETEA is designed to help the States deter impaired driving. Encouraging people to wear their safety belts will help reduce the number of deaths and injuries attributed to impaired driving, but reducing the actual number of impaired drivers is a complex issue requiring interconnected strategies and programs. In 2002, an estimated 17,970 people died in alcohol-related crashes (42 percent of the total fatalities for the year), a 25 percent reduction from the 23,833 alcohol-related fatalities in 1988, but an increase of 3 percent over 2001. Intoxication rates have decreased for drivers of all age groups involved in fatal crashes over the past decade, with drivers 25 to 34 years old experiencing the greatest decrease, followed by drivers 16 to 20 years old. However, the easier gains have been made. Our 2002 estimates indicate that alcohol-related fatalities rose for the third straight year.

Another component of our revised Section 402 program will focus significant resources on a small number of States with particularly severe impaired driving problems by creating a new $50 million a year impaired driving discretionary grant program. The grant program will include support for up to 10 States with especially high alcohol fatality numbers or rates to conduct detailed reviews of their impaired driving systems by a team of outside experts and assist them in developing a strategic plan for improving programs, processes, and reducing impaired driving-related fatalities and injuries. Additional support will also be provided for training, technical assistance in the prosecution and adjudication of DWI cases, and to help licensing and criminal justice authorities close legal loopholes.

NHTSA believes that this targeted State grant program and supporting activities, together with continued nationwide use of high-visibility enforcement and paid and earned media campaigns, will lead to a resumption of the downward trend in alcohol-related fatalities that the Nation experienced over the past decade. Also, through the comprehensive safety planning process, all States may elect to use a significant amount of their FHWA Highway Safety Infrastucture funding, in addition to their consolidated Section 402 funds, for impaired driving.

In addition to the consolidation of our Section 402 programs, SAFETEA's highway safety title includes a key provision to provide a comprehensive national motor vehicle crash causation survey that will enable us to determine the factors responsible for the most frequent causes of crashes on the Nation's roads. This comprehensive survey would be funded at $10 million a year out of the funds authorized for our highway safety research and development program. The last update of crash causation data was generated comprehensively in the 1970s. Vehicle design, traffic patterns, numbers and types of vehicles in use, on-board technologies and lifestyles have changed dramatically in the last 30 years. Old assumptions about the causes of crashes may no longer be valid. Since NHTSA depends on causation data to form the basis for its priorities, we must ensure that this data is current and accurate. Updating our crash causation data will allow us to target our efforts for the next decade on the factors that are the most frequent causes of crashes on American roads.

NHTSA has in place an infrastructure of investigation teams that will enable us to perform the crash causation study efficiently and accurately. These teams are currently performing a similar study for large, commercial truck crashes and are adept at gathering evidence from the scene, the hospital, and from victim and witness interviews. Their findings will guide the agency's programs in crash avoidance, including vehicle technologies as well as human factors.

SAFETEA also creates a new $300 million incentive grant program that builds upon a TEA-21 program to encourage States to improve their traffic records data. Deficiencies in such data negatively impact national databases including the Fatality Analysis Reporting System, General Estimates System, National Driver Register, Highway Safety Information System, and Commercial Driver License Information System as well as State data used to identify local safety problems. Improvements are needed for police reports, emergency medical services, driver licensing, vehicle registration, and citation/court data provide essential information. Accurate State traffic safety data are critical to identifying local safety issues, applying focused safety countermeasures, and evaluating the effectiveness of countermeasures.

SAFETEA also establishes a new $60 million State formula grant program to support emergency medical services (EMS) systems development, 911 systems nationwide, and a Federal Interagency Committee on EMS to strengthen intergovernmental coordination of EMS. The States would administer the grant program through their State EMS offices and coordinate it with their highway safety offices.

For the past 20 years, Federal support for EMS has been both scarce and uncoordinated. As a result, the capacity of this critical public service has seen little growth and support for EMS has been spread among a number of agencies throughout the Federal government, including NHTSA. Most of the support offered by these agencies has focused only on specific system functions, rather than on overall system capacity, and has been inconsistent and ineffectively coordinated.

In 2001, the General Accounting Office (GAO) cited in its report, "Emergency Medical Response: Reported Needs Are Wide-Ranging, With Lack of Data A Growing Concern," the need to increase coordination among Federal agencies as they address the needs of regional, State, or local emergency medical services systems. According to GAO, these needs, including personnel, training, equipment, and more emergency personnel in the field, vary between urban and rural communities.

The Administration believes that Federal support for EMS and 9-1-1 systems should be enhanced and coordinated. The enactment of this section would result in comprehensive system support for EMS, 9-1-1 systems, and improved emergency response capacity nationwide.

SAFETEA also would provide $559.5 million for NHTSA's highway safety research and development program. This program supports State highway safety behavioral programs and activities by developing and demonstrating innovative safety countermeasures, and by collecting and disseminating essential data on highway safety. The results of our Section 403 research provide the scientific basis for highway safety programs that States and local communities can tailor to their own needs, ensuring that precious tax dollars are spent only on programs that are effective. The States are encouraged to use the successful programs for their ongoing safety programs and activities.

Highway safety behavioral research focuses on human factors that influence driver and pedestrian behavior and on environmental conditions affecting safety. The program addresses a wide range of safety problems through various programs, initiatives, and demonstrations, such as: impaired driving programs, including the drug evaluation and classification (DEC) program, safety belt and child safety seat programs and related enforcement mobilizations, pedestrian, bicycle, and motorcycle safety initiatives and related law enforcement strategies, enforcement and justice services, speed management, aggressive driving countermeasures, emergency medical services, fatigue and inattention countermeasures, and data collection and analysis efforts. All of these efforts have produced a variety of scientifically sound data and results.

SAFETEA provides specific set-asides out of Section 403 funds for the National Motor Vehicle Crash Causation Survey, discussed earlier, and for EMS and international highway safety activities.

Finally, SAFETEA would provide $23.6 million for the National Driver Register (NDR). The NDR facilitates the exchange of driver licensing information on problem drivers among the States and various Federal agencies to aid in making decisions concerning driver licensing, driver improvement, and driver employment and transportation safety.

Mr. Chairman, NHTSA's portion of SAFETEA builds upon the principles, values, and achievements of ISTEA and TEA-21, yet recognizes that there are new challenges to address. We urge Congress to reauthorize the highway safety programs before they expire on September 30, 2003. I would be pleased to answer any questions.

I got this message from Presidential Messages -

They want to know have you review their messages - only for grammar and content or for the organization also. I assume it is only for grammar and content. But please let me know if that is different.

In a recent meeting with Staff Sec Office - I have been asked to find out "what is the process that our messages go through when we send to your office for White House Staff to review our messages and requests."

Does your office review content and grammar of our draft only?

Does your office review content and grammar of our draft AND check the organization requesting the message?

Please discuss these questions with your staff members that review our Presidential messages and let me know asap.

Thanks again for all your help! Please call me at 65503 if you have any questions.

 DRAFT – FOR STAFF DISCUSSION PURPOSES ONLY ***

FAIRNESS IN ASBESTOS INJURY RESOLUTION ACT OF 2003 ("FAIR ACT")

TITLE I. ASBESTOS CLAIMS RESOLUTION

Subtitle A. United States Court of Asbestos Claims

Sec. 101. Establishment of Asbestos Court.

Establishes the United States Court of Asbestos Claims, which consists of five (5) judges appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The President designates one Chief Judge, who is empowered to prescribe rules and regulations for the Court, appoint magistrates, appoint or contract for necessary court services and make necessary expenditures. Judges are paid the same as U.S. district court judges and may be removed by the President for good cause. The Court has its principal office in Washington, DC, but may hold court in other locations if deemed necessary. Magistrates will be individual finders of fact assigned to individual claims, and will be compensated at Level V on the Executive Schedule. Judges will receive the same retirements benefits and judges of the United States Court of Federal Claims.

Subtitle B. Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Procedures

Sec. 111. Filing of claims.

Claimants file claims with the United States Court of Asbestos Claims (the Court). The Court issues rules as to who may file as a representative of another individual. Claims must be notarized and give detailed information about the claimant, including their asbestos exposure, medical records, tobacco use, collateral sources of compensation and any other information that the Court elects to add. Claims must be brought within two (2) years from the time the defendants knew or should have known of their injury. Persons with pending claims in the tort system must file within two (2) years of the date of enactment. Claimants who develop an additional condition or disease may file for additional benefits.

Sec. 112. General rule concerning no-fault compensation.

Claimant need not establish that his/her injury resulted from the negligence or other fault of another person.

Sec. 113. Essential elements of eligible asbestos claim.

Claimants must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that they have an eligible disease or condition, and that they meet the latency and exposure criteria requirements.

Sec. 114. Eligibility determinations.

Claims are referred to magistrates within 20 days. Claims examiners then make the initial review for each claim under the magistrate's direction. Claims examiners will notify claimants if additional information is needed to determine eligibility, including requiring a medical exam and/or tests. Once a claim examiner has all the necessary information, the claim and a recommendation are sent to a magistrate who has 60 days after receipt of a completed claim to provide a written recommendation, including findings of facts. One judge of the Court will then either accept or reject the magistrate's recommendation within 30 days.

The Court will establish expedited procedures for exigent cases. Claimants must either waive their right to judicial review or have exhausted their judicial review to receive their award. The Court will establish audit procedures for reviewing the accuracy of the magistrates' recommendations.

Sec. 115. Medical evidence auditing procedures.

The Court will establish audit procedures for medical evidence submitted as part of claims to ensure accuracy of x-ray readings and pulmonary function tests. If the Court finds certain providers are not complying with prevailing medical practices, records from such providers will be deemed inadmissible for a claim. A provider who is deemed non-compliant may appeal such determination under procedures established by the Court.

Sec. 116. Claimant assistance program.

This section authorizes the Court to establish a legal assistance program to aid claimants in legal representation issues. As part of this program, the Court will maintain a list of attorneys who are willing to provide their services on a pro bono basis.

Subtitle C. Medical Criteria

Sec. 121. Essential Elements of Eligible Asbestos Claim.

To be eligible for compensation a claimant shall file in a timely manner, and prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the claimant suffers from an eligible disease as demonstrated by evidence that meets the diagnostic, medical and latency criteria requirements of this Act.

Sec. 122. Diagnostic Criteria Requirements.

Claimants must prove their diagnosis by having an in-person medical exam by a licensed physician who is treating or has treated the claimant and that reviews the claimant's work history, exposure pattern, smoking history and any other factors determined by the Court. Such exam must also exclude other more likely causes than asbestos for the claimant's condition. The claim must be accompanied by sufficient medical evidence such as the necessary medical tests and x-rays, including a B-reader's report. An attorney retention agreement shall not be required as a prerequisite to a medical examination or medical screening for purposes of obtaining a medical diagnosis or other medical information under this section.

Sec. 123. Latency Criteria Requirements.

Claimants must have been exposed within the United States territories or possessions and for at least 10 years before the initial diagnosis of any asbestos-related injury.

Sec. 124.~~Subtitle A. Asbestos~~ Medical Criteria Requirements.

The Manville Trust Distribution Process (2002) medical criteria are incorporated in this Act.

~~Commission~~

Sec. 125. ~~301. Establishment of Commission on Medical/Exposure/Latency~~ Criteria Requirements.

The exposure requirements from the 2002 Manville TDP are incorporated in this Act.

~~Same as Section 201 above, except that Commissioners here shall have sufficient medical expertise in the area of asbestos-related conditions and diseases.~~

~~Sec. 302. Duties of Medical Commission.~~

~~The Commission will review current medical criteria on asbestos-related injuries, including, but not limited to, the Manville TDP, the ABA Standards, the AMA Guide to Impairment (5th Ed.), criteria proposed by organized labor and any other criteria or input from interested parties the Commission deems appropriate. The Commission will then establish its own criteria and disease/condition categories to best determine who is an eligible claimant for an asbestos-related injury award or for medical monitoring.~~

~~Commission shall also determine diagnostic criteria requirements, including (a) whether claimants must prove their diagnosis by having an in-person medical exam by a licensed physician that reviews the claimant's work history, exposure pattern, smoking history and any other factors determined the Court, and (b) such exam must also exclude other more likely causes than asbestos for the claimant's condition. The Commission shall also determine whether the demonstration required must be accompanied by the necessary medical tests and x-rays, including a B-reader's report. The Court will prescribe rules to implement the requirements used in applying this section.~~

TITLE I. ASBESTOS CLAIMS RESOLUTION

Subtitle A. United States Court of Asbestos Claims

Sec. 101. Establishment of Asbestos Court.

Establishes the United States Court of Asbestos Claims, which consists of five (5) judges appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. The President designates one Chief Judge, who is empowered to prescribe rules and regulations for the Court, appoint magistrates, appoint or contract for necessary court services and make necessary expenditures. Judges are paid the same as U.S. district court judges and may be removed by the President for good cause. The Court has its principal office in Washington, DC, but may hold court in other locations if deemed necessary. Magistrates will be individual finders of fact assigned to individual claims, and will be compensated at Level V on the Executive Schedule. Judges will receive the same retirements benefits and judges of the United States Court of Federal Claims.

Subtitle B. Asbestos Injury Claims Resolution Procedures

Sec. 111. Filing of claims.

Claimants file claims with the United States Court of Asbestos Claims (the Court). The Court issues rules as to who may file as a representative of another individual. Claims must be notarized and give detailed information about the claimant, including their asbestos exposure, medical records, tobacco use, collateral sources of compensation and any other information that the Court elects to add. Claims must be brought within two (2) years from the time the defendants knew or should have known of their injury. Persons with pending claims in the tort system must file within two (2) years of the date of enactment. Claimants who develop an additional condition or disease may file for additional benefits.

Sec. 112. General rule concerning no-fault compensation.

Claimant need not establish that his/her injury resulted from the negligence or other fault of another person.

Sec. 113. Essential elements of eligible asbestos claim.

Claimants must prove by a preponderance of the evidence that they have an eligible disease or condition, and that they meet the latency and exposure criteria requirements.

Sec. 114. Eligibility determinations.

Claims are referred to magistrates within 20 days. Claims examiners then make the initial review for each claim under the magistrate's direction. Claims examiners will notify claimants if additional information is needed to determine eligibility, including requiring a medical exam and/or tests. Once a claim examiner has all the necessary information, the claim and a recommendation are sent to a magistrate who has 60 days after receipt of a completed claim to provide a written recommendation, including findings of facts. One judge of the Court will then either accept or reject the magistrate's recommendation within 30 days.

The Court will establish expedited procedures for exigent cases. Claimants must either waive their right to judicial review or have exhausted their judicial review to receive their award. The Court will establish audit procedures for reviewing the accuracy of the magistrates' recommendations.

Sec. 115. Medical evidence auditing procedures.

The Court will establish audit procedures for medical evidence submitted as part of claims to ensure accuracy of x-ray readings and pulmonary function tests. If the Court finds certain providers are not complying with prevailing medical practices, records from such providers will be deemed inadmissible for a claim. A provider who is deemed non-compliant may appeal such determination under procedures established by the Court.

Sec. 116. Claimant assistance program.

This section authorizes the Court to establish a legal assistance program to aid claimants in legal representation issues. As part of this program, the Court will maintain a list of attorneys who are willing to provide their services on a pro bono basis.

Subtitle C. Medical Criteria

Sec. 121. Essential Elements of Eligible Asbestos Claim.

To be eligible for compensation a claimant shall file in a timely manner, and prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the claimant suffers from an eligible disease as demonstrated by evidence that meets the diagnostic, medical and latency criteria requirements of this Act.

Sec. 122. Diagnostic Criteria Requirements.

Claimants must prove their diagnosis by having an in-person medical exam by a licensed physician who is treating or has treated the claimant and that reviews the claimant's work history, exposure pattern, smoking history and any other factors determined by the Court. Such exam must also exclude other more likely causes than asbestos for the claimant's condition. The claim must be accompanied by sufficient medical evidence such as the necessary medical tests and x-rays, including a B-reader's report. An attorney retention agreement shall not be required as a prerequisite to a medical examination or medical screening for purposes of obtaining a medical diagnosis or other medical information under this section.

Sec. 123. Latency Criteria Requirements.

Claimants must have been exposed within the United States territories or possessions and for at least 10 years before the initial diagnosis of any asbestos-related injury.

Sec. 124.~~Subtitle A. Asbestos~~ Medical Criteria Requirements.

The Manville Trust Distribution Process (2002) medical criteria are incorporated in this Act.

~~Commission~~

Sec. 125. ~~301. Establishment of Commission on Medical/Exposure/Latency~~ Criteria Requirements.

The exposure requirements from the 2002 Manville TDP are incorporated in this Act.

~~Sec. 302. Duties of Medical Commission.~~

~~The Commission will review current medical criteria on asbestos-related injuries, including, but not limited to, the Manville TDP, the ABA Standards, the AMA Guide to Impairment (5th Ed.), criteria proposed by organized labor and any other criteria or input from interested parties the Commission deems appropriate. The Commission will then establish its own criteria and disease/condition categories to best determine who is an eligible claimant for an asbestos-related injury award or for medical monitoring.~~

~~Commission shall also determine diagnostic criteria requirements, including (a) whether claimants must prove their diagnosis by having an in-person medical exam by a licensed physician that reviews the claimant's work history, exposure pattern, smoking history and any other factors determined the Court, and (b) such exam must also exclude other more likely causes than asbestos for the claimant's condition. The Commission shall also determine whether the demonstration required must be accompanied by the necessary medical tests and x-rays, including a B-reader's report. Identification of Defendant Participants: The Administrator shall identify defendants that have paid or been assessed through legal judgment or settlement, greater than $1 million in defense and indemnity costs relating to asbestos personal injury claims and these defendants shall be mandatory participants in the fund. The Administrator shall directly notify all reasonably identifiable defendant participants of the requirement to submit information necessary to calculate the amount of any required contribution to the Fund; and publish in the Federal Register a notice requiring any person who may be a defendant participant to submit such information.

Assessment of Defendant Participant Contributions: The Administrator shall further determine the amount that each defendant participant will be required to pay into the fund to compensate claimants for asbestos injuries based on the following formula:

provisions of this Act, provided that: (1) the bankruptcy court determines that confirmation is necessary to permit the reorganization of the company and assure that all creditors and the company are treated fairly and equitably; (2) an order confirming the plan of reorganization is entered by the bankruptcy court within nine months after the effective date of the Act, or such longer period approved by the bankruptcy court for good cause shown. Guaranteed Payment Surcharge: The Administrator shall impose on each mandatory participant an amount in addition to contributions a reasonable surcharge to insure against the risk of nonpayment of required contributions.

Periodic payments: Periodic payments are permitted as long as the annual obligation is met each year. Annual contribution amounts are expected to decline over time as claims are expected to decline.

Several Liability: Each defendant participant's obligation to contribute to the Fund is several. There is no joint liability and the future insolvency of any defendant participant shall not affect the assessment assigned to any other defendant participant.

Thanks. Charlie already directed me to this opinion, which then prompted me to have a follow-up call with him and, subsequently, my discussion with David and then you. I just wish the opinion were more clearly drafted. (The concurrence is better.) Sounds like you are on top of all of this, and I can come to you with my questions in the future!

RE: School Choice Update

DATE: May 20, 2003

The U.S. Supreme Court's decision yesterday to review the decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit in Davey v. Locke is very important news for the school choice movement. It raises squarely the issue we are confronting around the nation: does a state's Blaine Amendment that is interpreted to require discrimination against religious educational options violate the First Amendment?

Washington State discriminates in its postsecondary student aid programs against students studying for the ministry. The Ninth Circuit ruled 2-1 that the Blaine Amendment must give way to the First Amendment's requirement, and it struck down the discrimination. Although our side won, we submitted an amicus brief on behalf of IJ and the Center for Education Reform written by IJ attorney Dick Komer supporting Supreme Court review because the case raises important issues for school choice.

Prospects in the Supreme Court are uncertain. Usually the Court takes cases in order to reverse them, and it reverses the Ninth Circuit most often of all. But four justices wrote several years ago in Mitchell v. Helms that it was time to take on the legacy of bigotry embodied in the Blaine Amendments.

The group litigating the case is the American Center for Law and Justice, which has a good track record in the Supreme Court. However, ACLJ is focused on religious liberty, not school choice. So IJ will seek to play as central a role as possible in raising the Court's consciousness about the impact of the case on school choice.

A clear victory could wipe away the largest remaining legal obstacle to school choice. The Court could decide the case on some narrow grounds that would require further cases to resolve the larger issue. A loss would mean simply that we will have to litigate the Blaine Amendment issue state-by-state, as we have done in Wisconsin and Arizona, as we are currently doing in Florida, and as we soon will be doing in Colorado. Compounding the uncertainty is the possibility of some change in the composition of the Court before arguments this fall. Regardless, we will work aggressively to shift the odds in favor of a victory for school choice.

Meanwhile, we expect an imminent challenge to the Colorado program. Chip will head the litigation defense for IJ and is in Colorado now working with school choice activists and meeting with parents. We will be prepared to intervene as soon as the lawsuit is filed. Fortunately, the school choice team in Colorado is strong and well organized.

The second wave of litigation is growing intense. With luck, there will be many programs to defend--and the strength of the legal challenges will continue to diminish. Thanks as always for your support.

WH personnel generally does a political check on new hires for loyalty and other purposes. The question is whether they can check detailees who are detailed to the WHO. If so, the additional question is whether they should check detailees. I see no legal or policy reason that they should not check when they want to do so for people who would be filling political/administratively designated slots. Thoughts?

Linda and Colleen,
We are going to record a Medicare video for House and Senate members to use at Town Hall meetings during the Recess.; The video would highlight the President's commitment to Medicare reform.; Ordinarily, the organization requesting the video would pay the costs of producing the video.; The cost is $1,100.
At issue is the fact the we, the White House, are;requesting the video to distribute to any Member of Congress that wants it.; We are doing this because Medicare will be a priority issue in June on the Hill.; We need someone to authorize the costs associated with this request.; The video would be available to any Democrat or Republican House and/or Senate member to use.

Please let me know what else you might need to complete the necessary paperwork.; We will help complete the form if you will help authorize it.

In case you haven't already seen it, here is agreed language from BRT, NAM, and the Chamber on CEO tax signatures. They recognize it is late in the game, but wanted to put it in the mix. I assume they're shopping it with House and Senate leadership as well.

Tax Return

Mike, as you know, Section 332 of S. 1054, the Jobs and Growth Tax Act, requires the CEO to sign the principle tax return (Form 1120) or its equivalent. The sponsors of the provision believe that the filing of accurate tax returns is essential to the proper functioning of the tax system, and that requiring the chief executive officer (CEO) of a corporation to sign its corporate income tax return will elevate the level of care given to the preparation of those returns.

The BRT does not oppose Sec. 332. However, we do believe it can be improved significantly in a way that strengthens the objectives of the sponsors without hampering the ability of CEOs to manage their companies. Specifically, we urge retaining the present-law signature requirement while adding a new requirement that the CEO sign, under penalties of perjury, a declaration concerning the corporation's Federal income tax return, as described as follows:

CEO DECLARATION

Under penalties of perjury, I declare that as Chief Executive Officer I have taken steps to ensure that this return, including accompanying schedules and statements, complies with the Internal Revenue Code; to the best of my knowledge and belief, this return is true, correct, and complete; and the officer signing this return did so under no compulsion to adopt any tax position with which such officer did not agree.

[For info: An authorized officer would continue to sign the present jurat on the Form 1120 that reads as follows: Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this return, including accompanying schedules and statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, it is true, correct, and complete.]

This alternative has the support of the U.S. Chamber and the National Association of Manufacturers. Further the FEI tax committee put the two proposals to a vote last week (see attachment) and I am told that the declaration approach won by a comfortable margin.

Consistent with the Senate's goal of accurate tax returns, the proposed change would retain the present-law requirement that an authorized officer sign the return, under penalties of perjury, so that the corporation can authorize an officer to sign the return who has the necessary tax expertise and detailed information about the corporation. At the same time, the proposed change reflects the need to elevate the level of care given by the authorized signing officer and other corporate employees in preparing accurate tax returns by specifying involvement by the CEO in significant aspects of the return.

Whereas under present law the income tax return of a corporation must be signed by either the president, the vice-president, the treasurer, the assistant treasurer, the chief accounting officer, or any other officer of the corporation authorized by the corporation to sign the return, and whereas under Sec. 322 only the CEO is required to sign the principle return, under the proposed alternative accountability is improve by doing both. Further, this will improve accuracy because the chief tax officer is much more qualified to know what's in the tax return. The CEO's job is to run the company, not the tax department. The more time he/she spends examining and the tax return and its accompanying schedules, the less time he/she has to effectively run the company.

Thanks for considering this proposal.

To: FEI COT Members

From: Mark Prysock

Topic: Call for Vote on CEO Certification Issue

As Joe Luby mentioned in a memo you received yesterday, the Senate Finance Committee reported out their Jobs and Growth package last week. Section 332 of the bill contains the CEO certification requirement. However, the JCT report accompanying the bill contains a footnote which reads as follows:

> "Because the provision amends Section 6062, it applies only to the Form 1120 itself (or its equivalent) and any disclosures required under section 6662 or related provisions. It does not apply to any other schedules or attachments."

Assuming the Senate goes to conference with this report language intact, we must now decide how we will continue to work this issue with the House Ways and Means Committee and the conference committee. I ask each member of the COT to complete the accompanying ballot by expressing a preference for one of the two options discussed below. Please email or fax your reply to me by 3:00 pm on Wednesday, May 14th.

Option #1: FEI's COT will continue to advocate the position adopted by the JCT report, which calls for limiting the CEO signature requirement to one place on Form 1120.

Option #2: FEI's COT will urge the House Ways and Means Committee to require CEOs to sign a declaration on the face of Form 1120 stating that the CEO has taken steps to ensure that the return, including accompanying statements and schedules, complies with the Internal Revenue Code.

Please respond via fax or email no later than 3:00 pm on Wednesday, May 14th. As you would expect, this legislation has been fast-tracked, with Congressional leaders promising to have a final bill ready for the President by the Memorial Day recess.

(a)IN GENERAL.— Section 6062 (relating to signing of corporation returns) is amended by striking the first sentence and inserting the following new sentence: ''The annual Federal income tax return of a corporation required under section 6012(a)(2) ~~with respect to income~~ shall be signed by the chief executive officer of such corporation (or ~~other~~ such other officer of the corporation as the Secretary may designate if the corporation does not have a chief executive officer). Such other returns, statements or documents required to be made under any provision of the internal revenue laws or regulations shall be signed by the president, vice president, treasurer, assistant treasurer, chief accounting officer or any other officer duly authorized to so act." ~~The preceding sentence shall not apply to any return of a regulated investment company (within the meaning of section 851).''~~

(b)EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by this section shall apply to returns filed in the corporation's tax year beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

JOINT TAX EXPLANATION

Chief Executive Officer Required To Sign Corporate Income Tax Returns (sec. 722 of the bill and sec. 6062 of the Code)

Present Law

The Code requires that the annual Federal income tax return of a corporation must be signed by either the president, the vice-president, the treasurer, the assistant treasurer, the chief accounting officer, or any other officer of the corporation authorized by the corporation to sign the return.

The Code also imposes a criminal penalty on any person who willfully signs any tax return under penalties of perjury that that person does not believe to be true and correct with respect to every material matter at the time of filing. If convicted, the person is guilty of a felony; the Code imposes a fine of not more than $100,000 ($500,000 in the case of a corporation) or imprisonment of not more than three years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution.

Reasons for Change

The Committee believes that the filing of accurate Federal tax returns is essential to the proper functioning of the tax system. The Committee believes that requiring that the chief executive officer of a corporation sign its annual Federal corporate income tax returns will elevate the level of care given to the preparation of those returns.

Explanation of Provision

The bill requires that the chief executive officer of a corporation sign the corporation's annual Federal income tax return (i.e., Form 1120 of the corporation's income tax returns). If the corporation does not have a chief executive officer, the IRS may designate another officer of the corporation; otherwise, no other person is permitted to sign the income tax return of a corporation. The Committee intends that the IRS issue general guidance, such as a revenue procedure, to (1) address situations when a corporation does not have a chief executive officer, and (2) define who the chief executive officer is, in situations (for example) when the primary official bears a different title or when a corporation has multiple chief executive officers. The Committee intends that, in every instance, the highest ranking corporate officer (regardless of title) sign the tax return.

The provision does not apply to the income tax returns of mutual funds; they are required to be signed as under present law.

Effective Date

The provision is effective for returns filed in the corporation's tax year beginning after the date of enactment.

CEO DECLARATION

Under penalties of perjury, I declare that as Chief Executive Officer I have taken steps to ensure that this return, including accompanying schedules and statements, complies with the Internal Revenue Code; to the best of my knowledge and belief, this return is true, correct, and complete; and the officer signing this return did so under no compulsion to adopt any tax position with which such officer did not agree.

[For info: An authorized officer would continue to sign the present jurat on the Form 1120 that reads as follows:

Under penalties of perjury, I declare that I have examined this return, including accompanying schedules and statements, and to the best of my knowledge and belief, it is true, correct, and complete.]

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

(g) United States. - The term "United States" means the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Commonwealth of the Mariana Islands, the territories and possessions of the United States, the territorial sea of the United States, and the airspace above them.

SEC. 104 ADMINISTRATION

(a) Threshold Determination. -

(1) Upon the occurrence of a terrorist incident, the Secretary of State, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretaries of Defense, Homeland Security and the Treasury, shall promptly determine in writing whether an act of international terrorism as defined in section 103(a) of this Act has taken place. Any such determination shall be published in the Federal Register.

(2) The Secretary of State's determination under this section shall be final and conclusive, and it shall not be subject to review in any judicial, administrative or other proceeding.

(b) Adjudication and Payment. -- When a threshold determination set forth in subsection (a) is made, the Department shall have jurisdiction to receive, examine, adjudicate, and render final decisions, and pay awards with respect to claims filed under section 105 in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

SEC. 105 FILING OF CLAIMS

(b) Claim Form. –

(1) The Department shall develop a form that claimants shall use when submitting claims under subsection (a).

(2) The claim form at a minimum shall request -

(A) in the case of a claim filed for a death benefit with respect to a decedent, information demonstrating the decedent's death as a direct result of the act of international terrorism and information demonstrating that the claimant is eligible to recover under the Act;

international terrorism or information demonstrating the period the claimant was held hostage as a direct result of the act of international terrorism; and

(C) in the case of a claim filed by a parent or legal guardian, information demonstrating the claimant's status as a parent or legal guardian.

(3) The claim form shall state clearly and conspicuously the information contained in section 112(c) of this Act.

SEC. 106 ELIGIBILITY

(b) Eligible Individuals. -- An eligible individual is a victim who, as of the date on which the act of international terrorism occurred, (1) was a national of the United States; and (2)(A) died as the direct result of the act of international terrorism, (B) suffered physical injury as the direct result of the act of international terrorism, or (C) was held hostage as a direct result of an act of international terrorism and not solely for ransom.

(a) Death Benefit. -- In any case in which the Department determines, under regulations issued pursuant to this Act, that an eligible individual has died as the direct and proximate result of an act of international terrorism, the Department shall award a benefit to the survivor or survivors in the same manner and the same amount as death benefits are paid pursuant to the Public Safety Officers' Benefits Program under subpart 1 of part L of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796 et seq.).

(b) Injury or Hostage Benefit. -- In the event the claimant was physically injured or held hostage as a direct result of an act of international terrorism, the Department shall award a benefit to the claimant in an amount determined by the Department up to, but not to exceed, the amount provided for under the Thanks.

Is no one worried about the lack of provision for the fund running out of money? Brett, what do you think happens legally at that time?

Also, has anyone run this by OMB (Phil) to see if they have an opinion (this office now looks out for OMB more than ever!)

The House Judiciary approved with amendments H.R. 1115. Please advise if we should prepare a SAP on this bill. Several of you advised that we should issue a SAP on the Senate bill (S. 274) should that come to the floor. In response to that guidance, I prepared a rough draft based on the SAP that was issued in the 107th Congress on H.R. 2341, which is attached here. Also, please pass along any information you may have as to when and if the full House will take up HR1115.

House Panel Votes To Move Class Action Suits To Federal Court

By Michael Posner, CongressDaily

© National Journal Group Inc.

WASHINGTON (May 21, 2003) -- Overriding Democratic charges that the legislation is "outrageous," the House Judiciary Committee approved legislation Wednesday to move most national class action cases from state to federal courts.

Proponents of the legislation, backed by major business groups, said legislation is needed to correct abuses in class action cases where members of the class sometime get little more than coupons for product discounts and lawyers get hefty fees.

The bill (H.R. 1115) was approved on a 20-14 roll call [Vote 5] with Rep. Rick Boucher of Virginia, the only Democrat voting with 19 Republicans. Fourteen Democrats and no Republicans voted against the measure, which now goes to the full House. The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved a bill with the same purpose but which differs in many details.

"The problem of abusive state class action suits is now systemic," said committee Chairman James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis. "It is a threat to the integrity of our civil justice system and a drain on the national economy."

In the last decade, he said, state court class action filings nationwide have increased over 1,000 percent. He noted that in one case against the Blockbuster video chain over late fees a settlement was reached giving consumers a $1 discount coupon while lawyers received $9.2 million. In a case against Crayola, consumers received 75-cent discount coupons for crayons while lawyers received $600,000.

But Democratic critics charged the bill would erode the federalism system of federal and state court systems. It was "simply outrageous," charged Rep. William Delahunt, D-Mass. "This has to be the most egregious affront to federalism since my service on this committee," he said.

Many corporate defendants believe they could get better treatment in federal courts, but Rep. Melvin Watt, D-N.C., said there was no reason to believe defendants would get better deals in federal courts. The Judicial Conference, which handles administrative matters for federal courts, is against the proposed move to federal courts.

The bill would set up a so-called "consumer class action bill of rights" to create a fair system for rewarding and protecting consumers against high payments to lawyers and require that settlement information be written in plain English and other provisions.

But the heart of the bill is designed to move cases to federal court if the total amount of the award is $2 million or more. Now state courts get class action suits unless each of the members of the class seeks $75,000 or more in damages and every member of the class is from a different state from the defendant.

Nine Democratic amendments to change the bill were defeated. Two Republican amendments were approved.

Rep. Bob Goodlatte, R-Va., won on a voice vote an amendment supported by the Judicial Conference to make the plain English requirement conform with another federal plain English rule.

Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, won on a 21-9 roll call [Vote 2] a move to move some pending class action cases to federal courts, changing the bill's original language that would make the legislation effective only after the bill was signed by the president. Delahunt said this could be "a bailout" to big corporations, such as Enron, facing enraged consumers.

Democratic amendments defeated included:

-- A Rep. Bobby Scott, D-Va., amendment to strike a provision of the bill banning paying extra bounties to some members of a class on a 12-20 roll call [Vote 3].

-- A move by Rep. Jerrold Nadler, D-N.Y., to open up sealed settlement cases to the public, on a 7-20 roll call [Vote 1].

-- A proposal by Rep. Sheila Jackson Lee, D-Texas, to prevent corporations from avoiding U.S. court action by getting foreigners to buy the companies, on a 13-20 roll call [Vote 4].

-- A Scott move to keep some consolidated cases in state courts, by a voice vote.

-- An attempt by Scott to have some parts of class action suits remanded to state courts, by a voice vote.

-- A Rep. Linda Sanchez, D-Calif., amendment to permit some cases brought by citizens in California to stay in state courts, by a voice vote.

-- A Scott plan to prevent delays in class action cases when there are appeals, by a voice vote.

-- A Watt amendment to restrict people who can move cases to federal courts, on a voice vote.

-- A Watt amendment that changed procedures for moving cases to federal courts, by voice vote.

DRAFT - Not for Release

May xx, 2003
(Senate)

S. 274 - Class Action Fairness Act of 2003
(Sen. Grassley (R) Iowa and 18 cosponsors)

The Administration [strongly] supports the enactment of S. 274 as an important step in reforming class action litigation. The Administration supports the proposal to establish a consumer class action bill of rights that would: (1) require notice of a lawsuit to class members in "plain English"; (2) require judicial review of settlements that give class members only "coupons" or other non-cash benefits; and (3) prohibit a court from approving a settlement that discriminates among plaintiffs on account of their geographical location or status as class representatives.

The bill also would make long-needed changes to the requirements for Federal diversity jurisdiction over class action cases. The Administration [strongly] supports the proposal to permit removal to Federal court of a class action if the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $5 million and there is minimal diversity (at least one plaintiff representative and one defendant are from different States). Combined with existing Federal rules for consolidation of related Federal cases, this proposal would help avoid the inefficiency, waste, and unfairness that has too often resulted from multiple overlapping class action suits.

[The Administration would support adding, at the appropriate point in the legislative process, a provision to Section 7 of the bill to make clear that the authority of the Supreme Court under Section 2072, 2074 or 2075 of Title 28 of the U.S. Code to issue certain rules that supersede conflicting laws cannot be used to supersede this legislation and amendments made by this legislation.] The Administration would also support adding a provision that would grant courts of appeals jurisdiction of appeals from orders of the U.S. district courts granting or denying class certification under rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, if notice of appeal is filed within ten days after entry of the order.

However, the Administration does not support the provisions in the bill that would exempt from Federal jurisdiction class actions that solely involve claims related to certain securities or to the governance of a corporation that arises under the laws of the State in which the corporation is incorporated. The Administration would support that type of carve-out if it applied, as in other pending legislation, only to cases brought by shareholders.

STATEMENT

OF

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL
OFFICE OF LEGAL POLICY

BEFORE THE

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

CONCERNING

H.R. 1115, THE "CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003"

PRESENTED ON

REV_00167485

MAY 15, 2003

TESTIMONY OF VIET D. DINH,
ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL, OFFICE OF LEGAL POLICY,
BEFORE THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE
OF THE UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
ON THE "CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003."

May 15, 2003

Mr. Chairman, it is a pleasure for me to be here this morning to present the views of the Department of Justice on H.R. 1115, the "Class Action Fairness Act of 2003." The Department of Justice supports this bill, which is nearly identical to H.R. 2341 passed by the House of Representatives in the 107th Congress, also with our strong support. Mr. Chairman, we appreciate your leadership on this important legislation, and the leadership of the bill's bi-partisan group of sponsors.

Let me emphasize at the outset that the problem is not the class action device itself. If that were the case, then we could simply repeal Rule 23 and all go home. Everyone recognizes that class actions can serve a very important goal. As one former Solicitor General has stated, "their true purpose is noble – to vindicate the rights of large groups of individuals who sought justice for civil rights violations and other wrongs, but who could not achieve such justice individually."

Class action abuses, however, have taken a toll on our legal system. All too often, class actions represent a lawyer's rush to the courthouse in order to select the most favorable State forum before duplicative actions purporting to represent the same victims with the same claims are filed in other States. In essence, it becomes a race to the courthouse for the attorneys to see who among them can file and then settle his or her case the fastest and thereby collect attorney's fees. The losers in this race are the victims who often gain little or nothing through the settlement, yet are bound by it in perpetuity.

As explained by committees of the Judicial Conference, overlapping and duplicative class actions in federal and state courts threaten the resolution and settlement of such actions on terms that are fair to victims, burden both plaintiffs and defendants with the expenses of multiple litigation of the same issues, and place conscientious class counsel at a potential disadvantage. Certainly we can all agree that consumers such as Bank of Boston account holders do not benefit when plaintiffs are each awarded $8.76, but then each must pay $90 to the attorneys who purportedly brought the action on their behalf. The goal of class action reform, then, must be to stop the abuses which have frustrated the class action device's noble purpose.

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2003 contains three distinct, but necessary components: (1) a "Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights" which addresses the administration of class actions in Federal courts; (2) expanded federal diversity jurisdiction to ensure that class actions with national implications can be heard in federal courts; and (3) expedited appellate review of decisions whether to certify a class. I would like to briefly address each in turn.

Consumer Class Action Bill of Rights

Section 3 of H.R. 1115, entitled the "Class Action Bill of Rights and Improved Procedures for Interstate Class Actions," would establish long needed protections for victims whose rights are often adjudicated by lawyers not of their choosing in fora with which they have no connection, and where settlements are, in practical effect, imposed on them. Too often victims receive notices of class action settlement proposals that are too confusing to provide any meaningful information about the proposed settlement. This section appropriately would guard against settlements that were unreasonable or even harmful to individual class members by providing for thorough review by the courts. To ensure that class members receive adequate information, this section would require settlement notices be in plain English and in a standardized, easy-to-read format.

Federal Court Jurisdiction for National Class Actions

In addition to the problem of duplicative class actions being filed in numerous states, certain local courthouses have become known for the ease with which they certify class actions. The threat of large awards arising out of class actions filed in these jurisdictions coerces defendants to agree to disproportionately high settlement amounts. Often, these tiny jurisdictions are the first to adjudicate a class action claim and impose their laws on class members from other States and on those States themselves, where similar actions may be pending. Such interstate litigation is exactly why the Founders created diversity jurisdiction: to provide a Federal forum preventing bias against out-of-State defendants and out-of-State plaintiffs.

H.R. 1115 would close the gap in diversity jurisdiction that has resulted from the interpretation and application of diversity and jurisdictional amount requirements in the unique class action world. The bill would prevent attorneys from avoiding removal through artful pleading that eliminates full diversity or minimizes the claimed damages of the individual class members – actions that fail to serve the victims and prejudice the defendants. Specifically, sections 4 and 5 of H.R.1115 provide much needed amendments to Federal diversity jurisdiction by relaxing the "complete diversity" rule. The Act would permit, but not require, removal by any class member and any defendant, so long as there is "minimal diversity," the aggregate amount in controversy exceeds $2 million, and the lawsuit is not primarily intra-state in nature.

Importantly, H.R. 1115 also contains an anti-circumvention measure. Section 4 provides that – regardless of the label placed on a lawsuit by the State court – an action will be "deemed" a class action if: (1) the named plaintiff (exclusive of a State attorney general) purports to act for the interests of its members who are not named parties to the action; or (2) the monetary relief claims of 100 or more other persons are proposed to be tried jointly in the action on the grounds the claims involve common questions of law or fact. This definition would appropriately encompass "private attorney general suits" in which an individual seeks to recover on behalf of the general public, as well as "mass actions" brought on behalf of plaintiffs who claim that their suits present common questions of law or fact that should be resolved in a single proceeding.

The Department fully supports these changes to Federal diversity jurisdiction and removal procedures, which recognize the Federal interest in significant class action litigation that truly involves multiple interstate plaintiffs and defendants. In addition, providing for consistent and uniform Federal adjudication of these claims will protect each State and its citizens from other State courts' legal rulings from which there is no recourse.

Prior witnesses before this committee have described the multi-billion dollar judgment awarded in Madison County, Illinois against State Farm Insurance for repairing automobiles with "aftermarket parts" as distinguished from original manufacturers' parts. That decision applied Illinois law to plaintiffs in all 50 states, even though such a ruling was contrary to state insurance regulations in New York, Massachusetts, and Hawaii among other places. The State Farm case is not an isolated example. Right now, for instance, we are following with interest a case in Oklahoma where a nationwide class has been certified against DaimlerChrylser Corporation. The Oklahoma courts plan to apply Michigan law to adjudicate, on behalf of residents of all 50 states, claims that Chrysler should not have installed certain airbags that comply with federal safety standards.

Expansion of Federal diversity jurisdiction, of course, will shift some state class actions to the Federal courts. However, Federal courts have significant interests in cases that involve interstate commerce and parties from many States, and federal adjudication avoids costly and inefficient duplication in State courts. The Constitution's provision for diversity jurisdiction was intended to prevent just the sort of local biases that have resulted from State court class actions that often award higher settlements to in-State victims and award excessive damages against out-of-State defendants. The unique circumstances of class actions, a modern phenomenon, have outstripped the original conception of 28 U.S.C. § 1332, when that provision was initially enacted.

Interlocutory Appeal of Class Certification Decision

Because a district court's decision whether to certify a class often is decisive — a decision to certify may place insurmountable pressure on the defendant to settle, while a refusal to certify may force the plaintiffs to abandon their claims — the bill permits immediate appeal of certification decisions as a matter of right. Immediate appeals of certification decisions can be crucial to efficient management of class actions, preventing the nightmare situation where parties engage in years of expensive litigation under a ruling on the class certification, only to have the appeals court reverse the class certification determination. Contrary to concerns voiced about previous legislative proposals, H.R. 1115 would not encourage or permit the destruction of documents or other evidence during the appeal of the certification decision. On the contrary, discovery would be stayed under this section unless the court finds that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice.

Conclusion

In sum, H.R. 1115 is an important step in returning common sense to the nation's class action system and providing greater protections for the victims the system originally was designed to benefit. The bill would update diversity jurisdiction appropriately to account for class action litigation, while permitting State court actions to proceed in cases where no party sought removal and in specified circumstances such as where the class is relatively small or where the primary plaintiffs and defendants are within the State. Thus, State courts would be able to offer redress and provide a convenient forum for their citizens, while Federal courts would provide a forum for truly interstate class actions.

Thank you for this opportunity to present our views. We greatly appreciate your efforts in support of meaningful class action reform. I would be pleased to answer any questions that the Committee may have on this subject.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

March 6, 2003

Mr. GOODLATTE (for himself, Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, Mr. MORAN of Virginia, Mr. SMITH of Texas, Mr. STENHOLM, Mr. DELAY, Mr. DOOLEY of California, Mr. HYDE, Mr. HOLDEN, Mr. COX, and Mr. CRAMER) introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary

A BILL

To amend the procedures that apply to consideration of interstate class actions to assure fairer outcomes for class members and defendants, to outlaw certain practices that provide inadequate settlements for class members, to assure that attorneys do not receive a disproportionate amount of settlements at the expense of class members, to provide for clearer and simpler information in class action settlement notices, to assure prompt consideration of interstate class actions, to amend title 28, United States Code, to allow the application of the principles of Federal diversity jurisdiction to interstate class actions, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE- This Act may be cited as the `Class Action Fairness Act of 2003'.
(b) REFERENCE- Whenever in this Act reference is made to an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 28, United States Code.

(c) TABLE OF CONTENTS- The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; reference; table of contents.
Sec. 2. Findings and purposes.
Sec. 3. Consumer class action bill of rights and improved procedures for interstate class actions.
Sec. 4. Federal district court jurisdiction of interstate class actions.
Sec. 5. Removal of interstate class actions to Federal district court.
Sec. 6. Appeals of class action certification orders.
Sec. 7. Effective date.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS- The Congress finds as follows:

(1) Class action lawsuits are an important and valuable part of our legal system when they permit the fair and efficient resolution of legitimate claims of numerous parties by allowing the claims to be aggregated into a single action against a defendant that has allegedly caused harm.

(2) Over the past decade, there have been abuses of the class action device that have--

(A) harmed class members with legitimate claims and defendants that have acted responsibly;

(B) adversely affected interstate commerce; and

(C) undermined public respect for the judicial system in the United States.

(3) Class members have been harmed by a number of actions taken by plaintiffs' lawyers, which provide little or no benefit to class members as a whole, including--

(A) plaintiffs' lawyers receiving large fees, while class members are left with coupons or other awards of little or no value;

(B) unjustified rewards being made to certain plaintiffs at the expense of other class members; and

(C) the publication of confusing notices that prevent class members from being able to fully understand and effectively exercise their rights.

(4) Through the use of artful pleading, plaintiffs are able to avoid litigating class actions in Federal court, forcing businesses and other organizations to defend interstate class action lawsuits in county and State courts where--

(A) the lawyers, rather than the claimants, are likely to receive the maximum benefit;

(B) less scrutiny may be given to the merits of the case; and

(C) defendants are effectively forced into settlements, in order to avoid the possibility of huge judgments that could destabilize their companies.

(5) These abuses undermine the Federal judicial system, the free flow of interstate commerce, and the intent of the framers of the Constitution in creating diversity jurisdiction, in that county and State courts are--

(A) handling interstate class actions that affect parties from many States;

(B) sometimes acting in ways that demonstrate bias against out-of-State defendants; and

(C) making judgments that impose their view of the law on other States and bind the rights of the residents of those States.

(6) Abusive interstate class actions have harmed society as a whole by forcing innocent parties to settle cases rather than risk a huge judgment by a local jury, thereby costing consumers billions of dollars in increased costs to pay for forced settlements and excessive judgments.

(b) PURPOSES- The purposes of this Act are--

(1) to assure fair and prompt recoveries for class members with legitimate claims;

(2) to protect responsible companies and other institutions against interstate class actions in State courts;

(3) to restore the intent of the framers of the Constitution by providing for Federal court consideration of interstate class actions; and

(4) to benefit society by encouraging innovation and lowering consumer prices.

SEC. 3. CONSUMER CLASS ACTION BILL OF RIGHTS AND IMPROVED PROCEDURES FOR INTERSTATE CLASS ACTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL- Part V is amended by inserting after chapter 113 the following:

`CHAPTER 114--CLASS ACTIONS

`Sec.
`1711. Judicial scrutiny of coupon and other noncash settlements.
`1712. Protection against loss by class members.
`1713. Protection against discrimination based on geographic location.
`1714. Prohibition on the payment of bounties.
`1715. Clearer and simpler settlement information.
`1716. Definitions.

`Sec. 1711. Judicial scrutiny of coupon and other noncash settlements

`The court may approve a proposed settlement under which the class members would receive noncash benefits or would otherwise be required to expend funds in order to obtain part or all of the proposed benefits only after a hearing to determine whether, and making a written finding that, the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate for class members.

`Sec. 1712. Protection against loss by class members

`The court may approve a proposed settlement under which any class member is obligated to pay sums to class counsel that would result in a net loss to the class member only if the court makes a written finding that nonmonetary benefits to the class member outweigh the monetary loss.

`Sec. 1713. Protection against discrimination based on geographic location

`The court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of greater sums to some class members than to others solely on the basis that the class members to whom the greater sums are to be paid are located in closer geographic proximity to the court.

`Sec. 1714. Prohibition on the payment of bounties

`(a) IN GENERAL- The court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of a greater share of the award to a class representative serving on behalf of a class, on the basis of the formula for distribution to all other class members, than that awarded to the other class members.
`(b) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION- The limitation in subsection (a) shall not be construed to prohibit any payment approved by the court for reasonable time or costs that a person was required to expend in fulfilling his or her obligations as a class representative.

`Sec. 1715. Clearer and simpler settlement information

`(a) PLAIN ENGLISH REQUIREMENTS- Any court with jurisdiction over a plaintiff class action shall require that any written notice concerning a proposed settlement of the class action provided to the class through the mail or publication in printed media contain--

`(1) at the beginning of such notice, a statement in 18-point Times New Roman type or other functionally similar type, stating `LEGAL NOTICE: YOU ARE A PLAINTIFF IN A CLASS ACTION LAWSUIT AND YOUR LEGAL RIGHTS ARE AFFECTED BY THE SETTLEMENT DESCRIBED IN THIS NOTICE.'; and
`(2) a short summary written in plain, easily understood language, describing--

`(A) the subject matter of the class action;
`(B) the members of the class;
`(C) the legal consequences of being a member of the class;
`(D) if the notice is informing class members of a proposed settlement agreement--

`(i) the benefits that will accrue to the class due to the settlement;

`(ii) the rights that class members will lose or waive through the settlement;
`(iii) obligations that will be imposed on the defendants by the settlement;
`(iv) the dollar amount of any attorney's fee class counsel will be seeking, or if not possible, a good faith estimate of the dollar amount of any attorney's fee class counsel will be seeking; and `(v) an explanation of how any attorney's fee will be calculated and funded; and

`(E) any other material matter.

`(b) TABULAR FORMAT- Any court with jurisdiction over a plaintiff class action shall require that the information described in subsection (a)--

`(1) be placed in a conspicuous and prominent location on the notice;
`(2) contain clear and concise headings for each item of information; and
`(3) provide a clear and concise form for stating each item of information required to be disclosed under each heading.

`(c) TELEVISION OR RADIO NOTICE- Any notice provided through television or radio (including transmissions by cable or satellite) to inform the class members in a class action of the right of each member to be excluded from the class action or a proposed settlement of the class action, if such right exists, shall, in plain, easily understood language--

`(1) describe the persons who may potentially become class members in the class action; and
`(2) explain that the failure of a class member to exercise his or her right to be excluded from a class action will result in the person's inclusion in the class action or settlement.

`Sec. 1716. Definitions

`(B) Nothing in subparagraph (A) shall prohibit plaintiffs from filing an amended class action in Federal court or filing an action in State court, except that any such action filed in State court may be removed to the appropriate district court if it is an action of which the district courts of the United States have original jurisdiction.

`(C) In any action that is dismissed under this paragraph and is filed by any of the original named plaintiffs therein in the same State court venue in which the dismissed action was originally filed, the limitations periods on all reasserted claims shall be deemed tolled for the period during which the dismissed class action was pending. The Honorable Orrin G. Hatch

Chairman

Senate Committee on the Judiciary

224 Dirksen Senate Office Building

Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I would like to applaud you for the leadership you have provided in the Senate Judiciary Committee on the issue of asbestos litigation reform. I know you feel very strongly Congress must address this issue this year, for a variety of reasons. I sympathize with many of your concerns, and with the legitimate concerns of businesses that have been unfairly tagged with growing asbestos liabilities. None of us have any desire to see companies wrongly forced into bankruptcy over this issue. At the same time, I don't believe any of us wish to deny the true victims of asbestos their right to fair compensation for their injuries. This is particularly true of my constituents in Libby, Montana.

That is why I am writing to you today, because I would like to outline for you some of my grave concerns with your draft asbestos bill - the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 (FAIR Act) that you circulated on Monday, May 19.

First, Section 124 of your draft bill, the Medical Criteria Requirements, would exclude the vast majority of current and future Libby claimants. Except for those persons who have mesothelioma, your criteria would require evidence of both 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos prior to December 31, 1982 and significant occupational exposure, which you define as cumulative employment for a period of at least 5 years in an asbestos industry.

Mr. Chairman, a large number of persons in Libby who have become sick, or will become sick, from their exposure to asbestos never had any occupational exposure to asbestos. Many of them are or were the children of W.R. Grace workers, who inhaled the asbestos fibers brought home in the dust on their father's clothes. Let me quote for you a section of the March 4 letter from Dr. Brad Black, Medical Director of the Center for Asbestos Related Disease in Libby, that was included in the record of your March 5 hearing on asbestos:

In the last 18 months I have observed the diagnosis of five mesotheliomas, with three individuals already having died. Four of these individuals (nurse, office receptionist, forest service administrator and a non-resident who traveled to Libby for basic services) were exposed to tremolite [asbestos] simply by living and working in Libby. Another gentleman who lived near a vermiculite processing facility in the residential area of Libby died from progressive pleural fibrosis. His spouse has advanced asbestos-related disease. A significant number of residents who were exposed environmentally are experiencing advancing lung disease, some of whom require supplemental oxygen. Based on past observations with chrysotile [asbestos] exposure, one would not expect non-occupationally exposed individuals to develop such extensive asbestos-related disease.

Dr. Brad Black, Letter to Senator Baucus, March 4, 2003.

On top of the above concern, Mr. Chairman, I would point out that the medical science of diagnosing and identifying categories of asbestos-related disease in Libby is still developing, particularly as concerns the differences between what is traditionally known as asbestosis or pleural disease, and what manifests itself as debilitating pleural disease in Libby. This further concerns me because the compensation amount for "Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B" is only $40,000.

Second, I am concerned about the apparent life-span of the trust created by your draft bill, which appears to be about 25 years - at least that's the length of time insurers and defendant companies are required to contribute the trust. The Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, part of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, has documented up to a 47-year latency period for the onset of asbestos-related disease resulting from exposure to asbestos in and around Libby, Montana.

Mr. Chairman, W.R. Grace was still operating in the early 1990's, releasing asbestos fibers into the air; asbestos could and still can be found in sites all around Libby; the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has stated that there is no known "safe" threshold level of exposure to asbestos. We don't know how much exposure leads to illness, particularly in Libby, where it is clear that the tremolite asbestos and other fibers released by W.R. Grace's vermiculite operations were particularly virulent and deadly. That means, Mr. Chairman, some of my constituents, particularly those exposed as children, could become very sick after the trust has expired or after it has run out of money - currently, your bill contains no mechanism to ensure that the trust will remain viable over the long-term.

Third, I am concerned about the collateral source requirements in your draft bill. Section 134 would require a reduction in the amount paid to an asbestos victim by the amount of any collateral source payments he or she has received, or is entitled to receive, for their asbestos-related injury. Mr. Chairman, one of the main points of an asbestos trust or other compensation mechanism, is to fairly compensate victims for their injuries that were caused by others. In addition, I have read about your concerns that the taxpayer should not bear any liability for this trust fund, or for the payment of asbestos claims in general. The FAIR Act's collateral source requirements could have exactly this undesired effect.

Elected officials in Lincoln County, Montana, are concerned that the cost of treating the W.R. Grace workers alone threatens to bankrupt the State of Montana's Medicaid program. Everyone is concerned about the impacts of asbestos-related health care costs in Libby on area businesses. If a person is "entitled" to Medicaid payments for necessary health care, does that mean any amounts he or she may be eligible for under the FAIR Act will be reduced accordingly, thus shifting all or a part of the burden to the State and Federal taxpayer of treating this worker's illness? Even though workers, current and former residents of Libby, their families and area businesses will suffer increased health insurance premiums, or eventually be denied health insurance, as a result of the health care crisis in Libby caused by W.R. Grace's operations, an individual's payments from the proposed trust would be reduced by the amount of any insurance payments he or she may receive, or be entitled to receive?

For my constituents in Libby, this section threatens to swallow the whole. It is particularly offensive given the almost criminal nature of W.R. Grace's actions in Libby and that company's clear and obvious responsibility to make that town and its people whole again.

And finally, Mr. Chairman, I am very troubled by the appearance that the draft FAIR Act will not hold W.R. Grace fully accountable for its actions in Libby. At the same time, the people of Libby will struggle to receive any compensation under the terms of the FAIR Act.

If I read you draft legislation correctly, W.R. Grace will be required to pay into the trust fund created by your bill only 1.45333% of their 2002 revenues for years 1 through 5, with that amount declining over the next 20 years out to year 25. This is a paltry amount. Even on revenues of $1 billion, that would mean a company like W.R. Grace would only have to contribute approximately $1.45 million per year in years 1-5. Over the life of the trust, such a company would contribute far less than $25 million, based on $1 billion in 2002 revenues. This does not even come close to compensating the people in Libby for their past, current and future injuries and long-term health care needs, let alone approximate a fair contribution from a company like W.R. Grace to a national trust. On its face, this is an unacceptable outcome.

Mr. Chairman, these are just a few of my concerns about the FAIR Act as they relate to my constituents in Libby, Montana. I know others have expressed similar concerns about how the bill would treat sick people in general. If I am incorrect in my assessment of any aspect of the FAIR Act, please let me know. I hope that you will continue to work with me and others to address some of the serious concerns that we have with your draft legislation. Again, I thank-you for your leadership on this issue, and I look forward to working with you in the near future.

Sincerely,

Max Baucus

Many of them are or were the children of W.R. Grace workers, who inhaled the asbestos fibers brought home in the dust on their father's clothes. Let me quote for you a section of the March 4 letter from Dr. Brad Black, Medical Director of the Center for Asbestos Related Disease in Libby, that was included in the record of your March 5 hearing on asbestos:

In the last 18 months I have observed the diagnosis of five mesotheliomas, with three individuals already having died. Four of these individuals (nurse, office receptionist, forest service administrator and a non-resident who traveled to Libby for basic services) were exposed to tremolite [asbestos] simply by living and working in Libby. Another gentleman who lived near a vermiculite processing facility in the residential area of Libby died from progressive pleural fibrosis. His spouse has advanced asbestos-related disease. A significant number of residents who were exposed environmentally are experiencing advancing lung disease, some of whom require supplemental oxygen. Based on past observations with chrysotile [asbestos] exposure, one would not expect non-occupationally exposed individuals to develop such extensive asbestos-related disease.

Dr. Brad Black, Letter to Senator Baucus, March 4, 2003.

On top of the above concern, Mr. Chairman, I would point out that the medical science of diagnosing and identifying categories of asbestos-related disease in Libby is still developing, particularly as concerns the differences between what is traditionally known as asbestosis or pleural disease, and what manifests itself as debilitating pleural disease in Libby. This further concerns me because the compensation amount for "Asbestosis/Pleural Disease B" is only $40,000.

Second, I am concerned about the apparent life-span of the trust created by your draft bill, which appears to be about 25 years - at least that's the length of time insurers and defendant companies are required to contribute the trust. The Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, part of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, has documented up to a 47-year latency period for the onset of asbestos-related disease resulting from exposure to asbestos in and around Libby, Montana.

Mr. Chairman, W.R. Grace was still operating in the early 1990's, releasing asbestos fibers into the air; asbestos could and still can be found in sites all around Libby; the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has stated that there is no known "safe" threshold level of exposure to asbestos. We don't know how much exposure leads to illness, particularly in Libby, where it is clear that the tremolite asbestos and other fibers released by W.R. Grace's vermiculite operations were particularly virulent and deadly. That means, Mr. Chairman, some of my constituents, particularly those exposed as children, could become very sick after the trust has expired or after it has run out of money - currently, your bill contains no mechanism to ensure that the trust will remain viable over the long-term.

Third, I am concerned about the collateral source requirements in your draft bill. Section 134 would require a reduction in the amount paid to an asbestos victim by the amount of any collateral source payments he or she has received, or is entitled to receive, for their asbestos-related injury. Mr. Chairman, one of the main points of an asbestos trust or other compensation mechanism, is to fairly compensate victims for their injuries that were caused by others. In addition, I have read about your concerns that the taxpayer should not bear any liability for this trust fund, or for the payment of asbestos claims in general. The FAIR Act's collateral source requirements could have exactly this undesired effect.

Elected officials in Lincoln County, Montana, are concerned that the cost of treating the W.R. Grace workers alone threatens to bankrupt the State of Mon tana's Medicaid program. Everyone is concerned about the impacts of asbestos-related health care costs in Libby on area businesses. If a person is "entitled" to Medicaid payments for necessary health care, does that mean any amounts he or she may be eligible for under the FAIR Act will be reduced accordingly, thus shifting all or a part of the burden to the State and Federal taxpayer of treating this worker's illness? Even though workers, current and former residents of Libby, their families and area businesses will suffer increased health insurance premiums, or eventually be denied health insurance, as a result of the health care crisis in Libby caused by W.R. Grace's operations, an individual's payments from the proposed trust would be reduced by the amount of any insurance payments he or she may receive, or be entitled to receive?

For my constituents in Libby, this section threatens to swallow the whole. It is particularly offensive given the almost criminal nature of W.R. Grace's actions in Libby and that company's clear and obvious responsibility to make that town and its people whole again.

And finally, Mr. Chairman, I am very troubled by the appearance that the draft FAIR Act will not hold W.R. Grace fully accountable for its actions in Libby. At the same time, the people of Libby will struggle to receive any compensation under the terms of the FAIR Act.

If I read you draft legislation correctly, W.R. Grace will be required to pay into the trust fund created by your bill only 1.45333% of their 2002 revenues for years 1 through 5, with that amount declining over the next 20 years out to year 25. This is a paltry amount. Even on revenues of $1 billion, that would mean a company like W.R. Grace would only have to contribute approximately $1.45 million per year in years 1-5. Over the life of the trust, such a company would contribute far less than $25 million, based on $1 billion in 2002 revenues. This does not even come close to compensating the people in Libby for their past, current and future injuries and long-term health care needs, let alone approximate a fair contribution from a company like W.R. Grace to a national trust. On its face, this is an unacceptable outcome.

Mr. Chairman, these are just a few of my concerns about the FAIR Act as they relate to my constituents in Libby, Montana. I know others have expressed similar concerns about how the bill would treat sick people in general. If I am incorrect in my assessment of any aspect of the FAIR Act, please let me know. I hope that you will continue to work with me and others to address some of the serious concerns that we have with your draft legislation. Again, I thank-you for your leadership on this issue, and I look forward to working with you in the near future.

Sincerely ,

Max Baucus

The Yale Law School Association of DC has monthly events. I was a guest speaker at one about judges. It actually was originally scheduled for someone else's house on Cap Hill but was snowed out. Then it was re-scheduled for the next month and that month's event was at the house of her and her husband. (She used to be on board of YLSA of DC so hosts them now and then). Why?

The Honorable Orrin G. Hatch

Chairman

Senate Committee on the Judiciary

224 Dirksen Senate Office Building

Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I would like to applaud you for the leadership you have provided in the Senate Judiciary Committee on the issue of asbestos litigation reform. I know you feel very strongly Congress must address this issue this year, for a variety of reasons. I sympathize with many of your concerns, and with the legitimate concerns of businesses that have been unfairly tagged with growing asbestos liabilities. None of us have any desire to see companies wrongly forced into bankruptcy over this issue. At the same time, I don't believe any of us wish to deny the true victims of asbestos their right to fair compensation for their injuries. This is particularly true of my constituents in Libby, Montana.

That is why I am writing to you today, because I would like to outline for you some of my grave concerns with your draft asbestos bill - the Fairness in Asbestos Injury Resolution Act of 2003 (FAIR Act) that you circulated on Monday, May 19.

First, Section 124 of your draft bill, the Medical Criteria Requirements, would exclude the vast majority of current and future Libby claimants. Except for those persons who have mesothelioma, your criteria would require evidence of both 6 months of occupational exposure to asbestos prior to December 31, 1982 and significant occupational exposure, which you define as cumulative employment for a period of at least 5 years in an asbestos industry.

Mr. Chairman, a large number of persons in Libby who have become sick, or will become sick, from their exposure to asbestos never had any occupational exposure to asbestos. Many of them are or were the children of W.R. Grace workers, who inhaled the asbestos fibers brought home in the dust on their father's clothes. Let me quote for you a section of the March 4 letter from Dr. Brad Black, Medical Director of the Center for Asbestos Related Disease in Libby, that was included in the record of your March 5 hearing on asbestos:

As of today, we have responses for 145 of the 169 Questions for the Record (QFR) received from the Transportation, Treasury Subcommittee. Below is information on the coordination process, the coordination schedule, assigned functional responsibilities and hearing record references. The complete package is due to Congress on May 30th. It is imperative that we get the package to Congress on time because the bill markup will take place shortly thereafter.

A. Coordination Process - Please review the attached file entitled "QFR Responses 1" which contains the latest update of responses for the FY 2004 QFRs. If we have not received a response from the POC, the QFR will be highlighted in yellow in the "QFR Responses 1" document. As the missing responses come in, we will send them to you in a separate email. Make all edits within the document using a RED font. We need all edited documents to be sent electronically. Make sure to note in your reply the QFR number that has been edited for quick reference. We will assume that you approve/concur with all answers where you have not made edits. After your review, please reply to this message with an "X" in one of the selections listed below:

C. Functional/POC Accountablitity - Several of the QFRs requested factual information in functional areas such as personnel, accounting, space, etc. The following Chart of Accountablity identifies the OA offices and individuals that are responsible for ensuring that these areas are checked for accuracy and consistency throughout the document.

D. Hearing Record References - Several of the FY 2004 QFRs refer to the FY 2003 Hearing Record. Attached is a document called "Hearing Record References" which will assist you while reviewing the FY 2004 responses.

HOW TO USE THIS DOCUMENT

Several of the FY 2004 questions for the record refer to pages from last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. Below is the FY 2003 hearing record information.

Note that the Question # refers to this year's (FY 2004) question and the information that follows is what was in last year's (FY 2003) hearing record.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 6:

Issue: Executive Office of the President

Question: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2001 (actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimates).

Answer: The following tables provide the total FY 2001 actual, FY 2002 and FY 2003 estimates for full time equivalents (FTE) and other government employees (OGE) for each EOP and other entity as of April 5, 2002. The OGE numbers are itemized by category on the following page. The FY 2001 actual numbers should be viewed in the context of a Presidential transition year and may vary greatly from the FY 2002 figures. The FY 2002 and FY 2003 numbers are estimates only and therefore subject to change for a number of reasons.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 16:

Question: Provide an organizational chart for the OHS.

REV_00167558

REV_00167559

Hearing Record Reference for question 17:

Question: The President's request includes $1,337,000 for travel and transportation of persons, an increase of $976,000 from the estimated level of $361,000 in FY 2002. For FY 2002 and 2003 (estimates), provide a list of trips by location and purpose, including the number of staff traveling and staff position.

Answer: The FY 2002 travel and transportation of persons estimate and FY 2003 budget request provides funding for the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and staff travel, Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) activities and advisory board activities. Specific locations for FY 2003 are currently unavailable due to the fact that they are determined as requirements are finalized. FY 2002 and FY 2003 anticipated travel activities are in furtherance of the OHS mission promulgated in the Executive Orders.

Examples of FY 2003 estimated travel requirements include: per diem and travel for two-thirds of Advisory Board members to attend approximately 40 various meetings and activities; approximately 50 domestic trips for the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and 3 staff members to fulfill outreach requirements; approximately 100 domestic trips for Homeland Security staff to fulfill mission functions as outlined in Executive Order 13228; approximately 24 domestic and 3 overseas trips for the Chair, Vice Chair and one staff member of the CIPB to fulfill outreach requirements as stated in Executive Order 13231; and approximately 12 CIPB staff (director level) trips to outreach the private sector. Of course, these are estimates only and are therefore subject to change for a variety of reasons.

FY 2002 travel expenses incurred to date include trips to Mexico and Canada for border discussions and various locations in the United States to visit first response, bioterrorism research facilities and other initiatives related to homeland security. The following table lists current (as of April 10, 2002) FY 2002 travel expenses as reflected in the accounting system.

Trip Cost Note: Estimated costs of trips will vary greatly from trip to trip to the same city and from one city to another city for four significant reasons; mode of transportation used/authorized, number of days TDY, number of personnel on trip, and whether costs recorded are actual or estimated expenses.

Issue: White House Communications Agency

Question: For FY 2001 and 2002 (estimates) itemize the reimbursements made to the WH Communications Agency.

Question: For FY 2003, what are the estimated reimbursements to the WH Communications Agency?

Answers to previous two questions: Reimbursements made to WHCA, for the non-telecommunications support they provide to the WHO, is broken down into two categories: personnel and audio visual support. The amount of planned reimbursement is initially set and agreed to via an inter-agency agreement (IAG). This IAG is then adjusted if needed as a result of actual execution. Reimbursement actuals and estimates follow:

	FY01 (actual)	FY02 (est.)	FY03 (est.)
Military Personnel	$3,946,779	$4,564,085	$4,754,346
Audiovisual Support	$3,514,528	$3,589.242	$3,953,848

Hearing Record Reference for Question 64:

Issue: Office of Administration

Question: Provide an organization chart for the Office of Administration, including the numbers of FTE in each office.

Answer: The Office of Administration organization chart provided below reflects the current streamlined organizational structure where the number of operating units reporting to the Director was reduced from 10 to 4. The FY 2003 FTE request includes an increase of 20 FTE over FY 2002 authorized levels. All additional FTEs support the ongoing requirements stemming from the events of September 11 including IT and facility support for dispersed offices, additional logistics responsibilities for the receipt and delivery of mail, and financial management support for the Office of Homeland Security (+7 Chief Operating Officer, +10 Chief Information Officer, +1 Chief Projects Officer, +2 Chief Financial Officer).

Hearing Record Reference for Question 72:

Issue: White House Office

Question: Provide a brief description of the duties and responsibilities of each office (e.g. Chief of Staff, Oval Office Operations, Office of the Press Secretary, Office of Homeland Security, etc.) within the appropriations account "White House Office". By office, provide obligations, FTE and OGE for FY 2001(actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimated). Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc.).

Answer: The purpose of the White House Office is to provide advice and assistance to the President of the United States. This requires a range of professional and support staff. The White House Office is currently divided into the following major units:

Office of the Chief of Staff – Provides advice and assistance to the President and directs the activities of the White House staff.

Oval Office Operations – Provides assistance to the President by, among other things, managing the operations of the Oval Office.

REV_00167575

Advance – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by taking responsibility for the organization and implementation of the President and the First Lady's visits outside of the White House complex.

Cabinet Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the President's Cabinet and agency heads.

Communications, Speechwriting, and Media Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and supporting efforts to communicate and explain the President's views and decisions.

Office of Counsel to the President – Provides advice and assistance to the President and White House staff, principally on matters of law.

Faith-Based and Community Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and implementing the President's initiative to empower community and faith-based organizations to better confront poverty and social decay.

Office of the First Lady – Provides advice and assistance to Mrs. Bush in carrying out her official responsibilities as the First Lady.

Homeland Security – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by developing, coordinating, and advising the President on a comprehensive national strategy to secure the United States from terrorist threats or attacks and, in particular, by coordinating the Executive Branch's efforts to detect, prepare for, prevent, protect against, respond to, and recover from terrorist attacks within the United States. It has no operational role.

Intergovernmental Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by monitoring the views of State and local elected officials and serving as a liaison between the White House and the Executive Branch, on the one hand, and State and local governments, on the other.

Legislative Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the Congress and developing the strategy used to promote and defend the President's legislative agenda.

Management and Administration – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing day-to-day administrative support to the White House staff.

Presidential Personnel – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by recruiting, screening, and recommending to the President qualified candidates for Presidential appointments to Federal departments and agencies.

Scheduling – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by coordinating the planning, organization, and implementation of the President's daily and long-range schedules.

Office of the Staff Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, managing documents or other items addressed to the President, including correspondence and gifts.

Strategic Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating the planning and development of a long-range strategy for achieving Presidential priorities; conducting research; and assisting in message development and other communications activities in conjunction with the Office of Public Liaison and the Office of Political Affairs.

USA Freedom Corps – Provides advice and assistance to the President on matters relating to enlisting Americans in public service at home and abroad; in particular, it provides advice and support on the work of, and recognizes participants in, three service efforts – the newly created Citizen Corps, AmeriCorps and Senior Corps, and the Peace Corps.

In addition to these major units, certain individuals – including certain individuals who work with the National Security Council, the Domestic Policy Council, and the National Economic Council – are also White House Office officers or employees, although the units within which they principally work are not themselves part of the White House Office.

The major units within the White House Office are administratively designated by the President's Chief of Staff and the number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. Therefore, a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit is not particularly meaningful. White House Office obligations, FTE and OGE are summarized below. The Office of Homeland Security is funded under the emergency supplemental this fiscal year, and therefore, the FY 2002 numbers below do not include OHS personnel or funding. FY 2002 estimates for the OHS are addressed separately in response to other committee questions.

FY 2003 includes the 95 OGEs for the Office of Homeland Security requested in the FY 2003 Budget Request.

* FY 2002 obligations for the Office of Homeland Security are funded under the Emergency Supplemental Appropriation

It should be noted that a single budget is prepared for the WHO. This single budget is prepared based on a number of criteria such as: prior spending patterns, estimated requirements, OMB provided inflation factors, and the priorities of the President. During a given execution year, personnel costs are allocated based upon that year's sometimes unique staffing decisions. The remainder of the budget is allocated initially to two WHO offices. The travel budget is allocated in its entirety to Scheduling and Advance and obligated against this office if the travel is done in support of the President. Any travel undertaken that is not in support of a Presidential trip is charged to the office of the staff member in question. The remaining portion of the non-personnel, non-travel budget, including expenses for rent, supplies, equipment and other services is considered overhead and charged as such to the White House Office of Management and Administration.

The only exceptions are the Office of Homeland Security and the USA Freedom Corps Office. Since these are new offices requiring new budget authority, all new obligations (including travel and overhead) anticipated as a result of these offices are reflected in the FY 2003 estimates for these offices.

Hearing Record Reference for question 73:

Question: Referencing the FTE/OGE tables that break-out personnel classifications by type of OGE, please explain why the number of "historically provided" employees decreased so significantly (from 25 to 1) for the Vice President's office between FY2001 and FY2002. Please provide the Subcommittee your definition of each OGE category listed on the table (agency reps, assignees, detailees, HP services, others, student volunteers, WH fellows, PMI). Please also provide a listing of the 15 "historically provided" White House Office positions identified on the FY2002 chart, the White House Office to which these positions are assigned, and the agency that pays the salary of each of the 15 positions.

Answer: The difference in the number of "Historically Provided" employees in the Vice President's Office from FY 2001 to FY 2002 is due to the redesignation of U.S. Senate employees. In FY 2001, the previous administration designated U.S. Senate employees in the Vice President's office as "Historically Provided". This was done in error and it has since been corrected. For FY 2002 and FY 2003, U. S. Senate employees are more accurately designated as "Other" since they do not fit into any other OGE category.

The following chart shows the 15 "Historically Provided" White House Office positions, the associated office and the agency that pays their salaries.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 79:

Question: How many political appointees are currently employed within the Executive Office of the President?

Answer: The term "political appointees" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2 of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President has the following number of political appointees directly hired

Questions for the Record
Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

QUESTION 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

QUESTION 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

RESPONSE: As presented in the Congressional Budget Submission pages 4, 5, and 6, the Executive Office of the President (EOP) has established a Budget Activity structure that is consistent, beginning with the budget submission and extending through the accounting and reporting phases. The EOP accounting system will track and report obligations and expenditures consistent with this structure through the use of budget activity, program, sub-program, and line item codes assigned to each transaction. EOP has the ability to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk to the individual transactions authorized under sections 105 and 106 of Title 3 of the United States Code.

QUESTION 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

RESPONSE: The following appropriations in Public Law 108-7: Compensation of the President, White House Office Salaries and Expenses, Office of Homeland Security, Executive Residence at the White House, White House Repair and Restoration, Council of Economic Advisers, Office of Policy Development, National Security Council, Office of Administration would be combined into one appropriation entitled "The White House". The individual language in Public Law 108-7 for each of those appropriations would be removed. However, suggested language for the combined appropriation is provided in the Appendix to the FY 2004 Budget (page 881) and states: "For the Compensation of the President and White House Office (including the Office of Homeland Security), Executive Residence, White House Repair and Restoration, Office of Policy and Development, Office of Administration, Council of Economic Advisers and the National Security Council, (hereinafter, and solely for the purposes of Title VI of this Act, "the White House"), $183,770,000, of which $24,803,000 shall remain available until expended, including compensation for the President, including an expense allowance of $50,000 as authorized by U.S.C. 102; for travel expense of $100,000 as authorized by 3 U.S.C. 103; for necessary expenses for the White House as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109 and 3 U.S.C. 105; for the necessary expenses of the Executive Residence at the White House as authorized by 3 U.S.C. 105,109,110, and 112-114; for the necessary expenses of the Offices and Councils in the White House account as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109, 15 U.S.C. 1021, and 3 U.S.C. 105 and 107 (including not to exceed $19,000 for official reception and representation expenses); and for the hire of passenger motor vehicles: Provide, That none of the funds made available to the President for official expenses shall be expended for any other purpose and any unused portion of such funds shall revert to the Treasury pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 1552: Provided further, That no such funds shall be considered as taxable to the President: Provided further, That advances or repayments or transfers from this appropriation may be made to any department or agency for expenses of carrying out such activities."

The suggested language, with the exception of a consolidated appropriation amount incorporates the same restrictions and clarifications as contained the language contained in the Public Law 108-7 for the appropriations being consolidated. The appropriations for Vice President's Salaries and Expense, Vice President's Residence Operating Expenses, Office of Management and Budget, Office of National Drug Control Policy, Unanticipated Needs will remain separate appropriations and will therefore not require any language changes as a result of the combination.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 White House (WH) consolidated budget net increase of $5,292,000 for communications is required in three major areas:

- Most of the increase ($4,420,000) is needed in the OA Capital Investment Plan for offsite data center communications. This facility will transition into full operation during FY 2004. The telecommunications between the offsite data center and the EOP complex are necessary to provide expanded, survivable and redundant connectivity, continuity of operations, disaster recovery and system support. These costs include funds for telecommunications lines, two additional

DS-3 data paths, two T-1 lines, and backups to provide the communications bandwidth necessary for servicing the EOP complex.

- $482,000 in the White House Office budget to provide a custom communications package which will enable the Homeland Security Council to establish a presence for its staff within the White House Situation Room.

- $100,000 for information assurance in the OA salaries/expenses budget. In addition to the Offsite Data Center project, the OA FY 2004 budget also includes a request for an additional $100,000 for the information assurance program in the FY 2004 salaries/expenses account. This program will enable the CIO office to correct vulnerabilities in the EOP information security perimeter to secure internal systems, to perform real-time monitoring of perimeter network devices.

- $151,000 in transfers of Lexis-Nexis database costs from nonconsolidated agencies to the consolidated White House appropriation. The FY 2004 budget envisions that $72,000 will be transferred from USTR, $56,000 from ONDCP, $15,000 from OMB, and $8,000 from CEQ so that the EOP can have a single funding source for EOP-wide Lexis-Nexis service.

- $139,000 for adjustments to maintain the same level of services for the base funding during FY 2004. This is calculated on the basis of the $7,010,000 in FY 2003 funding.

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an "EOP average" rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

RESPONSE: The EOP space rental project began during the summer of 2002 at the request of OMB's budget examiners, who were working to ensure that EOP agencies moved to the same market-based rent methodology used to determine space rental rates for GSA's other Federal properties. OMB requested that GSA and EOP review the space rental costs for each EOP property and each EOP agency so that the most up-to-date costs available were included in the FY 2004 budget proposal. Another significant concern in this project is to ensure that GSA will work with the EOP to ensure that the critical needs of the EOP are funded and executed.

As a result of the initial project, OA and GSA began a series of meetings which culminated in the space estimates which were included in the budget. GSA staff prepared a comprehensive listing of EOP properties, which itemized the space occupied by each

EOP entity. This listing included commercial and government-owned space, current estimates of rentable square footage, and the annual rental rate per square foot. EOP staff provided updated estimates of the rentable square footage.

During this process, GSA blended the fair-market rates for the permanent EOP buildings into a single blended rate. This was done to simplify the administrative work when EOP staff are relocated. This is especially needed in the post-9/11 environment's unusually high number of large-scale EOP agency relocations driven by security considerations as well as the result of the legislation creating the Department of Homeland Security. The EOP average rental rate for Federally-owned properties (New Executive Office Building (NEOB), Eisenhower Executive Office Building (OEOB), White House, Winder Building, Jackson Place) is $29.60 annually per square foot. GSA adds an additional building security charge for buildings which are not protected by the US Secret Service. The average rental rates used to determine each EOP entity's budget estimate for office space are as follows:

EOP Entity	Locations	Owned or Leased	Average Rental Rate
OMB	EEOB, NEOB	owned	$29.60/sf

QUESTION 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: The following tables provide the total FY 2002 actual, FY 2003 and FY 2004, estimates for full time equivalents (FTE) and other government employees (OGE) for each EOP and other entity as of May 5, 2003. The OGE numbers are itemized by category on the following page. The FY 2003 numbers have the Office of Homeland Security in a separate category, which accordingly decreased the White House numbers. The FY 2003 and FY 2004 numbers are estimates only and are therefore subject to change.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

QUESTION 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

RESPONSE: An object class breakdown of estimated HSC costs in FY 2003 and FY 2004 is provided in the table below. Please note that the FY 2003 estimate covers only costs incurred after the enactment of the FY 2003 appropriation on February 20, 2003. Unlike other EOP entities which operated under continuing resolutions between October 1, 2003 and February 20, 2003, the Office of Homeland Security was not permitted to utilize the CR funding mechanism but instead continued to charge FY 2003 expenses against the no-year emergency funding (provided in FY2002) until the FY 2003 appropriation was enacted. Therefore the FY 2003 estimate reflects only seven months of activity, whereas the FY 2004 Request needs to cover HSC expenses for the full 12 months next fiscal year.

	FY 2003 Appropriation	FY 2003 Estimate*	FY 2004 Request	2004 Request - 2003 Estimate
Homeland Security Council:
Personnel	$4,403	$2,800	$5,550	$2,750
Travel	$300	$60	$588	$528
Transportation of Things	$24	$24	$10	-$14
Rent	$0	$0	$200	$200
Communications, Utilities, and Misc.	$209	$50	$1,080	$1,030
Printing and Reproduction	$69	$69	$50	-$19
Other Services	$3,267	$1,267	$528	-$739
Supplies and Materials	$0		$175	$175
Equipment	$0	$50	$150	$100
Subtotal	$8,272	$4,320	$8,331	$4,011

* FY 2003 Estimate covers only seven months vs. FY 2004 Request covering full 12 months

QUESTION 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

RESPONSE: In FY 2004 HSC is requesting $528,000 for Other Services compared with $3,267,000 appropriated for the same category in FY 2003. The decrease is due to reduced requirements of the ongoing missions of the Office of Homeland Security after start-up costs and emergency requirements were met with larger budgets in FY 2002 and FY 2003. Anticipated contractual needs in FY 2004 include maintenance, upgrades, and technical support for the classified computer network that will be extended to HSC staff in FY 2003.

QUESTION 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

REV_00167597

RESPONSE: HSC is requesting resources to support 40 direct hire FTE and 26 Other Government Employees on its staff to fill the 66 positions HSC is projecting for FY 2004.

Office of Homeland Security / Homeland Security Council Personnel

	FY 2002 Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Request
Direct Hire FTE	0	20	40
Other Government Employees (EOY headcount)	89	26	26
Total Personnel	89	46	66

QUESTION 12: How many positions in the office are filled today, and how many are vacant?

RESPONSE: As of May 15, 2003, 51 positions are filled and 15 are vacant.

QUESTION 13: Please provide a table comparing the number of detailees to OHS, by federal agency, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004 (estimated).

QUESTION 18: Currently, OHS costs are included in both the WHO and OA appropriations. Is that also the case in the FY 2004 request? If so, please provide a table, by appropriation, showing total OHS budgeted costs, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: For FY 2003, although funds were requested as part of the WHO budget activity, the Office of Homeland Security received for the first time its own appropriation, separate from the WHO appropriation. Funds supporting OHS / HSC requirements in FY 2003 were provided also to OA as part of the OA Pilot program. The FY 2004 Request identifies all requirements for OHS / HSC in the WHO Budget Activity, since the OA Pilot program was not guaranteed to continue after FY 2003. See table below:

REV_00167619

(Dollars in Thousands)

	Congressional Budgets
	FY 2002* Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Estimate
OHS / HSC	$30,800	$8,272	$8,331
OA		$783
	$30,800	$9,055	$8,331

*FY 2002 budget for OHS was based on the OHS mission and funding profile prior to the establishment of DHS and was provided by 3 sources of emergency appropriated funds: P.L. 107-38 for $25,000,000; P.L.107-117 for $2,000,000; and P.L. 107-206 for $3,800,000.

QUESTION 19: Last year, it was stated that one MOU existed between OHS and other EOP entities (p. 51). Please provide a copy of the MOU between MOU and the Office of Science and Technology Policy.

RESPONSE: The MOU between OHS and OSTP expired with the creation of the Department of Homeland Security as relevant responsibilities transferred from OHS to DHS, pursuant to the Homeland Security Act of November, 2002.

QUESTION 20: Have any other MOUs been signed since that time?

RESPONSE: An MOU between the Homeland Security Council and the National Security Council was signed in May, 2003 providing for the expansion of NSC's classified computer network to include approved HSC staff with necessary security clearances.

In addition standard interagency agreements were signed between OHS/HSC and the Office of Administration (OA) and OMB to pay for detailees from these EOP agencies to OHS/HSC and separately between OHS/HSC and OA to pay for miscellaneous supplies and materials.

QUESTION 21: At this time last year, OHS planned to establish a coordination center which would function 24 hours a day, 7 days a week; a communications room; and two incident management rooms. At the same time, the Administration made clear that the role of OHS was to establish and coordinate policy, and not to conduct operational activities. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, have these specific activities been descoped or eliminated?

RESPONSE: The role of the Homeland Security Council is to provide confidential policy advice to the President and coordinate policy across the departments and agencies of the executive branch. The Homeland Security Council does not conduct operational activities. The Homeland Security Council does not operate a coordination center. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, DHS is the lead federal agency for incident management. As such, DHS operates a Homeland Security Center with 24 hour/7 days per week coordination and communications capabilities. Those functions do not reside in the Homeland Security Council.

QUESTION 22: How many positions support these activities in the FY 2004 request, and what is the total budgeted amount?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 budget will not fund any personnel or activities related to a coordination center.

QUESTION 23: How are such activities appropriate for a policymaking body, when DHS now exists to coordinate and execute operational activities related to specific homeland security incidents and activities?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council does not operate a coordination center. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, DHS is the lead federal agency for incident management. As such, DHS operates a Homeland Security Center with 24 hour/7 days per week coordination and communications capabilities. Those functions do not reside in the Homeland Security Council.

QUESTION 24: At the time of last year's hearing, the permanent location and amount of space for the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board had not been determined (p. 77). Have these requirements been determined today?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 25: Likewise, total CIPB staffing had not been determined. Do you have an estimate today? What staffing assumptions were made in the FY 2004 budget submission?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

REV_00167621

QUESTION 26: How much funding is included in the FY 2004 request for CIPB, and how does that compare to the current estimate for FY 2003?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 27: Please provide a breakdown showing how those funds would be used.

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 28: Please provide details on any government-industry partnerships that have been created in support of cyber security initiatives coordinated by, or carried out, through EOP or the CIPB.

RESPONSE: In 2002, the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board developed a National Strategy to Secure Cyberspace. To encourage broader participation and input into the development process, a draft strategy was released for public comment in September 2002. The final strategy was released in February 2003. The PCIPB requested the National Infrastructure Assurance Council and the National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee to both provide comments on the draft strategy. In addition, there were 10 town hall meetings held in various portions of the country which brought industry, academia and private citizens together to focus on the complex issues related to cyber security.

The National Strategy to Secure Cyberspace emphasizes that government-industry partnerships will be a cornerstone. As the primary implementer of the Strategy, DHS will be a partner with industry and academia to accomplish the objectives identified by the President's strategy.

National Security Council (POC – Katherine Fertakis)

QUESTION 29: Your request includes a 10.8 percent increase to cover reimbursable detailee costs and additional support staff for the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please explain the need for these increases in detail.

REV_00167622

RESPONSE: The requested increase covers reimbursable detailee costs of personnel from the Department of State. The National Security Council (NSC) may request detailed personnel performing at a high level in high priority positions to remain beyond their initial tour of duty because of their unique qualifications. Public Law 93-126, Section 11, requires the NSC to reimburse the Department of State for details to the NSC that exceed the cap of 13 detailed into their second year and for all staff detailed longer than two years. The FY 2003 increase in this category estimates for details becoming reimbursable during the Spring and the Summer. The FY 2004 increase represents an annualization of the expenses, minus the cost for the details that will not be renewed.

Since the events of September 11, 2001, the PFIAB support staff workload has been significantly increased and consumed by the homeland security effort. Thus far about 95% of the Board's current advisory work for the President has been directly related to homeland security and counter-terrorism. (Intelligence performance thereon, and support to the new department of homeland security) With only 4 staff members and an already overflowing Board work schedule, work on other important PFIAB priorities has been deferred—such as declassification review of PFIAB archived records. At least three additional staff members, including a GS-14 administrative manager, will be needed to adequately meet support requirements as the Board expands its review of intelligence support to homeland security beyond the more immediate structural and organizational issues, and also re-engages the more general intelligence performance issues across the full spectrum of pressing issues. The FY 2004 request includes $250,000 which will fund two reimbursable detailed staff members and one permanent, Schedule A, Excepted Service, GS-14 administrative management position.

QUESTION 30: What are the dollar and percentage increases for each of the above items, compared to the FY 2003 estimated levels?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 request for reimbursable detailees represents an increase of $356,000, or 64%, over the FY 2003 estimated levels. The PFIAB increase of $250,000 will be 100% above the FY 2003 request since this is a new requirement for FY 2004.

QUESTION 31: The justifications indicate that 11 additional positions are being added to this office in FY 2003, raising the estimated from 60 in FY 2002 to an estimated 71 in FY 2003. What specific positions are being created?

RESPONSE: The 11 additional positions, which raise NSC's FTE from 60 to 71, are not new positions. In FY 2003, the Office for Combating Terrorism (OCT) was combined with the NSC budget request. The increased FTE request correlates with the continued funding for and operation of the OCT as a part of the NSC submission.

QUESTION 32: The FY 2004 request includes funds for a new GS-14 administrative manager for the PFIAB. Why is this new position needed at this time?

REV_00167623

RESPONSE: PFIAB requires a permanent administrative position for continuity as well as efficiency reasons. The administrative staff constitutes the lifeblood of the Board: it fulfills all of the support responsibilities, including human resource management, budget, travel, procurement, research, publishing, protocol, and special assistance to the Executive Director, Chair and Vice Chair. With only two administrative people on staff, it is absolutely critical that both individuals be fully knowledgeable about and highly experienced at White House administrative policies, procedures and guidelines; equally important, both must possess highly honed administrative skills and be extremely efficient, effective and professionally dedicated.

The Board simply cannot attain this level of experience and competence by relying on detailees from other agencies, particularly non-reimbursed detailees. More often than not, we must accept whomever an agency can make available. Therefore, the Board will use this one permanent administrative billet to create a PFIAB office manager position. This individual not only will provide continuity of expertise and experience, but also will ensure that the other administrative person obtains the proper professional mentoring and supervision. We plan to make this a GS-14 position, but may start the individual we select at the GS-13 level to allow for personal advancement...and thereby also ensuring, hopefully, a fairly long term of service to the Board.

Office of National Drug Control Policy (POC – Michelle Marx)

QUESTION 33: You are requesting 10 additional FTE in FY 2004 to replace 10 non-reimbursable detailees who are no longer available. Why are these positions no longer available, and what are the specific positions?

RESPONSE: ONDCP's FY 2004 request includes resources to support 125 FTEs, an increase of 10 FTEs over the FY 2003 request. This FTE increase is requested to offset the loss of approximately 20 - 25 of the 30 non-reimbursable military detailee positions the Department of Defense has supported at ONDCP since 1996. (The Department of Defense, as outlined in a December 28, 2001 memorandum, adheres to a general policy that approves of requests for details only on a reimbursable basis. Exceptions to this policy are granted only in the most compelling circumstances when the agency head has certified that the net benefit of the detail accrues to the Department of Defense.)

This 10 FTE increase, along with distributing additional responsibilities among existing staff, will allow ONDCP to absorb the detailee staffing loss and meet its statutory responsibilities. The specific positions would be appointed within the following offices: Planning and Budget; State and Local Affairs; Intelligence; and Supply Reduction.

Renovation of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (POC – Steve Beattie)

QUESTION 34: What is the status of funding provided in FY 2002 and 2003? Please provide a breakdown of funding by the type of activity or renovation performed.

REV_00167624

RESPONSE: 34: The General Service Administration has used FY 2002 Emergency Response Funds in the amount of $1,674,000 for starting the Architects' and Engineers' design contract for the 17th Street Wing Security Modernization Project. GSA is currently in the process of reprogramming $7,500,000 for FY 2003 for design, management and inspection. The FY 2003 reprogramming is required to complete the Design/Build/Bridging documents and assist in managing the Design/Build/Bridging efforts.

QUESTION 35: How much remains unobligated, by appropriation?

RESPONSE: 35: The General Services Administration (GSA) awarded a portion of the design cost in the amount of $1,537,173 utilizing the FY 2002 Emergency Response Fund. $136,827 remains unobligated. GSA has not obligated any FY 2003 funding.

QUESTION 36: Please provide a detailed breakdown showing how funds requested in the GSA budget for FY 2004 would be used.

RESPONSE: 36: The following is a break down on how the funds will be used in FY 2004:

Major Work Items:
Electrical System	$ 10,244,000
Air conditioning system, chillers and piping	$ 12,530,000
Interior Construction	$ 13,163,000

Estimated Construction Cost (ECC)	$ 63,531,000

QUESTION 37: Please provide a detailed schedule for activities planned in FY 2004.

RESPONSE: 37: The design/build/bridging contract is scheduled to be awarded in March 2004. The current schedule for the project is as follows:

Design Award:	04/03
A/E Bridging Documents Complete:	10/03

QUESTION 38: How much are you currently paying GSA for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB, and how much rental cost are you incurring for the new locations where relocated employees are working?

RESPONSE: We are paying $0 for FY2003 for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB. GSA is not charging the EOP for the space vacated in September 2001. See Attachment A for the rental cost being incurred for the new locations where relocated employees are working.

Pennsylvania Avenue Improvements (POC – Steve Beattie)

QUESTION 44: What is the total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, for which funds were provided in FY 2003?

RESPONSE: This project is to be funded by the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA). The total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House is currently $26.1 million. The information below breaks out the estimated FY 2003 costs for the project.

Preliminary Activities
Verification and Concept Studies	$ 605,150
Design Activities
Ground Survey and Mapping	$ 57,524
Subsurface Utility Survey	$ 149,682
Environmental Documentation	$ 75,000
Final Design (Consultant)	$ 1,300,000
Crash Testing	$ 350,000
FHWA Contract Administration	$ 100,000
Design Contingency	$ 262,644
Construction Activities
Construction Contract	$ 18,500,000
Utility Construction	$ 1,500,000
FHWA Contract Administration	$ 1,700,000
MVVA Construction Assistance	$ 500,000
Construction Contingency	$ 1,000,000
Grand Totals	$26,100,000

QUESTION 45: What is the status of that project? When will FY 2003 funds be obligated?

RESPONSE: 45: The status of the security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue is as follows -

- Project's status is an ongoing iterative process as the Design team receives comments from the public and the various stakeholders on surrounding sites.
- Under the National Environmental Policy Act, the final public information meeting for the Environmental Impact Assessment was held on May 5, 2003, which is the last step before the final report is issued the week of May 27, 2003. It is expected that the report's concluding statement will find no significant impact.

- The design team is in the pre-design stage.
- The engineers are currently in the design stage for utility relocation in the project's vicinity.
- The Section 106 review as required by the Secretary of the Interior under the Historic Preservation Act is underway and will develop a Memorandum of Agreement in June 2003, which will address issues regarding the design details. The Section 106 review occurs when a project utilizing federal funds may have an effect upon natural, environmental, or cultural resources and looks at mitigation of any adverse effects to those resources.
- $1.5 million is expected to be obligated at the end of August or early September 2003 to start the utility relocation on Pennsylvania Avenue and at the north ends of Jackson and Madison Places.
- Arrangements have already been made for procurement of the trees to be used on the Avenue since it will require root and limb pruning over two calendar years prior to installation on the Avenue. The trees will be installed after inaugural events in the spring of 2005.
- Approximately, $2,675,000 has been obligated to date (under contract). The remaining $3,685,000 will be obligated within the next six months to have the construction contract awarded by the end of September or early October 2003.

QUESTION 46: How much funding is requested for this project in FY 2004, and where is it located in the budget?

RESPONSE: $15 million has been set aside under the Department of the Interior bill for FY 2004. However, discussions have been held between the Federal Highway Administration and the Office of Policy Development in the Executive Office of the President to make the money available for contract award this fiscal year. Discussions have included placing FY 2004 monies into the FY 2003 supplemental appropriation. With the highway legislation pending, there could be a delay in getting the funding moved into the supplemental appropriation to allow the project to get underway.

QUESTION 47: What is the schedule for studies of traffic congestion mitigation alternatives in the vicinity of the White House, as funded in FY 2003?

RESPONSE: The project administrators met with representatives in the Office of Policy Development in the Executive Office of the President, on May 8, 2003 to begin outlining the scope of the study and a plan to involve the District of Columbia government and neighborhood stakeholders. A schedule for the study has not been developed, but will be prepared in the next three months.

Remote Data Center (POC – Carlos Solari)

QUESTION 48: What is the status of establishment today of the remote data center?

RESPONSE: The remote data center project is on schedule and on budget. The project began last summer by conducting a systems development lifecycle analysis to determine and recommend the location for the facility. From this analysis, EOP decided on building the data center at a hardened FEMA facility located in Maryland. The project is being co-managed with FEMA and was established with three phases: (1) infrastructure build-out of the hardened facility (power, air handlers, etc), (2) construction of the data center itself (cabling, raised flooring, etc), and (3) the transition of EOP data systems (telecommunications, servers, etc). The project is approximately halfway through completion for the first two phases with a scheduled opening (initial operational capability) date of September 2003. The transition phase is on schedule preparing the systems and will proceed to begin the transfer September 2003 – with a planned transition of 12 months for all systems. The following chart shows the funding of the remote data center from FY 2002 thru FY 2004.

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004
CIP	$15,000,000	$5,000,000	$8,403,000
Total	$15,000,000	$5,000,000	$8,403,000

QUESTION 49: Last year, you estimated annual operating costs of this facility to be $7,500,000 (p. 88). Is that your current estimate?

RESPONSE: Last year OA provided a rough estimate of $7,500,000 for the future annual operating cost of the new data center facility. This was based upon the following estimated costs:

- $1,500,000 in communications to maintain connectivity for the EOP,
- $600,000 in space rental,
- $450,000 for hardware maintenance,
- $1,300,000 for software maintenance,
- $2,600,000 for contractor services,
- $300,000 for supplies/components,
- $75,000 for equipment, and
- $675,000 in salaries/benefits.

While most of these estimates remain valid, OA must revise the estimate for space rental to $1,258,000, bringing the revised estimated annual operating costs for the facility to $8,158,000.

REV_00167633

QUESTION 50: Your FY 2004 request includes $8,403,000 to transition the remote data center to full operational status (p. 75). What specific activities are required in FY 2004 to accomplish this? Can you provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request consistent with these activities?

RESPONSE: The following table lists the FY2004 CIP funds requested for the completion of the remote data center construction and initial year operating costs.

Object Class	Object Class Title	Requested Funding (in $1000s)	Description
23.0	Space Rental Payments	$1,258	This estimate reflects $1,258 in rental for the offsite data center and will be the initial rent to be paid for the offsite data center. This cost was previously funded from emergency funds.
23.3	Communications, utilities, and miscellaneous charges	$4,420	$4,420 is for CIP networking/telecommunications projects at the offsite data center. These projects include funds for a tap off of telecommunications lines, two additional DS-3 data paths, two T-1 lines, and backup to support required communications bandwidth, and availability requirements.
25.2	Other Services	$2,700	This estimate reflects Priority System Disaster Recovery costs, Secondary Systems Disaster Recovery costs, Hardware and Software for the Disaster Recovery Site, and Hardware and Software upgrades to support the data center move.
26.0	Supplies and materials	$25	The estimate reflects $25 in additional supplies necessary for start-up operations at the offsite data center. This will include start up costs for office equipment used for the new office spaces.
Total FY2004 Data Center CIP Request		$8,403

White House Communications Agency (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 63: Updating the information on page 133 of last year's hearing record, please provide estimated reimbursements for the White House Communications Agency for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: Reimbursements made to the White House Communications Agency, for the non-telecommunications support they provide to the WHO, is broken down into two categories: military personnel and audiovisual support. The amount of planned reimbursement is initially set and agreed to via an inter-agency agreement (IAG). This IAG is then adjusted if needed as a result of actual execution. Reimbursement actuals and estimates follow:

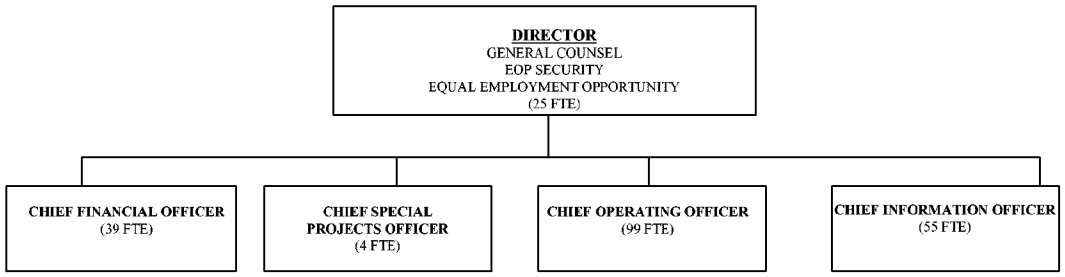
	FY02 (actual)	FY03 (est.)	FY04 (est.)
Military Personnel	$4,376,085	$4,754,346	$4,858,942
Audiovisual Support	$4,543,643	$3,953,848	$2,743,915
Total	$8,919,738	$8,708,194	$7,602,857

REV_00167644

The FY04 estimate for audiovisual support shows a decrease from the FY 2003 estimate due to the move of audiovisual supplies and equipment from IAG reimbursed items to direct procurement through normal WHO channels.

Office of Administration (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 64: Updating the information on page 134 of last year's hearing record, please provide a current organizational chart for the Office of Administration, including the associated numbers of FTEs requested for each office in the FY 2004 President's budget.



RESPONSE: The Office of Administration organization chart provided below reflects the current organizational structure. The FY 2004 FTE request remains constant with FY 2003 levels (222 FTE).

Executive Office of the President

Office of Administration

Organization Chart

FY 2004

Total 222 FTE

QUESTION 65: Last year, it was estimated that 4 FTE were needed to provide administrative services to the Office of Homeland Security. Since that office is substantially smaller due to establishment of the DHS, is there a lesser requirement for OA support? If so, is that reflected in FY 2004 staffing figures?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 budget proposal included the statement that there was "2 CFO staff to support Homeland Security" rather than the 4 FTE referred to in the question. These two Chief Financial Officer (CFO) staff were requested during FY 2003 because last year's OA budget request was a 49% increase over the previous year's spending – and security-related enhancements accounted for nearly all of that increase. The FY 2004 budget proposal included additional security-related enhancements beyond the FY 2003 level. Furthermore, even though the funding level of the Homeland Security Council is not as great as was originally envisioned, it is still a separate account for which the staff must perform the same number of administrative tasks in setting up and monitoring the status of the account. Therefore, the additional two FTE in the CFO office remain necessary to assist EOP offices in executing their new responsibilities.

QUESTION 66: Your salary and expenses request includes a transfer of $1,500 from Homeland Security for information technology services. What are these services?

RESPONSE: The part of OHS that remained with EOP (now called the Homeland Security Council) does not need the information technology contractor support that was previously planned. There is, however, an urgent need to expand the funding needed to support the White House website. The system security put in place to protect the whitehouse.gov website from cyber attack includes a web content distribution designed to make it highly resistant to denial of service type attacks. The cost of this service has increased dramatically, and is directly proportional to the volume of activity. The volume of activity, in turn, is a combination of the website hits and the level of cyber-attack activity directed against the site. The importance of the White House web site cannot be overstated. Along with the DHS website, the whitehouse.gov website is one of the primary government sites with a mission to communicate threat level information to the public.

Due to increased traffic on the White House website, the monthly cost of web caching service to maintain the website has risen from $30,000 per month to more than $75,000 per month. The estimated FY 2004 cost to maintain the website is $1,500,000. No funds were requested for this increased requirement in the FY 2004 budget. OA wishes to use the funds originally requested for the OHS information technology contract support for the White House website effort.

QUESTION 67: You are requesting additional funding for victim rescue units, which would be distributed to all White House staff (p. 82). What are these units, and what is the unit cost?

RESPONSE: Victim Rescue Units (VRUs) provide a 20-45 minute supply of pure oxygen to the wearer. This would be critical to the survival of EOP staff in the event of an incident which would require an evacuation to a safe area. VRUs were selected because they can be easily operated by a novice, while it takes a significant amount of training to teach staff to properly operate a gas mask. VRUs have a ten-year shelf life, which is significantly longer than gas mask filters. They provide protection from the entire threat spectrum from fire and smoke to chemical and biological agents. The VRUs are portable and small, and their expected cost is $375 each.

QUESTION 68: How is the requirement for additional safes and emergency evacuation chairs documented?

RESPONSE: The EOP Security Office conducted a review of security containers (safes) at the White House Complex and found that most of them were 1950's-vintage mechanical locks. During the aftermath of 9/11, it was deemed important that the White House adhere to the latest Federal regulations promulgated by the General Services Administration (FFL-2740A) for the protection of classified materials. Thus, the EOP recommends acquiring new security containers which are fully compliant with GSA standard which governs all changeable combination locks for the protection of national security information.

After 9/11, we reviewed all emergency evacuation procedures for the White House Complex. As we updated evacuation plans and reviewed procedures it was determined that evacuation chairs were needed in various buildings and on various floors to assist individuals who may need assistance or have special needs during an evacuation. This was an internal study performed by staff of the EOP security office.

Financial Audits (POC – Al Muhlbauer)

QUESTION 69: Last year, you advised us that EOP would plan to address the findings of the recent auditability assessment no later than FY 2003. What is the status of that effort today?

RESPONSE: EOP has initiated five major efforts to address the auditability assessment. They are:

- Development and publication of the EOP entity and reporting structure, which was completed and is and presented in the FY 2004 Budget Submission.
- Development and publication of the EOP financial management structure, which has been developed in draft and is currently being circulated for comment within EOP. Approval and issuance of the financial management structure is expected to occur within 30 days.
- Provide financial management policy and guidance to the EOP, and put in place consistent EOP-wide business practices and procedures. This effort is underway and is expected to be completed this fiscal year.
- Select a replacement for the current non-compliant financial accounting system. The Office of the Chief Financial Officer has reviewed various alternatives and has made a determination to be cross-serviced by another Federal agency that has implemented a compliant system, is currently receiving "clean" audit opinions, and has cross-servicing as an agency mission. Two such organizations were identified, a requirements document was provided, their proposals are currently being evaluated, and a decision is expected within the next two weeks.
- Accomplish a detailed review of the EOP general ledger and supporting documents for account balances, correct the data as necessary, and prepare the information for conversion to the replacement accounting system. A "clean-up" and conversion plan is in process and will be coordinated with the selected cross-servicing agency.

QUESTION 70: When will you be able to produce an auditable financial statement?

RESPONSE: The Chief Financial Officer completed an exercise that resulted in EOP-wide financial statements, that exercise identified various data problems that confirmed the auditability assessment. The "clean-up" exercise which is required prior to the conversion to the cross-servicing agency's system is addressing these problems and it is anticipated that the FY 2004 financial statements will be audited.

QUESTION 71: Last year, you stated that you had identified best practices for documented policies and procedures based upon one federal agency which has been recognized as one of the best in the Federal Government (p. 136). Which agency are you using as a model, and what are some examples of the specific best practices you intend to use?

RESPONSE: We were referring to the Department of Education and we conducted a pilot of their approach for developing policies and procedures within the Office of the CFO. While that pilot was helpful, we determined that three other tasks (identify reporting entity, develop financial management structure, and identifying our financial accounting system cross servicing provider) needed to be completed before our policies and procedures could be developed. Since those are near completion we anticipate again focusing on developing policies and procedures during the remainder of this fiscal year.

White House Office (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 72: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 budget request for the White House Office by office or activity, as itemized on pages 137 and 138 of last year's hearing record. Please compare those amounts to corresponding amounts for FY 2002 (actual) and FY 2003 (estimated), similar in format to that shown on pages 246 and 247 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: As noted last year, a single budget is prepared for the WHO. This single budget is prepared based on a number of criteria such as: prior spending patterns, estimated requirements, OMB provided inflation factors, and the priorities of the President. During a given execution year, personnel costs are allocated based upon that year's sometimes unique staffing decisions. The remainder of the budget is allocated initially to two WHO offices. The travel budget is allocated in its entirety to the Office of Advance and obligated against this office if the travel is done in support of the President. Any travel undertaken that is not in support of a Presidential trip is charged to the office of the staff member in question. The remaining portion of the non-personnel, non-travel budget, including expenses for rent, supplies, equipment and other services is considered overhead and in most years is charged as such to the White House Office of Management and Administration. In FY 2003 as part of a pilot program authorized by Congress, costs related to many of these "overhead" items were consolidated under the EOP Office of Administration. Obligations (actual and estimated) are provided by individual White House office for FY 2002 thru FY 2004 in the table below.

Notes:

(1) $911K of the FY03 USA Freedom Corps estimate and $1,351K of the FY04 USA Freedom Corps estimate detailed in the answer to question 54, are included above within the Office of Management and Administration numbers as are similar funds for all other White House Offices.

(2) Because Congress has chosen to appropriate funds for the Office of Homeland Security (OHS)/ Homeland Security Council (HSC) separately from the WHO appropriation, numbers related to OHS/ HSC are not included above. FY03 and FY04 estimates for OHS/ HSC are addressed independently in response to other committee questions.

QUESTION 73: Please provide a corresponding breakdown for FTE staff years and OGE, similar in format to that shown on pages 152 through 154 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: As noted last year, the major units within the White House Office are simply a creature of administrative convenience. The number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. With this kept in mind, a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit, is provided below. This breakout is based on current estimates and planning and will differ during the actual execution year. In addition to these major units, certain individuals – including certain individuals who work with the National Security Council, the Domestic Policy Council, and the National Economic Council – are also White House Office employees, although the units within which they principally work are not themselves part of the White House Office. These individuals are included under the Other category.

Other Services (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 75: Similar to the information on page 236 et seq. of last year's hearing record, please provide a detailed description of each project, program, or initiative proposed to be funded in FY 2004 under object class 25.2 ("other services").

RESPONSE: Capital Investment Plan (CIP) - $5,220,000

The overall FY 2004 CIP requirement supports nine areas, as described below. The following "services" costs are included in the FY 2004 CIP request:

- $690,000 for Customer Service and Desktop Systems. This funding will be used to perform desktop software integration support.
- $450,000 for New Technologies and Systems. This includes "services" funding of $150,000 for server technology integration testing, and $300,000 for voice and data integration.
- $230,000 for EOP Systems and Support, including "services" funding of $150,000 to develop external Local Area Networks, and $80,000 for production test lab development.
- $700,000 for Information Security for enterprise identity projects to allow the introduction of new authentication and identification mechanisms into the EOP IT infrastructure.

REV_00167652

- $650,000 for Web-Based Services for web services application environment.
- $2,500,000 for the Offsite Data Center for services necessary to transition the offsite data center to full operational status
- There are no services funds allocated to Campus Wiring, Networks and Data Communications Infrastructure, or Messaging and Scheduling.

Salaries and Expenses - $2,150,000

There are three initiatives in the FY 2004 OA salaries/expense budget which comprise $2,150,000 in new programs under object class 25.2 ("other services"):

- $1,800,000 for Technology and Systems Support Contract . The Chief Information Officer (CIO) provides a wide range of computer services support to the EOP. These tasks are performed in large measure through an outsourcing contract that delivers IT services from PC deployment, to help desk and data center operations. During FY 2003, this IT systems support contract was competed with an increase in base labor rates due to the need for more advanced skills in IT disciplines such as XML and web services software development, Oracle database development and administration, and implementation of a new Enterprise Resources Planning (ERP) application covering finance, asset management and human resources. The CIO outsource contract is the vehicle used to maintain a 24 hour-a-day operation for mainframes, servers, help desk, local area networks, personal computers, applications; installation of end-user hardware and software; training; software application development and maintenance services. Altogether, this contract supports customers throughout the White House 18 acre complex, at remote and mobile locations, and at the planned Offsite Data Center. Key components driving the cost upward include: (1) higher labor rates for the DC area, which have risen since the previous IT 1997 facility contract; (2) the impact of the new data center operations in 2003 and thereafter; (3) an expanded EOP customer base which has more advanced, sophisticated, and security-conscious users.

- $300,000 for Information Assurance Support. The CIO has established the Information Assurance (IA) program to serve as a central location for information security serving all of EOP. FY 2002 and FY 2003 funds attended to the most critical concern with significant vulnerabilities in the perimeter and began the process of securing the internal systems. The IA program created real-time monitoring of perimeter network devices; it established the first formal documentation of IA program policy to bring the EOP in conformance with Federal guidelines and directives. However, the cyber threat facing EOP is dynamic because our systems are constantly assailed with a wide and unexpected range of attacks. The new state of defense must be active vigilance, to include the following components: (1) Perimeter Security, (2) Advanced Security Concepts, (3) Contingency Planning Support, (4) Network Monitor/Response Systems, and (5) Security Awareness, Assessments, and Education.

- $50,000 for Security Enhancements: Videos. There is a frequent and ongoing need for a security video – specific to the EOP and White House – which can be used in security briefings and new employee orientation meetings. This video will contain a brief overview of security responsibilities and procedures which must be understood by all personnel working in the EOP.

Salaries and Expenses (POC – Dilworth)

QUESTION 76: Please provide a detailed description of any expenses in the FY 2004 budget under "salaries and expenses" which are not directly related to personnel compensation and benefits.

Security Guard Services for OSTP (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 77: In FY 2003, you budgeted $1,798,000 for security guard services for the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Are similar funds requested in FY 2004? If so, how much?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 OA budget proposes that the cost of the security guard service (estimated at $702,000) for OSTP be transferred to the OSTP appropriation. Thus, the proposed FY04 OA budget would contain the balance of the funds (approximately $1.1 million).

Since the FY 2003 budget was proposed, there have been additional reviews of the physical security of the White House complex by the US Secret Service, the Federal Protective Service, and the OA Security Office. As a result, the OA Security Office has been assigned the responsibility of correcting deficiencies in EOP physical security. There are some locations which do not currently have Secret Service protection (such as the Jackson Place White House Conference Center). Another location which does not have firm long-term security plans is the office at 1800 G Street. Thus, the Office of Administration has ongoing needs for the $1.1 million which remains in the OA budget. During FY03, these funds are being used for consolidation of information technology maintenance ($200,000), centralization of database services ($200,000), and common building service costs ($400,000). The remaining $300,000 of these savings will be used for an FY03 OA personnel shortfall.

QUESTION 78: Why aren't such funds in the OSTP budget?

RESPONSE: The estimated FY04 cost of 24-hour security guard services is included in the FY04 OSTP budget request. This estimate is $702,000 for a full year.

Political Appointees (POC – Jon Laurich)

REV_00167654

QUESTION 79: Please update the information on political appointees within EOP as shown on page 268 of last year's hearing record, using the same criteria and assumptions as last year.

RESPONSE: The term "political appointees" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2 of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President has the following number of political appointees directly hired within the EOP and serving in the EOP on detailed assignments from other agencies as of May 5, 2003.

Detailees (POC – Jon Laurich)

QUESTION 80: Please update the information on reimbursable and non-reimbursable detailees with EOP as shown on pages 268 and 269 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: There are currently 251 detailees staffed within the Executive Office of the President. There are 40 reimbursable detailees and 211 non-reimbursable detailees as shown in the chart below, as of May 5, 2003:

Office of the Vice President (POC – Kristen Savercool)

QUESTION 81: You are requesting an additional $70,000 (+1.7 percent) for the Vice President's travel, due to increased travel to undisclosed locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. Weren't these type of increases baselined in FY 2002 and FY 2003, and if so, why are further increases needed in FY 2004?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 budget was submitted in February 2002, prior to it becoming evident that the Vice President's travel requirements had increased more than originally estimated. Following the events of 9-11, the Vice President has been required to be outside the Washington, DC vicinity for significant periods of time. This travel has been 100 percent official, and operational in nature (i.e. the Vice President performs his regular duties in an off-site location). This travel has required the accompaniment of staff, who also perform operational duties.

Because the budget impact of these additional travel requirements was not fully realized until after the FY 2003 budget request was submitted, they were not included in the FY 2003 baseline. Continued security concerns related to the Vice President and the ensuing impact on the Vice President's travel costs necessitate the increase to the FY 2004 OVP travel budget. This increase will allow the Vice President the flexibility needed to adequately execute his official travel requirements.

QUESTION 82: Please provide a listing of the uses of Unanticipated Needs funds in FY 2002.

RESPONSE: $757,000 of the $1,000,000 appropriated to the Unanticipated Needs account in FY 2002 was provided to OMB for Office of Homeland Security Transition Planning Office. The remaining appropriation was not utilized.

Account Consolidation and Transfer Proposals (POC – Al Muhlbauer/Jim Daniel)

When we centralized the funds within the Office of Administration, Congress intended that each agency would continue to receive a similar share of support and assistance under the consolidation.

QUESTION 83: Are any agencies going to receive diminished services or resources under the consolidation?

RESPONSE: No, currently the funding in the pilot has been allocated to be consistent with the FY 03 budget request. The service levels will be equal to or greater than pre-pilot levels; however, we are hopeful that the cost to procure the same level of service will decrease. Also, the Office of Administration is preparing service standards that will be approved by the Common Services Board. For example, if the service standard for PC's would be one PC per desktop that is less than four years old and if one EOP component is currently at that standard for 95 % of its employees and another is currently at that standard for 50% of its employees, based on need, the second component would get a larger share of the services to bring it closer to the EOP standard. This allows EOP to consistently upgrade software and services across the entire organization as the total infrastructure permits.

QUESTION 84: Are any agencies to receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed as part of the consolidation?

RESPONSE: Yes, based on need and to bring organizations that are lagging behind the approved standards up to a consistent standard, some organizations may receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed to the consolidation. We anticipate some of those services will be funded from savings in the program.

QUESTION 85: Under the procurement consolidation pilot approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are IT or database services for any EOP agency going to be paid for by funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

RESPONSE: Yes, in addition to generating procurement savings and efficiencies, a major goal of the consolidation pilot is to bring all of the EOP components up to an approved standard of service which will allow us to implement technology evenly across the organization and to realize efficiencies and benefits from a consistent and even infrastructure. In reaching this goal, the funds may be applied in a manner which is not in the same ratio in which they were contributed.

QUESTION 86: In general, are the funds appropriated for this centralized procurement program going to be used to supplement the appropriation made to individual agencies?

RESPONSE: Yes, the individual agencies will be the recipients of the services funded by the centralized procurement program without reimbursement in accordance with the Congressional appropriation provided to OA.

QUESTION 87: If so, which agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions?

RESPONSE: OA is currently establishing the allocation standards for the commodities included in the centralized procurement program. It is intended that a Common Services Board representing the EOP agencies approve those standards. OA is also requesting that the agencies assist us in developing a baseline against which we will measure the allocation standards. That will determine which, if any, agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions. We intend to report to OMB and the Congress how the centralized procurement program commodities were provided.

QUESTION 88: You recently submitted a very cursory report on the procurement pilot. When will you provide us with specific details on the progress of the pilot program?

RESPONSE: As mentioned above, progress is being made on the plan to implement the Common Services Program. We intend to report the status of the implementation of the plan in the June/July timeframe.

Other than for extreme situations similar to those encountered immediately after 9/11/01, it is not our intent to transfer large amounts between EOP appropriations. More likely, because a number of the appropriations are small we would be moving funds to cover unanticipated requirements such as paying unexpected terminal leave to employees who have retired and whose agency did not anticipate the level of required terminal leave. As stated in our request, Congress will be notified in advance of our intent to move funds between accounts.

Your budget also proposes a change that would permit EOP agencies to transfer up to 10% into our out any agency's budget. Coupled with your account consolidation proposal, that would allow you to transfer in up to $18 million more into (or out of) the White House's budget.

REV_00167659

QUESTION 89: Under the procurement consolidation program that we approved in the FY03 bill, don't you have a similar type of flexibility already? What other flexibility is needed?

RESPONSE: The flexibility of the procurement consolidation program is directed to certain defined common commodities. The 10% transfer authority provides flexibility for unexpected requirements and to address needs that may be outside the program.

QUESTION 90: What protection is there for smaller EOP agencies under this proposal? Don't they stand to lose critical resources if the White House or Vice President's Office decide to take 10% of their resources?

RESPONSE: It is more likely that the smaller agencies will benefit from the proposal, because their appropriations are small they are less likely to be able to adjust to unforeseen circumstances, this program will allow the EOP to address those circumstances without requesting supplemental funding. And, as stated above, the Congressional Committees will be notified in advance of any fund movement and could have any such concerns addressed.

Office of Homeland Security Questions (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts. The source of these funds would come from the Office of Homeland Security.

The Office of Homeland Security has gone from an initial $25m stated need when the initial FY03 bills passed the House and Senate to $11m when the FY03 Omnibus was passed to what will be $9m if the reprogramming is approved.

QUESTION 91: What exactly does the Office of Homeland Security do now that the Department of Homeland Security is in place?

RESPONSE: HSC provides advice to the President on homeland security matters and coordinates the interagency process to ensure unified administration policy on homeland security.

QUESTION 92: Does OHS still have a presence at Nebraska Avenue?

RESPONSE: No.

QUESTION 93: Does the Office of Administration provide any support to agencies at Nebraska Avenue? If so, please describe the specific types of support provided. Is this support on a reimbursable basis?

REV_00167660

RESPONSE: Since the transfer of the Nebraska Avenue facility to the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) on January 1, 2003, OA has not provided any support to agencies at the Nebraska Avenue Complex (NAC). Pursuant to a Determination by the OMB Director, funds in the amount of $3,746,000 were transferred from the OHS Emergency Fund within OA to the Department of Homeland Security in March 2003 to support NAC activities.

QUESTION 94: How many personnel and detailees now work for OHS?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council currently consists of 66 staff positions which can be filled by either Direct Hire FTE or Other Government Employee (detailee and assignee) personnel. HSC is requesting resources to support up to 40 Direct Hire FTE and 26 OGE FTE on its staff for FY 2004. See table below for a comparison with fiscal years 2003 and 2002.

Office of Homeland Security / Homeland Security Council Personnel

	FY 2002 Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Request
Direct Hire FTE	0	20	40
Other Government Employee (EOY headcount)	89	31	26
Total Personnel	89	51	66

QUESTION 95: What is the actual operational budget need for OHS in FY03?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council budget requirement from the FY 2003 appropriation is estimated to be approximately $4.32 million. Please note that the FY 2003 estimate covers only costs incurred after the enactment of the FY 2003 appropriation on February 20, 2003. Unlike other EOP agencies which operated under continuing resolutions between October 1, 2003 and February 20, 2003, the Office of Homeland Security was not permitted to utilize the CR funding mechanism but instead continued to charge FY 2003 expenses against the no-year emergency funding (provided in FY2002) until the FY 2003 appropriation was enacted. Therefore the FY 2003 estimate reflects only seven months of activity, whereas the FY 2004 Request needs to cover HSC expenses for the full 12 months next fiscal year.

QUESTION 96: For the record, please provide us a breakout by object class of the Office of Homeland Security's FY03 remaining budget.

RESPONSE: The breakout below reflects HSC's budget for the last seven months of FY 2003, from the enactment of the FY 2003 Appropriation on February 20, 2003 through September 30, 2003.

REV_00167661

(Dollars in Thousands)

Object Class	FY 2003 est.
Personnel	$2,800
Travel	$60
Transportation of Things	$24
Communications, Utilities, and Miscelaneous	$50
Printing and Reproduction	$69
Other Services	$1,267
Equipment	$50
Total,	$4,320

QUESTION 97: Any likelihood that these estimates will be revised downward again?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 estimate provided above reflects the best assessment of HSC requirements from the OHS FY 2003 appropriation, and actual obligations against this appropriation will likely be close to this current estimate.

QUESTION 98: I understand that the President named General Gordon as his new Homeland Security Adviser. Does he support the latest $2 million cut to his office's resources?

RESPONSE: General Gordon has not yet reported to Homeland Security Council. Also, the resources of the Homeland Security Council have not been cut by $2 million. The FY 2003 appropriations for the Homeland Security Council included $2 million for decontamination of the Remote Delivery Site as agreed to by the Congress and the Administration. Subsequent to the passage of the FY 2003 appropriations, that $2 million was allocated to decontamination of the RDS per the agreement. Therefore, this planned use of that appropriation is not a cut to HSC resources.

QUESTION 99: Have you validated the FY04 request recently to ensure it is an accurate figure?

RESPONSE: Yes. HSC reevaluated its FY 2004 requirements prior to submitting the final FY 2004 Request. Given the creation of the Department of Homeland Security, HSC's FY 2004 budget requirements are estimated at $8,331,000; as requested.

Budget Questions:

After the FY03 enacted levels are adjusted to reflect the transfer of $9 million to the Office of Homeland Security, the Executive Office of the President's FY04 budget request reflects an 8% increase over FY03 levels. Your agency, the Office of Administration requests a 10% increase between FY03 and FY04.

When the budget was introduced, Mitch Daniels said that the overall growth of Federal programs would be pegged to the expected 4% growth in inflation. The administration also said the President wanted to "match government's growth with the growth of American family income."

QUESTION 100: When the rest of the government is forced to live with 4% growth, how can you justify an almost 10% increase in your office and an overall Executive Office of the President increase of 8%? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: The Office of Administration's 10% budget increase amounts to approximately $7 million. This increase is necessitated by additional costs stemming from the enhanced security activities in the post-September 11 environment:

- The Capital Investment Plan has a net increase of $3.8 million required for the relocation of the EOP data center to an offsite location. The offsite data center has been determined to be a critical project in any contingency plan, and the communications requirements for the data center will be significantly higher in the new facility.
- $2.5 million is needed for the new information technology contract, driven by the information technology service labor increases, the relocation of the data center as well as by the increased security concerns for EOP systems.
- $0.5 million is required for the EOP information assurance program.
- $0.2 million for physical security improvements to the White House complex in providing resources for security education and evacuation resources.

The 8% growth in the overall EOP budget amounts to approximately $24.6 million. Primary components of this increase are mission-specific needs proposed by the different EOP entities:

- $6.3 million in OA programs described in the prior paragraph ($3.8 million for the capital investment plan, $2.5 million for the information technology contract, $0.5 million for information assurance, and $0.2 million for physical security).
- $2.5 million in EOP-wide space rental increases to conform with GSA's market-based rental rates.
- $3.0 million for USTR's additional staff for intensified trade negotiations.
- $3.0 million in the Executive Residence's multiyear East and West Wing restoration projects.
- $2.7 million for OMB personnel needs.
- $1.5 million for OMB's budget system updates.
- $0.7 million for OMB's E-Government staff and the Office of Information Technology.
- $0.8 million for additional staff for ONDCP.

REV_00167663

- $0.6 million in the NSC's funding for reimbursable detailees and President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board's request for additional staff.
- $0.5 million for OSTP's continuity of operations plan.

The White House Office's increase of 3.6% looks smaller because of a realignment of $1.85m in rent to the Office of Administration's account. Without the realignment, the White House Office's increase would be around 6.6%.

QUESTION 101: What is the justification for this realignment? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The realignment of $1.85M in rent was made "Into" vice out of the WHO account. Without this and other realignments made as part of the FY 2004 WHO budget request, The White House Office's increase would have only been 1.7 percent.

QUESTION 102: How could the White House have been paying the bill for space that wasn't theirs? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The WHO has not been paying rent on the 1800 G Street office spaces that this realignment involves. These office spaces were necessitated by the movement of certain White House staff offices following the events of September 11. In FY 2003 funds for these spaces were budgeted by the Office of Administration and are being paid for as part of a pilot program authorized by Congress.

QUESTION 103: Which EOP agencies occupied this space on which the White House Office has been paying rent? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: As indicated in the previous answers, White House staff have been occupying this space. Rent is being paid by the Office of Administration as part of the pilot program authorized by Congress.

QUESTION 104: Are these costs that had historically been paid by the White House Office? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: No. The 1800 G Street Office spaces were not occupied by EOP staff until after the events of 9-11.

QUESTION 105: If so, why make the change this year? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The realignment of these costs under the WHO is done to reflect the costs under the office whose staff occupies them.

REV_00167664

Travel

The White House Office's request includes a decrease of $400,000 in Presidential Travel.

QUESTION 106: Was the FY03 estimate too high? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: As part of the FY 2003 WHO budget submission, $600,000 was requested to support the travel requirements of the new USA Freedom Corps Office. Actual experience subsequently determined this amount to be in excess of need. As a result, the FY 2003 WHO travel line was reduced $329,647 by the Congressional recission, and the FY 2004 WHO budget submission requested $400,000 less in the travel line than the original FY 2003 estimate.

QUESTION 107: If so, how do you intend to use the surplus funds? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The $400,000 reduction to the FY 2004 WHO budget request for travel requirements does not result in surplus funds. It instead results in an overall reduction to the FY 2004 WHO budget estimate.

QUESTION 108: Are you planning less travel in FY04 or will more of the travel just be paid for by political entities? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: Except as noted above, the amount of official travel conducted by the White House staff is expected to remain consistent with the FY 2003 estimate.

QUESTION 109: Please provide a list of all White House Office, Office of Homeland Security and Office of Vice President official staff travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). Include a brief description of the official purpose of the trip. For FY04 estimates, provide estimated number of trips and trip purpose. (POC – Rothley Howard)

RESPONSE: The following tables provide the FY 2002 and FY 2003 (to date) staff travel information for the White House Office, the Office of Homeland Security and the Office of the Vice President.

QUESTION 110: Please provide a list of all Presidential, First Lady and Vice Presidential travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). For each trip, please provide the trip date, destination, designation (i.e., political, official), number of official EOP staff supporting the Principal and, the official cost of the trip. (POC – Rothley Howard)

REV_00167690

QUESTION 111: How much did OMB reimburse the White House Office for use of White House motorpool vehicles in FY02? How much is OMB projecting to reimburse in FY03 and FY04? (POC – Brian Gillis)

RESPONSE: For FY 2002, OMB reimbursed the Department of Defense $99,000 for the use of the White House motorpool. OMB is projecting a similar amount for FY 2003 and FY 2004.

In the hearing, Mr. Daniel mentioned that the FY03 vehicle lease and IT support contracts came in significantly below the original budget estimates.

QUESTION 112: Do you intend to return the unused funds to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: The EOP plans to use the funds to implement other critical EOP priorities. The programs which were described by Mr. Daniel at the hearing were the FY 2003 vehicle lease (covering leases by OA, White House, and Office of the Vice President (OVP)), and the guard services contract for guard services at 1801 Pennsylvania Avenue. He did not refer to the IT support contract.

QUESTION 113: For these areas in which savings were realized, what are your plans for the funds? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: Vehicle contract savings for FY 2003 amount to approximately $20,000 for OA, $43,000 for the White House, and $19,000 for OVP. These savings will be utilized to fund priority needs for these EOP entities. The guard service contract will result in savings of approximately $1.1 million.

For FY 2003, these funds are being applied to fund other priorities for the OA as well as common services for EOP entities. These other priorities include consolidation of information technology maintenance ($200,000), centralization of database services ($200,000), and common building service costs ($400,000). The remaining $300,000 of these savings will be used for an FY03 OA personnel shortfall.

Political Travel

QUESTION 114: Please explain the reimbursement procedures the White House intends to follow during the Presidential election season. (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 13, 1992, prepared by C. Boyden Gray, former Counsel to the President, "Allocation of the costs for "campaign-related" travel by senior Administration officials is governed by the Federal Election Commission (FEC) hypothetical trip rule." These regulations require that all "campaign-related" travel of a candidate seeking nomination, or re-election to the Office of the President, must be paid by the candidate's authorized campaign committee. Further, if any campaign activity is conducted at a stop, other than incidental contacts, "that stop shall be identified as campaign-related and, in general, all costs associated with it must be paid by the President's campaign committee."

QUESTION 115: Exactly when will the presidential-campaign procedures take effect? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: The presidential-campaign procedures take effect after the President declares that he is a candidate for re-election.

QUESTION 116: How do you determine who the official travelers are on a campaign or political trip? Does the list of positions vary from trip to trip? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated December 6, 1991 prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "officials are to be considered on official duty, regardless of the nature of the President's activities, only if it is determined by the Assistant to the President and Deputy Chief of Staff before the trip that (1) the official is traveling for the sole purpose of providing (a) clerical, logistical and administrative support, or (b) staff assistance in the management of paperwork and the records of decisions, or (c) consultation and guidance necessary solely for the transaction of Government business, and (2) the official will not engage in any political activity during the travel." A list of positions has been developed which are deemed to always be official. This list does not change from trip to trip.

QUESTION 117: On trips with political and official components, what is the procedure for determining which events are paid for using official funds and which events are reimbursed by the political entity? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 12, 1990, from C. Boyden Gray, "With regard to non-Presidential election campaigns events (e.g., Congressional and State and local campaigns), applicable law and regulations do not provide a specific method for allocating the costs of mixed official and political travel by individuals other than the candidates. Neither is there a precise definition for distinguishing between "official" and "political" functions. As a result, the guidelines set forth below are based on general legal principles, policies established over a period of years by previous Administrations, and guidance from Federal Election Commission opinions and actions." A good faith apportionment of the costs of a trip based on the time spent on political activities and the time spent on official activities has been developed and has become know as the "hard-time" formula. This formula is based on the time spent in official meetings and receptions, etc, and time spent in political activities to determine total activity time. Based on this data, a ratio is developed based on total activity time which is allocated to political activity and official activities. The percentage that represents the political and official portions of the trip is then used as a multiplier to determine the allocation between official and political costs.

QUESTION 118: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, what criteria is used to determine whether an event is "political" or "official"? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 12, 1990, prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "Appearing at party functions, fundraising, and campaigning for specific candidates are principal examples of travel which should be considered political." The memo goes on to say that a precise definition for distinguishing between "official" and "political" functions does not exist. Further clarification is provided in the memo dated February 13, 1992, also prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "In determining whether an activity is political or official, all relevant factors should be considered, including, but not limited to, the identity of the sponsor of the event, the group or organization being addressed, other participants, whether the speech being delivered is partisan and political in nature, and whether it is a factual presentation or defense of the Administration's position on the issue."

QUESTION 119: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, does the political entity reimburse the White House for the Speechwriters time? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 120: Have events been classified as "official" even if only members of the President's political party are invited to share the stage with the President? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 121: If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 122: Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03. For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill. (POC – WHO M&A)

Photographic Services (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 123: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photographic equipment purchased for use by the White House photographers?

RESPONSE: The total cost (actual and projected) of photographic equipment procured for use by White House photographers in FY 2002, FY 2003 and FY 2004 are displayed in the table below.

REV_00167693

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004
	Actual	Estimate	Estimate
Photographic Equipment	$137,057	$35,700	$36,300

FY 2002 actual costs are higher than the estimates for FY 2003 and FY 2004 due to the use of end of year sweep-up funds.

QUESTION 124: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photo lab equipment purchased for use by the WHCA photo lab?

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004

QUESTION 125: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total travel cost associated with travel of White House Photographers?

RESPONSE: The FY 2002 travel costs of White House Photographers was $????. The estimated FY 2003 cost is $38,000 and the projected cost for FY 2004 is $38,760.

QUESTION 126: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab?

RESPONSE: There is no rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab. However, there are utility and facility maintenance costs associated with the WHCA photo lab. Those costs were $73,600 for FY 2002, $76,650 estimated for FY 2003 and a projected $79,000 for FY 2004.

QUESTION 127: Please explain the procedures for determining when and how the government is to be reimbursed for photos released for non-official purposes. If these procedures have changed from those followed by the previous administration, please explain any changes that have been made.

RESPONSE: The procedures for obtaining reimbursements for photographs changed on October 1, 2000. The procedures now in place are designed to ensure that the government receives appropriate reimbursement for photographs sought for non-official purposes. Records are kept of all such requests, and appropriate reimbursement is then sought.

REV_00167694

It is the White House policy to provide two photographs to members of the general public upon request of photographs that include a principal (President, 1st Lady, Vice President or Mrs. Cheney) and the requestor. These requests are generally provided without consideration as to whether or not they are official or non-official. For requests for photos outside these general guidelines, a determination is made by the White House Office as to whether it is an official or non-official request. For non-official requests, the requestor is provided the cost to the government of the photograph and is required to provide reimbursement. The photographs are provided to the requestor and the reimbursement is credited to the White House Office salaries and expenses appropriation.

QUESTION 128: For FY02 and the first seven months of FY03, please provide the following information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos or photo lab services that were provided:

- date reimbursement was made
- name of reimbursing organization
- amount of payment
- number of photos purchased by reimbursing organization
- size of photos purchased by reimbursing organization

RESPONSE: The requested information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos is provided below.

Remote Delivery Site Reprogramming Request (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts.

QUESTION 129: What is the status of remediation efforts?

RESPONSE: We are in the process of Confirmatory Sampling. The sampling plan is intended to present a technical approach for (1) completing air and surface sampling for culturable Bacillus anthracis spores to verify the efficacy of the decontamination process: (2) providing for qualified laboratory analysis of the collected samples: and (3) presenting a protocol for data collection and reporting such that the results of the sampling effort are valid and defensible. In addition, the Plan provides for the site and personnel security, safety, health, and personal protection, equipment and collection methods, and sample handling.

QUESTION 130: Please provide the total budget estimate for this project.

RESPONSE: As the contractor responsible for returning the building to an environmentally safe workplace, Versar to date has not been able to develop or provide accurate cost estimates or time lines to EOP. Budget and schedule estimates for this project are especially difficult due to critical path activities taking place in a high-risk environment relying on the utilization of untested speculative technologies. However to date $2.422 million has been spent on the effort and we are currently requesting an additional $2 million, which is Versar's best estimate of what it will cost to complete the project. The total budget estimate for the project then comes to $4.422 million.

QUESTION 131: Please provide the anticipated schedule for this effort.

RESPONSE: Given many variables, including weather, our best current estimate of time to required complete the RDS project is 4 months. The confirmatory testing phase is estimated to take eight weeks from start up. The next phase would be for the ECC committee to ratify the confirmation process; we estimate this to be one month. After this is completed, our best estimate is thirty days to perform PM on the HVAC equipment, build out the office areas, and re-establish the building operation.

QUESTION 132: What caused this $2 million overrun?

RESPONSE: There is not a $2 million overrun. The request for $2 million is a result of anticipated costs and those unforeseen conditions as result of the environmental cleanup process, that OA, GSA or its contractors had available at the time of fumigation. The Environmental Clearance Committee has placed additional requirements that resulted in the additional costs. The proposed sampling plan utilizes the barrier divisions already in Building 410 (which provides discrete work areas) and presents proposed sampling location, quantity, and types of samples to be collected . Sampling will be carried out using a phased approach for each work area as follows:

Phase 1, Surface Sampling; Phase 2 Air Sampling: Phase 3, "Dymanic Sampling", Phase 4, Start Up of the Heating, Ventilation , and Air Conditioning (HVAC) Units; and Phase 5, Final Sampling with the Barriers Down.

QUESTION 133: Why have you stopped providing the monthly reports on the remediation efforts?

RESPONSE: Due to the process of establishing the Environmental Clearance Committee, it was an administrative error that the reports were inadvertently not forwarded.

Previously the Remote Delivery Site was used to screen incoming mail. It also used to serve as an off-site supply depot. With the Department of Homeland Security now assuming the mail processing function and with supply operations now established on the White House Complex, I'm curious about future plans for the RDS.

QUESTION 134: What will the facility be used for when remediation is finished?

RESPONSE: Prior to September 11, 2001 the Remote Delivery Site (RDS) was used as a centralized receiving facility for the White House Complex. All postage flat mail and packages, including UPS and FedEx deliveries, and all equipment and local deliveries were delivered to the RDS. All incoming deliveries, regardless of size, were screened by the U.S. Secret Service (USSS) via large X ray machines, and if any equipment was too large to fit on the X-ray conveyer belt, then the USSS used dogs to sniff for explosives. After initial USSS clearance, all of the items were sorted and delivered to their intended destination to the White House Complex. Supplies, equipment and furniture which were purchased for inventory for use at later time were housed at the RDS.

In addition to the screening of WHO Complex deliveries, the USSS Administrative Operations Division used RDS space to screen all of its incoming mail and packages that were intended for USSS personnel.

The EOP Supply store was operated within the confines of the RDS. Supplies were purchased and inventoried at the RDS and office supplies and copier paper were purchased in volume to take advantage of discounts. The WHO/EOP customers faxed supply requisitions to the RDS staff who then pulled and boxed office supplies for delivery to the WHO Complex. OA property supply staff made supply deliveries to the WHO complex at least twice a day, and more if needed.

The EOP/OA Personal Property Program (excess, transfer, donation, and destruction of furniture and equipment) had its operations housed at the RDS. Excessed equipment and furniture were corralled at the RDS until enough equipment and furniture were gathered to make it economical to excess all at once. In addition, schools and nonprofit organizations were allowed to review equipment for donation under Executive Order 12999.

After September 11, as a precautionary move, the White House United States Postal Service was relocated from the Eisenhower Executive Office Building to the RDS. A separate room was built for the USPS's operation of opening and screening all White House mail. The RDS operations continued working around the new USPS area. These USPS operations continued until the RDS was closed due to the discovery of Anthrax. Since then the USPS operations have relocated to 1800 G. St. NW.

Once the remediation is finished, the RDS will resume its former function of screening all bulk deliveries (including equipment, furniture, boxes of supplies) sent to the EOP Complex. In addition the facility will be used to store supplies and an inventory of equipment and furniture. The RDS will also be used as a staging area for efficient loading and delivery of bulk items for all EOP agencies.

QUESTION 135: Will the DHS use the facility to screen the White House's mail?

RESPONSE: No.

QUESTION 136: Will you close the on-site supply stores and revert back to running the supply operation out of the Remote Delivery Site?

RESPONSE: When the RDS reopens after the remediation of the building, the RDS staff will resume the same functions prior to the Anthrax. However, there are major changes in the way the OA Supply Store operates and manages its supply inventory. The Office of Administration has entered into a new business relationship with GSA. The OA Supply operation will purchase its supplies from GSA who will provide a wide array of office supplies and maintain the level of supply inventory that is needed to support the WHO Complex. The GSA inventory will be housed at the RDS after relocation from Franconia, VA, the current, temporary RDS location. OA supply staff will pull supply orders based on customer's requisitions, and then box and deliver the supplies from the RDS to WHO complex. GSA will only charge for the supplies that EOP customers use at point of sale, otherwise the unsold inventory will still belong to GSA. GSA promises to maintain the supplies that the EOP customers may need. Inventories will be reviewed and adjusted to realize the kind and quantities of supplies the EOP customers expect. This business relationship will promote a more flexible inventory that allows the supply inventory to have the quantity or variety of supplies to meet our customer needs in a more proactive, real-time fashion.

White House Access (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 137: For the record, please provide the total number of visitors who passed through the White House as part of tours in 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 (to date).

QUESTION 138: Why are White House tours currently not open to the general public?

QUESTION 139: What is the status of the report on the status of White House Tours that was due to the Subcommittee by March 22nd?

QUESTION 140: Who has the lead on the efforts to decide whether public tours can be resumed?

To the Management of
White House Travel Office Press Fund

We have audited the accompanying statement of financial position of the White House Travel Office Press Fund as of December 31, 2001, and the related statements of activities and cash flows for the year then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of the White House Travel Office Press Fund's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit.

We conducted our audit in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe our audit provides a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the White House Travel Office Press Fund as of December 31, 2001, and the changes in its net assets and its cash flows for the nine months then ended in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

WHITE HOUSE TRAVEL OFFICE PRESS FUND
NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
DECEMBER 31, 2001

NOTE 1 – ORGANIZATION

The White House Travel Office Press Fund ('WHTO") was established to manage expenses associated with travel for members of the press who accompany the President, Vice President, First Lady, and Second Lady on domestic and foreign trips. In May 1993, a new management team was hired to manage WHTO. Consequently, for accounting and reporting purposes, a new WHTO was established as of January 1, 1994.

NOTE 2- SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Revenue and expenditures are recognized using the accrual basis of accounting. The WHTO invoices the press organizations for their prorated share of the expenses associated with each trip. The WHTO then remits payment directly to the vendors whose services were used for the particular trip. The total amount invoiced to the press members equals the total of the amounts paid to the vendors. The WHTO does not own any fixed assets. Al! fixed assets are purchased through the White House's general fund and designated for the WHTO use. Similarly, all operating expenses of the WHTO, including salaries and office supplies, are paid directly by the White House's general fund.

NOTE 3- CASH

Gash is maintained in two non-interest checking accounts at the Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C. The RCA 2000 cash account is explained in Note 4.

The total cash held by WHTO at December 31, 2001 includes $512,821 that is not covered by insurance provided by the federal government. It is the opinion of WHTO's management that the solvency of the referenced financial institution is not of particular concern at this time.

REV_00167710

NOTE 4 - RESTRICTED CASH ACCOUNT

Effective April 1, 2000, the management of the White House Travel Office implemented a Restricted Cash Account (RCA). RCA funds are encumbered for specific purposes set forth in written policies and procedures, most notably for payment of late arriving vendor invoices, bank charges and accounts receivable written off as uncollectible.

The RCA is funded through an RCA funding amount applied to every customer invoice, except those for government employees. Presently, that funding amount is two percent of the invoice amount

RCA funding amounts are not considered revenue for accounting purposes.

Under current policies and procedures, a separate RCA is established for each calendar year. The RCA 2000 account on the Statement of Financial Position reflects the total amount of cash in that account at December 31, 2001. The RCA liability accounts for 2000 and 2001 reflect the total RCA funding amount applied to all customer invoices during the respective calendar year, less any disbursements. RCA funding amounts that have been invoiced but not yet collected are included in the accounts receivable amount.

The RCA for each year will be terminated at a designated point in time after the conclusion of the applicable calendar year. At the time of dissolution, any excess funds will be refunded to the Press Fund's customers subject to the RCA funding amount in accordance with a formula based on the percentage of the total travel costs consumed during the year corresponding to the RCA. For example, if a customer were responsible for ten percent of all travel costs for the calendar year 2001, they would be entitled to ten percent of the remaining RCA 2001 funds at the time of dissolution.

NOTE 5 – ACCOUNTS RECEIVABLE

Currently, the WHTO writes off accounts receivable using the direct write-off method. Therefore, there is no allowance for uncollectible accounts.

REV_00167711

NOTE 6 - OTHER RECEIVABLES

As per note 2, the WHTO utilizes a system of dollar for dollar accounting. Under the current accounting process, vendor invoices for trip expenses are entered into accounts payable as they are received. Accordingly, there is an accumulation of unbilled trip expenses in accounts payable until such time that trip accounting is finalized and members of the press are invoiced for their pro rata share of trip expenses. This timing difference creates the need for an Other Receivables category. Other Receivables represents the obligations for normal trip expenses that have been entered into accounts payable, but not yet billed to the press.

REV_00167712

QUESTION 155: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Corps travelers on the Press Charter?

RESPONSE: Each leg of the itinerary is assigned a proportionate cost, which is divided equally among all press passengers. The following formula is used to compute the proportionate cost for each leg of the trip: (Leg flight time / Total flight time) * Total Air Transportation Expense

QUESTION 156: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Pool travelers on Air Force One?

RESPONSE: The cost of the fourteen members of the pool traveling on AF1 is added to the total air transportation expense and the total costs are spread on a pro-rata share among all of the press travelling on the trip. The following formula is used to compute the proportionate cost for each leg of the trip: (Leg flight time / Total flight time) * Total Air Transportation Expense

QUESTION 157: Please explain the formula used to identify the reimbursement rate that the Travel Office billed Press Corps travelers accompanying the President's travel to the USS Abraham Lincoln. In your response, please include the actual rate billed to individual press corps travelers on this trip.

RESPONSE: The cost of transporting press corps travelers from the North Island Naval Air Station to the USS Abraham Lincoln and back to the North Island Naval Air Station totaled $7,440.26. This cost will be added to the total air transportation expense and spread on a pro-rata share among all the press traveling on the trip. The formula for military aircraft reimbursement for the trip to the USS Abraham Lincoln is as follows: $X per hour per aircraft, divided by 60 minutes to get a per minute rate, multiplied by the flight time, divided by the total number of passengers, and then 7.5% excise tax plus $3.00 dollars per person was added.

Bonuses

QUESTION 158: Why did this administration reinstate the payments of bonuses to political appointees? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 159: Have any EOP political staff been given bonuses since the policy was reinstated in March of 2002? (POC – Jon Laurich)

RESPONSE: The term "political appointees" or "political staff" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2

of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President had a total of 28 political staff within 4 offices that received bonuses since March 2002.

QUESTION 160: Have any EOP political staff been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY02 or FY03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus? (POC – Jon Laurich)

RESPONSE: No political staff within the EOP have been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY 02 or FY 03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus.

Eisenhower Executive Office Building

QUESTION 161: Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? [this question does not apply to the White House residence.] (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 162: Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilitles) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 163: For the record, please provide the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings. POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 164: For the record, please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 165: Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 166: Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 167: Please provide a list of all EOP and EOP-support-related agencies that occupied space in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building on 1/20/01 that have since been relocated to locations outside the EEOB. For each agency that relocated, please identify the agency that paid the move-related costs. (POC – Steve Beattie)

REV_00167714

RESPONSE: 167: See Attachment B. (chart will be inserted here)

QUESTION 168: What is the status of the vacant space on the 17th Street side of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building? (POC – Steve Beattie)

RESPONSE: 168: With the exception of the ground floor cafeteria and kitchen, several fourth floor offices, and a few storage areas, the space remains essentially vacant as progress continues on the Fire and Life Safety Improvements project.

EOP Staffing Levels:

QUESTION 169: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2002 (actual) and FY03-FY04 (estimates). Please provide a list of the "historically provided" White House Office positions, the office to which these positions are assigned and the agency that pays the salary for each of these positions. (POC – Jon Laurich)

My understanding is that;DOJ believes that either interpretation of the disputed Safety Act provision is defensible, and in fact has concluded that the;disjunctive interpretation is the better reading.; Given that the Attorney General is the final arbiter on legal issues, it does not appear to me that there is any longer a basis for a;dispute over the legality of either option that is being considered.; Accordingly, there remains only a policy judgment to be made about which of those discretionary options best serves the Administration's objectives.; I'm not steeped in the ins and outs of the policy here, but would certainly be favorably disposed as a general matter to an interpretation which preserves rather than restricts the Secretary's authority.;

HEALTH
Beginning Precarious Process, Hatch Introduces Asbestos Bill
Senate Judiciary Chairman Hatch late Thursday introduced long-awaited asbestos litigation reform legislation, with Democratic Sens. Ben Nelson of Nebraska and Zell Miller of Georgia signing on, but without further support from key Democrats.
The backlash against the bill, which Hatch decided to introduce despite the urging of Democrats to keep working on it, may propel parties back to the negotiating table, Democrats hope.
"They tried the bum's rush, and it didn't work," one aide said.
The bill Nelson and Miller backed includes some modest modifications to the draft that Hatch proposed earlier this week, including provisions that would allow en banc review of decisions by a newly created federal asbestos court. Unlike in the earlier draft, the legislation also allows cases to randomly be assigned to judges and subjects suspected "bad actors" to review by the attorney general's office.
Introducing the measure on the Senate floor, Hatch agreed to continue tweaking the bill, particularly saying he may address one of the Democrats' biggest concerns -- that awards to asbestos victims may exceed the $108 billion trust fund. But the lack of broad support from the Democratic Caucus and whispers of objections from some Republicans spells trouble for the bill as written, observers said.
Senate Judiciary ranking member Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said that he ultimately may throw his support behind the Hatch bill, but indicated he will hold out his support until substantive changes are made.
"For a bill to pass, we both have to be on it, and we both know that," Leahy said.
Democrats, echoing concerns by labor unions and some others, are worried that the legislation does not contain a "backstop" to ensure that the fund does not run dry. They also worry that medical criteria sets too high a bar for victims to get compensation.

Compensation levels for victims -- with a maximum award of $750,000- also are too low, some Democrats say.
Hatch warned that anyone who would not negotiate in good faith would be "somebody who destroys -- or tries to destroy -- the only game in town."
He said the legislation was needed to rein in a litigation system that has spun out of control, with more than 70 companies in bankruptcy as a result of asbestos payouts and more than two-thirds of plaintiffs who were not even ill.
The legislation is partly the product of months of private sector negotiations involving insurers, unions, defendant companies and others, who have supported litigation reform in order to prevent bankruptcies and to target compensation to those plaintiffs who have been harmed by asbestos exposure.
Senate Finance ranking member Max Baucus, D-Mont., complained in a letter to Hatch that the planned bill would exclude many victims of a notorious asbestos-exposure case in the mining town of Libby, Mont., where employees of W.R. Grace & Co. were exposed to asbestos.
Many townspeople in Libby have become ill or died of asbestos-related illnesses, Baucus noted, but many of the victims would not be eligible for compensation under the proposed federal system.
The children of W.R. Grace employees would not be eligible because, unlike their fathers, they did not have "occupational" exposure or work for five years in an asbestos industry. They inhaled fibers carried on their fathers' clothes, Baucus said. Among other criticisms, Baucus also said he was concerned about the amount that companies would pay into the trust.
"If I read your draft legislation correctly, W.R. Grace will be required to pay into the trust fund created by your bill only 1.45333 percent of their 2002 revenues for years one through five, with that amount declining over the next 20 years out to year 25," he wrote. "This is a paltry amount."
Further complicating progress on the bill, labor unions have halted talks on the legislation, saying that the provisions in the Hatch draft leave workers worse off than they are under current law. Negotiations will not continue until Hatch demonstrates that unions' concerns will be addressed, they said.
"If Sen. Hatch does introduce the bill -- if he continues to insist any negotiations go on in that framework -- then I don't think anything is going to happen," said AFL-CIO General Counsel Jon Hiatt.
Meanwhile, Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., reintroduced legislation from last year that would ban the use of asbestos. Asbestos, which can cause illnesses including cancer, is illegal in more than 30 other countries, Murray noted. The bill would complement the goals of the Hatch proposal, Murray said, although she had not taken a position on the bill.
"Our legislation is necessary on top of that legislation -- otherwise, we will need funds far into the future," Murray said. By Emily Heil

Beginning Precarious Process, Hatch Introduces Asbestos Bill

Senate Judiciary Chairman Hatch late Thursday introduced long-awaited asbestos litigation reform legislation, with Democratic Sens. Ben Nelson of Nebraska and Zell Miller of Georgia signing on, but without further support from key Democrats.

The backlash against the bill, which Hatch decided to introduce despite the urging of Democrats to keep working on it, may propel parties back to the negotiating table, Democrats hope.

"They tried the bum's rush, and it didn't work," one aide said.

The bill Nelson and Miller backed includes some modest modifications to the draft that Hatch proposed earlier this week, including provisions that would allow en banc review of decisions by a newly created federal asbestos court. Unlike in the earlier draft, the legislation also allows cases to randomly be assigned to judges and subjects suspected "bad actors" to review by the attorney general's office.

Introducing the measure on the Senate floor, Hatch agreed to continue tweaking the bill, particularly saying he may address one of the Democrats' biggest concerns -- that awards to asbestos victims may exceed the $108 billion trust fund. But the lack of broad support from the Democratic Caucus and whispers of objections from some Republicans spells trouble for the bill as written, observers said.

Senate Judiciary ranking member Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said that he ultimately may throw his support behind the Hatch bill, but indicated he will hold out his support until substantive changes are made.

"For a bill to pass, we both have to be on it, and we both know that," Leahy said.

Democrats, echoing concerns by labor unions and some others, are worried that the legislation does not contain a "backstop" to ensure that the fund does not run dry. They also worry that medical criteria sets too high a bar for victims to get compensation.

Compensation levels for victims -- with a maximum award of $750,000- also are too low, some Democrats say.

Hatch warned that anyone who would not negotiate in good faith would be "somebody who destroys -- or tries to destroy -- the only game in town."

He said the legislation was needed to rein in a litigation system that has spun out of control, with more than 70 companies in bankruptcy as a result of asbestos payouts and more than two-thirds of plaintiffs who were not even ill.

The legislation is partly the product of months of private sector negotiations involving insurers, unions, defendant companies and others, who have supported litigation reform in order to prevent bankruptci es and to target compensation to those plaintiffs who have been harmed by asbestos exposure.

Senate Finance ranking member Max Baucus, D-Mont., complained in a letter to Hatch that the planned bill would exclude many victims of a notorious asbest os-exposure case in the mining town of Libby, Mont., where employees of W.R. Grace & Co. were exposed to asbestos.

Many townspeople in Libby have become ill or died of asbestos-related illnesses, Baucus noted, but many of the victims would not be eligible for compensation under the proposed federal system.

The children of W.R. Grace employees would not be eligible because, unlike their fathers, they did not have "occupational" exposure or work for five years in an asbestos industry. They inhaled fibers carried on their fathers' clothes, Baucus said. Among other criticisms, Baucus also said he was concerned about the amount that companies would pay into the trust.

Further complicating progress on the bill, labor unions have halted talks on the legislation, saying that the provisions in the Hatch draft leave workers worse off than they are under current law. Negotiations will not continue until Hatch demonstrates that unions' concerns will be addressed, they said.

"If Sen. Hatch does introduce the bill -- if he continues to insist any negotiations go on in that framework -- then I don't think anything is going to happen," said AFL-CIO General Counsel Jon Hiatt.

Meanwhile, Sen. Patty Murray, D-Wash., reintroduced legislation from last year that would ban the use of asbestos. All) just got a call from David Leitch regarding the regulations.; He walked me through some of the email traffic on this and said that) while he didn,t want to wade knee-deep into it)it seemed to him, in the end to be more of a policy call) given that DOJ felt it could defend regulations that didn,t require all 7 factors to be met.; I believe you all were copied on an email to this effect from David.

On this point, the Secretary called me last night to speak about the Safety Act.; I explained that there were two potential interpretations of the statute floating around:; (1) all 7 criteria must be met and (2) all 7 criteria must be considered and it would be within the Department,s discretion how to weight them.; I said that as his counsel I would recommend #2, that I thought that it made more sense as a policy matter (because it permitted the Department to exercise discretion based on its policy needs, i.e., to interpret broadly or narrowly and to respond to policy needs over time, as we learned more about the implementation of the Act).; We discussed and he concurred.

I have not had a chance to look at the language John drafted and will not be able to until tomorrow am; that said, I think the process is coalescing around the idea that the regulations should permit discretion wrt the weighing of seven factors.; The debate has been useful in that it has focused all our attention on this important issue.; If anyone wants to call me to discuss further, please don,t hesitate) I,ve had trouble looping up with Joe today and thus apologize for resorting to email.

TITLE II—AIRPORT PROJECT STREAMLINING

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Airport Streamlining Approval Process Act of 2003''.

SEC. 202. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) airports play a major role in interstate and foreign commerce;

(2) congestion and delays at our Nation's major airports have a significant negative impact on our Nation's economy;

(3) airport capacity enhancement projects at congested airports are a national priority and should be constructed on an expedited basis;

(4) airport capacity enhancement projects must include an environmental review process that provides local citizenry an opportunity for consideration of and appropriate action to address environmental concerns; and

(5) the Federal Aviation Administration, airport authorities, communities, and other Federal, State, and local government agencies must work together to develop a plan, set and honor milestones and deadlines, and work to protect the environment while sustaining the economic vitality that will result from the continued growth of aviation.

SEC. 203. PROMOTION OF NEW RUNWAYS.

Section 40104 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c) AIRPORT CAPACITY ENHANCEMENT PROJECTS AT CONGESTED AIRPORTS.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Administrator shall take action to encourage the construction of airport capacity enhancement projects at congested airports as those terms are defined in section 47178.".

SEC. 204. AIRPORT PROJECT STREAMLINING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 471 is amended by inserting after section 47153 the following:

"SUBCHAPTER III—AIRPORT PROJECT STREAMLINING

"§ 47171. DOT as lead agency

"(a) AIRPORT PROJECT REVIEW PROCESS.—The Secretary of Transportation shall develop and implement a coordinated review process for airport capacity enhancement projects at congested airports.

"(b) COORDINATED REVIEWS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The coordinated review process under this section shall provide that all environmental reviews, analyses, opinions, permits, licenses, and approvals that must be issued or made by a Federal agency or airport sponsor for an airport capacity enhancement project at a congested airport will be conducted concurrently, to the maximum extent practicable, and completed within a time period established by the Secretary, in cooperation with the agencies identified under subsection (c) with respect to the project.

"(2) AGENCY PARTICIPATION.—Each Federal agency identified under subsection (c) shall formulate and implement administrative, policy, and procedural mechanisms to enable the agency to ensure completion of environmental reviews, analyses, opinions, permits, licenses, and approvals described in paragraph (1) in a timely and environmentally responsible manner.

"(c) IDENTIFICATION OF JURISDICTIONAL AGENCIES.—With respect to each airport capacity enhancement project at a congested airport, the Secretary shall identify, as soon as practicable, all Federal and State agencies that may have jurisdiction over environmental-related matters that may be affected by the project or may be required by law to conduct an environmental-related review or analysis of the project or determine whether to issue an environmental-related permit, license, or approval for the project.

"(d) STATE AUTHORITY.—If a coordinated review process is being implemented under this section by the Secretary with respect to a project at an airport within the boundaries of a State, the State, consistent with State law, may choose to participate in such process and provide that all State agencies that have jurisdiction over environmental-related matters that may be affected by the project or may be required by law to conduct an environmental-related review or analysis of the project or determine whether to issue an environmental-related permit, license, or approval for the project, be subject to the process.

"(e) MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING.—The coordinated review process developed under this section may be incorporated into a memorandum of understanding for a project between the Secretary and the heads of other Federal and State agencies identified under subsection (c) with respect to the project and the airport sponsor.

"(f) EFFECT OF FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—

"(1) NOTIFICATION OF CONGRESS AND CEQ.—If the Secretary determines that a Federal agency, State agency, or airport sponsor that is participating in a coordinated review process under this section with respect to a project has not met a deadline established under subsection (b) for the project, the Secretary shall notify, within 30 days of the date of such determination, the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, the Council on Environmental Quality, and the agency or sponsor involved about the failure to meet the deadline.

"(2) AGENCY REPORT.—Not later than 30 days after date of receipt of a notice under paragraph (1), the agency or sponsor involved shall submit a report to the Secretary, the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives, the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate, and the Council on Environmental Quality explaining why the agency or sponsor did not meet the deadline and what actions it intends to take to complete or issue the required review, analysis, opinion, license, or approval.

"(g) PURPOSE AND NEED.—For any environmental review, analysis, opinion, permit, license, or approval that must be issued or made by a Federal or State agency that is participating in a coordinated review process under this section with respect to an airport capacity enhancement project at a congested airport and that requires an analysis of purpose and need for the project, the agency, notwithstanding any other provision of law, shall be bound by the project purpose and need as defined by the Secretary.

"(h) ALTERNATIVES ANALYSIS.—The Secretary shall determine the reasonable alternatives to an airport capacity enhancement project at a congested airport. Any other Federal or State agency that is participating in a coordinated review process under this section with respect to the project shall consider only those alternatives to the project that the Secretary has determined are reasonable.

"(i) SOLICITATION AND CONSIDERATION OF COMMENTS.—In applying subsections (g) and (h), the Secretary shall solicit and consider comments from interested persons and governmental entities.

"(j) MONITORING BY TASK FORCE.—The Transportation Infrastructure Streamlining Task Force, established by Executive Order 13274 (67 Fed. Reg. 59449; relating to environmental stewardship and transportation infrastructure project reviews) may monitor airport projects that are subject to the coordinated review process under this section.

"§ 47172. Categorical exclusions

"Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary of Transportation shall develop and publish a list of categorical exclusions from the requirement that an environmental assessment or an environmental impact statement be prepared under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.) for projects at airports.

"§ 47173. Access restrictions to ease construction

"At the request of an airport sponsor for a congested airport, the Secretary of Transportation may approve a restriction on use of a runway to be constructed at the airport to minimize potentially significant adverse noise impacts from the runway only if the Secretary determines that imposition of the restriction—

"(1) is necessary to mitigate those impacts and expedite construction of the runway;

"(2) is the most appropriate and a cost-effective measure to mitigate those impacts, taking into consideration any environmental tradeoffs associated with the restriction; and

"(3) would not adversely affect service to small communities, adversely affect safety or efficiency of the national airspace system, unjustly discriminate against any class of user of the airport, or impose an undue burden on interstate or foreign commerce.

"§ 47174. Airport revenue to pay for mitigation

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding section 47107(b), section 47133, or any other provision of this title, the Secretary of Transportation may allow an airport sponsor carrying out an airport capacity enhancement project at a congested airport to make payments, out of revenues generated at the airport (including local taxes on aviation fuel), for measures to mitigate the environmental impacts of the project if the Secretary finds that—

"(1) the mitigation measures are included as part of, or support, the preferred alternative for the project in the documentation prepared pursuant to the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.);

"(2) the use of such revenues will provide a significant incentive for, or remove an impediment to, approval of the project by a State or local government; and

"(3) the cost of the mitigation measures is reasonable in relation to the mitigation that will be achieved.

"(b) MITIGATION OF AIRCRAFT NOISE.—Mitigation measures described in subsection (a) may include the insulation of residential buildings and buildings used primarily for educational or medical purposes to mitigate the effects of aircraft noise and the improvement of such buildings as required for the insulation of the buildings under local building codes.

"§ 47175. Airport funding of FAA staff

"(a) ACCEPTANCE OF SPONSOR-PROVIDED FUNDS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may accept funds from an airport sponsor, including funds provided to the sponsor under section 47114(c), to hire additional staff or obtain the services of consultants in order to facilitate the timely processing, review, and completion of environmental activities associated with an airport development project.

"(b) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISION.—Instead of payment from an airport sponsor from funds apportioned to the sponsor under section 47114, the Administrator, with agreement of the sponsor, may transfer funds that would otherwise be apportioned to the sponsor under section 47114 to the account used by the Administrator for activities described in subsection (a).

"(c) RECEIPTS CREDITED AS OFFSETTING COLLECTIONS.—Notwithstanding section 3302 of title 31, any funds accepted under this section, except funds transferred pursuant to subsection (b)—

"(1) shall be credited as offsetting collections to the account that finances the activities and services for which the funds are accepted;

"(2) shall be available for expenditure only to pay the costs of activities and services for which the funds are accepted; and

"(3) shall remain available until expended.

"(d) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—No funds may be accepted pursuant to subsection (a), or transferred pursuant to subsection (b), in any fiscal year in which the Federal Aviation Administration does not allocate at least the amount it expended in fiscal year 2002, excluding amounts accepted pursuant to section 337 of the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2002 (115 Stat. 862), for the activities described in subsection (a).

"§ 47176. Authorization of appropriations

"In addition to the amounts authorized to be appropriated under section 106(k), there is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Transportation, out of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502), $4,200,000 for fiscal year 2004 and for each fiscal year thereafter to facilitate the timely processing, review, and completion of environmental activities associated with airport capacity enhancement projects at congested airports.

"§ 47177. Designation of aviation safety and aviation security projects for priority environmental review

"(a) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may designate an aviation safety or aviation security project for priority environmental review. The Administrator may not delegate this designation authority.

"(b) PROJECT DESIGNATION CRITERIA.—The Administrator shall establish guidelines for the designation of an aviation safety or aviation security project for priority environmental review. Such guidelines shall include consideration of—

"(1) the importance or urgency of the project;

"(2) the potential for undertaking the environmental review under existing emergency procedures under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.);

"(3) the need for cooperation and concurrent reviews by other Federal or State agencies; and

"(4) the prospect for undue delay if the project is not designated for priority review.

"(c) COORDINATED ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEWS.—

"(1) TIMELINES AND HIGH PRIORITY FOR COORDINATED ENVIRONMENTAL REVIEWS.—The Administrator, in consultation with the heads of affected agencies, shall establish specific timelines for the coordinated environmental review of an aviation safety or aviation security project designated under subsection (a). Such timelines shall be consistent with the timelines established in existing laws and regulations. Each Federal agency with responsibility for project environmental reviews, analyses, opinions, permits, licenses, and approvals shall accord any such review a high priority and shall conduct the review expeditiously and, to the maximum extent possible, concurrently with other such reviews.

"(2) AGENCY PARTICIPATION.—Each Federal agency identified under subsection (c) shall formulate and implement administrative, policy, and procedural mechanisms to enable the agency to ensure completion of environmental reviews, analyses, opinions, permits, licenses, and approvals described in paragraph (1) in a timely and environmentally responsible manner.

"(d) STATE PARTICIPATION.—

"(1) INVITATION TO PARTICIPATE.—If a priority environmental review process is being implemented under this section with respect to a project within the boundaries of a State with applicable State environmental requirements and approvals, the Administrator shall invite the State to participate in the process.

"(2) STATE CHOICE.—A State invited to participate in a priority environmental review process, consistent with State law, may choose to participate in such process and direct that all State agencies, which have jurisdiction by law to conduct an environmental review or analysis of the project to determine whether to issue an environmentally related permit, license, or approval for the project, be subject to the process.

"(e) FAILURE TO GIVE PRIORITY REVIEW.—

"(1) NOTICE.—If the Secretary of Transportation determines that a Federal agency or a participating State is not complying with the requirements of this section and that such noncompliance is undermining the environmental review process, the Secretary shall notify, within 30 days of such determination, the head of the Federal agency or, with respect to a State agency, the Governor of the State.

"(2) REPORT TO SECRETARY.—A Federal agency that receives a copy of a notification relating to that agency made by the Secretary under paragraph (1) shall submit, within 30 days after receiving such copy, a written report to the Secretary explaining the reasons for the situation described in the notification and what remedial actions the agency intends to take.

"(3) NOTIFICATION OF CEQ AND COMMITTEES.—If the Secretary determines that a Federal agency has not satisfactorily addressed the problems within a reasonable period of time following a notification under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall notify the Council on Environmental Quality, the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation of the Senate.

"(f) PROCEDURAL PROVISIONS.—The procedures set forth in subsections (c), (e), (g), (h), and (i) of section 47171 shall apply with respect to an aviation safety or aviation security project under this section in the same manner and to the same extent as such procedures apply to an airport capacity enhancement project at a congested airport under section 47171.

"(g) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions apply:

"(1) AVIATION SAFETY PROJECT.—The term 'aviation safety project' means an aviation project that—

"(A) has as its primary purpose reducing the risk of injury to persons or damage to aircraft and property, as determined by the Administrator; and

"(c) GUIDELINES.—

"(1) ISSUANCE.—The Administrator shall issue guidelines concerning the pilot program. Such guidelines, at a minimum, shall define the criteria and process for determining when a capacity reduction event exists that warrants the use of collaborative decisionmaking among carriers at airports participating in the pilot program and that prescribe the methods of communication to be implemented among carriers during such an event.

"(2) VIEWS.—The Administrator may obtain the views of interested parties in issuing the guidelines.

"(d) EFFECT OF DETERMINATION OF EXISTENCE OF CAPACITY REDUCTION EVENT.—Upon a determination by the Administrator that a capacity reduction event exists, the Administrator may authorize air carriers and foreign air carriers operating at an airport participating in the pilot program to communicate for a period of time not to exceed 24 hours with each other concerning changes in their respective flight schedules in order to use air traffic capacity most effectively. The Administration shall facilitate and monitor such communication.

"(e) SELECTION OF PARTICIPATING AIRPORTS.—Not later than 30 days after the date on which the Administrator establishes the pilot program, the Administrator shall select 3 airports to participate in the pilot program from among the most capacity constrained airports in the country based on the Administration's Airport Capacity Benchmark Report 2001 or more recent data on airport capacity that is available to the Administrator. The Administrator shall select an airport for participation in the pilot program if the Administrator determines that collaborative decisionmaking among air carriers and foreign air carriers would reduce delays at the airport and have beneficial effects on reducing delays in the national airspace system as a whole.

"(f) ELIGIBILITY OF AIR CARRIERS.—An air carrier or foreign air carrier operating at an airport selected to participate in the pilot program is eligible to participate in the pilot program if the Administrator determines that the carrier has the operational and communications capability to participate in the pilot program.

"(g) MODIFICATION OR TERMINATION OF PILOT PROGRAM AT AN AIRPORT.—The Administrator may modify or end the pilot program at an airport before the term of the pilot program has expired, or may ban an air carrier or foreign air carrier from participating in the program, if the Administrator determines that the purpose of the pilot program is not being furthered by participation of the airport or air carrier or if the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Attorney General, finds that the pilot program or the participation of an air carrier or foreign air carrier in the pilot program has had, or is having, an adverse effect on competition among carriers.

"(h) ANTITRUST IMMUNITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Unless, within 5 days after receiving notice from the Secretary of the Secretary's intention to exercise authority under this subsection, the Attorney General submits to the Secretary a written objection to such action, including reasons for such objection, the Secretary may exempt an air carrier's or foreign air carrier's activities that are necessary to participate in the pilot program under this section from the antitrust laws for the sole purpose of participating in the pilot program. Such exemption shall not extend to any discussions, agreements, or activities outside the scope of the pilot program.

"(2) ANTITRUST LAWS DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'antitrust laws' has the meaning given that term in the first section of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 12).

"(j) EVALUATION.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Before the expiration of the 2-year period for which the pilot program is authorized under subsection (b), the Administrator shall determine whether the pilot program has facilitated more effective use of air traffic capacity and the Secretary, in consultation with the Attorney General, shall determine whether the pilot program has had an adverse effect on airline competition or the availability of air services to communities. The Administrator shall also examine whether capacity benefits resulting from the participation in the pilot program of an airport resulted in capacity benefits to other parts of the national airspace system.

"(2) OBTAINING NECESSARY DATA.—The Administrator may require participating air carriers and airports to provide data necessary to evaluate the pilot program's impact.

"(k) EXTENSION OF PILOT PROGRAM.—At the end of the 2-year period for which the pilot program is authorized, the Administrator may continue the pilot program for an additional 2 years and expand participation in the program to up to 7 additional airports if the Administrator determines pursuant to subsection (j) that the pilot program has facilitated more effective use of air traffic capacity and if the Secretary, in consultation with the Attorney General, determines that the pilot program has had no adverse effect on airline competition or the availability of air services to communities. The Administrator shall select the additional airports to participate in the extended pilot program in the same manner in which airports were initially selected to participate."

As of today, we have responses for 145 of the 169 Questions for the Record (QFR) received from the Transportation, Treasury Subcommittee. Below is information on the coordination process, the coordination schedule, assigned functional responsibilities and hearing record references. The complete package is due to Congress on May 30th. It is imperative that we get the package to Congress on time because the bill markup will take place shortly thereafter.

A. Coordination Process - Please review the attached file entitled "QFR Responses 1" which contains the latest update of responses for the FY 2004 QFRs. If we have not received a response from the POC, the QFR will be highlighted in yellow in the "QFR Responses 1" document. As the missing responses come in, we will send them to you in a separate email. Make all edits within the document using a RED font. We need all edited documents to be sent electronically. Make sure to note in your reply the QFR number that has been edited for quick reference. We will assume that you approve/concur with all answers where you have not made edits. After your review, please reply to this message with an "X" in one of the selections listed below:

Several of the FY 2004 questions for the record refer to pages from last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. Below is the FY 2003 hearing record information.

Note that the Question # refers to this year's (FY 2004) question and the information that follows is what was in last year's (FY 2003) hearing record.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 6:

Issue: Executive Office of the President

Question: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2001 (actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimates).

Answer: The following tables provide the total FY 2001 actual, FY 2002 and FY 2003 estimates for full time equivalents (FTE) and other government employees (OGE) for each EOP and other entity as of April 5, 2002. The OGE numbers are itemized by category on the following page. The FY 2001 actual numbers should be viewed in the context of a Presidential transition year and may vary greatly from the FY 2002 figures. The FY 2002 and FY 2003 numbers are estimates only and therefore subject to change for a number of reasons.

Hearing Record Reference for question 17:

Question: The President's request includes $1,337,000 for travel and transportation of persons, an increase of $976,000 from the estimated level of $361,000 in FY 2002. For FY 2002 and 2003 (estimates), provide a list of trips by location and purpose, including the number of staff traveling and staff position.

Answer: The FY 2002 travel and transportation of persons estimate and FY 2003 budget request provides funding for the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and staff travel, Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) activities and advisory board activities. Specific locations for FY 2003 are currently unavailable due to the fact that they are determined as requirements are finalized. FY 2002 and FY 2003 anticipated travel activities are in furtherance of the OHS mission promulgated in the Executive Orders.

Examples of FY 2003 estimated travel requirements include: per diem and travel for two-thirds of Advisory Board members to attend approximately 40 various meetings and activities; approximately 50 domestic trips for the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and 3 staff members to fulfill outreach requirements; approximately 100 domestic trips for Homeland Security staff to fulfill mission functions as outlined in Executive Order 13228; approximately 24 domestic and 3 overseas trips for the Chair, Vice Chair and one staff member of the CIPB to fulfill outreach requirements as stated in Executive Order 13231; and approximately 12 CIPB staff (director level) trips to outreach the private sector. Of course, these are estimates only and are therefore subject to change for a variety of reasons.

FY 2002 travel expenses incurred to date include trips to Mexico and Canada for border discussions and various locations in the United States to visit first response, bioterrorism research facilities and other initiatives related to homeland security. The following table lists current (as of April 10, 2002) FY 2002 travel expenses as reflected in the accounting system.

Trip Cost Note: Estimated costs of trips will vary greatly from trip to trip to the same city and from one city to another city for four significant reasons; mode of transportation used/authorized, number of days TDY, number of personnel on trip, and whether costs recorded are actual or estimated expenses.

Issue: White House Office

Question: Provide a brief description of the duties and responsibilities of each office (e.g. Chief of Staff, Oval Office Operations, Office of the Press Secretary, Office of Homeland Security, etc.) within the appropriations account "White House Office". By office, provide obligations, FTE and OGE for FY 2001(actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimated). Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc.).

Answer: The purpose of the White House Office is to provide advice and assistance to the President of the United States. This requires a range of professional and support staff. The White House Office is currently divided into the following major units:

Office of the Chief of Staff – Provides advice and assistance to the President and directs the activities of the White House staff.

Oval Office Operations – Provides assistance to the President by, among other things, managing the operations of the Oval Office.

REV_00168096

Advance – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by taking responsibility for the organization and implementation of the President and the First Lady's visits outside of the White House complex.

Cabinet Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the President's Cabinet and agency heads.

Communications, Speechwriting, and Media Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and supporting efforts to communicate and explain the President's views and decisions.

Office of Counsel to the President – Provides advice and assistance to the President and White House staff, principally on matters of law.

Faith-Based and Community Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and implementing the President's initiative to empower community and faith-based organizations to better confront poverty and social decay.

Office of the First Lady – Provides advice and assistance to Mrs. Bush in carrying out her official responsibilities as the First Lady.

Homeland Security – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by developing, coordinating, and advising the President on a comprehensive national strategy to secure the United States from terrorist threats or attacks and, in particular, by coordinating the Executive Branch's efforts to detect, prepare for, prevent, protect against, respond to, and recover from terrorist attacks within the United States. It has no operational role.

Intergovernmental Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by monitoring the views of State and local elected officials and serving as a liaison between the White House and the Executive Branch, on the one hand, and State and local governments, on the other.

Legislative Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the Congress and developing the strategy used to promote and defend the President's legislative agenda.

Management and Administration – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing day-to-day administrative support to the White House staff.

Presidential Personnel – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by recruiting, screening, and recommending to the President qualified candidates for Presidential appointments to Federal departments and agencies.

REV_00168097

Office of the Press Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing information to the national and international press and by handling all national press inquiries such as interview requests, requests for transcripts or releases, and travel and scheduling information.

Scheduling – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by coordinating the planning, organization, and implementation of the President's daily and long-range schedules.

Office of the Staff Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, managing documents or other items addressed to the President, including correspondence and gifts.

Strategic Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating the planning and development of a long-range strategy for achieving Presidential priorities; conducting research; and assisting in message development and other communications activities in conjunction with the Office of Public Liaison and the Office of Political Affairs.

USA Freedom Corps – Provides advice and assistance to the President on matters relating to enlisting Americans in public service at home and abroad; in particular, it provides advice and support on the work of, and recognizes participants in, three service efforts – the newly created Citizen Corps, AmeriCorps and Senior Corps, and the Peace Corps.

In addition to these major units, certain individuals – including certain individuals who work with the National Security Council, the Domestic Policy Council, and the National Economic Council – are also White House Office officers or employees, although the units within which they principally work are not themselves part of the White House Office.

The major units within the White House Office are administratively designated by the President's Chief of Staff and the number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. Therefore, a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit is not particularly meaningful. White House Office obligations, FTE and OGE are summarized below. The Office of Homeland Security is funded under the emergency supplemental this fiscal year, and therefore, the FY 2002 numbers below do not include OHS personnel or funding. FY 2002 estimates for the OHS are addressed separately in response to other committee questions.

* FY 2002 excludes the approximately 65 OGEs currently on board for the Office of Homeland Security.
The FY 2002 OGEs for the Office of Homeland Security are funded out of the emergency supplemental funding.
FY 2003 includes the 95 OGEs for the Office of Homeland Security requested in the FY 2003 Budget Request.

Issue: The Committee is resubmitting the following questions due to the lack of detailed information provided in the original responses

The major units within the White House Office are simply a creature of administrative convenience, and the number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. Therefore a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit is not particularly meaningful. Nevertheless, set forth below is a breakout based on current estimates and planning, which of course, may differ during the actual execution year.

It should be noted that a single budget is prepared for the WHO. This single budget is prepared based on a number of criteria such as: prior spending patterns, estimated requirements, OMB provided inflation factors, and the priorities of the President. During a given execution year, personnel costs are allocated based upon that year's sometimes unique staffing decisions. The remainder of the budget is allocated initially to two WHO offices. The travel budget is allocated in its entirety to Scheduling and Advance and obligated against this office if the travel is done in support of the President. Any travel undertaken that is not in support of a Presidential trip is charged to the office of the staff member in question. The remaining portion of the non-personnel, non-travel budget, including expenses for rent, supplies, equipment and other services is considered overhead and charged as such to the White House Office of Management and Administration.

The only exceptions are the Office of Homeland Security and the USA Freedom Corps Office. Since these are new offices requiring new budget authority, all new obligations (including travel and overhead) anticipated as a result of these offices are reflected in the FY 2003 estimates for these offices.

Hearing Record Reference for question 73:

Question: Referencing the FTE/OGE tables that break-out personnel classifications by type of OGE, please explain why the number of "historically provided" employees decreased so significantly (from 25 to 1) for the Vice President's office between FY2001 and FY2002. Please provide the Subcommittee your definition of each OGE category listed on the table (agency reps, assignees, detailees, HP services, others, student volunteers, WH fellows, PMI). Please also provide a listing of the 15 "historically provided" White House Office positions identified on the FY2002 chart, the White House Office to which these positions are assigned, and the agency that pays the salary of each of the 15 positions.

Answer: The difference in the number of "Historically Provided" employees in the Vice President's Office from FY 2001 to FY 2002 is due to the redesignation of U.S. Senate employees. In FY 2001, the previous administration designated U.S. Senate employees in the Vice President's office as "Historically Provided". This was done in error and it has since been corrected. For FY 2002 and FY 2003, U. S. Senate employees are more accurately designated as "Other" since they do not fit into any other OGE category.

The following chart shows the 15 "Historically Provided" White House Office positions, the associated office and the agency that pays their salaries.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 79:

Question: How many political appointees are currently employed within the Executive Office of the President?

Answer: The term "political appointees" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2 of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President has the following number of political appointees directly hired

Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

QUESTION 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

QUESTION 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

RESPONSE: As presented in the Congressional Budget Submission pages 4, 5, and 6, the Executive Office of the President (EOP) has established a Budget Activity structure that is consistent, beginning with the budget submission and extending through the accounting and reporting phases. The EOP accounting system will track and report obligations and expenditures consistent with this structure through the use of budget activity, program, sub-program, and line item codes assigned to each transaction. EOP has the ability to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk to the individual transactions authorized under sections 105 and 106 of Title 3 of the United States Code.

QUESTION 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

RESPONSE: The following appropriations in Public Law 108-7: Compensation of the President, White House Office Salaries and Expenses, Office of Homeland Security, Executive Residence at the White House, White House Repair and Restoration, Council of Economic Advisers, Office of Policy Development, National Security Council, Office of Administration would be combined into one appropriation entitled "The White House". The individual language in Public Law 108-7 for each of those appropriations would be removed. However, suggested language for the combined appropriation is provided in the Appendix to the FY 2004 Budget (page 881) and states: "For the Compensation of the President and White House Office (including the Office of Homeland Security), Executive Residence, White House Repair and Restoration, Office of Policy and Development, Office of Administration, Council of Economic Advisers and the National Security Council, (hereinafter, and solely for the purposes of Title VI of this Act, "the White House"), $183,770,000, of which $24,803,000 shall remain available until expended, including compensation for the President, including an expense allowance of $50,000 as authorized by U.S.C. 102; for travel expense of $100,000 as authorized by 3 U.S.C. 103; for necessary expenses for the White House as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109 and 3 U.S.C. 105; for the necessary expenses of the Executive Residence at the White House as authorized by 3 U.S.C. 105,109,110, and 112-114; for the necessary expenses of the Offices and Councils in the White House account as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109, 15 U.S.C. 1021, and 3 U.S.C. 105 and 107 (including not to exceed $19,000 for official reception and representation expenses); and for the hire of passenger motor vehicles: Provide, That none of the funds made available to the President for official expenses shall be expended for any other purpose and any unused portion of such funds shall revert to the Treasury pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 1552: Provided further, That no such funds shall be considered as taxable to the President: Provided further, That advances or repayments or transfers from this appropriation may be made to any department or agency for expenses of carrying out such activities."

The suggested language, with the exception of a consolidated appropriation amount incorporates the same restrictions and clarifications as contained the language contained in the Public Law 108-7 for the appropriations being consolidated. The appropriations for Vice President's Salaries and Expense, Vice President's Residence Operating Expenses, Office of Management and Budget, Office of National Drug Control Policy, Unanticipated Needs will remain separate appropriations and will therefore not require any language changes as a result of the combination.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 White House (WH) consolidated budget net increase of $5,292,000 for communications is required in three major areas:

- Most of the increase ($4,420,000) is needed in the OA Capital Investment Plan for offsite data center communications. This facility will transition into full operation during FY 2004. The telecommunications between the offsite data center and the EOP complex are necessary to provide expanded, survivable and redundant connectivity, continuity of operations, disaster recovery and system support. These costs include funds for telecommunications lines, two additional

DS-3 data paths, two T-1 lines, and backups to provide the communications bandwidth necessary for servicing the EOP complex.

- $482,000 in the White House Office budget to provide a custom communications package which will enable the Homeland Security Council to establish a presence for its staff within the White House Situation Room.

- $100,000 for information assurance in the OA salaries/expenses budget. In addition to the Offsite Data Center project, the OA FY 2004 budget also includes a request for an additional $100,000 for the information assurance program in the FY 2004 salaries/expenses account. This program will enable the CIO office to correct vulnerabilities in the EOP information security perimeter to secure internal systems, to perform real-time monitoring of perimeter network devices.

- $151,000 in transfers of Lexis-Nexis database costs from nonconsolidated agencies to the consolidated White House appropriation. The FY 2004 budget envisions that $72,000 will be transferred from USTR, $56,000 from ONDCP, $15,000 from OMB, and $8,000 from CEQ so that the EOP can have a single funding source for EOP-wide Lexis-Nexis service.

- $139,000 for adjustments to maintain the same level of services for the base funding during FY 2004. This is calculated on the basis of the $7,010,000 in FY 2003 funding.

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an "EOP average" rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

RESPONSE: The EOP space rental project began during the summer of 2002 at the request of OMB's budget examiners, who were working to ensure that EOP agencies moved to the same market-based rent methodology used to determine space rental rates for GSA's other Federal properties. OMB requested that GSA and EOP review the space rental costs for each EOP property and each EOP agency so that the most up-to-date costs available were included in the FY 2004 budget proposal. Another significant concern in this project is to ensure that GSA will work with the EOP to ensure that the critical needs of the EOP are funded and executed.

As a result of the initial project, OA and GSA began a series of meetings which culminated in the space estimates which were included in the budget. GSA staff prepared a comprehensive listing of EOP properties, which itemized the space occupied by each

EOP entity. This listing included commercial and government-owned space, current estimates of rentable square footage, and the annual rental rate per square foot. EOP staff provided updated estimates of the rentable square footage.

During this process, GSA blended the fair-market rates for the permanent EOP buildings into a single blended rate. This was done to simplify the administrative work when EOP staff are relocated. This is especially needed in the post-9/11 environment's unusually high number of large-scale EOP agency relocations driven by security considerations as well as the result of the legislation creating the Department of Homeland Security. The EOP average rental rate for Federally-owned properties (New Executive Office Building (NEOB), Eisenhower Executive Office Building (OEOB), White House, Winder Building, Jackson Place) is $29.60 annually per square foot. GSA adds an additional building security charge for buildings which are not protected by the US Secret Service. The average rental rates used to determine each EOP entity's budget estimate for office space are as follows:

EOP Entity	Locations	Owned or Leased	Average Rental Rate
OMB	EEOB, NEOB	owned	$29.60/sf
CEQ	EEOB	owned	$29.60

QUESTION 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: The following tables provide the total FY 2002 actual, FY 2003 and FY 2004, estimates for full time equivalents (FTE) and other government employees (OGE) for each EOP and other entity as of May 5, 2003. The OGE numbers are itemized by category on the following page. The FY 2003 numbers have the Office of Homeland Security in a separate category, which accordingly decreased the White House numbers. The FY 2003 and FY 2004 numbers are estimates only and are therefore subject to change.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

QUESTION 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

RESPONSE: An object class breakdown of estimated HSC costs in FY 2003 and FY 2004 is provided in the table below. Please note that the FY 2003 estimate covers only costs incurred after the enactment of the FY 2003 appropriation on February 20, 2003. Unlike other EOP entities which operated under continuing resolutions between October 1, 2003 and February 20, 2003, the Office of Homeland Security was not permitted to utilize the CR funding mechanism but instead continued to charge FY 2003 expenses against the no-year emergency funding (provided in FY2002) until the FY 2003 appropriation was enacted. Therefore the FY 2003 estimate reflects only seven months of activity, whereas the FY 2004 Request needs to cover HSC expenses for the full 12 months next fiscal year.

	FY 2003 Appropriation	FY 2003 Estimate*	FY 2004 Request	2004 Request - 2003 Estimate
Homeland Security Council:
Personnel	$4,403	$2,800	$5,550	$2,750
Travel	$300	$60	$588	$528
Transportation of Things	$24	$24	$10	-$14
Rent	$0	$0	$200	$200
Communications, Utilities, and Misc.	$209	$50	$1,080	$1,030
Printing and Reproduction	$69	$69	$50	-$19
Other Services	$3,267	$1,267	$528	-$739
Supplies and Materials	$0		$175	$175
Equipment	$0	$50	$150	$100
Subtotal	$8,272	$4,320	$8,331	$4,011

* FY 2003 Estimate covers only seven months vs. FY 2004 Request covering full 12 months

QUESTION 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

RESPONSE: In FY 2004 HSC is requesting $528,000 for Other Services compared with $3,267,000 appropriated for the same category in FY 2003. The decrease is due to reduced requirements of the ongoing missions of the Office of Homeland Security after start-up costs and emergency requirements were met with larger budgets in FY 2002 and FY 2003. Anticipated contractual needs in FY 2004 include maintenance, upgrades, and technical support for the classified computer network that will be extended to HSC staff in FY 2003.

QUESTION 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

REV_00168118

RESPONSE: HSC is requesting resources to support 40 direct hire FTE and 26 Other Government Employees on its staff to fill the 66 positions HSC is projecting for FY 2004.

	FY 2002 Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Request

QUESTION 12: How many positions in the office are filled today, and how many are vacant?

RESPONSE: As of May 15, 2003, 51 positions are filled and 15 are vacant.

QUESTION 13: Please provide a table comparing the number of detailees to OHS, by federal agency, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004 (estimated).

QUESTION 18: Currently, OHS costs are included in both the WHO and OA appropriations. Is that also the case in the FY 2004 request? If so, please provide a table, by appropriation, showing total OHS budgeted costs, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: For FY 2003, although funds were requested as part of the WHO budget activity, the Office of Homeland Security received for the first time its own appropriation, separate from the WHO appropriation. Funds supporting OHS / HSC requirements in FY 2003 were provided also to OA as part of the OA Pilot program. The FY 2004 Request identifies all requirements for OHS / HSC in the WHO Budget Activity, since the OA Pilot program was not guaranteed to continue after FY 2003. See table below:

REV_00168140

(Dollars in Thousands)

	Congressional Budgets
	FY 2002* Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Estimate
OHS / HSC	$30,800	$8,272	$8,331
OA		$783
	$30,800	$9,055	$8,331

*FY 2002 budget for OHS was based on the OHS mission and funding profile prior to the establishment of DHS and was provided by 3 sources of emergency appropriated funds: P.L. 107-38 for $25,000,000; P.L.107-117 for $2,000,000; and P.L. 107-206 for $3,800,000.

QUESTION 19: Last year, it was stated that one MOU existed between OHS and other EOP entities (p. 51). Please provide a copy of the MOU between MOU and the Office of Science and Technology Policy.

RESPONSE: The MOU between OHS and OSTP expired with the creation of the Department of Homeland Security as relevant responsibilities transferred from OHS to DHS, pursuant to the Homeland Security Act of November, 2002.

QUESTION 20: Have any other MOUs been signed since that time?

RESPONSE: An MOU between the Homeland Security Council and the National Security Council was signed in May, 2003 providing for the expansion of NSC's classified computer network to include approved HSC staff with necessary security clearances.

In addition standard interagency agreements were signed between OHS/HSC and the Office of Administration (OA) and OMB to pay for detailees from these EOP agencies to OHS/HSC and separately between OHS/HSC and OA to pay for miscellaneous supplies and materials.

QUESTION 21: At this time last year, OHS planned to establish a coordination center which would function 24 hours a day, 7 days a week; a communications room; and two incident management rooms. At the same time, the Administration made clear that the role of OHS was to establish and coordinate policy, and not to conduct operational activities. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, have these specific activities been descoped or eliminated?

RESPONSE: The role of the Homeland Security Council is to provide confidential policy advice to the President and coordinate policy across the departments and agencies of the executive branch. The Homeland Security Council does not conduct operational activities. The Homeland Security Council does not operate a coordination center. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, DHS is the lead federal agency for incident management. As such, DHS operates a Homeland Security Center with 24 hour/7 days per week coordination and communications capabilities. Those functions do not reside in the Homeland Security Council.

QUESTION 22: How many positions support these activities in the FY 2004 request, and what is the total budgeted amount?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 budget will not fund any personnel or activities related to a coordination center.

QUESTION 23: How are such activities appropriate for a policymaking body, when DHS now exists to coordinate and execute operational activities related to specific homeland security incidents and activities?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council does not operate a coordination center. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, DHS is the lead federal agency for incident management. As such, DHS operates a Homeland Security Center with 24 hour/7 days per week coordination and communications capabilities. Those functions do not reside in the Homeland Security Council.

QUESTION 24: At the time of last year's hearing, the permanent location and amount of space for the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board had not been determined (p. 77). Have these requirements been determined today?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 25: Likewise, total CIPB staffing had not been determined. Do you have an estimate today? What staffing assumptions were made in the FY 2004 budget submission?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

REV_00168142

QUESTION 26: How much funding is included in the FY 2004 request for CIPB, and how does that compare to the current estimate for FY 2003?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 27: Please provide a breakdown showing how those funds would be used.

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 28: Please provide details on any government-industry partnerships that have been created in support of cyber security initiatives coordinated by, or carried out, through EOP or the CIPB.

RESPONSE: In 2002, the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board developed a National Strategy to Secure Cyberspace. To encourage broader participation and input into the development process, a draft strategy was released for public comment in September 2002. The final strategy was released in February 2003. The PCIPB requested the National Infrastructure Assurance Council and the National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee to both provide comments on the draft strategy. In addition, there were 10 town hall meetings held in various portions of the country which brought industry, academia and private citizens together to focus on the complex issues related to cyber security.

The National Strategy to Secure Cyberspace emphasizes that government-industry partnerships will be a cornerstone. As the primary implementer of the Strategy, DHS will be a partner with industry and academia to accomplish the objectives identified by the President's strategy.

National Security Council (POC – Katherine Fertakis)

QUESTION 29: Your request includes a 10.8 percent increase to cover reimbursable detailee costs and additional support staff for the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please explain the need for these increases in detail.

REV_00168143

RESPONSE: The requested increase covers reimbursable detailee costs of personnel from the Department of State. The National Security Council (NSC) may request detailed personnel performing at a high level in high priority positions to remain beyond their initial tour of duty because of their unique qualifications. Public Law 93-126, Section 11, requires the NSC to reimburse the Department of State for details to the NSC that exceed the cap of 13 detailed into their second year and for all staff detailed longer than two years. The FY 2003 increase in this category estimates for details becoming reimbursable during the Spring and the Summer. The FY 2004 increase represents an annualization of the expenses, minus the cost for the details that will not be renewed.

Since the events of September 11, 2001, the PFIAB support staff workload has been significantly increased and consumed by the homeland security effort. Thus far about 95% of the Board's current advisory work for the President has been directly related to homeland security and counter-terrorism. (Intelligence performance thereon, and support to the new department of homeland security) With only 4 staff members and an already overflowing Board work schedule, work on other important PFIAB priorities has been deferred—such as declassification review of PFIAB archived records. At least three additional staff members, including a GS-14 administrative manager, will be needed to adequately meet support requirements as the Board expands its review of intelligence support to homeland security beyond the more immediate structural and organizational issues, and also re-engages the more general intelligence performance issues across the full spectrum of pressing issues. The FY 2004 request includes $250,000 which will fund two reimbursable detailed staff members and one permanent, Schedule A, Excepted Service, GS-14 administrative management position.

QUESTION 30: What are the dollar and percentage increases for each of the above items, compared to the FY 2003 estimated levels?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 request for reimbursable detailees represents an increase of $356,000, or 64%, over the FY 2003 estimated levels. The PFIAB increase of $250,000 will be 100% above the FY 2003 request since this is a new requirement for FY 2004.

QUESTION 31: The justifications indicate that 11 additional positions are being added to this office in FY 2003, raising the estimated from 60 in FY 2002 to an estimated 71 in FY 2003. What specific positions are being created?

RESPONSE: The 11 additional positions, which raise NSC's FTE from 60 to 71, are not new positions. In FY 2003, the Office for Combating Terrorism (OCT) was combined with the NSC budget request. The increased FTE request correlates with the continued funding for and operation of the OCT as a part of the NSC submission.

QUESTION 32: The FY 2004 request includes funds for a new GS-14 administrative manager for the PFIAB. Why is this new position needed at this time?

REV_00168144

RESPONSE: PFIAB requires a permanent administrative position for continuity as well as efficiency reasons. The administrative staff constitutes the lifeblood of the Board: it fulfills all of the support responsibilities, including human resource management, budget, travel, procurement, research, publishing, protocol, and special assistance to the Executive Director, Chair and Vice Chair. With only two administrative people on staff, it is absolutely critical that both individuals be fully knowledgeable about and highly experienced at White House administrative policies, procedures and guidelines; equally important, both must possess highly honed administrative skills and be extremely efficient, effective and professionally dedicated.

The Board simply cannot attain this level of experience and competence by relying on detailees from other agencies, particularly non-reimbursed detailees. More often than not, we must accept whomever an agency can make available. Therefore, the Board will use this one permanent administrative billet to create a PFIAB office manager position. This individual not only will provide continuity of expertise and experience, but also will ensure that the other administrative person obtains the proper professional mentoring and supervision. We plan to make this a GS-14 position, but may start the individual we select at the GS-13 level to allow for personal advancement...and thereby also ensuring, hopefully, a fairly long term of service to the Board.

Office of National Drug Control Policy (POC – Michelle Marx)

QUESTION 33: You are requesting 10 additional FTE in FY 2004 to replace 10 non-reimbursable detailees who are no longer available. Why are these positions no longer available, and what are the specific positions?

RESPONSE: ONDCP's FY 2004 request includes resources to support 125 FTEs, an increase of 10 FTEs over the FY 2003 request. This FTE increase is requested to offset the loss of approximately 20 - 25 of the 30 non-reimbursable military detailee positions the Department of Defense has supported at ONDCP since 1996. (The Department of Defense, as outlined in a December 28, 2001 memorandum, adheres to a general policy that approves of requests for details only on a reimbursable basis. Exceptions to this policy are granted only in the most compelling circumstances when the agency head has certified that the net benefit of the detail accrues to the Department of Defense.)

This 10 FTE increase, along with distributing additional responsibilities among existing staff, will allow ONDCP to absorb the detailee staffing loss and meet its statutory responsibilities. The specific positions would be appointed within the following offices: Planning and Budget; State and Local Affairs; Intelligence; and Supply Reduction.

Renovation of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (POC – Steve Beattie)

QUESTION 34: What is the status of funding provided in FY 2002 and 2003? Please provide a breakdown of funding by the type of activity or renovation performed.

REV_00168145

RESPONSE: 34: The General Service Administration has used FY 2002 Emergency Response Funds in the amount of $1,674,000 for starting the Architects' and Engineers' design contract for the 17th Street Wing Security Modernization Project. GSA is currently in the process of reprogramming $7,500,000 for FY 2003 for design, management and inspection. The FY 2003 reprogramming is required to complete the Design/Build/Bridging documents and assist in managing the Design/Build/Bridging efforts.

QUESTION 35: How much remains unobligated, by appropriation?

RESPONSE: 35: The General Services Administration (GSA) awarded a portion of the design cost in the amount of $1,537,173 utilizing the FY 2002 Emergency Response Fund. $136,827 remains unobligated. GSA has not obligated any FY 2003 funding.

QUESTION 36: Please provide a detailed breakdown showing how funds requested in the GSA budget for FY 2004 would be used.

RESPONSE: 36: The following is a break down on how the funds will be used in FY 2004:

Major Work Items:
Electrical System	$ 10,244,000
Air conditioning system, chillers and piping	$ 12,530,000

QUESTION 37: Please provide a detailed schedule for activities planned in FY 2004.

RESPONSE: 37: The design/build/bridging contract is scheduled to be awarded in March 2004. The current schedule for the project is as follows:

Design Award:	04/03
A/E Bridging Documents Complete:	10/03
Design/Build/Bridging Procurement Start:	09/03

QUESTION 38: How much are you currently paying GSA for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB, and how much rental cost are you incurring for the new locations where relocated employees are working?

RESPONSE: We are paying $0 for FY2003 for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB. GSA is not charging the EOP for the space vacated in September 2001. See Attachment A for the rental cost being incurred for the new locations where relocated employees are working.

QUESTION 41: The justifications (p. 67) indicate an estimated unobligated balance of $7,023,000 in this appropriation at the beginning of FY 2003. Please explain the sources of this balance, and provide a schedule for obligation of increments of those funds.

RESPONSE: The majority ($4,388,127) of the unobligated funds are associated with the Communication System Repairs/Phase 2 which was delayed to unanticipated design requirements. The schedule for completion and obligation of all FY2002 projects is detailed in the table below.

White House Repair and Restoration (POC – Dennis Freemyer)

QUESTION 42: You are requesting $4.225,000 for repairs and restoration of the White House. Is there additional funding in the National Park Service budget or elsewhere in the President's budget request for FY 2004 for similar activities at the White House?

RESPONSE: There are no other budget requests for the same activities at the White House.

QUESTION 43: Of this request, $3,500,000 is for restoration of the east and west wing exterior. Please provide a detailed discussion and breakdown of this request.

RESPONSE: The funding requested is for the continuation (2nd phase) of the East and West Wing Restoration project, the first being funded in FY'02. This is consistent with the original planning for the execution of this project based on the experience of the completed Executive Residence Exterior Restoration completed in 1996. A breakdown of major work items follows:

Pennsylvania Avenue Improvements (POC – Steve Beattie)

QUESTION 44: What is the total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, for which funds were provided in FY 2003?

RESPONSE: This project is to be funded by the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA). The total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House is currently $26.1 million. The information below breaks out the estimated FY 2003 costs for the project.

Project Activity	Projected FY 2003 Obligations
Preliminary Activities
Verification and Concept Studies	$ 605,150
Design Activities
Ground Survey and Mapping	$ 57,524
Subsurface Utility Survey	$ 149,682
Environmental Documentation	$ 75,000
Final Design (Consultant)	$ 1,300,000
Crash Testing	$ 350,000
FHWA Contract Administration	$ 100,000
Design Contingency	$ 262,644
Construction Activities
Construction Contract	$ 18,500,000
Utility Construction	$ 1,500,000
FHWA Contract Administration	$ 1,700,000
MVVA Construction Assistance	$ 500,000
Construction Contingency	$ 1,000,000
Grand Totals	$26,100,000

QUESTION 45: What is the status of that project? When will FY 2003 funds be obligated?

RESPONSE: 45: The status of the security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue is as follows -

- Project's status is an ongoing iterative process as the Design team receives comments from the public and the various stakeholders on surrounding sites.
- Under the National Environmental Policy Act, the final public information meeting for the Environmental Impact Assessment was held on May 5, 2003, which is the last step before the final report is issued the week of May 27, 2003. It is expected that the report's concluding statement will find no significant impact.

- The design team is in the pre-design stage.
- The engineers are currently in the design stage for utility relocation in the project's vicinity.
- The Section 106 review as required by the Secretary of the Interior under the Historic Preservation Act is underway and will develop a Memorandum of Agreement in June 2003, which will address issues regarding the design details. The Section 106 review occurs when a project utilizing federal funds may have an effect upon natural, environmental, or cultural resources and looks at mitigation of any adverse effects to those resources.
- $1.5 million is expected to be obligated at the end of August or early September 2003 to start the utility relocation on Pennsylvania Avenue and at the north ends of Jackson and Madison Places.
- Arrangements have already been made for procurement of the trees to be used on the Avenue since it will require root and limb pruning over two calendar years prior to installation on the Avenue. The trees will be installed after inaugural events in the spring of 2005.
- Approximately, $2,675,000 has been obligated to date (under contract). The remaining $3,685,000 will be obligated within the next six months to have the construction contract awarded by the end of September or early October 2003.

QUESTION 46: How much funding is requested for this project in FY 2004, and where is it located in the budget?

RESPONSE: $15 million has been set aside under the Department of the Interior bill for FY 2004. However, discussions have been held between the Federal Highway Administration and the Office of Policy Development in the Executive Office of the President to make the money available for contract award this fiscal year. Discussions have included placing FY 2004 monies into the FY 2003 supplemental appropriation. With the highway legislation pending, there could be a delay in getting the funding moved into the supplemental appropriation to allow the project to get underway.

QUESTION 47: What is the schedule for studies of traffic congestion mitigation alternatives in the vicinity of the White House, as funded in FY 2003?

RESPONSE: The project administrators met with representatives in the Office of Policy Development in the Executive Office of the President, on May 8, 2003 to begin outlining the scope of the study and a plan to involve the District of Columbia government and neighborhood stakeholders. A schedule for the study has not been developed, but will be prepared in the next three months.

Remote Data Center (POC – Carlos Solari)

QUESTION 48: What is the status of establishment today of the remote data center?

RESPONSE: The remote data center project is on schedule and on budget. The project began last summer by conducting a systems development lifecycle analysis to determine and recommend the location for the facility. From this analysis, EOP decided on building the data center at a hardened FEMA facility located in Maryland. The project is being co-managed with FEMA and was established with three phases: (1) infrastructure build-out of the hardened facility (power, air handlers, etc), (2) construction of the data center itself (cabling, raised flooring, etc), and (3) the transition of EOP data systems (telecommunications, servers, etc). The project is approximately halfway through completion for the first two phases with a scheduled opening (initial operational capability) date of September 2003. The transition phase is on schedule preparing the systems and will proceed to begin the transfer September 2003 – with a planned transition of 12 months for all systems. The following chart shows the funding of the remote data center from FY 2002 thru FY 2004.

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004
CIP	$15,000,000	$5,000,000	$8,403,000
Total	$15,000,000	$5,000,000	$8,403,000

QUESTION 49: Last year, you estimated annual operating costs of this facility to be $7,500,000 (p. 88). Is that your current estimate?

RESPONSE: Last year OA provided a rough estimate of $7,500,000 for the future annual operating cost of the new data center facility. This was based upon the following estimated costs:

- $1,500,000 in communications to maintain connectivity for the EOP,
- $600,000 in space rental,
- $450,000 for hardware maintenance,
- $1,300,000 for software maintenance,
- $2,600,000 for contractor services,
- $300,000 for supplies/components,
- $75,000 for equipment, and
- $675,000 in salaries/benefits.

While most of these estimates remain valid, OA must revise the estimate for space rental to $1,258,000, bringing the revised estimated annual operating costs for the facility to $8,158,000.

REV_00168154

QUESTION 50: Your FY 2004 request includes $8,403,000 to transition the remote data center to full operational status (p. 75). What specific activities are required in FY 2004 to accomplish this? Can you provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request consistent with these activities?

RESPONSE: The following table lists the FY2004 CIP funds requested for the completion of the remote data center construction and initial year operating costs.

Object Class	Object Class Title	Requested Funding (in $1000s)	Description
23.0	Space Rental Payments	$1,258	This estimate reflects $1,258 in rental for the offsite data center and will be the initial rent to be paid for the offsite data center. This cost was previously funded from emergency funds.
23.3	Communications, utilities, and miscellaneous charges	$4,420	$4,420 is for CIP networking/telecommunications projects at the offsite data center. These projects include funds for a tap off of telecommunications lines, two additional DS-3 data paths, two T-1 lines, and backup to support required communications bandwidth, and availability requirements.
25.2	Other Services	$2,700	This estimate reflects Priority System Disaster Recovery costs, Secondary Systems Disaster Recovery costs, Hardware and Software for the Disaster Recovery Site, and Hardware and Software upgrades to support the data center move.
26.0	Supplies and materials	$25	The estimate reflects $25 in additional supplies necessary for start-up operations at the offsite data center. This will include start up costs for office equipment used for the new office spaces.

QUESTION 55: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request for the Freedom Corps, and a brief description of the work to be accomplished under each item.

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 WHO request includes funding for the following USA Freedom Corps requirements.

Personnel: This category provides funding for the cost of the salaries and benefits for the staff of the USA Freedom Corps. The FY 2004 WHO request included $827,000 for this category.

Travel: The USA Freedom Corps office staff members are frequent travelers and often work at the state and local levels with organizations~~., especially in organizing the Citizen Corps across the country~~. In addition, the Director of the USA Freedom Corps or the appropriate staff is required to address gatherings at national conferences, and of state and local officials in order to disseminate information about the President's Call to Service and the activities coordinated by the USA Freedom Corps~~. and answer questions relating to the organization of USA Freedom Corps activities at the local level.~~ The FY 2004 WHO request included $102,000 for this category.

Rent: This category funds the costs of the GSA office space utilized by the USA Freedom Corps. The FY 2004 WHO request included $157,000 for this category.

Printing: This category includes the costs of the creation and printing of documents regarding the USA Freedom Corps mission and policies and initiatives~~specific programs~~ coordinated by its Council. The FY 2004 WHO request included $225,000 for this category.

Other services: This category includes funds for the hiring of contractors to measure the nationwide effects of the USA Freedom Corps efforts through surveys and other measurement tools, funds for the creation and production of materials used in the furtherance of the USA Freedom Corps mission and ~~specific programs,~~initiatives coordinated by its Council. The FY 2004 WHO request included $926,000 for this category. ~~and other activities that will further the mission of the USA Freedom Corps.~~

Communications and Misc.; Supplies and Materials; Equipment: These general categories are managed centrally by the White House Office of Management and Administration. Funds in these categories support the normal costs associated with day to day office operations. The FY 2004 WHO request included $43,000 for this category.

QUESTION 56: Last year, funds were requested for Freedom Corps information dissemination and recognition materials (p. 239). Are similar activities funded in FY 2004? If so, how much?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 WHO request includes requirements for similar activities to those funded in FY 2003 and included are funds for information dissemination and recognition materials. Funds for these activities are included in the Other Services category of the WHO request. An estimated $926,000 of this portion of the request is for USA Freedom Corps requirements.

QUESTION 57: Are additional funds requested in FY 2004 outside the EOP?

RESPONSE: As a White House office and a coordinating council, the USA Freedom Corps does not run, fund, or administer programs. Instead, the USA Freedom Corps coordinates the development of policies and initiatives with various offices/entities in the Executive Branch in support of the President's goal to strengthen the American culture of service while helping all Americans find meaningful service opportunities. This role does not require outside funding and none have been requested by the WHO.

Sensitive Compartmented Information Facilities (POC – Jeff Thompson)

QUESTION 59: Are any funds requested in any EOP office in the FY 2004 President's request for the construction of sensitive compartmented information facilities (SCIFs)?

RESPONSE: No funds are requested for SCIFs in FY 2004.

QUESTION 60: How many such facilities have been built within EOP offices since the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001?

RESPONSE: Since the terrorist attacks of 9/11 the EOP has requested through the Secret Service to the CIA the accreditation of 23 additional SCIFs. To date eight SCIFs have been completed, 13 are pending final approval inspection from the CIA and two requests were later rescinded.

Data Center Relocation (POC – Carlos Solari)

QUESTION 61: What is the status of efforts to relocate the existing EOP data center, and what are plans for the coming year?

RESPONSE: The remote data center project is on track to achieve completion on budget and on schedule. The project began last summer by conducting a systems development lifecycle analysis to determine and recommend the location for the facility. From this analysis, EOP decided on building the data center at a hardened FEMA facility located in Maryland. White House Communications Agency (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 63: Updating the information on page 133 of last year's hearing record, please provide estimated reimbursements for the White House Communications Agency for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: Reimbursements made to the White House Communications Agency, for the non-telecommunications support they provide to the WHO, is broken down into two categories: military personnel and audiovisual support. The amount of planned reimbursement is initially set and agreed to via an inter-agency agreement (IAG). This IAG is then adjusted if needed as a result of actual execution. Reimbursement actuals and estimates follow:

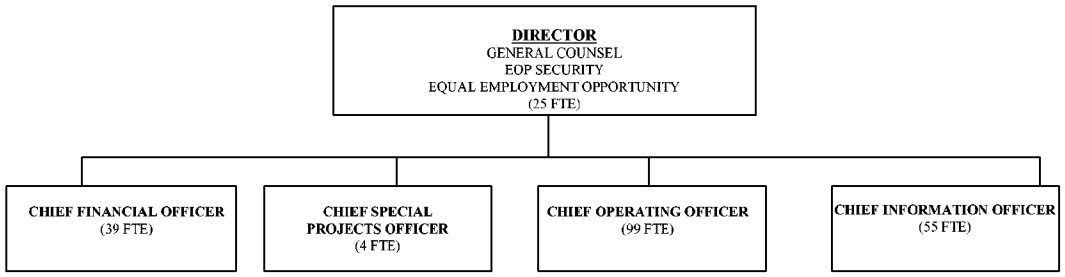
	FY02 (actual)	FY03 (est.)	FY04 (est.)
Military Personnel	$4,376,085	$4,754,346	$4,858,942
Audiovisual Support	$4,543,643	$3,953,848	$2,743,915
Total	$8,919,738	$8,708,194	$7,602,857

REV_00168165

The FY04 estimate for audiovisual support shows a decrease from the FY 2003 estimate due to the move of audiovisual supplies and equipment from IAG reimbursed items to direct procurement through normal WHO channels.

Office of Administration (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 64: Updating the information on page 134 of last year's hearing record, please provide a current organizational chart for the Office of Administration, including the associated numbers of FTEs requested for each office in the FY 2004 President's budget.



RESPONSE: The Office of Administration organization chart provided below reflects the current organizational structure. The FY 2004 FTE request remains constant with FY 2003 levels (222 FTE).

Executive Office of the President

Office of Administration

Organization Chart

Total 222 FTE

QUESTION 65: Last year, it was estimated that 4 FTE were needed to provide administrative services to the Office of Homeland Security. Since that office is substantially smaller due to establishment of the DHS, is there a lesser requirement for OA support? If so, is that reflected in FY 2004 staffing figures?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 budget proposal included the statement that there was "2 CFO staff to support Homeland Security" rather than the 4 FTE referred to in the question. These two Chief Financial Officer (CFO) staff were requested during FY 2003 because last year's OA budget request was a 49% increase over the previous year's spending – and security-related enhancements accounted for nearly all of that increase. The FY 2004 budget proposal included additional security-related enhancements beyond the FY 2003 level. Furthermore, even though the funding level of the Homeland Security Council is not as great as was originally envisioned, it is still a separate account for which the staff must perform the same number of administrative tasks in setting up and monitoring the status of the account. Therefore, the additional two FTE in the CFO office remain necessary to assist EOP offices in executing their new responsibilities.

QUESTION 66: Your salary and expenses request includes a transfer of $1,500 from Homeland Security for information technology services. What are these services?

RESPONSE: The part of OHS that remained with EOP (now called the Homeland Security Council) does not need the information technology contractor support that was previously planned. There is, however, an urgent need to expand the funding needed to support the White House website. The system security put in place to protect the whitehouse.gov website from cyber attack includes a web content distribution designed to make it highly resistant to denial of service type attacks. The cost of this service has increased dramatically, and is directly proportional to the volume of activity. The volume of activity, in turn, is a combination of the website hits and the level of cyber-attack activity directed against the site. The importance of the White House web site cannot be overstated. Along with the DHS website, the whitehouse.gov website is one of the primary government sites with a mission to communicate threat level information to the public.

Due to increased traffic on the White House website, the monthly cost of web caching service to maintain the website has risen from $30,000 per month to more than $75,000 per month. The estimated FY 2004 cost to maintain the website is $1,500,000. No funds were requested for this increased requirement in the FY 2004 budget. OA wishes to use the funds originally requested for the OHS information technology contract support for the White House website effort.

QUESTION 67: You are requesting additional funding for victim rescue units, which would be distributed to all White House staff (p. 82). What are these units, and what is the unit cost?

RESPONSE: Victim Rescue Units (VRUs) provide a 20-45 minute supply of pure oxygen to the wearer. This would be critical to the survival of EOP staff in the event of an incident which would require an evacuation to a safe area. VRUs were selected because they can be easily operated by a novice, while it takes a significant amount of training to teach staff to properly operate a gas mask. VRUs have a ten-year shelf life, which is significantly longer than gas mask filters. They provide protection from the entire threat spectrum from fire and smoke to chemical and biological agents. The VRUs are portable and small, and their expected cost is $375 each.

QUESTION 68: How is the requirement for additional safes and emergency evacuation chairs documented?

RESPONSE: The EOP Security Office conducted a review of security containers (safes) at the White House Complex and found that most of them were 1950's-vintage mechanical locks. During the aftermath of 9/11, it was deemed important that the White House adhere to the latest Federal regulations promulgated by the General Services Administration (FFL-2740A) for the protection of classified materials. Thus, the EOP recommends acquiring new security containers which are fully compliant with GSA standard which governs all changeable combination locks for the protection of national security information.

After 9/11, we reviewed all emergency evacuation procedures for the White House Complex. As we updated evacuation plans and reviewed procedures it was determined that evacuation chairs were needed in various buildings and on various floors to assist individuals who may need assistance or have special needs during an evacuation. This was an internal study performed by staff of the EOP security office.

Financial Audits (POC – Al Muhlbauer)

QUESTION 69: Last year, you advised us that EOP would plan to address the findings of the recent auditability assessment no later than FY 2003. What is the status of that effort today?

RESPONSE: EOP has initiated five major efforts to address the auditability assessment. They are:

- Development and publication of the EOP entity and reporting structure, which was completed and is and presented in the FY 2004 Budget Submission.
- Development and publication of the EOP financial management structure, which has been developed in draft and is currently being circulated for comment within EOP. Approval and issuance of the financial management structure is expected to occur within 30 days.
- Provide financial management policy and guidance to the EOP, and put in place consistent EOP-wide business practices and procedures. This effort is underway and is expected to be completed this fiscal year.
- Select a replacement for the current non-compliant financial accounting system. The Office of the Chief Financial Officer has reviewed various alternatives and has made a determination to be cross-serviced by another Federal agency that has implemented a compliant system, is currently receiving "clean" audit opinions, and has cross-servicing as an agency mission. Two such organizations were identified, a requirements document was provided, their proposals are currently being evaluated, and a decision is expected within the next two weeks.
- Accomplish a detailed review of the EOP general ledger and supporting documents for account balances, correct the data as necessary, and prepare the information for conversion to the replacement accounting system. A "clean-up" and conversion plan is in process and will be coordinated with the selected cross-servicing agency.

QUESTION 70: When will you be able to produce an auditable financial statement?

RESPONSE: The Chief Financial Officer completed an exercise that resulted in EOP-wide financial statements, that exercise identified various data problems that confirmed the auditability assessment. The "clean-up" exercise which is required prior to the conversion to the cross-servicing agency's system is addressing these problems and it is anticipated that the FY 2004 financial statements will be audited.

QUESTION 71: Last year, you stated that you had identified best practices for documented policies and procedures based upon one federal agency which has been recognized as one of the best in the Federal Government (p. 136). Which agency are you using as a model, and what are some examples of the specific best practices you intend to use?

RESPONSE: We were referring to the Department of Education and we conducted a pilot of their approach for developing policies and procedures within the Office of the CFO. While that pilot was helpful, we determined that three other tasks (identify reporting entity, develop financial management structure, and identifying our financial accounting system cross servicing provider) needed to be completed before our policies and procedures could be developed. Since those are near completion we anticipate again focusing on developing policies and procedures during the remainder of this fiscal year.

White House Office (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 72: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 budget request for the White House Office by office or activity, as itemized on pages 137 and 138 of last year's hearing record. Please compare those amounts to corresponding amounts for FY 2002 (actual) and FY 2003 (estimated), similar in format to that shown on pages 246 and 247 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: As noted last year, a single budget is prepared for the WHO. This single budget is prepared based on a number of criteria such as: prior spending patterns, estimated requirements, OMB provided inflation factors, and the priorities of the President. During a given execution year, personnel costs are allocated based upon that year's sometimes unique staffing decisions. The remainder of the budget is allocated initially to two WHO offices. The travel budget is allocated in its entirety to the Office of Advance and obligated against this office if the travel is done in support of the President. Any travel undertaken that is not in support of a Presidential trip is charged to the office of the staff member in question. The remaining portion of the non-personnel, non-travel budget, including expenses for rent, supplies, equipment and other services is considered overhead and in most years is charged as such to the White House Office of Management and Administration. In FY 2003 as part of a pilot program authorized by Congress, costs related to many of these "overhead" items were consolidated under the EOP Office of Administration. Obligations (actual and estimated) are provided by individual White House office for FY 2002 thru FY 2004 in the table below.

(2) Because Congress has chosen to appropriate funds for the Office of Homeland Security (OHS)/ Homeland Security Council (HSC) separately from the WHO appropriation, numbers related to OHS/ HSC are not included above. FY03 and FY04 estimates for OHS/ HSC are addressed independently in response to other committee questions.

QUESTION 73: Please provide a corresponding breakdown for FTE staff years and OGE, similar in format to that shown on pages 152 through 154 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: As noted last year, the major units within the White House Office are simply a creature of administrative convenience. The number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. With this kept in mind, a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit, is provided below. This breakout is based on current estimates and planning and will differ during the actual

In addition to these major units, certain individuals – including certain individuals who work with the National Security Council, the Domestic Policy Council, and the National Economic Council – are also White House Office employees, although the units within which they principally work are not themselves part of the White House Office. These individuals are included under the Other category.

Other Services (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 75: Similar to the information on page 236 et seq. of last year's hearing record, please provide a detailed description of each project, program, or initiative proposed to be funded in FY 2004 under object class 25.2 ("other services").

RESPONSE: Capital Investment Plan (CIP) - $5,220,000

The overall FY 2004 CIP requirement supports nine areas, as described below. The following "services" costs are included in the FY 2004 CIP request:

- $690,000 for Customer Service and Desktop Systems. This funding will be used to perform desktop software integration support.
- $450,000 for New Technologies and Systems. This includes "services" funding of $150,000 for server technology integration testing, and $300,000 for voice and data integration.
- $230,000 for EOP Systems and Support, including "services" funding of $150,000 to develop external Local Area Networks, and $80,000 for production test lab development.
- $700,000 for Information Security for enterprise identity projects to allow the introduction of new authentication and identification mechanisms into the EOP IT infrastructure.

REV_00168173

- $650,000 for Web-Based Services for web services application environment.
- $2,500,000 for the Offsite Data Center for services necessary to transition the offsite data center to full operational status
- There are no services funds allocated to Campus Wiring, Networks and Data Communications Infrastructure, or Messaging and Scheduling.

Salaries and Expenses - $2,150,000

There are three initiatives in the FY 2004 OA salaries/expense budget which comprise $2,150,000 in new programs under object class 25.2 ("other services"):

- $1,800,000 for Technology and Systems Support Contract . The Chief Information Officer (CIO) provides a wide range of computer services support to the EOP. These tasks are performed in large measure through an outsourcing contract that delivers IT services from PC deployment, to help desk and data center operations. During FY 2003, this IT systems support contract was competed with an increase in base labor rates due to the need for more advanced skills in IT disciplines such as XML and web services software development, Oracle database development and administration, and implementation of a new Enterprise Resources Planning (ERP) application covering finance, asset management and human resources. The CIO outsource contract is the vehicle used to maintain a 24 hour-a-day operation for mainframes, servers, help desk, local area networks, personal computers, applications; installation of end-user hardware and software; training; software application development and maintenance services. Altogether, this contract supports customers throughout the White House 18 acre complex, at remote and mobile locations, and at the planned Offsite Data Center. Key components driving the cost upward include: (1) higher labor rates for the DC area, which have risen since the previous IT 1997 facility contract; (2) the impact of the new data center operations in 2003 and thereafter; (3) an expanded EOP customer base which has more advanced, sophisticated, and security-conscious users.

- $300,000 for Information Assurance Support. The CIO has established the Information Assurance (IA) program to serve as a central location for information security serving all of EOP. FY 2002 and FY 2003 funds attended to the most critical concern with significant vulnerabilities in the perimeter and began the process of securing the internal systems. The IA program created real-time monitoring of perimeter network devices; it established the first formal documentation of IA program policy to bring the EOP in conformance with Federal guidelines and directives. However, the cyber threat facing EOP is dynamic because our systems are constantly assailed with a wide and unexpected range of attacks. The new state of defense must be active vigilance, to include the following components: (1) Perimeter Security, (2) Advanced Security Concepts, (3) Contingency Planning Support, (4) Network Monitor/Response Systems, and (5) Security Awareness, Assessments, and Education.

- $50,000 for Security Enhancements: Videos. There is a frequent and ongoing need for a security video – specific to the EOP and White House – which can be used in security briefings and new employee orientation meetings. This video will contain a brief overview of security responsibilities and procedures which must be understood by all personnel working in the EOP.

Salaries and Expenses (POC – Dilworth)

QUESTION 76: Please provide a detailed description of any expenses in the FY 2004 budget under "salaries and expenses" which are not directly related to personnel compensation and benefits.

Security Guard Services for OSTP (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 77: In FY 2003, you budgeted $1,798,000 for security guard services for the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Are similar funds requested in FY 2004? If so, how much?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 OA budget proposes that the cost of the security guard service (estimated at $702,000) for OSTP be transferred to the OSTP appropriation. Thus, the proposed FY04 OA budget would contain the balance of the funds (approximately $1.1 million).

Since the FY 2003 budget was proposed, there have been additional reviews of the physical security of the White House complex by the US Secret Service, the Federal Protective Service, and the OA Security Office. As a result, the OA Security Office has been assigned the responsibility of correcting deficiencies in EOP physical security. There are some locations which do not currently have Secret Service protection (such as the Jackson Place White House Conference Center). Another location which does not have firm long-term security plans is the office at 1800 G Street. Thus, the Office of Administration has ongoing needs for the $1.1 million which remains in the OA budget. During FY03, these funds are being used for consolidation of information technology maintenance ($200,000), centralization of database services ($200,000), and common building service costs ($400,000). The remaining $300,000 of these savings will be used for an FY03 OA personnel shortfall.

QUESTION 78: Why aren't such funds in the OSTP budget?

RESPONSE: The estimated FY04 cost of 24-hour security guard services is included in the FY04 OSTP budget request. This estimate is $702,000 for a full year.

Political Appointees (POC – Jon Laurich)

REV_00168175

QUESTION 79: Please update the information on political appointees within EOP as shown on page 268 of last year's hearing record, using the same criteria and assumptions as last year.

RESPONSE: The term "political appointees" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2 of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President has the following number of political appointees directly hired within the EOP and serving in the EOP on detailed assignments from other agencies as of May 5, 2003.

Detailees (POC – Jon Laurich)

QUESTION 80: Please update the information on reimbursable and non-reimbursable detailees with EOP as shown on pages 268 and 269 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: There are currently 251 detailees staffed within the Executive Office of the President. There are 40 reimbursable detailees and 211 non-reimbursable detailees as shown in the chart below, as of May 5, 2003:

Office of the Vice President (POC – Kristen Savercool)

QUESTION 81: You are requesting an additional $70,000 (+1.7 percent) for the Vice President's travel, due to increased travel to undisclosed locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. Weren't these type of increases baselined in FY 2002 and FY 2003, and if so, why are further increases needed in FY 2004?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 budget was submitted in February 2002, prior to it becoming evident that the Vice President's travel requirements had increased more than originally estimated. Following the events of 9-11, the Vice President has been required to be outside the Washington, DC vicinity for significant periods of time. This travel has been 100 percent official, and operational in nature (i.e. the Vice President performs his regular duties in an off-site location). This travel has required the accompaniment of staff, who also perform operational duties.

Because the budget impact of these additional travel requirements was not fully realized until after the FY 2003 budget request was submitted, they were not included in the FY 2003 baseline. Continued security concerns related to the Vice President and the ensuing impact on the Vice President's travel costs necessitate the increase to the FY 2004 OVP travel budget. This increase will allow the Vice President the flexibility needed to adequately execute his official travel requirements.

QUESTION 82: Please provide a listing of the uses of Unanticipated Needs funds in FY 2002.

Questions for the Record
Ranking Member, John Olver
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Account Consolidation and Transfer Proposals (POC – Al Muhlbauer/Jim Daniel)

When we centralized the funds within the Office of Administration, Congress intended that each agency would continue to receive a similar share of support and assistance under the consolidation.

QUESTION 83: Are any agencies going to receive diminished services or resources under the consolidation?

RESPONSE: No, currently the funding in the pilot has been allocated to be consistent with the FY 03 budget request. The service levels will be equal to or greater than pre-pilot levels; however, we are hopeful that the cost to procure the same level of service will decrease. Also, the Office of Administration is preparing service standards that will be approved by the Common Services Board. For example, if the service standard for PC's would be one PC per desktop that is less than four years old and if one EOP component is currently at that standard for 95 % of its employees and another is currently at that standard for 50% of its employees, based on need, the second component would get a larger share of the services to bring it closer to the EOP standard. This allows EOP to consistently upgrade software and services across the entire organization as the total infrastructure permits.

QUESTION 84: Are any agencies to receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed as part of the consolidation?

RESPONSE: Yes, based on need and to bring organizations that are lagging behind the approved standards up to a consistent standard, some organizations may receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed to the consolidation. We anticipate some of those services will be funded from savings in the program.

QUESTION 85: Under the procurement consolidation pilot approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are IT or database services for any EOP agency going to be paid for by funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

RESPONSE: Yes, in addition to generating procurement savings and efficiencies, a major goal of the consolidation pilot is to bring all of the EOP components up to an approved standard of service which will allow us to implement technology evenly across the organization and to realize efficiencies and benefits from a consistent and even infrastructure. In reaching this goal, the funds may be applied in a manner which is not in the same ratio in which they were contributed.

QUESTION 86: In general, are the funds appropriated for this centralized procurement program going to be used to supplement the appropriation made to individual agencies?

RESPONSE: Yes, the individual agencies will be the recipients of the services funded by the centralized procurement program without reimbursement in accordance with the Congressional appropriation provided to OA.

QUESTION 87: If so, which agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions?

RESPONSE: OA is currently establishing the allocation standards for the commodities included in the centralized procurement program. It is intended that a Common Services Board representing the EOP agencies approve those standards. OA is also requesting that the agencies assist us in developing a baseline against which we will measure the allocation standards. That will determine which, if any, agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions. We intend to report to OMB and the Congress how the centralized procurement program commodities were provided.

QUESTION 88: You recently submitted a very cursory report on the procurement pilot. When will you provide us with specific details on the progress of the pilot program?

RESPONSE: As mentioned above, progress is being made on the plan to implement the Common Services Program. We intend to report the status of the implementation of the plan in the June/July timeframe.

Other than for extreme situations similar to those encountered immediately after 9/11/01, it is not our intent to transfer large amounts between EOP appropriations. More likely, because a number of the appropriations are small we would be moving funds to cover unanticipated requirements such as paying unexpected terminal leave to employees who have retired and whose agency did not anticipate the level of required terminal leave. As stated in our request, Congress will be notified in advance of our intent to move funds between accounts.

Your budget also proposes a change that would permit EOP agencies to transfer up to 10% into our out any agency's budget. Coupled with your account consolidation proposal, that would allow you to transfer in up to $18 million more into (or out of) the White House's budget.

REV_00168180

QUESTION 89: Under the procurement consolidation program that we approved in the FY03 bill, don't you have a similar type of flexibility already? What other flexibility is needed?

RESPONSE: The flexibility of the procurement consolidation program is directed to certain defined common commodities. The 10% transfer authority provides flexibility for unexpected requirements and to address needs that may be outside the program.

QUESTION 90: What protection is there for smaller EOP agencies under this proposal? Don't they stand to lose critical resources if the White House or Vice President's Office decide to take 10% of their resources?

RESPONSE: It is more likely that the smaller agencies will benefit from the proposal, because their appropriations are small they are less likely to be able to adjust to unforeseen circumstances, this program will allow the EOP to address those circumstances without requesting supplemental funding. And, as stated above, the Congressional Committees will be notified in advance of any fund movement and could have any such concerns addressed.

Office of Homeland Security Questions (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts. The source of these funds would come from the Office of Homeland Security.

The Office of Homeland Security has gone from an initial $25m stated need when the initial FY03 bills passed the House and Senate to $11m when the FY03 Omnibus was passed to what will be $9m if the reprogramming is approved.

QUESTION 91: What exactly does the Office of Homeland Security do now that the Department of Homeland Security is in place?

RESPONSE: HSC provides advice to the President on homeland security matters and coordinates the interagency process to ensure unified administration policy on homeland security.

QUESTION 92: Does OHS still have a presence at Nebraska Avenue?

RESPONSE: No.

QUESTION 93: Does the Office of Administration provide any support to agencies at Nebraska Avenue? If so, please describe the specific types of support provided. Is this support on a reimbursable basis?

REV_00168181

RESPONSE: Since the transfer of the Nebraska Avenue facility to the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) on January 1, 2003, OA has not provided any support to agencies at the Nebraska Avenue Complex (NAC). Pursuant to a Determination by the OMB Director, funds in the amount of $3,746,000 were transferred from the OHS Emergency Fund within OA to the Department of Homeland Security in March 2003 to support NAC activities.

QUESTION 94: How many personnel and detailees now work for OHS?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council currently consists of 66 staff positions which can be filled by either Direct Hire FTE or Other Government Employee (detailee and assignee) personnel. HSC is requesting resources to support up to 40 Direct Hire FTE and 26 OGE FTE on its staff for FY 2004. See table below for a comparison with fiscal years 2003 and 2002.

Office of Homeland Security / Homeland Security Council Personnel

	FY 2002 Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Request
Direct Hire FTE	0	20	40
Other Government Employee (EOY headcount)	89	31	26
Total Personnel	89	51	66

QUESTION 95: What is the actual operational budget need for OHS in FY03?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council budget requirement from the FY 2003 appropriation is estimated to be approximately $4.32 million. Please note that the FY 2003 estimate covers only costs incurred after the enactment of the FY 2003 appropriation on February 20, 2003. Unlike other EOP agencies which operated under continuing resolutions between October 1, 2003 and February 20, 2003, the Office of Homeland Security was not permitted to utilize the CR funding mechanism but instead continued to charge FY 2003 expenses against the no-year emergency funding (provided in FY2002) until the FY 2003 appropriation was enacted. Therefore the FY 2003 estimate reflects only seven months of activity, whereas the FY 2004 Request needs to cover HSC expenses for the full 12 months next fiscal year.

QUESTION 96: For the record, please provide us a breakout by object class of the Office of Homeland Security's FY03 remaining budget.

RESPONSE: The breakout below reflects HSC's budget for the last seven months of FY 2003, from the enactment of the FY 2003 Appropriation on February 20, 2003 through September 30, 2003.

QUESTION 97: Any likelihood that these estimates will be revised downward again?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 estimate provided above reflects the best assessment of HSC requirements from the OHS FY 2003 appropriation, and actual obligations against this appropriation will likely be close to this current estimate.

QUESTION 98: I understand that the President named General Gordon as his new Homeland Security Adviser. Does he support the latest $2 million cut to his office's resources?

RESPONSE: General Gordon has not yet reported to Homeland Security Council. Also, the resources of the Homeland Security Council have not been cut by $2 million. The FY 2003 appropriations for the Homeland Security Council included $2 million for decontamination of the Remote Delivery Site as agreed to by the Congress and the Administration. Subsequent to the passage of the FY 2003 appropriations, that $2 million was allocated to decontamination of the RDS per the agreement. Therefore, this planned use of that appropriation is not a cut to HSC resources.

QUESTION 99: Have you validated the FY04 request recently to ensure it is an accurate figure?

RESPONSE: Yes. HSC reevaluated its FY 2004 requirements prior to submitting the final FY 2004 Request. Given the creation of the Department of Homeland Security, HSC's FY 2004 budget requirements are estimated at $8,331,000; as requested.

Budget Questions:

After the FY03 enacted levels are adjusted to reflect the transfer of $9 million to the Office of Homeland Security, the Executive Office of the President's FY04 budget request reflects an 8% increase over FY03 levels. Your agency, the Office of Administration requests a 10% increase between FY03 and FY04.

When the budget was introduced, Mitch Daniels said that the overall growth of Federal programs would be pegged to the expected 4% growth in inflation. The administration also said the President wanted to "match government's growth with the growth of American family income."

QUESTION 100: When the rest of the government is forced to live with 4% growth, how can you justify an almost 10% increase in your office and an overall Executive Office of the President increase of 8%? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: The Office of Administration's 10% budget increase amounts to approximately $7 million. This increase is necessitated by additional costs stemming from the enhanced security activities in the post-September 11 environment:

- The Capital Investment Plan has a net increase of $3.8 million required for the relocation of the EOP data center to an offsite location. The offsite data center has been determined to be a critical project in any contingency plan, and the communications requirements for the data center will be significantly higher in the new facility.
- $2.5 million is needed for the new information technology contract, driven by the information technology service labor increases, the relocation of the data center as well as by the increased security concerns for EOP systems.
- $0.5 million is required for the EOP information assurance program.
- $0.2 million for physical security improvements to the White House complex in providing resources for security education and evacuation resources.

The 8% growth in the overall EOP budget amounts to approximately $24.6 million. Primary components of this increase are mission-specific needs proposed by the different EOP entities:

- $6.3 million in OA programs described in the prior paragraph ($3.8 million for the capital investment plan, $2.5 million for the information technology contract, $0.5 million for information assurance, and $0.2 million for physical security).
- $2.5 million in EOP-wide space rental increases to conform with GSA's market-based rental rates.
- $3.0 million for USTR's additional staff for intensified trade negotiations.
- $3.0 million in the Executive Residence's multiyear East and West Wing restoration projects.
- $2.7 million for OMB personnel needs.
- $1.5 million for OMB's budget system updates.
- $0.7 million for OMB's E-Government staff and the Office of Information Technology.
- $0.8 million for additional staff for ONDCP.

REV_00168184

- $0.6 million in the NSC's funding for reimbursable detailees and President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board's request for additional staff.
- $0.5 million for OSTP's continuity of operations plan.

The White House Office's increase of 3.6% looks smaller because of a realignment of $1.85m in rent to the Office of Administration's account. Without the realignment, the White House Office's increase would be around 6.6%.

QUESTION 101: What is the justification for this realignment? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The realignment of $1.85M in rent was made "Into" vice out of the WHO account. Without this and other realignments made as part of the FY 2004 WHO budget request, The White House Office's increase would have only been 1.7 percent.

QUESTION 102: How could the White House have been paying the bill for space that wasn't theirs? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The WHO has not been paying rent on the 1800 G Street office spaces that this realignment involves. These office spaces were necessitated by the movement of certain White House staff offices following the events of September 11. In FY 2003 funds for these spaces were budgeted by the Office of Administration and are being paid for as part of a pilot program authorized by Congress.

QUESTION 103: Which EOP agencies occupied this space on which the White House Office has been paying rent? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: As indicated in the previous answers, White House staff have been occupying this space. Rent is being paid by the Office of Administration as part of the pilot program authorized by Congress.

QUESTION 104: Are these costs that had historically been paid by the White House Office? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: No. The 1800 G Street Office spaces were not occupied by EOP staff until after the events of 9-11.

QUESTION 105: If so, why make the change this year? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The realignment of these costs under the WHO is done to reflect the costs under the office whose staff occupies them.

Travel

The White House Office's request includes a decrease of $400,000 in Presidential Travel.

QUESTION 106: Was the FY03 estimate too high? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: As part of the FY 2003 WHO budget submission, $600,000 was requested to support the travel requirements of the new USA Freedom Corps Office. Actual experience subsequently determined this amount to be in excess of need. As a result, the FY 2003 WHO travel line was reduced $329,647 by the Congressional recission, and the FY 2004 WHO budget submission requested $400,000 less in the travel line than the original FY 2003 estimate.

QUESTION 107: If so, how do you intend to use the surplus funds? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The $400,000 reduction to the FY 2004 WHO budget request for travel requirements does not result in surplus funds. It instead results in an overall reduction to the FY 2004 WHO budget estimate.

QUESTION 108: Are you planning less travel in FY04 or will more of the travel just be paid for by political entities? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: Except as noted above, the amount of official travel conducted by the White House staff is expected to remain consistent with the FY 2003 estimate.

QUESTION 109: Please provide a list of all White House Office, Office of Homeland Security and Office of Vice President official staff travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). Include a brief description of the official purpose of the trip. For FY04 estimates, provide estimated number of trips and trip purpose. (POC – Rothley Howard)

RESPONSE: The following tables provide the FY 2002 and FY 2003 (to date) staff travel information for the White House Office, the Office of Homeland Security and the Office of the Vice President.

QUESTION 110: Please provide a list of all Presidential, First Lady and Vice Presidential travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). QUESTION 111: How much did OMB reimburse the White House Office for use of White House motorpool vehicles in FY02? How much is OMB projecting to reimburse in FY03 and FY04? (POC – Brian Gillis)

RESPONSE: For FY 2002, OMB reimbursed the Department of Defense $99,000 for the use of the White House motorpool. OMB is projecting a similar amount for FY 2003 and FY 2004.

In the hearing, Mr. Daniel mentioned that the FY03 vehicle lease and IT support contracts came in significantly below the original budget estimates.

QUESTION 112: Do you intend to return the unused funds to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: The EOP plans to use the funds to implement other critical EOP priorities. The programs which were described by Mr. Daniel at the hearing were the FY 2003 vehicle lease (covering leases by OA, White House, and Office of the Vice President (OVP)), and the guard services contract for guard services at 1801 Pennsylvania Avenue. He did not refer to the IT support contract.

QUESTION 113: For these areas in which savings were realized, what are your plans for the funds? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: Vehicle contract savings for FY 2003 amount to approximately $20,000 for OA, $43,000 for the White House, and $19,000 for OVP. These savings will be utilized to fund priority needs for these EOP entities. The guard service contract will result in savings of approximately $1.1 million.

For FY 2003, these funds are being applied to fund other priorities for the OA as well as common services for EOP entities. These other priorities include consolidation of information technology maintenance ($200,000), centralization of database services ($200,000), and common building service costs ($400,000). The remaining $300,000 of these savings will be used for an FY03 OA personnel shortfall.

Political Travel

QUESTION 114: Please explain the reimbursement procedures the White House intends to follow during the Presidential election season. (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 13, 1992, prepared by C. Boyden Gray, former Counsel to the President, "Allocation of the costs for "campaign-related" travel by senior Administration officials is governed by the Federal Election Commission (FEC) hypothetical trip rule." These regulations require that all "campaign-related" travel of a candidate seeking nomination, or re-election to the Office of the President, must be paid by the candidate's authorized campaign committee. Further, if any campaign activity is conducted at a stop, other than incidental contacts, "that stop shall be identified as campaign-related and, in general, all costs associated with it must be paid by the President's campaign committee."

QUESTION 115: Exactly when will the presidential-campaign procedures take effect? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: The presidential-campaign procedures take effect after the President declares that he is a candidate for re-election.

QUESTION 116: How do you determine who the official travelers are on a campaign or political trip? Does the list of positions vary from trip to trip? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated December 6, 1991 prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "officials are to be considered on official duty, regardless of the nature of the President's activities, only if it is determined by the Assistant to the President and Deputy Chief of Staff before the trip that (1) the official is traveling for the sole purpose of providing (a) clerical, logistical and administrative support, or (b) staff assistance in the management of paperwork and the records of decisions, or (c) consultation and guidance necessary solely for the transaction of Government business, and (2) the official will not engage in any political activity during the travel." A list of positions has been developed which are deemed to always be official. This list does not change from trip to trip.

QUESTION 117: On trips with political and official components, what is the procedure for determining which events are paid for using official funds and which events are reimbursed by the political entity? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 12, 1990, from C. Boyden Gray, "With regard to non-Presidential election campaigns events (e.g., Congressional and State and local campaigns), applicable law and regulations do not provide a specific method for allocating the costs of mixed official and political travel by individuals other than the candidates. Neither is there a precise definition for distinguishing between "official" and "political" functions. As a result, the guidelines set forth below are based on general legal principles, policies established over a period of years by previous Administrations, and guidance from Federal Election Commission opinions and actions." A good faith apportionment of the costs of a trip based on the time spent on political activities and the time spent on official activities has been developed and has become know as the "hard-time" formula. This formula is based on the time spent in official meetings and receptions, etc, and time spent in political activities to determine total activity time. Based on this data, a ratio is developed based on total activity time which is allocated to political activity and official activities. The percentage that represents the political and official portions of the trip is then used as a multiplier to determine the allocation between official and political costs.

QUESTION 118: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, what criteria is used to determine whether an event is "political" or "official"? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 12, 1990, prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "Appearing at party functions, fundraising, and campaigning for specific candidates are principal examples of travel which should be considered political." The memo goes on to say that a precise definition for distinguishing between "official" and "political" functions does not exist. Further clarification is provided in the memo dated February 13, 1992, also prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "In determining whether an activity is political or official, all relevant factors should be considered, including, but not limited to, the identity of the sponsor of the event, the group or organization being addressed, other participants, whether the speech being delivered is partisan and political in nature, and whether it is a factual presentation or defense of the Administration's position on the issue."

QUESTION 119: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, does the political entity reimburse the White House for the Speechwriters time? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 120: Have events been classified as "official" even if only members of the President's political party are invited to share the stage with the President? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 121: If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 122: Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03. For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill. (POC – WHO M&A)

Photographic Services (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 123: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photographic equipment purchased for use by the White House photographers?

RESPONSE: The total cost (actual and projected) of photographic equipment procured for use by White House photographers in FY 2002, FY 2003 and FY 2004 are displayed in the table below.

REV_00168214

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004
	Actual	Estimate	Estimate
Photographic Equipment	$137,057	$35,700	$36,300

FY 2002 actual costs are higher than the estimates for FY 2003 and FY 2004 due to the use of end of year sweep-up funds.

QUESTION 124: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photo lab equipment purchased for use by the WHCA photo lab?

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004

QUESTION 125: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total travel cost associated with travel of White House Photographers?

RESPONSE: The FY 2002 travel costs of White House Photographers was $????. The estimated FY 2003 cost is $38,000 and the projected cost for FY 2004 is $38,760.

QUESTION 126: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab?

RESPONSE: There is no rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab. However, there are utility and facility maintenance costs associated with the WHCA photo lab. Those costs were $73,600 for FY 2002, $76,650 estimated for FY 2003 and a projected $79,000 for FY 2004.

QUESTION 127: Please explain the procedures for determining when and how the government is to be reimbursed for photos released for non-official purposes. If these procedures have changed from those followed by the previous administration, please explain any changes that have been made.

RESPONSE: The procedures for obtaining reimbursements for photographs changed on October 1, 2000. The procedures now in place are designed to ensure that the government receives appropriate reimbursement for photographs sought for non-official purposes. Records are kept of all such requests, and appropriate reimbursement is then sought.

REV_00168215

It is the White House policy to provide two photographs to members of the general public upon request of photographs that include a principal (President, 1st Lady, Vice President or Mrs. Cheney) and the requestor. These requests are generally provided without consideration as to whether or not they are official or non-official. For requests for photos outside these general guidelines, a determination is made by the White House Office as to whether it is an official or non-official request. For non-official requests, the requestor is provided the cost to the government of the photograph and is required to provide reimbursement. The photographs are provided to the requestor and the reimbursement is credited to the White House Office salaries and expenses appropriation.

QUESTION 128: For FY02 and the first seven months of FY03, please provide the following information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos or photo lab services that were provided:

- date reimbursement was made
- name of reimbursing organization
- amount of payment
- number of photos purchased by reimbursing organization
- size of photos purchased by reimbursing organization

RESPONSE: The requested information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos is provided below.

Remote Delivery Site Reprogramming Request (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts.

QUESTION 129: What is the status of remediation efforts?

RESPONSE: We are in the process of Confirmatory Sampling. The sampling plan is intended to present a technical approach for (1) completing air and surface sampling for culturable Bacillus anthracis spores to verify the efficacy of the decontamination process: (2) providing for qualified laboratory analysis of the collected samples: and (3) presenting a protocol for data collection and reporting such that the results of the sampling effort are valid and defensible. In addition, the Plan provides for the site and personnel security, safety, health, and personal protection, equipment and collection methods, and sample handling.

QUESTION 130: Please provide the total budget estimate for this project.

RESPONSE: As the contractor responsible for returning the building to an environmentally safe workplace, Versar to date has not been able to develop or provide accurate cost estimates or time lines to EOP. Budget and schedule estimates for this project are especially difficult due to critical path activities taking place in a high-risk environment relying on the utilization of untested speculative technologies. However to date $2.422 million has been spent on the effort and we are currently requesting an additional $2 million, which is Versar's best estimate of what it will cost to complete the project. The total budget estimate for the project then comes to $4.422 million.

QUESTION 131: Please provide the anticipated schedule for this effort.

RESPONSE: Given many variables, including weather, our best current estimate of time to required complete the RDS project is 4 months. The confirmatory testing phase is estimated to take eight weeks from start up. The next phase would be for the ECC committee to ratify the confirmation process; we estimate this to be one month. After this is completed, our best estimate is thirty days to perform PM on the HVAC equipment, build out the office areas, and re-establish the building operation.

QUESTION 132: What caused this $2 million overrun?

RESPONSE: There is not a $2 million overrun. The request for $2 million is a result of anticipated costs and those unforeseen conditions as result of the environmental cleanup process, that OA, GSA or its contractors had available at the time of fumigation. The Environmental Clearance Committee has placed additional requirements that resulted in the additional costs. The proposed sampling plan utilizes the barrier divisions already in Building 410 (which provides discrete work areas) and presents proposed sampling location, quantity, and types of samples to be collected . Sampling will be carried out using a phased approach for each work area as follows:

Phase 1, Surface Sampling; Phase 2 Air Sampling: Phase 3, "Dymanic Sampling", Phase 4, Start Up of the Heating, Ventilation , and Air Conditioning (HVAC) Units; and Phase 5, Final Sampling with the Barriers Down.

QUESTION 133: Why have you stopped providing the monthly reports on the remediation efforts?

RESPONSE: Due to the process of establishing the Environmental Clearance Committee, it was an administrative error that the reports were inadvertently not forwarded.

Previously the Remote Delivery Site was used to screen incoming mail. It also used to serve as an off-site supply depot. With the Department of Homeland Security now assuming the mail processing function and with supply operations now established on the White House Complex, I'm curious about future plans for the RDS.

QUESTION 134: What will the facility be used for when remediation is finished?

RESPONSE: Prior to September 11, 2001 the Remote Delivery Site (RDS) was used as a centralized receiving facility for the White House Complex. All postage flat mail and packages, including UPS and FedEx deliveries, and all equipment and local deliveries were delivered to the RDS. All incoming deliveries, regardless of size, were screened by the U.S. Secret Service (USSS) via large X ray machines, and if any equipment was too large to fit on the X-ray conveyer belt, then the USSS used dogs to sniff for explosives. After initial USSS clearance, all of the items were sorted and delivered to their intended destination to the White House Complex. Supplies, equipment and furniture which were purchased for inventory for use at later time were housed at the RDS.

In addition to the screening of WHO Complex deliveries, the USSS Administrative Operations Division used RDS space to screen all of its incoming mail and packages that were intended for USSS personnel.

The EOP Supply store was operated within the confines of the RDS. Supplies were purchased and inventoried at the RDS and office supplies and copier paper were purchased in volume to take advantage of discounts. The WHO/EOP customers faxed supply requisitions to the RDS staff who then pulled and boxed office supplies for delivery to the WHO Complex. OA property supply staff made supply deliveries to the WHO complex at least twice a day, and more if needed.

The EOP/OA Personal Property Program (excess, transfer, donation, and destruction of furniture and equipment) had its operations housed at the RDS. Excessed equipment and furniture were corralled at the RDS until enough equipment and furniture were gathered to make it economical to excess all at once. In addition, schools and nonprofit organizations were allowed to review equipment for donation under Executive Order 12999.

After September 11, as a precautionary move, the White House United States Postal Service was relocated from the Eisenhower Executive Office Building to the RDS. A separate room was built for the USPS's operation of opening and screening all White House mail. The RDS operations continued working around the new USPS area. These USPS operations continued until the RDS was closed due to the discovery of Anthrax. Since then the USPS operations have relocated to 1800 G. St. NW.

Once the remediation is finished, the RDS will resume its former function of screening all bulk deliveries (including equipment, furniture, boxes of supplies) sent to the EOP Complex. In addition the facility will be used to store supplies and an inventory of equipment and furniture. The RDS will also be used as a staging area for efficient loading and delivery of bulk items for all EOP agencies.

QUESTION 135: Will the DHS use the facility to screen the White House's mail?

RESPONSE: No.

QUESTION 136: Will you close the on-site supply stores and revert back to running the supply operation out of the Remote Delivery Site?

RESPONSE: When the RDS reopens after the remediation of the building, the RDS staff will resume the same functions prior to the Anthrax. However, there are major changes in the way the OA Supply Store operates and manages its supply inventory. The Office of Administration has entered into a new business relationship with GSA. The OA Supply operation will purchase its supplies from GSA who will provide a wide array of office supplies and maintain the level of supply inventory that is needed to support the WHO Complex. The GSA inventory will be housed at the RDS after relocation from Franconia, VA, the current, temporary RDS location. OA supply staff will pull supply orders based on customer's requisitions, and then box and deliver the supplies from the RDS to WHO complex. GSA will only charge for the supplies that EOP customers use at point of sale, otherwise the unsold inventory will still belong to GSA. GSA promises to maintain the supplies that the EOP customers may need. Inventories will be reviewed and adjusted to realize the kind and quantities of supplies the EOP customers expect. This business relationship will promote a more flexible inventory that allows the supply inventory to have the quantity or variety of supplies to meet our customer needs in a more proactive, real-time fashion.

White House Access (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 137: For the record, please provide the total number of visitors who passed through the White House as part of tours in 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 (to date).

QUESTION 138: Why are White House tours currently not open to the general public?

QUESTION 139: What is the status of the report on the status of White House Tours that was due to the Subcommittee by March 22nd?

QUESTION 140: Who has the lead on the efforts to decide whether public tours can be resumed?

QUESTION 141: Does the USSS do a background check on all individuals attending events and meetings at the White House Complex before access can be granted?

QUESTION 142: During this administration, have White House aides ever overruled a building-access recommendation made by the USSS?

Off-site EOP Support

QUESTION 143: How many EOP employees are based in Crawford, TX? (POC – Stacia Cropper)

RESPONSE: One.

QUESTION 144: How much space does the EOP pay rent for in Crawford, TX? (POC James Daniel/Stacia Cropper)

RESPONSE: There is one double-wide trailer. The cost of the trailer itself and all operating costs will be paid to GSA in a monthly rent payment of $8,496.83 for two years.

QUESTION 145: How many trailers were acquired for Crawford, TX? (POC James Daniel/Stacia Cropper)

RESPONSE: One trailer was acquired for the EOP.

QUESTION 146: What was the cost to purchase and renovate these trailers? (POC James Daniel/Stacia Cropper)

RESPONSE: The cost of the trailer shell was $72,745.28. The cost to apply finishes to the trailer interior was $20,976.62.

REV_00168221

QUESTION 147: What are the expected FY04 operating costs of facilities and staff permanently deployed to Crawford, TX? (POC James Daniel/Stacia Cropper)

RESPONSE: The following are the estimated operating costs for one year: Pest Control ($1,440), cleaning ($4,200), electricity ($4,211.75), and water ($2,286.38).

Rent (POC – Steve Beattie)

QUESTION 148: Please provide an accounting of all space on which the EOP currently pays rent. The list should include the number of staff in each building, the agencies which occupy space in each facility, the total square footage by agency in each facility, the total square footage of vacant space on which the EOP is currently paying rent in each facility and the GSA rent rates for each facility.

RESPONSE: See Attachment A (chart will be inserted here).

QUESTION 149: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, is the rent for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

RESPONSE: No. The funds in the pilot will only be used to support the EOP components in the pilot; EOP funds not included in the pilot will not be used to support EOP components included in the pilot.

QUESTION 150: Under the procurement consolidation pilot that was approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are after hours utilities charges for any EOP agency going to be paid out of funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

RESPONSE: No. After hours utilities charges were not included in the procurement consolidation pilot funding.

WHITE HOUSE TRAVEL OFFICE PRESS FUND
NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

NOTE 1 – ORGANIZATION

The White House Travel Office Press Fund ('WHTO") was established to manage expenses associated with travel for members of the press who accompany the President, Vice President, First Lady, and Second Lady on domestic and foreign trips. In May 1993, a new management team was hired to manage WHTO. Consequently, for accounting and reporting purposes, a new WHTO was established as of January 1, 1994.

NOTE 2- SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Revenue and expenditures are recognized using the accrual basis of accounting. The WHTO invoices the press organizations for their prorated share of the expenses associated with each trip. The WHTO then remits payment directly to the vendors whose services were used for the particular trip. The total amount invoiced to the press members equals the total of the amounts paid to the vendors. The WHTO does not own any fixed assets. Al! fixed assets are purchased through the White House's general fund and designated for the WHTO use. Similarly, all operating expenses of the WHTO, including salaries and office supplies, are paid directly by the White House's general fund.

NOTE 3- CASH

Gash is maintained in two non-interest checking accounts at the Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C. The RCA 2000 cash account is explained in Note 4.

The total cash held by WHTO at December 31, 2001 includes $512,821 that is not covered by insurance provided by the federal government. It is the opinion of WHTO's management that the solvency of the referenced financial institution is not of particular concern at this time.

REV_00168231

NOTE 4 - RESTRICTED CASH ACCOUNT

Effective April 1, 2000, the management of the White House Travel Office implemented a Restricted Cash Account (RCA). RCA funds are encumbered for specific purposes set forth in written policies and procedures, most notably for payment of late arriving vendor invoices, bank charges and accounts receivable written off as uncollectible.

The RCA is funded through an RCA funding amount applied to every customer invoice, except those for government employees. Presently, that funding amount is two percent of the invoice amount

RCA funding amounts are not considered revenue for accounting purposes.

Under current policies and procedures, a separate RCA is established for each calendar year. The RCA 2000 account on the Statement of Financial Position reflects the total amount of cash in that account at December 31, 2001. The RCA liability accounts for 2000 and 2001 reflect the total RCA funding amount applied to all customer invoices during the respective calendar year, less any disbursements. RCA funding amounts that have been invoiced but not yet collected are included in the accounts receivable amount.

The RCA for each year will be terminated at a designated point in time after the conclusion of the applicable calendar year. At the time of dissolution, any excess funds will be refunded to the Press Fund's customers subject to the RCA funding amount in accordance with a formula based on the percentage of the total travel costs consumed during the year corresponding to the RCA. For example, if a customer were responsible for ten percent of all travel costs for the calendar year 2001, they would be entitled to ten percent of the remaining RCA 2001 funds at the time of dissolution.

NOTE 5 – ACCOUNTS RECEIVABLE

Currently, the WHTO writes off accounts receivable using the direct write-off method. Therefore, there is no allowance for uncollectible accounts.

REV_00168232

NOTE 6 - OTHER RECEIVABLES

As per note 2, the WHTO utilizes a system of dollar for dollar accounting. Under the current accounting process, vendor invoices for trip expenses are entered into accounts payable as they are received. Accordingly, there is an accumulation of unbilled trip expenses in accounts payable until such time that trip accounting is finalized and members of the press are invoiced for their pro rata share of trip expenses. This timing difference creates the need for an Other Receivables category. Other Receivables represents the obligations for normal trip expenses that have been entered into accounts payable, but not yet billed to the press.

QUESTION 155: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Corps travelers on the Press Charter?

RESPONSE: Each leg of the itinerary is assigned a proportionate cost, which is divided equally among all press passengers. The following formula is used to compute the proportionate cost for each leg of the trip: (Leg flight time / Total flight time) * Total Air Transportation Expense

QUESTION 156: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Pool travelers on Air Force One?

RESPONSE: The cost of the fourteen members of the pool traveling on AF1 is added to the total air transportation expense and the total costs are spread on a pro-rata share among all of the press travelling on the trip. The following formula is used to compute the proportionate cost for each leg of the trip: (Leg flight time / Total flight time) * Total Air Transportation Expense

QUESTION 157: Please explain the formula used to identify the reimbursement rate that the Travel Office billed Press Corps travelers accompanying the President's travel to the USS Abraham Lincoln. In your response, please include the actual rate billed to individual press corps travelers on this trip.

RESPONSE: The cost of transporting press corps travelers from the North Island Naval Air Station to the USS Abraham Lincoln and back to the North Island Naval Air Station totaled $7,440.26. This cost will be added to the total air transportation expense and spread on a pro-rata share among all the press traveling on the trip. The formula for military aircraft reimbursement for the trip to the USS Abraham Lincoln is as follows: $X per hour per aircraft, divided by 60 minutes to get a per minute rate, multiplied by the flight time, divided by the total number of passengers, and then 7.5% excise tax plus $3.00 dollars per person was added.

Bonuses

QUESTION 158: Why did this administration reinstate the payments of bonuses to political appointees? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 159: Have any EOP political staff been given bonuses since the policy was reinstated in March of 2002? (POC – Jon Laurich)

RESPONSE: The term "political appointees" or "political staff" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2

of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President had a total of 28 political staff within 4 offices that received bonuses since March 2002.

QUESTION 160: Have any EOP political staff been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY02 or FY03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus? (POC – Jon Laurich)

RESPONSE: No political staff within the EOP have been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY 02 or FY 03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus.

Eisenhower Executive Office Building

QUESTION 161: Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? [this question does not apply to the White House residence.] (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 162: Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilitles) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 163: For the record, please provide the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings. POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 164: For the record, please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 165: Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 166: Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 167: Please provide a list of all EOP and EOP-support-related agencies that occupied space in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building on 1/20/01 that have since been relocated to locations outside the EEOB. For each agency that relocated, please identify the agency that paid the move-related costs. (POC – Steve Beattie)

REV_00168235

RESPONSE: 167: See Attachment B. (chart will be inserted here)

QUESTION 168: What is the status of the vacant space on the 17th Street side of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building? (POC – Steve Beattie)

RESPONSE: 168: With the exception of the ground floor cafeteria and kitchen, several fourth floor offices, and a few storage areas, the space remains essentially vacant as progress continues on the Fire and Life Safety Improvements project.

EOP Staffing Levels:

QUESTION 169: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2002 (actual) and FY03-FY04 (estimates). Please provide a list of the "historically provided" White House Office positions, the office to which these positions are assigned and the agency that pays the salary for each of these positions. (POC – Jon Laurich)

RESPONSE: The following chart provides the FTE and OGE information for FY 2002 to FY 2004 in addition to a listing of "historically provided" White House Office positions.

Monique--I have the following comments at the moment:;

CFO should review the document to ensure that the term "EOP agency" or "agency" is not used generically to describe EOP offices in our answers.;
It is used several times.;

The FTE numbers for OA offices on page 8 do not appear to match the numbers in the chart on page 58.;

The "T" in Assistant To the Presidential Diarist probably should not be capitalized on page 64.;;;

On page 68, the number of political appointees in OA seems wrong.; This line may have been intended for the Official Residence of the Vice President.; If we do have any Schedule C's in OA, please let me know ASAP since that may affect the financial disclosure requirements applying to that individual.;

On page 69, should the line for details to the Office of Homeland Security recognize the establishment of the HSC?;

On page 105 and 106, reference is made to memoranda written by Counsel to the President C. Boyden Gray.; I defer to White House Counsel on any changes to this part, but it's possible that they may prefer that this be restated by describing the standards used without reference to these memoranda, or by referring generally to "in consonance with procedures used by previous administrations," or something like that.; Have we specifically referred to these memoranda in previous Q & A's?; Ben, Jen, Brett, Ted--let us know your thoughts.;

Page 148, add the following language to the end of the answer to question 149:; "for purposes that pilot funds were budgeted.";

Hello All,

Counsel's office has been asked to review all responses to "Questions for the Record" for the hearing on the Executive Office of the President this Friday. Jen Newstead is reviewing all the questions. However, several of the questions require input from your areas of expertise. In the Excel spreadsheet attached, I have assigned some questions to you. Please review the ones where your name appears and write a "concur" or "comments" in the Approval column. If you have comments, please email them to me separately. Some questions reference the FY 2003 hearing record and that is located below. If you have any questions, please let me know. Please have comments in to me by 9 AM tomorrow morning, Wednesday, May 28th.

Questions for the Record
Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

QUESTION 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

QUESTION 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

RESPONSE: As presented in the Congressional Budget Submission pages 4, 5, and 6, the Executive Office of the President (EOP) has established a Budget Activity structure that is consistent, beginning with the budget submission and extending through the accounting and reporting phases. The EOP accounting system will track and report obligations and expenditures consistent with this structure through the use of budget activity, program, sub-program, and line item codes assigned to each transaction. EOP has the ability to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk to the individual transactions authorized under sections 105 and 106 of Title 3 of the United States Code.

QUESTION 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

RESPONSE: The following appropriations in Public Law 108-7: Compensation of the President, White House Office Salaries and Expenses, Office of Homeland Security, Executive Residence at the White House, White House Repair and Restoration, Council of Economic Advisers, Office of Policy Development, National Security Council, Office of Administration would be combined into one appropriation entitled "The White House". The individual language in Public Law 108-7 for each of those appropriations would be removed. However, suggested language for the combined appropriation is provided in the Appendix to the FY 2004 Budget (page 881) and states: "For the Compensation of the President and White House Office (including the Office of Homeland Security), Executive Residence, White House Repair and Restoration, Office of Policy and Development, Office of Administration, Council of Economic Advisers and the National Security Council, (hereinafter, and solely for the purposes of Title VI of this Act, "the White House"), $183,770,000, of which $24,803,000 shall remain available until expended, including compensation for the President, including an expense allowance of $50,000 as authorized by U.S.C. 102; for travel expense of $100,000 as authorized by 3 U.S.C. 103; for necessary expenses for the White House as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109 and 3 U.S.C. 105; for the necessary expenses of the Executive Residence at the White House as authorized by 3 U.S.C. 105,109,110, and 112-114; for the necessary expenses of the Offices and Councils in the White House account as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109, 15 U.S.C. 1021, and 3 U.S.C. 105 and 107 (including not to exceed $19,000 for official reception and representation expenses); and for the hire of passenger motor vehicles: Provide, That none of the funds made available to the President for official expenses shall be expended for any other purpose and any unused portion of such funds shall revert to the Treasury pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 1552: Provided further, That no such funds shall be considered as taxable to the President: Provided further, That advances or repayments or transfers from this appropriation may be made to any department or agency for expenses of carrying out such activities."

The suggested language, with the exception of a consolidated appropriation amount incorporates the same restrictions and clarifications as contained the language contained in the Public Law 108-7 for the appropriations being consolidated. The appropriations for Vice President's Salaries and Expense, Vice President's Residence Operating Expenses, Office of Management and Budget, Office of National Drug Control Policy, Unanticipated Needs will remain separate appropriations and will therefore not require any language changes as a result of the combination.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 White House (WH) consolidated budget net increase of $5,292,000 for communications is required in three major areas:

- Most of the increase ($4,420,000) is needed in the OA Capital Investment Plan for offsite data center communications. This facility will transition into full operation during FY 2004. The telecommunications between the offsite data center and the EOP complex are necessary to provide expanded, survivable and redundant connectivity, continuity of operations, disaster recovery and system support. These costs include funds for telecommunications lines, two additional

DS-3 data paths, two T-1 lines, and backups to provide the communications bandwidth necessary for servicing the EOP complex.

- $482,000 in the White House Office budget to provide a custom communications package which will enable the Homeland Security Council to establish a presence for its staff within the White House Situation Room.

- $100,000 for information assurance in the OA salaries/expenses budget. In addition to the Offsite Data Center project, the OA FY 2004 budget also includes a request for an additional $100,000 for the information assurance program in the FY 2004 salaries/expenses account. This program will enable the CIO office to correct vulnerabilities in the EOP information security perimeter to secure internal systems, to perform real-time monitoring of perimeter network devices.

- $151,000 in transfers of Lexis-Nexis database costs from nonconsolidated agencies to the consolidated White House appropriation. The FY 2004 budget envisions that $72,000 will be transferred from USTR, $56,000 from ONDCP, $15,000 from OMB, and $8,000 from CEQ so that the EOP can have a single funding source for EOP-wide Lexis-Nexis service.

- $139,000 for adjustments to maintain the same level of services for the base funding during FY 2004. This is calculated on the basis of the $7,010,000 in FY 2003 funding.

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an "EOP average" rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

RESPONSE: The EOP space rental project began during the summer of 2002 at the request of OMB's budget examiners, who were working to ensure that EOP agencies moved to the same market-based rent methodology used to determine space rental rates for GSA's other Federal properties. OMB requested that GSA and EOP review the space rental costs for each EOP property and each EOP agency so that the most up-to-date costs available were included in the FY 2004 budget proposal. Another significant concern in this project is to ensure that GSA will work with the EOP to ensure that the critical needs of the EOP are funded and executed.

As a result of the initial project, OA and GSA began a series of meetings which culminated in the space estimates which were included in the budget. GSA staff prepared a comprehensive listing of EOP properties, which itemized the space occupied by each

EOP entity. This listing included commercial and government-owned space, current estimates of rentable square footage, and the annual rental rate per square foot. EOP staff provided updated estimates of the rentable square footage.

During this process, GSA blended the fair-market rates for the permanent EOP buildings into a single blended rate. This was done to simplify the administrative work when EOP staff are relocated. This is especially needed in the post-9/11 environment's unusually high number of large-scale EOP agency relocations driven by security considerations as well as the result of the legislation creating the Department of Homeland Security. The EOP average rental rate for Federally-owned properties (New Executive Office Building (NEOB), Eisenhower Executive Office Building (OEOB), White House, Winder Building, Jackson Place) is $29.60 annually per square foot. GSA adds an additional building security charge for buildings which are not protected by the US Secret Service. The average rental rates used to determine each EOP entity's budget estimate for office space are as follows:

EOP Entity	Locations	Owned or Leased	Average Rental Rate
OMB	EEOB, NEOB	owned	$29.60/sf

EOP Staffing (POC – Jon Laurich)

QUESTION 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: The following tables provide the total FY 2002 actual, FY 2003 and FY 2004, estimates for full time equivalents (FTE) and other government employees (OGE) for each EOP and other entity as of May 5, 2003. The OGE numbers are itemized by category on the following page. The FY 2003 numbers have the Office of Homeland Security in a separate category, which accordingly decreased the White House numbers. The FY 2003 and FY 2004 numbers are estimates only and are therefore subject to change.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

QUESTION 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

RESPONSE: An object class breakdown of estimated HSC costs in FY 2003 and FY 2004 is provided in the table below. Please note that the FY 2003 estimate covers only costs incurred after the enactment of the FY 2003 appropriation on February 20, 2003. Unlike other EOP entities which operated under continuing resolutions between October 1, 2003 and February 20, 2003, the Office of Homeland Security was not permitted to utilize the CR funding mechanism but instead continued to charge FY 2003 expenses against the no-year emergency funding (provided in FY2002) until the FY 2003 appropriation was enacted. Therefore the FY 2003 estimate reflects only seven months of activity, whereas the FY 2004 Request needs to cover HSC expenses for the full 12 months next fiscal year.

	FY 2003 Appropriation	FY 2003 Estimate*	FY 2004 Request	2004 Request - 2003 Estimate
Homeland Security Council:
Personnel	$4,403	$2,800	$5,550	$2,750

QUESTION 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

RESPONSE: In FY 2004 HSC is requesting $528,000 for Other Services compared with $3,267,000 appropriated for the same category in FY 2003. The decrease is due to reduced requirements of the ongoing missions of the Office of Homeland Security after start-up costs and emergency requirements were met with larger budgets in FY 2002 and FY 2003. Anticipated contractual needs in FY 2004 include maintenance, upgrades, and technical support for the classified computer network that will be extended to HSC staff in FY 2003.

QUESTION 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

REV_00168461

RESPONSE: HSC is requesting resources to support 40 direct hire FTE and 26 Other Government Employees on its staff to fill the 66 positions HSC is projecting for FY 2004.

QUESTION 18: Currently, OHS costs are included in both the WHO and OA appropriations. Is that also the case in the FY 2004 request? If so, please provide a table, by appropriation, showing total OHS budgeted costs, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: For FY 2003, although funds were requested as part of the WHO budget activity, the Office of Homeland Security received for the first time its own appropriation, separate from the WHO appropriation. Funds supporting OHS / HSC requirements in FY 2003 were provided also to OA as part of the OA Pilot program. The FY 2004 Request identifies all requirements for OHS / HSC in the WHO Budget Activity, since the OA Pilot program was not guaranteed to continue after FY 2003. See table below:

REV_00168483

(Dollars in Thousands)

	Congressional Budgets
	FY 2002* Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Estimate
OHS / HSC	$30,800	$8,272	$8,331
OA		$783
	$30,800	$9,055	$8,331

*FY 2002 budget for OHS was based on the OHS mission and funding profile prior to the establishment of DHS and was provided by 3 sources of emergency appropriated funds: P.L. 107-38 for $25,000,000; P.L.107-117 for $2,000,000; and P.L. 107-206 for $3,800,000.

QUESTION 19: Last year, it was stated that one MOU existed between OHS and other EOP entities (p. 51). Please provide a copy of the MOU between MOU and the Office of Science and Technology Policy.

RESPONSE: The MOU between OHS and OSTP expired with the creation of the Department of Homeland Security as relevant responsibilities transferred from OHS to DHS, pursuant to the Homeland Security Act of November, 2002.

QUESTION 20: Have any other MOUs been signed since that time?

RESPONSE: An MOU between the Homeland Security Council and the National Security Council was signed in May, 2003 providing for the expansion of NSC's classified computer network to include approved HSC staff with necessary security clearances.

In addition standard interagency agreements were signed between OHS/HSC and the Office of Administration (OA) and OMB to pay for detailees from these EOP agencies to OHS/HSC and separately between OHS/HSC and OA to pay for miscellaneous supplies and materials.

QUESTION 21: At this time last year, OHS planned to establish a coordination center which would function 24 hours a day, 7 days a week; a communications room; and two incident management rooms. At the same time, the Administration made clear that the role of OHS was to establish and coordinate policy, and not to conduct operational activities. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, have these specific activities been descoped or eliminated?

RESPONSE: The role of the Homeland Security Council is to provide confidential policy advice to the President and coordinate policy across the departments and agencies of the executive branch. The Homeland Security Council does not conduct operational activities. The Homeland Security Council does not operate a coordination center. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, DHS is the lead federal agency for incident management. As such, DHS operates a Homeland Security Center with 24 hour/7 days per week coordination and communications capabilities. Those functions do not reside in the Homeland Security Council.

QUESTION 22: How many positions support these activities in the FY 2004 request, and what is the total budgeted amount?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 budget will not fund any personnel or activities related to a coordination center.

QUESTION 23: How are such activities appropriate for a policymaking body, when DHS now exists to coordinate and execute operational activities related to specific homeland security incidents and activities?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council does not operate a coordination center. With the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security, DHS is the lead federal agency for incident management. As such, DHS operates a Homeland Security Center with 24 hour/7 days per week coordination and communications capabilities. Those functions do not reside in the Homeland Security Council.

QUESTION 24: At the time of last year's hearing, the permanent location and amount of space for the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board had not been determined (p. 77). Have these requirements been determined today?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 25: Likewise, total CIPB staffing had not been determined. Do you have an estimate today? What staffing assumptions were made in the FY 2004 budget submission?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

REV_00168485

QUESTION 26: How much funding is included in the FY 2004 request for CIPB, and how does that compare to the current estimate for FY 2003?

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 27: Please provide a breakdown showing how those funds would be used.

RESPONSE: The President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) no longer exists at the White House. Executive Order 13228, which created the CIPB was amended. Congress through Homeland Security Act created within Department of Homeland Security the Directorate for Information Analysis and Infrastructure Protection. Cyber security issues will be addressed by DHS and that office.

QUESTION 28: Please provide details on any government-industry partnerships that have been created in support of cyber security initiatives coordinated by, or carried out, through EOP or the CIPB.

RESPONSE: In 2002, the President's Critical Infrastructure Protection Board developed a National Strategy to Secure Cyberspace. To encourage broader participation and input into the development process, a draft strategy was released for public comment in September 2002. The final strategy was released in February 2003. The PCIPB requested the National Infrastructure Assurance Council and the National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee to both provide comments on the draft strategy. In addition, there were 10 town hall meetings held in various portions of the country which brought industry, academia and private citizens together to focus on the complex issues related to cyber security.

The National Strategy to Secure Cyberspace emphasizes that government-industry partnerships will be a cornerstone. As the primary implementer of the Strategy, DHS will be a partner with industry and academia to accomplish the objectives identified by the President's strategy.

National Security Council (POC – Katherine Fertakis)

QUESTION 29: Your request includes a 10.8 percent increase to cover reimbursable detailee costs and additional support staff for the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Please explain the need for these increases in detail.

REV_00168486

RESPONSE: The requested increase covers reimbursable detailee costs of personnel from the Department of State. The National Security Council (NSC) may request detailed personnel performing at a high level in high priority positions to remain beyond their initial tour of duty because of their unique qualifications. Public Law 93-126, Section 11, requires the NSC to reimburse the Department of State for details to the NSC that exceed the cap of 13 detailed into their second year and for all staff detailed longer than two years. The FY 2003 increase in this category estimates for details becoming reimbursable during the Spring and the Summer. The FY 2004 increase represents an annualization of the expenses, minus the cost for the details that will not be renewed.

Since the events of September 11, 2001, the PFIAB support staff workload has been significantly increased and consumed by the homeland security effort. Thus far about 95% of the Board's current advisory work for the President has been directly related to homeland security and counter-terrorism. (Intelligence performance thereon, and support to the new department of homeland security) With only 4 staff members and an already overflowing Board work schedule, work on other important PFIAB priorities has been deferred—such as declassification review of PFIAB archived records. At least three additional staff members, including a GS-14 administrative manager, will be needed to adequately meet support requirements as the Board expands its review of intelligence support to homeland security beyond the more immediate structural and organizational issues, and also re-engages the more general intelligence performance issues across the full spectrum of pressing issues. The FY 2004 request includes $250,000 which will fund two reimbursable detailed staff members and one permanent, Schedule A, Excepted Service, GS-14 administrative management position.

QUESTION 30: What are the dollar and percentage increases for each of the above items, compared to the FY 2003 estimated levels?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 request for reimbursable detailees represents an increase of $356,000, or 64%, over the FY 2003 estimated levels. The PFIAB increase of $250,000 will be 100% above the FY 2003 request since this is a new requirement for FY 2004.

QUESTION 31: The justifications indicate that 11 additional positions are being added to this office in FY 2003, raising the estimated from 60 in FY 2002 to an estimated 71 in FY 2003. What specific positions are being created?

RESPONSE: The 11 additional positions, which raise NSC's FTE from 60 to 71, are not new positions. In FY 2003, the Office for Combating Terrorism (OCT) was combined with the NSC budget request. The increased FTE request correlates with the continued funding for and operation of the OCT as a part of the NSC submission.

QUESTION 32: The FY 2004 request includes funds for a new GS-14 administrative manager for the PFIAB. Why is this new position needed at this time?

REV_00168487

RESPONSE: PFIAB requires a permanent administrative position for continuity as well as efficiency reasons. The administrative staff constitutes the lifeblood of the Board: it fulfills all of the support responsibilities, including human resource management, budget, travel, procurement, research, publishing, protocol, and special assistance to the Executive Director, Chair and Vice Chair. With only two administrative people on staff, it is absolutely critical that both individuals be fully knowledgeable about and highly experienced at White House administrative policies, procedures and guidelines; equally important, both must possess highly honed administrative skills and be extremely efficient, effective and professionally dedicated.

The Board simply cannot attain this level of experience and competence by relying on detailees from other agencies, particularly non-reimbursed detailees. More often than not, we must accept whomever an agency can make available. Therefore, the Board will use this one permanent administrative billet to create a PFIAB office manager position. This individual not only will provide continuity of expertise and experience, but also will ensure that the other administrative person obtains the proper professional mentoring and supervision. We plan to make this a GS-14 position, but may start the individual we select at the GS-13 level to allow for personal advancement...and thereby also ensuring, hopefully, a fairly long term of service to the Board.

Office of National Drug Control Policy (POC – Michelle Marx)

QUESTION 33: You are requesting 10 additional FTE in FY 2004 to replace 10 non-reimbursable detailees who are no longer available. Why are these positions no longer available, and what are the specific positions?

RESPONSE: ONDCP's FY 2004 request includes resources to support 125 FTEs, an increase of 10 FTEs over the FY 2003 request. This FTE increase is requested to offset the loss of approximately 20 - 25 of the 30 non-reimbursable military detailee positions the Department of Defense has supported at ONDCP since 1996. (The Department of Defense, as outlined in a December 28, 2001 memorandum, adheres to a general policy that approves of requests for details only on a reimbursable basis. Exceptions to this policy are granted only in the most compelling circumstances when the agency head has certified that the net benefit of the detail accrues to the Department of Defense.)

This 10 FTE increase, along with distributing additional responsibilities among existing staff, will allow ONDCP to absorb the detailee staffing loss and meet its statutory responsibilities. The specific positions would be appointed within the following offices: Planning and Budget; State and Local Affairs; Intelligence; and Supply Reduction.

Renovation of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building (POC – Steve Beattie)

QUESTION 34: What is the status of funding provided in FY 2002 and 2003? Please provide a breakdown of funding by the type of activity or renovation performed.

REV_00168488

RESPONSE: 34: The General Service Administration has used FY 2002 Emergency Response Funds in the amount of $1,674,000 for starting the Architects' and Engineers' design contract for the 17th Street Wing Security Modernization Project. GSA is currently in the process of reprogramming $7,500,000 for FY 2003 for design, management and inspection. The FY 2003 reprogramming is required to complete the Design/Build/Bridging documents and assist in managing the Design/Build/Bridging efforts.

QUESTION 35: How much remains unobligated, by appropriation?

RESPONSE: 35: The General Services Administration (GSA) awarded a portion of the design cost in the amount of $1,537,173 utilizing the FY 2002 Emergency Response Fund. $136,827 remains unobligated. GSA has not obligated any FY 2003 funding.

QUESTION 36: Please provide a detailed breakdown showing how funds requested in the GSA budget for FY 2004 would be used.

RESPONSE: 36: The following is a break down on how the funds will be used in FY 2004:

Major Work Items:
Electrical System	$ 10,244,000
Air conditioning system, chillers and piping	$ 12,530,000
Interior Construction	$ 13,163,000
Utility Vault (includes foundation construction)	$ 22,107,000
Window Blast Mitigation	$ 4,685,000

Estimated Construction Cost (ECC)	$ 63,531,000
Management and Inspection	$ 2,226,000
Authorization Requested (ECC, M&I)	$ 65,757,000

QUESTION 37: Please provide a detailed schedule for activities planned in FY 2004.

RESPONSE: 37: The design/build/bridging contract is scheduled to be awarded in March 2004. The current schedule for the project is as follows:

Design Award:	04/03
A/E Bridging Documents Complete:	10/03
Design/Build/Bridging Procurement Start:	09/03
Design/Build/Bridging Contract Award:	03/04

QUESTION 38: How much are you currently paying GSA for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB, and how much rental cost are you incurring for the new locations where relocated employees are working?

RESPONSE: We are paying $0 for FY2003 for the unoccupied space along the 17th Street side of EEOB. GSA is not charging the EOP for the space vacated in September 2001. See Attachment A for the rental cost being incurred for the new locations where relocated employees are working.

Pennsylvania Avenue Improvements (POC – Steve Beattie)

QUESTION 44: What is the total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, for which funds were provided in FY 2003?

RESPONSE: This project is to be funded by the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA). The total estimated cost of security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House is currently $26.1 million. The information below breaks out the estimated FY 2003 costs for the project.

Verification and Concept Studies	$ 605,150
Design Activities
Ground Survey and Mapping	$ 57,524
Subsurface Utility Survey	$ 149,682
Environmental Documentation	$ 75,000
Final Design (Consultant)	$ 1,300,000
Crash Testing	$ 350,000
FHWA Contract Administration	$ 100,000
Design Contingency	$ 262,644
Construction Activities
Construction Contract	$ 18,500,000
Utility Construction	$ 1,500,000
FHWA Contract Administration	$ 1,700,000
MVVA Construction Assistance	$ 500,000
Construction Contingency	$ 1,000,000
Grand Totals	$26,100,000

QUESTION 45: What is the status of that project? When will FY 2003 funds be obligated?

RESPONSE: 45: The status of the security and street improvements on Pennsylvania Avenue is as follows -

- Project's status is an ongoing iterative process as the Design team receives comments from the public and the various stakeholders on surrounding sites.
- Under the National Environmental Policy Act, the final public information meeting for the Environmental Impact Assessment was held on May 5, 2003, which is the last step before the final report is issued the week of May 27, 2003. It is expected that the report's concluding statement will find no significant impact.

- The design team is in the pre-design stage.
- The engineers are currently in the design stage for utility relocation in the project's vicinity.
- The Section 106 review as required by the Secretary of the Interior under the Historic Preservation Act is underway and will develop a Memorandum of Agreement in June 2003, which will address issues regarding the design details. The Section 106 review occurs when a project utilizing federal funds may have an effect upon natural, environmental, or cultural resources and looks at mitigation of any adverse effects to those resources.
- $1.5 million is expected to be obligated at the end of August or early September 2003 to start the utility relocation on Pennsylvania Avenue and at the north ends of Jackson and Madison Places.
- Arrangements have already been made for procurement of the trees to be used on the Avenue since it will require root and limb pruning over two calendar years prior to installation on the Avenue. The trees will be installed after inaugural events in the spring of 2005.
- Approximately, $2,675,000 has been obligated to date (under contract). The remaining $3,685,000 will be obligated within the next six months to have the construction contract awarded by the end of September or early October 2003.

QUESTION 46: How much funding is requested for this project in FY 2004, and where is it located in the budget?

RESPONSE: $15 million has been set aside under the Department of the Interior bill for FY 2004. However, discussions have been held between the Federal Highway Administration and the Office of Policy Development in the Executive Office of the President to make the money available for contract award this fiscal year. Discussions have included placing FY 2004 monies into the FY 2003 supplemental appropriation. With the highway legislation pending, there could be a delay in getting the funding moved into the supplemental appropriation to allow the project to get underway.

QUESTION 47: What is the schedule for studies of traffic congestion mitigation alternatives in the vicinity of the White House, as funded in FY 2003?

RESPONSE: The project administrators met with representatives in the Office of Policy Development in the Executive Office of the President, on May 8, 2003 to begin outlining the scope of the study and a plan to involve the District of Columbia government and neighborhood stakeholders. A schedule for the study has not been developed, but will be prepared in the next three months.

Remote Data Center (POC – Carlos Solari)

QUESTION 48: What is the status of establishment today of the remote data center?

RESPONSE: The remote data center project is on schedule and on budget. The project began last summer by conducting a systems development lifecycle analysis to determine and recommend the location for the facility. From this analysis, EOP decided on building the data center at a hardened FEMA facility located in Maryland. The project is being co-managed with FEMA and was established with three phases: (1) infrastructure build-out of the hardened facility (power, air handlers, etc), (2) construction of the data center itself (cabling, raised flooring, etc), and (3) the transition of EOP data systems (telecommunications, servers, etc). The project is approximately halfway through completion for the first two phases with a scheduled opening (initial operational capability) date of September 2003. The transition phase is on schedule preparing the systems and will proceed to begin the transfer September 2003 – with a planned transition of 12 months for all systems. The following chart shows the funding of the remote data center from FY 2002 thru FY 2004.

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004
CIP	$15,000,000	$5,000,000	$8,403,000
Total	$15,000,000	$5,000,000	$8,403,000

QUESTION 49: Last year, you estimated annual operating costs of this facility to be $7,500,000 (p. 88). Is that your current estimate?

RESPONSE: Last year OA provided a rough estimate of $7,500,000 for the future annual operating cost of the new data center facility. This was based upon the following estimated costs:

- $1,500,000 in communications to maintain connectivity for the EOP,
- $600,000 in space rental,
- $450,000 for hardware maintenance,
- $1,300,000 for software maintenance,
- $2,600,000 for contractor services,
- $300,000 for supplies/components,
- $75,000 for equipment, and
- $675,000 in salaries/benefits.

While most of these estimates remain valid, OA must revise the estimate for space rental to $1,258,000, bringing the revised estimated annual operating costs for the facility to $8,158,000.

REV_00168497

QUESTION 50: Your FY 2004 request includes $8,403,000 to transition the remote data center to full operational status (p. 75). What specific activities are required in FY 2004 to accomplish this? Can you provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 request consistent with these activities?

RESPONSE: The following table lists the FY2004 CIP funds requested for the completion of the remote data center construction and initial year operating costs.

Object Class	Object Class Title	Requested Funding (in $1000s)	Description
23.0	Space Rental Payments	$1,258	This estimate reflects $1,258 in rental for the offsite data center and will be the initial rent to be paid for the offsite data center. This cost was previously funded from emergency funds.
23.3	Communications, utilities, and miscellaneous charges	$4,420	$4,420 is for CIP networking/telecommunications projects at the offsite data center. These projects include funds for a tap off of telecommunications lines, two additional DS-3 data paths, two T-1 lines, and backup to support required communications bandwidth, and availability requirements.
25.2	Other Services	$2,700	This estimate reflects Priority System Disaster Recovery costs, Secondary Systems Disaster Recovery costs, Hardware and Software for the Disaster Recovery Site, and Hardware and Software upgrades to support the data center move.
26.0	Supplies and materials	$25	The estimate reflects $25 in additional supplies necessary for start-up operations at the offsite data center. This will include start up costs for office equipment used for the new office spaces.

White House Communications Agency (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 63: Updating the information on page 133 of last year's hearing record, please provide estimated reimbursements for the White House Communications Agency for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: Reimbursements made to the White House Communications Agency, for the non-telecommunications support they provide to the WHO, is broken down into two categories: military personnel and audiovisual support. The amount of planned reimbursement is initially set and agreed to via an inter-agency agreement (IAG). This IAG is then adjusted if needed as a result of actual execution. Reimbursement actuals and estimates follow:

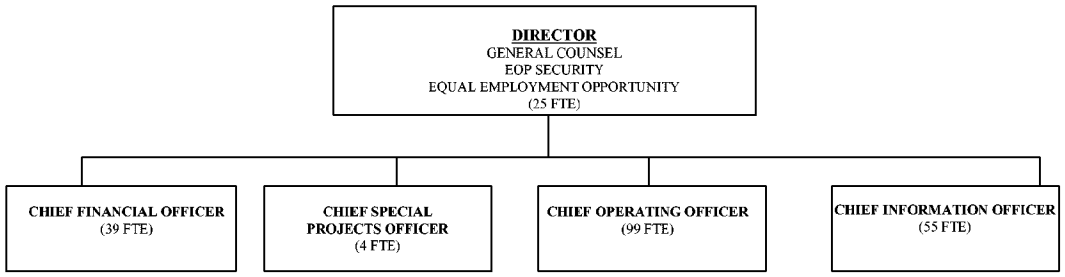
	FY02 (actual)	FY03 (est.)	FY04 (est.)
Military Personnel	$4,376,085	$4,754,346	$4,858,942
Audiovisual Support	$4,543,643	$3,953,848	$2,743,915
Total	$8,919,738	$8,708,194	$7,602,857

REV_00168508

The FY04 estimate for audiovisual support shows a decrease from the FY 2003 estimate due to the move of audiovisual supplies and equipment from IAG reimbursed items to direct procurement through normal WHO channels.

Office of Administration (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 64: Updating the information on page 134 of last year's hearing record, please provide a current organizational chart for the Office of Administration, including the associated numbers of FTEs requested for each office in the FY 2004 President's budget.



RESPONSE: The Office of Administration organization chart provided below reflects the current organizational structure. The FY 2004 FTE request remains constant with FY 2003 levels (222 FTE).

Executive Office of the President

Office of Administration

Organization Chart

FY 2004

Total 222 FTE

QUESTION 65: Last year, it was estimated that 4 FTE were needed to provide administrative services to the Office of Homeland Security. Since that office is substantially smaller due to establishment of the DHS, is there a lesser requirement for OA support? If so, is that reflected in FY 2004 staffing figures?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 budget proposal included the statement that there was "2 CFO staff to support Homeland Security" rather than the 4 FTE referred to in the question. These two Chief Financial Officer (CFO) staff were requested during FY 2003 because last year's OA budget request was a 49% increase over the previous year's spending – and security-related enhancements accounted for nearly all of that increase. The FY 2004 budget proposal included additional security-related enhancements beyond the FY 2003 level. Furthermore, even though the funding level of the Homeland Security Council is not as great as was originally envisioned, it is still a separate account for which the staff must perform the same number of administrative tasks in setting up and monitoring the status of the account. Therefore, the additional two FTE in the CFO office remain necessary to assist EOP offices in executing their new responsibilities.

QUESTION 66: Your salary and expenses request includes a transfer of $1,500 from Homeland Security for information technology services. What are these services?

RESPONSE: The part of OHS that remained with EOP (now called the Homeland Security Council) does not need the information technology contractor support that was previously planned. There is, however, an urgent need to expand the funding needed to support the White House website. The system security put in place to protect the whitehouse.gov website from cyber attack includes a web content distribution designed to make it highly resistant to denial of service type attacks. The cost of this service has increased dramatically, and is directly proportional to the volume of activity. The volume of activity, in turn, is a combination of the website hits and the level of cyber-attack activity directed against the site. The importance of the White House web site cannot be overstated. Along with the DHS website, the whitehouse.gov website is one of the primary government sites with a mission to communicate threat level information to the public.

Due to increased traffic on the White House website, the monthly cost of web caching service to maintain the website has risen from $30,000 per month to more than $75,000 per month. The estimated FY 2004 cost to maintain the website is $1,500,000. No funds were requested for this increased requirement in the FY 2004 budget. OA wishes to use the funds originally requested for the OHS information technology contract support for the White House website effort.

QUESTION 67: You are requesting additional funding for victim rescue units, which would be distributed to all White House staff (p. 82). What are these units, and what is the unit cost?

RESPONSE: Victim Rescue Units (VRUs) provide a 20-45 minute supply of pure oxygen to the wearer. This would be critical to the survival of EOP staff in the event of an incident which would require an evacuation to a safe area. VRUs were selected because they can be easily operated by a novice, while it takes a significant amount of training to teach staff to properly operate a gas mask. VRUs have a ten-year shelf life, which is significantly longer than gas mask filters. They provide protection from the entire threat spectrum from fire and smoke to chemical and biological agents. The VRUs are portable and small, and their expected cost is $375 each.

QUESTION 68: How is the requirement for additional safes and emergency evacuation chairs documented?

RESPONSE: The EOP Security Office conducted a review of security containers (safes) at the White House Complex and found that most of them were 1950's-vintage mechanical locks. During the aftermath of 9/11, it was deemed important that the White House adhere to the latest Federal regulations promulgated by the General Services Administration (FFL-2740A) for the protection of classified materials. Thus, the EOP recommends acquiring new security containers which are fully compliant with GSA standard which governs all changeable combination locks for the protection of national security information.

After 9/11, we reviewed all emergency evacuation procedures for the White House Complex. As we updated evacuation plans and reviewed procedures it was determined that evacuation chairs were needed in various buildings and on various floors to assist individuals who may need assistance or have special needs during an evacuation. This was an internal study performed by staff of the EOP security office.

Financial Audits (POC – Al Muhlbauer)

QUESTION 69: Last year, you advised us that EOP would plan to address the findings of the recent auditability assessment no later than FY 2003. What is the status of that effort today?

RESPONSE: EOP has initiated five major efforts to address the auditability assessment. They are:

- Development and publication of the EOP entity and reporting structure, which was completed and is and presented in the FY 2004 Budget Submission.
- Development and publication of the EOP financial management structure, which has been developed in draft and is currently being circulated for comment within EOP. Approval and issuance of the financial management structure is expected to occur within 30 days.
- Provide financial management policy and guidance to the EOP, and put in place consistent EOP-wide business practices and procedures. This effort is underway and is expected to be completed this fiscal year.
- Select a replacement for the current non-compliant financial accounting system. The Office of the Chief Financial Officer has reviewed various alternatives and has made a determination to be cross-serviced by another Federal agency that has implemented a compliant system, is currently receiving "clean" audit opinions, and has cross-servicing as an agency mission. Two such organizations were identified, a requirements document was provided, their proposals are currently being evaluated, and a decision is expected within the next two weeks.
- Accomplish a detailed review of the EOP general ledger and supporting documents for account balances, correct the data as necessary, and prepare the information for conversion to the replacement accounting system. A "clean-up" and conversion plan is in process and will be coordinated with the selected cross-servicing agency.

QUESTION 70: When will you be able to produce an auditable financial statement?

RESPONSE: The Chief Financial Officer completed an exercise that resulted in EOP-wide financial statements, that exercise identified various data problems that confirmed the auditability assessment. The "clean-up" exercise which is required prior to the conversion to the cross-servicing agency's system is addressing these problems and it is anticipated that the FY 2004 financial statements will be audited.

QUESTION 71: Last year, you stated that you had identified best practices for documented policies and procedures based upon one federal agency which has been recognized as one of the best in the Federal Government (p. 136). Which agency are you using as a model, and what are some examples of the specific best practices you intend to use?

RESPONSE: We were referring to the Department of Education and we conducted a pilot of their approach for developing policies and procedures within the Office of the CFO. While that pilot was helpful, we determined that three other tasks (identify reporting entity, develop financial management structure, and identifying our financial accounting system cross servicing provider) needed to be completed before our policies and procedures could be developed. Since those are near completion we anticipate again focusing on developing policies and procedures during the remainder of this fiscal year.

White House Office (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 72: Please provide a breakdown of the FY 2004 budget request for the White House Office by office or activity, as itemized on pages 137 and 138 of last year's hearing record. Please compare those amounts to corresponding amounts for FY 2002 (actual) and FY 2003 (estimated), similar in format to that shown on pages 246 and 247 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: As noted last year, a single budget is prepared for the WHO. This single budget is prepared based on a number of criteria such as: prior spending patterns, estimated requirements, OMB provided inflation factors, and the priorities of the President. During a given execution year, personnel costs are allocated based upon that year's sometimes unique staffing decisions. The remainder of the budget is allocated initially to two WHO offices. The travel budget is allocated in its entirety to the Office of Advance and obligated against this office if the travel is done in support of the President. Any travel undertaken that is not in support of a Presidential trip is charged to the office of the staff member in question. The remaining portion of the non-personnel, non-travel budget, including expenses for rent, supplies, equipment and other services is considered overhead and in most years is charged as such to the White House Office of Management and Administration. In FY 2003 as part of a pilot program authorized by Congress, costs related to many of these "overhead" items were consolidated under the EOP Office of Administration. Obligations (actual and estimated) are provided by individual White House office for FY 2002 thru FY 2004 in the table below.

Notes:

(1) $911K of the FY03 USA Freedom Corps estimate and $1,351K of the FY04 USA Freedom Corps estimate detailed in the answer to question 54, are included above within the Office of Management and Administration numbers as are similar funds for all other White House Offices.

(2) Because Congress has chosen to appropriate funds for the Office of Homeland Security (OHS)/ Homeland Security Council (HSC) separately from the WHO appropriation, numbers related to OHS/ HSC are not included above. FY03 and FY04 estimates for OHS/ HSC are addressed independently in response to other committee questions.

QUESTION 73: Please provide a corresponding breakdown for FTE staff years and OGE, similar in format to that shown on pages 152 through 154 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: As noted last year, the major units within the White House Office are simply a creature of administrative convenience. The number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. With this kept in mind, a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit, is provided below. This breakout is based on current estimates and planning and will differ during the actual execution year. In addition to these major units, certain individuals – including certain individuals who work with the National Security Council, the Domestic Policy Council, and the National Economic Council – are also White House Office employees, although the units within which they principally work are not themselves part of the White House Office. These individuals are included under the Other category.

Other Services (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 75: Similar to the information on page 236 et seq. of last year's hearing record, please provide a detailed description of each project, program, or initiative proposed to be funded in FY 2004 under object class 25.2 ("other services").

RESPONSE: Capital Investment Plan (CIP) - $5,220,000

The overall FY 2004 CIP requirement supports nine areas, as described below. The following "services" costs are included in the FY 2004 CIP request:

- $690,000 for Customer Service and Desktop Systems. This funding will be used to perform desktop software integration support.
- $450,000 for New Technologies and Systems. This includes "services" funding of $150,000 for server technology integration testing, and $300,000 for voice and data integration.
- $230,000 for EOP Systems and Support, including "services" funding of $150,000 to develop external Local Area Networks, and $80,000 for production test lab development.
- $700,000 for Information Security for enterprise identity projects to allow the introduction of new authentication and identification mechanisms into the EOP IT infrastructure.

REV_00168516

- $650,000 for Web-Based Services for web services application environment.
- $2,500,000 for the Offsite Data Center for services necessary to transition the offsite data center to full operational status
- There are no services funds allocated to Campus Wiring, Networks and Data Communications Infrastructure, or Messaging and Scheduling.

Salaries and Expenses - $2,150,000

There are three initiatives in the FY 2004 OA salaries/expense budget which comprise $2,150,000 in new programs under object class 25.2 ("other services"):

- $1,800,000 for Technology and Systems Support Contract . The Chief Information Officer (CIO) provides a wide range of computer services support to the EOP. These tasks are performed in large measure through an outsourcing contract that delivers IT services from PC deployment, to help desk and data center operations. During FY 2003, this IT systems support contract was competed with an increase in base labor rates due to the need for more advanced skills in IT disciplines such as XML and web services software development, Oracle database development and administration, and implementation of a new Enterprise Resources Planning (ERP) application covering finance, asset management and human resources. The CIO outsource contract is the vehicle used to maintain a 24 hour-a-day operation for mainframes, servers, help desk, local area networks, personal computers, applications; installation of end-user hardware and software; training; software application development and maintenance services. Altogether, this contract supports customers throughout the White House 18 acre complex, at remote and mobile locations, and at the planned Offsite Data Center. Key components driving the cost upward include: (1) higher labor rates for the DC area, which have risen since the previous IT 1997 facility contract; (2) the impact of the new data center operations in 2003 and thereafter; (3) an expanded EOP customer base which has more advanced, sophisticated, and security-conscious users.

- $300,000 for Information Assurance Support. The CIO has established the Information Assurance (IA) program to serve as a central location for information security serving all of EOP. FY 2002 and FY 2003 funds attended to the most critical concern with significant vulnerabilities in the perimeter and began the process of securing the internal systems. The IA program created real-time monitoring of perimeter network devices; it established the first formal documentation of IA program policy to bring the EOP in conformance with Federal guidelines and directives. However, the cyber threat facing EOP is dynamic because our systems are constantly assailed with a wide and unexpected range of attacks. The new state of defense must be active vigilance, to include the following components: (1) Perimeter Security, (2) Advanced Security Concepts, (3) Contingency Planning Support, (4) Network Monitor/Response Systems, and (5) Security Awareness, Assessments, and Education.

- $50,000 for Security Enhancements: Videos. There is a frequent and ongoing need for a security video – specific to the EOP and White House – which can be used in security briefings and new employee orientation meetings. This video will contain a brief overview of security responsibilities and procedures which must be understood by all personnel working in the EOP.

Salaries and Expenses (POC – Dilworth)

QUESTION 76: Please provide a detailed description of any expenses in the FY 2004 budget under "salaries and expenses" which are not directly related to personnel compensation and benefits.

Security Guard Services for OSTP (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 77: In FY 2003, you budgeted $1,798,000 for security guard services for the Office of Science and Technology Policy. Are similar funds requested in FY 2004? If so, how much?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 OA budget proposes that the cost of the security guard service (estimated at $702,000) for OSTP be transferred to the OSTP appropriation. Thus, the proposed FY04 OA budget would contain the balance of the funds (approximately $1.1 million).

Since the FY 2003 budget was proposed, there have been additional reviews of the physical security of the White House complex by the US Secret Service, the Federal Protective Service, and the OA Security Office. As a result, the OA Security Office has been assigned the responsibility of correcting deficiencies in EOP physical security. There are some locations which do not currently have Secret Service protection (such as the Jackson Place White House Conference Center). Another location which does not have firm long-term security plans is the office at 1800 G Street. Thus, the Office of Administration has ongoing needs for the $1.1 million which remains in the OA budget. During FY03, these funds are being used for consolidation of information technology maintenance ($200,000), centralization of database services ($200,000), and common building service costs ($400,000). The remaining $300,000 of these savings will be used for an FY03 OA personnel shortfall.

QUESTION 78: Why aren't such funds in the OSTP budget?

RESPONSE: The estimated FY04 cost of 24-hour security guard services is included in the FY04 OSTP budget request. This estimate is $702,000 for a full year.

Political Appointees (POC – Jon Laurich)

REV_00168518

QUESTION 79: Please update the information on political appointees within EOP as shown on page 268 of last year's hearing record, using the same criteria and assumptions as last year.

RESPONSE: The term "political appointees" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2 of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President has the following number of political appointees directly hired within the EOP and serving in the EOP on detailed assignments from other agencies as of May 5, 2003.

Detailees (POC – Jon Laurich)

QUESTION 80: Please update the information on reimbursable and non-reimbursable detailees with EOP as shown on pages 268 and 269 of last year's hearing record.

RESPONSE: There are currently 251 detailees staffed within the Executive Office of the President. There are 40 reimbursable detailees and 211 non-reimbursable detailees as shown in the chart below, as of May 5, 2003:

Office of the Vice President (POC – Kristen Savercool)

QUESTION 81: You are requesting an additional $70,000 (+1.7 percent) for the Vice President's travel, due to increased travel to undisclosed locations after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. Weren't these type of increases baselined in FY 2002 and FY 2003, and if so, why are further increases needed in FY 2004?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 budget was submitted in February 2002, prior to it becoming evident that the Vice President's travel requirements had increased more than originally estimated. Following the events of 9-11, the Vice President has been required to be outside the Washington, DC vicinity for significant periods of time. This travel has been 100 percent official, and operational in nature (i.e. the Vice President performs his regular duties in an off-site location). This travel has required the accompaniment of staff, who also perform operational duties.

Because the budget impact of these additional travel requirements was not fully realized until after the FY 2003 budget request was submitted, they were not included in the FY 2003 baseline. Continued security concerns related to the Vice President and the ensuing impact on the Vice President's travel costs necessitate the increase to the FY 2004 OVP travel budget. This increase will allow the Vice President the flexibility needed to adequately execute his official travel requirements.

Questions for the Record
Ranking Member, John Olver
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Account Consolidation and Transfer Proposals (POC – Al Muhlbauer/Jim Daniel)

When we centralized the funds within the Office of Administration, Congress intended that each agency would continue to receive a similar share of support and assistance under the consolidation.

QUESTION 83: Are any agencies going to receive diminished services or resources under the consolidation?

RESPONSE: No, currently the funding in the pilot has been allocated to be consistent with the FY 03 budget request. The service levels will be equal to or greater than pre-pilot levels; however, we are hopeful that the cost to procure the same level of service will decrease. Also, the Office of Administration is preparing service standards that will be approved by the Common Services Board. For example, if the service standard for PC's would be one PC per desktop that is less than four years old and if one EOP component is currently at that standard for 95 % of its employees and another is currently at that standard for 50% of its employees, based on need, the second component would get a larger share of the services to bring it closer to the EOP standard. This allows EOP to consistently upgrade software and services across the entire organization as the total infrastructure permits.

QUESTION 84: Are any agencies to receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed as part of the consolidation?

RESPONSE: Yes, based on need and to bring organizations that are lagging behind the approved standards up to a consistent standard, some organizations may receive extra services above and beyond the amount of funds they contributed to the consolidation. We anticipate some of those services will be funded from savings in the program.

QUESTION 85: Under the procurement consolidation pilot approved in the FY03 Omnibus, are IT or database services for any EOP agency going to be paid for by funds contributed by other EOP agencies?

RESPONSE: Yes, in addition to generating procurement savings and efficiencies, a major goal of the consolidation pilot is to bring all of the EOP components up to an approved standard of service which will allow us to implement technology evenly across the organization and to realize efficiencies and benefits from a consistent and even infrastructure. In reaching this goal, the funds may be applied in a manner which is not in the same ratio in which they were contributed.

QUESTION 86: In general, are the funds appropriated for this centralized procurement program going to be used to supplement the appropriation made to individual agencies?

RESPONSE: Yes, the individual agencies will be the recipients of the services funded by the centralized procurement program without reimbursement in accordance with the Congressional appropriation provided to OA.

QUESTION 87: If so, which agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions?

RESPONSE: OA is currently establishing the allocation standards for the commodities included in the centralized procurement program. It is intended that a Common Services Board representing the EOP agencies approve those standards. OA is also requesting that the agencies assist us in developing a baseline against which we will measure the allocation standards. That will determine which, if any, agencies will benefit and which agencies will receive less than their share of contributions. We intend to report to OMB and the Congress how the centralized procurement program commodities were provided.

QUESTION 88: You recently submitted a very cursory report on the procurement pilot. When will you provide us with specific details on the progress of the pilot program?

RESPONSE: As mentioned above, progress is being made on the plan to implement the Common Services Program. We intend to report the status of the implementation of the plan in the June/July timeframe.

Other than for extreme situations similar to those encountered immediately after 9/11/01, it is not our intent to transfer large amounts between EOP appropriations. More likely, because a number of the appropriations are small we would be moving funds to cover unanticipated requirements such as paying unexpected terminal leave to employees who have retired and whose agency did not anticipate the level of required terminal leave. As stated in our request, Congress will be notified in advance of our intent to move funds between accounts.

Your budget also proposes a change that would permit EOP agencies to transfer up to 10% into our out any agency's budget. Coupled with your account consolidation proposal, that would allow you to transfer in up to $18 million more into (or out of) the White House's budget.

REV_00168523

QUESTION 89: Under the procurement consolidation program that we approved in the FY03 bill, don't you have a similar type of flexibility already? What other flexibility is needed?

RESPONSE: The flexibility of the procurement consolidation program is directed to certain defined common commodities. The 10% transfer authority provides flexibility for unexpected requirements and to address needs that may be outside the program.

QUESTION 90: What protection is there for smaller EOP agencies under this proposal? Don't they stand to lose critical resources if the White House or Vice President's Office decide to take 10% of their resources?

RESPONSE: It is more likely that the smaller agencies will benefit from the proposal, because their appropriations are small they are less likely to be able to adjust to unforeseen circumstances, this program will allow the EOP to address those circumstances without requesting supplemental funding. And, as stated above, the Congressional Committees will be notified in advance of any fund movement and could have any such concerns addressed.

Office of Homeland Security Questions (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts. The source of these funds would come from the Office of Homeland Security.

The Office of Homeland Security has gone from an initial $25m stated need when the initial FY03 bills passed the House and Senate to $11m when the FY03 Omnibus was passed to what will be $9m if the reprogramming is approved.

QUESTION 91: What exactly does the Office of Homeland Security do now that the Department of Homeland Security is in place?

RESPONSE: HSC provides advice to the President on homeland security matters and coordinates the interagency process to ensure unified administration policy on homeland security.

QUESTION 92: Does OHS still have a presence at Nebraska Avenue?

RESPONSE: No.

QUESTION 93: Does the Office of Administration provide any support to agencies at Nebraska Avenue? If so, please describe the specific types of support provided. Is this support on a reimbursable basis?

REV_00168524

RESPONSE: Since the transfer of the Nebraska Avenue facility to the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) on January 1, 2003, OA has not provided any support to agencies at the Nebraska Avenue Complex (NAC). Pursuant to a Determination by the OMB Director, funds in the amount of $3,746,000 were transferred from the OHS Emergency Fund within OA to the Department of Homeland Security in March 2003 to support NAC activities.

QUESTION 94: How many personnel and detailees now work for OHS?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council currently consists of 66 staff positions which can be filled by either Direct Hire FTE or Other Government Employee (detailee and assignee) personnel. HSC is requesting resources to support up to 40 Direct Hire FTE and 26 OGE FTE on its staff for FY 2004. See table below for a comparison with fiscal years 2003 and 2002.

Office of Homeland Security / Homeland Security Council Personnel

	FY 2002 Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Request
Direct Hire FTE	0	20	40
Other Government Employee (EOY headcount)	89	31	26
Total Personnel	89	51	66

QUESTION 95: What is the actual operational budget need for OHS in FY03?

RESPONSE: The Homeland Security Council budget requirement from the FY 2003 appropriation is estimated to be approximately $4.32 million. Please note that the FY 2003 estimate covers only costs incurred after the enactment of the FY 2003 appropriation on February 20, 2003. Unlike other EOP agencies which operated under continuing resolutions between October 1, 2003 and February 20, 2003, the Office of Homeland Security was not permitted to utilize the CR funding mechanism but instead continued to charge FY 2003 expenses against the no-year emergency funding (provided in FY2002) until the FY 2003 appropriation was enacted. Therefore the FY 2003 estimate reflects only seven months of activity, whereas the FY 2004 Request needs to cover HSC expenses for the full 12 months next fiscal year.

QUESTION 96: For the record, please provide us a breakout by object class of the Office of Homeland Security's FY03 remaining budget.

RESPONSE: The breakout below reflects HSC's budget for the last seven months of FY 2003, from the enactment of the FY 2003 Appropriation on February 20, 2003 through September 30, 2003.

REV_00168525

(Dollars in Thousands)

Object Class	FY 2003 est.
Personnel	$2,800
Travel	$60
Transportation of Things	$24
Communications, Utilities, and Miscelaneous	$50
Printing and Reproduction	$69
Other Services	$1,267
Equipment	$50
Total,	$4,320

QUESTION 97: Any likelihood that these estimates will be revised downward again?

RESPONSE: The FY 2003 estimate provided above reflects the best assessment of HSC requirements from the OHS FY 2003 appropriation, and actual obligations against this appropriation will likely be close to this current estimate.

QUESTION 98: I understand that the President named General Gordon as his new Homeland Security Adviser. Does he support the latest $2 million cut to his office's resources?

RESPONSE: General Gordon has not yet reported to Homeland Security Council. Also, the resources of the Homeland Security Council have not been cut by $2 million. The FY 2003 appropriations for the Homeland Security Council included $2 million for decontamination of the Remote Delivery Site as agreed to by the Congress and the Administration. Subsequent to the passage of the FY 2003 appropriations, that $2 million was allocated to decontamination of the RDS per the agreement. Therefore, this planned use of that appropriation is not a cut to HSC resources.

QUESTION 99: Have you validated the FY04 request recently to ensure it is an accurate figure?

RESPONSE: Yes. HSC reevaluated its FY 2004 requirements prior to submitting the final FY 2004 Request. Given the creation of the Department of Homeland Security, HSC's FY 2004 budget requirements are estimated at $8,331,000; as requested.

Budget Questions:

After the FY03 enacted levels are adjusted to reflect the transfer of $9 million to the Office of Homeland Security, the Executive Office of the President's FY04 budget request reflects an 8% increase over FY03 levels. Your agency, the Office of Administration requests a 10% increase between FY03 and FY04.

When the budget was introduced, Mitch Daniels said that the overall growth of Federal programs would be pegged to the expected 4% growth in inflation. The administration also said the President wanted to "match government's growth with the growth of American family income."

QUESTION 100: When the rest of the government is forced to live with 4% growth, how can you justify an almost 10% increase in your office and an overall Executive Office of the President increase of 8%? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: The Office of Administration's 10% budget increase amounts to approximately $7 million. This increase is necessitated by additional costs stemming from the enhanced security activities in the post-September 11 environment:

- The Capital Investment Plan has a net increase of $3.8 million required for the relocation of the EOP data center to an offsite location. The offsite data center has been determined to be a critical project in any contingency plan, and the communications requirements for the data center will be significantly higher in the new facility.
- $2.5 million is needed for the new information technology contract, driven by the information technology service labor increases, the relocation of the data center as well as by the increased security concerns for EOP systems.
- $0.5 million is required for the EOP information assurance program.
- $0.2 million for physical security improvements to the White House complex in providing resources for security education and evacuation resources.

The 8% growth in the overall EOP budget amounts to approximately $24.6 million. Primary components of this increase are mission-specific needs proposed by the different EOP entities:

- $6.3 million in OA programs described in the prior paragraph ($3.8 million for the capital investment plan, $2.5 million for the information technology contract, $0.5 million for information assurance, and $0.2 million for physical security).
- $2.5 million in EOP-wide space rental increases to conform with GSA's market-based rental rates.
- $3.0 million for USTR's additional staff for intensified trade negotiations.
- $3.0 million in the Executive Residence's multiyear East and West Wing restoration projects.
- $2.7 million for OMB personnel needs.
- $1.5 million for OMB's budget system updates.
- $0.7 million for OMB's E-Government staff and the Office of Information Technology.
- $0.8 million for additional staff for ONDCP.

REV_00168527

- $0.6 million in the NSC's funding for reimbursable detailees and President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board's request for additional staff.
- $0.5 million for OSTP's continuity of operations plan.

The White House Office's increase of 3.6% looks smaller because of a realignment of $1.85m in rent to the Office of Administration's account. Without the realignment, the White House Office's increase would be around 6.6%.

QUESTION 101: What is the justification for this realignment? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The realignment of $1.85M in rent was made "Into" vice out of the WHO account. Without this and other realignments made as part of the FY 2004 WHO budget request, The White House Office's increase would have only been 1.7 percent.

QUESTION 102: How could the White House have been paying the bill for space that wasn't theirs? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The WHO has not been paying rent on the 1800 G Street office spaces that this realignment involves. These office spaces were necessitated by the movement of certain White House staff offices following the events of September 11. In FY 2003 funds for these spaces were budgeted by the Office of Administration and are being paid for as part of a pilot program authorized by Congress.

QUESTION 103: Which EOP agencies occupied this space on which the White House Office has been paying rent? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: As indicated in the previous answers, White House staff have been occupying this space. Rent is being paid by the Office of Administration as part of the pilot program authorized by Congress.

QUESTION 104: Are these costs that had historically been paid by the White House Office? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: No. The 1800 G Street Office spaces were not occupied by EOP staff until after the events of 9-11.

QUESTION 105: If so, why make the change this year? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The realignment of these costs under the WHO is done to reflect the costs under the office whose staff occupies them.

REV_00168528

Travel

The White House Office's request includes a decrease of $400,000 in Presidential Travel.

QUESTION 106: Was the FY03 estimate too high? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: As part of the FY 2003 WHO budget submission, $600,000 was requested to support the travel requirements of the new USA Freedom Corps Office. Actual experience subsequently determined this amount to be in excess of need. As a result, the FY 2003 WHO travel line was reduced $329,647 by the Congressional recission, and the FY 2004 WHO budget submission requested $400,000 less in the travel line than the original FY 2003 estimate.

QUESTION 107: If so, how do you intend to use the surplus funds? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: The $400,000 reduction to the FY 2004 WHO budget request for travel requirements does not result in surplus funds. It instead results in an overall reduction to the FY 2004 WHO budget estimate.

QUESTION 108: Are you planning less travel in FY04 or will more of the travel just be paid for by political entities? (POC – Eric Lanman)

RESPONSE: Except as noted above, the amount of official travel conducted by the White House staff is expected to remain consistent with the FY 2003 estimate.

QUESTION 109: Please provide a list of all White House Office, Office of Homeland Security and Office of Vice President official staff travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). Include a brief description of the official purpose of the trip. For FY04 estimates, provide estimated number of trips and trip purpose. (POC – Rothley Howard)

RESPONSE: The following tables provide the FY 2002 and FY 2003 (to date) staff travel information for the White House Office, the Office of Homeland Security and the Office of the Vice President.

QUESTION 110: Please provide a list of all Presidential, First Lady and Vice Presidential travel for FY02 and FY03 (to date). For each trip, please provide the trip date, destination, designation (i.e., political, official), number of official EOP staff supporting the Principal and, the official cost of the trip. (POC – Rothley Howard)

QUESTION 111: How much did OMB reimburse the White House Office for use of White House motorpool vehicles in FY02? How much is OMB projecting to reimburse in FY03 and FY04? (POC – Brian Gillis)

RESPONSE: For FY 2002, OMB reimbursed the Department of Defense $99,000 for the use of the White House motorpool. OMB is projecting a similar amount for FY 2003 and FY 2004.

In the hearing, Mr. Daniel mentioned that the FY03 vehicle lease and IT support contracts came in significantly below the original budget estimates.

QUESTION 112: Do you intend to return the unused funds to the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: The EOP plans to use the funds to implement other critical EOP priorities. The programs which were described by Mr. Daniel at the hearing were the FY 2003 vehicle lease (covering leases by OA, White House, and Office of the Vice President (OVP)), and the guard services contract for guard services at 1801 Pennsylvania Avenue. He did not refer to the IT support contract.

QUESTION 113: For these areas in which savings were realized, what are your plans for the funds? (POC – Chuck Sigman)

RESPONSE: Vehicle contract savings for FY 2003 amount to approximately $20,000 for OA, $43,000 for the White House, and $19,000 for OVP. These savings will be utilized to fund priority needs for these EOP entities. The guard service contract will result in savings of approximately $1.1 million.

For FY 2003, these funds are being applied to fund other priorities for the OA as well as common services for EOP entities. These other priorities include consolidation of information technology maintenance ($200,000), centralization of database services ($200,000), and common building service costs ($400,000). The remaining $300,000 of these savings will be used for an FY03 OA personnel shortfall.

Political Travel

QUESTION 114: Please explain the reimbursement procedures the White House intends to follow during the Presidential election season. (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 13, 1992, prepared by C. Boyden Gray, former Counsel to the President, "Allocation of the costs for "campaign-related" travel by senior Administration officials is governed by the Federal Election

Commission (FEC) hypothetical trip rule." These regulations require that all "campaign-related" travel of a candidate seeking nomination, or re-election to the Office of the President, must be paid by the candidate's authorized campaign committee. Further, if any campaign activity is conducted at a stop, other than incidental contacts, "that stop shall be identified as campaign-related and, in general, all costs associated with it must be paid by the President's campaign committee."

QUESTION 115: Exactly when will the presidential-campaign procedures take effect? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: The presidential-campaign procedures take effect after the President declares that he is a candidate for re-election.

QUESTION 116: How do you determine who the official travelers are on a campaign or political trip? Does the list of positions vary from trip to trip? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated December 6, 1991 prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "officials are to be considered on official duty, regardless of the nature of the President's activities, only if it is determined by the Assistant to the President and Deputy Chief of Staff before the trip that (1) the official is traveling for the sole purpose of providing (a) clerical, logistical and administrative support, or (b) staff assistance in the management of paperwork and the records of decisions, or (c) consultation and guidance necessary solely for the transaction of Government business, and (2) the official will not engage in any political activity during the travel." A list of positions has been developed which are deemed to always be official. This list does not change from trip to trip.

QUESTION 117: On trips with political and official components, what is the procedure for determining which events are paid for using official funds and which events are reimbursed by the political entity? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 12, 1990, from C. Boyden Gray, "With regard to non-Presidential election campaigns events (e.g., Congressional and State and local campaigns), applicable law and regulations do not provide a specific method for allocating the costs of mixed official and political travel by individuals other than the candidates. Neither is there a precise definition for distinguishing between "official" and "political" functions. As a result, the guidelines set forth below are based on general legal principles, policies established over a period of years by previous Administrations, and guidance from Federal Election Commission opinions and actions." A good faith apportionment of the costs of a trip based on the time spent on political activities and the time spent on official activities has been developed and has become know as the "hard-time" formula. This formula is based on the time spent in official meetings and receptions, etc, and time spent in political activities to determine total activity time. Based on this data, a ratio is developed based on total activity time which is allocated to political activity and official activities. The percentage that represents the political and official portions of the trip is then used as a multiplier to determine the allocation between official and political costs.

QUESTION 118: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, what criteria is used to determine whether an event is "political" or "official"? (POC – Andy Kalnins)

RESPONSE: In accordance with a memo dated February 12, 1990, prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "Appearing at party functions, fundraising, and campaigning for specific candidates are principal examples of travel which should be considered political." The memo goes on to say that a precise definition for distinguishing between "official" and "political" functions does not exist. Further clarification is provided in the memo dated February 13, 1992, also prepared by C. Boyden Gray, "In determining whether an activity is political or official, all relevant factors should be considered, including, but not limited to, the identity of the sponsor of the event, the group or organization being addressed, other participants, whether the speech being delivered is partisan and political in nature, and whether it is a factual presentation or defense of the Administration's position on the issue."

QUESTION 119: If the President gives virtually the same speech at a political event that he gave at an official event in that same city, does the political entity reimburse the White House for the Speechwriters time? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 120: Have events been classified as "official" even if only members of the President's political party are invited to share the stage with the President? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 121: If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 122: Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03. For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill. (POC – WHO M&A)

Photographic Services (POC – Eric Lanman)

QUESTION 123: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photographic equipment purchased for use by the White House photographers?

RESPONSE: The total cost (actual and projected) of photographic equipment procured for use by White House photographers in FY 2002, FY 2003 and FY 2004 are displayed in the table below.

REV_00168557

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004
	Actual	Estimate	Estimate
Photographic Equipment	$137,057	$35,700	$36,300

FY 2002 actual costs are higher than the estimates for FY 2003 and FY 2004 due to the use of end of year sweep-up funds.

QUESTION 124: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total cost of photo lab equipment purchased for use by the WHCA photo lab?

	FY 2002	FY 2003	FY 2004

QUESTION 125: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total travel cost associated with travel of White House Photographers?

RESPONSE: The FY 2002 travel costs of White House Photographers was $????. The estimated FY 2003 cost is $38,000 and the projected cost for FY 2004 is $38,760.

QUESTION 126: For FY02, FY03 and FY04, what was (or is projected to be) the total rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab?

RESPONSE: There is no rent cost associated with the WHCA photo lab. However, there are utility and facility maintenance costs associated with the WHCA photo lab. Those costs were $73,600 for FY 2002, $76,650 estimated for FY 2003 and a projected $79,000 for FY 2004.

QUESTION 127: Please explain the procedures for determining when and how the government is to be reimbursed for photos released for non-official purposes. If these procedures have changed from those followed by the previous administration, please explain any changes that have been made.

RESPONSE: The procedures for obtaining reimbursements for photographs changed on October 1, 2000. The procedures now in place are designed to ensure that the government receives appropriate reimbursement for photographs sought for non-official purposes. Records are kept of all such requests, and appropriate reimbursement is then sought.

REV_00168558

It is the White House policy to provide two photographs to members of the general public upon request of photographs that include a principal (President, 1st Lady, Vice President or Mrs. Cheney) and the requestor. These requests are generally provided without consideration as to whether or not they are official or non-official. For requests for photos outside these general guidelines, a determination is made by the White House Office as to whether it is an official or non-official request. For non-official requests, the requestor is provided the cost to the government of the photograph and is required to provide reimbursement. The photographs are provided to the requestor and the reimbursement is credited to the White House Office salaries and expenses appropriation.

QUESTION 128: For FY02 and the first seven months of FY03, please provide the following information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos or photo lab services that were provided:

- date reimbursement was made
- name of reimbursing organization
- amount of payment
- number of photos purchased by reimbursing organization
- size of photos purchased by reimbursing organization

RESPONSE: The requested information about each payment made to the White House, OA, WHCA, DISA (or other DoD organization) to reimburse for the release of photos is provided below.

Remote Delivery Site Reprogramming Request (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

We recently received a reprogramming request to transfer $2m of the funds provided to the Office of Homeland Security to the Remote Delivery Site cleanup efforts.

QUESTION 129: What is the status of remediation efforts?

RESPONSE: We are in the process of Confirmatory Sampling. The sampling plan is intended to present a technical approach for (1) completing air and surface sampling for culturable Bacillus anthracis spores to verify the efficacy of the decontamination process: (2) providing for qualified laboratory analysis of the collected samples: and (3) presenting a protocol for data collection and reporting such that the results of the sampling effort are valid and defensible. In addition, the Plan provides for the site and personnel security, safety, health, and personal protection, equipment and collection methods, and sample handling.

QUESTION 130: Please provide the total budget estimate for this project.

RESPONSE: As the contractor responsible for returning the building to an environmentally safe workplace, Versar to date has not been able to develop or provide accurate cost estimates or time lines to EOP. Budget and schedule estimates for this project are especially difficult due to critical path activities taking place in a high-risk environment relying on the utilization of untested speculative technologies. However to date $2.422 million has been spent on the effort and we are currently requesting an additional $2 million, which is Versar's best estimate of what it will cost to complete the project. The total budget estimate for the project then comes to $4.422 million.

QUESTION 131: Please provide the anticipated schedule for this effort.

RESPONSE: Given many variables, including weather, our best current estimate of time to required complete the RDS project is 4 months. The confirmatory testing phase is estimated to take eight weeks from start up. The next phase would be for the ECC committee to ratify the confirmation process; we estimate this to be one month. After this is completed, our best estimate is thirty days to perform PM on the HVAC equipment, build out the office areas, and re-establish the building operation.

QUESTION 132: What caused this $2 million overrun?

RESPONSE: There is not a $2 million overrun. The request for $2 million is a result of anticipated costs and those unforeseen conditions as result of the environmental cleanup process, that OA, GSA or its contractors had available at the time of fumigation. The Environmental Clearance Committee has placed additional requirements that resulted in the additional costs. The proposed sampling plan utilizes the barrier divisions already in Building 410 (which provides discrete work areas) and presents proposed sampling location, quantity, and types of samples to be collected . Sampling will be carried out using a phased approach for each work area as follows:

Phase 1, Surface Sampling; Phase 2 Air Sampling: Phase 3, "Dymanic Sampling", Phase 4, Start Up of the Heating, Ventilation , and Air Conditioning (HVAC) Units; and Phase 5, Final Sampling with the Barriers Down.

QUESTION 133: Why have you stopped providing the monthly reports on the remediation efforts?

RESPONSE: Due to the process of establishing the Environmental Clearance Committee, it was an administrative error that the reports were inadvertently not forwarded.

Previously the Remote Delivery Site was used to screen incoming mail. It also used to serve as an off-site supply depot. With the Department of Homeland Security now assuming the mail processing function and with supply operations now established on the White House Complex, I'm curious about future plans for the RDS.

QUESTION 134: What will the facility be used for when remediation is finished?

RESPONSE: Prior to September 11, 2001 the Remote Delivery Site (RDS) was used as a centralized receiving facility for the White House Complex. All postage flat mail and packages, including UPS and FedEx deliveries, and all equipment and local deliveries were delivered to the RDS. All incoming deliveries, regardless of size, were screened by the U.S. Secret Service (USSS) via large X ray machines, and if any equipment was too large to fit on the X-ray conveyer belt, then the USSS used dogs to sniff for explosives. After initial USSS clearance, all of the items were sorted and delivered to their intended destination to the White House Complex. Supplies, equipment and furniture which were purchased for inventory for use at later time were housed at the RDS.

In addition to the screening of WHO Complex deliveries, the USSS Administrative Operations Division used RDS space to screen all of its incoming mail and packages that were intended for USSS personnel.

The EOP Supply store was operated within the confines of the RDS. Supplies were purchased and inventoried at the RDS and office supplies and copier paper were purchased in volume to take advantage of discounts. The WHO/EOP customers faxed supply requisitions to the RDS staff who then pulled and boxed office supplies for delivery to the WHO Complex. OA property supply staff made supply deliveries to the WHO complex at least twice a day, and more if needed.

The EOP/OA Personal Property Program (excess, transfer, donation, and destruction of furniture and equipment) had its operations housed at the RDS. Excessed equipment and furniture were corralled at the RDS until enough equipment and furniture were gathered to make it economical to excess all at once. In addition, schools and nonprofit organizations were allowed to review equipment for donation under Executive Order 12999.

After September 11, as a precautionary move, the White House United States Postal Service was relocated from the Eisenhower Executive Office Building to the RDS. A separate room was built for the USPS's operation of opening and screening all White House mail. The RDS operations continued working around the new USPS area. These USPS operations continued until the RDS was closed due to the discovery of Anthrax. Since then the USPS operations have relocated to 1800 G. St. NW.

Once the remediation is finished, the RDS will resume its former function of screening all bulk deliveries (including equipment, furniture, boxes of supplies) sent to the EOP Complex. In addition the facility will be used to store supplies and an inventory of equipment and furniture. The RDS will also be used as a staging area for efficient loading and delivery of bulk items for all EOP agencies.

QUESTION 135: Will the DHS use the facility to screen the White House's mail?

RESPONSE: No.

QUESTION 136: Will you close the on-site supply stores and revert back to running the supply operation out of the Remote Delivery Site?

RESPONSE: When the RDS reopens after the remediation of the building, the RDS staff will resume the same functions prior to the Anthrax. However, there are major changes in the way the OA Supply Store operates and manages its supply inventory. The Office of Administration has entered into a new business relationship with GSA. The OA Supply operation will purchase its supplies from GSA who will provide a wide array of office supplies and maintain the level of supply inventory that is needed to support the WHO Complex. The GSA inventory will be housed at the RDS after relocation from Franconia, VA, the current, temporary RDS location. OA supply staff will pull supply orders based on customer's requisitions, and then box and deliver the supplies from the RDS to WHO complex. GSA will only charge for the supplies that EOP customers use at point of sale, otherwise the unsold inventory will still belong to GSA. GSA promises to maintain the supplies that the EOP customers may need. Inventories will be reviewed and adjusted to realize the kind and quantities of supplies the EOP customers expect. This business relationship will promote a more flexible inventory that allows the supply inventory to have the quantity or variety of supplies to meet our customer needs in a more proactive, real-time fashion.

QUESTION 137: For the record, please provide the total number of visitors who passed through the White House as part of tours in 2000, 2001, 2002 and 2003 (to date).

QUESTION 138: Why are White House tours currently not open to the general public?

QUESTION 139: What is the status of the report on the status of White House Tours that was due to the Subcommittee by March 22nd?

QUESTION 140: Who has the lead on the efforts to decide whether public tours can be resumed?

QUESTION 141: Does the USSS do a background check on all individuals attending events and meetings at the White House Complex before access can be granted?

QUESTION 142: During this administration, have White House aides ever overruled a building-access recommendation made by the USSS?

We believe our audit provides a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the White House Travel Office Press Fund as of December 31, 2001, and the changes in its net assets and its cash flows for the nine months then ended in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

WHITE HOUSE TRAVEL OFFICE PRESS FUND
NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
DECEMBER 31, 2001

NOTE 1 – ORGANIZATION

The White House Travel Office Press Fund ('WHTO") was established to manage expenses associated with travel for members of the press who accompany the President, Vice President, First Lady, and Second Lady on domestic and foreign trips. In May 1993, a new management team was hired to manage WHTO. Consequently, for accounting and reporting purposes, a new WHTO was established as of January 1, 1994.

NOTE 2- SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Revenue and expenditures are recognized using the accrual basis of accounting. The WHTO invoices the press organizations for their prorated share of the expenses associated with each trip. The WHTO then remits payment directly to the vendors whose services were used for the particular trip. The total amount invoiced to the press members equals the total of the amounts paid to the vendors. The WHTO does not own any fixed assets. Al! fixed assets are purchased through the White House's general fund and designated for the WHTO use. Similarly, all operating expenses of the WHTO, including salaries and office supplies, are paid directly by the White House's general fund.

NOTE 3- CASH

Gash is maintained in two non-interest checking accounts at the Riggs National Bank of Washington, D.C. The RCA 2000 cash account is explained in Note 4.

The total cash held by WHTO at December 31, 2001 includes $512,821 that is not covered by insurance provided by the federal government. It is the opinion of WHTO's management that the solvency of the referenced financial institution is not of particular concern at this time.

REV_00168574

NOTE 4 - RESTRICTED CASH ACCOUNT

Effective April 1, 2000, the management of the White House Travel Office implemented a Restricted Cash Account (RCA). RCA funds are encumbered for specific purposes set forth in written policies and procedures, most notably for payment of late arriving vendor invoices, bank charges and accounts receivable written off as uncollectible.

The RCA is funded through an RCA funding amount applied to every customer invoice, except those for government employees. Presently, that funding amount is two percent of the invoice amount

RCA funding amounts are not considered revenue for accounting purposes.

Under current policies and procedures, a separate RCA is established for each calendar year. The RCA 2000 account on the Statement of Financial Position reflects the total amount of cash in that account at December 31, 2001. The RCA liability accounts for 2000 and 2001 reflect the total RCA funding amount applied to all customer invoices during the respective calendar year, less any disbursements. RCA funding amounts that have been invoiced but not yet collected are included in the accounts receivable amount.

The RCA for each year will be terminated at a designated point in time after the conclusion of the applicable calendar year. At the time of dissolution, any excess funds will be refunded to the Press Fund's customers subject to the RCA funding amount in accordance with a formula based on the percentage of the total travel costs consumed during the year corresponding to the RCA. For example, if a customer were responsible for ten percent of all travel costs for the calendar year 2001, they would be entitled to ten percent of the remaining RCA 2001 funds at the time of dissolution.

NOTE 5 – ACCOUNTS RECEIVABLE

Currently, the WHTO writes off accounts receivable using the direct write-off method. Therefore, there is no allowance for uncollectible accounts.

REV_00168575

NOTE 6 - OTHER RECEIVABLES

As per note 2, the WHTO utilizes a system of dollar for dollar accounting. Under the current accounting process, vendor invoices for trip expenses are entered into accounts payable as they are received. Accordingly, there is an accumulation of unbilled trip expenses in accounts payable until such time that trip accounting is finalized and members of the press are invoiced for their pro rata share of trip expenses. This timing difference creates the need for an Other Receivables category. Other Receivables represents the obligations for normal trip expenses that have been entered into accounts payable, but not yet billed to the press.

REV_00168576

QUESTION 155: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Corps travelers on the Press Charter?

RESPONSE: Each leg of the itinerary is assigned a proportionate cost, which is divided equally among all press passengers. The following formula is used to compute the proportionate cost for each leg of the trip: (Leg flight time / Total flight time) * Total Air Transportation Expense

QUESTION 156: Please explain the formula you use to determine the rate of reimbursement for Press Pool travelers on Air Force One?

RESPONSE: The cost of the fourteen members of the pool traveling on AF1 is added to the total air transportation expense and the total costs are spread on a pro-rata share among all of the press travelling on the trip. The following formula is used to compute the proportionate cost for each leg of the trip: (Leg flight time / Total flight time) * Total Air Transportation Expense

QUESTION 157: Please explain the formula used to identify the reimbursement rate that the Travel Office billed Press Corps travelers accompanying the President's travel to the USS Abraham Lincoln. In your response, please include the actual rate billed to individual press corps travelers on this trip.

RESPONSE: The cost of transporting press corps travelers from the North Island Naval Air Station to the USS Abraham Lincoln and back to the North Island Naval Air Station totaled $7,440.26. This cost will be added to the total air transportation expense and spread on a pro-rata share among all the press traveling on the trip. The formula for military aircraft reimbursement for the trip to the USS Abraham Lincoln is as follows: $X per hour per aircraft, divided by 60 minutes to get a per minute rate, multiplied by the flight time, divided by the total number of passengers, and then 7.5% excise tax plus $3.00 dollars per person was added.

Bonuses

QUESTION 158: Why did this administration reinstate the payments of bonuses to political appointees? (POC – WHO M&A)

QUESTION 159: Have any EOP political staff been given bonuses since the policy was reinstated in March of 2002? (POC – Jon Laurich)

RESPONSE: The term "political appointees" or "political staff" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2

of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President had a total of 28 political staff within 4 offices that received bonuses since March 2002.

QUESTION 160: Have any EOP political staff been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY02 or FY03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus? (POC – Jon Laurich)

RESPONSE: No political staff within the EOP have been given pay increases for a single pay period in FY 02 or FY 03 (to date) that would have the same effect as a bonus.

Eisenhower Executive Office Building

QUESTION 161: Since 1/20/01, have any non-Federal funds been used for renovations and/or furnishings in the GSA facilities occupied by the Executive Office of the President? [this question does not apply to the White House residence.] (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 162: Which Federal agency (i.e., GSA, OA/Facilitles) coordinated the work that was paid for using non-Federal funds? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 163: For the record, please provide the sources and amounts of the non-Federal funds used for renovations and/or furnishings. POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 164: For the record, please also provide a description of each project for which non-Federal funds were provided. (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 165: Why were non-Federal funds used to renovate and/or furnish these GSA facilities? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 166: Which agency's gift authority was used to accept the contribution of non-Federal funds for renovations and/or furnishings? (POC –WHO M&A)

QUESTION 167: Please provide a list of all EOP and EOP-support-related agencies that occupied space in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building on 1/20/01 that have since been relocated to locations outside the EEOB. For each agency that relocated, please identify the agency that paid the move-related costs. (POC – Steve Beattie)

REV_00168578

RESPONSE: 167: See Attachment B. (chart will be inserted here)

QUESTION 168: What is the status of the vacant space on the 17th Street side of the Eisenhower Executive Office Building? (POC – Steve Beattie)

RESPONSE: 168: With the exception of the ground floor cafeteria and kitchen, several fourth floor offices, and a few storage areas, the space remains essentially vacant as progress continues on the Fire and Life Safety Improvements project.

EOP Staffing Levels:

Please provide a list of the "historically provided" White House Office positions, the office to which these positions are assigned and the agency that pays the salary for each of these positions. (POC – Jon Laurich)

HOW TO USE THIS DOCUMENT

Several of the FY 2004 questions for the record refer to pages from last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. Below is the FY 2003 hearing record information.

Note that the Question # refers to this year's (FY 2004) question and the information that follows is what was in last year's (FY 2003) hearing record.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 6:

Issue: Executive Office of the President

Question: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2001 (actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimates).

Answer: The following tables provide the total FY 2001 actual, FY 2002 and FY 2003 estimates for full time equivalents (FTE) and other government employees (OGE) for each EOP and other entity as of April 5, 2002. The OGE numbers are itemized by category on the following page. The FY 2001 actual numbers should be viewed in the context of a Presidential transition year and may vary greatly from the FY 2002 figures. The FY 2002 and FY 2003 numbers are estimates only and therefore subject to change for a number of reasons.

Hearing Record Reference for question 17:

Question: The President's request includes $1,337,000 for travel and transportation of persons, an increase of $976,000 from the estimated level of $361,000 in FY 2002. For FY 2002 and 2003 (estimates), provide a list of trips by location and purpose, including the number of staff traveling and staff position.

Answer: The FY 2002 travel and transportation of persons estimate and FY 2003 budget request provides funding for the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and staff travel, Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) activities and advisory board activities. Specific locations for FY 2003 are currently unavailable due to the fact that they are determined as requirements are finalized. FY 2002 and FY 2003 anticipated travel activities are in furtherance of the OHS mission promulgated in the Executive Orders.

Examples of FY 2003 estimated travel requirements include: per diem and travel for two-thirds of Advisory Board members to attend approximately 40 various meetings and activities; approximately 50 domestic trips for the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and 3 staff members to fulfill outreach requirements; approximately 100 domestic trips for Homeland Security staff to fulfill mission functions as outlined in Executive Order 13228; approximately 24 domestic and 3 overseas trips for the Chair, Vice Chair and one staff member of the CIPB to fulfill outreach requirements as stated in Executive Order 13231; and approximately 12 CIPB staff (director level) trips to outreach the private sector. Of course, these are estimates only and are therefore subject to change for a variety of reasons.

FY 2002 travel expenses incurred to date include trips to Mexico and Canada for border discussions and various locations in the United States to visit first response, bioterrorism research facilities and other initiatives related to homeland security. The following table lists current (as of April 10, 2002) FY 2002 travel expenses as reflected in the accounting system.

Trip Cost Note: Estimated costs of trips will vary greatly from trip to trip to the same city and from one city to another city for four significant reasons; mode of transportation used/authorized, number of days TDY, number of personnel on trip, and whether costs recorded are actual or estimated expenses.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 72:

Issue: White House Office

Question: Provide a brief description of the duties and responsibilities of each office (e.g. Chief of Staff, Oval Office Operations, Office of the Press Secretary, Office of Homeland Security, etc.) within the appropriations account "White House Office". By office, provide obligations, FTE and OGE for FY 2001(actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimated). Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc.).

Answer: The purpose of the White House Office is to provide advice and assistance to the President of the United States. This requires a range of professional and support staff. The White House Office is currently divided into the following major units:

Office of the Chief of Staff – Provides advice and assistance to the President and directs the activities of the White House staff.

Oval Office Operations – Provides assistance to the President by, among other things, managing the operations of the Oval Office.

REV_00168605

Advance – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by taking responsibility for the organization and implementation of the President and the First Lady's visits outside of the White House complex.

Cabinet Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the President's Cabinet and agency heads.

Communications, Speechwriting, and Media Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and supporting efforts to communicate and explain the President's views and decisions.

Office of Counsel to the President – Provides advice and assistance to the President and White House staff, principally on matters of law.

Faith-Based and Community Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and implementing the President's initiative to empower community and faith-based organizations to better confront poverty and social decay.

Office of the First Lady – Provides advice and assistance to Mrs. Bush in carrying out her official responsibilities as the First Lady.

Homeland Security – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by developing, coordinating, and advising the President on a comprehensive national strategy to secure the United States from terrorist threats or attacks and, in particular, by coordinating the Executive Branch's efforts to detect, prepare for, prevent, protect against, respond to, and recover from terrorist attacks within the United States. It has no operational role.

Intergovernmental Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by monitoring the views of State and local elected officials and serving as a liaison between the White House and the Executive Branch, on the one hand, and State and local governments, on the other.

Legislative Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the Congress and developing the strategy used to promote and defend the President's legislative agenda.

Management and Administration – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing day-to-day administrative support to the White House staff.

Presidential Personnel – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by recruiting, screening, and recommending to the President qualified candidates for Presidential appointments to Federal departments and agencies.

REV_00168606

Office of the Press Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing information to the national and international press and by handling all national press inquiries such as interview requests, requests for transcripts or releases, and travel and scheduling information.

Scheduling – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by coordinating the planning, organization, and implementation of the President's daily and long-range schedules.

Office of the Staff Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, managing documents or other items addressed to the President, including correspondence and gifts.

Strategic Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating the planning and development of a long-range strategy for achieving Presidential priorities; conducting research; and assisting in message development and other communications activities in conjunction with the Office of Public Liaison and the Office of Political Affairs.

USA Freedom Corps – Provides advice and assistance to the President on matters relating to enlisting Americans in public service at home and abroad; in particular, it provides advice and support on the work of, and recognizes participants in, three service efforts – the newly created Citizen Corps, AmeriCorps and Senior Corps, and the Peace Corps.

In addition to these major units, certain individuals – including certain individuals who work with the National Security Council, the Domestic Policy Council, and the National Economic Council – are also White House Office officers or employees, although the units within which they principally work are not themselves part of the White House Office.

The major units within the White House Office are administratively designated by the President's Chief of Staff and the number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. Therefore, a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit is not particularly meaningful. White House Office obligations, FTE and OGE are summarized below. The Office of Homeland Security is funded under the emergency supplemental this fiscal year, and therefore, the FY 2002 numbers below do not include OHS personnel or funding. FY 2002 estimates for the OHS are addressed separately in response to other committee questions.

* FY 2002 excludes the approximately 65 OGEs currently on board for the Office of Homeland Security.
The FY 2002 OGEs for the Office of Homeland Security are funded out of the emergency supplemental funding.
FY 2003 includes the 95 OGEs for the Office of Homeland Security requested in the FY 2003 Budget Request.

Issue: The Committee is resubmitting the following questions due to the lack of detailed information provided in the original responses

Question: Provide a brief description of the duties and responsibilities of each office (e.g. Chief of Staff, Oval Office Operations, Office of the Press Secretary, Office of Homeland Security, etc.) within the appropriations account "White House Office". By office, provide obligations, FTE and OGE for FY 2001(actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimated). Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc.).

Answer: The purpose of the White House Office is to provide advice and assistance to the President of the United States. This requires a range of professional and support staff. The White House Office is currently divided into the following major units. A brief description of the duties and responsibilities of the major units is provided for the record.

Office of the Chief of Staff – Provides advice and assistance to the President and directs the activities of the White House staff.

Oval Office Operations – Provides assistance to the President by, among other things, managing the operations of the Oval Office.

Advance – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by taking responsibility for the organization and implementation of the President and the First Lady's visits outside of the White House complex.

Cabinet Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the President's Cabinet and agency heads.

REV_00168608

Communications, Speechwriting, and Media Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and supporting efforts to communicate and explain the President's views and decisions.

Office of Counsel to the President – Provides advice and assistance to the President and White House staff, principally on matters of law.

Faith-Based and Community Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and implementing the President's initiative to empower community and faith-based organizations to better confront poverty and social decay.

Office of the First Lady – Provides advice and assistance to Mrs. Bush in carrying out her official responsibilities as the First Lady.

Homeland Security – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by developing, coordinating, and advising the President on a comprehensive national strategy to secure the United States from terrorist threats or attacks and, in particular, by coordinating the Executive Branch's efforts to detect, prepare for, prevent, protect against, respond to, and recover from terrorist attacks within the United States.

Intergovernmental Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by monitoring the views of state and local elected officials and serving as a liaison between the White House and the Executive Branch, on the one hand, and state and local governments, on the other.

Legislative Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the Congress and developing the strategy used to promote and defend the President's legislative agenda.

Management and Administration – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing day-to-day administrative support to the White House staff.

Presidential Personnel – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by recruiting, screening, and recommending qualified candidates for Presidential appointments to Federal departments and agencies.

Office of the Press Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing information to the national and international press and by handling all national press inquiries such as interview requests, requests for transcripts or releases, and travel and scheduling information.

REV_00168609

Scheduling – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by coordinating the planning, organization, and implementation of the President's daily and long-range schedules.

Office of the Staff Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, managing documents or other items addressed to the President, including correspondence and gifts.

Strategic Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating the planning and development of a long-range strategy for achieving Presidential priorities; conducting research; and assisting in message development and other communications activities in conjunction with the Office of Public Liaison and the Office of Political Affairs.

USA Freedom Corps – Provides advice and assistance to the President on matters relating to enlisting Americans in public service at home and abroad; in particular, it provides advice and support on the work of, and recognizes participants in, three service efforts – the newly created Citizen Corps, AmeriCorps and Senior Corps, and the Peace Corps.

In addition to these major units, certain individuals – including certain individuals who work with the National Security Council, the Domestic Policy Council, and the National Economic Council – are also White House Office employees, although the units within which they principally work are not themselves part of the White House Office.

The major units within the White House Office are simply a creature of administrative convenience, and the number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. Therefore a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit is not particularly meaningful. Nevertheless, set forth below is a breakout based on current estimates and planning, which of course, may differ during the actual execution year.

It must be emphasized that the FY 2002 and FY 2003 numbers are estimates only. As circumstances and needs change, so may these estimates in any actual year. Therefore, these estimates are not particularly meaningful.

* FY 2002 obligations for the Office of Homeland Security are funded under the Emergency Supplemental Appropriation

It should be noted that a single budget is prepared for the WHO. This single budget is prepared based on a number of criteria such as: prior spending patterns, estimated requirements, OMB provided inflation factors, and the priorities of the President. During a given execution year, personnel costs are allocated based upon that year's sometimes unique staffing decisions. The remainder of the budget is allocated initially to two WHO offices. The travel budget is allocated in its entirety to Scheduling and Advance and obligated against this office if the travel is done in support of the President. Any travel undertaken that is not in support of a Presidential trip is charged to the office of the staff member in question. The remaining portion of the non-personnel, non-travel budget, including expenses for rent, supplies, equipment and other services is considered overhead and charged as such to the White House Office of Management and Administration.

The only exceptions are the Office of Homeland Security and the USA Freedom Corps Office. Since these are new offices requiring new budget authority, all new obligations (including travel and overhead) anticipated as a result of these offices are reflected in the FY 2003 estimates for these offices.

Hearing Record Reference for question 73:

Question: Referencing the FTE/OGE tables that break-out personnel classifications by type of OGE, please explain why the number of "historically provided" employees decreased so significantly (from 25 to 1) for the Vice President's office between FY2001 and FY2002. Please provide the Subcommittee your definition of each OGE category listed on the table (agency reps, assignees, detailees, HP services, others, student volunteers, WH fellows, PMI). Please also provide a listing of the 15 "historically provided" White House Office positions identified on the FY2002 chart, the White House Office to which these positions are assigned, and the agency that pays the salary of each of the 15 positions.

Answer: The difference in the number of "Historically Provided" employees in the Vice President's Office from FY 2001 to FY 2002 is due to the redesignation of U.S. Senate employees. In FY 2001, the previous administration designated U.S. Senate employees in the Vice President's office as "Historically Provided". This was done in error and it has since been corrected. For FY 2002 and FY 2003, U. S. Senate employees are more accurately designated as "Other" since they do not fit into any other OGE category.

The following chart shows the 15 "Historically Provided" White House Office positions, the associated office and the agency that pays their salaries.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 79:

Question: How many political appointees are currently employed within the Executive Office of the President?

Answer: The term "political appointees" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2 of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President has the following number of political appointees directly hired

In this regard, at least, Viet Dinh's tenure ends not with a bang but a whimper. Surely we'll have a chance to wish him a proper farewell?

RECOMMENDATIONS ON DRAFT INFORMATION ASSURANCE PROGRAM AND POLICY

1. Change the cover memo to read as follows:

MEMORANDUM FOR: Administrative Contacts in the Executive Office of the President and the Office of the Vice President

FROM: Timothy Campen, Special Assistant to the President and Director of the Office of Administration

SUBJECT: Information Assurance Program and Policy

To facilitate information system security, information integrity, and effective use of information technology, the Office of Administration hereby issues the Information Assurance Program and Policy attached. Consistent with section 3534 of Title 31 of the United States Code, as enacted by the E-Government Act of 2002 (Public Law 107-347), this Program and Policy applies with respect to each agency within the Executive Office of the President to the extent such agency does not have in force a separate information assurance program and policy compliant with section 3534.

Entities within the Executive Office of the President that are not agencies (such as the White House Office, the Office of Policy Development, and the Executive Residence), and entities served by the Office of Administration that are not within the Executive Office of the President (such as the Office of the Vice President), may adopt in whole or in appropriate part this Program and Policy for their respective organizations.

Your continued support for an effective information assurance program and policy is very much appreciated.

2. On the issuance page, strike "2. Personnel Concerned. This policy provides procedures for OA administration of the EOP IA Program, as well as standards for users to follow in order to access the EOP network." and insert in lieu thereof:

2. Applicability. This policy applies to (a) each agency within the Executive Office of the President to the extent such agency does not have in force a separate information assurance program and policy compliant with section 3534 of title 31 of the United States Code and (b) the Office of Administration. Entities within the Executive Office of the President that are not agencies (such as the White House Office, the Office of Policy Development, and the Executive Residence), and entities served by the Office of Administration that are not within the Executive Office of the President (such as the Office of the Vice President), may adopt in whole or in appropriate part this Program and Policy for their respective organizations.

3. In the Executive Summary, strike "In order to provide such protection, the Office of Administration (OA) is responsible for administering an information assurance (IA) program for White House and EOP-wide information processing systems." and insert in lieu thereof "In order to provide such protection, the Office of Administration (OA) administers an information assurance (IA) program for the information processing systems it operates for the organizations OA supports."

4. In part II.1 (p. 8), strike "Policy compliance is required for all personnel that manage, develop, implement, or access shared systems. This includes EOP employees, contractors, interns, detailees, temporary employees, volunteers or anyone else acting in an official capacity on behalf of EOP." and insert after the first paragraph under part II.1. the following new paragraphs:

> This Information Assurance Program and Policy applies to (a) each agency within the Executive Office of the President to the extent such agency does not have in force a separate information assurance program and policy compliant with section 3534 of title 31 of the United States Code and (b) the Office of Administration. Entities within the Executive Office of the President that are not agencies (such as the White House Office, the Office of Policy Development, and the Executive Residence), and entities served by the Office of Administration that are not within the Executive Office of the President (such as the Office of the Vice President), may adopt in whole or in appropriate part this Program and Policy for their respective organizations.
> Because this Information Assurance Program and Policy has been adopted by the Office of Administration, it applies with respect to the operation and use of information systems managed by OA, consistent with applicable law. Thus, any employee (including a full-time, part-time and temporary employee), contractor, intern, detailee, assignee, intern volunteer or any other person authorized to use such information systems must do so consistent with this Information Assurance Program and Policy.

5. At the end of part II.1 (page 8), insert: "This directive is intended only to improve internal management and is not intended to, and does not, create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, against the United States, any department, agency, entity, officer, employee or agent thereof, or any other person. Nothing in this directive shall be construed to limit access to or use of information systems or information for defense, protective, intelligence or law enforcement purposes, or in an emergency to protect life or limb."

6. In part III.1.a. (page 10), strike "The OA Director is the final approval authority and the enforcement authority for all IA policies." and insert in lieu thereof "The Director of OA issues and implements the Information Assurance Program and Policy."

7. In part III.b.14.c. strike "to oversight organizations, such as OMB and GAO".

8. In part 1 of Appendix A (page A-2) after "OMB Circular A-230" insert ", which applies to agencies in the executive branch,".

9. In part 2 of Appendix A (page A-3), strike "shall be strictly enforced" and insert in lieu thereof "shall be strictly observed".

10. Revise part 4.a. of Appendix A (page A-4) to read "a. Ensure that no individual has access to any EOP network system without approval for such access in accordance with applicable personnel security policies."

11. In part 9 of Appendix A (page A-7), strike "All EOP personnel and personnel acting on behalf of EOP are required to undergo initial computer security training and annual refresher training to maintain active accounts on EOP systems." and insert in lieu thereof: "OA shall conduct computer security training programs, including provision of written or on-line annual refresher materials, for individuals with authorized access to EOP information systems."

12. Add at the end of part 4.d. of Appendix B (page B-5) the following sentence: "Such prohibited peer-to-peer communications that involve the constitutional, statutory or ceremonial functions of the President or the Vice President also fail to comply with Presidential Records Act requirements."

13. In part 7.d. of Appendix B (page B-8), strike "Personnel shall not share account passwords with anyone except the account owner."An individual issued an account password for use of an information system shall not share that password with anyone, except authorized OA information systems management personnel and the authorized information system point of contact for the organization in which they are employed, assigned or detailed."

14. In part 13 of Appendix B (page B-11), after "Waivers to this policy may only be approved by the CIO" insert ", and no such waiver may authorize communication of Presidential Records Act material by such messaging".

15. Either (a) delete Appendix D. entirely, or (b) strike the introduction paragraph and the sentence at the beginning of part D. 1 and insert in lieu thereof "The following table maps components of this document with related Federal statutes and policies of interest. To determine whether a particular legal requirement is applicable to your organization or to you official actions, consult the general counsel of your organization."

16. Strike from the matrix (page D-15) items numbered 17, 18, and 19 referring to PDD-63, the Enduring Constitutional Government document of October 21, 1998, and PDD-67.

Nation's Newspapers Demand End to Filibusters of Judicial Nominees

Updated through May 22, 2003

At least 179 editorials from 104 separate newspapers from 35 states and the District of Columbia have decried Democrats' use of the filibuster to block President Bush's judicial nominees and/or have called for the immediate confirmation of those nominees.

Only 25 editorials in 17 separate newspapers have argued that these nominees should be blocked by filibuster or that Senators need more information before voting up-or-down.

The following chart represents every newspaper editorial published this year that could be located – not including op-eds, even if signed by a member of the newspaper's own editorial staff – regarding the pending nomination. Each editorial is listed by date, and where a newspaper has editorialized more than once on the subject, a separate date is provided. Not all of the many editorial boards opposing this filibuster necessarily favor the ultimate confirmation of the nominees, and they are marked accordingly. In addition, some editorial boards have stopped short of commenting on the merits of the nomination or the filibuster, and are marked as "ambiguous" and not included in the totals above.

You called our office and asked whether you could make financial contributions to a political organization or campaign. The answer is yes, provided your contribution remains within the political limits of the receiving organization. Please note that Brett Kavanaugh is our White House advisor on political campaign issues and future questions in this area should be directed to his attention.

Following up on Jen's note, I am told that although they requested the OSTP/OHS MOU last year we did not provide a copy. For the reasons that've been referenced, and unless Brett is aware of a different practice used for similar requests for MOUs from other EOP offices, I concur that neither of the 2 HSC MOUs shld be provided as part of the EOP response.

A few points:

-Answer to Q 19 states gives details of a signed MOU b/w OHS and OSTP and provides a copy of the MOU (and the next Q discusses a HSC/NSC MOU). You should check with Brett on whether it is appropriate to disclose such internal agreements. I also seem to recall other MOU type questions in other places in the list of questions.

-Typo in first sentence in Q 21 answer.

-Q 98 states that OA counsel (Greenstone) is going to suggest an answer to the question of whether Gen. Gordon supports the $2 mill "cut" in resources.
I would think this is a HSC/WHCO item to answer. IF it is answered (a question for Jennifer as it essentially asks for testimony from someone who we would not normally have testify/answer written questions), at most I would think the answer would simply not address the views of Gen. Gordon and state something like "The EOP budget proposal provides the necessary resources for HSC to advise and assist the President. The $2 mill "cut" reference is incorrect because . . . . ($2 mill reflects appropriate adjustments as a result of . . . . . creation of DHS, etc. -- whatever the case is.)"

This is a clean version and includes comments from Ben Powell. If you would like a track changes version, I can provide that as well.

Here is the answer for question for 98:

To begin with we should note that, General Gordon has not yet reported to Homeland Security Council. Secondly, in any event, the EOP budget proposal provides the necessary resources for HSC to advise and assist the President. Third, we should also note that the reference to a $2 million cut is incorrect. In fact, the resources of the Homeland Security Council have not been cut by $2 million. The FY 2003 appropriations for the Homeland Security Council included $2 million for decontamination of the Remote Delivery Site (RDS) as agreed to by the Congress and the Administration. Subsequent to the passage of the FY 2003 appropriations, that $2 million was allocated to decontamination of the RDS per agreement. This planned use of that appropriation is not a cut to HSC resources.

Subject: QFR questions 19 (MOUs) and 98 ($2 mil/Gen Gordon)

Q 19 -- we're looking further into these 2 MOUs (e.g., to ID whether copies of either or both of them have previously been disclosed outside the EOP), and welcome Brett's views re: past practices on Congressional requests for docs such as these.

Q 98 -- The answer in the att'd draft is the wrong answer. I edited a very different answer to this question, which must have fallen out somehow in one of the many transfers involved in this cut & paste text. We'll retrieve the correct answer and re-submit. We're on the same page in terms of the substance Ben, which is that Gen. Gordon's views won't be part of any such answer.

Question 120:; Have events been classified as &official8 even if only members of the President,s political party are invited to share the stage with the President? (POC - WHO M&A)

Question 121:; If so, what justification is used to argue that these events were not political events? (POC - WHO M&A)

Question 122:; Please provide information about reimbursement to the White House Office or other government agencies associated with local staff travel to political events attended by the President in FY02 or FY03.; For each reimbursement made, please provide the date the bill was generated, the number of events reflected on the bill, the date payment was received, the political entity paying the charges and the total amount paid on each bill. West Wing Review during Budget Volume Authoring:
A Brief Background and Suggestions for Plans for the FY 2005 Budget Process

Budget Volume Authoring is the OMB process for preparing the chapters in the President's Budget. This process includes a review by designated staff from the Staff Secretary's Office, OVP, NEC, DPC, White House Counsel, and others -- collectively referred to as 'West Wing' reviewers -- that occurs towards the end of the authoring process after an initial review by OMB policy officials and before final OMB policy official review, publishing and typesetting. For the past two years, we have been using electronic collaborative authoring technologies to increase the automation of this process.

Background and Records Management Discussion:

Traditionally, the West Wing review step has been done through hand-markups of paper copies. These markups are then entered into the OMB-maintained document. A copy of the West Wing markups was kept by the Staff Secretary for Presidential Records Management purposes.

Two years ago, these hand-markups were entered into the electronic documents maintained by OMB using the track changes function in Microsoft Word. Markup attribution was recorded by the OMB enterer by temporarily changing their identity to that of the markup author.

During this past year, West Wing reviewers had the opportunity to directly mark-up documents electronically using the track changes function in Microsoft Word and have the mark-ups directly attributed to them. The documents were housed in a folder with limited access on an OMB file server. At the end of the process, a version of these electronic documents including the initial documents provided to the West Wing and the document provided back to OMB with all electronic markups and attributions was archived and submitted to the Presidential Records Management Office to be included for Presidential Records archives. Hard copy printouts of all mark-ups were also kept by the White House Staff Secretary.

After the West Wing review was finished, the documents (including the markups with attribution) were moved from the file server back into the document management system that OMB was using for the Budget Volume process -- Microsoft SharePoint Portal Services -- and became part of OMB's Federal Records. The Presidential Records Management Office requested a complete copy of the OMB Federal Budget Records and was provided a courtesy copy for historical completeness.

Plans for FY 2005 Budget Volume Process:

For the FY 2005 Budget, OMB is proposing to further automate the West Wing Review by including West Wing Reviewers in the document management system, Microsoft SharePoint Portal Services. Instead of putting documents on a separate file server and then copying them back to an OMB server, West Wing Reviewers would work directly in the same arena with OMB staff. The document management system (DMS) will allow reviewers to check documents in and out, provide status and schedule for each document, and assist with overall project management for the Budget Volume. The Microsoft SharePoint DMS is provided and managed by OA IS&T.

Under this proposed DMS-based West Wing reviewing process, records management considerations would continue to be the same as described above -- i.e. all versions of documents that were part of the West Wing Review process would be distinctly identified and copies with all markups and attributions would be provided to the EOP and White House Office of Records Management for archiving as Presidential Records. A final copy of all OMB Federal Budget Records would be turned over to OA Records Management. The White House Office of Records Management would be free to request another courtesy copy of the OMB Federal Budget Records for historical completeness.

P.S.--I've just been advised by our Records Management Office that last year OMB was able to see deliberations within the WHO on the system they had up.; However, I assume that you will still want to review directly with Staff Secretary to ensure WHO is are ok with this;system.;

HOW TO USE THIS DOCUMENT

Several of the FY 2004 questions for the record refer to pages from last year's (FY 2003) hearing record. Below is the FY 2003 hearing record information.

Note that the Question # refers to this year's (FY 2004) question and the information that follows is what was in last year's (FY 2003) hearing record.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 6:

Issue: Executive Office of the President

Question: By EOP agency, provide FTE and OGE. Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc). Include FY 2001 (actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimates).

Answer: The following tables provide the total FY 2001 actual, FY 2002 and FY 2003 estimates for full time equivalents (FTE) and other government employees (OGE) for each EOP and other entity as of April 5, 2002. The OGE numbers are itemized by category on the following page. The FY 2001 actual numbers should be viewed in the context of a Presidential transition year and may vary greatly from the FY 2002 figures. The FY 2002 and FY 2003 numbers are estimates only and therefore subject to change for a number of reasons.

Hearing Record Reference for question 17:

Question: The President's request includes $1,337,000 for travel and transportation of persons, an increase of $976,000 from the estimated level of $361,000 in FY 2002. For FY 2002 and 2003 (estimates), provide a list of trips by location and purpose, including the number of staff traveling and staff position.

Answer: The FY 2002 travel and transportation of persons estimate and FY 2003 budget request provides funding for the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and staff travel, Critical Infrastructure Protection Board (CIPB) activities and advisory board activities. Specific locations for FY 2003 are currently unavailable due to the fact that they are determined as requirements are finalized. FY 2002 and FY 2003 anticipated travel activities are in furtherance of the OHS mission promulgated in the Executive Orders.

Examples of FY 2003 estimated travel requirements include: per diem and travel for two-thirds of Advisory Board members to attend approximately 40 various meetings and activities; approximately 50 domestic trips for the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security and 3 staff members to fulfill outreach requirements; approximately 100 domestic trips for Homeland Security staff to fulfill mission functions as outlined in Executive Order 13228; approximately 24 domestic and 3 overseas trips for the Chair, Vice Chair and one staff member of the CIPB to fulfill outreach requirements as stated in Executive Order 13231; and approximately 12 CIPB staff (director level) trips to outreach the private sector. Of course, these are estimates only and are therefore subject to change for a variety of reasons.

FY 2002 travel expenses incurred to date include trips to Mexico and Canada for border discussions and various locations in the United States to visit first response, bioterrorism research facilities and other initiatives related to homeland security. The following table lists current (as of April 10, 2002) FY 2002 travel expenses as reflected in the accounting system.

Trip Cost Note: Estimated costs of trips will vary greatly from trip to trip to the same city and from one city to another city for four significant reasons; mode of transportation used/authorized, number of days TDY, number of personnel on trip, and whether costs recorded are actual or estimated expenses.

Answer: The Office of Administration organization chart provided below reflects the current streamlined organizational structure where the number of operating units reporting to the Director was reduced from 10 to 4. The FY 2003 FTE request includes an increase of 20 FTE over FY 2002 authorized levels. All additional FTEs support the ongoing requirements stemming from the events of September 11 including IT and facility support for dispersed offices, additional logistics responsibilities for the receipt and delivery of mail, and financial management support for the Office of Homeland Security (+7 Chief Operating Officer, +10 Chief Information Officer, +1 Chief Projects Officer, +2 Chief Financial Officer).

Hearing Record Reference for Question 72:

Issue: White House Office

Question: Provide a brief description of the duties and responsibilities of each office (e.g. Chief of Staff, Oval Office Operations, Office of the Press Secretary, Office of Homeland Security, etc.) within the appropriations account "White House Office". By office, provide obligations, FTE and OGE for FY 2001(actual) and FY 2002-2003 (estimated). Itemize OGE by category (e.g. reimbursable detailee, PSC, etc.).

Answer: The purpose of the White House Office is to provide advice and assistance to the President of the United States. This requires a range of professional and support staff. The White House Office is currently divided into the following major units:

Office of the Chief of Staff – Provides advice and assistance to the President and directs the activities of the White House staff.

Oval Office Operations – Provides assistance to the President by, among other things, managing the operations of the Oval Office.

REV_00169122

Advance – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by taking responsibility for the organization and implementation of the President and the First Lady's visits outside of the White House complex.

Cabinet Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the President's Cabinet and agency heads.

Communications, Speechwriting, and Media Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and supporting efforts to communicate and explain the President's views and decisions.

Office of Counsel to the President – Provides advice and assistance to the President and White House staff, principally on matters of law.

Faith-Based and Community Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating and implementing the President's initiative to empower community and faith-based organizations to better confront poverty and social decay.

Office of the First Lady – Provides advice and assistance to Mrs. Bush in carrying out her official responsibilities as the First Lady.

Homeland Security – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by developing, coordinating, and advising the President on a comprehensive national strategy to secure the United States from terrorist threats or attacks and, in particular, by coordinating the Executive Branch's efforts to detect, prepare for, prevent, protect against, respond to, and recover from terrorist attacks within the United States. It has no operational role.

Intergovernmental Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by monitoring the views of State and local elected officials and serving as a liaison between the White House and the Executive Branch, on the one hand, and State and local governments, on the other.

Legislative Affairs – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, serving as the liaison between the White House and the Congress and developing the strategy used to promote and defend the President's legislative agenda.

Management and Administration – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing day-to-day administrative support to the White House staff.

Presidential Personnel – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by recruiting, screening, and recommending to the President qualified candidates for Presidential appointments to Federal departments and agencies.

REV_00169123

Office of the Press Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by providing information to the national and international press and by handling all national press inquiries such as interview requests, requests for transcripts or releases, and travel and scheduling information.

Scheduling – Provides advice and assistance to the President, principally by coordinating the planning, organization, and implementation of the President's daily and long-range schedules.

Office of the Staff Secretary – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, managing documents or other items addressed to the President, including correspondence and gifts.

Strategic Initiatives – Provides advice and assistance to the President by, among other things, coordinating the planning and development of a long-range strategy for achieving Presidential priorities; conducting research; and assisting in message development and other communications activities in conjunction with the Office of Public Liaison and the Office of Political Affairs.

USA Freedom Corps – Provides advice and assistance to the President on matters relating to enlisting Americans in public service at home and abroad; in particular, it provides advice and support on the work of, and recognizes participants in, three service efforts – the newly created Citizen Corps, AmeriCorps and Senior Corps, and the Peace Corps.

In addition to these major units, certain individuals – including certain individuals who work with the National Security Council, the Domestic Policy Council, and the National Economic Council – are also White House Office officers or employees, although the units within which they principally work are not themselves part of the White House Office.

The major units within the White House Office are administratively designated by the President's Chief of Staff and the number of employees within each unit and the work of each unit vary over time and as circumstances and needs change. Therefore, a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit is not particularly meaningful. White House Office obligations, FTE and OGE are summarized below. The Office of Homeland Security is funded under the emergency supplemental this fiscal year, and therefore, the FY 2002 numbers below do not include OHS personnel or funding. FY 2002 estimates for the OHS are addressed separately in response to other committee questions.

FY 2003 includes the 95 OGEs for the Office of Homeland Security requested in the FY 2003 Budget Request.

Therefore a detailed breakout of FTEs and OGEs by unit is not particularly meaningful. It should be noted that a single budget is prepared for the WHO. This single budget is prepared based on a number of criteria such as: prior spending patterns, estimated requirements, OMB provided inflation factors, and the priorities of the President. During a given execution year, personnel costs are allocated based upon that year's sometimes unique staffing decisions. The remainder of the budget is allocated initially to two WHO offices. The travel budget is allocated in its entirety to Scheduling and Advance and obligated against this office if the travel is done in support of the President. Any travel undertaken that is not in support of a Presidential trip is charged to the office of the staff member in question. The remaining portion of the non-personnel, non-travel budget, including expenses for rent, supplies, equipment and other services is considered overhead and charged as such to the White House Office of Management and Administration.

The only exceptions are the Office of Homeland Security and the USA Freedom Corps Office. Since these are new offices requiring new budget authority, all new obligations (including travel and overhead) anticipated as a result of these offices are reflected in the FY 2003 estimates for these offices.

Hearing Record Reference for question 73:

Question: Referencing the FTE/OGE tables that break-out personnel classifications by type of OGE, please explain why the number of "historically provided" employees decreased so significantly (from 25 to 1) for the Vice President's office between FY2001 and FY2002. Please provide the Subcommittee your definition of each OGE category listed on the table (agency reps, assignees, detailees, HP services, others, student volunteers, WH fellows, PMI). Please also provide a listing of the 15 "historically provided" White House Office positions identified on the FY2002 chart, the White House Office to which these positions are assigned, and the agency that pays the salary of each of the 15 positions.

Answer: The difference in the number of "Historically Provided" employees in the Vice President's Office from FY 2001 to FY 2002 is due to the redesignation of U.S. Senate employees. In FY 2001, the previous administration designated U.S. Senate employees in the Vice President's office as "Historically Provided". This was done in error and it has since been corrected. For FY 2002 and FY 2003, U. S. Senate employees are more accurately designated as "Other" since they do not fit into any other OGE category.

The following chart shows the 15 "Historically Provided" White House Office positions, the associated office and the agency that pays their salaries.

Hearing Record Reference for Question 79:

Question: How many political appointees are currently employed within the Executive Office of the President?

Answer: The term "political appointees" is somewhat of a misnomer because it narrowly defines the type of employees authorized under Chapter 2 of Title 3 of the U.S. Code, for the White House Office, the Executive Residence, the Official Residence of the Vice President and the Office of Administration. These offices can hire personnel in various excepted service positions that are not subject to the rules of regular government employees. Many of these excepted service positions fall under the category of serving at the pleasure of the President while others do not. Using the term in the broadest possible sense, including all employees hired as Presidential Appointees, Administratively Determined, Non Career SES, or Schedule C's, the Executive Office of the President has the following number of political appointees directly hired

Questions for the Record
Chairman Ernest J. Istook, Jr.
Hearing on the Executive Office of the President
April 30, 2003

Unobligated Balances (POC - Veronica Kitchen)

QUESTION 1: Please provide a listing of all unobligated balances, by fiscal year, appropriation and PPA, for all accounts within the Executive Office of the President. Please also show the original appropriation levels for these accounts.

Consolidation of Accounts (POC- Al Muhlbauer)

QUESTION 2: Sections 105 and 106 of title 3 U. S. Code describe expenses that may be accounted for solely on the certificate of the President and Vice President, respectively. Most of these expenses correspond to particular accounts. The Comptroller General may inspect documents related to these expenditures, but solely to verify that the expenditures were made for allowed purposes. When we asked last year how certified expenses would be identified for audit within a consolidated appropriation, the response was that the certification requirements would continue to be observed (p. 41). This does not answer the question of how the account structure will be maintained to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk between title 3-certifiable expenses and other expenses within the consolidated appropriation.

RESPONSE: As presented in the Congressional Budget Submission pages 4, 5, and 6, the Executive Office of the President (EOP) has established a Budget Activity structure that is consistent, beginning with the budget submission and extending through the accounting and reporting phases. The EOP accounting system will track and report obligations and expenditures consistent with this structure through the use of budget activity, program, sub-program, and line item codes assigned to each transaction. EOP has the ability to provide an identifiable and auditable crosswalk to the individual transactions authorized under sections 105 and 106 of Title 3 of the United States Code.

QUESTION 3: Please provide a listing of all appropriations language enacted in Public Law 108-7 which would be dropped in the proposed account consolidation, and provide a brief explanation of why that language is not necessary.

RESPONSE: The following appropriations in Public Law 108-7: Compensation of the President, White House Office Salaries and Expenses, Office of Homeland Security, Executive Residence at the White House, White House Repair and Restoration, Council of Economic Advisers, Office of Policy Development, National Security Council, Office of Administration would be combined into one appropriation entitled "The White House". The individual language in Public Law 108-7 for each of those appropriations would be removed. However, suggested language for the combined appropriation is provided in the Appendix to the FY 2004 Budget (page 881) and states: "For the Compensation of the President and White House Office (including the Office of Homeland Security), Executive Residence, White House Repair and Restoration, Office of Policy and Development, Office of Administration, Council of Economic Advisers and the National Security Council, (hereinafter, and solely for the purposes of Title VI of this Act, "the White House"), $183,770,000, of which $24,803,000 shall remain available until expended, including compensation for the President, including an expense allowance of $50,000 as authorized by U.S.C. 102; for travel expense of $100,000 as authorized by 3 U.S.C. 103; for necessary expenses for the White House as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109 and 3 U.S.C. 105; for the necessary expenses of the Executive Residence at the White House as authorized by 3 U.S.C. 105,109,110, and 112-114; for the necessary expenses of the Offices and Councils in the White House account as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109, 15 U.S.C. 1021, and 3 U.S.C. 105 and 107 (including not to exceed $19,000 for official reception and representation expenses); and for the hire of passenger motor vehicles: Provided, That none of the funds made available to the President for official expenses shall be expended for any other purpose and any unused portion of such funds shall revert to the Treasury pursuant to 31 U.S.C. 1552: Provided further, That no such funds shall be considered as taxable to the President: Provided further, That advances or repayments or transfers from this appropriation may be made to any department or agency for expenses of carrying out such activities."

The suggested language, with the exception of a consolidated appropriation amount incorporates the same restrictions and clarifications as contained the language contained in the Public Law 108-7 for the appropriations being consolidated. The appropriations for Vice President's Salaries and Expense, Vice President's Residence Operating Expenses, Office of Management and Budget, Office of National Drug Control Policy, Unanticipated Needs will remain separate appropriations and will therefore not require any language changes as a result of the combination.

The White House (Consolidated Account) (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 4: You are requesting $12,302,000 for object class 23.3 (communications, utilities, and miscellaneous services) in FY 2004. This is a large increase over the estimated $7,010,000 for FY 2003. What accounts for the increase?

RESPONSE: The FY 2004 White House (WH) consolidated budget net increase of $5,292,000 for communications is required in three major areas:

- Most of the increase ($4,420,000) is needed in the OA Capital Investment Plan for offsite data center communications. This facility will transition into full operation during FY 2004. The telecommunications between the offsite data center and the EOP complex are necessary to provide expanded, survivable and redundant connectivity, continuity of operations, disaster recovery and system support. These costs include funds for telecommunications lines, two additional

DS-3 data paths, two T-1 lines, and backups to provide the communications bandwidth necessary for servicing the EOP complex.

- $482,000 in the White House Office budget to provide a custom communications package which will enable the Homeland Security Council to establish a presence for its staff within the White House Situation Room.

- $100,000 for information assurance in the OA salaries/expenses budget. In addition to the Offsite Data Center project, the OA FY 2004 budget also includes a request for an additional $100,000 for the information assurance program in the FY 2004 salaries/expenses account. This program will enable the CIO office to correct vulnerabilities in the EOP information security perimeter to secure internal systems, to perform real-time monitoring of perimeter network devices.

- $151,000 in transfers of Lexis-Nexis database costs from nonconsolidated entities to the consolidated White House appropriation. The FY 2004 budget envisions that $72,000 will be transferred from USTR, $56,000 from ONDCP, $15,000 from OMB, and $8,000 from CEQ so that the EOP can have a single funding source for EOP-wide Lexis-Nexis service.

- $139,000 for adjustments to maintain the same level of services for the base funding during FY 2004. This is calculated on the basis of the $7,010,000 in FY 2003 funding.

Rental Pricing (POC – Chuck Sigman)

QUESTION 5: The FY 2004 justifications state that, over the past year, EOP, GSA, and OMB have undertaken an assessment of space rental costs for all EOP entities. The result of this analysis is that the FY 2004 request includes additional funding to accommodate an "EOP average" rental rate. Please provide details of how this analysis was conducted, and specify the estimated rental rates for the various EOP entities, as determined by this analysis.

RESPONSE: The EOP space rental project began during the summer of 2002 at the request of OMB's budget examiners, who were working to ensure that EOP entities moved to the same market-based rent methodology used to determine space rental rates for GSA's other Federal properties. OMB requested that GSA and EOP review the space rental costs for each EOP property and each EOP entity so that the most up-to-date costs available were included in the FY 2004 budget proposal. Another significant concern in this project is to ensure that GSA will work with the EOP to ensure that the critical needs of the EOP are funded and executed.

As a result of the initial project, OA and GSA began a series of meetings which culminated in the space estimates which were included in the budget. GSA staff prepared a comprehensive listing of EOP properties, which itemized the space occupied by each

EOP entity. This listing included commercial and government-owned space, current estimates of rentable square footage, and the annual rental rate per square foot. EOP staff provided updated estimates of the rentable square footage.

During this process, GSA blended the fair-market rates for the permanent EOP buildings into a single blended rate. This was done to simplify the administrative work when EOP staff are relocated. This is especially needed in the post-9/11 environment's unusually high number of large-scale EOP entity relocations driven by security considerations as well as the result of the legislation creating the Department of Homeland Security. The EOP average rental rate for Federally-owned properties (New Executive Office Building (NEOB), Eisenhower Executive Office Building (OEOB), White House, Winder Building, Jackson Place) is $29.60 annually per square foot. GSA adds an additional building security charge for buildings which are not protected by the US Secret Service. The average rental rates used to determine each entity's budget estimate for office space are as follows:

Entity	Locations	Owned or Leased	Average Rental Rate
OMB	EEOB, NEOB	owned	$29.60/sf

QUESTION 6: By EOP office, please provide FTE and OGE, similar in format to the tables found on pages 111 and 112 of last year's hearing record. Please provide data for FY 2002 through 2004.

RESPONSE: The following tables provide the total FY 2002 actual, FY 2003 and FY 2004, estimates for full time equivalents (FTE) and other government employees (OGE) for each EOP and other entity as of May 5, 2003. The OGE numbers are itemized by category on the following page. The FY 2003 numbers have the Office of Homeland Security in a separate category, which accordingly decreased the White House numbers. The FY 2003 and FY 2004 numbers are estimates only and are therefore subject to change.

Office of Homeland Security (POC – Paul Ehrhardt)

QUESTION 9: Your FY 2004 budget requests $8,331,000 for the Office of Homeland Security. Please provide an object class breakdown of those costs and compare them to FY 2003 estimated levels.

RESPONSE: The Office of Homeland Security was created by the President on October 8, 2001, via Executive Order 13228 and serves as and is synonymous with the staff of the Homeland Security Council (HSC). An object class breakdown of estimated HSC costs in FY 2003 and FY 2004 is provided in the table below. Please note that the FY 2003 estimate covers only costs incurred after the enactment of the FY 2003 appropriation on February 20, 2003. Unlike other EOP offices which operated under continuing resolutions between October 1, 2003 and February 20, 2003, the Office of Homeland Security was not permitted to utilize the CR funding mechanism but instead continued to charge FY 2003 expenses against the no-year emergency funding (provided in FY2002) until the FY 2003 appropriation was enacted. Therefore the FY 2003 estimate reflects only seven months of activity, whereas the FY 2004 Request needs to cover HSC expenses for the full 12 months next fiscal year.

(Dollars in Thousands)	FY 2003 Appropriation	FY 2003 Estimate*	FY 2004 Request	2004 Request - 2003 Estimate
Homeland Security Council:
Personnel	$4,403	$2,800	$5,550	$2,750
Travel	$300	$60	$588	$528
Transportation of Things	$24	$24	$10	-$14
Rent	$0	$0	$200	$200
Communications, Utilities, and Misc.	$209	$50	$1,080	$1,030
Printing and Reproduction	$69	$69	$50	-$19
Other Services	$3,267	$1,267	$528	-$739
Supplies and Materials	$0		$175	$175
Equipment	$0	$50	$150	$100
Subtotal	$8,272	$4,320	$8,331	$4,011

* FY 2003 Estimate covers only seven months vs. FY 2004 Request covering full 12 months

Rent was included in the Office of Administration budget in FY 2003, and is moved back to the Homeland Security Council in FY 2004. The Communications object class in FY 2004 includes funding to provide a custom communications package to establish an interface for the Homeland Security Council within the White House Situation Room. Supplies and Materials and Equipment object classes both were funded out of the Office of Administration Pilot Program in FY 2003 but show budgets in HSC for FY 2004.

QUESTION 10: In particular, how much are you requesting in FY 2004 for professional contracts, and how does that compare to the estimated FY 2003 level?

REV_00169145

RESPONSE: In FY 2004 HSC is requesting $528,000 for Other Services compared with $3,267,000 appropriated for the same category in FY 2003. The decrease is due to the creation of the Department of Homeland Security as the President's Security as the President's advisors and as the staff of HSC. Anticipated contractual needs in FY 2004 include maintenance, upgrades, and technical support for the classified computer network that will be extended to include HSC staff in FY 2003.

QUESTION 11: How many FTE and FTP are you requesting for this office in FY 2004, and how do these figures compare to current FY 2003 estimates and actuals for FY 2002?

RESPONSE: HSC is requesting resources to support 40 direct hire FTE and 26 Other Government Employees on its staff to fill the 66 positions HSC is projecting for FY 2004.

Office of Homeland Security / Homeland Security Council Personnel

	FY 2002 Actual	FY 2003 Estimate	FY 2004 Request
Direct Hire FTE	31	40	40
Other Government Employees (EOY headcount)	89	26	26
Total Personnel	120	66	66

QUESTION 12: How many positions in the office are filled today, and how many are vacant?

RESPONSE: As of May 15, 2003, 51 positions are filled and 15 are vacant.

QUESTION 13: Please provide a table comparing the number of detailees to OHS, by federal agency, for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2004 (estimated).

QUESTION 15: Please provide a list of all positions in OHS, showing the incumbent's name, rate of annual salary, and position title. Please annotate any positions which are currently vacant.

RESPONSE: The President is authorized to appoint and fix pay of any member of the White House Staff without regard to any provision of law related to employees of the federal government. QUESTION 17: Please update the information shown on pages 44 through 47 of last year's hearing record concerning Office of Homeland Security travel. In addition to the information provided last year, please provide a brief descriptor of the travel purpose.

RESPONSE: All travel was conducted as part of the duties of the Office of Homeland Security and as such is considered official travel. The President and the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security have regularly stated that the homeland will not be secure unless the Federal government works closely with state and local officials. Official trips were approved for various purposes including the attendance of various conferences, to holding of meetings with state and local officials and the holding of town hall meetings. The HSC considers travel to different states and cities as a vital part of its mission.
