STATEMENT OF ROY A. BERNARDI

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR COMMUNITY PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00339669

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on the Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. Madame Chairwoman, the efforts you and others have made to bring the need for affordable housing to the attention of Congress through legislation such as HR 3995 are very much appreciated. I would like to thank you for your demonstrated leadership, resolute voice, and compassion for the less fortunate among us. Your contributions will be sorely missed when your career in Congress draws to a close.

HR 3995 proposes some significant changes to many programs in the Office of Community Planning and Development, and to the HOME Investments Partnerships program in particular. I will address those related to HOME first.

HOME Investment Partnerships Program

The HOME Program has a demonstrated record of success in developing "deep-targeted" affordable housing with over 40 percent of all HOME-assisted rental units produced serving extremely low-income families. We believe that reforms to the HOME Program should build on the notable success the program has already achieved. We are concerned that the proposed Production and Preservation Program, as currently structured, and the other significant changes proposed for the HOME Program itself, particularly in regard to rent level determinations, would not help to achieve the worthy objectives of HR 3995, that of providing affordable housing for extremely low-income families. We believe that some of the bill's provisions would have unintended consequences.

The creation of a new Production and Preservation Program within HOME that has different requirements in such areas as rent determination, tenant contribution to rent, match, income targeting, commitment of funds, and even in the definition of who is low- or very low-income, could create significant compatibility issues with the basic HOME program and with other Federal programs, resulting in serious implementation problems. Unless these conflicting requirements are reconciled, the implementation problems will remain and projects will be delayed or found infeasible if the new program is made part of HOME or potentially if it is developed as a separate, stand-alone program.

We would urge the Committee to reconsider its proposed changes to the way in which HOME Program rents are determined. The effort made in HR 3995 to remedy lagging housing development "in certain rural counties" is understandable. However, these changes - abandoning the Fair Market Rent (FMR) standard and adopting the greater of the State or area median income as a floor for determining rents – could actually increase rents generally across the country while not ensuring that those who are the targeted beneficiaries of the legislation, extremely low- and very low-income families, will be able to afford those higher rents. For example:

- 86% of the population of metro areas and 100% of all non-metropolitan areas will have rent increases;
- Average increase in rents will be 32% (or $200) for the country as a whole;

- 63% of the rent increases will be more than 20%;
- 37% of the rent increases will be more than 40%;
- The largest rent increases will be in areas with the least housing affordability needs if the current rent-to-income ratio is used as the measurement indicator;

Some specific local examples of rent increases are contained in the following table:

Metro Area/County	2-Bedrm FY2002 FMR	Current High HOME Rent (Monthly)	Proposed High HOME Rent (Monthly)	Monthly Rent Increase
Modoc County, CA	503	503	867	364
Gilpin County, CO	678	678	1,173	495
Stamford-Norwalk, CT	1,384	1,202	1,667	465
Cedar Rapids, IA	520	520	959	439
Adams County, IL	395	395	951	556
Decatur, IL	475	475	951	476
Duluth-Superior, MN-WI	487	487	921	434
Utica-Rome, NY	495	495	882	387
Kendall County, TX	473	473	911	438
Roanoke, VA	500	500	913	413
Washington, DC-MD-VA	943	943	1,316	373

At the other end of the spectrum, high HOME rents would fall in areas with exceptionally high rent-to-income ratios where FMRs are currently used to adjust the income limits used to calculate rents. For example, San Francisco's current high HOME rent of $1,467 would decrease by $230 under the proposed rent rules, making an already difficult environment even less attractive to developers in San Francisco.

Finally, abandoning the FMR standard would make it more difficult to use housing vouchers in HOME-assisted projects and would place many HOME units out of reach of voucher holders. At the same time, the HOME program could become less attractive to developers in areas with the most affordability problems (i.e., high rent to income ratio areas), and more attractive in areas with the least affordability problems (i.e., low rent to income ratio areas) and high vacancy rates. For the U.S. as a whole:

- Approximately 39 percent of the rental stock is located in markets where the FMR currently sets the maximum limit for HOME rents. Prevailing rents are quite low relative to income in these areas and the rental vacancy rate is 12 percent;
- In markets where rents are high relative to incomes and the FMR does not now act as a cap on HOME rents, the vacancy rate is 5 percent.

HUD is eager to work with this Committee to build on its efforts and those of the Millennial Housing Commission whose report is due out in May, to expand affordable housing opportunities. We are also confident that solutions to identified impediments to affordable housing development in certain rural counties can be addressed with specific adjustments to the existing HOME Program rent structure.

Many changes have already been made over the ten years that the HOME Program has been in operation in an effort to streamline the program and improve its effectiveness. The production results and the ongoing feedback we receive from housing providers would indicate that this effort has been largely successful. Indeed, one of the hallmarks of this program and an important reason for its success has been the close and continuing communication between the administrators at HUD and recipients of HOME funds and their representatives and associations. We are receptive to further improvements to the program.

Homeless Assistance Programs

Madame Chairwoman, I'd now like to address the provisions of the bill dealing with HUD's McKinney-Vento Act homeless assistance programs. On an overall basis, the homeless assistance provisions of the bill are carefully crafted and correctly recognize both the important elements of current law that should be retained and the provisions that need modification.

Specifically, we support the reauthorization provisions for the Supportive Housing, Shelter Plus Care, Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation SRO and the Emergency Shelter Grants programs. The Department will be proposing a consolidation of these programs into one that is needs-based and performance-driven. This consolidation will ensure community-level planning and decision-making. And, it will retain the fundamental components of our Continuum of Care strategy to address homelessness. We further support the provisions of the bill reauthorizing the Interagency Council on the Homeless and the Emergency Food and Shelter Program, currently housed at FEMA but proposed for transfer to HUD in the President's budget request.

The Department fully supports Section 604 of the bill that continues the current requirement that at least 30 percent of appropriated funds be targeted for permanent housing projects. Similarly, we support the removal of the unrealistic caps on the use of Supportive Housing Program funding for acquisition, rehabilitation and new construction. These caps have increasingly worked to restrain our grantees' ability to generate new and rehabilitated permanent housing units for homeless individuals and families.

The Department notes bill language proposing the transfer of the costs of renewing expiring Shelter Plus Care projects and projects funded under the Permanent Housing component of the Supportive Housing Program to the Housing Certificate Fund (HCF). The Department looked at these renewals in the 2003 budget process and determined that it is preferable to address them as part of consolidated homeless funding.

Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS

HUD supports Section 904 of the Bill that would reauthorize the Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS (HOPWA) program. HOPWA is the only Federal program solely dedicated to providing housing assistance to persons with HIV/AIDS and their families. Housing provided under this program provides a basis for helping people at the lowest income levels access appropriate care and acts as a base to help maintain difficult therapies and medical regimens.

Community Development Block Grant

I would like to make several other comments on provisions of HR 3995 that would affect HUD's basic Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program.

Section 902 on Housing Counseling programs would require the Secretary to designate a single office within the Department to "establish, coordinate, and administrate all requirements, standards, and performance measures under programs and laws administered by the Department that relate to housing counseling, homeownership, counseling . . ." This section also specifies that the CDBG eligible activity under section 105(a)(20) of the HCD Act of 1974 be covered by this provision. Section 105(a)(20) of the HCD Act authorizes grantees to use CDBG funds to carry out housing services, such as housing counseling. Housing counseling is an important component of the Department's rental housing and homeownership programs. However, we would caution against adopting a "one size fits all" approach that would take away the local discretion of program design and implementation from CDBG grantees, which is the cornerstone of the CDBG program. Recently, FHA revised the standards and performance measures related to the 1400 HUD-approved housing counseling agencies participating in this program. We see no need for another office within the Department to repeat this process. As you know, the Administration has requested $35 million for a new categorical counseling program, nearly doubling the current level of funding and removing the program from the HOME block grant. We urge you to support that proposal, and we believe it will be easier and quicker to provide the funds to counseling agencies if we can operate the new program on the basis of the standards we have recently established.

Section 905 concerns the funding eligibility for secular activities carried out by religious organizations. HUD supports the involvement of faith-based organizations in our programs, consistent with Constitutional principles of Church and State.

Section 906 would add a new eligibility category to the CDBG program to authorize the construction of tornado or storm-safe shelters in manufactured housing parks. This addition would expand this otherwise eligible public facility to serve residents of private manufactured housing parks and HUD supports it. However, subparagraph (b) of Section 906 would authorize a set-aside from the CDBG program for fiscal year 2002 for this purpose. The Department does not support further set-asides within the CDBG appropriation.

HUD supports Section 907 of the bill that would amend Section 105(a)(13) of the HCD Act to allow the use of CDBG funds to administer renewal communities. HUD believes that such support of the Renewal Communities program will foster needed job creation and revitalization in distressed communities.

Self-Help Homeownership Opportunities Program

HUD supports the reauthorization of the Self-Help Homeownership Opportunities Program (SHOP), which has been instrumental in helping many low-income families become homeowners. The President's request to triple funding to $65 million for SHOP in FY 2003 reflects this program's popularity and success.

Thank you again for this opportunity, and I would be happy to answer any questions that you may have.

STATEMENT OF MICHAEL LIU

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00339675

I am Michael Liu, Assistant Secretary for Public and Indian Housing at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. In that position I have responsibility for administration of the public housing, voucher and Native American housing programs. Accordingly, I will limit my testimony to Titles IV, V and VI of the bill, which concern those programs.

First, Congresswoman Roukema, thank you and your cosponsors for developing and introducing the Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. The bill contains many proposals that will allow us to do our jobs better, of providing the most effective low-income housing assistance possible with the funds available. The reauthorizations for two of our critical programs, HOPE VI and Native American Block Grants, are critical measures in themselves. The bill contains several measures to achieve our common goal of assuring that the voucher funds Congress appropriates can be fully used. The bill also contains the Administration's Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative, which holds great promise as a means of improving the Nation's public housing communities.

Title IV, Section 8 Rental Housing Assistance Program

Section 401 of the bill proposes a new thrifty production voucher program. This program is patterned after the current project-based voucher program, but assumes that the capital for production will be found from other programs or sources and provides for a reduced subsidy designed to cover only operating costs.

HUD generally supports additional tools that may help public housing authorities (PHAs) meet their communities' housing needs, and in that context will work with the Committee to develop a means of offering vouchers that can be combined easily with capital subsidies. The current proposal seems rather complex and differs from the project-based voucher program in ways that may not be necessary, such as waiting list administration, development location requirements and several others. I look forward to further discussions on this matter.

The bill contains several initiatives designed directly or indirectly to increase the successful use of appropriated voucher program funds, including an increase in the amount families can expend as their share of rent when initially leasing any unit (section 402), authorization for PHAs to use up to five percent of program monthly assistance payment funds (as opposed to administrative fees) for efforts to help families obtain and remain in suitable housing (section 403) and an authorization to provide increased administrative fees for high-performing PHAs in the voucher program (section 405). These proposals would augment steps HUD and Congress already have taken or are taking to accomplish this goal, including increased flexibility for PHAs to set payment standards; increased fair market rents to the 50th percentile of rentals for units in satisfactory condition some areas; initiation of the Section 8 Management Assessment Program (SEMAP), a management report card with consequences; training of PHA staff; award of new incremental vouchers only to PHAs with high usage of current resources; and reallocation of vouchers from PHAs that have not been able to use them to PHAs that need and can use them.

HUD supports the direction of these new proposals, but has suggestions. HUD supports the increase in allowable family rent to forty percent of gross income, but believes PHAs also need flexibility to address compelling situations—for example, where a family already in the program would like to move to a significantly less expensive unit, but cannot do so because the family still would be paying more than the limit.

HUD would allow the use of some program funds to help increase voucher utilization for PHAs that already are using their administrative fees solely for the Section 8 program, but believes that the authorization should be substantially narrower to address competing concerns regarding diversion of program funds. With respect to administrative fees, HUD recommends that it be given broader authority not just to provide a bonus for high performers, but also to restructure the fees to promote performance in general and the accomplishment of specific program priorities, such as families' movement to self-sufficiency and homeownership.

The bill contains several provisions regarding enhanced vouchers. HUD supports clarification of the obligation of owners to take enhanced vouchers in projects where tenants are eligible for them (section 406). With respect to the same section's protections for overhoused families, HUD recommends that such families be treated in the same manner as overhoused families are treated now in the voucher program (basically, the enhanced voucher families could choose to stay in the oversized unit, but would be subsidized at the level they would receive if they were in a unit of appropriate size at the property).

The bill also contains a provision to provide for higher contract rents upon the renewal of moderate rehabilitation contracts (section 408). HUD agrees that the current-law restriction of such rents to the lower of comparable rents, current rents plus an operating cost adjustment or fair market rents is unnecessarily restrictive. The bill's proposed solution, however, will pose administrative challenges for PHAs not accustomed to evaluating budget-based rents and may go further than is needed to preserve assisted units.

You asked me to discuss the future impact of Section 8 contract renewals on the HUD budget. Renewals for both tenant-based and project-based Section 8 rose from $14.3 billion in fiscal 2001 to a requested $16.9 billion for fiscal 2003, and are projected to increase to over $20 billion in several more years. This is a result of the program serving more families, some program changes that have increased per-unit costs, such as increases in fair market rents, and conversion over time of all contracts to one-year contracts, so that all contracts must have new budget authority each year.

Title V, Public Housing

I am excited that Title V contains the Administration's Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative (section 505), because that initiative can provide a new and effective means of improving public housing. Recent HUD studies indicate that the backlog of public housing capital needs is in the $20 billion range and that new needs accrue at about two billion dollars annually. Strides have been made in recent years in public housing communities, but appropriations for the Capital Fund at two to three billion dollars annually will allow only slow progress. The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative provides a means of addressing this problem sooner with the dollars available.

The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative allows PHAs that choose to participate to trade their public housing subsidies for project-based vouchers on a property-by-property basis. PHAs then could borrow money for capital improvements on the same individual property basis now used for Section 8 developments and multifamily housing generally. In addition to leveraging private capital, this action is likely to lead to more accountable property and financial management because management must be done at the individual property level. Tenants generally would be protected in the same manner as in public housing. PHAs could use the project-based vouchers on current sites, or on replacement sites where appropriate.

The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative can be a powerful tool for the prompt rehabilitation of housing that otherwise would languish for years. For example, a development's capital needs of four million dollars that otherwise would be impossible to address from available Capital Fund moneys can be addressed with debt service payments on a seven percent, thirty-year loan of about $335,000 per year. PHAs could undertake individual transactions as long as the monthly expenses for operations, debt service and a capital replacement reserve did not exceed the lower of market rents or the applicable Section 8 payment standard. If the approvable rent levels were too low to finance all the necessary capital work—for example, if the PHA only could raise $20,000 per unit at approvable rent levels but the development needed $30,000 per unit in capital work—the PHA could choose to supplement the project-based vouchers with an up-front contribution from the Capital Fund or other sources.

The bill contains a proposal to suspend the PHA Plan requirement for three years for the smallest PHAs up to 100 units (section 504). Current law requires annual PHA Plans with eighteen listed elements, but also allows HUD to streamline PHA Plans for small, high-performing and Section 8-only PHAs. The extent to which the PHA Plan requirement has resulted in useful strategic planning has varied greatly from locality to locality. In many localities, the Resident Advisory Board participation requirement has resulted in better access for public housing residents and Section 8 families to make their views known to PHA decision-makers.

The usefulness of the PHA Plan relative to the PHAs' ability to carry it out with limited staff resources, however, appears to drop dramatically for small PHAs. HUD has provided some streamling of PHA Plan requirements for these PHAs, but I believe we need to go further and HUD is developing a regulation that will accomplish this. The bill's proposal is certainly along these lines, although we may be able to accomplish the necessary streamlining through regulation without disturbing the current resident and public process to the same extent. I want to note Congressman Bereuter's leadership on this issue and thank him for that leadership.

While HUD has differentiated between small and larger PHAs in PHA Plan processing, it has not done this to enough of an extent in its other programs. Small PHAs with 250 or fewer units constitute 75 percent of all PHAs, but operate only fifteen percent of the units. From a risk management standpoint, it is unnecessary to impose the same regulatory burdens on these PHAs as on larger ones. The new regulation I have mentioned will recognize that in several program areas.

The bill would require HUD to develop and test a third-party system for public housing performance evaluation, through an outside contractor (section 503). This year, HUD has implemented a binding public housing management assessment that contains an independent inspection of physical conditions. However, experience with the Public Housing Assessment System (PHAS) during its extended advisory period raised so many questions regarding the adequacy of its physical inspection and finance components that HUD substantially simplified and in some respects had to pare back these components prior to implementation. HUD is committed to working with public housing groups toward how best to revise the system. It may be that a third-party system could accomplish the same tasks better and provide a broader assessment that would be more readily recognized and accepted as appropriate by all parties concerned. The work being done by others such as public housing industry groups and private companies to develop such systems is promising, and HUD may be able to take account of this work and the views of resident representatives and others to develop an improved and possibly third-party system expeditiously.

Section 501 of the bill would allow HUD to waive the requirement that PHAs have a resident on the board of commissioners in particular States, where reasonable efforts are being made to take the necessary legislative or regulatory action so that this can occur. Congress has recognized problems in the implementation of the resident on the board requirement in several States, has exempted housing authorities in three States from the requirement for fiscal 2002 and has required HUD to provide a report by May 30, 2002 regarding the impediments to its implementation and related matters. Thus, further legislative action seems appropriate. The proposed legislation, however, would allow for permanent waivers and would not result in having residents on boards of commissioners promptly in the affected States. A better solution may be to provide for appointment by the chief executive officer of the PHA's jurisdiction of an additional board member to fulfill the resident on the board requirement, for a temporary period such as three years. This would give the noncompliant States more time to complete any necessary actions so that residents could be appointed to PHA boards as federal law requires, but the relief would be temporary and promptly would result in residents serving on boards of commissioners.

The bill provides for a two-year reauthorization of HOPE VI and for measures to ensure that a broader group of communities in terms of size and location have a realistic possibility of receiving a HOPE VI award. HUD supports both reauthorization and the general effort to promote broad program participation. More discussion of concepts in regard to reauthorization of HOPE VI will be constructive. A report on HOPE VI lessons learned is due to Congress on June 15, 2002.

Title VII, Native American Housing

Title VII reauthorizes both the Native American Block Grant Program and its related loan guarantee program. HUD believes that these programs continue to hold much promise and supports the reauthorization of both programs.

I look forward to working closely with the Committee as you continue to develop this important legislation for the improvement of the voucher, public housing and Native American housing programs. Please call on me and my staff for any assistance we can provide.

consider the issues relative to direct ownership of projects by religious organizations. Our practice for both religious and secular sponsors has been that ownership is vested in a single-purpose non-religious entity and established by the sponsor, not the sponsoring organization.

Other Provisions

The Housing Impact Analysis proposed in Title VIII was proposed by President Bush during the campaign two years ago. It is an effort to create a system to monitor the aggregate effects of all rules on the cost and availability of housing. We believe that it is in the interest of consumers, especially moderate-income families seeking to become homeowners or to find decent affordable rental housing, to ensure that regulations are demonstrably required to protect health and safety, and that the consequences of regulation for affordable housing are recognized and balanced against other important public purposes.

Section 902 establishes a single office within the Department to coordinate counseling activities. This sounds desirable, but may be counterproductive, in our judgment. It might undermine the ability of the various offices to establish requirements, standards, and performance measures that meet the unique needs of their programs and clients. HUD's various program areas each provide counseling, generally for different purposes and typically to different clienteles. Recently, FHA revised the standards and performance measures related to the 1400 HUD-approved housing counseling agencies participating in this program. We see no need for another office within the Department to repeat this process. As you know, the Administration has requested $35 million for a new categorical counseling program, nearly doubling the current level of funding and removing the program from the HOME block grant. We urge you to support that proposal, and we believe it will be easier and quicker to provide the funds to counseling agencies if we can operate the new program on the basis of the standards we have recently established.

Finally, the Administration supports Section 907 to simplify current law pertaining to subsidy layering. The provision permits housing credit agencies to certify to compliance with the Department's subsidy layering requirements concerning the combination of HUD and other governmental assistance with the Low Income Housing Tax Credit. The housing credit agency will simply certify that it has made the subsidy layering determination already required by Section 42 of the Tax Code. This provision is consistent with the Secretary's efforts to streamline the delivery of HUD's programs and support the production of affordable housing through the use of FHA mortgage insurance and the Low Income Housing Tax Credit Program.

Conclusion

Thank you again for the opportunity to testify on The Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. I would be happy to answer any questions that the Subcommittee may have.

REV_00339691

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on behalf of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Office of Housing-Federal Housing Administration (FHA), concerning the "Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002". The bill covers a very wide range of programs and activities across the Department, including many different programs within the Office of Housing. We have carefully reviewed each provision contained in the bill, and I am grateful for this opportunity to provide you with our thoughts on the sections of this important piece of legislation. Because you have also addressed a number of specific questions about FHA programs in your letter of invitation, I will combine my answers to those questions with comments on the corresponding sections of the bill. I have organized my comments by program area.

FHA Single-Family Insurance Programs

To begin with FHA's basic Section 203(b) home mortgage insurance program and the Mutual Mortgage Insurance (MMI) Fund: as you know, the President and the Secretary have made promoting homeownership, especially for minority households, a cornerstone of domestic policy. We are very proud of FHA's success in promoting homeownership. About 80 percent of our home purchase mortgages serve first-time homebuyers and about 35 percent serve minority households. The national homeownership rate, and the minority homeownership rate, both set new records last year.

The MMI Fund was determined to have an economic value of $18.5 billion at the end of FY2001, with a capital ratio of 3.75%. FHA's volume of business this year is running substantially in excess of expectations. Indeed, through the first six months of the year we have insured over $81 billion of single-family mortgages. We are assessing the need to seek an increase in our current commitment limitation of $160 billion for the MMI Fund for the current fiscal year. Having been personally involved in developing the legislation that put FHA on an actuarially sound basis some 12 years ago – as was Chairwoman Roukema and ranking member Frank - I am very pleased to report this information to you.

Of course, the MMI Fund net worth, which estimates future receipts, liabilities, and cash on hand, has attracted a number of proposals to spend the reserves, for example to divert funds into a new "National Housing Trust Fund" for purposes well beyond the homeownership goals of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund. We think these proposals are ill-advised, and they misconstrue the nature of the MMI Fund.

The creation of the MMI capital reserve was a fundamental goal of the Cranston - Gonzales National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 which was intended to forestall any taxpayer bailout of the FHA, as had just been required for the savings and loan industry. While all Federal credit programs are required to budget for anticipated losses, under the Credit Reform Act of 1990, the MMI Fund was specifically required to generate additional revenue to be held as a special reserve against potential losses. The Cranston-Gonzales legislation created a kind of "lock-box" for funds that would be available to meet any contingency, so that general revenues in the Treasury would never be needed to meet FHA obligations. To generate the funds needed for this capital reserve, FHA suspended the payment of distributive shares to borrowers and raised insurance premiums substantially.

Since 1990, FHA has gradually built up its reserves year by year. This annual surplus has been counted in the overall Federal budget as an offsetting receipt, and has helped reduce the deficit. Because this revenue was previously counted as a receipt, any legislation that proposes to expend it will be counted as new spending, just as if funds were being appropriated directly out of the Treasury. There is no budgetary magic to raiding this "lock box"; instead there is a budgetary outlay. Moreover, using the MMI Fund reserves will vitiate FHA's ability to meet the basic goal of the Cranston-Gonzales Act of making the MMI Fund actuarially sound.

FHA was able to reduce single-family premiums substantially last year, and make homeownership more affordable for more families, in line with our fundamental public policy purpose. We have also been looking at the possibility of reinstituting the payment of distributive shares. However, it is clear that any such policy will be procedurally complex, and we are not proposing it at this time.

The Housing Affordability for Americans Act of 2002 contains several provisions that would improve FHA's ability to operate our core single-family home mortgage insurance programs. Section 221 would make permanent a pilot designed to streamline and simplify the FHA downpayment program. Secretary Martinez supported this proposal during his testimony before the House Appropriations Subcommittee last month. This downpayment simplification calculation has proven to be a successful program modification. The procedure reduces the number of steps involved in the calculation of the FHA single-family mortgage amounts, and thereby has eliminated the confusion experienced by many buyers, brokers, and lenders. Further, this existing statutory authority has reduced the costs associated with closing an FHA insured mortgage. Ultimately, the simplification has increased homeownership opportunities for low- and moderate-income families.

Similarly, Section 227 should facilitate the Department's ability to effectuate another legislative priority. During the FY2002 budget process, the Department requested and received authority to insure hybrid Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARMs). Our work to implement that authority is continuing. The Department's position is that FHA's hybrid ARM should approximate the conventional hybrid ARM and its benefits as closely as possible subject to preserving sound underwriting policies and protections for FHA borrowers and the MMI Fund. Section 227 supports that end by allowing the Department greater flexibility in the design of regulations that will govern the initial rate adjustment at the end of the fixed rate period. The Department appreciates the efforts by Rep. Bob Ney and other Members of this Committee in supporting the permanent extension of this provision.

Sections 229-231 are consistent with recent Department actions to strengthen our Section 203(k) rehabilitation mortgage insurance program and our nonprofit partnerships. In 1996, the Office of Housing issued Mortgagee Letter 96-59, placing a moratorium on investor participation in the 203(k) program. Investors have not been allowed to participate in the program since the issuance of this Mortgagee Letter. The moratorium still stands. We have no plans to modify the Letter and have no objection to Section 229.

Similarly, Section 230 regarding rehabilitation loan advances is also consistent with Departmental action. FHA Mortgagee Letter 00-25 states, "mortgagees are fully responsible for authorizing draw inspections, managing the rehabilitation escrow account, and approving the associated draws for the account." The Letter also requires consultants to be chosen from the FHA 203(k) Consultant Roster and permits consultants to perform the inspections on the mortgagee's behalf. The Department has a number of technical questions regarding this provision and looks forward to working with the Committee to ensure that mortgagees are held appropriately responsible.

Section 231 would require nonprofits to be approved 501(c)(3) organizations and certify annually to the Department its understanding of HUD guidelines. In January 2002, the Office of Housing issued Mortgagee Letter 02-01, establishing new requirements for nonprofits seeking FHA-approval. Nonprofits must now have, among other requirements, two years 501(c)(3) IRS tax-exempt status and a minimum of two consecutive years – within the last 5 years – of housing development experience. Approved nonprofits have until September 30, 2002 to demonstrate their compliance with the new requirements. The Office of Housing supports Section 231 to strengthen its existing guidance. It will help us prevent a recurrence of the 1998-1999 Section 203(k) fraud problem in New York City, where a number of nonprofits purchased small multi-unit buildings in Harlem and Brooklyn intending to have them rehabilitated for owner-occupancy. The knowledgeable and experienced Commissioner of New York City's Department of Housing Preservation and Development said that she had never heard of 25 of the nonprofits that bought these homes; she had only heard of two. This fraud will cost the taxpayers some $268 million, and will cost the citizens of New York City another $125 million.

Sections 222-224 contain proposals to provide special opportunities for teachers and public safety officers. Section 223 would give the Secretary authority to discount HUD-owned, single-family properties by 50% to qualified teachers and public safety officers. The Department certainly does not object to such a program; indeed, the Secretary already has this authority and has exercised it. The Department's Officer/Teacher Next Door Program currently allows teachers and police officers to purchase homes at a 50% discount in designated revitalization areas, subject to a three-year owner occupancy requirement. During a Fiscal Year 2001 audit of the program, the Office of the Inspector General uncovered a significant number of violations of the program rules by officer participants. In May 2001, the Department temporarily suspended sales under the program and instituted enhanced management controls. A recent IG audit of sales closed after the program resumed in August 2001 did not identify any new program violations. The Department is currently working on a proposed rule to include these program controls.

Sections 222 and 224 both aim to reduce downpayment requirements for public safety officers, while Section 222 also includes teachers among those who will benefit. In regard to both provisions, it is important to note that the Office of Housing has recently made significant changes to its programs to reduce downpayment costs substantially for all buyers of FHA insured properties. These changes include the reduction of insurance premium rates by 33 percent, along with the Downpayment Simplification previously mentioned. One observation the Department would make with regard to these provisions is that a number of other occupational groups have expressed a similar interest in reduced downpayments.

In addition, it may be more appropriate to pursue these initiatives within the American Dream Downpayment Fund, as proposed by the President and funded by Congress last year. The American Dream Downpayment Fund will reduce the barrier that downpayments frequently pose to homeownership, for all low- and moderate-income families. On behalf of the Administration, I want to thank Rep. Mike Rogers and other Members of Congress for introducing H.R. 4446 to authorize this program.

I would also mention that the Department's Office of Policy Development and Research is in the process of studying the impact of this type of program, as required by Congress. We believe that it would be prudent to wait until the results of this study are available before making any commitment to such an initiative.

Section 228, which would establish a uniform national loan limit for Home Equity Conversion Mortgages (HECMs), also concerns an issue that is currently part of an internal analysis by the Office of Policy Development and Research. As mandated by the American Homeownership and Economic Opportunity Act of 2000, the Department is conducting an actuarial analysis on the impact of this provision. We will provide the Subcommittee with comments and recommendations when this study has been finalized.

FHA Single-Family REO

The bill also contains several provisions concerning FHA's single-family inventory of foreclosed homes, and the Committee has asked about our REO activities. Since the introduction of the Management and Marketing contracts in March of 1999, the Department has greatly improved its REO disposition. As of March 2002, the inventory of HUD-owned homes is at its lowest level since 1996 - 28,270, compared to a March 1999 inventory of 41,747. Moreover, the inventory has been stable during the recession, instead of rising as has been typical in the past. Currently, properties remain in inventory an average of 183 days, compared to 221 days in March 1999, and losses per claim have been reduced from 39 cents to 29 cents on the dollar. The loss rate is at its lowest point in at least 20 years.

FHA sold 66,415 single-family homes during FY 2001. About 60 percent of these sales were to owner-occupants, helping serve FHA's basic purpose of promoting homeownership. Another 30 percent are sales to investors, and the remainder – slightly less than 10 percent - goes to local governments and nonprofit organizations.

FHA currently offers discounts to HUD-approved nonprofit organizations on the purchase of REO. Properties newly acquired by HUD are initially offered to nonprofit organizations on a limited competitive basis, which excludes investors and owner occupants, for up to 10 business days. FHA offers properties to nonprofits for an additional five days of limited competition that does include owner occupants but excludes investors. After these periods, FHA opens bids on properties to the general public, but nonprofit groups may bid and still receive sales discounts. These discounts are factored into a sale after the highest bids are calculated.

FHA has two primary initiatives underway associated with its property disposition program. We have begun a major review of our Asset Control Area (ACA) program, following a report of program deficiencies by the HUD Office of Inspector General in a recent audit. We are planning to build stronger controls into the ACA program. During that review, which will take 4-6 months, we will let current ACA agreements expire. Our ACA partners can, however, continue to rehabilitate and sell the properties they have already acquired from HUD, and we believe that most if not all ACA partners have an inventory of properties that will not be exhausted during the review. This program, with proper controls in place, can provide an effective role for nonprofit groups, and local governments, in HUD's property disposition.

A second initiative is HUD's Accelerated Claims Demonstration Program. This program, announced in a Federal Register Notice on February 5th, utilizes current statutory authority for HUD to buy seriously defaulted loans that cannot be addressed through FHA's loss mitigation program, and sell these loans to the private sector for disposition. This program is expected to begin in the fourth quarter of this fiscal year. Considering both of these initiatives, it does not appear that additional statutory authority related to property disposition is required at this time.

Partly for these reasons, we see no need for Section 225 of this bill, which would require HUD to use the Department of Agriculture's Rural Housing Services Center as an additional resource for servicing single-family, HUD-held mortgages. We believe that this requirement is unnecessary and indeed would be counterproductive. Presently, HUD's National Servicing Center (NSC) in Oklahoma services four types of secretary-held loans, each with unique characteristics and servicing requirements. In particular, NSC services 963 reverse equity (HECM) loans. For this loan type, the Department makes monthly payments to the borrowers rather than receiving income from them. The daily payment process is complex and time sensitive. Additionally, NSC services second mortgages generated through loss mitigation advances, and discounted sales to officers and teachers in HUD's Officer Next Door/Teacher Next Door programs. Because these mortgages carry no interest and require no monthly payments, servicing activity is generally limited to processing subordinations and payoffs. All of these mortgage types are unique to HUD. The Rural Housing Service has no similar programs and no experience in servicing such loans. NSC is doing an excellent job managing their unique mortgage servicing requirements. It is unclear that there is a benefit or need to outsource the servicing of these loans.

FHA Multifamily Insurance Programs

As the members of this Subcommittee know, FHA's basic multifamily insurance program is Section 221(d)(4). This program has required a credit subsidy since Credit Reform was enacted in 1990. Three times in the last eight years, the program was closed down because the available credit subsidy was exhausted. To prevent further closures and place the program on a break-even basis, the Department raised the premium from 50 basis points to 80 basis points for FY 2002. Many in the industry, and some Members of Congress, were concerned that the program would be hamstrung by this increase. That has not happened. In the first six months of the fiscal year, FHA has insured almost $1.5 billion worth of Section 221(d)(4) projects, compared to less than $1.1 billion during the same period a year ago. Moreover, with the 25 percent increase in mortgage limits that was proposed by the Secretary and enacted by Congress, we are seeing applications from high-cost metropolitan area that have not participated in the program in years – the Twin Cities, Philadelphia, Newark, Baltimore, here in Washington, and Austin.

In addition, we have conducted the first systematic re-analysis of the premium and credit subsidy since Credit Reform was enacted. We have concluded that Section 221(d)(4) can be operated on a break-even basis at a much lower premium – 57 basis points. The President's Budget contains an announcement of this premium reduction, effective in October, at the beginning of FY 2003. We are also reducing either the premium or the credit subsidy for nearly every other multifamily program.

This summary of FHA's multifamily mortgage insurance programs provides background for your consideration of Sections 201 and 202 in the legislation. They address the question of who should be served by the programs. FHA generally serves moderate-income renters. Most of the projects that FHA insures are affordable to families in the lower half of the income distribution, and almost half are in underserved areas. These are important markets; these families and these communities need FHA.

Section 201 proposes to index the FHA multifamily mortgage limits. As members of this Subcommittee certainly know, Congress approved indexing the mortgage limits in the Section 203(b) single-family mortgage insurance program several years ago. This provision has enabled FHA to keep pace with inflation and changing economic conditions as it serves young, first-time homebuyers. Indexing the multifamily limits should likewise prove to be more responsive to market conditions and to the needs of families seeking moderately priced rental housing. Clearly, annual adjustments provide a better way to compensate for increased costs than by providing periodic dollar increases. When Congress raised the limits last year by 25 percent, at the request of Secretary Martinez, this was the first increase since 1992, and represented a delayed catch-up for the inflation that occurred between 1992 and 2001; during those years, FHA was progressively less able to serve moderate-income renters.

Section 202 proposes to increase the maximum mortgage limits in areas with very high housing costs by 30 percent above the amounts allowed under current law. It also proposes to increase the amount by which the Secretary, on a case-by-case basis, may increase the maximum mortgage amount. The Department would prefer to analyze the data resulting from our experience with the new limits that Congress enacted last year and the future effects of the indexing contained in Section 201 before proceeding with any additional high housing cost authority beyond that which already exists.

FHA Insurance for Nursing Homes and Hospitals

The Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002 contains several provisions relating to FHA's insurance programs for nursing homes and hospitals. Section 206 seeks to provide a more flexible procedure with respect to the Certificate of Need (CON) for hospitals, which is somewhat similar to an Administration proposal that was not enacted last year. There is a technical problem with the language of Section 206 as drafted. The Section states that HUD should work "in conjunction with" the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). HUD currently has a contractual agreement with HHS with respect to Section 242, the hospital mortgage insurance program. Under this agreement, both HHS salaries and expenses are paid from the FHA General Insurance Fund. This agreement has worked well for several years. Because of the agreement, the language should be modified to read "in consultation with," to avoid any contractual disputes between HUD and HHS in the future. There is no similar agreement between HUD and HHS with respect to the Section 232 nursing homes mortgage insurance program, and we do not believe that the language is necessary or desirable for that program. HUD operates the nursing home program effectively without formal participation by HHS.

Sections 203-205 amend the definition of the FHA health care and assisted living programs so as to take FHA into new lines of business. Sections 203 and 204 change the definitions in Section 232 and Section 242, respectively, to include community health centers, medical practice facilities, and group practice facilities, and Section 205 permits insurance to refinance these facilities. These provisions raise a number of questions and require additional analysis before the Department can provide a definitive position. The language creates an overlap between Section 232 and Section 242, as well as Title XI, so that these new lines of business can be insured under either program. The programs are now managed separately within the Office of Housing, and the overlap could possibly complicate our ability to run both programs. More fundamentally, these proposals would appear to require FHA to undertake new insurance activities on unfamiliar products, beyond our current expertise and capacity. FHA primarily insures financing for housing. To expand our portfolio to include businesses that provide no shelter could have long-term consequences to the FHA GI Fund. We are now experiencing an increasing number of claims in the Section 232 nursing home program, and just last week had the first default in the Section 242 hospital program in three years. It is particularly relevant that the expansion of nursing homes into new business activities during the 1990s led to a significant number of defaults and bankruptcies.

Programs for the Elderly and Disabled

Section 301 addresses part of a well-known policy concern. It would authorize the use of uncommitted, unobligated Assisted Living Conversion Program funds in the Section 202 program for use in a modernization demonstration program for Section 236 elderly housing. The Section 236 elderly housing portfolio is a fraction of the Section 236 program - about 90,000 units, less than one-third of the units in the entire Section 236 portfolio of over 330,000 units nationwide. The elderly housing projects are generally in good physical condition; only 25 projects out of 556 have REAC physical inspection scores of less than 60, less than 5 percent of the inventory. No projects have REAC scores less than 30. We certainly recognize that there is some need for capital improvements among the entire older insured subsidized FHA multifamily portfolio. We have been working with the multifamily industry over the last two years, in an effort to modernize and restructure the Section 236 housing portfolio. The work is being conducted within the framework of preserving these projects for continued use within the affordable multifamily housing stock. The general restructuring technique involves a sale of the project to a new owner who physically modernizes the project and maintains its affordability for the term of the mortgage plus five years, generally a total of 15 years. In most cases, the financing technique utilizes new mortgages supported by the continuation of Section 8 rental assistance and the remaining Section 236 interest reduction payments. The owner's capital is provided through the Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC). To date, we have succeeded in restructuring over 100 of these projects. We do not believe that Section 301 is necessary for this effort. We also are concerned that the Section 202 Assisted Living Conversion program might be adversely affected. The program has not yet reached the scale envisioned in past appropriations, and the unexpended funds have been carried forward. But it is our experience that new programs do take time to get underway, and we do not believe it is prudent to anticipate that Section 202 Assisted Living Conversion funds would be available.

With regard to Section 303, as you know, the President and the Secretary are strongly committed to ensuring that religious organizations have the same opportunities as any other participant in the Section 202/811 programs, which are our largest programs in terms of participation by faith-based organizations. These organizations now can be sponsors of these projects, and certainly religious organizations have been very active in the Section 202 program since its creation in 1959. In recent years, they have accounted for approximately 40% of the funding that Congress appropriates for these programs. While we applaud the purpose of Section 303, the Department will need to thoroughly

She would be "delighted" to help out making the case publicly on the judges. It turns out she worked hard to help push through a number of Clinton nominees over the past few years, including Merrick Garland for the D.C. Circuit, so she should have good credibility on the issue.

She wants to be credible and substantive and therefore asked that we provide her the necessary background information. I assured her that we had every interest in making certain that she was well-prepared. Perhaps once we have identified all our surrogates, we can have them all in for a meeting at which we distribute background materials, talking points, fact sheets etc. and answer any questions they might have.

In any event, I told Victoria we would be back in touch shortly to arrange for her education on this topic.

COUNCIL OF ECONOMIC ADVISERS
April 23, 2002

Update on Malpractice Cost Increases

Background

- Rising liability costs are a concern not only to health care providers but also to the Federal government. For example, Medicare incorporates malpractice costs its provider payment calculations. Most state Medicaid plans also account for some part of liability costs – and to the extent they do not, providers may refuse to treat Medicaid patients. Higher liability costs are also incorporated in private insurance premiums, which are tax-subsidized. Thus, eventually, a large share of the costs of higher liability are eventually borne by the Federal government.

- The cause of rising liability costs is rapidly rising malpractice awards – to the point that some malpractice carriers are refusing to offer insurance altogether. The second section of this memo describes the serious problems that providers are facing in many states.

- The national medical malpractice combined ratio (the ratio of paid claims to premiums) is nearing the level experienced at the height of the 1980s medical malpractice crisis. In 2001, insurers likely paid out $1.40 in claims for every dollar of premiums, compared with $1.60 in claims at the height of the 1980s' crisis.

- Jury awards for malpractice have skyrocketed in recent years. The median malpractice award grew 60% between 1997 and 1999 (from $500,000 to $800,000). In 1999 the median punitive damage award for medical malpractice cases was $515,000. The only cases with a higher median award were products liability suits ($2 million), where defendants are often large corporations.

- St. Paul (the largest medical malpractice insurance writer in the U.S. prior to its exit from the market in December 2001) saw twice as many claims for $1 million or more in 2000 than they did in 1999. Only 1.5% of all claims paid in 1990 were for $1 million or more, while 4.5% in 1998 were. Many analysts view this rapid and difficult-to-predict trend as a driving factor in the decision by St. Paul to pull back from the malpractice insurance markets (see below). Its exit will affect 42,000 physicians.

- The number of medical malpractice payment reports increased in 1999 and 2000 after falling at an average rate of 4% per year between 1996 and 1998. In the past 5 years the number of "reportable action reports" increased by almost 10% while the number of medical malpractice payment reports only increased by 1%.

- A rising number of large awards is thus the main contributing factor to the increase in malpractice costs for doctors. In 2000, median malpractice payments (by state) ranged from $55,000 (California) to $262,000 (Maine). The mean malpractice payment (by state) ranged from $142,637 (California) to $584,338 (Washington DC). Kansas was the only state in which the mean malpractice payment was less than the median. 40% of all jury awards are over $1 million, compared with 35% in the period from 1993 to 1995.

- High awards are generally related to poor outcomes that follow complex procedures – and in most cases are not the result of care that medical experts judge to be negligent. The highest average and median malpractice payments are for obstetrics and the most malpractice payments were made for claims that were diagnosis or surgery related.
- Medical malpractice premiums skyrocketed in recent years. In an AMA survey 8 States (AR, CT, IL, NV, NC, OH, PA & TX) reported premium increases of over 30% in 2002. The Texas Medical Liability Trust has raised rates by 100% over the last 2.5 years. New Jersey hospital medical malpractice insurance premiums jumped an average of 250% from 1999 to 2002.

- Considerable research indicates that higher malpractice premiums cause doctors to practice more "defensive medicine," such as ordering extra tests or unnecessary procedures to provide legal cover in case a patient has a bad outcome. In a recent survey, roughly three quarters of physicians acknowledged that fear of litigation lead them to order more tests and more frequently refer patients to specialists than they would based only on their professional judgement of what is medically necessary. The excess health care costs resulting from defensive medicine are much greater than the direct costs of the malpractice system – potentially adding 2 to 4 percent each year to the costs of the entire health care system.

- Malpractice liability also leads to worse care and worse health for other reasons. As noted below, high malpractice costs are significantly threatening access to care in many parts of the country. And health care providers are reluctant to undertake initiatives to eliminate medical errors and improve quality, for fear that any information they develop on opportunities to improve care will be used against them in court. Additionally, 61% of physicians have noticed physicians being reluctant to make what they categorize as humane choices at the end of a patient's life due to a fear of litigation.

Long Term Care

- Rising liability costs in nursing homes are a major cause of rapid growth in the cost of nursing home care, which is mostly financed by Medicaid and Medicare. Between 1990 and 2001 general liability and professional liability (GL/PL) loss costs increased from $240 per annual occupied skilled nursing bed to $2,360 per bed. Most of this increase took place after 1995. Florida ($11,000) and Texas ($5,500) had the highest per bed costs in 2001.

- Nursing home malpractice costs are rising because of rapid increases in both the number of lawsuits and the size of awards. Between 1990 and 2001, the average size of a GL/PL claim tripled and the average number of claims for long term care operators increased from 3.6 claims per 1000 beds to 11 claims per 1000 beds.

- A very large share of these liability costs go to lawyers. Altogether, 47% of the total GL/PL claims costs goes to attorneys (this includes the defendant's legal costs, which are roughly 40% of the total dollars that attorneys get).

- Even excluding "high cost" states, GL/PL loss costs are increasing at a rate of 20% per year. This is much faster growth than in other industries, where GL/PL claim costs tend to increase between 5% and 10% per year.

State Malpractice Laws Have Major Implications for Malpractice Costs, Federal Health Care Spending, and Access to Care

California

- California (like Utah, New Mexico, and other states) has a cap on jury awards for pain and suffering. California limits such awards to $250,000.

- The 5 largest California insurers requested malpractice insurance rate increases of only 2% to 8% for 2002, while the rest of the country faced increases of 10% to 30%. Furthermore, the rates in California are already relatively low. The base rate for a California obstetrician is around $35,000 per year. The same doctor would pay between $80,000 and $120,000 in Pennsylvania. (San Francisco Business Times, October 15, 2001).

- Medical malpractice insurance is only about 10% of doctors' revenues in California, down from 25%. Nationally, premiums generally average between 10% and 25% of a physician's gross revenues. The premium for an obstetrician in PA would be more than twice as much as it would be for the same obstetrician in CA.

Pennsylvania

- Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia have relatively high medical malpractice costs, and have faced significant cost increases this year.

- The PA Medical Association found that it costs $96,199 to cover an orthopedic surgeon in PA and less than $40,000 to cover one in Delaware and New Jersey. According to the president of the PA Medical Society, their 2001 survey found that 72% of doctors deferred purchasing new medical equipment or didn't hire needed staff because of "sudden and sharp increases" in malpractice insurance premiums.

- PA has recently taken legislative steps to try to curb the cost increases (including the partial privatization and eventual phase-out of the PA CAT fund, shortening the statute of limitations, and allowing judges to lower awards in some cases).

Nevada

- Malpractice Insurance Availability in Nevada:

    - The Nevada Division of Insurance conducted a survey of 11 insurers offering medical malpractice insurance in Nevada. The respondents indicated that punitive damages were the largest contributor to the cost of claims, followed by legal fees.

- St. Paul, the largest insurer, pulled out of Nevada in 2001 and 4 other insurers left the market in 2002. Those 5 insurers provided 70% of the State's malpractice coverage.

- The Governor's Plan:

  - It was concluded at a state hearing in March, 2002 that medical malpractice insurance was not readily available in Nevada, so the state was designated as the insurer of last resort. Beginning on April 15, 2002, Nevada will sell medical malpractice insurance through the newly established Medical Liability Association of Nevada. This is meant to be a stop-gap measure, and the Governor intends to work with the Legislature to institute market reforms.

  - Premiums will be set to cover projected losses and expenses and are not expected to be below the rates available in the private market. The Association will have the right to refuse to insure physicians deemed to be an "unacceptable risk." Participating medical professionals will each be assessed a one-time fee to cover any Association losses. The Board will also develop a "cost stabilization option" so that each physician could choose to pay a fee in lieu of any end of the year assessments. The plans offered by the State will not cover prior acts. According to local newspapers, physicians expect to pay as much as $100,000 for "tail coverage."

- Anecdotes from Nevada Newspapers:

  - "More than half of the surgeons working at Southern Nevada's only trauma center are poised to quit if Gov. Kenny doesn't soon commit to limiting malpractice liability in Nevada" (Las Vegas Review-Journal, March 21, 2002).

  - Over 20% of Clark County's OB-GYNs are actively considering leaving Nevada (i.e calling medical boards in other states to transfer certification, looking for other jobs, etc) because malpractice rates are going from $40,000 to as much as $200,000. 78% of Clark County physicians responding to a survey by a researcher at the University of Nevada School of Medicine indicated that they will leave the State if the legislature does not undertake tort reform. These physicians represent 40% of the OB-GYNs in Clark County (Las Vegas Review-Journal, March 23, 2002)

Conversations with colleagues appear to be impacted by the fear of litigation. While more than two-thirds of both physicians and nurses report that frank discussions of an adverse event or error at least sometimes helps them or a colleague avoid making a similar mistake in an actual medical case, many report that their colleagues are often uncomfortable having such conversations.

- Only one-fourth or fewer of physicians, nurses and hospital administrators think that their colleagues are very comfortable discussing adverse events or uncertainty about proper treatment with them.
- Even fewer – roughly 5% -- think that their colleagues are very comfortable discussing medical errors with them.

Fear of liability is cited by physicians and hospital administrators as the leading factor that discourages medical professionals from openly discussing and thinking of ways to reduce medical errors. By comparison, nurses are more likely to point to not wanting to upset or criticize a colleague as a main reason. Although hospital administrators and nurses somewhat disagree, physicians feel that fear of liability at least sometimes also leads to hospitals avoiding disclosing quality deficiencies and is the primary reason why hospitals do not share the results of inquiries into patient injury cases. [See Tables 14-19]

Patient relationships also appear to be somewhat impacted by litigation concerns. While the overwhelming majority of nurses report that malpractice concerns have not impacted their patient relations and discussions at all, significant numbers of physicians feel that malpractice concerns have made their relationships with patients less personal (38%) and caused them to be more candid in their conversations with patients (43%). Interestingly, perceptions differ greatly between hospital administrators and physicians and nurses on whether physicians have become more likely to admit errors and apologize. While half (51%) of all hospital administrators think that physicians have become more likely to admit errors and apologize, only one-fourth of nurses and physicians themselves think this is true. [See Tables 20-23]

One area where there is clear agreement is the influence of the fear of litigation on administrative issues. Well over three-fourths of all physicians and nurses (84% and 81%, respectively) report that they spend more time on paper work, such as medical record documentation, because of malpractice concerns than they would based solely on the patient's clinical needs. Additionally, nearly all physicians (94%) believe that written descriptions of cases are very often or sometimes influenced by the fear of litigation. [See Tables 24-25]

Physicians, nurses and hospital administrators were somewhat divided on whether or not their interpretation of the November 1999 Institute of Medicine reports which suggested that between 44,000 and 98,000 patients die annually in the United States as a result of preventable hospital errors however they generally disagreed with this finding. Their views on malpractice claims were more common. The clear majority of physicians, nurses and hospital administrators all feel that malpractice claims occur mainly from adverse results rather than actual error. Physicians see the patient/physician relationship as the most important factors in determining whether or not an injured patient brings a lawsuit or not. Quality of communications as well as greed and the patient's financial status are also noted as important factors by physicians, nurses and hospital administrators. [See Tables 28-30]

That many medical professionals behavior is clearly influenced by the fear of litigation can perhaps be explained by the finding that the overwhelming majority of physicians (83%) and hospital administrators (72%) do not feel that physicians can trust the current system of justice to achieve a reasonable result if sued. When coupled with the previously noted finding that most feel that malpractice claims occur mainly from adverse results rather than actual error this sense of distrust in the current system is underscored. It is not surprising then, that physicians nearly unanimously, as well as at least three-fourths of nurses and hospital administrators would instead favor switching to a medical court presided over by independent medical professionals and other experts that would have authority to review and decide injury cases.

Suggestions by physicians and hospital administrators for improving the malpractice and patient safety situation include a number of legal reforms such as caps on judgments/ liability, general tort reform, as well as improved communication with patients. Nurses were more likely to look to improved patient communication and staff education improvements for possible improvement. While changes in levels of career satisfaction have caused roughly half of physicians, nurses, and hospital administrators to consider leaving medicine, changes made by HMOs as well as those brought about by the threat of malpractice liability have had nearly as great an impact upon physicians. [See Tables 26, 27, & 31-33]

In summary, it is clear that the practice of medicine and the delivery of medical care are significantly influenced and shaped by fear of malpractice claims and perceived unreliability of the current system of justice. With adverse consequences ranging from cost implications to quality of care the impact of the fear of litigation cannot be ignored and is an area that should be included in any efforts to improve medicine in America today and restore health to health care.

Quality of Medical Care Over Past Five Years

Although feelings are mixed both within and across sample groups, half of all physicians feel that the ability to provide quality medical care to patients has gotten worse over the past five years. In contrast, the plurality of nurses and hospital administrators feel that things have improved.

Q205 Setting aside improvements in technology or medical knowledge, do you think the ability of physicians and nurses to provide quality medical care to patients has improved, has gotten worse or is it about the same as it was five years ago?

Impact on Providing Quality Patient Care

While physicians, nurses and hospital administrators generally agree on the impact of various influences on their ability to provide quality care, physicians are more likely to feel that managed care plans have hurt their ability to provide quality care. Nurses are more likely to feel that patient advocacy groups have made a positive impact on their ability to provide quality care and are less likely to have personally felt a negative impact because of concerns about malpractice litigation.

Impact on Discussions About Medical Errors

Among physicians and hospital administrators, fear of liability is the leading factor that discourages open discussions about how to reduce medical errors. While fear of liability is also significant for nurses, not wanting to upset or criticize a colleague is seen as slightly more important in discouraging these discussions.

Improvements for Malpractice/Patient Safety Situation

Physicians and hospital administrators both would look to make changes to the legal system in order to improve the malpractice/patient safety situation in the United States. Improved communication and discussion of errors are also seen as important. Leading improvements noted by nurses include better informed patients, increased hospital staff, increased staff education as well as liability judgment caps.

Actual Case Descriptions Where Fear Of Liability Contributed to Bad Result

While many respondents could not cite a specific case, prolonged life support with not chance of survival or against a patient's wishes as well as unnecessary testing and procedures were the most noted among those physicians and hospital administrators. Nurses most often described a case where death or sever reaction occurred due to over medication or incorrect medication.

METHODOLOGY

AN OVERVIEW

The Fear of Litigation Study – The Impact on Medicine was conducted for Common Good by Harris Interactive Inc. The final results are based on interviews with representative samples of 300 physicians, 100 hospital-based nurses, and 100 hospital administrators. Interviews averaging 15 minutes in length took place between March 4 and 20, 2002. The physicians interviews were conducted online and the results were weighted using the AMA Physician Masterfile to be representative of physicians in the United States. The nurses and hospital administrators were interviewed by telephone. The following provides a more detailed description of the sampling and interviewing procedures used.

HARRIS POLL ONLINE OVERVIEW

Harris Interactive's online interviewing of physicians utilized The Harris Interactive Physician Panel Online which consists of practicing physicians involved in "hands-on" patient care in the United States who have agreed to participate in online research about healthcare-related issues. In addition to Primary Care Physicians, every major medical specialty and sub-specialty are represented among the members of the Panel.

Interviews conducted online utilized Harris Interactive's proprietary technology for e-mailing to large groups of respondents and enabling large numbers of respondents to simultaneously complete the survey online; and utilized advanced survey interviewing techniques, adapted to the online environment, including password protection, skip patterns, and visually-appealing fonts and formatting.

Randomly selected Harris Interactive Physician Panel members received email invitations with unique IDs and passwords, along with a link to the survey site. Physicians were offered an honorarium of $50 or $65 for their participation. Data were weighted to reflect the general population of general practitioners and specialist physicians. The AMA Physician Masterfile was used to create weighting targets, which included medical specialty, sex and geographic region.

ONLINE INTERVIEWING PROCEDURES

Physician interviews are conducted using a self-administered, online questionnaire, via proprietary, web-assisted interviewing software. The HPOL interviewing system permits online data entry of interviews by the respondents.

REV_00339749

Questionnaires are programmed into the system with the following checks:

1. Question and response series
2. Skip pattern
3. Question rotation
4. Range checks
5. Mathematical checks
6. Consistency checks
7. Special edit procedures

All data are tabulated, checked for internal consistency and processed by computer. A series of computer-generated tables is then produced for each of the key sample groups showing the results of each survey question, both by the total number of respondents and by the key subgroups.

CONTROL OF THE SAMPLE

To maintain the reliability and integrity in the sample, the following procedures are used:

1. Password protection. Each invitation contains a password that is uniquely assigned to that e-mail address. A respondent is required to enter the password at the beginning of the survey to gain access into the survey. Password protection ensures that a respondent completes the survey only one time.

2. Reminder invitations. To increase the number of respondents in the survey and to improve overall response rates, up to two additional reminder invitations are typically mailed at 2-4 day intervals to those respondents who have not yet participated in the survey. For this study, two reminders were sent to respondents.

EDITING AND CLEANING THE DATA

The data-processing staff perform machine edits and additional cleaning for the entire data set. Our edit programs act as a verification of the skip instructions and other data checks that are written into the online program. The edit programs list any errors by case number, question number and type. These are then resolved by senior personnel, who inspect the original file and made appropriate corrections. Complete records are kept of all such procedures.

SIGNIFICANCE TESTING

Reliability of Survey Percentages

It is important to bear in mind that the results from any sample survey are subject to sampling variation. The magnitude of this variation (or error) is affected both by the number of interviews—the base size—and by the level of the percentages expressed in the results.

Table A-1 shows the possible sample variation that applies to percentage results for this survey. The chances are 95 in 100 that a survey result does not vary, plus or minus, by more than the indicated number of percentage points from the result that would have been obtained if interviews were conducted with all persons in the universe represented by the sample. For example, if the response for a sample size of 300 is 30%, then in 95 cases out of 100, the response in the total population would have been between 25% and 35% (+/-5%). Note that survey results based on subgroups of small size can be subject to large sampling error.

Recommended Allowance for Sampling Error of Proportions (Plus or Minus)

	Survey Percentage Result
Sample Size	10% or 90%	20% or 80%	30% or 70%	40% or 60%	50%
300	3	5	5	6	6
200	4	6	6	7	7
100	6	8	9	10	10
50	8	11	13	14	14

Significance of Differences Between Proportions

Sampling tolerances are also involved in the comparison of results from different surveys or from different parts of a sample from the same survey (subgroup analysis). Table A-2 shows the percentage difference that must be obtained before a difference can be considered statistically significant. These figures, too, represent the 95% confidence level.

To illustrate, suppose the two percentages in question are 34% and 25%. More specifically, suppose that one group of 300 has a response of 34% "yes" to a question, and an independent group has a response of 25% to the same question, for an observed difference of 9 percentage points. According to the table, this difference is subject to a potential sampling error of 6-7 percentage points. Since the observed difference is greater than the sampling error, the observed difference is significant.

Sampling Error of Difference Between Proportions
Approximate Sampling Tolerances (at 95% Confidence Level)
To Use in Evaluating Differences Between Two Percentage Results

Sample Sizes		Survey Percentage Result
		10% or 90%	20% or 80%	30% or 70%	40% or 60%	50%
300 v.	300	5	6	7	8	8
	200	5	7	8	9	9
	100	7	9	10	11	11
	50	9	12	14	15	15
200 v.	200	6	8	9	10	10
	100	7	10	11	12	12
	50	9	12	14	15	15
100 v.	100	8	11	13	14	14
	50	10	14	16	17	17
50 v.	50	12	16	18	19	20

Sampling error of the type so far discussed is only one type of error. Survey research is also susceptible to other types of error, such as refusals to be interviewed (non-response error), question wording and question order, interviewer error, and weighting by demographic control data. Although difficult or impossible to quantify these types of error, the procedures followed by Harris Interactive, Inc. keep errors of these types to a minimum.

INTRODUCTION

The Fear of Litigation Study – The Impact on Medicine was conducted for Common Good among a national sample of physicians, nurses and hospital administrators. This survey sought to provide some insight into the impact of the fear of litigation on the practice of medicine and the delivery of medical care. Broadly the survey focused on the following areas:

- Judgments about tests and medical care
- Interactions with patients and other physicians
- Proposals for change

METHODOLOGICAL OVERVIEW

Interviews for The Fear of Litigation Study – The Impact on Medicine were conducted both via telephone as well as online. 300 physicians were interviewed online using Harris Interactive's Physician Panel. 100 hospital-based nurses and 100 hospital administrators were interviewed by telephone. Interviews averaging 15 minutes in length took place between March 4 and 20, 2002.

The three sample groups were selected not only because they make up the key constituents in the delivery of medical care, but also because we thought that they might have different views on the subject matter and perhaps even different abilities or incentives to be either forthcoming or reserved on the subject matter.
One of the interesting and rather surprising findings of the study was the willingness of physicians to fully disclose not only their views on how the fear of litigation impacts the behavior of physicians in general, but also their own behavior.

A detailed survey methodology including a description of the sampling and survey administration procedures is contained in Appendix A. The complete data-sheeted questionnaire is found in Appendix B.

NOTES ON READING TABLES

The base on each question is the total number of respondents answering that question. An asterisk (*) on a table signifies a value of less than one-half percent (0.5%). A dash represents a value of zero. Percentages may not always add up to 100% because of computer rounding or the acceptance of multiple answers from respondents answering that question. Note that in some cases results may be based on small sample sizes. Caution should be used in drawing any conclusion from results based on these small samples.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Medicine is clearly a highly dynamic and ever-changing field. Technological and scientific advances, the development of HMOs and managed care, as well as societal changes all shape it on an on-going basis. Although malpractice litigation has its roots back in the mid-1800s, one area of interest is how the increasingly litigious nature of American society today is influencing the field of medicine. Rather than explore the number of suits, the size of jury awards, or the costs of malpractice insurance, this survey sought to explore -- through interviews with physicians, nurses and hospital administrators -- how the fear of litigation affects the practice of medicine and the delivery of medical care.

The results are striking. Concerns about liability are influencing medical decision-making on many levels. From the increased ordering of tests, medications, referrals, and procedures to increased paperwork and reluctance to offer off-duty medical assistance, the impact of the fear of litigation is far-reaching and profound.

Broadly, half (51%) of all physicians think that their ability to provide quality medical care to patients has gotten worse in the past five years. Further, more than three-fourths of physicians feel that concern about malpractice litigation (76%) has hurt their ability to provide quality care in recent years. All respondent groups report increased levels of concern or awareness about the risks of malpractice liability over their career and nearly one-third (29%) of physicians state that they have been interested in a certain specialty but shied away from it due to fear of higher legal exposure. These findings seem to suggest that the broad impact of the fear of litigation is significant and growing. [See Tables 1 - 4]

Some of the more arresting study findings are on the impact of liability concerns on the provision of medical care. Broadly, nearly all physicians and hospital administrators feel that unnecessary or excessive care is very often or sometimes provided because of fear about litigation. More specifically, physicians report that the fear of malpractice claims causes themselves and/or other physicians to:

- Order more tests than they would based only on professional judgment of what is medically needed. (91% have noticed other physicians, and 79% report they themselves do this due to concerns about malpractice liability)
- Refer patients to specialists more often than they would based only on their professional judgment of what is medically needed. (85% have noticed other physicians, and 74% report they themselves do this due to concerns about malpractice liability)

- Suggest invasive procedures such as biopsies to confirm diagnoses more often than they would based only on their professional judgment of what is medically needed. (73% have noticed other physicians, and 51% report they themselves do this due to concerns about malpractice liability)
- Prescribe more medications such as antibiotics than they would based only on their professional judgment of what is medically needed. (73% have noticed other physicians, and 41% report they themselves do this due to concerns about malpractice liability)

A similar, although slightly less dramatic trend is seen when looking at patient end of life issues.

- Just under two-thirds (61%) of physicians have noticed physicians being reluctant to make what they believe to be humane choices because of concerns that a family member might bring suit.
- Half (50%) have noticed a physician resorting to aggressive treatments of terminally ill patients because of liability concerns.
- Just under half (42%) have noticed a physician or staff member going against a patient's expressed wishes concerning life-prolonging medical interventions because of concerns that a family member might bring suit.

Not surprisingly, there is nearly unanimous agreement among physicians, nurses and hospital administrators that these extra tests, referrals and procedures contribute in a significant way to health care costs issues. [See Tables 6-10]

Views on the conducive nature of the hospital environment are mixed when it comes to issues of medical errors and liability protocol. Strong majorities of hospital administrators and nurses feel that staff in their hospital are encouraged to report medical errors such as dispensing incorrect medication or medication doses, surgical mistakes and human error in interpreting results of diagnostic tests. Only two thirds (63%) of physicians, however, agree perhaps due to a greater sense of personal exposure. [See Tables 11-13]

- Hospital administrators feel that while established rules and protocol have clearly improved or enhanced patient safety, they also believe that unnecessary rules of protocol are often created out of a concern about liability protection.
- Nearly half (43%) of all nurses also feel prohibited or discouraged from doing what they think is right for the patient because of rules or protocols set up for liability protection.

White House Counsel has no policy objection to these except to raise a question about whether the Native American Housing program raises any constitutional issues. Has OLC reviewed?
We object to the lack of sufficient time to review these

April 22, 2002 Draft

STATEMENT OF ROY A. BERNARDI

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR COMMUNITY PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00339805

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on the Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. Madame Chairwoman, the efforts you and others have made to bring the need for affordable housing to the attention of Congress through legislation such as HR 3995 are very much appreciated. I would like to thank you for your demonstrated leadership, resolute voice, and compassion for the less fortunate among us. Your contributions will be sorely missed when your career in Congress draws to a close.

HR 3995 proposes some significant changes to many programs in the Office of Community Planning and Development, and to the HOME Investments Partnerships program in particular. I will address those related to HOME first.

HOME Investment Partnerships Program

The HOME Program has a demonstrated record of success in developing "deep-targeted" affordable housing with over 40 percent of all HOME-assisted rental units produced serving extremely low-income families. We believe that reforms to the HOME Program should build on the notable success the program has already achieved. We are concerned that the proposed Production and Preservation Program, as currently structured, and the other significant changes proposed for the HOME Program itself, particularly in regard to rent level determinations, would not help to achieve the worthy objectives of HR 3995, that of providing affordable housing for extremely low-income families. We believe that some of the bill's provisions would have unintended consequences.

The creation of a new Production and Preservation Program within HOME that has different requirements in such areas as rent determination, tenant contribution to rent, match, income targeting, commitment of funds, and even in the definition of who is low- or very low-income, could create significant compatibility issues with the basic HOME program and with other Federal programs, resulting in serious implementation problems. Unless these conflicting requirements are reconciled, the implementation problems will remain and projects will be delayed or found infeasible if the new program is made part of HOME or potentially if it is developed as a separate, stand-alone program.

We would urge the Committee to reconsider its proposed changes to the way in which HOME Program rents are determined. The effort made in HR 3995 to remedy lagging housing development "in certain rural counties" is understandable. However, these changes - abandoning the Fair Market Rent (FMR) standard and adopting the greater of the State or area median income as a floor for determining rents – could actually increase rents generally across the country while not ensuring that those who are the targeted beneficiaries of the legislation, extremely low- and very low-income families, will be able to afford those higher rents. For example:

- 86% of the population of metro areas and 100% of all non-metropolitan areas will have rent increases;
- Average increase in rents will be 32% (or $200) for the country as a whole;

- 63% of the rent increases will be more than 20%;
- 37% of the rent increases will be more than 40%;
- The largest rent increases will be in areas with the least housing affordability needs if the current rent-to-income ratio is used as the measurement indicator;

Some specific local examples of rent increases are contained in the following table:

Metro Area/County	2-Bedrm FY2002 FMR	Current High HOME Rent (Monthly)	Proposed High HOME Rent (Monthly)	Monthly Rent Increase
Gilpin County, CO	678	678	1,173	495

At the other end of the spectrum, high HOME rents would fall in areas with exceptionally high rent-to-income ratios where FMRs are currently used to adjust the income limits used to calculate rents. For example, San Francisco's current high HOME rent of $1,467 would decrease by $230 under the proposed rent rules, making an already difficult environment even less attractive to developers in San Francisco.

Finally, abandoning the FMR standard would make it more difficult to use housing vouchers in HOME-assisted projects and would place many HOME units out of reach of voucher holders. At the same time, the HOME program could become less attractive to developers in areas with the most affordability problems (i.e., high rent to income ratio areas), and more attractive in areas with the least affordability problems (i.e., low rent to income ratio areas) and high vacancy rates. For the U.S. as a whole:

- Approximately 39 percent of the rental stock is located in markets where the FMR currently sets the maximum limit for HOME rents. Prevailing rents are quite low relative to income in these areas and the rental vacancy rate is 12 percent;
- In markets where rents are high relative to incomes and the FMR does not now act as a cap on HOME rents, the vacancy rate is 5 percent.

HUD is eager to work with this Committee to build on its efforts and those of the Millennial Housing Commission whose report is due out in May, to expand affordable housing opportunities. We are also confident that solutions to identified impediments to

Many changes have already been made over the ten years that the HOME Program has been in operation in an effort to streamline the program and improve its effectiveness. The production results and the ongoing feedback we receive from housing providers would indicate that this effort has been largely successful. Indeed, one of the hallmarks of this program and an important reason for its success has been the close and continuing communication between the administrators at HUD and recipients of HOME funds and their representatives and associations. We are receptive to further improvements to the program.

Homeless Assistance Programs

Madame Chairwoman, I'd now like to address the provisions of the bill dealing with HUD's McKinney-Vento Act homeless assistance programs. On an overall basis, the homeless assistance provisions of the bill are carefully crafted and correctly recognize both the important elements of current law that should be retained and the provisions that need modification.

Specifically, we support the reauthorization provisions for the Supportive Housing, Shelter Plus Care, Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation SRO and the Emergency Shelter Grants programs. The Department will be proposing a consolidation of these programs into one that is needs-based and performance-driven. This consolidation will ensure community-level planning and decision-making. And, it will retain the fundamental components of our Continuum of Care strategy to address homelessness. We further support the provisions of the bill reauthorizing the Interagency Council on the Homeless and the Emergency Food and Shelter Program, currently housed at FEMA but proposed for transfer to HUD in the President's budget request.

The Department fully supports Section 604 of the bill that continues the current requirement that at least 30 percent of appropriated funds be targeted for permanent housing projects. Similarly, we support the removal of the unrealistic caps on the use of Supportive Housing Program funding for acquisition, rehabilitation and new construction. These caps have increasingly worked to restrain our grantees' ability to generate new and rehabilitated permanent housing units for homeless individuals and families.

The Department notes bill language proposing the transfer of the costs of renewing expiring Shelter Plus Care projects and projects funded under the Permanent Housing component of the Supportive Housing Program to the Housing Certificate Fund (HCF). The Department looked at these renewals in the 2003 budget process and determined that it is preferable to address them as part of consolidated homeless funding.

Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS

HUD supports Section 904 of the Bill that would reauthorize the Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS (HOPWA) program. HOPWA is the only Federal program solely dedicated to providing housing assistance to persons with HIV/AIDS and their families. Housing provided under this program provides a basis for helping people at the lowest income levels access appropriate care and acts as a base to help maintain difficult therapies and medical regimens.

Community Development Block Grant

I would like to make several other comments on provisions of HR 3995 that would affect HUD's basic Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) program.

Section 902 on Housing Counseling programs would require the Secretary to designate a single office within the Department to "establish, coordinate, and administrate all requirements, standards, and performance measures under programs and laws administered by the Department that relate to housing counseling, homeownership, counseling . . ." This section also specifies that the CDBG eligible activity under section 105(a)(20) of the HCD Act of 1974 be covered by this provision. Section 105(a)(20) of the HCD Act authorizes grantees to use CDBG funds to carry out housing services, such as housing counseling. Housing counseling is an important component of the Department's rental housing and homeownership programs. However, we would caution against adopting a "one size fits all" approach that would take away the local discretion of program design and implementation from CDBG grantees, which is the cornerstone of the CDBG program. Recently, FHA revised the standards and performance measures related to the 1400 HUD-approved housing counseling agencies participating in this program. We see no need for another office within the Department to repeat this process. As you know, the Administration has requested $35 million for a new categorical counseling program, nearly doubling the current level of funding and removing the program from the HOME block grant. We urge you to support that proposal, and we believe it will be easier and quicker to provide the funds to counseling agencies if we can operate the new program on the basis of the standards we have recently established.

Section 905 concerns the funding eligibility for secular activities carried out by religious organizations. HUD supports the involvement of faith-based organizations in our programs, consistent with Constitutional principles of Church and State.

Section 906 would add a new eligibility category to the CDBG program to authorize the construction of tornado or storm-safe shelters in manufactured housing parks. This addition would expand this otherwise eligible public facility to serve residents of private manufactured housing parks and HUD supports it. However, subparagraph (b) of Section 906 would authorize a set-aside from the CDBG program for fiscal year 2002 for this purpose. The Department does not support further set-asides within the CDBG appropriation.

HUD supports Section 907 of the bill that would amend Section 105(a)(13) of the HCD Act to allow the use of CDBG funds to administer renewal communities. HUD believes that such support of the Renewal Communities program will foster needed job creation and revitalization in distressed communities.

Self-Help Homeownership Opportunities Program

HUD supports the reauthorization of the Self-Help Homeownership Opportunities Program (SHOP), which has been instrumental in helping many low-income families become homeowners. The President's request to triple funding to $65 million for SHOP in FY 2003 reflects this program's popularity and success.

Thank you again for this opportunity, and I would be happy to answer any questions that you may have.

STATEMENT OF MICHAEL LIU

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR PUBLIC AND INDIAN HOUSING

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

April 24, 2002

I am Michael Liu, Assistant Secretary for Public and Indian Housing at the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. In that position I have responsibility for administration of the public housing, voucher and Native American housing programs. Accordingly, I will limit my testimony to Titles IV, V and VI of the bill, which concern those programs.

First, Congresswoman Roukema, thank you and your cosponsors for developing and introducing the Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. The bill contains many proposals that will allow us to do our jobs better, of providing the most effective low-income housing assistance possible with the funds available. The reauthorizations for two of our critical programs, HOPE VI and Native American Block Grants, are critical measures in themselves. The bill contains several measures to achieve our common goal of assuring that the voucher funds Congress appropriates can be fully used. The bill also contains the Administration's Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative, which holds great promise as a means of improving the Nation's public housing communities.

Section 401 of the bill proposes a new thrifty production voucher program. This program is patterned after the current project-based voucher program, but assumes that the capital for production will be found from other programs or sources and provides for a reduced subsidy designed to cover only operating costs.

HUD generally supports additional tools that may help public housing authorities (PHAs) meet their communities' housing needs, and in that context will work with the Committee to develop a means of offering vouchers that can be combined easily with capital subsidies. The current proposal seems rather complex and differs from the project-based voucher program in ways that may not be necessary, such as waiting list administration, development location requirements and several others. I look forward to further discussions on this matter.

The bill contains several initiatives designed directly or indirectly to increase the successful use of appropriated voucher program funds, including an increase in the amount families can expend as their share of rent when initially leasing any unit (section 402), authorization for PHAs to use up to five percent of program monthly assistance payment funds (as opposed to administrative fees) for efforts to help families obtain and remain in suitable housing (section 403) and an authorization to provide increased administrative fees for high-performing PHAs in the voucher program (section 405). These proposals would augment steps HUD and Congress already have taken or are taking to accomplish this goal, including increased flexibility for PHAs to set payment standards; increased fair market rents to the 50th percentile of rentals for units in satisfactory condition some areas; initiation of the Section 8 Management Assessment Program (SEMAP), a management report card with consequences; training of PHA staff; award of new incremental vouchers only to PHAs with high usage of current resources; and reallocation of vouchers from PHAs that have not been able to use them to PHAs that need and can use them.

HUD supports the direction of these new proposals, but has suggestions. HUD supports the increase in allowable family rent to forty percent of gross income, but believes PHAs also need flexibility to address compelling situations—for example, where a family already in the program would like to move to a significantly less expensive unit, but cannot do so because the family still would be paying more than the limit.

HUD would allow the use of some program funds to help increase voucher utilization for PHAs that already are using their administrative fees solely for the Section 8 program, but believes that the authorization should be substantially narrower to address competing concerns regarding diversion of program funds. With respect to administrative fees, HUD recommends that it be given broader authority not just to provide a bonus for high performers, but also to restructure the fees to promote performance in general and the accomplishment of specific program priorities, such as families' movement to self-sufficiency and homeownership.

The bill contains several provisions regarding enhanced vouchers. HUD supports clarification of the obligation of owners to take enhanced vouchers in projects where tenants are eligible for them (section 406). With respect to the same section's protections for overhoused families, HUD recommends that such families be treated in the same manner as overhoused families are treated now in the voucher program (basically, the enhanced voucher families could choose to stay in the oversized unit, but would be subsidized at the level they would receive if they were in a unit of appropriate size at the property).

The bill also contains a provision to provide for higher contract rents upon the renewal of moderate rehabilitation contracts (section 408). HUD agrees that the current-law restriction of such rents to the lower of comparable rents, current rents plus an operating cost adjustment or fair market rents is unnecessarily restrictive. The bill's proposed solution, however, will pose administrative challenges for PHAs not accustomed to evaluating budget-based rents and may go further than is needed to preserve assisted units.

You asked me to discuss the future impact of Section 8 contract renewals on the HUD budget. Renewals for both tenant-based and project-based Section 8 rose from $14.3 billion in fiscal 2001 to a requested $16.9 billion for fiscal 2003, and are projected to increase to over $20 billion in several more years. This is a result of the program serving more families, some program changes that have increased per-unit costs, such as increases in fair market rents, and conversion over time of all contracts to one-year contracts, so that all contracts must have new budget authority each year.

Title V, Public Housing

I am excited that Title V contains the Administration's Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative (section 505), because that initiative can provide a new and effective means of improving public housing. Recent HUD studies indicate that the backlog of public housing capital needs is in the $20 billion range and that new needs accrue at about two billion dollars annually. Strides have been made in recent years in public housing communities, but appropriations for the Capital Fund at two to three billion dollars annually will allow only slow progress. The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative provides a means of addressing this problem sooner with the dollars available.

The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative allows PHAs that choose to participate to trade their public housing subsidies for project-based vouchers on a property-by-property basis. PHAs then could borrow money for capital improvements on the same individual property basis now used for Section 8 developments and multifamily housing generally. In addition to leveraging private capital, this action is likely to lead to more accountable property and financial management because management must be done at the individual property level. Tenants generally would be protected in the same manner as in public housing. PHAs could use the project-based vouchers on current sites, or on replacement sites where appropriate.

The Public Housing Reinvestment Initiative can be a powerful tool for the prompt rehabilitation of housing that otherwise would languish for years. For example, a development's capital needs of four million dollars that otherwise would be impossible to address from available Capital Fund moneys can be addressed with debt service payments on a seven percent, thirty-year loan of about $335,000 per year. PHAs could undertake individual transactions as long as the monthly expenses for operations, debt service and a capital replacement reserve did not exceed the lower of market rents or the applicable Section 8 payment standard. If the approvable rent levels were too low to finance all the necessary capital work—for example, if the PHA only could raise $20,000 per unit at approvable rent levels but the development needed $30,000 per unit in capital work—the PHA could choose to supplement the project-based vouchers with an up-front contribution from the Capital Fund or other sources.

The bill contains a proposal to suspend the PHA Plan requirement for three years for the smallest PHAs up to 100 units (section 504). Current law requires annual PHA Plans with eighteen listed elements, but also allows HUD to streamline PHA Plans for small, high-performing and Section 8-only PHAs. The extent to which the PHA Plan requirement has resulted in useful strategic planning has varied greatly from locality to locality. In many localities, the Resident Advisory Board participation requirement has resulted in better access for public housing residents and Section 8 families to make their views known to PHA decision-makers.

The usefulness of the PHA Plan relative to the PHAs' ability to carry it out with limited staff resources, however, appears to drop dramatically for small PHAs. HUD has provided some streamling of PHA Plan requirements for these PHAs, but I believe we need to go further and HUD is developing a regulation that will accomplish this. The bill's proposal is certainly along these lines, although we may be able to accomplish the necessary streamlining through regulation without disturbing the current resident and public process to the same extent. I want to note Congressman Bereuter's leadership on this issue and thank him for that leadership.

While HUD has differentiated between small and larger PHAs in PHA Plan processing, it has not done this to enough of an extent in its other programs. Small PHAs with 250 or fewer units constitute 75 percent of all PHAs, but operate only fifteen percent of the units. From a risk management standpoint, it is unnecessary to impose the same regulatory burdens on these PHAs as on larger ones. The new regulation I have mentioned will recognize that in several program areas.

The bill would require HUD to develop and test a third-party system for public housing performance evaluation, through an outside contractor (section 503). This year, HUD has implemented a binding public housing management assessment that contains an independent inspection of physical conditions. However, experience with the Public Housing Assessment System (PHAS) during its extended advisory period raised so many questions regarding the adequacy of its physical inspection and finance components that HUD substantially simplified and in some respects had to pare back these components prior to implementation. HUD is committed to working with public housing groups toward how best to revise the system. It may be that a third-party system could accomplish the same tasks better and provide a broader assessment that would be more readily recognized and accepted as appropriate by all parties concerned. The work being done by others such as public housing industry groups and private companies to develop such systems is promising, and HUD may be able to take account of this work and the views of resident representatives and others to develop an improved and possibly third-party system expeditiously.

Section 501 of the bill would allow HUD to waive the requirement that PHAs have a resident on the board of commissioners in particular States, where reasonable efforts are being made to take the necessary legislative or regulatory action so that this can occur. Congress has recognized problems in the implementation of the resident on the board requirement in several States, has exempted housing authorities in three States from the requirement for fiscal 2002 and has required HUD to provide a report by May 30, 2002 regarding the impediments to its implementation and related matters. Thus, further legislative action seems appropriate. The proposed legislation, however, would allow for permanent waivers and would not result in having residents on boards of commissioners promptly in the affected States. A better solution may be to provide for appointment by the chief executive officer of the PHA's jurisdiction of an additional board member to fulfill the resident on the board requirement, for a temporary period such as three years. This would give the noncompliant States more time to complete any necessary actions so that residents could be appointed to PHA boards as federal law requires, but the relief would be temporary and promptly would result in residents serving on boards of commissioners.

The bill provides for a two-year reauthorization of HOPE VI and for measures to ensure that a broader group of communities in terms of size and location have a realistic possibility of receiving a HOPE VI award. HUD supports both reauthorization and the general effort to promote broad program participation. More discussion of concepts in regard to reauthorization of HOPE VI will be constructive. A report on HOPE VI lessons learned is due to Congress on June 15, 2002.

Title VII, Native American Housing

Title VII reauthorizes both the Native American Block Grant Program and its related loan guarantee program. HUD believes that these programs continue to hold much promise and supports the reauthorization of both programs.

I look forward to working closely with the Committee as you continue to develop this important legislation for the improvement of the voucher, public housing and Native American housing programs. Please call on me and my staff for any assistance we can provide.

STATEMENT OF JOHN C. WEICHER

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR HOUSING/FHA COMMISSIONER

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity

Committee on Financial Services

April 24, 2002

REV_00339817

consider the issues relative to direct ownership of projects by religious organizations. Our practice for both religious and secular sponsors has been that ownership is vested in a single-purpose non-religious entity and established by the sponsor, not the sponsoring organization.

Other Provisions

The Housing Impact Analysis proposed in Title VIII was proposed by President Bush during the campaign two years ago. It is an effort to create a system to monitor the aggregate effects of all rules on the cost and availability of housing. We believe that it is in the interest of consumers, especially moderate-income families seeking to become homeowners or to find decent affordable rental housing, to ensure that regulations are demonstrably required to protect health and safety, and that the consequences of regulation for affordable housing are recognized and balanced against other important public purposes.

Section 902 establishes a single office within the Department to coordinate counseling activities. This sounds desirable, but may be counterproductive, in our judgment. It might undermine the ability of the various offices to establish requirements, standards, and performance measures that meet the unique needs of their programs and clients. HUD's various program areas each provide counseling, generally for different purposes and typically to different clienteles. Recently, FHA revised the standards and performance measures related to the 1400 HUD-approved housing counseling agencies participating in this program. We see no need for another office within the Department to repeat this process. As you know, the Administration has requested $35 million for a new categorical counseling program, nearly doubling the current level of funding and removing the program from the HOME block grant. We urge you to support that proposal, and we believe it will be easier and quicker to provide the funds to counseling agencies if we can operate the new program on the basis of the standards we have recently established.

Finally, the Administration supports Section 907 to simplify current law pertaining to subsidy layering. The provision permits housing credit agencies to certify to compliance with the Department's subsidy layering requirements concerning the combination of HUD and other governmental assistance with the Low Income Housing Tax Credit. The housing credit agency will simply certify that it has made the subsidy layering determination already required by Section 42 of the Tax Code. This provision is consistent with the Secretary's efforts to streamline the delivery of HUD's programs and support the production of affordable housing through the use of FHA mortgage insurance and the Low Income Housing Tax Credit Program.

Conclusion

Thank you again for the opportunity to testify on The Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002. I would be happy to answer any questions that the Subcommittee may have.

REV_00339827

Thank you for the opportunity to testify on behalf of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Office of Housing-Federal Housing Administration (FHA), concerning the "Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002". The bill covers a very wide range of programs and activities across the Department, including many different programs within the Office of Housing. We have carefully reviewed each provision contained in the bill, and I am grateful for this opportunity to provide you with our thoughts on the sections of this important piece of legislation. Because you have also addressed a number of specific questions about FHA programs in your letter of invitation, I will combine my answers to those questions with comments on the corresponding sections of the bill. I have organized my comments by program area.

FHA Single-Family Insurance Programs

To begin with FHA's basic Section 203(b) home mortgage insurance program and the Mutual Mortgage Insurance (MMI) Fund: as you know, the President and the Secretary have made promoting homeownership, especially for minority households, a cornerstone of domestic policy. We are very proud of FHA's success in promoting homeownership. About 80 percent of our home purchase mortgages serve first-time homebuyers and about 35 percent serve minority households. The national homeownership rate, and the minority homeownership rate, both set new records last year.

The MMI Fund was determined to have an economic value of $18.5 billion at the end of FY2001, with a capital ratio of 3.75%. FHA's volume of business this year is running substantially in excess of expectations. Indeed, through the first six months of the year we have insured over $81 billion of single-family mortgages. We are assessing the need to seek an increase in our current commitment limitation of $160 billion for the MMI Fund for the current fiscal year. Having been personally involved in developing the legislation that put FHA on an actuarially sound basis some 12 years ago – as was Chairwoman Roukema and ranking member Frank - I am very pleased to report this information to you.

Of course, the MMI Fund net worth, which estimates future receipts, liabilities, and cash on hand, has attracted a number of proposals to spend the reserves, for example to divert funds into a new "National Housing Trust Fund" for purposes well beyond the homeownership goals of the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund. We think these proposals are ill-advised, and they misconstrue the nature of the MMI Fund.

The creation of the MMI capital reserve was a fundamental goal of the Cranston - Gonzales National Affordable Housing Act of 1990 which was intended to forestall any taxpayer bailout of the FHA, as had just been required for the savings and loan industry. While all Federal credit programs are required to budget for anticipated losses, under the Credit Reform Act of 1990, the MMI Fund was specifically required to generate additional revenue to be held as a special reserve against potential losses. The Cranston-Gonzales legislation created a kind of "lock-box" for funds that would be available to meet any contingency, so that general revenues in the Treasury would never be needed to meet FHA obligations. To generate the funds needed for this capital reserve, FHA suspended the payment of distributive shares to borrowers and raised insurance premiums substantially.

Since 1990, FHA has gradually built up its reserves year by year. This annual surplus has been counted in the overall Federal budget as an offsetting receipt, and has helped reduce the deficit. Because this revenue was previously counted as a receipt, any legislation that proposes to expend it will be counted as new spending, just as if funds were being appropriated directly out of the Treasury. There is no budgetary magic to raiding this "lock box"; instead there is a budgetary outlay. Moreover, using the MMI Fund reserves will vitiate FHA's ability to meet the basic goal of the Cranston-Gonzales Act of making the MMI Fund actuarially sound.

FHA was able to reduce single-family premiums substantially last year, and make homeownership more affordable for more families, in line with our fundamental public policy purpose. We have also been looking at the possibility of reinstituting the payment of distributive shares. However, it is clear that any such policy will be procedurally complex, and we are not proposing it at this time.

The Housing Affordability for Americans Act of 2002 contains several provisions that would improve FHA's ability to operate our core single-family home mortgage insurance programs. Section 221 would make permanent a pilot designed to streamline and simplify the FHA downpayment program. Secretary Martinez supported this proposal during his testimony before the House Appropriations Subcommittee last month. This downpayment simplification calculation has proven to be a successful program modification. The procedure reduces the number of steps involved in the calculation of the FHA single-family mortgage amounts, and thereby has eliminated the confusion experienced by many buyers, brokers, and lenders. Further, this existing statutory authority has reduced the costs associated with closing an FHA insured mortgage. Ultimately, the simplification has increased homeownership opportunities for low- and moderate-income families.

Similarly, Section 227 should facilitate the Department's ability to effectuate another legislative priority. During the FY2002 budget process, the Department requested and received authority to insure hybrid Adjustable Rate Mortgages (ARMs). Our work to implement that authority is continuing. The Department's position is that FHA's hybrid ARM should approximate the conventional hybrid ARM and its benefits as closely as possible subject to preserving sound underwriting policies and protections for FHA borrowers and the MMI Fund. Section 227 supports that end by allowing the Department greater flexibility in the design of regulations that will govern the initial rate adjustment at the end of the fixed rate period. The Department appreciates the efforts by Rep. Bob Ney and other Members of this Committee in supporting the permanent extension of this provision.

Sections 229-231 are consistent with recent Department actions to strengthen our Section 203(k) rehabilitation mortgage insurance program and our nonprofit partnerships. In 1996, the Office of Housing issued Mortgagee Letter 96-59, placing a moratorium on investor participation in the 203(k) program. Investors have not been allowed to participate in the program since the issuance of this Mortgagee Letter. The moratorium still stands. We have no plans to modify the Letter and have no objection to Section 229.

Similarly, Section 230 regarding rehabilitation loan advances is also consistent with Departmental action. FHA Mortgagee Letter 00-25 states, "mortgagees are fully responsible for authorizing draw inspections, managing the rehabilitation escrow account, and approving the associated draws for the account." The Letter also requires consultants to be chosen from the FHA 203(k) Consultant Roster and permits consultants to perform the inspections on the mortgagee's behalf. The Department has a number of technical questions regarding this provision and looks forward to working with the Committee to ensure that mortgagees are held appropriately responsible.

Section 231 would require nonprofits to be approved 501(c)(3) organizations and certify annually to the Department its understanding of HUD guidelines. In January 2002, the Office of Housing issued Mortgagee Letter 02-01, establishing new requirements for nonprofits seeking FHA-approval. Nonprofits must now have, among other requirements, two years 501(c)(3) IRS tax-exempt status and a minimum of two consecutive years – within the last 5 years – of housing development experience. Approved nonprofits have until September 30, 2002 to demonstrate their compliance with the new requirements. The Office of Housing supports Section 231 to strengthen its existing guidance. It will help us prevent a recurrence of the 1998-1999 Section 203(k) fraud problem in New York City, where a number of nonprofits purchased small multi-unit buildings in Harlem and Brooklyn intending to have them rehabilitated for owner-occupancy. The knowledgeable and experienced Commissioner of New York City's Department of Housing Preservation and Development said that she had never heard of 25 of the nonprofits that bought these homes; she had only heard of two. This fraud will cost the taxpayers some $268 million, and will cost the citizens of New York City another $125 million.

Sections 222-224 contain proposals to provide special opportunities for teachers and public safety officers. Section 223 would give the Secretary authority to discount HUD-owned, single-family properties by 50% to qualified teachers and public safety officers. The Department certainly does not object to such a program; indeed, the Secretary already has this authority and has exercised it. The Department's Officer/Teacher Next Door Program currently allows teachers and police officers to purchase homes at a 50% discount in designated revitalization areas, subject to a three-year owner occupancy requirement. During a Fiscal Year 2001 audit of the program, the Office of the Inspector General uncovered a significant number of violations of the program rules by officer participants. In May 2001, the Department temporarily suspended sales under the program and instituted enhanced management controls. A recent IG audit of sales closed after the program resumed in August 2001 did not identify any new program violations. The Department is currently working on a proposed rule to include these program controls.

Sections 222 and 224 both aim to reduce downpayment requirements for public safety officers, while Section 222 also includes teachers among those who will benefit. In regard to both provisions, it is important to note that the Office of Housing has recently made significant changes to its programs to reduce downpayment costs substantially for all buyers of FHA insured properties. These changes include the reduction of insurance premium rates by 33 percent, along with the Downpayment Simplification previously mentioned. One observation the Department would make with regard to these provisions is that a number of other occupational groups have expressed a similar interest in reduced downpayments.

In addition, it may be more appropriate to pursue these initiatives within the American Dream Downpayment Fund, as proposed by the President and funded by Congress last year. The American Dream Downpayment Fund will reduce the barrier that downpayments frequently pose to homeownership, for all low- and moderate-income families. On behalf of the Administration, I want to thank Rep. Mike Rogers and other Members of Congress for introducing H.R. 4446 to authorize this program.

I would also mention that the Department's Office of Policy Development and Research is in the process of studying the impact of this type of program, as required by Congress. We believe that it would be prudent to wait until the results of this study are available before making any commitment to such an initiative.

Section 228, which would establish a uniform national loan limit for Home Equity Conversion Mortgages (HECMs), also concerns an issue that is currently part of an internal analysis by the Office of Policy Development and Research. As mandated by the American Homeownership and Economic Opportunity Act of 2000, the Department is conducting an actuarial analysis on the impact of this provision. We will provide the Subcommittee with comments and recommendations when this study has been finalized.

FHA Single-Family REO

The bill also contains several provisions concerning FHA's single-family inventory of foreclosed homes, and the Committee has asked about our REO activities. Since the introduction of the Management and Marketing contracts in March of 1999, the Department has greatly improved its REO disposition. As of March 2002, the inventory of HUD-owned homes is at its lowest level since 1996 - 28,270, compared to a March 1999 inventory of 41,747. Moreover, the inventory has been stable during the recession, instead of rising as has been typical in the past. Currently, properties remain in inventory an average of 183 days, compared to 221 days in March 1999, and losses per claim have been reduced from 39 cents to 29 cents on the dollar. The loss rate is at its lowest point in at least 20 years.

FHA sold 66,415 single-family homes during FY 2001. About 60 percent of these sales were to owner-occupants, helping serve FHA's basic purpose of promoting homeownership. Another 30 percent are sales to investors, and the remainder – slightly less than 10 percent - goes to local governments and nonprofit organizations.

FHA currently offers discounts to HUD-approved nonprofit organizations on the purchase of REO. Properties newly acquired by HUD are initially offered to nonprofit organizations on a limited competitive basis, which excludes investors and owner occupants, for up to 10 business days. FHA offers properties to nonprofits for an additional five days of limited competition that does include owner occupants but excludes investors. After these periods, FHA opens bids on properties to the general public, but nonprofit groups may bid and still receive sales discounts. These discounts are factored into a sale after the highest bids are calculated.

FHA has two primary initiatives underway associated with its property disposition program. We have begun a major review of our Asset Control Area (ACA) program, following a report of program deficiencies by the HUD Office of Inspector General in a recent audit. We are planning to build stronger controls into the ACA program. During that review, which will take 4-6 months, we will let current ACA agreements expire. Our ACA partners can, however, continue to rehabilitate and sell the properties they have already acquired from HUD, and we believe that most if not all ACA partners have an inventory of properties that will not be exhausted during the review. This program, with proper controls in place, can provide an effective role for nonprofit groups, and local governments, in HUD's property disposition.

A second initiative is HUD's Accelerated Claims Demonstration Program. This program, announced in a Federal Register Notice on February 5th, utilizes current statutory authority for HUD to buy seriously defaulted loans that cannot be addressed through FHA's loss mitigation program, and sell these loans to the private sector for disposition. This program is expected to begin in the fourth quarter of this fiscal year. Considering both of these initiatives, it does not appear that additional statutory authority related to property disposition is required at this time.

Partly for these reasons, we see no need for Section 225 of this bill, which would require HUD to use the Department of Agriculture's Rural Housing Services Center as an additional resource for servicing single-family, HUD-held mortgages. We believe that this requirement is unnecessary and indeed would be counterproductive. Presently, HUD's National Servicing Center (NSC) in Oklahoma services four types of secretary-held loans, each with unique characteristics and servicing requirements. In particular, NSC services 963 reverse equity (HECM) loans. For this loan type, the Department makes monthly payments to the borrowers rather than receiving income from them. The daily payment process is complex and time sensitive. Additionally, NSC services second mortgages generated through loss mitigation advances, and discounted sales to officers and teachers in HUD's Officer Next Door/Teacher Next Door programs. Because these mortgages carry no interest and require no monthly payments, servicing activity is generally limited to processing subordinations and payoffs. All of these mortgage types are unique to HUD. The Rural Housing Service has no similar programs and no experience in servicing such loans. NSC is doing an excellent job managing their unique mortgage servicing requirements. It is unclear that there is a benefit or need to outsource the servicing of these loans.

FHA Multifamily Insurance Programs

As the members of this Subcommittee know, FHA's basic multifamily insurance program is Section 221(d)(4). This program has required a credit subsidy since Credit Reform was enacted in 1990. Three times in the last eight years, the program was closed down because the available credit subsidy was exhausted. To prevent further closures and place the program on a break-even basis, the Department raised the premium from 50 basis points to 80 basis points for FY 2002. Many in the industry, and some Members of Congress, were concerned that the program would be hamstrung by this increase. That has not happened. In the first six months of the fiscal year, FHA has insured almost $1.5 billion worth of Section 221(d)(4) projects, compared to less than $1.1 billion during the same period a year ago. Moreover, with the 25 percent increase in mortgage limits that was proposed by the Secretary and enacted by Congress, we are seeing applications from high-cost metropolitan area that have not participated in the program in years – the Twin Cities, Philadelphia, Newark, Baltimore, here in Washington, and Austin.

In addition, we have conducted the first systematic re-analysis of the premium and credit subsidy since Credit Reform was enacted. We have concluded that Section 221(d)(4) can be operated on a break-even basis at a much lower premium – 57 basis points. The President's Budget contains an announcement of this premium reduction, effective in October, at the beginning of FY 2003. We are also reducing either the premium or the credit subsidy for nearly every other multifamily program.

This summary of FHA's multifamily mortgage insurance programs provides background for your consideration of Sections 201 and 202 in the legislation. They address the question of who should be served by the programs. FHA generally serves moderate-income renters. Most of the projects that FHA insures are affordable to families in the lower half of the income distribution, and almost half are in underserved areas. These are important markets; these families and these communities need FHA.

Section 201 proposes to index the FHA multifamily mortgage limits. As members of this Subcommittee certainly know, Congress approved indexing the mortgage limits in the Section 203(b) single-family mortgage insurance program several years ago. This provision has enabled FHA to keep pace with inflation and changing economic conditions as it serves young, first-time homebuyers. Indexing the multifamily limits should likewise prove to be more responsive to market conditions and to the needs of families seeking moderately priced rental housing. Clearly, annual adjustments provide a better way to compensate for increased costs than by providing periodic dollar increases. When Congress raised the limits last year by 25 percent, at the request of Secretary Martinez, this was the first increase since 1992, and represented a delayed catch-up for the inflation that occurred between 1992 and 2001; during those years, FHA was progressively less able to serve moderate-income renters.

Section 202 proposes to increase the maximum mortgage limits in areas with very high housing costs by 30 percent above the amounts allowed under current law. It also proposes to increase the amount by which the Secretary, on a case-by-case basis, may increase the maximum mortgage amount. The Department would prefer to analyze the data resulting from our experience with the new limits that Congress enacted last year and the future effects of the indexing contained in Section 201 before proceeding with any additional high housing cost authority beyond that which already exists.

FHA Insurance for Nursing Homes and Hospitals

The Housing Affordability for America Act of 2002 contains several provisions relating to FHA's insurance programs for nursing homes and hospitals. Section 206 seeks to provide a more flexible procedure with respect to the Certificate of Need (CON) for hospitals, which is somewhat similar to an Administration proposal that was not enacted last year. There is a technical problem with the language of Section 206 as drafted. The Section states that HUD should work "in conjunction with" the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). HUD currently has a contractual agreement with HHS with respect to Section 242, the hospital mortgage insurance program. Under this agreement, both HHS salaries and expenses are paid from the FHA General Insurance Fund. This agreement has worked well for several years. Because of the agreement, the language should be modified to read "in consultation with," to avoid any contractual disputes between HUD and HHS in the future. There is no similar agreement between HUD and HHS with respect to the Section 232 nursing homes mortgage insurance program, and we do not believe that the language is necessary or desirable for that program. HUD operates the nursing home program effectively without formal participation by HHS.

Sections 203-205 amend the definition of the FHA health care and assisted living programs so as to take FHA into new lines of business. Sections 203 and 204 change the definitions in Section 232 and Section 242, respectively, to include community health centers, medical practice facilities, and group practice facilities, and Section 205 permits insurance to refinance these facilities. These provisions raise a number of questions and require additional analysis before the Department can provide a definitive position. The language creates an overlap between Section 232 and Section 242, as well as Title XI, so that these new lines of business can be insured under either program. The programs are now managed separately within the Office of Housing, and the overlap could possibly complicate our ability to run both programs. More fundamentally, these proposals would appear to require FHA to undertake new insurance activities on unfamiliar products, beyond our current expertise and capacity. FHA primarily insures financing for housing. To expand our portfolio to include businesses that provide no shelter could have long-term consequences to the FHA GI Fund. We are now experiencing an increasing number of claims in the Section 232 nursing home program, and just last week had the first default in the Section 242 hospital program in three years. It is particularly relevant that the expansion of nursing homes into new business activities during the 1990s led to a significant number of defaults and bankruptcies.

Section 301 addresses part of a well-known policy concern. It would authorize the use of uncommitted, unobligated Assisted Living Conversion Program funds in the Section 202 program for use in a modernization demonstration program for Section 236 elderly housing. The Section 236 elderly housing portfolio is a fraction of the Section 236 program - about 90,000 units, less than one-third of the units in the entire Section 236 portfolio of over 330,000 units nationwide. The elderly housing projects are generally in good physical condition; only 25 projects out of 556 have REAC physical inspection scores of less than 60, less than 5 percent of the inventory. No projects have REAC scores less than 30. We certainly recognize that there is some need for capital improvements among the entire older insured subsidized FHA multifamily portfolio. We have been working with the multifamily industry over the last two years, in an effort to modernize and restructure the Section 236 housing portfolio. The work is being conducted within the framework of preserving these projects for continued use within the affordable multifamily housing stock. The general restructuring technique involves a sale of the project to a new owner who physically modernizes the project and maintains its affordability for the term of the mortgage plus five years, generally a total of 15 years. In most cases, the financing technique utilizes new mortgages supported by the continuation of Section 8 rental assistance and the remaining Section 236 interest reduction payments. The owner's capital is provided through the Low Income Housing Tax Credit (LIHTC). To date, we have succeeded in restructuring over 100 of these projects. We do not believe that Section 301 is necessary for this effort. We also are concerned that the Section 202 Assisted Living Conversion program might be adversely affected. The program has not yet reached the scale envisioned in past appropriations, and the unexpended funds have been carried forward. But it is our experience that new programs do take time to get underway, and we do not believe it is prudent to anticipate that Section 202 Assisted Living Conversion funds would be available.

With regard to Section 303, as you know, the President and the Secretary are strongly committed to ensuring that religious organizations have the same opportunities as any other participant in the Section 202/811 programs, which are our largest programs in terms of participation by faith-based organizations. These organizations now can be sponsors of these projects, and certainly religious organizations have been very active in the Section 202 program since its creation in 1959. In recent years, they have accounted for approximately 40% of the funding that Congress appropriates for these programs. While we applaud the purpose of Section 303, the Department will need to thoroughly

SUBJECT: VETERANS AFFAIRS Report on HR1541 Vietnam Veterans Children's Disability Act

DEADLINE: COB Thursday, April 18, 2002

In accordance with OMB Circular A-19, OMB requests the views of your agency on the above subject before advising on its relationship to the program of the President. Please advise us if this item will affect direct spending or receipts for purposes of the "Pay-As-You-Go" provisions of Title XIII of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

COMMENTS: This letter states VA's support for the provisions of H.R. 1541 which would authorize VA to provide benefits to the children of veterans for their diseases that may be associated with their parents' herbicide exposure in active military service. However, VA states that it does not support the bill's provision that would direct VA to provide these benefits for acute myelogenous leukemia (AML) because a recent NAS report indicates that current scientific evidence does not show an association between parental herbicide exposure and the occurrence of AML in the children of exposed parents.

The Honorable Christopher H. Smith
Chairman
Committee on Veterans' Affairs
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

As requested by the Honorable Lane Evans, Ranking Democratic Member, I am pleased to provide the Committee the views of the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) on H.R. 1541, 107th Congress, the "Vietnam Veterans Children's Disability Act." The bill would add a new subchapter to chapter 18 of title 38, United States Code, authorizing VA to provide certain benefits to veterans' children who have diseases associated with the veterans' exposure to herbicide agents in active service.

VA supports H.R. 1541 insofar as it would authorize VA to provide benefits to veterans' children having diseases associated with parental exposure to herbicide agents in service. However, VA does not support the provision of this legislation directing VA to provide such benefits for acute myelogenous leukemia (AML). As explained below, a recent report of the National Academy of Sciences indicates that current scientific evidence does not indicate an association between parental herbicide exposure and the occurrence of AML in the children of exposed parents.

Although VA supports the objectives of H.R. 1541 with the one exception noted above, we believe that a number of revisions to this bill are necessary to ensure clarity and consistency with other VA benefit programs. Accordingly, we offer a number of recommended changes and an explanation of the concerns underlying each recommendation.

Provisions of H.R. 1541

Section 2 of H.R. 1541 would add a new subchapter IV, comprising five new statutory sections, to chapter 18 of title 38, United States Code. Under this new subchapter, VA would be authorized to provide health care, vocational training, and a monetary allowance to an "eligible child" of a veteran for disability resulting from any disease which VA determines is associated with parental exposure to an herbicide agent prior to the child's conception. Section 1831 of title 38, as added by this bill, would define the term "eligible child" to refer to an compensation under 38 U.S.C. § 1110 for the same disability or disability pension under 38 U.S.C. § 1521.

Based on the foregoing concerns, we recommend adding the following provisions to H.R. 1541:

> __ NONDUPLICATION OF BENEFITS.--Section 1824(a) is amended to read as follows--
> "(a) Monetary Allowance--(1) In the case of an eligible child under subchapter II of this chapter whose only covered birth defect is spina bifida, a monetary allowance shall be paid only under subchapter I of this chapter.
> "(2) In the case of an eligible child under subchapter II of this chapter who has spina bifida and one or more additional covered birth defects, a monetary allowance shall be paid only under subchapter II of this chapter.
> "(3) In the case of an eligible child who has two or more covered diseases under subchapter IV of this chapter or who has one or more covered diseases under subchapter IV of this chapter and one or more birth defects covered by subchapter I or II of this chapter, a single monetary allowance shall be paid under subchapter IV of this chapter. The amount of the monthly allowance paid to such child under subchapter IV of this chapter shall be based on the degree of disability suffered by the child concerned as the result of all the child's diseases or defects covered by this chapter.
> "(4) An individual may not receive both a monetary allowance for disability under this chapter and either compensation under section 1110 of this title for the same disability or pension under section 1521 of this title.".
> __ CONFORMING AMENDMENT.--Section 1823(a) is amended by striking "Notwithstanding" and inserting "Except as provided in section 1824(a)(4) of this title, and notwithstanding".

Consistent with the principle that an eligible child should be paid a single monetary allowance for all disability due to a covered condition or conditions, we recommend revising the text of 38 U.S.C. 1835(c)(3) appearing in H.R. 1541 to read as follows:

> "(3) In determining the degree of an eligible child's disability for purposes of this section, the Secretary shall take into account any secondary disability which results from a covered disease."

This language would clarify that a single monetary allowance, rather than cumulative allowances, would be paid for disability due to a covered disease and any disability associated with a secondary condition.

Monetary Allowance for Disability Resulting from Treatment

Section 1835(c)(3) would authorize benefits for "any disability resulting from treatment" for a disease associated with parental herbicide exposure. We believe this reference to disability resulting from treatment should be deleted. As suggested by the Supreme Court's analysis of similar language in Brown v. Gardner, 513 U.S. 115 (1994), this language would likely be construed broadly to permit payment for all consequences of treatment by VA or any other health-care provider. For example, this provision could be construed to authorize VA payment for disability caused solely by the negligence of non-VA physicians, even if such disability bears no relation to the patient's covered disease except that it was incurred while the patient was receiving treatment for a covered disease. We believe that such a broad rule would be beyond the intended scope of H.R. 1541. Further, as explained below, we believe the reference to disability resulting from treatment for a covered disease is unnecessary.

We believe the reference in H.R. 1541 to disability resulting from treatment may be based on the concern that accepted forms of treatment for certain diseases may be invasive and productive of disability distinct from the symptoms of the underlying condition. For example, some patients who receive bone marrow transplants as treatment for AML may incur a condition known as "graft vs. host disease" requiring ongoing treatment. We believe the ordinary consequences of treatment for a covered disease may reasonably be considered as a "secondary condition" resulting from the covered disease, in a manner analogous to grants of "secondary service connection" for veterans' conditions under 38 C.F.R. § 3.310. See, e.g., Hayes v. Brown, 4 Vet. App. 353, 354 (1993) (reflecting grant of service connection for burn scar and hypothyroidism secondary to radiation therapy). Inasmuch as 38 U.S.C. § 1835(c)(3) would authorize compensation for "secondary disability", there is no need for specific reference to disability resulting from treatment, which could be misconstrued to provide broader liability for any consequences of medical treatment.

Subchapter Heading

We recommend that the word "Vietnam" be deleted from the heading of subchapter IV appearing in H.R. 1541, because this legislation would also apply to children of veterans other than Vietnam veterans. For similar reasons, it may be appropriate to revise the heading of chapter 18.

Benefits for Spina Bifida in Children of Other than Vietnam Veterans Who Were Exposed To Herbicide Agents in Service

VA supports the provisions of H.R. 1541 authorizing benefits for covered diseases occurring in children of veterans other than Vietnam veterans who were exposed to herbicide agents in service. We note, however, that this legislation may appear to create an inequity to the extent that benefits could not be provided for spina bifida occurring in children of such veterans, although the provision of benefits for children suffering from spina bifida is based on the association between that condition and parental exposure to herbicides. To ensure consistency and fairness in the provision of benefits for disabilities associated with exposure to herbicide agents, we recommend that subchapter I of chapter 18 of title 38, United States Code, be amended to provide benefits for spina bifida occurring in children of veterans other than Vietnam veterans who were exposed to herbicide agents in service. This may be accomplished by replacing the phrase "child of a Vietnam veteran" in 38 U.S.C. §§ 1803(a), 1804(a), and 1805(a) with the phrase "eligible child"; and by adding a provision defining "eligible child", for purposes of subchapter I, in terms similar to those we have proposed above with respect to the definitional provisions of subchapter IV contained in H.R. 1541.

individual, regardless of age or marital status, who (A) is the natural child of a Vietnam veteran or is the natural child of a veteran who was exposed to herbicides during active military, naval, or air service before the child was conceived and (B) who has one or more covered diseases.

Section 1832(a) of title 38, as added by this bill, would direct VA to identify by regulation "diseases occurring in children that have a positive association with parental exposure to an herbicide agent before the date on which the child was conceived." Section 1832(b) would direct VA to include AML among the diseases identified in such regulations.

Sections 1833 and 1834 of title 38, as added by this bill, would authorize VA to provide health care and vocational training to an eligible child in essentially the same manner as is currently authorized under chapter 18 for certain Vietnam veterans' children born with spina bifida or another covered birth defect.

Section 1835 of title 38, as added by this bill, would authorize VA to pay a monetary allowance to an eligible child for disability resulting from a covered disease. As with spina bifida and other covered birth defects, the amount of the monetary allowance would be based on each child's level of disability, in accordance with a schedule of disability ratings to be established for this purpose. The monthly amount of the monetary allowance paid to an eligible child under this bill could be no less than the lowest monthly amount authorized by section 401 of the Veterans Benefits and Health Care Improvement Act of 2000 for disability due to covered birth defects other than spina bifida, and no greater than the highest monthly amount authorized by that Act. Unlike the existing provisions of law regarding monetary allowances for spina bifida and other covered birth defects, however, this bill would place no limit on the number of levels of monetary allowance that VA may establish between the highest and lowest levels prescribed.

Section 1835(c)(2), as added by this bill, would provide that VA may discontinue payment of a monetary allowance six months after the child has fully recovered from the disability. Section 1835(c)(3) would provide that benefits may be paid for any secondary disability that results from any disability associated with herbicide exposure or any disability resulting from treatment for such disability.

Authority to Provide Benefits to Veterans' Children

The Agent Orange Act of 1991 established procedures for identifying diseases associated with exposure to herbicide agents and for providing benefits to certain veterans who incur such diseases. Pursuant to that Act, the Institute of Medicine (IOM) of the National Academy of Sciences has, since 1993, provided VA with biennial reports summarizing the scientific and medical evidence concerning the health effects of exposure to herbicide agents. In its 1996 report, "Veterans and Agent Orange: Update 1996," the IOM concluded that there was "limited/suggestive" evidence of an association between exposure to herbicide agents and the occurrence of spina bifida in the children of exposed individuals. Because VA did not have authority to provide benefits for disability occurring in the children of veterans, we sought legislative authority to provide health care, vocational training, and a monetary allowance to children of Vietnam veterans born with spina bifida. In September 1996, Congress enacted Pub. L. No. 104-204, section 421(b) of which provided the authority to provide such benefits.

In October 1998, VA's Environmental Epidemiology Service released a study that detected a statistically significant increase in the occurrence of birth defects among the children of female Vietnam veterans. The increased occurrence of birth defects was not specifically linked to herbicide exposure. Based on those findings, VA sought legislative authority to provide benefits to the children of female Vietnam veterans born with birth defects found to be associated with the service of female veterans in the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era. In December 2000, Congress provided such authority in section 401 of the Veterans Benefits and Health Care Improvement Act of 2000.

In view of the ongoing evolution of scientific and medical knowledge concerning the health effects of exposure to herbicide agents, and the continuing efforts of the IOM and VA to identify such health effects, it is possible that diseases in children will be found to be associated with parental exposure to herbicide agents. We believe it would be appropriate, and consistent with the purposes of the above-referenced statutes concerning spina bifida and other birth defects, to authorize VA to provide benefits to the children of veterans for their diseases that may be associated with their parents' exposure to herbicide agents in active military, naval, or air service. H.R. 1541 would obviate the need for VA to seek specific legislative authorization in the future to pay benefits for any diseases as to which an association is detected.

Acute Myelogenous Leukemia

As noted above, H.R. 1541 would add a provision at 38 U.S.C. § 1832(b) requiring VA to issue a regulation identifying AML as a "covered disease" for purposes of providing benefits to the children of veterans exposed to herbicides during service. VA does not support this provision because current scientific evidence does not demonstrate a positive association between parental exposure to an herbicide agent and the occurrence of AML in children conceived after such exposure.

On April 19, 2001, the IOM released a report concluding that there was "limited/suggestive" evidence of an association between exposure to herbicides and the occurrence of AML in the children of exposed individuals. This conclusion was based in part upon a study by the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare (AIHW), which detected a more than four-fold increase in the risk of AML among the children of Australian Vietnam veterans. The IOM considered this study significant because the increased risk was statistically significant and of sufficiently large magnitude as to reduce the likelihood that the increase was due to other confounding factors. After the IOM released its April 2001 report, however, the AIHW announced that it had detected an error in its analysis concerning AML and that the corrected data no longer indicated that the children of Vietnam veterans face a significantly greater risk of AML than children in the general population. In view of this announcement, VA asked the IOM to conduct a further assessment of the scientific evidence concerning the possible association between parental herbicide exposure and the occurrence of AML in children.

On February 27, 2002, the IOM released its report, entitled "Veterans and Agent Orange: Herbicide/Dioxin Exposure and Acute Myelogenous Leukemia in the Children of Vietnam Veterans." In this report, the IOM concludes that there is "inadequate/insufficient evidence to determine whether an association exists" between parental herbicide exposure and the occurrence of AML in children. The finding of "inadequate/insufficient evidence" reflects the IOM's conclusion that the available studies are of insufficient quality, consistency, or statistical power to permit a conclusion regarding the presence or absence of an association. The IOM stated that a revised study issued by the AIHW in October 2001 detected a slight excess of AML cases in the children of Vietnam veterans, but the increase was not statistically significant. The IOM reviewed and discussed a number of other scientific studies, including two that were not previously considered in its April 2001 report, and concluded that current scientific evidence is insufficient to permit a determination as to whether an association exists between parental herbicide exposure and the occurrence of AML in children.

I am confident that the IOM has thoroughly and thoughtfully evaluated the evidence on this issue. In view of the analysis stated in the IOM's February 2002 report, current scientific evidence does not support a conclusion that there is a positive association between parental herbicide exposure and the occurrence of AML in children. Accordingly, VA does not support the proposal in H.R. 1541 to provide benefits for AML in the children of veterans exposed to herbicides in service.

Recommended Changes

I am attaching a summary of our recommended changes to this bill, which we believe are necessary to ensure the fair and efficient administration of the benefits it contemplates.

Costs

VA estimates that the benefit costs of paying a monetary allowance for AML under H.R. 1541 would be $12.7 million over the first five years and $36.8 million over the first ten years. VA further estimates that the cost of furnishing medical care for disability associated with AML or its treatment would be $81.4 million over the first five years and $164.8 million over the first ten years.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that there is no objection to the submission of this report from the standpoint of the Administration's program.

Sincerely,

Anthony J. Principi

Recommended Changes to H.R. 1541

Definition of "Eligible Child"

Section 1831(1)(A) of title 38, as added by H.R. 1541, would define "eligible child", for purposes of new subchapter IV, as the natural child of either (i) a Vietnam veteran, or (ii) a veteran other than a Vietnam veteran who was exposed before the child was conceived to herbicides during active military, naval, or air service. Accordingly, with respect to the children of Vietnam veterans, this definition would not require that the veteran's presumed exposure to herbicides have occurred prior to the child's conception. We note that 38 U.S.C. § 1821(1), as added by section 401 of Pub. L. No. 106-419, defines the term "child", for purposes of chapter 18, to refer to an individual who is the natural child of a Vietnam veteran and who was conceived after the date on which the veteran first entered the Republic of Vietnam during the Vietnam era. As a technical matter, however, it is not clear that the date-of-conception limitation in section 1821(1) would govern the definition of "eligible child" under section 1831(1)(A). Inasmuch as the terms "eligible child" and "natural child" in section 1831(1)(A) encompass children of certain non-Vietnam veterans, they do not appear to incorporate the more limited definition of "child" in section 1821(1). Further, because the definition of "eligible child" in section 1831(1)(A)(i) reiterates the "natural child" requirement, but not the date-of-conception requirement, contained in section 1821(1), it may be interpreted as reflecting an intent to omit any date-of-conception limitation.

To address this concern, we recommend revising the text of section 1831(1) appearing in H.R. 1541 to read as follows:

> "(1) The term 'eligible child' means an individual, regardless of age or marital status, who--
> "(A) is either--
> "(i) a child as defined in section 1821(1) of this title; or
>
> "(ii) the natural child of a veteran other than a Vietnam veteran who, as determined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, was exposed before the child was conceived to an herbicide agent during active military, naval, or air service; and
> "(B) has one or more covered diseases."

This language would be consistent the definitional provisions of 38 U.S.C. § 1821(1), as added by Pub. L. No. 106-419. Our proposed language also substitutes the phrase "herbicide agent" for "herbicides" to conform to the terminology used in 38 U.S.C. § 1832(a) as stated in H.R. 1541 as well as the terminology currently used in 38 U.S.C. § 1116.

Definitions of "Herbicide Agent" and "Positive Association"

We recommend revising 38 U.S.C. § 1831 to include definitions of "herbicide agent" and "positive association" corresponding to the definitions stated in 38 U.S.C. § 1116(a)(4) and (b)(3), respectively. H.R. 1541 would employ those terms in 38 U.S.C. § 1832 in a manner apparently intended to mirror their use in 38 U.S.C. § 1116. However, the definitions stated in section 1116(a)(4) and (b)(3) would not expressly govern the interpretation of 38 U.S.C. § 1832(a), and H.R. 1541 would provide no separate definition in chapter 18. Accordingly, we recommend adding the following subsections to 38 U.S.C. § 1831:

> "(3) The term 'herbicide agent' has the same meaning stated in section 1116(a)(4) of this title.
> "(4) The term "positive association" has the same meaning as specified in section 1116(b)(3) of this title."

Duty to Issue Regulations

Section 1832(a) would state that, "[t]he Secretary shall by regulation identify diseases occurring in children that have a positive association with parental exposure to an herbicide agent before the date on which the child was conceived." Inasmuch as the statute does not specify when VA's duty to issue such regulations accrues, this section could be construed to require VA to issue such regulations following enactment of H.R. 1541, even if current evidence does not establish a positive association between parental herbicide exposure and any disease in children. We do not believe there is any reason to require VA to issue regulations stating only the negative proposition that no such associations are currently shown. Accordingly, we recommend this section be revised to read as follows:

> "Whenever the Secretary determines that there is a positive association between a disease occurring in children and parental exposure to an herbicide agent before the date on which the child was conceived, the Secretary shall provide by regulation that such disease shall be considered a 'covered disease' for purposes of this subchapter."

Effective Date of Regulations

We recommend adding a sentence at the end of 38 U.S.C. § 1832(a) in H.R. 1541 stating: "Such regulations shall be effective on the date of issuance." This would conform to the effective-date rule prescribed in 38 U.S.C. § 1116(c)(2) for regulations concerning veterans' diseases associated with exposure to herbicide agents.

Manifestation Periods

We recommend adding a provision to 38 U.S.C. § 1832 to specify that VA may prescribe time limits within which a covered disease must become manifest in order for benefits to be paid under new subchapter IV. We are unable to predict which diseases may be found to be associated with parental herbicide exposure. It is possible that such an association may be found for a disease that is not limited to onset during childhood, but which may become manifest many years or even decades following birth. In the event that sound scientific evidence were to indicate that a positive association exists for a particular disease having its onset during childhood, but not for the same disease if initially manifested at some later period, there would be no sound basis for providing benefits in the latter circumstance. We believe VA should have the authority to provide benefits only to the extent consistent with the prevailing scientific evidence. This principle is reflected in 38 U.S.C. § 1116(a)(1)(B), which authorizes VA to prescribe manifestation periods for veterans' diseases associated with herbicide exposure. Accordingly, we recommend adding the following new subsection (b) to 38 U.S.C. § 1832, in lieu of current subsection (b), which we do not support for reasons explained above:

> "(b) The Secretary may prescribe the time periods within which a covered disease must become manifest in order for benefits to be provided under this subchapter."

Intervening Causes

Under 38 U.S.C. § 1812(b)(2), VA may not provide benefits where a covered birth defect is shown by affirmative evidence to have resulted from a cause other than the mother's Vietnam service. In similar fashion, 38 U.S.C. § 1113 prohibits VA from granting service connection on a presumptive basis where there is affirmative evidence that an intercurrent injury or disease capable of causing the veteran's disability was suffered between the date of separation from service and the date of onset of the disability. For purposes of consistency with these provisions, and to prevent the provision of benefits in cases where a veteran's service did not result in disability to the veteran's child, we recommend adding the following new subsection to 38 U.S.C. § 1832 in H.R. 1541:

> "(c) In any case where affirmative evidence establishes that a covered disease of an eligible child results from a cause other than the exposure of the child's parent to an herbicide agent during active military, naval, or air service, no benefits or assistance may be provided to the child under this subchapter."

Nonduplication of Benefits

As added by Pub. L. No. 106-419, 38 U.S.C. § 1824(a) prohibits an individual from receiving separate monetary allowances under subchapters I and II of chapter 18 for spina bifida and another covered birth defect. We believe it is necessary to include similar provisions specifying the criteria governing the payment of a monetary allowance to an individual who has both a covered disease under subchapter IV and a birth defect covered by subchapter I or II, or who has two or more covered diseases under subchapter IV.

The prohibition on paying separate monetary allowances under subchapters I and II is apparently based in part on the fact that spina bifida is itself a birth defect and that disability from two or more birth defects may be considered in the assignment of a single disability rating for birth defects under subchapter II. In contrast, because diseases covered under subchapter IV generally would not be considered to be birth defects, disability due to such diseases may be distinct from any disability covered by the monetary allowances authorized for spina bifida or other covered birth defects. At the same time, merely adding together the allowances that would be separately payable for two or more covered conditions may result in payment amounts disproportionate to the overall level of disability and disproportionate to compensation amounts paid to veterans with multiple disabilities under principles of combined disability ratings. We believe the goal of this bill should be to authorize payment of a monetary allowance based on the overall level of disability from all of an individual's covered diseases and birth defects. We believe this goal should also govern the payment of a monetary allowance to a child who has two or more covered diseases under subchapter IV.

To address this concern, we recommend adding a provision to 38 U.S.C. § 1824(a) specifying that, in the event that an eligible child has more than one covered disease under subchapter IV or has a covered disease under subchapter IV and a birth defect covered by subchapter I or II, a monetary allowance shall be paid under subchapter IV taking into account the combined effect of disability attributable to all of the child's diseases or birth defects covered by chapter 18. We believe the provisions of section 1835, as added by H.R. 1541, would allow VA to adopt procedures to determine the degree of disability resulting from more than one covered condition.

As a separate matter, it is possible that a child's disease associated with parental herbicide exposure may not arise until the child has reached adulthood. In such circumstances, it is possible that a child may have served on active duty in the Armed Forces of the United States and may be entitled to VA disability compensation or disability pension based on his or her own service. Consistent with the general prohibitions on duplication of benefits, we recommend adding a provision to 38 U.S.C. § 1824(a) stating that a child may not concurrently receive a monetary allowance for disability under chapter 18 and either disability

H. R. 1541

To amend title 38, United States Code, to provide the Secretary of V eterans Affairs authority to furnish certain benefits for certain diseases occu rring in children of Vietnam-era veterans upon a determination that such diseas es have a positive association with parental exposure to a herbicide agent.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

April 24, 2001

Mr. EVANS (for himself, Mr. REYES, and Ms. BROWN of Florida) introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs

A BILL

To amend title 38, United States Code, to provide the Secretary of V eterans Affairs authority to furnish certain benefits for certain diseases occu rring in children of Vietnam-era veterans upon a determination that such diseas es have a positive association with parental exposure to a herbicide agent.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Un ited States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the `Vietnam Veterans Children's Disability A ct'.

SEC. 2. AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE BENEFITS FOR CHILDREN OF VIETNAM VETERANS W ITH CERTAIN DISEASES ASSOCIATED WITH PARENTAL EXPOSURE TO HERBICIDE AGENTS.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO NEW CHAPTER 18- The amendments made by this section are made to chapter 18 of title 38, United States Code, as amended by section 4 01 of the Veterans Benefits and Health Care Improvement Act of 2000 (Public Law 106-419; 114 Stat. 1857), and take effect on--

(1) December 1, 2001 (the effective date of those amendments); or< /ul>

(2) if later, the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) BENEFITS FOR CERTAIN CHILDREN- (1) Chapter 18 of title 38, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subchapter:

`Sec. 1831. Definitions

In this subchapter:

`(i) a Vietnam veteran; or

`(ii) a veteran other than a Vietnam veteran who, as deter mined under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, was exposed before the chi ld was conceived to herbicides during active military, naval, or air service; a nd

`(B) has one or more covered diseases.

`(2) The term `covered disease' means a disease identified by the Secretary under section 1832 of this title.

`Sec. 1832. Covered diseases

`(a) IDENTIFICATION- The Secretary shall by regulation identify diseas es occurring in children that have a positive association with parental exposur e to an herbicide agent before the date on which the child was conceived.

`(b) DISEASES TO BE INCLUDED- The Secretary shall include acute myelog enous leukemia in the diseases identified under subsection (a).

`Sec. 1833. Health care

`(a) NEEDED CARE- The Secretary shall provide an eligible child such h ealth care as the Secretary determines is needed by the child for that child's covered diseases or any disability that is associated with those diseases.

`(b) AUTHORITY FOR CARE TO BE PROVIDED DIRECTLY OR BY CONTRACT- The Se cretary may provide health care under this section directly or by contract or o ther arrangement with a health care provider.

`(c) DEFINITIONS- For purposes of this section, the definitions in sec tion 1803(c) of this title shall apply with respect to the provision of health care under this section, except that for such purposes--

`(1) the reference to `specialized spina bifida clinic' in paragra ph (2) of that section shall be treated as a reference to a specialized clinic treating the disease concerned under this section; and

`(2) the reference to `vocational training under section 1804 of t his title' in paragraph (8) of that section shall be treated as a reference to vocational training under section 1834 of this title.

`Sec. 1834. Vocational training

`(a) AUTHORITY- The Secretary may provide a program of vocational trai ning to an eligible child if the Secretary determines that the achievement of a vocational goal by the child is reasonably feasible.

`(b) APPLICABLE PROVISIONS- Subsections (b) through (e) of section 180 4 of this title shall apply with respect to any program of vocational training provided under subsection (a).

`Sec. 1835. Monetary allowance

`(a) MONETARY ALLOWANCE- The Secretary shall pay a monthly allowance t o an eligible child for any disability resulting from a covered disease.

`(b) SCHEDULE FOR RATING DISABILITIES- (1) The amount of the monthly a llowance paid under this section shall be based on the degree of disability suf fered by the child concerned, as determined in accordance with a schedule for r ating disabilities resulting from covered diseases that is prescribed by the Se cretary.

`(2) In prescribing a schedule for rating disabilities for the purpose s of this section, the Secretary shall establish the levels of disability upon which the amount of the allowance provided by this section shall be based. The levels of disability established may take into account functional limitations, including limitations on cognition, communication, motor abilities, activities of daily living, and employability.

`(c) AMOUNT OF MONTHLY ALLOWANCE- (1) The Secretary shall prescribe th e amount of the monthly allowance paid under this section for each level of dis ability established in the schedule of rating disabilities prescribed under sub section (b), except that an allowance under this section--

`(A) may not be less than the amount in effect under section 1815(c)(1) of this title; and

`(B) may not be greater than the amount in effect under section 18 15(c)(4) of this title.

`(2)(A) Benefits under this subchapter may be discontinued six months after the child has recovered fully from the disability.

`(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term `fully recovered fro m the disability' means that no signs or symptoms of disability are present and no treatment for the disability is warranted.

`(3) Benefits under this subchapter may be paid for any secondary disability which results from any disability associated with exposure to a herb icide or any disability resulting from treatment for such disability.

`(d) INDEXING TO SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT INCREASES- Amounts paid under subsection (c) shall be subject to adjustment from time to time under section 5312 of this title.'.

(2) The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end the following:

`1832. Covered diseases.

`1833. Health care.

`1835. Monetary allowance.'.

(c) DEFINITION OF VIETNAM VETERAN- Section 1821(3)(A) of such title is amended by striking `subchapter I' and inserting `subchapters I and IV'.

According to our records, we have not received a signed certification from you on the form that is attached to this e-mail. The form relates to the Department of Justice's criminal investigation of the unauthorized disclosure last year of confidential government information concerning the blocking and freezing of the assets of the Global Relief Foundation, the Benevolence International Foundation, and the Holy Land Foundation. Please complete and sign the attached form and return it to Brent Greenfield in Room 160 1/2 no later than close of business Wednesday, April 24. If you have any questions or cannot complete the form in that time frame, please contact me at 6-7984.

As part of the certification, you are also asked to produce all official documents in your possession (including any e-mails and internal memoranda you have retained) that:

a) were created (or are dated) between September 11, 2001 and on or before September 30, 2001, and indicate that the Global Relief Foundation and/or the Benevolence International Foundation was being considered for inclusion on a list of organizations whose assets would be frozen by the United States government; or

b) were created (or are dated) on or before December 4, 2001, and indicate that the Holy Land Foundation was being considered for inclusion on a list of suspected terrorist fund-raising organizations or would otherwise have its assets blocked or frozen by the United States government; or

c) were created (or are dated) on or before December 14, 2001, and indicate that the Global Relief Foundation was to be searched or would have its assets frozen or blocked on or about December 14, 2001 or which discusses the expected date and time of any such action.

Thank you.
FYI, OMBGC (Matthew Schneider) requested that we hold-off clearing SSA positions on secs 301 and 302 on attorney fee payment system improvements until OMBGC has more time to consider the issues and possibly get additional information from SSA. I have relayed that message to SSA; they have alerted the subcommittee that they will not have positions on those provisions at the markup tomorow. Otherwise, the SSA positions on the provisions in HR 4070 were cleared with one modification: sec. 206(penalty for corrupt or forcible interference with administration of the SS Act) was cleared as a "do not oppose" rather than "support".

6:00 P.M.

April 30, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

Thank you for your letter of April 24, 2002, which seeks additional information concerning our efforts to respond to the Committee's March 27, 2002 letter of request to White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card. It appears there may have been some misunderstanding between your staff and mine, and I appreciate the opportunity to clarify our plans for compliance with the Committee's request.

At the conclusion of the staff-level meeting, we agreed to furnish the Committee with a letter stating our position on the Committee's request and our intentions with respect to response. That letter was sent to you on April 19, 2002. We did not understand that we were to provide a fixed timeframe for response, nor did we believe that the Committee was expecting to receive a statement of intention to withhold specific responsive information. Because the scope and content of the efforts that will ultimately be necessary to satisfy the Committee's needs remain somewhat uncertain, and because we do not yet know what, if any, responsive information we have, we are not in a position to estimate with confidence response dates or to take positions with respect to the disclosure of specific items of information.

That said, I am pleased to share with you information concerning the efforts we are making to identify information the Committee has requested and my necessarily tentative forecast of our initial response. Our work is already underway. We have made an initial request for information to all Assistants to the President, all Deputy Assistants to the President, and all Special Assistants to the President throughout the White House, regardless of the office in which they work. In addition, we have requested information from appropriate officials of the Office of the Vice President, the Council on Environmental Quality, the Office of Management and Budget, and the Office of the United States Trade Representative. We expect to receive responses to this initial request by May 17, 2002. Once we receive the responses, we will take additional steps to follow up and gather additional information as appropriate. Until we have had an opportunity to review the initial responses, I cannot say with certainty what additional steps, if any, may be necessary to obtain information you have requested. However, in general, I anticipate that the process of making follow-up requests and receiving the necessary responses will likely take approximately 3-4 weeks. I therefore hope to furnish responsive information to the Committee by the middle of June.

While we have expressed serious concerns to you with respect to your requests for information implicating the presidential appointment process and the NEPDG, we are not taking any categorical position at this time with respect to information that might fall within those categories. We expect to communicate with you further concerning those requests and hope to receive further guidance from the Committee concerning particular appointments on which we might focus our efforts and the factual predicate for believing that the work of the NEPDG, which merely issued a series of recommendations to the Congress, could shed any light on whether the government operated in an efficient and effective manner with respect to dealing with the collapse of Enron, which took place months after the NEPDG had been formally disbanded. With additional guidance, we will be better able to make sound judgments concerning the propriety of disclosure of particular information and the accommodations, if any, that might be possible to allow each branch of government to satisfy its legitimate needs.

In closing, let me reiterate our desire to help the Committee discharge its legitimate oversight responsibilities and our commitment to work with you in a constructive and cooperative spirit.

Sincerely,

Alberto R. Gonzales
Counsel to the President

The Honorable Joseph I. Lieberman
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20510

Jay,

I heard yesterday that the White House hired someone else to be the SBA GC. I just wanted to thank you for your help; it was great to be considered. In the meantime, I'm hoping that something will work out with OLP.

Thanks again,
Daryl

Dear Chairman Byrd and Senator Stevens:

Thank you for your April 17 letter to Assistant to the President for Homeland Security Tom Ridge renewing your previous invitations for him to testify before the Committee. As Secretary Card and I have previously advised you, Governor Ridge and his staff are prepared to meet with you and to provide appropriate briefings to you, the Committee, and appropriate staff. Consistent with the policy long maintained by the Executive Branch and long respected by the Congress, however, Presidential advisors such as Governor Ridge do not testify before Congress on policy matters.

Thank you again for your letter and for your continued interest in homeland security issues.

Matt & Brett,
Thought you guys might be interested in Hatch's statement that we submitted for the record. It helps outline where the changes were made and why he still isn't pleased with the overall bill. I will get you a copy of the bill as amended as soon as it is available. (make sure no one in the Administration is under the mistaken impression that Hatch cosponsored the bill - he did not).
FYI - apparently Leahy's staff is drafting a committee report - once they draft the majority views, they have to circulate it to us and it is my understanding that we then have 48 hours to draft and submit our "additional views". I know we will have alot of "additional views" :)
Let us know if you have anything you want us to look at as we draft the minority opinion for the report. You guys always come through for me - so really sorry guys if I let you down by not contacting you directly to give you the heads up. If you want to hear all the behind the scenes info about how things played out when it was brought up for mark-up last week, and how that allowed us to make progress for this week's markup, give me a buzz, 224-7986. It was very interesting. Let me know if you want a copy of Leahy's statement from the markup, I can fax it to you. (the more humerous statement is that submitted by Schumer - it is priceless in its shamelessness, as was his performance at the markup - that i s a good story)
Looking forward to terrorism insurance..... (how long till recess?????)

Statement of Senator Orrin G. Hatch
Ranking Republican Member
On S. 2010 the "Corporate and Criminal Fraud Accountability Act"
Before the Executive Business Meeting
United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary
April 25, 2002

I want to thank Chairman Leahy and Senators Sessions, Feinstein and Grassley for their efforts to alleviate some of the concerns I had with previous versions of this bill. These are complicated issues that cannot be addressed easily. The Justice Department and the Securities Exchange Commission have been aggressive in investigating and bringing charges against the offending parties. I believe any legislative response needs to be deliberate and measured so that our economy is not adversely affected.

I am pleased that the Chairman and I have reached an agreement on some improvements to S. 2010. Together, we have increased the maximum penalty that applies to S. 2010's new document destruction offense, and strengthened the Sentencing Commission directive. In addition to agreeing that the Commission review a host of additional guidelines that apply to obstruction of justice and fraud offenses, we have also agreed to ask the Commission to revisit the guidelines that apply to corporate misconduct. I believe that tougher penalties, coupled with new criminal offenses, will enhance the ability of prosecutors to punish and deter egregious acts involving obstruction and fraud.

As I stated last week, I could not support S. 2010 in its original form. I had grave concerns about its scope. In my view, for example, a broad federal mandate requiring accountants of publicly traded companies to retain all documents sent, received or created in connection with any audit, review or other similar engagement, would have been unworkable. In short, it would have required auditors to retain warehouses of documents, including those immaterial to an audit's conclusions.

As revised by the Hatch-Leahy-Schumer amendment, the document retention provision strikes a better balance between the legitimate needs of investigators and the accounting industry. While I still have concerns that such legislation could be used to impose unreasonable burdens on the accounting industry, I anticipate that the SEC will exercise its expertise and discretion prudently to promulgate only those rules and regulations that are necessary to ensure that documents which are material to an audit or review, as well as any future investigation, are retained.

I am also pleased that we were able to work to improve many of the civil provisions that were originally included in S. 2010. You are aware of the strong concerns I had, some of which were shared by members on both sides. As originally drafted, I believe such provisions would have been a trial lawyer's dream, would have done little, if anything, for consumers, and would have likely had a major negative impact on our economic markets.

First of all, I had serious concerns about granting the SEC and the 50 State Attorneys General automatic standing to bring suit under the civil provision of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act. I believe this would have been an unwise and unwarranted extension. To allow all 50 State Attorneys General and the SEC to bring multiple and duplicative civil RICO actions would have resulted in inconsistent applications of the statute and undermined DOJ's proper role in this area. I know other members of this committee, on both sides, shared similar concerns. I am pleased that we were able to remove this section from the bill before us.

In addition, I felt that the original whistleblower provision in S. 2010 was so broadly worded that it would have encouraged frivolous claims which would have flooded our courts and abused the protections we seek to bestow. It also provided for expansive damage awards, again a trial lawyer's dream. I do not see any justification for treating private employees differently than we currently treat federal employees and aviation employees. There is no reason to do so other than to line the pockets of trial lawyers. I believe the alternative language that Senator Grassley proposes more appropriately tracks current law in this area and, at the same time, expands the class of people that can access its protections - which should be the goal here. While I still have some concerns about the amendment, I believe it is a marked improvement.

Finally, my serious concerns about the statute of limitations provision remain. I believe current law provides an adequate length of time in which people who have been defrauded can file suit - one year after an individual knows he or she has been defrauded or three years after the date of the fraud. This period mirrors legislatively enacted limitations that apply to statutory claims that are most analogous to those contemplated here. Such statutes of limitations provide for certainty in the markets and adequately protect genuinely aggrieved consumers. Since 1991, when the Supreme Court determined the existing limitations period, technological advances have made it easier, not harder, to file legitimate fraud claims in a timely manner. I understand that the number of shareholder suits has increased in recent years. By extending the statute of limitations period as S. 2010 proposes, I believe we will flood our courts with frivolous shake-down claims that will do nothing but hamper technological innovation and adversely impact our economy.

While none of us wants to witness another Enron-type disaster, we must be measured and not reactionary in our legislative approach. The reforms we enact must give government agencies the tools they need to punish those at fault and to protect the real victims of corporate and accounting fraud. Such reforms should not fuel the ever-powerful trial lawyers' bar. That simply is not the answer. I sincerely hope that my colleagues on both sides, and in both houses, will work hard to ensure that this does not occur, and that this Congress enacts appropriate legislation that addresses legitimate concerns highlighted by recent accounting debacles.

Thank you.

House Veterans Affairs Committee
Subcommittee on Health
Hearing on H.R. 3253 and H.R. 3254
April 10, 2002

Follow-up Questions for
The Honorable Leo S. Mackay, Jr., Ph.D.
Deputy Secretary of Veterans Affairs

Question 1: Your testimony indicates you are concerned that, without dedicated funding, the new programs our two bills would establish could diminish VA's ability to fulfill its primary mission. Are these truly VA's concerns, or OMB's concerns, or those of the Office of Homeland Security? Since both these bills include provisions that require outside funding, in effect forbidding the Secretary from proceeding unless outside funding is available, what is the purpose of your raising concerns about funding?

Response: The concerns about receiving dedicated funding represent the Department of Veterans Affairs' (VA) position. Although H.R. 3253 and H.R. 3254 did authorize funding to meet the objectives of the legislation, it is not clear that the necessary funds under Public Law 107-38 will, in fact, be available for these purposes. Without additional funding specifically dedicated to those activities, VA is concerned about carrying out the proposed activities of H.R. 3253 and H.R. 3254.

Question 2: Beyond the funding question, considering the events of the past year and the new world we have entered with regard to terrorism here on our very shores, should Congress charge the Department with new public health functions beyond its primary mission of providing heath care and services to veterans? Please explain the rationale for your response.

Response: Because of the new reality of the threat to the American homeland, VA cannot help but operate differently. We must make prudent preparation to safeguard the life and health of our employees and veterans under our care. As well, VA as an integrated and pre-deployed health care asset can play a role beyond the purely self-defensive in public health preparedness and response if funded to do so. The issue, really, is one of opportunity cost. Can the Congress and OHS afford not to take advantage of this tremendous resource if the American people are to be adequately protected?

Under the Federal Response Plan, VA today functions as a reservoir of services, expertise and trained health-care workers when requested to provide excess capacity in a given location to support local capabilities. VA may be reimbursed for these services. This is the same ethic that we seek with regard to emergency planning/homeland defense: make available to the public defense the tremendous resource of VA's endowment of people, expertise, and geographic expanse, but recompense it for the services it provides in defense of the public.

Question 3: You estimated the first-year costs associated with H.R. 3254 to be $5.6 million, and ten-year costs to be $55 million. What is VA's basis for this estimate? Since VA is now spending billions of dollars annually on its academic affairs with schools of health professions nationwide, does your estimate indicate this bill would represent insignificant incremental costs, or is there some other implication the Subcommittee should note?

Response: A breakdown of the costs is attached. These are the additional costs to VA associated with the development and production by VHA's Employee Education System of appropriate training and education programs to meet its obligations under H.R. 3254. They have no relation to funds that VA spends in regard to its academic affiliations program.

Question 4: In your participation with the Office of Homeland Security to craft a comprehensive and coordinated federal policy on bio-terrorism, what is your estimate of the cost of the expertise, infrastructure and time that the Department is committing to the effort? Would it be fair to conclude that this work extends beyond your primary mission of caring for veterans? Please explain the rationale for your response.

Response: The President's formation of the Office of Homeland Security, with its Homeland Security Councils (HSC) and Policy Coordinating Committees (PCC) and working groups, created a new set of inter-agency activities and responsibilities for VA. VA's newly established Office of Operations, Security and Preparedness (OSP) has the mission to coordinate all of VA's involvement in HSCs and PCCs, and enhance liaison activities with other Federal agencies. In addition, OSP was formed with the specific intent of improving and increasing VA's ability to respond to any contingency (whether natural disaster or terrorist assault) with minimal disruption to ongoing services to veterans and their families. VA's focus is on all hazards that require comprehensive emergency management including bioterrorism. Therefore, we cannot separate out costs related exclusively to bioterrorism. The cost to establish OSP was approximately $7.9 million. An additional $115 million is needed in FY 2002 for other activities throughout VA to enhance internal preparedness capability.

Caring for veterans is the Department's primary mission, and VA is also tasked with conducting research to improve medical care that we provide, and with educating health care practitioners through affiliations with colleges, universities, etc. VA's participation in developing a comprehensive federal policy on bio-terrorism goes directly to the Department's ability to meet the needs of veterans who may be victims of bio-terrorist attacks, either in the United States or on foreign battlefields. This work directly supports VA's fourth mission of contingency support to DoD and natural disasters. VA is the largest integrated, pre-deployed Federal health care system in this nation that is strategically positioned to respond during an emergency. Disasters occur locally. VA's strategic local presence in most communities makes our role inevitable in times of natural disasters or terrorist attacks. We must be prepared to take care of our veterans as well as our employees. Additional resources and authorization would be required to extend our care to other affected citizens. When properly tasked and resourced, VA can supplement Homeland Security with minimal disruption to the Department's primary mission of caring for veterans and their families.

Question 5: The written testimony submitted by the Vietnam Veterans of America does not support H.R. 3253 due to the funding matter that was thoroughly reviewed during the hearing. Mindful of the views of VVA, and in your opinion, can your 4th mission – supporting military and national emergencies – be carried out without jeopardizing the current resources available to VHA?

Response: VA believes that the existing 4th mission can be performed, as it now exists, without jeopardizing the current resources available to VHA. VHA has worked closely with DOD to provide contingency back up for many years, and VA does not see this changing, although excess capacity in both systems may be lower today than it was 10 years ago. In national emergencies, VA has a secondary role to HHS and provides support in an emergency. HHS also has other partners in the National Disaster Medical System, including DOD and civilian facilities.

The Crisis in America's Courts

April 26, 2002

Total Submitted: 99; Total Confirmed: 50; Total Circuit Court Confirmed: 9; % of Confirmation: 51%

- America is facing a Judicial vacancy crisis

- ✓ The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, William Rehnquist, recently wrote that America's present judicial vacancy crisis is "alarming."
- ✓ There are currently 90 vacancies in the federal courts. In the past, when there were between 50 and 80 open judicial seats, Senator Leahy referred to the situation as a vacancy crisis.
- ✓ The most egregious example is the 6th judicial circuit, Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee, where 8 of the 16 seats are open. (Bush has made nominations to fill 7 of the 8 vacant seats)

- President Bush has acted decisively and nominated 99 individuals to serve as federal judges.

- ✓ Despite President Bush's commitment to filling the vacancies in the federal courts, there are more vacant seats today than there were on January 20, 2001, when President Bush took office.
- ✓ President Bush has nominated more judges and nominated them faster than any President in history, almost 100 in his first year in office.
- ✓ President Bush has out-nominated the past four Presidents. At the same point in their administrations, President Clinton had nominated only 77 judges, former President Bush had nominated 49, and President Reagan had nominated 61 judges.

- President Bush's nominees are highly qualified and highly respected

- ✓ The President has nominated strong jurists who respect and follow the law.
- ✓ Of the nominees awaiting Senate action, the nominees who have been given a rating by the American Bar Association have all received "qualified" or "well qualified" ratings by the American Bar Association. The ABA rating has been called the Gold Standard by Democrats like Senator Leahy.
- ✓ The White House has worked with both Republicans and Democrats to identify qualified and experienced individuals to serve on the bench.

- The Senate has failed to do its part

- ✓ The Senate has confirmed only 50 of the President's 99 nominees, for a confirmation rate of 51%. At this point in the Clinton administration, 60% of his nominees had been confirmed.
- ✓ Most concerning, only 9 of the President's 29 nominees to the circuit courts, the courts of last resort in most cases, have been confirmed.
- ✓ President Bush nominated his first slate of judges at the White House almost a year ago on May 9, 2001. Of those 11 circuit court nominees, only three have been confirmed today.

- Nominees deserve to be treated fairly and should be considered quickly

- ✓ President Bush has said that it is time to rise above the bitterness of the past and provide fair hearings and prompt votes to all nominees, no matter who controls the Senate and who controls the White House.
- ✓ In the end, it is only the American people who suffer. By failing to confirm justice, the Democrats in the Senate are standing in the way of the pursuit of justice.
- ✓ The American people deserve better.

11 Months and Counting…

On May 9, 2001, President Bush nominated his first 11 judges to serve on America's circuit courts. As he did so, he urged Senators of both parties to rise above the bitterness of the past and provide fair hearings and prompt votes to every judicial nominee - no matter who is in the White House and which party controls the Senate.

- Nearly a year has passed and only three of the first 11 have had even a hearing. Two of those three were judges previously nominated by President Clinton.

- The eight nominees who have languished before the Judiciary Committee are individuals of extraordinary experience, intellect, and character:

  - ✓ John Roberts, nominee to the D.C. Circuit, is one of the nation's leading appellate lawyers having argued 36 cases before the U.S. Supreme Court and served as Deputy Solicitor General.
  - ✓ Miguel Estrada, nominee to the D.C. Circuit, has argued 15 cases before the U.S. Supreme Court and has worked as a federal prosecutor, Assistant U.S. Solicitor General, and Supreme Court law clerk. Estrada came to America as a teenager who spoke virtually no English, and if confirmed would be the first Hispanic to serve on the D.C. Circuit.
  - ✓ Justice Priscilla Owen, nominee to the 5th circuit, has served on the Texas Supreme Court since 1994. In her successful reelection bid in 2000, every major newspaper in Texas endorsed her.
  - ✓ Michael McConnell, nominee to the 10th circuit, is one of the nation's leading constitutional scholars and lawyers. His reputation for fairness and integrity has generated support from hundreds of Democrat law professors across the country.
  - ✓ Jeffrey Sutton, nominee to the 6th circuit, is another of America's leading appellate attorneys. He graduated first in his class from Ohio State law school and has gone on to argue over 20 cases before the U.S. Supreme Court and state supreme courts and serve as the Solicitor of the State of Ohio.
  - ✓ Justice Deborah Cook, nominee to the 6th circuit, has served as a Justice on the Ohio Supreme Court since 1994. Before becoming a judge, she was the first woman partner at Akron's oldest law firm.
  - ✓ Judge Dennis Shedd, nominee to the 4th circuit, was unanimously confirmed to be a federal district judge in 1990. He is strongly supported by his home state Senators, Democrat Fritz Hollings and Republican Strom Thurmond, and served in the past as Chief Counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee.
  - ✓ Judge Terrence Boyle, nominee to the 4th circuit, was unanimously confirmed to be a federal district judge in 1984. The former chairman of the state Democratic Party supports Judge Boyle's nomination, stating that he gives everyone "a fair trial."

On January 25, 2002, Judiciary Committee Patrick Leahy indicated that Justice Priscilla Owen, Michael McConnell and Miguel Estrada would receive hearings this year. Each has waited nearly a year for a hearing and more than two months since his statement.

- President Bush has gone on to nominate 98 individuals to serve as federal judges, both in the district and circuit courts – more nominations at this point then any past President.

On May 9, 2001, President Bush paraphrased our nation's fourth President, James Madison, by saying the courts exist to exercise not the will of men, but the judgment of law. President Bush went on to say,
"My judicial nominees will know the difference."

- President Bush has appointed individuals who clearly understand that the role of a judge is to interpret the law, not to legislate from the bench.

- The American people and a majority of the Senate agree with President Bush's vision of the proper role of the judiciary. But a handful of Democrat Senators would prefer judges who share their liberal activist views and use the power of the bench to make law that they have been unsuccessful in passing in Congress like weakening private property rights and putting the rights of criminals over those of victims.

- These Democrats are using procedural maneuvers to prevent the will of the entire Senate from being heard. They know a majority of the Senate agrees with President Bush's philosophy and that the full Senate would promptly confirm his judicial nominees.

On May 9, 2001, President Bush said, "There are today over a hundred vacancies on the federal courts, causing backlogs, frustration and delay of justice."

- Chief Justice Rehnquist recently stated that the present judicial vacancy crisis is "alarming," and "on behalf of the judiciary" implored the Senate to grant prompt hearings and up or down votes to judicial nominees.

- Because of the actions of a handful of Democrats to prevent the confirmation of President Bush's nominees, there are more vacancies in the federal courts today than there were when President Bush took office.

- Ultimately, Justice delayed is Justice denied.

On May 9, 2001, President Bush asked for a return of civility and dignity to the confirmation process.

- Many have said that the judicial confirmation process is broken. The first step towards fixing the process is treating nominees with respect and granting them fair hearings and prompt votes.

- ✓ The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, William Rehnquist, recently wrote that America's present judicial vacancy crisis is "alarming."
- ✓ There are currently 90 vacancies in the federal courts. In the past, when there were between 50 and 80 open judicial seats, Senator Leahy referred to the situation as a vacancy crisis.
- ✓ The most egregious example is the 6th judicial circuit, Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee, where 8 of the 16 seats are open. (Bush has made nominations to fill 7 of the 8 vacant seats)

- President Bush has acted decisively and nominated 98 individuals to serve as federal judges.

- ✓ Despite President Bush's commitment to filling the vacancies in the federal courts, there are more vacant seats today than there were on January 20, 2001, when President Bush took office.
- ✓ President Bush has nominated more judges and nominated them faster than any President in history, almost 100 in his first year in office.
- ✓ President Bush has out-nominated the past four Presidents. At the same point in their administrations, President Clinton had nominated only 77 judges, former President Bush had nominated 49, and President Reagan had nominated 61 judges.

- President Bush's nominees are highly qualified and highly respected

- ✓ The White House has nominated strong jurists who respect and follow the law.
- ✓ Of the nominees awaiting Senate action, the nominees who have been given a rating by the American Bar Association have all received "qualified" or "well qualified" ratings by the American Bar Association. The ABA rating has been called the Gold Standard by Democrats like Senator Leahy.
- ✓ The White House has worked with both Republicans and Democrats to identify qualified and experienced individuals to serve on the bench.

- The Senate has failed to do its part

- ✓ The Senate has confirmed only 50 of the President's 99 nominees, for a confirmation rate of 51%. At this point in the Clinton administration, 60% of his nominees had been confirmed.
- ✓ Most concerning, only 9 of the President's 29 nominees to the circuit courts, the courts of last resort in most cases, have been confirmed.
- ✓ President Bush nominated his first slate of judges at the White House almost a year ago on May 9, 2001. Of those 11 circuit court nominees, only three have been confirmed today.

- Nominees deserve to be treated fairly and should be considered quickly

- ✓ President Bush has said that it is time to rise above the bitterness of the past and provide fair hearings and prompt votes to all nominees, no matter who controls the Senate and who controls the White House.
- ✓ In the end, it is only the American people who suffer. By failing to confirm justice, the Democrats in the Senate are standing in the way of the pursuit of justice.
- ✓ The American people deserve better.

Brett,

Got this email from Katye Balls in Correspondence. She is looking for a response to a question she had about a political event thank you note.

Patrick -
Good morning -- when we met at Old Ebbitt on Friday, you mentioned you worked in counsel's office. Would you mind passing this to Brett Kavanaugh and encouraging a response? It is about Event/Trip letters for political functions.
If either of you have any questions, I can be reached at 67707.

Thanks,
Katye Balls

Brett -
I'm handling the Event Thank You letters for the President and Blake Gottesman advised me to talk with you about thanking for political events. He passed along your earlier advice, thanks for that.
In particular, I'm wondering about today's function in Texas -- it is a RNC event I believe. The Office of Political Affairs called me wondering whether they should turn in forms for the folks who help out on the event -- I'm guessing Blake has explained the process with the forms etc, if I'm wrong let me know.
Anyway, I wanted to double check with you that this event should be handled like the other political events -- a thank you note w/o mentioning or advocating a candidate or party.

If you could get back to me as soon as possible on this, I'd really appreciate it.
Thanks,
Katye Balls

One comment:

Shouldn't the cover memorandum in some way or other (apart from the "To:" line) indicate to the GC's or COS's what they're supposed to do with the surveys, i.e., identify appropriate personnel, circulate copies to those individuals, keep track of who got them, collect them all, and get them back to us? It seems that a little additional specificity on this point may help to avoid problems, and putting it in the memo will be concrete evidence of the adequacy of the instruction.

SUBJECT: ENRON SURVEY

The Chairman of the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs has sent the White House a letter requesting certain information relating to Enron Corporation. The White House is cooperating with the Committee, and we intend to provide appropriate and responsive information.

Accordingly, we ask that you complete the attached survey and return it to my office (West Wing, Second Floor) no later than May 10, 2002.

The survey questions can be answered yes or no, and we are not asking for further explanation at this time. Instead, depending on your answers, the Counsel's Office may contact you to obtain additional information. If you are unsure whether to answer yes or no, you may check the third box, and we will contact you.

If you have any questions, please call Associate Counsel Brett Kavanaugh (6-7984), Brad Berenson (6-2318), or Chris Bartolomucci (6-7963).

ENRON SURVEY

Instructions:

You are expected to answer the following questions to the best of your knowledge and recollection.

This will be Hatch's message of the week and you guys might consider getting this theme through DOJ / WH press and see if it is something that could be used against sen. Dems.

Democrats say they are confirming judicial nominees at a record-breaking pace, faster than ever before. I see things differently. At a time of national emergency, with a judicial vacancy crisis, my Democrat friends are simply not treating President Bush fairly. What they are doing isn?t right. Let?s compare the treatment of President Bush?s first 11 circuit court nominees to the first 11 of previous presidents. President Reagan, the first President Bush and President Clinton all enjoyed a 100% confirmation rate on their first 11
Circuit
Court nominees, and all were confirmed well within a year. President Reagan?s
first 11 were confirmed in an average of 39 days, the first President Bush?s
first 11 averaged 88 days, and President Clinton?s first 11 ? only 115 days. The longest any of these individuals were held up in Committee was 202 days.
President Bush nominated his first 11 on May 9th, 2001, almost a year ago. In

stark contrast to previous presidents, 8 of President Bush?s 11 are still pending in Committee, and we are coming up on the year anniversary of their nominations; nearly 365 days and only 3 of 11 of the President?s first nominees are confirmed. Worse yet, only 3 of 11 have gotten a hearing! Democrats have not even given them a hearing! Democrats have set a record breaking pace alright, they are confirming with the velocity of molasses.

Two questions

What kinds of activities could subject the federal govt to suit for a terrorism-related incident? For example, can the fed govt be sued a federal baggage screener messes up), can the govt be sued and, if so, what rules apply?

Does this bill affect the federal govt's direct liability at all?

Yes, please let the group know that we would like to invite them for another meeting in May. I left Prof Spitzer a message as well as he had written to us on this. Without increasing the group to an unmanageable size, we also would like to have you include the historians/academics who have been publicly critical of the order. Although some disagreements no doubt will remain, we believe that initiating/maintaining the working relationship we have begun is helpful both to us in ensuring efficient and appropriate access and to those who are interested in obtaining efficient and appopriate access. Thanks again and please call on your return. Have a safe trip.

DRAFT NOT FOR RELEASE

H.R. 2604 - Mutilateral Bank Reauthorization
(Bereuter (R) NE and 7 cosponsors)

Although the Administration appreciates the Financial Services Committee authorization of U.S. participation in the new replenishments of the Asian Development Fund (AsDF) and the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), the Administration objects to various other provisions in H.R. 2604.

In particular, the Administration opposes provisions which infringe on the President,s Constitutional authorities, including prescribing particular U.S. policy positions and directing U.S. voting in various multilateral development banks (MDBs). As well, the bill requires that U.S. Executive Directors to particular MDBs must testify before Congress. Finally, H.R. 2604 establishes new burdensome, time consuming reporting requirements.

The Administration would hope to work cooperatively with Congress to formulate authorizing legislation that does not intrude on Executive Branch prerogatives, is more tailored, but acknowledges Congressional international financial policy concerns.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE

April 25, 2002

The Honorable William G. Schubert Administrator and Chairman Maritime Administration
400 Seventh Street, SW
Washington, DC 20590

Dear Captain Schubert:

We are writing to you regarding the Maritime Administration's support of Enron Corp. (Enron) over the years. As the Finance Committee continues its review of Enron, it will be beneficial to understand all actions that the Maritime Administration took in support of Enron.

Please provide since 1985, the year Enron was formed, a listing of all actions that the Maritime Administration has taken in support of Enron's business activities. This would include any loans, loan guarantees, insurance, working capital guarantees, export credit insurance, etc. that was in support of an Enron initiative or used to support an overseas Enron project (or iniriative/project in which Enron was a significant participant). Please also list all instances when Enron was denied assistance from the Maritime Administration.

In providing.this list, please list separately for each activity/project: 1) the dollar amount involved; 2) who made the decision to approve or disapprove as well as all decision memoranda or write-up documents; 3) any communications received from Congress, the Administration (officials outside of Ex-Im Bank) and the private sector in support or opposition; and, 4) copies of all applications and related material provided by Enron to the Maritime Administration.

For context, please provide an overall guidance on how the Maritime Administration decides to support a project and who makes the decision at low, medium and high dollar authorizations. Please explain how the Maritime Administration reviews the financial viability of a company to which it provides support, and what credit standards it employs. Finally, as a result of the bankruptcy of Enron, what liabilities does the Maritime Administration have, if any.

Thank you for your time and assistance. Given the time frame of the Committee, we would ask for your response by May 13, 2002. If you have any questions, please contact Mr. Pat Heck (202) 224-4515 or Mr, Dean Zerbe (202) 224-5315 of the Finance Committee staff.

Cordially yours,

Brett,
I hope you are doing well. I just thought I should email you to keep in touch as this legislative year starts to dwindle away. I am the Wheaton College student who was referred to you by Ken Starr to talk about possible White House jobs last fall. I ended up taking a position as the Executive Assistant (scheduler, finance manager) for Rep. Bob Schaffer from my home district in Colorado. As you may or may not know, Mr. Schaffer has chosen to abide by a term limits pledge he made in 1996, and not seek a fourth term. Therefore, in a few months, I will once again be looking for a job!

I don't mean to impose on you, but I was wondering if I could send my updated resume to you. My interests are very broad, and I am willing to take almost any available position as I know White House/Administration opportunities are rare. My scheduling duties have also given me an interest in event and social planning, so any position of this nature would interest me as well.

If you are willing to take my resume, I can mail, email or fax it to you. Please let me know which would be more convenient. I appreciate all the help you have given me previously, and apologize for once again being in need of your assistance.

Have a wonderful day!

DRAFT NOT FOR RELEASE

H.R. 2604 - Mutilateral Bank Reauthorization
(Bereuter (R) NE and 7 cosponsors)

Although the Administration appreciates the Financial Services Committee authorization of U.S. participation in the new replenishments of the Asian Development Fund (AsDF) and the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD), the Administration objects to various other provisions in H.R. 2604.

In particular, the Administration opposes provisions which infringe on the President,s Constitutional authorities, including prescribing particular U.S. policy positions and directing U.S. voting in various multilateral development banks (MDBs). As well, the bill requires that U.S. Executive Directors to particular MDBs must testify before Congress. Finally, H.R. 2604 establishes new burdensome, time consuming reporting requirements.

The Administration would hope to work cooperatively with Congress to formulate authorizing legislation that does not intrude on Executive Branch prerogatives, is more tailored, but acknowledges Congressional international financial policy concerns.

I am trying to get the full statement:

Statement of Senator Patrick Leahy,
Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee on the Confirmation of Judge Cynthia Rufe and Michael Baylson
April 30, 2002

With today's votes, the number of federal judges confirmed since the change in Senate majority fewer than 10 months ago now exceeds 50 and totals 52. Under Democratic leadership, the Senate has confirmed more judges in fewer than 10 months than were confirmed by the Republican-controlled Senate in the 1996 and 1997 sessions combined. We have accomplished is less than one year what our predecessors and critics took two years to do.

The number of judicial confirmations over these past 10 months - 52 - exceeds the number confirmed in four out of six full years under Republican leadership, during all 12 months of 2000, 1999, 1997 and 1996. And we are ahead of the pace for all the years of Republican control. It exceeds the number of confirmations in the first year of the Reagan Administration by a Republican Senat Subject: If you get asked about the President's judicial nominations....

Total Nominated: 100; Total Confirmed: 52; Circuit Court Nominations: 30; Circuit Court Confirmed: 9

? President Bush today sent his 100th judicial nominee to the Senate, Judge Reena Raggi to serve on the 2nd Circuit.

? Like all of the President,s nominees, Judge Raggi exemplifies President Bush,s philosophy: the role of a judge is to interpret the law, not to legislate from the bench.

? There is presently a vacancy crisis in the federal judiciary with almost 90 judicial seats vacant. Judges help ensure that the innocent remain free and the guilty are punished. They safeguard the stability of the marketplace and address the grievances of those who have been wronged. To allow as many judicial seats to remain empty is irresponsible and ultimately denies swift justice to the American people.

? President Bush has responded decisively to this crisis by sending the Senate a record 100 judicial nominations) more than at the same point in any modern administration. But, the Senate has failed to act accordingly.

? Only 52 of the President,s judicial nominees have been confirmed
? Of greatest concern, only 9 of the President,s 30 nominees to the Appellate Courts have been confirmed, leaving a 20%vacancy rate in what are often the courts of last resort

? President Bush,s nominees are highly accomplished individuals and distinguished members of their communities, but far too many have been held hostage by partisan politics.

? It,s time the Senate Democrats stop playing politics and start acting on the President,s judicial nominees to address the vacancy crisis.

To elaborate briefly on an issue I identified earlier today (and that may have sounded overbroad in the way I phrased it), any notes taken by WH lawyers at an FBI interview of a WH employee may well be Jencks/Brady material in a case against a separate third-party defendant -- as we would be considered attorneys for the government and the notes would be considered "statements" of the witness in many districts. And the same principle would apply to pre-interview discussions with WH employees that are recorded in our notes. There also are Brady implications, of course, as we are agents of the government within the scope of the Brady principle.
That does not affect our course of action on any front. I just wanted to make sure we were all aware of that legal overlay.

Senate Democrats Must Stop Playing Politics With Judicial Nominations
Hyde: 'Vacancy Crisis Exists in the Federal Judiciary'

(WASHINGTON) May 2, 2002 * Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., today issued the following statement about the dozens of judicial nominations being held captive in the Senate:

There is presently a vacancy crisis in the federal judiciary with almost 90 judicial seats vacant. This is a scandalous situation due solely to the Democrat-dominated Senate's refusal to confirm President Bush's judicial nominations.

There are few functions of government more important than the administration of justice. Judges help ensure that the innocent remain free and that the guilty are punished. It is irresponsible to play politics concerning such important matters. To allow this many judicial seats to remain empty denies swift justice for the American people.

[Background information: To date, President Bush has sent the Senate a record 100 judicial nominations * more than at the same point in any modern administration. However, the Senate has only confirmed 52 of those nominees. Of gravest concern: only 9 of the President's 30 nominees to the Appellate Courts have been confirmed, leaving a 20 percent vacancy rate in what are often the courts of last resort for those whose appeals are turned down by the Supreme Court.]

BENEFITS AND COSTS OF THE 8(a) PROGRAM TO THE ECONOMY

15 U.S.C. 636(j)(16)(B)(ii)

The Administrator shall submit a report to the Congress on the Program that shall include the following: A description and estimate of the benefits and costs that have accrued to the economy and the Government in the immediately preceding fiscal year due to the operations of those business concerns that were performing contracts awarded pursuant to section 637(a) of this title.

During fiscal year 2001, a total of 6,942 concerns participated in the 8(a) program. This figure includes all firms that entered and exited the program throughout the year. Field offices reported that these firms provided employment for more than 181,080 persons.

According to year-end financial statements submitted by participants in the program during the fiscal year ending September 30, 2001, total revenue exceeded $17.9 billion. Total revenue for the program authorized by 15 U.S.C. 637(a) was approximately $4.66 billion, or 26.01 percent, of firms' total revenue. The balance of revenue for program participants, almost 74 percent, was earned from non-program sources. This is consistent with congressional intent to have participants rely on non-program sources of revenue in order to enhance post program viability.

1. Benefits to the Economy and the Government

The most direct measure of benefits to the economy and to the Federal Government is through the market value of goods and services produced and the number and quality of jobs provided. The following are areas in which 8(a) certified businesses are contributing to the gross domestic product, the nation's tax base, employment, and the individual wealth and well-being of all Americans.

a. Employment: 8(a) firms provided employment for an estimated 181,080 persons during fiscal year 2001. The program is a source of employment in all states, District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

b. Economic Status of Firm Owners: Program participants are involved in all areas of community development and volunteer work. They contribute time and resources to improve their schools and neighborhoods, and provide jobs and educational opportunities for minority and disadvantaged youth. In the selection of program participants for annual national awards, much emphasis is placed on community involvement.

c. Diversity and Ethnicity of Individuals Helped: America is a nation composed of ethnically diverse individuals. Historically, many disadvantaged businesses are owned by ethnically diverse individuals who have not had access to mainstream business development opportunities. The 8(a) program provides certified firms with opportunities to improve their ability to successfully compete in the nation's marketplace.

2. Costs to the Government

The SBA's Office of Business Development (BD), located in the Office of Government Contracting and Business Development, is responsible for the administration of the 8(a) program. The following is a summary of the administrative, financial assistance, and management and technical assistance costs of the 8(a) program during fiscal year 2001:

a. Program Administrative Costs $ 21,229,247

Program administrative costs consist of personnel, travel, supplies, training and similar expenses. In fiscal year 2001, the 8(a) Business Development Program had actual costs of $ 21,229,247, including $3,678,000 attributable to Headquarters,[1] and $17,551,247 attributable to Field Operations (district offices).[2] A total of 297 full time equivalent (FTE) positions worked in the program in fiscal year 2001, including 53 FTE's[3] in Headquarters and 244 FTE's[4] in Field Operations.

b. Management and Technical Assistance $3,241,000

Section 7(j) mandates that the SBA obtain and maintain a qualified cadre of individuals and organizations to provide assistance to socially and economically disadvantaged individuals. For fiscal year 2001, $3,600,000 was appropriated for Section 7(j) assistance in fiscal year 2001, against which $3,241,000[5] was obligated.

c. Advance Payments $0

Advance payments are non-interest bearing loans made by the SBA to an 8(a) program participant in connection with the performance of a specific 8(a) contract to assist the firm in meeting the financial requirements of performing the contract. Since the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 (effective October 1, 1992), no advance payments have been processed or made by the SBA on 8(a) contracts. In 1998, the SBA eliminated the authority to approve advance payments for 8(a) contractors from the 8(a) Program Development program regulations at 13 C.F.R. 124. There have been no new appropriations for this program for the past several years. Consequently, no advance payments have been appropriated for the current fiscal year. However, each procuring agency's contracting officers have authority to provide advance payments on individual contracts to 8(a) firms using their agency's funds.

EVALUATION OF FIRMS THAT EXITED THE 8(a) PROGRAM

15 U.S.C. 636(j)(16)(B)(iii)

The Administrator shall submit a report to the Congress on the Program that shall include the following: A compilation and evaluation of those business concerns that have exited the Program during the immediately proceeding three fiscal years. Such compilation and evaluation shall detail the number of concerns actively engaged in business operations, those that have ceased or substantially curtailed such operations, including the reasons for such actions, and those concerns that have been acquired by other firms or organizations owned and controlled by other than socially and economically disadvantaged individuals. For those businesses that have continued operations after they exited from the Program, the Administrator shall also separately detail the benefits and costs that have accrued to the economy during the immediately preceding fiscal year due to the operations of such concern.

The SBA conducted a survey of the 1,077 firms that completed their 8(a) program term between October 1, 1998, and September 30, 2001. Of the 1,077 total, 689 were independently operational, 10 had substantially curtailed operations, 10 had been acquired by other firms owned and controlled by non-disadvantaged individuals, 61 had ceased business operations, and 307 did not respond to this survey. (See Table III)

The total annual revenue of all exited firms reporting was more than $10.04 billion. The average revenue per reporting firm was approximately $10.0 million. Firms exiting over the immediately proceeding 3 fiscal years provided employment for approximately 34,928 persons.

During fiscal year 2001, 145 firms were terminated from participation in the 8(a) program. There are numerous reasons for terminations; however, most were terminated due to their failure to comply with basic program reporting requirements. These actions ensured that only firms eligible for the program received program benefits. In addition, companies that cease operations and fail to withdraw voluntarily are terminated. During fiscal year 2001, 64 firms elected to withdraw voluntarily from 8(a) program participation.

The reasons that caused former 8(a) businesses to cease operations, like the reasons that cause any category of business to cease operations, are numerous. The reasons may include: economic conditions; retirement, illness or death of the owner; reduced Federal contracting opportunities; a decision to sell the business or start a new business venture; or the pursuit of other professional interests.

When considering the number of former 8(a) companies that have ceased business operations, please note that 79 percent of new businesses fail within 10 years.[5]

COMPILATION OF FISCAL YEAR 2001 PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS

15 U.S.C. 636(j) (16) (B) (iv)

The Administrator shall submit a report to the Congress on the Program that shall include the following: A listing of all participants in the Program during the preceding fiscal year identifying, by State and by Region, for each firm: the name of the concern, the race or ethnicity, and gender of the disadvantaged owners, the dollar value of all contracts received in the preceding year, the dollar amount of advance payments received by each concern pursuant to contracts awarded under section 637(a) of this title, and a description including (if appropriate) an estimate of the dollar value of all benefits received pursuant to paragraphs (13) and (14) and section 7(a) (20) during such year.

The ethnic heritage of the owners of the 6,942 firms participating in the 8(a) program during fiscal year 2001 is as follows: Black American - 2,766 (39.8 percent); Hispanic American - 1,709 (24.6 percent); Asian Pacific American - 868 (12. 5 percent); Subcontinent Asian American - 690 (9.9 percent); Native American - 589 (8.5 percent); Native Hawaiian American - 45 (0.07 percent); Caucasian American - 185 (2.7 percent) and Other American - 90 (1.3 percent). Men own 74.5 percent of the firms and 25.5 percent are owned by women. (See Tables IV, V, and VI.)

Table VII provides ethnic totals of firms participating in the 8(a) program by state and region during fiscal year 2001. States with the largest number of 8(a) certified firms are California (788), Maryland (708), Virginia (704), Texas (479), and Florida (369).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This is the report on the U.S. Small Business Administration's 8(a) Business Development Program as required by the Business Opportunity Development Reform Act of 1988 [15 U.S.C. 636(j)16(A) & (B)]. The purpose of this review is to determine and quantify the extent to which the 8(a) program has assisted in the development of firms owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals. The Act requires the Small Business Administration (SBA) to analyze the accomplishments of businesses certified to participate in the 8(a) program during fiscal year 2001 and the status of the 1,077 business concerns that completed their 8(a) program term during fiscal years 1999, 2000 and 2001. These findings are summarized in this report.

Fiscal year 2001 marked the 33rd year of the SBA's 8(a) Business Development Program. During fiscal year 2001, a total of 6,942 businesses participated in the 8(a) program. These firms made significant contributions to the Federal, state and local tax base and created an estimated 181,080 jobs in the nation's economy. Between October 1, 2000, and September 30, 2001, a total of 1,117 new firms were certified to participate in the program.

Year-end financial statements submitted by the 6,942 firms participating in the program authorized by 15 U.S.C. 637(a) during fiscal year 2001 reported total revenues exceeding $17.9 billion. Revenue that resulted from the program authorized by 15 U.S.C. 637(a) was $4.66 billion or 26.01 percent of firms' total revenue, as indicated in the year-end financial statements.

In order to assess the current business status of firms that graduated from the 8(a) program in the past three years, SBA surveyed 1,077 firms that completed their 8(a) program terms between October 1, 1998, and September 30, 2001. Of the 1,077 firms surveyed: 689, or 64 percent, were independently operational; 10, or 1 percent, had substantially curtailed operations; 10, or 1 percent, had been acquired by other firms owned and controlled by non-disadvantaged individuals; 61, or 6 percent, had ceased business operations; and 307, or 28 percent, failed to respond to SBA's survey. Given that firms exiting the program generally have been in business at least 11 years, and in many cases over 20 years, a 6 percent rate of business cessation is considered normal. Many of the owners are voluntarily ceasing operations, and are not being forced out of business.

The total annual revenue of graduated firms that responded to the survey and reported earnings was more than $10 billion dollars. The average annual revenue for these firms was approximately $10 million, and they provided employment for approximately 35,000 persons.

Note: Final procurement information for fiscal year 2001 was not available from the Federal Procurement Data System when this report was prepared. All Participants' financial information in this report is based on financial data submitted by the participants.

PROGRAM INITIATIVES

1. Mission: The mission of SBA's 8(a) program is to assist in the business development and economic stability of small businesses owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals, economically disadvantaged Indian tribes (including Alaska Native Corporations), economically disadvantaged Native Hawaiian Organizations and Community Development Corporations. The 8(a) program fulfills this mission by providing a menu of business development resources, such as marketing, managerial, technical, financial and procurement assistance.

2. Business Development: The 8(a) program promotes competitive development over a 9-year period. Each participant's progress is monitored and measured, and its developmental needs are identified through annual reviews of its business plan. Guidance is provided through SCORE (Service Corps of Retired Executives), SBDCs (Small Business Development Centers) and BICs (Business Information Centers) and WBCs (Women's Business Centers). In addition, through award of sole source and limited-competition contracts, the 8(a) program provides a logical, systematic approach to market access and enterprise growth to small businesses owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals.

3. Management and Technical Assistance: Under Section 7(j) of the Small Business Act, the SBA provides specialized training, professional consultant assistance, and high-level executive development to eligible firms. This authority allows the SBA to provide assistance to 8(a) program participants as well as to other small disadvantaged businesses, low-income entrepreneurs, and small businesses in labor-surplus areas or areas with a high proportion of low-income individuals. The services provided by this program have been limited, for the most part, to providing high-level executive development training, through the Executive Education Program, to current 8(a) program participants. However, 8(a) firms also receive assistance through SCORE, SBDCs and the USEACs (United States Export Assistance Centers), as well as the mentor-protégé, surety guarantee, and loan programs.

NET WORTH OF NEWLY CERTIFIED PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS

15 U.S.C. 636(j)(16)(B)(i)

The Administrator shall submit a report to the Congress on the Program that shall include the following: The average personal net worth of individuals who own and control concerns that were initially certified for participation in the Program during the immediately preceding fiscal year. The Administrator shall also indicate the dollar distribution of net worths, at $50,000 increments, of all such individuals found to be socially and economically disadvantaged.

1. Total Personal Net Worth: The personal net worth, for program purposes, is the net value of the assets of an individual remaining after total liabilities are deducted. During fiscal year 2001, 1,117 firms were initially certified to participate in the 8(a) program. Table I presents data on the personal net worth of the 1,208 individuals who used their eligibility to qualify these 1,117 firms (more than one individual may use his/her social and economic disadvantage status to qualify a single firm). In determining total personal net worth, the equity in the individual's primary residence and business is included. The average personal net worth of these individuals was $202,332.

   Individuals with a personal net worth ranging from less than zero dollars to $50,000 constituted 19.8 percent of owners controlling firms that were certified; individuals with a personal net worth of $50,001 to $100,000 constituted 19.2 percent; and individuals with a personal net worth of $100,001 to $150,000 constituted 17.5 percent. Fifty six percent of the individuals owning and controlling firms that were certified had a personal net worth ranging from less than zero dollars to $150,000. (See Table I)

2. Adjusted Personal Net Worth: The adjusted personal net worth is defined as total personal net worth less the individual's equity in his or her primary residence and the individual's ownership interest in the applicant concern. Please note: the Small Business Act directs the SBA to use adjusted personal net worth, which excludes the net value of the personal residence and the business. For the purpose of determining whether an individual may be considered economically disadvantaged, the average adjusted personal net worth of the individuals owning and controlling the firms initially certified during fiscal year 2001 was $69,901.

   Individuals with an adjusted personal net worth ranging from less than zero dollars to $50,000 constituted 48.6 percent of owners controlling firms that were certified; individuals with an adjusted personal net worth of $50,001 to $100,000 constituted 21.1 percent; and individuals with an adjusted personal net worth of $100,001 to $150,000 constituted 14.6 percent. Eighty four percent of the individuals owning and controlling firms that were certified had an adjusted personal net worth ranging from less than zero dollars to $150,000. (See Table II)

Brett,

You are booked for 8:45 AM Wednesday on Good Day USA to talk about judicial nominations. This show is more left leaning than others we have done in the past, so you'll need to be ready for defense on this one. Also, there is a slight chance that one of the hosts will try to dig up your time with the independent counsel's office, but I doubt it. Even so, you should be prepared for that just in case.

I'll meet you in your office Wednesday morning a few minutes before. Thanks for your help on this.

Dear:

As a long timer supporter of Governor Rick Perry, you have played a major role in the destiny of Texas as we move forward into the 21st Century. With his solid record of leadership and experience, Governor Perry is in a strong position heading into this election season. He has a wide lead in the polls, strong grassroots and organization support, and is aggressively taking his plans and vision to every corner of our state.

Now, we have even more exciting news. President George W. Bush will be joining us for a fundraising event honoring Governor Perry and his reelection campaign, in Houston, on Friday, June 14th, at the Hyatt Regency Downtown. The event will begin with a general reception with President Bush and Governor Perry at 5:00pm, followed by a private photo opportunity with President Bush and Governor Perry, and conclude with a dinner with Governor Perry.

Will you agree to help Governor Perry make this historic Presidential event a smashing success?

Working together in 1999, then-Governor Bush and Lt. Governor Rick Perry passed a balanced state, nearly $2 billion in tax cuts, and record increases in education funding and teacher pay. That strong record of accomplishment helped catapult George W. Bush into the White House and Rick Perry into the Texas Governor's Office.

Governor Perry has been building on that record ever since. The 2001 Legislative Session witnessed another balanced budget and significant improvements in education and health care funding and programs. The Governor's strong leadership also turned back proposed gasoline, sales, and nursing home tax increases and protected the state's Rainy Day Fund, which now contains about $900 million for future priorities.

The Democrats think their "dream team" will energize liberal voters and keep our voters home this year. The Chairman of the Democrat National Committee – Bill Clinton's chief fundraiser – is even gloating that his Democrats will embarrass President Bush in his own back yard by beating us in Texas!

You and I know they are wrong. Texans are energized behind Governor Perry's campaign because he has the right leadership, experience, and vision for Texas families.

Governor Perry needs your help to take his conservative message to all Texans. And we are honored that President Bush has agreed to lend his personal support to Governor Perry's reelection efforts.

A commitment from you to serve on the host committee will ensure a successful event. Please review carefully the important host committee contribution levels and event information are on the enclosed form, and send the form to Leslie Sullivan, so we can be sure to list your name on the invitation.

Your support will ensure the Texas Governor's office stays in strong and experienced hands. If you have any questions, please call Leslie Sullivan at Texans for Rick Perry at 512/478-3276.

Sincerely,

H. Scott Caven

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

Thank you for your May 3 letter about the White House's effort to gather information helpful to the Committee's inquiry. Your letter identifies several questions that you have ~~about~~ regarding ~~the White House's~~ that effort. After considering the exchange of correspondence we have had, I believe it would be most productive for you and I to meet to discuss the matter. I think that such a meeting, rather than more letters, is most likely to help us clarify the issues and settle on a mutually agreeable approach. I am available to meet this week and look forward to meeting with you ~~doing so~~ at your convenience. ~~I invite~~ ask that your ~~scheduler~~ office ~~to~~ contact my office at 456-2632 to arrange a time.

Brett,

I am sorry to bother you with this...The Office of Homeland Security is looking for language that they can include in responses to letters sent by companies addressed to Governor Ridge. These companies are requesting that the Office of Homeland Security recommend their company to another government agency (for example, DoJ or DoT). They just need a small paragraph, which include the reasons why the Administration can NOT recommend a company to another government agency.

FOR EXAMPLE: Governor Rigde appreciates you contacting him requesting that the Office of Homeland Security recommend your company's services to the Department of Justice in an effort to increase our Nation's security. Unfortunately, Governor Ridge can not review all of the requests tat are brought to his attention each day. Therefore, Governor Ridge can not make a recommendation on any government contract or advocate a particular company's services to any Federal agency. (NOR DOES HE HAVE THE AUTHORITY TO MAKE THESE RECOMMENDATIONS????)

Thanks and I hope you understand the need for these practices.

Please let me know if you can draft anything. The contact in Homeland Security is Lindsay Nasshorn. Her number is 6-1700.

Thanks for your help.

Thanks.
Nicole

Just in case it comes up at senior staff, there is an event Tuesday in EEOB where President and some others (Rove, Mehlman, Dylan Glenn et al) greet some political activists from around the country. Counsel's office (me) has been involved throughout and approved this event. The same kind of event occurred a year ago. This is not a fundraiser and is not a donor maintenance event. And political activity of this kind by EOP officials is perfectly permissible on government property and during normal work hours. Moreover, because it is not a donor maintenance event, the appearance issues are at most very slight and did not justify requiring that the event be held at another off-site locale.

Brett,

Here is VA's response to your question about the second sentence in the second paragraph of the transmittal letter for this VA draft bill, which reads "As a result, depending on the program involved, some veterans may be disadvantaged when compared to other "non-veteran" students."

VA's response:
It just means that veteran-students, whose MGIB benefits are taken into consideration, get a lesser benefit (smaller grant) from the Department of Education than non-veterans.

Please let me know if VA's response clears up your confusion or if you would like to edit the sentence. Thanks.

Statement of Senator Patrick Leahy,
Chairman, Senate Judiciary Committee
on the Confirmation of Judge Cynthia Rufe and Michael Baylson
April 30, 2002
With today's votes, the number of federal judges confirmed since the change in Senate majority fewer than 10 months ago now exceeds 50 and totals 52. Under Democratic leadership, the Senate has confirmed more judges in fewer than 10 months than were confirmed by the Republican-controlled Senate in the 1996 and 1997 sessions combined. We have accomplished is less than one year what our predecessors and critics took two years to do.

The number of judicial confirmations over these past 10 months - 52 - exceeds the number confirmed in four out of six full years under Republican leadership, during all 12 months of 2000, 1999, 1997 and 1996. And we are ahead of the pace for all the years of Republican control. It exceeds the number of confirmations in the first year of the Reagan Administration by a Republican Senate majority. It is almost double the number of confirmations in the first year of the Clinton Administration by a Democratic Senate majority.

acknowledge that we have been working at a record pace to seek to solve the problems they created.

Each of the 52 nominees confirmed by the Senate has received the unanimous, bipartisan backing of the Committee.
The confirmations of Judge Rufe and Mr. Baylson make the 51st and 52nd judicial nominees to be confirmed since I became Chairman last July. I would like to commend the members of the Judiciary Committee and our Majority Leader Senator Daschle and Assistant Majority Leader Senator Reid for all of their hard work in getting us to this point. The confirmation of the 52nd judge in less than 10 months, especially these last 10 months, in spite of the unfair and personal criticism to which they have each been subjected, is an extraordinary achievement and a real example of Democratic Senators acting in a bipartisan way even some on the other side have continued to make our efforts toward progress as difficult as possible.

And it is more than triple the number of judges confirmed for the George H.W. Bush
Administration by a Senate of the other party.

The confirmation of Judge Rufe and Mr. Baylson today illustrates the progress being made under Democratic leadership, and the fair and expeditious way in which we have considered nominees. With today's confirmations, we will have confirmed three district court judges to the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in fewer than four months. On April 18th, the Senate confirmed, by a vote of 94 to zero, Judge Legrome Davis to the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.
Judge Legrome Davis was first nominated to the position of U.S.
District Court Judge for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania by President Clinton on July 30, 1998. The Republican-controlled Senate took no action on his nomination and it was returned to the President at the end of 1998. On January 26, 1999, President Clinton renominated
Judge Davis for the same vacancy. The Senate again failed to hold a hearing for Judge Davis and his nomination was returned to the President on December 15, 2000, after two more years of inaction in a second full Congress while the Senate was controlled by a Republican majority. Under Republican leadership, Judge Davis languished before the Committee for 868 days without a hearing.

This year we have moved expeditiously to consider Judge Davis. Judge
Davis was nominated by President Bush in late January 2002 and he received a unanimous vote by the Judiciary Committee on April 11th -- fewer than three months after his nomination and less than one month after his paperwork was completed. The saga of Judge Davis recalls for us so many nominees from the period January 1995 through July 10,
2001, who never received a hearing or a vote and who were the subject of secret anonymous holds by Republicans for reasons that were never explained. Judge Davis was a nominee held up for almost three years and when the Senate was finally allowed to vote on his nomination, he was confirmed by a vote of 94 to 0.

Judge Rufe and Mr. Baylson help fill vacancies on the Pennsylvania District Courts that existed long before the majority shifted last summer. One of the two vacancies has existed since December 31,

1998. Despite the fact that President Clinton nominated David Fineman to fill this judicial vacancy, Mr. Fineman never received a hearing and his nomination was returned to the President without action at the end of 2000. In contrast, we have moved expeditiously, as with Judge Davis, to consider Judge Rufe and Mr. Baylson. Both nominees were nominated by President Bush in January, received a hearing within days of their files being complete, and are being confirmed approximately three months after their nominations. Both nominees have been practicing law for more than 25 years and have a distinguished history of public service.

As our action today demonstrates, again, we are moving at a fast pace to fill judicial vacancies with nominees who have strong bipartisan support. Partisan critics of these accomplishments ignore the facts. The facts are that we are confirming President Bush's nominees at a faster pace than the nominees of prior presidents, including those who worked closely with a Senate majority of the same political party.

The rate of confirmation in the past 10 months actually exceeds the rates of confirmation in the past three presidencies. For example, in the first 15 months of the Clinton administration, 46 judicial nominees were confirmed, a pace on average of 3.1 per month. In the first 15 months of the first Bush administration, judges were confirmed at a pace of 1.8 judges per month. Even in the first 15 months of the Reagan Administration, when a staunchly Republican majority in the Senate was working closely with a Republican President, 54 judges were confirmed, a pace of 3.6 per month. In fewer than 10 months since the shift to a Democratic majority in the Senate, President George W. Bush's judicial nominees have been confirmed at a rate of more than 5.2 judges per month, a faster pace than for any of the past three Presidents.

During the six and one-half years of Republican control of the Senate, judicial confirmations averaged 38 per year - a pace of consideration and confirmation that we have already exceeded under Democratic leadership over these past 10 months in spite of all of the challenges facing Congress and the Nation during this period and all of the obstacles Republicans have placed in our path.

As of today, we have confirmed 52 judicial nominees in just 10 months. This is almost twice as many confirmations as George W. Bush's father had over a longer period
- 27 nominees in 15 months - than the period we have been in the majority in the Senate.

The Republican critics typically compare apples to oranges to mischaracterize the achievements of the last 10 months. They complain that we have not done 24 months of work in the fewer than 10 months we have been in the majority. Ironically, with today's confirmations, we even meet that unfair standard: Within the last 10 months we have confirmed as many judges as were confirmed by the Republican majority in the entire 1996 congressional session and in all of 1997 combined. We have now met their two-year figures is less than 10 months.

A fair examination of the rate of confirmation shows that Democrats are working harder and faster on judicial nominees, confirming judges at a faster pace than the rates of the past 20 years. The double standards asserted by Republican critics are just plain wrong and unfair, but that does not seem to matter to Republicans intent on criticizing and belittling every achievement of the Senate under a Democratic majority.

The Republican attack is based on the unfounded notion that the Senate has not kept up with attrition on the District Courts and the Courts of Appeals. Well, the Democratic majority in the Senate has not only been keeping up with attrition but outpacing it, and we have started to move the vacancies numbers in the right direction - down. By contrast, from January 1995 when the Republican majority took over control of the Senate until they relinquished control in June 2001, federal judicial vacancies rose by 65 percent, from 63 to 105.

The Republican majority assumed control of judicial confirmations in January 1995 and did not allow the Judiciary Committee to be reorganized after the shift in majority last summer until July 10, 2001.
When I became Chairman of a Committee to which Members were finally assigned on July 10, we began with 110

judicial vacancies. With today's confirmation of Judge Rufe and Mr. Baylson, we have reduced the overall number of judicial vacancies to 88 and the number of district court vacancies to 58. Already, in fewer than 10 months in the majority, we more than kept up with attrition and begun to close the judicial vacancies gap that nearly doubled under the Republican majority. Under Democratic leadership, we have reduced the number of district court vacancies by almost 25 percent and the overall number of judicial vacancies by 20 percent, to below 90.

The Democratic majority in the Senate has also kept up with attrition on the Courts of Appeals and been acting to close the vacancies gap on the Courts of Appeals that more than doubled under the Republican majority. Vacancies on the Courts of Appeals rose from 16 to 33 in the period January 1995 to July 2001, before the Senate was allowed to reorganize after the shift in majority last summer. In the fewer than 10 months since the change in majority, the Senate has confirmed nine judges to the Courts of Appeals and more than kept up with the five vacancies that had arisen since July. In contrast, the Republican-controlled majority averaged only seven confirmations to the Courts of Appeals per year. Seven. In the less than 10 months the Democrats have been in the majority, we have already exceeded the annual number of Court of Appeals judges confirmed by our predecessors. The Senate in the last 10 months has confirmed as many Court of Appeals judges as were confirmed in all of 2000 and more than were confirmed in 1997 or 1999, and nine more than the zero from 1996. Another way to put it is that within the last 10 months, the Democratic majority in the Senate has confirmed as many Court of Appeals judges as were confirmed in the 2000 and 1996 sessions combined and confirmed more Court of Appeals judges than were confirmed in the 1999 and 1996 sessions combined or in the 1997 and 1996 sessions combined. Simply put, in fewer than 10 months we have already exceeded the number of Court of Appeals judges confirmed by a Republican majority in four of the six years in which they were in control.

Under Republican leadership from 1995 through

July 10, 2001, vacancies on the Courts of Appeals increased from 16 to 33, more than doubling. When I became chairman of a Committee to which Members were finally assigned on July 10, we began with 33 Courts of Appeals vacancies. That is what I inherited. Since the shift in majority last summer, five additional vacancies have arisen on the Courts of Appeals around the country. With last week's confirmation of Judge Howard, we have reduced the number of circuit court vacancies to 29. That is, we have kept up with attrition by confirming five Court of Appeals judges and then acted to lower the number of vacancies by confirming four additional judges. Those are the facts. Since our Republican critics are so fond of using percentages, I will say that we will have now reduced the vacancies on the Courts of Appeals by more than 12 percent in the last 10 months.

Rather than the 38 vacancies that would exist
if we were making no progress, as some have asserted, there are now 29 vacancies - that is more than keeping up with the attrition on the Circuit Courts. Republican critics unfairly seek to attribute to the Democratic majority the lack of action by the Republican majority before the historic change last summer.

While the Republican Senate majority increased vacancies on the Courts of Appeals by over 100 percent, it has taken the Democratic majority fewer than 10 months to reverse that trend, keep up with extraordinary turnover and, in addition, reduce circuit court vacancies overall. This is progress. Rather than having the circuit vacancy numbers skyrocketing, as they did overall during the prior six and one-half years
- more than doubling from 16 to 33 - the Democratic-led Senate has reversed that trend. The vacancies numbers are moving in the right direction - down.

Overall, in fewer than 10 months, the Senate Judiciary Committee has held 17 hearings involving 61 judicial nominations. That is more hearings on judges than the Republican majority held in any year of its control of the Senate. The Republican majority never held 17 judicial confirmation hearings in 12 months. In contrast, one-sixth of President Clinton's judicial nominees - more than 50 - never got a Committee hearing and Committee vote from the Republican majority, which perpetuated

longstanding vacancies into this year.

Despite the newfound concern from across the aisle about the number of judicial vacancies, no nominations hearings were held while the Republicans controlled the Senate in the 107th Congress last year. No judges were confirmed during that time from among the many qualified circuit court nominees received by the Senate on January 3, 2001, or from among the nominations received by the Senate on May 9, 2001.

The Democratic leadership acted promptly to address the number of district and circuit vacancies that had been allowed to grow when the Senate was in Republican control. The Judiciary Committee noticed the first hearing on judicial nominations within 10 minutes of the reorganization of the Senate and held that hearing on the day after the Committee was assigned new members.

That initial hearing included two District Court nominees and a Court of Appeals nominee on whom the Republican majority had refused to hold a hearing the year before. Within two weeks of the first hearing, we held a second hearing on judicial nominations that included another Court of Appeals nominee. I did try to schedule some District Court nominees for that hearing, but none of the files of the seven District Court nominees pending before the Committee was complete. Similarly, in the unprecedented hearings we held for judicial nominees during the August recess, we attempted to schedule
additional District Court nominees but we could not do so if their paperwork was not complete.
Had we had cooperation from the Republican majority and the White House in our efforts, we could have held even more hearings for more District Court nominees. Nevertheless, in fewer than 10 tumultuous months, the Committee has held 17 hearings involving 61 judicial nominations.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is holding regular hearings on judicial nominees and giving nominees a vote in Committee, in contrast to the practice of anonymous holds and other obstructionist tactics employed by some during the period of Republican control. The Democratic majority has reformed the process and practices used in the past to deny Committee consideration of judicial nominees. We have moved away from the anonymous holds that so dominated the process from 1996 through 2000. We have made home state senators' blue slips public for the first time.

I do not mean by my comments to appear critical of Senator Hatch. Many times during the six and one-half years he chaired the Judiciary Committee, I observed that, were the matter left up to us, we would have made more progress on more judicial nominees. I thanked him during those years for his efforts. I know that he would have liked to have been able to do more and not have to leave so many vacancies and so many nominees without action.

I hope to hold additional hearings and make additional progress on judicial nominees. In our efforts to address the number of vacancies on the circuit and district courts we inherited from the Republicans, the Committee has focused on consensus nominees for all Senators. In order to respond to what Vice President Cheney and Senator Hatch now call a vacancy crisis, the Committee has focused on consensus nominees. This will help end the crisis caused by Republican delay and obstruction by confirming as many of the President's judicial nominees as quickly as possible.

Most Senators understand that the more controversial nominees require greater review. This process of careful review is part of our democratic process. It is a critical part of the checks and balances of our system of government that does not give the power to make lifetime appointments to one person alone to remake the courts along narrow ideological lines, to pack the courts with judges whose views are outside of the mainstream of legal thought, and whose decisions would further divide our nation.

Some on the other side of the aisle have falsely charged that if a nominee has a record as a conservative Republican, he will not be considered by the Committee. That is simply untrue. The next time Republican critics are bandying around charges that the Democratic majority has failed to consider conservative judicial nominees, I hope someone will ask those critics about all the Federalist Society members we have confirmed and the Republican activists we have confirmed without a single dissenting vote. I do not believe that President Bush is nominating liberals and neither does the White House.

The Committee continues to try to accommodate Senators from both sides of the aisle. The Court of Appeals nominees included at hearings so far this year have been at the request of Senator Grassley, Senator Lott, Senator Specter, Senator Enzi, Senator Smith, and Senator Thompson - six Republican Senators who each sought a prompt hearing on a Court of Appeals nominee who was not among those initially sent to the Senate in May 2001.

The whipsawing by the other side is truly remarkable. When we proceed on nominees that they support and on whom they seek action, we are criticized for not acting on others. When we direct our effort to trying to solve problems in one Circuit, they complain that we are not acting in another. Since these multiple problems arose on their watch while they were in the majority, it is a bit like the arsonist who complains that the local fire department is not responding fast enough to all of his destructive antics.

I imagine that over the next 10 days we will be hearing a refrain about the most controversial of President Bush's nominees who have not yet participated in a hearing. Some of them do not have the necessary home-state Senator support needed to proceed. Some will take a great deal of time and effort for the Committee to consider. I hope to be able to do something else that our Republican counterparts never did, which is to announce some scheduling decisions well in advance of hearings to come over the next several months. In spite of all we have done and all we are doing, our partisan critics will act as if we have not held a single hearing on a single judicial nominee. They will not acknowledge their role in creating what they now call a judicial vacancies crisis. They will not apologize for their harsh tactics in the six and one-half years that preceded the shift in majority. They will not acknowledge that the Democratic majority has moved faster on more judges than they ever did. That will not

5:30 P.M.

May __, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

Thank you for your letter of May 7, 2002. I look forward to meeting with you this week, which should assist the Committee and the White House in settling on a mutually agreeable approach.

You asked that I inform you before the meeting about White House efforts to gather relevant information. As you know, we have distributed an initial survey to a large group of White House and other EOP officials who are likely to possess relevant information. The survey is designed to help us determine who had communications relevant to the Committee's inquiry. Then, we intend to gather more information from the individuals who had relevant communications. This seemed to us an entirely sensible approach that would allow us to efficiently gather relevant information and expeditiously and appropriately respond to the Committee's inquiry.

In light of your most recent letter, however, we have initiated a process for searching relevant e-mail and visitor entry records for all EOP employees. As you know, this procedure will require the page-by-page review of a tremendous amount of irrelevant information that necessarily will be gathered in an electronic search using general search terms. That said, we have undertaken this effort in order to cooperate with the Committee.

You also have asked specifically about former employees. We did not send the survey to former employees because they are no longer employed by the White House. You also ask about appointments and the NEPDG. The survey necessarily will elicit certain information that may be relevant to those subjects. That said, I wish to discuss with you the Committee's interest in those matters for reasons stated in my letter of April 19.

I look forward to meeting with you this week.

Sincerely,

Alberto R. Gonzales

A few weeks ago, the Seventh Circuit ruled on the question whether the government attorney-client privilege applies in federal criminal proceedings. In a 3-0 opinion by Judge Diane Wood and joined by Judges Posner and Flaum, the court expressly agreed with Eighth Circuit and D.C. Circuit decisions that there is no such privilege in federal criminal proceedings. The Seventh Circuit case involved a state lawyer for then-Secretary of State Ryan in Illinois; the federal grand jury subpoenaed the lawyer regarding his discussions with Ryan. Ryan objected, but the Seventh Circuit ruled that the attorney must testify.

The court's decision includes the same kind of very strong rhetoric found in the Eighth and D.C. Circuit decisions about the distinction between government lawyers and corporate and private lawyers: "While we recognize the need for full and frank communication between government officials, we are more persuaded by the serious arguments against extending the attorney-client privilege to protect communications between government lawyers and the public officials they serve when criminal proceedings are at issue. First, government lawyers have responsibilities and obligations different from those facing members of the private bar. While the latter are appropriately concerned first and foremost with protecting their clients--even those engaged in wrongdoing--from criminal charges and public exposure, government lawyers have a higher, competing duty to act in the public interest. Lindsey, 158 F.3d at 1273; Comment to ABA Model Rule 1.13 (noting that government lawyers may have higher duty to rectify wrongful official acts despite general rule of confidentiality). They take an oath, separate from their bar oath, to uphold the United States Constitution and the laws of this nation (and usually the laws of the state they serve when, as was the case with Bickel, they are state employees). Their compensation comes not from a client whose interests they are sworn to protect from the power of the state, but from the state itself and the public fisc. It would be both unseemly and a misuse of public assets to permit a public official to use a taxpayer-provided attorney to conceal from the taxpayers themselves otherwise admissible evidence of financial wrongdoing, official misconduct, or abuse of power. Compare Nixon, 418 U.S. at 713 (qualified executive privilege applies in the face of a criminal investigation). Therefore, when another government lawyer requires information as part of a criminal investigation, the public lawyer is obligated not to protect his governmental client but to ensure its compliance with the law."

Adrian -- Todd and Kevin have been cc'ing me re the question re use of military air for political events. A couple of months ago, Cabinet Affairs pulled the COS's together for a briefing on clarifying policy re political events -- Matt provided most of the info, but an individual (I embarrassed I cannot remember his name) with WH Counsel's ofc explained the do's and don't's -- several of us asked questions re transportation -- my notes indicate that:

* No corporate planes under any circumstance (USDA has this as a general rule re our prohibited source regs/statutes)
* No political (i.e., fundraising/party) events while Cabinet member is designated for military air travel
* However, "policy" events (i.e., farmer roundtables, meetings with Hill members and constituents, etc.) are permitted with official is travelling via military air

I rechecked with CA to make sure I hadn't misunderstood -- CA confirmed that this is their understanding unless the policy has been modified and they haven't been notified. I hope this is helpful in answering your question. Please call me if you have any questions -- my direct is 720-7971/cell is PRA 6 dwm Repub. Conference is looking for the historic judicial vacancy rates. I know I read such a history somewhere in a document raw numbers and rates back to at least Reagan. Anybody have a document on that that you cold send me or Chris Myers at conference.

From Kennedy to Clinton, Presidents Get Their Judicial Nominees

Choosing Judges

The Senate confirms more than 90 percent of a new President's judicial nominees during his first two years in office. That may be what the Framers anticipated.

Two hundred fourteen years ago this week (on June 5, 1787), the Constitutional Convention turned to the question of a national judiciary. A few days earlier, Governor Edmund Randolph of Virginia had opened their work by outlining the defects of the Articles of Confederation. Randolph put forward 15 proposed changes which were the result of discussions among all seven Virginia delegates as they met daily and awaited the arrivals of delegates from other States. James Madison was the chief thinker behind this "Virginia Plan."

At the time, the "United States in Congress assembled" was meeting in New York City and operating under the Articles of Confederation. The Articles gave to Congress the power to appoint courts, but only for the trial and appeal of crimes and captures committed on the high seas. The Virginia Plan sought to expand the reach of the national courts, so the ninth of Randolph's resolutions proposed that "a National Judiciary be established to consist of one or more supreme tribunals, and of inferior tribunals to be chosen by the National Legislature."

In the debate of June 5, James Wilson of Pennsylvania opposed having the legislature appoint judges because the consequence would be "intrigue, partiality, and concealment." On the other hand, John Rutledge of South Carolina said that vesting the appointment power in an executive smacked of monarchy. Madison tended to agree with both points, and wondered if the power might be given to "the Senatorial branch" where there would be enough members to answer Mr. Rutledge's objection but not so many as to offend Mr. Wilson. Alexander Hamilton seems to have first suggested that the executive authority nominate but the Senate be given "the right of rejecting or approving," but the Convention was not yet ready to agree to Hamilton's suggestion.

When the Convention returned to the subject on July 18, Nathaniel Gorham of Massachusetts seconded Hamilton's idea. Gorham proposed that judges be nominated and appointed by the executive officer "by and with the advice and consent of the second branch" of the legislature, a procedure that his State had used successfully for 140 years. Gorham's motion failed.

Three days later, the Convention gave the power to appoint judges to the Senate, but that decision would not stand. When the Convention returned to the issue in early September, it took away the power to appoint. The Convention finally provided that the President "shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint . . . Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States . . . which shall be established by Law" [Art. II, sec. 2].

In Federalist No. 66, Hamilton reiterated the decision of the Convention. "There will, of course, be no exertion of choice on the part of the Senate," he wrote. "They may defeat one choice of the Executive, and oblige him to make another; but they cannot themselves choose — they can only ratify or reject the choice of the president." Recent remarks by some Senators are to the contrary, perhaps, but it is Hamilton who is right.

The executive was designated to choose judges, Hamilton continued in Federalist No. 76, because the "sole and undivided responsibility of one man will naturally beget a livelier sense of duty," and a "single well-directed man by a single understanding, cannot be distracted and warped by that diversity of views, feeling and interest, which frequently" affect the decisions of a legislative body. Nevertheless, the Constitution requires the concurrence of the Senate because "It would be an excellent check upon a spirit of favoritism in the President, and would tend greatly to preventing the appointment of unfit characters from State prejudice, from family connection, from personal attachment, or from a view to popularity."

The table below shows how quickly the Senate has acted on the judicial nominees of a new President. With only the exception of President Ford's anomalous term, the Senate has confirmed more than 90 percent of a President's nominees to the courts during his first two years in office. Even this statistic might obscure a President's rate of success, however, because some readers might infer that a 90-percent success rate implies a 10-percent failure rate. That is an invalid inference. Often, the Senate simply does not have time to consider all of a President's nominees during the first Congress of his presidency. A 90-percent approval rate means merely that of all the nominations received by the Senate in a Congress, 90 percent were approved during that two years.

Court of Appeals and District Court Nominees Confirmed During a President's First Two Years in Office, Combined Percentage of All Such Nominations Received

President	Senate and President of Same Party	Senate and President of Different Parties
Kennedy	98.9%
Johnson (1965-66)	96.7%
Nixon		92.8%
Ford (1975-76) [includes a presidential election year]		82.7%
Carter	92.8%
Reagan	97.8%
Bush		93.3%
Clinton	90.1%

Written by Lincoln Oliphant, 224-2946

Sources: The account of the Constitutional Convention is taken from the indispensable M. Farrand, THE RECORDS OF THE FEDERAL CONVENTION OF 1787 (1937 rev. ed.), Vol. I pp. 21, 119-20, 128; Vol. II, pp. 44, 72, 183, 498. Hamilton's writings are from THE FEDERALIST No. 66, at 449, & No. 76 at 510-11, 513 (J.E. Cooke ed., 1961). The chart was prepared by RPC using data from CRS (D. Rutkus, CRS Memorandum, "Judicial appointments and vacancy statistics, 1977-1999" (dated Jan. 3, 2000)), supplemented for 2000 with data from the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, and supplemented for years before 1977 by data from the Calendar of the Senate Judiciary Committee. RPC intern Jordan Heller, Princeton University class of 2002, did the research for the earlier years. President Ford's term, which is shown in the chart, is "anomalous" because his first full Congress included a presidential election, and confirmation rates always drop in those years. His first Congress would have been a second Congress for an elected President. Supreme Court nominees are not included in the data but would make very little change in the percentages shown.

I will try to get hard copies circulated around, but in the interim, here is the internet link to the DC Circuit's website page with the opinion.

3-0, per Sentelle. Basically cribs our brief. Opinion expressly controls delayed appointments as well as mid-term appointments.

AG's office has confirmed that DOJ will recommend a veto of the Horn legislation. Therefore, it is up to us when and how to use that information.

Attached, per your request. In addition to that guidance, use of e-mail does not cause the government to incur an additional cost; therefore, the use of e-mail for "political activity" in the manner you inquired about is legally permitted. As a prophylactic measure, however, your office has set up separate e-mail accounts.

This confirms advice given orally to the two of you.

I have confirmed with the Office of Special Counsel that the RNC can send e-mails seeking political assistance (get out the vote efforts, etc.) to non-PAS and non-White-House individuals who happen to work in the Executive Branch. In addition, the employees can respond to those RNC e-mails on their government e-mail system. However, the employees cannot use their government e-mail system to forward those e-mails to others, and that caution should be noted in the RNC e-mail that is sent to the employees.

Please contact me with any further questions.

------------------------------------------------------------
Progress for America Conference Call
Thursday, May 16th, 2:30 pm
Agenda

2:30 Intro and Welcome Jennifer Oschal

Jennifer will briefly thank people on the call for their help and introduce them to speakers.

2:35 Grassroots Overview Tim Goeglin

Jennifer will introduce Tim at which point he will talk about the importance of support from outside of DC. Mention that we cannot win this fight without the legal community across the country on board with the ?fairness?
angle.

Keep in mind, the participants on this call are NOT grassroots activists, but legal scholars, judges, etc. who are interested in overall strategy, not technique. If you can talk about plans for 6th circuit, Estrada, Owen and others ? that would be great.

2:42 Nominee Overview Brett Kavanauh

Jennifer will introduce Brett, who will provide update on the nominees on the radar screen. Also provide general numbers and overview of confirmations compared to administrations past.

2:50 Q&A

I will provide you with questions from the audience ahead of time. You can choose which questions you will answer and do so at this time.

Times stated above are very fluid. If Tony Feather is available, I will introduce him to make brief remarks at beginning of call. I only ask that the call lasts 30 mins ? but your overview presentations can be as long as you wish.

Conversation with Chairman Lieberman (May 15, 2002)

1. We have broadened the scope of the survey by circulating a follow-up survey that asks two additional questions, as you requested. This includes questions about communications relating to the NEPDG and communications with agencies other than the 8 listed agencies. (Note: Our communications office has a practice of making widely distributed surveys in matters such as this available to the public. We see nothing wrong with that practice.)

2. We are continuing to gather e-mail and WAVES records.

3. We have started follow-up interviews with individuals who have indicated they may possess relevant information.

4. We will send your staff a list of the persons who have completed the survey. So that you know, it is our impression that there is a very limited group of people who have any relevant information -- and, moreover, the information that this group possesses appears quite limited.

5. We are moving expeditiously. Indeed, we asked for responses to the follow-up survey by May 17, this Friday.

6. As we stated in the meeting, we can send the survey to others in the EOP after we complete these steps, but we first want to finish these steps, which are the most likely to generate useful information for the Committee.

7. We hope to provide the Committee at least a summary of relevant information soon, preferably in the next few weeks. (Note: The Committee has not asked for any documents.)

Privileged Attorney Communication

In our meeting this afternoon with NARA, Secret Service, and White House Counsel, all parties agreed with my recommendation that we may proceed with OA/CIO's proposal to move the computerized WAVES request system from Lotus Notes to an intranet based system. Consistent with practice dating back to the Nixon administration, Secret Service will continue to provide the WAVES information to the White House Records Management Office, which would eventually provide it to the Presidential Library. There was a general discussion in the meeting on the unique status of the WAVES data. However, it was agreed that the proper way to records manage this information, given the historical precedent and its particular purpose, was as described above.

Brett -- The attached draft is also essentially internal to OHS at this time. It is a draft of a possible Homeland Security Presidential Directive No. 4 (HSPD-4), and would be intended to serve as a kind of a companion piece to the FOIA legislation noted in the draft "white paper" on information sharing I just sent you. Obviously the FOIA legislation could take months, years or forever. Regardless of that timetable, the attached is being considered as an initial component which, while imperfect in effect and scope (b/c it can't protect homeland security information the way a FOIA exemption could), has the value of a prompt step now.
The basic problem it seeks to address is this: Everyone now recognizes that there is a category of "homeland security information" that is potentially as sensitive as we've always understood NATIONAL security information to be. We don't want information about security perimeters for nuclear power plants (or even just electrical substations) to be available to any foreigner who requests it. At the same time, we don't want to just slap "Top Secret" or other classifications on all such information -- b/c that would effectively prevent us from readily sharing such information with those who may need it most. Meaning: First responders closest to the scene -- like NON-federal firefighters and police (who generally do not have fed. security clearances).
This draft is also being prepared for discussion at the PCC level. I would welcome any thoughts, concerns, suggestions or edits. -- E.

All,

Here is the most recent version of HSPD 4. Please review and send me your comments. The Task 2 revisions were taken almost verbatim from edits suggested by the DCI. Please let me know your thoughts. This document needs to go out tomorrow along with the PCC invite.

Thanks for your input.

Best,
Marianne

DRAFT HOMELAND SECURITY PRESIDENTIAL DIRECTIVE ON HOMELAND SECURITY INFORMATION
(as of May 13, 2002)

Background. Our democratic principles require that the American people be ~~well-informed~~well informed of the activities of their Government. Also, our nation's continued growth and progress depend upon the free flow of information. The Paperwork Reduction Act requires that federal agencies provide for the dissemination of public information on a timely basis, on equitable terms, and in a manner that promotes the utility of the information to the public. Similarly, the Freedom of Information Act provides for public access to government information. Nevertheless, throughout our history, the national interest has required that certain information be maintained in confidence in order to protect our citizens and our democratic institutions from harm.

Recent events, in particular, have demonstrated the need to protect certain information related to aspects of America's homeland security when the public disclosure of such information would cause significant harm to the public health and safety or long-term economic prosperity of the citizens of the United States. Recent events also have demonstrated the necessity of sharing information that indicates a threat to the safety and security of the American people broadly throughout federal, state, and local government and appropriate elements of the private sector without compromising the integrity of classified information.

Purpose. The struggle against terrorism in the United States is a national struggle. Federal officials must work as part of a larger national team with State and local governments and the private sector. The Federal government needs a better system of communication with these partners, in terms of both content and ~~process, that~~ process that works in concert with our laws and values regarding public access to information, privacy, civil liberties, and protection of sources and methods. The purpose of this Directive is to enhance the ability of government and private sector officials to exchange information about threats to residents, operations, and the infrastructure of the United States in a way that appropriately safeguards the sensitivity of such information. Some of this information will be classified, and much more will be sensitive but unclassified. This program will include guidance for identifying and safeguarding sensitive but unclassified information related to homeland security, as well as the designation and training of key positions to access and handle both classified and sensitive but unclassified information related to homeland security.

I am assigning the following tasks to ensure coordinated efforts to improve communication of essential homeland security information among all levels of government and the private sector:

Task 1. Sensitive Homeland Security Information (SHSI). Within 180 days of the date of this Directive, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), after consultation with the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security, shall issue guidance that sets a standard to identify and safeguard ~~for identifying and safeguarding~~ sensitive homeland security information that is not classified pursuant to state or executive order ~~on national security grounds~~ or protected under existing legislative authority. ~~, such as the Atomic Energy Act.~~ Such guidance shall be applicable throughout the Executive ~~Branch~~ Branch. It should also be recommended as the threshold guidance for safeguarding homeland security information that is to be provided ~~and~~ to other authorized non-Executive Branch recipients~~. of such information~~. To the maximum extent possible, the guidance ~~shall use~~ should consider existing programs within agencies to protect unclassified information eligible for protection under the Freedom of Information Act in order to facilitate the least administrative burden and quickest implementation while ensuring that SHSI is adequately ~~protected~~ protected and safeguarded from unauthorized disclosure. In developing guidance, OMB and the Office of Homeland Security shall consult ~~with~~ with the heads ~~Executive~~of Executive B~~b~~ranch departments, agencies, and entities~~state~~; state and local government officials~~;~~; officials in key private industries~~;~~; and the public interest community.

Task 2. Exchanging Sensitive Homeland Security Information. Within 180 days of the date of this Directive~~, ,~~the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security shall ~~coordinate~~ consult with the heads of Executive B~~b~~ranch departments ~~agencies~~, agencies and entities and (1) determine whether such agencies, departments, and entities have in place adequate procedures for the timely and effective conversion of information that may be derived from classified or other sensitive government information sources into sensitive but unclassified information impacting on homeland security, which will be safeguarded as sensitive homeland security information; and (2) develop guidance for executive branch departments, agencies and entities for (a) the sharing of sensitive homeland security information, which is intended to provide as much relevant information as necessary, with federal, State, local, and private sector officials; and (b) the appropriate safeguarding and use of such sensitive homeland security information as such officials seek to enhance homeland security., This guidance should incorporate best practices for the protection of sensitive government information, with respect to the sharing, use and safeguarding of sensitive homeland security infomration. ~~to develop guidance for use by federal, State, local, and private sector officials in sharing credible and essential information regarding America's homeland security that is derived from intelligence reporting and other classified sources, without compromising intelligence sources and methods or other national security equities. The guidance for converting classified information into Sensitive Homeland Security Information shall be designed to provide as much detail as possible regarding the timing, location, nature, and credibility of each threat or other aspects of homeland security.. The guidance should incorporate current best practices for exchanging sensitive but unclassified information about homeland security, and should include examples for converting classified information into sensitive but unclassified information as well as guidelines for determining when to downgrade classified information related to homeland security.~~

Task 3. Security Clearances for State and Private Industry Officials. Within 90 days of the date of this Directive, the Director of the Information Security Oversight Office, after consultation with other Executive branch agencies having knowledge and expertise in this area, shall submit to the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security a plan for obtaining security clearances as soon as possible for appropriate State, territorial, local, and private sector officials. The plan shall include recommendations for the appropriate level of clearances, a mechanism and guidelines for determining officials who should obtain a clearance, a mechanism for determining when to share classified information, recommended agencies to perform the needed investigations and adjudication, and a detailed budget, including life cycle requirements for periodic reinvestigation. The Director of the Information Security Oversight Office shall coordinate all necessary steps to implement the plan as approved by the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security after coordination with pertinent agency officials.

Task 4. Training and Education. Within 90 days of the date of this Directive, the Director of the Information Security Oversight Office, in consultation with Executive branch agencies having knowledge and expertise in this area, shall submit to the Assistant to the President for Homeland Security a plan, including a detailed budget, for providing necessary training and education to the following: (a) State, local, and other non-federal employees who receive national security clearances; and (b) State and local officials and other non-federal employees who will have access to sensitive homeland security information. The training should emphasize proper handling procedures for both classified information and Sensitive Homeland Security Information. The training for non-federal employees who receive security clearances should include guidance about how to use classified information effectively as well as how to safeguard it. The head of each federal agency shall ensure that all appropriate staff within his or her agency receives training in the handling of sensitive homeland security information.

Dear Congressman ____:

Section 616 of Public Law 107-77 directs the President to submit a legislative proposal to establish "a comprehensive program to ensure fair, equitable, and prompt compensation for all United States victims of international terrorism" that occurred on or after November 1, 1979. While Section 616 has no legal effect under Article II, Section 3 of the Constitution, I am writing to offer the Administration's comments on the bills pending in Congress that would provide compensation to victims of international terrorism. The Administration believes that, at a minimum, the following principles should guide consideration of any proposal to ensure compensation for victims of international terrorism.

First, a program funded by the taxpayers should provide the same benefits to those with low incomes that it provides to victims of greater means. While plaintiffs in tort suits may receive differing awards based upon their lost income, the federal government generally should not draw such distinctions in a victims compensation program. Rather, such government compensation should be without regard to the victim's income status.

Second, victims should receive compensation as quickly as possible. We should not create a lengthy administrative process that will prevent victims from quickly receiving assistance and that will force victims to relive their tragedies. The need for a prompt process for compensating victims further weighs against providing different amounts to different victims based upon their individualized circumstances.

Third, a program funded by taxpayers should recognize the importance of private insurance and other private financial measures in protecting victims' families against financial loss. The government program should not be designed to be the primary means of compensating victims and victims' families for their losses. The proposal to compensate victims of international terror is based upon the premise that international terrorism is different, because the victims have been targeted because of their U.S. connection and because of the difficulty of recovering compensation from the wrongdoers. That should not, however, change the fact that life insurance, savings, and other private financial measures are the primary means by which Americans protect themselves against unexpected financial hardship. Any compensation amount should be set with that premise in mind.

Fourth, the government program for terrorism victims should provide compensation on par with that provided other victims for whom the government provides compensation. It would be difficult to justify giving more money to victims of international terrorism than the government gives to police officers and firefighters killed in the line of duty. Therefore, the benefits for victims of international terrorism should not exceed the federal government's no-fault, $250,000 (indexed for inflation) benefit for public safety officers killed in the line of duty. See 42 U.S.C. 3796.

Fifth, the victims of international terrorism program should preserve the President's ability to conduct foreign policy. Therefore, the Administration opposes the use of blocked assets to fund such compensation or to satisfy judgments. Using blocked assets would preclude their use to pressure regimes to improve their policies on terrorism, risk taxpayer liability for third party claims against the assets, eliminate their availability to satisfy current U.S. government claims (currently more than $2 billion), and put at risk diplomatic property. Funding for any proposal to compensate victims of international terror should instead come from the International Affairs 150 Account. We are not, however, opposed to allowing victims and their families to sue those responsible for the terrorist acts under existing law. If an individual actually receives compensation from the defendants in such a suit, the government should have a right of reimbursement.

Sixth, several of the proposals pending in Congress would provide relief for a few categories of terrorism victims and are modeled after the September 11th Victim Compensation Fund. The Administration has serious concerns with this approach, because the September 11th Fund was based upon the unique circumstances of the September 11th terrorist attacks and should not, therefore, become the basis for a future program.

We look forward to working with the Congress on a proposal that would meet those principles.

Very truly yours,

Brett,

Lezlee wanted me to run this invite by Counsel to make sure everything's ok. This is for an event we're having with the President on June 13th. I think everything's fine, but we just wanted to double-check.

Please let me know if you see any problems with this.

Thanks!
Katy

Do you want to ask Moose his usual practice for something like this? My assumption is that a broad-based group of invitees is perfectly fine except for a company/official actually under indictment or in some such equivalent trouble.

Brett,

Lezlee wanted me to run this invite by Counsel to make sure everything's ok. This is for an event we're having with the President on June 13th. I think everything's fine, but we just wanted to double-check.

Please let me know if you see any problems with this.

Thanks!
Katy

This is fine. There is no preferential treatment. All ticket holders have an equal chance of being selected. These are appropriate 501(c)(3) organizations. The Susan Komen Foundation is not under investigation by the federal government, so there is no apparent reason why involvement with this organization should reflect negatively on the POTUS or FLOTUS. Many First Lady's have been involved in these type of issues in the past. The cancer survivors understand this is for them personally.

Go ahead, unless Brett has some objection.

Hi Brett --

Question for you. The Susan Komen Foundation is holding a dinner at the women's museum the night before the Race for the Cure on May 31st. My question for you (and it is explained a little more below), Can we have the President and Mrs. Bush sign race numbers to be given out? Everyone who attends will get a ticket and they will pick the recipients randomly from a bowl.
Do you think we could do this since it is not for a fundraiser?
Let me know,Meredith

hey Meredith--can the POTUS and FLOTUS sign the #1 and #2 bib numbers--these are strictly NOT for auction or fundraisng or anything like that. They will be given away at the eve of race event for survivors and supporters. I have the numbers here and can get them to the right person in person.

thanks

Hi Meredith. I know that Steve Robinson has hooked up with your communications

Okay, I just talked to the Communications guy and he says I need two things:
the phone number audio visual contact, sound person to make sure you all have the right equipment necessary.

let me know your timetable on the two also, i'm leaving town next thursday to the following tuesday so i'd like to get most of it done by tuesday next week.

Debbie --

I wanted to make sure that You all were setting up a phone number for us to call in. You had mentioned that you were working on it but I wanted to see if there was any progress. I'm hopefully going to talk to our Communications shop today, and I'm going to work on the Speechwriting request. I need to get that in by Friday so I may go over that with you.

Also, great job last night.
I saw you from afar at the swisshotel but wasn't able to actually make it over to you.
Talk soon -- Meredith

This is fine. There is no preferential treatment. All ticket holders have an equal chance of being selected. These are appropriate 501(c)(3) organizations. The Susan Komen Foundation is not under investigation by the federal government, so there is no apparent reason why involvement with this organization should reflect negatively on the POTUS or FLOTUS. Many First Lady's have been involved in these type of issues in the past. The cancer survivors understand this is for them personally.

Go ahead, unless Brett has some objection.

Hi Brett --

Question for you. The Susan Komen Foundation is holding a dinner at the women's museum the night before the Race for the Cure on May 31st. My question for you (and it is explained a little more below), Can we have the President and Mrs. Bush sign race numbers to be given out? Everyone who attends will get a ticket and they will pick the recipients randomly from a bowl.
Do you think we could do this since it is not for a fundraiser?
Let me know,Meredith

hey Meredith--can the POTUS and FLOTUS sign the #1 and #2 bib numbers--these are strictly NOT for auction or fundraisng or anything like that. They will be given away at the eve of race event for survivors and supporters. I have the numbers here and can get them to the right person in person.

thanks

Hi Meredith. I know that Steve Robinson has hooked up with your expert. Here is the thing--I know you are leaving town, should we have a brief meeting to discuss the timeline and nature of this call? I mean to clarify all of the particulars including the timing, the recognition and potential interaction of the person on our end who answers the call? I want to make sure

I understand all of the details so that we reduce like crazy and room for Okay, I just talked to the Communications guy and he says I need two things:

the phone number
audio visual contact, sound person to make sure you all have the right necessary.

let me know your timetable on the two also, i'm leaving town next thursday
to the following tuesday so i'd like to get most of it done by tuesday next week.

in he Washington Post "Outlook:" section in December on the Executive Order.
Is on the faculty at Duke University. PRA 6

Terry Sullivan - The Baker Institute and Associate Director of the White House 2001 Project; he met Judge Gonzales when Gonzales went to speak at the Baker Institute last year. He is in the Department of Political Science at the University of North Carolina. PRA 6

Howard Silver - Executive Director of the Consortium of Social Science Association, PRA 6

Martha Joynt Kumar - I write about issues related to White House communications, head the White House 2001 Project, and on the faculty of the Department of Political Science at Towson University and the organizer of the group. Since Bob Spitzer who heads the Presidency Research Group is not going to be there, I will put in my oar for the PRG. PRA 6

Everyone knows the deal: off the record. At the same time, you know it is really difficult to keep meeting information under wraps. We are all looking forward to an interesting discussion of a topic we care about from a variety of angles. You and Judge Gonzales from the viewpoint of protecting information, scholars and news people as users of information from presidential libraries

I assume we come in the Northwest Gate rather than through EEOB, Brett. As far as Terry Sullivan is concerned, this afternoon I sent you the list of the ten people I told you last night who are coming. Terry Sullivan is one of them. I sent his SOC and his DOB just as I did for the others. I just checked the email I sent to you earlier today and his information is there as well as that of the others. If you have not received the information for all of the people, please let me know as soon as possible as I know you will need it

Given Rea's e-mail, should we send a follow-up Postmaster e-mail that states 2 things:

1. Regarding the previous e-mail regarding the Enron subpoena, please open and read the documents that were attached, as you have an affirmative responsibility to complete and return the form attached to that e-mail.

2. Please note that the subpoena requests official EOP documents, no matter when created, that refer to, relate to, or incorporate communications that occurred between January 1, 1992, and December 2, 2001

Adam;

Pls note the date range (The original request said January 20, 2001, to December 2, 2002) I am sure it means December 2 2001.)

Here is the search definition, estimate and schedule for the search you requested. I made some assumptions based on the previous "enron" search that I applied here, so please check the definition to make sure it is what is wanted. Also, the estimate is based on real numbers from the "enron" search.

Search definition:

Search all ARMS records created between Jan 20 2001 and Dec 31 2001 (12 months)* for the phrases and phrase combinations cited in the "INCLUDE LIST" below. The results from this part of the search will then be searched for the phrases in the "EXCLUDE LIST" below and'ed with the "CREATOR:" phrase and any hits will be excluded from the final delivery. (This will eliminate any mail sent by either Brian Bravo or Rachel Sunbarger or anyone else on the exclude list.
Additionally, Bulk mail will not be searched in response to this request.

* ARMS buckets are segregated by month, It is proposed that ALL of December will be searched.

Note: All these words and phrases will be searched case insensitively.

INCLUDE LIST

Lisa and jacobson (On the same line of a record)
or Jeff and keeler (On the same line of a record)
or Rich and Shapiro (On the same line of a record)
or Dick and Shapiro (On the same line of a record)
or Emilio and vicens (On the same line of a record)

Adam:

Thanks for your help with the first ARMS search. We've determined that we need to have an additional search performed for the following names:

1. "Lisa Jacobson"
2. "Jeffrey Keeler" or "Jeff Keeler"
3. "Richard Shapiro" or "Rich Shapiro" or "Dick Shapiro"
4. "Emilio Vicens"

As before, the date range is January 20, 2001, to December 2, 2002.

Thanks,

Chris

Subject: Re: Additional ARMS Search

Adam;

Pls note the date range (The original request said January 20, 2001, to December 2, 2002) I am sure it means December 2 2001.)

Here is the search definition, estimate and schedule for the search you requested. I made some assumptions based on the previous "enron" search that I applied here, so please check the definition to make sure it is what is wanted. Also, the estimate is based on real numbers from the "enron" search.

Search definition:

Search all ARMS records created between Jan 20 2001 and Dec 31 2001 (12 months)* for the phrases and phrase combinations cited in the "INCLUDE LIST" below. The results from this part of the search will then be searched for the phrases in the "EXCLUDE LIST" below and'ed with the "CREATOR:" phrase and any hits will be excluded from the final delivery. (This will eliminate any mail sent by either Brian Bravo or Rachel Sunbarger or anyone else on the exclude list.
Additionally, Bulk mail will not be searched in response to this request.

* ARMS buckets are segregated by month, It is proposed that ALL of December will be searched.

Note: All these words and phrases will be searched case insensitively.

INCLUDE LIST

Lisa and jacobson (On the same line of a record)
or Jeff and keeler (On the same line of a record)
or Rich and Shapiro (On the same line of a record)
or Dick and Shapiro (On the same line of a record)
or Emilio and vicens (On the same line of a record)

EXCLUDE LIST
sunbarger
brian and bravo

Adam:

Thanks for your help with the first ARMS search. We've determined that we need to have an additional search performed for the following names:

1. "Lisa Jacobson"
2. "Jeffrey Keeler" or "Jeff Keeler"
3. "Richard Shapiro" or "Rich Shapiro" or "Dick Shapiro"
4. "Emilio Vicens"

As before, the date range is January 20, 2001, to December 2, 2002.

Thanks,

Chris

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL EOP EMPLOYEES

FROM: ALBERTO R. GONZALES
COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

SUBJECT: ENRON SUBPOENA

On May 22, 2002, the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee issued the attached subpoena to the Executive Office of the President requesting documents pertaining to certain Enron-related communications occurring between January 1, 1992, and December 2, 2002. Please read the subpoena carefully.

You are directed to produce to Counsel's Office all official EOP documents in your possession (including any e-mails) responsive to the subpoena no later than May 31, 2002.

Please be advised that you are expected to perform a reasonable, diligent, and good faith search of all official documents in your possession for materials responsive to the subpoena.

You will have satisfied your responsibilities if you produce all of your official EOP documents relating to, referring to, or incorporating the following:

(a) Communications between Enron and any EOP employee occurring between January 1, 1992, and December 2, 2001

(Note: "Enron" means anyone you knew was working for, or communicating on behalf of, Enron Corporation or one of its businesses.); and

(b) Communications about Enron between any EOP employee and any employee of any Executive Branch department or agency occurring between January 1, 1992, and December 2, 2001

(Note: The Executive Office of the President and the Office of the Vice President are not departments or agencies.)

You are also directed to complete the attached Certification and return it by May 31. Note that you must complete the Certification whether or not you have responsive documents.

All documents and Certifications should be delivered to Hana Brilliant (6-5049) in EEOB 158.

If you have any questions, please call Associate Counsels Brett Kavanaugh (6-7984), Brad Berenson (6-2318), or Chris Bartolomucci (6-7963).

CERTIFICATION

Please check one of the following:

_____ I certify that I performed a reasonable, diligent, and good faith search of all the official EOP documents in my possession (including any e-mails I have) for materials responsive to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committees subpoena dated May 22, 2002, and have produced all such documents to the Office of the Counsel to the President.

_____ I certify that I performed a reasonable, diligent, and good faith search of all the official EOP documents in my possession (including any e-mails I have) for materials responsive to the Senate Governmental Affairs Committees subpoena dated May 22, 2002, and have no such documents.

INSTRUCTIONS

(1) The documents requested include all those that are in the custody, control or possession of the EOP, or within the right of custody, control or possession of the EOP, its officers, agents, employees, or representatives.

(2) Unless otherwise indicated, the documents requested are those dated, prepared or received during the period January 1, 1992 to December 2, 2001 or that refer to, relate to or incorporate communications that took place during that time period.

(3) You are under a continuing obligation to promptly provide additional documents responsive to this subpoena.

(4) Each document produced shall be produced in a form that renders the document susceptible of copying, shall include all attachments and shall not be redacted.

(5) Documents produced in response to this subpoena shall be produced together with copies of file labels, dividers or identifying markers with which they were associated when this subpoena was served or shall otherwise be identified and dated.

(6) It shall not be a basis for refusal to produce documents that any other person or entity also possesses non-identical or identical copies of the same document.

(7) If any of the subpoenaed information is available in machine-readable form, state the form in which it is available and provide sufficient detail to allow the information to be copied to a readable format. If the information requested is stored in a computer, indicate whether you have an existing program that will print the records in a readable form.

(8) If the subpoena cannot be complied with in full, it shall be complied with to the extent possible, with an explanation of why full compliance is not possible.

(9) In the event that a document is withheld on the basis of privilege, provide with the responses to this subpoena the following information concerning any such document: (a) the date of the document, its author, his or her occupation, title and employer, all recipients, the occupation, title and employer of each recipient, (b) the subject matter of the document, (c) the privilege claimed and a brief explanation of the basis of the claim of privilege, (d) the type of document, and (e) the relationship of the author and recipient(s) to each other.

(10) If any document responsive to this subpoena was, but no longer is, in your possession, custody, or control, identify the document (stating its date, author, subject and recipients) and explain the circumstances by which it ceased to be in your possession, custody, or control.

(11) If a date set forth in this subpoena referring to a communication, meeting or other event is inaccurate, but the actual date is known to you or is otherwise apparent from the context of the request, you should produce all documents which would be responsive as if the date were correct.

(12) For each document produced, please indicate the paragraph and, where applicable, subparagraph of Attachment A to which it is responsive.

DEFINITIONS

(1) "Enron" means Enron Corp., Enron Capital Trust I, Enron Capital Trust II, and each of their affiliates, subsidiaries, partnerships, special purpose entities, joint ventures, trusts or any other entity in which Enron Corp., Enron Capital Trust I, or Enron Capital Trust II is or was a shareholder, partner, investor, trustee, or member. The term "Enron" includes, with respect to each entity described in the previous sentence, the entity's officers, directors, employees, and representatives, including any person or entity purporting to act on their behalf or known to you to be acting on their behalf.

(2) "Executive Office of the President" or "EOP" means the Executive Office of the President and all of its units including, but not limited to, the Office of Administration, the White House Office, the Office of the Vice President, the Office of Science and Technology Policy, the Office of Management and Budget, the Office of the Chief of Staff, the United States Trade Representative, the Office of Management and Administration, the Office of White House Counsel, the Office of Communications, the Office of Cabinet Affairs, the Office of the Staff Secretary, the Office of Speechwriting, the Office of Public Liaison, the Office of Correspondence, the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Policy and Political Affairs, the Office of Information Programs, the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for White House Operations, the Domestic Policy Council, the Office of Federal Procurement Policy, the Office of Intergovernmental Affairs, the Office of Legislative Affairs, the Office of Media Affairs, the National Economic Council, the Office of Policy Development, the Office of Political Affairs, the Office of Strategic Initiatives, the White House Military Office, the Office of Presidential Personnel, the Office of the Press Secretary, the Office of Scheduling, the Office of Advance, the Council of Economic Advisors, the Council on Environmental Quality, the Executive Residence, the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, the National Security Council, the Office of Homeland Security, the Office of National Drug Control Policy, the Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives and the Office of Policy Development. The terms "Executive Office of the President" and "EOP" include, with respect to each entity described in the previous sentence, the entity's officials, employees and representatives and any person detailed to work for the entity. The terms also include the President and Vice President of the United States.

(3) "Document" means any written, recorded, or graphic matter of any nature whatsoever, regardless of how recorded, and whether original or copy, including, but not limited to, the following: memoranda; reports; studies; reviews; analyses; presentations; working papers; records; notes; letters; notices; confirmations; telegrams; faxes, telexes, receipts; appraisals; interoffice and intraoffice communications; electronic mail (e-mail); computer or other electronic files; contracts; cables; notations or logs of any type of conversation, telephone call, meeting or other communication; bulletins; printed matter; computer printouts; teletype; invoices; transcripts; audio and video recordings, diaries; appointment books; returns; summaries; minutes; bills; accounts; estimates; projections; comparisons; messages; or correspondence. A document bearing any notation not a part of the original text is to be considered a separate document. A draft or non-identical copy is a separate document within the meaning of this term.

(4) "Communication" means any contact or attempted contact or any disclosure of information, regardless of the means utilized, whether oral, electronic, by document or otherwise, and whether face-to-face, in meeting, by telephone, mail, telex, facsimile, computer, discussions, releases, delivery, or otherwise.

(5) The terms "and" and "or" shall be construed broadly and either conjunctively or disjunctively to bring within the scope of this subpoena any information which might otherwise be construed to be outside its scope. The term "any" includes the term "all" and vice versa, and both terms shall be construed broadly to bring within the scope of this subpoena any information which might otherwise be construed to be outside its scope. The singular includes the plural number and vice versa.

FLORIDA FALLOUT: DoJ Reverses Course And Finds No Election Violations
One week "after reigniting the controversy" over the WH 2000 FL vote, the DoJ told Congress 5/28 that "no Floridians were intentionally prevented from voting and that problems at the polls caused only a few people to leave without voting." In a letter to the Senate Jud. Cmte, DoJ Assistant AG Ralph Boyd wrote, "While the Civil Rights Division discovered evidence of significant confusion and delay in the three counties (Orange, Osceloa, and Miami-Dade), there were relatively few voters who actually did not vote because of these problems." Boyd said after "looking into 11,000 complaints" about the election, the DoJ "found violations in the three counties - mostly because of language barriers - and this 'may have resulted in at least 26 voters choosing to leave the polls.'" Boyd said, "that number of voters 'doesn't reasonably cast any doubt on President Bush's several hundred vote margin of victory" in FL. The DoJ's "announcement was immediately greeted with partisan skepticism." Sen. Bill Nelson (D-FL): "This is a stretch for me to believe, out of 11,000 complaints with everything that we went through." Last week, Boyd "told members" of the Sen. Jud. Cmte that the civil rights division "was preparing to sue the three counties for election law violations relating" to WH 2000, "with an eye toward reaching quick settlements." Rob Labasky, an atty for FL's assn of election supervisors, said the DoJ's "new letter appeared to counterbalance Boyd's statements about the lawsuits last week" (Smith/Allison, St. Petersburg Times, 5/29). FL Dem Chair Bob Poe, on the DoJ letter: "The U.S. Department of Justice's determination that there is little evidence that Florida voters were intentionally denied their right to vote in the 2000 general election is a slap in the face to all Floridians" (release, 5/29).

UNCLEARED PRELIMINARY DRAFT ACCURACY NOT VERIFIED

June 3, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

The Executive Office of the President (EOP) has prepared an initial production of documents in response to Senate Governmental Affairs Committee subpoena No. 000032. These documents bear Bates numbers 000001 through 001745. While this represents a substantial production, especially in light of the exceptionally short period of time allotted for making return to the subpoena, it is only an initial production. We are still in the process of receiving documents from various units within the EOP and are continuing to review those documents we have already received. We are working very hard to prepare additional documents for production, and we expect to make one or more additional productions to the Committee in the near future.[1] When production is complete, we will advise the Committee whether any responsive documents have been withheld; at present, there are none we have determined to withhold.

The 1,745 pages of documents being produced today are available for immediate inspection and review by Committee staff in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building. In addition, copies will be provided to the Committee as soon as agreement has been reached on procedures to safeguard the security and confidentiality of these documents, which are unredacted and include many sensitive categories of information, including social security numbers, e-mail addresses of government officials, conference call numbers on the White House exchange, proprietary and confidential business and commercial information, executive branch communications concerning matters of policy, and foreign relations material. (Future productions may also include classified material, as most National Security Council (NSC) records have not yet been reviewed.) In the meantime, Committee staff may contact my office to arrange for review of the documents.

These documents have been gathered from a variety of sources. Following receipt of the subpoena, which was the first time the Committee had requested documents from the White House, we circulated a request for responsive documents to all EOP employees; a copy of that request was provided to Committee staff. The Office of Records Management performed an electronic search of files in its possession that are full-text searchable, which include the presidential documents received from the Office of the Staff Secretary. Searches were performed of the records of the White House Worker and Visitor Entry System (WAVES) for records of entry to the White House complex by certain individuals known to be affiliated with Enron. The Office of Administration performed searches of the White House Automated

[1] Pursuant to paragraph 8 of the Instructions in the subpoena, we note that the Committee's subpoena was exceptionally broad, requiring all of the nearly 2,000 employees in the EOP to search for responsive documents, and provided only 12 days for compliance, of which three were consumed by the Memorial Day weekend. We have made an extraordinary effort to provide an initial production by the return date, but our work necessarily continues.

Records Management System (ARMS) for potentially responsive e-mails. The NSC staff also performed searches of its classified e-mail system.[2]

Please note that in performing our review of ARMS records, we have excluded several categories of e-mail traffic. We have not reviewed bulk e-mail from the general public sent to the general White House e-mail addresses, nor have we reviewed error messages or delivery failure notices. In addition, we have not reviewed bulk e-mails sent out by the White House Press Office containing items such as press releases, transcripts of press briefings, and public fact sheets. We also have not reviewed bulk e-mails received on the ARMS system that merely contain copies of newsletters or published news stories. Finally, where e-mails have contained attachments, we have not produced the unreadable "hex dumps" of the data in those attachments but have instead produced readable copies of the attachments themselves.

With respect to WAVES records, we have searched for records of entries by certain individuals from Enron who were either senior executives of the company or who we had some reason to believe may have visited the complex. (The latter category includes, for example, certain individuals working in Enron's Washington-based governmental relations office.) We have produced all the responsive entries we located. However, we renew our previous offer to supplement our search if the Committee becomes aware of additional names of potential visitors from Enron. In addition, as we have previously noted, the Committee should be aware that there are certain technical and practical limitations of the WAVES system that do not make it an absolutely reliable indicator of actual entries and/or exits.

As you are aware, many large business organizations, non-profits, interest groups, and labor unions communicate their policy views to Congress and the executive branch, including to Members of both parties and to the EOP regardless of Administration. While our review is not yet complete, the records we have examined thus far continue to reflect that Enron communicated its policy views to the EOP but that none of those communications was inappropriate or improper. They also continue to reflect that the related actions of EOP officials were responsible and fully consistent with the appropriate performance of their official duties.

Sincerely,

Alberto R. Gonzales
Counsel to the President

The Honorable Joseph I. Lieberman
Chairman
Senate Governmental Affairs Committee
United States Senate

[2] As you know, electronic searches can only be performed using specified search terms. In all cases, given the absence of guidance from the Committee, we have endeavored in good faith to devise a reasonable approach to the searches performed, including, at a minimum, the term "Enron" and the names of Enron senior executives and others known to have had communications with the EOP.

June 3, 2002

Dear Chairman Lieberman:

This letter supplements our earlier response to the Committee's requests for information concerning certain Executive Office of the President (EOP) communications relating to Enron Corporation. By letter dated May 22, 2002, we provided the Committee voluntarily, as a matter of comity, certain information responsive to those requests. In that letter and attachment, we advised the Committee that the information was necessarily preliminary in nature, reflecting only the results of certain initial investigative steps. We noted that "[a]s further work is performed, the information in th[e] attachment is subject to supplementation or amendment."

At this time, we wish to furnish certain corrections to information contained in the attachment to the May 22, 2002 letter. At the time of the letter to Secretary of Energy Spencer Abraham dated February 12, 2001 referenced in the attachment, Jim Connaughton was not yet Chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality; he was a lawyer in private practice. Also, at the time of the telephone calls referenced in the attachment between Steve Ruhlen, Deputy Assistant to the Vice President for Legislative Affairs, and Pat Shortridge, Mr. Shortridge was not yet an employee of Enron. In the October 19, 2001 meeting between Elizabeth Stolpe and the Clean Power Group, Jim Connaughton, Chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality was also in attendance. The conversations and meetings between Karen Hughes and other press secretaries referenced in the attachment were not for the purpose of discussing the subject of Enron but were instead routine conversations or meetings at which the subject of Enron may have come up. The time period of those conversations and meetings cannot be identified with certainty and may have occurred after December 2, 2001. Finally, there is a typographical error in the paragraph concerning the March 6 and March 7 meetings relating to the Commission on Ocean Policy. The March 7 meeting occurred on March 7, 2001, not March 7, 2002.

In my letter of May 22, 2002, I indicated that we expected to make further information responsive to the letter requests available to the Committee as we completed further work. In light of the Committee's decision to issue subpoena No. 000032, we have now redirected our efforts toward responding to that subpoena. Accordingly, further information responsive to the letter requests will now be furnished in the form of documents produced pursuant to the subpoena, rather than in narrative form.

Sincerely,

Alberto R. Gonzales
Counsel to the President

CONFIDENTIALITY AGREEMENT

I agree to maintain the confidentiality of all Executive Office of the President and Office of the Vice President documents (and all information derived from review of such documents) provided to me for review pursuant to the June 3, 2002, letters of Alberto Gonzales and David Addington. I understand that these documents are furnished with due regard for the constitutional separation of powers and reserving all legal authorities and privileges that may apply, including with respect to other governmental entities or private parties. I understand that the documents are provided in confidence and as in closed session. I agree to disclose information derived from review only to such Committee members and Committee staff as necessary, and I agree to inform the Office of Counsel to the President and Office of Counsel to the Vice President of all individuals to whom I impart any information derived from my review. I agree to ensure that those Committee members and staff to whom I impart any such information protect that information from further disclosure. This agreement does not affect or prejudice any subsequent document protocol the Committee may choose to adopt.

DISCLOSURE OF TAX RETURN INFORMATION FOR STUDENT AID PURPOSES

SEC. ___. (a) INTERNAL REVENUE CODE AMENDMENTS.--(1) DISCLOSURE. Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 6103, hereinafter in this section referred to as "the Code") is amended—

(A) in subsection (l)—

(i) in paragraph (10)—

(I) in subparagraph (B), by inserting a comma and "except as provided in subparagraph (C)," immediately after "subparagraph (A) shall"; and

(II) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(C) USE OF DISCLOSED TAXPAYER IDENTITY INFORMATION. Taxpayer identity information disclosed under subparagraph (A) may also be used by officers, employees, and contractors or other agents of the Department of Education, for the purpose of locating the person in order to collect the debt by means other than a reduction under section 6402(c) or (d)."; and

(ii) by amending paragraph (13) to read as follows:

"(13) DISCLOSURE OF RETURN INFORMATION FOR STUDENT FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE PURPOSES.--(A) IN GENERAL. (i) DISCLOSURE AUTHORIZED. The Secretary may, upon written request from the Secretary of Education, disclose the items of return information specified in clause (ii) for the purposes described in subparagraph (B) with respect to a person who—

"(I) has applied for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as 'the Act'),

(II) is seeking income contingent repayment on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (D)) ,

"(III) is the parent, as that term is defined for purposes of Title IV of the Act (in the case of a dependent student) or spouse (in the case of a independent student, if applicable) of an individual who has applied for the assistance or benefit described in subparagraphs (I) – (II).

"(ii) The return information that may be disclosed under this paragraph shall be limited to—

"(I) taxpayer identity information with respect to a person described in subclause (I)-(III) of clause (i);

"(II) the filing status of that taxpayer;

"(III) the adjusted gross income of that taxpayer;

"(IV) the total earnings from employment (including net earnings from self-employment) of that taxpayer;

"(V) the Federal income tax liability of that taxpayer tie to line on FAFSA/return; and

"(VI) the type of tax return filed by that taxpayer.

"(B) RESTRICTION ON USE OF DISCLOSED INFORMATION.- Return information may be disclosed under subparagraph (A) to officers, employees, and agents of the Department of Education only for the purpose of, and to the extent necessary to—

"(I) verify the information reported by a person described in subparagraph (A)(i) in applying for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Act; "

(II) determine income contingent repayment amounts and schedules on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (D)); or

"(III) collect overpayments of grants or loans provided under that title including by means of litigation. Information disclosed under this paragraph shall be limited to the tax years required, in accordance with the Act and implementing regulations, to carry out the purposes described in this paragraph.

"(C) DISCLOSURES TO STUDENT AID PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS. (i) IN GENERAL. Subject to clause (iii), officers, employees, or contractors or other agents of the Department of Education may disclose, to the entities described in clause (ii), the fact of a discrepancy between items of information previously reported, directly or indirectly, to the Secretary of Education and information subsequently provided to the Secretary of Education under the provisions of this section that may affect the amount of grant, loan, or work assistance provided to an applicant (including the collection of any overpayments of assistance), or the income contingent repayment of an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (E)). Notwithstanding section 6103(p)(4), such fact of discrepancy information shall not be subject to the safeguard provisions of that section.

"(ii) The entities referred to in clause (i) are:

"(I) Institutions of higher education, as defined in section 102 of the Act, that administer, or assist the Secretary of Education in administering, a grant, loan, or work assistance program under title IV of the Act.

"(II) State agencies that administer a grant or work assistance program under subpart 4 of part A of title IV of the Act.

"(III) The contractor of an entity described in clause (I) or (II).

"(iii) The information referred to in clause (i) shall be used solely for purposes of—

"(I) verifying the information reported by a person described in subparagraph (A)(i) in applying for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Act;

(II) determining income contingent repayment amounts and schedules on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (D)); or

"(III) collecting overpayments of grants or loans provided under that title.

(D) DISCLOSURES TO STUDENTS. Return information disclosed under subparagraph (B) may be redisclosed to students, including information pertaining to such students' parents or spouses as defined in section 6103(l)(13)(A)(i)(III).

"(E) APPLICABLE STUDENT LOAN. For purposes of subparagraph (B)(i)(III), the term 'applicable student loan' means—

"(i) any loan made under the program authorized under part D of title IV of the Act ; and

"(ii) any loan made under part B or E of that title that is in default and has been assigned to the Department of Education.

(2) CONFORMING AND OTHER AMENDMENTS. (A) Section 6103 of the Code is further amended—

(i) in subsection (a)(3), by striking "paragraph (6), (12), or (16) of subsection (l)," and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (6), (10), (12), (13), or (16) of subsection (l),";

(ii) in subsection (l)(10) –

by removing all references to subsection (e) of section 6402 and by striking the last sentence of section 6103(l)(10)(B).

(iii) in subsection (p)—

(I) in paragraph (3)(A), by striking "(13),"; and

(II) in paragraph (4), in the flush language at the end thereof, by striking "paragraph (6)(A), (12)(B), or (16) of subsection (l)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (6)(A), (10), (12)(B), (13), or (16) of subsection (l)".

(B) Section 7213(a)(2) of the Code is amended by inserting "(13)," immediately after "(12),".

(3) COMPLIANCE BY CONTRACTORS AND OTHER AGENTS WITH CONFIDENTIALITY SAFEGUARDS.--Section 6103(p) of the Code is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) DISCLOSURE TO CONTRACTORS AND OTHER AGENTS. (A) IN GENERAL.-

Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, no return or return information shall be disclosed to a contractor or other agent of a Federal, State, or local agency unless such agency

"(i) has requirements in effect which require each such contractor or other agent which would have access to returns or return information to provide safeguards (within the meaning of paragraph (4)) to protect the confidentiality of such returns or return information;

"(ii) agrees to conduct a regular on-site review (or a mid-point review in the case of a contract of less than 1 year in duration) of each contractor or other agent to determine compliance with such requirements;

"(iii) submits the findings of the most recent review conducted under clause (ii) to the Secretary as part of the report required by paragraph (4)(E); and

"(iv) certifies to the Secretary for the most recent annual period that such contractor or other agent is in compliance with all such requirements. Such certification shall be signed by the head of the agency or his or her delegate.

"(B) CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.--The certification required by subparagraph (A)(iv) shall include the name and address of each contractor or other agent and a description of the contract or agreement of the contractor or other agent with the agency, and the duration of such contract or agreement.

"(C) NOT APPLICABLE TO TAX ADMINISTRATION.--The requirements of this paragraph shall not apply to disclosures pursuant to subsection (n) for purposes of Federal tax administration.".

(b) HIGHER EDUCATION ACT AMENDMENTS. Section 484(q) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1091(q)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking out "to confirm "and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "in accordance with section 6103(l)(13) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, to confirm"; and

(B) by striking out "taxes paid, filing status, and exemptions reported by applicants (including parents)" and inserting in lieu thereof "tax liability, filing status, and type of income tax form filed, as reported by applicants (including parents or spouses, if applicable)";

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "tax return information" through the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof " Federal income tax return information as described in paragraph (1)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE. The amendments made by this section shall be effective on enactment.

Karl,

Is Mark really in Africa with Bono? This is a very scary thought.

I've got a favor to ask which you might think is nuts, so no harm, no foul. But I wanted to check.

Lawrence Odonnell whom you may know -- long time Dem guy, has been working on West wing -- has created a new political drama for mid-season next year on NBC called Mr. Sterling. It's basically a Mr. Smith goes to DC story about a new California senator.

Anyway, it's a show I'm interested in working on. I've got my guys at CAA working this but I was wondering if you would mind calling him and putting in a word for me. Basically it would be that I actually know at least something about politics and I'm not a total asshole, etc. Or something like that. It might go a long way toward raising my profile on his radar screen. The goal of the call would be for him to hang up the phone and be interested in following up and actually reading the stuff that has been sent over by CAA.

It could be good to have some Republican input into the show -- good for him, maybe good for us. I sure hope it won't be a total Dem pandering fest like West Wing. I'm not really sure what the feel of the show is going to be. I've read the pilot and it's pretty good.

His number is PRA 6

Russ has been really enjoying these White House shoots, so many thanks.

I think Corndog is in good shape...

Thanks, buddy. Understand totally if this isn't cool.

Take care,

Stuart

Dear Charlotte,

I was hoping you might be able to pass the e-mail below on to Mr. Brett Kavanaugh and to let me know whether he might be willing to write an article for publication in the upcoming issue of the Harvard Journal of Law and Public Policy....thanks in advance for your help!

P.S. -- Please say hello to Hana for me if you get a chance!

Dear Mr. Kavanaugh,

My name is Jamil Jaffer and I currently serve as the National Symposium Editor for the Harvard Journal of Law and Public Policy. I am writing today to introduce myself and to thank you for your participation in the Federalist Society's National Symposium on Law and Truth. As you may know, the Harvard Journal annually publishes articles from the Federalist Society's National Symposium and I wanted to personally invite you to contribute an article to our upcoming publication.

You may have already received a letter from Michael Geiser, the Editor in Chief of the Harvard Journal along with a copy of the transcript from your session. We have provided this transcript to assist you in the process of developing an article. The Harvard Journal will not be publishing the actual transcripts, but we hope to publish articles that are related to the topic that you and your colleagues discussed. We generally request that articles be approximately 20 pages in length and contain 50 footnotes. However, this is only a guideline -- we will certainly accept articles that are either longer or shorter.

We would request that you let us know whether you are planning on contributing an article as soon as possible so that we may plan accordingly.
If you do choose to contribute, we would ask that you provide us with an electronic copy of your article (preferably via e-mail) by June 3, 2002.

Please feel free to contact me should you have any questions or concerns.
I look forward to hearing from you and thank you again for participating in the symposium!

Best,

JJ

Hearing on Capital Investment In Indian Country

Subcommittee on Financial Institutions
U.S. Senate Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee

Written Statement

Rodger J. Boyd
Special Assistant to the Director

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
Community Development Financial Institutions Fund

June 6, 2002

REV_00342730

There were four remedies identified that relate to economic barriers.

1. Create Alternative Collateral Options for Trust Land. Workshop participants recommended recognizing and leveraging the value of trust assets; facilitating development of trust land through alternative means of valuation and collateralization, such as the creation of leaseholds and master leaseholds; building equity pools from trust lands and other resources; and converting traditional assets into collateral. Workshop participants also recommended that, for Indian Lands and Native Hawaiian Home Lands, the U.S. Department of the Interior and the Hawaii Department of Hawaiian Home Lands, respectively, examine the feasibility of further streamlining leasing procedures.

2. Develop New Local and Non-traditional Mechanisms to Deliver Capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Workshop participants suggested that Tribal governments should develop their capacity to orchestrate and leverage all sources of capital, and financial institutions should develop new lending and financing products and revise underwriting criteria to meet the unique needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian markets, including the development of micro-lending programs for small businesses and securitization of oil and gas reserves and timber. Workshop participants proposed two options for providing access to nontraditional sources of debt and equity capital:

- Develop Tribal or Inter-Tribal CDFIs, community banks, and other lending and investment institutions; and

- Create Tribal or Inter-Tribal pools for loan guarantees, equity investments/venture capital, micro-lending and lending for housing and small business.

3. Increase Equity Investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Equity Investment Roundtable participants suggested the following methods of increasing equity investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities:

- Create industry sector specific incubators that provide management and technical assistance to start-up businesses and that focus on the specific needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian business owners,
- Use existing "angel investor" networks (i.e. – networks of investors who provide start-up capital for new business, sometimes accompanied by technical expertise and contacts networks),
- Build an "angel" network that specializes in investments in Native American-owned or Native Hawaiian-owned businesses,
- Create community development venture capital (CDVC) funds,
- Use existing corporate venture capital programs,
- Use state and city venture capital programs, and
- Form a public/private intermediary to direct funds into Native American and Native Hawaiian CDFIs, businesses, or projects.

4. Establish a Native American/Native Hawaiian Equity Fund. To attract equity investments in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, Workshop participants suggested that the federal government sponsor an equity fund to help encourage private sector investors and public/private partnerships to invest on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands,

Four recommendations related to the two financial and physical infrastructure barriers cited above, were identified:

1. Increase the Number of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands. To provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians greater access to financial services, a number of policies need to be considered, including:

    - Creating more financial institutions, including CDFIs, on Indian Lands, and
    - Encouraging existing financial institutions that are not located on Indian Lands to open branches on Indian Lands.

2. Develop Regional Financial Institutions. The Workshop participants believed that regional partnerships and alliances are essential to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access, and possible strategies include:

    - Building on partnerships established with the CDFI Fund's regional Inter-Tribal cosponsors and holding follow-up forums similar to those conducted in the Study,
    - Establishing information clearinghouses at the regional level on model financing approaches, methods of accessing equity capital, and sources of training and technical assistance,
    - Providing channels of information to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities so that they can adapt existing models to their unique cultural and community needs, and

- Establishing regional partnerships among banks, lending institutions, venture capitalists, federal agencies, and Tribes/Inter-Tribal organizations.

3. Develop Financial Products and Services That Will Meet the Needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian Depositors and Borrowers. Workshop participants suggested that this could be accomplished by financial institutions through the development of new lending and financing products, revised underwriting criteria more suited to the unique attributes of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, the creation of micro lending programs for small business, and the creation of CDFIs.

4. Create Innovative Strategies to Develop Physical Infrastructure on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Various initiatives were explored at the Workshops to facilitate development of a more adequate infrastructure system on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, including creation of partnerships with private developers to plan for infrastructure development and development of an infrastructure investment strategy that utilizes available federal resources and encourages private partnerships to participate in the funding and development process.

Study participants identified four recommendations related to the seven educational and cultural barriers.

1. Expand Financial Literacy Education Opportunities for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Workshop participants agreed that providing financial literacy education and personal finance education for Native

REV_00342742

Americans and Native Hawaiians can provide them with the means to participate in the contemporary economy and that culturally appropriate financial literacy curriculum is available from various sources. Many existing CDFIs regularly provide this type of training in their communities.

2. Develop Entrepreneurship Programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Workshop participants recommended that these programs include:

- Development of core materials on small business finance and entrepreneurship,
- Establishment of teaching partnerships with Tribal and non-Tribal colleges, financial institutions, CDFIs, and nonprofits,
- Incorporation of web-based training in the curriculum, and
- Facilitation of funding and teacher recruitment through the private sector, Tribes, Inter-Tribal organizations, and federal agencies.

3. Conduct Lender and Investor Education. Actions recommended by the Workshop participants include:

- Development of informational handbooks on issues such as Tribal government structures, sovereignty and sovereign immunity, and land status,
- Creation of a directory of Tribal credit officers, economic development officers, and department heads and a directory of attorneys qualified to practice in Tribal courts,

REV_00342743

- Development of a marketing campaign that illustrates effective practices and success stories, initiation of educational outreach seminars by Native American and Native Hawaiian communities for potential lenders and investors, and
- Initiation of "road shows" focusing on investment opportunities on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

4. Expand Technical Assistance and Training. From the Workshops, several initiatives were identified for increasing technical assistance and training on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands:

- Provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiian business owners with technical assistance related to developing business plans and proposals and other business management needs,
- Help Tribal governments develop a comprehensive strategic plan to meet development and financing needs,
- Assist lenders, investors, and potential business partners in developing an understanding of Tribal laws, Tribal enforcement capabilities, and lender rights, and
- Help lenders, investors, and potential business partners understand federal programs, requirements, and application processes.

Examples of Initiatives and Programs

One of the important aspects of the Study was the identification by participants of programs and initiatives that involve government, the private sector and Tribes to address the major barriers identified above. Each initiative identified below, designed to meet the needs of a particular community, may offer insights to other communities that can be adapted to meet the unique needs of other particular communities or regions.

For example, some Tribes have enacted legislation to promote business development, Tribal commercial codes, land use and planning codes, zoning codes and laws regulating corporate and business activity.

Workshop participants noted that lenders and investors are often reluctant to accept the jurisdiction of Tribal courts to enforce financial contracts and, to address this problem, suggested increasing the capacity of Tribal courts to resolve commercial and financial disputes and to enforce commercial codes. Some initiatives are currently underway:

- The Federal Bureau of Justice Assistance, Department of Justice, and Bureau of Indian Affairs are currently funding technical assistance and training grants for Tribal Court capacity building.
- The National American Indian Court Judges Association has established the National Tribal Justice Resource Center to assist Tribes in strengthening methods of self-government and to provide technical assistance for enhancing Tribal justice systems.
- The Tribal Court Clearinghouse has been created as a resource for Tribal court development, training, court review, code drafting, and training.

REV_00342745

To provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians greater access to financial services, Study participants felt that a number of options need to be considered, including creating more financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, expanding and/or rebuilding existing financial institutions on Indian Lands, purchasing existing banks, expanding Native-ownership of financial institutions through purchase or de novo creation of new institutions, and creating more CDFIs. Workshop participants and CDFI Fund research identified the following examples of successful initiatives:

- The Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe used an existing revolving loan fund to create the non-profit Four Bands Community Fund, which makes business loans.
- In 1990, the Navajo Nation had only three bank branches and one ATM serving a geographic area of 17 million acres. To increase the availability of financial services on the reservation, the Tribe entered into an agreement with Norwest Bank (now Wells Fargo) to build four new branch banks with ATMs, hire and train Navajo personnel, and target financing to business startups and housing development.
- In all, nine Tribally-owned commercial banks, seven credit unions, and 14 loan funds have been developed nationwide to serve Native American communities.

REV_00342746

- Hawaiian Community Assets, Inc. is developing a charter for the first Native Hawaiian-owned bank.
- As of September 30, 2000, the CDFI Fund had made awards totaling nearly $27 million to 33 CDFIs that provide some level of service to Native American or Native Hawaiian communities.
- In FY 2002, the CDFI Fund initiated its $5.0 million Native American Technical Assistance program to assist Native American and Native Hawaiian communities in establishing community based CDFIs.

Workshop participants identified regional partnerships and alliances as essential components to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access, and examples of successful regional initiatives include:

- The Native American Development Corporation is a CDFI that provides Native American business communities in Montana and Wyoming with funds to create jobs, develop long-term economic self-sufficiency, and facilitate access to capital. Its Capital Loan Fund was initially capitalized with funding from banks, the federal government, First Nations Development Institute, and private corporations.
- The Native American Lending Group, Inc. is a nonprofit multi-Tribe CDFI in New Mexico that serves 19 Pueblo communities. It was created to provide Tribes, businesses, and individuals access to private investment capital.

- Coastal Enterprises, Inc. is a nonprofit CDFI that serves low-income communities in Maine and provides financial and technical assistance for development and expansion of certain targeted industries, small businesses, housing, and social services. CEI has established a partnership with the Penobscot Indian Nation to develop a CDFI to fund housing and business development.

Tribal leaders and private investors participating in the Workshops suggested strategies that relied on accessing capital sources that have not traditionally been on the Native American investment "radar screen" and on expanding Native American awareness to include more equity and nontraditional financing and thus increase the likelihood of securing funding.

One example of an existing strategy captured significant Workshop participant attention: Center of North America Capital Fund is an "angel" investor network and investment fund in North Dakota that links two Tribes -- the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa and the Spirit Lake Sioux -- with investors. The CONAC Fund was modeled after Minnesota's Regional Angel Investor Networks Fund, a series of rural investment funds formed by the Minnesota Investment Network Corporation.

Chairman Johnson, Senator Bennett and Members of the Subcommittee, I am Rodger Boyd, Special Assistant to the Director of the Community Development Financial Institutions (CDFI) Fund. I appreciate the opportunity to appear before you today on behalf of the CDFI Fund. In addition to my current duties as Special Assistant, I served as the lead staff member for the Native American Lending Study conducted by the CDFI Fund. I have been asked to specifically address the findings of that study as they relate to the subject of this hearing, "Capital Investment in Indian Country."

The Community Development Financial Institutions Fund is a government corporation within the U.S. Department of Treasury. The CDFI Fund's mission is to expand the capacity of financial institutions to provide capital, credit, and financial services in underserved markets.

When the Congress authorized the CDFI Fund under P.L. 103-325, the enabling legislation required the CDFI Fund to undertake a study on lending and investment practices on Indian Reservations and other lands held in trust by the United States. The result, known as the Native American Lending Study (the "Study"), was undertaken for the purposes of meeting that Congressional mandate and examining the barriers to accessing capital and providing financial services on Indian Lands[1] and Hawaiian Home Lands[2].

The Issue

[1] "Indian Lands" are defined for purposes of the Study as lands owned by or under the control of Tribal governments including reservations, Indian Lands, and Alaska Native Villages. For purposes of the Study, Alaska Native Villages have the definition ascribed by 43 USC 1602, et seq.

[2] "Hawaiian Home Lands" are defined for the purposes of the Study as trust lands held for the benefit of Native Hawaiian people and are administered by the State of Hawaii's Department of Hawaiian Home Lands.

The following are examples of public/private intermediaries cited by Workshop participants that direct funds to Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses:

- The Hopi Credit Association is a Tribal loan fund that provides a bridge between banks and Tribal borrowers, obtaining funds from banks, handling all loan selection and servicing with Tribal members. Participating banks thus gain a point of entry to the Tribal community, via a Tribal loan fund that understands banking needs, and Tribal members are served directly by a credit union that understands their needs.
- Another example is the Southern Ute Growth Fund, which uses a partnership approach and co-invests, using its growth fund and capital provided by outside investors, in a variety of growth opportunities.

Conclusion

Much of the progress in expanding access to capital was not achieved by tribal governments, financial institutions or federal agencies acting alone. Rather, progress often depended on these stakeholders acting together. One of the most important themes to emerge from the CDFI Fund's research, Workshops, and Equity Research is the need to foster even greater coordinated activity among stakeholders. For example, input of Tribal or Native Hawaiian representatives to any review of the effectiveness of government programs or policies would help to answer questions about community compatibility and relevance. Neither technical assistance nor cultural education will have the desired effect unless Tribes, Native Hawaiian communities, and FSOs commit to such processes. Moreover, FSOs, government regulators, and Tribes would all likely have to participate in attempts to create new loan products and equity investment opportunities for Native American or Native Hawaiian communities.

REV_00342750

In the Community Development Banking and Financial Institutions Act 1994, Congress found that "[m]any of the Nation's urban, rural and Native American communities face critical social and economic problems arising in part from the lack of economic growth, people living in poverty, and the lack of employment and other economic opportunities". Indeed, many communities located in Indian Lands face economic and social challenges that place them significantly behind the rest of the U.S. economy.

Study Approach

The Study was designed to produce a broad, if not necessarily exhaustive, qualitative review of the state of lending and investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. This was accomplished largely through input from many of the stakeholders involved in capital access issues on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Simultaneously, the Study has attempted to supplement this review with meaningful quantitative input and analysis. This was accomplished through the CDFI Fund's Financial Survey, the Equity Investment Research Report, and other CDFI Research. Accordingly, the Study approach was designed not only to provide a catalog of economic problems on Indian lands and Hawaiian Home Lands by integrating the concerns and recommendations of those who are attempting to lead their communities into the nation's economic mainstream, but to provide a statistical reporting as well.

To assist in accomplishing this, the CDFI Fund convened 13 regional workshops and two national roundtable meetings involving Tribal leaders and economic development professionals, Native American and Native Hawaiian business people, private investors and bankers, federal regulatory officials, and federal agency government officials. The Workshops and national roundtable meetings represented an extensive effort to bring together a broad array of stakeholders who each have specific economic development and financing expertise, with experience on Indian and Native Hawaiian lands, to discuss issues related to barriers to capital access and identify possible remedies. The Fund developed this Study approach to gain the knowledge and experience of these participants that have worked with these issues on a day-to-day basis.

The Workshops were complemented by the following research:

- The Financial Survey was administered to 851 Tribal government housing and economic development directors and 735 private financial service organizations (FSOs) located on or near Indian Lands or located in Hawaiian Home Lands to identify the barriers to lending and provide financial services and to help develop recommendations to address those barriers.
- An Equity Investment Research Report on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands was developed to provide the background and recommendations for enhancing equity capital access. This research included discussions with equity market participants, review of the relevant findings from the Financial Survey, and analysis of the findings from the Workshops. In addition, a questionnaire was administered to participants in the Equity

Investment Roundtable that provided useful information about equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

The CDFI Fund's research found that there exists a significant difference in the amount of capital investment when comparing the rest of the United States to Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

The Financial Survey and Equity Investment Research Report found the following evidence of this historic under investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands:

- 65 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents to the Financial Survey report that conventional mortgages are "difficult" or "impossible" to obtain. Home equity loans and construction and property rehabilitation loans are also in short supply on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.
- Business loans were rated as "impossible" to obtain by 24 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents to the Financial Survey and as "difficult" to obtain by 37 percent. Larger business loans, those over $100,000, are even more difficult to obtain; 67 percent of said Financial Survey respondents rated them as "difficult" to impossible to obtain.
- 66 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents to the Financial Survey stated that private equity investments are "difficult" or "impossible" to obtain for Native American and Native Hawaiian business owners.

- 33 percent of Native American respondents to the Financial Survey indicated they had to drive over 30 miles to ATM and bank branches.
- The Equity Research Report estimates the buying power of Native Americans is about $35 Billion and estimated Indian Country revenue of $34 Billion for 2001.
- The Equity Research Report estimates that the investment gap between Native American and Native Hawaiian economies and the United States overall totals $44 billion.

Barriers to Capital Access

The Study identified 17 major barriers to capital access, relating to legal infrastructure, government operations, economic, financial and physical infrastructure, and education and cultural issues.

The Study identified one major barrier to capital access related to legal infrastructure:

1. Uncertain Tribal Commercial Laws and Regulations and the Absence of an Independent Judiciary.

Three major capital access barriers were identified that are related to government operations:

1. Cumbersome, Conflicting, or Ineffective Federal Programs and Regulations.
2. Uncertainty Generated by Changes in Tribal Government Leadership.
3. Poor Understanding of Tribal Sovereignty and Sovereign Immunity.

Five major economic barriers to capital access were identified:

REV_00342735

1. Limited Use of Trust Land as Collateral.
2. Inflexible Bank Lending Rules and Regulations.
3. Lack of Capital, Collateral, and/or Credit Histories of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.
4. Negligible Economic Base on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.
5. Lack of Networking of Native-owned Businesses With Equity Investors.

There are two major capital access barriers related to financial and physical infrastructure:

1. Lack of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands.
2. Lack of Physical and Telecommunications Infrastructure on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands.

Six major capital access barriers related to education and cultural issues were identified:

1. Lack of Knowledge or Experience With the Financial World on the Part of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians.
2. Lack of Technical Assistance Resources.
3. Failure of Lenders and Investors to Understand Tribal Government or Legal Systems.
4. Historical Absence of Trust Between Tribes and Banks.
5. Differences Between Native American and Native Hawaiian Cultures and Banking and Investor Cultures.
6. Discrimination Against and/or Stereotyping of Native American and Native Hawaiian Communities.

Remedies and Recommendations

Study participants identified a number of potential remedies and recommendations related to the major capital access barriers identified above.

Participants identified one recommendation related to the legal infrastructure barrier cited above.

1. Enhance the Tribal Legal Infrastructure. Some Study participants recommended a strategy of creating a more pro-business legal environment on Indian Lands, through such actions as:

- Establishment of a Tribal legal infrastructure for business development, including Tribal commercial codes, foreclosure regulations, bankruptcy codes, permitting processes, and general regulatory frameworks,
- Development of zoning codes and land use plans, and
- Clarification of sovereignty and sovereign immunity, particularly regarding business and housing development.

Study participants identified four recommendations related to the three government operations barriers.

1. Improve Tribal Planning Processes and Structures. Some Workshop participants felt that Tribal governments need to enhance their ability to establish, articulate and manage a clear and concise vision, to formulate policies and strategic plans for overall economic development, and to cultivate the professional government workforce necessary to implement such plans.

2. Separate the Goals and Management of Tribal Government From Those of Tribal Business. Some Workshop participants recommended separating the management of business and government, spinning off Tribally-owned enterprises to a separate bodies for oversight and management, delegating privately-owned enterprise oversight to nonpolitical bodies, and clarifying the differences between Tribal government and corporate liability.

3. Strengthen Tribal Courts. Some actions recommended by Study participants include:

- Further development of independent Tribal courts,
- Provision of training for court personnel on commercial and financial law,
- Increasing the skills and capacity of judges and judicial personnel regarding lender and investor issues, and
- Establishment of enforcement procedures for foreclosure, repossession, garnishment, and bankruptcy.

4. Streamline and Improve the Efficiency and Effectiveness of Certain Federal and State Programs Used By Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Many Workshop participants expressed the need to accelerate the pace of decision-making, reducing excessive requirements and paperwork, rationalizing conflicting requirements and revising programs with overly restrictive entry guidelines, of certain state and federal programs.

THE REPORT OF THE NATIVE AMERICAN LENDING STUDY

Community Development Financial Institutions Fund

November 2001

REV_00342751

the Study participants identified one significant factor: a lack of access to capital and financial services in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.[6] In fact, the CDFI Fund's research found that there exists a significant difference in the amount of capital investment when comparing the rest of the United States to Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. [7]

The Financial Survey and supporting research found the following evidence of this historic underinvestment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands[8]:

- 65 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents to the Financial Survey report that conventional mortgages are "difficult" or "impossible" to obtain. Home equity loans and construction and property rehabilitation loans are also in short supply on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.
- Business loans were rated as "impossible" to obtain by 24 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents to the Financial Survey and as "difficult" to obtain by 37 percent. Larger business loans, those over $100,000, are even more difficult to obtain; 67 percent of said Financial Survey respondents rated them as "difficult" to impossible to obtain.
- 66 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents to the Financial Survey stated that private equity investments are "difficult" or "impossible" to obtain for Native American and Native Hawaiian business owners.
- The CDFI Fund's Equity Research Report estimates that the investment gap between Native American and Native Hawaiian economies and the United States overall totals $44 billion[9].

Accordingly, the major objectives of the Study are to identify the barriers to capital access, credit, and basic financial services on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands and to develop policy recommendations that address these barriers.

[6] For the purposes of the Study, the term "Native Hawaiian" is defined as "a person having origins in the original peoples of Hawaii", see 62 Fed. Reg. 58,781 (1997). "Native Hawaiian" is not a term comparable to a federally-recognized American Indian Tribe. Inclusion of Native Hawaiians in the study does not confer or imply any specific, legally enforceable duties on the United States as trustee that apply under certain circumstances when it manages tribal or individual Indian property or resources. In addition, this study does not support or create any right enforceable or cause of action by or against the United States, its agencies, officers or any person. The CDFI Fund's experience with CDFIs and prospective CDFIs in Hawaii has suggested that Native Hawaiians face many of the same issues and barriers as Native Americans and Alaska Natives in their attempts to access loans and investment capital. Accordingly, in 1999, the CDFI Fund proposed to Congress to expand the Study beyond the original Congressional mandate to include Native Hawaiians. The Senate Committee on Indian Affairs encouraged and supported the proposed expansion.

[7] Based upon research prepared for the CDFI Fund by Complexity Management, Inc., a business, financial, and economic development consultant firm, it is estimated that a given region or country can support equity investment at a particular rate based on the level Gross Domestic Product, and other economic and demographic factors. Based on that calculation, Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, with their "local GDP" (i.e.- the cost of goods and services purchased and sold), could support equity investment in an amount equal to $16 billion. However, it is estimated that $10 billion is currently invested in Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Indeed, similar estimates project that Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands could support approximately $40 billion of equity investment if their demographics and economic conditions more closely reflected those of the rest of the United States as a whole. This Study refers to the difference between investment at the prescribed rate and current investment as the "investment gap" or "equity gap." See Ch. III for additional discussion.

[8] See Chapter II for a detailed description of the design of the research and the Financial Surveys. A more detailed discussion of the barriers follows in Chapter III.

STUDY APPROACH

The Study was designed to produce a broad, if not necessarily exhaustive, qualitative review of the state of lending and investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. This was accomplished largely through input from many of the stakeholders involved in capital access issues on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Simultaneously, the Study has attempted to supplement this review with meaningful quantitative input and analysis. This was accomplished through the Financial Survey, the Equity Investment Research Report, and other CDFI Research[10] . Accordingly, the Study approach was designed not only to provide a catalog of economic problems on Indian lands and Hawaiian Home Lands by integrating the concerns and recommendations of those who are attempting to lead their communities into the nation's economic mainstream, but to provide a statistical reporting as well.

To assist in accomplishing this, the CDFI Fund convened 13 regional and two national Workshops involving Tribal[11] leaders and economic development professionals, Native American and Native Hawaiian business people, private investors and bankers, federal and state government officials, and other stakeholders. Participants discussed the major barriers to Native American and Native Hawaiian access to capital and developed strategies and actions to overcome those barriers. The Workshops represent an extensive effort to bring together a broad array of stakeholders who each have specific economic development and financing expertise, with experience on Indian and Native Hawaiian lands, to discuss issues related to barriers to capital access and identify possible remedies. Workshop and Equity Investment Roundtable participants offered their diverse range of views and perspectives on accessing capital based on their individual expertise.

The Financial Survey was designed to probe the same set of issues with a broader group of individuals having expertise and experience similar to that of Workshop and Equity Roundtable participants, and who, for the most part were located in or within ten miles of Indian Lands and Native Hawaiian communities. The Financial Survey response rate (33 percent for representatives of FSOs and 25 percent for representatives of Tribal and Native Hawaiian organizations) was lower than expected due to the limited data collection time frame. Nonetheless, the Financial Survey results were consistent with the findings of the Workshops and Equity Roundtable.

The Workshops were complemented by the following research:

- The Financial Survey was administered to Tribal government housing and economic development directors and private financial service organizations (FSOs)[12] located on or near Indian Lands or located in Hawaiian Home Lands to identify the barriers to lending and provide financial services and to help develop recommendations to address those barriers.

[10] A Bibliography detailing the sources for the CDFI Fund research is located on the CDFI Fund website at: www.treas.gov/cdfi/. The Bibliography is not intended to be exhaustive, or to indicate any CDFI Fund or Department of Treasury endorsement of the positions or opinions expressed in the materials listed therein. Rather, the Bibliography provides the reader with a list of the key sources of information that informed the preparation of this Study.

[11] In the Study, "Tribal" refers to Native American and Alaska Native governments, except as may be hereinafter specified.

[12] Financial Service Organizations (FSOs) are commercial banks, thrifts, credit unions and other related insured depository institutions.

REV_00342761

- A study on equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands was conducted to provide the background and recommendations for enhancing equity capital access. This research included discussions with equity market participants, review of the relevant findings from the Financial Survey, and analysis of the findings from the Workshops. In addition, a questionnaire was administered to participants in the Equity Investment Roundtable that provided useful information about equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

BARRIERS TO CAPITAL ACCESS

The Study identified 17 major barriers to capital access, relating to legal infrastructure, government operations, economic, financial and physical infrastructure, and education and cultural issues. [13]

The Study identified one major barrier to capital access related to legal infrastructure:

1. Uncertain Tribal Commercial Laws and Regulations and the Absence of an Independent Judiciary. Investors and financial service providers who participated in Workshops and responded to the Financial Survey were concerned that, in many Tribal governments, Tribal courts may not be sufficiently independent of the executive branch of the Tribal government. Moreover, Workshop participants and Financial Survey participants cited the absence of codified Tribal commercial laws and regulations as causing investors to be hesitant to invest capital on Indian Lands.

Three major capital access barriers were identified that are related to government operations:

1. Cumbersome, Conflicting, or Ineffective Federal Programs and Regulations. Study participants noted their experience or perception that the pace of government decision-making is often slow and may involve extensive requirements and paperwork, program requirements often conflict with one another, some programs fail to meet the needs of the Native American and Native Hawaiian communities that they were designed to meet, and some programs have excessively restrictive entry guidelines.
2. Uncertainty Generated by Changes in Tribal Government Leadership. As is often true for elected governments, when a new Tribal administration is elected it may eliminate plans for programs begun by the previous administration. Since most Tribal governments do not exercise general taxing authority, many support their operation with revenues derived from their ownership of private businesses. Accordingly, a Tribal government sometimes operates simultaneously as both private sector investor and public sector "regulator" and Tribal business endeavors can at times take on both a public and private character.
3. Poor Understanding of Tribal Sovereignty and Sovereign Immunity. Study participants noted that lenders and investors are uncertain about the operation of Tribal and Alaska Native village sovereignty and sovereign immunity and, thus, often perceive greater risk to conduct business on Indian Lands.

[13] See Chapter III for a description of how the 17 barriers to capital access were identified.

Five major economic barriers to capital access were identified:

1. Limited Use of Trust Land as Collateral. Study participants and Fund research revealed that financing home mortgages and business loans presents a major challenge, since most Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands are held in trust by federal or state governments and cannot be sold or encumbered by a mortgage lien, except as authorized by the Secretary of the Interior or other appropriate state official.

2. Inflexible Bank Lending Rules and Regulations. In many cases, Study participants noted their experience or perception that underwriting standards of traditional financial institutions do not appear to be structured to account for the particular economic circumstances of Native American and Native Hawaiian people, many of whom might otherwise be creditworthy.

3. Lack of Capital, Collateral, and/or Credit Histories of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Fund research suggests that most Native Americans and Native Hawaiians living on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands do not have access to capital in the form of home equity, stock holdings, or other assets.

4. Negligible Economic Base on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Fund research found that, at present, many Native American and Native Hawaiian communities on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands lack adequate economic bases to meet the needs of their communities.

5. Lack of Networking of Native-owned Businesses With Equity Investors. The CDFI Fund Equity Investment Research Report reveals that many of the nation's venture capital investors are concentrated in areas that are physically and even socially remote to Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs. The equity research and comments of Workshop participants confirm that little investment occurs when potential investors and entrepreneurs live in different states and operate in different social and business circles.

There are two major capital access barriers related to financial and physical infrastructure:

1. Lack of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands. A number of Financial Survey and Workshop participants stated that few financial institutions, bank branches, or even ATMs are located on or near (within 30 miles) Indian Lands. The participants posited that the absence of financial institutions impedes the development of bank-community relationships, and drives up borrowing costs.

2. Lack of Physical and Telecommunications Infrastructure on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands. Many areas within Indian Lands lack the physical infrastructure necessary for business development and expansion. A New Mexico State University Study[14] reports, and Study participants confirm, that many households on Indian Lands lack telephones, electricity and/or natural gas and improved roads. Workshop participants reported that similar conditions prevail in Hawaiian Home Lands.

[14] Assessment of Technology Infrastructure in Native Communities, College of Engineering of New Mexico State University, 2000, prepared for the Economic Development Administration, U.S. Department of Commerce.

Six major capital access barriers related to education and cultural issues were identified:

1. Lack of Knowledge or Experience With the Financial World on the Part of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Some Study participants related that in many Native American and Native Hawaiian economies, financial transactions have traditionally been conducted using cash. Thus, according to Study participants, many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians lack experience with and understanding of banking, credit reporting, and loan qualification processes and standards. They may have difficulty obtaining credit, and often lack knowledge and experience in preparing business plans required for bank financing or equity investment.

2. Lack of Technical Assistance Resources. The Study identified the lack of technical assistance and training resources, in areas including financial literacy, financial management and entrepreneurship, as a serious barrier to capital access and, throughout the Workshops, participants identified a variety of unmet training needs for Tribal governments and Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs.

3. Failure of Lenders and Investors to Understand Tribal Government or Legal Systems. Study participants noted that lenders and investors have had limited exposure to Tribal government operations, regulations, and enforcement, and thus may be concerned about not being able to collect on their debts or may fear that the process of doing so will be complex and difficult.

4. Historical Absence of Trust Between Tribes and Banks. Study participants noted that there has been a historical lack of trust between Native Americans and Native Hawaiians and FSOs. This may cause misunderstandings that lead to failed negotiations for loans, increased costs of doing business for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, and a reluctance on the part of banks to underwrite loans.

5. Differences Between Native American and Native Hawaiian Cultures and Banking and Investor Cultures. The differences between Native American and Native Hawaiian cultures and banking and investor cultures are substantial, according to Study participants. There are, for example, differing views of the concepts of wealth and wealth sharing, profit motive, asset accumulation, credit worthiness, and land ownership.

6. Discrimination Against and/or Stereotyping of Native American and Native Hawaiian Communities. Financial Survey respondents and Workshop participants reported that Native Americans and Native Hawaiians suffer from stereotyping and discrimination, with problems ranging from cultural misunderstandings to overt redlining and discriminatory lending practices.

REMEDIES AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Study participants identified a number of potential remedies and recommendations related to the major capital access barriers identified above.

Participants identified one recommendation related to the legal infrastructure barrier cited above.

REV_00342764

1. Enhance the Tribal Legal Infrastructure. Some Study participants recommended a strategy of creating a more pro-business legal environment on Indian Lands, through such actions as:
    - Establishment of a Tribal legal infrastructure for business development, including Tribal commercial codes, foreclosure regulations, bankruptcy codes, permitting processes, and general regulatory frameworks
    - Development of zoning codes and land use plans
    - Clarification of sovereignty and sovereign immunity, particularly regarding business and housing development

Study participants identified four recommendations related to the three government operations barriers:

1. Improve Tribal Planning Processes and Structures. Some Workshop participants felt that Tribal governments need to enhance their ability to establish, articulate and manage a clear and concise vision, to formulate policies and strategic plans for overall economic development, and to cultivate the professional government workforce necessary to implement such plans.
2. Separate the Goals and Management of Tribal Government From Those of Tribal Business. Some Workshop participants recommended separating the management of business and government, spinning off Tribally-owned enterprises to a separate bodies for oversight and management, delegating privately-owned enterprise oversight to nonpolitical bodies, and clarifying the differences between Tribal government and corporate liability.
3. Strengthen Tribal Courts. Some actions recommended by Study participants include:
    - Further development of independent Tribal courts
    - Provision of training for court personnel on commercial and financial law
    - Increasing the skills and capacity of judges and judicial personnel regarding lender and investor issues
    - Establishment of enforcement procedures for foreclosure, repossession, garnishment, and bankruptcy
4. Streamline and Improve the Efficiency and Effectiveness of Certain Federal and State Programs Used By Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Many Workshop participants expressed the need to accelerate the pace of decision-making, reducing excessive requirements and paperwork, rationalizing conflicting requirements and revising programs with overly restrictive entry guidelines, of certain state and federal programs.

There were four remedies identified that relate to economic barriers:

1. Create Alternative Collateral Options for Trust Land. Workshop participants recommended recognizing and leveraging the value of trust assets; facilitating development of trust land through alternative means of valuation and collateralization, such as the creation of leaseholds and master leaseholds; building equity pools from trust lands and other resources; and converting traditional assets into collateral. Workshop participants also recommended that, for Indian Lands and Native Hawaiian Home Lands, the U.S. Department of the Interior and the Hawaii Department of Hawaiian Home Lands, respectively, examine the feasibility of further streamlining leasing procedures.

2. Develop New Local and Non-traditional Mechanisms to Deliver Capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Workshop participants suggested that Tribal governments should develop their capacity to orchestrate and leverage all sources of capital, and financial institutions should develop new lending and financing products and revise underwriting criteria to meet the unique needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian markets, including the development of micro-lending programs for small businesses and securitization of oil and gas reserves and timber. Workshop participants proposed two options for providing access to nontraditional sources of debt and equity capital:

   - Develop Tribal or Inter-Tribal CDFIs, community banks, and other lending and investment institutions.
   - Create Tribal or Inter-Tribal pools for loan guarantees, equity investments/ venture capital, micro-lending and lending for housing and small business.

3. Increase Equity Investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Equity Investment Roundtable participants suggested the following methods of increasing equity investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities:

   - Create industry sector specific incubators that provide management and technical assistance to start-up businesses and that focus on the specific needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian business owners.
   - Use existing "angel investor" networks (i.e. – networks of investors who provide start-up capital for new business, sometimes accompanied by technical expertise and contacts networks).
   - Build an "angel" network that specializes in investments in Native American-owned or Native Hawaiian-owned businesses.
   - Create community development venture capital (CDVC) funds,
   - Use existing corporate venture capital programs.
   - Use state and city venture capital programs.
   - Form a public/private intermediary to direct funds into Native American and Native Hawaiian CDFIs, businesses, or projects.

4. Establish a Native American/Native Hawaiian Equity Fund. To attract equity investments in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, Workshop participants suggested that the federal government sponsor an equity fund to help encourage private sector investors and public/private partnerships to invest on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

Four recommendations related to the two financial and physical infrastructure barriers cited above, were identified:

1. Increase the Number of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands. To provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians greater access to financial services, a number of policies need to be considered, including:
   - Creating more financial institutions, including CDFIs, on Indian Lands
   - Encouraging existing financial institutions that are not located on Indian Lands to open branches on Indian Lands
2. Develop Regional Financial Institutions. The Workshop participants believed that regional partnerships and alliances are essential to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access, and possible strategies include:
   - Building on partnerships established with the CDFI Fund's regional Inter-Tribal cosponsors and holding follow-up forums similar to those conducted in the Study
   - Establishing information clearinghouses at the regional level on model financing approaches, methods of accessing equity capital, and sources of training and technical assistance
   - Providing channels of information to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities so that they can adapt existing models to their unique cultural and community needs
   - Establishing regional partnerships among banks, lending institutions, venture capitalists, federal agencies, and Tribes/Inter-Tribal organizations
3. Develop Financial Products and Services That Will Meet the Needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian Depositors and Borrowers. Workshop participants suggested that this could be accomplished by financial institutions through the development of new lending and financing products, revised underwriting criteria more suited to the unique attributes of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, the creation of micro lending programs for small business, and the creation of CDFIs.
4. Create Innovative Strategies to Develop Physical Infrastructure on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Various initiatives were explored at the Workshops to facilitate development of a more adequate infrastructure system on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, including creation of partnerships with private developers to plan for infrastructure development and development of an infrastructure investment strategy that utilizes available federal resources and encourages private partnerships to participate in the funding and development process.

Study participants identified four recommendations related to the seven educational and cultural barriers:

1. Expand Financial Literacy Education Opportunities for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Workshop participants agreed that providing financial literacy education and personal finance education for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians can provide them with the means to participate in the contemporary economy and that culturally appropriate financial literacy curriculum is available from various sources. Many existing CDFIs regularly provide this type of training in their communities.

2. Develop Entrepreneurship Programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Workshop participants recommended that these programs include:

   - Development of core materials on small business finance and entrepreneurship
   - Establishment of teaching partnerships with Tribal and non-Tribal colleges, financial institutions, CDFIs, and nonprofits
   - Incorporation of web-based training in the curriculum
   - Facilitation of funding and teacher recruitment through the private sector, Tribes, Inter-Tribal organizations, and federal agencies

3. Conduct Lender and Investor Education. Actions recommended by the Workshop participants include:

   - Development of informational handbooks on issues such as Tribal government structures, sovereignty and sovereign immunity, and land status
   - Creation of a directory of Tribal credit officers, economic development officers, and department heads and a directory of attorneys qualified to practice in Tribal courts
   - Development of a marketing campaign that illustrates effective practices and success stories, initiation of educational outreach seminars by Native American and Native Hawaiian communities for potential lenders and investors
   - Initiation of "road shows" focusing on investment opportunities on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

4. Expand Technical Assistance and Training. From the Workshops, several initiatives were identified for increasing technical assistance and training on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands:

   - Provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiian business owners with technical assistance related to developing business plans and proposals and other business management needs[15].
   - Help Tribal governments develop a comprehensive strategic plan to meet development and financing needs.
   - Assist lenders, investors, and potential business partners in developing an understanding of Tribal laws, Tribal enforcement capabilities, and lender rights.
   - Help lenders, investors, and potential business partners understand federal programs, requirements, and application processes.

[15] In Fall 2001, the CDFI Fund will publish in the Federal Register a Notice of Funds Availability (NOFA), inviting applications for the initial round of the Native American CDFI Technical Assistance (NACTA) Component of the CDFI Program. The NACTA Component will be supported by the CDFI Fund's Native American CDFI Training Program. These programs are designed to assist the creation and capacity building of existing and nascent CDFIs and to build financial management capacity on Indian Lands.

REV_00342768

EXAMPLES OF INITIATIVES AND PROGRAMS

One of the important aspects of the Study was the identification by participants of programs and initiatives that involve government, the private sector and Tribes to address the major barriers identified above. Each initiative identified below, designed to meet the needs of a particular community, may offer insights to other communities that can be adapted to meet the unique needs of other particular communities or regions.

For example, some Tribes have enacted legislation to promote business development, Tribal commercial codes, land use and planning codes, zoning codes and laws regulating corporate and business activity.[16]

Workshop participants noted that lenders and investors are often reluctant to accept the jurisdiction of Tribal courts to enforce financial contracts and, to address this problem, suggested increasing the capacity of Tribal courts to resolve commercial and financial disputes and to enforce commercial codes. Some initiatives are currently underway:

- The Federal Bureau of Justice Assistance, Department of Justice, and Bureau of Indian Affairs[17] are currently funding technical assistance and training grants for Tribal Court capacity building.
- The National American Indian Court Judges Association has established the National Tribal Justice Resource Center[18] to assist Tribes in strengthening methods of self-government and to provide technical assistance for enhancing Tribal justice systems.
- The Tribal Court Clearinghouse[19] has been created as a resource for Tribal court development, training, court review, code drafting, and training.

To provide Native Americans and Native Hawaiians greater access to financial services, Study participants felt that a number of options need to be considered, including creating more financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, expanding and/or rebuilding existing financial institutions on Indian Lands, purchasing existing banks, expanding Native-ownership of financial institutions through purchase or de novo creation of new institutions, and creating more CDFIs. Workshop participants and CDFI Fund research identified the following examples of successful initiatives:

- The Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe used an existing revolving loan fund to create the non-profit Four Bands Community Fund, which makes business loans.
- In 1990, the Navajo Nation had only three bank branches and one ATM serving a geographic area of 17 million acres. To increase the availability of financial services on the reservation, the Tribe entered into an agreement with Norwest Bank (now Wells Fargo) to build four new branch banks with ATMs, hire and train Navajo personnel, and target financing to business startups and housing development.
- In all, nine Tribally-owned commercial banks, seven credit unions, and 14 loan funds have been developed nationwide to serve Native American communities.
- Hawaiian Community Assets, Inc. is developing a charter for the first Native Hawaiian-owned bank.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The CDFI Fund is very grateful to all the Tribal leaders, Tribal economic development professionals, Native Hawaiian representatives, representatives of commercial banking organizations, private equity investors, federal government agency officials, financial supervisory agency officials, and Native American entrepreneurs who took the time to participated in the Native American Lending Study Workshops and Roundtable meetings. Their economic development and financing expertise greatly contributed to identifying barriers to accessing capital and possible remedies. In addition, the advice and contribution by the Study's ad hoc advisory group is greatly appreciated.

The CDFI Fund acknowledges and appreciates the professionalism of the Johnson Strategy Group, Inc. for facilitating all the Workshops and Roundtable meetings, and for its contribution to the final report.

REV_00342752

- As of September 30, 2000, the CDFI Fund had made awards totaling nearly $27 million to 33 CDFIs that provide some level of service to Native American or Native Hawaiian communities.

Workshop participants identified regional partnerships and alliances as essential components to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access, and examples of successful regional initiatives include:

- The Native American Development Corporation is a CDFI that provides Native American business communities in Montana and Wyoming with funds to create jobs, develop long-term economic self-sufficiency, and facilitate access to capital. Its Capital Loan Fund was initially capitalized with funding from banks, the federal government, First Nations Development Institute, and private corporations.
- The Native American Lending Group, Inc. is a nonprofit multi-Tribe CDFI in New Mexico that serves 19 Pueblo communities. It was created to provide Tribes, businesses, and individuals access to private investment capital.
- Coastal Enterprises, Inc. is a nonprofit CDFI that serves low-income communities in Maine and provides financial and technical assistance for development and expansion of certain targeted industries, small businesses, housing, and social services. CEI has established a partnership with the Penobscot Indian Nation to develop a CDFI to fund housing and business development.

Tribal leaders and private investors participating in the Workshops suggested strategies that relied on accessing capital sources that have not traditionally been on the Native American investment "radar screen" and on expanding Native American awareness to include more equity and nontraditional financing and thus increase the likelihood of securing funding. One example of an existing strategy captured significant Workshop participant attention: Center of North America Capital Fund is an "angel" investor network and investment fund in North Dakota that links two Tribes — the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa and the Spirit Lake Sioux — with investors. The CONAC Fund was modeled after Minnesota's Regional Angel Investor Networks Fund, a series of rural investment funds formed by the Minnesota Investment Network Corporation.

The following are examples of public/private intermediaries cited by Workshop participants that direct funds to Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses:

- The Hopi Credit Association is a Tribal credit union that provides a bridge between banks and Tribal borrowers, obtaining funds from banks, handling all loan selection and servicing with Tribal members. Participating banks thus gain a point of entry to the Tribal community, via a Tribal credit union that understands banking needs, and Tribal members are served directly by a credit union that understands their needs.
- Another example is the Southern Ute Growth Fund, which uses a partnership approach and co-invests, using its growth fund and capital provided by outside investors, in a variety of growth opportunities.

The following Chapters One through Four of this Study contain quotes that are attributed to Workshop, Equity Roundtable, and other Study participants. The Fund has not included such quotations to indicate Fund or Treasury Department endorsement of the positions therein expressed, or to represent, necessarily, a prevailing point of view among any particular group of participants. Rather, the Fund has included quotations to add context and background to the report where such additions might help inform the reader's understanding of the subject.

CHAPTER ONE

MANDATE FOR THE STUDY

In September 1994, Congress mandated that the Community Development Financial Institutions Fund (the CDFI Fund), a wholly-owned government corporation within the Department of the Treasury, conduct a study on lending and investment practices on Indian reservations and other lands held in trust by the United States.[20] Congress mandated that the Study:

- Identify barriers to private financing.
- Identify the impact of such barriers on access to capital and to credit for Native Americans[21] and Native Hawaiians[22]
- Develop recommendations for statutory and regulatory changes to existing federal programs.
- Develop policy recommendations for community development financial institutions (CDFIs), insured depository institutions, secondary market institutions, and private-sector capital institutions.
- Submit final report to Congress and the President.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS ON THE INDIAN LANDS AND HAWAIIAN HOME LANDS

Economic and social conditions on many Indian Lands[23] and Hawaiian Home Lands[24] place them significantly behind the mainstream U.S. economy. For example:

- According to U.S. Department of Commerce census data[25], unemployment rates on Indian Lands in the continental United States range between 20 percent and 80 percent, and are over 90 percent in some Alaska Native Villages where it is common for 90 - 100 percent of the population to depend on subsistence farming or hunting for their livelihood, according to Financial Survey respondents. Average unemployment rates on Indian Lands are about 50 percent, whereas the rate for the United States as a whole is less than five percent.[26]

- According to U.S. census data, poverty rates in the late 1990s were 26 percent for Native Americans, lower than earlier in the decade, but still far above the national average of 12 percent.[27]
- Also, U.S. census data estimates that Native American household income is about three-quarters the national household average.[28]
- Workshop participants report that transportation, telecommunications, energy, financial, and other infrastructures are often substandard and inadequate to support new business formation.
- While it is not clear precisely how many mortgages there are on Indian Lands held in trust, as of 1999, there were 471 home mortgages on Indian Lands, overall [29], even though an estimated 38,000 households have sufficient income to qualify for a mortgage[30].

"We all know that as we live on the Reservation,...our money goes off each time, every two weeks, we go off to the malls somewhere else. We spend our money. So we're supporting the jobs in Rapid City, Bismarck, Missoula, Great Falls, and we're not making jobs of our own."

—Linda Pease, Native American Development Corporation, Montana

In addition, the Financial Survey revealed the following:

- Only 14 percent of Indian Lands located in the continental United States have a financial institution in the community, fewer than half have such an institution anywhere nearby, and 15 percent of Native American people must travel more than 100 miles to reach a bank or automatic teller machine (ATM).
- Although 85 percent of financial institutions on or near Indian Lands located in the continental United States offer deposit accounts to Native Americans residing there, 50 percent of these financial institutions offer primarily two financial services — ATMs and personal consumer loans.
- Conventional home mortgages were rated as "difficult" or "very difficult" to finance by 65 percent Tribal respondents, and 35 percent of FSO respondents. Home equity loans, construction and property rehabilitation loans are also in short supply on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.
- Business loans were rated as "impossible" to obtain by 24 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents and as "difficult" to obtain by 37 percent. Larger business loans, those over $100,000, are even more difficult to obtain, 67 percent of respondents rated them as difficult to impossible to obtain.
- The percentage of the overall financial service organization (FSO) loan portfolio represented by conventional home mortgages is disproportionately lower on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands (81.9 percent of the overall portfolio versus 54.3 percent of the portfolio of products offered to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians).

- Conventional home mortgages were rated as "difficult" or "very difficult" to finance by 65 percent of Tribal respondents and 35 percent of FSO respondents.
- Only one-third of financial institutions on or near Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands offer state loan or loan guarantee programs to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians residing there.
- 66 percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents stated that private equity investments are "difficult" or "impossible" to obtain for Native American and Native Hawaiian business owners.

Native American economies have about half of the level of equity that comparable international economies (that is, countries or regions with similar GDP, population and other demographic factors) have.[31] Further, the Equity Investment Research Report's comparisons of Indian Lands to similar economies suggests that if external equity investors were located in or serving Indian Lands and if the strategies to overcome existing obstacles were pursued and were successful, an additional $10 billion in equity could be invested in the Native American economy.

What accounts for the equity gap on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands? The Equity Research and Workshops identified the following causes:

- The perception of unreasonably high risk surrounding private lending on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands results in little infusion of development capital.
- The underdeveloped nature of Native American and Native Hawaiian economies.
- The difficulty that private investments on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands have in producing adequate financial returns.
- The inability of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities to attract conventional financing due to trust land status.
- Only seven percent of Native American and Native Hawaiian respondents to the Financial Survey reported obtaining private equity investment with relative ease. Less than one percent reported that private equity was easy to obtain, while 66 percent found obtaining private equity difficult or impossible. Moreover, Workshop participants reported that even profitable and growing businesses in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities have difficulty obtaining even small amounts of equity capital to expand because entrepreneurs do not know how to apply for it and have difficulty locating equity investors.

"...often time with Native Americans there's one product or there's just one source of loans, and there's less competition for it...it forces people [Native Americans] who need loans to go to alternative sources, which are often exploitative, often charge a high interest rate...a lot of time the Tribes see that there's limited lending resources, so they put their own resources into lending. Now, the effect that this has on them is they're using their money instead of bringing in outside money like other communities."

—Ken Goosens, Seminole Tribe of Florida

PROFILE OF THE NATIVE AMERICAN COMMUNITY

There are approximately 2.7 million Native American and Native Hawaiian people living in the United States, of whom approximately half live on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands.[32] This population has grown rapidly since the 1970s, and Native Americans and Native Hawaiians constitute the third fastest growing population

[31] For a more comprehensive discussion of the comparison, see Equity Investment Roundtable and Research Report, January 2001.

[32] The US Census Bureau estimates that there were 2.45 million American Indians, Eskimos, and Aleuts living in the United States as of October 1, 2000. The Office of Hawaiian Affairs has 250,000 enrolled members who, as of December 2000, declare Native Hawaiian descent.

segment in the nation, after Hispanics and Asians. The nation's 562 federally recognized Tribes and Alaska Native Villages, along with Native Hawaiian communities, are heterogeneous with respect to traditions, cultures, and languages, and about half of the population lives in economically depressed rural communities. There are 334 Indian Tribes[33] in the continental United States and 228 Alaska Native Villages. Tribal populations range from fewer than five members on several acres of land to the Navajo Nation with 250,000 enrolled members and a land base of 17 million acres. Tribal governments vary in size and organization from small elected councils to three-branch governments that include executive and legislative bodies as well as independent court systems.

The federally recognized Tribes in the continental United States and Alaska have been recognized as sovereign entities through peace treaties, Congressional legislation, and U.S. Supreme Court decisions. Congressional legislation — such as the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934[34], the Indian Financing Act of 1974[35], and the Indian Self-Determination and Educational Act of 1975[36] — further established the principle of Tribal self-government. Most Tribes, with the exception of those in Oklahoma, have a land base that comprises trust, allotted, and fee-simple land.

In the early 1970s, Alaska Natives negotiated the transfer of Alaskan land, previously held in trust by the federal government for their benefit. This land was given to Alaska Natives in exchange for the sale of land to the federal government for the Alaska oil pipeline right-of-way. The Alaska Native Settlement and Claims Act of 1971[37] divided the state into 12 regions, created a for-profit corporation and a non-profit corporation wholly owned by the Alaska Natives of that region, and transferred ownership of that trust land to the 12 regional for-profit corporations. Some land was also transferred to several dozen village corporations.

Native Hawaiians, who number approximately 250,000, are not members of a separate, federally recognized entity, but do maintain a formal relationship with the State of Hawaii. Native Hawaiians lived under a monarchy until 1893, and 203,000 acres of land were set aside for them under the provisions of the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act of 1920[38]. At present, this land holding totals 193,935 acres held as state trust land and administered by the Department of Hawaiian Home Lands, a state government agency. In 1970, the state created the Office of Hawaiian Affairs (OHA), both a government agency and a trust, to assist Native Hawaiians. OHA operates economic development, education, health and human services, land, and natural resource programs.

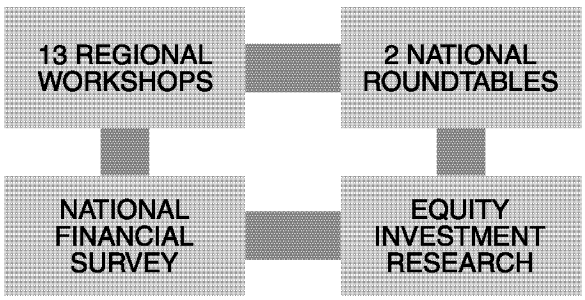
RESEARCH DESIGN



CHAPTER TWO

The CDFI Fund developed the design for the Study to ensure that findings and recommendations were derived from empirical data and research. Also, very importantly, the Study was designed to obtain as much meaningful input as possible from many of the stakeholders involved in the issue of capital access on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Consequently, the Study presents a non-exhaustive quantitative review of the state of lending and equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, together with qualitative information reported by Workshop participants. The Study did not catalogue or review every program or policy (federal, state, local, or otherwise) operative on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Rather, the Study chronicles Financial Survey respondents' and Workshop participants' experiences with particular programs and policies.

Specifically, the Study included:

- Thirteen regional Workshops conducted to identify the barriers to lending and investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities (the "Workshops").
- A national roundtable on barriers to lending on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands (the "National Roundtable").
- A national Financial Survey of lending practices relating to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians (the "Financial Survey").
- A national roundtable and a research report on equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands (the "Equity Investment Roundtable" and "Equity Investment Report").

STUDY APPROACH BUILDING BLOCKS

REGIONAL WORKSHOPS AND NATIONAL ROUNDTABLE

"It has to be a two-way street. The lenders have to learn what we are, just as you expect us to learn how to operate in your world."

—Samuel Rock, White Earth Band of Chippewa, Minnesota

The Study design combined two approaches. First, the CDFI Fund identified and involved experts in the field. Second, to ensure that all the major issues were addressed, to quantify the incidence and severity of access to capital barriers, and to ascertain whether the problems identified were widespread, the CDFI Fund conducted extensive additional research, including the Financial Survey.

The Study design ensured that input from a substantial group involved in the provision of capital access on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands would be obtained. Tribal[39] leaders, Tribal economic development professionals, Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs, commercial banking organizations and other financial institutions, private equity investors, secondary market organizations, U.S. government officials from financial supervisory agencies and other federal agencies, officials from state agencies, and other financial services and lending experts participated in numerous and detailed discussions.

The 13 regional Workshops were conducted with the assistance of 14 co-sponsors, including: regional Native American organizations, Alaska Native corporations, and Hawaiian state agencies.

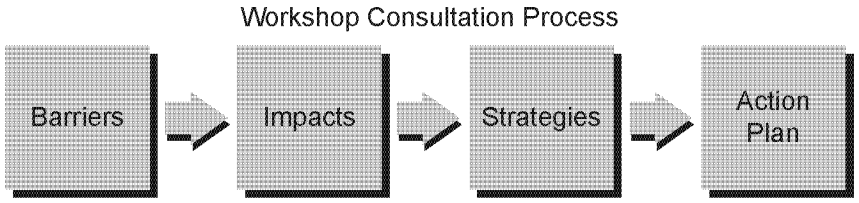
Of the approximately 700 Workshop participants, 43 percent represented Native American or Native Hawaiian organizations, 24 percent represented financial institutions, and 33 percent represented federal, state and non-profit organizations.

Regional Workshops were held as follows:

- Northwest Region — Seattle, Washington, March 24-25, 1999; cosponsored by the Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians Economic Development Corporation, Seattle, Washington
- Southwest Region — Phoenix, Arizona, April 1-2, 1999; cosponsored by the Inter-Tribal Council of Arizona

"I'm kind of seeing this as the meeting of the minds. I really don't think that there is a right answer and a wrong answer to all of these issues that are coming together; it's coming together in knowing how we each think and communicate."

—John Lucero, First National Bank, Santa Fe



- Southwest Region — Albuquerque, New Mexico, April 28-29, 1999; cosponsored by the All Indian Pueblo Council
- West Region — Reno/Sparks, Nevada, May 12-13, 1999; cosponsored by the Inter-Tribal Council of Nevada and the California Indian Manpower Consortium, Inc.
- Midwest Region — Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, June 2-3, 1999; cosponsored by the Oklahomans for Indian Opportunity
- Great Lakes Region — Minneapolis, Minnesota, June 29-30, 1999; cosponsored by the Midwest Alliance of Sovereign Tribes
- North Central Region — Rapid City, South Dakota, July 26-27, 1999; cosponsored by the Rapid City Housing Coalition and the Montana- Wyoming Tribal Leaders Council
- Hawaii Region — Honolulu, Hawaii, August 11-12, 1999; cosponsored by the State Department of Hawaiian Home Lands and the State Office of Hawaiian Affairs

[39] In the Study, "Tribal" refers to Native American and Alaska Native governments, except as may be hereinafter specified. See n.12

REV_00342776

- Hawaii Region — Hilo, Hawaii, August 17-18, 1999; cosponsored by the State Department of Hawaiian Home Lands and the State Office of Hawaiian Affairs
- Alaska Region — Anchorage, Alaska, November 15-16, 1999; cosponsored by Alaska Village Initiatives
- Alaska Region — Fairbanks, Alaska, November 18-19, 1999, cosponsored by the Tanana Chiefs Conference, Inc.
- Northeastern Region-Mystic, Connecticut, December 1-2, 1999; cosponsored by the United South And Eastern Tribes
- Southeastern Region — Tampa, Florida, December 14-15, 1999; cosponsored by the United South and Eastern Tribes

Participants identified and discussed the major barriers to Native Americans' and Native Hawaiians' access to capital, prioritized the significance of those barriers, noted impacts for each barrier, and identified strategies and actions to address such barriers. A report of the proceedings of each Workshop was prepared.

In addition, in January 2000, representatives of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, along with federal and financial institution representatives, were invited to Washington, D.C. for a roundtable discussion on barriers and strategies. After discussing the issues raised in the regional workshops, participants focused on:

- How to access capital, equity, and investments.
- How to establish effective, mutually beneficial partnerships across stakeholder groups.
- The kinds of messages that should be delivered to the various audiences.
- Plans for implementing the recommendations.
- Success stories that demonstrate how Native American and Native Hawaiian communities have partnered with and/or leveraged public and private sources of capital.

The discussions at this workshop formed the basis for the recommendations contained in this Study.

THE FINANCIAL SURVEY

OBJECTIVES OF THE FINANCIAL SURVEY

Following the National Roundtable, the CDFI Fund developed a nationwide Financial Survey, which was administered to Tribal governments, Native Hawaiian representatives and FSOs familiar with lending on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands to identify the barriers to capital access and to help develop and recommend strategies to address those barriers. Specifically, the objectives of the Financial

REV_00342777

Survey were to: provide quantitative data to complement and enhance the qualitative and anecdotal findings of the Workshops and the National Roundtable; identify the kinds of relationships that exist between FSOs and Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, as well as the mix of financial services available or provided by FSOs to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities; and ensure that the issues addressed are representative of the diversity of both Native American and Native Hawaiian communities and FSOs.

The Financial Survey results were then compared to the results of Workshops and the National Roundtable.

FINANCIAL SURVEY METHODOLOGY

To conduct the Financial Survey, the CDFI Fund engaged three contractors: Deloitte & Touche LLP, an accounting and professional services firm with extensive experience in designing and conducting Financial Surveys, the Metro Chicago Information Center, a non-profit research and consulting firm, and the Johnson Strategy Group, Inc., the firm that conducted the 13 Workshops and the National Roundtable.

This team developed two Financial Survey instruments, one for Tribal governments and one for FSOs. Slightly different versions of each instrument were developed for respondents in Alaska and Hawaii to reflect the appropriate terminology used in those areas.[40]

The Financial Survey was sent to all federally recognized Tribes, including those in Alaska, as well as to non-federally recognized Tribes in Oklahoma and organizations representing Native Hawaiians, including the two Hawaii State agencies with missions relating to the Native Hawaiian community. The final Financial Survey response rates were: for FSOs, 735 Financial Surveys were sent and 245 Financial Surveys were completed, for a response rate of 33 percent; for Tribes and Native Hawaiian representatives, 851 Financial Surveys were sent, and 212 were completed, for a response rate of 25 percent.

THE EQUITY INVESTMENT ROUNDTABLE AND RESEARCH REPORT ON EQUITY INVESTMENT

THE EQUITY INVESTMENT ROUNDTABLE

In November 2000, the CDFI Fund convened a second meeting of Tribal officials, Native American entrepreneurs, private equity players, government agency representatives, and experts on issues related to accessing equity capital in underserved communities. Like the CDFI Fund's 13 Workshops, the goal of Equity Investment Roundtable was to obtain input from individuals who have direct experience in dealing with the barriers of accessing or providing equity investments, and to develop appropriate strategies and actions to address these barriers. Forty-seven people participated in a two-day roundtable discussion, and a proceedings report was prepared.

The Equity Investment Roundtable focused on defining the equity investment landscape and identifying Native American and Native Hawaiian opportunities for "getting on the equity investment radar screen." Structured discussion topics included:

[40] Appendices A and B of this report contain the Financial Survey instruments.

REV_00342778

- The equity investment landscape and "radar screen", i.e. types of equity investors and their investment criteria
- The equity investment gap on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands
- Barriers to equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands
- Strategies to overcome these barriers and improve access to equity capital
- Action plans and model approaches that can be adapted for use on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

THE EQUITY INVESTMENT REPORT

"Indian Country appears to be an 'equity desert.' What is needed is irrigation, seeding, weeding, and growth."

—Equity Investment Research Report

The CDFI Fund also conducted research on equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands to provide the background and recommendations for enhancing equity capital access. Primary research included extensive discussions with equity market participants about equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Other primary research included review of the relevant findings concerning equity investment from the Financial Survey and analysis of the major preliminary findings from the Workshops. In addition, a questionnaire was developed for participants in the Equity Investment Roundtable that provided useful information about equity investment performance and demand for equity on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

The CDFI Fund also conducted research on the level of equity investment on Indian Lands, using mostly census data and Native American-owned business data obtained from the Dun & Bradstreet Minority-Owned Business Database. The CDFI Fund estimated the amount of equity in economies comparable to those on Indian Lands based on census and related information, and data on underdeveloped countries was obtained from various UN, International Monetary Fund, and World Bank, and other sources.[41] The CDFI Fund's Equity Research analyzed these data, along with information on the effects of various public sector-sponsored, economically targeted, and community development equity investment programs, to estimate the potential benefits of bridging the estimated equity gap. The CDFI Fund supplemented this primary research with a review of over 150 secondary sources.[42]

In addition, the CDFI Fund studied models being used elsewhere that may have applicability to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities based on published reviews of these efforts, analysts' knowledge of different programs, interviews with practitioners, and the roundtable discussions. Materials from the Equity Investment Report were also used in the Equity Investment Roundtable to provide a general overview of the equity landscape and to provide structure for the roundtable discussions.

[41] These sources included the International Finance Corporation/ Standard & Poor's global stock market figures, the Milken Institute Capital Access Index, Heritage Foundation ratings on ease of capital flows, and others.

[42] These included articles in the general press, books on investment and/or obtaining financing, government publications, testimony, and press releases, academic research articles, practitioner articles and guides, and Tribal and Indian Land publications. A complete list is provided in the Bibliography, available on the CDFI website at: www.treas.gov/cdfi/. Inclusion of materials in the Bibliography, or in this Study, does not indicate CDFI Fund or U.S. Department of Treasury endorsement of the positions or opinions expressed therein. BARRIERS TO PRIVATE FINANCING AND POTENTIAL REMEDIES

CHAPTER THREE

The 13 Workshops resulted in the identification and prioritization of barriers to lending and investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities and development of strategies for addressing the barriers. The Workshops provided a forum for the stakeholders who live and work with these issues on a day-to-day basis and, working in teams, participants identified, in the aggregate, hundreds of barriers. They then prioritized the barriers and developed strategies and action plans to address them. The CDFI Fund synthesized the barriers into 17 priority barriers.

The 17 priority barriers were used as the basis for further research, and the results from the Financial Survey permitted a more detailed analysis of the barriers identified by type of respondent. Finally, barriers were reviewed during a National Roundtable and an Equity Investment Roundtable. The priority barriers are grouped into five categories, as follows:

- Legal Infrastructure
- Government Operations
- Economic
- Financial and Physical Infrastructure
- Educational and Cultural

LEGAL INFRASTRUCTURE BARRIERS

Study participants identified one legal infrastructure barrier:

- Inadequate Tribal Commercial Laws and Regulations.

Participants suggested the following recommendation:

- Enhance the Tribal Legal Infrastructure.

IDENTIFICATION OF BARRIER

Inadequate Tribal Commercial Laws and Regulations

Tribal sovereignty generally entails the right to govern, adjudicate disputes, and be immune from suit. In 1975, Congress promoted Tribal self-government by enacting the Indian Self-Determination and Educational Assistance Act[43]. Since then, Tribal governments have assumed from federal agencies increasing responsibility for day-to-day Tribal affairs. Several Workshop participants related that, in their respective experience, when lenders and investors express concerns about sovereign immunity, often they meant that Tribal governments had not developed or clearly defined the legal infrastructure for the enforcement of contracts or other commercial arrangements. Many of the FSO representatives who participated in the Workshops reported their perception that many Tribes lacked clear, predictable guidelines for the operation of Tribal sovereignty comparable to those of the neighboring states and municipal governments.

Fund research found that Tribal commercial codes and Tribal courts are at varying stages of development. Some Tribal governments have fully developed commercial codes and court systems, including trial and appellate courts, while others maintain the Tribal council or executive body as the legal enforcement mechanism. Some Tribes are too small to have their own court system and rely on the courts of neighboring states. Others are in the process of developing commercial laws, regulations, and trial and appellate courts.

Fund Equity Research and Roundtable participants reported that When Tribal commercial laws and regulations are inadequate and ambiguous, uncertainty results for potential lenders and investors. Such uncertainty can increase investors' perceived risks and cost. As a result, investors and lenders are unwilling, without increased compensation in the form of higher rates or other terms, to make investments or extend credit for home mortgages and business loans.

Additionally, some FSOs are concerned that existing Tribal courts may not be sufficiently independent of the executive branch of the Tribal government to offer a secure source of recourse to aggrieved parties from outside the community. Until investors feel confident that they can sue to enforce a contract, and appeal an adverse decision to a higher court, they may be hesitant to invest on Indian Lands.

POTENTIAL REMEDY

Enhance the Tribal Legal Infrastructure

Workshop participants reported that one potential remedy to the barriers presented by Tribal sovereignty would be the development of clearer, more predictable guidelines. In particular, Workshop participants expressed a need to inform potential lenders and investors of the circumstances under which Tribes would waive or invoke their sovereign immunity in the context of commercial transactions. It was noted that following the model of federal and state governments, many Tribal governments have enacted limited waivers of their immunity from suit for commercial development as a matter of standard business practice.

Fund research found that as Tribal economies expand and as their capital needs increase, Tribal governments need to cultivate an environment conducive to entrepreneurship, lending, and investment. A key component of a pro-business environment is a legal infrastructure that supports contract enforcement and facilitates commercial activity in the communities.

Study participants recommended a strategy of creating a more pro-business environment on Indian Lands through such actions as:

- Establishment of Tribal uniform commercial codes, foreclosure regulations, bankruptcy codes, permitting processes, and general regulatory frameworks
- Development of zoning codes and land use plans
- Development of educational programs for lenders and investors on Tribal government, laws, codes, and sovereignty and sovereign immunity

Workshop participants and CDFI research identified the following strategies implemented by various Tribal governments and examples of activities that have helped to create and strengthen those communities' respective legal infrastructures and, in some cases, have improved access to capital:

- The Tribal Commercial Code (UCC): developed by the Navajo Nation, Crow Tribe, Hoopa Valley Tribe, Lummi Indian Nation, Northern Cheyenne Tribe, Cheyenne River, Mille Lacs Band, Rosebud Sioux Tribe, and Standing Rock Sioux.
- The Tribal Land Use and Planning Code: developed by the Navajo Nation, Cabazon Band of Mission Indians, and Gila River Indian Community.
- Tribal Zoning Codes: developed by the Navajo Nation, Colville, Muckleshoot, and Menominee Tribes.
- Building Codes: developed by the Colorado River Standing Rock Sioux and the Navajo Nation.
- *Tribal Corporation Codes (licensing, incorporation, and contracts):* developed by the Navajo Nation, Cherokee Nation (Oklahoma), and the Hoopa Valley Tribe.
- Tribal Housing Codes: model codes developed by the HUD Office of Native American Programs.
- The Model Tribal Code: developed by the University of Montana-Missoula School of Law and has been adopted by several Tribes.
- Two hundred governance projects specifically for code development have been funded by the Administration for Native Americans, Department of Health and Human Services.

GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS

There is a group of barriers identified by Workshop participants and Financial Survey respondents that point to the role of government (Federal, state and Tribal) in slowing the flow of capital into these communities. The three most significant of those barriers are:

- Cumbersome, conflicting, or ineffective Federal or state programs and regulations
- Inflexible banking regulations
- Uncertainty generated by changes in Tribal government leadership

Participants suggested four recommendations:

- Improve Tribal planning processes and structure

"...most people just flat don't understand how Tribal governments are set up. ...A lot of times, they look at it as 'no-mans-land.' ...The impact of that is that there's a great fear of investment."

—Richard Kontz, Navajo Partnership for Housing

REV_00342783

- Separate the goals and management of Tribal government from those of Tribal business
- Strengthen Tribal Courts
- Streamline and improve the efficiency and effectiveness of Federal and state programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians

IDENTIFICATION OF BARRIERS

Cumbersome, Conflicting, or Inefficient Federal or State Programs and Regulations[44]

Workshop participants expressed their perceptions of: the slow pace of government decision-making; excessive requirements and paperwork; conflicting requirements of certain programs; programs that fail to address the needs of the community; and programs with overly restrictive entry guidelines. Frustration was especially pronounced because, according to participants, the role of the federal government in developing Native American and Native Hawaiian economies can be critical. Participants noted that federal funding, combined with Tribal resources, has been a major source of capital that often is necessary to leverage private capital. Accordingly, breakdowns or delays in the systems that deliver federal funding stymie the flow of private capital. Some participants related that many federal agencies have made strides in streamlining their applications and review processes with improved coordination and shortened response times, but there remains considerable room for improvement.

Inefficient regulations can discourage lenders and investors from doing business in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. According to Workshop participants, resultant bureaucratic delays increase investor risk and the costs of doing business, and discourage business development.

Inflexible Bank Lending Rules and Regulations

"Traditional loans don't work in rural Alaska because we don't qualify. We don't have a steady income. We have seasonal income or else we're on welfare."

—Fred Bahr, Noorvik, Alaska

Many Study participants felt that, in many cases, underwriting standards that financial institutions use in non-Tribal and non-Native Hawaiian communities are inappropriate to evaluate the unique attributes of potential borrowers on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands. Moreover, many participants felt that most mainstream financial institutions do not offer credit products appropriate for the income and credit histories of non-traditional income earners or for individuals with minimal credit histories. Few resources are available in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities to help people establish or repair their credit rating.

Study participants cited the following examples of Native American and Native Hawaiian economic circumstances that may disadvantage certain borrowers under traditional underwriting standards:

[44] This section is based upon the reported experiences with certain programs of Workshop participants and Financial Survey respondents. It does not contain a comprehensive review of all programs purporting to serve Native American or Native Hawaiian communities.

REV_00342784

- Seasonal, agricultural, and part-time incomes are common in Native American, Native Hawaiian communities, and especially in Alaska Native Villages.
- Many non-traditional income earners use cash for all of their transactions and consequently have not established credit histories.

Uncertainty Generated by Changes in Tribal Government Leadership

Newly-elected Tribal administrations have the authority, at their discretion, to change and or eliminate the priorities of prior administrations. Because Tribal governments frequently operate private business enterprises to augment the Tribal tax base, these priorities may, or may not, include prior administrations' business arrangements. This represents one kind of possible economic disruption resulting from transitions of Tribal governments, but Tribal ownership of businesses create other uncertainties as well. When Tribal governments maintain a dual role of governance and management oversight of Tribally-owned enterprises, the dual role can become complicated — especially when the two roles are in conflict. In the Workshops, both lenders and Tribal participants expressed concerns that newly elected officials and their administrations may change a previous administration's policies and programs in such a way as to affect private sector business arrangements. The possibility that new administrations would undermine the business arrangements of their predecessors may create uncertainty and, accordingly, risk for lenders and investors as well as for Tribal business people.

According to Workshop participants, uncertainties resulting from changes in Tribal government leadership can imply that Tribal businesses may not operate efficiently because management may emphasize meeting political goals instead of business goals, Tribal entrepreneurs may become frustrated and move their businesses out of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, and lenders and investors may invest less in Tribal businesses.

"...you need to ensure that the policies are in place that bridge the administrations and councils - both banks, Tribes, and Feds - so that as people are constantly revolving and going in and out, the policies will already be in place so you have something to fall back on."

—Justin Parker, Administrative Services Director, Makah Tribe, Washington

POTENTIAL REMEDIES

Improve Tribal Planning Processes and Structure

Workshop participants felt that Tribal governments have the responsibility to establish a clear and concise vision for the community's long-term future, to formulate policies and strategic plans for overall economic development, and to build a well-trained government workforce. They felt that a Tribally-driven, systematic approach to economic development will foster an environment that is more favorable to economic development. A plan will allow Tribal governments to proactively develop their business climate from within, rather than reacting to isolated opportunities from outside the community. Potential business partners and investors will be assured that the Tribe will continue to move in a given direction and that specific future initiatives will be implemented. The Financial Survey revealed that some Tribes have economic development plans, land use plans, and programs encouraging entrepreneurship; however, many of these plans lack crucial components for success.

"The lack of a comprehensive, cohesive plan for development, ... sometimes forces the Indian Nation to, or the government and the people to, place greater reliance on the federal government or the state government."

—Phil Scott, Chief Financial Office, Navajo Nation Division of Economic Development

REV_00342785

Specifically, participants recommended that Tribal plans should include strategies for economic diversification, a consumer spending assessment, and land use and zoning plans. They should identify businesses the Tribe wishes to target — those that are appropriate for the Tribe and that are consistent with the Tribe's culture and goals — such as, maximizing economic growth or job creation. In addition, performance evaluation plans containing measures to monitor progress should be included.

Separate the Goals and Management of Tribal Government From Those of Tribal Business

Lenders, investors, and Native American and Native business partners participating in the Workshops recommended that Tribes separate management of Tribal enterprises from the management of Tribal government operations. This would de-politicize business decisions and encourage business management decision making to focus solely on the benefit of the business operation. One strategy suggested by Workshop participants is to spin off Tribally-owned enterprises to a separate body for oversight and management, and delegate privately owned enterprise decision-making authority to a nonpolitical body, thus clarifying the roles between Tribal government activities and Tribally-owned enterprise/corporation business activities. For example, several Tribes have created Tribally-owned enterprises and corporations with separate boards and management. The Navajo Nation and Southern Ute Tribes have created Tribal for-profit oil and gas corporations, the Salt River Pima-Maricopa Community owns and operates a sand and gravel business and a cement company, and the Mississippi Band of Choctaw Indians owns and operates manufacturing plants and construction companies, all with separate governing bodies.

Strengthen Tribal Courts

Tribal courts are an integral part of a legal environment that promotes/facilitates economic development on Indian Lands, but they vary widely in their capacity and breadth of jurisdiction. Some Tribes are too small to have a court system and rely primarily on courts in surrounding jurisdictions and federal courts for enforcement. CDFI Fund research determined that there are approximately 275 formal Tribal courts, including peacemaker, traditional, and formal courts.

Workshop participants noted that lenders and investors are often reluctant to accept the jurisdiction of Tribal courts to enforce financial contracts, although it is unclear whether this reluctance is based on experience with courts or lack of knowledge of them. To address this problem, Workshop participants recommended an increase in the capacity of Tribal courts to resolve commercial and financial disputes and to enforce commercial codes. Recommended actions include the further development of independent Tribal courts, provision of training for court personnel on commercial and financial law, increasing the skills and capacity of judges and judicial personnel regarding lender and investor issues, and establishment of enforcement procedures for foreclosures and repossession, garnishment, and bankruptcy. Some initiatives are currently underway:

REV_00342786

- The Bureau of Justice Assistance, U.S. Department of Justice, and BIA are currently funding technical assistance and training grants for Tribal Court capacity building.[45]
- The National American Indian Court Judges Association has established the National Tribal Justice Resource Center to assist Tribes in strengthening methods of self-government and to provide technical assistance for enhancing Tribal justice systems.[46]
- The Tribal Court Clearinghouse has been created as a resource for Tribal court development, training, court review, code drafting, and training. [47]

Streamline and Improve the Efficiency and Effectiveness of Federal and State Programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians

Workshop participants acknowledged the important role that state and federal programs play in economic development on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. However, Workshop participants also consistently expressed the need to accelerate the pace of government decision-making, reduce excessive requirements and paperwork, rationalize the requirements of different programs that conflict with one another, reform programs that do not meet the needs of the community, and revise programs with overly-restrictive entry guidelines. They stressed that bureaucratic delays and onerous programmatic requirements extend timelines for physical and business development on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Many participants felt that if the federal government and the State of Hawaii could shorten their decision-making processes and ease programmatic requirements, development timelines could be shortened, and the associated risk and cost could be reduced.

Moreover, many Workshop participants felt that streamlining the processes that limit Tribes' abilities to alienate land, so that Tribal governments and individuals can exercise greater control over the assets that benefit them, would help remove barriers to the private sector to finance real estate and business development. As an example, in 2000 Congress passed the Omnibus Indian Advancement Act, Public Law 106-568.[48] The Act provided the opportunity to establish a streamlined process for the Navajo Nation to lease trust lands without having to obtain the approval of the Secretary of the Interior for individual leases, except leases for exploration, development, or extraction of any mineral resources. The terms of these leases, in the case of business or agricultural leases, would not exceed 25 years, but may include an option to renew for up to an additional 25 years. For residential purposes, the lease could be for a term of 75 years.

ECONOMIC BARRIERS

Workshop participants identified four major barriers that affect the economic capacity of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities:

- Limited use of trust land as collateral
- Lack of capital, collateral, and/or credit histories of Native Americans on Indian Lands and Native Hawaiians
- Negligible economic base on Indian Lands
- Lack of networking of Native-owned businesses with equity investors

Participants suggested four recommendations:

- Create alternative collateral options for trust land
- Develop ways to access debt and equity capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands
- Increase equity investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands
- Establish a Native American and Native Hawaiian equity fund

IDENTIFICATION OF BARRIERS

Limited Use of Trust Land as Collateral

"...that is the biggest impediment, in our view, as far as banks coming on and lending dollars to Tribes is because of collateral issues. You cannot put the land that is in trust as collateral because if you default, there is no way for the bank to come in and to recoup so they don't have a loss."

—Keller George, President, United South and Eastern Tribes, Inc.

One of the most complex and long-standing barriers identified in the course of the Study is the status of Indian Lands. In the latter part of the eighteenth century, Congress passed the Trade and Intercourse Act[49], which voided any transfer trust of Tribally-owned land without the approval of the federal government. In 1887, Congress passed the Allotment Act[50], which provided to individual Native Americans land from both the public domain and from the reservations themselves. Often, reservation land that remained after allotments were issued would be sold in fee status to non-Indians, creating a checkerboard land tenure system and jurisdictional uncertainty. This practice was ended in 1934. At present, land tenure on most reservations is identified as Tribal trust, individual allotment in trust, and fee-simple (which is privately owned land that is transferable and may be encumbered by a mortgage or lien). Historic changes in federal policy, the historical distrust of certain federal policies and programs by Native Americans, and basic cultural differences relating to land ownership have led to the present confusing, hybrid system of land tenure on reservations.

Trust land (tribal or allotted) is held in trust by the federal government for the benefit and use of the Tribe or the allottee and cannot be conveyed by the Tribe or members for such transactions as business leases or mortgages, without the approval of the Secretary of Interior. In Hawaii, the situation is very similar for Hawaiian Home Lands. These lands are held in trust for the benefit of the Native Hawaiian people, who may homestead a parcel of this trust land only with the approval of the State Department of Hawaiian Home Lands.

According to Workshop participants, slow and inefficient operation of such restrictions can effectively deprive Native Americans and Native Hawaiians of opportunities to use what is potentially the most valuable asset in their communities and thus creates an obvious barrier to the availability of debt financing. This barrier was identified in the Workshops and in the Financial Survey, with 55 percent of the FSOs citing limited use of trust land as collateral as a significant barrier to lending.

Even leasing, an alternative to sale requires approval from the Bureau of Indian Affairs or (in the case of Hawaiian Home Lands) the State of Hawaii. According to Workshop participants, the approval process can often take six months to two years and, even after approval, many mortgage lenders are reluctant to accept a leasehold interest in property as collateral for a mortgage. The result is that most Native Americans and Native Hawaiians either purchase mobile homes, rent apartments, reside with friends or family, wait for public housing, or purchase homes outside their communities.

In Alaska, federal ownership is replaced by regional corporation ownership of land, creating similar difficulties. As in the continental United States and Hawaii, an Alaska Native does not own the land on which his/her home or business may be constructed. [51]

According to Workshop participants and Fund research, the limited use of trust land as collateral has the following results:

- As of 1999, there were 471 home mortgages on Indian Lands.
- The out-migration of Indian Lands caused by those seeking home ownership, results in the loss of talent and economic vitality in Native American communities.
- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians often lack home equity to pay for small-business start-ups, consumer loans, and college expenses.

Lack of Capital, Collateral, and/or Credit Histories of Native Americans on Indian Lands and Native Hawaiians

Many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians do not have access to capital in the form of home equity, stock holdings, or other assets and, according to Workshop participants, the result is that:

- Low levels of home-ownership deny Native Americans and Native Hawaiians the most common form of collateral to obtain loans for purchases or small-business startups.
- Individual Native Americans and Native Hawaiians wishing to start a business, purchase a home, or make another large purchase are often not able to qualify for the loans that they need.
- Fund research and Workshop participants suggest that compared to the United States overall, fewer business and consumer loans are granted on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

[51] The Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act of 1971, codified at 43 U.S.C. §§ 1601 et seq., transferred trust land beneficiary status from the Alaska Native Tribes and Villages to 12 regional corporations. See also, Alaska v. Venetie Tribal Government, 118 S. Ct. 948 (1998).

REV_00342789

Negligible Economic Base on Indian Lands

Another key barrier that Workshop participants identified is the limited economic base in most Native American communities, which is due to a combination of small population, remote location, and the other barriers discussed in this report. According to Workshop participants, the impacts of this barrier are severe:

- Native American communities cannot support the establishment or expansion of local businesses, so that community members are forced to seek work, goods and services off Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands.
- Native American communities experience a "brain drain," as the most highly skilled members of the community emigrate in search of employment and housing opportunities.
- Private firms, investors, and financial institutions are unable to obtain the scale or volume necessary to support business.
- Community economies are concentrated in one economic sector and are vulnerable to the economic fortunes of that sector.

As a result, according to Workshop participants, Native American economies lack the diversity to withstand economic shocks or even more routine, cyclical movements. Native American communities, accordingly, are more sensitive to downturns in particular sectors.

Lack of Networking of Native-owned Businesses With Equity Investors

The CDFI Fund's Equity Investment Research Report shows that locations with significant numbers of investors and significant volume of investment activity do not coincide with significant populations of Native American and Native Hawaiian people. Additionally, investors and Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs often operate in different social/business circles. This separation can inhibit investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses. "Angel" and venture capital investors generally take an active role in the management of the companies in which they invest, and most prefer to invest in companies located in close proximity to them. Areas with the highest number of venture capital offices, such as Silicon Valley in California and Boston, Massachusetts, are not generally the locations with large numbers of Native American and Native Hawaiian firms. In addition, "angel" investors and venture capitalists often obtain investment leads and business plan submissions through a network of trusted sources, generally colleagues that they have worked with or socialized with for years, and Native American and Native Hawaiian business owners and entrepreneurs are not usually members of these referral networks. This geographic and social mismatch between Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs and investors can impede access to outside investment for many Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs.

REV_00342790

POTENTIAL REMEDIES

Create Alternative Collateral Options for Trust Land

One strategy recommended by Workshop participants is to recognize and leverage the value of trust assets and other commercial or financial assets and to build equity pools from these resources. For example, the Southern Ute Tribe has established a growth fund built on the Tribal mineral estate. This fund has leveraged outside capital and currently provides the basis for Tribal economic self-sufficiency.

Another potential strategy identified by Workshop participants is to facilitate development of trust land and unlock the value of assets through alternative means of valuation and of turning assets into collateral. Alternative collateral options could be utilized, including master leases, and streamlined leasing procedures could be implemented to overcome restrictions on using trust land as collateral. For example, in 2000, Congress passed the Omnibus Indian Advancement Act (P.L.106-568), which established a streamlined process for the Navajo Nation to lease trust lands without having to obtain the approval of the Secretary of the Interior for individual leases.[52]

Develop Ways to Access Debt and Equity Capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

There are four potential sources of capital on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands:

- Tribal financial resources. Tribal respondents to the Financial Survey reported that they use their own resources to fund infrastructure on Indian Lands, Tribally owned businesses, economic development, and home construction and purchases.
- Federal and state government loans and grants. These are primarily used, according to Financial Survey respondents, to finance infrastructure on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, economic development, home construction, property redevelopment, and large businesses.
- Debt capital from banks. According to Financial Survey respondents, banks most commonly finance consumer purchases.
- External equity for businesses, investment. According to the Fund's research, external equity investment is the least used form of financing on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.

Another recommendation from Workshop participants was to form more FSOs and CDFIs on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Workshop participants felt that locally controlled FSOs and CDFIs could be an important source of investment, loans and financial services that would be crafted to respond to their particular community's needs. A CDFI, in order [52] P.L. 106-568 provides modification to existing law concerning the leasing of Navajo Nation trust lands. The Navajo Nation Trust Land Leasing Act of 2000 allows trust land to be leased, subject to Tribal regulations, without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior. The terms of these leases, in the case of business or agricultural leases, cannot exceed 25 years, but may include an option to renew for an additional 25 years. For residential purposes, leases can be for a term of 75 years.

to be certified as such by the CDFI Fund, is required to provide services to support the consumers of its products and to demonstrate that its products and services are targeted to the market that it serves. Several Workshop participants stated that, in many instances, only financial institutions and investors that have some broader stake in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities will undertake the level of activity and investment needed to serve the communities adequately.

Accordingly, Workshop participants recommended that Tribes and Native Hawaiian communities should develop their capacity to orchestrate and leverage all sources of capital, that financial institutions should develop new lending and financing products and revise underwriting criteria to meet the unique needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, and that lending programs of regulated and unregulated entities be developed to finance businesses of all sizes and home ownership, especially on trust land.

Increase Equity Investment on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

"It seems like the underlying question is: How do you create – carve a channel for capital to flow into Indian Country in terms of equity funding?"

—Glenn Yago, The Milken Institute

Equity Investment Roundtable participants noted that having access to new equity investments would provide financing for businesses and allow greater lending to these businesses by allowing them increased ability to leverage their equity. As explained in the Equity Investment Research Report, however, external equity investment, although widely used throughout the U.S. and in countries around the world, has not been widely used on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Equity investment is a critical missing ingredient because equity investments often do not require the types of physical assets as collateral that loans or other types of credit financing require. In particular, equity investment does not require using land as security and accordingly, equity investments overcomes the obstacles presented by impediments to using trust land as security. Equity investments can thus provide money to businesses that do not qualify for loans but are still good investments. Bankers provide liquidity and expansion capability to businesses with cash flow and collateral, whereas equity investors invest in management teams with credible business plans — teams that investors expect will generate returns on their investments.

"The latest research we did both on the angels [startup equity investors] and the venture capital markets are interesting in the fact that there is plenty of capital out there. What they miss is quality deal flow, putting the emphasis on quality... You will certainly have to develop that pipeline that feeds the systems."

—Jeffrey Sohl, Professor, University of New Hampshire

Many Workshop participants agreed that in order to improve access to equity capital, investors must understand Native American and Native Hawaiian communities and Native Americans and Native Hawaiians must understand how equity markets function — what investors want and why. There are many sources of equity to suit different needs: some companies evolve through one or more of these equity sources as they change and grow, whereas others may only use the type most applicable to them at the time they need it. Tribal leaders and private investors suggested strategies that relied on accessing capital sources that have not traditionally been on the Native American investment "radar screen" and on expanding Native American awareness to include more equity and nontraditional financing and thus increase the chance of securing funding. Exhibit 1 depicts the new tribal-investment "radar screen" and illustrates how participants at the November 28-29, 2000, Equity Investment Roundtable Meeting view future awareness of equity sources.

Exhibit 2 illustrates an equity landscape in terms of types of equity investment versus enterprise stages of business development.

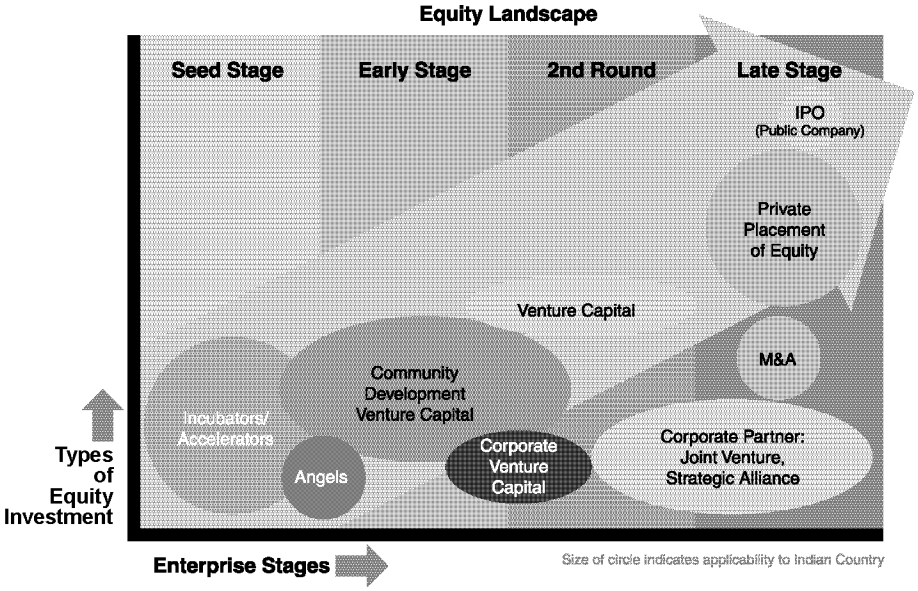

Exhibit 2

Equity Investment Roundtable participants discussed, and the Equity Investment Research Report reviewed, several potential strategies[53]:

- First, business incubators provide seed capital, physical space, and expert advice on technical and management issues to small businesses and start-ups. Industry or sector-specific incubators can provide full spectrum management and technical assistance on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, and thus meet the needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.

- Second, "angel" investors are another source of early money (seed capital) and expert advice. Most angel investors are entrepreneurs who have successfully launched one or more businesses of their own and enjoy helping other entrepreneurs get their businesses started. In addition to money and advice, they contribute time and help with contacts. They are usually very involved in the day-to-day management of the business, and they usually prefer to finance businesses in an industry in which they have experience and in businesses that are in close physical proximity to their headquarters.

  Existing angel investor networks could be utilized and, in addition, a Native American and Native Hawaiian angel network could be created. A relevant example is the Center of North America Capital Fund (CONAC), an angel investor network and investment fund that links two Tribes — the Turtle Mountain Band of Chippewa and the Spirit Lake Sioux — with nationwide investors for investment in North Dakota. The CONAC Fund was modeled after Minnesota's Regional Angel Investor Networks (RAIN) Fund, a series of rural investment funds formed by the Minnesota Investment Network Corporation.

[53] For a more complete discussion of the equity strategies discussed here, see CDFI Fund Native American Lending Study, Equity Investment Roundtable and Research Report, January 2001, prepared by Complexity Management, Inc. and The Johnson Strategy Group, Inc.

REV_00342794

- Third, existing community development venture capital (CDVC) funds can be used and Native-specific ones can be created. CDVC combines venture capital with high levels of technical assistance, similar to what incubators and angels provide. CDVC strives for both financial and social returns. CDVC has been a successful and growing approach to bringing capital to businesses in underserved communities, but is still a small part of the overall equity investment landscape, representing only about 0.03 percent of all private equity available in 2000. Traditional venture capital funds typically raise funds and then liquidate their investments and return money to investors in ten-year increments. Funding such as grants, foundation loans, and official aid does not always require a market rate of financial return. However, while some private sector equity investors are willing to accept less-than-market returns for helping the community, their resources are limited. The social returns sought by CDVCs vary, but are typically characterized by increased minority and women ownership, job creation, diversity in hiring, employment of residents in the targeted disadvantaged communities, quality benefits as part of compensation, and environmental criteria. Sensitivity to the culture of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities can also be built into the investment criteria of these funds.

  For example, the Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation (KHIC) has succeeded in providing training and technical assistance to Appalachian entrepreneurs. The corporation initiates new businesses by helping the entrepreneur create a viable business, management team, and business plan, and thus investing equity in the business.

- Fourth, some corporations have internal venture capital funds. Generally, they invest in businesses that can potentially offer a promising new technology, a complementary product or component of their own product line, or a new or complementary market approach. Corporate venture capital funds may invest in an early stage or an expansion stage of a business.

  Becoming a partner with, and receiving equity investments from, corporations outside Native American and Native Hawaiian communities has been used occasionally on Indian Lands, and could be used more widely in the future. Corporate "partnering" offers not only financing, but also management skills, industry expertise, and informal networks to assist small businesses.

- Fifth, state and city venture capital programs can be used. Public sector sponsored funds, fund guarantees, and incentives of various types are proving to be a source of learning and information for investors. Public and private sector partnership approaches, often joint funds with an intermediary, have proven successful. For example, several states, including Massachusetts and Oklahoma, have launched profitable, growing businesses that created jobs and a more diverse economy.

- Finally, public/private intermediaries could be formed to direct equity and loan funds to Native American and Native Hawaiian businesses. For example, the Hopi Credit Association provides a bridge between banks and Tribal borrowers. The credit union obtains funds from banks and handles all loan "Demand for equity is exactly equal to the number of businesses that you start. If you put it in the vernacular, there ain't a business that's going to be started without equity."

—Ray Moncrief, Kentucky Highlands Investment

REV_00342795

selection and servicing interaction with Native Americans, the banks with a responsible Tribal credit union that understands banking needs, and the Native Americans are comfortable with a credit union that understands their needs. In another case, the Southern Ute Growth Fund uses a partnership approach: the Tribe co-invests, using its growth fund and capital provided by outside investors, in a variety of growth opportunities. This approach initially began with the Tribe's oil and gas business, and then expanded to other ventures.

Establish a Native American and Native Hawaiian Equity Fund

Equity Investment Roundtable participants, noting that an emerging economy can find it difficult to become self-sustaining until adequate levels of private debt and equity capital are available to the businesses in that economy, felt that public funds can play an important role in this process. Since public funds can have the mission of developing a particular region, they can be provided on the basis of greater risk and lower returns than private sector investors may be willing to accept. Historically, the public sector has often played a crucial role in investing in underdeveloped areas, and can help develop a critical mass of investment to encourage the private sector to invest.

To attract equity to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, one option identified by Workshop participants was for the federal government to play an initial role by sponsoring an equity fund on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. According to Workshop participants, this could encourage private sector investors to invest on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands and could be combined with other incentives, such as guarantees, tax credits, or other risk-reduction measures.

FINANCIAL AND PHYSICAL INFRASTRUCTURE

Workshop participants and Financial Survey respondents identified the lack of financial and physical infrastructure as a significant barrier to investment in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities. These issues will be discussed in the following barrier sections:

- Lack of financial institutions on or near Indian Lands or Native Hawaiian communities
- Lack of physical and telecommunications infrastructure on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands

"Without necessary infrastructure to build an economy, why would a banking industry want to lend money? It wants money returned. But for money to return, it has to have a sustained economy... But to have a sustained economy, you need necessary infrastructure."

—Brian Henry, Alaska Village Initiatives

Participants and respondents suggested the following four potential recommendations:

- Increase the number of financial institutions on or near Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands
- Develop regional financial institutions
- Develop financial products and services that will meet the needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian depositors and borrowers
- Create innovative strategies to develop Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands infrastructure

REV_00342796

IDENTIFICATION OF BARRIERS

Lack of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands or Native Hawaiian Communities

The Financial Survey identified the lack of financial institutions based in Indian Land and Hawaiian Home Land as a serious problem and noted that, unlike non-Native American or non-Native Hawaiian communities, Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands are not generally served by a variety of financial institutions. In the Financial Survey, 33 percent of Tribal respondents indicated that they had to travel at least 30 miles to reach an ATM or a bank branch, and many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians have difficulty in accessing any form of banking service. This lack of basic financial services has implications for financial literacy, capacity building, and banker-customer communication. It exacerbates the capital access gap and increases the difficulty of starting new businesses and acquiring home mortgages. The Financial Survey also found that:

- Only 14 percent of communities on Indian Lands have a financial institution in their community.
- Approximately half of these communities have a financial institution nearby, and only about half have an easily accessible ATM.
- Six percent of the residents of Indian Lands must travel more than 100 miles to reach the nearest bank or ATM.

Native American Workshop participants noted that in many of their communities that lack financial institutions, individuals needing credit must often rely on sub-prime lenders who charge high fees for their services. In addition, the absence of financial service providers reinforces the cash and barter system of trade and contributes to Native Americans' and Native Hawaiians' unfamiliarity with financial institutions and the contemporary financial services culture. According to CDFI research and Workshop participants, the impact of this lack of financial institutions on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands is substantial:

- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians' access to even basic banking services is limited, and they must leave Tribal lands to obtain these services.
- Financial services are costly for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians.
- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians have limited opportunity to acquire financial expertise or the capacity and experience to manage community-based financial institutions.
- Many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians have either no credit history or a poor credit history that prevents them from qualifying for loans.

Lack of Physical and Telecommunications Infrastructure on Indian Lands or Hawaiian Home Lands

According to Workshop participants, there is serious lack of physical and telecommunications infrastructure[54] on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Several Workshop participants and, in particular, investors who [54] For purposes of this report, physical infrastructure is defined as water, sewer, and electrical lines and roads; telecommunications infrastructure is defined as telephone, cable, and fiber optic lines.

REV_00342797

participated in the Equity Investment Roundtable cited this absence of developed infrastructure as a significant impediment to attracting investment to Indian Lands. Further, participants reported that undeveloped infrastructure significantly increased the costs associated with business development on Indian Lands:

- Only 47 percent of households on Indian Lands have telephones, compared to 94 percent for non-Native rural communities in the United States.[55]
- Twenty-six percent of Tribes report that they do not have 911 police/fire emergency services.[56]
- In rural areas (with populations of 2,500 or fewer), 12 percent of Native American households lack electricity and 23 percent do not have access to natural gas.[57]
- Only nine percent of rural Native American households have personal computers and, of these, only eight percent have Internet access.[58]
- There is significant unmet need for road and bridge improvements on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands.[59]
- More than 66 percent of the Indian Reservation Roads (IRR) system consists of unimproved earth and gravel surfaces that wash out in severe weather, and 26 percent of IRR bridges are deficient. The annual fatality rate on these roads is more than four times the national average.[60]

Workshop participants expressed concern about infrastructure, and a recent study by the New Mexico State University also found that Tribes identified infrastructure development as one of their top priorities.[61] The NMSU Study of infrastructure needs on Indian Lands in the lower 48 states and Alaska found that "Tribes overwhelmingly identified their top investment priorities as housing, roads, wastewater technology, and medical facilities."[62]

Moreover, the NMSU Study reports that due to this inferior physical and telecommunications infrastructure:

- The cost of economic development is increased and private commercial development is decreased.
- Business startups face prohibitive costs, and economic activity on Indian Lands is limited to a large degree to service industries.

- The Native American economies are not self-sustaining and create relatively few jobs.
- Internet access is more expensive and more difficult to obtain in Native American communities.

POTENTIAL REMEDIES

Increase the Number of Financial Institutions on or Near Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands

Workshop participants noted that different approaches have been used to address the lack of access to financial services. A few Tribes have formed agreements with banks to build branch banks on their land, some Tribes and Native American non-profits have started revolving loan funds (some are CDFIs), and some Tribal governments have instituted government-run revolving loan funds.

Workshop participants strongly felt that the creation of community based financial institutions in Native American and Native Hawaiian communities should be given high priority, and CDFIs were identified as a crucial and underutilized resource. Since, no single financial institution model can address the needs of all Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, establishing and expanding CDFIs on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands offers important advantages for they can provide lending and investment funds that employ people from the community. In addition, CDFIs provide opportunities for to develop partnership programs among Tribes, other financial institutions, equity investors, and federal agencies.

Another strategy is the expansion of existing financial institutions to Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, and purchasing existing banks. There are examples of successful initiatives cited by Workshop participants:

- The Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe used an existing revolving loan fund to create the non-profit Four Bands Community Fund, a CDFI that provides loans to businesses.
- In 1990, the Navajo Nation had only three bank branches and one ATM serving a geographic area of 17 million acres. To increase the availability of financial services on the reservation, the Tribe entered into an agreement with Norwest Bank (now Wells Fargo) to build four new branch banks, hire and train Navajo personnel, and target financing to business startups and housing development.
- In all, nine Tribally-owned commercial banks, seven credit unions, and 14 loan funds have been developed nationwide to serve Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.
- Hawaiian Community Assets, Inc. is developing a charter for the first Native Hawaiian-owned bank.
- As of September 30, 2000, the CDFI Fund had certified 34 CDFIs that serve Native American or Native Hawaiian communities.

"...this is the first time I've met some of the credit officers from Tribal credit enterprises here, and it's really exciting to see them here, but I think they're all set up separately and I think an association might be real helpful for training, for collaboration, for working with other banks, for partnerships."

—Dave Tovey, Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation, Oregon

Develop Regional Financial Institutions

Workshop participants stated their belief that regional partnerships and alliances are essential to overcoming barriers to capital and credit access,

The regional focus is important because, according to Workshop participants:

- Tribes and Tribal organizations can coordinate with federal agency financial assistance providers at the regional level for initiatives such as Small Business Investment Companies (SBICs) or CDFIs.
- Regional partnerships and alliances can address economies of scale for small or newly recognized Tribes that do not have the necessary legal, economic, and physical infrastructure necessary to support financial institutions.

Possible strategies identified by Workshop participants include building partnerships established through the Workshop cosponsors[63] and other Inter-Tribal organizations; establishing regional information clearinghouses for information on model financing approaches, accessing equity capital, and sources of training and technical assistance; and providing channels of information to Tribal communities so that they can adapt model approaches unique to their cultural settings; and holding follow-up forums similar to those conducted in this Study.

Another approach is to establish regional partnerships among banks, lending institutions, venture capitalists, federal agencies, and Tribes/Inter-Tribal organizations to:

- Conduct regional forums to assist Tribal businesses in identifying types and sources of financing that best serve a given enterprise.
- Create financing intermediaries that provide regional and local assistance to Tribes and Tribal entrepreneurs.
- Develop technical and underwriting standards at the regional level that can be adapted to varying Tribal business environments.

Examples of successful regional initiatives cited by Workshop participants include:

- The Native American Development Corporation is a nonprofit CDFI that provides Native American business communities in Montana and Wyoming with funds to create jobs, develop long-term economic self-sufficiency, and facilitate access to capital. Its Capital Loan Fund was initially capitalized with funding from banks, the federal government, First Nations Development Institute, and private corporations.
- The Native American Lending Group, Inc. is a nonprofit multi-Tribe CDFI in New Mexico that serves 19 Pueblo communities. It was created to provide Tribes, Native American businesses, and individuals access to private investment capital.

[63] See Chapter II, pages 18-19, for the list of the 14 cosponsors.

REV_00342800

- Coastal Enterprises, Inc. is a nonprofit CDFI serving low-income communities in Maine, provides financial and technical assistance for development and expansion of industries, small businesses, housing, and social services. CEI has partnered with the Penobscot Indian Nation to develop a CDFI to fund housing and business development.

Develop Financial Products and Services That Will Meet the Needs of Native American and Native Hawaiian Depositors and Borrowers

Many Workshop participants expressed the opinion that, in order to bridge the divide between lenders and Native American communities, FSOs should develop products and services that will address the economic attributes of Native American or Native Hawaiian markets. For example, many participants suggested that FSOs develop underwriting standards that can evaluate potential borrowers who are employed seasonally, or who have lived in mostly cash economies. In addition, Workshop participants believed that there would be more creditworthy borrowers in Native American communities if FSOs provided more educational and outreach services.

Create Innovative Strategies to Develop Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands Infrastructure

According to Workshop participants, infrastructure must be in place if Native American and Native Hawaiian economies are to develop and create jobs, and that, absent commercial grade infrastructure, projects proposed for financing are frequently rejected by lenders. Various ideas were explored at the Workshops to facilitate development of an infrastructure system capable of supporting commercial and industrial needs on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands:

- Conduct a commercial and industrial infrastructure assessment to determine infrastructure needs throughout Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.
- Create partnerships between Tribal governments and private developers to plan for comprehensive infrastructure development, including information technology needs.
- Ensure that a federal infrastructure investment strategy best utilizes available federal resources and encourages private partnerships to participate in the funding and development process.
- Assess the feasibility of creating an entity similar to the Rural Community Assistance Project (RCAP) that would focus on infrastructure development in rural Native American and Native Hawaiian communities.

Workshop participants noted that the federal government has already begun to address some of these issues. As an example, the Workshop participants cited an initiative by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) has to increase assistance to Native Americans through the Lifeline and Link Up programs, and conduct outreach to ensure that Native Americans are familiar with these programs and know how to qualify for them. FCC has also changed its auction rules to increase incentives for wireless carriers to serve Indian lands, and has streamlined the process for telecommunications companies to receive universal-service support in serving Indian Lands.[64]

Another opportunity may exist through the Indian Financing Act of 1974[65], under which Tribes may issue tax-exempt bonds to fund "essential government functions" that state and local governments customarily provide — including principal infrastructure improvements. However, according to Workshop participants, most Tribes do not have the ability to service tax-exempt bond debt. While Tribes as sovereigns have the authority to levy taxes, there is frequently an inadequate tax base to finance infrastructure improvements.

A number of other mechanisms exist to finance infrastructure development, including loans from Tribal trust funds, loans to Tribes from revolving credit funds (established in section 10 of the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934[66]), loans for infrastructure development pursuant to the Indian Financing Act, Tribal (general obligation) bonds, publicly issued and traded Tribal bonds, revenue bonds, joint ventures with the private sector, and grants. However, most of these are based on some form of debt, and most Tribes, according to Workshop participants, do not have tax bases that would enable them to qualify for loans or bonds.

EDUCATIONAL AND CULTURAL BARRIERS

Workshop participants and Financial Survey respondents identified banker, investor, and Tribal lack of knowledge, understanding or capacity more often than any other set of barriers to private investment. Specifically, they identified the following seven barriers that were grouped into this theme:

- Lack of knowledge or experience with the financial world on the part of Tribes and individual Native Americans and Native Hawaiians
- Lack of technical assistance resources
- Failure of lenders and investors to understand Tribal government or legal systems
- Poor understanding of Tribal sovereignty and sovereign immunity
- Historical absence of trust between Tribes and banks
- Differences between Native American and Native Hawaiian cultures and the banking and investor cultures
- Discrimination against and/or stereotyping of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities

REV_00342802

Participants and respondents suggested the following four recommendations:

- Expand financial education for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians
- Develop entrepreneurship programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians
- Conduct lender and investor education
- Expand technical assistance

IDENTIFICATION OF BARRIERS

Lack of Knowledge or Experience With the Financial World on the Part of Tribes and Individual Native Americans and Native Hawaiians

According to CDFI Fund research, in Native American and Native Hawaiian economies, most transactions have been conducted using cash. Many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians thus lack an understanding of banking, credit reporting, and loan qualification processes and standards and have difficulty obtaining credit because they have no credit histories or, in some cases, bad credit histories. Moreover, Native American residents of Indian Lands and Native Hawaiians often lack knowledge and experience in preparing the business plans required for bank financing. In addition, many are unfamiliar with how financial markets work, how to make equity financing choices, and what investors require.

According to CDFI Fund research and Equity Investment Roundtable, equity investment has not traditionally been a Tribal focus for capital formation. While Tribes are beginning to reinvest their funds as equity in new businesses, accepting external equity investment is still often a foreign concept. Native American and Native Hawaiian cultures have not traditionally been profit-driven, and the Tribal government's objective in business management and business development is often job creation to address immediate unemployment problems. Moreover, according to Workshop participants, in the past, some unscrupulous salespeople have taken advantage of these Tribal sensibilities to offer investments to Tribes that subverted Tribal values and returned little. Such experiences have contributed to a history of Tribal distrust of "outside" business interests. This is often exacerbated when a non-Native investor or lender requires that, as part of the deal, the Tribe or entrepreneur relinquish partial ownership and control of the business to the investor.

In evaluating potential funding opportunities, bankers and equity investors analyze the loan applicant's management skills, financial knowledge, and business planning ability. Equity investors also require that applicants seeking investment capital have business plans, which is often an unfamiliar concept to many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians, according to Workshop participants. Therefore, before they even apply for capital, potential Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs are likely need assistance with strategic, business, and financial planning. Equity Investment Roundtable participants noted that the consequences of inexperience with the financial services sector can be serious:

- Many Native Americans and Native Hawaiians do not establish credit histories or have poor credit histories that disqualify them from many loans, and they tend to have relatively high loan default rates.
- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians can be vulnerable to predatory lenders.
- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians can be subject to high financial service costs that are passed on in high interest rates on loans.

Similarly, according to Workshop participants, the implications of a lack of understanding of private equity investment can be serious:

- Tribes do not know how to locate and approach equity investors.
- Native American and Native Hawaiian business proposals are not funded if they do not meet equity investors' goals.
- Native Americans and Native Hawaiians often do not know how to package development proposals for consideration for loan in equity investment, and are thus not successful in obtaining funds.

Lack of Technical Assistance Resources

The Study identified the lack of technical assistance and training financial literacy, financial management and banking and investment standards as serious barriers. Workshops participants identified a variety of unmet training needs for Tribal governments and Native American and Native Hawaiian entrepreneurs. Many stakeholders would benefit from technical assistance and training that facilitate greater access to lending and investments in Native American communities. The consensus of Workshop participants was that a lack of technical assistance limits Tribes' opportunities to build the internal capacities of potential financial managers or entrepreneurs.

"...there is a misunderstanding of Tribal sovereignty... We fear what we don't understand. And when you fear what you don't understand, it makes you reluctant to work with the Tribes. And if the lenders won't work with the Tribes and they fear them, then biases are created. And when the biases are created they get carried generation to generation and the problem just persists over and over again."

—Sharon Scott, Alatna Tribal Council, Alaska

Failure of Lenders and Investors to Understand Tribal Government or Legal Systems

Equity Investment Roundtable participants suggested that many lenders and investors have had limited exposure to Tribal government operations, regulations, and enforcement. Lenders and investors are concerned about not being able to collect on their debts or fear that the process of doing so will be complex and difficult. They may not know how to get Tribal government approval or how to get a stalled project moving. They may not have or know how to find attorneys that are knowledgeable about a particular Tribe's laws and regulatory requirements and they may not trust the impartiality of the Tribe's courts. As a result, lenders and investors perceive higher risk and cost associated with lending and investment activity on Indian Lands and thus few lenders and investors pursue Native American markets.

Poor Understanding of Tribal Sovereignty and Sovereign Immunity

Study results indicate that lenders and investors do not understand Tribal and Village sovereignty and sovereign immunity, and thus often are reluctant to conduct business on Indian Lands because they fear that they will not be able to recover assets or enforce contracts in the event of a default or a bankruptcy.

REV_00342804

Further, a number of lenders and investors who participated in Workshops or the Equity Investment Roundtable reported that they have tried to make loans in Native American communities and have been unsuccessful because they underestimated the time required or did not adequately address community concerns.

Historical Absence of Trust Between Tribes and Banks

The Financial Survey revealed significant differences in perception between Tribes and FSOs, involving the difficulty of accessing financial products and services. Workshop participants reported that there has been a historical lack of trust between Native Americans and Native Hawaiians and FSOs. Further, they reported that this lack of trust has impeded the development of working relationships, and caused misunderstanding that has led, in turn, to: failed negotiations for loans; cultural isolation; increased costs of doing business for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians; and a reluctance on the part of banks to underwrite loans.

"...a lot of the Tribes are faced with the fear of losing self-governance and control. So we felt it was real important they understand...the rules of lending and how it would apply to them as a sovereign nation."

—David Salmon, Chalkyitsik Traditional Council, Alaska

Differences Between Native American and Native Hawaiian Cultures and the Banking and Investor Cultures

A key difference between Native American and Native Hawaiian cultures and the financial and investment culture on views of wealth and sharing became evident in the Workshops and the Equity Investment Roundtable. As participants explained, traditional banking and investor cultures value profit and the accumulation of assets; creditworthiness is determined by "objective" standards based an individual's accumulated wealth, income stream, controlling assets, and credit history; and land is an asset with a value that is determined (it belongs to individuals and can be legally transferred).

In contrast, according to Workshop participants, Native Americans and Native Hawaiians with an asset to lend to another are more likely to consider the borrower's character and the relationship between the lender and the borrower. The traditions and customs regarding debts of Tribal members exist in various ways. Workshop participants and commentators have observed that debtor creditor relationships in Native American communities frequently are family as well as individual obligations. Moreover, they have noted, Native American creditors' determinations of potential borrowers' creditworthiness factors in the individuals' character and the ongoing relationship between the lender and the borrower. Perhaps most telling, CDFI Fund research found, and Workshop participants confirmed, that such local "underwriting" practices yield more than competitive repayment rates.

"We need to come up with a balance, and they [cultural heritage vs. western values] both have a place in our lives today in the Hawaiian community. But that is a very sensitive issue. You don't want to have to give up one in order to pursue the other."

—William Chang, Hina-Malailena, Hawaii

In many Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, relationships are built on interdependence and resource sharing. Generosity and giving away one's possessions is a mark of Native American wealth. This is often demonstrated at social gatherings where one's possessions are distributed at a "give away" or "potlatch" to members of the community. The concept of wealth building, as most bankers and investors understand it, is often foreign in many Native American and Native Hawaiian cultures. Land is held communally and its value belongs to the community. The idea that one can establish a credit history and develop assets through a home mortgage is not seen as creating wealth.

REV_00342805

"It takes me back to my point this morning about communication, knowledge, and understanding. The more both sides have that, the more you reach a level of trust. That's really where the partnerships need to go between Indian Country organizations and outside organizations."

—James W. Wagele, Bank of America

The lack of understanding of these differences in value systems and their impact on relationship building, approaches to contract making and receptiveness to marketing approaches was apparent in the Workshops. For example, some Native American and Native Hawaiian representatives discussed the importance of maintaining their cultures and the difficulties that they encounter when trying to establish new policies and procedures that fulfill lender and investor demands and expectations. Workshop participants from FSOs, investment, Native American, and Native Hawaiian communities expressed a desire to learn more about each other in ways that will facilitate relationship-building, contract-making and product development.

Discrimination Against and/or Stereotyping of Native American and Native Hawaiian Communities

According to Workshop participants, Native Americans and Native Hawaiians suffer from discrimination and/or stereotyping in lending arenas. Study participants reported that such activity plays out in many subtle and overt ways ranging from misunderstandings and missteps that occur when two individuals raised with different values communicate with each other to overt redlining and discriminatory lending practices. Workshop participants report that much discrimination today is subtle, and sometimes surfaces as less outreach by lenders to Native American and Native Hawaiian communities than to other communities and as prospective Native American and Native Hawaiian borrowers feeling unwelcome and uncomfortable in the lending arena. In addition, Workshop participants report that few in the Native American and Native Hawaiian communities are familiar enough with federal and state consumer protection and fair lending laws to address potential discrimination in lending.

POTENTIAL REMEDIES

Expand Financial Education for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians

"Our group felt that education was our No. 1 priority... We're talking about Tribal leaders being educated as to what is needed to get loans, what processes you have to go through; the lenders as to how Tribes are run, what our Tribal codes are..."

—Sharon Holmdahl, Colville Tribal Credit, Washington

A key strategy identified by Workshop participants for addressing educational and cultural barriers is to provide financial education to Native Americans and Native Hawaiians. Such education can enhance economic and community development efforts on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands by giving people the expertise to shape their own and their communities' economic futures. Financial literacy curricula are readily available from various sources, although they may need to be adapted for Native American and Native Hawaiian students. [67]

[67] For example, First Nations Development Institute, in partnership with the Fannie Mae Foundation, has developed a personal finance curriculum that is tailored to the Native American community. In addition, the National Partnership for Financial Education, a consortium of federal agencies and regulators, non-profits, and trade associations, is working to improve financial literacy in Native American communities.

REV_00342806

The actions recommended by Workshop participants include:

- Establishment of teaching partnerships among Tribal and non-Tribal colleges, financial institutions, nonprofits, and CDFIs.
- Incorporation of web-based training in the curriculum.
- Facilitation of funding and teacher recruitment through the private sector, Tribes, Inter-Tribal organizations, and federal agencies.

"We're only going to be here for so long, but we need to start working with young people, you know, the kids, and that's part of your vision here and I want to see that continued further."

—Mark Madsen, Jamestown S'Klallam Tribe, Washington

Develop Entrepreneurship Programs for Native Americans and Native Hawaiians

According to Workshop participants, entrepreneurs and small business owners are essential to Native American and Native Hawaiian economies; however, the skills of the trade of a good mechanic or restaurateur, for example, are qualitatively different from the financial, marketing, and personnel development skills required of a successful entrepreneur. An entrepreneurial training program and small business finance education program can help bridge this gap.

Educational curricula can be adapted to fit elementary-to-high-school educational programs, and Workshop participants recommended teaching entrepreneurial skills to both school children and adults. Moreover, Workshop participants suggested that entrepreneurship programs in high school could be reinforced with business development programs, such as Junior Achievement, where young people learn to start small businesses, and core materials on personal finance, small business finance, and entrepreneurship can be presented.

An example of a training program cited by Workshop participants is the American Indian Business Leaders entrepreneurial training program, headquartered at the University of Montana in Missoula, for Native American high school and college students.

Conduct Lender and Investor Education

One initiative suggested by Workshop participants is to develop educational programs on Native American and Native Hawaiian economies and markets so as to increase lender and investor awareness of Native American and Native Hawaiian market opportunities, business successes, and emerging entrepreneurs. Workshops and National Roundtable discussions revealed that stakeholders are interested in continuing the information and education exchanges begun here. Specific actions recommended by the participants include:

- Development of guides to Tribal government structures and procedures, sovereignty and sovereign immunity, land status, Native American and Native Hawaiian culture, protocol, and etiquette Tribal laws, regulatory/licensing requirements and financing and economic development needs.
- Creation of a directory of Tribal credit officers, economic development officers, department heads, and attorneys qualified to practice in Tribal courts.
- Development of a general marketing campaign that illustrates effective practices and success stories by implementing awards programs, such as Honoring Nations (Harvard University's annual awards for innovative Tribal government programs).

"...we want to increase the awareness with the partners that we have, the Federal government, lenders, private players, by bringing them out to the communities... This then, we would hope, would lead to specific projects that were designed specifically for that community..."

—Jeri Walters, National Bank of Alaska

REV_00342807

- The initiation of educational seminars by Native American and Native Hawaiian communities focusing on Native American and Native Hawaiian business investment opportunities.
- Creation of speakers bureaus, to be offered through extension services, chambers of commerce, Tribal community colleges, Inter-Tribal organizations and Alaska Native regional corporations.
- Development of web-based databases that include economic and institutional profiles of Native American and Native Hawaiian communities, federal programs that may be available to support economic development projects, and lending and investment resources.
- Development of educational materials about fair lending laws and creation of forums to present these materials to Native American and Native Hawaiian audiences.
- Development of educational materials about discrimination and cultural awareness, and creation of forums to present these materials to lenders, investors, and state and federal officials.

Expand Technical Assistance

Workshop participants recommended developing technical assistance resources for small business owners on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands. Most Workshop participants agreed that small business finance and entrepreneurship training and education alone would not be enough to create financial opportunities on Indian Lands and Hawaiian Home Lands, for entrepreneurs and small-business owners would likely require assistance in applying the training to their unique situations. The Financial Survey indicated that Native Americans and Native Hawaiians with access to counseling, training, and/or technical-assistance resources are more likely to rate financial products and services as easier to obtain.

Actions recommended by Workshop participants include:

- Development of small business incubators, resource centers, "one-stop shops," and CDFIs to provide business development and management technical assistance.
- Use of circuit riders or loaned staff from partner business and financial institutions to augment small business resource center nonprofit staff in training Tribal and Inter-Tribal office staffs.
- Creation of regional business resource centers funded by federal, Tribal, and private sources.

Examples of such assistance cited by Workshop participants include the SBA Micro Loan program, the SBA Tribal Business Information Centers, and technical assistance programs for program borrowers such as the Hopi Credit Association, the Lakota Fund, and the Alaska Growth Capital BIDCO, Inc.

According to Workshop participants, another useful strategy may be to coordinate technical assistance resources by establishing a national clearinghouse of training and technical assistance resources relating to lending and investment, developing a training package that includes planning models relevant to Tribal business opportunities, and conducting regional forums and inviting Tribal businesses to test plans before panels of experts.

According to Workshop participants, the basic financial training discussed above can be further strengthened with student internships and with exchanges for adults. Internships for Native American and Native Hawaiian students with financial regulatory agencies and financial institutions could be an effective way for students to obtain financial training and job skills. In addition, Tribal government professionals could use exchange programs and details or rotations in administration and regulatory agencies to improve their financial skills. An exchange could be particularly useful because it will allow federal and FSO staff to gain understanding of the workings and needs of Tribal governments. Actions recommended by Workshop participants include enhanced recruitment of Native Americans and Native Hawaiians by financial institutions and establishment of Federal and private sector internships, exchange programs, technical assistance and training programs, personal finance and entrepreneurship education programs, and college and graduate school student programs in business, finance, and economics.

Additionally, Workshop participants recommended the development of mentoring programs with industry that would involve educating Tribal entrepreneurs on the decision criteria and processes used by equity investment fund boards, chambers of commerce, and industry and trade groups.

CONCLUSION: KEY INITIATIVES

CHAPTER FOUR

Tribal and Native Hawaiian communities throughout the nation confront daunting economic challenges. They are confronted with legal infrastructure, governmental operations, economic financial, physical infrastructure, education and cultural barriers. As indicated in this Report, there has been palpable progress in addressing these challenges. A significant number of Tribes have mounted innovative development strategies. Efforts are underway to enhance the capacities of Tribal governments. There are many examples of "win-win" relationships with major manufacturing and financial service organizations. Real, albeit modest, progress has been made in addressing the backlog of investment in human and physical capital. Recent federal policies that stress government-to-government relationships are beginning to provide more Tribal governmental control.

Despite these achievements, much more remains to be accomplished. This requires a disciplined focus on expanding access to capital for businesses and households located in Tribal and Native Hawaiian communities. Workshop participants and Financial Survey respondents identified a host of remedies for Tribal governments, the financial community and the federal government acting independently or in concert to achieve this objective. There are, however, a few critical initiatives that can serve as essential catalysts for accelerating progress.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT NEXT STEPS

This Study does not purport to review every program or policy that operates on Indian Lands or Native Hawaiian Home Lands, whether federal, state or local. In particular, the discussion of federal government programs set forth in this Study was generated primarily from the comments and experiences of Workshop participants. From among their many recommendations, priority initiatives involve maintaining investments for physical, telecommunications and utility infrastructure, facilitating the creation of public-private equity investment funds, and supporting for an array of vehicles for training, technical assistance for both Tribal governments and businesses, and facilitating linkages to financial markets. These and other initiatives would be assisted by the ongoing Congressional charge to the General Accounting Office and the Department of Commerce for a comprehensive review of federal government programs and policies that affect, and attempt to facilitate, economic development and capital allocation on Indian Lands.

REV_00342811

TRIBES' AND NATIVE HAWAIIANS' NEXT STEPS

In addition to "next steps" for government entities, information gathered for this Study also revealed a number of steps that Tribes and Native Hawaiians must take to facilitate the flow of debt and equity capital into Indian Lands and Native American Home Lands. The most oft-repeated step for Tribes is the need to rationalize Tribal legal systems and promulgate commercially reasonable, predictable guidelines for their exercise of sovereign immunity. One of the chief barriers to lending and equity investment in Indian Lands that is squarely in Tribal control, as reported by Workshop participants, is unpredictability of Tribal judicial systems. Accordingly, an important next step for Tribes is the development of court systems that provide for the orderly disposition of the rights of aggrieved parties to commercial transactions. Such reform would be buttressed by codifying or adopting local commercial codes, zoning and planning codes, and laws generally regulating corporate activity.

Another important step identified by the Study's participants is the adoption and publication of rational, predictable rules for the operation of sovereign immunity in commercial transactions.

In addition, Tribes and Native Hawaiian communities will have to build their respective local capacities to facilitate economic development and the financing of local activity. Tribal authorities, for example, will have to expand their capacity to plan and coordinate economic activity. Tribal Authorities and Native Hawaiian communities will need to build the capacities of prospective local entrepreneurs. Tribes and Native Hawaiian groups can forge regional cooperation through inter-Tribal organizations, and use programs like the CDFI Fund's Native American CDFI Technical Assistance (NACTA) program to increase their respective capacities.

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS' NEXT STEPS

Financial institutions, including private equity investors, also have a continuing role in addressing the barriers to lending and equity investment in Indian Lands and Native Hawaiian Home Lands. Financial institutions have to develop a local presence that is flexible enough to participate in transactions that do not fit 'typical' profiles. This might entail the opening of branch offices in Indian Land or Native Hawaiian communities. It also might entail partnering with Tribes and Native Hawaiian groups to form local CDFIs, loan funds or investor groups. To do this, financial institutions will have to find models for managing risk, while addressing the non-traditional profiles of some borrowers.

Financial institutions can be important partners for Tribes. The institutions can be an important resource in the capacity building that Tribes and Native Hawaiian communities must undertake by providing technical assistance. Financial institutions can also work as a bridge between Tribes or Native Hawaiian communities and the government to develop new financial products that are tailored to the particular needs of the communities (for example, mortgages for trust land).

COOPERATIVE ACTIVITY

Much of the progress in expanding access to capital was not achieved by tribal governments, financial institutions or federal agencies acting alone. Rather, progress often depended on these stakeholders acting together. One of the most important themes to emerge from the CDFI Fund's research, Workshops, and Equity Research is the need to foster even greater coordinated activity among stakeholders. For example, input of Tribal or Native Hawaiian representatives to any review of the effectiveness of government programs or policies would help to answer questions about community compatibility and relevance. Neither technical assistance nor cultural education will have the desired effect unless Tribes, Native Hawaiian communities, and FSOs commit to such processes. Moreover, FSOs, government regulators, and Tribes would all likely have to participate in attempts to create new loan products for Native American or Native Hawaiian communities, or to address the peculiar issues arising from attempting to mortgage trust lands.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Native American Lending Study (the "Study") [1] was undertaken by the Community Development Financial Institutions Fund (the "CDFI Fund"), a government corporation within the U.S. Department of Treasury, for the purposes of examining the access to capital and financial services on Indian Lands[2] and Hawaiian Home Lands[3], identifying the barriers to access, and providing options to address these barriers. The mission of the CDFI Fund is to expand the capacity of financial institutions to provide capital, credit and financial services in underserved markets.

THE ISSUE

In the Community Development Banking and Financial Institutions Act (1994)[4], Congress found that "[m]any of the Nation's urban, rural and Native American communities face critical social and economic problems arising in part from the lack of economic growth, people living in poverty, and the lack of employment and other economic opportunities."[5] Indeed, many communities located in Indian Lands face economic and social challenges that place them significantly behind the rest of the U.S. economy.

Financial Survey respondents and Workshop participants identified a number of historical, economic, and institutional reasons for these conditions. Affirming the Congressional findings with respect to the absence of economic opportunity, many of

[1] The Native American Lending Study reports the findings of: (1) 13 Regional Workshops (the "Workshops"), convened by the CDFI Fund from March through December, 1999 – which included over 700 individual participants, of whom: 43 percent were representatives of Tribal governments as herein after defined; 33 percent were representatives of federal, state and non-profit organizations; and 24 percent were representatives of financial institutions; (2) the National Roundtable, convened January 13-14, 2000; (3) the Community Development Financial Institutions Fund Financial Survey (the "Financial Survey"), administered October, 2000 to 1,600 Tribal and financial organizations; and (4) the Equity Investment Roundtable, convened on November 27-28, 2000, and the CDFI Fund Equity Research Investment Report. For a more detailed description of the Study design, see Chapter II.

[2] "Indian Lands" are defined for the purposes of the Study as lands owned by or under the control of Tribal governments, including reservations, Indian Lands in Oklahoma, and Alaska Native Villages. For purposes of the Study, Alaska Native Villages shall have the definition ascribed by 43 U.S.C. § 1602, et. seq.

[3] "Hawaiian Home Lands" are defined for the purposes of the Study as trust lands held for the benefit of Native Hawaiian people and are administered by the State of Hawaii's Department of Hawaiian Home Lands.

[4] 12 U.S.C §§ 4701, et seq. (2000).

as most of you know, today is my last day at the white house. leaving fills me with an emotion that is hard to put into words. it has a been a privilege working with each and every one of you. your unwavering commitment to the President and our Nation has inspired me on a daily basis. from the lincoln lounge all the way to the white house, the pleasure has been all mine.

until next time,

mike

Karl,

Is Mark really in Africa with Bono? This is a very scary thought.

I've got a favor to ask which you might think is nuts, so no harm, no foul. But I wanted to check.

Lawrence Odonnell whom you may know -- long time Dem guy, has been working on West wing -- has created a new political drama for mid-season next year on NBC called Mr. Sterling. It's basically a Mr. Smith goes to DC story about a new California senator.

Anyway, it's a show I'm interested in working on. I've got my guys at CAA working this but I was wondering if you would mind calling him and putting in a word for me. Basically it would be that I actually know at least something about politics and I'm not a total asshole, etc. Or something like that. It might go a long way toward raising my profile on his radar screen. The goal of the call would be for him to hang up the phone and be interested in following up and actually reading the stuff that has been sent over by CAA.

It could be good to have some Republican input into the show -- good for him, maybe good for us. I sure hope it won't be a total Dem pandering fest like West Wing. I'm not really sure what the feel of the show is going to be. I've read the pilot and it's pretty good.

His number is PRA 6

Russ has been really enjoying these White House shoots, so many thanks.

I think Corndog is in good shape...

Thanks, buddy. Understand totally if this isn't cool.

Take care,

Stuart

Subject: Revised - LRM IKK210 - - JUSTICE Qs and As on September 11th Terrorist Attacks Against the United States

The answer to question #13 in the Qs and As circulated last week for clearance has been revised.
The change is only made to the second sentence of the first paragraph of the answer. According to Justice, the change would make the texts more accurate.

The original answer reads -

The Patriot Act improved the FBI's ability to fulfill its counterintelligence mission in three significant ways. First, from an intelligence collection perspective, the centerpiece of the legislation was the amendment to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) which enables the government to initiate (or continue) intelligence collection while a parallel or related criminal case is also in the progress of being initiated.

The revised answer would read -

The Patriot Act improved the FBI's ability to fulfill its counterintelligence mission in three significant ways. First, from an intelligence collection perspective, the centerpiece of the legislation was the amendment to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) WHICH ENHANCES THE GOVERNMENT'S ABILITY TO RUN PARALLEL CRIMINAL AND INTELLIGENCE INVESTIGATIONS AGAINST THE SUBJECT OF A FISA SURVEILLANCE OR SEARCH.

Attached are the two documents with the orgininal and revised answers.

Please review and provide your comments by 12:00 PM, Tuesday, June 4th.
Thank you.

DRAFT JUSTICE DEPARTMENT RESPONSE TO INQUIRY FROM THE STAFF DIRECTOR OF THE JOINT INQUIRY INITIATED BY THE SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE AND HOUSE PERMANENT SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE INTO THE TERRORIST ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES THAT OCCURRED ON SEPTEMBER 11TH:

(U) QUESTION 13: Are there any laws, regulations, or policies in effect that restrict or hamper your ability to collect or disseminate information about terrorists operating in the United States or against U.S. interests abroad? If so, what are they, and does your agency believe they should be changed?

(U) The Patriot Act improved the FBI's ability to fulfill its counterintelligence mission in three significant ways. First, from an intelligence collection perspective, the centerpiece of the legislation was the amendment to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) which enables the government to initiate (or continue) intelligence collection while a parallel or related criminal case is also in the progress of being initiated. Prior to this change in the law, FISA had been interpreted by most courts to require that the government establish that the "primary purpose" of a FISA surveillance (or search) was to obtain foreign intelligence information or to prevent acts of terrorism. Application of the "primary purpose doctrine" limited the government's ability to gather criminal information from a FISA surveillance or search to those instances where collection of foreign intelligence was the primary purpose of the surveillance or search. The Patriot Act changes the standard from "primary purpose" to "a significant purpose".

(U) Additionally, the Patriot Act also expressly permits intelligence officers using FISA to "consult" with law enforcement officers to "coordinate" intelligence and law enforcement efforts to "investigate or protect against" foreign attack, sabotage, terrorism, and clandestine intelligence activities. The Act expressly provides that such coordination "shall not" preclude the government's certification of the requisite "significant" foreign intelligence purpose for conducting electronic surveillance or a physical search, and that it also "shall not" preclude the FISA Court from issuing an order authorizing electronic surveillance or a physical search. The Attorney General has approved new intelligence sharing procedures that implement these statutory provisions and allow for increased coordination. The FISA Court recently issued an order accepting these procedures in part and modifying them in part.

(U) Third, the Patriot Act changed the legal standard required to obtain national security letters (NSLs) - i.e., administrative subpoenas -- from "relevance" to an authorized foreign counterintelligence investigation and "specific and articulable facts giving reason to believe that an individual or entity to whom the information pertains is a foreign power or agent of a foreign power" -- to one of "relevance" to an authorized foreign counterintelligence investigation. The Patriot Act also authorized the FBI to delegate authority to issue NSLs to designated Special Agents in Charge (SACs) in FBI field offices. These changes in law and policy have greatly facilitated the Bureau's ability to collect essential information quickly. Similar changes were made in the law with regard to pen register and trap and trace requests, which have provided the field with important tools needed to develop probable cause for FISA applications and criminal warrants.

(U) At the present time, the Federal Bureau of Investigation does not perceive a need for additional authorities; however, we do not wish to foreclose the possibility of asking for additional legislative changes in the future.

DRAFT JUSTICE DEPARTMENT RESPONSE TO INQUIRY FROM THE STAFF DIRECTOR OF THE JOINT INQUIRY INITIATED BY THE SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE AND HOUSE PERMANENT SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE INTO THE TERRORIST ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES THAT OCCURRED ON SEPTEMBER 11TH:

If so, what are they, and does your agency believe they should be changed?

(U) The Patriot Act improved the FBI's ability to fulfill its counterintelligence mission in three significant ways. First, from an intelligence collection perspective, the centerpiece of the legislation was the amendment to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) which enhances the Government's ability to run parallel criminal and intelligence investigations against the subject of a FISA surveillance or search. Prior to this change in the law, FISA had been interpreted by most courts to require that the government establish that the "primary purpose" of a FISA surveillance (or search) was to obtain foreign intelligence information or to prevent acts of terrorism. Application of the "primary purpose doctrine" limited the government's ability to gather criminal information from a FISA surveillance or search to those instances where collection of foreign intelligence was the primary purpose of the surveillance or search. Brett, you may already know all this - but since you had the pleasure of being involved in the creation of the 9/11 Victim's Comp fund, wanted to make sure you were in the loop with HR 3375, which as you may know, just passed the House and adds the embassy bombing victims to the 9/11 fund. It has been referred to the Judiciary Committee and may get a quick markup, with Schumer trying to add the 1993 WTC victims and Schumer has apparently agreed to add the Oklahoma bombing victims (for Nickles), and anthrax victims - and is probably looking to do one amendment combining all three. I know the WH issued an SAP against HR3375, just wanted to let you know there may be a quick markup right after the recess, and Schumer is looking to gin up a lot of press very quickly.
This will never end.....

Brett and Jay:

Attached is a draft of the resolution, which has been vetted here. I will also copy below in case there are any translation problems between our computers. Please comment by 9:00 a.m. Wednesday morning so I can finalize and get off to the SBC President. This resolution will come from him to the Resolutions committee.

Please be aware that the Resolutions committee is a free agent and can (and probably will) edit this document.

Most of this is the stuff of principal. However, I need documentation on 2 of the "Whereas" statements: the one on the 20% vacancy rate and the one on nominations that have been pending for more than one year.

Also -- any suggestions for a title?

Because of the issue of timeliness, please do not refer me to pages of documents....I need concise info that I can pass on to the SBC President in case he is asked to defend those specific statements.

Thank you for your timely assistance in this request. I hope this serves the purpose you had in mind.

Whereas, Article II of the Constitution of the United States confers to the President the power to appoint judges with the advice and consent of the full Senate;

Whereas, the President of the United States has fulfilled his constitutional obligation by nominating qualified persons to fill existing judicial vacancies; and

Whereas, the Senate has failed to fulfill its constitutional obligation by not acting upon the nominations pending before its body; and

Whereas, the Senate Judiciary Committee is engaged in an unprecedented obstructionism; and

Whereas, judicial nominees deserve to receive a fair hearing and a timely decision on their nomination; and

Whereas, many of the nominations pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee have been pending for over a year; and

Whereas, there is a twenty percent vacancy rate on the Appellate Courts; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the messengers to the Southern Baptist Convention meeting in St. Louis, Missouri, on June 11-12, 2002, recognize that a judicial crisis exists; and be it further

RESOLVED, that we affirm the President for his timely nomination of qualified candidates to fill judicial vacancies; and be it finally

RESOLVED, That we urge the Senate Judiciary Committee to act in a fair and timely manner upon the Presidentûs nominations and that we urge final consideration by the full Senate.

RESOLVED, that we affirm the President for his timely nomination of qualified c andidates to fill judicial vacancies; and be it finally

RESOLVED, That we urge the Senate Judiciary Committee to act in a fair and time ly manner upon the Presidents nominations and that we urge final consideration by the full Senate.

Whereas, Article II of the Constitution of the United States confers to the President the power to appoint judges with the advice and consent of the full Senate;

Whereas, the President of the United States has fulfilled his constitutional obligation by nominating qualified persons to fill existing judicial vacancies; and

Whereas, the Senate has failed to fulfill its constitutional obligation by not acting upon the nominations pending before its body; and

Whereas, the Senate Judiciary Committee is engaged in an unprecedented obstructionism; and

Whereas, judicial nominees deserve to receive a fair hearing and a timely decision on their nomination; and

Whereas, many of the nominations pending before the Senate Judiciary Committee have been pending for over a year; and

Whereas, there is a twenty percent vacancy rate on the Appellate Courts; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the messengers to the Southern Baptist Convention meeting in St. Louis, Missouri, on June 11-12, 2002, recognize that a judicial crisis exists; and be it further

RESOLVED, that we affirm the President for his timely nomination of qualified candidates to fill judicial vacancies; and be it finally

RESOLVED, That we urge the Senate Judiciary Committee to act in a fair and timely manner upon the President's nominations and that we urge final consideration by the full Senate.

Please say "who works [or has worked] for [or with] Karl Rove" rather than either deputy or assistant. Thanks. Approved with that change.

Brett- can you please approve this fundraiser invite that ken is attending? I insisted on no titles, but they want to call him "the honorable ken mehlman, assistant to karl rove." I think ken might prefer "deputy to Karl rove"

thanks

PRELIMINARY DRAFT

Please join us in support of the reelection of our friend, Congressman Eric Cantor (R-VA-7th). Eric has been an outspoken proponent of a strong U.S.-Israel relationship, urging cooperation at unprecedented levels to fight world terrorism. His efforts to support America's only democratic ally in the Middle East have earned him wide recognition. Eric is a repeat designee as one of The Forward's "Forward 50". Eric serves on the House International Relations Committee, the House Financial Services Committee and the House Subcommittee on the Middle East and South Asia; and chairs the Congressional Task Force on Terrorism and Unconventional Warfare.

Eric has earned our continued support. He will be meeting with supporters on June 26th to discuss the pending campaign.

Our featured speaker at cocktails with Eric will be the Honorable Ken Mehlman, assistant to Karl Rove. An articulate spokesman with unique insights into the political process, Ken understands Eric Cantor's value to the Congress.

Please join us at 7:00pm on Wednesday evening, June 26th at the home of Diana & Michael Epstein, 10501 Willowbrook, Potomac. We look forward to hearing from you.

Subject:

Brett: I want to let you know that in conversations here last night, there was universal agreement that your office's conduct with respect to yesterday's negotiations was below the standard we expected from you and inconsistent with the spirit of the negotiations in which we engaged over the last several days.

As you know, your office asked last Thursday that the Committee adopt the 1997 protocol to govern the production of White House documents. As you also know, since your proposed it, that protocol has an extensive section governing what the White House would do with any responsive documents it intended to withhold from production. That section, as you must know, was not just the Committee's wish list in 1997, but a clear agreement from the Clinton White House to do certain things -- in 1997, as now, the protocol was extensively negotiated with the Committee.

Given that you proposed that provision to us, it seems entirely reasonable to infer that you intended to abide by it. That's what a proposal usually means.

As the discussions progressed over the next several days, you never once raised that provision as an issue, despite the fact that you discussed with us virtually every other substantive piece in the protocol we were discussing and despite the fact that we were fully up front with you from the outset on the areas in which we had flexibility and in which we did not. We therefore proceeded with the negotiations under the assumption that both the White House and the Committee were getting something out of the agreement and we made concessions accordingly. Our operating assumption was confirmed (or so we thought) when we orally described a proposal including such a provision and then included it in the written proposal we sent you on Saturday. Again, despite extensive discussions, you never once raised an issue about that provision. We, of course, expected that you might want to alter its mandates in light of discussions about other issues, and we even proactively made such a proposal to you yesterday. But not until close to noon yesterday -- as negotiations were concluding and after we had even changed the provision to make it less burdensome on your office -- did you apparently think it timely to inform us that not only did you not like either the provision you proposed or the lesser one we suggested, but that you in fact did not have any intention of being bound by any provision put in the protocol.

As discussed, we have gone forward and adopted the protocol which, based on your statements, we now see as a document unilaterally adopted by the Chairman (and which we understand Senator Thompson separately decided to direct his staff to follow). Moreover, as we informed you, your position does not, in our view, impact at all on the White House's obligations under the subpoenas -- those are crystal clear. Yesterday's events do, however, serve as a learning experience for us about dealing with your office and serve as a cautionary note both about the way in which your office negotiates and that we should not assume that when you make a proposal you mean to abide by it. I am disheartened to say that we have learned our lesson.

MEMORANDUM FOR CATHY ALIX
SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT FOR MANAGEMENT AND ADMINISTRATION

FROM: BRETT KAVANAUGH
SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT AND ASSOCIATE COUNSEL

SUBJECT: Official Travel of the First Lady on Military Aircraft

This memorandum reflects travel policies of this administration as decided by your office.

Official Travel

It has been the policy of the last several administrations to provide military aircraft for travel of the First Lady. We will continue this policy.

White House staff members or individuals accompanying the First Lady on official travel for the purpose of assisting in carrying out official duties travel on a non-reimbursable basis.

Federal government employees and immediate family members traveling on military aircraft in the company of the First Lady on official trips also travel on a non-reimbursable basis.

Unofficial Travel

Travel by the First Lady on military aircraft for non-official purposes (personal, but not political) must be reimbursed at the full commercial Economy class rate, plus tax, plus one dollar. White House staff members accompanying the First Lady to assist in carrying out official functions travel on a non-reimbursable basis.

Guests traveling with the First Lady on personal trips travel on a reimbursable basis at the rate of full commercial Economy class, plus tax, plus one dollar.

Jim,

SBA off ers the following comments on the proposed Stevens amendment to H.R. 4775, the Supplemental Appropriations bill for FY 02:

As prop osed, the amendment recognizes Alaska Native Corporations (ANCs) as "small or small disadvantaged business" for subcontracting purposes. The a mendment would also permit lower tier subcontracts awarded to ANCs or small bus inesses owned and controlled by ANCs to be credited towards the prime contracto rs small or small disadvantaged business goals where an agreement was so agreed .

This am endment would allow ANCs, regardless of their size, to be considered a small bu siness for Federal procurements. That is inconsistent with SBA's current statutory mandate and regulations. SBA's current regulations require a bu siness entity to be a for-profit business entity in order to be considered a &q uot;business concern." This change would permit a not-for-profit ANC to be considered a "business concern."

In addi tion, the statutory authority for the 8(a) program permits sole source awards t o ANC-owned business concerns in excess of the $3 million and $5 million compet itive threshold amounts. With the change allowing ANCs of any size to be counted as SDBs and possibly be eligible for the 8(a) program, this loophole wi ll only grow. Procuring agencies would have more incentive to award large sole source contracts to large ANCs. This will only harm traditional 8(a) small business concerns.

In rega rd to the subcontracting credit, this concept was previously explored to assess the feasibility of allowing prime contractors to take credit for awards made t o small businesses at lower tier subcontracting levels. It was concluded that the current data reporting system is incapable of tracking those types of arrangements and would ultimately lead to multiple counting of that type of dat a thereby rendering it unusable for statistical purposes.

SBA bel ieves the proposed amemdment would be harmful to small business.

(c) Eligibility for need-based Federal programs

In determining the eligibility of a household, an individual Native, or a descendant of a Native (as defined in section 1602(r) of this title) to—

(1) participate in the Food Stamp Program,

(2) receive aid, assistance, or benefits, based on need, under the Social Security Act [42 U.S.C.A. § 301 et seq.], or

(3) receive financial assistance or benefits, based on need, under any other Federal program or federally-assisted program, none of the following received from a Native Corporation, shall be considered or taken into account as an asset or resource:

(A) cash (including cash dividends on stock received from a Native Corporation and on bonds received from a Native Corporation) to the extent that it does not, in the aggregate, exceed $2,000 per individual per annum;

(B) stock (including stock issued or distributed by a Native Corporation as a dividend or distribution on stock) or bonds issued by a Native Corporation which bonds shall be subject to the protection of section 1606(h) of this title until voluntarily and expressly sold or pledged by the shareholder subsequent to the date of distribution;

(C) a partnership interest;

(D) land or an interest in land (including land or an interest in land received from a Native Corporation as a dividend or distribution on stock); and

(E) an interest in a settlement trust.

(d) Federal Indian programs

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Alaska Natives shall remain eligible for all Federal Indian programs on the same basis as other Native Americans.

(e) Minority status

(1) For all purposes of Federal law, a Native Corporation shall be considered to be a corporation owned and controlled by Natives and a minority and economically disadvantaged business enterprise if the Settlement Common Stock of the corporation and other stock of the corporation held by holders of Settlement Common Stock and by Natives and descendants of Natives, represents a majority of both the total equity of the corporation and the total voting power of the corporation for the purposes of electing directors.

(2) For all purposes of Federal law, direct and indirect subsidiary corporations, joint ventures, and partnerships of a Native Corporation qualifying pursuant to paragraph (1) shall be considered to be entities owned and controlled by Natives and a minority and economically disadvantaged business enterprise if the shares of stock or other units of ownership interest in any such entity held by such Native Corporation and by the holders of its Settlement Common Stock represent a majority of both—

(A) the total equity of the subsidiary corporation, joint venture, or partnership; and

(B) the total voting power of the subsidiary corporation, joint venture, or partnership for the purpose of electing directors, the general partner, or principal officers.

(3) No provision of this subsection shall—

(A) preclude a Federal agency or instrumentality from applying standards for determining minority ownership (or control) less restrictive than those described in paragraphs (1) and (2), or

(B) supersede any such less restrictive standards in existence on February 3, 1988.

(f) Omitted

(g) Civil Rights Act of 1964

For the purposes of implementation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 [42 U.S.C.A. § 2000a et seq.], a Native Corporation and corporations, partnerships, joint ventures, trusts, or limitations in which the Native Corporation owns not less than 25 per centum of the equity shall be within the class of entities excluded from the definition of "employer"

TESTIMONY OF
PAMELA OLSON, ACTING ASSISTANT SECRETARY (TAX POLICY), UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
BEFORE THE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS ON CORPORATE INVERSION TRANSACTIONS

Mr. Chairman, Congressman Rangel, and distinguished Members of the Committee, we appreciate the opportunity to appear today at this hearing on corporate inversion transactions.

In recent months, several high-profile U.S. companies have announced plans to reincorporate outside the United States. The documents prepared for shareholder approval and filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission cite substantial reductions in overall corporate taxes as a key reason for the transactions. While these so-called corporate inversion transactions are not new, there has been a marked increase recently in the frequency, size, and profile of the transactions.

On February 28, 2002, the Treasury Department announced that it was studying the issues arising in connection with these corporate inversion transactions and the implications of these transactions for the U.S. tax system and the U.S. economy. On May 17, 2002, the Treasury Department released its preliminary report on the tax policy implications of corporate inversion transactions. The Treasury preliminary report describes the mechanics of the transactions, the current tax treatment of the transactions, the current tax treatment of the companies post-inversion, the features of our tax laws that facilitate the transactions or that may be exploited through such transactions, and the features of our tax laws that drive companies to consider these transactions.

Inversion transactions implicate fundamental issues of tax policy. The U.S. tax system can operate to provide a cost advantage to foreign-based multinational companies over U.S.-based multinational companies. The Treasury report identifies two distinct classes of tax reduction that are available to foreign-based companies and that can be achieved through an inversion transaction. First, an inversion transaction may be used by a U.S.-based company to achieve a reduction in the U.S. corporate-level tax on income from U.S. operations. In addition, through an inversion transaction, a U.S.-based multinational group can substantially reduce or eliminate the U.S. corporate-level tax on income from its foreign operations.

The Treasury preliminary report discusses the need for an immediate response to address the U.S. tax advantages that arise from the ability to reduce U.S. corporate-level tax on income from U.S. operations. My testimony today will focus on several specific actions that we believe are urgently needed to eliminate these opportunities to reduce inappropriately the U.S. tax on U.S. operations and thereby to ensure continued confidence in the U.S. tax system. We believe that addressing these opportunities will halt the corporate inversion activity that is now occurring. However, the Treasury preliminary report also discusses the need to address the U.S. tax disadvantages that are caused for U.S.-based companies because of the U.S. tax treatment of their foreign operations. We must evaluate our tax system, particularly our international tax rules, relative to those of our major trading partners, to ensure that the United States is competitive.

An inversion is a transaction through which the corporate structure of a U.S.-based multinational group is altered so that a new foreign corporation, typically located in a low- or no-tax country, replaces the existing U.S. parent corporation as the parent of the corporate group. In order to provide context for consideration of the policy issues that arise, the Treasury preliminary report includes a technical description of the forms of the inversion transaction and the potential tax treatment of the various elements of the transaction under current law. The transactional forms through which the basic reincorporation outside the United States can be accomplished vary as a technical matter, but all involve little or no immediate operational change and all are transactions in which either the shareholders of the company or the company itself are subject to tax. This reincorporation step may be accompanied by other restructuring steps designed to shift the ownership of the group's foreign operations outside the United States. The restructuring steps involving movement of foreign subsidiaries are complex and varied, but, like the reincorporation itself, are transactions that are subject to tax. When all the transactions are complete, the foreign operations of the company will be outside of the U.S. taxing jurisdiction and the corporate structure also may provide opportunities to reduce the U.S. tax on U.S. operations.

Market conditions have been a factor in the recent increase in inversion activity. Although the reincorporation step triggers potential tax at the shareholder level or the corporate level, depending on the transactional form, that tax liability may be less significant because of current economic and market factors. The company's shareholders may have little or no gain inherent in their stock and the company may have net operating losses to offset any gain at the company level. While these market conditions may help facilitate the transactions, they are not, however, what motivates a company to undertake an inversion. U.S.-based companies and their shareholders are making the decision to reincorporate outside the United States largely because of the tax savings available. It is that underlying motivation that we must address.

The ability to achieve a substantial reduction in taxes through a transaction that is complicated technically but virtually transparent operationally is a cause for concern as a policy matter. As we formulate a response, however, we must not lose sight of the fact that an inversion is not the only route to accomplishing the same type of reduction in taxes. A U.S.-based start-up venture that contemplates both U.S. and foreign operations may incorporate overseas at the outset. An existing U.S. group may be the subject of a takeover, either friendly or hostile, by a foreign-based company. In either case, the structure that results provides tax-savings opportunities similar to those provided by an inversion transaction. A narrow policy response to the inversion phenomenon may inadvertently result in a tax code favoring the acquisition of U.S. operations by foreign corporations and the expansion of foreign controlled operations in the United States at the expense of domestically managed corporations. In turn, other decisions affecting the location of new investment, choice of suppliers, and employment opportunities may be adversely affected. While the openness of the U.S. economy has always made -- and will continue to make -- the United States one of the most attractive and hospitable locations for foreign investment in the world, there is no merit in policies biased against domestic control and domestic management of U.S. operations.

The policy response to the recent corporate inversion activity should be broad enough to address the underlying differences in the U.S. tax treatment of U.S.-based companies and foreign-based companies, without regard to how foreign-based status is achieved. Measures designed simply to halt inversion activity may address these transactions in the short run, but there is a serious risk that measures targeted too narrowly would have the unintended effect of encouraging a shift to other forms of transactions and structures to the detriment of the U.S. economy in the long run.

An immediate response is needed to address the U.S. tax advantages that are available to foreign-based companies through the ability to reduce the U.S. corporate-level tax on income from U.S. operations. Inappropriate shifting of income from the U.S. companies in the corporate group to the foreign parent or its foreign subsidiaries represents an erosion of the U.S. corporate tax base. It provides a competitive advantage to companies that have undergone an inversion or otherwise operate in a foreign-based group. It creates a corresponding disadvantage for their U.S. competitors that operate in a U.S.-based group. Moreover, exploitation of inappropriate income-shifting opportunities erodes confidence in the fairness of the tax system.

In the case of inversion transactions, the ability to reduce overall taxes on U.S. operations through these income-shifting techniques provides an immediate and quantifiable benefit. Because of the cost and complexity of these transactions, the immediate and quantifiable benefit from reducing U.S. tax on U.S. operations is a key component of the cost-benefit analysis with respect to the transaction. In other words, the decision to consummate the inversion often is dependent upon the immediate expected reduction in U.S. tax on income from U.S. operations. Accordingly, eliminating the opportunities to reduce inappropriately the U.S. tax on income from U.S. operations will halt the inversion transaction activity.

We believe there are four specific areas in which changes are urgently needed. The statutory rules regarding the deductibility of interest payments to related parties need to be tightened to prevent the inappropriate use of related-party debt to generate deductions against income from U.S. operations that otherwise would be subject to U.S. tax. Second, we must ensure that the valuation of assets transferred between related parties and the allocation of income among related parties leads to proper results through enhanced enforcement efforts and modifications to the applicable regulations. Third, we will undertake a comprehensive review of our income tax treaties to ensure that they do not provide inappropriate opportunities to reduce U.S. taxes. Fourth, reporting requirements must be promulgated to provide the IRS with information to ensure that shareholders are paying the tax owed on the gain recognized in an inversion transaction. There also are other areas in which further study is ongoing.

In addition, we must continue to work to address the U.S. tax disadvantages faced by U.S.-based companies that do business abroad relative to their counterparts in our major trading partners. We look forward to working closely with the Committee on this important issue.

Interest on Related Party Debt. One of the simplest ways for a foreign-based company to reduce the U.S. tax on income from U.S. operations is through deductions for interest payments on intercompany debt. The U.S. subsidiary can be loaded up with a disproportionate amount of debt for purposes of generating interest deductions through the mere issuance of an intercompany note, without any real movement of assets or change in business operations. Interest paid by a U.S. subsidiary to its foreign parent or a foreign affiliate thereof gives rise to a U.S. tax deduction but the interest income may be subject to little or no tax in the home country of the foreign related party recipient.

The potential to use foreign related-party debt to generate deductions that reduce taxable income in the United States is not unique to inversion transactions, and concern about this technique is not new. Section 163(j) of the Internal Revenue Code was enacted in 1989 to address these concerns by denying U.S. tax deductions for certain interest expense paid by a corporation to a related party. Section 163(j) as it currently exists applies only where (1) the corporation's debt-equity ratio exceeds 1.5 to 1, and (2) its net interest expense exceeds 50 percent of its adjusted taxable income (computed by adding back net interest expense, depreciation, amortization and depletion, and any net operating loss deduction). If the corporation exceeds these thresholds, no deduction is allowed for interest in excess of the 50-percent limit that is paid to a related party and that is not subject to U.S. tax. Any interest that is disallowed in a given year is carried forward indefinitely and may be deductible in a subsequent taxable year. Section 163(j) also provides a four-year carryforward for any excess limitation (i.e., the amount by which interest expense for a given year falls short of the 50 percent of adjusted tax income threshold).

A revision of these rules is needed immediately to eliminate what is referred to as the real "juice" in an inversion transaction. The prevalent and increasing use of foreign related-party debt in inversion transactions demonstrates the importance of the tax reductions achieved through interest deductions to these transactions and the need to eliminate this benefit now. Accordingly, we propose statutory changes to tighten the interest disallowance rules of section 163(j) in several respects. Moreover, the opportunities for generating interest deductions that reduce U.S. taxable income are not limited to inversion transactions. These opportunities are present as well in cases where a U.S. business is structured from the outset with a foreign parent and in cases where a foreign corporation acquires a U.S. operating group. Therefore, we believe these revisions to section 163(j) should not be limited to companies that have inverted but should apply across the board.

The fixed debt-equity test of current law effectively operates as a safe harbor for corporations with debt-equity ratios of 1.5 to 1 or lower. We propose replacing the safe harbor protection currently available under the fixed 1.5 to 1 debt-equity test with a test that would deny a deduction for related party interest to the extent that the corporate group's level of indebtedness in the United States exceeds its worldwide level of indebtedness. This worldwide test would compare (i) the ratio of indebtedness incurred by the U.S. members of the corporate group to their assets, with (ii) the ratio of the entire corporate group's worldwide indebtedness (excluding related party debt) to its worldwide assets. Interest that is paid to related parties and that is not subject to U.S. tax would be denied deductibility to the extent it is attributable to indebtedness in excess of the worldwide ratio.

With this approach , the 50-percent of adjusted taxable income test would operate as a second, alternative test applicable in cases where the U.S. debt-to-assets ratio does not exceed the worldwide ratio. We propose modifying the 50-percent test by revising the definition of adjusted taxable income to eliminate the addback of depreciation, amortization and depletion. This would have the effect of appropriately focusing the test on net interest expense as a percentage of economic income.

We also propose curtailing the carry over rules applicable under section 163(j). Although the current carryforwards appropriately provide relief to those taxpayers whose interest-to-income ratio may be subject to unanticipated fluctuations due to business fluctuations, an indefinite carryforward has the effect of dampening the impact of the deduction denial. This consequence is further exacerbated by the ability under current law to carry forward excess limitation to shelter additional interest deductions in future years. Accordingly, we propose eliminating the carryforward of excess limitation and shortening the carryforward period for disallowed deductions to 5 years.

Income Shifting and Transfers of Intangibles. Another way for a foreign-based company to reduce the U.S. tax on income from U.S. operations is through related-party transactions for other than arm's length consideration. Many inversion transactions involve the movement of foreign subsidiaries out of the U.S. group so that they are held directly by the new foreign parent. Some inversion transactions involve transfers of intangible or other assets, or business opportunities, to the new foreign parent or its foreign subsidiaries. Cross-border transfers of subsidiaries and assets can give rise to significant valuation issues, and the ongoing transactions between the various entities can give rise to significant income allocation issues.

This type of movement of foreign subsidiaries, assets, and opportunities is not unique to inversion transactions. The same sort of restructuring transactions are common whenever a multinational group is acquired or makes an acquisition. The magnitude of the potential tax savings at stake puts significant pressure on the application of the section 482 transfer pricing rules. The transfer of foreign operations or other assets to the foreign parent or a foreign subsidiary thereof puts significant pressure on the implementation and enforcement of the arm's length standard under the transfer pricing rules. The valuation and income allocation issues that arise in the context of a cross-border transfer of intangible property are particularly difficult. Where the arm's length standard is not properly applied or enforced, the inappropriate income shifting that results can significantly erode the U.S. tax base. Accordingly, we intend to take administrative and regulatory steps to ensure that cross-border transfers and other related party transactions lead to appropriate income allocation results.

The IRS will undertake an initiative to review current practices related to the examination of transfer pricing issues and the imposition of transfer pricing penalties, with a particular emphasis on transactions in which intangibles are transferred. The volume and complexity of cross-border related party transactions have grown significantly in recent years, and a number of U.S. trading partners have undertaken broad compliance initiatives relative to transfer pricing, including requiring taxpayers to prepare and maintain documentation. The purposes of this comprehensive review will include ensuring that taxpayer documentation is utilized effectively by the IRS and that transfer pricing penalties are imposed where warranted on a fair and consistent basis. This IRS review also will help identify potential improvements to existing guidance, including the provisions regarding penalties, reporting, and documentation, that would enhance transfer pricing compliance.

We will review the current section 482 cost sharing regulations with a view to ensuring that cost-sharing arrangements cannot be used to facilitate a disguised transfer of intangible assets outside the United States in a manner inconsistent with the arm's length standard, as reinforced by the commensurate with income standard. The purpose of the cost sharing regulations is to facilitate the allocation among related taxpayers of future income attributable to future intangible property in a manner that reasonably reflects the actual economic activity undertaken by each related taxpayer to develop that property. The review will focus initially on the effectiveness of the current rules intended to apply the arm's length standard to taxpayers that contribute to the cost sharing arrangement the right to use existing intangible property, such as know-how or core technology, which often constitutes the most important and valuable input into the development of future intangible property.

We also will review the section 482 regulations applicable to transfers of intangible assets to ensure they do not inadvertently facilitate the transfer of intangible property outside the United States for less than arm's length consideration. These regulations relating to the transfer of intangible assets implement the arm's length and commensurate with income standards by allowing periodic adjustments to transfer prices in limited circumstances based on objective standards. While these objective standards have provided certainty and minimized disputes in this otherwise contentious area, focus is needed on ensuring the proper operation of the periodic adjustments provisions.

Finally, as part of an ongoing project to update the 482 regulations applicable to services, we will work to mitigate the extent to which the structuring or characterization of a transfer of intangible assets as the provision of services can lead to inappropriate transfer pricing results. The differences between the section 482 regulations relating to the provision of services and those relating to the transfer of intangible property could be exploited through the characterization of a transfer of intangible property as a provision of services. While a transfer of intangibles through a license in return for royalty payments and the provision of technical services utilizing the intangibles in return for a service fee, for example, may be similar from an economic perspective, the transfer pricing results may differ depending on whether the transfer pricing regulations related to services or intangible property are applicable. The transfer pricing rules should reach similar results in the case of economically similar transactions regardless of the characterization or structuring of such transactions.

Because the potential to use related party transactions to reduce the U.S. tax on income from U.S. operations is not unique to inversion transactions, our proposals in this area are not limited in scope to corporations that have inverted.

Income Tax Treaties. The United States imposes a withholding tax at a rate of 30 percent on payments of interest and royalties (as well as dividends) from a U.S. corporation to a foreign affiliate. This withholding tax may be reduced or eliminated in certain circumstances under an applicable income tax treaty. The cost advantage achieved by shifting income by means of deductible payments to foreign related parties is most effective when the payments are to a foreign related party that is eligible for benefits under a comprehensive U.S. income tax treaty and, in addition, is not subject to significant local tax on the income.

Most inversion transactions have involved a reincorporation into a foreign jurisdiction either that does not have a tax treaty with the United States or whose treaty with the United States does not generally reduce U.S. withholding tax rates. However, many of the newly created foreign parent corporations may be considered resident for treaty purposes in a country that has a comprehensive tax treaty with the United States and that does not subject certain payments received by its corporations to significant local income tax. Through such a structure, the cost advantage achieved by shifting income can be maximized. Similar results may be obtained through the use of finance subsidiaries located in certain treaty jurisdictions.

We must review and evaluate our tax treaties to identify any inappropriate reductions in U.S. withholding tax that provide opportunities for shifting income out of the United States. U.S. income tax treaties are intended to prevent the double taxation by the United States and its treaty partner of income earned by residents of one country from sources within the other. Thus, the United States does not enter into income tax treaties that lower the rates of U.S. withholding tax on U.S.-source income (e.g., U.S.-source interest and royalties) with jurisdictions that do not have a comprehensive income tax system. In such a case, there is no need to reduce the U.S. withholding tax because there is no risk of double taxation. We must make certain that the operation of our treaties is consistent with the expectation of the United States and its treaty partners that treaties should reduce or eliminate double taxation of income, not eliminate all taxation of income. If a current or prospective treaty partner does not tax a particular category of U.S.-source income earned by its residents, either because of a general tax exemption or a special tax regime, reduction of U.S. withholding tax on that category of income may not be appropriate.

We also must consider whether anti-abuse mechanisms already within our treaties are operating properly. Because U.S. tax treaties are intended to benefit only residents of either the United States or the treaty partner, U.S. income tax treaties include detailed limitation on benefits provisions, to prevent the misuse of treaties by residents of third countries. Those limitation on benefits provisions are important for ensuring that a resident of a third country cannot benefit inappropriately from a reduction in U.S. withholding tax by structuring a transaction, including a transaction designed to generate deductible payments, through a treaty country. One of Treasury's key tax policy goals in modernizing our network of existing tax treaties is to bring the limitations on benefits provisions in all our treaties up to standards so as to remove the opportunity for such misuse.

Reporting Requirements. In many inversion transactions the company's shareholders are required to recognize gain. Current Treasury regulations generally require Form 1099 reporting to the IRS of the gross proceeds from any sale effected by a broker in the ordinary course of its business. However, there are no similar reporting obligations in the case of an inversion where a shareholder exchanges stock of one corporation for stock in another corporation. We intend to establish a Form 1099 reporting requirement for stock transfers in inversions and other taxable reorganization transactions. Requiring reporting of these transactions will increase the IRS's access to information about the transactions. It also will serve to remind shareholders of the tax consequences to them from the company's transaction and of their obligation to report any gain.

Other Areas of Further Study. There are two other areas where we believe that further study is needed and we have begun careful consideration of these areas.

A comprehensive review of the corporate organization and reorganization rules is needed in light of the increasing pressure put on these rules through the larger and more complicated international restructuring transactions that are becoming commonplace. The corporate organization and reorganization rules, as well as the other related rules of subchapter C of the Code, were written largely for purely domestic transactions. Section 367, and the lengthy regulations thereunder, modify those rules for application in the case of cross-border transactions. With the increasing globalization of both U.S. companies and foreign companies, these rules are being applied more frequently and to larger and more complicated cross-border transactions. It is critical that the rules governing cross-border reorganizations keep up with these developments. The current cross-border reorganization rules are something of a patchwork, developed and revised over the last twenty years. One focus in this reconsideration of the current-law rules will be on achieving greater consistency in treatment across similar transactions, in order to avoid both traps for the unwary and opportunities for taxpayers to exploit the rules to reach results that are not intended. Moreover, more detailed guidance and clearer rules will help provide greater certainty to taxpayers and the government in this complex area.

A careful review also is needed of the income-shifting issues that arise in the context of the several inversion transactions that have involved insurance and reinsurance companies. The initial reincorporation outside the United States typically has been accompanied by a shift of some portion of the existing U.S. insurance business through reinsurance with a related foreign affiliate. An evaluation must be made as too whether the use of related party reinsurance permits inappropriate shifting of income from the U.S. members of a corporate group to the new foreign parent and its foreign affiliates, and whether existing mechanisms for dealing with such related party transactions are sufficient to address these opportunities. In this regard, further analysis is appropriate to consider and evaluate the approaches used by our trading partners in taxing insurance companies, including, for example, the use by some countries of a premium-based tax that captures within the country's tax base all business written on risks within the country.

* * * * *

Finally, we must continue our work to address the U.S. tax disadvantages for U.S.-based companies that do business abroad relative to their counterparts in our major trading partners. The U.S. international tax rules can operate to impose a burden on U.S.-based companies with foreign operations that is disproportionate to the tax burden imposed by our trading partners on the foreign operations of their companies. The U.S. rules for the taxation of foreign-source income are unique in their breadth of reach and degree of complexity. Both the recent inversion activity and the increase in foreign acquisitions of U.S. multinationals are evidence that the competitive disadvantage caused by our international tax rules is a serious issue with significant consequences for U.S. businesses and the U.S. economy. A comprehensive reexamination of the U.S. international tax rules and the economic assumptions underlying them is needed. As we consider appropriate reformulation of these rules we should not underestimate the benefits to be gained from reducing the complexity of the current rules. Our system of international tax rules should not disadvantage U.S.-based companies competing in the global marketplace.

REV_00343388

As we work to address these important issues, we must keep our focus on the overarching goal of maintaining the attractiveness of the United States as the most desirable location in the world for incorporation, headquartering, foreign investment, and business operations, in order to achieve an ever higher standard of living for all Americans.

Subject: REVISED LRM IMS17 - - TREASURY Draft Bill on Disclosure of Tax Return Information for Student Aid Purposes

Attached is revised bill text and a sectional analysis that reflects changes agreed to by Treasury and Education during a conference call yesterday. The only non-technical changes are: (1) to add language to allow auditors access to limited information that would enable them to perform certain audits; and (2) to delete language that would have permitted Education to use the IRS information for the purposes of locating a person for debt collection purposes (the determination was made that ED could do this under current authority). Please provide any comments to Ingrid Schroeder on the revised draft by 1pm, TODAY, Wednesday, June 5th.

DISCLOSURE OF TAX RETURN INFORMATION FOR STUDENT AID PURPOSES

SEC. ___. (a) INTERNAL REVENUE CODE AMENDMENTS.--(1) DISCLOSURE. Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 6103, hereinafter in this section referred to as "the Code") is amended~~—(A)~~ in subsection (l)—

~~(i) in paragraph (10)—~~

~~(I) in subparagraph (B), by inserting a comma and "except as provided in subparagraph (C)," immediately after "subparagraph (A) shall"; and~~

~~(II) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:~~

~~"(C) USE OF DISCLOSED TAXPAYER IDENTITY INFORMATION. Taxpayer identity information disclosed under subparagraph (A) may also be used by officers, employees, and contractors or other agents of the Department of Education, for the purpose of locating the person in order to collect the debt by means other than a reduction under section 6402(c) or (d).";~~ ~~and~~

~~(ii)~~ by amending paragraph (13) to read as follows:

"(13) DISCLOSURE OF RETURN INFORMATION FOR STUDENT FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE PURPOSES.--(A) IN GENERAL. (i) DISCLOSURE AUTHORIZED. The Secretary may, upon written request from the Secretary of Education, disclose the items of return information specified in clause (ii) for the purposes described in subparagraph (B) with respect to a person who—

"(I) has applied for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as 'the Act'),

"(II) is seeking income contingent repayment on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (ĐE)), or

"(III) is the parent, as that term is defined for purposes of Title IV of the Act (in the case of a dependent student) or spouse (in the case of a independent student, if applicable) of an individual who has applied for the assistance or benefit described in subparagraphs (I) – (II).

"(ii) The return information that may be disclosed under this paragraph shall be limited to—

"(I) taxpayer identity information with respect to a person described in subclause (I)-(III) of clause (i);

"(II) the filing status of that taxpayer;

"(III) the adjusted gross income of that taxpayer;

"(IV) the total earnings from employment (including net earnings from self-employment) of that taxpayer;

"(V) the Federal income tax liability of that taxpayer; and

"(VI) the type of tax return filed by that taxpayer.

"(B) RESTRICTION ON USE OF DISCLOSED INFORMATION.-

(i) Return information may be disclosed under subparagraph (A) to officers, employees, contractors and agents of the Department of Education only for the purpose of, and to the extent necessary to—

"(I) verify the information reported by a person described in subparagraph (A)(i) in applying for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Act; "

(II) determine income contingent repayment amounts and schedules on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (~~D~~E)); or

"(III) collect overpayments of grants or loans provided under that title including by means of litigation.

(ii) Information disclosed under this paragraph shall be limited to the tax years required, in accordance with the Act and implementing regulations, to carry out the purposes described in this paragraph.

"(C) DISCLOSURES TO STUDENT AID PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS. (i) IN GENERAL. Subject to clause (iii), officers, employees, ~~or~~ contractors ~~or other~~ and agents of the Department of Education may disclose, to the entities described in clause (ii), the fact of a discrepancy between items of information ~~previously~~ reported, directly or indirectly, to the Secretary of Education and information ~~subsequently~~ provided to the Secretary of Education under the provisions of this section that may affect the amount of grant, loan, or work assistance provided to an applicant (including the collection of any overpayments of assistance), or the income contingent repayment of an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (E)). Notwithstanding section 6103(p)(4), such fact of discrepancy information shall not be subject to the safeguard provisions of that section.

"(ii) The entities referred to in clause (i) are:

" (I) Institutions of higher education, as defined in section 102 of the Act, that administer, or assist the Secretary of Education in administering, a grant, loan, or work assistance program under title IV of the Act.

" (II) State agencies that administer a grant or work assistance program under subpart 4 of part A of title IV of the Act.

" (III) ~~The~~ A contractor or agent of an entity described in clause (I) or (II).

(IV) An auditor engaged to perform audits or reviews required under section 487(c) of the Act.

" (iii) The information referred to in clause (i) shall be used solely for purposes of—

" (I) verifying the information reported by a person described in subparagraph (A)(i) in applying for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Act;

(II) determining income contingent repayment amounts and schedules on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (D)); ~~or~~

" (III) collecting overpayments of grants or loans provided under that title~~.~~; or

(IV) auditing the title IV student assistance programs required under section 487(c) of the Act.

(D) DISCLOSURES TO APPLICANTS ~~STUDENTS~~. Return information disclosed under subparagraph ~~(B)~~ (A) or (C) may be redisclosed to ~~students~~applicants described in subparagraph A(i), including information pertaining to such applicants' ~~students'~~ parents or spouses as defined in subparagraph ~~section 6103(l)(13)~~(A)(i)(III).

" (E) APPLICABLE STUDENT LOAN. For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i)(II) and (B)(i)(~~II~~III), the term 'applicable student loan' means—

" (i) any loan made under the program authorized under part D of title IV of the Act ; and

" (ii) any loan made under part B or E of that title that is in default and has been assigned to the Department of Education.

(2) CONFORMING AND OTHER AMENDMENTS. (A) Section 6103 of the Code is further amended—

~~(i) in subsection (a)(3), by striking "paragraph (6), (12), or (16) of subsection (l)," and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (6), (10), (12), (13), or (16) of subsection (l),";~~

~~(ii) in subsection (l)(10) –~~

~~by removing all references to subsection (e) of section 6402 and by striking the last sentence of section 6103(l)(10)(B).~~

~~(iii)~~ in subsection (p)—

(i)~~(I)~~ in paragraph (3)(A), by striking "(13),"; and (ii)~~(II)~~ in paragraph (4), in the flush language at the end thereof, by striking "paragraph (6)(A), (12)(B), or (16) of subsection (l)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (6)(A), (10), (12)(B), (13), or (16) of subsection (l)".

(B) Section 7213(a)(2) of the Code is amended by inserting "(13)," immediately after "(12),".

(3) COMPLIANCE BY CONTRACTORS AND OTHER AGENTS WITH CONFIDENTIALITY SAFEGUARDS.--Section 6103(p) of the Code is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) DISCLOSURE TO CONTRACTORS AND OTHER AGENTS. (A) IN GENERAL.-

Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, no return or return information shall be disclosed to a contractor or other agent of a Federal, State, or local agency unless such agency

" (i) has requirements in effect which require each such contractor or other agent which would have access to returns or return information to provide safeguards (within the meaning of paragraph (4)) to protect the confidentiality of such returns or return information;

" (ii) agrees to conduct a regular on-site review (or a mid-point review in the case of a contract of less than 1 year in duration) of each contractor or other agent to determine compliance with such requirements;

" (iii) submits the findings of the most recent review conducted under clause (ii) to the Secretary as part of the report required by paragraph (4)(E); and

" (iv) certifies to the Secretary for the most recent annual period that such contractor or other agent is in compliance with all such requirements. Such certification shall be signed by the head of the agency or his or her delegate.

" (B) CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.--The certification required by subparagraph (A)(iv) shall include the name and address of each contractor or other agent and a description of the contract or agreement of the contractor or other agent with the agency, and the duration of such contract or agreement.

" (C) NOT APPLICABLE TO TAX ADMINISTRATION.--The

DISCLOSURE OF TAX RETURN INFORMATION FOR STUDENT AID PURPOSES

SEC. ___. (a) INTERNAL REVENUE CODE AMENDMENTS.--(1) DISCLOSURE. Section 6103 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 6103, hereinafter in this section referred to as "the Code") is amended in subsection (l) by amending paragraph (13) to read as follows:

(13) DISCLOSURE OF RETURN INFORMATION FOR STUDENT FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE PURPOSES.--(A) IN GENERAL. (i) DISCLOSURE AUTHORIZED. The Secretary may, upon written request from the Secretary of Education, disclose the items of return information specified in clause (ii) for the purposes described in subparagraph (B) with respect to a person who—

(I) has applied for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as 'the Act'),

(II) is seeking income contingent repayment on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (E)), or

(III) is the parent, as that term is defined for purposes of Title IV of the Act (in the case of a dependent student) or spouse (in the case of a independent student, if applicable) of an individual who has applied for the assistance or benefit described in subparagraphs (I) – (II).

(ii) The return information that may be disclosed under this paragraph shall be limited to—

(I) taxpayer identity information with respect to a person described in subclause (I)-(III) of clause (i);

(II) the filing status of that taxpayer;

(III) the adjusted gross income of that taxpayer;

(IV) the total earnings from employment (including net earnings from self-employment) of that taxpayer;

(V) the Federal income tax liability of that taxpayer; and

(VI) the type of tax return filed by that taxpayer.

(B) RESTRICTION ON USE OF DISCLOSED INFORMATION.-

(i) Return information may be disclosed under subparagraph (A) to officers, employees, contractors and agents of the Department of Education only for the purpose of, and to the extent necessary to—

(I) verify the information reported by a person described in subparagraph (A)(i) in applying for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Act;

(II) determine income contingent repayment amounts and schedules on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (E)); or

(III) collect overpayments of grants or loans provided under that title including by means of litigation.

(ii) Information disclosed under this paragraph shall be limited to the tax years required, in accordance with the Act and implementing regulations, to carry out the purposes described in this paragraph.

"(C) DISCLOSURES TO STUDENT AID PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS. (i) IN GENERAL. Subject to clause (iii), officers, employees, contractors and agents of the Department of Education may disclose, to the entities described in clause (ii), the fact of a discrepancy between items of information reported, directly or indirectly, to the Secretary of Education and information provided to the Secretary of Education under the provisions of this section that may affect the amount of grant, loan, or work assistance provided to an applicant (including the collection of any overpayments of assistance), or the income contingent repayment of an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (E)). Notwithstanding section 6103(p)(4), such fact of discrepancy information shall not be subject to the safeguard provisions of that section.

(ii) The entities referred to in clause (i) are:

(I) Institutions of higher education, as defined in section 102 of the Act, that administer, or assist the Secretary of Education in administering, a grant, loan, or work assistance program under title IV of the Act.

(II) State agencies that administer a grant or work assistance program under subpart 4 of part A of title IV of the Act.

(III) A contractor or agent of an entity described in clause (I) or (II).

(IV) An auditor engaged to perform audits or reviews required under section 487(c) of the Act.

(iii) The information referred to in clause (i) shall be used solely for purposes of—

(I) verifying the information reported by a person described in subparagraph (A)(i) in applying for grant, loan, or work assistance under title IV of the Act;

(II) determining income contingent repayment amounts and schedules on an applicable student loan (as defined in subparagraph (D));

(III) collecting overpayments of grants or loans provided under that title; or

(IV) auditing the title IV student assistance programs required under section 487(c) of the Act.

(D) DISCLOSURES TO APPLICANTS . Return information disclosed under subparagraph (A) or (C) may be redisclosed to applicants described in subparagraph A(i), including information pertaining to such applicants' parents or spouses as defined in subparagraph (A)(i)(III).

(E) APPLICABLE STUDENT LOAN. For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i)(II) and (B)(i)(II), the term 'applicable student loan' means—

(i) any loan made under the program authorized under part D of title IV of the Act ; and

(ii) any loan made under part B or E of that title that is in default and has been assigned to the Department of Education.

(2) CONFORMING AND OTHER AMENDMENTS. (A) Section 6103 of the Code is further amended in subsection (p)—

(i) in paragraph (3)(A), by striking "(13),"; and

(ii) in paragraph (4), in the flush language at the end thereof, by striking "paragraph (6)(A), (12)(B), or (16) of subsection (l)" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (6)(A), (10), (12)(B), (13), or (16) of subsection (l)".

(B) Section 7213(a)(2) of the Code is amended by inserting "(13)," immediately after "(12),".

(3) COMPLIANCE BY CONTRACTORS AND OTHER AGENTS WITH CONFIDENTIALITY SAFEGUARDS.--Section 6103(p) of the Code is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

(9) DISCLOSURE TO CONTRACTORS AND OTHER AGENTS. (A) IN GENERAL.-

Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, no return or return information shall be disclosed to a contractor or other agent of a Federal, State, or local agency unless such agency

(i) has requirements in effect which require each such contractor or other agent which would have access to returns or return information to provide safeguards (within the meaning of paragraph (4)) to protect the confidentiality of such returns or return information;

(ii) agrees to conduct a regular on-site review (or a mid-point review in the case of a contract of less than 1 year in duration) of each contractor or other agent to determine compliance with such requirements;

(iii) submits the findings of the most recent review conducted under clause (ii) to the Secretary as part of the report required by paragraph (4)(E); and

(iv) certifies to the Secretary for the most recent annual period that such contractor or other agent is in compliance with all such requirements. Such certification shall be signed by the head of the agency or his or her delegate.

(B) CERTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS.--The certification required by subparagraph (A)(iv) shall include the name and address of each contractor or other agent and a description of the contract or agreement of the contractor or other agent with the agency, and the duration of such contract or agreement.

(C) NOT APPLICABLE TO TAX ADMINISTRATION.--The requirements of this paragraph shall not apply to disclosures pursuant to subsection (n) for purposes of Federal tax administration.

(b) HIGHER EDUCATION ACT AMENDMENTS. Section 484(q) of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1091(q)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking out "to confirm "and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "in accordance with section 6103(l)(13) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, to confirm"; and

(B) by striking out "taxes paid, filing status, and exemptions reported by applicants (including parents)" and inserting in lieu thereof "tax liability, filing status, and type of income tax form filed, as reported by applicants (including parents or spouses, if applicable)";

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "tax return information" through the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof " Federal income tax return information as described in paragraph (1)."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE. The amendments made by this section shall be effective on enactment.

Draft 6/05/02 10:30 A.M.

Section-by-Section Analysis

Section ___. Section ___ of the bill would amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 ("the Code") regarding types of disclosures that the Secretary of the Treasury may make to the Department of Education, consistent with amendments made to section 484 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (HEA) by the Higher Education Amendments of 1998 ("1998 Amendments", P.L. 105-244). This section of the bill would also make conforming and clarifying changes to the Code and the HEA.

Section 484(q) of the HEA (20 U.S.C. 1091(q)) currently authorizes the Secretary of Education, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Treasury, to confirm with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) the adjusted gross income, Federal income taxes paid, filing status, and exemptions reported by student financial aid applicants (including parents) for the purpose of verifying the information reported on student financial aid applications. The Secretary of Education is also required to establish procedures under which applicants are notified that the IRS will disclose the tax return information "as authorized under section 6103(l)(13)" of the Code. Current section 6103(l)(13) of the Code authorizes disclosure of return information only to carry out income contingent repayment of student loans, and only to Department of Education personnel. Because returns and return information may not be disclosed unless authorized by the Code, the disclosure described in section 484(q) of the HEA is not currently implemented.

By adding section 484(q) to the HEA in 1998, Congress intended that Federal income tax return information be available to verify eligibility for assistance under title IV of the HEA. The ability of the Secretary of Education to have access to actual return information about an applicant for student aid would help ensure that eligibility determinations for that assistance are based upon accurate information. An audit by the Department of Education's Inspector General has found that many applicants are reporting incorrect information on their financial aid applications and forms, and, as a result, there are significant and costly errors in the amount of aid and benefit being provided to these applicants. The conclusion of this audit was supported by the findings of a test data match between the IRS and the Department of Education. Although the Secretary of Education has established an elaborate "verification" process whereby some applicants (approximately 30%) must provide copies of their tax returns, the paper-intensive nature of that process makes it impossible to cover more applicants. In addition, the submission by those applicants of uncertified taxpayer copies of returns does not ensure that the verification process relies on official IRS data. While ED could require students to provide certified copies of their return as part of the verification process, such copies are expensive, time-consuming to obtain, and would continue to leave the student without the protections of Title 26 with respect to the school's use of the information in the return.

Section ___(a)(1) of the bill would amend section 6103(l)(13) of the Code to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury, upon written request from the Secretary of Education, to disclose return information with respect to an individual (or his or her parent or spouse, if applicable) who has applied for title IV student financial assistance.

In proposed new section 6103(l)(13)(A)(ii), the return information that may be disclosed are limited to those items relevant to determining an applicant's income-based eligibility under section 471 of the HEA. Specifically, taxpayer identity information, filing status, adjusted gross income, earnings from employment, Federal income taxes paid, and type of tax return filed. Under new section 6103(l)(13)(B), the disclosed return information could be used only by officers, employees and contractors of the Department of Education, and only for the purpose of, and to the extent necessary in, verifying eligibility for title IV assistance, establishing the appropriate income contingent repayment amount for an applicable student loan,[1] or resolving disputes (including litigation) in which applicants fail or refuse to repay overpayments of grants or loans.

The proposed change to include contractors recognizes the current operational and administrative structure of the Federal student aid programs. Any third party provided access to the information described above would be informed of, and covered by, the privacy provisions of the Code and data security requirements, undergo a rigorous review process, and be subject to both existing and newly created safeguard requirements (see discussion of "safeguards" below).

Because title IV aid is distributed to an applicant by his/her school (and in some cases the school's contractor), proposed new section 6103(l)(13)(C) allows the Department of Education to inform schools (and the school's contractor, if applicable) of the fact that a discrepancy exists between an item of information that the applicant reported to the IRS and what the applicant reported to the Department of Education.[2] Being informed of a discrepancy, the school can withhold disbursing title IV aid until the discrepancy is resolved, or in the event the disbursement has already been made, can initiate a process to collect the overpayment from the applicant. In addition, auditors who conduct compliance audits under the HEA will be able to assess whether schools are making the appropriate award adjustments under the new verification process.

[1] An "applicable student loan" would be defined for purposes of disclosures related to income contingent repayment by retaining the current law definition (with minor stylistic edits) in proposed new section 6103(l)(13)(E) of the Code. A loan made under part B (Federal Family Education Loan Program) or part E (Federal Perkins Loan Program) of that title that is in default and assigned to the Department of Education, or any loan made under part D of title IV of the HEA (William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan Program) would be considered an "applicable student loan."

[2] Funds provided under the Leveraging Educational Assistance Partnership program (LEAP) are distributed by States, not schools. Therefore, proposed new section 6103(l)(13)(C) authorizes the Department of Education to disclose the fact of a discrepancy to the State so that the State can either withhold LEAP grant funds, or in the event that grant has already been awarded, initiate a process to collect the over award.

Under new section 6103(l)(13)(c), schools are provided only the fact that a discrepancy exists and which of the data items is discrepant, and are not provided with the underlying data. It would not be cost effective or practical to apply the safeguard provisions of section 6103(p)(4) to these limited disclosures to numerous schools given the extensive administrative burden associated with the safeguards, and in light of the fact that no underlying data is provided. Moreover, schools maintain extensive files on each student containing highly sensitive information, all of which is protected by longstanding requirements under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, 20 U.S.C. 1232.

In order that the applicant have a full understanding of why his/her award or benefit amount may have been changed, proposed new section 6103(l)(13)(D) allows the Department of Education to redisclose to the student applicant the information provided by the IRS under new section 6103(l)(13)(A)(ii). This will include parent information in the case of a dependent applicant and spouse information in the event of a married applicant.

Section (a)(2) of the bill would make conforming changes to section 6103(a)(3) (regarding use limitations); section 6103(p)(3) (regarding recordkeeping requirements); section 6103(p)(4) (which pertains to safeguards on disclosed return information); and section 7213(a)(2) (which specifies the criminal penalties for unauthorized disclosure of return information) of the Code.

Section (a)(3) of the bill would add a new section 6103(p)(9) to the Code, transferring responsibility for overseeing compliance by agency contractors and other agents with the safeguard requirements of section 6103(p)(4) to the agencies themselves.

Section ___(b) of the bill would make minor amendments to section 484(q) of the HEA to parallel more closely the language of proposed new section 6103(l)(13).

Section __(c) of the bill would specify that the amendments made by this section would be effective on enactment.

DRAFT Proposed response:

Laurie:

I think your allegation of bad faith is wrong and overwrought.

On Thursday, I noted to you that Chairman Thompson had adopted the 1997 protocol with respect to Clinton Administration records, and asked whether the Committee would adopt it again to protect sensitive White House documents of this Administration. Judge Gonzales formally asked about the 1997 protocol in a letter sent to the Chairman on Friday. We did not receive what we considered to be final word on Judge Gonzales' request until Tuesday at about 11:00 a.m. after the Chairman had talked to Senator Thompson. (The Chairman and Judge Gonzales talked Monday afternoon about the protocol issue, and the Chairman indicated that he would be talking to Senator Thompson on Tuesday morning.) Before that time, therefore, we made no specific proposals other than those contained in the 1997 protocol (although you had asked us to do so, we first wanted to hear your response on the 1997 protocols, as we told you).

On Tuesday at 11:00, Joyce called me and informed me that the Chairman would not employ the same procedures that the Committee under Chairman Thompson had used in 1997. However, Joyce stated (as you had earlier) that you would welcome our suggestions on security and confidentiality measures apart from the issues that were non-starters for you. We offered our proposals at noon yesterday. You accepted some proposals and rejected others. Since the EOP was not a party to the protocol (as you expressly informed me), that obviously was the Committee's prerogative.

Your e-mail references the procedures for the EOP to withhold sensitive documents if and when that circumstance arises. We recognize (as do you) that the 1997 protocol has more burdensome procedures on that point than we think appropriate. Yesterday, we proposed the following language on that point: "In the event that the producing party withholds responsive documents from production, the producing party shall maintain a copy set of all such documents unless other procedures are agreed to with the Committee." You came back with additional language that would reference and incorporate Instruction 9 of the subpoena (which requires privilege logs). The final protocol includes the reference to Instruction

9 in Section 4.

You then asked us yesterday to expressly state that the EOP will follow Instruction 9 in its totality in all instances. To begin with, the EOP is not a party to the protocol (which you made clear to me during our discussions), so there was no mechanism for formal agreement by the EOP to Section 4 of the protocol, which in turn incorporates Instruction 9 and is the only provision in the protocol that purports to impose a duty on the EOP. Beyond that, it is premature to assume that the EOP would not comply with Instruction 9. And in the event there ever is a need for the EOP to assert a privilege or withhold a responsive document, I assured you yesterday that we will be transparent in asserting any privilege or withholding any documents. We will act in good faith. We will not engage in gamesmanship.

We acted entirely appropriately and in good faith during these discussions. But you appear to disagree. I would like to meet with you to discuss this further. We surely will not always agree, nor should we, as Congress and the Executive Branch have different perspectives and prerogatives. But we likely will be dealing with one another for a while, and the interests of our respective clients will be better served, in my judgment, if we have a respectful relationship.

I would love to help, as would Coddy. However, our counsel's office has told us that, in general, we need to stay away from matters like this, particularly involving immigration matters. I have cc'd our White House counsel Brett Kavanaugh for advice about the best way to proceed. I will advise you when I hear from him.

Subject: Re: If you get asked about information sharing since 9/11

Hello Ken. I hope all is well. I have a big favor of you and Cody that has to do with a Canadian couple and their three year old son who live in Greensboro, N.C. They are also like family to me since Dr. Rivard is my daughter and son't step sister. Her step-father is my ex husband and if this sounds strange is really isn't since my ex and I have remained friends since we divorced in 1976. Dr. Sandra Rivard, her husband Michel Senneville (she goes by her maiden name) and their three year old son have had nothing but problems in their effort to live in the USA and become American citizens. All their problems stem from the inadequacy of a lawyer named Madeline Chee. They now have a new lawyer, but due to the fact that Ms. Chee didn't file for the green card, etc. before the deadline,they now have a deadline of July 1st. At that time Dr. Rivard will not be allowed to leave the USA and Mr Senneville and their three year old son Alex, will be deported to Canada and not allowed to return. I would like to fax the information I have to you and Cody in hopes that you can put me int touch with someone in Immigrations who can expedite their papers. Time is of the essence and anything you can do to help me with this will be greatly appreciated. Ms. Chee made so many mistakes (and Congressman Howard Coble's office will attest to this) from Mr. Senneville's date of birth right up to forgetting to file their papers. I intend to report her to the N.C. Bar Association because this isn't the only one's she has managed to mess up. Please e-mail your fax and I will get this off to you immediately. This family does not want to be seperated, nor do they want to move back to Canada. Dr. Rivard's mother and sister live here.Thank you for your help on this and I will await you e-mail or call.

Purpose: To provide for a complete substitute.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES—107th Cong., 2d Sess.

S. 396

To provide for national quadrennial summits on small business and State summits on small business, to establish the White House Quadrennial Commission on Small Business, and for other purposes.

Referred to the Committee on _____ and ordered to be printed

Ordered to lie on the table and to be printed

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE intended to be proposed by Mr. BOND

Viz:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "White House Quadrennial Small Business Summit Act of 2002".

SEC. 2. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act—

(1) the term "Administrator" means the Administrator of the Small Business Administration;

(A) initially be made not less than 12 months before the date on which the 2003 Small Business Summit is convened;

(B) except for the initial appointments, be made not later than 18 months before the date on which each Small Business Summit is convened after 2003; and

(C) expire 6 months after the date on which each Small Business Summit is convened.

(c) ELECTION OF CHAIRPERSON.—At the first meeting of the Small Business Commission, a majority of the members present and voting shall elect a member of the Small Business Commission to serve as the Chairperson.

(d) POWERS AND DUTIES OF COMMISSION.—The Small Business Commission—

(1) may enter into contracts with public agencies, private organizations, and academic institutions to carry out this Act;

(2) shall consult, coordinate, and contract with an independent, nonpartisan organization that—

(A) has both substantive and logistical experience in developing and organizing conferences and forums throughout the Nation with elected officials and other government and business leaders;

(B) has experience in generating private resources from multiple States in the form of event sponsorships; and

(C) can demonstrate evidence of a working relationship with Members of Congress from the majority and minority parties, and at least 1 Federal agency; and

(3) shall prescribe such financial controls and accounting procedures as needed for the handling of funds from fees and charges and the payment of authorized meal, facility, travel, and other related expenses.

(e) PLANNING AND ADMINISTRATION OF SUMMITS.—In carrying out the Small Business Summits and State Summits, the Small Business Commission shall consult with—

(1) the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship of the Senate;

(2) the Committee on Small Business of the House of Representatives; and

(3) such other Federal agencies as the Small Business Commission determines to be appropriate.

(f) REPORTS REQUIRED.—Not later than 6 months after the date on which each Small Business Summit is convened, the Small Business Commission shall submit to the President, the Chairperson and Ranking Member of the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship of the Senate and the Chairperson and Ranking Member of the Committee on Small Business of the House of Representatives a final report, which shall—

(1) include the findings and recommendations of the Small Business Summit and any proposals for legislative action necessary to implement those recommendations; and

(2) be made available to the public.

(g) QUORUM.—Four voting members of the Small Business Commission shall constitute a quorum for purposes of transacting business.

(h) MEETINGS.—The Small Business Commission shall meet not later than 20 calendar days after the appointment of the initial members of the Small Business Commission, and not less frequently than every 30 calendar days thereafter.

(i) VACANCIES.—Any vacancy on the Small Business Commission shall not affect its powers, but shall be filled in the manner in which the original appointment was made.

(j) EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND STAFF.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Small Business Commission may appoint and compensate an executive director and such other personnel to conduct the Small Business Summits and State Summits, as the Small Business Commission may determine to be advisable, without regard to title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service, and without regard to chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of such title, relating to classification and General Schedule pay rates, except that the rate of pay for the executive director and other personnel may not exceed the rate payable for level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of such title.

(2) FEDERAL EMPLOYEES.—The executive director and any employee of the Commission shall be employees under section 2105 of title 5, United States Code, for purposes of chapters 63, 81, 83, 84, 85, 87, 89, and 90 of that title.

(k) FUNDING.—Members of the Small Business Commission shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence at rates authorized for employees of agencies under subchapter I of chapter 57 of title 5, United States Code, while away from their homes or regular places of business in the performance of services for the Small Business Commission.

SEC. 7. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS; AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out each Small Business Summit and the State Summits required by this Act, $5,000,000, which shall remain available until expended. New spending authority or authority to enter contracts as provided in this Act shall be effective only to such extent and in such amounts as are provided in advance in appropriations Acts.

(b) SPECIFIC EARMARK.—No amount made available to the Small Business Administration may be made available to carry out this Act, other than amounts made available specifically for the purpose of conducting the Small Business Summits and State Summits.

(2) the term "Chief Counsel" means the Chief Counsel for Advocacy of the Small Business Administration;

(3) the term "Small Business Commission" means the national White House Quadrennial Commission on Small Business established under section 6;

(4) the term "Small Business Summit"—

(A) means the White House Quadrennial Summit on Small Business conducted under section 3 (a) or (b); and

(B) includes the last White House Conference on Small Business occurring before 2002;

(5) the term "small business" has the meaning given the term "small business concern" in section 3 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 632);

(6) the term "State" means each of the several States of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and American Samoa; and

(7) the term "State Summit" means a State Summit on Small Business conducted under section 3(c).

SEC. 3. NATIONAL AND STATE QUADRENNIAL SUMMITS ON SMALL BUSINESS.

(a) NATIONAL SUMMIT.—A national White House Quadrennial Summit on Small Business shall be held in 2003, to carry out the purposes set forth in section 4.

(b) QUADRENNIAL SUMMITS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) Small Business Summits should be held once every 4 years, during the second year following each Presidential election; and

(2) Congress should statutorily establish each Small Business Summit under paragraph (1) not later than 2 years prior to the date such summit is to be convened.

(c) STATE SUMMITS.—Each Small Business Summit referred to in subsections (a) and (b) shall be preceded by a State Summit on Small Business—

(1) with not less than 1 State Summit held in each State; and

(2) with not less than 2 State Summits held in any State having a population of more than 10,000,000.

SEC. 4. PURPOSES OF SMALL BUSINESS SUMMITS.

The purposes of each Small Business Summit shall be to—

(1) increase public awareness of the contribution of small business to the national economy;

(2) identify the problems of small business;

(3) examine the status of minorities and women as small business owners;

(4) assist small businesses in carrying out their role as the Nation's principal job creator;

(5) assemble small businesses to develop such specific and comprehensive recommendations for legislative and regulatory action as may be appropriate for maintaining and encouraging the economic viability of small business and thereby, the Nation; and

(6) review the status of recommendations adopted at the immediately preceding Small Business Summit.

SEC. 5. SUMMIT PARTICIPANTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—To carry out the purposes set forth in section 4, the Small Business Commission shall conduct Small Business Summits and State Summits to bring together individuals concerned with issues relating to small business.

(b) SUMMIT DELEGATES.—

(1) QUALIFICATION.—Only individuals who are owners or officers of a small business shall be eligible for appointment or election as delegates or alternates, to the Small Business Summit, or be eligible to vote in the selection of delegates at the State Summits under this subsection.

(2) APPOINTED DELEGATES.—Two months before the date of the first State Summit, there shall be—

(A) 1 delegate and 1 alternate, appointed by the Governor of each State;

(B) 1 delegate and 1 alternate, appointed by each Member of the House of Representatives, from the congressional district of that Member;

(C) 1 delegate and 1 alternate, appointed by each Member of the Senate from the home State of that Member; and

(D) 55 delegates and 55 alternates, appointed by the President, 1 from each State.

(3) ELECTED DELEGATES.—The participants at each State Summit shall elect 3 delegates and 3 alternates to the Small Business Summit for each congressional district within the State, or part of the State represented at the summit, or not fewer than 9 delegates, pursuant to rules developed by the Small Business Commission.

(4) POWERS AND DUTIES.—Each delegate to a Small Business Summit shall—

(A) attend a State Summit in the State of that delegate;

(B) elect a delegation chairperson, vice chairperson, and other leadership as may be necessary;

(C) conduct meetings and other activities at the State level before the date of the Small Business Summit, subject to the approval of the Small Business Commission; and

(D) direct such State level summits, meetings, and activities toward the consideration of the purposes set forth in section 4, in order to prepare for the next Small Business Summit.

(5) ALTERNATES.—Alternates shall serve during the absence or unavailability of the delegate.

(c) ROLE OF THE CHIEF COUNSEL.—The Chief Counsel shall, after consultation and in coordination with the Small Business Commission, assist in carrying out the Small Business Summits and State Summits required by this Act by—

(1) preparing and providing background information and administrative materials for use by participants in the summits;

(2) distributing issue information and administrative communications, electronically where possible through an Internet web site and e-mail, and in printed form if requested;

(3) maintaining an Internet website and regular e-mail communications after each Small Business Summit to inform delegates and the public of the status of recommendations and related governmental activity; and

(4) maintaining, between summits, an active interim organization of delegate representatives from each region of the Administration, to advise the Chief Counsel on each of the major small business issue areas, and monitor the progress of the recommendations of the summit.

(d) EXPENSES.—Each delegate and alternate, to each Small Business Summit and State Summit—

(1) shall be responsible for the expenses of that delegate related to attending the summits; and

(2) shall not be reimbursed either from funds made available under this section or the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 631 et seq.).

(e) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Small Business Commission shall appoint a Summit Advisory Committee, which shall be composed of 10 individuals who were participants at the most recently preceding Small Business Summit, to advise the Small Business Commission on the organization, rules, and processes of the summits.

(2) PREFERENCE.—Preference for appointment under this subsection shall be given to individuals who have been active participants in the implementation process following the most recently preceding Small Business Summit.

(f) PUBLIC PARTICIPATION.—

(1) OPEN MEETINGS.—State Summits shall be open to the public.

(2) ATTENDANCE FEE.—No fee or charge may be imposed on any State Summit attendee, except for—

(A) an amount necessary to cover the cost of any meal provided; and

(B) a registration fee to defray the expense of meeting rooms and materials of not to exceed $20 per person.

SEC. 6. WHITE HOUSE QUADRENNIAL COMMISSION ON SMALL BUSINESS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established the White House Quadrennial Commission on Small Business.

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—

(1) APPOINTMENT.—The Small Business Commission shall be composed of 9 members, including—

(A) the Administrator;

(B) the Chief Counsel;

(C) 3 members appointed by the President;

(D) 1 member appointed by the Majority Leader of the Senate;

(E) 1 member appointed by the Minority Leader of the Senate;

(F) 1 member appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and

(G) 1 member appointed by the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives.

(2) SELECTION.—Members of the Small Business Commission described in subparagraphs (C) through (G) of paragraph (1) shall be selected from among distinguished individuals noted for their knowledge and experience in fields relevant to the issue of small business and the purposes set forth in section 4.

(3) TIME OF APPOINTMENT.—The appointments required by paragraph (1) shall—

JOHN FUND'S POLITICAL DIARY

Boxer Rebellion
It's time for President Bush to stand up to California's senators.

Wednesday, June 5, 2002 12:01 a.m. EDT
President Bush took office promising to restore the "power and legitimate authority of the Oval Office." To that end, the White House has taken controversial steps to claim executive privilege for Enron-related documents from his energy task force, clashed with Rep. Dan Burton, a fellow Republican, in refusing to turn over files on an old FBI scandal in Boston, and ended the American Bar Association's special role in vetting judicial nominees.
But there is one glaring exception to the White House's firm line on protecting its executive branch turf. Last year, it allowed Gerald Parsky, its chief political operative in California, to take effective control of the process of reviewing and recommending nominees for the federal district courts in the largest state. Normally, in the absence of a senator from the president's party, judicial nominees for district courts are vetted by senior House members of the president's party. Instead, Mr. Parsky and the White House crafted a bizarre power-sharing arrangement in California whereby Sens. Barbara Boxer and Dianne Feinstein, both Democrats, would have virtual veto power over district-court nominations. The deal was to set up four commissions to select judges, one for each of the Golden State's judicial districts. Mr. Parsky and the White House selected three candidates to serve each commission; Sens. Boxer and Feinstein selected another three. Together the six members on each commission would interview prospective candidates and forward their names to the White House, which would pick from those names. Four out of the six commission members would have to agree for any name to be sent to the White House.

The commissions may have seemed a clever way to maneuver around increasingly partisan fights over judicial nominees. But they are constitutionally suspect, and they haven't delivered the political benefits the White House expected. Last month, White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales expressed what the Los Angeles Daily Journal, a newspaper for lawyers, called "strong dissatisfaction" with the judicial advisory committees. "In terms of how quickly the president was able to nominate judges to the bench, California is probably last," he told the American Law Institute. "And I think it was probably because of the commission structure." Mr. Gonzales went on to recognize that the commissions are "an encroachment upon the powers of the presidency, in terms of limiting who he can look to within the state to nominate to the federal bench."

That said, Mr. Gonzales acknowledged that the commission might be here to stay: "We'll see how it works down the road." But he was blunt in saying the only reason it existed is that "You've got two Democratic senators [in California], one [Ms. Feinstein] on the Judiciary Committee."

The argument for the commissions was that they would make Sens. Boxer and Feinstein more cooperative in allowing more important nominations--especially for the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals--through. But that didn't happen. Ms. Boxer vowed to filibuster the possible nomination of Rep. Chris Cox, a respected judicial conservative. And she has blocked hearings for Carolyn Kuhl, a Los Angeles lawyer nominated for the Ninth Circuit. For her part, Ms. Feinstein voted to block Judge Charles Pickering, a nominee to another appeals court, from getting a vote by the full Senate. The Judiciary Committee killed the Pickering nomination by a party-line vote even though a majority of the Senate was prepared to confirm him.

When the commissions were created, Mr. Parsky pledged that they would be a way "to take ideology out of the process" and ensure confirmable nominees. But several legal scholars and former judges say the process is suffused with ideology. John Eastman, a professor at Chapman Law School, in Orange, Calif., says he knows of at least two people interviewed by the commissions who were asked for their views on specific issues by Democratic members, including whether they supported the Second Amendment and the Roe v. Wade decision. One candidate was even quizzed about his Catholicism, notwithstanding the Constitution's provision that "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

In addition, the White House understood the commissions were supposed to send a minimum of three names to Washington for consideration as district judges. In reality, the commissions have sent a maximum of three names, severely curbing the choices President Bush could make. The commission interviewed more than 25 candidates for one vacancy, but Democrats rejected most of them, including a lawyer who had made the mistake of working with the Bush legal team in Florida during the 2000 election controversy.

Beyond the internal problems of the commissions there are real problems of accountability. The commissions, filled with establishment pillars of the legal community, operate in secret. The White House is never informed of how many votes each nominee received or who voted for or against him. Most candidates are never even voted on, being discarded in an informal process of which no records are kept. A president is politically accountable for the judicial selections he makes. A senator who blocks a nominee in committee or on the floor may have to answer for his actions to voters or constituency groups. But the California commissions make their decisions in the shadows.

The growing judicial vacancy crisis--the Judicial Conference of the United States has declared 35 "judicial emergencies"--has finally convinced the White House that Senate Democrats aren't interested in allowing a vote on any identifiably conservative judicial nominee. California's jury-rigged commissions aren't working, and Senate Democrats see their existence as a sign of weakness. It's time for the president to dissolve them.

Subject: Volokh: Cardozo, First Hispanic Supreme Court Justice?

http://volokh.blogspot.com/2002_05_26_volokh_archive.html#85120282

[Eugene Volokh, 7:37 AM]

FIRST HISPANIC SUPREME COURT JUSTICE? Conventional wisdom says President Bush will appoint the first Hispanic U.S. Supreme Court Justice, quite possibly Alberto Gonzales, the current White House Counsel and former Texas Supreme Court Justice. It turns out, though, that under one common definition of Hispanic -- a definition that's officially used by the U.S. government itself -- there has already been a Hispanic Supreme Court Justice.

Who was this great man? Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo, one of the leading lights of the bench and bar of the first half of the 20th century, who served on New York State's highest court with great distinction and then served on the U.S. Supreme Court from 1932-38. (Curiously, Cardozo is more remembered for his pre-U.S.-Supreme-Court work, perhaps because he died so soon after being appointed.)

Note the Hispanic surname, a traditional way of testing Hispanic status; actually, I think the name is Portuguese, but if it's good enough for the U.S. government, it's good enough for me: Title 49, section 26.5 of the Code of Federal Regulations (the definition that's used in the contracting race preference programs administered by the Department of Transportation) defines "Hispanic Americans" as persons of Mexican, Puerto Rican, Cuban, Dominican, Central or South American, or other Spanish or Portuguese culture or origin, regardless of race.

There's no doubt, to my knowledge, that Cardozo was indeed of Spanish or Portuguese origin; in fact, a recent biography describes the shaping experiences of Cardozo's youth as including participation in a leading Spanish-Portuguese cultural organization. True, his family probably left the Iberian Peninsula over 350 years before his birth, but that's true of many Hispanics as well. And he likely had no American Indian blood, but that's true of many Hispanics, too.

As it happens, Cardozo was a Sephardic Jew, which is to say (at least in his instance) a Jew whose family lived on the Iberian Peninsula but was eventually expelled in the 1490s. The Spanish-Portuguese organization was New York's Spanish-Portuguese Synagogue, a prominent Sephardic congregation.

Actually, I can certainly understand both why many Hispanics would be enthusiastic about having a Hispanic appointed to the Court, and why they wouldn't count Cardozo as one of them: Ethnicity tends to be defined in practice by felt cultural bonds, and not by Code of Federal Regulations definitions. Still, it's an amusing little factoid, so I thought I'd pass it along.

Subject: FAQ for 6/11 Rally
Author: Stephen Push <spush@familiesofseptember11.org>
Date: 6/10/2002 6:16 AM

What do you want?

We, the families of those murdered and injured in the September 11 attacks, demand that the U.S. government appoint a commission to (1) study the events surrounding the attacks and (2) make recommendations to improve prevention of and response to future attacks. The commission must:

-- be independent of all branches of government;
-- be bipartisan; and
-- have a broad mandate to study all relevant facts and events prior
to,
during, and immediately after the attacks, including intelligence and law enforcement activities, diplomacy, immigration policy and border control, aviation security, skyscraper safety, the flow of assets to terrorists, emergency and rescue operations, and any other matters the commission deems worthy of study.

Why is an independent commission necessary?

The coalition supports the establishment of an independent commission for the following reasons:

-- The nation cannot effectively prevent or respond to future attacks without adequate knowledge of the problems that led to the September 11 tragedy.
-- The victims' families and the public deserve to know the facts concerning the most devastating act of terrorism against Americans in history.
-- Only an independent commission can conduct the study in an atmosphere
free from political pressure.
-- Only a comprehensive study can provide the "big picture" view needed for an integrated approach to homeland security and the war on terrorism.

Won't an independent investigation interfere with the War on Terrorism?

The government established several independent commissions to study the Pearl Harbor attack between 1941 and 1945. Those investigations did not interfere with the nation's ability to win a two-front world war.

Shouldn't we be rallying around our leader in a time of war?

The commission should not be charged with investigating only actions taken by the current administration. It should also examine the actions of Congress, prior administrations, and private-sector organizations that have a role in homeland security.

Won't an independent commission leak vital national secrets?

The commission should be a panel of highly distinguished former government officials and other leaders of national stature. They and the senior staff they select would be required to obtain government security clearances. We are confident that such men and women will be willing and capable of protecting sensitive national security information. While we want the commission's reports and most of its hearings to be public, closed hearings should be conducted when necessary to protect secret intelligence sources and methods.

Won't the search for people to blame undermine the morale of the agencies responsible for our security?

We want the commission to avoid a potentially divisive search for individuals to blame; the focus should be on improving the nation's security. The victims' families believe that saving lives is the only way to ensure that their loved ones will not have died in vain.

Which independent commission bill do you support?

We support any method of establishing a commission that is truly independent, is bipartisan, and has a sufficiently broad mandate. There are three proposals currently being advanced on Capitol Hill:

-- Senators Joseph Lieberman (D-Conn.) and John McCain (R-Ariz.) introduced a bill that would establish a 14-member panel of experts not currently in government service to evaluate facts relating to the September 11 attacks.
-- Representative Tim Roemer (D-Ind.) introduced a bill that would establish a 10-member commission to study the attacks.
-- Representative Chris Shays (R-Conn.) is calling on President George W. Bush to appoint a presidential commission to investigate the attacks.

Shouldn't the congressional intelligence committees do the investigation?

We applaud the Senate and House intelligence committees and other congressional committees that are undertaking investigations and oversight of various executive-branch agencies involved in homeland security and anti-terrorism efforts. But the nation needs an independent commission that takes a broad view of the issue, including an examination of Congress's role. We believe that the congressional investigations should continue and that they would be complemented by an independent commission report.

Hasn't President Bush solved the problems by establishing the new Department of Homeland Security?

The President's proposal to establish a Department of Homeland Security is a step in the right direction, but it doesn't go far enough. For example, the FBI and the CIA-the two agencies responsible for the most egregious cases of not sharing or acting on pre-September 11 intelligence-would not be incorporated into the new department under the Bush proposal. If history is any guide, these agencies will view the new department as a competitor and withhold intelligence from it. But even if the intelligence agencies were incorporated into the new department, an independent commission would still be needed to discover, analyze, and recommend solutions to other problems that contributed to the September 11 tragedy.

What precedents are there for such independent commissions?

Independent commission reports were prepared after the Pearl Harbor attack, the bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, and other tragic events in the nation's history.

We are puzzled by the draft testimony's assertion of jurisdiction over transporters because ATF generally does not regulate explosives while they are in transportation--RSPA does. We suggest dropping the reference to "or transporting" in the paragraph near top of page 4.

Hey guys,

Cant imagine how busy you are if you've been involved with this homeland agency stuff. I know judges are still slow but I did go to the dick leon investiture and party last week (we used to share a secretary) so at least there are some victories. Couple things:

1) did you get an invite to our movie screening for The Bourne Identity forwarded to you by Dee Dee Benkie for tomorrow night? She was supposed to get them around but based on the rsvp list, I'm not sure it happened - we have another one next week which I will try to arrange if she did not.

2) any time to grab lunch sometime over the next few weeks? I'm now right around the corner and would love to catch up - hope things are well

Dear [Chairman Leahy, Senator Hatch]:

I write to express the commitment of this Administration to working with Congress to ensure that victims of terrorism receive appropriate financial assistance following a terrorist attack and to provide our views on legislation pending in Congress on this issue. ~~address the pending legislation proposing that certain categories of victims of international terrorism be added to the September 11th Victim Compensation Fund.~~

~~The Administration is committed to working with the Congress to ensure that victims of international terrorism receive appropriate assistance.~~ As you know, pending legislation in Congress would create compensation funds modeled on the September 11th Victim Compensation Fund for certain victims of terrorist attacks. The Administration believes, however, that based on our experience with the administration of the September 11th fund, we can make substantial improvements to any future program to compensate victims of international terrorism to ensure more equitable, expeditious assistance. Recognizing the many substantial concerns voiced by Americans to the structure of the September 11th fund, the ~~program and the difficulties faced in implementing that program, the Administration believes that there is a more equitable and appropriate course for compensating other victims of international terrorism. The~~ Administration proposes to model any additional program for ~~believes that~~ compensation for victims of international terrorism ~~should instead be modeled~~ after the federal benefit provided to the families of public safety officers killed in the line of duty, ~~.~~ see 42 U.S.C. 3796, and to fund the program out of International Affairs 150 Account.

Last fall, overwhelming majorities in Congress, recognizing the tremendous sacrifices of our nation's public safety officers, voted to streamline the Public Safety Officer Benefit program and to increase payments under the program from approximately $150,000 to $250,000, indexed for inflation. This program has been a tremendous success in providing prompt compensation to public safety officers killed on September 11th and other public safety officers killed in the line of duty. We believe that designing a program for victims of international terrorism after the public safety officer benefit model will make the following important improvements to the September 11th program:

First, this approach will ensure that the ~~a~~victim compensation program ~~should~~provides victims with lower incomes the same awards that it provides to victims with higher incomes. While wealthy plaintiffs in tort suits may receive greater awards than do victims with lower incomes, the federal government generally does not draw such distinctions in victim compensation programs.

Second, the~~e~~ claims process under this approach will ~~should~~be quick, streamlined, and simple, in order to help victims' families in their time of need. We should not create a lengthy administrative process that will prevent victims from quickly receiving assistance and that will force victims to submit complicated financial records or to relive their tragedies. The need for a prompt process for compensating victims further weighs against providing different amounts to different victims based upon their individual financial circumstances, as any program with differential awards necessarily would require an administrative claims process.

Third, the amount of compensation should be on par with that provided for public safety officers killed in the line of duty. ~~See 42 U.S.C. 3796 (providing approximately $250,000, indexed for inflation, to the families of public safety officers). Like the Public Safety Officer Benefit, a program to compensate victims of international terrorism should recognize that there are other sources of compensation for victims. For example, awards under the program should not be offset by victims' insurance benefits and other collateral source compensation.~~ Some Americans have raised concerns that the statute establishing the September 11th fund required offset of life insurance and other collateral sources and required participants to waive rights in civil litigation. In contrast, the approach we are proposing would provide lower amounts of compensation, but without offsetting collateral sources or requiring victims to waive rights to civil litigation. ~~Likewise, the Administration is not opposed to allowing victims to sue culpable parties, to the extent permitted under law. (However~~Although, to prevent double recovery, if an individual actually receives compensation from the defendants in a lawsuit for the same injuries for which they were compensated under this program, the government should have a right of reimbursement.)

Importantly, this approach would ~~the victims of international terrorism program shoul~~preserve the President's ability to conduct foreign policy. T~~herefore, t~~he Administration opposes the use of blocked assets to fund victim compensation or to satisfy judgments. Using blocked assets would preclude their use to pressure regimes to improve their policies on terrorism, risk taxpayer liability for third party claims against the assets, eliminate their availability to satisfy current U.S. government claims (currently more than $2 billion), and put at risk diplomatic property.~~Funding for any proposal to compensate victims of international terror should instead come from the International Affairs 150 Account.~~

We recognize the congressional interest in this matter, as reflected in Section 626 of Public Law 107-77, and we look forward to working with the Congress on a proposal that would meet those principles.

Very truly yours,

Dear Ms. Rubenstein:

We have received the Chairman,s letter of June 10, and I will reply on behalf of Judge Gonzales.

We have received responses from more than 1600 people in the EOP. We also have gathered and reviewed an extensive body of e-mail and WAVES records.
Three attorneys (out of the nine Associate Counsel on Judge Gonzales, staff) are reviewing records on a continuing basis consistent with their other duties. Our goal is to continue with productions at least once a week and to complete most if not all of our production this month.

We intend to submit another production (our third) this Thursday. Please do not hesitate to contact me with any additional questions.

Sincerely,

Brett M. Kavanaugh
Associate Counsel to the President

An Administration Draft Plan to Improve Federal Statistical Programs

The Administration proposes to:

establish a uniform set of legislative safeguards across Federal statistical agencies to protect the confidentiality of information provided by the public, including tougher criminal penalties for inappropriate disclosure; and authorize the sharing of business data among the Census, BEA, and the BLS to reduce the duplicative paperwork burdens imposed on businesses and to improve the accuracy and reliability of economic statistics.

The Administration has expressed strong support for data sharing as a means to improve the performance of Federal statistical programs in its FY2002 Statistical Programs of the United States Government, the FY2003 Budget of the United States Government, and in the 2002 Economic Report of the President.

The Administration looks forward to working with Congress to draft the relevant legislation to implement this proposal. An example of the type of legislation the Administration would support is attached; attached also is an example of the type of conforming tax code legislation that would be required. The draft legislation is based in large part on H.R. 2885 (the Statistical Efficiency Act of 1999) and H.R. 2136.

Need for the Legislation:

Different statutory disclosure rules for confidential information across Federal statistical agencies raise concerns about the Federal Government's ability to provide clear and consistent safeguards of confidential data provided by the public. One high and consistent standard should be established and applied to all statistical agencies.

Statutory restrictions prevent the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA), and the Bureau of the Census (Census) from producing the highest quality economic statistics.

June 7, 2002 – DRAFT

A BILL (Referred to as "the Act" below)

To protect the confidentiality of information acquired from the public for statistical purposes, and to permit the exchange of business data among designated statistical agencies for statistical purposes only.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Confidential Information Protection and ~~Confidentiality and~~ Statistical Efficiency Act of 2002".

SECTION 2. DEFINITIONS.

~~Takes all seven definitions in Sawyer, plus (g) from Horn, and (i) which is new, with changes to Sawyer in bold~~

As used in this Act:

(a) The term "respondent" means a person who, or organization that, is requested or required to supply information to an agency, is the subject of information requested or required to be supplied to an agency, or provides that information to an agency.

(b) The term "identifiable form" means any representation of information that permits information concerning ~~the identity of the~~ a specific respondent to be reasonably inferred by either direct or indirect means.

Formatted

Formatted

(c) The term "agency" means any entity that falls within the definition of the term "executive agency" as defined in section 102 of title 31, United States Code, or "agency", as defined in section 3502 of title 44, United States Code.

(d) The term "statistical purpose" –

(1) means the description, estimation, or analysis of the characteristics of groups without disclosure of the identities of individuals or organizations that comprise such groups; and

(2) includes the development, implementation, or maintenance of methods, technical or administrative procedures, or information resources that support the purposes described in subparagraph (1).

(e) The term 'nonstatistical purpose' means use of data in identifiable form for any purpose that is not a statistical purpose, and includes any administrative, regulatory, law enforcement, adjudicatory, or other purpose that affects the rights, privileges, or benefits of a particular identifiable respondent.

(c) Officers, employees, and agents of a Designated Statistical Agency who receive data pursuant to this Title shall be subject to all provisions of law, including penalties, that relate:

(1) to the unlawful provision of the business data that would apply to the officers, employees, and agents of the agency that originally obtained the information; and

(2) to the unlawful disclosure of the business data that would apply to officers, employees, and agents of the agency that originally obtained the information.

(d) NOTICE –Whenever a written agreement concerns data that respondents were required by law to report and the agreement contains terms that could not reasonably have been anticipated by respondents who provided the data that will be disclosed, the terms of such agreement shall be described in a public notice issued by the agency that intends to disclose the data. Such notice shall allow a minimum of 60 days for public comment, and appropriate modifications responsive to public comments shall be made before such agreement shall take effect.

SECTION~~.~~ 2045. LIMITATIONS ON USE ~~AND DISCLOSURE~~ OF ~~BUSINESS INFORMATION~~BUSINESS DATA PROVIDED BY DESIGNATED STATISTICAL AGENCIES.

(a) ~~Business information~~Business data ~~exchanged~~provided by a Designated Statistical Agency pursuant to this Title shall be used~~only~~ exclusively for statistical purposes ~~authorized~~as defined by this ~~Title~~Act.

(b) Publication of ~~exchanged business information~~business data shall occur in a manner whereby the data furnished by any particular respondent ~~establishment or individual can not be identified~~are not in identifiable form.

(c) Examination of ~~exchanged business information~~business data in identifiable form shall be limited to the officers, employees, and agents authorized to examine the individual reports in accordance with written agreements pursuant to Section 20~~45(a)~~.

~~The following clause closely parallels language in Horn that makes the penalties flow with the data. This is probably the most efficient way to extend Title 13 when Census data go to BLS and BEA. It replaces the terms 'disclosed' and disclosure' with 'provided' and 'provision' because disclosure is a term of art meaning something very different n Title 13.~~

~~SEC. 206. REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF RULES.~~

~~The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall review any rules proposed by a Designated Statistical Agency pursuant to this Title for consistency with the provisions of this Act and chapter 35 of title 44, United States Code, and such rules shall be subject to the approval of the Director.~~

~~SEC. 207. RELATIONSHIP TO OTHER LAWS.~~

REV_00343981

~~(a) TITLE 44, UNITED STATES CODE.—This Act, including the amendments made by this Act, does not diminish the authority under section 3510 of title 44, United States Code, of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to direct, and of an agency to make, disclosures that are not inconsistent with any applicable law.~~

~~(b) EXEMPTION FROM FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT.—Business information acquired for exclusively statistical purposes as provided in Title II of this Act is exempt from mandatory disclosure under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, pursuant to section 552(b)(3) of such title.~~

~~(c) PREEMPTION OF STATE LAW.—Nothing in this Act shall preempt applicable State law regarding the confidentiality of data collected by the States.~~

REV_00343982

SECTION. 2086. CONFORMING CHANGES IN LAW.

(a) DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE – Section 1 of the Act of January 27, 1938 (15 UNITED STATES CODE 176a) is amended by:

(1) striking ``The'' and inserting ``Except as provided in the Confidential Information Protection and Statistical Efficiency Act of 2002, the'';

(2) Chapter 10 of title 13, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 401 the following:

``Sec. 402. Exchange ofProviding business informationdata withto Designated Statistical Agencies

``The Bureau of the Census may provideexchange business informationbusiness data withto the Bureau of Economic Analysis and the Bureau of Labor Statistics ("Designated Statistical Agencies") if such information serves a statistical purpose and the provisionexchange is the subject of a written agreement with that Designated Statistical Agency, or their successors, as defined in the Confidential Information Protection and Statistical Confidentiality and Efficiency Act of 2002.''.

REV_00343983

(3) The table of sections for chapter 10 of title 13, United States Code, is amended by adding after the item relating to section 401 the following:

"~~'~~402. ~~Exchange~~Providing ~~of information~~ business data from the Bureau of the Census ~~with~~to Designated Statistical Agencies.".

~~(b) DEPARTMENT OF TREASURY. Section 6103(j) of the Internal Revenue Code (26 UNITED STATES CODE ------, et seq.) is amended by:~~

~~[The following clause puts BEA on a par with Census for business information on tax records:]~~

~~(1) Striking 'corporations' in paragraph (j)(1)(B) and inserting 'businesses and non-profit institutions'~~

~~(2) Renumbering paragraphs (j)(2) through (j)(6) as (j)(4) through (j)(8).~~

~~(3) Adding the following two new paragraphs after paragraph (j)(1):~~

~~[The following clause puts BLS on a par with the other two agencies for business information on tax records:]~~

~~'(2) Department of Labor~~
~~Upon request in writing by the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary shall furnish such return information reflected on returns of businesses and non-profit institutions to officers, employees, and agents of the Bureau of Labor Statistics,' as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation for the purpose of, but only to the extent necessary for, statistical activities authorized by law.~~

~~[The following clause clarifies the meaning of statistical activities for all three bureaus:]~~

~~'(3) The term statistical activities (A) means the collection, compilation, processing, analysis, or interpretation of data for the purpose of describing or making estimates concerning the whole, or relevant groups or components within, the economy; and~~

~~(B) includes the development of methods or resources that support those activities, such as measurement methods, models, statistical classifications, or sampling frames.'.~~

(f) The term 'statistical agency or unit' means an agency or organizational unit of the executive branch whose activities are predominantly the collection, compilation, processing, or analysis of information for statistical purposes.

(g) The term 'statistical activities' –

(~~A~~1) means the collection, compilation, processing, or analysis of data for the purpose of describing or making estimates concerning the whole, or relevant groups or components within, economy, society, or natural environment; and

(~~B~~2) includes the development of methods or resources that support those activities, such as measurement methods, models, statistical classifications, or sampling frames.

(h) The term '~~a~~agent' –

(1) means an employee of a private organization or a researcher affiliated with an academic institution (including a person granted Special Sworn Status by the Bureau of the Census under section 23(c) of Title 13) with whom a contract or other agreement is executed, on a temporary basis, by an executive agency to perform exclusively statistical activities under the control and supervision of an officer or employee of that agency; or

(2) means a government entity with which a contract or other agreement is executed by an executive agency to perform exclusively statistical activities under the control of an officer or employee of that agency; or

(3) means a contractor with whom a contract or other agreement is executed by an executive agency to perform a statistical activity under the control of an officer or employee of that agency; or

(4) means a contractor engaged by the agency to design or maintain the systems for handling or storage of data received under this Act; and

(5) who agrees in writing to comply with all provisions of law that affect information acquired by that agency.

~~(2) who agrees in writing to comply with all provisions of law that affect information acquired by that agency.~~

(~~i~~i) The term '~~business information~~business data' means operating and financial data and information about businesses, ~~non-profit~~tax-exempt organizations~~institutions~~, and government entities.

SECTION 3. COORDINATION AND OVERSIGHT OF POLICIES.

REV_00343973

(a) IN GENERAL – The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall coordinate and oversee the confidentiality and disclosure policies established by this Act.

(b) REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF RULES – The Director shall review any rules proposed by an agency pursuant to this Act for consistency with the provisions of this Act and chapter 35 of title 44, United States Code, and such rules shall be subject to the approval of the Director.

SECTION 4. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.

(a) SECTION 3510 of TITLE 44, UNITED STATES CODE – This Act, including amendments made by this Act, does not diminish the authority under section 3510 of title 44, United States Code, of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to direct, and of an agency to make, disclosures that are not inconsistent with any applicable law.

(b) SECTIONS 16 AND 301 OF TITLE 13 and SECTION 2108 OF TITLE 44 – This Act, including amendments made by this Act, does not diminish the authority of the Bureau of the Census to provide information in accordance with sections 16 and 301 of title 13 and section 2108 of title 44.

(c) EXEMPTION FROM FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT – Data acquired for exclusively statistical purposes as described in Section 2 are exempt from mandatory disclosure under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, pursuant to section 552(b)(3) of such title.

(d) PREEMPTION OF STATE LAW – Nothing in this Act shall preempt applicable State law regarding the confidentiality of data collected by the States.

(e) CONSTRUCTION – Nothing in this Act shall be construed as restricting or diminishing any confidentiality protections that otherwise apply to data or information collected for statistical purposes or nonstatistical purposes, including, but not limited to, section 6103 of Title 26.

TITLE I – CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION PROTECTION

~~This entire Title lifted from Sawyer bill, taking all sections other than title and definitions.~~

SEC 101. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS – Congress finds the following:

(1) Consumers, citizens, businesses, and other organizations have varying degrees of legal protection when providing information to the Federal Government for strictly statistical purposes.

(2) The integrity and credibility of pledges of confidentiality by the Federal Government provide assurances to the public that information about individuals or organizations or provided by individuals or organizations for exclusively statistical purposes will be held in confidence and will not be used against such individuals or organizations in any Federal Government action.

(3) Protecting the privacy and confidentiality interests of individuals or organizations who provide information for Federal statistical programs serves both the interests of the public and the needs of society.

(4) Declining trust of the public in the protection of information provided to the Federal Government adversely affects both the accuracy and completeness of statistical analyses.

(5) Ensuring that information provided for statistical purposes receives protection is essential in continuing public cooperation in statistical programs.

(b) PURPOSES – The purposes of this Title are the following:

(1) To ensure that information supplied by individuals or organizations to an agency for statistical purposes is used exclusively for statistical purposes.

(2) To ensure that individuals or organizations who supply information to the Federal Government for statistical purposes will ~~not~~neither have that information disclosed in identifiable form to anyone not authorized by this Act nor have that information used for any purpose other than a statistical purpose ~~without the consent of such individuals or organizations~~.

(3) To safeguard the confidentiality of individually identifiable information acquired for statistical purposes by controlling access to, and uses made of, such information.

~~(4) To respect the rights and privileges of the public by observing and promoting fair information practices.~~

SEC. TION 102. LIMITATIONS ON USE AND DISCLOSURE OF DATA AND INFORMATION.

(a) USE OF STATISTICAL DATA OR INFORMATION – Data or information acquired by an agency for exclusively statistical purposes shall be used by officers, employees, or agents of the agency ~~only~~ exclusively for statistical purposes.

(b) DISCLOSURE OF STATISTICAL DATA OR INFORMATION – Data or information acquired by an agency for exclusively statistical purposes shall not be disclosed by an agency in identifiable form, for any purpose other than a statistical purpose, except with the informed consent of the respondent.

(c) RULE FOR USE OF DATA OR INFORMATION FOR NONSTATISTICAL PURPOSES – A statistical agency or unit shall clearly distinguish any data or information it collects for nonstatistical purposes (as authorized by law) by a rule that provides that the respondent supplying the data or information is fully informed, before the data or information is collected, that the data or information will be used for nonstatistical purposes.

(d) DESIGNATION OF AGENTS – A statistical agency or unit may designate agents who may perform exclusively statistical activities, subject to the limitations and penalties described in this Act.

~~SEC. 103. COORDINATION AND OVERSIGHT OF POLICIES.~~

~~(a) IN GENERAL.—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall coordinate and oversee the confidentiality and disclosure policies established by this Title.~~

~~(b) REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF RULES.—The Director shall review any rules proposed by an agency pursuant to this Title for consistency with the provisions of this Title and chapter 35 of title 44, United States Code, and such rules shall be subject to the approval of the Director.~~

~~SEC. 104. EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.~~

~~(a) TITLE 44, UNITED STATES CODE.—This Act does not diminish the authority under section 3510 of title 44, United States Code, of the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to direct, and of an agency to make, disclosures that are not inconsistent with any applicable law.~~

~~(b) EXEMPTION FROM FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT.—Data or information acquired for exclusively statistical purposes as described in section 101 is exempt from mandatory disclosure under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, pursuant to section 552(b)(3) of such title.~~

~~(c) PREEMPTION OF STATE LAW.—Nothing in this Act shall preempt applicable State law regarding the confidentiality of data collected by the States.~~

REV_00343976

~~(d) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed as restricting or diminishing any confidentiality protections that otherwise apply to data or information collected for statistical purposes or nonstatistical purposes.~~

SEC.TION 1053. DISCLOSURE PENALTIES.

An officer, employee, or agent of an agency who knowingly, without the informed consent of the respondent, discloses in identifiable form, for any purpose other than a statistical purpose, data or information acquired by an agency for an exclusively statistical purpose, shall be found guilty of a class E felony and imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or fined not more than $250,000, or both.

TITLE II – STATISTICAL EFFICIENCY

SECTION 201. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS – Congress finds the following:

(1) Federal statistics are an important source of information for public and private decision-makers such as policymakers, consumers, businesses, investors, and workers.

(2) Federal statistical agencies should continuously seek to improve their efficiency. Statutory constraints limit the ability of these agencies to share data and thus to achieve higher efficiency for Federal statistical programs.

(3) The quality of Federal statistics depends on the willingness of businesses to respond to statistical surveys. Reducing reporting burdens will increase response rates, and therefore lead to more accurate characterizations of the economy.

(4) Enhanced sharing of business data among the Bureau of the Census, the Bureau of Economic Analysis, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics for exclusively statistical purposes will improve their ability to track more accurately the large and rapidly changing nature of U.S. business. In particular, the statistical agencies will be able to better ensure that businesses are consistently classified in appropriate industries, resolve data anomalies, produce statistical samples that are consistently adjusted for the entry and exit of new businesses in a timely manner, and correct faulty reporting errors quickly and efficiently.

(5) Congress passed the International Investment and Trade in Services Act of 1990 that allowed the Bureau of the Census, the Bureau of Economic Analysis, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics to share data on foreign-owned companies. The Act not only expanded detailed industry coverage from 135 industries to over 800 industries with no increase in the data collected from respondents but also demonstrated how data sharing can result in the creation of valuable data products.

(6) With Title I of this Act, sharing of business data among the Bureau of the Census, the Bureau of Economic Analysis, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics continues to ensure the highest level of confidentiality for respondents to statistical surveys.

(b) PURPOSES – The purposes of this Title are the following:

(1) To authorize the sharing of business data among the Bureau of the Census, the Bureau of Economic Analysis, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics for exclusively statistical purposes.

REV_00343978

(2) To reduce the paperwork burdens imposed on businesses that provide requested information to the Federal Government.

(3) To improve the comparability and accuracy of federal economic statistics by allowing the Bureau of the Census, the Bureau of Economic Analysis, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics to update sample frames, develop consistent classifications of establishments and companies into industries, improve coverage, and reconcile significant differences in data produced by the three agencies.

(4) To increase understanding of the U.S. economy, especially for key industry and regional statistics, to develop more accurate measures of the impact of technology on productivity growth, and to enhance the reliability of the Nation's most important economic indicators such as the National Income and Product Accounts.

~~(e) [Status—Is this necessary now? - The BLS recommends a clause to clarify that Title II covers business information only and does not apply to individual demographic information beyond that necessary to identify a business for statistical purposes.]~~

SECTION~~.~~ 202. _DESIGNATION OF STATISTICAL AGENCIES.

IN GENERAL – For purposes of this Title, the following hereafter shall be referred to as Designated Statistical Agencies:

(a) The Bureau of Economic Analysis in the Department of Commerce,

(b) The Bureau of the Census in the Department of Commerce, and

(c) The Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Department of Labor.

SECTION~~.~~ 203. _RESPONSIBILITIES OF DESIGNATED STATISTICAL AGENC~~Y~~IES.

~~This preserves all three responsibilities listed in Horn that pertain to data sharing. (The fourth Horn responsibility on 'fair information practices' was picked up in Sawyer and remains in Title I—Sec. 101(b)(4).)~~

Designated Statistical Agencies shall:

(a) identify opportunities to eliminate duplication and otherwise reduce reporting burden and cost imposed on the public ~~by~~in ~~exchang~~providing information for statistical purposes;

(b) enter into joint statistical projects to improve the quality and reduce the cost of statistical programs;

(c) protect the confidentiality of individually identifiable information acquired for statistical purposes by adhering to safeguard principles, including:

(1) emphasizing to their officers, employees, and agents the importance of protecting the confidentiality of individually identifiable information,

(2) training their officers, employees, and agents in their legal obligations to protect the confidentiality of individually identifiable information and in the procedures that must be followed to provide access to such information,

(3) implementing appropriate measures to assure the physical and electronic security of confidential data,

(4) establishing a system of records that identifies individuals accessing confidential data and the project for which the data were required, and

(6) being prepared to document their compliance with safeguard principles to other agencies authorized by law to monitor such compliance; and

(d) respect the rights and privileges of the public by observing and promoting fair information practices.

SECTION 204. SHARING OF BUSINESS DATA AMONG DESIGNATED STATISTICAL AGENCIES.

(a) A Designated Statistical Agency may provide business data to another Designated Statistical Agency only under the terms of a written agreement among the agencies sharing the business data that specifies:

(1) the business data to be shared;

(2) the statistical purposes for which the business data are to be used;

(3) the officers, employees, and agents authorized to examine the business data to be shared; and

(4) appropriate security procedures to safeguard the confidentiality of the business data.

(b) The provision of business data by an agency to a Designated Statistical Agency under this Title shall in no way alter the responsibility of the agency providing the data under other statutes (including the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act) with respect to the provision or withholding of such information by the agency providing the data.

DRAFT OF CONFORMING CHANGES TO TAX CODE

USE OF TAX INFORMATION FOR STATISTICAL PURPOSES

SECTION 1. AUTHORITY TO DISCLOSE RETURN INFORMATION

(a) Section 6103(j) of the Internal Revenue Code (26 UNITED STATES CODE ------, et seq.) is amended by:

(1) Striking 'officers and employees' in paragraph (j)(1)(A) and inserting 'officers, employees, and agents';

(2) Striking 'corporations' in paragraph (j)(1)(B) and inserting 'businesses, government entities, and tax-exempt organizations';

(3) Striking 'officers and employees' in paragraph (j)(1)(B) and inserting 'officers, employees, and agents';

(4) Striking paragraph (2), and renumbering paragraphs (3) through (6) as (6) through (9); and

(5) Adding the following new paragraphs after paragraph (j)(1):

"(2) Department of Labor

(A) In general. Upon request in writing by the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary shall furnish such return information reflected on returns of businesses, government entities, and tax-exempt organizations to officers, employees, and agents of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation for the purpose of, but only to the extent necessary for, the structuring of surveys and related statistical activities authorized by law.

(B) Use by states. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, subject to approval by the Secretary, may disclose the fact of a discrepancy between an item of information reflected in records of the Bureau of Labor Statistics and that item of information as it is reflected in the records of a state statistical agency with whom the Bureau of Labor Statistics has a cooperative agreement for the purpose of independently verifying the data maintained in the state statistical agency's file. Such items of information with respect to which the fact of a discrepancy (but not the underlying data) may be disclosed shall be limited to a taxpayer's name, address, employer identification number, or industry classification. Only the independently obtained and verified data shall be made a part of the state statistical agency's files. Notwithstanding paragraphs (4) or (9) of section 6103(p), such fact of discrepancy information shall not be subject to the safeguard provisions of those sections.

(3) Return information disclosed under paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection (j) may be redisclosed among organizations specified in such paragraphs pursuant to agreements approved by the Secretary and in accordance with section 6103(p)(2)(B) and the regulations thereunder.

(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, no disclosure of return information shall be made to an officer, employee, or agent of a statistical agency under paragraphs (1)-(3) unless such agency has submitted a plan that has been reviewed pursuant to procedures agreed upon by the Secretary and that establishes that the activity will predominantly serve a statistical purpose consistent with the legislatively mandated or appropriated mission of that agency.

'(5) Definitions. For purposes of paragraphs (1), (2), (3), (4), and (10) of this subsection (j),

(A) the term 'statistical activities' –

(i) means the collection, compilation, processing, or analysis of data for the purpose of describing or making estimates concerning the whole, or relevant groups or components within, the economy, society, or natural environment; and

(ii) includes the development of methods or resources that support those activities, such as measurement methods, models, statistical classifications, or sampling frames.'

(B) the term 'agent' –

(i) means an employee of a private organization or a researcher affiliated with an academic institution (including a person granted Special Sworn Status by the Bureau of the Census under section 23(c) of Title 13) with whom a contract or other agreement is executed, on a temporary basis, by an executive agency to perform exclusively statistical activities under the control and supervision of an officer or employee of that agency; or

(ii) means a government entity with which a contract or other agreement is executed by an executive agency to perform exclusively statistical activities under the control of an officer or employee of that agency; or

(iii) means a contractor with whom a contract or other agreement is executed by an executive agency to perform a statistical activity under the control of an officer or employee of that agency; or

(iv) means a contractor engaged by the agency to design or maintain the systems for handling or storage of the returns and return information received under this subsection; and

(v) who agrees in writing to comply with all provisions of law that affect information acquired by that agency.

(C) the term 'businesses' includes corporations, S corporations, partnerships, and sole proprietorships;

(D) The term 'statistical purpose' –

(i) means the description, estimation, or analysis of the characteristics of groups without disclosure of the identities of individuals or organizations that comprise such groups;

(ii) includes the development, implementation, or maintenance of methods, technical or administrative procedures, or information resources that support the purposes described in subparagraph (1); and

(iii) excludes any administrative, regulatory, law enforcement, adjudicatory, or other purpose that affects the rights, privileges, or benefits of a particular respondent, or any commercial purpose.

(6) Inserting the phrase "Except as provided in paragraph (3)" at the beginning of paragraph (7) of subsection (j) entitled "Anonymous form."

(7) Inserting the following new paragraph at the end of subsection (j):

(a) '(10) Federal Reserve Board.—Upon request in writing by the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System or another member of the Board designated by the Chairman, the Secretary shall furnish such return information as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation for use by officers, employees and agents of the Federal Reserve Board whose official duties require access to such information for the purpose of, but only to the extent necessary in, structuring, conducting or preparing economic or financial surveys, and for related statistical activities authorized by law.'

(b) Section 6103(a) is amended by striking "subsection (e)(1)(D)(iii), paragraph (6)" in paragraph (3) and inserting "subsection (e)(1)(D)(iii), subsection (j), paragraph (6)"

(c) Section 6103(p)(3) is amended by inserting "(j)" between "(8)(A)(ii)," and "(k)(1)".

(d) Section 6103(p) is amended by striking "(j)(1), (2), or (5)" in the matter at the beginning of paragraph (4) and inserting "(j)[insert final paragraph numbers for commerce (1), BLS (2), sharing provision (3), agriculture (7), FRB(10)]"

(e) Strike "under paragraph (6)(A)" in the flush language at the end of subsection (p)(4) and insert "under subsection (j) or paragraph (6)(A)"."

SECTION 2. COMPLIANCE BY CONTRACTORS AND OTHER AGENTS WITH CONFIDENTIALITY SAFEGUARDS.—

(a) Section 6103(p) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) DISCLOSURE TO CONTRACTORS AND OTHER AGENTS. –

Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, no return or return information shall be disclosed to a contractor or other agent of a Federal, State, or local agency unless such agency, to the satisfaction of the Secretary—

"(i) has requirements in effect which require each such contractor or other agent that would have access to returns or return information to provide safeguards (within the meaning of paragraph (4)) to protect the confidentiality of such returns or return information,

"(ii) agrees to conduct a regular, on-site review (mid-point review in the case of contracts of less than 1 year in duration) of each contractor or other agent to determine compliance with such requirements,

"(iii) submits the findings of the most recent review conducted under clause (ii) to the Secretary as part of the report required by paragraph (4)(E), and

"(iv) certifies to the Secretary for the most recent annual period that such contractor or other agent is in compliance with all such requirements. Such certification shall be signed by the head of the agency or his or her delegate.

The certification required by clause (iv) shall include the name and address of each agent, a description of the contract or agreement with the agent, and the duration of such contract or agreement. The requirements of this paragraph shall not apply to disclosures pursuant to subsection (n) for purposes of Federal tax administration.".

SECTION 3. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

(a) Section 7213(a)(2) of Title 26 is amended by inserting "(j) [insert final paragraph numbers for Commerce (1), BLS (2), sharing (3), Agriculture (7), FRB (10)]," between "(7)(A)(ii)," and "(l)(6)" .

I agree - but isn't your proposal supposed to answer both? aren't you anticipating the compensation covering at least some of the people anticipated to be covered by Harkin's bill? the two are intertwined and I think it will be somewhat difficult to separate them.

Note that it is important to keep in mind that we have 2 separate issues here: (i) frozen-assets issue and (ii) government compensation for victims of terrorism (i.e., 9/11 fund with offsets and waiver or instead the flat 250K payment). The fact that the Senator may be dug in on the first issue does not answer the second issue.

FYI - thought you guys might want to have a copy of this stuff.
Brett, I know you now have Terrorism Insurance on your plate too - we will have so much fun over the next week! (note sarcasm).
Feinstein will not be sympathetic on the frozen assets issue - she is in fact a cosponsor of the proposal and has been for years, her counsel David Hantman gave me an earful as to how "on board" she is with the idea of giving victims access
to frozen assets.
Also - I have received the letter from State on the statement of principles.

The Harkin-Allen-Smith Bill - S. 2134

Summary: The Terrorism Victim's Access to Compensation Act of 2002 will allow victims of terrorism to recover damages from the assets of terrorists and the national governments of foreign countries that sponsor terrorism. The central purpose of this bipartisan legislation is to make sure that victims of terrorism can obtain justice and that those who commit or support acts of terrorism are held accountable. The bill will allow people who possess final judgments from U.S. courts against terrorist states to have their judgments paid from blocked terrorist assets.

Background: In 1996, Former President Clinton explicitly requested from Congress a bill that would allow victims of terrorism to receive compensation from blocked assets held in the United States. Later that same year, Congress passed the Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act. That Act, in Section 221, expressly amended the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA) to allow private American victims of terrorism to seek justice through the federal courts against foreign terrorist governments. Between the time the amendment to the FSIA was passed and the first cases were finalized, the executive branch bureaucracy essentially changed its position and began opposing any payments from blocked assets.

Therefore, Congress amended the FSIA again in 1998 and 2000 to reinforce the intent of the law – to make blocked assets available to victims of terrorism to satisfy their FSIA judgments. The 1998 amendment to the FSIA stated explicitly that any property of a terrorist state that was frozen could be subject to execution or attachment in aid of a judgment against that state pursuant to the FSIA. Unfortunately, in Presidential Determination 99-1, Former President Clinton exercised a blanket waiver of this provision.

At the end of 2000, Congress enacted legislation it hoped would finally settle the legislative debate on the use of blocked assets for anti-terrorism cases. In section 2002 of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Congress underscored the President's authority to pay victims from blocked assets, established a precedent group of victims who received funds directly from blocked assets, as well as assets linked to blocked assets, and clearly endorsed the policy of using blocked assets to impose a cost on terrorism and provide some justice to victims. In addition, the 2000 law clarified the waiver in the 1998 legislation in which Congress clearly intended for the President to exercise the waiver on a case-by-case and asset-by-asset basis only. In Presidential Determination 2001-03, however, President Clinton again exercised a broad waiver.

Last year, Congress passed legislation directing the Bush Administration to come up with a plan of action regarding this issue no later than February, 2002. To date, the Bush Administration has not done so. This has forced the Congress to act to help compensate victims of terrorism. In addition, through this legislation, Congress will make it clear that Congress is committed to stand beside victims of terrorism to make sure that they obtain the justice to which they are entitled.

1-Page Summary of Most Likely Questions and Recommended Answers

- What countries has the State Department identified as state sponsors of terrorism?

  Answer: Iran, Iraq, Libya, Syria, Sudan, North Korea, and Cuba

- If your bill is enacted soon, how many American victims of terrorism will receive compensation from the blocked assets and how much?

  Answer: You are missing the point. This bill is all about enabling American victims of terrorism to attain justice and making those who sponsor and commit acts of terrorism pay the court-ordered judgments first and foremost — not American taxpayers. Besides, I can't give you a dollar amount or head count because there is no way of knowing, given the number and complexity of cases making their way through our federal courts.

- Doesn't your bill take away a key foreign policy tool the President needs and forfeits the leverage that comes from keeping the assets blocked , thus giving the USG means of influencing and moderating the behavior of these state sponsors of terrorism?

  Answer: It makes much more sense to me that our country can deter future terrorist attacks by making certain that we make the state sponsors of terrorism pay the Americans victims of their past attacks. I can't think of one example where any of the current state sponsors of terrorism has stopped because of the threat that we might do something with their blocked assets.

- Waiver authority in the bill for the President to exercise any discetion?

  Answer: There a very narrow waiver to allow the President to keep a very small amount of blocked assets to cover the costs of any of these governments to operate an Embassy or consulate in the U.S. pursuant to the Vienna Protocols.

- Won't your bill prompt a so-called "race-to-the courthouse" with more American victims of terrorism rushing to file new lawsuits or jockeying to move their existing ones to the head of the line, so to speak, before all of the newly-available blocked assets are used up?

  Answer: No. Cases brought by victims of terrorism will continue to make their way through the federal courts in the customary way that torts and other cases are handled. This is not about picking "winners and losers" among the victims who want to pursue justice in the federal courts.

- How soon do you expect action on this bill and what legislative vehicles are available to get it enacted?

  Answer: We are going to leave no stone unturned to get this bill enacted this session and to make these badly-needed improvements in our multi-faceted war on terrorism. For example, the Senate will be taking upon the FY 2002 Supplemental Appropriations Bill which provides tens of billions of additional funds to wage the on-going military campaign against terrorism. Why shouldn't we include this measure in that legislative package and, in so doing, make certain that the sponsors of international terrorism actually have to pay their American victims from at least $3.7 billion of their money currently under the control of the U.S. Treasury.

- Couldn't your bill boomerang and come back to haunt U.S. companies abroad and other U.S. interests overseas?

  Answer: Neither the U.S. Government or U.S. companies abroad are involved in state-sponsored terrorism.

- Do any other countries do what you are proposing or is there any existing international precedent for using blocked assets this way?

STATEMENT OF U.S. SENATOR TOM HARKIN TO ACCOMPANY INTRODUCTION OF THE TERRORISM VICTIM'S ACCESS TO COMPENSATION ACT OF 2002

April 16, 2002

MR. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am very pleased to be joined by my Republican colleague, U.S. Senator George Allen of Virginia , in introducing The Terrorism Victim's Access to Compensation Act of 2002. U.S. Senators Bob Smith of New Hampshire, Schumer, Nickles, Clinton, Warner, Mikulski, Burns, and Craig are also original co-sponsors of this much-needed, bipartisan legislation.

The war against terrorism must be fought and won on multiple fronts. And we cannot forget that terrorist acts are ultimately stories of human tragedy. The dedicated, professional woman from Iowa, Kathryn Koob, seeking to build cross-cultural ties between the Iranian people and the American people only to be held captive for 444 days in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The teenage boy from Iowa, Taleb Subh, visiting family in Kuwait, terrorized by Saddam Hussein at the outbreak of the Persian Gulf War. The U.S. aid worker from Virginia, Charles Hegna, tortured and killed in 1984 by Iranian-backed hijackers in order "to punish" the United States. These are only a few of the people we know; Americans in all fifty states have suffered. What do we say to these families, the wives, mothers and fathers, sons and daughters?

We believe that those who sponsor as well as those who commit these inhumane acts must pay a price. In 1996, the Congress passed a significant law without partisan divide, and with the support of the U.S. State Department. This law allows Americans to pursue justice in U.S. federal courts. The idea behind this law is to make the terrorists and their sponsors pay an immediate price for attacks against Americans abroad. For example, the money of foreign sponsors of terrorism and their agents that we hold here in the United States could be used to compensate innocent Americans who are victimized by their attacks for their pain, suffering and losses. Make the bad guys pay.

This law only applies to "terrorist states", currently a list of seven foreign governments officially designated as state sponsors of terrorism (i.e. Iran, Iraq, Libya, Syria, Sudan, North Korea, and Cuba). It is those state sponsors of international terrorism, not the American taxpayer, who must be compelled to pay these costs first and foremost.

Currently, the U.S. Treasury Department lawfully controls at least $3.7 billion in blocked or frozen assets of these seven state sponsors of terrorism. But officials of the U.S. Treasury and State Departments oppose using these funds to compensate American victims of terrorism who have brought lawsuits in federal courts, won their cases on the merits, and secured court-ordered judgments and compensation awards against the rogue governments that are responsible for the attacks upon them and their families. To summarize, these American victims have been encouraged to pursue justice in U.S. federal courts, have complied with existing U.S. law, but have been denied what little justice they were encouraged to pursue. Unelected bureaucrats, instead, want American taxpayers apparently to foot the bill for what could amount to hundreds of millions of dollars. In fact, in the pending case involving the 53 Americans taken hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Iran in 1979 and held in captivity for 444 days and their families, U.S. Justice and State Department attorneys have gone into federal court in recent months to have their lawsuit dismissed in its entirety, thus de facto siding with the Government of Iran.

This policy is wrong-headed and counterproductive for at least three reasons.

First, paying American victims of terrorism from the blocked and frozen assets of these rogue governments and their agents will really punish and impose a heavy cost on those aiding and abetting the terrorists; this tougher policy will provide a new, powerful disincentive for any foreign government to continue sponsoring terrorist attacks on Americans, while also discouraging any regimes tempted to get into the ugly business of sponsoring future terrorist attacks.

Second, making the state sponsors actually lose billions of dollars will more effectively deter future acts of terrorism than keeping their assets blocked or frozen in perpetuity in pursuit of the delusion that long-standing, undemocratic, brutish governments like those in Iran and Iraq can be moderated.

Third, the American wives, husbands, sons, and daughters will have a sense of justice --- they will have the public condemnation by the U.S. Government and statement of guilt, but they will have also made those terrorists responsible for the attacks and their sponsors pay a price.

In his last days in office, Former President Clinton signed a law endorsing a policy of paying American victims of terrorism from blocked assets, while simultaneously signing a waiver of the means to make this policy work. But the Bush Administration hasn't registered an opinion yet on this crucial test of our nation's resolve to fight state-sponsored terrorism. That is why we are pushing bipartisan legislation to establish two new policy cornerstones in our nation's war against terrorism. First, we seek to require that compensation be paid from the blocked and frozen assets of the state sponsors of terrorism in cases where American victims of terrorism secure a final judgment in our federal courts and are awarded compensation accordingly. Second, we will provide a level playing field for all American victims of state-sponsored terrorism who are pursuing redress by providing equal access to our federal courts.

American victims of state-sponsored terrorism deserve and want to be compensated for their losses from those who perpetrated the attacks upon them. The Congress should clear the way for them to get some satisfaction of court-ordered judgments and, in so doing, deter future acts of state-sponsored terrorism against innocent Americans.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

Attached is the McConnell amendment to terrorism insurance, plus a brief one-pager. The talking points should be self-evident, but it is important to emphasize that these are not traditional suits between a sympathetic plaintiff
v. big business defendant. These are victim v. victim lawsuits where we the Ds seek to punish American defendants for the actions of the terrorists.
Plus, our criminal liability exception to the punitives ban answers all the concerns that we should not let criminal-type conduct go unpunished.

Let me know if you have questions, and also let me know if your boss wants
to make a brief floor statement in support. My direct is 4-8292 or I'll be on the floor.

SEC. 10. PROCEDURES FOR CIVIL ACTIONS.

(a) FEDERAL CAUSE OF ACTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There shall exist a Federal cause of action for claims arising out of or resulting from an act of terrorism, which shall be the exclusive cause of action and remedy for such claims, except as provided in subsection (f).

(2) PREEMPTION OF STATE ACTIONS.—All State causes of action of any kind for claims arising out of or resulting from an act of terrorism that are otherwise available under State law, are hereby preempted, except as provided in subsection (f).

(b) GOVERNING LAW.—The substantive law for decision in an action described in subsection (a)(1) shall be derived from the law, including applicable choice of law principles, of the State in which the act of terrorism giving rise to the action occurred, except to the extent that—

(1) the law, including choice of law principles, of another State is determined to be applicable to the action by the district court hearing the action; or

(2) otherwise applicable State law (including that determined under paragraph (1), is inconsistent with or otherwise preempted by Federal law.

(c) FEDERAL JURISDICTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, not later than 90 days after the date of the occurrence of an act of terrorism, the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation shall assign a single Federal district court to conduct pretrial and trial proceedings in all pending and future civil actions for claims arising out of or resulting from that act of terrorism.

(2) SELECTION CRITERIA.—The Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation shall select and assign the district court under paragraph (1) based on the convenience of the parties and the just and efficient conduct of the proceedings.

(3) JURISDICTION.—The district court assigned by the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction over all actions under paragraph (1). For purposes of personal jurisdiction, the district court assigned by the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation shall be deemed to sit in all judicial districts in the United States.

(4) TRANSFER OF CASES FILED IN OTHER FEDERAL COURTS.—Any civil action for claims arising out of or resulting from an act of terrorism that is filed in a Federal district court other than the Federal district court assigned by the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation under paragraph (1) shall be transferred to the Federal district court so assigned.

(5) REMOVAL OF CASES FILED IN STATE COURTS.—Any civil action for claims arising out of or resulting from an act of terrorism that is filed in a State court shall be removable to the Federal district court assigned by the Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation under paragraph (1).

(d) APPROVAL OF SETTLEMENTS.—Any settlement between the parties of a civil action described in this section for claims arising out of or resulting from an act of terrorism shall be subject to prior approval by the Secretary after consultation by the Secretary with the Attorney General.

(e) LIMITATION ON DAMAGES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Punitive or exemplary damages shall not be available for any losses in any action described in subsection (a)(1), including any settlement described in subsection (d), except where—

(A) punitive or exemplary damages are permitted by applicable State law; and

(B) the harm to the plaintiff was caused by a criminal act or course of conduct for which the defendant was convicted under Federal or State criminal law, including a conviction based on a guilty pea or plea of nolo contendere.

(2) PROTECTION OF TAXPAYER FUNDS.—Any amounts awarded in, or granted in settlement of, an action described in subsection (a)(1) that are attributable to punitive or exemplary damages allowable under paragraph (1) of this subsection shall not count as insured losses for purposes of this Act.

(f) CLAIMS AGAINST TERRORISTS.—Nothing in this section shall in any way be construed to limit the ability of any plaintiff to seek any form of recovery from any person, government, or other entity that was a participant in, or aider and abettor of, any act of terrorism.

(g) EFFECTIVE PERIOD.—This section shall apply only to actions described in subsection (a)(1) arising out of or resulting from acts of terrorism that occur during the effective period of the Program, including any applicable extension period.

I agree - but isn't your proposal supposed to answer both? aren't you anticipating the compensation covering at least some of the people anticipated to be covered by Harkin's bill? the two are intertwined and I think it will be somewhat difficult to separate them.

Note that it is important to keep in mind that we have 2 separate issues here: (i) frozen-assets issue and (ii) government compensation for victims of terrorism (i.e., 9/11 fund with offsets and waiver or instead the flat 250K payment). The fact that the Senator may be dug in on the first issue does not answer the second issue.

FYI - thought you guys might want to have a copy of this stuff.
Brett, I know you now have Terrorism Insurance on your plate too - we will have so much fun over the next week! (note sarcasm).
Feinstein will not be sympathetic on the frozen assets issue - she is in fact a cosponsor of the proposal and has been for years, her counsel David Hantman gave me an earful as to how "on board" she is with the idea of giving victims access
to frozen assets.
Also - I have received the letter from State on the statement of principles.

The Harkin-Allen-Smith Bill - S. 2134

Summary: The Terrorism Victim's Access to Compensation Act of 2002 will allow victims of terrorism to recover damages from the assets of terrorists and the national governments of foreign countries that sponsor terrorism. The central purpose of this bipartisan legislation is to make sure that victims of terrorism can obtain justice and that those who commit or support acts of terrorism are held accountable. The bill will allow people who possess final judgments from U.S. courts against terrorist states to have their judgments paid from blocked terrorist assets.

Background: In 1996, Former President Clinton explicitly requested from Congress a bill that would allow victims of terrorism to receive compensation from blocked assets held in the United States. Later that same year, Congress passed the Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act. That Act, in Section 221, expressly amended the Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA) to allow private American victims of terrorism to seek justice through the federal courts against foreign terrorist governments. Between the time the amendment to the FSIA was passed and the first cases were finalized, the executive branch bureaucracy essentially changed its position and began opposing any payments from blocked assets.

Therefore, Congress amended the FSIA again in 1998 and 2000 to reinforce the intent of the law – to make blocked assets available to victims of terrorism to satisfy their FSIA judgments. The 1998 amendment to the FSIA stated explicitly that any property of a terrorist state that was frozen could be subject to execution or attachment in aid of a judgment against that state pursuant to the FSIA. Unfortunately, in Presidential Determination 99-1, Former President Clinton exercised a blanket waiver of this provision.

At the end of 2000, Congress enacted legislation it hoped would finally settle the legislative debate on the use of blocked assets for anti-terrorism cases. In section 2002 of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Congress underscored the President's authority to pay victims from blocked assets, established a precedent group of victims who received funds directly from blocked assets, as well as assets linked to blocked assets, and clearly endorsed the policy of using blocked assets to impose a cost on terrorism and provide some justice to victims. In addition, the 2000 law clarified the waiver in the 1998 legislation in which Congress clearly intended for the President to exercise the waiver on a case-by-case and asset-by-asset basis only. In Presidential Determination 2001-03, however, President Clinton again exercised a broad waiver.

Last year, Congress passed legislation directing the Bush Administration to come up with a plan of action regarding this issue no later than February, 2002. To date, the Bush Administration has not done so. This has forced the Congress to act to help compensate victims of terrorism. In addition, through this legislation, Congress will make it clear that Congress is committed to stand beside victims of terrorism to make sure that they obtain the justice to which they are entitled.

1-Page Summary of Most Likely Questions and Recommended Answers

- What countries has the State Department identified as state sponsors of terrorism?

  Answer: Iran, Iraq, Libya, Syria, Sudan, North Korea, and Cuba

- If your bill is enacted soon, how many American victims of terrorism will receive compensation from the blocked assets and how much?

  Answer: You are missing the point. This bill is all about enabling American victims of terrorism to attain justice and making those who sponsor and commit acts of terrorism pay the court-ordered judgments first and foremost — not American taxpayers. Besides, I can't give you a dollar amount or head count because there is no way of knowing, given the number and complexity of cases making their way through our federal courts.

- Doesn't your bill take away a key foreign policy tool the President needs and forfeits the leverage that comes from keeping the assets blocked , thus giving the USG means of influencing and moderating the behavior of these state sponsors of terrorism?

  Answer: It makes much more sense to me that our country can deter future terrorist attacks by making certain that we make the state sponsors of terrorism pay the Americans victims of their past attacks. I can't think of one example where any of the current state sponsors of terrorism has stopped because of the threat that we might do something with their blocked assets.

- Waiver authority in the bill for the President to exercise any discetion?

  Answer: There a very narrow waiver to allow the President to keep a very small amount of blocked assets to cover the costs of any of these governments to operate an Embassy or consulate in the U.S. pursuant to the Vienna Protocols.

- Won't your bill prompt a so-called "race-to-the courthouse" with more American victims of terrorism rushing to file new lawsuits or jockeying to move their existing ones to the head of the line, so to speak, before all of the newly-available blocked assets are used up?

  Answer: No. Cases brought by victims of terrorism will continue to make their way through the federal courts in the customary way that torts and other cases are handled. This is not about picking "winners and losers" among the victims who want to pursue justice in the federal courts.

- How soon do you expect action on this bill and what legislative vehicles are available to get it enacted?

  Answer: We are going to leave no stone unturned to get this bill enacted this session and to make these badly-needed improvements in our multi-faceted war on terrorism. For example, the Senate will be taking upon the FY 2002 Supplemental Appropriations Bill which provides tens of billions of additional funds to wage the on-going military campaign against terrorism. Why shouldn't we include this measure in that legislative package and, in so doing, make certain that the sponsors of international terrorism actually have to pay their American victims from at least $3.7 billion of their money currently under the control of the U.S. Treasury.

- Couldn't your bill boomerang and come back to haunt U.S. companies abroad and other U.S. interests overseas?

  Answer: Neither the U.S. Government or U.S. companies abroad are involved in state-sponsored terrorism.

- Do any other countries do what you are proposing or is there any existing international precedent for using blocked assets this way?

STATEMENT OF U.S. SENATOR TOM HARKIN TO ACCOMPANY INTRODUCTION OF THE TERRORISM VICTIM'S ACCESS TO COMPENSATION ACT OF 2002

April 16, 2002

MR. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am very pleased to be joined by my Republican colleague, U.S. Senator George Allen of Virginia , in introducing The Terrorism Victim's Access to Compensation Act of 2002. U.S. Senators Bob Smith of New Hampshire, Schumer, Nickles, Clinton, Warner, Mikulski, Burns, and Craig are also original co-sponsors of this much-needed, bipartisan legislation.

The war against terrorism must be fought and won on multiple fronts. And we cannot forget that terrorist acts are ultimately stories of human tragedy. The dedicated, professional woman from Iowa, Kathryn Koob, seeking to build cross-cultural ties between the Iranian people and the American people only to be held captive for 444 days in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The teenage boy from Iowa, Taleb Subh, visiting family in Kuwait, terrorized by Saddam Hussein at the outbreak of the Persian Gulf War. The U.S. aid worker from Virginia, Charles Hegna, tortured and killed in 1984 by Iranian-backed hijackers in order "to punish" the United States. These are only a few of the people we know; Americans in all fifty states have suffered. What do we say to these families, the wives, mothers and fathers, sons and daughters?

We believe that those who sponsor as well as those who commit these inhumane acts must pay a price. In 1996, the Congress passed a significant law without partisan divide, and with the support of the U.S. State Department. This law allows Americans to pursue justice in U.S. federal courts. The idea behind this law is to make the terrorists and their sponsors pay an immediate price for attacks against Americans abroad. For example, the money of foreign sponsors of terrorism and their agents that we hold here in the United States could be used to compensate innocent Americans who are victimized by their attacks for their pain, suffering and losses. Make the bad guys pay.

This law only applies to "terrorist states", currently a list of seven foreign governments officially designated as state sponsors of terrorism (i.e. Iran, Iraq, Libya, Syria, Sudan, North Korea, and Cuba). It is those state sponsors of international terrorism, not the American taxpayer, who must be compelled to pay these costs first and foremost.

Currently, the U.S. Treasury Department lawfully controls at least $3.7 billion in blocked or frozen assets of these seven state sponsors of terrorism. But officials of the U.S. Treasury and State Departments oppose using these funds to compensate American victims of terrorism who have brought lawsuits in federal courts, won their cases on the merits, and secured court-ordered judgments and compensation awards against the rogue governments that are responsible for the attacks upon them and their families. To summarize, these American victims have been encouraged to pursue justice in U.S. federal courts, have complied with existing U.S. law, but have been denied what little justice they were encouraged to pursue. Unelected bureaucrats, instead, want American taxpayers apparently to foot the bill for what could amount to hundreds of millions of dollars. In fact, in the pending case involving the 53 Americans taken hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Iran in 1979 and held in captivity for 444 days and their families, U.S. Justice and State Department attorneys have gone into federal court in recent months to have their lawsuit dismissed in its entirety, thus de facto siding with the Government of Iran.

This policy is wrong-headed and counterproductive for at least three reasons.

First, paying American victims of terrorism from the blocked and frozen assets of these rogue governments and their agents will really punish and impose a heavy cost on those aiding and abetting the terrorists; this tougher policy will provide a new, powerful disincentive for any foreign government to continue sponsoring terrorist attacks on Americans, while also discouraging any regimes tempted to get into the ugly business of sponsoring future terrorist attacks.

Second, making the state sponsors actually lose billions of dollars will more effectively deter future acts of terrorism than keeping their assets blocked or frozen in perpetuity in pursuit of the delusion that long-standing, undemocratic, brutish governments like those in Iran and Iraq can be moderated.

Third, the American wives, husbands, sons, and daughters will have a sense of justice --- they will have the public condemnation by the U.S. Government and statement of guilt, but they will have also made those terrorists responsible for the attacks and their sponsors pay a price.

In his last days in office, Former President Clinton signed a law endorsing a policy of paying American victims of terrorism from blocked assets, while simultaneously signing a waiver of the means to make this policy work. But the Bush Administration hasn't registered an opinion yet on this crucial test of our nation's resolve to fight state-sponsored terrorism. That is why we are pushing bipartisan legislation to establish two new policy cornerstones in our nation's war against terrorism. First, we seek to require that compensation be paid from the blocked and frozen assets of the state sponsors of terrorism in cases where American victims of terrorism secure a final judgment in our federal courts and are awarded compensation accordingly. Second, we will provide a level playing field for all American victims of state-sponsored terrorism who are pursuing redress by providing equal access to our federal courts.

American victims of state-sponsored terrorism deserve and want to be compensated for their losses from those who perpetrated the attacks upon them. The Congress should clear the way for them to get some satisfaction of court-ordered judgments and, in so doing, deter future acts of state-sponsored terrorism against innocent Americans.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the Record.

HR 1081, Accountability for Presidential Gifts Act

June 18, 2002

Chairman Horn, Congresswoman Schakowsky, and members of the Subcommittee, I am John Carlin, Archivist of the United States and I thank you for the opportunity to share the views of the National Archives and Records Administration on HR 1081, Accountability for Presidential Gifts Act. Before proceeding Mr. Chairman, I want to take a moment to thank you for all of the work that you have done over the years to serve scholarship and support the foundation of freedom that we preserve and serve everyday from the National Archives. There are few in public service that understand our mission from the perspective of both the scholar and the public servant and we would put you first in that category. We wish you the best as you go on to other challenges and look forward to your transition from being a custodian of our services to being a customer of our services.

We are here today to discuss presidential gift legislation and I would like to take just a moment to reflect on the importance of the Presidential gift collections. The gifts that are on deposit and display in the Presidential Libraries add to the public's understanding of the President and the Presidency. They document in a way that the records cannot the stages of a President's life, the important policy decisions of his Presidential administration, various world and national events, and topics of historical or current interest. We approach this subject from the perspective of the agency that can attest to the ongoing worth and historical significance of these collections.

As to HR 1081, Mr. Chairman, we are supportive of the goals of this legislation and flattered that Mr. Ose and his staff recognize the important mission carried out by the National Archives for the American people. Any archives has to consider first and foremost the accountability and authenticity of what it preserves and makes available for research. We share that ideal of integrity with all of the archives of the world and are carrying it out on a daily basis. However, one way we protect that accountability and integrity is to argue against expansion of our mission into areas that are the proper purview of others, that we would argue are currently being handled in a proper and appropriate manner.

Mr. Chairman, we have made no secret of the fact that while supportive of the goals of this legislation and appreciative of your trust in our ability to carry them out, the National Archives and Records Administration feels that the solution goes beyond what is necessary and that the improvements made in the current system have already corrected the deficiencies previously identified. Speaking only for myself, Mr. Chairman, in the spirit of the integrity that I previously claimed for my institution, some of the improvements that I have implemented in this system have come about due to Mr. Ose's attention to this matter and my agreement that incremental change was in order. It is now the degree of additional change upon which I respectfully disagree and the question as to whether legislation is the way to improve these types of administrative functions of the Executive branch.

I'd like to outline our four principal concerns with the approach taken in the proposed legislation and submit for the record a summary of the current system that we administer in providing courtesy gift and records storage for the White House.

First of all, HR 1081 would require the Archivist of the United States to staff or supervise functions wholly duplicative of those performed by the current White House Gift Office and the National Park Service. The Act would require the Archivist to "maintain a current inventory of all Presidential gifts". While the National Archives maintains an inventory of gifts deposited by the White House with NARA for courtesy storage, the only way that the National Archives could ensure the accuracy of the required inventory of all Presidential gifts would be to staff the entire chain of custody from receipt to ultimate disposal. In other words, the Archivist would be required to completely duplicate the functions of the current White House Gift Office (and possibly both the National Park Service and GSA units as well, depending on your interpretation of the legislation). This approach would seem neither prudent not practical.

Secondly, as currently drafted, HR 1081, does not address the existing framework of controlling statutes and regulations and the distinctions among personal gifts to the President, official gifts accepted on behalf of the American people and gifts received by the National Park Service for the permanent White House Collection. This complex system of controlling laws, while partially based on the appraised value of the gift, or the intent of the donor, also recognizes that in many cases it is the decision of the President that determines the route and final disposition of the gift. As a practical matter, the administration of such a system should remain in the Executive Office of the President and under the current delegations of authority.

Thirdly, the National Archives believes that the procedures and management controls associated with our current responsibilities for White House gifts are sufficient and do not require legislative change. Over the last several years, NARA has undergone an independent Inspector General review of our gifts operation, updated and formalized written procedures for the National Archives courtesy storage unit, added new staff professionals to ensure proper handling and preservation of gifts in our custody, and regularly reviewed our management controls.

Finally, we would question whether the central accountability problem assumed in the legislation exists today. It has been our experience that the current administration is paying careful attention to management controls associated with such functions and that proper procedures are currently in place to mitigate risk of recurrence. However, the real question is the confidence of the current administration that the procedures that they have in place are sufficient to carry out the law in an effective and efficient manner. On that we defer to the Executive Office of the President.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to submit as an addendum to my testimony a summary of the procedures currently in place at NARA to administer the gifts in courtesy storage for the White House. I would be happy to respond to any questions at the appropriate time.

Addendum

Procedures for Handling the Presidential Gift Collection by the National Archives and Records Administration

The Presidential Gift Collection

Every four to eight years with the change of each Presidential administration, National Archives and Records Administration (NARA) assumes the responsibility of providing courtesy storage for a new collection of records and gifts. Almost immediately, the President and his family begin to receive gifts from around the world. These gifts are given by leaders of nations, foreign officials, and private citizens alike.

For over thirty years, the National Archives has provided storage and care for incumbent Presidential gifts. Beginning in 1984, a new program for caring for Presidential gifts was instituted whereby NARA would transfer Presidential gifts on a regular basis from the White House Gift Office to the National Archives building to be preserved, wrapped and packaged for eventual shipment to the future Presidential project/library. This courtesy storage program for incumbent Presidential gifts remains in effect today, although it has been modified and improved over the years. It not only assists the President, but it also facilitates NARA in ensuring the preservation in one institution of both the records of the President and the gifts that he received, further adding to the understanding of the President, the Presidency, and the cultural and historical times of his administration.

NARA's Presidential Materials Staff (NLMS) provides courtesy storage for the records and historical materials created or received by the incumbent Presidential Administration. These materials are held for storage, servicing and initial processing pending eventual transfer to a Presidential library or Presidential materials project at the end of each administration. In the mean time, these materials remain fully available for recall by the incumbent Administration. By holding these materials at the National Archives facility, NLMS can establish basic physical and intellectual control over the records and historical materials and also ensure proper, curatorial standards for the preservation and security of these items. Throughout the courtesy storage phase of their life cycle, the records generated by the White House remain the key archival documentation on all materials in courtesy storage, with the understanding that these records will be transferred to NARA at the end of the administration. Any additional logs or files created by NARA are considered an adjunct to these records, and are based on information provided (volunteered) by the White House, and are created with the sole purpose of assisting with the control, tracking and proper care of the materials at hand.

White House Gift Office Handling of Presidential Gifts

The White House Gift Office (WHGO), which is part of the White House Correspondence Office, records, tracks, and appraises Presidential gifts, responds to donors, and assists in the requisite reporting requirements. Each gift, some containing multiple parts, is given a unique identification number used by the White House and NARA to track gifts. Each gift is described by the WHGO for correspondence purposes, and identified as a Foreign Official gift or a Domestic gift (from a US or foreign private citizen). This information is managed by the WHGO through both paper files and its own electronic database. The WHGO also decides the disposition of Presidential gifts, which may include: retention by the President, donation to charity, return to donor, destruction or retention by NARA on courtesy storage for eventual deposit in the Presidential Library.

NLMS Procedures for Presidential Gifts on Courtesy Storage

NLMS Gift Pickups

At the White House Gift Office's request, the Presidential Materials Staff transfers Presidential gifts from the White House Gift Office to the Archives 1 building. Gift pickups are scheduled on a weekly basis, are assigned a sequential number by NLMS and logged in a trip log together with the date of the pickup and signatures of each participating NLMS staff.

NLMS receives two copies of each Gift Record with each gift: one pink, one green (the 'green sheet'). While in the WHGO, the NLMS staff reviews the paperwork to ensure that each object is clearly described, that all parts are accounted for, that the gift has been assigned a value by the White House Gift Office, and is designated for disposition with NARA. If the NLMS staff finds any inconsistencies, they consult with WHGO staff who make necessary corrections and provide a new set of paperwork while NLMS is on site at the Gift Office. The pink copy of the Gift Record is packed along with each gift into one of several transport bins. The green sheet is stamped and annotated by the NARA staff with the trip number, date and staff initials. The WHGO staff retains the green sheets long enough to enter trip numbers into their database, usually 48 hours or less. When this is completed, the green sheets are picked up by NARA and maintained as Presidential Records. Meanwhile, the bins are locked and transported back to Archives and stored in a secure holding vault.

Gift Processing At NARA

At NARA, the NLMS staff makes an additional copy set of the green sheets for security purposes. This procedure dates to early in the current Bush administration. NLMS staff re-unites the green sheets with each gift. As an added precaution, certain gifts are photographed including: foreign official; high-value domestic gifts (appraised value over $1,000); and any gifts bearing a likeness of the President. The bulk of the gifts are immediately packed for preservation purposes, then containerized with the pink sheet for intellectual control. The green sheets are collected together by box number for data entry. After data entry, the green sheets are annotated with the appropriate box number and data entry date. Green sheets are filed as a series in box number order, and maintained in a secure area with limited access. Access to the database is also restricted.

The NLMS Gift Database

The NLMS Gift database was created near the beginning of the Clinton administration to facilitate retrieval of gifts by NLMS for the WHGO and improved on the earlier practice of manually searching the paper files. This early database included the Gift ID, brief description, trip number, box number, and donor. It also tagged gifts that had photographic records. It was divided into several different tables to reflect the general divisions in collection storage: Foreign Head of State gifts, Domestic gifts, Domestic book and Audiovisual gifts and Staff gifts, with a separate table recording recalls.

In 1997, the Presidential Materials Staff was created as part of the Office of Presidential Libraries and included a museum component. After a professional curatorial staff was added, the level of detail of the gift database expanded, with hopes that it might become a more comprehensive tool for intellectual control, physical control and security. Also, the curatorial staff hoped to facilitate future use by the Curator, exhibit designers and other researchers once the materials were transferred to the future Presidential Materials Project or Presidential Library. Database improvements included breaking out gift records so that gifts with many parts could receive separate description and tracking for each part. Fields were also added to the general tables for class and object designations, for the donor's city and state/country, for whom the gift was intended, and for inventory codes. At this point, further electronic modifications were made to track recalls and returns. It is this database system that is currently used to track the Presidential gifts of George W. Bush.

Currently, NLMS is implementing a state-of-the-art software program tailored to the management of museum collections. Improvements include: the accumulation of a complete location history for each gift as a permanent part of its record; extensive features for creating and managing condition and loan files; and the potential of incorporating digital images. This software management tool is being implemented throughout the Presidential Library system.

Unpacked gifts and high value gifts

Historically, the packing of certain gifts has been delayed because of gifts' size, fragility or preservation needs. A new procedure has been implemented that allows for tracking of these unpacked gifts by using a special location code. In addition, very high value gifts are stored in a locked cabinet, documented immediately and assigned a special location code. Both unpacked gifts and high value gifts are inventoried every six months.

Gift Recalls

Requests for recalls by the incumbent President are made in writing through the WHGO. The WHGO faxes their request to NARA using a standardized recall request sheet created by NLMS.

Once the items are located, they are returned to the WHGO along with the pink copy of the paperwork. Beginning in June 2002, NLMS staff delivering the gift and WHGO staff receiving it both sign the recall request sheet and note the date and time of delivery. This change more fully documents the recall process and the current location of the gift. The recall request along with the green sheet for each recalled gift is maintained by NLMS in a permanent chronological file. If recalled gifts are returned to NARA, they are accompanied by fresh paperwork, but retain their original gift ID number.

The recalls are tracked in multiple tables within the gift database to ensure comprehensive intellectual and physical control. The recall table includes fields for the gift ID, the recall date, a brief description, and the return date, should the item come back to NARA. An inventory field in the general gift tables is used to code a particular gift or gift part as recalled. For any gifts or gift parts not yet in the database at the time of recall, a complete record is created in the general tables at that time. In order to track returns, all new gift entries are checked at the outset of the data entry process against the recall table to reveal any returned items. The return date is entered into the recall table, and in the general tables, the flag is removed from the inventory field of the existing record and new box and trip numbers assigned. The original box and trip numbers are preserved on the original green sheet, in the recall file.

Summary of NLMS's newest procedures for the incumbent Presidential administration

1. Gift records are broken out into parts, and each part documented and tracked separately.
2. A security copy of green sheets for each trip is maintained undisturbed in secure storage.
3. Gifts for which packing will be delayed and very high value gifts are documented and tracked from early on in the gift processing sequence.
4. Recall returns, in addition to recalls, are fully documented, tracked and dated.
5. Recall deliveries, including the date, time and staff involved, are fully documented.
6. NLMS conducts regular inventories of gifts on courtesy storage. Unpacked and high value items are inventoried every 6 months. For the remaining collection, NLMS conducts an annual inventory of 5% of the collection, in accordance with NARA-wide standards for museum collections.

As most of you know, I begin my new job at the Commerce Department tomorrow morning. It has been a true honor and privilege working with each of you. At 301 Congress St and here at the White House, your commitment to the President and all that he stands for has been an inspiration. Stay in touch, and thanks for everything.

Warmest regards,

John

As most of you know, I begin my new job at the Commerce Department tomorrow morning. It has been a true honor and privilege working with each of you. At 301 Congress St and here at the White House, your commitment to the President and all that he stands for has been an inspiration. Stay in touch, and thanks for everything.

Warmest regards,

John

As most of you know, I begin my new job at the Commerce Department tomorrow morning. It has been a true honor and privilege working with each of you. At 301 Congress St and here at the White House, your commitment to the President and all that he stands for has been an inspiration. Stay in touch, and thanks for everything.

Warmest regards,

John

Attached are two photos of the IA candidate for Sec. of State, Mike Hartwig - one w/ the President and one w/ the Attorney General. I know it's fine to use the photo of the President, but is it also ok to use the photo w/ the Attorney General?

Hi Sarah,
What a small world that I'd run into you again after the 2000 campaign! I'm still hacking away on a few political clients on my own here in Iowa, but started my own Marketing company last year when I had my son. So I'm happy to be out of the agency and advertising world for now!

Can you please send me written permission to use the attached photos of Mike Hartwig with Pres Bush and Aschcroft for his campaign for Iowa Secretary of State?

I plan to go to print by Friday, and need to make sure it's ok to use these photos. So please advise ASAP. The plan is to use the photos on a 2-panel brochure, and potentially on his Web site.

Thanks Sarah,

I am not sure how clear we want to be, but this is my thought:

Members of Congress of both parties must ensure that the final bill provides fair and reasonable litigation procedures in cases arising out of terrorist attacks. An act of terrorism against the American people should never become an occasion for lawyers to file predatory lawsuits and seek punitive damages from Americans who themselves are the victims of terrorism. The availability of such damages in terrorism cases would result in inequitable relief for injured parties, a loss of jobs for American workers, and bankruptcies for American companies. I therefore will oppose any bill that does not protect Americans from predatory lawsuits and punitive damages in the wake of a terrorism attack against our people.

Thanks for signing up for the White House staff Habitat build on Saturday, June 29.

The following information will give you a few updates and ask you to confirm your participation by close of business on Tuesday, June 18. I need to get firm numbers to Habitat for t-shirts and for lunch. The Northern Virginia affiliate, with whom we will be working, provides lunch for volunteers on Saturdays.

Here is the draft schedule for the day.

8:15 a.m. volunteer check-in, liability waivers, breakfast
8:45 a.m. Welcome and introduction of home owner family
9:00 a.m Get to work
11:45 a.m. program and symbolic wall raising
12:15 p.m. lunch
12:45 p.m. back to work
4:00 p.m. clean-up and departure

The address of the build is 4133 Stevenson Street in Fairfax. For those of you who worked last year, this is the same townhouse development. You will have a chance to help in the final stages of the houses you began last year -- some fiinshing work inside, and some landscaping and fence building outside. Others will start to build the component parts for the next 9 houses.

Again, please let me know if you are still participating not later than June 18 COB. As you confirm your participation, please indicate whether or not you would be available to give a ride to someone who might be in need of transportation.

Once you confirm participation, I will follow-up with directions to the site.

I look forward to seeing you on the 29th and thanks for giving of your time -- and talents.

12:15 p.m. lunch
12:45 p.m. back to work
4:00 p.m. clean-up and departure

The address of the build is 4133 Stevenson Street in Fairfax. For those of you who worked last year, this is the same townhouse development. You will have a chance to help in the final stages of the houses you began last year -- some fiinshing work inside, and some landscaping and fence building outside. Others will start to build the component parts for the next 9 houses.

Again, please let me know if you are still participating not later than June 18 COB. As you confirm your participation, please indicate whether or not you would be available to give a ride to someone who might be in need of transportation.

Once you confirm participation, I will follow-up with directions to the site.

I look forward to seeing you on the 29th and thanks for giving of your time -- and talents.

Subject: RALLY RALLY RALLY RALLY

Please help me turn out folks for this rally!!! I truly need every person I ca n get to this event!! We also need signs.....really could use your help here!

At 12 noon on Thursday, June 20th, we will have a press conference/rally to support the President's judicial nominees. The theme: Judges Held Hostage, Da y
406. The location: on the lawn on the Senate side between Russell and the Capitol (Otherwise known as the "Upper Senate Park" -- not the swamp.....the swamp no longer exists....but right next to where the swamp was....)

To that end, I need:
-- Signs (Get creative, folks -- I'll send out some ideas as well)
-- People (Interns, friends, colleagues, relatives, kids, assorted fellow travelers -- bring as many folks as you possibly can.)
-- Press releases (Please get these to me by June 19th at noon so that I can include them in media packages.)

Thanks,

DEADLINE: 5:00 p.m. Wednesday, June 19, 2002
In accordance with OMB Circular A-19, OMB requests the views of your agency on the above subject before advising on its relationship to the program of the President. Please advise us if this item will affect direct spending or receipts for purposes of the "Pay-As-You-Go" provisions of Title XIII of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

COMMENTS: Attached for your review, please find a VA draft letter to SVAC Chairman Rockefeller regarding S. 2231. The bill would provide an incremental increase in amounts of educational assistance for survivors and dependents of veterans, and for other purposes. The letter expresses support for provisions to raise the chapter 35 education assistance allowance and Special Restorative Training rates, and increase the annual limit on funds available to compensate State Approval Agencies (SAAs). The letter expresses opposition to a provision to decrease the entitlement available to chapter 35 recipients from the current 45 months to 36 months because it provides inadequate time for the average recipient to complete a prescribed course of study. For your convenience, a copy of S. 2231, as introduced, is also included.

The Honorable John D. Rockefeller IV
Chairman, Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

On May 2, 2002, Tim S. McClain, Department of Veterans Affairs' General Counsel, testified before your Committee on numerous bills of interest to the Department. At that time, Mr. McClain indicated that we would like to provide the Committee our views on some of the bills after further review. One such bill, S. 2231, the Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance Adjustment Act of 2002, would "amend title 38, United States Code, to provide an incremental increase in amounts of educational assistance for survivors and dependents of veterans, and for other purposes."

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) notes that this measure would affect direct spending and receipts and, therefore, would be subject to pay-as-you-go (PAYGO) rules. Accordingly, the support VA expresses for portions of S. 2231 is contingent upon accommodating those provisions within the budget submitted by the President.

S. 2231 would increase educational assistance benefits under VA's Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance program (chapter 35), limit the number of months for those benefits, and increase funding to State Approving Agencies (SAAs).

Specifically, section 2 of this bill would raise the chapter 35 educational assistance allowance to $900 per month for a full-time course for Fiscal Year (FY) 2003 and to $985 per month for FY 2004. It would also raise the basic monthly rate payable for Special Restorative Training (SRT) to $900 for FY 2003 and to $985 for FY 2004. Similarly, the optional supplement to the SRT basic rate would be increased to pay the amount of tuition and fee charges that, on a monthly basis, would exceed $282 for FY 2003 and $307 for FY 2004.

VA notes that the chapter 30 (Montgomery GI Bill) rate of benefits paid for those with 3 years or more of service will also be $900 per month under legislation already enacted. We believe that chapter 35 benefit recipients should be paid the same amount as those eligible for chapter 30 benefits. In addition, current chapter 35 payment rates cover only about 67% of the costs (tuition/fees plus room and board) for a 4-year public college education. VA notes the effective date for this section should be changed to October 1, 2002, since the section refers to FY 2003. VA favors enactment of this section.

Section 3 of S. 2231 would decrease the entitlement available to chapter 35 recipients from the current 45 months to 36 months, in the case of those who first file an educational assistance claim under chapter 35 after the date of enactment. Our administrative experience with VA's educational assistance programs indicates that many claimants pursue the minimum 12 semester hours of credit, the minimum amount to be considered full-time, each semester. As a result, these individuals take longer than 36 months to complete their Bachelor's degree programs. Recognizing this reality, we believe 45 months of entitlement is not excessive. VA, therefore, does not favor enactment of this provision.

Finally, section 4 of the bill would increase the annual limit on funds available to compensate SAAs for work undertaken on behalf of VA, including approving educational institutions and programs for which veterans and other entitled participants receive VA-administered education benefits. This provision would increase the funding available for the SAAs from the current $13 million to $18 million per year effective October 1, 2002. On April 11, 2002, the Under Secretary for Benefits testified before the House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Benefits in favor of H.R. 3731, a bill similar to this one.

Because of the cost-of-living pay increases mandated by State law, salaries for State employees have gone up since the last SAA funding increase in 1994. Additionally, over the last 2 years, the SAAs have been called upon to perform new and time-consuming duties as part of their mission. For example, Public Law 106-419, enacted on November 1, 2000, initiated the licensing and certification test payment program and allowed VA to delegate approval responsibility to SAAs even though it was not covered in their contracts.

Furthermore, Public Law 107-103, enacted on December 27, 2001, requires that the SAAs, in addition to VA, actively promote the development of VA programs of training on the job and apprenticeship programs. Moreover, it requires each SAA to conduct outreach programs and provide outreach services to eligible persons and veterans about education and training benefits available under applicable federal and state laws. For the foregoing reasons, VA favors enactment of section 4 of S. 2231.

As noted, S. 2231 is subject to the PAYGO requirement of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, and, VA estimates that if enacted, it would result in net cumulative budget costs over the next 10 years of $1.7 billion. A copy of the Cost Methodology for each section of S. 2231 is enclosed.

We appreciate the opportunity to comment on the provisions of this measure.

S. 2231 Cost Methodology

Section 2
INCREMENTAL INCREASE IN RATES OF SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Section 2 increases the monthly full-time education benefit for survivors and dependents by 34.3% (from $670 to $900) in 2003 and by 9.4% (from $900 to $985) in 2004. Beginning in 2005, the CPI will drive annual increases. The cost estimate assumes that the chapter 35 training population will increase by five percent in 2003 and by 10 percent in 2004 and 2005. The combined effect of the rate increase and the growth in participation will increase estimated obligations. These rate increases will raise estimated obligations by $80.7 million in 2003, $775 million over 5 years and by a cumulative total of $1.8 billion over 10 years.

Section 3
MODIFICATION OF DURATION OF EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Section 3 reduces the number of months of entitlement from 45 to 36 for trainees who submit their initial claim for chapter 35 benefits after enactment of this legislation. The cost savings generated by this section was calculated by determining the portion of the current chapter 35 population that use more than 36 months of entitlement and applying that ratio to the projected new caseload over the next 10 years. There will be no cost savings for the first 3 years because trainees receiving benefits at the time of enactment will retain 45 months of entitlement. The projected cost savings in 2006 is $23.1 million and the total 10-year cost savings is projected to be $188.8 million.

Section 4

INCREASE IN AGGREGATE ANNUAL AMOUNT AVAILABLE FOR STATE APPROVING AGENCIES FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

Section 4 increases the annual amount available to compensate State Approving Agencies from $13 million to $18 million. This measure results in a $5 million annual increase in obligations and a 10-year cumulative cost of $50 million.

CUMULATIVE COST

The estimated net cumulative cost over the next 10 years for S. 2231 is $1.7 billion.

107TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

S. 2231

To amend title 38, United States Code, to provide an incremental increase in amounts of educational assistance for survivors and dependents of veterans, and for other purposes.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

APRIL 23, 2002

Mr. SPECTER (for himself and Mr. ROCKEFELLER) introduced the following bill; which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs

---

A BILL

To amend title 38, United States Code, to provide an incremental increase in amounts of educational assistance for survivors and dependents of veterans, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance Adjustment Act of 2002".

REV_00344737

SEC. 2. INCREMENTAL INCREASE IN RATES OF SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE.—Section 3532 of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking ''at the monthly rate of'' and all that follows and inserting ''at the monthly rate of—

''(A) for months occurring during fiscal year 2003, $900 for full-time, $676 for three-quarter-time, or $450 for half-time pursuit; and

Ed, the sentence we have been discussing is as follows: "Records received from the White House Office shall remain under the control of the White House Office and shall not be incorporated into the files of the Transition Planning Office." As you know, I favor not including the sentence in the e.o. and instead making it part of a separate document.

Brett --
Chief of Staff would like to see this Exec. Order signed today. Please note Section 3(d). The question is whether there is anything we can say in 3(d) (presumably more or better language than is there at present) that would actually make the walls between WHO/PRA documents and OMB/FOIA higher and thicker? And if so, what language would be helpful?

Disorder in the Court
Judicial shenanigans mar an affirmative-action case. Will Congress investigate?

BY THOMAS J. BRAY
Tuesday, June 18, 2002 12:01 a.m.

Rumors in Washington has it that the House Judiciary Committee may hold hearings into the events surrounding the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals' 5-4 decision upholding the University of Michigan Law School's affirmative action program. In a rare break with judicial comity, two judges in the court publicly questioned the procedures that Chief Judge Boyce Martin, a Carter appointee, had set out in the case.

A spokesman for the House Judiciary Committee didn't return calls asking for comment. But in the continuing war over control of the judiciary now taking place in the Democratic-controlled Senate, it wouldn't be surprising if House Republicans sensed a ripe target in the Sixth Circuit--which is down to only eight of its 16 authorized active judges. (One judge retired after participating in the Michigan case.) The Senate so far has scheduled hearings for only one of President Bush's nominations to the court, the fourth busiest of the nation's 13 federal appeals courts.

Some observers also believe the Michigan case was part of a disturbing pattern at the Sixth Circuit. Judge Martin faced similar allegations of high-handed behavior in a case last year in which liberal-leaning judges sought to block the execution of an Ohio prisoner convicted of murdering a fellow inmate. After a three-judge panel formed by a blind draw refused to stay the sentence, Judge Martin ordered a hearing by the full court, allegedly giving members of the original panel only a few hours' notice. It was "the most bizarre process this court has ever seen," protested Judge Richard Suhrheinrich--since retired--in a written opinion at the time.

Eyebrows also rose this year when the chief judge landed on several judicial panels reviewing legislative redistricting processes in the circuit, which includes Kentucky and Tennessee as well as Michigan and Ohio. Two of the panels consisted entirely of Democratic appointees, reversing a longstanding practice of ensuring that at least one appointee from each party would participate in these politically charged cases.

In fairness, the Michigan redistricting panel, which included Judge Martin, ultimately threw out the Democratic challenge to a plan devised by the state's Republican-dominated government. And the Ohio execution ultimately was allowed to go forward despite last-minute claims of new evidence (which, it became clear, had been available to the defendants' lawyers all along).

And Judge Martin's propensity for serving on panels hearing sensitive cases might be explained by the depleted ranks of the Sixth Circuit. "Those who complain should talk to their U.S. senators," Judge Martin told me last month when I called to ask about the status of the redistricting cases.

But it is rare for sitting judges, even those with roots in a different party, to go public with their grievances over court procedures. In order to maintain public confidence, judges tend to put a collegial face on even the bitterest disagreements. But so poisonous has the atmosphere on the Sixth Circuit become, according to court sources, that some of the judges simply refuse to talk to each other.

The latest rupture came to public attention in the dissent Judge Danny Boggs, a Reagan appointee, in the University of Michigan case. Judge Boggs dissented on the substance of the case, ridiculing the majority's pretense that the university's racial preferences amounted only to a "plus" factor as opposed to an unconstitutional quota. But the real bombshell was a "procedural appendix" that he attached to his dissent, making clear his belief that the chief judge had improperly assigned himself to a three-judge panel hearing the case, then failed to disclose for three months a request by the plaintiff for an en banc hearing by the full court. During that time, two of the court's more conservative judges took "senior status," retiring from the pool of active judges who to hear any new en banc cases, and tipping the balance of power on the court.

Judge Karen Nelson Moore, in an opinion concurring with the court's majority, defended Judge Martin's actions, claiming they were consistent with court policy laid down the prior year and in any case wouldn't have changed the outcome of the case. Moreover, she asserted the Boggs revelations would have the effect of shaking "public confidence" in the courts and thus were "nothing short of shameful."

But several sources close to the court say the new policy of withholding en banc petitions until briefs were fully filed was news to them. And sweeping the issue under the rug seems a poor way of upholding public confidence. Nor was this the first hint that the University of Michigan case might be the object of unusual treatment. "Affirmative action cases seem to bring out the worst in our courts," observes a lawyer close to the Michigan cases.

Earlier, Chief Judge Anna Diggs Taylor of the federal District Court in Detroit tried to take the suit against the law school away from Judge Bernard Freedman, who had been assigned it through a blind draw--and who was suspected of being skeptical about affirmative action--and consolidate it with a similar suit against the university's undergraduate admissions practice, which Judge Patrick Duggan was hearing. The chief judge dropped that effort after the judge hearing the law school complaint went public with a blistering opinion objecting to what he termed "the highly irregular" effort of the chief judge. Judge Duggan ruled in favor of the undergraduate racial preferences, while Judge Freedman ruled against the law school preferences.

A House hearing into the goings-on at the Sixth Circuit may have a disciplining effect, though Democrats and the liberal media are likely to dismiss it as a partisan witch hunt. An investigation by the federal judicial system's administrative office might be preferable. But at the very least, Sixth Circuit procedures could use some brushing up. Procedure isn't a technical issue; it lies at the heart of Anglo-Saxon law and the perception that justice is being done.

As for the broader issue of Mr. Bush's judicial appointments, Sen. Charles Schumer and his colleagues on the Senate Judiciary Committee have been loudly defending their refusal to hold hearings on Bush nominees who are supposedly outside the "mainstream." But is it "mainstream" to fiddle with procedures that guarantee a fair hearing to all parties appearing before a court? Maybe the Senate should take a look at the Sixth Circuit as well.

RALLY FOR PRESIDENT BUSH'S JUDICIAL NOMINEES

Progress for America would like to invite residents of Maryland, Virginia and Washington DC to join a rally being held in support of the President's judicial nominees.

President Bush has nominated over 100 qualified individuals to serve our nation's federal courts, and the Senate Democrats are playing games with our judicial branch.

Some of these nominees have been waiting over 400 days for a hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee!

Please join the Coalition for a Fair Judiciary at the US Capitol this week and call upon the Senate to put fairness back in the political process and fill the vacancies on our courts.

Many of our courts are in a state of "judicial emergency." In this unprecedented time, we cannot afford to have our judicial branch operating poorly.

Click below to find out more about the emergency in our courts:

http://www.usdoj.gov/olp/judicialnominations.htm

Time: 12:00pm to 12:45pm, THIS Thursday, June 20.

Location: Upper Senate Park: on the lawn on the Senate side between Russell and the Capitol.

What: Rally, sign waving, some chants and a speech or two in support of President Bush's judicial nominees. Help us tell Senators Daschle and Leahy: "Justice Delayed = Justice Denied."

Progress for America is taking the lead in supporting and promoting President Bush's legislative agenda. Progress for America is a 501 (c) 4, a non-profit organization.

Please forward this Action Alert to anyone interested in President Bush's legislative agenda. Ask them to click below to receive newsletters and action alerts from Progress for America: http://www.progressforamerica.com/1101/contact.jsp

Tim: Below is Senator Hutchison's floor speech from March. I thought this might be useful given our discussion the other day.

Senate Floor Speech
Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison
March 21, 2002 -- Page: S2214

JUDICIAL NOMINATIONS
MRS. HUTCHISON. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, I thank Senator Leahy and Senator Reid for allowing me to speak. I very much want to make a statement on behalf of Priscilla Owen, the supreme court justice from Texas.

I rise in support of Senator Lott's amendment calling on the Judiciary Committee to hold hearings on the U.S. circuit courts of appeals nominees who have been in the committee since May 9 of last year.

In fact, 7 of the President's 30 circuit court judges have been confirmed. We will have a judicial emergency across our Nation if the Senate continues to delay the confirmation of these fine men and women. I was concerned when I saw the Wall Street Journal report last Friday that some Members of the Senate may target the nomination of Justice Priscilla Owen to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. In fact, the Committee on the Judiciary in the Senate should take swift action on her nomination, particularly in light of the fact that Judge Owen was among the group of original 11 judicial nominees announced by President Bush on May 9 of last year.

Justice Owen's stellar academic achievements and professional experience are remarkable. She earned a cum laude bachelor of arts degree from Baylor University. She graduated cum laude from Baylor Law School in 1977. When she took the Texas bar exam, which is one of the hardest bar exams in the Nation, she came in first. She earned the very highest score on the Texas bar exam that year.

Prior to her election to the Texas Supreme Court in 1994, she was a partner in the Texas law firm of Andrews & Kurth, where she practiced commercial litigation for 17 years.

Justice Owen has delivered exemplary service on the Texas Supreme Court, as affirmed by receiving positive endorsements from every major newspaper in Texas
during her successful reelection bid in 2000.

Justice Owen enjoys bipartisan support, and the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on the Federal Judiciary has unanimously voted Justice Owen well qualified.

Filling judicial vacancies is a critical duty of the Senate. I hope we will be able to move forward. I have asked the Judiciary Committee to let us confirm three of the four U.S. attorneys for the State of Texas. The State of Texas has four judicial districts. One of our U.S. attorneys has been confirmed, but three U.S. attorneys remain unconfirmed. So we have appointed leaders in those offices where we really need to have permanent leaders, at least a permanent leader during this term, who will be able to lead the office and organize it and make sure we are hiring and staffing the offices in these important districts.

One of those has the largest caseload in the United States, the Southern District of Texas. We need to have the prosecutors on board. We need to make sure the U.S. attorney who is going to run the office is setting the priorities for those offices. We know that our border districts, both the Western and Southern Districts, are the busiest districts in America.

I ask that our U.S. attorneys in three of the four Texas districts be confirmed immediately. I had hoped we would do it before the recess because these three people are waiting and ready to go. All three of them are in Government now. They are not in private practice that has to be tied up. They are assistant U.S.
attorneys and one is a magistrate. They could make the moves swiftly and begin to lead these offices.

I ask the Judiciary Committee, with all due respect, to please expedite these nominees for U.S. attorney, particularly with Justice Priscilla Owen, who is a personal friend of mine, who I know to be of the very highest caliber. Having been appointed May 9, 2001,
and not yet having a hearing I think is a pretty difficult situation. She is so well regarded by everyone who has appeared before her in court or has practiced law with her.

I ask that we have a fair hearing on Justice Owen and that we be able to go forward with our three U.S. attorneys and Justice Priscilla Owen on an expedited basis.

Addendum. One additional Clinton nominee (Allen Snyder for DC Circuit) had a Committee hearing but never received a vote and thus was never confirmed.

important than another. Research studies examining American diets have documented that people who choose foods from all of the Food Guide Pyramid are not only improving their nutrition, but are better able to maintain a healthy weight.

- If you are a parent, set good habits for your family by choosing and preparing food in a sensible way. When you shop for groceries, read labels and make wise choices for your family. Prepare foods using as little salt, oil, cholesterol, and fat as possible. Reducing blood cholesterol levels by dietary means has been shown to be effective in decreasing the risk for coronary heart disease. In addition, one study found that reducing saturated fat intake produced a trend towards a decrease in both coronary mortality (21 percent) and total mortality (6 percent).
- Eat sensible and moderate portions. You can keep your weight in a healthy range by not overeating and balancing what you eat with the energy you expend. Compare the recommended serving size and portions of the food you prepare with what you actually eat. Be sure to eat appropriate servings to ensure proper vitamins, minerals, carbohydrates, and proteins are included in your diet.

Promoting Improved Nutrition: Administration Actions

Enhancing the National 5 A Day for Better Health Program--The Administration is strengthening this program by launching a more coordinated effort between the USDA, CDC, and the National Cancer Institute. The expertise of the science and medical communities will lend valuable support for improving overall nutrition and increasing the consumption of fruits and vegetables in the United States to five-to-nine servings every day. The program seeks to inform Americans that eating fruits and vegetables can improve their health and reduce the risk of heart disease and cancer, the two leading causes of death in the United States.

Promotion of Nutrition Curriculum and Education--The Department of Education (ED), USDA, and HHS are collaborating on a new MOU concerning the promotion of nutritional excellence in school. Just as USDA and HHS assist in the operation of the school lunch programs, these Departments will also provide guidance on good nutrition that can be incorporated into daily classes and lessons on health. Based on a successful program in elementary schools, this joint effort will be expanded to higher grades. The information will help students identify how a healthy meal is planned by using the school lunch as an example and will highlight examples of healthy lunches brought from home.

Eat Smart-Play Hard Campaign--This national nutrition education and promotion campaign is designed by the USDA to convey science-based, behavior-focused, and motivational messages about healthy eating and physical activity to pre-school and school-aged children. The campaign focuses on four basic themes: the importance of breakfast, healthy snacks, physical activity, and balancing what you eat with what you do. The campaign' s primary communication vehicle is Power Panther™, a spokes-character who conveys nutrition and physical activity messages in a fun and non-threatening way as a peer. Future projects in this campaign include Spanish language materials, an interactive web site with an expanded children's page, public service announcements, and a multi-year development and promotion plan.

Chapter 5. The President's Recommendations for Prevention

Get Preventive Screenings

Background

Preventive screenings and tests save lives. Unfortunately, many Americans do not routinely follow some basic health screening recommendations. Routine screenings can identify a previously undiagnosed condition or risk of condition. This allows physicians to intervene early with treatments and therapies to control the condition or inform the individual of lifestyle changes that can be taken to improve health outcomes and costs.

For example, screening for high blood pressure and high blood cholesterol is an important first step in identifying individuals who are at risk for chronic diseases but may be undiagnosed. Screening and appropriate follow-up for high blood pressure and elevated cholesterol can also save the lives of those at risk for heart disease. Early detection and treatment for diabetes can improve health, and the CDC recommends health professionals screen high-risk patients periodically, even when those individuals are visiting their doctor for another reason. Such opportunistic screenings can alert a health professional to troubling results requiring follow-up care.

Many studies have shown that dietary changes and therapies can dramatically reduce the risk of heart disease and stroke, especially when these modifications reduce high blood pressure and high blood cholesterol. When coupled with lifestyle changes, these therapies can be even more effective in lowering the risk of a heart attack or stroke. About 90 percent of all adults now have their blood pressure measured at least once every two years. In 1998, only 67 percent of adults had had their blood cholesterol checked within the preceding five years. Of the estimated 17 million people with diabetes in the country, about 5.9 million are undiagnosed. Without effective diagnosis and treatment, diabetes becomes a leading cause of blindness, kidney failure, heart disease, and stroke.

There are additional simple, preventive measures many Americans can take to reduce bad health outcomes. Pneumonia and influenza are responsible for more than 30,000 deaths among older adults each year. Immunization can substantially reduce the severity, risk of hospitalization, and risk of death from these diseases.

The President's Challenge:

Basic preventive health services such as health screenings are the most important health information Americans can receive about their current health status. Regular screenings can motivate individuals to modify their current activities and behaviors to improve their overall health. And seeking follow-up care based on basic preventive screenings can save lives. Every little bit of effort counts:

- Take advantage of basic health screening practices recommended by your treating physician or other health professionals. Screening and appropriate follow-up care for high blood pressure and elevated cholesterol can save the lives of those at risk for heart disease and stroke. Regular screening can detect many forms of cancer at early, less dangerous stages.
- Get your blood pressure checked regularly, particularly if you are a high-risk individual. Effective blood pressure treatment is easy and reduces risk of stroke by 40 percent. Easy to use machines are conveniently located in public places.
- Ask your doctor about a routine screening for diabetes. Lack of treatment for diabetes can lead to blindness, kidney failure, and amputations. Early detection with treatment can reduce diabetes-related blindness by up to 90 percent, kidney failure by up to 50 percent, and amputations by up to 50 percent.
- Get the appropriate immunizations each year. In 1999, 33 percent of adults aged 65 or older reported they did not get a flu shot in the previous year, and 46 percent reported they had never been vaccinated against pneumococcal disease.

Promoting Preventive Health: Administration Actions

Healthy Communities Innovations Initiative--$25 million has been included in the Fiscal Year 2003 Budget for the development of best practices in communities to improve the health of their citizens and to prevent diabetes, asthma, and obesity. The Healthy Communities Innovation Initiative will fund demonstration projects in five communities to enhance access to services, encourage positive behavioral changes, and improve community health.

The Initiative will build partnerships at the local level and will match Federal with local resources to improve prevention and treatment activities. It will be administered by the HHS Health Resources and Services Administration in collaboration with the CDC and the Office of Disease Prevention and Health Promotion.

Diabetes Screening and Awareness--HHS is partnering with several medical and private organizations to increase the utilization of important diabetes screening tools. The Food and Drug Administration, the American Diabetic Association (ADA), and the National Association of Chain Drug Stores have partnered in a nationwide "Take Time to Care" campaign to raise the awareness of diabetes among women, who are at a greater risk for the disease. Distributing information at grocery stores, pharmacies, and other public places, the campaign highlights the warning signs that women need to recognize; the literature identifies all the screening services that are available. The program aims to arm women with key facts about preventing diabetes and guide them to appropriate, effective treatments once diagnosed.

HHS and ADA also have unveiled a new expert panel's recommendations about pre-diabetes. Pre-diabetes is a condition affecting nearly 16 million Americans where blood glucose levels are higher than normal, sharply raising the risk for developing type 2 diabetes, but the individual does not yet have diabetes. The panel's new recommendations call for physicians to begin screening overweight people age 45 and older for pre-diabetes and to counsel their patients about the high risk of getting diabetes.

Strengthening and Improving Medicare--Medicare+Choice plans are an increasingly reliable source for quality screening and prevention services. As a part of the President's broader initiative to improve the Medicare program, Medicare+Choice plans would be strengthened and made available to more beneficiaries. In addition to being more affordable and providing prescription drug coverage, Medicare+Choice plans provide extra benefits to support seniors with serious and chronic health conditions, such as programs to help patients with diabetes and cancer avoid complications. Medicare+Choice plans also provide innovative health care services that are generally not available in the traditional Medicare plan, such as annual checkups to catch health problems early, exercise and wellness programs, and programs to improve patient safety. Making Medicare+Choice plans more available would give seniors access to modern, reliable coverage options, similar to those available to all Federal employees through the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program.

Recommended Preventative Health Screenings

Service	Goal	Age: 19 to 39	Age: 40 to 64	Age 65 and older
Comprehensive screening exam	To promote wellness	Frequency should be tailored to age and health status. Consult your health professional.
Diagnostic Testing
Blood Pressure	To identify high blood pressure	Every 2 years for all ages
Cholesterol	To reduce risk of heart disease	At least every 5 years
Diabetes screening	To test for diabetes	Depends on risk factors and age. Consult with your health professional.
Colon cancer screening: Options include: Stool blood (fecal test) Sigmoidoscopy, Colonoscopy, Barium enema	To detect colorectal cancer		After age 50: frequency depends on test: FOBT: every year Sigmoidoscopy: every 5 years Colonoscopy: every 10 years Barium enema: every 5 years
Sigmoidoscopy or colonoscopy	To detect colorectal cancer or large polyps		Every 5 years beginning at age 50
Vision exam	To test vision and screen for glaucoma	Discuss with your health professional.
Hearing test	To monitor hearing	Every 10 years	Hearing loss increases at age 50 so discuss frequency of tests with your health professional.
Men Only
Prostate-specific antigen (PSA)/DRE for prostate cancer	Blood test to detect prostate cancer		Guidelines vary. Discuss with your health professional.
Women only
Mammogram and clinical breast exam	Early detection of cancer		Every 1 to 2 years starting at age 40
Cervical cancer screening/pelvic exam	To detect cervical and ovarian cancer	Every 1-3 years depending on risk	Every 1-3 years depending on risk. Over age 65, if negative on previous screens, at your health professional's discretion.
Rubella antibody	To determine rubella immunity	One time prior to first pregnancy
Osteoporosis	To identify those at risk		At least once after age 65; earlier for high risk women

Chapter 6. The President's Recommendations for Avoiding Risky Behaviors

Make Healthy Choices

Background

One of the most important things individuals and families can do to promote good health is to make smart choices. Avoiding risky behaviors such as using tobacco or drugs, or abusing alcohol - even driving without a safety belt - can save lives and improve health. Behavioral changes reduce the chance of illness or injury; even washing one's hands regularly prevents the spread of many common illnesses and infections.

Misuse and abuse of alcohol continue to be a problem in this country. Alcoholic beverages supply calories but few nutrients and are harmful when consumed in excess. People who should not drink at all include children, adolescents, pregnant women, and individuals who cannot restrict their drinking to moderate levels. Having more than one drink per day for women or more than two drinks per day for men can raise the risk of high blood pressure, stroke, and some forms of cancer. American adults who drink should use alcohol responsibly in all social and recreational settings. The effects of alcohol abuse can be devastating, from adverse health consequences, to domestic abuse, to drinking and driving.

Tobacco use is the single most preventable cause of death and disease in the United States, causing more than 440,000 premature deaths annually during 1995-1999. Smoking can cause chronic lung disease, coronary heart disease, and stroke. Smoking has also been linked to cancer of the lungs, larynx, esophagus, mouth, and bladder. In addition, smoking contributes to cancer of the cervix, pancreas, and kidneys. Smokeless tobacco and cigars also have deadly consequences, including lung, larynx, esophageal, and mouth cancer. Aggressive and sustained anti-smoking programs prevent and reduce smoking and many states have successful efforts underway.

Regular marijuana use may also cause many of the same respiratory problems as regular tobacco use. Some of the respiratory problems associated with marijuana use include daily cough and phlegm, symptoms of chronic bronchitis, and more frequent chest colds. Continuing to smoke marijuana can lead to abnormal functioning of lung tissue. Research shows that marijuana harms the brain, heart, lungs, and immune system and limits learning, memory perception, judgement, and the ability to drive an automobile. Any illegal drug possession or use should not be tolerated. More parents need to learn about the power of preventing youth drug abuse.

Other simple behavioral changes save lives as well. For example, handwashing has been show to be a fundamental factor in preventing the spread of infections. One study of school children found that those who washed their hands four times a day had fewer sick days due to respiratory illness and fewer days lost because of stomach upset.

Thousands of people needlessly die in traffic accidents yearly because they do not use safety belts. Seat belts are the most effective means of reducing fatalities and serious injuries in a traffic accident. In fact, seat belts save over 10,000 lives in America every year. Appropriate bicycle safety measures could also reduce the 690 fatalities and 51,000 traffic-related injuries that occur every year. Bike helmets reduce head injury risk by 85 percent. These are smart choices Americans can make that prevent injuries and death.

The President's Challenge:

Healthy choices are about making smart decisions in your everyday life—from avoiding tobacco and illegal drugs, to moderate consumption of alcoholic beverages if you drink, to using safety belts and bike helmets. Every little bit of effort counts:

- If you smoke, quit. If you don't smoke, don't start. After just one day without cigarettes, the risk for heart attack decreases. Over the next several months, coughing, sinus congestion, and fatigue decrease. One year after quitting, excess risk for heart disease is reduced by half; risk for stroke is reduced after five years of not smoking. Ten years after quitting, the lung cancer death rate is about half that of a smoker; 15 years after quitting, an ex-smoker's risk for heart disease is about the same as that of a nonsmoker.
- If you are a parent, set a good example and quit smoking before your children start. If you continue to smoke, avoid smoking inside or around your children. Each year an estimated 3,000 nonsmoking Americans die of lung cancer and up to 300,000 children suffer from respiratory tract infections because of exposure to secondhand smoke. Evidence also indicates that exposure to secondhand smoke causes heart disease.
- Avoid illegal drugs. One of the largest factors contributing to emergency room episodes is the use of illegal drugs. In the first six months of 2001, more than 308,000 emergency room episodes were attributable to illegal drug use
- Buckle up. About 41,730 people were killed in highway crashes in 2001, down from 41,821 in 2000, but 60 percent of the people killed were not wearing safety belts.

Promoting Healthy Choices: Administration Actions

CDC Tobacco Control Toolkit--CDC is starting to develop a toolkit to accompany the 2003 annual Tobacco Control State Highlights report. This toolkit will include information and resources to assist states in developing, implementing, and evaluating programs to limit tobacco use. The toolkit will enable CDC to guide states in investing in proven programs and strategies to reduce tobacco use that have been successful in the states.

Drug-Free Communities Support Program--This program supports community anti-drug coalitions that harness local energy and resources to reduce substance abuse. Coalitions include local partnerships among youth; parents; businesses; the media; schools; youth organizations; law enforcement; civic groups; religious or fraternal organizations; health care professionals; state, local, or tribal governmental agencies; and other organizations. Activities include parent drug education programs, youth summits, drug intervention counseling services, and tutoring and financial incentives for businesses that adopt drug-free workplace programs. The President's

Budget for Fiscal Year 2003 provides $60 million for the Drug-Free Communities Support Program — an increase of $10 million over 2002.

Bicycle Safety Initiatives--The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) is undertaking a series of initiatives to improve public information, education, enforcement, and outreach on bicycle safety. NHTSA sponsors the National Strategies for Advancing Bicycle Safety Conference, which is a key forum bringing together policy makers, educators, advocates, transportation experts, health and injury professional and others. The Conference ensures that all interested parties agree to, and cooperate in acting upon, established goals to improve national bike safety. NHTSA also actively promotes and distributes the most recent information on helmet safety standards from the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

REV_00345020

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

President Bush's HealthierUS Initiative is based on the premise that increasing personal fitness and becoming healthier is critical to achieving a better and longer life. Extensive research, much of it conducted or funded by the Federal Government, has shown that improving overall health, and thus preventing disease and premature death, is as easy as making small adjustments and improvements in the activities of daily life. The President's HealthierUS Initiative uses the resources of the Federal Government to alert Americans to the vital health benefits of simple and modest improvements in physical activity, nutrition, and behavior.

Nearly half of American adults report that they do not exercise at all, and seven out of 10 do so infrequently. Too many of America's youth do not exercise at all, are overweight, and have poor dietary habits. Five chronic diseases associated with obesity -- heart disease, cancer, stroke, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (e.g., bronchitis, emphysema, asthma), and diabetes -- account for more than two-thirds of all deaths in the United States. In addition to claiming more than 1.7 million American lives each year, these diseases hinder daily living for more than one of every 10 Americans, or 25 million people. More than 100 million Americans live with chronic disease, and millions of new cases are diagnosed each year.

Although these chronic diseases are among the most prevalent and deadly health problems facing our nation, some of them are very preventable. Effective measures exist today to prevent or delay much of the chronic disease burden and curtail its devastating consequences. Families can take simple, affordable steps to work physical activity, good nutrition, and behavior changes into their daily routine. You don't have to become a marathon runner or be able to afford a gym or health club membership to improve personal fitness. The health of Americans would improve with modest but regular physical activity and better eating habits.

People of all ages can benefit from these actions. For the nation's seniors, poor health should not be a foregone consequence of aging. Improvements in diet and physical activity can greatly improve the quality of life at any age. Regular physical activity also helps older Americans maintain joint strength and mobility and substantially delays the onset of functional limitations and loss of independence.

The Administration is announcing two actions to promote fitness:

The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports.

> An important step in communicating the Administration's message on fitness and health is the revitalization of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. Chaired by Lynn Swann, and vice-chaired by Dot Richardson, the Council will coordinate its activities with Federal, state, and private entities to serve communities across the country more effectively.

REV_00345005

Agency-Wide Activities to Promote Personal Fitness.

> The President is signing an Executive Order that directs certain Federal agencies to review all policies, programs, and regulations related to physical activity, nutrition, screenings, and making healthy choices. The agencies will propose revisions, modifications, or new actions to further improve the promotion of personal fitness, and forward the recommendations to the President within 90 days.

The HealthierUS Initiative is based on a very simple formula: every little bit of effort counts. The Administration has identified four keys for a healthier America and is taking the following actions to promote them:

- Be Physically Active Every Day. Many chronic diseases can be prevented with modest exercise, in some cases as simple as walking for half an hour. There are countless opportunities for physical activity that do not need to be strenuous or very time-consuming to be beneficial. Enjoy the outdoors with your children and family and show them that exercise can be fun and achievable. Administration actions to promote physical activity include:
  - Declaring a Fee-Free Weekend in America's National Parks and Federal Lands
  - Creating a HealthierUS.gov Web Site
  - Promoting the Use of Public Lands and Water
  - Highlighting the Rivers, Trails, and Conservation Assistance Program

- Eat a Nutritious Diet. Americans should make simple adjustments to their diet and avoid excessive portions. Increasing fruit and vegetable consumption is a central part of a healthier diet, and good overall nutrition lowers the risk of getting heart disease, stroke, cancer, and osteoporosis. Administration actions to promote better nutrition include:
  - Enhancing the National 5 A Day for Better Health Program
  - Promoting Nutrition Curriculum and Education in Our Schools
  - Supporting the Eat Smart-Play Hard Campaign

- Get Preventive Screenings. Americans may be surprised to learn how a simple test like a cholesterol screen or a blood pressure check can reveal current health status and identify a need to adjust diet or behavior. Administration actions to promote preventive medicine include:
  - Creating the Healthy Communities Innovation Initiative
  - Raising Awareness of Diabetes Screening, Especially for Women
  - Strengthening and Improving Medicare

- Make Healthy Choices. Avoid tobacco and drugs and the abuse of alcohol and make smart and safe choices in your everyday life. Administration actions to promote healthy choices include:
  - Creating a CDC Tobacco Control Toolkit
  - Highlighting the Drug Free Communities Support Program
  - Promoting Bicycle Safety Initiatives

REV_00345006

HealthierUS: The President's Health and Fitness Initiative

Chapter 1. Appointment of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports

A reinvigorated Council on Physical Fitness and Sports will raise Americans' awareness of the importance of increasing personal fitness and becoming healthier. The President has appointed 20 outstanding volunteer citizens, including distinguished athletes and experts from the health care community, to serve on the Council.

The Council members will use their expertise to advise the Administration on the quality and content of Administration programs to promote physical fitness. Their diverse backgrounds will help the Administration reach more Americans, and individuals will serve as an inspiration for a more active lifestyle through personal and professional examples. Their experiences and background make them qualified to communicate important fitness messages to individuals of any age and ability.

The Council will focus on all populations, including young Americans among whom there is an alarming trend in obesity and inactivity. Council members will help to educate community leaders and all citizens on the HealthierUS Initiative. Specific activities include:

Refocusing the President's Challenge Awards Program

- Presidential Adult Active Lifestyle Award--A new award to recognize adults for committing to regular physical activity five days a week for six weeks in partnership with a child or adolescent.

- President's Sports and Fitness Award--Like its predecessor, the Presidential Sports Award, this renewed program will allow individuals of all ages, not just children, to earn Presidential recognition for sustained commitment in over 60 categories of physical activity and sports.

- Other Awards--The existing school-based awards for children who are tested for overall physical fitness will remain as important motivators of fitness.

Revising WWW.FITNESS.GOV

- This web site has been revised to include educational resources, a monthly letter from the executive director, "timely topics" related to physical activity and healthy living, and current physical activity news.

REV_00345007

Chapter 2. Executive Order on Agency-wide Activities to Promote Personal Fitness

Existing information on the importance of appropriate physical activity, diet, preventive health screenings, and avoiding harmful substances is often not received by the public or cannot be sufficiently integrated by Americans into their daily lives. However, individuals of all ages, in all locations, and of all levels of personal fitness can benefit from some amount of appropriate physical activity, dietary guidance, preventive health screening, and making healthy choices.

While personal fitness is an individual responsibility, the Federal Government should expand opportunities for individuals to empower themselves to improve their general health. Such opportunities should include improving the flow of information about personal fitness, assisting in the utilization of that information, increasing the accessibility of resources for physical activity, and reducing barriers to achieving good personal fitness.

The Departments of Agriculture, Education, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Interior, Labor, Transportation, and Veterans Affairs, and the Office of National Drug Policy together oversee programs and initiatives that promote or enhance personal fitness and health. Under the new Executive Order issued by President Bush, these agencies will review and evaluate the policies, programs, and regulations of their respective agencies relating to personal fitness and health of the general public. Based on that review, they will make recommendations to the President on whether existing policies, programs, and regulations of their respective agencies should be modified or whether new policies or programs should be implemented. These policies and programs shall improve the Federal Government's assistance of individuals, private organizations, and State and local governments in increasing physical activity; improving responsible dietary habits; increasing utilization of preventive health screenings; and discouraging the use of tobacco and drugs, and the abuse of alcohol.

Designees from each agency shall meet no less than twice a year as part of a Personal Fitness Interagency Working Group to ensure cooperation, coordination, and efficiency in Federal fitness activities.

REV_00345008

Chapter 3. The President's Recommendations for Improving Physical Fitness

Be Physically Active Every Day

Background

Fitness problems such as obesity and overweight have reached truly epidemic proportions in the United States. In the last 20 years, obesity rates have increased by more than 60 percent among adults. In 1999, 61 percent of the adult population was either overweight or obese. The obesity epidemic impacts other diseases as well. For example, the incidence of type 2 diabetes, a major consequence of obesity, is on the rise. Among U.S. adults, diagnosed diabetes increased 49 percent from 1990 to 2000.

The rate of increase in overweight among young people has been even steeper. This is particularly troubling since many of the behaviors that lead to adult obesity are established during childhood. Just 10 years ago, type 2 diabetes was virtually unknown in children and adolescents. Indeed, the medical community commonly referred to the condition as "adult onset diabetes." Today, it accounts for almost 50 percent of new cases of pediatric diabetes in some communities. Medical complications associated with obesity in children can lead to hospitalizations for type 2 diabetes, sleep apnea, and asthma. Since 1980, the percentage of children who are overweight has nearly doubled, and the percentage of adolescents who are overweight has nearly tripled. About 8 million young Americans, almost 15 percent of all children, are overweight.

Americans young and old should incorporate regular physical activity into their everyday lives. This does not necessarily mean joining an expensive gym or committing to a rigorous exercise or training routine. It is sufficient to choose activities that fit into your daily routine that speed your heart rate and breathing, or increase your strength and flexibility. Examples include walking to work, gardening, taking extra stairs, or mowing the lawn with a push mower. Besides building strength and aerobic fitness, regular exercise relieves stress, provides motivation, promotes relaxation, and facilitates sleep. Such activity reduces the risk of dying of coronary heart disease and decreases the risk for colon cancer, diabetes, and high blood pressure.

Regular physical activity is important throughout life. Healthy lifestyles are more influential than genetic factors in avoiding deterioration traditionally associated with aging. The growing number of older Americans places increasing demands on the public health system and on medical and social services. Currently, almost one-third of total U.S. health care expenditures are for older adults. These expenditures are largely due to treatment and care of chronic diseases, and the cost associated with many of these conditions could be reduced through regular physical activity.

For children, almost any physical activity is sufficient as long as they are moving. Playing actively or participating in athletic or physical fitness activities during school, running, biking, jumping rope, and dancing -- instead of watching television or playing video games -- all provide children with the kinds of activity they need.

The President's Challenge:

Regular physical activity substantially reduces the risk of poor health. Physical activity need not be strenuous or very time-consuming to be beneficial, and all ages can benefit from modest physical activity. Every little bit of effort counts:

- Adults, get at least 30 minutes of physical activity each day. If it is too hard to set aside 30 minutes at one time, break it up into 10 or 15 minute segments. Developed by a panel of scientists under the leadership of Department of Agriculture (USDA) and the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) as a part of the 2000 Dietary Guidelines for Americans, these recommendations for daily activity are based on the results of studies that examined the relationship between physical activity and health. If only 10 percent of American adults began regularly walking, $5.6 billion in health care costs associated with heart disease could be saved.
- Children and teenagers, get at least 60 minutes of physical activity each day. For children, setting aside time for physical activity should be easy. Unfortunately, even children have busy schedules today. According the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, they can break activity up into segments. Regular activity for children is important. Normal childhood play or outdoor activity helps control blood pressure and manages weight while building and maintaining healthy bones, muscles, and joints.
- Parents, commit to family activities that involve physical activity. It can be easier to work physical activity into your daily routine if you combine it with family time.

Promoting Physical Fitness: Administration Actions

Fee-Free Weekend in America's Federal Lands--Free admission has been granted to many of America's Federally managed areas this weekend, June 22 and 23, 2002. In support of physical fitness, Americans are encouraged to visit one of the 385 National Parks or numerous other Federal recreation areas throughout the country. Public Service Announcements have been running nationwide to alert Americans of the effort. Eliminating entrance fees and increasing accessibility will allow more Americans to benefit from our public lands.

HealthierUS.gov Web Site--This interactive web site will be the central repository of information related to the President's initiative and will serve as a portal to resources throughout the Federal government related to promoting fitness. This site will provide links to www.fitness.gov, the web site of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports; www.BAM.gov, an interactive site encouraging increased physical activities for adolescents; healthfinder.gov, an exhaustive source of information on health care topics prepared by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC); and many other fitness, nutrition, prevention, and safety sites from across the Federal agencies.

Promoting Use of Public Lands and Waters--A Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) has been entered into by the Departments of Interior (DOI), USDA, HHS, and the Army Corps of Engineers to promote the use of public lands to enhance physical and physiological health. The cooperating agencies will collaborate to raise public awareness of the role and benefits of physical activity in maintaining good physical and mental health. They will raise public awareness of the many places in America's public lands where recreation opportunities exist. Programs will be developed with a focus on preventing or reducing obesity, and encouraging a physically active lifestyle. Where appropriate these collaborative projects will focus on the needs of urban and underserved populations, especially those living near public lands and waters. Volunteer events such as National Public Lands Day, National Fishing and Boating Week, National Trails Day, and Great Outdoors Week shall be promoted as benefiting people through activity in natural and cultural landscapes.

Rivers, Trails, and Conservation Assistance--Also known as Rivers & Trails or RTCA, this program works with community groups and local and State governments to conserve rivers, preserve open space, and develop trails and greenways as "pathways to health." The National Park Service (NPS) administers the technical assistance with support from HHS and USDA and other federal and nonprofit partners. RTCA has worked with communities on urban promenades, trails along abandoned railroad rights-of-way, wildlife corridors, downtown riverfronts, and regional water trails.

Chapter 4. The President's Recommendations for Improving Nutrition

Eat a Nutritious Diet

Background

Eating right is vital to promoting health and reducing the risk for death or disability due to chronic diseases such as heart disease, certain cancers, diabetes, stroke, and osteoporosis. In fact, it has been estimated that dietary changes could reduce cancer deaths in the United States by as much as 35 percent.

Nevertheless, a large gap remains between recommended dietary patterns and what Americans actually eat. Very few Americans meet the majority of recommendations of the Food Guide Pyramid or the Dietary Guidelines for Americans. Only 3 percent of all individuals meet four of the five recommendations for the intake of grains, fruits, vegetables, milk products, and meat and bean food groups. Only one-fourth of U.S. adults eat the recommended servings of fruits and vegetables each day. Unfortunately, poor eating habits are usually established during childhood. And more than 60 percent of young people eat too much fat, and less than 20 percent eat the recommended servings of fruits and vegetables.

The Food Guide Pyramid is an outline of what to eat each day, and it calls for a variety of food and nutrients. Fruits and vegetables provide essential vitamins and minerals, fiber, and other substances that are associated with good health. Low fat diets rich in fiber-containing grain products, fruits, and vegetables may reduce the risk of heart disease and some types of cancer. Milk products provide protein, vitamins and minerals and are the best source of calcium. However, fats, oils, and sweets provide calories and little else, and should be used sparingly. Drinking enough water is also essential to keeping hydrated, converting food into energy, carrying nutrients through the body, and removing waste.

The President's Challenge:

Americans can dramatically improve their overall health by making modest improvements to their diets. All Americans can benefit from reducing their fat intake and by working more fruits and vegetables into their daily meals. Every little bit of effort counts:

- Eat at least five fruits and vegetables every day. A large number of research studies have shown that higher intakes of fruits and vegetables are related to decreased risk for cardiovascular disease as well as a lower incidence of certain cancers, including lung cancer, cancers of the mouth and pharynx, squamous esophageal cancer, laryngeal cancer, and some colon cancers.
- Follow the Food Guide Pyramid and the Dietary Guidelines for Americans in your food choices. Use fruits, vegetables, and grains as the foundation of your meals, and limit your intake of fat and sugar. Foods in one group cannot replace another, nor is one group more

LESS IS MORE, MORE OR LESS

Thomas L. Jipping

Time is running out for the Senate to live up to its claims of fairness in considering President Bush's judicial nominees.

Over the last dozen years, the Senate has annually been in session an average of 152 days. Observing day-long holidays with week-long breaks, taking the month of August off and quitting early to campaign for re-election leaves only about 50 legislative days this year.

While its legislative agenda varies, the Senate always has judicial nominees waiting for hearings or confirmation. You'd think that a vacancy rate Chief Justice William Rehnquist calls "alarming" would put some pressure on the Senate to act on the 45 pending nominees. Yet vacancies remain higher than on Inauguration Day.

Either the president is not making nominations to fill the vacancies, or the Senate is simply refusing to approve them. That's an easy choice, because Mr. Bush started nominating months earlier than past new presidents and has sent a record number to the Senate.

Last year, Senate Democrats said their confirmation performance should be measured by confirmation of President Clinton's nominees. They proudly claimed they out-confirmed Mr. Clinton's first year, 28-27. But liars figure and figures lie. Confirmation rates, rather than confirmation totals, are the most important measure because the question is not how many nominees the Senate confirmed, but how many the Senate could have confirmed. Mr. Clinton's 48 nominations turn his total of 27 into a rate of 56 percent. Mr. Bush's 65 nominations turn his total of 28 into a rate of 43 percent. A claim of more becomes a fact of less.

Senate Democrats won't even be talking about confirmation totals anymore. During the first two years of the Clinton administration, the Senate confirmed 128 judges. So far, during the first two years of the Bush administration, the Senate has confirmed just 57 judges. Using the correct standard, the previous three presidents enjoyed an average confirmation rate of 94 percent during their first two years in office. Mr. Bush's confirmation rate so far stands at 55 percent.

The picture gets even bleaker looking specifically at nominations to the U.S. Court of Appeals. During his first year in office, Mr. Bush made 32 percent more appeals court nominations than his three predecessors' average, yet his confirmation rate was more than 70 percent less. And this disparity continues into his second year, with just three appeals court nominees confirmed all year and none in two months.

Mr. Bush's nominations leave just one explanation for so few confirmations. Senate Democrats simply won't hold hearings or votes on nominees. Mr. Bush sent 11 nominees to the Senate on May 9, 2001. Sen. Patrick Leahy, Judiciary Committee chairman, has granted only three of them a hearing. Two of these had previously been nominated or appointed to a judicial post by Mr. Clinton and the other came from a state with two Democrat senators. He has blocked the nominees initiated by Mr. Bush and from states with Republican senators.

The previous three presidents saw their first 11 appeals court nominees confirmed in an average of 81 days, and none took more than 202 days. Today, after more than twice that length of time, eight of those first 11 nominees languish with no hearing, despite receiving high ratings from the liberal American Bar Association.

In October 1998, Mr. Leahy said that 48 vacancies were a "crisis." He rejected Republican excuses and scoffed at claims that they were doing the best they could. Yet with vacancies nearly double that level today, he refuses to lift the blockade. Senate Republicans must do more to tell the American people the truth about this hostage situation. Judiciary Committee members and senators from states with vacancies have been largely silent as the obstruction continues. And they must not wait for the November election returns to begin.

In 1994, Senate Democrats confirmed, in just the three months before the election, as many nominees as they have confirmed since Mr. Bush took office. They can do it if they want to.

Nominations: On June 20, the Senate Judiciary Committee held over the nomination of Lavenski Smith, to be a U.S. Circuit Judge for the Eighth Circuit, and approved the following district court nominations, each by a roll call vote of 19-0: David Cercone, U.S District Judge for the Western District of Pennsylvania; Morrison C. England, U.S. District Judge for the Eastern District of California; and Kenneth Marra, U.S. District Judge for the Southern District of Florida. The nominations of Lawrence Greenfeld, to be Director of the Bureau of Justice Statistics; Anthony Dichio, to be U.S. Marshal for the District of Massachusetts; Michael Kline, to be U.S. Marshal for the Eastern District of Washington; and James T. Roberts, to be U.S. Marshal for the Southern District of Georgia, were approved en banc by voice vote. The number of nominees now on the Senate Executive Calendar awaiting confirmation are four circuit court judges, twelve district court judges, three U. S. Attorneys, fourteen U.S.
Marshals, and one Departmental nominee.

I might change the last two sentences to something like the following, which mirrors the various letters sent to Congress on Ridge testimony.

This Administration adheres to the same policy that Presidents of both parties have long followed and that Congress has long respected: The President,s immediate White House advisors and staff do not testify before Congress with respect to the performance of their official duties.

Attached below for your review/comment is a short draft letter to the Washington Post correcting the record about Dick Clarke's briefing to the 9/11 committee. A similar letter could be sent to the NY Times (which we think ran a similar story referring to "testimony" by Clarke.)

Dear Sirs:

Your June 12 story "'We Should Have Known,' Goss Says of 9/11," inaccurately reported that Richard A. Clarke, currently the Assistant to the President for Cyberspace Security and formerly a senior adviser to President Clinton on terrorism, "testified for several hours" as the "first outside witness" to the joint congressional committee examining the September 11 attacks.

Mr. Clarke provided an informal briefing to members of the joint committee, but he was not a witness and did not testify to the committee. It has been the longstanding practice of the Executive Branch to decline congressional requests for testimony by members of the President's personal staff with respect to performance of their official duties. As a matter of separation of powers, Congress may not compel the President or his senior advisors to testify before it on the performance of their duties.

Sincerely,

Alberto R. Gonzales
Counsel to the President

We want to try to pull "all interested parties" together and get everyone in one room to discuss the Hatch alternative regarding victims compensation.
Rebecca with Hatch will coordinate the appropriate hill staff. (i.e Leahy, Hatch, Schumer, Nickles, Biden, other cmte Rs that support us). We are shooting for 6:15pm in room SD-226 on Monday. All of this info is tentative and subject to change but please let me know if you would be available to attend.
This time works for Hatch's folks, as well as for Phil Perry & Nancy Dorn. It will also allow us most of Monday to prepare for the mtg. but give us Tues. and Wed. to work before the Judiciary hearing on Thursday.

Question: do we include Specter/Warner given their positon re: USS Cole vicitms or wait to loop them in once we have this first intial mtg.? I vote for wait but let me know your thoughts.

Please let me know if you woudl be avaialble for this mtg.
Thanks.
Christine

sorry for the late notice but are you all available for a quick call to touch base on where things stand with regard to Thursday's Judiciary mark-up?
Please let me know.
We can just all get together and conf. one another in, if so. (our trusty call organizer is out so this will have to do!)

Please let me know.

Attached is a draft letter over Mrs. Dole's signature that we would like to send to her $500 plus donors asking them to serve as patrons or sponsors of the July 25th event in Greensboro.

I would appreciate you putting this through for approval.

Thanks

Dear

I am honored to invite you to join me for An Evening with George W. Bush and Elizabeth Dole in Greensboro on Thursday, July 25.

The dinner will be held at the Grandover Resort and Conference Center and benefits the Dole North Carolina Victory Committee.

I hope you will please mark your calendar now for what promises to be a wonderful night with President Bush. You will receive an invitation in the coming days, but I hope that you will make note of the date now and plan to attend.

I have often said that we need leaders in Washington who have strength of character, core values and a common-sense conservatism. How blessed we have been to have a man of President Bush's integrity and inspirational leadership at a time when we are fighting a war against terrorism and putting people back to work as we grow the economy.

It's truly an honor and a humbling experience to have the President take the time to join me as we continue to build my campaign for the U.S. Senate.

One of the most important reasons I am running for the Senate is to help President Bush continue to succeed with his agenda for America. The best way we can help the President is to win this campaign, keep Senator Jesse Helms' seat in Republican hands, and take control of the United States Senate.

I would be most appreciative if you would consider serving as either a Sponsor or Patron of this special night. Sponsors commit to raise and/or contribute $10,000 for a table of 10 at $1,000 per person. All Sponsors will be invited to a Private Reception prior to the dinner. Patrons commit to raise and/or contribute $5,000 for a table of 10 at $500 per person. Patrons will be invited to a VIP Reception prior to the dinner. Additional Sponsor and Patron details, as well as individual ticket details, are included on the enclosed reply.

I hope you will join me in welcoming President Bush to North Carolina on July 25 at the Grandover Resort in Greensboro for what I believe will be an extraordinary evening. It will be an opportunity to thank the President for his exceptional courage and to pay tribute to his leadership which has renewed America's vision and sense of mission for generations to come.

I look forward to hearing from you in the next few days.

With heartfelt thanks and my warmest best wishes,

Elizabeth Dole

It looks like you had the same dates I had on my first email---those appear to be dates of hearing, which I got from DOJ's web site. After checking the Senate's web site and confirming with the Federal Judicial Center's web page, the dates below are dates of confirmation, while the commission dates follow by a few days for each of the nominees.

Brent/Anne: The dates in my e-mail and Brent's e-mail do not square up, I believe because the date of Senate confirmation is not the same as the date of appointment (when the Presidential commission is signed). My e-mail has the dates of Senate confirmation. Brent's new e-mail has the dates of appointment (when commissions were signed). Brent, correct me if I am wrong.

Justice Speaks
Former top government lawyers tell Patrick Leahy to lay off.
Byron York, National Review, June 26, 2002 8:45 a.m.

Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Patrick Leahy has run into bipartisan opposition to his demand that the Justice Department turn over secret documents in the confirmation battle over one of President Bush's most prominent judicial nominees.

The nominee is Miguel Estrada, picked for a seat of the federal court of appeals for the District of Columbia. The 40-year-old Estrada is regarded by Washington Republicans as a rising star with the potential to one day sit on the Supreme Court. On the other side, Democrats on the Judiciary Committee, along with allies in liberal interest groups, have been scouring Estrada's record in search of material that might be used against him in confirmation hearings.

There is no indication that they have found much, if anything. Estrada's resume includes service as an Assistant U.S. Attorney in the Southern District of New York, a five-year stay in the Justice Department's Office of Solicitor General, and, since 1997, private practice in Washington, during which time Estrada has argued 15 cases before the Supreme Court.

Last month, apparently dissatisfied with examining that record, Leahy made an unprecedented demand. He asked the Justice Department to hand over the internal legal recommendations that Estrada wrote while in the Solicitor General's office from 1992 to 1997. A few weeks later, the Justice Department declined, calling the documents "highly privileged."

Now, all seven living former Solicitors General have written Leahy a letter warning him of the dangers of such an inquiry. The letter, delivered on Tuesday, was written by Seth Waxman, who served as Solicitor General under Bill Clinton. It was sent to Leahy on behalf of not only Waxman but of Walter Dellinger and Drew Days III, who also held the post under Clinton; Kenneth Starr, who held it under the first President Bush; Charles Fried, who was Solicitor General under President Reagan; Robert Bork, who served under President Nixon; and Archibald Cox, who served under President Kennedy.

The letter begins by explaining that the Solicitor General has to make some of the most important legal decisions in the government, like whether to seek Supreme Court review of cases that involve the United States. "When we made these and other critical decisions, we relied on frank, honest, and thorough advice from our staff attorneys, like Mr. Estrada," the letter says. "Our decision-making process required the unbridled, open exchange of ideas - an exchange that simply cannot take place if attorneys have reason to fear that their private recommendations are not private at all, but vulnerable to public disclosure."

The letter continues: "Any attempt to intrude into the Office's highly privileged deliberations would come at the cost of the Solicitor General's ability to defend vigorously the United States' litigation interests - a cost that also would be borne by Congress itself." Finally, the letter says that while the former Solicitors General respect Leahy's responsibility to evaluate the fitness of judicial nominees, "we do not think that the confidentiality and integrity of internal deliberations should be sacrificed in the process."

It is not clear whether Leahy intends to press the issue, but it does seem clear that the Justice Department is strongly determined not to turn over the materials. Interest groups like People for the American Way and the Alliance for Justice, which are trying to derail the Estrada nomination, have urged the Judiciary Committee to obtain the documents. But with the letter from seven distinguished Republicans and Democrats who served as the nation's top lawyer, Leahy's job has become much harder.

The Honorable Patrick J. Leahy
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary
United States Senate
224 Dirksen Senate Office Building
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Chairman Leahy:

We write to express our concern about your recent request that the Department of Justice turn over "appeal recommendations, certiorari recommendations, and amicus recommendations" that Miguel Estrada worked on while in the Office of the Solicitor General.

As former heads of the Office of the Solicitor General -- under Presidents of both parties -- we can attest to the vital importance of candor and confidentiality in the Solicitor General's decisionmaking process. The Solicitor General is charged with the weighty responsibility of deciding whether to appeal adverse decisions in cases where the United States is a party, whether to seek Supreme Court review of adverse appellate decisions, and whether to participate as amicus curiae in other high-profile cases that implicate an important federal interest. The Solicitor General has the responsibility of representing the interests not just of the Justice Department, nor just of the Executive Branch, but of the entire federal government, including Congress.

It goes without saying that, when we made these and other critical decisions, we relied on frank, honest, and thorough advice from our staff attorneys, like Mr. Estrada. Our decisionmaking process required the unbridled, open exchange of ideas -- an exchange that simply cannot take place if attorneys have reason to fear that their private recommendations are not private at all, but vulnerable to public disclosure. Attorneys inevitably will hesitate before giving their honest, independent analysis if their opinions are not safeguarded from future disclosure. High-level decisionmaking requires candor, and candor in turn requires confidentiality.

Any attempt to intrude into the Office's highly privileged deliberations would come at the cost of the Solicitor General's ability to defend vigorously the United States' litigation interests -- a cost that also would be borne by Congress itself.

Although we profoundly respect the Senate's duty to evaluate Mr. Estrada's fitness for the federal judiciary, we do not think that the confidentiality and integrity of internal deliberations should be sacrificed in the process.

Sincerely,

On behalf of
Seth P. Waxman
Walter Dellinger
Drew S. Days, III
Kenneth W. Starr
Charles Fried
Robert H. Bork
Archibald Cox

SUBJECT: VETERANS AFFAIRS Report on S. 2231 Survivors% and Dependents% Educational Assistance Adjustment Act of 2002

DEADLINE: 5:00 p.m. Wednesday, June 19, 2002
In accordance with OMB Circular A-19, OMB requests the views of your agency on the above subject before advising on its relationship to the program of the President. Please advise us if this item will affect direct spending or receipts for purposes of the "Pay-As-You-Go" provisions of Title XIII of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

COMMENTS: Attached for your review, please find a VA draft letter to SVAC Chairman Rockefeller regarding S. 2231. The bill would provide an incremental increase in amounts of educational assistance for survivors and dependents of veterans, and for other purposes. The letter expresses support for provisions to raise the chapter 35 education assistance allowance and Special Restorative Training rates, and increase the annual limit on funds available to compensate State Approval Agencies (SAAs). The letter expresses opposition to a provision to decrease the entitlement available to chapter 35 recipients from the current 45 months to 36 months because it provides inadequate time for the average recipient to complete a prescribed course of study. For your convenience, a copy of S. 2231, as introduced, is also included.

Please provide your comment by 5:00 p.m., Wednesday, June 19th. If you experience difficulty with this LRM, or its attachments, please contact us immediately. To ensure receipt by Agency addressees, the electronic copy of this LRM will be followed by a duplicate copy via facsimile.

The Honorable John D. Rockefeller IV
Chairman, Senate Committee on Veterans' Affairs
United States Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Mr. Chairman:

On May 2, 2002, Tim S. McClain, Department of Veterans Affairs' General Counsel, testified before your Committee on numerous bills of interest to the Department. At that time, Mr. McClain indicated that we would like to provide the Committee our views on some of the bills after further review. One such bill, S. 2231, the Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance Adjustment Act of 2002, would "amend title 38, United States Code, to provide an incremental increase in amounts of educational assistance for survivors and dependents of veterans, and for other purposes."

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) notes that this measure would affect direct spending and receipts and, therefore, would be subject to pay-as-you-go (PAYGO) rules. Accordingly, the support VA expresses for portions of S. 2231 is contingent upon accommodating those provisions within the budget submitted by the President.

S. 2231 would increase educational assistance benefits under VA's Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance program (chapter 35), limit the number of months for those benefits, and increase funding to State Approving Agencies (SAAs).

Specifically, section 2 of this bill would raise the chapter 35 educational assistance allowance to $900 per month for a full-time course for Fiscal Year (FY) 2003 and to $985 per month for FY 2004. It would also raise the basic monthly rate payable for Special Restorative Training (SRT) to $900 for FY 2003 and to $985 for FY 2004. Similarly, the optional supplement to the SRT basic rate would be increased to pay the amount of tuition and fee charges that, on a monthly basis, would exceed $282 for FY 2003 and $307 for FY 2004.

VA notes that the chapter 30 (Montgomery GI Bill) rate of benefits paid for those with 3 years or more of service will also be $900 per month under legislation already enacted. We believe that chapter 35 benefit recipients should be paid the same amount as those eligible for chapter 30 benefits. In addition, current chapter 35 payment rates cover only about 67% of the costs (tuition/fees plus room and board) for a 4-year public college education. VA notes the effective date for this section should be changed to October 1, 2002, since the section refers to FY 2003. VA favors enactment of this section.

Section 3 of S. 2231 would decrease the entitlement available to chapter 35 recipients from the current 45 months to 36 months, in the case of those who first file an educational assistance claim under chapter 35 after the date of enactment. Our administrative experience with VA's educational assistance programs indicates that many claimants pursue the minimum 12 semester hours of credit, the minimum amount to be considered full-time, each semester. As a result, these individuals take longer than 36 months to complete their Bachelor's degree programs. Recognizing this reality, we believe 45 months of entitlement is not excessive. VA, therefore, does not favor enactment of this provision.

Finally, section 4 of the bill would increase the annual limit on funds available to compensate SAAs for work undertaken on behalf of VA, including approving educational institutions and programs for which veterans and other entitled participants receive VA-administered education benefits. This provision would increase the funding available for the SAAs from the current $13 million to $18 million per year effective October 1, 2002. On April 11, 2002, the Under Secretary for Benefits testified before the House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Benefits in favor of H.R. 3731, a bill similar to this one.

Because of the cost-of-living pay increases mandated by State law, salaries for State employees have gone up since the last SAA funding increase in 1994. Additionally, over the last 2 years, the SAAs have been called upon to perform new and time-consuming duties as part of their mission. For example, Public Law 106-419, enacted on November 1, 2000, initiated the licensing and certification test payment program and allowed VA to delegate approval responsibility to SAAs even though it was not covered in their contracts.

Furthermore, Public Law 107-103, enacted on December 27, 2001, requires that the SAAs, in addition to VA, actively promote the development of VA programs of training on the job and apprenticeship programs. Moreover, it requires each SAA to conduct outreach programs and provide outreach services to eligible persons and veterans about education and training benefits available under applicable federal and state laws. For the foregoing reasons, VA favors enactment of section 4 of S. 2231.

As noted, S. 2231 is subject to the PAYGO requirement of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, and, VA estimates that if enacted, it would result in net cumulative budget costs over the next 10 years of $1.7 billion. A copy of the Cost Methodology for each section of S. 2231 is enclosed.

We appreciate the opportunity to comment on the provisions of this measure.

S. 2231 Cost Methodology

Section 2
INCREMENTAL INCREASE IN RATES OF SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Section 2 increases the monthly full-time education benefit for survivors and dependents by 34.3% (from $670 to $900) in 2003 and by 9.4% (from $900 to $985) in 2004. Beginning in 2005, the CPI will drive annual increases. The cost estimate assumes that the chapter 35 training population will increase by five percent in 2003 and by 10 percent in 2004 and 2005. The combined effect of the rate increase and the growth in participation will increase estimated obligations. These rate increases will raise estimated obligations by $80.7 million in 2003, $775 million over 5 years and by a cumulative total of $1.8 billion over 10 years.

Section 3
MODIFICATION OF DURATION OF EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE

Section 3 reduces the number of months of entitlement from 45 to 36 for trainees who submit their initial claim for chapter 35 benefits after enactment of this legislation. The cost savings generated by this section was calculated by determining the portion of the current chapter 35 population that use more than 36 months of entitlement and applying that ratio to the projected new caseload over the next 10 years. There will be no cost savings for the first 3 years because trainees receiving benefits at the time of enactment will retain 45 months of entitlement. The projected cost savings in 2006 is $23.1 million and the total 10-year cost savings is projected to be $188.8 million.

Section 4

INCREASE IN AGGREGATE ANNUAL AMOUNT AVAILABLE FOR STATE APPROVING AGENCIES FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

Section 4 increases the annual amount available to compensate State Approving Agencies from $13 million to $18 million. This measure results in a $5 million annual increase in obligations and a 10-year cumulative cost of $50 million.

CUMULATIVE COST

The estimated net cumulative cost over the next 10 years for S. 2231 is $1.7 billion.

107TH CONGRESS
2D SESSION

S. 2231

To amend title 38, United States Code, to provide an incremental increase in amounts of educational assistance for survivors and dependents of veterans, and for other purposes.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

APRIL 23, 2002

Mr. SPECTER (for himself and Mr. ROCKEFELLER) introduced the following bill; which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs

---

A BILL

To amend title 38, United States Code, to provide an incremental increase in amounts of educational assistance for survivors and dependents of veterans, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance Adjustment Act of 2002".

REV_00345435

SEC. 2. INCREMENTAL INCREASE IN RATES OF SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE.

(a) SURVIVORS' AND DEPENDENTS' EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE.—Section 3532 of title 38, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking ''at the monthly rate of'' and all that follows and inserting ''at the monthly rate of—

''(A) for months occurring during fiscal year 2003, $900 for full-time, $676 for three-quarter-time, or $450 for half-time pursuit; and

''(B) for months occurring during a subsequent fiscal year, $985 for full-time, $740 for three-quarter-time, or $492 for half-time pursuit.''; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking ''at the rate of'' and all that follows and inserting ''at the rate of the lesser of—

''(A) the established charges for tuition and fees that the educational institution involved requires similarly circumstanced nonveterans enrolled in the same program to pay; or

''(B)(i) for months occurring during fiscal year 2003, $900 per month for a full-time course; or (ii)

REV_00345436

for months occurring during a subsequent fiscal year, $985 per month for a full-time course.'';

(2) in subsection (b), by striking ''at the rate of'' and all that follows and inserting ''at the rate of—

''(1) for months occurring during fiscal year 2003, $900 per month; and

''(2) for months occurring during a subsequent fiscal year, $985 per month.''; and

(3) in subsection (c)(2), by striking ''shall be'' and all that follows and inserting ''shall be—

''(A) for months occurring during fiscal year 2003, $727 for full-time, $545 for three-quarter-time, or $364 for half-time pursuit; and

''(B) for months occurring during a subsequent fiscal year, $795 for full-time, $596 for three-quarter-time, or $398 for half-time pursuit.''.

(b) CORRESPONDENCE COURSES.—Section 3534(b) of that title is amended by striking ''for each $670'' and all that follows and inserting ''for each amount which is paid to the spouse as an educational assistance allowance for such course as follows:

''(1) For amounts paid during fiscal year 2003, $900.

REV_00345437

"(2) For amounts paid during a subsequent fiscal year, $985.".

(c) SPECIAL RESTORATIVE TRAINING.—Section 3542(a) of that title is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" after "(a)";

(2) by designating the second sentence as paragraph (2) and indenting such paragraph, as so designated, two ems from the left margin;

(3) in paragraph (1), as so designated, by striking "the basic rate of $670 per month." and inserting "the basic rate of—

"(A) for months occurring during fiscal year 2003, $900 per month; and

"(B) for months occurring during a subsequent fiscal year, $985 per month."; and

(4) in paragraph (2), as so designated—

(A) by striking "$184 per calendar month" and inserting "$282 per calendar month for months occurring during fiscal year 2003, or $307 per calendar months for months occurring during a subsequent fiscal year"; and

(B) by striking "$184 a month" and inserting "$282 a month for months occurring during fiscal year 2003, or $307 a month for months occurring during a subsequent fiscal year".

(d) APPRENTICESHIP TRAINING.—Section 3687(b)(2) of that title is amended by striking "shall be $488 for the first six months" and all that follows and inserting "shall be—

"(A) $655 for the first six months, $490 for the second six months, $325 for the third six months, and $164 for the fourth and any succeeding six-month period of training, if such six-month period of training begins during fiscal year 2003; and

"(B) $717 for the first six months, $536 for the second six months, $356 for the third six months, and $179 for the fourth and any succeeding six-month period of training, if such six-month period of training begins during a subsequent fiscal year.".

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—(1) The amendments made by this section shall take effect as of October 1, 2003, and shall apply with respect to educational assistance allowances payable under chapter 35 and section 3687(b)(2) of title 38, United States Code, for months beginning on or after that date.

REV_00345439

(2) No adjustment in rates of monthly training allowances shall be made under section 3687(d) of title 38, United States Code, for fiscal years 2003 and 2004.

SEC. 3. MODIFICATION OF DURATION OF EDUCATIONAL ASSISTANCE.

Section 3511(a)(1) of title 38, United States Code, is amended by striking "45 months" and all that follows and inserting "45 months, or 36 months in the case of a person who first files a claim for educational assistance under this chapter after the date of the enactment of the Survivors' and Dependents' Educational Assistance Adjustment Act of 2002, or to the equivalent thereof in part-time training.".

SEC. 4. INCREASE IN AGGREGATE ANNUAL AMOUNT AVAILABLE FOR STATE APPROVING AGENCIES FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

(a) INCREASE IN AMOUNT.—Section 3674(a)(4) of title 38, United States Code, is amended in the first sentence by striking "may not exceed $13,000,000" and all that follows through the end and inserting "may not exceed $18,000,000.".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 2002.

At high noon on Thursday, the last day of the Supreme Ct. session, let's all meet on the sidewalk in front of the Supreme Ct. steps to recite the Pledge of Allegiance.

No signs. No bullhorns. Just a decent recitation of the Pledge.

If the press asks about it, let's say, "Clearly, there is a problem in the American Judiciary when a decision like this is made. We need to confirm the Bush Judges and bring sanity and judicial restraint to the federal judiciary."

SAVE THE PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE! CONFIRM THE BUSH JUDGES!

Brett,

Thank you so much for getting this draft to me. Perfect timing as there was another Airlift Ops monthly briefing yesterday. Nancy suggested that instead of "appropriate commercial rate" that we state "lowest discount rate". This will actually reflect what is being done now as once the trip is announced, they make a run of the commercial rates that are available on that date. Please let me know if you have any comments. If not, please make this one edit and get a final to me in hard copy. Thanks for everything.

MEMORANDUM FOR CATHY ALIX

FROM: BRETT M. KAVANAUGH

SUBJECT: OFFICIAL TRAVEL OF FIRSY LADY ON MILITARY AIRCRAFT

As we discussed, this memorandum reiterates the long-standing practice and policy regarding First Lady travel.

It has been the policy of the last several Administration to provide military aircraft for travel of the First Lady. This practice continues.

White House staff or individuals accompanying the First Lady on official travel or for an official purpose travel on a non-reimbursable basis. Federal government employees and family members who accompany the First Lady on official trips also travel on a non-reimbursable basis.

Travel by the First Lady on military aircraft for personal purposes must be reimbursed at an appropriate commercial rate. White House staff or individuals accompanying the First Lady for an official purpose travel on a non-reimbursable basis. Other guests traveling on First Lady personal trips travel on a reimbursable basis at an appropriate commercial rate.

The Counsel's Office is prepared to assist as necessary to review classifications of travelers for political trips and mixed trips.

ok, except on my first point, to deal with your concern, I would change point 1 to "or might be protected by the incumbent or former President as privileged under the Constitution." I think it important to keep that in to accurately describe the process.

 High Priority **

I agree with Craig's comments below.

I do not agree with Brett's first change, because the second paragraph is describing NARA's review and withholding prior to giving notice; NARA does not withhold for Constitutional privilige until after we give notice and a President asserts privilege. So I don't think it's appropriate to talk about constitutional privilege in this letter.

I would prefer to leave in "what we then thought," since the total number went from 1500 to 1900, which seems to fall outside of the parameters of "approximately."

Finally, Brett's response to Craig's other email on mentioning P5, I left Brett a voicemail, and spoke to Craig, to explain why it is rather complicated, given all the various permutations (i.e., P5 and P1; not P5; personal; even early P2, before Reagan withdrew P2) of some of these records. I think it's better not to say anything.

So, here is what I propose as the final draft, per my comments above and Craig's below, subject to your approval.

few suggestions:
-- add "or might be protected as privileged under the Constitution" at the end of the second paragraph.
-- change "in hopes of facilitating the first opening" to "to facilitate the opening"---I WOULD BE IN FAVOR OF KEEPING THE WORD "FIRST" BECAUSE IT EMPHASIZES THIS WAS A NEW PROCEDURE AND MAY HELP US EXPLAIN SOME OF THE DELAY;
-- at end of that sentence add "The Reagan representative reviewed the records at that time and raised questions as to some."
-- delete "what we then thought were" [this is unnecessary because you say approximately]
-- change "as" to "after" in first sentence of paragraph 4
-- is the paragraph beginning "In addition" necessary? WE NEED THIS TO RESPOND TO HIS INTERROGATORY 10, WHICH ASKS ABOUT REAGAN NOTICES OTHER THAN THE 68,000

Dear Scott:

I am writing to respond to certain questions you have raised about the reference to the "approximately 1500 pages" of records in my letter of November 14, 2001, to Ms. Joanne Drake.

Beginning in 2000, NARA staff reviewed all of the records at the Reagan Library that had been withheld from disclosure under the Presidential Records Act restrictions (44 U.S.C. § 2204(a)), whether in response to FOIA requests or as a result of systematic review, during the twelve years following the end of the Reagan presidency, in order to determine which records would be subject to disclosure upon the expiration of the PRA restrictions on January 20, 2001. Records initially withheld under the Presidential restriction categories, particularly those records withheld under P5, might no longer require protection upon re-review, and therefore could be proposed for opening. Conversely, records initially withheld only under P5 might, upon re-review, also warrant protection under an applicable FOIA exemption (e.g., (b)(1) or (b)(6)), or might be determined to be personal records, as defined in 44 U.S.C. § 2201(3).

In the fall of 2000, after NARA staff made an initial determination on records that could be proposed for opening, NARA engaged in informal consultations with the representatives of former President Reagan to inform them of our re-review to facilitate the first opening of Presidential records no longer covered by the PRA restrictive categories. The Reagan representatives reviewed the records at that time and raised questions as to some. Following those consultations, NARA agreed to re-review and further discuss with the Reagan representatives the status of what we then thought were approximately 1500 pages of records for which questions were raised as to whether FOIA exemptions might apply and/or whether they might constitute personal records. NARA determined to have these discussions and make its final decisions on these documents following the completion of the notification and review process of the remaining approximately 68,000 pages of Reagan records for which no questions were raised by the Reagan representatives.

In May and June of 2002, after the notification and review process on the "68,000" pages was largely complete, NARA met with the Reagan representatives to discuss the so-called "1500" pages, and on June 27, 2002, provided notice to the former and incumbent Presidents for the proposed opening of what turned out to be approximately 1654 pages (approximately 246 pages were withdrawn under FOIA exemptions or as personal records).

REV_00345601

NARA will treat your FOIA request of May 7, 2002, as applying to all 1654 pages of records that are covered by the notice, and will respond once the notice process under Executive Order 13233 is completed.

In addition, NARA has provided notice for the opening of other Reagan Presidential records. On June 14, 2002, NARA opened approximately 23,653 pages of records and 43 minutes of audio tape in response to numerous pending FOIA requests (notice was provided on May 9, 2002, and no privilege was asserted); and on June 10 and June 28, 2002, NARA provided notice for the proposed opening of approximately 16,784 pages and twelve audiotapes of Reagan records. NARA will continue to provide notice on proposed openings on an ongoing basis.

I hope this is responsive to your questions.

Sincerely,

GARY M. STERN
General Counsel

To all,

Attached are draft EOP guidelines and procedures for travel in support of the President and Vice President, and the related transmittal memorandum.

These guidelines are intended to provide supplemental guidance to the Federal Travel Regulations, and other legislation pertinent to federal travel. These supplemental procedures are needed to accommodate the unique requirements and circumstances associated with Presidential and Vice Presidential travel.

The transmittal memorandum details the purpose for developing these procedures and background on the history of Presidential and Vice Presidential travel support. It will also serve as the starting point for our effort to develop and institutionalize Presidential and Vice Presidential travel which will serve the presidency and withstand the scrutiny of a public audit.

We are asking all of you who work in support of the President's and Vice President's travel to review this attachment and provide any comments in writing to the CFO's office (e-mail Kristin Savercool or myself) no later than Monday, July 8, 2002. It is really important for you to present alternative recommendations and complete rationale for all significant comments and issues.

We will incorporate your suggestions and present the final recommended package for final coordination. After final coordination, we will present the package for final approval and immediate implementation.

We look forward to working with you all to finalize these procedures, and believe that they will provide a solid basis for sound financial practices and accounting for Presidential and Vice Presidential travel.

MEMORANDUM FOR EOP CERTIFYING OFFICIALS

THROUGH: PHILLIP D. LARSEN
SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT AND DIRECTOR, OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATION

FROM: JAMES F. DANIEL
CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER

SUBJECT: EOP SUPPLEMENTALTRAVEL PROCEDURES FOR PRESIDENTIAL AND VICE PRESIDENTIAL TRAVEL

1. Purpose. This memorandum transmits for your review, comprehensive supplemental travel guidelines relating to the procurement and payment of travel services in conjunction with Presidential and Vice Presidential travel. The three main purposes of these guidelines are: (1) to ensure quality travel services are available to support the travel requirements of the President and Vice President; (2) to interpret statutory, Federal Travel Regulation, and other policy requirements in a manner that ensures full compliance with all applicable federal laws and regulations; and (3) to ensure full disclosure of all financial activities in the official accounting system.

These guidelines also highlight governing laws, regulations and policies relating to travel in the federal government. The guidelines clarify the roles and responsibilities of the White House Office (WHO), Office of the Vice President (OVP), Chief Financial Officer's (CFO) Travel Services Branch, and the Executive Office of the President's Travel Management Center (TMC). They detail the process by which travel services are ordered and paid for, and highlight the importance of the CFO providing timely and accurate financial information. For instance, the guidelines provide timeframes for submission of trip summaries which are critically important for accurate division of travel expenses between the government and political entities, and for timely payment of vendors and travelers within Prompt Payment requirements.

2. Background. For many years, travel support for the President and Vice President has presented a tremendous challenge in the EOP that has resulted in numerous General Accounting Office (GAO) audits, Congressional inquiries, and management reorganizations. These actions have resulted in millions of dollars in government spending to manage an annual travel budget of less than $1.5 million. More significantly,

2. names of travelers (if known and appropriate),
3. point of contact name and phone number for each component

Components may not make room reservations for anyone who does not have or will not have an approved travel authorization for the trip in question.

c. The WH Hotel Program Manager will coordinate with all non-WH, non-OVP traveling staff to obtain their credit card information for reservation and payment of those components lodging arrangements.
d. The WH Hotel Program Manager will issue a hotel letter reflecting all information requested above and instructing the hotel to bill each component individually, only for the rooms requested on the hotel letter.
e. Each component may change, add or delete travelers. They must contact the hotel directly to make the changes. The TAs for all approved travelers should be faxed to the hotel, prior to the use of the rooms, and hotels instructed to bill only for approved travelers. The hotel contact name and number will be listed on the hotel letter, which will be e-mailed to each component.
f. For official and mixed trips, the government contract rate will be used and pre-payment will be made using the WHO or OVP corporate travel accounts.
g. For 100% political trips, the hotel letter will provide a non-government credit card number, and contact information for pre-payment. The commercial rate should be charged, including tax.

In the event costs related to a 100% political trip are charged to the government in error, the political entity will reimburse the government for the commercial rate of the lodging costs. The difference between the commercial and government rates will be paid to the lodging provider.

3. Vehicle Rentals

a. When trip is announced, the WHO advance office, OVP advance office, or press office will complete a vehicle requisition form. Each form will include:

1. Travelers' names
2. Travelers' travel authorization numbers
3. Purpose of trip
4. Vehicle type
4. Pick up and drop off location and date
5. Name of requesting office
6. Point of contact name and phone number
7. Name and phone number of staff lead
8. Date of request
9. Trip number

b. The vehicle requisition form must be signed by a designated certifying official in the WHO, OVP, or press office.
c. Once approved, the form is submitted to the TMC. For 100% official and mixed trips the TMC will make reservations and pay the vehicle rental with the WHO, OVP, or press office corporate travel credit cards.
d. For 100% political trips, the vehicle requisition form will provide a non-government credit card number, and contact information for payment. The commercial rate should be charged, including tax.

In the event costs related to a 100% political trip are charged to the government in error, the political entity will reimburse the government for the commercial rate of the vehicle rental costs. The difference between the commercial and government rates will be paid to the rental company.

B. Vendor Payment Reconciliation and Payment to Credit Card Company

1. All official and mixed payments for airfare, hotels, and vehicle rental will be made with the White House Office or Vice President's Office official corporate travel credit accounts. These government issued credit accounts are for expenses related to official travel only.

Government credit accounts cannot be used for 100 percent political costs. Traveler must provide credit account for use by TMC when trips are 100% political.

a. At the conclusion of each trip, the TMC will reconcile each airfare, lodging, or vehicle rental bill, ensuring that proper payments have been made for authorized WHO and OVP travelers.
b. On a monthly basis, the TMC will reconcile the monthly credit account bill against the individual trip bills, breaking out and identifying all charges by TA number and trip number. The TMC will forward the reconciled bills to the CFO's travel services center for payment.
c. WHO or OVP will forward trip summaries to the CFO's travel services center no later than 7 calendar days following completion of a Presidential or Vice Presidential trip. One trip summary will be provided per Presidential or Vice Presidential swing. The trip summary will include each trip site, the number of official/political minutes at each trip site, and the percentage political/official time. The summaries will also provide an overall political/official percentage split, if warranted, based on the entire swing. This will be the basis for cost allocations for the traveling staff. The summaries must also clearly identify travelers who were designated to be 100% official or 100% political at all times.
d. Based on the trip summary, the CFO's office will allocate the political versus official costs of the reconciled trip costs. A financial tracking report will be created for each trip listing a detailed breakout of airfare, hotel, vehicle rental, voucher and site costs (see attached example).

e. On a monthly basis, the CFO's travel services center will provide the WHO and OVP the financial tracking reports for trips completed in the prior month, and the accompanying documentation, for approval and signature by the WHO/OVP certifying officials.

These financial tracking reports will report all costs for each individual trip. They will be used for approval and payment to the credit card company of airfare, lodging, and vehicle rental costs that have been paid by government credit accounts.

f. The WHO and OVP will review and approve the allocation of costs, certify the official portion for payment, and forward the political financial tracking report with accompanying back-up to the appropriate political entity for payment of the political portion.

g. When approved, the government will pay the credit card company for the official portion only of the monthly reconciled bill, based on the certified financial tracking reports.

h. The political entity will send a check to the credit card company for the amount of the political share of the trip costs. They will also provide WHO/OVP with a copy of the check as confirmation of payment.

C. Vouchers

1. When a trip is announced, WHO and OVP staffs will complete and approve travel authorization forms for all travelling staff.
2. Staff will use their personal resources to purchase meals and incidentals while on travel status.
3. Within five days after completion of the trip, travelers will submit completed travel vouchers and accompanying receipts for reimbursement of meals and incidental costs incurred on travel status to their certifying officer for approval and certification.
4. The WHO/OVP certifying officers will forward vouchers to CFO's office for processing and payment.
5. If trip is 100% political WHO/OVP will forward vouchers to political entity for payment in full.
6. If trip is 100% official, the Government will reimburse traveler in full.
7. If trip is mixed, the Government will reimburse traveler for official portion only. The CFO's travel services center will break out official and political costs based on trip summaries provided by the WHO/OVP. The travel services center will forward copies of the vouchers to the WHO/OVP certifying officials, who will then forward them to the political entity. The political entity will issue checks to the travelers, sent to their home addresses, for the political share of their vouchered costs. Following payment, the political entity will provide confirmation of the voucher payments to the WHO/OVP certifying officers.

D. Authorization and Payment of Site Expenses

1. Authorization

a. The CFO's travel services center will contact the advance staff lead to identify the type of visit (i.e., Tier I, II, or III event), to obtain an initial estimate of expenses for the event, to exchange contact numbers, and to identify the event funding sponsor.

b. The travel services center will contact the financial point of contact for the sponsoring event host(s) to establish the total host budget. A Funds Commitment letter will be prepared and faxed to the host point(s) of contact for review and signature. This letter will provide confirmation of the host's intent to support the Presidential trip and the total budget amount. If the White House is the sponsoring host, the CFO's accounting office will provide the total budget.

c. The CFO's travel services center will inform the staff and press leads of the approved budget for the official and press segments of the visit.

d. The CFO's travel services center will authorize the lead to contact vendors to arrange for services. The leads will be instructed that they are not authorized to obligate the government for services. Once suitable vendors have been identified, the trip leads will forward vendor names to the CFO's travel services center, or request that the vendor contact the CFO's travel services center directly.

e. The CFO's office will enter into a contract or agreement with the vendor and will provide billing instructions.

f. Upon receipt of the vendor information, the travel services center will contact each vendor to explain the billing procedures, provide point of contact numbers, and obtain written estimates of the goods/services to initiate the proper procurement procedures.

g. The travel services center will record the initial estimates in the CFO financial tracking report.

h. The travel services center will coordinate with the staff leads to ensure the written estimates accurately reflect the goods and services requested.

6. Payment

a. Upon conclusion of the event, final invoices are faxed to the CFO's travel services center. Each invoice will be reconciled by the travel services center and verified by the advance staff lead prior to processing for payment.

b. Upon completion of the reconciliation and verification process, the invoice will be forwarded to the WHO/OVP certifying officer for approval and certification.

c. Once the invoices have been approved for payment, the CFO's office will pay the vendor invoice with appropriate payment method (e.g., credit card, IMPAC check, U.S. Treasury Check) and update the CFO financial tracking report with final site costs.

VIII. SAMPLE FORMS AND MEMORANDA (Will be provided at briefing)

A. Draft memoranda to TMC on Issuance and Payment of Airline Tickets
B. Airfare reconciliation worksheet
C. Draft memoranda requesting lodging reservations
D. Draft hotel letter detailing travelers by component and detailed payment instructions
E. Sample hotel reconciliation worksheet
A. Draft memoranda to TMC on issuance of vehicle rental reservations and payment
G. Sample staff vehicle requisition form
H. Sample press vehicle requisition form
I. Sample vehicle rental reconciliation worksheet
J. Payment package with reconciled financial tracking summaries per trip, which will be sent monthly to WHO/OVP. Package includes:
    1. Draft memorandum to WHO/OVP transmitting trip financial tracking report/s and supporting documentation
    2. Sample trip financial tracking report, highlighting official share
    3. Draft memorandum to WHO/OVP transmitting trip financial tracking report/s and supporting documentation to political entity
    4. Sample trip financial tracking report, highlighting political share
    5. Sample trip summary
    6. Trip status listing
K. Draft transmittal memorandum requesting travel voucher certification
L. Sample travel authorization/travel voucher reconciliation form
M. Office of Presidential Advance event designation
N. Sample host letter of financial commitment for site costs
O. Sample site cost reconciliation the current process has required each administration to divert limited human resources from the WHO and OVP to respond to travel related issues.

Each administration has attempted to develop procedures for the WHO and the OVP travel support. These procedures, drafted largely by the administrations' legal counsels, focus on legal requirements and not on generally accepted accounting standards and principles. While, this may have served the needs then, it is not sufficient to meet our current challenges. These travel guidelines are designed to serve our EOP customers and meet our legal compliance and disclosure requirements, while favorably withstanding scrutiny from professional external auditors and accountants.

During the past several years, federal and corporate business processes have evolved significantly, bringing many changes. Changes such as the Travel and Transportation Reform Act, the Prompt Payment Act, use of government credit cards, e-ticketing and the elimination of cash advances, coupled with the requirement to manage and administer political costs in close proximity to official costs, have required the EOP to radically alter its travel support processes and procedures. In addition, the EOP's inclusion in the provisions of the Chief Financial Officers' Act requires us to expand the scope of our travel procedures beyond legal considerations to include sound auditable financial practices.

In addition to the many process changes outlined above, the EOP faces some unique reporting and disclosure challenges not shared by other government agencies. While the Office of Management and Budget only requires recording and reporting of travel related cost at a summary level, the EOP is required to track costs in much greater detail. Congress requires extensive disclosure of Presidential and Vice Presidential travel information in connection with the annual appropriations process. We are required to track the travel of the four principals, i.e., the President, the Vice President, the First Lady, and the spouse of the Vice President, independently of one another. We must track and report the dates, locations and costs for each component such as airlines, lodging, rental cars, meals, et cetera, for each individual trip. We must identify each trip as to the nature of its purpose (i.e., 100% official, mixed official/political, or 100% political) and properly allocate costs accordingly. We must also track costs for Presidential and Vice Presidential trips sponsored by other federal agencies and collect and accurately record reimbursements from these sponsoring agencies.

3. The Current Process. A review of our current travel support process in the EOP found that we are meeting the first requirement criterion, the provision of travel support services as required by WHO and OVP staff in accompaniment of the President and Vice President. However, we found serious internal weaknesses in the historical travel process with regard to both legal compliance, and meeting financial accounting standards for accurate information and timely disclosure.

First, the current travel process provides travel services without proper authorization and documentation from the appropriate agency approving official. Invoices and vouchers often are received which do not have the required authorization approved and recorded in the financial system. This process results in delayed payments to vendors, significant difficulty reconciling bills, and errors in posting to the accounting system. Resolutions under these circumstances are difficult and time consuming for the travel services staff as well as agency staff.

Second, our current process presents a significant challenge to meeting the legal requirements of the Travel and Transportation Reform Act and the Prompt Payment Act in paying travel vouchers and vendor invoices. These laws require payment of proper travel vouchers and vendor invoices within thirty (30) days of receipt.

Third, the current process is not standardized or uniform for travel financial elements such as trip summaries, travel costs, and political reimbursements. This has resulted in confusion and uncertainty as to final resolution of bills associated with a trip. The impact is even greater for mixed trips with official and political components.

4. Political Travel. We recognize that the co-mingling of political and official elements is inherent to travel in accompaniment of the President and Vice President. These guidelines define the process for allocating non-severable (airfare, lodging, rental cars, and meals) costs between government and political entities. They provide standard procedures for authorizing, paying, and collecting reimbursement cost for non-severable activities, and prohibit the treatment of severable political travel services as official in any way. The government rate will not be used nor will any official government credit card be used for severable political travel services.

Travel requirements for non-severable (mixed) travel services will be authorized and paid to vendors as official. The rationale for treating these trips as official is based on the requirement to have the traveler on an official travel authorization, the cost is non-severable, and the government authorized the travel and entered into the agreement with the vendors. Also, since the travel is performed on an official travel authorization, the government rate will apply to all travel services and the government travel credit cards will be used to make payments to travel vendors. Costs incurred will be thoroughly documented, and the political entity will be charged for its share of the costs.

Laws and regulations are mostly silent when it comes to the allocation of travel costs for trips with a mixed official and political nature. The hard-time formula, which divides costs according to a pro-rata share of the principals' time spent at either political or official functions, has been the method used by previous administrations to allocate costs between political or official functions. The formula is documented within a trip summary, and this trip summary then becomes the basis by which all non-severable costs will be allocated.

5. Political Reimbursements. These guidelines make every effort to balance the many federal statutes governing appropriations and reimbursements. While the hard-time formula meets the requirement to not use government resources for non-official activities, if not applied correctly, it could violate the government's prohibition on appropriation augmentation. A direct application of the hard-time formula would result in the political entity reimbursing the government agency appropriation for each element (airline fares, lodging, rental cars, and meal). This principle states that the government may not charge another entity for costs incurred, unless those costs represent an incremental increase to official business costs. However, in the case of air fare, there is no incremental cost to the government. The round trip airfare for an employee travelling to Chicago would be the same, without regard to duration, whether the trip is 100% official, or 60% official and 40% political. Nonetheless, in order that the political entity not benefit from the government, the political entity would be required to reimburse the government for 40% of the round-trip airfare incurred by the government. To avoid augmentation, non-incremental reimbursements for airfare should be deposited to the Treasury miscellaneous general receipts account.

Currently there are several different procedures in use for managing, processing, collecting and paying political reimbursements at the EOP. Each of the elements providing support such as the Executive Residence, the Residence of the Vice President, the White House Office, the Office of the Vice President, the Office of Administration, the White House Airlift Operations, and the White House Communications Agency are administering different procedures. The varying procedures and practices were developed for various reasons over the years such as public law, congressional inquiries, leadership preferences, news articles, legal interpretations, et cetera. We believe the ideal model to collect political reimbursements at the EOP is the one currently authorized and in use by the Executive Residence. The Residence maintains a deposit (specifically authorized by congress) from the political entity, sufficient to cover losses should they be realized. Therefore, the government can fully fund costs of a mixed or political nature and collect reimbursement from the political entity in arrears, without risk to the government.

We strongly recommend the administration petition for the Congressional approval required to make this reimbursement process standard for all EOP agencies. This method would virtually eliminate risk to the government, would significantly reduce administrative costs related to political reimbursements, and would provide a uniform process for handling reimbursements at the EOP. All of these goals are emphasized in the CFO Act and the President's Management Agenda.

6. Conclusion. These guidelines will significantly enhance our ability to meet the service requirements of the WHO and OVP, will fully comply with all applicable laws and regulation, and disclose accurate and timely financial information. We believe that these procedures will correct long-standing weaknesses inherent in the EOP travel process.

We welcome review and comment from the White House Office and Office of the Vice President travel staff, administrative staff and counsel. We look forward to working with these offices to further refine these travel procedures and develop a finished product that will significantly enhance the travel support to the President and Vice President.

Financial Guidelines and Procedures for Travel in Accompaniment of the President and Vice President

I. PURPOSE

This document provides guidelines and procedures for the Executive Office of the President (EOP) regarding travel in accompaniment of the President and Vice President.

II. REQUIREMENT

These procedures are written to satisfy the following three criteria:

1. To provide complete travel services to the staff accompanying the President and Vice President, including air travel, lodging, vehicle rental and meals and incidentals.
2. To provide these services in full compliance with all applicable federal laws and regulations, including the Travel and Transportation Reform Act of 1998, the Prompt Payment Act of 1983, the Federal Travel Regulations, Federal Appropriations Law, and generally accepted accounting standards and principles.
3. To provide accurate accounting information on travel obligations and expenditures and timely disclosure of this information, both to the White House Office (WHO) and Office of the Vice President (OVP) as well as disclosure in auditable financial statements. This latter criterion is critical, as the EOP is now included within the guidelines of the Chief Financial Officer's Act, and will be audited at the end of fiscal year 2003.

III. APPLICABILITY

These guidelines apply to all agencies within the EOP who participate in travel in accompaniment of the President and Vice President

IV. LEGAL REFERENCES

31 U.S.C. § 3528
Prompt Payment Act of 1983
Chief Financial Officers Act of 1990
Public Law 106-58 § 638
Travel and Transportation Act of 1998
Federal Travel Regulations
Federal Appropriations Law

V. DEFINITIONS

Certifying Official (WHO/OVP) - Agency official responsible and liable for the legality of proposed payments and for the amount of illegal or improper payments resulting from their certification.

Travel Management Center (TMC) - The contracted agent for procurement of travel related services such as airline tickets, lodging reservations, and vehicle rentals while in travel status.

CFO's Travel Services Branch - Group assigned to manage the business aspects of Presidential and Vice Presidential travel, to include financial and procurement services.

Disbursing Officer (CFO's Office) - An officer or employee of a federal department or agency, civilian or military, designated to disburse monies and render accounts in accordance with laws and regulations governing the disbursement of public funds.

Government Purchase Card - Government credit card used for the payment of non-travel related goods and services (i.e. staging, pipe and drape, banners, etc.), in support of events during Presidential travel.

Government Travel Card - Government credit card used for the payment of travel related services (lodging, airfare, vehicle rentals, etc.) in support of Presidential travel.

Hard-time Formula - Financial formula used to determine the official and political allocations for mixed trips. This formula is based on the pro-rata share of minutes spent at official and political functions on a given trip. This formula is applied to the expenses of Presidential travel and allocated appropriately to the official and political entity for payment of the expenses. (e.g., Official – 60%, Political – 40%)

Mixed Travel - Travel involving official and political duties associated with a trip in advance or in accompaniment of the President or Vice President.

Political Travel - Travel involving political duties associated with a trip in advance or in accompaniment of the President or Vice President.

Presidential and Vice Presidential Travel - Travel involving official duties associated with a trip in advance or in accompaniment of the President, Vice President, First Lady or the spouse of the Vice President, which is under an official travel authorization.

Severable Costs - Costs able to be divided into independent obligations of official and political entities.

V. RESPONSIBILITIES

Official Traveler - Participates in all aspects of official and/or mixed travel in support of the President or Vice President including air travel, lodging, vehicle rental, and vouchered expenses, having obtained an approved travel authorization from his or her agency's certifying official.

Certifying Official (WHO/OVP) - Reviews and approves all requests for travel services, including travel authorizations, lodging reservations, vehicle rental reservations, and travel vouchers, to ensure no travel services are procured for travelers who are not properly authorized. Approves and certifies for payment all invoices and vouchers resulting from authorizations.

Travel Management Center (TMC) - In adherence to the terms of its contract with the Office of Administration, provides travel services to properly authorized travelers in conjunction with official travel of the President and Vice President.

CFO's Travel Services Branch - Reviews all travel related expenditures, reconciles travel payments for each trip, and breaks out cost allocations for travel with mixed official/political purpose based on trip summaries provided by WHO/OVP.

Disbursing Officer (CFO's Office) – Ensures payments are in proper form, including all supporting documentation, before authorizing disbursement by the Department of the Treasury.

VI. POLICY

A. Travel Authorization. A travel authorization (TA) is mandatory for all travel. It must be approved and recorded for all participating individuals, in accordance with the Federal Travel Regulations (FTR), § 301-2.1.

1. All TAs will designate type of travel (i.e. 100% official, mixed or 100% political).

2. All TAs must be approved by the Agency Head or a person with delegated authority.

3. If a TA is deemed 100% political, none of the following costs can be charged to the government credit card: airfare, vehicle rental, or lodging.

B. Trip Summaries. For all Presidential and Vice Presidential trips, a standardized trip summary will be completed.

The standardized trip summary will include itinerary, hard time cost breakouts for complete swings (trips beginning when Principal departs DC area and completed when Principal returns to DC area) and will identify all accompanying personnel as 100% official, 100% political or mixed.

The hard time formula will be used to determine official and political allocation for mixed trips. This formula is based on the pro-rata share of minutes spent at official and political functions on a given trip.

Trip summaries are required to be submitted to the CFO's travel services center no later than 7 calendar days following the completion of the trip.

C. Reservation and Payment for travel related services. The following outlines the policy for making reservations and payments for travel related services.

1. 100% official and mixed trips

a. Presidential travel with a mixed agenda (political and official events) will be treated as official travel for purposes of authorization and payment.
b. Government travel cards will be used for the reservation and immediate payment of travel services, to include airfare, lodging and rental vehicles for official and mixed travel in accordance with the Travel and Transportation Reform Act of 1998.
c. Government purchase cards will be used for immediate payment of official expenses other than the categories listed above (airfare, lodging and rental vehicles).
d. Travel services (airline tickets, lodging, and vehicle rental) for travelers on official and mixed trips will be procured paid at the government rate. The official component of the travel warrants the use of the government rate for mixed trip.
e. Incremental severable costs (hotel, car rentals and vouchers) will be reimbursed to the agency appropriation that incurred the cost. Non-incremental costs (airfare) will be deposited to the Treasury general receipts fund.
f. The official portion of the travelers' travel vouchers will be paid upon receipt by official funds as required by the Travel and Transportation Act of 1998. The vouchers will be forwarded to the political party if travel is mixed. The political party will send the political reimbursement portion directly to the travelers' home addresses.
g. Travel bills (airfare, lodging, and vehicle rental) will be grouped by trip and presented monthly for review and certification by the agencies certifying officials for 100% official trips.
h. Travel bills for mixed and political trips, will be grouped by trip and presented monthly to the White House or Vice President's office to forward to the political party.

2. 100% political trips

a. Travel services (airfare, lodging and car rental) for official travelers will be arranged and paid separately from 100% political travelers. The government travel credit card may not be used for any cost, which is 100% political and severable.

b. All bills (airfare, hotels, car rental, and vouchers) will be forwarded to the Travel Services Branch. All invoices will be logged in by the Travel Services Branch and forwarded to the WHO or the OVP. They will then forward all invoices to the correct political party.

c. The use of the contracted Travel Management Center (TMC) will be available for the purchase of travel services and will be secured by a non-government credit card.

VII. PROCEDURES

A. Authorizations for Travel Accommodations

When a trip is announced, the advance office will assign a trip number. This number will be indicated on the travel authorizations, and all associated requests for travel services.

1. Airline Tickets

a. The Travel Management Center (TMC) will make all reservations for travelers on official, mixed and political trips. The TMC may make reservations and procure travel for personal and political travel.

b. All travelers must have an approved travel authorization (indicating the trip number) before tickets are purchased.

In rare instances when tickets must be issued, or reservations made without an approved written travel authorization, a verbal approval will be substituted by designated agency officials. A list of authorized certifying officials will be maintained by the TMC, and updated as necessary by the White House Office and Office of the Vice President.

c. For official and mixed trips, the government rate will be used and pre-payment will be made using the WHO or OVP corporate travel accounts.

d. For 100% political trips, payment will be made with a non-government credit card at the commercial rate.

In the event costs related to a 100% political trip are charged to the government in error, the political entity will reimburse the government for the commercial rate of the airline tickets. The difference between the commercial and government rates will be deposited in the U.S. Treasury Miscellaneous Receipts account

2. Lodging

a. When trip is announced, WHO and/or OVP advance offices will notify the White House Hotel Program Manager, and request lodging arrangements.

b. Each component office with traveling staff must provide a lodging request form to the WH Hotel Program Manager, which includes:

1. trip number
2. number of rooms requested,

Right. That should not change costs much.

Michigan senators create crisis by vetoing judicial appointees

The nomination of Michigan Court of Appeals Judge Richard Griffin to the federal bench makes him the latest pawn is an outrageous, lingering stalemate between the White House and the U.S. Senate. It has created a severe shortage of judges.
For years, it was a deadlock between the Clinton White House and the Republican-ruled Senate. Now it's between the Bush White House and the narrowly Democratic Senate -- where Michigan's Carl Levin and Debbie Stabenow essentially have veto power over appointees from their state.

On Thursday, President Bush nominated Griffin to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which has declared a judicial emergency because half of its 16 positions are vacant. Four of the vacancies are Michigan seats.
But there may not even be a hearing this year on confirmation of Griffin and three previous Michigan Bush nominees who have been twisting in the wind for more than a year while politicians play tit-for-tat.
The federal court system has 86 vacancies. The percentage is highest in the 6th Circuit, which handles appeals from federal district courts in Michigan, Kentucky, Ohio and Tennessee.
Gov. John Engler Friday correctly declared the Senate guilty of "misuse of the advise and consent authority." He's particularly frustrated by the vacancies and backlog in the 6th Circuit, where Michigan is appealing federal court rulings that knocked down laws on drug testing of welfare recipients and registries of sex offenders.
Engler told me the problem is so serious he thinks President Bush should consider filling all vacancies with recess appointments of judges who would serve two years without Senate confirmation and then step down.
"America is facing a crisis in our courts," says U.S. Rep. David Camp, R-Midland. "The Senate has failed to see the importance of fulfilling its constitutional responsibility."
Traditionally, the Senate Judiciary Committee will not advance a president's judicial nomination without consent of the home state senators. Democrats Levin and Stabenow vow that the four Michigan vacancies in the 6th will not be filled "in the absence of bipartisan compromise."
The shoe was on the other foot before the 2000 election that put Bush in the White House and Stabenow in the seat of Republican Sen. Spencer Abraham, who had balked at Clinton appointees to the court.
Michigan Court of Appeals Judge Helene White and Detroit attorney Kathleen McCree Lewis were nominated to the federal bench by Clinton but never got a hearing in the GOP-controlled Senate. Levin says White's "four-year wait was longer than that of any nominee in Senate history."
After Bush's nomination of Griffin -- son of ex-Sen. Bob Griffin -- Levin and Stabenow said: "The White House has regrettably opted for stalemate" over the 6th Circuit.
They said they had "made repeated attempts to reach compromise." One would have Bush nominate White and Lewis to appeals and district vacancies.
It was wrong for the Senate to fail to act on Clinton's Michigan nominees. But another wrong won't make things right for Michigan. Enough is enough.
Griffin, Federal District Judge David McKeague, state Appeals Judge Henry Saad and Wayne Circuit Court Judge Susan Neilson should be individually evaluated for Michigan vacancies on the 6th Circuit -- not shelved until voters decide Nov. 5 which party will rule the Senate.
Senators, it is long past time to fill Michigan's voids in the hall of justice.
