TREATMENT AND STATUS OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO

January 22, 2002

What is the legal status of the prisoners at Guantanamo? Are they prisoners of war?

- We are treating all of the detainees at Guantanamo humanely and consistent with the principles of the Third Geneva Convention of 1949. The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined.

- All detainees are being provided three appropriate meals a day, medical care, clothing, shelter, showers, and the opportunity to worship. The detainees will not, of course, be subjected to physical or mental abuse. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. We are building enclosed, long-term facilities to house the detainees.

What do you mean when you say that prisoners will be treated "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention? Are the conditions at Guantanamo "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention?

- The conditions in Guantanamo are fully consistent with the Third Geneva Convention's core requirement that all detainees be treated humanely. We are treating all detainees humanely. All detainees are being provided shelter, food, water, and medical care. They are, of course, not being tortured or subjected to any physical or mental abuse. Moreover, we are providing all detainees the treatment provided to POWs under the Convention taking into account appropriate factors such as security and the temporary nature of the facilities in Guantanamo. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. Other than the fact that the detainees are in detention, their material living conditions are substantially better than they were before they were captured. When in their separate enclosures, detainees are NOT handcuffed or shackled; they are free to move about in their separate enclosures.

What specific benefits are the detainees receiving?

- All detainees are being provided three meals a day that meet Muslim laws with regard to diet; water; medical care; clothing and shoes; shelter; showers; soap and toilet articles; and the opportunity to worship.

- Detainees are being given foam sleeping pads and blankets as well as towels and washcloths.

- They are given correspondence materials and will be allowed to send and receive mail. They will be allowed to receive packages of food and clothing, subject to security screening.

- Money or other personal effects collected from each detainee will be accounted for in his name and safeguarded.

- We will re-evaluate continuously the conditions of the detainees. Detainees will be permitted to raise their concerns and we will attempt to address them to the extent consistent with security.

So what's the practical effect of the determination that the detainees are not prisoners of war? What will they be denied that they would otherwise be entitled to receive as POWs?

- The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined. Some of the specific treatment conditions provided to POWs by the Third Geneva Convention were suitable for regular soldiers in 1949 but are not appropriate for terrorists in 2002. Some treatment conditions are not compatible with the extraordinary security risk posed by these detainees, who are extremely violent and dangerous and pose a threat to the U.S. forces who are guarding them and to each other.

- For example, we do not plan to install canteens where detainees may purchase food, soap, and tobacco. We will not be giving the detainees at Guantanamo a monthly advance of pay, or allow them to have and consult personal financial accounts. Detainees will not be allowed to receive scientific equipment, musical instruments, or sports outfits.

Some experts have said that the open-air cages in which the prisoners are being held are not consistent with the Geneva Convention? Is that right?

- We do not have facilities in place at Guantanamo ready to house several hundred extremely dangerous individuals. The detainees at Guantanamo are being housed in temporary open-air shelters until long-term facilities can be arranged; these shelters are fully appropriate given the mild climate of Cuba. But we are building facilities in Guantanamo that are more appropriate for housing the detainees on a long-term basis.

- Many detainees at Guantanamo pose a severe security risk both to those responsible for guarding them and to each other. Clearly, many of the detainees have not "surrendered" and continue to fight even while detained. Some of these individuals demonstrated how dangerous they are in uprisings at Mazar-e-Sharif and in Pakistan. The United States must take into account the need for security in establishing the conditions of detention at Guantanamo. It is not possible for us to house them collectively in tents or other open spaces without undue threat to our personnel who are guarding and detaining them.

Will you seek to amend the Geneva Conventions to address the new realities of the war against terrorism?

- I am not aware of any effort to amend the Geneva Conventions at this time. Our conflict with the Taliban and al-Qaida is much different from past conflicts, however. The Taliban and al-Qaida have demonstrated their contempt for the traditional laws and customs of war accepted by all civilized states.

How long will you hold detainees? Until the end of hostilities in Afghanistan? Until the conclusion of the war against terrorism?

- We will hold the detainees until an appropriate disposition can be made for each detainee. We may prosecute certain detainees found to have committed crimes. We will turn other detainees over to their home countries or to third countries for detention and/or prosecution. We may hold other detainees for a longer period if we believe that they still pose a threat to safety and security of our forces or nationals. We may need to detain people if they clearly plan to commit further terrorist attacks against us or others.

How will you decide the disposition of each individual? When will you do this? If they are tried, where will they be tried?

- We will make an individual determination in each case. We may prosecute detainees who have committed specific crimes against us. We may, in some cases, turn detainees over to their home countries or to third countries if those countries request that they be returned for detention and prosecution.

Will this decision affect treatment of U.S. forces in future operations or conflicts? Will it open them to prosecution before foreign civil courts or international tribunals such as the ICC?

- Our detention of members of the Taliban and al-Qaida should have no legal or practical effect on our own forces.

TREATMENT AND STATUS OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO

January 22, 2002

What is the legal status of the prisoners at Guantanamo? Are they prisoners of war?

- We are treating all of the detainees at Guantanamo humanely and consistent with the principles of the Third Geneva Convention of 1949. The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined.

- All detainees are being provided three appropriate meals a day, medical care, clothing, shelter, showers, and the opportunity to worship. The detainees will not, of course, be subjected to physical or mental abuse. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. We are building enclosed, long-term facilities to house the detainees.

What do you mean when you say that prisoners will be treated "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention? Are the conditions at Guantanamo "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention?

- The conditions in Guantanamo are fully consistent with the Third Geneva Convention's core requirement that all detainees be treated humanely. We are treating all detainees humanely. All detainees are being provided shelter, food, water, and medical care. They are, of course, not being tortured or subjected to any physical or mental abuse. Moreover, we are providing all detainees the treatment provided to POWs under the Convention taking into account appropriate factors such as security and the temporary nature of the facilities in Guantanamo. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. Other than the fact that the detainees are in detention, their material living conditions are substantially better than they were before they were captured. When in their separate enclosures, detainees are NOT handcuffed or shackled; they are free to move about in their separate enclosures.

What specific benefits are the detainees receiving?

- All detainees are being provided three meals a day that meet Muslim laws with regard to diet; water; medical care; clothing and shoes; shelter; showers; soap and toilet articles; and the opportunity to worship.

- Detainees are being given foam sleeping pads and blankets as well as towels and washcloths.

- They are given correspondence materials and will be allowed to send and receive mail. They will be allowed to receive packages of food and clothing, subject to security screening.

- Money or other personal effects collected from each detainee will be accounted for in his name and safeguarded.

- We will re-evaluate continuously the conditions of the detainees. Detainees will be permitted to raise their concerns and we will attempt to address them to the extent consistent with security.

So what's the practical effect of the determination that the detainees are not prisoners of war? What will they be denied that they would otherwise be entitled to receive as POWs?

- The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined. Some of the specific treatment conditions provided to POWs by the Third Geneva Convention were suitable for regular soldiers in 1949 but are not appropriate for terrorists in 2002. Some treatment conditions are not compatible with the extraordinary security risk posed by these detainees, who are extremely violent and dangerous and pose a threat to the U.S. forces who are guarding them and to each other.

- For example, we do not plan to install canteens where detainees may purchase food, soap, and tobacco. We will not be giving the detainees at Guantanamo a monthly advance of pay, or allow them to have and consult personal financial accounts. Detainees will not be allowed to receive scientific equipment, musical instruments, or sports outfits.

Some experts have said that the open-air cages in which the prisoners are being held are not consistent with the Geneva Convention? Is that right?

- We do not have facilities in place at Guantanamo ready to house several hundred extremely dangerous individuals. The detainees at Guantanamo are being housed in temporary open-air shelters until long-term facilities can be arranged; these shelters are fully appropriate given the mild climate of Cuba. But we are building facilities in Guantanamo that are more appropriate for housing the detainees on a long-term basis.

- Many detainees at Guantanamo pose a severe security risk both to those responsible for guarding them and to each other. Clearly, many of the detainees have not "surrendered" and continue to fight even while detained. Some of these individuals demonstrated how dangerous they are in uprisings at Mazar-e-Sharif and in Pakistan. The United States must take into account the need for security in establishing the conditions of detention at Guantanamo. It is not possible for us to house them collectively in tents or other open spaces without undue threat to our personnel who are guarding and detaining them.

Will you seek to amend the Geneva Conventions to address the new realities of the war against terrorism?

- I am not aware of any effort to amend the Geneva Conventions at this time. Our conflict with the Taliban and al-Qaida is much different from past conflicts, however. The Taliban and al-Qaida have demonstrated their contempt for the traditional laws and customs of war accepted by all civilized states.

How long will you hold detainees? Until the end of hostilities in Afghanistan? Until the conclusion of the war against terrorism?

- We will hold the detainees until an appropriate disposition can be made for each detainee. We may prosecute certain detainees found to have committed crimes. We will turn other detainees over to their home countries or to third countries for detention and/or prosecution. We may hold other detainees for a longer period if we believe that they still pose a threat to safety and security of our forces or nationals. We may need to detain people if they clearly plan to commit further terrorist attacks against us or others.

How will you decide the disposition of each individual? When will you do this? If they are tried, where will they be tried?

- We will make an individual determination in each case. We may prosecute detainees who have committed specific crimes against us. We may, in some cases, turn detainees over to their home countries or to third countries if those countries request that they be returned for detention and prosecution.

Will this decision affect treatment of U.S. forces in future operations or conflicts? Will it open them to prosecution before foreign civil courts or international tribunals such as the ICC?

- Our detention of members of the Taliban and al-Qaida should have no legal or practical effect on our own forces.

TREATMENT AND STATUS OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO

January 22, 2002

What is the legal status of the prisoners at Guantanamo? Are they prisoners of war?

- We are treating all of the detainees at Guantanamo humanely and consistent with the principles of the Third Geneva Convention of 1949. The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined.

- All detainees are being provided three appropriate meals a day, medical care, clothing, shelter, showers, and the opportunity to worship. The detainees will not, of course, be subjected to physical or mental abuse. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. We are building enclosed, long-term facilities to house the detainees.

What do you mean when you say that prisoners will be treated "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention? Are the conditions at Guantanamo "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention?

- The conditions in Guantanamo are fully consistent with the Third Geneva Convention's core requirement that all detainees be treated humanely. We are treating all detainees humanely. All detainees are being provided shelter, food, water, and medical care. They are, of course, not being tortured or subjected to any physical or mental abuse. Moreover, we are providing all detainees the treatment provided to POWs under the Convention taking into account appropriate factors such as security and the temporary nature of the facilities in Guantanamo. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. Other than the fact that the detainees are in detention, their material living conditions are substantially better than they were before they were captured. When in their separate enclosures, detainees are NOT handcuffed or shackled; they are free to move about in their separate enclosures.

What specific benefits are the detainees receiving?

- All detainees are being provided three meals a day that meet Muslim laws with regard to diet; water; medical care; clothing and shoes; shelter; showers; soap and toilet articles; and the opportunity to worship.

- Detainees are being given foam sleeping pads and blankets as well as towels and washcloths.

- They are given correspondence materials and will be allowed to send and receive mail. They will be allowed to receive packages of food and clothing, subject to security screening.

- Money or other personal effects collected from each detainee will be accounted for in his name and safeguarded.

- We will re-evaluate continuously the conditions of the detainees. Detainees will be permitted to raise their concerns and we will attempt to address them to the extent consistent with security.

So what's the practical effect of the determination that the detainees are not prisoners of war? What will they be denied that they would otherwise be entitled to receive as POWs?

- The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined. Some of the specific treatment conditions provided to POWs by the Third Geneva Convention were suitable for regular soldiers in 1949 but are not appropriate for terrorists in 2002. Some treatment conditions are not compatible with the extraordinary security risk posed by these detainees, who are extremely violent and dangerous and pose a threat to the U.S. forces who are guarding them and to each other.

- For example, we do not plan to install canteens where detainees may purchase food, soap, and tobacco. We will not be giving the detainees at Guantanamo a monthly advance of pay, or allow them to have and consult personal financial accounts. Detainees will not be allowed to receive scientific equipment, musical instruments, or sports outfits.

Some experts have said that the open-air cages in which the prisoners are being held are not consistent with the Geneva Convention? Is that right?

- We do not have facilities in place at Guantanamo ready to house several hundred extremely dangerous individuals. The detainees at Guantanamo are being housed in temporary open-air shelters until long-term facilities can be arranged; these shelters are fully appropriate given the mild climate of Cuba. But we are building facilities in Guantanamo that are more appropriate for housing the detainees on a long-term basis.

- Many detainees at Guantanamo pose a severe security risk both to those responsible for guarding them and to each other. Clearly, many of the detainees have not "surrendered" and continue to fight even while detained. Some of these individuals demonstrated how dangerous they are in uprisings at Mazar-e-Sharif and in Pakistan. The United States must take into account the need for security in establishing the conditions of detention at Guantanamo. It is not possible for us to house them collectively in tents or other open spaces without undue threat to our personnel who are guarding and detaining them.

Will you seek to amend the Geneva Conventions to address the new realities of the war against terrorism?

- I am not aware of any effort to amend the Geneva Conventions at this time. Our conflict with the Taliban and al-Qaida is much different from past conflicts, however. The Taliban and al-Qaida have demonstrated their contempt for the traditional laws and customs of war accepted by all civilized states.

How long will you hold detainees? Until the end of hostilities in Afghanistan? Until the conclusion of the war against terrorism?

- We will hold the detainees until an appropriate disposition can be made for each detainee. We may prosecute certain detainees found to have committed crimes. We will turn other detainees over to their home countries or to third countries for detention and/or prosecution. We may hold other detainees for a longer period if we believe that they still pose a threat to safety and security of our forces or nationals. We may need to detain people if they clearly plan to commit further terrorist attacks against us or others.

How will you decide the disposition of each individual? When will you do this? If they are tried, where will they be tried?

- We will make an individual determination in each case. We may prosecute detainees who have committed specific crimes against us. We may, in some cases, turn detainees over to their home countries or to third countries if those countries request that they be returned for detention and prosecution.

Will this decision affect treatment of U.S. forces in future operations or conflicts? Will it open them to prosecution before foreign civil courts or international tribunals such as the ICC?

- Our detention of members of the Taliban and al-Qaida should have no legal or practical effect on our own forces.

TREATMENT AND STATUS OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO

January 22, 2002

What is the legal status of the prisoners at Guantanamo? Are they prisoners of war?

- We are treating all of the detainees at Guantanamo humanely and consistent with the principles of the Third Geneva Convention of 1949. The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined.

- All detainees are being provided three appropriate meals a day, medical care, clothing, shelter, showers, and the opportunity to worship. The detainees will not, of course, be subjected to physical or mental abuse. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. We are building enclosed, long-term facilities to house the detainees.

What do you mean when you say that prisoners will be treated "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention? Are the conditions at Guantanamo "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention?

- The conditions in Guantanamo are fully consistent with the Third Geneva Convention's core requirement that all detainees be treated humanely. We are treating all detainees humanely. All detainees are being provided shelter, food, water, and medical care. They are, of course, not being tortured or subjected to any physical or mental abuse. Moreover, we are providing all detainees the treatment provided to POWs under the Convention taking into account appropriate factors such as security and the temporary nature of the facilities in Guantanamo. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. Other than the fact that the detainees are in detention, their material living conditions are substantially better than they were before they were captured. When in their separate enclosures, detainees are NOT handcuffed or shackled; they are free to move about in their separate enclosures.

What specific benefits are the detainees receiving?

- All detainees are being provided three meals a day that meet Muslim laws with regard to diet; water; medical care; clothing and shoes; shelter; showers; soap and toilet articles; and the opportunity to worship.

- Detainees are being given foam sleeping pads and blankets as well as towels and washcloths.

- They are given correspondence materials and will be allowed to send and receive mail. They will be allowed to receive packages of food and clothing, subject to security screening.

- Money or other personal effects collected from each detainee will be accounted for in his name and safeguarded.

- We will re-evaluate continuously the conditions of the detainees. Detainees will be permitted to raise their concerns and we will attempt to address them to the extent consistent with security.

So what's the practical effect of the determination that the detainees are not prisoners of war? What will they be denied that they would otherwise be entitled to receive as POWs?

- The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined. Some of the specific treatment conditions provided to POWs by the Third Geneva Convention were suitable for regular soldiers in 1949 but are not appropriate for terrorists in 2002. Some treatment conditions are not compatible with the extraordinary security risk posed by these detainees, who are extremely violent and dangerous and pose a threat to the U.S. forces who are guarding them and to each other.

- For example, we do not plan to install canteens where detainees may purchase food, soap, and tobacco. We will not be giving the detainees at Guantanamo a monthly advance of pay, or allow them to have and consult personal financial accounts. Detainees will not be allowed to receive scientific equipment, musical instruments, or sports outfits.

Some experts have said that the open-air cages in which the prisoners are being held are not consistent with the Geneva Convention? Is that right?

- We do not have facilities in place at Guantanamo ready to house several hundred extremely dangerous individuals. The detainees at Guantanamo are being housed in temporary open-air shelters until long-term facilities can be arranged; these shelters are fully appropriate given the mild climate of Cuba. But we are building facilities in Guantanamo that are more appropriate for housing the detainees on a long-term basis.

- Many detainees at Guantanamo pose a severe security risk both to those responsible for guarding them and to each other. Clearly, many of the detainees have not "surrendered" and continue to fight even while detained. Some of these individuals demonstrated how dangerous they are in uprisings at Mazar-e-Sharif and in Pakistan. The United States must take into account the need for security in establishing the conditions of detention at Guantanamo. It is not possible for us to house them collectively in tents or other open spaces without undue threat to our personnel who are guarding and detaining them.

Will you seek to amend the Geneva Conventions to address the new realities of the war against terrorism?

- I am not aware of any effort to amend the Geneva Conventions at this time. Our conflict with the Taliban and al-Qaida is much different from past conflicts, however. The Taliban and al-Qaida have demonstrated their contempt for the traditional laws and customs of war accepted by all civilized states.

How long will you hold detainees? Until the end of hostilities in Afghanistan? Until the conclusion of the war against terrorism?

- We will hold the detainees until an appropriate disposition can be made for each detainee. We may prosecute certain detainees found to have committed crimes. We will turn other detainees over to their home countries or to third countries for detention and/or prosecution. We may hold other detainees for a longer period if we believe that they still pose a threat to safety and security of our forces or nationals. We may need to detain people if they clearly plan to commit further terrorist attacks against us or others.

How will you decide the disposition of each individual? When will you do this? If they are tried, where will they be tried?

- We will make an individual determination in each case. We may prosecute detainees who have committed specific crimes against us. We may, in some cases, turn detainees over to their home countries or to third countries if those countries request that they be returned for detention and prosecution.

Will this decision affect treatment of U.S. forces in future operations or conflicts? Will it open them to prosecution before foreign civil courts or international tribunals such as the ICC?

- Our detention of members of the Taliban and al-Qaida should have no legal or practical effect on our own forces.

NON-PARTISAN CBO CONFIRMS RECESSION AND WAR CAUSED SURPLUS DECLINE – NOT TAX RELIEF

CBO confirms recession and war caused surplus decline: CBO Director Dan Crippen said "over 70% of (FY2002 surplus reduction) results from the weak economy and related technical factors" (source: CBO testimony 1/23/02). CBO said bipartisan tax relief resulted in less than 12% of the surplus decline in FY 2002.

CBO Shows Strong Fiscal Position in the Baseline: Slight baseline deficits of $21B in FY 2002 and $14B in FY 2003 give way to a baseline surplus in FY 2004 of $54B. CBO projects a $1.6T surplus between 2002-2011.

OMB & CBO Budget Outlooks Are Quite Similar: CBO shows historically small deficits, especially given the simultaneous effects of war, recession, and emergency. However, some differences explain the small variance in surplus projections:

- OMB assumes an economic stimulus plan and other policies will be enacted.
- CBO assumes the $20B emergency response fund continues indefinitely, which will certainly not be the case. This calculation reduces CBO's 5-year surplus by $100B.

The Terrorist Attacks and the Weak Economy Reduced CBO's 10-year Surplus by almost $2T Since CBO's August Update: Since the August CBO update, the 2002-2011 surplus projection fell from $3.4T to $1.6T.

The Economy Took a Severe Downturn After September 11th: 943,000 jobs were lost, the stock market dropped, and consumer confidence plummeted.

- 943,000 jobs were lost in the last quarter of 2001.
- Unemployment rose by close to 1% (0.8%) in the last three months of 2001.
- Stock market dropped by 12% by September 21st.
- Consumer confidence plummeted 26% by October.
- The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down.

Recession, War & Homeland Security Spending Were Responsible for over 85% of the Surplus Decline: CBO's projections confirm that tax relief played a minor role in the surplus decline in the next few years – accounting for less than 12% of the decline in 2002 and less than 28% in 2003 (calculations made by OMB based on CBO projections).

CBO Already Calculated Effects of Tax Relief in the August Update: The bipartisan tax relief package was already assumed in CBO's August projections.

CBO vs. OMB Projections
(Unified Surplus/Deficit, $ in Billions)

Fiscal Year	OMB*	CBO
2002	-106	-21
2003	-80	-14
2004	-14	54
2005	61	103
5-yr (2002-2006)	(not public)	250
10-yr (2002-2011)	(not public)	1,602
10-yr (2003-2012)	about $1 trillion	NA
10-yr (2003-2012) Baseline (before policy)	2,900	NA

OMB projections include policy proposals such as an increase in homeland security and defense spending, and the economic security package, while CBO projections do not.*

NON-PARTISAN CBO CONFIRMS RECESSION AND WAR CAUSED SURPLUS DECLINE – NOT TAX RELIEF

CBO confirms recession and war caused surplus decline: CBO Director Dan Crippen said "over 70% of (FY2002 surplus reduction) results from the weak economy and related technical factors" (source: CBO testimony 1/23/02). CBO said bipartisan tax relief resulted in less than 12% of the surplus decline in FY 2002.

CBO Shows Strong Fiscal Position in the Baseline: Slight baseline deficits of $21B in FY 2002 and $14B in FY 2003 give way to a baseline surplus in FY 2004 of $54B. CBO projects a $1.6T surplus between 2002-2011.

OMB & CBO Budget Outlooks Are Quite Similar: CBO shows historically small deficits, especially given the simultaneous effects of war, recession, and emergency. However, some differences explain the small variance in surplus projections:

- OMB assumes an economic stimulus plan and other policies will be enacted.
- CBO assumes the $20B emergency response fund continues indefinitely, which will certainly not be the case. This calculation reduces CBO's 5-year surplus by $100B.

The Terrorist Attacks and the Weak Economy Reduced CBO's 10-year Surplus by almost $2T Since CBO's August Update: Since the August CBO update, the 2002-2011 surplus projection fell from $3.4T to $1.6T.

The Economy Took a Severe Downturn After September 11th: 943,000 jobs were lost, the stock market dropped, and consumer confidence plummeted.

- 943,000 jobs were lost in the last quarter of 2001.
- Unemployment rose by close to 1% (0.8%) in the last three months of 2001.
- Stock market dropped by 12% by September 21st.
- Consumer confidence plummeted 26% by October.
- The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down.

Recession, War & Homeland Security Spending Were Responsible for over 85% of the Surplus Decline: CBO's projections confirm that tax relief played a minor role in the surplus decline in the next few years – accounting for less than 12% of the decline in 2002 and less than 28% in 2003 (calculations made by OMB based on CBO projections).

CBO Already Calculated Effects of Tax Relief in the August Update: The bipartisan tax relief package was already assumed in CBO's August projections.

CBO vs. OMB Projections
(Unified Surplus/Deficit, $ in Billions)

Fiscal Year	OMB*	CBO
2002	-106	-21
2003	-80	-14
2004	-14	54
2005	61	103
5-yr (2002-2006)	(not public)	250
10-yr (2002-2011)	(not public)	1,602
10-yr (2003-2012)	about $1 trillion	NA
10-yr (2003-2012) Baseline (before policy)	2,900	NA

OMB projections include policy proposals such as an increase in homeland security and defense spending, and the economic security package, while CBO projections do not.*

President Bush Signs Legislation to Help Victims of Terrorism

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush today signed the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act -- bipartisan legislation that provides significant income and estate tax relief to the families of victims of terrorism.

- The legislation will help the victims of September 11, the Oklahoma City bombing and the recent anthrax attacks.

BACKGROUND ON THE VICTIMS OF TERRORISM TAX RELIEF ACT

- Two days after the terrorist attacks of September 11, a bipartisan group of legislators led by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Thomas introduced H.R. 2884 to provide real tax relief to help the victims' families to recover.

- President Bush signaled early support for the legislation, and the Bush Administration worked with Members of Congress from both parties to develop a final bill.

- As signed into law by the President today, the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act provides real tax relief to the families of those who died in the September 11 attacks, the Oklahoma City bombing and the anthrax attacks.

- Among the many provisions designed to help the families of victims, the new law will:

  - Provide Real Tax Relief to Victims' Families: The new law waives the income tax liability of a victim who died in one of the attacks for both the year of the attack and the previous year. It ensures that a minimum benefit of $10,000 is provided to the family of each victim.

  - Exclude Special Death Benefits From Taxation: A number of employers provided death benefits to the families of victims that would have been taxable. The new law provides tax-free treatment of these benefits.

  - Lower Death Tax Rates for Victims: The new law shields the first $8.5 million of a victim's estate from the federal death tax, and protects the first $3 million of the estate from state death taxes as well. This provision also applies to the families of the men and women of America's Armed Forces who died in the line of duty in a combat zone as part of Operation Enduring Freedom.

  - Facilitate Charitable Donations to Victims' Families: The new law facilitates payments by charitable organizations to victims' families as a result of the attacks. It also describes how employers can use private foundations to provide assistance to victims' families.

  - Eliminate Income Tax on Victims' Debts Forgiven: Many creditors want to forgive the debts of victims, such as credit card balances. The new law provides that this debt forgiveness is not taxable.

President Bush Signs Legislation to Help Victims of Terrorism

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush today signed the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act -- bipartisan legislation that provides significant income and estate tax relief to the families of victims of terrorism.

- The legislation will help the victims of September 11, the Oklahoma City bombing and the recent anthrax attacks.

BACKGROUND ON THE VICTIMS OF TERRORISM TAX RELIEF ACT

- Two days after the terrorist attacks of September 11, a bipartisan group of legislators led by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Thomas introduced H.R. 2884 to provide real tax relief to help the victims' families to recover.

- President Bush signaled early support for the legislation, and the Bush Administration worked with Members of Congress from both parties to develop a final bill.

- As signed into law by the President today, the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act provides real tax relief to the families of those who died in the September 11 attacks, the Oklahoma City bombing and the anthrax attacks.

- Among the many provisions designed to help the families of victims, the new law will:

  - Provide Real Tax Relief to Victims' Families: The new law waives the income tax liability of a victim who died in one of the attacks for both the year of the attack and the previous year. It ensures that a minimum benefit of $10,000 is provided to the family of each victim.

  - Exclude Special Death Benefits From Taxation: A number of employers provided death benefits to the families of victims that would have been taxable. The new law provides tax-free treatment of these benefits.

  - Lower Death Tax Rates for Victims: The new law shields the first $8.5 million of a victim's estate from the federal death tax, and protects the first $3 million of the estate from state death taxes as well. This provision also applies to the families of the men and women of America's Armed Forces who died in the line of duty in a combat zone as part of Operation Enduring Freedom.

  - Facilitate Charitable Donations to Victims' Families: The new law facilitates payments by charitable organizations to victims' families as a result of the attacks. It also describes how employers can use private foundations to provide assistance to victims' families.

  - Eliminate Income Tax on Victims' Debts Forgiven: Many creditors want to forgive the debts of victims, such as credit card balances. The new law provides that this debt forgiveness is not taxable.

President Bush Signs Legislation to Help Victims of Terrorism

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush today signed the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act -- bipartisan legislation that provides significant income and estate tax relief to the families of victims of terrorism.

- The legislation will help the victims of September 11, the Oklahoma City bombing and the recent anthrax attacks.

BACKGROUND ON THE VICTIMS OF TERRORISM TAX RELIEF ACT

- Two days after the terrorist attacks of September 11, a bipartisan group of legislators led by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Thomas introduced H.R. 2884 to provide real tax relief to help the victims' families to recover.

- President Bush signaled early support for the legislation, and the Bush Administration worked with Members of Congress from both parties to develop a final bill.

- As signed into law by the President today, the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act provides real tax relief to the families of those who died in the September 11 attacks, the Oklahoma City bombing and the anthrax attacks.

- Among the many provisions designed to help the families of victims, the new law will:

  - Provide Real Tax Relief to Victims' Families: The new law waives the income tax liability of a victim who died in one of the attacks for both the year of the attack and the previous year. It ensures that a minimum benefit of $10,000 is provided to the family of each victim.

  - Exclude Special Death Benefits From Taxation: A number of employers provided death benefits to the families of victims that would have been taxable. The new law provides tax-free treatment of these benefits.

  - Lower Death Tax Rates for Victims: The new law shields the first $8.5 million of a victim's estate from the federal death tax, and protects the first $3 million of the estate from state death taxes as well. This provision also applies to the families of the men and women of America's Armed Forces who died in the line of duty in a combat zone as part of Operation Enduring Freedom.

  - Facilitate Charitable Donations to Victims' Families: The new law facilitates payments by charitable organizations to victims' families as a result of the attacks. It also describes how employers can use private foundations to provide assistance to victims' families.

  - Eliminate Income Tax on Victims' Debts Forgiven: Many creditors want to forgive the debts of victims, such as credit card balances. The new law provides that this debt forgiveness is not taxable.

President Bush Signs Legislation to Help Victims of Terrorism

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush today signed the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act -- bipartisan legislation that provides significant income and estate tax relief to the families of victims of terrorism.

- The legislation will help the victims of September 11, the Oklahoma City bombing and the recent anthrax attacks.

BACKGROUND ON THE VICTIMS OF TERRORISM TAX RELIEF ACT

- Two days after the terrorist attacks of September 11, a bipartisan group of legislators led by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Thomas introduced H.R. 2884 to provide real tax relief to help the victims' families to recover.

- President Bush signaled early support for the legislation, and the Bush Administration worked with Members of Congress from both parties to develop a final bill.

- As signed into law by the President today, the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act provides real tax relief to the families of those who died in the September 11 attacks, the Oklahoma City bombing and the anthrax attacks.

- Among the many provisions designed to help the families of victims, the new law will:

  - Provide Real Tax Relief to Victims' Families: The new law waives the income tax liability of a victim who died in one of the attacks for both the year of the attack and the previous year. It ensures that a minimum benefit of $10,000 is provided to the family of each victim.

  - Exclude Special Death Benefits From Taxation: A number of employers provided death benefits to the families of victims that would have been taxable. The new law provides tax-free treatment of these benefits.

  - Lower Death Tax Rates for Victims: The new law shields the first $8.5 million of a victim's estate from the federal death tax, and protects the first $3 million of the estate from state death taxes as well. This provision also applies to the families of the men and women of America's Armed Forces who died in the line of duty in a combat zone as part of Operation Enduring Freedom.

  - Facilitate Charitable Donations to Victims' Families: The new law facilitates payments by charitable organizations to victims' families as a result of the attacks. It also describes how employers can use private foundations to provide assistance to victims' families.

  - Eliminate Income Tax on Victims' Debts Forgiven: Many creditors want to forgive the debts of victims, such as credit card balances. The new law provides that this debt forgiveness is not taxable.

President Bush Signs Legislation to Help Victims of Terrorism

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- President Bush today signed the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act -- bipartisan legislation that provides significant income and estate tax relief to the families of victims of terrorism.

- The legislation will help the victims of September 11, the Oklahoma City bombing and the recent anthrax attacks.

BACKGROUND ON THE VICTIMS OF TERRORISM TAX RELIEF ACT

- Two days after the terrorist attacks of September 11, a bipartisan group of legislators led by House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Bill Thomas introduced H.R. 2884 to provide real tax relief to help the victims' families to recover.

- President Bush signaled early support for the legislation, and the Bush Administration worked with Members of Congress from both parties to develop a final bill.

- As signed into law by the President today, the Victims of Terrorism Tax Relief Act provides real tax relief to the families of those who died in the September 11 attacks, the Oklahoma City bombing and the anthrax attacks.

- Among the many provisions designed to help the families of victims, the new law will:

  - Provide Real Tax Relief to Victims' Families: The new law waives the income tax liability of a victim who died in one of the attacks for both the year of the attack and the previous year. It ensures that a minimum benefit of $10,000 is provided to the family of each victim.

  - Exclude Special Death Benefits From Taxation: A number of employers provided death benefits to the families of victims that would have been taxable. The new law provides tax-free treatment of these benefits.

  - Lower Death Tax Rates for Victims: The new law shields the first $8.5 million of a victim's estate from the federal death tax, and protects the first $3 million of the estate from state death taxes as well. This provision also applies to the families of the men and women of America's Armed Forces who died in the line of duty in a combat zone as part of Operation Enduring Freedom.

  - Facilitate Charitable Donations to Victims' Families: The new law facilitates payments by charitable organizations to victims' families as a result of the attacks. It also describes how employers can use private foundations to provide assistance to victims' families.

  - Eliminate Income Tax on Victims' Debts Forgiven: Many creditors want to forgive the debts of victims, such as credit card balances. The new law provides that this debt forgiveness is not taxable.

NON-PARTISAN CBO CONFIRMS RECESSION AND WAR CAUSED SURPLUS DECLINE – NOT TAX RELIEF

CBO confirms recession and war caused surplus decline: CBO Director Dan Crippen said "over 70% of (FY2002 surplus reduction) results from the weak economy and related technical factors" (source: CBO testimony 1/23/02). CBO said bipartisan tax relief resulted in less than 12% of the surplus decline in FY 2002.

CBO Shows Strong Fiscal Position in the Baseline: Slight baseline deficits of $21B in FY 2002 and $14B in FY 2003 give way to a baseline surplus in FY 2004 of $54B. CBO projects a $1.6T surplus between 2002-2011.

OMB & CBO Budget Outlooks Are Quite Similar: CBO shows historically small deficits, especially given the simultaneous effects of war, recession, and emergency. However, some differences explain the small variance in surplus projections:

- OMB assumes an economic stimulus plan and other policies will be enacted.
- CBO assumes the $20B emergency response fund continues indefinitely, which will certainly not be the case. This calculation reduces CBO's 5-year surplus by $100B.

The Terrorist Attacks and the Weak Economy Reduced CBO's 10-year Surplus by almost $2T Since CBO's August Update: Since the August CBO update, the 2002-2011 surplus projection fell from $3.4T to $1.6T.

The Economy Took a Severe Downturn After September 11th: 943,000 jobs were lost, the stock market dropped, and consumer confidence plummeted.

- 943,000 jobs were lost in the last quarter of 2001.
- Unemployment rose by close to 1% (0.8%) in the last three months of 2001.
- Stock market dropped by 12% by September 21st.
- Consumer confidence plummeted 26% by October.
- The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down.

Recession, War & Homeland Security Spending Were Responsible for over 85% of the Surplus Decline: CBO's projections confirm that tax relief played a minor role in the surplus decline in the next few years – accounting for less than 12% of the decline in 2002 and less than 28% in 2003 (calculations made by OMB based on CBO projections).

CBO Already Calculated Effects of Tax Relief in the August Update: The bipartisan tax relief package was already assumed in CBO's August projections.

CBO vs. OMB Projections

Fiscal Year	OMB*	CBO
2002	-106	-21
2003	-80	-14
2004	-14	54
2005	61	103
5-yr (2002-2006)	(not public)	250
10-yr (2002-2011)	(not public)	1,602
10-yr (2003-2012)	about $1 trillion	NA
10-yr (2003-2012) Baseline (before policy)	2,900	NA

OMB projections include policy proposals such as an increase in homeland security and defense spending, and the economic security package, while CBO projections do not.*

NON-PARTISAN CBO CONFIRMS RECESSION AND WAR CAUSED SURPLUS DECLINE – NOT TAX RELIEF

CBO confirms recession and war caused surplus decline: CBO Director Dan Crippen said "over 70% of (FY2002 surplus reduction) results from the weak economy and related technical factors" (source: CBO testimony 1/23/02). CBO said bipartisan tax relief resulted in less than 12% of the surplus decline in FY 2002.

CBO Shows Strong Fiscal Position in the Baseline: Slight baseline deficits of $21B in FY 2002 and $14B in FY 2003 give way to a baseline surplus in FY 2004 of $54B. CBO projects a $1.6T surplus between 2002-2011.

OMB & CBO Budget Outlooks Are Quite Similar: CBO shows historically small deficits, especially given the simultaneous effects of war, recession, and emergency. However, some differences explain the small variance in surplus projections:

- OMB assumes an economic stimulus plan and other policies will be enacted.
- CBO assumes the $20B emergency response fund continues indefinitely, which will certainly not be the case. This calculation reduces CBO's 5-year surplus by $100B.

The Terrorist Attacks and the Weak Economy Reduced CBO's 10-year Surplus by almost $2T Since CBO's August Update: Since the August CBO update, the 2002-2011 surplus projection fell from $3.4T to $1.6T.

The Economy Took a Severe Downturn After September 11th: 943,000 jobs were lost, the stock market dropped, and consumer confidence plummeted.

- 943,000 jobs were lost in the last quarter of 2001.
- Unemployment rose by close to 1% (0.8%) in the last three months of 2001.
- Stock market dropped by 12% by September 21st.
- Consumer confidence plummeted 26% by October.
- The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down.

Recession, War & Homeland Security Spending Were Responsible for over 85% of the Surplus Decline: CBO's projections confirm that tax relief played a minor role in the surplus decline in the next few years – accounting for less than 12% of the decline in 2002 and less than 28% in 2003 (calculations made by OMB based on CBO projections).

CBO Already Calculated Effects of Tax Relief in the August Update: The bipartisan tax relief package was already assumed in CBO's August projections.

CBO vs. OMB Projections
(Unified Surplus/Deficit, $ in Billions)

Fiscal Year	OMB*	CBO
2002	-106	-21
2003	-80	-14
2004	-14	54
2005	61	103
5-yr (2002-2006)	(not public)	250
10-yr (2002-2011)	(not public)	1,602
10-yr (2003-2012)	about $1 trillion	NA
10-yr (2003-2012) Baseline (before policy)	2,900	NA

OMB projections include policy proposals such as an increase in homeland security and defense spending, and the economic security package, while CBO projections do not.*

NON-PARTISAN CBO CONFIRMS RECESSION AND WAR CAUSED SURPLUS DECLINE – NOT TAX RELIEF

CBO confirms recession and war caused surplus decline: CBO Director Dan Crippen said "over 70% of (FY2002 surplus reduction) results from the weak economy and related technical factors" (source: CBO testimony 1/23/02). CBO said bipartisan tax relief resulted in less than 12% of the surplus decline in FY 2002.

CBO Shows Strong Fiscal Position in the Baseline: Slight baseline deficits of $21B in FY 2002 and $14B in FY 2003 give way to a baseline surplus in FY 2004 of $54B. CBO projects a $1.6T surplus between 2002-2011.

OMB & CBO Budget Outlooks Are Quite Similar: CBO shows historically small deficits, especially given the simultaneous effects of war, recession, and emergency. However, some differences explain the small variance in surplus projections:

- OMB assumes an economic stimulus plan and other policies will be enacted.
- CBO assumes the $20B emergency response fund continues indefinitely, which will certainly not be the case. This calculation reduces CBO's 5-year surplus by $100B.

The Terrorist Attacks and the Weak Economy Reduced CBO's 10-year Surplus by almost $2T Since CBO's August Update: Since the August CBO update, the 2002-2011 surplus projection fell from $3.4T to $1.6T.

The Economy Took a Severe Downturn After September 11th: 943,000 jobs were lost, the stock market dropped, and consumer confidence plummeted.

- 943,000 jobs were lost in the last quarter of 2001.
- Unemployment rose by close to 1% (0.8%) in the last three months of 2001.
- Stock market dropped by 12% by September 21st.
- Consumer confidence plummeted 26% by October.
- The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down.

Recession, War & Homeland Security Spending Were Responsible for over 85% of the Surplus Decline: CBO's projections confirm that tax relief played a minor role in the surplus decline in the next few years – accounting for less than 12% of the decline in 2002 and less than 28% in 2003 (calculations made by OMB based on CBO projections).

CBO Already Calculated Effects of Tax Relief in the August Update: The bipartisan tax relief package was already assumed in CBO's August projections.

CBO vs. OMB Projections
(Unified Surplus/Deficit, $ in Billions)

Fiscal Year	OMB*	CBO
2002	-106	-21
2003	-80	-14
2004	-14	54
2005	61	103
5-yr (2002-2006)	(not public)	250
10-yr (2002-2011)	(not public)	1,602
10-yr (2003-2012)	about $1 trillion	NA
10-yr (2003-2012) Baseline (before policy)	2,900	NA

OMB projections include policy proposals such as an increase in homeland security and defense spending, and the economic security package, while CBO projections do not.*

NON-PARTISAN CBO CONFIRMS RECESSION AND WAR CAUSED SURPLUS DECLINE – NOT TAX RELIEF

CBO confirms recession and war caused surplus decline: CBO Director Dan Crippen said "over 70% of (FY2002 surplus reduction) results from the weak economy and related technical factors" (source: CBO testimony 1/23/02). CBO said bipartisan tax relief resulted in less than 12% of the surplus decline in FY 2002.

CBO Shows Strong Fiscal Position in the Baseline: Slight baseline deficits of $21B in FY 2002 and $14B in FY 2003 give way to a baseline surplus in FY 2004 of $54B. CBO projects a $1.6T surplus between 2002-2011.

OMB & CBO Budget Outlooks Are Quite Similar: CBO shows historically small deficits, especially given the simultaneous effects of war, recession, and emergency. However, some differences explain the small variance in surplus projections:

- OMB assumes an economic stimulus plan and other policies will be enacted.
- CBO assumes the $20B emergency response fund continues indefinitely, which will certainly not be the case. This calculation reduces CBO's 5-year surplus by $100B.

The Terrorist Attacks and the Weak Economy Reduced CBO's 10-year Surplus by almost $2T Since CBO's August Update: Since the August CBO update, the 2002-2011 surplus projection fell from $3.4T to $1.6T.

The Economy Took a Severe Downturn After September 11th: 943,000 jobs were lost, the stock market dropped, and consumer confidence plummeted.

- 943,000 jobs were lost in the last quarter of 2001.
- Unemployment rose by close to 1% (0.8%) in the last three months of 2001.
- Stock market dropped by 12% by September 21st.
- Consumer confidence plummeted 26% by October.
- The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down.

Recession, War & Homeland Security Spending Were Responsible for over 85% of the Surplus Decline: CBO's projections confirm that tax relief played a minor role in the surplus decline in the next few years – accounting for less than 12% of the decline in 2002 and less than 28% in 2003 (calculations made by OMB based on CBO projections).

CBO Already Calculated Effects of Tax Relief in the August Update: The bipartisan tax relief package was already assumed in CBO's August projections.

CBO vs. OMB Projections
(Unified Surplus/Deficit, $ in Billions)

Fiscal Year	OMB*	CBO
2002	-106	-21
2003	-80	-14
2004	-14	54
2005	61	103
5-yr (2002-2006)	(not public)	250
10-yr (2002-2011)	(not public)	1,602
10-yr (2003-2012)	about $1 trillion	NA
10-yr (2003-2012) Baseline (before policy)	2,900	NA

OMB projections include policy proposals such as an increase in homeland security and defense spending, and the economic security package, while CBO projections do not.*

MEDIA ADVISORY:

NEW ABA INTITIATIVE TO BE LAUNCHED AT DC HIGH SCHOOL

PRESS ADVISORY -- Laura Bush and U.S. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy will participate in the nation's first "DIALOGUE ON FREEDOM," a new American Bar Association initiative born in the wake of the terrorist attacks on September 11 that is designed to foster discussions in our nation's classrooms about American civic values and their compatibility with other cultures.

"Dialogue on Freedom" mobilizes judges and lawyers across the country to go into American high schools and lead structured discussions with teenagers about American democracy and values in the wake of the 9-11 attacks. The project is the concept of Justice Kennedy and will be carried out by the American Bar Association. Mrs. Bush has been a strong advocate of encouraging students to talk about the attacks and use them as an opportunity for growth and understanding diversity. She and ABA President Robert Hirshon will participate in the classroom discussion led by Justice Kennedy.

STRENGTHENING HOMELAND SECURITY

President Bush's budget for fiscal year 2003 – the federal government's first post-September 11 budget – almost doubles spending to secure the homeland. The FY 2003 homeland security budget provides substantial increases in areas that require immediate attention: enhancing first responder programs, securing America's borders, combating bioterrorism, strengthening intelligence sharing, improving transportation security and supporting other national defense related initiatives. This significant increase in resources from $19.5 billion to $37.7 billion reflects the President's unwavering resolve to achieve a more secure homeland.

First Responders – America's Frontline Soldiers

Police officers, firefighters, and emergency medical teams are America's front-line soldiers in the event of a terrorist attack. With the right training and equipment, these first responders have the greatest potential to save lives and limit casualties. America's current capabilities for responding to a terrorist attack vary widely across the country. Even the best-prepared States and localities lack adequate resources to respond to the full range of terrorist threats this country faces. Many areas have little or no capability to respond to terrorist attacks using weapons of mass destruction.

Facts About First Responders

- There are over 1 million firefighters in the United States, of which approximately 750,000 are volunteers.
- Local police departments have an estimated 556,000 full-time employees including about 436,000 sworn law enforcement personnel.
- Sheriffs' offices reported about 291,000 full-time employees, including about 186,000 sworn officers.
- There are over 155,000 nationally registered emergency medical technicians.

President Bush proposes to spend $3.5 billion in fiscal year 2003 to dramatically enhance the homeland security response capabilities of America's first responders – a greater than 10-fold increase in Federal resources. This initiative will:

- Give the first responder community critically needed funds to purchase equipment, train their personnel, and plan.

- Provide states and localities with the flexibility they require to ensure that the funds are used in the local areas where they are needed most.

- Establish a consolidated, simple, and quick method for dispersing federal assistance to states and localities.

- Foster mutual aid across the nation so that the entire local, state, federal, and volunteer network can operate seamlessly together.

- Create an evaluation process to make sure that all programs are producing results and to direct the allocation of future resources.

- Involve all Americans in programs to make their homes, communities, states, and nation safer and stronger.

The President's First Responder Initiative will be administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) through a streamlined mechanism designed to speed the flow of resources to the States and localities.

These new funds will sustain first responder activities, including:

Planning. Allocates approximately $105 million to support state and local governments in developing comprehensive plans to prepare for and respond to a terrorist attack.

Equipment. Provides about $2 billion to allow State and local first responder agencies to purchase a wide range of equipment needed to respond effectively to a terrorist attack, including personal protective equipment, chemical and biological detection systems, and interoperable communications gear.

Training. Allocates approximately $1.1 billion to train firefighters, police offices, and emergency medical technicians to respond and operate in a chemical or biological environment.

Exercises. Designates about $245 million to support a coordinated, regular exercise program to improve response capabilities, practice mutual aid, and assess operational improvements and deficiencies.

Strengthening America's first responder community will make our country not only safer, but also stronger. Nearly two million first responders put their lives at risk regularly to save lives and make our country more secure. Hundreds of firefighters, police officers and emergency medical workers gave their lives on September 11 as they worked to save others. The President's First Responder Initiative will help these brave Americans do their jobs better.

Building on existing capabilities at the federal, State, and local level, the First Responder Initiative provides an incentive to develop mutually supportive programs that maximize effective response capability. Through joint planning, clear communication, comprehensive coordination, mutual aid at all levels and increased information sharing, America's first responders can be trained and equipped to save lives in the event of a terrorist attack.

Building first responder capabilities will have immediate and widespread benefit – making the Nation safer from terrorist attacks and bolstering everyday response capabilities.

Harnessing the power of citizens will help make local communities stronger. Every American can contribute to winning the war on terrorism. The Presidential Task Force on Citizen Preparedness in the War Against Terrorism has outlined ways all citizens can work to make their homes and communities more prepared.

STRENGTHENING HOMELAND SECURITY

President Bush's budget for fiscal year 2003 – the federal government's first post-September 11 budget – almost doubles spending to secure the homeland. The FY 2003 homeland security budget provides substantial increases in areas that require immediate attention: enhancing first responder programs, securing America's borders, combating bioterrorism, strengthening intelligence sharing, improving transportation security and supporting other national defense related initiatives. This significant increase in resources from $19.5 billion to $37.7 billion reflects the President's unwavering resolve to achieve a more secure homeland.

First Responders – America's Frontline Soldiers

Police officers, firefighters, and emergency medical teams are America's front-line soldiers in the event of a terrorist attack. With the right training and equipment, these first responders have the greatest potential to save lives and limit casualties. America's current capabilities for responding to a terrorist attack vary widely across the country. Even the best-prepared States and localities lack adequate resources to respond to the full range of terrorist threats this country faces. Many areas have little or no capability to respond to terrorist attacks using weapons of mass destruction.

Facts About First Responders

- There are over 1 million firefighters in the United States, of which approximately 750,000 are volunteers.
- Local police departments have an estimated 556,000 full-time employees including about 436,000 sworn law enforcement personnel.
- Sheriffs' offices reported about 291,000 full-time employees, including about 186,000 sworn officers.
- There are over 155,000 nationally registered emergency medical technicians.

President Bush proposes to spend $3.5 billion in fiscal year 2003 to dramatically enhance the homeland security response capabilities of America's first responders – a greater than 10-fold increase in Federal resources. This initiative will:

- Give the first responder community critically needed funds to purchase equipment, train their personnel, and plan.

- Provide states and localities with the flexibility they require to ensure that the funds are used in the local areas where they are needed most.

- Establish a consolidated, simple, and quick method for dispersing federal assistance to states and localities.

- Foster mutual aid across the nation so that the entire local, state, federal, and volunteer network can operate seamlessly together.

- Create an evaluation process to make sure that all programs are producing results and to direct the allocation of future resources.

- Involve all Americans in programs to make their homes, communities, states, and nation safer and stronger.

The President's First Responder Initiative will be administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) through a streamlined mechanism designed to speed the flow of resources to the States and localities.

These new funds will sustain first responder activities, including:

Planning. Allocates approximately $105 million to support state and local governments in developing comprehensive plans to prepare for and respond to a terrorist attack.

Equipment. Provides about $2 billion to allow State and local first responder agencies to purchase a wide range of equipment needed to respond effectively to a terrorist attack, including personal protective equipment, chemical and biological detection systems, and interoperable communications gear.

Training. Allocates approximately $1.1 billion to train firefighters, police offices, and emergency medical technicians to respond and operate in a chemical or biological environment.

Exercises. Designates about $245 million to support a coordinated, regular exercise program to improve response capabilities, practice mutual aid, and assess operational improvements and deficiencies.

Strengthening America's first responder community will make our country not only safer, but also stronger. Nearly two million first responders put their lives at risk regularly to save lives and make our country more secure. Hundreds of firefighters, police officers and emergency medical workers gave their lives on September 11 as they worked to save others. The President's First Responder Initiative will help these brave Americans do their jobs better.

Building on existing capabilities at the federal, State, and local level, the First Responder Initiative provides an incentive to develop mutually supportive programs that maximize effective response capability. Through joint planning, clear communication, comprehensive coordination, mutual aid at all levels and increased information sharing, America's first responders can be trained and equipped to save lives in the event of a terrorist attack.

Building first responder capabilities will have immediate and widespread benefit – making the Nation safer from terrorist attacks and bolstering everyday response capabilities.

Harnessing the power of citizens will help make local communities stronger. Every American can contribute to winning the war on terrorism. The Presidential Task Force on Citizen Preparedness in the War Against Terrorism has outlined ways all citizens can work to make their homes and communities more prepared.

STRENGTHENING HOMELAND SECURITY

President Bush's budget for fiscal year 2003 – the federal government's first post-September 11 budget – almost doubles spending to secure the homeland. The FY 2003 homeland security budget provides substantial increases in areas that require immediate attention: enhancing first responder programs, securing America's borders, combating bioterrorism, strengthening intelligence sharing, improving transportation security and supporting other national defense related initiatives. This significant increase in resources from $19.5 billion to $37.7 billion reflects the President's unwavering resolve to achieve a more secure homeland.

First Responders – America's Frontline Soldiers

Police officers, firefighters, and emergency medical teams are America's front-line soldiers in the event of a terrorist attack. With the right training and equipment, these first responders have the greatest potential to save lives and limit casualties. America's current capabilities for responding to a terrorist attack vary widely across the country. Even the best-prepared States and localities lack adequate resources to respond to the full range of terrorist threats this country faces. Many areas have little or no capability to respond to terrorist attacks using weapons of mass destruction.

Facts About First Responders

- There are over 1 million firefighters in the United States, of which approximately 750,000 are volunteers.
- Local police departments have an estimated 556,000 full-time employees including about 436,000 sworn law enforcement personnel.
- Sheriffs' offices reported about 291,000 full-time employees, including about 186,000 sworn officers.
- There are over 155,000 nationally registered emergency medical technicians.

President Bush proposes to spend $3.5 billion in fiscal year 2003 to dramatically enhance the homeland security response capabilities of America's first responders – a greater than 10-fold increase in Federal resources. This initiative will:

- Give the first responder community critically needed funds to purchase equipment, train their personnel, and plan.

- Provide states and localities with the flexibility they require to ensure that the funds are used in the local areas where they are needed most.

- Establish a consolidated, simple, and quick method for dispersing federal assistance to states and localities.

- Foster mutual aid across the nation so that the entire local, state, federal, and volunteer network can operate seamlessly together.

- Create an evaluation process to make sure that all programs are producing results and to direct the allocation of future resources.

- Involve all Americans in programs to make their homes, communities, states, and nation safer and stronger.

The President's First Responder Initiative will be administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) through a streamlined mechanism designed to speed the flow of resources to the States and localities.

These new funds will sustain first responder activities, including:

Planning. Allocates approximately $105 million to support state and local governments in developing comprehensive plans to prepare for and respond to a terrorist attack.

Equipment. Provides about $2 billion to allow State and local first responder agencies to purchase a wide range of equipment needed to respond effectively to a terrorist attack, including personal protective equipment, chemical and biological detection systems, and interoperable communications gear.

Training. Allocates approximately $1.1 billion to train firefighters, police offices, and emergency medical technicians to respond and operate in a chemical or biological environment.

Exercises. Designates about $245 million to support a coordinated, regular exercise program to improve response capabilities, practice mutual aid, and assess operational improvements and deficiencies.

Strengthening America's first responder community will make our country not only safer, but also stronger. Nearly two million first responders put their lives at risk regularly to save lives and make our country more secure. Hundreds of firefighters, police officers and emergency medical workers gave their lives on September 11 as they worked to save others. The President's First Responder Initiative will help these brave Americans do their jobs better.

Building on existing capabilities at the federal, State, and local level, the First Responder Initiative provides an incentive to develop mutually supportive programs that maximize effective response capability. Through joint planning, clear communication, comprehensive coordination, mutual aid at all levels and increased information sharing, America's first responders can be trained and equipped to save lives in the event of a terrorist attack.

Building first responder capabilities will have immediate and widespread benefit – making the Nation safer from terrorist attacks and bolstering everyday response capabilities.

Harnessing the power of citizens will help make local communities stronger. Every American can contribute to winning the war on terrorism. The Presidential Task Force on Citizen Preparedness in the War Against Terrorism has outlined ways all citizens can work to make their homes and communities more prepared.

STRENGTHENING HOMELAND SECURITY

President Bush's budget for fiscal year 2003 – the federal government's first post-September 11 budget – almost doubles spending to secure the homeland. The FY 2003 homeland security budget provides substantial increases in areas that require immediate attention: enhancing first responder programs, securing America's borders, combating bioterrorism, strengthening intelligence sharing, improving transportation security and supporting other national defense related initiatives. This significant increase in resources from $19.5 billion to $37.7 billion reflects the President's unwavering resolve to achieve a more secure homeland.

First Responders – America's Frontline Soldiers

Police officers, firefighters, and emergency medical teams are America's front-line soldiers in the event of a terrorist attack. With the right training and equipment, these first responders have the greatest potential to save lives and limit casualties. America's current capabilities for responding to a terrorist attack vary widely across the country. Even the best-prepared States and localities lack adequate resources to respond to the full range of terrorist threats this country faces. Many areas have little or no capability to respond to terrorist attacks using weapons of mass destruction.

Facts About First Responders

- There are over 1 million firefighters in the United States, of which approximately 750,000 are volunteers.
- Local police departments have an estimated 556,000 full-time employees including about 436,000 sworn law enforcement personnel.
- Sheriffs' offices reported about 291,000 full-time employees, including about 186,000 sworn officers.
- There are over 155,000 nationally registered emergency medical technicians.

President Bush proposes to spend $3.5 billion in fiscal year 2003 to dramatically enhance the homeland security response capabilities of America's first responders – a greater than 10-fold increase in Federal resources. This initiative will:

- Give the first responder community critically needed funds to purchase equipment, train their personnel, and plan.

- Provide states and localities with the flexibility they require to ensure that the funds are used in the local areas where they are needed most.

- Establish a consolidated, simple, and quick method for dispersing federal assistance to states and localities.

- Foster mutual aid across the nation so that the entire local, state, federal, and volunteer network can operate seamlessly together.

- Create an evaluation process to make sure that all programs are producing results and to direct the allocation of future resources.

- Involve all Americans in programs to make their homes, communities, states, and nation safer and stronger.

The President's First Responder Initiative will be administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) through a streamlined mechanism designed to speed the flow of resources to the States and localities.

These new funds will sustain first responder activities, including:

Planning. Allocates approximately $105 million to support state and local governments in developing comprehensive plans to prepare for and respond to a terrorist attack.

Equipment. Provides about $2 billion to allow State and local first responder agencies to purchase a wide range of equipment needed to respond effectively to a terrorist attack, including personal protective equipment, chemical and biological detection systems, and interoperable communications gear.

Training. Allocates approximately $1.1 billion to train firefighters, police offices, and emergency medical technicians to respond and operate in a chemical or biological environment.

Exercises. Designates about $245 million to support a coordinated, regular exercise program to improve response capabilities, practice mutual aid, and assess operational improvements and deficiencies.

Strengthening America's first responder community will make our country not only safer, but also stronger. Nearly two million first responders put their lives at risk regularly to save lives and make our country more secure. Hundreds of firefighters, police officers and emergency medical workers gave their lives on September 11 as they worked to save others. The President's First Responder Initiative will help these brave Americans do their jobs better.

Building on existing capabilities at the federal, State, and local level, the First Responder Initiative provides an incentive to develop mutually supportive programs that maximize effective response capability. Through joint planning, clear communication, comprehensive coordination, mutual aid at all levels and increased information sharing, America's first responders can be trained and equipped to save lives in the event of a terrorist attack.

Building first responder capabilities will have immediate and widespread benefit – making the Nation safer from terrorist attacks and bolstering everyday response capabilities.

Harnessing the power of citizens will help make local communities stronger. Every American can contribute to winning the war on terrorism. The Presidential Task Force on Citizen Preparedness in the War Against Terrorism has outlined ways all citizens can work to make their homes and communities more prepared.

STRENGTHENING HOMELAND SECURITY

President Bush's budget for fiscal year 2003 – the federal government's first post-September 11 budget – almost doubles spending to secure the homeland. The FY 2003 homeland security budget provides substantial increases in areas that require immediate attention: enhancing first responder programs, securing America's borders, combating bioterrorism, strengthening intelligence sharing, improving transportation security and supporting other national defense related initiatives. This significant increase in resources from $19.5 billion to $37.7 billion reflects the President's unwavering resolve to achieve a more secure homeland.

First Responders – America's Frontline Soldiers

Police officers, firefighters, and emergency medical teams are America's front-line soldiers in the event of a terrorist attack. With the right training and equipment, these first responders have the greatest potential to save lives and limit casualties. America's current capabilities for responding to a terrorist attack vary widely across the country. Even the best-prepared States and localities lack adequate resources to respond to the full range of terrorist threats this country faces. Many areas have little or no capability to respond to terrorist attacks using weapons of mass destruction.

Facts About First Responders

- There are over 1 million firefighters in the United States, of which approximately 750,000 are volunteers.
- Local police departments have an estimated 556,000 full-time employees including about 436,000 sworn law enforcement personnel.
- Sheriffs' offices reported about 291,000 full-time employees, including about 186,000 sworn officers.
- There are over 155,000 nationally registered emergency medical technicians.

President Bush proposes to spend $3.5 billion in fiscal year 2003 to dramatically enhance the homeland security response capabilities of America's first responders – a greater than 10-fold increase in Federal resources. This initiative will:

- Give the first responder community critically needed funds to purchase equipment, train their personnel, and plan.

- Provide states and localities with the flexibility they require to ensure that the funds are used in the local areas where they are needed most.

- Establish a consolidated, simple, and quick method for dispersing federal assistance to states and localities.

- Foster mutual aid across the nation so that the entire local, state, federal, and volunteer network can operate seamlessly together.

- Create an evaluation process to make sure that all programs are producing results and to direct the allocation of future resources.

- Involve all Americans in programs to make their homes, communities, states, and nation safer and stronger.

The President's First Responder Initiative will be administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) through a streamlined mechanism designed to speed the flow of resources to the States and localities.

These new funds will sustain first responder activities, including:

Planning. Allocates approximately $105 million to support state and local governments in developing comprehensive plans to prepare for and respond to a terrorist attack.

Equipment. Provides about $2 billion to allow State and local first responder agencies to purchase a wide range of equipment needed to respond effectively to a terrorist attack, including personal protective equipment, chemical and biological detection systems, and interoperable communications gear.

Training. Allocates approximately $1.1 billion to train firefighters, police offices, and emergency medical technicians to respond and operate in a chemical or biological environment.

Exercises. Designates about $245 million to support a coordinated, regular exercise program to improve response capabilities, practice mutual aid, and assess operational improvements and deficiencies.

Strengthening America's first responder community will make our country not only safer, but also stronger. Nearly two million first responders put their lives at risk regularly to save lives and make our country more secure. Hundreds of firefighters, police officers and emergency medical workers gave their lives on September 11 as they worked to save others. The President's First Responder Initiative will help these brave Americans do their jobs better.

Building on existing capabilities at the federal, State, and local level, the First Responder Initiative provides an incentive to develop mutually supportive programs that maximize effective response capability. Through joint planning, clear communication, comprehensive coordination, mutual aid at all levels and increased information sharing, America's first responders can be trained and equipped to save lives in the event of a terrorist attack.

Building first responder capabilities will have immediate and widespread benefit – making the Nation safer from terrorist attacks and bolstering everyday response capabilities.

Harnessing the power of citizens will help make local communities stronger. Every American can contribute to winning the war on terrorism. The Presidential Task Force on Citizen Preparedness in the War Against Terrorism has outlined ways all citizens can work to make their homes and communities more prepared.

STRENGTHENING HOMELAND SECURITY

President Bush's budget for fiscal year 2003 – the federal government's first post-September 11 budget – almost doubles spending to secure the homeland. The FY 2003 homeland security budget provides substantial increases in areas that require immediate attention: enhancing first responder programs, securing America's borders, combating bioterrorism, strengthening intelligence sharing, improving transportation security and supporting other national defense related initiatives. This significant increase in resources from $19.5 billion to $37.7 billion reflects the President's unwavering resolve to achieve a more secure homeland.

First Responders – America's Frontline Soldiers

Police officers, firefighters, and emergency medical teams are America's front-line soldiers in the event of a terrorist attack. With the right training and equipment, these first responders have the greatest potential to save lives and limit casualties. America's current capabilities for responding to a terrorist attack vary widely across the country. Even the best-prepared States and localities lack adequate resources to respond to the full range of terrorist threats this country faces. Many areas have little or no capability to respond to terrorist attacks using weapons of mass destruction.

Facts About First Responders

- There are over 1 million firefighters in the United States, of which approximately 750,000 are volunteers.
- Local police departments have an estimated 556,000 full-time employees including about 436,000 sworn law enforcement personnel.
- Sheriffs' offices reported about 291,000 full-time employees, including about 186,000 sworn officers.
- There are over 155,000 nationally registered emergency medical technicians.

President Bush proposes to spend $3.5 billion in fiscal year 2003 to dramatically enhance the homeland security response capabilities of America's first responders – a greater than 10-fold increase in Federal resources. This initiative will:

- Give the first responder community critically needed funds to purchase equipment, train their personnel, and plan.

- Provide states and localities with the flexibility they require to ensure that the funds are used in the local areas where they are needed most.

- Establish a consolidated, simple, and quick method for dispersing federal assistance to states and localities.

- Foster mutual aid across the nation so that the entire local, state, federal, and volunteer network can operate seamlessly together.

- Create an evaluation process to make sure that all programs are producing results and to direct the allocation of future resources.

- Involve all Americans in programs to make their homes, communities, states, and nation safer and stronger.

The President's First Responder Initiative will be administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) through a streamlined mechanism designed to speed the flow of resources to the States and localities.

These new funds will sustain first responder activities, including:

Planning. Allocates approximately $105 million to support state and local governments in developing comprehensive plans to prepare for and respond to a terrorist attack.

Equipment. Provides about $2 billion to allow State and local first responder agencies to purchase a wide range of equipment needed to respond effectively to a terrorist attack, including personal protective equipment, chemical and biological detection systems, and interoperable communications gear.

Training. Allocates approximately $1.1 billion to train firefighters, police offices, and emergency medical technicians to respond and operate in a chemical or biological environment.

Exercises. Designates about $245 million to support a coordinated, regular exercise program to improve response capabilities, practice mutual aid, and assess operational improvements and deficiencies.

Strengthening America's first responder community will make our country not only safer, but also stronger. Nearly two million first responders put their lives at risk regularly to save lives and make our country more secure. Hundreds of firefighters, police officers and emergency medical workers gave their lives on September 11 as they worked to save others. The President's First Responder Initiative will help these brave Americans do their jobs better.

Building on existing capabilities at the federal, State, and local level, the First Responder Initiative provides an incentive to develop mutually supportive programs that maximize effective response capability. Through joint planning, clear communication, comprehensive coordination, mutual aid at all levels and increased information sharing, America's first responders can be trained and equipped to save lives in the event of a terrorist attack.

Building first responder capabilities will have immediate and widespread benefit – making the Nation safer from terrorist attacks and bolstering everyday response capabilities.

Harnessing the power of citizens will help make local communities stronger. Every American can contribute to winning the war on terrorism. The Presidential Task Force on Citizen Preparedness in the War Against Terrorism has outlined ways all citizens can work to make their homes and communities more prepared.

STRENGTHENING HOMELAND SECURITY

President Bush's budget for fiscal year 2003 – the federal government's first post-September 11 budget – almost doubles spending to secure the homeland. The FY 2003 homeland security budget provides substantial increases in areas that require immediate attention: enhancing first responder programs, securing America's borders, combating bioterrorism, strengthening intelligence sharing, improving transportation security and supporting other national defense related initiatives. This significant increase in resources from $19.5 billion to $37.7 billion reflects the President's unwavering resolve to achieve a more secure homeland.

First Responders – America's Frontline Soldiers

Police officers, firefighters, and emergency medical teams are America's front-line soldiers in the event of a terrorist attack. With the right training and equipment, these first responders have the greatest potential to save lives and limit casualties. America's current capabilities for responding to a terrorist attack vary widely across the country. Even the best-prepared States and localities lack adequate resources to respond to the full range of terrorist threats this country faces. Many areas have little or no capability to respond to terrorist attacks using weapons of mass destruction.

Facts About First Responders

- There are over 1 million firefighters in the United States, of which approximately 750,000 are volunteers.
- Local police departments have an estimated 556,000 full-time employees including about 436,000 sworn law enforcement personnel.
- Sheriffs' offices reported about 291,000 full-time employees, including about 186,000 sworn officers.
- There are over 155,000 nationally registered emergency medical technicians.

President Bush proposes to spend $3.5 billion in fiscal year 2003 to dramatically enhance the homeland security response capabilities of America's first responders – a greater than 10-fold increase in Federal resources. This initiative will:

- Give the first responder community critically needed funds to purchase equipment, train their personnel, and plan.

- Provide states and localities with the flexibility they require to ensure that the funds are used in the local areas where they are needed most.

- Establish a consolidated, simple, and quick method for dispersing federal assistance to states and localities.

- Foster mutual aid across the nation so that the entire local, state, federal, and volunteer network can operate seamlessly together.

- Create an evaluation process to make sure that all programs are producing results and to direct the allocation of future resources.

- Involve all Americans in programs to make their homes, communities, states, and nation safer and stronger.

The President's First Responder Initiative will be administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) through a streamlined mechanism designed to speed the flow of resources to the States and localities.

These new funds will sustain first responder activities, including:

Planning. Allocates approximately $105 million to support state and local governments in developing comprehensive plans to prepare for and respond to a terrorist attack.

Equipment. Provides about $2 billion to allow State and local first responder agencies to purchase a wide range of equipment needed to respond effectively to a terrorist attack, including personal protective equipment, chemical and biological detection systems, and interoperable communications gear.

Training. Allocates approximately $1.1 billion to train firefighters, police offices, and emergency medical technicians to respond and operate in a chemical or biological environment.

Exercises. Designates about $245 million to support a coordinated, regular exercise program to improve response capabilities, practice mutual aid, and assess operational improvements and deficiencies.

Strengthening America's first responder community will make our country not only safer, but also stronger. Nearly two million first responders put their lives at risk regularly to save lives and make our country more secure. Hundreds of firefighters, police officers and emergency medical workers gave their lives on September 11 as they worked to save others. The President's First Responder Initiative will help these brave Americans do their jobs better.

Building on existing capabilities at the federal, State, and local level, the First Responder Initiative provides an incentive to develop mutually supportive programs that maximize effective response capability. Through joint planning, clear communication, comprehensive coordination, mutual aid at all levels and increased information sharing, America's first responders can be trained and equipped to save lives in the event of a terrorist attack.

Building first responder capabilities will have immediate and widespread benefit – making the Nation safer from terrorist attacks and bolstering everyday response capabilities.

Harnessing the power of citizens will help make local communities stronger. Every American can contribute to winning the war on terrorism. The Presidential Task Force on Citizen Preparedness in the War Against Terrorism has outlined ways all citizens can work to make their homes and communities more prepared.

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - 3 In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - 3 A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - 3 "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 3 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - 3 Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - 3 In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - 3 A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - 3 "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 3 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - 3 Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Public Attributes Deficit to War, Recession, Spending

Americans Trust President, Republicans on the Budget

"And while Democrats are mightily trying to blame President Bush and his tax cuts, most Americans don't seem to be buying that explanation..."

-National Journal's Charlie Cook, January 19, 2002

An analysis of recent public opinion surveys shows that:

The American people understand the true causes of the federal budget deficit…

- Americans believe war, recession and government overspending have caused the federal budget deficit.
  - 3 In an NBC News/Wall Street Journal Poll released this morning, 36% say the war on terrorism is the biggest cause of the budget deficit, while 28% point to the recession.
  - 3 A CNN/USA Today/Gallup Poll released last week shows that when asked about the deficit, 40% blame government overspending, 30% the war, and 17% the recession. Only 9% say last year's tax cut is the main reason for the deficit.

…and trust the President and Republicans to handle the economy and budget.

- The President and Republicans are favored over Democrats to handle both the economy and the budget.
  - 3 "When it comes to dealing with the tough choices involved in the federal budget, both in deciding how much Americans should pay in taxes and funding needed federal programs," the public favors President Bush's approach over Congressional Democrats' – 50% to 38% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).
  - 3 66% approve of the President's handling of the economy (Bloomberg).
  - 3 Americans trust Republicans over Democrats on the key issues of the economy and the federal budget deficit by six points – 47% to 41% (CNN/USA Today/Gallup).

Subject: Republican Leadership Conference - February 1st

Dear Friend:

The West Virginia Republican Party has reached a critical point in its history. The renewed enthusiasm for our party???s ideas and leadership exhibited the past two years have set the stage for us to become the majority party in both houses of the West Virginia legislature by the year 2008. As one of our state???s leaders, you understand the State of West Virginia faces many challenges. More importantly, you have a valuable combination of experiences and knowledge that can help solve many of the problems that must be addressed.

I would like to invite you to join us for our First Republican Leadership Conference on Friday, February 1, 2002 from 9:00AM to 5:00PM at the Holiday Inn - Charleston House. We will spend the day discussing Education, Healthcare, Infrastructure, Taxation, Workers Compensation, Judicial and Social Issues. A deli-style lunch will be served to attendees.

A Leadership Reception and Dinner with Rep. Shelley Moore Capito and White House Political Director Ken Mehlman will be held from 6:00PM to 9:00PM following the Conference. The cost for the entire day of activities is $150.
If your plans allow you to join us for part of the day only, the cost is $50 for the Conference Seminars and $100 for the Reception and Dinner.
Sponsorships are available for the seminars, lunch, and reception for those who wish to make an additional donation.

Dear Congressional Staff Member:

On behalf of the Congressional Committee, we have the pleasure of inviting Congressional staff to serve as ushers at the 50th National Prayer Breakfast on Thursday, February 7, 2002 at the Hilton Washington hotel here in Washington, DC. Members of Congress initiated the breakfast and have remained committed to hosting it since its inception. This event is an opportunity for Congressional staff to partner with Members of Congress, both Republicans and Democrats, in collectively caring for the President, the Vice President, other national and international leaders, and individuals from all walks of life.

Over 3,600 guests, representing more than 160 nations, all 50 states, and the U.S. Territories, accepted our invitation last year to gather together, reaffirm our trust in God, and recognize the reconciling power of prayer. In light of recent events, our hearts can be strengthened, both individually and collectively, as we each seek God's wisdom and guidance together.

Due to security measures, guests must be seated within twenty minutes. This requires a large team of ushers who must work together in the spirit that is characteristic of the breakfast.

An instructional meeting for Congressional staff who plan to serve as ushers will be held at the Hilton Washington hotel on Monday, February 4, at 6:30 PM. This will provide you with the opportunity to become acquainted with fellow ushers, learn more about the National Prayer Breakfast, and receive further instructions. Your participation at this meeting is required in order to serve as an usher.

Any Congressional staffers who are interested in participating should complete the enclosed response form and send it to Ashley Oster in my office at npbushers@hotmail.com. If you have any questions or need additional information, please contact Max Finberg in Representative Tony Hall's office by phone at (x5-3522).

Because space is limited, ushers will be selected on a "first come, first served" basis, so those interested in participating should respond promptly, but in no case later than Friday, January 11, 2002. Unfortunately, we cannot guarantee a spot even for those who do respond by that date, therefore interested staff are encouraged to respond early. An e-mail will be sent to you to confirm your participation.

We sincerely hope you will be able to participate in this special time.

With Kind Regards,

Bart Stupak
U.S. House of Representatives and Chairman
2002 National Prayer Breakfast

Dear Congressional Staff Member:

On behalf of the Congressional Committee, we have the pleasure of inviting Congressional staff to serve as ushers at the 50th National Prayer Breakfast on Thursday, February 7, 2002 at the Hilton Washington hotel here in Washington, DC. Members of Congress initiated the breakfast and have remained committed to hosting it since its inception. This event is an opportunity for Congressional staff to partner with Members of Congress, both Republicans and Democrats, in collectively caring for the President, the Vice President, other national and international leaders, and individuals from all walks of life.

Over 3,600 guests, representing more than 160 nations, all 50 states, and the U.S. Territories, accepted our invitation last year to gather together, reaffirm our trust in God, and recognize the reconciling power of prayer. In light of recent events, our hearts can be strengthened, both individually and collectively, as we each seek God's wisdom and guidance together.

Due to security measures, guests must be seated within twenty minutes. This requires a large team of ushers who must work together in the spirit that is characteristic of the breakfast.

An instructional meeting for Congressional staff who plan to serve as ushers will be held at the Hilton Washington hotel on Monday, February 4, at 6:30 PM. This will provide you with the opportunity to become acquainted with fellow ushers, learn more about the National Prayer Breakfast, and receive further instructions. Your participation at this meeting is required in order to serve as an usher.

Any Congressional staffers who are interested in participating should complete the enclosed response form and send it to Ashley Oster in my office at npbushers@hotmail.com. If you have any questions or need additional information, please contact Max Finberg in Representative Tony Hall's office by phone at (x5-3522).

Because space is limited, ushers will be selected on a "first come, first served" basis, so those interested in participating should respond promptly, but in no case later than Friday, January 11, 2002. Unfortunately, we cannot guarantee a spot even for those who do respond by that date, therefore interested staff are encouraged to respond early. An e-mail will be sent to you to confirm your participation.

We sincerely hope you will be able to participate in this special time.

With Kind Regards,

Bart Stupak
U.S. House of Representatives and Chairman

Dear Congressional Staff Member:

On behalf of the Congressional Committee, we have the pleasure of inviting Congressional staff to serve as ushers at the 50th National Prayer Breakfast on Thursday, February 7, 2002 at the Hilton Washington hotel here in Washington, DC. Members of Congress initiated the breakfast and have remained committed to hosting it since its inception. This event is an opportunity for Congressional staff to partner with Members of Congress, both Republicans and Democrats, in collectively caring for the President, the Vice President, other national and international leaders, and individuals from all walks of life.

Over 3,600 guests, representing more than 160 nations, all 50 states, and the U.S. Territories, accepted our invitation last year to gather together, reaffirm our trust in God, and recognize the reconciling power of prayer. In light of recent events, our hearts can be strengthened, both individually and collectively, as we each seek God's wisdom and guidance together.

Due to security measures, guests must be seated within twenty minutes. This requires a large team of ushers who must work together in the spirit that is characteristic of the breakfast.

An instructional meeting for Congressional staff who plan to serve as ushers will be held at the Hilton Washington hotel on Monday, February 4, at 6:30 PM. This will provide you with the opportunity to become acquainted with fellow ushers, learn more about the National Prayer Breakfast, and receive further instructions. Your participation at this meeting is required in order to serve as an usher.

Any Congressional staffers who are interested in participating should complete the enclosed response form and send it to Ashley Oster in my office at npbushers@hotmail.com. If you have any questions or need additional information, please contact Max Finberg in Representative Tony Hall's office by phone at (x5-3522).

Because space is limited, ushers will be selected on a "first come, first served" basis, so those interested in participating should respond promptly, but in no case later than Friday, January 11, 2002. Unfortunately, we cannot guarantee a spot even for those who do respond by that date, therefore interested staff are encouraged to respond early. An e-mail will be sent to you to confirm your participation.

We sincerely hope you will be able to participate in this special time.

With Kind Regards,

Bart Stupak
U.S. House of Representatives and Chairman

School Without Walls Senior High School
2130 G Street, NW

PURPOSE

To participate in the American Bar Association's "Freedom, American Ideas and the 21st Century: A National Conversation" kick-off event. This nationwide initiative seeks to engage young students in discussions of the shared values that shape our identity, our civic traditions, and those precepts which must be respected by all people who seek freedom.

Mrs. Bush will be joining Justice Kennedy and the president of the American Bar Association, Robert Hirshon for this event.

PRESS PLAN

Event Press Plan
Open Press – Press for the event is being coordinated through Ashleigh Adams at (202) 456-6334 and Gail Alexander at the American Bar Association (ABA) -- 202.662.1095 on site.

Justice Kennedy will announce that there is going to be a break at the conclusion of the first topic. At this time, the students will have an opportunity to take a group photo with Mrs. Bush and this will give the press an opportunity to leave the event if they wish.

Length
1-2 minutes (Welcome remarks)

The discussion with Justice Kennedy will last for 15 minutes. If she wishes, Mrs. Bush will have the opportunity to answer questions and/or interject her thoughts and feelings.

Topic

Welcoming -- September 11 has shaken many Americans across the country, especially the children. If nothing else, the results of September 11 have reinforced the values and beauty of our country. The American Bar Association's "Freedom, American Ideas and the 21st Century: A National Conversation" initiative is important because it gives young people in our country a real opportunity to have an open dialogue with lawyers and judges. This is important because our children across America will learn to understand the value of our democracy and the importance of freedom.

DRAFT – 1/25/02-12:00 p.m.

Kenneth W. Dam

Deputy Secretary

Department of the Treasury

Senate Banking Committee

January 29, 2002, 10:00 a.m.

The United States Senate

[INSERT LOCATION]

Chairman Sarbanes and distinguished members of the Senate Banking Committee, thank you for inviting me to testify about the Treasury Department's efforts to disrupt terrorist financing and, in particular, the steps we are taking to implement the provisions of the International Counter-Money Laundering and Financial Anti-Terrorism Act of 2001. I have asked Under Secretary for Enforcement Jimmy Gurulé to join me today.

On September 24, 2001, President Bush stated, "we will direct every resource at our command to win the war against terrorists, every means of diplomacy, every tool of intelligence, every instrument of law enforcement, every financial influence. We will starve the terrorists of funding." The Treasury Department is determined to help make good on this promise. I am here today to tell you about the progress we have made and some of the complexities we still face.

Much of our progress is directly attributable to the Congress and this Committee. The swift passage of the USA PATRIOT Act and, in particular, Title III of that Act – the International Counter-Money Laundering and Financial Anti-Terrorism Act of 2001, has given with other agencies of the federal government and, I believe, obtained an unprecedented level of cooperation and coordination. We have worked extensively with foreign governments to ensure that terrorist money has nowhere to hide.

Some have said that the financial war on terrorism is an impossible task. After all, money is fungible and illegal money tends to flow to the most hospitable country. I disagree. That the task is difficult does not mean that it is impossible. This is an unconventional war where there are no boundaries, where civilians are the targets, where people (or so-called "martyrs") are the weapons, and where electronic money transfers and messaging are the fuel and the logistics train. Among other things, identifying the flow of money helps us find the footprint of sleeper cells, disable them, and perhaps prevent the next attack.

IMPLEMENTATION OF THE INTERNATIONAL COUNTER-MONEY LAUNDERING AND FINANCIAL ANTI-TERRORISM ACT OF 2001

The Treasury Department is committed to the aggressive and thorough implementation of the International Counter-Money Laundering and Financial Anti-terrorism Act of 2001. In the aftermath of September 11, efforts to enhance the Federal Government's ability to combat international money laundering, which had already begun before September 11th, were given a whole new level of priority by Congress and the Administration. The government and the financial community were forced to rethink assumptions, to reevaluate risks of money laundering and abuse in connection with terrorist financing, and, ultimately, to take the steps necessary to protect the country's financial system. The results of this reassessment were dramatic. Through the Act, which is also known as Title III of the USA PATRIOT Act, Congress took up the challenge of eliminating vulnerabilities within our anti-money laundering regime. Now, we at Treasury will continue this initiative through implementing regulations.

The Act is ambitious not only in scope, but also in its aggressive implementation schedule. The inclusion of numerous key provisions demonstrates remarkable resolve by Congress following the September attacks. Perhaps the most striking aspect of the Act is that in one legislative package, Congress addressed many deficiencies identified in our counter-money laundering regime. Treasury must address a wide array of challenging issues and promulgate regulations with far-reaching consequences—all on an accelerated schedule.

Treasury's Implementation Plan

Our plan for implementation relies heavily on tapping the existing resources and expertise found in the government to develop creative solutions to complex issues. Once the Act became law, we formed interagency working groups to handle each of the statutory provisions requiring implementation or reports. After identifying the appropriate Treasury personnel to chair these working groups, we solicited interagency participation. This system offers two distinct advantages: (1) it brings the collective knowledge and expertise of the various governmental agencies and departments together; and (2) it facilitates the consultation requirements found in many provisions of the Act. I am pleased to say that the results thus far have been remarkable. Other agencies and departments stepped forward immediately, committing personnel and resources. For example, less than one month after the Act was signed by the President, Treasury issued interim guidance on two key provisions that were set to take effect on December 26, 2001. When Treasury requested consultation, the other agencies and departments responded quickly, assisting with our analysis of the issues and the completion of the guidance in time for the affected financial institutions to use it. And the cooperation continues. Working groups and subgroups meet almost daily. Drafts are being circulated and comments are received when requested. We are grateful for the assistance.

Another encouraging result of this process has been the response of the private sector and industry groups. With respect to several key provisions, we have received not only positive comments about the legislation, but also helpful insight into implementation issues. Others have contributed by simply taking the time to educate us on their particular industry and existing practices and procedures. Regulations cannot be conceived and drafted in a vacuum. Creative and constructive suggestions from those who will be affected by the regulations allow us to identify issues early and then find solutions early.

As I noted, our implementation plan has met with some early success. Since October of last year, we have issued interim guidance and regulations covering four statutory provisions. The two provisions that took effect in December were the prohibition against certain U.S. financial institutions maintaining correspondent accounts for foreign shell banks or indirectly providing services to them (Section 313) and the requirement that U.S. financial institutions obtain ownership and registered agent information from foreign banks for which they maintain correspondent accounts (Section 319(b)). On November 20, less than one month after the passage of the Act, Treasury issued interim guidance that explained the provisions, identified their scope, and provided financial institutions with a certification that could be utilized to comply with the provisions. Treasury subsequently issued a formal proposed rule in December that codified the Interim Guidance as a regulatory standard. On a separate front, four months ahead of the statutory deadline, Treasury issued in December a regulation implementing Section 365 of the Act, which effectively gives FinCEN access to reports filed by non-financial trades or businesses when they receive $10,000 or more in coins or currency. Finally, as required by Section 356 of the Act, Treasury issued in December a proposed rule that would require securities brokers and dealers to file suspicious activity reports. In support of FinCEN's increased responsibilities under the Act, the President's FY 2003 budget calls for a $3.3 million dollar increase in FinCEN's budget to help FinCEN expand suspicious activity reporting to a number of new industries and maintain the Suspicious Activity Reporting Hotline, begun this fall, to expedite the investigation of suspicious financial activities.

We have many additional regulations to promulgate and reports to file with Congress. We are determined to promulgate these regulations and prepare the reports expeditiously. We are always cognizant of the urgency of our task. At the same time, we are also working closely with other agencies, the private sector, and, of course, the Congress to ensure that we do our job not just fast, but well.

Treasury's Implementation Principles

As we implement the Act, we are guided not only by the express statutory language, but also by certain core principles that reflect our vision of what this legislation should accomplish and the manner in which it should be implemented. This legislation addresses broad issues and relies heavily on implementing regulations to define the scope of the provisions. Through the regulatory process, we will take the general and make it specific, exercising our discretion where appropriate. In this role, it is essential that we remain true to our core principles, which are as follows:

1. Prevent regulatory arbitrage.

The Act takes aim at those areas of our financial and regulatory system that present opportunities for exploitation. Treasury embraces this goal, and, through the regulatory process, will adhere to the principle that people should not be able to shift from one type of financial institution to another in order to avoid a regulatory scheme or anti-money laundering controls. The test is a functional one, namely, can a similar financial transaction be accomplished through another financial institution with less regulation. The justification for this principle is two-fold: first, our financial system is only as secure as its most vulnerable point; and second, a regulatory scheme must not create a competitive advantage for one type of financial institution over another when they perform the same or similar functions.

Our proposed regulation for Section 319(b) illustrates the point. Section 319(b) provides the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney General with administrative subpoena authority to compel the production of documents from foreign banks with correspondent accounts in the U.S. The section also requires "covered" U.S. financial institutions that maintain a correspondent account on behalf of a foreign bank to maintain records identifying the owners of the foreign bank as well as its registered agent. But, Section 319(b) does not define "financial institution" for purposes of the section. Based on the notion that similar activity ought to be regulated similarly, instead of limiting the application to depository institutions—such as banks, thrifts, credit unions—Treasury proposed to extend the rule to securities brokers and dealers who also maintain correspondent accounts for foreign banks. In this way, the rule does not create the opportunity to shift from a bank to a securities broker or dealer in order to avoid regulation.

The provision of the Act requiring Treasury to issue a rule requiring securities brokers and dealers to file suspicious activity reports embodies this same principle. Banks and other depository institutions must file suspicious activity reports because such reports are important to the fight against money laundering. Because the potential for money laundering exists in the securities industry, a similar rule will soon apply. Section 356 of the Act also directs us to recommend whether and how to bring investment companies under the Bank Secrecy Act. For this as well we will analyze the functional activities of such entities, compare them with the activities of regulated entities, and identify the money laundering risks presented. With this information, Treasury will be able to proffer methods for applying the BSA to such entities.

2. Honor a central purpose of the Act: to enhance coordination and information flow.

An overarching goal of this legislation, and an important lesson we are learning as we continue our work to disrupt the financial underpinnings of terrorism, is that appropriate information must be made available to enable law enforcement, the intelligence community, and the regulators to protect our financial system. The financial institutions themselves have a critical role in sharing and reporting information. The Act facilitates information sharing on a number of levels: (1) among law enforcement and financial institutions; (2) among regulators, law enforcement, and the intelligence community; and (3) among financial institutions themselves. We will fulfill this goal of enhancing the ability to use and share information to combat terrorism and money laundering.

Treasury, through FinCEN, is well positioned to continue to expand its role as the lynchpin for information sharing and coordination in the financial sector. Indeed, Section 361 of the Act, among other things, requires FinCEN to establish a high-speed network for access to its extensive BSA data and information. Similarly, Section 362 requires Treasury to build the computer infrastructure necessary to link FinCEN electronically to financial institutions. Treasury is charged with establishing a highly secure network through which financial institutions can make Bank Secrecy Act filings and receive alerts regarding suspicious activities or persons requiring immediate attention. I am pleased to report that FinCEN is on schedule to have a working prototype for initial testing by mid-April.

Additionally, Section 314 of the Act contemplates an expanded role for Treasury in the sharing of information regarding terrorism and money laundering not only among law enforcement and financial institutions, but also among financial institutions themselves. Treasury is completing work on a regulation that will be issued by the February deadline that, in part, first sets up the procedures by which financial institutions may share information among themselves regarding suspected terrorist financing, including money laundering, after providing notice to Treasury.

3. Respect important privacy rights.

The significant anti-money laundering provisions of the Act also serve to highlight the tension between the need to share information and the legitimate need for financial privacy. We acknowledge, as we must, that now more than ever law enforcement and the intelligence community must have the ability to obtain and share financial information. However, that need must always be balanced against our fundamental notions of privacy. Striking that balance is the challenge for Treasury as we implement this legislation.

4. Require only the degree of reporting that results in action by the government.

The potential new reporting obligations created by the Act mean that we must be even more vigilant in ensuring that the information reported is useful and in fact will be used effectively by the government. One consequence of an aggressive regulatory scheme is increased reporting obligations. But additional reporting requirements in and of themselves cannot serve as proxies for an effective anti-money laundering regime. If the information is not going to be used, it should not be requested. This principle guided our approach to implementing Section 365. That Section requires that non-financial trades or business file a report when they receive over $10,000 in coins or currency—a requirement that is virtually identical to the requirement placed on the very same businesses to file a report with the IRS under section 6050I of the Internal Revenue Code. Although the purpose of Section 365 was unquestionably to provide law enforcement and regulatory authorities with access to the same information currently received by the IRS—information that could not be easily shared because of the IRS confidentiality statute—as written, Section 365 seemed to impose a new reporting requirement. Thus, we crafted a rule that permits businesses to file a single cash reporting form that will go to both FinCEN and the IRS, thus satisfying both reporting requirements with a single report.

5. Protect our financial system.

The Bank Secrecy Act exists to protect our financial system. The Act provides Treasury with additional authority to systematically eliminate known risks to the financial system as well as to act in response to a specific threat that may arise. Proven high-risk accounts, such as correspondent accounts maintained on behalf of foreign shell banks, will no longer be permitted access to our system. In Section 311, you have also given us a powerful weapon with which we can apply graduated, proportionate measures when specific money laundering risks involving foreign jurisdictions and individuals arise. This new authority makes it clear that the Secretary can impose an array of special measures that are tailored to the particular risk presented. Treasury is conducting active training and outreach to educate law enforcement agencies about this new tool.

Treasury's Implementation Priorities

Within the framework of the principles I have outlined above, the first priority for Treasury is to take all reasonable steps to meet the deadlines imposed by the Act. We have devoted considerable resources to this task, redirecting our policy objectives to accommodate this effort. I will not sit here today and assure this Committee that, without fail, we will meet each deadline. The issues presented are complex and, as we proceed, new ones continue to arise. I can assure you, however, that we are working and will continue to work diligently on implementation, while taking the time that may be necessary to resolve difficult legal and policy questions.

Beyond the deadlines imposed in the Act, we have identified various provisions which, for a variety of reasons, we seek to pursue at the outset. These are provisions that, in our view, ought to be addressed on an expedited basis if possible. Finally, certain provisions with no immediate deadlines will inevitably have to be implemented after the more immediate priorities.

1. The First Tranche -- To be Implemented by April.

Over the next three months, we are striving to implement statutory provisions addressing: (1) information sharing among financial institutions, law enforcement and regulatory authorities (Section 314); (2) enhanced due diligence provisions applicable to financial institutions that maintain either private bank accounts or correspondent accounts for non-U.S. persons (Section 312); (3) methods for identifying and confirming the identity of foreign nationals (Section 326); (4) the minimum requirements for anti-money laundering compliance programs for financial institutions; (5) the role of the IRS in the administration of the Bank Secrecy Act (Section 357); and (6) methods for improving compliance with the obligation to report foreign bank accounts (Section 361). Additionally, we will be issuing final regulations covering the foreign shell bank correspondent account prohibition (Section 313), the record-keeping provision under Section 319(b), and the cash reporting requirements (Section 365).

2. The Second Tranche – To Be Implemented as Expeditiously as Possible.

Treasury is moving forward now to implement the following provisions addressing: (1) the authority of the Secretary to designate primary money laundering concerns and impose special measures against them (Section 311); (2) concentration accounts (Section 325); (3) account opening procedures (Section 326); (4) suspicious activity reporting for futures commission merchants, commodity trading advisors, and commodity pool operators (Section 356); and (5) the efficient use of exemptions for currency transaction reports (Section 366). We intend to issue regulations further defining terms contained in Section 311 at the same time we issue regulations implementing the due diligence provisions of Section 312. Also, Treasury and the regulators are aggressively moving forward to draft regulations setting forth customer identification procedures for financial institutions.

IMMEDIATE RESULTS

Although we have much to do to fully implement the provisions of the Act, I wish to emphasize that the Act has helped us generate immediate results in the financial front of the war on terrorism. I alluded to two of those results at the beginning of my testimony.

INFORMATION SHARING

The amendments to the Bank Secrecy Act clarify the authority of the Secretary to share BSA information with the Intelligence Community for intelligence or counterintelligence activities related to domestic or international terrorism, regardless of whether the BSA information is related to law enforcement. The amendments to the Right to Financial Privacy Act ("RFPA") further enhance the ability of government to obtain and share relevant financial records with another agency or department, such as FinCEN and OFAC, involved in intelligence or counterintelligence activities related to international terrorism without notifying the targets. The amendment to the Fair Credit Reporting Act facilitates government access to information contained in suspected terrorists' credit reports when the inquiry relates to international terrorism. This amendment allows those investigating suspected terrorists prompt access to us important new tools in the financial front of the war on terrorism. To highlight just two aspects of the Act:

- The Act requires financial institutions to terminate correspondent accounts maintained for foreign shell banks and to take reasonable steps to ensure that they do not indirectly provide banking services to foreign shell banks. Treasury provided immediate, interim guidance to financial institutions, suggesting that they obtain certification from all foreign banks with correspondent accounts that they were not shells and that the foreign banks did not themselves maintain correspondent accounts for shell banks. This prohibition was effective on December 26.
- The Act requires all financial institutions to have an anti-money laundering program in place by April. Although many broker-dealers already had anti-money laundering programs in place, the Act ensures that all will.

This Committee played an important role in securing the passage of these and other provisions. On behalf of the Treasury Department – including our 25,000 law enforcement officers – I thank you.

I also wish to thank the many federal agencies that have worked with Treasury. This is a team effort. We have worked closely with the State Department, the Defense Department, the Department of Justice, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the intelligence community, and many other parts of the federal government. We coordinate daily at all levels and, I think, have done a good job of setting aside some of our historical rivalries. To cite just one of many examples of this coordination, the Administration recently created a new-high level strategies and priorities committee that I chair. This committee brings together senior officials from across credit histories that may reveal key information about the terrorists' plan or source of funding — without notifying the targets.

The Act also allows for greater information sharing with the private sector and self-regulatory organizations. Under the Act, for example, financial institutions that submit voluntary disclosures of information relating to terrorism and money laundering are immunized from liability, and Bank Secrecy Act reports can now be made available to securities and commodities self-regulatory organizations.

IEEPA Amendments That Have Helped in Our Freezing Efforts

This Committee was also largely responsible for amendments to the International Emergency Economic Powers Act ("IEEPA") that clarified the authority of the President and the Treasury Department to target and block terrorist assets successfully and efficiently. On December 14, 2001, OFAC utilized this authority to block suspect assets and records during the pendency of an investigation in the case of Global Relief Foundation and Benevolence International Foundation, two charities with locations in the United States.

In addition, it has become easier to share and use intelligence information for freezing assets since the PATRIOT Act authorized courts to consider classified information under the Act without such information being disclosed to those challenging the blocking. The IEEPA amendment also grants the President the power to confiscate and vest in the United States Government property of countries or persons involved in hostilities or attacks against the United States. Though this authority has not been used, it is a powerful new tool available to the Executive and a deterrent effect to those who would support terror.

NEW TOOLS TO FOLLOW THE MONEY AND TO DETER MONEY LAUNDERING

The Act also strengthens existing money laundering provisions and enhances the Treasury Department's ability to deal with this problem – which, in many respects, is related to the issue of terrorist financing. For example, the Act now requires that trades or businesses receiving more than $10,000 in coins or currency file reports with FinCEN. In addition, as of January 1, 2002, certain money service businesses are required to register with FinCEN and are now required to file suspicious activity reports (SARs) for money orders, travelers checks, and all transactions by money transmitters. While Congress gave Treasury the authority to impose some of these requirements before the Act was enacted, the Act extended the requirement to underground money transmitters. We have acted promptly to take full advantage of this new extension of authority. To date, it appears that registration is on track, and we will be able to begin the process of finding those underground money remitters who fail to register and charge them criminally if they have not registered in accordance with the law. In addition, the Act has given sharper teeth to these provisions by increasing civil and criminal penalties for Bank Secrecy Act violations.

In all, the Act enables us to fulfill our mission of thwarting the criminal use of the financial system in a way that was unavailable or impossible before October 25, 2001.

RESOURCES

The final issue that I will raise today is that the Act creates a host of new regulatory schemes and requirements with increased responsibilities, but provides no corresponding increase in resources for enforcement. At this point, we cannot accurately estimate the additional resources that will be necessary to enforce provisions such as Section 352, which requires an anti-money laundering program for a broad range of financial institutions not currently subject to

BSA regulations. We must first decide on an appropriate regulatory regime for these financial institutions. We are in the process of doing this right now. Only after this decision is made can we assess enforcement resource needs. We look forward to working with Congress at that time.

CONCLUSION

Mr. Chairman, we are engaged in a long-term battle against illegal abuse of the financial system. Whether it is terrorist financing or classic narcotics money laundering, we need to take every measure possible to combat the evil deeds that soil our financial system and pose a real threat to our security.

Treasury will continue to use the powers and assets at its disposal to ferret out terrorist financiers and networks and choke the funding source for terrorists here at home and abroad. We will continue to work in close coordination with our sister departments and agencies and with our international partners to make our campaign against terrorist financing as effective as possible. Furthermore, we will continue to fight the battle against money laundering and the criminal misuse of the financial system. An essential part of this mission is the complete and efficient implementation of the provisions of the Act. We are ready for this sustained effort, and we appreciate your support.

Mr. Chairman, this concludes my formal testimony. I would be pleased to answer any questions that you, or members of the Committee, may have regarding the Administration's goals and policies regarding terrorist financing and the Act.

the government to chart our strategy for pursuing terrorist finances over the coming months and years.

SUMMARY OF DEVELOPMENTS IN FINANCIAL ASPECTS OF U.S. ANTI-TERRORISM INITIATIVES

Our priority is to help prevent terrorist attacks by disrupting terrorist finances. As the President has said, we seek to "starve the terrorists of funding." Our goal is to deprive terrorists of one of the raw ingredients in terrorism: money for arms, explosives, plane tickets, and even the day-to-day sustenance of operatives. I will tell you candidly that where there is a conflict between preventing terrorist attacks and the prosecution of criminal cases against terrorists, preventing terrorist attacks comes first.

The strategy for the financial front of the war on terrorism closely tracks our strategy in the rest of the war. We remain focused on finishing off Al Qaeda. We are targeting not only Al Qaeda operatives, but their financial intermediaries and others that support them. Increasingly, we are also focussing on other terrorist groups of global reach. In addition, we are striving to ensure that fight on the financial front is not a unilateral effort or even a U.S.-led effort, but, like the rest of the war, a multilateral effort led by nations around the world.

We use several tactics on the financial front of the war on terrorism. Some of our tactics are public – like the public designation of terrorist organizations and the civil blocking of terrorist assets. Other tactics are private – for example, we work with foreign governments to enable them to designate and block terrorist assets on their own behalf. I would be pleased to tell you more about our private efforts in a closed session.

One thing that is different about the financial front from the rest of the war is that it is perhaps harder to measure success in the financial effort. To address this, we measure success in many ways. For example, we track the total amount of terrorist assets blocked. Since September 11th, the United States and other countries have frozen more than $80 million in terrorist-related assets. We expect the amount of blocked assets to continue to grow – although we also expect to release some of the money. For example, assets once controlled by the Taliban regime of Afghanistan will be returned to the legitimate government of Afghanistan.

The amount of assets blocked underscores the importance of another measure – the amount of international cooperation in the financial front of the war. I cannot emphasize enough how vitally important international cooperation is. After all, we cannot bomb foreign bank accounts. We need the cooperation of foreign governments to investigate and block them. So far, we have received a remarkable degree of cooperation. Foreign governments have blocked more than $46 million – over half of the total of $80 million. 147 countries and jurisdictions around the world have blocking orders in place. We work with these countries daily to get more information about their efforts and to ensure that the cooperation is as deep as it is broad. For example, we are providing technical assistance to a number of priority countries to help them develop the legal and enforcement infrastructure they need to find and freeze terrorist assets.

We have also had success pursuing international cooperation through multilateral fora including the U.N., the G7, the G20, the Financial Action Task Force (FATF), and the international financial institutions to combat terrorist financing on a global scale. A good example of Treasury leadership on this issue is in the role of the United States in the FATF on Money Laundering, a 31-member organization. In late October 2001, the United States hosted an Extraordinary FATF Plenary session, at which FATF members established eight Special Recommendations on Terrorist Financing. These recommendations quickly became the international standard on steps that countries can take to protect their financial systems from abuse by terrorist financiers. Our delegation is at a meeting in Hong Kong as I speak addressing these very issues and establishing a process by which all countries will engage in a self-assessment of compliance with these recommendations.

Still a third measure is the flow of funds disrupted. For example, when we shut down the Al-Barakaat hawala network, we seized $1.9 million in assets. But we disrupted the flow of much more. Our analysts believe that Al-Barakaat's worldwide network channeled as much as $15 to $20 million to Al Qaeda a year. It is important, therefore, to keep an eye on the flow of funds – how much money moved through a pipeline that we froze – as well has how much money happened to be in the pipeline when we froze it.

Finally, we do not ignore anecdotal measures of success. I would be willing to elaborate upon these anecdotes in a closed session. I can tell you in open session, however, that we believe from our intelligence channels that Al Qaeda and other terrorist organizations are suffering financially as a result of our actions. We also believe that potential donors are being more cautious about giving to money to organizations where they fear that the money might wind up in the hands of terrorists.

Having discussed some of our successes, I wish to spend a moment on some of the complexities we face. This Committee is intimately familiar with the challenges facing our anti-money laundering efforts. Stopping terrorist financing is perhaps more nuanced than money laundering because terrorist financing could be described as "reverse money laundering." In money laundering, the proceeds of crime are laundered for legitimate use or for use in perpetrating more crimes. If you find evidence of the original crime, you are likely to be placed on the trail of some money-laundering. In terrorist finance, it is often the other way around.

Proceeds of legitimate economic activity are used for illicit purposes. The money can come from almost anywhere.

A particular form of this problem is presented by the case of illicit charities. Illicit charities are organizations that exploit their charitable status to funnel money to terrorists. Such organizations are, in my view, particularly deplorable. But at the same time, it cannot be doubted that some of them do perform some charitable acts and that many donors believe that their donations are paying for charitable works. To solve this problem, we are developing a comprehensive, coordinated, inter-agency strategy to clean up illicit charities while still providing vehicles for legitimate charitable works.

I would like to highlight a few steps that we have taken to deal with these issues. First, we got the Foreign Terrorist Asset Tracking Center (FTAT) up and running under the direction of the Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC). FTAT was funded by Congress in the FY 2001 Appropriations Bill and was being organized and staffed when the attacks occurred. When fully operational, FTAT will serve as an analytical and strategic center for attacking the problem of terrorist financing. Since September, FTAT has served not only to provide essential analysis of particular targets and networks, but also as an information hub where intelligence and law enforcement agencies can share and analyze information for a common purpose. This inter-agency concentration on hunting the sources of terrorist financing is unprecedented for the U.S. government. Though FTAT is still in its infancy, it is making a significant impact on this cooperative and concentrated venture.

Second, on October 25, 2001, Treasury created Operation Green Quest ("Green Quest"), a new multi-agency financial enforcement initiative intended "to augment existing counter-terrorist efforts by bringing the full scope of the government's financial expertise to bear against systems, individuals, and organizations that serve as sources of terrorist funding." Green Quest is made up of investigators and analysts from the U.S. Customs Service, the IRS-Criminal Investigation Division, the Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN), OFAC, the Secret Service, and the FBI, with support from the Department of Justice. These agencies have brought their world-renowned financial expertise to bear on terrorist financing and have seen remarkable results in the three months FTAT has been in existence.

Green Quest has complemented the work of FTAT in identifying terrorist networks at home and abroad, and it has served as an investigative arm in aid of blocking actions. Green Quest's work has led to 11 arrests, 3 indictments, the seizure of nearly $4 million, and bulk cash seizures of over $8.5 million. Green Quest agents, along with the FBI and other government agencies, have traveled abroad to follow leads, exploit documents recovered, and to provide assistance to foreign governments. The work of these financial experts is just starting but they have already opened well over two hundred terrorist financing investigations and are following new leads on a daily basis. Green Quest's work, in combination with the work of FTAT, serves as a cornerstone of our enforcement efforts.

Third, we have worked closely with the FBI-led investigation into the September 11th attacks. Immediately after the attacks, Treasury deployed personnel to the FBI's Financial Review Group, bringing additional financial investigative capabilities, contacts in the financial sector, and expertise to the FBI's group. Treasury has also deployed people to serve on various Joint Terrorism Task Forces (JTTFs) headed by the FBI. Since then, those committed to this mission have made significant contributions, in the Group and in the field, to tracking the perpetrators of those heinous acts.

The November 7, 2001, designation of al-Barakaat as a terrorist-related financial entity is an example of how Treasury efforts, along with the fine work of our inter-agency partners, can lead to results in this war on terrorist financing. Al-Barakaat is a Somali-based hawaladar[1] operation, with locations in the United States and in 40 countries, that was used to finance and support terrorists around the world.[2] FTAT analysis identified Al-Barakaat as a major financial operation that supported terrorist organizations and was providing material, financial, and logistical support to Usama bin Laden, Al Qaeda, and other terrorist groups.

Treasury coordinated efforts to block assets and to assist other law enforcement agencies to take actions against Al-Barakaat. On November 7, 2001, federal agents executed search warrants in three cities across the country (Boston, Columbus, and Alexandria) and shut down eight Al-Barakaat offices across the U.S., including locations in the following cities:

- Boston, Massachusetts;
- Columbus, Ohio;
- Alexandria, Virginia;
- Seattle, Washington; and
- Minneapolis, Minnesota.

As part of that action, OFAC was able to freeze $1,900,000 domestically in Al-Barakaat-related funds on November 7, 2001. Treasury also worked closely with the United Arab Emirates to enable the UAE to block Al-Barakaat's assets at its financial center of operations in Dubai. Disruptions to Al-Barakaat's worldwide cash flows could be as high as $300 to $400 million per year, according to our analysts. Of that, our experts and experts in other agencies estimate that $15 to $20 million per year would have gone to terrorist organizations. The Al-Barakaat investigation exemplifies the importance of the flow of funds disruption measure that we are attempting to use more broadly. In addition, the combined work of FTAT and law enforcement led to additional leads in the Al-Barakaat investigation.

[1] Hawala is a type of alternative remittance system that is common in many parts of the world, including the Middle East and Far East. A hawaladar is an entity that engages in hawala transactions.
[2] Some individuals may have used Al-Barakaat as a legitimate means to transfer value between individuals in different countries without passing through the formal international banking system.

This is an example of what our combined efforts can do when we join our resources and our expertise to fight the scourge of terrorist financing.

Although we have made much progress, we still have much work to do. First, we must encourage more independent identification of terrorist groups by other countries. The EU designation at the end of December is a step in the right direction, but we need more countries to initiate more designations.

Second, we have to ensure that more countries issue blocking orders for more of the entities identified, by the United States, other countries, and the international community, as being part of terrorist financial networks. We must also do a better job of following up with the countries to make sure that their orders, once issued, are fully implemented and obeyed.

Third, we must do a better job of exploiting the "industrial quantity" of documents captured in Afghanistan and increasingly elsewhere. Hard drives and e-mails must be exploited as well. This is a massive task. To do it, we must bring documents together from all over the world, translate them, cross-reference them, and thereby build a complete picture. No one document can tell us that much.

Fourth, we must redouble efforts by U.S. and allied intelligence services against such financial intermediaries as hawalas and other informal systems.

To conclude this portion of my testimony, I believe that we have had several important successes on the financial front of the war on terrorism. We have marshaled the considerable expertise of our Treasury law enforcement personnel to execute the President's mission to detect, disrupt, and dismantle the financial infrastructure of terrorist financing. We have worked closely

Testimony of Michael Chertoff
Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division
United States Department of Justice on January 29, 2002

Before the Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs
United States Senate

Chairman Sarbanes, Ranking Minority Senator Gramm, members of the Committee, I am pleased and honored to appear before the Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs to address our progress on the financial front of the ongoing war on terrorism. As Assistant Attorney General of the Criminal Division, I appreciate the opportunity to provide you with a summary of the Department of Justice's efforts in this endeavor, including our actions to implement the authorities set forth in Title III of the USA Patriot Act, also known as the International Money Laundering and Anti-Terrorist Financing Act of 2001.

Initially, I would like to thank the members of this Committee and Congress for their prompt response to the terrorist threat posed to the United States and all civilized countries. The USA PATRIOT Act provided those of us whose mission it is to protect the people of the United States with a wide array of new measures that will serve to enhance our ability to carry out this work. We welcome the new authority granted by the PATRIOT Act and are committed to using our new powers in a vigorous but responsible manner.

As the members of this Committee are well aware, our country faces an extraordinary and grave threat to its national security and the safety of our citizens. As a result of the terrorist acts of September 11, 2001, in which over 3,000 innocent civilians were murdered by terrorists in New York City, in Pennsylvania and at the Pentagon, the United States is actively pursuing a world wide antiterrorism campaign today. Osama bin Laden has told the world that "the battle has moved inside America." Let there be no doubt: He and the forces of al Qaeda and other the Patriot Act, the Department issued interim guidance to the United States Attorneys regarding the provisions of the new legislation, including Title III.

The Department is also working closely with other departments and agencies, particularly the Department of the Treasury and FinCEN, to implement the various sections of the PATRIOT Act. On a daily basis, there are interagency meetings involving the drafting of implementing regulations and other guidance to ensure that the new authorities are used effectively and in a manner consistent with congressional intent.

Some of the new provisions in the Act have already been deployed with successful results. For example, the Department of Justice relied on the new civil forfeiture authority provided in the Patriot Act to seize six bank accounts in New Jersey and three in Florida related to the September 11th terrorists. On November 8, 2001, the United States Attorney's Office for the District of New Jersey obtained nine seizure warrants for bank accounts used by the terrorists based on the newly enacted PATRIOT Act authority codified at 18 U.S.C. 981(a)(1)(G), which provides for the seizure of all assets owned, acquired or used by any individual or organization engaged in domestic or international terrorism. Notice of the proposed forfeiture of these accounts has been made and, not surprisingly, no one has claimed an interest in the accounts.

In addition, we recently used Section 319 of the PATRIOT Act to good effect. Section 319(a) provided us with a new tool to seize and forfeit criminal assets deposited into a foreign bank account through the foreign bank's correspondent bank account in the United States. This section provides that assets which are subject to forfeiture in the United States, but which are deposited abroad in a foreign bank may be deemed to be held in the foreign bank's correspondent account in the United States. Thus, where a criminal deposits funds in a bank account in a foreign country and that bank maintains a correspondent account in the United States, the government may seize and forfeit an equivalent sum of money in the correspondent account, irrespective of whether the money in the correspondent account is traceable to the proceeds deposited in an account held by the foreign bank.

Although I was recused from the case because of a past representation, I can report that last month we recovered almost$1.7 million in funds using Section 319 which will be used to compensate the victims of a fraud scheme. On January 18, 2001, a grand jury in the Southern District of Illinois indicted James R. Gibson for various offenses, including conspiracy to commit money laundering, mail and wire fraud. Gibson defrauded clients of millions of dollars by fraudulently structuring settlement agreements for numerous tort victims. Gibson and his wife, who was indicted later, fled to Belize, depositing some of the proceeds of their fraud scheme in a Belizean bank.

Our efforts to recover the proceeds at first were unsuccessful. Although the government of Belize initially agreed to restrain the assets, a Belizean court ordered the freeze lifted because local law prohibited legal assistance to the United States because there is no treaty providing for legal assistance between the two countries. The court also prohibited the government from assisting the United States law enforcement agencies further, including providing information regarding Gibson's money laundering activities. Efforts to break the impasse failed and all the while the Gibsons systematically looted their accounts in Belize.

Following the passage of the PATRIOT Act and consultation with the Departments of Treasury and State, the Criminal Division authorized the use of the Section 319(a) authority. A seizure warrant was served on the correspondent bank and the funds were recovered. In our judgment, this case presents a compelling example of the need for, and appropriate use of, the new authority under Section 319(a).

While this instance involved fraud, the facts of this case demonstrate the utility of this particular tool, particularly in the area of terrorist financing. Section 319(a) is, of course, an important enhancement to the law enforcement's ability to pursue assets overseas. It is also a very powerful tool and one that can affect our international relationships. Accordingly, the Criminal Division is developing a policy to provide prosecutorial oversight regarding the use of this new provision.

Similarly, Section 319(b) of the Act provides new summons and subpoena authority with respect to foreign banks that have correspondent accounts in the United States. This section authorizes the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury to issue subpoenas and summonses to foreign banks that maintain accounts with correspondent banks in the United States in order to obtain records related to the U.S. correspondent accounts. We also anticipate delegating authority to use Section 319(b) to a level below the Attorney General, but because of the international sensitivities involved, we anticipate that the use of such authority will remain subject to departmental review and approval. I am currently reviewing a proposal regarding the best way to implement this important new authority.

Earlier I mentioned that the Department is working to implement the new PATRIOT authorities with a view to balancing law enforcement effectiveness and valid privacy interests. Section 358 of the PATRIOT Act exemplifies the Department's efforts in that regard. Among the important changes made by Section 358 is an amendment to the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978. As you know, the Right to Financial Privacy Act, 12 U.S.C. § 3402, places restrictions on the government's ability to obtain records from financial institutions. As amended by Section 358, the principal provisions of the Right to Financial Privacy Act no longer apply to requests by a government authority authorized to conduct investigations or intelligence analysis for purposes related to international terrorism. The Department is currently studying how to implement this authority.

We are particularly enthusiastic about the new investigative and prosecutorial tools set forth in the Patriot Act. As described in detail earlier, Section 319 is of critical importance. This provision, which by statute has only been in effect since December 25, 2001, enhances our ability to seize and forfeit criminal assets previously beyond our reach and it provides a mechanism to obtain foreign bank records through administrative subpoenas. While we expect that its authority will be used widely and effectively, we are presently implementing it in consultation with the Treasury Department. We have plans for other provisions as well. Although presently subject to the very restrictive one-year limit of 18 U.S.C. 984(c), the new authority to forfeit terrorist assets, codified at 18 U.S.C. 981(a)(1)(G), has been used effectively already, and we believe it will be of enormous importance to prosecutors. We are also confident that other PATRIOT Act tools, such as the enhanced ability to prosecute unlicensed money transmitters acting in violation of the amended 18 U.S.C. 1960, and to seek forfeiture based on conspiracies to evade the reporting requirements in Title 31, will be of substantial future use in the fight against terrorism.

Finally, Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, I would draw your attention to important provisions of the PATRIOT Act involving information sharing. Although these sections are not part of the authorities in Title III, they are nevertheless critical to making effective use of information obtained by law enforcement pursuant to the new authorities in Title III. I am speaking about the information sharing provisions of Sections 203 and 905 of the Act. Section 203 authorizes the Department to share information obtained through grand jury investigations and Title III wiretaps with other government officials investigating terrorism. Section 905 requires the Department to share foreign intelligence with the intelligence community.

I am pleased to report that while implementation of these sections is not yet final, the Department is fully sharing information and coordinating the disclosure of relevant information to the intelligence community. We have offered the CIA access to information in our investigative files with the understanding that there will be close consultation and coordination about the use of such information. We continue to work closely with not only the intelligence community but with other agencies to implement the new authorities to ensure that all relevant information, including financial information, is shared promptly and fully so that we can defend our citizens and bring those who would harm us to justice.

The Need for Additional Legislation

The PATRIOT Act provided law enforcement with a broad array of new tools useful to disrupt and investigate the financing of terrorism. However, I understand that there is interest in additional measures that would further enhance the Department's ability to protect our citizens and investigate more effectively the financing of terrorism. I would be happy to address any questions the Members of this Committee might have on this subject. Let me highlight a few of the areas in our money laundering laws that could be further strengthened through additional legislation.

Section 371 of the PATRIOT Act created a new offense of bulk cash smuggling (codified at 31 U.S.C. § 5332) that makes it illegal to knowingly conceal more than $10,000 in currency and attempt to transport it into or out of the United States with the intent to evade currency reporting requirements. However, it is not yet an offense for a money courier to transport bulk currency in a vehicle inside the country, even if the funds represent criminal proceeds. Moreover, in terrorism cases it is now clear that terrorists engage in so-called "reverse" money laundering in which they transport large quantities of cash that is not derived from any illegal source but which is intended to be used to finance a terrorist act or to commit another crime. In the Department's proposal last year, we included a provision that would make it illegal to transport more than $10,000 in currency concealed in a vehicle traveling in interstate commerce, knowing that the currency was derived from some kind of criminal activity or knowing that the currency was intended to be used to promote such activity. We continue to believe that there is a need for such legislation.

Another situation that the Department has encountered recently involves the valuation of blank bearer instruments, which is a technique equally valuable for laundering money or financing a terrorist organization. It is already a crime (see 31 U.S.C. § 5316) to transport monetary instruments in bearer form in excess of $10,000 into or out of the country without filing a report with the Customs Service. However, there is some confusion about how a check with the amount left blank should be counted toward the $10,000 threshold requirement. We would recommend that the law be clarified for such cases and to establish that a check in bearer form that with the dollar amount left open shall be deemed to have a value equal to the total funds in the account on which the check is drawn. Such a provision would allow us to prevent money launderers from exploiting this uncertainty in our present law.

One of the most serious problems that remains, and which has been highlighted by events since September 11, is the laundering of money through informal money exchanges called "Hawalas," particularly to the extent that Hawalas are used in "reverse" money laundering transactions to support terrorism or other transnational crime. We need to change the way we think about money laundering. Since 1986, when the money laundering laws were first enacted, law enforcement has looked backward to determine the source of the money and how it may have been concealed. In this age of international terrorism, if we are to protect our citizens and prevent future terrorist acts, we must be forward-looking: What are the funds going to be used for and why are steps being taken to conceal the identity of the originator or the source of the funds?

Unfortunately, only one narrow provision of Title 18 attempts to address these important questions, and then only if the funds are transported across a U.S. international border. Not only do we need legislation addressing the use of "clean" money intended to be used for the promotion of terrorism and other serious crime, but we need new tools to deal with concurrent and dependent transactions involving "clean money" washed through Hawalas to support criminal activity.

Finally, we are all well aware that money laundering today is global in nature. Yet gaps remain in our ability to seize proceeds resulting from foreign crimes as well as our ability to restrain the funds, even temporarily, of criminals arrested in the United States. For example, under current law, only a limited number of foreign crimes are specified unlawful activities under U.S. law, allowing foreign criminals to launder the proceeds of many other foreign crimes in the United States without providing law enforcement with the ability to prosecute money laundering cases and seize those funds for forfeiture. Similarly, we currently lack the authority to temporarily restrain funds in a U.S. bank account of an international terrorist arrested in the United States in order to determine whether such funds were connected to any illegal activity. We believe that these gaps need to be filled.

Conclusion

I would like to conclude by expressing the appreciation of the Department of Justice for the continuing support that this Committee has demonstrated for the Administration's anti-money laundering enforcement efforts.

Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, thank you for this opportunity to appear before you today. I look forward to working with you as we continue the war against terrorist financing and to close the remaining gaps in our money laundering laws. I would welcome any questions you may have at this time.

terrorist groups intend to continue their heinous acts of terrorism.

Accordingly, preventing future terrorist attacks and bringing terrorists to justice is now the top priority of the Department of Justice. Law enforcement is currently engaged in a cooperative effort to identify, disrupt and dismantle terrorist networks. Terrorism requires financing and terrorists rely on the flow of funds across international borders. To conceal their identities and their unlawful purpose, they exploit weaknesses in domestic and international financial systems. As this Committee well knows, therefore, curtailing terrorism requires a systemic approach to investigating the financial links to the terrorist organizations.

As you may recall, on September 24, 2001, less than two weeks after the terrorist attacks, Attorney General John Ashcroft appeared before the House Judiciary Committee, and then on September 25th, before the Senate Judiciary Committee to testify about the Administration's proposed new money laundering legislation. The Department of Justice encouraged the prompt adoption of the Administration's bill because it was necessary to update our money laundering laws. The proposed legislation included a large number of proposals, many of which had been drafted long before September 11, that would provide law enforcement with new investigative tools to prosecute financial crimes related to terrorism and to enhance our ability to cooperate with our international counterparts in the tracing, freezing and forfeiture of funds used to support terrorist organizations.

Due in great part to important work done by this Committee, Congress responded expeditiously, enacting a major part of the Administration's proposal. On October 26, 2001, one month after I had the honor of last appearing before you, Congress passed the USA PATRIOT Act, which included as Title III, the International Money Laundering Abatement and Financial Terrorism Act of 2001. While a few gaps still remain in the network of our anti-money laundering laws, Title III of the Patriot Act has provided law enforcement with important new authority to investigate and prosecute the financing of crime, including terrorism.

Among the many new provisions of the PATRIOT Act is the authority to seize terrorist assets, both foreign and domestic, if the property (or its owner) is involved in, related to, or used in support of acts of domestic or international terrorism. The new law also furthered our ability to fight transnational crime by making the smuggling of bulk cash across our border unlawful, adding terrorism and other offenses to the list of racketeering offenses, and providing prosecutors with the authority to seize money subject to forfeiture in a foreign bank account by authorizing the seizure of such a foreign bank's funds held in a U.S. correspondent account. Other important provisions expanded our ability to prosecute unlicenced money transmitters, provided authority for the service of administrative subpoenas on foreign banks concerning records for foreign transactions, and allowed law enforcement more immediate access to reports of currency transactions in excess of $10,000 by a trade or business. These provisions will prove to be powerful new weapons in our fight against international terrorism as well as other kinds of international criminal activity.

The financial aspects of U.S. anti-terrorism initiatives

Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer this Committee a brief summary of the Department's work to date using our present money laundering laws against terrorism. While I am not, of course, at liberty to disclose information that might compromise or undermine ongoing criminal investigations, I am nevertheless able to provide a list of areas in which the Department of Justice, in conjunction with other departments and agencies, is making headway to expose terrorist financing and to promote robust cooperation with our international partners in the global war on terrorism.

Through financial analysis, we continue our work to reconstruct the web of planning and finance that supported the September 11 terror attacks, and we continue to work to detect other threats to our national security, whether by persons affiliated with al Qaeda or by other state or non-state actors who target the U.S. or its interests anywhere in the world. Moreover, we have found that, as in many other criminal cases, following the money trail not only leads to other coconspirators, but also provides strong proof of the conspiracy, its membership, and its criminal actions.

Within days of September 11th, the Department established the Financial Review Group, an interagency task force investigating terrorist financing and operating out of FBI Headquarters. The FRG consists of over 100 agents and analysts from the federal law enforcement community under the leadership of the FBI's Financial Crimes Section, and a number of Criminal Division attorneys from the Terrorism and Violent Crimes Section, the Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section, and the Office of International Affairs, under my supervision. Over the past several months, the FRG has compiled and analyzed financial information gathered by federal agents and U.S. Attorneys' Offices around the country in the course of the ongoing terrorism investigation. By collecting this information in one central location, we have created a central depository for relevant evidence – bank records, travel records, credit card and retail receipts – for financial and forensic analysis. This evidence can then be interpreted and integrated with the fuller body of terrorist evidence collected by law enforcement and others. The work of the FRG is, of course, international in scope as we continue to work with our counterterrorism partners in other countries to follow the money trail. I fully expect the FRG will play a continuing critical role in all terrorist financing investigations.

At the same time we established the FRG, the Department created a task force of prosecutors to work with the FRG in developing terrorist financing cases, with an emphasis on non-governmental organizations and charities that may be providing cover for terrorist activity . This Terrorist Financing Task Force, located in the Terrorism and Violent Crime Section of the Criminal Division, also includes representatives from the Criminal Division's Fraud, Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering, and Appellate Sections, the Tax Division's Criminal Enforcement Sections, and Assistant U.S. Attorneys from Virginia, New York, and Colorado.

The FRG has made substantial progress in tracing financing related to the September 11th attacks as well as the financial underpinnings of Osama bin Laden's al Qaeda organization. Through financial information, we have established how the hijackers received their money, how and where they were trained to fly, where they lived and – perhaps most significantly – the names and whereabouts of persons with whom they worked and came into contact.

The Terrorist Financing Task Force is working directly with the Anti-Terrorism Task Forces, or ATTFs, which the Attorney General created in each judicial district. The ATTFs are comprised of federal prosecutors from the U.S. Attorney's Office, members of the federal law enforcement agencies, as well as the primary state and local law enforcement officials in each district. They coordinate closely with many of the existing FBI Joint Terrorism Task Forces (JTTFs). The ATTFs form a national network, which is the foundation of our effort to coordinate the collection, analysis and dissemination of information and to develop the investigative and prosecutorial anti-terrorism strategy for the country.

The efforts of the FRG, the Terrorist Financing Task Force and the ATTFs have resulted in targeted law enforcement actions that are at the heart of the Administration's assault on terrorism. On November 7, 2001, the Attorney General announced a nationwide enforcement action against the al Barakaat network, including coordinated arrests and the execution of search warrants in Massachusetts, Virginia and Ohio. These actions were coordinated with Treasury's execution of blocking actions pursuant to the Executive Order against al Barakaat-related entities in Georgia, Minnesota and Washington State. The nationwide efforts on November 7th against this Somalian financial network with ties to Osama bin Laden relied, in large part, upon the central coordination efforts of the FRG and the Terrorist Financing Task Force, in conjunction with various U.S. Attorneys' Offices, agents from the U.S. Customs Service and Criminal Investigations of the Internal Revenue Service. More recently, on December 4, 2001, the President, along with the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury, announced the designation and blocking action against the Texas-based charity known as the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development, alleged to be a North American "front" for the terrorist organization Hamas. These actions demonstrate that our fight against terrorist financing is a broad-based effort extending well beyond the al Qaeda network.

In addition to the coordinated shut-down of al Barakaat's operation on November 7th, the United States Attorney for the District of Massachusetts is prosecuting the principals of al Barakaat's Boston branch for operating an unlicenced money transmitting business. Between January and September 2001, while operating without a license under Massachusetts law, Barakaat North America knowingly caused the transfer of over $3,000,000 to banks in the United Arab Emirates. On November 14, 2001, a federal grand jury in Boston returned an indictment charging Liban Hussein, the president of al Barakaat, and his brother, Mohamed Hussein, with a violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1960. Mohamed Hussein has been detained pending trial, and we are seeking to extradite Liban Hussein through a request made to Canada.

There is another aspect of our terrorist financing efforts that is particularly promising. We are using computers to analyze information obtained in the course of criminal investigations, to uncover patterns of behavior that, before the advent of such efficient technology, would have eluded us. Through what has come to be called "data mining" and predictive technology, we seek to identify other potential terrorists and terrorism financing networks. In our search for terrorists and terrorist cells, we are employing technology that was previously utilized primarily by the business community.

We have reason to believe that terrorists have long utilized identity theft and social security number fraud to enable them to obtain employment and access to secure locations, such as airports. In addition, they have used these and similar means to obtain driver's licenses, hazardous material licenses, and bank and credit accounts through which terrorism financing dollars are transferred. The Utah ATTF, under the leadership of U.S. Attorney Paul Warner, recently undertook a computerized data verification operation that uncovered fraud committed by some 60 persons employed in sensitive locations throughout the Salt Lake City International Airport. These efforts are part the Attorney General's stated goal of aggressively using existing law enforcement tools and government-maintained data to bolster our national security.

As you know, in addition to United States v. Liban Hussein, et al., in Boston, a number of other criminal prosecutions related to terrorism are underway. For example, last month, a federal grand jury in Alexandria, Virginia, returned an indictment charging Zacarias Moussaoui of France with six criminal conspiracy charges, each of which carries a maximum penalty of death. As the indictment alleges, Moussaoui is linked to the al Qaeda organization in part through financial connections. And, earlier this month, a federal grand jury in Boston indicted another al Qaeda-trained operative for his attempt to destroy an American Airlines jet in December over the Atlantic. We will bring all available financial evidence and analytic techniques to bear in these prosecutions, as well.

And the Department of Justice is also using the civil forfeiture laws to combat the financing of terrorism. While few details are publicly available at this point in time, bank accounts used by, or related to, the September 11th terrorists have been seized by the United States Attorneys in New Jersey and the Southern District of New York.

We continue to work with other government departments and agencies, including the Department of the Treasury's "Operation Green Quest," in connection with the investigation and freezing of bank accounts and assets related to various organizations claiming to be charitable entities, but which have channeled funds to al Qaeda or other terrorist organizations.

In conjunction with our international partners, we have made substantial progress in the global war against terrorism. Even before September 11th, the Criminal Division was involved in efforts to attack terrorist financing on a global scale. Beginning in 1997, we played a key role in negotiations which led to development of the U.N. Convention on the Suppression of Terrorist Financing. This Convention obligates State parties to create criminal offenses specific to terrorist financing, and to prosecute or extradite, as appropriate, persons engaged in such offenses. On October 18, 2001, it was my privilege to testify before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in support of this important international instrument and the implementing legislation. The Senate is to be commended for its swift action to ratify that Convention.

The Department of Justice, together with the Departments of Treasury and State, continues to plays a leading role in the G-7 Financial Action Task Force against Money Laundering (FATF). Prior to September 11, the FATF adopted its 40 Recommendations on Money Laundering, which have become the global standard for an effective anti-money laundering regime, and fostered an initiative on "Non-Cooperative Countries and Territories" (NCCT), which endeavors to identify publicly the locations of the most prevalent money laundering activities in the world and the jurisdictions with the weakest anti-money laundering legal and regulatory framework. Following September 11th, FATF convened an emergency session in Washington on terrorist financing and agreed to focus its efforts and expertise on the global war against international terrorism. Attorney General Ashcroft addressed the group of international anti-money laundering experts on October 30th. At the conclusion of this extraordinary session, the FATF issued new Special Recommendations on Terrorist Financing, which, among other things, call upon all countries to criminalize the financing of terrorism and terrorist organizations, freeze and confiscate terrorist assets, report suspicious transactions linked to terrorism and impose anti-money laundering controls on non-traditional banking systems, such as hawalas. The FATF set forth a timetable for action, which requires the development of additional guidance for financial institutions on the techniques and mechanisms used in the financing of terrorism.

As you know, the Criminal Division also works extensively to provide assistance to countries that seek to improve their money laundering and asset forfeiture laws and enhance their enforcement programs. Prior to September 11th, the Criminal Division designed and presented a training course to share with foreign governments and practitioners our knowledge and expertise in rooting out terrorist financing. Since September 11th, we have placed increased emphasis on providing training and assistance to other countries to aid them in developing mechanisms to detect and disrupt financial crime. At present, we have attorneys from the Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section participating as members of interagency training and technical assistance assessment teams in Kuwait and Qatar. In the following months, we will be sending Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering attorneys to Pakistan and Saudi Arabia. These teams will evaluate the various countries mechanisms to identify money laundering and to freeze or seize terrorist assets. The assessment reports will be used to develop specific action plans for each of these countries as we provide training and technical assistance in the future.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

REMARKS AS WRITTEN ACTUAL REMARKS MAY VARY

EMBARGOED UNTIL DELIVERY

THE PRESIDENT'S STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS

Mr. Speaker, Vice President Cheney, Members of Congress, distinguished guests, and fellow citizens:

As we gather tonight, our Nation is at war, our economy is in recession, and the civilized world faces unprecedented dangers. Yet the state of our Union has never been stronger.

We last met in an hour of shock and suffering. In four short months, our Nation has comforted the victims … begun to rebuild New York and the Pentagon … rallied a great coalition … captured, arrested, and rid the world of thousands of terrorists … destroyed Afghanistan's terrorist training camps … saved a people from starvation … and freed a country from brutal oppression.

The American flag flies again over our embassy in Kabul. Terrorists who once occupied Afghanistan now occupy cells at Guantanamo Bay. And terrorist leaders who urged followers to sacrifice their lives are running for their own.

America and Afghanistan are now allies against terror... we will be partners in rebuilding that country... and this evening we welcome the distinguished interim leader of a liberated Afghanistan: Chairman Hamid Karzai.

The last time we met in this chamber, the mothers and daughters of Afghanistan were captives in their own homes, forbidden from working or going to school. Today women are free, and are part of Afghanistan's new government, and we welcome the new Minister of Women's Affairs, Doctor Sima Samar.

Our progress is a tribute to the spirit of the Afghan people, to the resolve of our coalition, and to the might of the United States military. When I called our troops into action, I did so with complete confidence in their courage and skill - and tonight, thanks to them, we are winning the war against terror. The men and women of our armed forces have delivered a message now clear to every enemy of the United States: Even seven thousand miles away, across oceans and continents, on mountaintops and in caves - you will not escape the justice of this Nation.

For many Americans, these four months have brought sorrow, and pain that will never completely go away. Every day a retired firefighter returns to Ground Zero, to feel closer to his two sons who died there. At a memorial in New York, a little boy left his football with a note for his lost father: "Dear Daddy, Please take this to Heaven. I don't want to play football until I can play with you again someday." Last month, at the grave of her husband, Micheal, a CIA officer and Marine who died in Mazar-e Sharif, Shannon Spann said these words of farewell: "Semper Fi, my love." Shannon is with us tonight.

Shannon, I assure you and all who have lost a loved one that our cause is just, and our country will never forget the debt we owe Micheal and all who gave their lives for freedom.

Our cause is just, and it continues. Our discoveries in Afghanistan confirmed our worst fears, and show us the true scope of the task ahead. We have seen the depth of our enemies' hatred in videos where they laugh about the loss of innocent life. And the depth of their hatred is equaled by the madness of the destruction they design. We have found diagrams of American nuclear power plants and public water facilities … detailed instructions for making chemical weapons ... surveillance maps of American cities, and thorough descriptions of landmarks in America and throughout the world.

What we have found in Afghanistan confirms that - far from ending there - our war against terror is only beginning. Most of the 19 men who hijacked planes on September 11th were trained in Afghanistan's camps - and so were tens of thousands of others. Thousands of dangerous killers, schooled in the methods of murder, often supported by outlaw regimes, are now spread throughout the world like ticking time bombs - set to go off without warning.

Thanks to the work of our law enforcement officials and coalition partners, hundreds of terrorists have been arrested …yet tens of thousands of trained terrorists are still at large. These enemies view the entire world as a battlefield, and we must pursue them wherever they are. So long as training camps operate, so long as nations harbor terrorists, freedom is at risk – and America and our allies must not, and will not, allow it.

Our Nation will continue to be steadfast, and patient, and persistent in the pursuit of two great objectives. First, we will shut down terrorist camps, disrupt terrorist plans, and bring terrorists to justice. Second, we must prevent the terrorists and regimes who seek chemical, biological, or nuclear weapons from threatening the United States and the world.

Our military has put the terror training camps of Afghanistan out of business, yet camps still exist in at least a dozen countries. A terrorist underworld - including groups like Hamas, Hezbollah, Islamic Jihad, and Jaish-i-Mohammed - operates in remote jungles and deserts, and hides in the centers of large cities.

While the most visible military action is in Afghanistan, America is acting elsewhere. We now have troops in the Philippines helping to train that country's armed forces to go after terrorist cells that have executed an American, and still hold hostages. Our soldiers, working with the Bosnian government, seized terrorists who were plotting to bomb our embassy. Our navy is patrolling the coast of Africa to block the shipment of weapons and the establishment of terrorist camps in Somalia.

My hope is that all nations will heed our call, and eliminate the terrorist parasites who threaten their countries, and our own. Many nations are acting forcefully. Pakistan is now cracking down on terror, and I admire the leadership of President Musharraf. But some governments will be timid in the face of terror. And make no mistake: If they do not act, America will.

Our second goal is to prevent regimes that sponsor terror from threatening America or our friends and allies with weapons of mass destruction.

Some of these regimes have been pretty quiet since September 11th. But we know their true nature. North Korea is a regime arming with missiles and weapons of mass destruction, while starving its citizens.

Iran aggressively pursues these weapons and exports terror, while an unelected few repress the Iranian people's hope for freedom.

Iraq continues to flaunt its hostility toward America and to support terror. The Iraqi regime has plotted to develop anthrax, and nerve gas, and nuclear weapons for over a decade. This is a regime that has already used poison gas to murder thousands of its own citizens – leaving the bodies of mothers huddled over their dead children. This is a regime that agreed to international inspections – then kicked out the inspectors. This is a regime that has something to hide from the civilized world.

States like these, and their terrorist allies, constitute an axis of evil, arming to threaten the peace of the world. By seeking weapons of mass destruction, these regimes pose a grave and growing danger. They could provide these arms to terrorists, giving them the means to match their hatred. They could attack our allies or attempt to blackmail the United States. In any of these cases, the price of indifference would be catastrophic.

We will work closely with our coalition to deny terrorists and their state sponsors the materials, technology, and expertise to make and deliver weapons of mass destruction. We will develop and deploy effective missile defenses to protect America and our allies from sudden attack. And all nations should know: America will do what is necessary to ensure our Nation's security.

We will be deliberate, yet time is not on our side. I will not wait on events, while dangers gather. I will not stand by, as peril draws closer and closer. The United States of America will not permit the world's most dangerous regimes to threaten us with the world's most destructive weapons.

Our war on terror is well begun, but it is only begun. This campaign may not be finished on our watch – yet it must be and it will be waged on our watch.

We cannot stop short. If we stopped now - leaving terror camps intact and terror states unchecked - our sense of security would be false and temporary. History has called America and our allies to action, and it is both our responsibility and our privilege to fight freedom's fight.

Our first priority must always be the security of our Nation, and that will be reflected in the budget I send to Congress. My budget supports three great goals for America: We will win this war, we will protect our homeland, and we will revive our economy.

September 11th brought out the best in America, and the best in this Congress, and I join the American people in applauding your unity and resolve. Now Americans deserve to have this same spirit directed toward addressing problems here at home. I am a proud member of my party - yet as we act to win the war, protect our people, and create jobs in America, we must act first and foremost not as Republicans, not as Democrats, but as Americans.

It costs a lot to fight this war. We have spent more than a billion dollars a month - over 30 million dollars a day - and we must be prepared for future operations. Afghanistan proved that expensive precision weapons defeat the enemy and spare innocent lives, and we need more of them. We need to replace aging aircraft and make our military more agile to put our troops anywhere in the world quickly and safely. Our men and women in uniform deserve the best weapons, the best equipment, and the best training – and they also deserve another pay raise. My budget includes the largest increase in defense spending in two decades... because while the price of freedom and security is high, it is never too high - whatever it costs to defend our country, we will pay it.

The next priority of my budget is to do everything possible to protect our citizens and strengthen our Nation against the ongoing threat of another attack. Time and distance from the events of September 11th will not make us safer unless we act on its lessons. America is no longer protected by vast oceans. We are protected from attack only by vigorous action abroad, and increased vigilance at home.

My budget nearly doubles funding for a sustained strategy of homeland security, focused on four key areas: bioterrorism, emergency response, airport and border security, and improved intelligence. We will develop vaccines to fight anthrax and other deadly diseases. We will increase funding to help states and communities train and equip our heroic police and firefighters. We will improve intelligence collection and sharing, expand patrols at our borders, strengthen the security of air travel, and use technology to track the arrivals and departures of visitors to the United States.

Homeland security will make America, not only stronger, but in many ways better. Knowledge gained from bioterrorism research will improve public health … stronger police and fire departments will mean safer neighborhoods … stricter border enforcement will help combat illegal drugs.

And as government works to better secure our homeland, America will continue to depend on the eyes and ears of alert citizens. A few days before Christmas, an airline flight attendant spotted a passenger lighting a match. The crew and passengers quickly subdued the man, who had been trained by al-Qaida, and was armed with explosives. The people on that airplane were alert, and as a result, likely saved nearly 200 lives – and tonight we welcome and thank flight attendants Hermis Moutardier and Christina Jones.

Once we have funded our national security and our homeland security, the final great priority of my budget is economic security for the American people. To achieve these great national objectives - to win the war, protect the homeland, and revitalize our economy - our budget will run a deficit that will be small and short term so long as Congress restrains spending and acts in a fiscally responsible way. We have clear priorities and we must act at home with the same purpose and resolve we have shown overseas: We will prevail in the war, and we will defeat this recession.

Americans who have lost their jobs need our help and I support extending unemployment benefits, and direct assistance for health care coverage. Yet American workers want more than unemployment checks – they want a steady paycheck. When America works, America prospers, so my economic security plan can be summed up in one word: jobs.

Good jobs begin with good schools – and here we've made a fine start. Republicans and Democrats worked together to achieve historic education reform so no child in America will be left behind. I was proud to work with Members of both parties – Chairman John Boehner and Congressman George Miller, Senator Judd Gregg – and I was so proud of our work I even had nice things to say about my friend Ted Kennedy. The folks at the Crawford coffee shop couldn't quite believe it – but our work on this bill shows what is possible if we set aside posturing and focus on results.

There is more to do. We need to prepare our children to read and succeed in school with improved Head Start and early childhood development programs. We must upgrade our teacher colleges and teacher training and launch a major recruiting drive with a great goal for America: a quality teacher in every classroom.

Good jobs also depend on reliable and affordable energy. This Congress must act to encourage conservation, promote technology, build infrastructure, and it must act to increase energy production at home so America is less dependent on foreign oil.

Good jobs depend on expanded trade. Selling into new markets creates new jobs, so I ask Congress to finally approve Trade Promotion Authority. On these two key issues, trade and energy, the House of Representatives has acted to create jobs – and I urge the Senate to pass this legislation.

Good jobs depend on sound tax policy. Last year, some in this hall thought my tax relief plan was too small – and some thought it was too big. But when those checks arrived in the mail, most Americans thought tax relief was just about right. Congress listened to the people and responded by reducing tax rates, doubling the child credit, and ending the death tax. For the sake of long-term growth and to help Americans plan for the future, let's make these tax cuts permanent.

The way out of this recession, the way to create jobs, is to grow the economy by encouraging investment in factories and equipment, and by speeding up tax relief so people have more money to spend. For the sake of American workers, let's pass a stimulus package.

Good jobs must be the aim of welfare reform. As we re-authorize these important reforms, we must always remember the goal is to reduce dependency on government and offer every American the dignity of a job.

Americans know economic security can vanish in an instant without health security. I ask Congress to join me this year to enact a Patients' Bill of Rights … to give uninsured workers credits to help buy health coverage … to approve an historic increase in spending for veterans' health … and to give seniors a sound and modern Medicare system that includes coverage for prescription drugs.

A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans, because employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails. Through stricter accounting standards and tougher disclosure requirements, corporate America must be made more accountable to employees and shareholders and held to the highest standards of conduct.

Retirement security also depends upon keeping the commitments of Social Security – and we will. We must make Social Security financially stable and allow personal retirement accounts for younger workers who choose them.

Members, you and I will work together in the months ahead on other issues: productive farm policy … a cleaner environment … broader home ownership, especially among minorities … and ways to encourage the good work of charities and faith-based groups. I ask you to join me on these important domestic issues in the same spirit of cooperation we have applied to our war against terrorism.

During these last few months, I have been humbled and privileged to see the true character of this country in a time of testing. Our enemies believed America was weak and materialistic, that we would splinter in fear and selfishness. They were as wrong as they are evil.

The American people have responded magnificently, with courage and compassion, strength and resolve. As I have met the heroes, hugged the families, and looked into the tired faces of rescuers, I have stood in awe of the American people.

And I hope you will join me in expressing thanks to one American for the strength, and calm, and comfort she brings to our Nation in crisis: our First Lady, Laura Bush.

None of us would ever wish the evil that was done on September 11th, yet after America was attacked, it was as if our entire country looked into a mirror, and saw our better selves. We were reminded that we are citizens, with obligations to each other, to our country, and to history. We began to think less of the goods we can accumulate, and more about the good we can do.

For too long our culture has said, "If it feels good, do it." Now America is embracing a new ethic and a new creed: "Let's roll." In the sacrifice of soldiers, the fierce brotherhood of firefighters, and the bravery and generosity of ordinary citizens, we have glimpsed what a new culture of responsibility could look like. We want to be a Nation that serves goals larger than self. We have been offered a unique opportunity, and we must not let this moment pass.

My call tonight is for every American to commit at least two years – four thousand hours over the rest of your lifetime – to the service of your neighbors and your Nation.

Many are already serving and I thank you. If you aren't sure how to help, I've got a good place to start. To sustain and extend the best that has emerged in America, I invite you to join the new USA Freedom Corps. The Freedom Corps will focus on three areas of need: responding in case of crisis at home, rebuilding our communities, and extending American compassion throughout the world.

One purpose of the USA Freedom Corps will be homeland security. America needs retired doctors and nurses who can be mobilized in major emergencies ... volunteers to help police and fire departments … transportation and utility workers well-trained in spotting danger.

Our country also needs citizens working to rebuild our communities. We need mentors to love children, especially children whose parents are in prison, and we need more talented teachers in troubled schools. USA Freedom Corps will expand and improve the good efforts of AmeriCorps and Senior Corps to recruit more than 200,000 new volunteers.

And America needs citizens to extend the compassion of our country to every part of the world. So we will renew the promise of the Peace Corps, double its volunteers over the next five years, and ask it to join a new effort to encourage development, and education, and opportunity in the Islamic world.

This time of adversity offers a unique moment of opportunity – a moment we must seize to change our culture. Through the gathering momentum of millions of acts of service and decency and kindness, I know: We can overcome evil with greater good.

And we have a great opportunity during this time of war to lead the world toward the values that will bring lasting peace. All fathers and mothers, in all societies, want their children to be educated and live free from poverty and violence. No people on earth yearn to be oppressed, or aspire to servitude, or eagerly await the midnight knock of the secret police.

If anyone doubts this, let them look to Afghanistan, where the Islamic "street" greeted the fall of tyranny with song and celebration. Let the skeptics look to Islam's own rich history - with its centuries of learning, and tolerance, and progress.

America will lead by defending liberty and justice because they are right and true and unchanging for all people everywhere. No nation owns these aspirations, and no nation is exempt from them. We have no intention of imposing our culture - but America will always stand firm for the non-negotiable demands of human dignity: the rule of law... limits on the power of the state... respect for women... private property... free speech... equal justice... and religious tolerance.

America will take the side of brave men and women who advocate these values around the world - including the Islamic world - because we have a greater objective than eliminating threats and containing resentment. We seek a just and peaceful world beyond the war on terror.

In this moment of opportunity, a common danger is erasing old rivalries. America is working with Russia, China, and India in ways we never have before to achieve peace and prosperity. In every region, free markets and free trade and free societies are proving their power to lift lives. Together with friends and allies from Europe to Asia, from Africa to Latin America, we will demonstrate that the forces of terror cannot stop the momentum of freedom.

The last time I spoke here, I expressed the hope that life would return to normal. In some ways, it has. In others, it never will. Those of us who have lived through these challenging times have been changed by them. We've come to know truths that we will never question: Evil is real, and it must be opposed. Beyond all differences of race or creed, we are one country, mourning together and facing danger together. Deep in the American character, there is honor, and it is stronger than cynicism. Many have discovered again that even in tragedy – especially in tragedy – God is near.

In a single instant, we realized that this will be a decisive decade in the history of liberty - that we have been called to a unique role in human events. Rarely has the world faced a choice more clear or consequential.

Our enemies send other people's children on missions of suicide and murder. They embrace tyranny and death as a cause and a creed. We stand for a different choice - made long ago, on the day of our founding. We affirm it again today. We choose freedom and the dignity of every life.

Steadfast in our purpose, we now press on. We have known freedom's price. We have shown freedom's power. And in this great conflict, my fellow Americans, we will see freedom's victory.

Thank you, and may God bless the United States of America.

STATE OF THE UNION PREVIEW

America faces a unique moment in history: our nation is at war, our homeland was attacked, and our economy is in recession. In the State of the Union speech, President Bush will commit our nation to achieving three great goals of our time:

- ✓ To Win the War on Terrorism;
- ✓ Strengthen Protections of our Homeland; and
- ✓ Revitalize Our Economy and Create Jobs.

- National Security. Our fight against terrorism began in Afghanistan, but it will not end there. President Bush will discuss the keys to ultimate victory by rooting out global terrorism wherever it exists and protecting America and our allies against chemical and biological attacks. Whatever it takes to win the war on terrorism and defend our country, our nation must and will provide it.

- Homeland Security. The President will outline plans to strengthen protections against future attacks at home by improving intelligence activities, tightening our borders, protecting our airports and airplanes and dramatically increasing funding to equip and train firefighters, law enforcement, and emergency medical personnel.

- Economic Security. The President's economic agenda can be summed up in one word: jobs. The president understands that a broad agenda to create jobs and strong economy requires a good education, reliable and affordable health care (including prescription drugs), a secure retirement, a comprehensive energy policy, and new markets for America's products through expanded trade.

There has been a broad and bipartisan commitment to winning the war on terrorism. The President wants to bring the same focus and bipartisan commitment to work to address America's needs here at home.

The President will also discuss how we can preserve and extend the great good we've seen come out of the evil of September 11th – not only to extend and strengthen our values throughout America, but throughout the world.

THE WHITE HOUSE OFFICE OF COMMUNICATIONS

THE STATE OF THE UNION

America faces a unique moment in history: our nation is at war, our homeland was attacked, and our economy is in recession. The President has committed our nation to achieving three great goals of our time:

- Win the War on Terrorism;
- Strengthen Protections of our Homeland; and
- Revitalize Our Economy and Create Jobs.

WINNING THE WAR ON TERRORISM

In 4 months America has rallied a great coalition, captured and arrested terrorists, destroyed terrorist training camps, saved Afghans from starvation and freed all Afghans, including women, from brutal oppression. Terrorist leaders who urged followers to sacrifice their lives are now running for their own. America will continue to fight the war on terrorism by pursuing two great objectives:

- Shut down terrorist camps, disrupt terrorist plans, and bring terrorists to justice. Most of the 19 men who hijacked planes on September 11th were trained in Afghanistan's camps – and so were as many as 100,000 others. Up to 100,000 dangerous killers are spread throughout the world like ticking time bombs, set to go off without warning.

- Prevent the terrorists and regimes who seek chemical, biological, or nuclear weapons from threatening the U.S. and the world. North Korea is a regime arming with missiles while starving its citizens. Iran pursues weapons of mass destruction while an unelected few repress the Iranian people. And Iraq continues to flaunt its hostility toward America -- and its support of terror -- by plotting to develop anthrax, nerve gas, and nuclear weapons.

States like Iran, Iraq, North Korea, and their terrorist allies constitute an axis of evil, arming to threaten the peace of the world. We will work closely with our coalition to deny terrorists and their state sponsors the materials, technology, and expertise to make and deliver weapons of mass destruction. We will develop and deploy effective missile defenses to protect America and our allies from sudden attack. The U.S. will not permit the world's most dangerous regimes to threaten us with the world's most destructive weapons.

Increasing Defense Spending. The President will outline important increases defense spending to make our military stronger and more agile. Our men and women in uniform deserve the best weapons, the best equipment and the best training. Whatever it takes to win the war on terrorism and defend our country, our nation must and will provide it.

STRENGTHENING PROTECTIONS OF OUR HOMELAND

The budget nearly doubles funding for a sustained strategy of homeland security to improve intelligence activities, tighten our borders, protect our airports and airplanes and dramatically increase funding to equip and train firefighters, law enforcement, and emergency medical personnel.

REVITALIZING OUR ECONOMY & CREATING JOBS

The President's economic agenda can be summed up in one word: jobs. The president understands that a broad agenda to create jobs and a strong economy also requires a good education, reliable & affordable health care (including prescription drugs), a secure retirement, a comprehensive energy policy, and new markets for America's products through expanded trade.

Good Jobs Depend on Sound Tax Policy. The President will call on Congress to pass the stimulus package that speeds up tax relief so people have more money to spend, creates jobs, and encourages investment in factories and equipment.

For the sake of long-term growth and to help Americans plan for the future, tax relief signed into law last year must be permanent. The quickest way to create jobs and speed up economic recovery is to grow the economy by encouraging investment in factories and equipment, and by speeding up tax relief so people have more money to spend. The best way to guarantee future surpluses is to guarantee future economic growth.

THE PRESIDENT'S CALL TO SERVICE & THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

The President asks every American to commit at least two years – 4,000 hours over the rest of their lifetime – to the service of their Nation. The new USA Freedom Corps will focus on three areas of need: responding in case of crisis at home, rebuilding our communities, and extending American compassion throughout the world.

- Responding to Crises at Home. Creates the Citizen Corps to enable individual Americans to participate in homeland security activities in their communities. For example, America needs retired doctors and nurses who can be mobilized in major emergencies, volunteers to help police and fire departments, and transportation and utility workers well-trained to spot danger.

- Rebuilding our Communities. Gives all Americans – especially young Americans and seniors – the opportunity to strengthen our communities here at home through teaching, mentoring and other community service activities. USA Freedom Corps will expand and improve the good efforts of Americorps and Senior Corps to recruit more than 200,000 new volunteers.

- Extending American Compassion Worldwide. The U.S. will renew the promise of the Peace Corps, double its volunteers over the next five years, and ask it to join a new effort to encourage development, and education, and opportunity in the Islamic world.

America has a great opportunity during this time of war to lead the world toward the values that bring lasting peace. All fathers and mothers, in all societies, want their children to be educated and live free from poverty and violence. America has no intention of imposing its culture – but America will always stand firm for the non-negotiable demands of human dignity: the rule of law; limits on the power of the state; respect for women; private property; free speech; equal justice; and religious tolerance. No nation owns these aspirations, and no nation is exempt from them.

PENSION PROTECTION

A good job should lead to security in retirement. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails. The President asks Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Through stricter accounting standards and tougher disclosure requirements, corporate America must be made more accountable to employees, shareholders, and the highest standards of conduct.

BIPARTISANSHIP

There has been a bipartisan commitment to winning the war on terrorism. The President wants to forge this same bipartisan commitment to address our challenges here at home. The President asks Congress join him this year to:

- ✓ Pass a Patients' Bill of Rights
- ✓ Give uninsured workers credits to help buy health coverage;
- ✓ Approve an historic increase in spending for veterans health;
- ✓ Give seniors a sound and modern Medicare system that includes coverage for prescription drugs;
- ✓ Protect our environment;
- ✓ Make Social Security financially stable and allow personal accounts for younger workers who choose them;
- ✓ Increase home ownership for all Americans, especially among minorities; and
- ✓ Encourage the good work of charities and faith-based groups.

TODAY
'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

? In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative ? the USA
Freedom Corps.

? Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps ? the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

? On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans

serve.

? In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan
to launch the new USA Freedom Corps ? a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

? A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist
Information and Prevention System (TIPS) ? as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.
? An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities.
President Bush's plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an
75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
? A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

? President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

? For more information on the USA Freedom Corps, Americans can visit www.usafreedomcorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS

ABOUT THE CITIZEN CORPS

? The Citizen Corps will enable Americans to volunteer to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

? Community-based Citizen Corps Councils will help drive local involvement in Citizen Corps, developing community action plans, assessing possible threats, identifying local resources and coordinating other Citizen Corps programs.

? These Councils will be broad-based ? including leaders from law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, businesses, community-basedinstitutions, schools, places of worship, health care facilities, public works and other key community sectors.

? The President's budget for FY 03 will request $144 million in matching funds to support the formation and training of local Citizen Corps Councils.

? Citizen Corps volunteers will be able to participate in a variety of programs that match their skills and abilities. The President's FY 03 budget provides more than $230 million for these efforts, including:

? Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) Program: Builds on successful local programs in which civilian volunteers help local police departments to perform non-sworn functions, freeing up police officers to perform vital front-line duties in times of emergency.

? Medical Reserve Corps: Enables retired healthcare professionals to effectively augment local health officials' capacity to respond to an emergency.

? Operation TIPS (Terrorist Information and Prevention System): Operation TIPS will enable millions of America transportation workers, postal workers, and public utility employees to identify and report suspicious activities linked to terrorism and crime.

? Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT): The President has proposed tripling over the next two years the number of Americans enrolled in CERT ? a training program that enables individual Americans to participate in emergency management planning in their communities and prepare to respond to disasters and other emergencies.

? Neighborhood Watch Programs: The President's plan will double the number of Neighborhood Watch Programs in the next two years, and enhance the program by incorporating terrorism prevention into its mission.

? Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook: The Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook provides current crime and disaster preparedness techniques as well as the latest information on terrorism, to give Americans guidance on how to prepare in their homes, neighborhoods, workplaces and public spaces.

? For more information on Citizen Corps initiatives or to become a

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative – the USA Freedom Corps.

- Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps – the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

- On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans to serve.

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan to launch the new USA Freedom Corps – a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

  - A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist Information and Prevention System (TIPS) – as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.
  - An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities. President Bush's plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an additional 75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
  - A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

- President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative – the USA Freedom Corps.

- Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps – the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

- On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans to serve.

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan to launch the new USA Freedom Corps – a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

  - A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist Information and Prevention System (TIPS) – as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.
  - An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities. President Bush's plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an additional 75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
  - A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

- President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

- For more information on the USA Freedom Corps, Americans can visit www.usafreedomcorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS

ABOUT THE CITIZEN CORPS

- The Citizen Corps will enable Americans to volunteer to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

- Community-based Citizen Corps Councils will help drive local involvement in Citizen Corps, developing community action plans, assessing possible threats, identifying local resources and coordinating other Citizen Corps programs.

  - These Councils will be broad-based – including leaders from law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, businesses, community-based institutions, schools, places of worship, health care facilities, public works and other key community sectors.

  - The President's budget for FY 03 will request $144 million in matching funds to support the formation and training of local Citizen Corps Councils.

- Citizen Corps volunteers will be able to participate in a variety of programs that match their skills and abilities. The President's FY 03 budget provides more than $230 million for these efforts, including:

  - Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) Program: Builds on successful local programs in which civilian volunteers help local police departments to perform non-sworn functions, freeing up police officers to perform vital front-line duties in times of emergency.

  - Medical Reserve Corps: Enables retired healthcare professionals to effectively augment local health officials' capacity to respond to an emergency.

  - Operation TIPS (Terrorist Information and Prevention System): Operation TIPS will enable millions of America transportation workers, postal workers, and public utility employees to identify and report suspicious activities linked to terrorism and crime.

  - Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT): The President has proposed tripling over the next two years the number of Americans enrolled in CERT – a training program that enables individual Americans to participate in emergency management planning in their communities and prepare to respond to disasters and other emergencies.

  - Neighborhood Watch Programs: The President's plan will double the number of Neighborhood Watch Programs in the next two years, and enhance the program by incorporating terrorism prevention into its mission.

  - Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook: The Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook provides current crime and disaster preparedness techniques as well as the latest information on terrorism, to give Americans guidance on how to prepare in their homes, neighborhoods, workplaces and public spaces.

- For more information on Citizen Corps initiatives or to become a volunteer, Americans can visit www.citizencorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS.

TODAY,S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

? In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative) the USA Freedom Corps.

? Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps) the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

? On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans to serve.

? In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan to launch the new USA Freedom Corps) a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

? A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist Information and Prevention System (TIPS)) as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.
? An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities. President Bush,s plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an additional 75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
? A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

? President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

? For more information on the USA Freedom Corps, Americans can visit www.usafreedomcorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS

ABOUT THE CITIZEN CORPS

? The Citizen Corps will enable Americans to volunteer to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

? Community-based Citizen Corps Councils will help drive local involvement in Citizen Corps, developing community action plans, assessing possible threats, identifying local resources and coordinating other Citizen Corps programs.

? These Councils will be broad-based) including leaders from law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, businesses, community-based institutions, schools, places of worship, health care facilities, public works and other key community sectors.

? The President,s budget for FY 03 will request $144 million in matching funds to support the formation and training of local Citizen Corps Councils.

? Citizen Corps volunteers will be able to participate in a variety of programs that match their skills and abilities. The President,s FY 03 budget provides more than $230 million for these efforts, including:

? Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) Program: Builds on successful local programs in which civilian volunteers help local police departments to perform non-sworn functions, freeing up police officers to perform vital front-line duties in times of emergency.

? Medical Reserve Corps: Enables retired healthcare professionals to effectively augment local health officials, capacity to respond to an emergency.

? Operation TIPS (Terrorist Information and Prevention System): Operation TIPS will enable millions of America transportation workers, postal workers, and public utility employees to identify and report suspicious activities linked to terrorism and crime.

? Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT): The President has proposed tripling over the next two years the number of Americans enrolled in CERT) a training program that enables individual Americans to participate in emergency management planning in their communities and prepare to respond to disasters and other emergencies.

? Neighborhood Watch Programs: The President,s plan will double the number of Neighborhood Watch Programs in the next two years, and enhance the program by incorporating terrorism prevention into its mission.

? Citizens, Preparedness Guidebook: The Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook provides current crime and disaster preparedness techniques as well as the latest information on terrorism, to give Americans guidance on how to prepare in their homes, neighborhoods, workplaces and public spaces.

? For more information on Citizen Corps initiatives or to become a volunteer, Americans can visit www.citizencorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS.

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative – the USA Freedom Corps.

- Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps – the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

- On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans to serve.

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan to launch the new USA Freedom Corps – a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

  - A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist Information and Prevention System (TIPS) – as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.
  - An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities. President Bush's plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an additional 75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
  - A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

- President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

- For more information on the USA Freedom Corps, Americans can visit www.usafreedomcorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS

ABOUT THE CITIZEN CORPS

- The Citizen Corps will enable Americans to volunteer to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

- Community-based Citizen Corps Councils will help drive local involvement in Citizen Corps, developing community action plans, assessing possible threats, identifying local resources and coordinating other Citizen Corps programs.

  - These Councils will be broad-based – including leaders from law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, businesses, community-based institutions, schools, places of worship, health care facilities, public works and other key community sectors.

  - The President's budget for FY 03 will request $144 million in matching funds to support the formation and training of local Citizen Corps Councils.

- Citizen Corps volunteers will be able to participate in a variety of programs that match their skills and abilities. The President's FY 03 budget provides more than $230 million for these efforts, including:

  - Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) Program: Builds on successful local programs in which civilian volunteers help local police departments to perform non-sworn functions, freeing up police officers to perform vital front-line duties in times of emergency.

  - Medical Reserve Corps: Enables retired healthcare professionals to effectively augment local health officials' capacity to respond to an emergency.

  - Operation TIPS (Terrorist Information and Prevention System): Operation TIPS will enable millions of America transportation workers, postal workers, and public utility employees to identify and report suspicious activities linked to terrorism and crime.

  - Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT): The President has proposed tripling over the next two years the number of Americans enrolled in CERT – a training program that enables individual Americans to participate in emergency management planning in their communities and prepare to respond to disasters and other emergencies.

  - Neighborhood Watch Programs: The President's plan will double the number of Neighborhood Watch Programs in the next two years, and enhance the program by incorporating terrorism prevention into its mission.

  - Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook: The Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook provides current crime and disaster preparedness techniques as well as the latest information on terrorism, to give Americans guidance on how to prepare in their homes, neighborhoods, workplaces and public spaces.

- For more information on Citizen Corps initiatives or to become a volunteer, Americans can visit www.citizencorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS.

TODAY,S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

? In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative) the USA Freedom Corps.

? Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps) the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

? On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans to serve.

? In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan to launch the new USA Freedom Corps) a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

? A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist Information and Prevention System (TIPS)) as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.

? An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities. President Bush,s plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an additional 75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
? A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

? President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

? For more information on the USA Freedom Corps, Americans can visit www.usafreedomcorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS

ABOUT THE CITIZEN CORPS

? The Citizen Corps will enable Americans to volunteer to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

? Community-based Citizen Corps Councils will help drive local involvement in Citizen Corps, developing community action plans, assessing possible threats, identifying local resources and coordinating other Citizen Corps programs.

? These Councils will be broad-based) including leaders from law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, businesses, community-based institutions, schools, places of worship, health care facilities, public works and other key community sectors.

? The President,s budget for FY 03 will request $144 million in matching funds to support the formation and training of local Citizen Corps Councils.

? Citizen Corps volunteers will be able to participate in a variety of programs that match their skills and abilities. The President,s FY 03 budget provides more than $230 million for these efforts, including:

? Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) Program: Builds on successful local programs in which civilian volunteers help local police departments to perform non-sworn functions, freeing up police officers to perform vital front-line duties in times of emergency.

? Medical Reserve Corps: Enables retired healthcare professionals to effectively augment local health officials, capacity to respond to an emergency.

? Operation TIPS (Terrorist Information and Prevention System): Operation TIPS will enable millions of America transportation workers, postal workers, and public utility employees to identify and report suspicious activities linked to terrorism and crime.

? Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT): The President has proposed tripling over the next two years the number of Americans enrolled in CERT) a training program that enables individual Americans to participate in emergency management planning in their communities and prepare to respond to disasters and other emergencies.

? Neighborhood Watch Programs: The President,s plan will double the number of Neighborhood Watch Programs in the next two years, and enhance the program by incorporating terrorism prevention into its mission.

? Citizens, Preparedness Guidebook: The Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook provides current crime and disaster preparedness techniques as well as the latest information on terrorism, to give Americans guidance on how to prepare in their homes, neighborhoods, workplaces and public spaces.

? For more information on Citizen Corps initiatives or to become a volunteer, Americans can visit www.citizencorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS.

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative – the USA Freedom Corps.

- Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps – the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

- On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans to serve.

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan to launch the new USA Freedom Corps – a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

  - A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist Information and Prevention System (TIPS) – as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.
  - An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities. President Bush's plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an additional 75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
  - A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

- President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

- For more information on the USA Freedom Corps, Americans can visit www.usafreedomcorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS

ABOUT THE CITIZEN CORPS

- The Citizen Corps will enable Americans to volunteer to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

- Community-based Citizen Corps Councils will help drive local involvement in Citizen Corps, developing community action plans, assessing possible threats, identifying local resources and coordinating other Citizen Corps programs.

  - These Councils will be broad-based – including leaders from law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, businesses, community-based institutions, schools, places of worship, health care facilities, public works and other key community sectors.

  - The President's budget for FY 03 will request $144 million in matching funds to support the formation and training of local Citizen Corps Councils.

- Citizen Corps volunteers will be able to participate in a variety of programs that match their skills and abilities. The President's FY 03 budget provides more than $230 million for these efforts, including:

  - Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) Program: Builds on successful local programs in which civilian volunteers help local police departments to perform non-sworn functions, freeing up police officers to perform vital front-line duties in times of emergency.

  - Medical Reserve Corps: Enables retired healthcare professionals to effectively augment local health officials' capacity to respond to an emergency.

  - Operation TIPS (Terrorist Information and Prevention System): Operation TIPS will enable millions of America transportation workers, postal workers, and public utility employees to identify and report suspicious activities linked to terrorism and crime.

  - Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT): The President has proposed tripling over the next two years the number of Americans enrolled in CERT – a training program that enables individual Americans to participate in emergency management planning in their communities and prepare to respond to disasters and other emergencies.

  - Neighborhood Watch Programs: The President's plan will double the number of Neighborhood Watch Programs in the next two years, and enhance the program by incorporating terrorism prevention into its mission.

  - Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook: The Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook provides current crime and disaster preparedness techniques as well as the latest information on terrorism, to give Americans guidance on how to prepare in their homes, neighborhoods, workplaces and public spaces.

PRESIDENT BUSH ANNOUNCES USA FREEDOM CORPS

TODAY
'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

? In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative ? the USA
Freedom Corps.

? Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps ? the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

? On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans to serve.

? In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan to launch the new USA Freedom Corps ? a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

? A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist Information and Prevention System (TIPS) ? as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.
? An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities.
President Bush's plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an additional 75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
? A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

? President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

? For more information on the USA Freedom Corps, Americans can visit www.usafreedomcorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS

ABOUT THE CITIZEN CORPS

? The Citizen Corps will enable Americans to volunteer to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

? Community-based Citizen Corps Councils will help drive local involvement in Citizen Corps, developing community action plans, assessing possible threats, identifying local resources and coordinating other Citizen Corps programs.

? These Councils will be broad-based ? including leaders from law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, businesses, community-basedinstitutions, schools, places of worship, health care facilities, public works and other key community sectors.

? The President's budget for FY 03 will request $144 million in matching funds to support the formation and training of local Citizen Corps Councils.

? Citizen Corps volunteers will be able to participate in a variety of programs that match their skills and abilities. The President's FY 03 budget provides more than $230 million for these efforts, including:

? Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) Program: Builds on successful local programs in which civilian volunteers help local police departments to perform non-sworn functions, freeing up police officers to perform vital front-line duties in times of emergency.

? Medical Reserve Corps: Enables retired healthcare professionals to effectively augment local health officials' capacity to respond to an emergency.

? Operation TIPS (Terrorist Information and Prevention System): Operation TIPS will enable millions of America transportation workers, postal workers, and public utility employees to identify and report suspicious activities linked to terrorism and crime.

? Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT): The President has proposed tripling over the next two years the number of Americans enrolled in CERT ? a training program that enables individual Americans to participate in emergency management planning in their communities and prepare to respond to disasters and other emergencies.

? Neighborhood Watch Programs: The President's plan will double the number of Neighborhood Watch Programs in the next two years, and enhance the program by incorporating terrorism prevention into its mission.

? Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook: The Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook provides current crime and disaster preparedness techniques as well as the latest information on terrorism, to give Americans guidance on how to prepare in their homes, neighborhoods, workplaces and public spaces.

TODAY'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush called on all Americans to serve their nation for the equivalent of two years (4,000 hours) over their lifetimes, and announced a major new citizen service initiative – the USA Freedom Corps.

- Today, the President traveled to Winston-Salem, North Carolina to outline a key component of the USA Freedom Corps – the Citizen Corps, which will enable Americans to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities.

BACKGROUND ON THE USA FREEDOM CORPS

- On November 8, 2001, President Bush gave a speech in Atlanta, Georgia where he called on Americans to fight the war on terrorism by serving to improve their communities, and announced his intention to develop new ways for Americans to serve.

- In his State of the Union Address, President Bush announced his plan to launch the new USA Freedom Corps – a comprehensive, integrated citizen service initiative. The USA Freedom Corps includes three major programs:

    - A new Citizen Corps to engage citizens directly in improving homeland security: The Citizen Corps will implement of range of new initiatives to engage ordinary Americans in specific homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps initiatives include the creation of a Medical Reserve Corps, a Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) program and a Terrorist Information and Prevention System (TIPS) – as well as a doubling of the Neighborhood Watch program, and a tripling of the Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) program.
    - An improved and enhanced AmeriCorps and Senior Corps: The Administration will reform and expand the AmeriCorps and Senior Corps programs to engage thousands of new volunteers in effective, community-based service opportunities. President Bush's plan will add more than 200,000 participants in community service (25,000 new AmeriCorps participants -- who will generate an additional 75,000 local volunteers -- and 100,000 new Senior Corps participants).
    - A strengthened Peace Corps: Today, enrollment in the Peace Corps is less than half the historic high level of 15,000 volunteers in 1966. To allow more Americans to demonstrate firsthand the true values of our nation to those in the developing world, the President will propose a doubling of the Peace Corps program over the next 5 years. The expanded Peace Corps program will include specific efforts targeted at rebuilding Afghanistan.

- President Bush will demonstrate his support for this effort by requesting more than $560 million in new funding for the USA Freedom Corps in his FY 2003 budget. He will also ensure a high-level Administration focus on this initiative by creating a new USA Freedom Corps Council, comprised of the relevant agency heads, and also a new USA Freedom Corps Office inside the Executive Office of the President and led by an Assistant to the President. The Council and the Office will make further recommendations to the President on ways to enhance service and improve civic progress.

- For more information on the USA Freedom Corps, Americans can visit www.usafreedomcorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS

ABOUT THE CITIZEN CORPS

- The Citizen Corps will enable Americans to volunteer to participate directly in homeland security efforts in their own communities. Citizen Corps will be coordinated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

- Community-based Citizen Corps Councils will help drive local involvement in Citizen Corps, developing community action plans, assessing possible threats, identifying local resources and coordinating other Citizen Corps programs.

  - These Councils will be broad-based – including leaders from law enforcement, fire and emergency medical services, businesses, community-based institutions, schools, places of worship, health care facilities, public works and other key community sectors.

  - The President's budget for FY 03 will request $144 million in matching funds to support the formation and training of local Citizen Corps Councils.

- Citizen Corps volunteers will be able to participate in a variety of programs that match their skills and abilities. The President's FY 03 budget provides more than $230 million for these efforts, including:

  - Volunteers in Police Service (VIPS) Program: Builds on successful local programs in which civilian volunteers help local police departments to perform non-sworn functions, freeing up police officers to perform vital front-line duties in times of emergency.

  - Medical Reserve Corps: Enables retired healthcare professionals to effectively augment local health officials' capacity to respond to an emergency.

  - Operation TIPS (Terrorist Information and Prevention System): Operation TIPS will enable millions of America transportation workers, postal workers, and public utility employees to identify and report suspicious activities linked to terrorism and crime.

  - Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT): The President has proposed tripling over the next two years the number of Americans enrolled in CERT – a training program that enables individual Americans to participate in emergency management planning in their communities and prepare to respond to disasters and other emergencies.

  - Neighborhood Watch Programs: The President's plan will double the number of Neighborhood Watch Programs in the next two years, and enhance the program by incorporating terrorism prevention into its mission.

  - Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook: The Citizens' Preparedness Guidebook provides current crime and disaster preparedness techniques as well as the latest information on terrorism, to give Americans guidance on how to prepare in their homes, neighborhoods, workplaces and public spaces.

- For more information on Citizen Corps initiatives or to become a volunteer, Americans can visit www.citizencorps.gov or call 1-877-USA-CORPS.

President Bush Calls for Action to Protect American Workers' Retirement Savings

"A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails."

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

President Bush Calls for Action to Protect American Workers' Retirement Savings

"A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails."

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

President Bush Calls for Action to Protect American Workers' Retirement Savings

"A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails."

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

President Bush Calls for Action to Protect American Workers' Retirement Savings

"A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails."

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

President Bush Calls for Action to Protect American Workers' Retirement Savings

"A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails."

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

President Bush Calls for Action to Protect American Workers' Retirement Savings

"A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails."

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

President Bush Calls for Action to Protect American Workers' Retirement Savings

"A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails."

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

President Bush Calls for Action to Protect American Workers' Retirement Savings

"A good job should lead to security in retirement. I ask Congress to enact new safeguards for 401(k) and pension plans. Employees who have worked hard and saved all their lives should not have to risk losing everything if their company fails."

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

President George W. Bush
State of the Union Address

THIS WEEK'S PRESIDENTIAL ACTION

- In his State of the Union Address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safeguards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

- Today, President Bush announced that he has approved the recommendations of a Cabinet-level Task Force on Retirement Security, which has made specific recommendations for legislative action to better protect workers' pensions. The Bush Administration will be working with Congress on a bipartisan basis to ensure that these reforms become law.

BACKGROUND ON THE PRESIDENT'S ACTION TO PROTECT WORKERS' PENSIONS

- About 42 million American workers own 401(k) accounts with a total of $2.0 trillion in assets. These workers need to have full confidence in the security of their pension plans.

- Under current law, companies can force workers to hold company stock in their 401(k) plans for extended periods of time. Workers also may not receive adequate advance notice of so-called "blackout periods" – times when employers change pension plan features or administrators, during which workers cannot control their retirement savings accounts. And, too many workers lack access to investment advice and useful information on the status of their retirement savings.

- To address these problems, President Bush created a Task Force on Retirement Security -- comprised of Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Labor Secretary Elaine Chao, and Commerce Secretary Don Evans – on January 10. The Task Force was charged with developing new safeguards to protect the pensions of American workers.

- President Bush today is announcing a four point pension protection proposal that will: (1) provide workers greater freedom to diversify and manage their own retirement funds; (2) ensure that senior corporate executives are held to the same restrictions as average American workers during "blackout periods" and that employers assume full fiduciary responsibility during these times; (3) give workers quarterly information about their investments and rights to diversify them; and (4) expand workers' access to investment advice.

- Giving Workers Freedom To Diversify: Employers should be encouraged to make generous contributions to workers' 401(k) plans, including the option to use company stock to make matching contributions. However, workers must be free to choose how to invest their retirement savings. The President's proposal will ensure that workers can sell company stock and diversify into other investment options after they have participated in the 401(k) plan for three years. While many companies already allow rapid diversification, others impose holding periods which can last for decades.

- Creating Parity Between Senior Corporate Executives and Rank-and-File Workers: President Bush believes it is unfair for workers to be denied the ability to sell company stock in their 401(k) accounts during blackout periods while corporate officers face no similar restrictions on selling stock held outside the 401(k).

  - The President has directed the Task Force to develop appropriate policies that would preclude senior corporate executives from selling company stock during times when workers are unable to trade in their 401(k) plans.
  - The Task Force recommendations will clarify that employers have a fiduciary responsibility for workers' investments during a blackout period. Under current law, when 401(k) plans are controlled by workers, employers are not responsible for the results of workers' investment decisions. This "safe harbor" from liability will no longer apply during a blackout period. During these times, employers will be responsible for the consequences of the workers' inability to independently control their investments if they violated their duty to act in the interests of the workers when they created the blackout period.

- Giving Workers Better Information About Their Pensions: The President proposes to increase worker notification of blackout periods and provide workers with quarterly benefits statements about their individual pension accounts.

  - To ensure that blackout periods are fair, responsible and transparent, the President's proposal will ensure that workers have ample opportunity to make investment changes through a requirement that they be given a 30-day notice before any blackout period begins.
  - To enable workers to make independent, informed decisions, employers will be required to give workers quarterly benefit statements that include information about their individual accounts, including the value of their assets, their rights to diversify, and the importance of maintaining a diversified portfolio. The Secretary of Labor will be given authority to tailor this requirement to the needs of small plans. Under current law employers are only required to make statements available to workers on an annual basis.

- Expanding Workers' Access to Investment Advice: The President calls on the Senate to pass the Retirement Security Advice Act – which passed the House with an overwhelming bipartisan majority. This legislation encourages employers to make investment advice available to workers and allows qualified financial advisors to offer investment advice only if they agree to act solely in the interests of the workers they advise.

GEORGE W. BUSH ANNOUNCES JUDICIAL APPOINTMENTS

LOCATION: WASHINGTON, D.C.

PRESIDENT BUSH ANNOUNCES JUDICIAL APPOINTMENTS

SPEAKER: GEORGE W. BUSH, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

 Elapsed Time 00:00, Eastern Time 14:42 ***

BUSH: Well, thank you all very much.

Attorney General, it's good to see you, sir, and happy birthday.

(LAUGHTER)

Today's his birthday.

Also, Judge Al Gonzales is here. Judge Gonzales is a great friend of mine who, fortunately, is my lawyer and is a part of the process -- judicial selection process.
Thank you for being here, Judge.

I'm also honored to welcome members of the United States Senate who are here to welcome the nominees to Washington. Of course, Senator Orrin Hatch, chairman of Judiciary, as well as Senator Patrick Leahy, ranking member on the Judiciary.

Good to see you men. Thank you both for coming.

John Warner, George Allen, George Voinovich, and last but not least, Senator Strom Thurmond. Welcome.

(APPLAUSE)

Thank you all for coming.

I'm pleased to welcome my judicial nominees to the White House, and I'm pleased to welcome their family and friends as well.

This is a proud moment for all of you, and it's a proud moment for me as well.

with attorney Miguel Estrada -- was named to the court in the president's first batch of nominees. Mr. Roberts was originally nominated by the elder President Bush, only to see his nomination languish and finally die after Bill Clinton's election. Now he is waiting again -- and for no good reason. Another example is Michael McConnell, a law professor in Utah whom Mr. Bush named to the 10th Circuit. Again, no hearing and no public explanation. If senators have anxieties about these -- or other -- nominees, the proper thing to do is to question them in hearings or vote against confirmation, not hold them up. The fact that lengthy delays were employed against Mr. Clinton's nominees does not excuse the practice now. Mr. Clinton deserved better -- and so does Mr. Bush.

A president has few greater responsibilities than that of nominating men and women to the courts of the United States. A federal judge holds a position of great influence and respect and can hold it for a lifetime.

When a president chooses a judge, he is placing in human hands the authority and majesty of the law. He owes it to the Constitution and to the country to choose with care. I have done so.

With me this afternoon are my first 11 judicial nominees, individuals of experience and character.

BUSH: Four of them serve as United States District judges. All four confirmed by unanimous votes. Two others are sitting judges on state supreme courts. Four have served as law clerks in the Supreme Court of the United States. One has served here as an associate counsel to the president. One already holds the position for which I nominate him by recess appointment of President Clinton.

These men and women have followed different paths to this nomination. They come from diverse backgrounds and will bring a wide range of experience to the bench. All have sterling credentials and have met high standards of legal training, temperament and judgment. As a group, they command broad bipartisan support among those who know them and who have served with them.

I submit their names to the Senate with full confidence that they will satisfy any test of judicial merit. These first nominations are also an opportunity to outline the standards by which I will choose all federal judges. The American people expect judges of the highest caliber and my nominees will meet that test.

A judge, by the most basic measure, has an obligation shared by the president and members of Congress. All of us are constitutional officers sworn to serve within the limits of our Constitution and laws. When we observe those limits, we exercise our rightful power. When we exceed those limits, we abuse our powers. Every judge I appoint will be a person who clearly understands the role of a judge is to interpret the law, not to legislate from the bench.

To paraphrase the third occupant of this house, James Madison, the courts exist to exercise not the will of men, but the judgment of law. My judicial nominees will know the difference. Understanding this will make them more effective in the defense of rights guaranteed under the Constitution, the enforcement of our laws and more effective in assuming that justice is done to the guilty and for the innocent.

BUSH: My standard is informed by the oath that each judge will take, to administer justice without respect to persons and to do equal right to poor and to the rich. A good judge exercises these powers with discernment, courage and humility. These are commitments not just of philosophy, but of character. My nominees today and in the years to come will be notable for their distinction and accomplishments, and all will be exceptional for their humanity and their integrity.

With today's 11 nominees, we continue a constitutional process that involves all three branches of government. For many weeks now we have sought and received advice from senators of both parties. I now submit these nominations in good faith, trusting that good faith will also be extended by the United States Senate.

Over the years, we have seen how the confirmation process can be turned to other ends. We have seen political battles played out in committee hearings, battles that have little to do with the merits of the person sitting before the committee. This is not good for the Senate, for our courts or for the country.

There are today over 100 vacancies on the federal courts causing backlogs, frustration and delay of justice. I urge senators of both parties to rise above the bitterness of the past, to provide a fair hearing and a prompt vote to every nominee. That should be the case for no matter who lives in this house and no matter who controls the Senate.

I ask for the return of civility and dignity to the confirmation process. And with this distinguished group of nominees awaiting confirmation, there is no better opportunity than right now.

I congratulate all of you on your service past and for your service to come.

God bless.

Remarks of Vice President Richard Cheney

November 15, 2001, 15th Annual National Lawyers Convention

(Source: http://www.fed-soc.org/events/lawyersconvention/cheney.htm)

Thank you very much. I appreciate the warm welcome. I realize you've adjusted your schedule to accommodate mine, and I thank you.

Secretary Chao, thank you for the very kind introduction. It's good to see a member of the Cabinet in person. It's good to see anybody in person these days. Lynne and I don't get too many visitors at the cave.

This is the second time I've had the privilege of addressing the Federalist Society. I was here as Secretary of Defense in 1990 — then, as now, filling the role of your token non-lawyer. Not that I have anything against lawyers. Looking around the room, I'd guess that a year ago, about half of you were down in Florida.

A lot has changed since my last appearance here. I've been a corporate CEO, national candidate, vice president — and now a recurring character on Saturday Night Live. I've been watching a tape of the guy who plays me on the show — Darrell Hammond. He's got the voice down. He's pretty good at the mannerisms. But he's not quite there yet, and I doubt he'll ever capture the real me. You just can't fake charisma.

I do have a lot of friends here this evening. It's nice to see all of you, and I bring with me the good wishes of a man we're all very proud of, President George W. Bush.

There are many members of the Federalist Society in our Administration. We know that because they were quizzed about it under oath. We're especially proud to have two of your founders at the Department of Energy — the general counsel, Lee Liberman Otis, and Secretary Spence Abraham.

The Federalist Society was formed to bring balance to the debate in our law schools and in the legal profession. You were founded in the conviction that the state exists to preserve freedom — that the separation of powers is essential to the operation of our government — and that judges are charged with interpreting the law, not inventing it.

In advancing these principles, you have changed the debate, while gaining the respect of people across the ideological spectrum. The Federalist Society has been a model of thoughtful, reasoned dialogue. You've helped bring a spirit of civility to Washington, D.C. Even more remarkably, you've managed to bring it to some of the law schools. Your spirit of honest, fair-minded debate hasn't always prevailed, as Judge Bork can attest. But against great odds, this organization has become one of the most influential in the world of law and public policy. I commend you for it.

Tomorrow at this conference, our Solicitor General will inaugurate an annual lecture series named for his wife. Barbara Olson will always be remembered for her sharp mind, her kindness, and her cheerful presence. It's hard to think of Barbara and not see her smiling. We miss her. And we will always remember the grace and courage of Ted Olson, from that day to this.

America will never forget what happened on September 11, and who is responsible. Nor will we lose sight of what is at stake. We are the target of enemies who rejoice in the murder of innocent, unsuspecting people. We are fighting now, to defend freedom and law against force and tyranny.

We are fighting to save ourselves and our children from living in a world of fear. We are fighting — and we are winning — because we will not permit a small group of vicious, violent men to impose their will on America and the world.

The President and I have often said that the war on terrorism will be fought on many fronts. The government of the United States is fully engaged in this battle, and let me tell you how.

We have given intelligence and law enforcement officials the new tools they need to hunt, capture, and punish terrorists. We are tracing terrorist communications and movements as never before, with new statutes that take account of the modern communications that terrorists use.

These new laws met with overwhelming, bipartisan agreement in Congress, because they uphold and respect the civil liberties guaranteed in the Constitution.

We are finding the terrorists' financial supporters and stopping them. Already we have blocked millions of dollars in assets of persons and organizations involved in supporting terrorism.

A new federal task force is at work tracking foreign terrorists. We will deny them entry into our country, detain those who are here, prosecute as needed, and deport the rest. Those who plot against our country will not be allowed to abuse our protections or our freedoms.

Furthermore, as the President deems necessary, non-U.S. citizens suspected of terrorist activity — whether captured here or abroad — will face trial by military commission. The mass murder of Americans by terrorists, or the planning thereof, is not just another item on the criminal docket. This is a war against terrorism. Where military justice is called for, military justice will be dispensed.

On the civil defense front, we are taking every measure to improve both our prevention capability and our response capability. Under Governor Tom Ridge, the Office of Homeland Security is leading the effort to detect and frustrate the plans of terrorists.

In everything we do, we have to be realistic. We have to proceed on the expectation that those who have already harmed our country will try again. The terrorists who gave the orders on September 11 have themselves promised it. They have called for the killing of Americans, Christians, and Jews.

Whenever the President has evidence of a credible threat, he will alert state and local authorities, and the American people will know as well. But a terrorism alert is not a signal to lock down your life. It is a sign that we are vigilant. When Americans hear of an alert, they can know that the government is on watch and taking action against the threat.

That is how we are working to protect our citizens. But wars are not won on the defensive. Wars are won by taking the fight to the enemy. America is not waiting for terrorists to strike us. In the places where they hide and plot, we are striking the terrorists.

There is a price for aiding and abetting terrorists, and the Taliban regime is paying it in full. Our military has destroyed training camps. Their communications and air defenses are in ruins. Their defenses are being systematically eliminated. Whole cities are free again. A large portion of the country can now celebrate the Taliban's departure from their lands and from their lives. The rest of the country is counting the hours.

The battle is not over in Afghanistan. There's still a long way to go. But as we speak the Taliban are high-tailing it to safer ground. They will find none. No matter how long it takes, Afghanistan will cease to be a haven for tyranny and terror.

Success in Afghanistan is only the beginning of our efforts in the world. We are going to find the leadership of the Taliban and the al Qaeda network, and we are going to stop them. This is not about one country, and in this struggle there is no neutral ground. As the Bush Doctrine makes clear, those who harbor terrorists share guilt for the acts they commit.

It bears repeating that ours is not a campaign against the Muslim faith — indeed, the innocent victims of these terrorists include many Muslims. This is a struggle against the evil of a few. That is why people in every part of the world, and of all faiths, stand together against this foe.

We cannot know every turn in the battles to come. Yet we know our cause is just. We have seen enemies like this before. We have defeated them before. We will defeat them again.

This crisis has brought our country together, uniting the political parties and elected branches of government in ways few would have thought possible. There are still honest disagreements on domestic priorities, and the war has not erased those. But this is a moment of real opportunity, with the leadership of both parties sincerely looking for common ground.

We hope Congress will act, and act soon, to pass an economic stimulus package. President Bush's plan gives immediate help to those out of work, reduces income tax rates, and will create new jobs throughout the economy.

We hope Congress will attend to America's energy needs. It is only more urgent now that we find new supplies and make this country less dependent on foreign oil.

And we hope the United States Senate will speed up the confirmation of federal judges. There is a dual responsibility here that we all understand. The President has discharged his duty by nominating well-qualified men and women to the federal district and circuit courts.

Yet there are today more vacancies on the federal bench than there were the day we were inaugurated. The pace of new vacancies is actually faster than the pace of confirmations. Barely one in four of President Bush's nominees have been given a hearing and a vote. This should be unacceptable to anyone concerned about the administration of justice in our country.

Some reply that this is merely the normal state of affairs, regardless of who is President or who controls the Senate. History does not support that claim.

Traditionally, a new President's judicial nominees during his first year are confirmed almost as fast as their nominations reach the Senate. In 1993, for example, 19 judges were confirmed on a single day in November, many just a few weeks after their names had been submitted. In each of the previous three administrations, almost all judicial nominations submitted before the first August recess were confirmed by the end of the year. That has held true regardless of whether the Senate and the White House were controlled by opposing parties. The only exception to the rule is a single Clinton nominee who was confirmed the following year.

In 2001, President Bush submitted 44 nominations prior to the August recess. By all rights, each of these should come to a vote by the end of next month. Yet almost half of them have not even begun the journey to a floor vote.

Overall, President Bush has submitted 64 judicial nominations. That's more in the first year than any other recent president. And this has been done for a reason. There are at present more than

Another vacancy is expected next month on the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals, which serves four states and one in every nine Americans. At that point the Sixth Circuit will have eight judges and eight vacancies — a fifty percent vacancy rate, the highest anyone can remember on a federal circuit court. Here again, the President has fulfilled his responsibility. He has already submitted six nominations for that Court — and all six await hearings.

The deliberate slowing of the confirmation process is unworthy of the United States Senate, and an injustice to the men and women whose names have been presented. These are good people — each and every one of them selected with care by the President himself.

The President announced his initial eleven nominees on May 9 — more than six months ago. Yet of these only three have had hearings. Those still waiting include his choices for the D.C. Circuit.

The first is John Roberts, the former deputy solicitor general and a lawyer of the highest reputation. The second is Miguel Estrada, who as a boy came to America from Honduras, graduated with honors from Harvard Law School, and served in the Justice Department under presidents of both parties.

These nominations are not being held up for lack of support. On the contrary, few doubt they would be swiftly confirmed by the full Senate, if only given that chance. By any standard of judicial merit, they are fully qualified to serve. And by any standard of fairness, they deserve a hearing.

In that spirit — simple fairness — and in the interest of the nation, I appeal to the Senate Judiciary Committee to proceed without further delay in filling the vacancies on our federal courts.

I'm confident that this matter will be resolved, and the interests of the nation well served in the months to come. As I said, this is a moment of opportunity. All of us have been given a new perspective on old differences, and perhaps a better sense of the great things we can achieve together.

America is passing through a time of testing. We have every right to be proud of our fellow citizens — proud of the great heroism we've seen — proud of the honorable conduct of our military. In so many ways, adversity has brought out the best in our nation. The attacks brought terrible grief down upon us. But we love our country, only more when she is threatened. And instead of weakening us, our enemies have only made us stronger.

In ways too numerous to mention, President Bush and I have counted on the friendship and good counsel of many in this room tonight. And we have never been disappointed. You have our respect, and our gratitude.

Thank you very much.

The Wall Street Journal, 01/25/02:

The Crisis in Our Courts

By Alberto Gonzales

Federal courts protect constitutional rights, resolve critical civil cases, and ensure that criminals are punished. But as Chief Justice William Rehnquist cautions, the ability of our courts to perform these functions is in jeopardy due to the "alarming number" of judicial vacancies, 101 as of today.

President Bush has responded to the vacancy crisis by nominating a record number of federal judges: 90 since taking office, almost double the nominations that any of the past six presidents submitted in the first year. Despite his decisive action, the Senate has not done enough to meet its constitutional responsibility. It has voted on less than half of the nominees. Indeed, it has voted on only six of the 29 nominees to the courts of appeals. And the Senate has failed even to grant hearings to many nominees, who have languished before the Judiciary Committee for months.

For example, on May 9, 2001, the president announced his first 11 nominees. All were deemed "well qualified" or "qualified" by the American Bar Association, whose rating system Judiciary Committee Chairman Patrick Leahy has called the "gold standard" for evaluating nominees. Yet his committee has held hearings for only three of the 11. Although the Senate did confirm 28 judges last year, its overall record was unsatisfactory, given the number of vacancies and pending nominees.

As Congress returns to work, the administration respectfully calls on the Senate to make the vacancy crisis a priority and to ensure prompt hearings and votes for all nominees. The Senate should make this practice permanent, adhering to it well after President Bush leaves office, so as to ensure that every judicial nominee by a president of either party receives a prompt hearing and vote.

The federal courts desperately need reinforcements. There are 101 vacancies out of 853 circuit and district court judgeships. The 12 regional circuit courts of appeals have an extraordinary 31 vacancies out of 167 judgeships (19%). The chief justice recently warned of the dangerous impact the vacancies have on the courts and the American people, and the Judicial Conference has classified 39 vacancies as "judicial emergencies."

In 1998, when there were many fewer judicial vacancies, Sen. Thomas Daschle, now majority leader, and Mr. Leahy expressed their concern about the "vacancy crisis" -- with the latter explaining that the Senate's failure to vote on nominees was "delaying or preventing the administration of justice."

Today's crisis is worse, and is acute in several places. The D.C. Circuit Court of Appeals, which, other than the Supreme Court, is often considered the most important federal court because of the constitutional cases that come before it, has four vacancies on a 12-judge court. The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals has eight vacancies on a court of 16. In March 2000, when that court had only four vacancies, its chief judge stated that it was "hurting badly and will not be able to keep up with its work load."

In the past, senators of both parties have accused each other of illegitimate delays in voting on nominees. The past mistreatment of nominees does not justify today's behavior. Finger-pointing does nothing to put judges on the bench and ease the courts' burdens; it only distracts the Senate from its constitutional obligation to act on the president's judicial nominees.

President Bush has encouraged the Senate to act in a bipartisan fashion, both now and in the future. He put it best at the White House last May while announcing his first 11 nominees: "I urge senators of both parties to rise above the bitterness of the past, to provide a fair hearing and a prompt vote to every nominee. That should be the case for no matter who lives in this house, and no matter who controls the Senate. I ask for the return of civility and dignity to the confirmation process."

Mr. Gonzales is counsel to President Bush.

The Washington Post, 11/30/01:

Give Them Hearings

Six months ago, President Bush named 11 nominees to federal courts of appeals. To date, exactly three of these people have been confirmed by the Senate. The other eight have not even received hearings from the Senate Judiciary Committee. This would be bad under any circumstances; it's particularly so with more than 100 judgeships vacant and many courts hurting. By year's end, for example, half of the authorized slots on the 6th Circuit will be empty. The D.C. Circuit has four vacancies out of 12. Yet the Senate has moved on nominees to neither court since the president named them in May. The Judiciary Committee chairman, Democratic Sen. Patrick Leahy, has offered no reasonable justification for stalling on these nominations. The Senate, so far this year, has confirmed 18 nominees -- most of them uncontroversial, and most of them district judges. Mr. Leahy's spokesman says that focusing on the least controversial nominations to lower-ranking courts enables the Senate to get the most done the quickest. This approach, which mimics the one that Mr. Leahy's predecessor as committee chairman -- Republican Sen. Orrin Hatch -- employed during the Clinton administration, also allows the Senate to confirm a respectable number of nominees while going slow on any that might raise the hackles of liberal senators or interest groups. But controversial nominees are no less entitled to hearings. Failing to hold them in a timely fashion damages the judiciary, disrespects the president's power to name judges and is grossly unfair to often well-qualified nominees.

One example is D.C. Circuit nominee John Roberts, a respected appellate lawyer who -- along

This is fine with a modification to the FAX cover sheet. In the first sentence, change "on behalf of Elizabeth Dole's campaign for the U.S. Senate" to "to speak at North Carolina's Salute to George W. Bush." I also assume they will delete "All benefits pending White House approval" on the bottom of the benefits sheet.
