Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "In his first televised address to the nation since being sworn into office on December 22, [Hamid] Karzai said the Afghan constitution will 'guarantee freedom of speech and of the press, and also political and social freedom.'" (AFP, 1/9/02)

- "The interim administration supports a free market…Social and economic progress in our country is dependent on a free market economy and private sector development. The government will lessen its interference in economic affairs. This will pave the way for freedom and private sector initiative." (Interim Afghan leader Hamid Karzai, AFP, 1/9/01)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. One by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

In Case You Missed It…

- "Today we're blocking the assets of two organizations and two individuals who have been stealing from widows and orphans to fund al Qaeda terrorism. The Afghan Support Committee, branches of the Revival of Islamic Heritage Society and two of their employees defrauded well-intentioned donors and turned funds meant for good into funds for evil. These bad actors will now be pariahs in the civilized world." (Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, 1/9/02)

Facts of the Day

- The U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) is giving more than $6.5 million to provide primary and emergency health care and vaccinations through static and mobile clinics in refugee camps and provinces within Afghanistan.

- USAID is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rehabilitate the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "In his first televised address to the nation since being sworn into office on December 22, [Hamid] Karzai said the Afghan constitution will 'guarantee freedom of speech and of the press, and also political and social freedom.'" (AFP, 1/9/02)

- "The interim administration supports a free market…Social and economic progress in our country is dependent on a free market economy and private sector development. The government will lessen its interference in economic affairs. This will pave the way for freedom and private sector initiative." (Interim Afghan leader Hamid Karzai, AFP, 1/9/01)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. One by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

In Case You Missed It…

- "Today we're blocking the assets of two organizations and two individuals who have been stealing from widows and orphans to fund al Qaeda terrorism. The Afghan Support Committee, branches of the Revival of Islamic Heritage Society and two of their employees defrauded well-intentioned donors and turned funds meant for good into funds for evil. These bad actors will now be pariahs in the civilized world." (Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, 1/9/02)

Facts of the Day

- The U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) is giving more than $6.5 million to provide primary and emergency health care and vaccinations through static and mobile clinics in refugee camps and provinces within Afghanistan.

- USAID is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rehabilitate the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

Rebuilding Afghanistan

The U.S. is providing historic amounts of food to the Afghan people to help them recover from terrorist rule. But Afghans need more than food. The terrorists have left the Afghan people without even the most basic infrastructure and health, education, and medical services. The U.S. is funding a comprehensive and compassionate program to bring a brighter future of freedom, hope and opportunity to the Afghan people. Since October 1, 2000, the U.S. has spent $384,599,456 to help Afghans in the following areas) among many others:

ç Education. The U.N. Food-for-Education program) with U.S. assistance) is distributing food to schoolchildren in Afghanistan. Thousands of children and teachers in Afghan schools are currently receiving assistance through this program that increases school attendance, reduces dropout rates, and encourages families to send girls to school.

ç Agriculture. USAID is giving more than $9 million towards the rehabilitation of Afghanistan,s agricultural sector. Specific initiatives include distributing seeds to more than one million people as well as seedlings, fertilizer and agricultural tools. The U.S. is also rehabilitating irrigation systems, providing veterinary services, and educating Afghans in agricultural methods, animal husbandry, pest control and environmental improvements.

ç Water & Sanitation. The U.S. is providing $7 million to help address the water and sanitation needs of the Afghan people. This assistance will help foster the drilling of water wells, the rehabilitation of water sources, the installation of pipelines, the construction of latrines, and education on hygiene and waster disposal.

ç Health Care. The Afghan people face critical medical needs, and the U.S. is leading the world effort to help the Afghan people recover by delivering massive shipments of vital medicine & health care supplies (since October 1 enough medical supplies have been delivered to support 100,000 Afghans for three months), providing emergency medical care, and educating Afghans on how to rebuild their health care system. The U.N. Children,s Fund and the World Health Organization have launched a nationwide campaign to vaccinate 9 million children against measles. In the first two days of the campaign in Kabul, more than 142,000 children were vaccinated. This is three times the number of children vaccinated from January to October 2001 (in Afghanistan, an average of 35,000 children die each year from measles alone).

ç Critical Infrastructure. The U.S. is providing $3.8 million to repair roads, clinics, schools, local markets, homes and water supply facilities in hard-hit areas of Afghanistan.

ç Shelter. The U.S. is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rebuild the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

ç Freedom of Information. The U.S. government has funded a radio program to provide humanitarian information to Afghans in their local languages. 30,000 radios are being funded by USAID to inform Afghans of information on immunizations for children, distribution points for food, health care, and security issues.

ç Funding the Interim Afghan Government. The coalition is committed to helping the people of Afghanistan rebuild their homeland. Operations of the Afghanistan Interim Authority are being funded through the $19.5 million it has received in pledges from international governments including Germany, Australia, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Later this month a ministerial meeting of donor countries will be held in Tokyo to discuss the reconstruction of Afghanistan.

ç America,s Children Respond to Help Afghan Children. President Bush launched America,s Fund for Afghan Children, asking U.S. children to send $1) or whatever they could afford) to help the children of Afghanistan who have suffered under the Taliban regime. The Fund has raised more than $2.1 million and shipments have already been sent to Afghan children) including hats, socks, coats, tents, school supplies and other important humanitarian items.

ç Helping Afghan Refugees Who Fled the Taliban Return Home. The Taliban,s oppressive reign and war on women and children is ending. Many Afghan refugees who fled in fear now wish to return to their homes, and the U.S. is doing everything it can to help these refugees in Pakistan, Iran and other neighboring countries return home. In fact, the U.S. government has already spent more than $32 million this fiscal year (since October 1) to help refugees return to their homes in Afghanistan. The U.K. has given 26 million pounds sterling to Pakistan for their support of Afghan refugees.

ç Food Assistance. The U.S. government has led a world effort to provide record amounts of food to the Afghan people. In December alone, the U.N. World Food Program (WFP) delivered more food than ever before in one month. Millions of meals have been provided to the Afghan people so far. And while conditions are far from ideal, famine in Afghanistan has been averted this winter.

Other Key Needs. USAID is giving more that $7 million to supply approximately 600,000 Afghans with emergency supplies such as mattresses, blankets, stoves and cooking sets, winter clothes and fuel.

Rebuilding Afghanistan

The U.S. is providing historic amounts of food to the Afghan people to help them recover from terrorist rule. But Afghans need more than food. The terrorists have left the Afghan people without even the most basic infrastructure and health, education, and medical services. The U.S. is funding a comprehensive and compassionate program to bring a brighter future of freedom, hope and opportunity to the Afghan people. Since October 1, 2000, the U.S. has spent $384,599,456 to help Afghans in the following areas ? among many others:

ç Education. The U.N. Food-for-Education program ? with U.S. assistance ? is distributing food to schoolchildren in Afghanistan. Thousands of children and teachers in Afghan schools are currently receiving assistance through this program that increases school attendance, reduces dropout rates, and encourages families to send girls to school.

ç Agriculture. USAID is giving more than $9 million towards the rehabilitation of Afghanistan's agricultural sector. Specific initiatives include distributing seeds to more than one million people as well as seedlings, fertilizer and agricultural tools. The U.S. is also rehabilitating irrigation systems, providing veterinary services, and educating Afghans in agricultural methods, animal husbandry, pest control and environmental improvements.

ç Water & Sanitation. The U.S. is providing $7 million to help address the water and sanitation needs of the Afghan people. This assistance will help foster the drilling of water wells, the rehabilitation of water sources, the installation of pipelines, the construction of latrines, and education on hygiene and waster disposal.

ç Health Care. The Afghan people face critical medical needs, and the U.S. is leading the world effort to help the Afghan people recover by delivering massive shipments of vital medicine & health care supplies (since October 1 enough medical supplies have been delivered to support 100,000 Afghans for three months), providing emergency medical care, and educating Afghans on how to rebuild their health care system. The U.N. Children's Fund and the World Health Organization have launched a nationwide campaign to vaccinate 9 million children against measles. In the first two days of the campaign in Kabul, more than 142,000 children were vaccinated. This is three times the number of children vaccinated from January to October 2001 (in Afghanistan, an average of 35,000 children die each year from measles alone).

ç Critical Infrastructure. The U.S. is providing $3.8 million to repair roads, clinics, schools, local markets, homes and water supply facilities in hard-hit areas of Afghanistan.

ç Shelter. The U.S. is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rebuild the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

ç Freedom of Information. The U.S. government has funded a radio program to provide humanitarian information to Afghans in their local languages. 30,000
radios are being funded by USAID to inform Afghans of information on immunizations for children, distribution points for food, health care, and security issues.

ç Funding the Interim Afghan Government. The coalition is committed to helping the people of Afghanistan rebuild their homeland. Operations of the Afghanistan Interim Authority are being funded through the $19.5 million it has received in pledges from international governments including Germany, Australia, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Russia,
Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Later this month a ministerial meeting of donor countries will be held in Tokyo to discuss the reconstruction of Afghanistan.

ç America's Children Respond to Help Afghan Children. President Bush launched America's Fund for Afghan Children, asking U.S. children to send $1 ?
or whatever they could afford ? to help the children of Afghanistan who have suffered under the Taliban regime. The Fund has raised more than $2.1 million and shipments have already been sent to Afghan children ? including hats, socks, coats, tents, school supplies and other important humanitarian items.

ç Helping Afghan Refugees Who Fled the Taliban Return Home. The Taliban's oppressive reign and war on women and children is ending. Many Afghan refugees who fled in fear now wish to return to their homes, and the U.S. is doing everything it can to help these refugees in Pakistan, Iran and other neighboring countries return home. In fact, the U.S. government has already spent more than $32 million this fiscal year (since October 1) to help refugees return to their homes in Afghanistan. The U.K. has given 26 million pounds sterling to Pakistan for their support of Afghan refugees.

ç Food Assistance. The U.S. government has led a world effort to provide record amounts of food to the Afghan people. In December alone, the U.N. World Food Program (WFP) delivered more food than ever before in one month. Millions of meals have been provided to the Afghan people so far. And while conditions are far from ideal, famine in Afghanistan has been averted this winter.

Other Key Needs. USAID is giving more that $7 million to supply approximately 600,000 Afghans with emergency supplies such as mattresses, blankets, stoves and
cooking sets, winter clothes and fuel. - CIC -- Comprehensive Afghan Family.doc

HELPING REBUILD AFGHANISTAN

The White House Coalition Information Center

The U.S. is providing historic amounts of food to the Afghan people to help them recover from terrorist rule. But Afghans need more than food. The terrorists have left the Afghan people without even the most basic infrastructure and health, education, and medical services. The U.S. is funding a comprehensive and compassionate program to bring a brighter future of freedom, hope and opportunity to the Afghan people. Since October 1, 2000, the U.S. has spent $384,599,456 to help Afghans in the following areas – among many others:

☑ Education. The U.N. Food-for-Education program – with U.S. assistance – is distributing food to schoolchildren in Afghanistan. Thousands of children and teachers in Afghan schools are currently receiving assistance through this program that increases school attendance, reduces dropout rates, and encourages families to send girls to school.

☑ Agriculture. USAID is giving more than $9 million towards the rehabilitation of Afghanistan's agricultural sector. Specific initiatives include distributing seeds to more than one million people as well as seedlings, fertilizer and agricultural tools. The U.S. is also rehabilitating irrigation systems, providing veterinary services, and educating Afghans in agricultural methods, animal husbandry, pest control and environmental improvements.

☑ Water & Sanitation. The U.S. is providing $7 million to help address the water and sanitation needs of the Afghan people. This assistance will help foster the drilling of water wells, the rehabilitation of water sources, the installation of pipelines, the construction of latrines, and education on hygiene and waster disposal.

☑ Health Care. The Afghan people face critical medical needs, and the U.S. is leading the world effort to help the Afghan people recover by delivering massive shipments of vital medicine & health care supplies (since October 1 enough medical supplies have been delivered to support 100,000 Afghans for three months), providing emergency medical care, and educating Afghans on how to rebuild their health care system. The U.N. Children's Fund and the World Health Organization have launched a nationwide campaign to vaccinate 9 million children against measles. In the first two days of the campaign in Kabul, more than 142,000 children were vaccinated. This is three times the number of children vaccinated from January to October 2001 (in Afghanistan, an average of 35,000 children die each year from measles alone).

☑ Critical Infrastructure. The U.S. is providing $3.8 million to repair roads, clinics, schools, local markets, homes and water supply facilities in hard-hit areas of Afghanistan.

☑ Shelter. The U.S. is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rebuild the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

☑ Freedom of Information. The U.S. government has funded a radio program to provide humanitarian information to Afghans in their local languages. 30,000 radios are being funded by USAID to inform Afghans of information on immunizations for children, distribution points for food, health care, and security issues.

☑ Funding the Interim Afghan Government. The coalition is committed to helping the people of Afghanistan rebuild their homeland. Operations of the Afghanistan Interim Authority are being funded through the $19.5 million it has received in pledges from international governments including Germany, Australia, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Later this month a ministerial meeting of donor countries will be held in Tokyo to discuss the reconstruction of Afghanistan.

suffered under the Taliban regime. The Fund has raised more than $2.1 million and shipments have already been sent to Afghan children – including hats, socks, coats, tents, school supplies and other important humanitarian items.

☑ Helping Afghan Refugees Who Fled the Taliban Return Home. The Taliban's oppressive reign and war on women and children is ending. Many Afghan refugees who fled in fear now wish to return to their homes, and the U.S. is doing everything it can to help these refugees in Pakistan, Iran and other neighboring countries return home. In fact, the U.S. government has already spent more than $32 million this fiscal year (since October 1) to help refugees return to their homes in Afghanistan. The U.K. has given 26 million pounds sterling to Pakistan for their support of Afghan refugees.

☑ Food Assistance. The U.S. government has led a world effort to provide record amounts of food to the Afghan people. In December alone, the U.N. World Food Program (WFP) delivered more food than ever before in one month. Millions of meals have been provided to the Afghan people so far. And while conditions are far from ideal, famine in Afghanistan has been averted this winter.

☑ Other Key Needs. USAID is giving more that $7 million to supply approximately 600,000 Afghans with emergency supplies such as mattresses, blankets, stoves and cooking sets, winter clothes and fuel.

Rebuilding Afghanistan

The U.S. is providing historic amounts of food to the Afghan people to help them recover from terrorist rule. But Afghans need more than food. The terrorists have left the Afghan people without even the most basic infrastructure and health, education, and medical services. The U.S. is funding a comprehensive and compassionate program to bring a brighter future of freedom, hope and opportunity to the Afghan people. Since October 1, 2000, the U.S. has spent $384,599,456 to help Afghans in the following areas ? among many others:

ç Education. The U.N. Food-for-Education program ? with U.S. assistance ? is distributing food to schoolchildren in Afghanistan. Thousands of children and teachers in Afghan schools are currently receiving assistance through this program that increases school attendance, reduces dropout rates, and encourages families to send girls to school.

ç Agriculture. USAID is giving more than $9 million towards the rehabilitation of Afghanistan's agricultural sector. Specific initiatives include distributing seeds to more than one million people as well as seedlings, fertilizer and agricultural tools. The U.S. is also rehabilitating irrigation systems, providing veterinary services, and educating Afghans in agricultural methods, animal husbandry, pest control and environmental improvements.

ç Water & Sanitation. The U.S. is providing $7 million to help address the water and sanitation needs of the Afghan people. This assistance will help foster the drilling of water wells, the rehabilitation of water sources, the installation of pipelines, the construction of latrines, and education on hygiene and waster disposal.

ç Health Care. The Afghan people face critical medical needs, and the U.S. is leading the world effort to help the Afghan people recover by delivering massive shipments of vital medicine & health care supplies (since October 1 enough medical supplies have been delivered to support 100,000 Afghans for three months), providing emergency medical care, and educating Afghans on how to rebuild their health care system. The U.N. Children's Fund and the World Health Organization have launched a nationwide campaign to vaccinate 9 million children against measles. In the first two days of the campaign in Kabul, more than 142,000 children were vaccinated. This is three times the number of children vaccinated from January to October 2001 (in Afghanistan, an average of 35,000 children die each year from measles alone).

ç Critical Infrastructure. The U.S. is providing $3.8 million to repair roads, clinics, schools, local markets, homes and water supply facilities in hard-hit areas of Afghanistan.

ç Shelter. The U.S. is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rebuild the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

ç Freedom of Information. The U.S. government has funded a radio program to provide humanitarian information to Afghans in their local languages. 30,000
radios are being funded by USAID to inform Afghans of information on immunizations for children, distribution points for food, health care, and security issues.

ç Funding the Interim Afghan Government. The coalition is committed to helping the people of Afghanistan rebuild their homeland. Operations of the Afghanistan Interim Authority are being funded through the $19.5 million it has received in pledges from international governments including Germany, Australia,
Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Russia,
Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Later this month a ministerial meeting of donor countries will be held in Tokyo to discuss the reconstruction of Afghanistan.

ç America's Children Respond to Help Afghan Children. President Bush launched America's Fund for Afghan Children, asking U.S. children to send $1 ?
or whatever they could afford ? to help the children of Afghanistan who have suffered under the Taliban regime. The Fund has raised more than $2.1 million and shipments have already been sent to Afghan children ? including hats, socks, coats, tents, school supplies and other important humanitarian items.

ç Helping Afghan Refugees Who Fled the Taliban Return Home. The Taliban's oppressive reign and war on women and children is ending. Many Afghan refugees who fled in fear now wish to return to their homes, and the U.S. is doing everything it can to help these refugees in Pakistan, Iran and other neighboring countries return home. In fact, the U.S. government has already spent more than $32 million this fiscal year (since October 1) to help refugees return to their homes in Afghanistan. The U.K. has given 26 million pounds sterling to Pakistan for their support of Afghan refugees.

ç Food Assistance. The U.S. government has led a world effort to provide record amounts of food to the Afghan people. In December alone, the U.N. World Food Program (WFP) delivered more food than ever before in one month. Millions of meals have been provided to the Afghan people so far. And while conditions are far from ideal, famine in Afghanistan has been averted this winter.

Other Key Needs. USAID is giving more that $7 million to supply approximately 600,000 Afghans with emergency supplies such as mattresses, blankets, stoves and
cooking sets, winter clothes and fuel. - CIC -- Comprehensive Afghan Family.doc

The White House Coalition Information Center

The U.S. is providing historic amounts of food to the Afghan people to help them recover from terrorist rule. But Afghans need more than food. The terrorists have left the Afghan people without even the most basic infrastructure and health, education, and medical services. The U.S. is funding a comprehensive and compassionate program to bring a brighter future of freedom, hope and opportunity to the Afghan people. Since October 1, 2000, the U.S. has spent $384,599,456 to help Afghans in the following areas – among many others:

☑ Education. The U.N. Food-for-Education program – with U.S. assistance – is distributing food to schoolchildren in Afghanistan. Thousands of children and teachers in Afghan schools are currently receiving assistance through this program that increases school attendance, reduces dropout rates, and encourages families to send girls to school.

☑ Agriculture. USAID is giving more than $9 million towards the rehabilitation of Afghanistan's agricultural sector. Specific initiatives include distributing seeds to more than one million people as well as seedlings, fertilizer and agricultural tools. The U.S. is also rehabilitating irrigation systems, providing veterinary services, and educating Afghans in agricultural methods, animal husbandry, pest control and environmental improvements.

☑ Water & Sanitation. The U.S. is providing $7 million to help address the water and sanitation needs of the Afghan people. This assistance will help foster the drilling of water wells, the rehabilitation of water sources, the installation of pipelines, the construction of latrines, and education on hygiene and waster disposal.

☑ Health Care. The Afghan people face critical medical needs, and the U.S. is leading the world effort to help the Afghan people recover by delivering massive shipments of vital medicine & health care supplies (since October 1 enough medical supplies have been delivered to support 100,000 Afghans for three months), providing emergency medical care, and educating Afghans on how to rebuild their health care system. The U.N. Children's Fund and the World Health Organization have launched a nationwide campaign to vaccinate 9 million children against measles. In the first two days of the campaign in Kabul, more than 142,000 children were vaccinated. This is three times the number of children vaccinated from January to October 2001 (in Afghanistan, an average of 35,000 children die each year from measles alone).

☑ Critical Infrastructure. The U.S. is providing $3.8 million to repair roads, clinics, schools, local markets, homes and water supply facilities in hard-hit areas of Afghanistan.

☑ Shelter. The U.S. is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rebuild the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

☑ Freedom of Information. The U.S. government has funded a radio program to provide humanitarian information to Afghans in their local languages. 30,000 radios are being funded by USAID to inform Afghans of information on immunizations for children, distribution points for food, health care, and security issues.

☑ Funding the Interim Afghan Government. The coalition is committed to helping the people of Afghanistan rebuild their homeland. Operations of the Afghanistan Interim Authority are being funded through the $19.5 million it has received in pledges from international governments including Germany, Australia, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Later this month a ministerial meeting of donor countries will be held in Tokyo to discuss the reconstruction of Afghanistan.

suffered under the Taliban regime. The Fund has raised more than $2.1 million and shipments have already been sent to Afghan children – including hats, socks, coats, tents, school supplies and other important humanitarian items.

☑ Helping Afghan Refugees Who Fled the Taliban Return Home. The Taliban's oppressive reign and war on women and children is ending. Many Afghan refugees who fled in fear now wish to return to their homes, and the U.S. is doing everything it can to help these refugees in Pakistan, Iran and other neighboring countries return home. In fact, the U.S. government has already spent more than $32 million this fiscal year (since October 1) to help refugees return to their homes in Afghanistan. The U.K. has given 26 million pounds sterling to Pakistan for their support of Afghan refugees.

☑ Food Assistance. The U.S. government has led a world effort to provide record amounts of food to the Afghan people. In December alone, the U.N. World Food Program (WFP) delivered more food than ever before in one month. Millions of meals have been provided to the Afghan people so far. And while conditions are far from ideal, famine in Afghanistan has been averted this winter.

☑ Other Key Needs. USAID is giving more that $7 million to supply approximately 600,000 Afghans with emergency supplies such as mattresses, blankets, stoves and cooking sets, winter clothes and fuel.

Rebuilding Afghanistan

The U.S. is providing historic amounts of food to the Afghan people to help them recover from terrorist rule. But Afghans need more than food. The terrorists have left the Afghan people without even the most basic infrastructure and health, education, and medical services. The U.S. is funding a comprehensive and compassionate program to bring a brighter future of freedom, hope and opportunity to the Afghan people. Since October 1, 2000, the U.S. has spent $384,599,456 to help Afghans in the following areas ? among many others:

ç Education. The U.N. Food-for-Education program ? with U.S. assistance ? is distributing food to schoolchildren in Afghanistan. Thousands of children and teachers in Afghan schools are currently receiving assistance through this program that increases school attendance, reduces dropout rates, and encourages families to send girls to school.

ç Agriculture. USAID is giving more than $9 million towards the rehabilitation of Afghanistan's agricultural sector. Specific initiatives include distributing seeds to more than one million people as well as seedlings, fertilizer and agricultural tools. The U.S. is also rehabilitating irrigation systems, providing veterinary services, and educating Afghans in agricultural methods, animal husbandry, pest control and environmental improvements.

ç Water & Sanitation. The U.S. is providing $7 million to help address the water and sanitation needs of the Afghan people. This assistance will help foster the drilling of water wells, the rehabilitation of water sources, the installation of pipelines, the construction of latrines, and education on hygiene and waster disposal.

ç Health Care. The Afghan people face critical medical needs, and the U.S. is leading the world effort to help the Afghan people recover by delivering massive shipments of vital medicine & health care supplies (since October 1 enough medical supplies have been delivered to support 100,000 Afghans for three months), providing emergency medical care, and educating Afghans on how to rebuild their health care system. The U.N. Children's Fund and the World Health Organization have launched a nationwide campaign to vaccinate 9 million children against measles. In the first two days of the campaign in Kabul, more than 142,000 children were vaccinated. This is three times the number of children vaccinated from January to October 2001 (in Afghanistan, an average of 35,000 children die each year from measles alone).

ç Critical Infrastructure. The U.S. is providing $3.8 million to repair roads, clinics, schools, local markets, homes and water supply facilities in hard-hit areas of Afghanistan.

ç Shelter. The U.S. is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rebuild the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

ç Freedom of Information. The U.S. government has funded a radio program to provide humanitarian information to Afghans in their local languages. 30,000
radios are being funded by USAID to inform Afghans of information on immunizations for children, distribution points for food, health care, and security issues.

ç Funding the Interim Afghan Government. The coalition is committed to helping the people of Afghanistan rebuild their homeland. Operations of the Afghanistan Interim Authority are being funded through the $19.5 million it has received in pledges from international governments including Germany, Australia,
Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Russia,
Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Later this month a ministerial meeting of donor countries will be held in Tokyo to discuss the reconstruction of Afghanistan.

ç America's Children Respond to Help Afghan Children. President Bush launched America's Fund for Afghan Children, asking U.S. children to send $1 ?
or whatever they could afford ? to help the children of Afghanistan who have suffered under the Taliban regime. The Fund has raised more than $2.1 million and shipments have already been sent to Afghan children ? including hats, socks, coats, tents, school supplies and other important humanitarian items.

ç Helping Afghan Refugees Who Fled the Taliban Return Home. The Taliban's
oppressive reign and war on women and children is ending. Many Afghan refugees who fled in fear now wish to return to their homes, and the U.S. is doing everything it can to help these refugees in Pakistan, Iran and other neighboring countries return home. In fact, the U.S. government has already spent more than $32 million this fiscal year (since October 1) to help refugees return to their homes in Afghanistan. The U.K. has given 26 million pounds sterling to Pakistan for their support of Afghan refugees.

ç Food Assistance. The U.S. government has led a world effort to provide record amounts of food to the Afghan people. In December alone, the U.N. World Food Program (WFP) delivered more food than ever before in one month. Millions of meals have been provided to the Afghan people so far. And while conditions are far from ideal, famine in Afghanistan has been averted this winter.

Other Key Needs. USAID is giving more that $7 million to supply approximately 600,000 Afghans with emergency supplies such as mattresses, blankets, stoves and
cooking sets, winter clothes and fuel. - CIC -- Comprehensive Afghan Family.doc

The White House Coalition Information Center

The U.S. is providing historic amounts of food to the Afghan people to help them recover from terrorist rule. But Afghans need more than food. The terrorists have left the Afghan people without even the most basic infrastructure and health, education, and medical services. The U.S. is funding a comprehensive and compassionate program to bring a brighter future of freedom, hope and opportunity to the Afghan people. Since October 1, 2000, the U.S. has spent $384,599,456 to help Afghans in the following areas – among many others:

- ☑ Education. The U.N. Food-for-Education program – with U.S. assistance – is distributing food to schoolchildren in Afghanistan. Thousands of children and teachers in Afghan schools are currently receiving assistance through this program that increases school attendance, reduces dropout rates, and encourages families to send girls to school.

- ☑ Agriculture. USAID is giving more than $9 million towards the rehabilitation of Afghanistan's agricultural sector. Specific initiatives include distributing seeds to more than one million people as well as seedlings, fertilizer and agricultural tools. The U.S. is also rehabilitating irrigation systems, providing veterinary services, and educating Afghans in agricultural methods, animal husbandry, pest control and environmental improvements.

- ☑ Water & Sanitation. The U.S. is providing $7 million to help address the water and sanitation needs of the Afghan people. This assistance will help foster the drilling of water wells, the rehabilitation of water sources, the installation of pipelines, the construction of latrines, and education on hygiene and waster disposal.

- ☑ Health Care. The Afghan people face critical medical needs, and the U.S. is leading the world effort to help the Afghan people recover by delivering massive shipments of vital medicine & health care supplies (since October 1 enough medical supplies have been delivered to support 100,000 Afghans for three months), providing emergency medical care, and educating Afghans on how to rebuild their health care system. The U.N. Children's Fund and the World Health Organization have launched a nationwide campaign to vaccinate 9 million children against measles. In the first two days of the campaign in Kabul, more than 142,000 children were vaccinated. This is three times the number of children vaccinated from January to October 2001 (in Afghanistan, an average of 35,000 children die each year from measles alone).

- ☑ Critical Infrastructure. The U.S. is providing $3.8 million to repair roads, clinics, schools, local markets, homes and water supply facilities in hard-hit areas of Afghanistan.

- ☑ Shelter. The U.S. is contributing $6.9 million to provide emergency shelter for more than 325,000 people and rebuild the damaged homes of approximately 62,000 Afghans.

- ☑ Freedom of Information. The U.S. government has funded a radio program to provide humanitarian information to Afghans in their local languages. 30,000 radios are being funded by USAID to inform Afghans of information on immunizations for children, distribution points for food, health care, and security issues.

- ☑ Funding the Interim Afghan Government. The coalition is committed to helping the people of Afghanistan rebuild their homeland. Operations of the Afghanistan Interim Authority are being funded through the $19.5 million it has received in pledges from international governments including Germany, Australia, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Russia, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom and the United States. Later this month a ministerial meeting of donor countries will be held in Tokyo to discuss the reconstruction of Afghanistan.

- ☑ America's Children Respond to Help Afghan Children. President Bush launched America's Fund for Afghan Children, asking U.S. children to send $1 – or whatever they could afford – to help the children of Afghanistan who have suffered under the Taliban regime. The Fund has raised more than $2.1 million and shipments have already been sent to Afghan children – including hats, socks, coats, tents, school supplies and other important humanitarian items.

☑ Helping Afghan Refugees Who Fled the Taliban Return Home. The Taliban's oppressive reign and war on women and children is ending. Many Afghan refugees who fled in fear now wish to return to their homes, and the U.S. is doing everything it can to help these refugees in Pakistan, Iran and other neighboring countries return home. In fact, the U.S. government has already spent more than $32 million this fiscal year (since October 1) to help refugees return to their homes in Afghanistan. The U.K. has given 26 million pounds sterling to Pakistan for their support of Afghan refugees.

☑ Food Assistance. The U.S. government has led a world effort to provide record amounts of food to the Afghan people. In December alone, the U.N. World Food Program (WFP) delivered more food than ever before in one month. Millions of meals have been provided to the Afghan people so far. And while conditions are far from ideal, famine in Afghanistan has been averted this winter.

☑ Other Key Needs. USAID is giving more that $7 million to supply approximately 600,000 Afghans with emergency supplies such as mattresses, blankets, stoves and cooking sets, winter clothes and fuel.

Brett: Ed has asked me to take the lead on coordinating this response.
In August, you provided me the attached general counsel listing. Does your office have a more current version that you could provide me? The August list gives phone numbers, but not email addresses. Any chance your office has a list now that includes email addresses?

This is to help get you started in circulating Barr memo to dept GC's.

Also, please add Brad's name to mine as a possible contact in this office when you send around the Barr memo. He will be handling a lot of this work as well (and is already, as you know).

FYI: I will be out the week of the 20th. My cell is PRA 6

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "A 12-nation advance team for Afghanistan's international peacekeeping force arrived in Kabul late Tuesday to assess logistics for a full-scale arrival of foreign troops later this month. The first French soldiers to join the peacekeeping force reached Kabul on Wednesday, the French military said...Turkey said it has volunteered to assume command of the international peacekeeping force in Afghanistan when Britain's mandate expires in three months...The logistics team that arrived Wednesday is made up of representatives from Germany, Austria, Denmark, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Norway, Romania, Spain, Sweden and the Netherlands, said British Col. Richard Barrens, chief of staff at the headquarters of the International Security Assistance Force." (San Antonio Express-News, 1/3/02)
- "In America, intelligence agents are said to have intercepted a phone call from Iran to al-Qaeda leaders telling them that the screening of a video of bin Laden on the Arabic Al-Jazeera television station had damaged morale because the terrorist mastermind looked so unwell. The caller, who was not identified, said: 'You should keep [bin Laden] off the television. He looks bad, he looks sick and it is demoralising to his people.'" (The Daily Telegraph (UK), 1/2/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. One by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

No, this letter does not remove/fire him. I think President may have to sign document to remove a PAS official who does not resign?
Either way, that is the kind of sample we need. Do you have such samples?

Subject: Peppercorn

This is the timeline of events for the removal of Ira Peppercorn (Clinton Holdover):

- Prior to Christmas, the Secretary met with Peppercorn and asked him to leave HUD. Peppercorn agreed to leave after the new year.
- When Peppercorn returned on 1/2 -- HUD asked PPO to draft a "thank you for your service letter" on 1/3. We then sent the attached letter.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Dear Mr. Peppercorn:

On behalf of the President and all those who have benefited from the work of the Office of Multifamily Housing Assistance Restructuring, thank you for the time and energy you have devoted to serving your country. By sharing your enthusiasm, insight, and expertise, you have made a real contribution to our nation.

Again, thank you for your dedicated service and I wish you success in your future endeavors.

Sincerely,

Clay Johnson
Assistant to the President for

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "A 12-nation advance team for Afghanistan's international peacekeeping force arrived in Kabul late Tuesday to assess logistics for a full-scale arrival of foreign troops later this month. The first French soldiers to join the peacekeeping force reached Kabul on Wednesday, the French military said...Turkey said it has volunteered to assume command of the international peacekeeping force in Afghanistan when Britain's mandate expires in three months...The logistics team that arrived Wednesday is made up of representatives from Germany, Austria, Denmark, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Norway, Romania, Spain, Sweden and the Netherlands, said British Col. Richard Barrens, chief of staff at the headquarters of the International Security Assistance Force." (San Antonio Express-News, 1/3/02)
- "In America, intelligence agents are said to have intercepted a phone call from Iran to al-Qaeda leaders telling them that the screening of a video of bin Laden on the Arabic Al-Jazeera television station had damaged morale because the terrorist mastermind looked so unwell. The caller, who was not identified, said: 'You should keep [bin Laden] off the television. He looks bad, he looks sick and it is demoralising to his people.'" (The Daily Telegraph (UK), 1/2/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. One by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "A 12-nation advance team for Afghanistan's international peacekeeping force arrived in Kabul late Tuesday to assess logistics for a full-scale arrival of foreign troops later this month. The first French soldiers to join the peacekeeping force reached Kabul on Wednesday, the French military said...Turkey said it has volunteered to assume command of the international peacekeeping force in Afghanistan when Britain's mandate expires in three months...The logistics team that arrived Wednesday is made up of representatives from Germany, Austria, Denmark, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Norway, Romania, Spain, Sweden and the Netherlands, said British Col. Richard Barrens, chief of staff at the headquarters of the International Security Assistance Force." (San Antonio Express-News, 1/3/02)
- "In America, intelligence agents are said to have intercepted a phone call from Iran to al-Qaeda leaders telling them that the screening of a video of bin Laden on the Arabic Al-Jazeera television station had damaged morale because the terrorist mastermind looked so unwell. The caller, who was not identified, said: 'You should keep [bin Laden] off the television. He looks bad, he looks sick and it is demoralising to his people.'" (The Daily Telegraph (UK), 1/2/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. One by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "A 12-nation advance team for Afghanistan's international peacekeeping force arrived in Kabul late Tuesday to assess logistics for a full-scale arrival of foreign troops later this month. The first French soldiers to join the peacekeeping force reached Kabul on Wednesday, the French military said...Turkey said it has volunteered to assume command of the international peacekeeping force in Afghanistan when Britain's mandate expires in three months...The logistics team that arrived Wednesday is made up of representatives from Germany, Austria, Denmark, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Norway, Romania, Spain, Sweden and the Netherlands, said British Col. Richard Barrens, chief of staff at the headquarters of the International Security Assistance Force." (San Antonio Express-News, 1/3/02)
- "In America, intelligence agents are said to have intercepted a phone call from Iran to al-Qaeda leaders telling them that the screening of a video of bin Laden on the Arabic Al-Jazeera television station had damaged morale because the terrorist mastermind looked so unwell. The caller, who was not identified, said: 'You should keep [bin Laden] off the television. He looks bad, he looks sick and it is demoralising to his people.'" (The Daily Telegraph (UK), 1/2/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. One by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "A 12-nation advance team for Afghanistan's international peacekeeping force arrived in Kabul late Tuesday to assess logistics for a full-scale arrival of foreign troops later this month. The first French soldiers to join the peacekeeping force reached Kabul on Wednesday, the French military said...Turkey said it has volunteered to assume command of the international peacekeeping force in Afghanistan when Britain's mandate expires in three months...The logistics team that arrived Wednesday is made up of representatives from Germany, Austria, Denmark, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Norway, Romania, Spain, Sweden and the Netherlands, said British Col. Richard Barrens, chief of staff at the headquarters of the International Security Assistance Force." (San Antonio Express-News, 1/3/02)
- "In America, intelligence agents are said to have intercepted a phone call from Iran to al-Qaeda leaders telling them that the screening of a video of bin Laden on the Arabic Al-Jazeera television station had damaged morale because the terrorist mastermind looked so unwell. The caller, who was not identified, said: 'You should keep [bin Laden] off the television. He looks bad, he looks sick and it is demoralising to his people.'" (The Daily Telegraph (UK), 1/2/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. One by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- "A 12-nation advance team for Afghanistan's international peacekeeping force arrived in Kabul late Tuesday to assess logistics for a full-scale arrival of foreign troops later this month. The first French soldiers to join the peacekeeping force reached Kabul on Wednesday, the French military said...Turkey said it has volunteered to assume command of the international peacekeeping force in Afghanistan when Britain's mandate expires in three months...The logistics team that arrived Wednesday is made up of representatives from Germany, Austria, Denmark, Finland, France, Greece, Italy, Norway, Romania, Spain, Sweden and the Netherlands, said British Col. Richard Barrens, chief of staff at the headquarters of the International Security Assistance Force." (San Antonio Express-News, 1/3/02)
- "In America, intelligence agents are said to have intercepted a phone call from Iran to al-Qaeda leaders telling them that the screening of a video of bin Laden on the Arabic Al-Jazeera television station had damaged morale because the terrorist mastermind looked so unwell. The caller, who was not identified, said: 'You should keep [bin Laden] off the television. He looks bad, he looks sick and it is demoralising to his people.'" (The Daily Telegraph (UK), 1/2/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come. Many terrorists are still hiding in heavily fortified bunkers in rugged territory. One by one, we are going to find them. Piece by piece, we will destroy their network of terror.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

President Signs Legislation to Clean Environment & Create Jobs

Today's Presidential Action

- President Bush today visited the Millennium Corporate Center in Conshohocken, Pennsylvania to sign bipartisan legislation that will encourage the cleanup and redevelopment of old industrial properties – cleaning up our environment, creating new jobs and protecting small businesses from frivolous lawsuits.

- The President also announced that his FY 03 budget will double the funds available through the EPA in FY 02 - from $98 million to $200 million - to help states and communities around the country clean up and revitalize brownfields sites. This is an example of budgeting resources for programs that get results.

- The President's FY 03 budget also includes $25 million in funding for urban redevelopment and brownfields cleanup through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

- And, the President's budget proposes to permanently extend the Brownfields Tax Incentive, which encourages the redevelopment of brownfields. According to government estimates, the $300 million annual investment in the Brownfields Tax Incentive will leverage approximately $3.4 billion in private investment and return 8,000 brownfields to productive use.

Background on Today's Presidential Action

- Brownfields are abandoned or underutilized industrial or commercial properties where redevelopment is hindered by possible environmental contamination and potential liability under Superfund for parties that purchase or operate these sites.

- The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that between 500,000 and one million brownfields tarnish the landscapes of communities across America, typically in urban areas. Spurring more effective and efficient cleanup and redevelopment of brownfields will:

    - Remove environmental hazards from communities;
    - Relieve pressure to develop pristine open space and farmland; and
    - Revitalize communities by creating jobs and returning productive property to local tax rolls.

- Located 20 minutes from Philadelphia on the banks of the Schuylkill River, the Millennium Corporate Center is the 1,000th site redeveloped under Pennsylvania's Land Recycling Program. The Center is built on the former site of the Schuylkill Iron Works, and, when completed, it will be the centerpiece of a 40-acre, $115 million office, recreation and residential development. More than 500 people already work at the new development.

- Some 40 states have developed voluntary programs that are cleaning up hundreds of brownfield sites faster and more effectively, and with less litigation, than under the federal Superfund program. These programs set high cleanup standards and provide liability protection under state law for new owners and operators of brownfields sites.

- However, these state programs have been hindered by the lack of liability protection in federal law. Under Superfund, owners and operators of a contaminated property can be held liable for the cost of cleanup, regardless of whether they actually caused any of the contamination. This potential liability creates a strong incentive for businesses to avoid redeveloping brownfields.

- The U.S. Conference of Mayors, in its February 2000 brownfields survey, Recycling America's Land, called for a "national commitment to recycle the thousands of brownfields in America's cities." They estimated that cleanup and redevelopment of brownfields could generate $2.4 billion in new tax revenues.

- The Small Business Liability Relief and Brownfields Revitalization Act reforms the major hindrance to brownfields cleanup -- the federal Superfund law. The bill provides liability protection for prospective purchasers, contiguous property owners, and innocent landowners and authorizes increased funding for state and local programs that assess and clean up brownfields.

- The legislation also provides common sense relief from Superfund liability for small business owners who sent waste or trash to waste sites, protecting innocent small businesses while ensuring that polluted sites continue to be cleaned up by those most responsible for the contamination.

- President Bush called for Superfund reform during his campaign, and worked to craft a bipartisan solution to the problem of contaminated and abandoned brownfields. Overcoming years of legislative gridlock on this common sense issue, Congress approved the bipartisan bill without opposition in December 2001.

President Signs Legislation to Clean Environment & Create Jobs

Today's Presidential Action

- President Bush today visited the Millennium Corporate Center in Conshohocken, Pennsylvania to sign bipartisan legislation that will encourage the cleanup and redevelopment of old industrial properties – cleaning up our environment, creating new jobs and protecting small businesses from frivolous lawsuits.

- The President also announced that his FY 03 budget will double the funds available through the EPA in FY 02 - from $98 million to $200 million - to help states and communities around the country clean up and revitalize brownfields sites. This is an example of budgeting resources for programs that get results.

- The President's FY 03 budget also includes $25 million in funding for urban redevelopment and brownfields cleanup through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

- And, the President's budget proposes to permanently extend the Brownfields Tax Incentive, which encourages the redevelopment of brownfields. According to government estimates, the $300 million annual investment in the Brownfields Tax Incentive will leverage approximately $3.4 billion in private investment and return 8,000 brownfields to productive use.

Background on Today's Presidential Action

- Brownfields are abandoned or underutilized industrial or commercial properties where redevelopment is hindered by possible environmental contamination and potential liability under Superfund for parties that purchase or operate these sites.

- The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that between 500,000 and one million brownfields tarnish the landscapes of communities across America, typically in urban areas. Spurring more effective and efficient cleanup and redevelopment of brownfields will:

    - Remove environmental hazards from communities;
    - Relieve pressure to develop pristine open space and farmland; and
    - Revitalize communities by creating jobs and returning productive property to local tax rolls.

- Located 20 minutes from Philadelphia on the banks of the Schuylkill River, the Millennium Corporate Center is the 1,000th site redeveloped under Pennsylvania's Land Recycling Program. The Center is built on the former site of the Schuylkill Iron Works, and, when completed, it will be the centerpiece of a 40-acre, $115 million office, recreation and residential development. More than 500 people already work at the new development.

- Some 40 states have developed voluntary programs that are cleaning up hundreds of brownfield sites faster and more effectively, and with less litigation, than under the federal Superfund program. These programs set high cleanup standards and provide liability protection under state law for new owners and operators of brownfields sites.

- However, these state programs have been hindered by the lack of liability protection in federal law. Under Superfund, owners and operators of a contaminated property can be held liable for the cost of cleanup, regardless of whether they actually caused any of the contamination. This potential liability creates a strong incentive for businesses to avoid redeveloping brownfields.

- The U.S. Conference of Mayors, in its February 2000 brownfields survey, Recycling America's Land, called for a "national commitment to recycle the thousands of brownfields in America's cities." They estimated that cleanup and redevelopment of brownfields could generate $2.4 billion in new tax revenues.

- The Small Business Liability Relief and Brownfields Revitalization Act reforms the major hindrance to brownfields cleanup -- the federal Superfund law. The bill provides liability protection for prospective purchasers, contiguous property owners, and innocent landowners and authorizes increased funding for state and local programs that assess and clean up brownfields.

- The legislation also provides common sense relief from Superfund liability for small business owners who sent waste or trash to waste sites, protecting innocent small businesses while ensuring that polluted sites continue to be cleaned up by those most responsible for the contamination.

- President Bush called for Superfund reform during his campaign, and worked to craft a bipartisan solution to the problem of contaminated and abandoned brownfields. Overcoming years of legislative gridlock on this common sense issue, Congress approved the bipartisan bill without opposition in December 2001.

President Signs Legislation to Clean Environment & Create Jobs

Today's Presidential Action

- President Bush today visited the Millennium Corporate Center in Conshohocken, Pennsylvania to sign bipartisan legislation that will encourage the cleanup and redevelopment of old industrial properties – cleaning up our environment, creating new jobs and protecting small businesses from frivolous lawsuits.

- The President also announced that his FY 03 budget will double the funds available through the EPA in FY 02 - from $98 million to $200 million - to help states and communities around the country clean up and revitalize brownfields sites. This is an example of budgeting resources for programs that get results.

- The President's FY 03 budget also includes $25 million in funding for urban redevelopment and brownfields cleanup through the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

- And, the President's budget proposes to permanently extend the Brownfields Tax Incentive, which encourages the redevelopment of brownfields. According to government estimates, the $300 million annual investment in the Brownfields Tax Incentive will leverage approximately $3.4 billion in private investment and return 8,000 brownfields to productive use.

Background on Today's Presidential Action

- Brownfields are abandoned or underutilized industrial or commercial properties where redevelopment is hindered by possible environmental contamination and potential liability under Superfund for parties that purchase or operate these sites.

- The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that between 500,000 and one million brownfields tarnish the landscapes of communities across America, typically in urban areas. Spurring more effective and efficient cleanup and redevelopment of brownfields will:

    - Remove environmental hazards from communities;
    - Relieve pressure to develop pristine open space and farmland; and
    - Revitalize communities by creating jobs and returning productive property to local tax rolls.

- Located 20 minutes from Philadelphia on the banks of the Schuylkill River, the Millennium Corporate Center is the 1,000th site redeveloped under Pennsylvania's Land Recycling Program. The Center is built on the former site of the Schuylkill Iron Works, and, when completed, it will be the centerpiece of a 40-acre, $115 million office, recreation and residential development. More than 500 people already work at the new development.

- Some 40 states have developed voluntary programs that are cleaning up hundreds of brownfield sites faster and more effectively, and with less litigation, than under the federal Superfund program. These programs set high cleanup standards and provide liability protection under state law for new owners and operators of brownfields sites.

- However, these state programs have been hindered by the lack of liability protection in federal law. Under Superfund, owners and operators of a contaminated property can be held liable for the cost of cleanup, regardless of whether they actually caused any of the contamination. This potential liability creates a strong incentive for businesses to avoid redeveloping brownfields.

- The U.S. Conference of Mayors, in its February 2000 brownfields survey, Recycling America's Land, called for a "national commitment to recycle the thousands of brownfields in America's cities." They estimated that cleanup and redevelopment of brownfields could generate $2.4 billion in new tax revenues.

- The Small Business Liability Relief and Brownfields Revitalization Act reforms the major hindrance to brownfields cleanup -- the federal Superfund law. The bill provides liability protection for prospective purchasers, contiguous property owners, and innocent landowners and authorizes increased funding for state and local programs that assess and clean up brownfields.

- The legislation also provides common sense relief from Superfund liability for small business owners who sent waste or trash to waste sites, protecting innocent small businesses while ensuring that polluted sites continue to be cleaned up by those most responsible for the contamination.

- President Bush called for Superfund reform during his campaign, and worked to craft a bipartisan solution to the problem of contaminated and abandoned brownfields. Overcoming years of legislative gridlock on this common sense issue, Congress approved the bipartisan bill without opposition in December 2001.

It is entirely appropriate for us to listen to the policy views of interested individuals, whether it be to (and through) the offices of Public Liaison, Legislative Affairs, Intergovernmental Affairs, Political Affairs, or some other appropriate mechanism. But decisions are made on the merits, of course, so no one should be under any misimpression about how the Administration's policy decisions are and will be made.

THE WHITE HOUSE
COALITION INFORMATION CENTER

1/15/2002

Today's Schedule

Presidential Envoy Zalmay Khalilzad briefs at the Coalition Information Center in Islamabad, Pakistan.

9:05a EST — President Bush tours the New Orleans wharf and makes remarks.

12:30p EST — Department of State daily press briefing by spokesman Richard Boucher.

In Case You Missed It

- "Al Qaeda militants practiced carrying out a mass assassination of world leaders and an attack on a motorcade, according to a video obtained in Afghanistan and broadcast on Australian television. The Australian Broadcasting Corp. late Sunday aired parts of video tapes recorded at an al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan that showed what the network said were Arab, Pakistani and African fighters rehearsing hostage-takings and assassinations." (CNN, 1/14/02)

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- The global total of 215,268 metric tons of food dispatched into Afghanistan from September 1 through December 31 exceeded the identified need of 212,058 metric tons estimated by the World Food Program (WFP) at the start of the period. Localized food shortages are a result of problems relating to access to needy populations, due to poor weather conditions, logistical challenges and insecurity, not a result of problems with sufficiency of food aid. (USAID, 1/11/02)

- "A vast al-Qaeda tunnel complex at Zawar Kili in eastern Afghanistan has been rendered unusable by nearly two weeks of U.S. bombing…" (MSNBC, 1/14/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

THE WHITE HOUSE
COALITION INFORMATION CENTER

Today's Schedule

Presidential Envoy Zalmay Khalilzad briefs at the Coalition Information Center in Islamabad, Pakistan.

9:05a EST — President Bush tours the New Orleans wharf and makes remarks.

12:30p EST — Department of State daily press briefing by spokesman Richard Boucher.

In Case You Missed It

- "Al Qaeda militants practiced carrying out a mass assassination of world leaders and an attack on a motorcade, according to a video obtained in Afghanistan and broadcast on Australian television. The Australian Broadcasting Corp. late Sunday aired parts of video tapes recorded at an al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan that showed what the network said were Arab, Pakistani and African fighters rehearsing hostage-takings and assassinations." (CNN, 1/14/02)

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- The global total of 215,268 metric tons of food dispatched into Afghanistan from September 1 through December 31 exceeded the identified need of 212,058 metric tons estimated by the World Food Program (WFP) at the start of the period. Localized food shortages are a result of problems relating to access to needy populations, due to poor weather conditions, logistical challenges and insecurity, not a result of problems with sufficiency of food aid. (USAID, 1/11/02)

- "A vast al-Qaeda tunnel complex at Zawar Kili in eastern Afghanistan has been rendered unusable by nearly two weeks of U.S. bombing…" (MSNBC, 1/14/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

THE WHITE HOUSE
COALITION INFORMATION CENTER

Today's Schedule

Presidential Envoy Zalmay Khalilzad briefs at the Coalition Information Center in Islamabad, Pakistan.

9:05a EST — President Bush tours the New Orleans wharf and makes remarks.

12:30p EST — Department of State daily press briefing by spokesman Richard Boucher.

In Case You Missed It

- "Al Qaeda militants practiced carrying out a mass assassination of world leaders and an attack on a motorcade, according to a video obtained in Afghanistan and broadcast on Australian television. The Australian Broadcasting Corp. late Sunday aired parts of video tapes recorded at an al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan that showed what the network said were Arab, Pakistani and African fighters rehearsing hostage-takings and assassinations." (CNN, 1/14/02)

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- The global total of 215,268 metric tons of food dispatched into Afghanistan from September 1 through December 31 exceeded the identified need of 212,058 metric tons estimated by the World Food Program (WFP) at the start of the period. Localized food shortages are a result of problems relating to access to needy populations, due to poor weather conditions, logistical challenges and insecurity, not a result of problems with sufficiency of food aid. (USAID, 1/11/02)

- "A vast al-Qaeda tunnel complex at Zawar Kili in eastern Afghanistan has been rendered unusable by nearly two weeks of U.S. bombing…" (MSNBC, 1/14/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

THE WHITE HOUSE
COALITION INFORMATION CENTER

1/15/2002

Today's Schedule

Presidential Envoy Zalmay Khalilzad briefs at the Coalition Information Center in Islamabad, Pakistan.

9:05a EST — President Bush tours the New Orleans wharf and makes remarks.

12:30p EST — Department of State daily press briefing by spokesman Richard Boucher.

In Case You Missed It

- "Al Qaeda militants practiced carrying out a mass assassination of world leaders and an attack on a motorcade, according to a video obtained in Afghanistan and broadcast on Australian television. The Australian Broadcasting Corp. late Sunday aired parts of video tapes recorded at an al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan that showed what the network said were Arab, Pakistani and African fighters rehearsing hostage-takings and assassinations." (CNN, 1/14/02)

Recent Key Quotes & Developments

- The global total of 215,268 metric tons of food dispatched into Afghanistan from September 1 through December 31 exceeded the identified need of 212,058 metric tons estimated by the World Food Program (WFP) at the start of the period. Localized food shortages are a result of problems relating to access to needy populations, due to poor weather conditions, logistical challenges and insecurity, not a result of problems with sufficiency of food aid. (USAID, 1/11/02)

- "A vast al-Qaeda tunnel complex at Zawar Kili in eastern Afghanistan has been rendered unusable by nearly two weeks of U.S. bombing…" (MSNBC, 1/14/02)

Message

Osama bin Laden is a coward who murders innocents, including women, children and Muslims.

We are a long way from finished in Afghanistan. Much difficult and dangerous work is yet to come.

The U.S. is leading a global coalition that has made great progress in the war on terrorism:

- Began to destroy al-Qaeda's grip on Afghanistan by driving the Taliban from power.
- Disrupted al-Qaeda's global operations and terrorist financing networks.
- Helped the innocent people of Afghanistan recover from the Taliban's reign of terror.
- Helped Afghans put aside long-standing differences to form a new interim government that represents all Afghans – including women.

The rumblings are beginning. Some people think that the best way to boost America's economy is to raise taxes on the American people by delaying the fair and responsible tax relief the President signed into law last year. The professional economists disagree. And 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats disagree.

Attached are:

1. A 1-pager on why tax increases will hurt our economy and low-income Americans.
2. A 1-pager with key statistics showing just how overtaxed the American people are.
3. A 1-pager with key quotes from Senate Democrats who oppose delaying tax cuts.

4. Talking points on the economy.

in-crease (in-krēs')

"I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

-- Senator John Breaux (D-LA)

"When the government cuts taxes, it increases households' take-home pay...When the government cuts taxes and stimulates consumer spending, earnings and profits rise, which further stimulates consumer spending....If the households expect the tax cut to be permanent, they will view it as adding substantially to their financial resources and, therefore, increase their spending by a large amount. In this case, the tax cut will have a large impact on aggregate demand."

-- N. Gregory Mankiw (Principles of Economics)

TAX INCREASES 101:

The dictionary defines in-crease (in-krēs') as:

- To become greater or larger.
- To make greater or larger.
- A process of becoming larger.

Synonyms for increase: expand, enlarge, augment.

DELAYING TAX RELIEF WILL RAISE TAXES ON THE AMERICAN PEOPLE BY:

- Preventing the repeal of the death tax (the law repeals the death tax).
- Preventing marriage penalty relief (the law provides relief from the marriage penalty).
- Raising taxes on taxpayers in many brackets (the law cut taxes for all taxpayers in all rates).
- Reducing the value of itemized deductions (the law repeals the phase out on itemized deductions).
- Reducing the value of personal exemptions (the law repeals the phase out of personal exemptions).
- Raising taxes on small businessmen and women (the law cut taxes for small businessmen and women by reducing their rates)
- Scrapping planned increases in the child tax credit (the law increases the child tax credit to $1,000 to help parents with the high costs of raising children).
- Denying scheduled increases in annual tax-free IRA contributions (the law increases the IRA contributions to $5,000 to allow Americans to save more for their retirement tax-free.)
- Complicating the tax code (the law simplified the tax code).

WHY TAX INCREASES WILL HURT AMERICA'S ECONOMY

- Tax increases reduce economic activity, particularly in a time of recession.
- Tax increases raise the cost of investment and reduce employment.
- Tax increases during economic downturns assume the federal budget is more important than the family budget.
- Tax increases during economic downturns take money from families when they need it most.
- America's workers are the engines of economic growth. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases – are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.
- Millions of business owners and entrepreneurs whose businesses are unincorporated will pay higher taxes. Higher marginal tax rates and less cash in the hands of these business owners will reduce incentives for hiring and curtail business expansion.
- Permanent tax cuts are most likely to increase business activity, because entrepreneurs need to know that the extra resources will be there year after year. Even the possibility of higher taxes in the future can reduce investment and employment today.
- According to one survey, nine of ten successors whose family businesses failed within three years of the owner's death listed the death tax as a contributing factor.

ECONOMISTS AGREE THAT HIGHER TAXES CAN LOWER ECONOMIC GROWTH

- According to N. Gregory Mankiw (Principles of Economics): "When the government cuts taxes, it increases households' take-home pay…When the government cuts taxes and stimulates consumer spending, earnings and profits rise, which further stimulates consumer spending….If the households expect the tax cut to be permanent, they will view it as adding substantially to their financial resources and, therefore, increase their spending by a large amount. In this case, the tax cut will have a large impact on aggregate demand."
- According to William J. Baumol and Alan S. Blinder (Economics: Principles and Policy): "It should be no mystery, then, how changes in personal taxes affect consumer spending. Any reduction in personal taxes leaves consumers with more disposable income to spend….Permanent cuts in income taxes cause greater increases in consumer spending than do temporary cuts of equal magnitude."
- According to Paul A. Samuelson and William D. Nordhaus (Economics): "Extra taxes lower our disposable incomes, and lower disposable incomes tend to reduce our consumption spending…Without a doubt, taxes lower output in our multiplier model."

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE OVERTAXED

- The typical American family pays more in total taxes than it spends on food, clothing, and shelter combined.

- Tax Freedom Day, the day Americans stop working for the government and begin working for their families, fell on May 10 last year.

- The average tax rate for the 437,036 individual returns filed for 1916 was 2.75 percent.

- Federal taxes consume about 21 percent of national income, the highest proportion since World War II. Total taxes from all levels of government - federal state and local taxes - stands at a record 32 percent of national income.

- The average family in 1998 worked 2 hours and 50 minutes of every eight hour workday to pay taxes. Most of that time, 1 hour and 55 minutes, was spent working to pay federal taxes.

- Americans spend $200 billion each year on tax lawyers, accountants and other costs associated with tax compliance.

DIVISION ON TAX INCREASES

"Daschle hasn't a leg to stand on, and his election-year opening salvo should be seen for just what it is: partisan politics at its worst."

--Manchester Union Leader Editorial, 1/8/02

Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for tax cuts. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Just a few examples of Democrats who disagree with Senator Tom Daschle's economic theory on tax cuts:

Senator John Breaux (D-LA): "I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA): "Twenty percent of the Democratic Senate caucus voted for the tax cut. Over $1 trillion dollars of that tax cut has yet not gone into effect. My view is that we ought to stay the course…I think it's good policy to let people keep more of their money." (CNN Late Edition, 1/6/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), who co-sponsored the tax cut, said Mr. Daschle's comments made neither political nor economic sense. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA): "Maybe it's at a level my brain can't reach. How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?" (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokesman for Senator Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana said he "can't imagine that she would advocate delaying or repealing" the tax cut. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokeswoman for Senator Max Cleland said the Georgia Democrat "is not interested in revisiting the tax cut." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD), through a spokesperson, said "that he sees no reason to regret his vote for the tax cut."

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, who usually stands shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Daschle against the White House on budget questions, said Mr. Gephardt wanted to stay out of the "Washington blame game." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Los Angeles Times editorial: "Daschle's charge is at least half-wrong. He also offers no way to fix the situation.

President Bush Pushes Economic Security Agenda to Create Jobs and Opportunity for America's Workers

Today's Presidential Action:

- As his first order of business upon returning to Washington, President Bush today met with his top economic advisors and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan to discuss the economy and ways to ensure the recovery happens sooner rather than later. The President also announced that he will include his economic security package in the 2003 budget.

Economic Growth Is Needed Now To Help Workers:

- The Senate Should Pass An Economic Security Plan Immediately: Given the uncertain economic outlook, we need an economic security package to boost growth now and get people back to work. President Bush called on Congress to pass an economic security bill months ago. The House acted quickly but the Senate failed to act, despite support for a bipartisan compromise that a majority of Senators supported. In the meantime, more than 900,000 Americans have lost their jobs. And, without action by the Senate, more than 300,000 workers will not find work this year.

- Economic Growth and Job Creation Boost Surpluses -- Not Tax Increases: The federal government is not responsible for budget surpluses. America's workers are the engines of economic growth that create surpluses. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases –are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.

President Bush - Providing Critical Leadership On The Economy:

- The President's Tax Relief Plan Will Help End the Recession Quicker: The President's tax cut was exactly the right medicine at the right time. It became law in May and workers began receiving checks in late August -- pumping $40 billion back into the economy and supporting consumer spending at a critical time. Had it not been for the September 11th attack, many economists believe our economy would have already recovered.

- While Some Blame Tax Cuts for Recession, the Facts Tell a Different Story: The recession began in March, two months before the tax cut even became law, and at least seven months before workers started receiving rebate checks. Despite Senator Daschle's claims, it is impossible that tax cuts made the recession worse.

- Democrats and Republicans Came Together Because the Tax Cut Was Needed: Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for the tax cut bill. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

The War and Recession Drained the Budget Surplus:

- While some in Washington have attempted to blame the tax cut for the declining budget surplus, the facts tell a different story:

  - The Recession Erased Two-Thirds of the Surplus*: The recession and declining tax revenues drained roughly two-thirds of the budget surplus between April 2000 and today.
  - Homeland Security and War Spending Used 19% of the Surplus: Immediately following the terrorist attacks, President Bush and Congress rightly passed significant spending increases for the war against terrorism, homeland security, airline security, and emergency response. This necessary spending accounted for approximately 19% of the surplus.
  - The Tax Cut Only Used 15% of the Surplus: Despite the claims of some in Washington, the tax cut used less than 15% of the surplus.

- The events of September 11 weakened an already slowing economy:

  - Unemployment rose by almost 1% after September 11.
  - The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down, costing thousands of jobs.
  - The tourism industry was especially hard-hit, costing even more jobs.
  - Wall Street closed for a week, investment dried up, and the markets dropped.
  - Anthrax attacks shut down large portions of commercial mail and shipping industries.

- Despite the terrorist attacks and the slowing economy, the budget remains effectively in balance: The miniscule shortfall in the budget represents less than 1% of GDP, meaning that the budget is effectively in balance.

- While some in Washington use partisan politics as an excuse for inaction, President Bush will continue to work toward a real, effective economic security package for America's workers.

The rumblings are beginning. Some people think that the best way to boost America's economy is to raise taxes on the American people by delaying the fair and responsible tax relief the President signed into law last year. The professional economists disagree. And 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats disagree.

Attached are:

1. A 1-pager on why tax increases will hurt our economy and low-income Americans.
2. A 1-pager with key statistics showing just how overtaxed the American people are.
3. A 1-pager with key quotes from Senate Democrats who oppose delaying tax cuts.

4. Talking points on the economy.

in-crease (in-krēs')

"I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

-- Senator John Breaux (D-LA)

"When the government cuts taxes, it increases households' take-home pay...When the government cuts taxes and stimulates consumer spending, earnings and profits rise, which further stimulates consumer spending....If the households expect the tax cut to be permanent, they will view it as adding substantially to their financial resources and, therefore, increase their spending by a large amount. In this case, the tax cut will have a large impact on aggregate demand."

-- N. Gregory Mankiw (Principles of Economics)

TAX INCREASES 101:

The dictionary defines in-crease (in-krēs') as:

- To become greater or larger.
- To make greater or larger.
- A process of becoming larger.

Synonyms for increase: expand, enlarge, augment.

DELAYING TAX RELIEF WILL RAISE TAXES ON THE AMERICAN PEOPLE BY:

- Preventing the repeal of the death tax (the law repeals the death tax).
- Preventing marriage penalty relief (the law provides relief from the marriage penalty).
- Raising taxes on taxpayers in many brackets (the law cut taxes for all taxpayers in all rates).
- Reducing the value of itemized deductions (the law repeals the phase out on itemized deductions).
- Reducing the value of personal exemptions (the law repeals the phase out of personal exemptions).
- Raising taxes on small businessmen and women (the law cut taxes for small businessmen and women by reducing their rates)
- Scrapping planned increases in the child tax credit (the law increases the child tax credit to $1,000 to help parents with the high costs of raising children).
- Denying scheduled increases in annual tax-free IRA contributions (the law increases the IRA contributions to $5,000 to allow Americans to save more for their retirement tax-free.)
- Complicating the tax code (the law simplified the tax code).

WHY TAX INCREASES WILL HURT AMERICA'S ECONOMY

- Tax increases reduce economic activity, particularly in a time of recession.
- Tax increases raise the cost of investment and reduce employment.
- Tax increases during economic downturns assume the federal budget is more important than the family budget.
- Tax increases during economic downturns take money from families when they need it most.
- America's workers are the engines of economic growth. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases – are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.
- Millions of business owners and entrepreneurs whose businesses are unincorporated will pay higher taxes. Higher marginal tax rates and less cash in the hands of these business owners will reduce incentives for hiring and curtail business expansion.
- Permanent tax cuts are most likely to increase business activity, because entrepreneurs need to know that the extra resources will be there year after year. Even the possibility of higher taxes in the future can reduce investment and employment today.
- According to one survey, nine of ten successors whose family businesses failed within three years of the owner's death listed the death tax as a contributing factor.

ECONOMISTS AGREE THAT HIGHER TAXES CAN LOWER ECONOMIC GROWTH

- According to N. Gregory Mankiw (Principles of Economics): "When the government cuts taxes, it increases households' take-home pay…When the government cuts taxes and stimulates consumer spending, earnings and profits rise, which further stimulates consumer spending….If the households expect the tax cut to be permanent, they will view it as adding substantially to their financial resources and, therefore, increase their spending by a large amount. In this case, the tax cut will have a large impact on aggregate demand."
- According to William J. Baumol and Alan S. Blinder (Economics: Principles and Policy): "It should be no mystery, then, how changes in personal taxes affect consumer spending. Any reduction in personal taxes leaves consumers with more disposable income to spend….Permanent cuts in income taxes cause greater increases in consumer spending than do temporary cuts of equal magnitude."
- According to Paul A. Samuelson and William D. Nordhaus (Economics): "Extra taxes lower our disposable incomes, and lower disposable incomes tend to reduce our consumption spending…Without a doubt, taxes lower output in our multiplier model."

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE OVERTAXED

- The typical American family pays more in total taxes than it spends on food, clothing, and shelter combined.

- Tax Freedom Day, the day Americans stop working for the government and begin working for their families, fell on May 10 last year.

- The average tax rate for the 437,036 individual returns filed for 1916 was 2.75 percent.

- Federal taxes consume about 21 percent of national income, the highest proportion since World War II. Total taxes from all levels of government - federal state and local taxes - stands at a record 32 percent of national income.

- The average family in 1998 worked 2 hours and 50 minutes of every eight hour workday to pay taxes. Most of that time, 1 hour and 55 minutes, was spent working to pay federal taxes.

- Americans spend $200 billion each year on tax lawyers, accountants and other costs associated with tax compliance.

DIVISION ON TAX INCREASES

"Daschle hasn't a leg to stand on, and his election-year opening salvo should be seen for just what it is: partisan politics at its worst."

--Manchester Union Leader Editorial, 1/8/02

Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for tax cuts. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Just a few examples of Democrats who disagree with Senator Tom Daschle's economic theory on tax cuts:

Senator John Breaux (D-LA): "I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA): "Twenty percent of the Democratic Senate caucus voted for the tax cut. Over $1 trillion dollars of that tax cut has yet not gone into effect. My view is that we ought to stay the course…I think it's good policy to let people keep more of their money." (CNN Late Edition, 1/6/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), who co-sponsored the tax cut, said Mr. Daschle's comments made neither political nor economic sense. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA): "Maybe it's at a level my brain can't reach. How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?" (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokesman for Senator Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana said he "can't imagine that she would advocate delaying or repealing" the tax cut. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokeswoman for Senator Max Cleland said the Georgia Democrat "is not interested in revisiting the tax cut." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD), through a spokesperson, said "that he sees no reason to regret his vote for the tax cut."

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, who usually stands shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Daschle against the White House on budget questions, said Mr. Gephardt wanted to stay out of the "Washington blame game." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Los Angeles Times editorial: "Daschle's charge is at least half-wrong. He also offers no way to fix the situation.

President Bush Pushes Economic Security Agenda to Create Jobs and Opportunity for America's Workers

Today's Presidential Action:

- As his first order of business upon returning to Washington, President Bush today met with his top economic advisors and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan to discuss the economy and ways to ensure the recovery happens sooner rather than later. The President also announced that he will include his economic security package in the 2003 budget.

Economic Growth Is Needed Now To Help Workers:

- The Senate Should Pass An Economic Security Plan Immediately: Given the uncertain economic outlook, we need an economic security package to boost growth now and get people back to work. President Bush called on Congress to pass an economic security bill months ago. The House acted quickly but the Senate failed to act, despite support for a bipartisan compromise that a majority of Senators supported. In the meantime, more than 900,000 Americans have lost their jobs. And, without action by the Senate, more than 300,000 workers will not find work this year.

- Economic Growth and Job Creation Boost Surpluses -- Not Tax Increases: The federal government is not responsible for budget surpluses. America's workers are the engines of economic growth that create surpluses. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases –are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.

President Bush - Providing Critical Leadership On The Economy:

- The President's Tax Relief Plan Will Help End the Recession Quicker: The President's tax cut was exactly the right medicine at the right time. It became law in May and workers began receiving checks in late August -- pumping $40 billion back into the economy and supporting consumer spending at a critical time. Had it not been for the September 11th attack, many economists believe our economy would have already recovered.

- While Some Blame Tax Cuts for Recession, the Facts Tell a Different Story: The recession began in March, two months before the tax cut even became law, and at least seven months before workers started receiving rebate checks. Despite Senator Daschle's claims, it is impossible that tax cuts made the recession worse.

- Democrats and Republicans Came Together Because the Tax Cut Was Needed: Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for the tax cut bill. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

The War and Recession Drained the Budget Surplus:

- While some in Washington have attempted to blame the tax cut for the declining budget surplus, the facts tell a different story:

  - The Recession Erased Two-Thirds of the Surplus*: The recession and declining tax revenues drained roughly two-thirds of the budget surplus between April 2000 and today.
  - Homeland Security and War Spending Used 19% of the Surplus: Immediately following the terrorist attacks, President Bush and Congress rightly passed significant spending increases for the war against terrorism, homeland security, airline security, and emergency response. This necessary spending accounted for approximately 19% of the surplus.
  - The Tax Cut Only Used 15% of the Surplus: Despite the claims of some in Washington, the tax cut used less than 15% of the surplus.

- The events of September 11 weakened an already slowing economy:

  - Unemployment rose by almost 1% after September 11.
  - The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down, costing thousands of jobs.
  - The tourism industry was especially hard-hit, costing even more jobs.
  - Wall Street closed for a week, investment dried up, and the markets dropped.
  - Anthrax attacks shut down large portions of commercial mail and shipping industries.

- Despite the terrorist attacks and the slowing economy, the budget remains effectively in balance: The miniscule shortfall in the budget represents less than 1% of GDP, meaning that the budget is effectively in balance.

- While some in Washington use partisan politics as an excuse for inaction, President Bush will continue to work toward a real, effective economic security package for America's workers.

The rumblings are beginning. Some people think that the best way to boost America's economy is to raise taxes on the American people by delaying the fair and responsible tax relief the President signed into law last year. The professional economists disagree. And 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats disagree.

Attached are:

1. A 1-pager on why tax increases will hurt our economy and low-income Americans.
2. A 1-pager with key statistics showing just how overtaxed the American people are.
3. A 1-pager with key quotes from Senate Democrats who oppose delaying tax cuts.
4. Talking points on the economy.

in-crease (in-krēs')

"I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

-- Senator John Breaux (D-LA)

"When the government cuts taxes, it increases households' take-home pay...When the government cuts taxes and stimulates consumer spending, earnings and profits rise, which further stimulates consumer spending....If the households expect the tax cut to be permanent, they will view it as adding substantially to their financial resources and, therefore, increase their spending by a large amount. In this case, the tax cut will have a large impact on aggregate demand."

-- N. Gregory Mankiw (Principles of Economics)

TAX INCREASES 101:

The dictionary defines in-crease (in-krēs') as:

- To become greater or larger.
- To make greater or larger.
- A process of becoming larger.

Synonyms for increase: expand, enlarge, augment.

DELAYING TAX RELIEF WILL RAISE TAXES ON THE AMERICAN PEOPLE BY:

- Preventing the repeal of the death tax (the law repeals the death tax).
- Preventing marriage penalty relief (the law provides relief from the marriage penalty).
- Raising taxes on taxpayers in many brackets (the law cut taxes for all taxpayers in all rates).
- Reducing the value of itemized deductions (the law repeals the phase out on itemized deductions).
- Reducing the value of personal exemptions (the law repeals the phase out of personal exemptions).
- Raising taxes on small businessmen and women (the law cut taxes for small businessmen and women by reducing their rates)
- Scrapping planned increases in the child tax credit (the law increases the child tax credit to $1,000 to help parents with the high costs of raising children).
- Denying scheduled increases in annual tax-free IRA contributions (the law increases the IRA contributions to $5,000 to allow Americans to save more for their retirement tax-free.)
- Complicating the tax code (the law simplified the tax code).

WHY TAX INCREASES WILL HURT AMERICA'S ECONOMY

- Tax increases reduce economic activity, particularly in a time of recession.
- Tax increases raise the cost of investment and reduce employment.
- Tax increases during economic downturns assume the federal budget is more important than the family budget.
- Tax increases during economic downturns take money from families when they need it most.
- America's workers are the engines of economic growth. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases – are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.
- Millions of business owners and entrepreneurs whose businesses are unincorporated will pay higher taxes. Higher marginal tax rates and less cash in the hands of these business owners will reduce incentives for hiring and curtail business expansion.
- Permanent tax cuts are most likely to increase business activity, because entrepreneurs need to know that the extra resources will be there year after year. Even the possibility of higher taxes in the future can reduce investment and employment today.
- According to one survey, nine of ten successors whose family businesses failed within three years of the owner's death listed the death tax as a contributing factor.

ECONOMISTS AGREE THAT HIGHER TAXES CAN LOWER ECONOMIC GROWTH

- According to N. Gregory Mankiw (Principles of Economics): "When the government cuts taxes, it increases households' take-home pay…When the government cuts taxes and stimulates consumer spending, earnings and profits rise, which further stimulates consumer spending….If the households expect the tax cut to be permanent, they will view it as adding substantially to their financial resources and, therefore, increase their spending by a large amount. In this case, the tax cut will have a large impact on aggregate demand."
- According to William J. Baumol and Alan S. Blinder (Economics: Principles and Policy): "It should be no mystery, then, how changes in personal taxes affect consumer spending. Any reduction in personal taxes leaves consumers with more disposable income to spend….Permanent cuts in income taxes cause greater increases in consumer spending than do temporary cuts of equal magnitude."
- According to Paul A. Samuelson and William D. Nordhaus (Economics): "Extra taxes lower our disposable incomes, and lower disposable incomes tend to reduce our consumption spending…Without a doubt, taxes lower output in our multiplier model."

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE OVERTAXED

- The typical American family pays more in total taxes than it spends on food, clothing, and shelter combined.

- Tax Freedom Day, the day Americans stop working for the government and begin working for their families, fell on May 10 last year.

- The average tax rate for the 437,036 individual returns filed for 1916 was 2.75 percent.

- Federal taxes consume about 21 percent of national income, the highest proportion since World War II. Total taxes from all levels of government - federal state and local taxes - stands at a record 32 percent of national income.

- The average family in 1998 worked 2 hours and 50 minutes of every eight hour workday to pay taxes. Most of that time, 1 hour and 55 minutes, was spent working to pay federal taxes.

- Americans spend $200 billion each year on tax lawyers, accountants and other costs associated with tax compliance.

DIVISION ON TAX INCREASES

"Daschle hasn't a leg to stand on, and his election-year opening salvo should be seen for just what it is: partisan politics at its worst."

--Manchester Union Leader Editorial, 1/8/02

Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for tax cuts. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Just a few examples of Democrats who disagree with Senator Tom Daschle's economic theory on tax cuts:

Senator John Breaux (D-LA): "I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA): "Twenty percent of the Democratic Senate caucus voted for the tax cut. Over $1 trillion dollars of that tax cut has yet not gone into effect. My view is that we ought to stay the course…I think it's good policy to let people keep more of their money." (CNN Late Edition, 1/6/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), who co-sponsored the tax cut, said Mr. Daschle's comments made neither political nor economic sense. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA): "Maybe it's at a level my brain can't reach. How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?" (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokesman for Senator Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana said he "can't imagine that she would advocate delaying or repealing" the tax cut. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokeswoman for Senator Max Cleland said the Georgia Democrat "is not interested in revisiting the tax cut." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD), through a spokesperson, said "that he sees no reason to regret his vote for the tax cut."

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, who usually stands shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Daschle against the White House on budget questions, said Mr. Gephardt wanted to stay out of the "Washington blame game." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Los Angeles Times editorial: "Daschle's charge is at least half-wrong. He also offers no way to fix the situation.

President Bush Pushes Economic Security Agenda to Create Jobs and Opportunity for America's Workers

Today's Presidential Action:

- As his first order of business upon returning to Washington, President Bush today met with his top economic advisors and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan to discuss the economy and ways to ensure the recovery happens sooner rather than later. The President also announced that he will include his economic security package in the 2003 budget.

Economic Growth Is Needed Now To Help Workers:

- The Senate Should Pass An Economic Security Plan Immediately: Given the uncertain economic outlook, we need an economic security package to boost growth now and get people back to work. President Bush called on Congress to pass an economic security bill months ago. The House acted quickly but the Senate failed to act, despite support for a bipartisan compromise that a majority of Senators supported. In the meantime, more than 900,000 Americans have lost their jobs. And, without action by the Senate, more than 300,000 workers will not find work this year.

- Economic Growth and Job Creation Boost Surpluses -- Not Tax Increases: The federal government is not responsible for budget surpluses. America's workers are the engines of economic growth that create surpluses. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases –are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.

President Bush - Providing Critical Leadership On The Economy:

- The President's Tax Relief Plan Will Help End the Recession Quicker: The President's tax cut was exactly the right medicine at the right time. It became law in May and workers began receiving checks in late August -- pumping $40 billion back into the economy and supporting consumer spending at a critical time. Had it not been for the September 11th attack, many economists believe our economy would have already recovered.

- While Some Blame Tax Cuts for Recession, the Facts Tell a Different Story: The recession began in March, two months before the tax cut even became law, and at least seven months before workers started receiving rebate checks. Despite Senator Daschle's claims, it is impossible that tax cuts made the recession worse.

- Democrats and Republicans Came Together Because the Tax Cut Was Needed: Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for the tax cut bill. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

The War and Recession Drained the Budget Surplus:

- While some in Washington have attempted to blame the tax cut for the declining budget surplus, the facts tell a different story:

  - The Recession Erased Two-Thirds of the Surplus*: The recession and declining tax revenues drained roughly two-thirds of the budget surplus between April 2000 and today.
  - Homeland Security and War Spending Used 19% of the Surplus: Immediately following the terrorist attacks, President Bush and Congress rightly passed significant spending increases for the war against terrorism, homeland security, airline security, and emergency response. This necessary spending accounted for approximately 19% of the surplus.
  - The Tax Cut Only Used 15% of the Surplus: Despite the claims of some in Washington, the tax cut used less than 15% of the surplus.

- The events of September 11 weakened an already slowing economy:

  - Unemployment rose by almost 1% after September 11.
  - The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down, costing thousands of jobs.
  - The tourism industry was especially hard-hit, costing even more jobs.
  - Wall Street closed for a week, investment dried up, and the markets dropped.
  - Anthrax attacks shut down large portions of commercial mail and shipping industries.

- Despite the terrorist attacks and the slowing economy, the budget remains effectively in balance: The miniscule shortfall in the budget represents less than 1% of GDP, meaning that the budget is effectively in balance.

- While some in Washington use partisan politics as an excuse for inaction, President Bush will continue to work toward a real, effective economic security package for America's workers.

The rumblings are beginning. Some people think that the best way to boost America's economy is to raise taxes on the American people by delaying the fair and responsible tax relief the President signed into law last year. The professional economists disagree. And 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats disagree.

Attached are:

1. A 1-pager on why tax increases will hurt our economy and low-income Americans.
2. A 1-pager with key statistics showing just how overtaxed the American people are.
3. A 1-pager with key quotes from Senate Democrats who oppose delaying tax cuts.
4. Talking points on the economy.

in-crease (in-krēs')

"I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

-- Senator John Breaux (D-LA)

"When the government cuts taxes, it increases households' take-home pay...When the government cuts taxes and stimulates consumer spending, earnings and profits rise, which further stimulates consumer spending....If the households expect the tax cut to be permanent, they will view it as adding substantially to their financial resources and, therefore, increase their spending by a large amount. In this case, the tax cut will have a large impact on aggregate demand."

-- N. Gregory Mankiw (Principles of Economics)

TAX INCREASES 101:

The dictionary defines in-crease (in-krēs') as:

- To become greater or larger.
- To make greater or larger.
- A process of becoming larger.

Synonyms for increase: expand, enlarge, augment.

DELAYING TAX RELIEF WILL RAISE TAXES ON THE AMERICAN PEOPLE BY:

- Preventing the repeal of the death tax (the law repeals the death tax).
- Preventing marriage penalty relief (the law provides relief from the marriage penalty).
- Raising taxes on taxpayers in many brackets (the law cut taxes for all taxpayers in all rates).
- Reducing the value of itemized deductions (the law repeals the phase out on itemized deductions).
- Reducing the value of personal exemptions (the law repeals the phase out of personal exemptions).
- Raising taxes on small businessmen and women (the law cut taxes for small businessmen and women by reducing their rates)
- Scrapping planned increases in the child tax credit (the law increases the child tax credit to $1,000 to help parents with the high costs of raising children).
- Denying scheduled increases in annual tax-free IRA contributions (the law increases the IRA contributions to $5,000 to allow Americans to save more for their retirement tax-free.)
- Complicating the tax code (the law simplified the tax code).

WHY TAX INCREASES WILL HURT AMERICA'S ECONOMY

- Tax increases reduce economic activity, particularly in a time of recession.
- Tax increases raise the cost of investment and reduce employment.
- Tax increases during economic downturns assume the federal budget is more important than the family budget.
- Tax increases during economic downturns take money from families when they need it most.
- America's workers are the engines of economic growth. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases – are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.
- Millions of business owners and entrepreneurs whose businesses are unincorporated will pay higher taxes. Higher marginal tax rates and less cash in the hands of these business owners will reduce incentives for hiring and curtail business expansion.
- Permanent tax cuts are most likely to increase business activity, because entrepreneurs need to know that the extra resources will be there year after year. Even the possibility of higher taxes in the future can reduce investment and employment today.
- According to one survey, nine of ten successors whose family businesses failed within three years of the owner's death listed the death tax as a contributing factor.

ECONOMISTS AGREE THAT HIGHER TAXES CAN LOWER ECONOMIC GROWTH

- According to N. Gregory Mankiw (Principles of Economics): "When the government cuts taxes, it increases households' take-home pay…When the government cuts taxes and stimulates consumer spending, earnings and profits rise, which further stimulates consumer spending….If the households expect the tax cut to be permanent, they will view it as adding substantially to their financial resources and, therefore, increase their spending by a large amount. In this case, the tax cut will have a large impact on aggregate demand."
- According to William J. Baumol and Alan S. Blinder (Economics: Principles and Policy): "It should be no mystery, then, how changes in personal taxes affect consumer spending. Any reduction in personal taxes leaves consumers with more disposable income to spend….Permanent cuts in income taxes cause greater increases in consumer spending than do temporary cuts of equal magnitude."
- According to Paul A. Samuelson and William D. Nordhaus (Economics): "Extra taxes lower our disposable incomes, and lower disposable incomes tend to reduce our consumption spending…Without a doubt, taxes lower output in our multiplier model."

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE OVERTAXED

- The typical American family pays more in total taxes than it spends on food, clothing, and shelter combined.

- Tax Freedom Day, the day Americans stop working for the government and begin working for their families, fell on May 10 last year.

- The average tax rate for the 437,036 individual returns filed for 1916 was 2.75 percent.

- Federal taxes consume about 21 percent of national income, the highest proportion since World War II. Total taxes from all levels of government - federal state and local taxes - stands at a record 32 percent of national income.

- The average family in 1998 worked 2 hours and 50 minutes of every eight hour workday to pay taxes. Most of that time, 1 hour and 55 minutes, was spent working to pay federal taxes.

- Americans spend $200 billion each year on tax lawyers, accountants and other costs associated with tax compliance.

DIVISION ON TAX INCREASES

"Daschle hasn't a leg to stand on, and his election-year opening salvo should be seen for just what it is: partisan politics at its worst."

--Manchester Union Leader Editorial, 1/8/02

Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for tax cuts. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

IN THEIR OWN WORDS

Just a few examples of Democrats who disagree with Senator Tom Daschle's economic theory on tax cuts:

Senator John Breaux (D-LA): "I think that the worst thing you can do is increase taxes during a recessionary period. And to go back on that program would, in effect, be a tax increase." (CNN, Novak, Hunt and Shields, 1/6/02)

Senator Dianne Feinstein (D-CA): "Twenty percent of the Democratic Senate caucus voted for the tax cut. Over $1 trillion dollars of that tax cut has yet not gone into effect. My view is that we ought to stay the course…I think it's good policy to let people keep more of their money." (CNN Late Edition, 1/6/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA), who co-sponsored the tax cut, said Mr. Daschle's comments made neither political nor economic sense. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Zell Miller (D-GA): "Maybe it's at a level my brain can't reach. How do you have as one of your highest priorities to re-elect the moderate Democrats from South Dakota, Montana and Missouri on one hand, then on the other hand blame them for voting for a tax cut that he maintains has created this recession? Hello?" (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokesman for Senator Mary L. Landrieu of Louisiana said he "can't imagine that she would advocate delaying or repealing" the tax cut. (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

A spokeswoman for Senator Max Cleland said the Georgia Democrat "is not interested in revisiting the tax cut." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Senator Tim Johnson (D-SD), through a spokesperson, said "that he sees no reason to regret his vote for the tax cut."

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri, who usually stands shoulder-to-shoulder with Mr. Daschle against the White House on budget questions, said Mr. Gephardt wanted to stay out of the "Washington blame game." (Washington Times, 1/8/02)

Los Angeles Times editorial: "Daschle's charge is at least half-wrong. He also offers no way to fix the situation.

President Bush Pushes Economic Security Agenda to Create Jobs and Opportunity for America's Workers

Today's Presidential Action:

- As his first order of business upon returning to Washington, President Bush today met with his top economic advisors and Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan to discuss the economy and ways to ensure the recovery happens sooner rather than later. The President also announced that he will include his economic security package in the 2003 budget.

Economic Growth Is Needed Now To Help Workers:

- The Senate Should Pass An Economic Security Plan Immediately: Given the uncertain economic outlook, we need an economic security package to boost growth now and get people back to work. President Bush called on Congress to pass an economic security bill months ago. The House acted quickly but the Senate failed to act, despite support for a bipartisan compromise that a majority of Senators supported. In the meantime, more than 900,000 Americans have lost their jobs. And, without action by the Senate, more than 300,000 workers will not find work this year.

- Economic Growth and Job Creation Boost Surpluses -- Not Tax Increases: The federal government is not responsible for budget surpluses. America's workers are the engines of economic growth that create surpluses. A strong economy and more jobs – not tax increases –are the keys to improving the daily lives of working families and creating budget surpluses for years to come.

President Bush - Providing Critical Leadership On The Economy:

- The President's Tax Relief Plan Will Help End the Recession Quicker: The President's tax cut was exactly the right medicine at the right time. It became law in May and workers began receiving checks in late August -- pumping $40 billion back into the economy and supporting consumer spending at a critical time. Had it not been for the September 11th attack, many economists believe our economy would have already recovered.

- While Some Blame Tax Cuts for Recession, the Facts Tell a Different Story: The recession began in March, two months before the tax cut even became law, and at least seven months before workers started receiving rebate checks. Despite Senator Daschle's claims, it is impossible that tax cuts made the recession worse.

- Democrats and Republicans Came Together Because the Tax Cut Was Needed: Twelve Senate Democrats and 41 House Democrats voted for the tax cut bill. They knew that cutting taxes was the right thing to do for America's future economic prosperity.

The War and Recession Drained the Budget Surplus:

- While some in Washington have attempted to blame the tax cut for the declining budget surplus, the facts tell a different story:

  - The Recession Erased Two-Thirds of the Surplus*: The recession and declining tax revenues drained roughly two-thirds of the budget surplus between April 2000 and today.
  - Homeland Security and War Spending Used 19% of the Surplus: Immediately following the terrorist attacks, President Bush and Congress rightly passed significant spending increases for the war against terrorism, homeland security, airline security, and emergency response. This necessary spending accounted for approximately 19% of the surplus.
  - The Tax Cut Only Used 15% of the Surplus: Despite the claims of some in Washington, the tax cut used less than 15% of the surplus.

- The events of September 11 weakened an already slowing economy:

  - Unemployment rose by almost 1% after September 11.
  - The airport and airline industry was entirely shut down, costing thousands of jobs.
  - The tourism industry was especially hard-hit, costing even more jobs.
  - Wall Street closed for a week, investment dried up, and the markets dropped.
  - Anthrax attacks shut down large portions of commercial mail and shipping industries.

- Despite the terrorist attacks and the slowing economy, the budget remains effectively in balance: The miniscule shortfall in the budget represents less than 1% of GDP, meaning that the budget is effectively in balance.

- While some in Washington use partisan politics as an excuse for inaction, President Bush will continue to work toward a real, effective economic security package for America's workers.

This is pretty high quality commentary on the John Walker situation -- more from a personal perspective. Thought you might enjoy it.

THE ROAD TO TREASON
By Jeff Jacoby
The Boston Globe

December 13, 2001

It isn't the case that the parents of John Walker - the Marin County child of privilege turned Taliban terrorist - never drew the line with their son. True, they didn't do so when he was 14 and his consuming passion was collecting hip-hop CDs with especially nasty lyrics. And true, they didn't put their foot down when he announced at 16 that he was going to drop out of Tamiscal High School - the elite "alternative" school where students determined their own course of study and only saw a teacher once a week.

And granted, they didn't interfere when he abruptly decided to become a Muslim after reading The Autobiography of Malcolm X, grew a beard, and took to wearing long white robes and an oversized skullcap. On the contrary: His father was "proud of John for pursuing an alternative course" and his mother told friends that it was "good for a child to find a passion."

Nor did they object when he began spending more and more time at a local mosque and set about trying to memorize the Koran. Nor when he asked his parents to pay his way to Yemen so he could learn to speak "pure" Arabic. Nor when they learned that his new circle of friends included gunmen who had been to Chechnya to fight the Russians. Nor when he headed to Pakistan to join a madrassah in a region known to be a stronghold of Islamist extremists.

His parents also didn't balk when he went to fight in Afghanistan - but that, at least, they didn't know about: Walker hadn't told them. Perhaps by that point he had learned to take their consent for granted.

Only once, it seems, did Frank Lindh and Marilyn Walker actually deny their son something he wanted. When he first adopted Islam and took the name Suleyman, they refused to use it and insisted on calling him John. After all, he had been named for one of the giants of our time: John Lennon.

Their refusal must have amazed him. For as long as he could remember, his oh-so-progressive parents had answered "Yes" to his every whim, indulged his every fancy, permitted -- even praised -- his every passion. The only thing they insisted on was that nothing be insisted on.

Nothing in his life was important enough for them to make an issue of: not his schooling, not his religion, not his appearance, not even whether he stayed in America or moved -- while still a minor -- to a benighted Third World oligarchy halfway around the world. Nothing. Except, of course, their right to call him by the name of their favorite Beatle.

Devout practitioners of the self-obsessed nonjudgmentalism for which the Bay Area is renowned, Lindh and Walker appear never to have rebuked their son or criticized his choices. In their world, there were no absolutes, no fixed truths, no mandatory behavior, no thou-shalt-nots. If they had one conviction, it was that all convictions are worthy -- that nothing is intolerable except intolerance.

But even in Marin County, there are times when children need to hear "No" and "Don't." They need to know that there are limits they must respect and expectations they must try to live up to. If they cannot find those limits and expectations at home, they are apt to look for them elsewhere. Newsweek calls it "truly perplexing" that Walker, who"grew up in possibly the most liberal, tolerant place in America . . . was drawn to the most illiberal, intolerant sect in Islam."

There is nothing perplexing about it. He craved standards and discipline. Mom and Dad didn't offer any. The Taliban did. Even when it was clear that their son was sinking into Islamist fanaticism, they wouldn't pull back on the reins.
When Osama bin Laden's terrorists bombed the USS Cole and killed 17 American servicemen, Walker e-mailed his father that the attack had been justified, since by docking the ship in Yemen, the United States had committed "an act of war."
Lindh now says that the message "raised my concerns" -- but that didn't stop him from wiring Walker another $1,200. After all, says Dad,"my days of molding him were over." It isn't clear that they ever began.

It undoubtedly came as a jolt to his parents when Walker turned up at the fortress near Mazar-i-Sharif, sporting an AK-47 and calling himself Abdul Hamid.
But the revelation that their son had enlisted in Al Qaeda and supported the Sept. 11 attacks brought no words of reproach - or self-reproach - to their lips.

Walker deserved "a little kick in the butt" for keeping them in the dark about his plans, his father said, but otherwise they just wanted to "give him a big hug."

His mother, meanwhile, was quite sure that "if he got involved with the Taliban he must have been brainwashed. When you're young and impressionable, it's easy to be led by charismatic people." Yes, it is, and it's a pity that that didn't occur to her sooner. If she and Lindh had been less concerned with flaunting their open-mindedness and more concerned with developing their son's moral judgment, he wouldn't be where he is today.

Walker is responsible for his own behavior and he will pay the price the law requires. But his road to treason and jihad didn't begin in Afghanistan. It began in Marin County, with parents who never said "No."

This morning's Washington Times quotes Majority Leader Daschle's spokesman saying that Sen. Daschle will not join Sen. Kennedy in calling for tax increases by delaying the tax cuts (it appears he will continue to simply attack tax cuts without offering to repeal them). The Washington Times also reports on a speech this week by Senator Zell Miller where he distances himself from Sen. Daschles' attacks on tax cuts: Here are the quotes:

"He,s been very clear, he is not calling for a rollback or a halt of the tax cut, [Daschle] spokeswoman Ranit Schmelzer said. "While every senator has the right to their views, it,s not something [Mr. Daschle] has said."

"The Democratic leader is publicly blaming the tax cut for our economic slowdown. This economic slowdown had begun before we passed the tax cut, and most of it hasn,t even gone into effect. Even hinting that we should somehow reverse it during an economic downturn is about the worst move we could make." -- Sen. Zell Miller (D-GA)

This morning's Washington Times quotes Majority Leader Daschle's spokesman saying that Sen. Daschle will not join Sen. Kennedy in calling for tax increases by delaying the tax cuts (it appears he will continue to simply attack tax cuts without offering to repeal them). The Washington Times also reports on a speech this week by Senator Zell Miller where he distances himself from Sen. Daschles' attacks on tax cuts: Here are the quotes:

"He 's been very clear, he is not calling for a rollback or a halt of the tax cut, [Daschle] spokeswoman Ranit Schmelzer said. "While every senator has the right to their views, it's not something [Mr. Daschle] has said."

"The Democratic leader is publicly blaming the tax cut for our economic slowdown. This economic slowdown had begun before we passed the tax cut, and most of it hasn't even gone into effect. Even hinting that we should somehow reverse it during an economic downturn is about the worst move we could make."
-- Sen. Zell Miller (D-GA)

Americans Want Bush to Set Direction of Country

President Boosts Republican Party on Image, Issues

"'What do Bush's high job ratings mean for us?' inquiring Republicans want to know. The answer is plenty."

-CNN's Bill Schneider, January 15, 2002

"The public perception of Republicans has risen significantly in recent months, and the Republican Party has an advantage over Democrats on top issues like the economy and foreign policy"

-Associated Press, January 15, 2002

An analysis of the latest USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll shows that:

The remarkable leadership of the President…

- President Bush's job approval historically high, extraordinarily durable. The President's approval rating has been above 80% for twelve consecutive Gallup polls spanning 18 weeks – the longest duration of such presidential ratings in history.
- By 23%, the public favors President Bush over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction. 59% prefer President Bush having more influence over the direction of the nation in the next year, compared to 36% who favor the Democrats.

…helps Republicans make great strides in public perception.

- Republicans have the advantage on key issues like terrorism, defense, immigration, the budget deficit and the economy. Republicans enjoy huge advantages on terrorism (61%-23%), defense (65%-24%) and immigration (50%-33%). The party holds a meaningful edge on the budget deficit (47%-41%) and the economy (47%-41%).
- Republicans close to parity with Democrats on the issue of education. Republicans have traditionally trailed the Democrats on education by an overwhelming margin. For instance, in 1996, Bob Dole lost voters concerned about education by 62%, and in 1999, surveys showed a 15-20% Republican disadvantage on the issue. But Republicans are now close to parity on education (42%-46%). And polls earlier this year showed President Bush leading the Democrats on the issue.
- Republicans now enjoy a 3% lead over Democrats in the 2002 generic ballot. In June, Democrats were favored over Republicans in the 2002 generic ballot by 4 points; in November, the parties were at parity. Republicans now lead 47% to 44%. In 1994, Republicans trailed Democrats by an average of 1% leading up to the mid-term elections.
- By 3%, the public favors Congressional Republicans over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction. 47% prefer Congressional Republicans having more influence over the direction of the nation in the next year, compared to 44% who favor the Democrats.

Americans Want Bush to Set Direction of Country

President Boosts Republican Party on Image, Issues

-CNN's Bill Schneider, January 15, 2002

"The public perception of Republicans has risen significantly in recent months, and the Republican Party has an advantage over Democrats on top issues like the economy and foreign policy"

-Associated Press, January 15, 2002

An analysis of the latest USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll shows that:

The remarkable leadership of the President…

- President Bush's job approval historically high, extraordinarily durable. The President's approval rating has been above 80% for twelve consecutive Gallup polls spanning 18 weeks – the longest duration of such presidential ratings in history.
- By 23%, the public favors President Bush over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction. 59% prefer President Bush having more influence over the direction of the nation in the next year, compared to 36% who favor the Democrats.

…helps Republicans make great strides in public perception.

- Republicans have the advantage on key issues like terrorism, defense, immigration, the budget deficit and the economy. Republicans enjoy huge advantages on terrorism (61%-23%), defense (65%-24%) and immigration (50%-33%). The party holds a meaningful edge on the budget deficit (47%-41%) and the economy (47%-41%).
- Republicans close to parity with Democrats on the issue of education. Republicans have traditionally trailed the Democrats on education by an overwhelming margin. For instance, in 1996, Bob Dole lost voters concerned about education by 62%, and in 1999, surveys showed a 15-20% Republican disadvantage on the issue. But Republicans are now close to parity on education (42%-46%). And polls earlier this year showed President Bush leading the Democrats on the issue.
- Republicans now enjoy a 3% lead over Democrats in the 2002 generic ballot. In June, Democrats were favored over Republicans in the 2002 generic ballot by 4 points; in November, the parties were at parity. Republicans now lead 47% to 44%. In 1994, Republicans trailed Democrats by an average of 1% leading up to the mid-term elections.
- By 3%, the public favors Congressional Republicans over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction. 47% prefer Congressional Republicans having more influence over the direction of the nation in the next year, compared to 44% who favor the Democrats.

Federal judge "Hippo" Garcia dies at age 76
By T.A. BADGER
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - U.S. District Judge Hipolito Garcia, who rose from an impoverished childhood to become the first Mexican-American federal judge in western Texas, died Wednesday after a long illness. He was 76.

Garcia's death came only a day after he had assumed semi-retired status after serving more than two decades on the federal bench.

Friends and colleagues of the judge, known widely by his nickname "Hippo", remembered him Wednesday as a man who climbed to a prestigious and influential position, but never forgot where he came from.

"He was everybody's friend - everybody loved Judge Garcia," said U.S. District Judge Edward Prado. "He was a very humble man who always had time for his friends."

"He always treated all with the highest degree of respect, and what he got in return was even higher respect" said local attorney Van Hilley, a longtime friend.

Garcia was born and raised in a down-at-heel neighborhood just south of downtown San Antonio - the small house where his immigrant parents settled in the 1920s was only a few blocks from the federal building that housed his busy courtroom.

Hilley said memories of his early years stayed with Garcia even as he rose in stature in the legal community.

"He didn't speak English when he was young and he had to fight his way through school," said Hilley, who met Garcia while trying a case before him in 1972. "He was always concerned about the (defendant's) family. He understood people's suffering."

Garcia was educated in San Antonio public schools, where classmates who couldn't pronounce Hipolito gave him his prominent nickname.

After graduation from Brackenridge High School, he served in the Army in Germany in World War II as a tank driver. Afterward he attended St. Mary's University, where he earned a law degree in 1951.

He served as an assistant district attorney in Bexar County for 14 years before going into private law practice. In late 1964, Garcia was elected a county court judge and a decade later, he was elected a judge in the state criminal court for Bexar County.

President Jimmy Carter appointed Garcia to a seat on the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Texas in October 1980.

"He was quite a man, I'll tell you that," said William Putnicki, the federal court clerk in San Antonio who credits Garcia with helping him get that job in the mid-1990s. "He had tremendous judicial discretion, judgement and temprament."

Putnicki said he'll most remember Garcia's wit and his gifts as a storyteller.

"The guy had so many experiences and a way of sharing them with you," he said. "He always kept you on the edge of your seat."

Garcia, who never married, is survived by two brothers and a sister.

SIGNIFICANT AGENCY FOIA REQUESTS

LABOR

- WHISTLEBLOWER CASE
  Brent Israelsen, Reporter, The Salt Lake Tribune, Salt Lake City, Utah, is seeking: excerpts from the transcript in a whistleblower case before Administrative Law Judge David W. Di Nardi in David W. Hall v. U.S. Army Dugway Proving Ground, 1997-SDW-5

  Comment: The request for the transcript is routine, but the case is not.

  The Salt Lake Tribune wrote an article about the case, which was published on Monday, January 14, 2002 and will apparently be following the hearing. In this case, the complainant alleges that the U.S. Army retaliated against him after he complained to state and federal regulators about how Dugway handled its chemicals, tested for contamination and approved gas masks for soldiers in the Persian Gulf. This article can be found on the internet at www.sltrib.com/2002/utah/167280.htm. The case is still at the hearing stage.

  This request is currently being processed by the Office of the Administrative Law Judge. Date request received: January 15, 2002.

HHS

HRSA received three requests:

- The National Organization for Research requested a copy of the Health and Health Behaviors Among Youth contract proposal.
- The In Phase International, Inc., asked for documents on the request for proposals for customizing an existing Internet-based system for use by REACH 2010; development of a formula used to calculate indirect medical education payments to children's hospitals; creating a multimedia, interactive, on-line training Web site; and Hospital Performance Improvement Initiative for the Mississippi River Delta Region.
- The Covenant House/Washington requested a sample of a funded Community-Based Abstinence Education grant application that received funding in excess of $500,000.

EDUCATION

January 11, 2002 the Department of Education received a request from Alan C. Miller, Staff Writer, The Los Angeles Times regarding all the travel records from January 22, 2001 to December 31, 2001.

DOJ

- Christopher Farrell, of Judicial Watch, Inc., has requested all records from the Department relating to any communications with Enron executives and any other agency officials regarding the financial status of the Enron Corporation.

- John Mintz, of the Washington Post, has requested copies of the calendars and any other documents which reflect contacts between the Attorney General, Chief of Staff to the Attorney General, Deputy Attorney General, and Chief of Staff to the Deputy Attorney General and officials of Enron.

- Alan C. Miller, of the *Los Angeles Times, has requested copies of all travel records for the Attorney General from January 22, 2000 to December 31, 2001.

DOI

- Imperial Project Gold Mine. Courtney Ann Coyle, Attorney at Law, filed a FOIA request with the Washington Office seeking all documents created on and after January 18, 2001, "referring or relating to the 'Rescission of Record of Decision for the Imperial Project Gold Mine Proposal' signed by Gale A. Norton on November 23, 2001, and referring or relating to the consideration of a new Record of Decision for the Imperial Project Gold Mine Proposal." This request is similar to an earlier request filed by Ms. Coyle in November 2001. A fee waiver was requested. There is related non-FOIA litigation on this subject.

- Suit Filed in U.S. District Court Concerning OSM Response to January 2001 FOIA. On December 19, 2001, citizens for Pennsylvania's Future (PennFuture) filed a complaint in the U.S. District Court of the Middle District of Pennsylvania concerning OSM' s response to a January 29, 2001, FOIA request. PennFuture's FOIA request sought information pertaining to OSM documents and activities including acid mine drainage and related correspondence, Pennsylvania mining program amendments, and OSM oversight evaluation reports. OSM withheld documents under Exemption 5 U.S.C. 552 (b)(5). On July 27, 2001, PennFuture filed an appeal to the FOIA response with the U.S. Department of the Interior Office of Information Services. The period for DOI to issue a final determination on PennFuture's appeal expired and PennFuture has now filed a formal complaint in District Court. Specifically, the appeal alleges that the Department of the Interior failed to provide sound grounds for withholding the requested records and therefore violated its own FOIA regulations.

DOE

- Alan Miller of Los Angeles Times requests all travel records for Secretary of Energy from January 22, 2000 to December 31, 2001.

- Judy Pasternak of Los Angeles Times requests copies of all correspondence to and from DOE regarding Kenneth Lay or Enron Corporation from January 20, 2001 to present.

Yes, Brett. I am the director of the project. Clay Johnson has a full set of the books in his office. Judge Gonzales has the complete one for the Counsel's Office. In addition to the White House and office essays, the full briefing book has around 10 interviews with former Counsels. They are very interesting interviews so they are something to hunt down if you have not read them. A.B. Culvahouse's interview is very good.

At Clay's request, during the transition period I made two sets of the briefing books for the seven offices. Each office had a separate briefing book. The front part was pretty much the same, but the office essay, the organization charts, and the interviews were fitted to the particular offices. Each briefing book is around 400 to 500 pages.

Our website - whitehouse2001.org - has all of the office essays, the White House and transition pieces, and the organization charts. Look under office descriptions for those pieces. The White House and transition ones are featured at the beginning of the website.

We are in the process of shrinking down the transition, White House, and office pieces and putting them in a book but it will not be out until the fall. If you have any trouble getting any of the essays, let me know and I will download them for you and drop them in the White House mail.

Warm Wishes,

Martha

The War Against Terrorism

- The U.S. is Committed to the Humane Treatment of the Detainees at Guantanamo Bay and the Safety of Our Men and Women in Uniform

  - On September 11, thousands of people were killed in terrorist attacks against the United States. As part of the war against terrorism, the United States is holding and questioning al Qaeda and Taliban fighters at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with the purpose of gathering information that will prevent future attacks and bring the terrorists to justice.

  - Taliban, al Qaeda and other detainees at Guantanamo Bay are being treated humanely. They are housed in temporary shelters until more permanent facilities can be arranged.

    - ✓ The detainees are held in a much more hospitable environment than where they were found. They are given three culturally appropriate meals a day, and have daily opportunities to pray, shower, exercise and receive medical attention.

  - The detainees are considered very dangerous – among them are those responsible for the prison uprising in Mazar-e-Sharif and others who have threatened to kill Americans while in Cuba. The U.S. military will transport and hold al Qaeda and Taliban combatants in a way that is safe for both the detainees and the men and women of the U.S. armed forces who come into contact with them.

  - In order to stop other terrorist attacks, detainees will be questioned for intelligence information. Following questioning, a decision will be made as to their disposition. Some may be tried by a military commission. Others could be tried in the U.S. criminal court system, and others may be returned to their countries of nationality for prosecution.

- Military Commissions are an Instrument of Justice in Bringing Foreign Terrorists to Justice

  - The terrorists who threaten us are unlawful combatants -- adversaries who attacked our nation with disregard for the rules of war. As the President has made clear, we will hunt them down wherever they hide. When enemy forces are captured, wherever they are captured, they must then be dealt with. There are a number of tools at the country's disposal for doing so. One of those tools is the establishment of military commissions.

  - The President, as Commander in Chief, issued a military order that would permit individual non-U.S. citizens to be tried by military commissions. The Department of Defense is developing appropriate procedures for commissions that are measured, balanced, thoughtful and reflect our country's values.

  - Military commissions have been used in times of war since the founding of this nation. George Washington used them during the Revolutionary War. Abraham Lincoln used them during the Civil War. President Franklin Roosevelt used them during World War II.

  - There are a number of compelling reasons for using military commissions instead of civilian courts to try unlawful belligerents in times of war, including:

- ✓ We can better protect civilian judges, jurors and courts from terrorist threats and assure the security of the trial itself. Because of the ongoing threat from terrorists, the risks to jurors are of a kind that military officers are trained and prepared to confront, but that are not normally imposed on jurors in civilian trials. For example, the judge who handled the trial for the 1993 World Trade Center attack, is still under 24-hour protection by federal marshals and probably will be for the rest of his life.

- ✓ Military tribunals permit more inclusive rules of evidence, a flexibility critical in wartime when it may be difficult to establish chains of custody for documents or to locate witnesses. Military commissions allow those judging the case to hear all the evidence, including evidence obtained under conditions of war -- evidence that could be critical to obtaining a conviction.

- ✓ Military commissions allow the use of classified information without endangering sources and methods. During the course of a civilian trial, prosecutors could be faced with a situation where they would have to use classified information that would expose how the U.S. monitors terrorist activities and communications. They could be forced to allow terrorists to go free or to offer them lighter sentences in order to protect a source that is critical to our national security.

- Military commissions require certain protections that guarantee full and fair trials, including right to counsel and presumption of innocence.

- We are at war with an enemy that has flagrantly violated the rules of war. They do not wear uniforms. They hide in caves abroad and among us here at home. They target civilians and intend to attack us again.

- Military commissions are one of many instruments we may use to bring terrorists to justice. We are confident that we will develop a process that Americans will have confidence in and which is fully consistent with the principles of justice and fairness our country is known for throughout the world.

The War Against Terrorism

- The U.S. is Committed to the Humane Treatment of the Detainees at Guantanamo Bay and the Safety of Our Men and Women in Uniform

  - On September 11, thousands of people were killed in terrorist attacks against the United States. As part of the war against terrorism, the United States is holding and questioning al Qaeda and Taliban fighters at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with the purpose of gathering information that will prevent future attacks and bring the terrorists to justice.

  - Taliban, al Qaeda and other detainees at Guantanamo Bay are being treated humanely. They are housed in temporary shelters until more permanent facilities can be arranged.

    - ✓ The detainees are held in a much more hospitable environment than where they were found. They are given three culturally appropriate meals a day, and have daily opportunities to pray, shower, exercise and receive medical attention.

  - The detainees are considered very dangerous – among them are those responsible for the prison uprising in Mazar-e-Sharif and others who have threatened to kill Americans while in Cuba. The U.S. military will transport and hold al Qaeda and Taliban combatants in a way that is safe for both the detainees and the men and women of the U.S. armed forces who come into contact with them.

  - In order to stop other terrorist attacks, detainees will be questioned for intelligence information. Following questioning, a decision will be made as to their disposition. Some may be tried by a military commission. Others could be tried in the U.S. criminal court system, and others may be returned to their countries of nationality for prosecution.

- Military Commissions are an Instrument of Justice in Bringing Foreign Terrorists to Justice

  - The terrorists who threaten us are unlawful combatants -- adversaries who attacked our nation with disregard for the rules of war. As the President has made clear, we will hunt them down wherever they hide. When enemy forces are captured, wherever they are captured, they must then be dealt with. There are a number of tools at the country's disposal for doing so. One of those tools is the establishment of military commissions.

  - The President, as Commander in Chief, issued a military order that would permit individual non-U.S. citizens to be tried by military commissions. The Department of Defense is developing appropriate procedures for commissions that are measured, balanced, thoughtful and reflect our country's values.

  - Military commissions have been used in times of war since the founding of this nation. George Washington used them during the Revolutionary War. Abraham Lincoln used them during the Civil War. President Franklin Roosevelt used them during World War II.

  - There are a number of compelling reasons for using military commissions instead of civilian courts to try unlawful belligerents in times of war, including:

- ✓ We can better protect civilian judges, jurors and courts from terrorist threats and assure the security of the trial itself. Because of the ongoing threat from terrorists, the risks to jurors are of a kind that military officers are trained and prepared to confront, but that are not normally imposed on jurors in civilian trials. For example, the judge who handled the trial for the 1993 World Trade Center attack, is still under 24-hour protection by federal marshals and probably will be for the rest of his life.

- ✓ Military tribunals permit more inclusive rules of evidence, a flexibility critical in wartime when it may be difficult to establish chains of custody for documents or to locate witnesses. Military commissions allow those judging the case to hear all the evidence, including evidence obtained under conditions of war -- evidence that could be critical to obtaining a conviction.

- ✓ Military commissions allow the use of classified information without endangering sources and methods. During the course of a civilian trial, prosecutors could be faced with a situation where they would have to use classified information that would expose how the U.S. monitors terrorist activities and communications. They could be forced to allow terrorists to go free or to offer them lighter sentences in order to protect a source that is critical to our national security.

- Military commissions require certain protections that guarantee full and fair trials, including right to counsel and presumption of innocence.

- We are at war with an enemy that has flagrantly violated the rules of war. They do not wear uniforms. They hide in caves abroad and among us here at home. They target civilians and intend to attack us again.

- Military commissions are one of many instruments we may use to bring terrorists to justice. We are confident that we will develop a process that Americans will have confidence in and which is fully consistent with the principles of justice and fairness our country is known for throughout the world.

The War Against Terrorism

- The U.S. is Committed to the Humane Treatment of the Detainees at Guantanamo Bay and the Safety of Our Men and Women in Uniform

  - On September 11, thousands of people were killed in terrorist attacks against the United States. As part of the war against terrorism, the United States is holding and questioning al Qaeda and Taliban fighters at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with the purpose of gathering information that will prevent future attacks and bring the terrorists to justice.

  - Taliban, al Qaeda and other detainees at Guantanamo Bay are being treated humanely. They are housed in temporary shelters until more permanent facilities can be arranged.

    - ✓ The detainees are held in a much more hospitable environment than where they were found. They are given three culturally appropriate meals a day, and have daily opportunities to pray, shower, exercise and receive medical attention.

  - The detainees are considered very dangerous – among them are those responsible for the prison uprising in Mazar-e-Sharif and others who have threatened to kill Americans while in Cuba. The U.S. military will transport and hold al Qaeda and Taliban combatants in a way that is safe for both the detainees and the men and women of the U.S. armed forces who come into contact with them.

  - In order to stop other terrorist attacks, detainees will be questioned for intelligence information. Following questioning, a decision will be made as to their disposition. Some may be tried by a military commission. Others could be tried in the U.S. criminal court system, and others may be returned to their countries of nationality for prosecution.

- Military Commissions are an Instrument of Justice in Bringing Foreign Terrorists to Justice

  - The terrorists who threaten us are unlawful combatants -- adversaries who attacked our nation with disregard for the rules of war. As the President has made clear, we will hunt them down wherever they hide. When enemy forces are captured, wherever they are captured, they must then be dealt with. There are a number of tools at the country's disposal for doing so. One of those tools is the establishment of military commissions.

  - The President, as Commander in Chief, issued a military order that would permit individual non-U.S. citizens to be tried by military commissions. The Department of Defense is developing appropriate procedures for commissions that are measured, balanced, thoughtful and reflect our country's values.

  - Military commissions have been used in times of war since the founding of this nation. George Washington used them during the Revolutionary War. Abraham Lincoln used them during the Civil War. President Franklin Roosevelt used them during World War II.

  - There are a number of compelling reasons for using military commissions instead of civilian courts to try unlawful belligerents in times of war, including:

- ✓ We can better protect civilian judges, jurors and courts from terrorist threats and assure the security of the trial itself. Because of the ongoing threat from terrorists, the risks to jurors are of a kind that military officers are trained and prepared to confront, but that are not normally imposed on jurors in civilian trials. For example, the judge who handled the trial for the 1993 World Trade Center attack, is still under 24-hour protection by federal marshals and probably will be for the rest of his life.

- ✓ Military tribunals permit more inclusive rules of evidence, a flexibility critical in wartime when it may be difficult to establish chains of custody for documents or to locate witnesses. Military commissions allow those judging the case to hear all the evidence, including evidence obtained under conditions of war -- evidence that could be critical to obtaining a conviction.

- ✓ Military commissions allow the use of classified information without endangering sources and methods. During the course of a civilian trial, prosecutors could be faced with a situation where they would have to use classified information that would expose how the U.S. monitors terrorist activities and communications. They could be forced to allow terrorists to go free or to offer them lighter sentences in order to protect a source that is critical to our national security.

- Military commissions require certain protections that guarantee full and fair trials, including right to counsel and presumption of innocence.

- We are at war with an enemy that has flagrantly violated the rules of war. They do not wear uniforms. They hide in caves abroad and among us here at home. They target civilians and intend to attack us again.

- Military commissions are one of many instruments we may use to bring terrorists to justice. We are confident that we will develop a process that Americans will have confidence in and which is fully consistent with the principles of justice and fairness our country is known for throughout the world.

The War Against Terrorism

- The U.S. is Committed to the Humane Treatment of the Detainees at Guantanamo Bay and the Safety of Our Men and Women in Uniform

  - On September 11, thousands of people were killed in terrorist attacks against the United States. As part of the war against terrorism, the United States is holding and questioning al Qaeda and Taliban fighters at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with the purpose of gathering information that will prevent future attacks and bring the terrorists to justice.

  - Taliban, al Qaeda and other detainees at Guantanamo Bay are being treated humanely. They are housed in temporary shelters until more permanent facilities can be arranged.

    - ✓ The detainees are held in a much more hospitable environment than where they were found. They are given three culturally appropriate meals a day, and have daily opportunities to pray, shower, exercise and receive medical attention.

  - The detainees are considered very dangerous – among them are those responsible for the prison uprising in Mazar-e-Sharif and others who have threatened to kill Americans while in Cuba. The U.S. military will transport and hold al Qaeda and Taliban combatants in a way that is safe for both the detainees and the men and women of the U.S. armed forces who come into contact with them.

  - In order to stop other terrorist attacks, detainees will be questioned for intelligence information. Following questioning, a decision will be made as to their disposition. Some may be tried by a military commission. Others could be tried in the U.S. criminal court system, and others may be returned to their countries of nationality for prosecution.

- Military Commissions are an Instrument of Justice in Bringing Foreign Terrorists to Justice

  - The terrorists who threaten us are unlawful combatants -- adversaries who attacked our nation with disregard for the rules of war. As the President has made clear, we will hunt them down wherever they hide. When enemy forces are captured, wherever they are captured, they must then be dealt with. There are a number of tools at the country's disposal for doing so. One of those tools is the establishment of military commissions.

  - The President, as Commander in Chief, issued a military order that would permit individual non-U.S. citizens to be tried by military commissions. The Department of Defense is developing appropriate procedures for commissions that are measured, balanced, thoughtful and reflect our country's values.

  - Military commissions have been used in times of war since the founding of this nation. George Washington used them during the Revolutionary War. Abraham Lincoln used them during the Civil War. President Franklin Roosevelt used them during World War II.

  - There are a number of compelling reasons for using military commissions instead of civilian courts to try unlawful belligerents in times of war, including:

- ✓ We can better protect civilian judges, jurors and courts from terrorist threats and assure the security of the trial itself. Because of the ongoing threat from terrorists, the risks to jurors are of a kind that military officers are trained and prepared to confront, but that are not normally imposed on jurors in civilian trials. For example, the judge who handled the trial for the 1993 World Trade Center attack, is still under 24-hour protection by federal marshals and probably will be for the rest of his life.

- ✓ Military tribunals permit more inclusive rules of evidence, a flexibility critical in wartime when it may be difficult to establish chains of custody for documents or to locate witnesses. Military commissions allow those judging the case to hear all the evidence, including evidence obtained under conditions of war -- evidence that could be critical to obtaining a conviction.

- ✓ Military commissions allow the use of classified information without endangering sources and methods. During the course of a civilian trial, prosecutors could be faced with a situation where they would have to use classified information that would expose how the U.S. monitors terrorist activities and communications. They could be forced to allow terrorists to go free or to offer them lighter sentences in order to protect a source that is critical to our national security.

- Military commissions require certain protections that guarantee full and fair trials, including right to counsel and presumption of innocence.

- We are at war with an enemy that has flagrantly violated the rules of war. They do not wear uniforms. They hide in caves abroad and among us here at home. They target civilians and intend to attack us again.

- Military commissions are one of many instruments we may use to bring terrorists to justice. We are confident that we will develop a process that Americans will have confidence in and which is fully consistent with the principles of justice and fairness our country is known for throughout the world.

The War Against Terrorism

- The U.S. is Committed to the Humane Treatment of the Detainees at Guantanamo Bay and the Safety of Our Men and Women in Uniform

  - On September 11, thousands of people were killed in terrorist attacks against the United States. As part of the war against terrorism, the United States is holding and questioning al Qaeda and Taliban fighters at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with the purpose of gathering information that will prevent future attacks and bring the terrorists to justice.

  - Taliban, al Qaeda and other detainees at Guantanamo Bay are being treated humanely. They are housed in temporary shelters until more permanent facilities can be arranged.

    - ✓ The detainees are held in a much more hospitable environment than where they were found. They are given three culturally appropriate meals a day, and have daily opportunities to pray, shower, exercise and receive medical attention.

  - The detainees are considered very dangerous – among them are those responsible for the prison uprising in Mazar-e-Sharif and others who have threatened to kill Americans while in Cuba. The U.S. military will transport and hold al Qaeda and Taliban combatants in a way that is safe for both the detainees and the men and women of the U.S. armed forces who come into contact with them.

  - In order to stop other terrorist attacks, detainees will be questioned for intelligence information. Following questioning, a decision will be made as to their disposition. Some may be tried by a military commission. Others could be tried in the U.S. criminal court system, and others may be returned to their countries of nationality for prosecution.

- Military Commissions are an Instrument of Justice in Bringing Foreign Terrorists to Justice

  - The terrorists who threaten us are unlawful combatants -- adversaries who attacked our nation with disregard for the rules of war. As the President has made clear, we will hunt them down wherever they hide. When enemy forces are captured, wherever they are captured, they must then be dealt with. There are a number of tools at the country's disposal for doing so. One of those tools is the establishment of military commissions.

  - The President, as Commander in Chief, issued a military order that would permit individual non-U.S. citizens to be tried by military commissions. The Department of Defense is developing appropriate procedures for commissions that are measured, balanced, thoughtful and reflect our country's values.

  - Military commissions have been used in times of war since the founding of this nation. George Washington used them during the Revolutionary War. Abraham Lincoln used them during the Civil War. President Franklin Roosevelt used them during World War II.

  - There are a number of compelling reasons for using military commissions instead of civilian courts to try unlawful belligerents in times of war, including:

- ✓ We can better protect civilian judges, jurors and courts from terrorist threats and assure the security of the trial itself. Because of the ongoing threat from terrorists, the risks to jurors are of a kind that military officers are trained and prepared to confront, but that are not normally imposed on jurors in civilian trials. For example, the judge who handled the trial for the 1993 World Trade Center attack, is still under 24-hour protection by federal marshals and probably will be for the rest of his life.

- ✓ Military tribunals permit more inclusive rules of evidence, a flexibility critical in wartime when it may be difficult to establish chains of custody for documents or to locate witnesses. Military commissions allow those judging the case to hear all the evidence, including evidence obtained under conditions of war -- evidence that could be critical to obtaining a conviction.

- ✓ Military commissions allow the use of classified information without endangering sources and methods. During the course of a civilian trial, prosecutors could be faced with a situation where they would have to use classified information that would expose how the U.S. monitors terrorist activities and communications. They could be forced to allow terrorists to go free or to offer them lighter sentences in order to protect a source that is critical to our national security.

- Military commissions require certain protections that guarantee full and fair trials, including right to counsel and presumption of innocence.

- We are at war with an enemy that has flagrantly violated the rules of war. They do not wear uniforms. They hide in caves abroad and among us here at home. They target civilians and intend to attack us again.

- Military commissions are one of many instruments we may use to bring terrorists to justice. We are confident that we will develop a process that Americans will have confidence in and which is fully consistent with the principles of justice and fairness our country is known for throughout the world.

The War Against Terrorism

- The U.S. is Committed to the Humane Treatment of the Detainees at Guantanamo Bay and the Safety of Our Men and Women in Uniform

  - On September 11, thousands of people were killed in terrorist attacks against the United States. As part of the war against terrorism, the United States is holding and questioning al Qaeda and Taliban fighters at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with the purpose of gathering information that will prevent future attacks and bring the terrorists to justice.

  - Taliban, al Qaeda and other detainees at Guantanamo Bay are being treated humanely. They are housed in temporary shelters until more permanent facilities can be arranged.

    - ✓ The detainees are held in a much more hospitable environment than where they were found. They are given three culturally appropriate meals a day, and have daily opportunities to pray, shower, exercise and receive medical attention.

  - The detainees are considered very dangerous – among them are those responsible for the prison uprising in Mazar-e-Sharif and others who have threatened to kill Americans while in Cuba. The U.S. military will transport and hold al Qaeda and Taliban combatants in a way that is safe for both the detainees and the men and women of the U.S. armed forces who come into contact with them.

  - In order to stop other terrorist attacks, detainees will be questioned for intelligence information. Following questioning, a decision will be made as to their disposition. Some may be tried by a military commission. Others could be tried in the U.S. criminal court system, and others may be returned to their countries of nationality for prosecution.

- Military Commissions are an Instrument of Justice in Bringing Foreign Terrorists to Justice

  - The terrorists who threaten us are unlawful combatants -- adversaries who attacked our nation with disregard for the rules of war. As the President has made clear, we will hunt them down wherever they hide. When enemy forces are captured, wherever they are captured, they must then be dealt with. There are a number of tools at the country's disposal for doing so. One of those tools is the establishment of military commissions.

  - The President, as Commander in Chief, issued a military order that would permit individual non-U.S. citizens to be tried by military commissions. The Department of Defense is developing appropriate procedures for commissions that are measured, balanced, thoughtful and reflect our country's values.

  - Military commissions have been used in times of war since the founding of this nation. George Washington used them during the Revolutionary War. Abraham Lincoln used them during the Civil War. President Franklin Roosevelt used them during World War II.

  - There are a number of compelling reasons for using military commissions instead of civilian courts to try unlawful belligerents in times of war, including:

- ✓ We can better protect civilian judges, jurors and courts from terrorist threats and assure the security of the trial itself. Because of the ongoing threat from terrorists, the risks to jurors are of a kind that military officers are trained and prepared to confront, but that are not normally imposed on jurors in civilian trials. For example, the judge who handled the trial for the 1993 World Trade Center attack, is still under 24-hour protection by federal marshals and probably will be for the rest of his life.

- ✓ Military tribunals permit more inclusive rules of evidence, a flexibility critical in wartime when it may be difficult to establish chains of custody for documents or to locate witnesses. Military commissions allow those judging the case to hear all the evidence, including evidence obtained under conditions of war -- evidence that could be critical to obtaining a conviction.

- ✓ Military commissions allow the use of classified information without endangering sources and methods. During the course of a civilian trial, prosecutors could be faced with a situation where they would have to use classified information that would expose how the U.S. monitors terrorist activities and communications. They could be forced to allow terrorists to go free or to offer them lighter sentences in order to protect a source that is critical to our national security.

- Military commissions require certain protections that guarantee full and fair trials, including right to counsel and presumption of innocence.

- We are at war with an enemy that has flagrantly violated the rules of war. They do not wear uniforms. They hide in caves abroad and among us here at home. They target civilians and intend to attack us again.

- Military commissions are one of many instruments we may use to bring terrorists to justice. We are confident that we will develop a process that Americans will have confidence in and which is fully consistent with the principles of justice and fairness our country is known for throughout the world.

The War Against Terrorism

- The U.S. is Committed to the Humane Treatment of the Detainees at Guantanamo Bay and the Safety of Our Men and Women in Uniform

  - On September 11, thousands of people were killed in terrorist attacks against the United States. As part of the war against terrorism, the United States is holding and questioning al Qaeda and Taliban fighters at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, with the purpose of gathering information that will prevent future attacks and bring the terrorists to justice.

  - Taliban, al Qaeda and other detainees at Guantanamo Bay are being treated humanely. They are housed in temporary shelters until more permanent facilities can be arranged.

    - ✓ The detainees are held in a much more hospitable environment than where they were found. They are given three culturally appropriate meals a day, and have daily opportunities to pray, shower, exercise and receive medical attention.

  - The detainees are considered very dangerous – among them are those responsible for the prison uprising in Mazar-e-Sharif and others who have threatened to kill Americans while in Cuba. The U.S. military will transport and hold al Qaeda and Taliban combatants in a way that is safe for both the detainees and the men and women of the U.S. armed forces who come into contact with them.

  - In order to stop other terrorist attacks, detainees will be questioned for intelligence information. Following questioning, a decision will be made as to their disposition. Some may be tried by a military commission. Others could be tried in the U.S. criminal court system, and others may be returned to their countries of nationality for prosecution.

- Military Commissions are an Instrument of Justice in Bringing Foreign Terrorists to Justice

  - The terrorists who threaten us are unlawful combatants -- adversaries who attacked our nation with disregard for the rules of war. As the President has made clear, we will hunt them down wherever they hide. When enemy forces are captured, wherever they are captured, they must then be dealt with. There are a number of tools at the country's disposal for doing so. One of those tools is the establishment of military commissions.

  - The President, as Commander in Chief, issued a military order that would permit individual non-U.S. citizens to be tried by military commissions. The Department of Defense is developing appropriate procedures for commissions that are measured, balanced, thoughtful and reflect our country's values.

  - Military commissions have been used in times of war since the founding of this nation. George Washington used them during the Revolutionary War. Abraham Lincoln used them during the Civil War. President Franklin Roosevelt used them during World War II.

  - There are a number of compelling reasons for using military commissions instead of civilian courts to try unlawful belligerents in times of war, including:

- ✓ We can better protect civilian judges, jurors and courts from terrorist threats and assure the security of the trial itself. Because of the ongoing threat from terrorists, the risks to jurors are of a kind that military officers are trained and prepared to confront, but that are not normally imposed on jurors in civilian trials. For example, the judge who handled the trial for the 1993 World Trade Center attack, is still under 24-hour protection by federal marshals and probably will be for the rest of his life.

- ✓ Military tribunals permit more inclusive rules of evidence, a flexibility critical in wartime when it may be difficult to establish chains of custody for documents or to locate witnesses. Military commissions allow those judging the case to hear all the evidence, including evidence obtained under conditions of war -- evidence that could be critical to obtaining a conviction.

- ✓ Military commissions allow the use of classified information without endangering sources and methods. During the course of a civilian trial, prosecutors could be faced with a situation where they would have to use classified information that would expose how the U.S. monitors terrorist activities and communications. They could be forced to allow terrorists to go free or to offer them lighter sentences in order to protect a source that is critical to our national security.

- Military commissions require certain protections that guarantee full and fair trials, including right to counsel and presumption of innocence.

- We are at war with an enemy that has flagrantly violated the rules of war. They do not wear uniforms. They hide in caves abroad and among us here at home. They target civilians and intend to attack us again.

- Military commissions are one of many instruments we may use to bring terrorists to justice. We are confident that we will develop a process that Americans will have confidence in and which is fully consistent with the principles of justice and fairness our country is known for throughout the world.

WEEK IN REVIEW ON TAX INCREASES

First...

Senator Tom Daschle attacked tax cuts blaming them for the recession (1/4/02).

Then...

Min. Leader Dick Gephardt: "I have not heard one Democrat say he or she wants to raise taxes." (1/7/02, US Newswire)

Then...

Senator Ted Kennedy proposes tax increases on the American people in a speech at the National Press Club (1/16/02)

Then...

"[In contrast with Sen. Kennedy] Bush seems more in tune with average Americans. Those surveyed in the IBD/TIPP poll say overwhelmingly tax cuts would be a smart move. Asked to rank possible policy actions to end the recession, 67% to 75% of those queried say tax cuts for individuals and businesses would be "very effective" or "somewhat effective" in stimulating economic growth" (Investors Business Daily, 1/17/02)

THIS WEEK

This week President Bush traveled the country to talk to Americans about his aggressive bipartisan economic growth agenda that creates jobs, helps unemployed workers get back to work, increases trade and lowers taxes.

Also this week, Senator Ted Kennedy unveiled his tax increase package that raises taxes by delaying marginal rate reductions and reinstating the death tax.

- America's Reaction? According to the latest USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll, by 23% the public favors President Bush over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction – 59% to 36%.

- The President's Reaction? The President opposes tax increases because he believes the worst thing we could do during tough economic times is raise taxes and have the government take more money from Americans.

- The Pundits Reaction? Frank Rich said on Imus in the Morning (1/17/02): "Let's face it -- we all know we were having this recession well before the current president took office--while I'm not a fan of this tax cut, most of it hasn't happened yet -- so really that formulation of Daschle's reflects a kind of intellectual bankruptcy in the democratic party -- they really don't seem to have a plan, they don't have many ideas so they are sniping around the edges of Bush's policies without any really interesting or dynamic alternative -- just this kind of stuff which really doesn't make a dent in the issue and it is bogus as often is the case."

- Democrat Reaction? As the week comes to a close, Democrats find themselves splintered into 3 groups:

  - ✓ The House and Senate Members who support tax increases – including Sens. Kennedy and Clinton
  - ✓ The 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Dems who voted for tax cuts.
  - ✓ The Senators who attack tax cuts but offer no other economic growth agenda – including Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

- The President's approval rating has been above 80% for twelve consecutive Gallup polls spanning 18 weeks – the longest duration of such presidential ratings in history.

LEGISLATIVE REFERRAL MEMORANDUM

TO: Legislative Liaison Officer - See Distribution below

FROM: Ingrid M. Schroeder (for) Assistant Director for Legislative Reference OMB CONTACT: Kathryn C. Thompson
PHONE: (202)395-7596 FAX: (202)395-6148

SUBJECT: DEFENSE Testimony on Efforts Related to the Illnesses and Undiagnosed Physical Symptoms of Gulf War Veterans

DEADLINE: 4 p.m. Tuesday, January 22, 2002

In accordance with OMB Circular A-19, OMB requests the views of your agency on the above subject before advising on its relationship to the program of the President. Please advise us if this item will affect direct spending or receipts for purposes of the "Pay-As-You-Go" provisions of Title XIII of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

COMMENTS: This testimony was prepared for a January 24th hearing before a House Veterans' Affairs subcommittee. The testimony discusses DoD's efforts related to the illnesses and undiagnosed physical symptoms of Gulf War veterans. VA will also testify at this hearing, and their testimony will be circulated later.

House Committee on Veterans Affairs Subcommittee on Health

Statement by
Ms. Ellen Embrey
Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Force Health Protection and Readiness

Department of Defense

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the opportunity to appear before the Subcommittee on Health to report on the Department of Defense's continuing efforts related to the illnesses and undiagnosed physical symptoms of veterans of the Gulf War and to provide information on the status of some deployment health surveillance programs.

First, let me emphasize that the Department of Defense is committed to providing a world-class health care system for its servicemembers and their families. This commitment is especially strong today when our soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen are deployed throughout the world in support of Operation Enduring Freedom and other contingencies. As America's sons and daughters serve and protect our nation, I recognize they may encounter unique challenges from operational or environmental conditions as well as from combat. The Gulf War and subsequent deployments to Somalia, Bosnia, and Kosovo provided the Department of Defense insights into the importance of deployment health protection. In response, we have changed processes, revised procedures, and invested heavily in research to develop more effective force health protection measures and equipment for our people; but our work continues. We are assessing and monitoring current deployments and are committed to provide for all who have health concerns related to deployments.

The experiences of the Gulf War focused our attention on traditional and non-traditional challenges to deployment health. Recognizing the seriousness of these challenges, the Department of Defense sought the assistance of the Institute of Medicine. In a comprehensive three-year study, the Institute of Medicine validated the challenges facing us and recommended strategies to better protect the health of the forces in the future. We have addressed many of these challenges and continue now to build the broad and integrated systems that will enhance prevention of, accelerate surveillance for, and increase effectiveness of treatment for deployment-related illnesses and injuries.

In 2000, the Joint Staff created and established a vision for Force Health Protection to support Joint Vision 2020. This vision encompasses a set of health programs that provide an integrated and focused approach to protect and sustain the Department's most important resources—its servicemembers and their families. Force Health Protection is built on these pillars—promoting and sustaining a fit and healthy force, casualty prevention and casualty care and management. Based on lessons of the Gulf War and subsequent deployments, this vision takes a life-cycle, long-term approach to protecting the health of those who serve. However, this vision places its most intense focus on continuous improvement to the Military Health System's doctrine, organizations, people, equipment, and technology to support the readiness and effectiveness of the fighting forces when they deploy. It require the monitoring and surveillance of threats and the forces in military operations, enhancing commanders' and servicemembers' awareness of threats before they affect the health of the force, and providing essential care of injured and ill in a theater as well as evacuation for definitive medical care. These key areas are being rapidly implemented in Afghanistan and in other deployments today. Health Affairs, the Joint Staff, Commanders-in-Chief, and the military services are indivisible partners within the Department of Defense in this effort.

The events of the Gulf War also caused the Department to take a hard look at occupational and environmental health surveillance issues with a focus on casualty prevention. To that goal, we have designated the U.S. Army Center for Health Promotion and Preventive Medicine as the Department's lead agency to provide a comprehensive environmental surveillance program that:

- Identifies risks for diseases and injuries for deployed forces;
- Identifies significant environmental and occupational hazards;
- Determines the impact of disease or non-battle injury (DNBI) on readiness;
- Provides support for commanders, policy makers, and others who can act to prevent diseases and injury; and
- Monitors the effectiveness of prevention strategies and programs.

Another area where we focused attention was medical logistics. Before the Gulf War, the depot system was the primary means of obtaining medical supplies. Since then, the Department has observed tremendous improvement through the implementation of the tri-service Wholesale Medical Logistics Readiness Plan. The foundation of the plan is the use of commercial vendors for providing medical materiel and assets during peacetime and contingency operations. Today, the Department is better prepared to meet the medical materiel requirements.

Issues and concerns from the Gulf War remain and we intend to continue our vigorous efforts to address and resolve these issues. We are equally committed to broaden those efforts to include issues and concerns arising from current and future deployments. Dr. Winkenwerder takes seriously his role as the Special Assistant for Gulf War Illnesses, Medical Readiness, and Military Deployments and has begun to focus on deployment health issues as they affect the entire Military Health System.

Dr. Winkenwerder, as the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs, has aligned the former staff of the Office of the Special Assistant into a Deployment Health Support Directorate, which will continue to provide support and outreach to all those with issues associated with any deployment. Through my office, that directorate, in cooperation with the Joint Staff and the military services, will provide critical assessments of deployment health-related processes and issues. As a result, we can more closely monitor force deployment health protection issues. Improving the adequacy of environmental surveillance, completeness of individual medical records, and implementation of other lessons learned will allow the Military Health System to be responsive to the health concerns of our servicemembers, veterans, and their families.

One area in which we continue to advocate the health concerns of servicemembers and veterans is through our support of medical research. As you may know, Health Affairs and the Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Science and Technology participate on behalf of the Department on the interagency Research Working Group. This group coordinates and sponsors Gulf-War-related medical research for the Departments of Defense, Veterans Affairs, and Health and Human Services. I believe the veterans are best served by following accepted scientific processes for selection and funding of medical research. We are committed to investigating the possible causes of illnesses and treatments for medically unexplained physical symptoms that are affecting veterans.

We have begun research on the health of military personnel over their entire careers and beyond. A prospective study of U.S. military forces, called the Millennium Cohort Study, responds to the need for a longitudinal study to assess the health impact of major elements of military service, especially deployments and their associated risks. This study also responds to recommendations from Congress and the Institute of Medicine to systematically collect population-based demographic and health data to evaluate the health of servicemembers throughout their military careers and after leaving military service. This study will eventually use a cross-sectional sample of over 140,000 military personnel who will be followed prospectively every three years over a 21-year period through 2022.

Additionally, in response to veteran concerns and congressional direction, we have established three centers focused on deployment health issues. These centers provide research, medical surveillance, and clinical care services. For example, the Center for Deployment Health Research in San Diego has established a DoD birth defects registry and monitors reproductive outcomes among all military families, including those of personnel who have deployed.

The Department also has taken steps to ensure that we deploy fit and healthy military personnel, that we monitor their health while they are deployed, and that we assess their health when they return. The Center for Deployment Health Surveillance at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington D.C. is our key to tracking and analyzing these deployment health data. Our policy and practice is to assess potential health threats in areas of deployment and minimize such threats where feasible. All of these principles are incorporated in DoD policy letters and directives and into a policy memorandum of the Joint Staff. The Commanders in Chief and their component commands, through the extensive professional efforts of the military services' medical departments, execute these policies and directives in the field.

Because we are concerned about the health of veterans, both during their military service and after they have left active duty, we work closely with the Department of Veterans Affairs initiating procedures and programs to facilitate the smooth transition of servicemembers' records to the VA.

As documented for Gulf War veterans, the majority of ailments found in deployment participants have been medical conditions seen commonly in other military, veteran, and civilian outpatient populations. The Deployment Health Clinical Center at Walter Reed[4] Army Medical Center, in cooperation with the Department of Veterans Affairs, has developed and tested a patient-oriented, evidence-based clinical practice guideline to aid primary caregivers in the assessment of illnesses that occur after deployments. Implementation of this guideline will begin next month. My expectation is that all beneficiaries who have been involved with deployments – including families of deployed servicemembers – will receive health care that is fully responsive to any special health issues that arise after deployments. I believe this clinical practice guideline will foster an important partnership between the individual with the health concern and the caregiver who directs individualized treatment for better continuity of care.

In addition, the Department continues to work towards fielding medical information systems to provide complete patient health records electronically, including all immunizations. Such systems will greatly facilitate the preservation of individual health records, epidemiological studies of military health, and transfer of health records to the Department of Veterans Affairs.

We will continue our close collaboration with the VA to improve medical service to our veterans. In addition to the clinical practice guideline, we have instituted common separation medical examinations, which efficiently serve the needs of veterans, the DoD, and the VA. Another result of the DoD-VA partnership is "FEDS HEAL." This program establishes a network that links the provider resources of the VA and the Department of Health and Human Services Division of Federal Occupational Health to furnish physical examination, immunization, dental screening, designated dental treatment, and other specified diagnostic services to units and individuals in the National Guard and Reserve components. I fully expect additional successes from our continuing collaboration with the VA.

In conclusion, based on observations during our visits to operational units of the Department of Defense, we believe the military health services are totally committed to ensuring the health of our military forces, and we are committed to doing everything in our power to provide a world-class health care system for our servicemembers, veterans, and their families.

WEEK IN REVIEW ON TAX INCREASES

First...

Senator Tom Daschle attacked tax cuts blaming them for the recession (1/4/02).

Then...

Min. Leader Dick Gephardt: "I have not heard one Democrat say he or she wants to raise taxes." (1/7/02, US Newswire)

Then...

Senator Ted Kennedy proposes tax increases on the American people in a speech at the National Press Club (1/16/02)

Then...

"[In contrast with Sen. Kennedy] Bush seems more in tune with average Americans. Those surveyed in the IBD/TIPP poll say overwhelmingly tax cuts would be a smart move. Asked to rank possible policy actions to end the recession, 67% to 75% of those queried say tax cuts for individuals and businesses would be "very effective" or "somewhat effective" in stimulating economic growth" (Investors Business Daily, 1/17/02)

THIS WEEK

This week President Bush traveled the country to talk to Americans about his aggressive bipartisan economic growth agenda that creates jobs, helps unemployed workers get back to work, increases trade and lowers taxes.

Also this week, Senator Ted Kennedy unveiled his tax increase package that raises taxes by delaying marginal rate reductions and reinstating the death tax.

- America's Reaction? According to the latest USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll, by 23% the public favors President Bush over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction – 59% to 36%.

- The President's Reaction? The President opposes tax increases because he believes the worst thing we could do during tough economic times is raise taxes and have the government take more money from Americans.

- The Pundits Reaction? Frank Rich said on Imus in the Morning (1/17/02): "Let's face it -- we all know we were having this recession well before the current president took office--while I'm not a fan of this tax cut, most of it hasn't happened yet -- so really that formulation of Daschle's reflects a kind of intellectual bankruptcy in the democratic party -- they really don't seem to have a plan, they don't have many ideas so they are sniping around the edges of Bush's policies without any really interesting or dynamic alternative -- just this kind of stuff which really doesn't make a dent in the issue and it is bogus as often is the case."

- Democrat Reaction? As the week comes to a close, Democrats find themselves splintered into 3 groups:

  - ✓ The House and Senate Members who support tax increases – including Sens. Kennedy and Clinton
  - ✓ The 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Dems who voted for tax cuts.
  - ✓ The Senators who attack tax cuts but offer no other economic growth agenda – including Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

- The President's approval rating has been above 80% for twelve consecutive Gallup polls spanning 18 weeks – the longest duration of such presidential ratings in history.

WEEK IN REVIEW ON TAX INCREASES

First...

Senator Tom Daschle attacked tax cuts blaming them for the recession (1/4/02).

Then...

Min. Leader Dick Gephardt: "I have not heard one Democrat say he or she wants to raise taxes." (1/7/02, US Newswire)

Then...

Senator Ted Kennedy proposes tax increases on the American people in a speech at the National Press Club (1/16/02)

Then...

"[In contrast with Sen. Kennedy] Bush seems more in tune with average Americans. Those surveyed in the IBD/TIPP poll say overwhelmingly tax cuts would be a smart move. Asked to rank possible policy actions to end the recession, 67% to 75% of those queried say tax cuts for individuals and businesses would be "very effective" or "somewhat effective" in stimulating economic growth" (Investors Business Daily, 1/17/02)

THIS WEEK

This week President Bush traveled the country to talk to Americans about his aggressive bipartisan economic growth agenda that creates jobs, helps unemployed workers get back to work, increases trade and lowers taxes.

Also this week, Senator Ted Kennedy unveiled his tax increase package that raises taxes by delaying marginal rate reductions and reinstating the death tax.

- America's Reaction? According to the latest USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll, by 23% the public favors President Bush over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction – 59% to 36%.

- The President's Reaction? The President opposes tax increases because he believes the worst thing we could do during tough economic times is raise taxes and have the government take more money from Americans.

- The Pundits Reaction? Frank Rich said on Imus in the Morning (1/17/02): "Let's face it -- we all know we were having this recession well before the current president took office--while I'm not a fan of this tax cut, most of it hasn't happened yet -- so really that formulation of Daschle's reflects a kind of intellectual bankruptcy in the democratic party -- they really don't seem to have a plan, they don't have many ideas so they are sniping around the edges of Bush's policies without any really interesting or dynamic alternative -- just this kind of stuff which really doesn't make a dent in the issue and it is bogus as often is the case."

- Democrat Reaction? As the week comes to a close, Democrats find themselves splintered into 3 groups:

  - ✓ The House and Senate Members who support tax increases – including Sens. Kennedy and Clinton
  - ✓ The 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Dems who voted for tax cuts.
  - ✓ The Senators who attack tax cuts but offer no other economic growth agenda – including Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

- The President's approval rating has been above 80% for twelve consecutive Gallup polls spanning 18 weeks – the longest duration of such presidential ratings in history.

WEEK IN REVIEW ON TAX INCREASES

First...

Senator Tom Daschle attacked tax cuts blaming them for the recession (1/4/02).

Then...

Min. Leader Dick Gephardt: "I have not heard one Democrat say he or she wants to raise taxes." (1/7/02, US Newswire)

Then...

Senator Ted Kennedy proposes tax increases on the American people in a speech at the National Press Club (1/16/02)

Then...

"[In contrast with Sen. Kennedy] Bush seems more in tune with average Americans. Those surveyed in the IBD/TIPP poll say overwhelmingly tax cuts would be a smart move. Asked to rank possible policy actions to end the recession, 67% to 75% of those queried say tax cuts for individuals and businesses would be "very effective" or "somewhat effective" in stimulating economic growth" (Investors Business Daily, 1/17/02)

THIS WEEK

This week President Bush traveled the country to talk to Americans about his aggressive bipartisan economic growth agenda that creates jobs, helps unemployed workers get back to work, increases trade and lowers taxes.

Also this week, Senator Ted Kennedy unveiled his tax increase package that raises taxes by delaying marginal rate reductions and reinstating the death tax.

- America's Reaction? According to the latest USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll, by 23% the public favors President Bush over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction – 59% to 36%.

- The President's Reaction? The President opposes tax increases because he believes the worst thing we could do during tough economic times is raise taxes and have the government take more money from Americans.

- The Pundits Reaction? Frank Rich said on Imus in the Morning (1/17/02): "Let's face it -- we all know we were having this recession well before the current president took office--while I'm not a fan of this tax cut, most of it hasn't happened yet -- so really that formulation of Daschle's reflects a kind of intellectual bankruptcy in the democratic party -- they really don't seem to have a plan, they don't have many ideas so they are sniping around the edges of Bush's policies without any really interesting or dynamic alternative -- just this kind of stuff which really doesn't make a dent in the issue and it is bogus as often is the case."

- Democrat Reaction? As the week comes to a close, Democrats find themselves splintered into 3 groups:

  - ✓ The House and Senate Members who support tax increases – including Sens. Kennedy and Clinton
  - ✓ The 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Dems who voted for tax cuts.
  - ✓ The Senators who attack tax cuts but offer no other economic growth agenda – including Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

- The President's approval rating has been above 80% for twelve consecutive Gallup polls spanning 18 weeks – the longest duration of such presidential ratings in history.

WEEK IN REVIEW ON TAX INCREASES

First...

Senator Tom Daschle attacked tax cuts blaming them for the recession (1/4/02).

Then...

Min. Leader Dick Gephardt: "I have not heard one Democrat say he or she wants to raise taxes." (1/7/02, US Newswire)

Then...

Senator Ted Kennedy proposes tax increases on the American people in a speech at the National Press Club (1/16/02)

Then...

"[In contrast with Sen. Kennedy] Bush seems more in tune with average Americans. Those surveyed in the IBD/TIPP poll say overwhelmingly tax cuts would be a smart move. Asked to rank possible policy actions to end the recession, 67% to 75% of those queried say tax cuts for individuals and businesses would be "very effective" or "somewhat effective" in stimulating economic growth" (Investors Business Daily, 1/17/02)

THIS WEEK

This week President Bush traveled the country to talk to Americans about his aggressive bipartisan economic growth agenda that creates jobs, helps unemployed workers get back to work, increases trade and lowers taxes.

Also this week, Senator Ted Kennedy unveiled his tax increase package that raises taxes by delaying marginal rate reductions and reinstating the death tax.

- America's Reaction? According to the latest USA Today/CNN/Gallup Poll, by 23% the public favors President Bush over Congressional Democrats when it comes to influencing the country's direction – 59% to 36%.

- The President's Reaction? The President opposes tax increases because he believes the worst thing we could do during tough economic times is raise taxes and have the government take more money from Americans.

- The Pundits Reaction? Frank Rich said on Imus in the Morning (1/17/02): "Let's face it -- we all know we were having this recession well before the current president took office--while I'm not a fan of this tax cut, most of it hasn't happened yet -- so really that formulation of Daschle's reflects a kind of intellectual bankruptcy in the democratic party -- they really don't seem to have a plan, they don't have many ideas so they are sniping around the edges of Bush's policies without any really interesting or dynamic alternative -- just this kind of stuff which really doesn't make a dent in the issue and it is bogus as often is the case."

- Democrat Reaction? As the week comes to a close, Democrats find themselves splintered into 3 groups:

  - ✓ The House and Senate Members who support tax increases – including Sens. Kennedy and Clinton
  - ✓ The 12 Senate Democrats and 41 House Dems who voted for tax cuts.
  - ✓ The Senators who attack tax cuts but offer no other economic growth agenda – including Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle.

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

- The President's approval rating has been above 80% for twelve consecutive Gallup polls spanning 18 weeks – the longest duration of such presidential ratings in history.

According to Asharq Al-Awsat newspaper in London, seven people believed to be al-Qaeda members were arrested while hiding under burquas attempting to disguise themselves as women.

They were arrested in Northern Pakistan near the Afghan border.

According to Asharq Al-Awsat newspaper in London, seven people believed to be al-Qaeda members were arrested while hiding under burquas attempting to disguise

themselves as women.

They were arrested in Northern Pakistan near the Afghan border.

According to Asharq Al-Awsat newspaper in London, seven people believed to be al-Qaeda members were arrested while hiding under burquas attempting to disguise

themselves as women.

They were arrested in Northern Pakistan near the Afghan border.

TREATMENT AND STATUS OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO

January 22, 2002

What is the legal status of the prisoners at Guantanamo? Are they prisoners of war?

- We are treating all of the detainees at Guantanamo humanely and consistent with the principles of the Third Geneva Convention of 1949. The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined.

- All detainees are being provided three appropriate meals a day, medical care, clothing, shelter, showers, and the opportunity to worship. The detainees will not, of course, be subjected to physical or mental abuse. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. We are building enclosed, long-term facilities to house the detainees.

What do you mean when you say that prisoners will be treated "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention? Are the conditions at Guantanamo "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention?

- The conditions in Guantanamo are fully consistent with the Third Geneva Convention's core requirement that all detainees be treated humanely. We are treating all detainees humanely. All detainees are being provided shelter, food, water, and medical care. They are, of course, not being tortured or subjected to any physical or mental abuse. Moreover, we are providing all detainees the treatment provided to POWs under the Convention taking into account appropriate factors such as security and the temporary nature of the facilities in Guantanamo. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. Other than the fact that the detainees are in detention, their material living conditions are substantially better than they were before they were captured. When in their separate enclosures, detainees are NOT handcuffed or shackled; they are free to move about in their separate enclosures.

What specific benefits are the detainees receiving?

- All detainees are being provided three meals a day that meet Muslim laws with regard to diet; water; medical care; clothing and shoes; shelter; showers; soap and toilet articles; and the opportunity to worship.

- Detainees are being given foam sleeping pads and blankets as well as towels and washcloths.

- They are given correspondence materials and will be allowed to send and receive mail. They will be allowed to receive packages of food and clothing, subject to security screening.

- Money or other personal effects collected from each detainee will be accounted for in his name and safeguarded.

- We will re-evaluate continuously the conditions of the detainees. Detainees will be permitted to raise their concerns and we will attempt to address them to the extent consistent with security.

So what's the practical effect of the determination that the detainees are not prisoners of war? What will they be denied that they would otherwise be entitled to receive as POWs?

- The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined. Some of the specific treatment conditions provided to POWs by the Third Geneva Convention were suitable for regular soldiers in 1949 but are not appropriate for terrorists in 2002. Some treatment conditions are not compatible with the extraordinary security risk posed by these detainees, who are extremely violent and dangerous and pose a threat to the U.S. forces who are guarding them and to each other.

- For example, we do not plan to install canteens where detainees may purchase food, soap, and tobacco. We will not be giving the detainees at Guantanamo a monthly advance of pay, or allow them to have and consult personal financial accounts. Detainees will not be allowed to receive scientific equipment, musical instruments, or sports outfits.

Some experts have said that the open-air cages in which the prisoners are being held are not consistent with the Geneva Convention? Is that right?

- We do not have facilities in place at Guantanamo ready to house several hundred extremely dangerous individuals. The detainees at Guantanamo are being housed in temporary open-air shelters until long-term facilities can be arranged; these shelters are fully appropriate given the mild climate of Cuba. But we are building facilities in Guantanamo that are more appropriate for housing the detainees on a long-term basis.

- Many detainees at Guantanamo pose a severe security risk both to those responsible for guarding them and to each other. Clearly, many of the detainees have not "surrendered" and continue to fight even while detained. Some of these individuals demonstrated how dangerous they are in uprisings at Mazar-e-Sharif and in Pakistan. The United States must take into account the need for security in establishing the conditions of detention at Guantanamo. It is not possible for us to house them collectively in tents or other open spaces without undue threat to our personnel who are guarding and detaining them.

Will you seek to amend the Geneva Conventions to address the new realities of the war against terrorism?

- I am not aware of any effort to amend the Geneva Conventions at this time. Our conflict with the Taliban and al-Qaida is much different from past conflicts, however. The Taliban and al-Qaida have demonstrated their contempt for the traditional laws and customs of war accepted by all civilized states.

How long will you hold detainees? Until the end of hostilities in Afghanistan? Until the conclusion of the war against terrorism?

- We will hold the detainees until an appropriate disposition can be made for each detainee. We may prosecute certain detainees found to have committed crimes. We will turn other detainees over to their home countries or to third countries for detention and/or prosecution. We may hold other detainees for a longer period if we believe that they still pose a threat to safety and security of our forces or nationals. We may need to detain people if they clearly plan to commit further terrorist attacks against us or others.

How will you decide the disposition of each individual? When will you do this? If they are tried, where will they be tried?

- We will make an individual determination in each case. We may prosecute detainees who have committed specific crimes against us. We may, in some cases, turn detainees over to their home countries or to third countries if those countries request that they be returned for detention and prosecution.

Will this decision affect treatment of U.S. forces in future operations or conflicts? Will it open them to prosecution before foreign civil courts or international tribunals such as the ICC?

- Our detention of members of the Taliban and al-Qaida should have no legal or practical effect on our own forces.

TREATMENT AND STATUS OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO

January 22, 2002

What is the legal status of the prisoners at Guantanamo? Are they prisoners of war?

- We are treating all of the detainees at Guantanamo humanely and consistent with the principles of the Third Geneva Convention of 1949. The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined.

- All detainees are being provided three appropriate meals a day, medical care, clothing, shelter, showers, and the opportunity to worship. The detainees will not, of course, be subjected to physical or mental abuse. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. We are building enclosed, long-term facilities to house the detainees.

What do you mean when you say that prisoners will be treated "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention? Are the conditions at Guantanamo "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention?

- The conditions in Guantanamo are fully consistent with the Third Geneva Convention's core requirement that all detainees be treated humanely. We are treating all detainees humanely. All detainees are being provided shelter, food, water, and medical care. They are, of course, not being tortured or subjected to any physical or mental abuse. Moreover, we are providing all detainees the treatment provided to POWs under the Convention taking into account appropriate factors such as security and the temporary nature of the facilities in Guantanamo. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. Other than the fact that the detainees are in detention, their material living conditions are substantially better than they were before they were captured. When in their separate enclosures, detainees are NOT handcuffed or shackled; they are free to move about in their separate enclosures.

What specific benefits are the detainees receiving?

- All detainees are being provided three meals a day that meet Muslim laws with regard to diet; water; medical care; clothing and shoes; shelter; showers; soap and toilet articles; and the opportunity to worship.

- Detainees are being given foam sleeping pads and blankets as well as towels and washcloths.

- They are given correspondence materials and will be allowed to send and receive mail. They will be allowed to receive packages of food and clothing, subject to security screening.

- Money or other personal effects collected from each detainee will be accounted for in his name and safeguarded.

- We will re-evaluate continuously the conditions of the detainees. Detainees will be permitted to raise their concerns and we will attempt to address them to the extent consistent with security.

So what's the practical effect of the determination that the detainees are not prisoners of war? What will they be denied that they would otherwise be entitled to receive as POWs?

- The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined. Some of the specific treatment conditions provided to POWs by the Third Geneva Convention were suitable for regular soldiers in 1949 but are not appropriate for terrorists in 2002. Some treatment conditions are not compatible with the extraordinary security risk posed by these detainees, who are extremely violent and dangerous and pose a threat to the U.S. forces who are guarding them and to each other.

- For example, we do not plan to install canteens where detainees may purchase food, soap, and tobacco. We will not be giving the detainees at Guantanamo a monthly advance of pay, or allow them to have and consult personal financial accounts. Detainees will not be allowed to receive scientific equipment, musical instruments, or sports outfits.

Some experts have said that the open-air cages in which the prisoners are being held are not consistent with the Geneva Convention? Is that right?

- We do not have facilities in place at Guantanamo ready to house several hundred extremely dangerous individuals. The detainees at Guantanamo are being housed in temporary open-air shelters until long-term facilities can be arranged; these shelters are fully appropriate given the mild climate of Cuba. But we are building facilities in Guantanamo that are more appropriate for housing the detainees on a long-term basis.

- Many detainees at Guantanamo pose a severe security risk both to those responsible for guarding them and to each other. Clearly, many of the detainees have not "surrendered" and continue to fight even while detained. Some of these individuals demonstrated how dangerous they are in uprisings at Mazar-e-Sharif and in Pakistan. The United States must take into account the need for security in establishing the conditions of detention at Guantanamo. It is not possible for us to house them collectively in tents or other open spaces without undue threat to our personnel who are guarding and detaining them.

Will you seek to amend the Geneva Conventions to address the new realities of the war against terrorism?

- I am not aware of any effort to amend the Geneva Conventions at this time. Our conflict with the Taliban and al-Qaida is much different from past conflicts, however. The Taliban and al-Qaida have demonstrated their contempt for the traditional laws and customs of war accepted by all civilized states.

How long will you hold detainees? Until the end of hostilities in Afghanistan? Until the conclusion of the war against terrorism?

- We will hold the detainees until an appropriate disposition can be made for each detainee. We may prosecute certain detainees found to have committed crimes. We will turn other detainees over to their home countries or to third countries for detention and/or prosecution. We may hold other detainees for a longer period if we believe that they still pose a threat to safety and security of our forces or nationals. We may need to detain people if they clearly plan to commit further terrorist attacks against us or others.

How will you decide the disposition of each individual? When will you do this? If they are tried, where will they be tried?

- We will make an individual determination in each case. We may prosecute detainees who have committed specific crimes against us. We may, in some cases, turn detainees over to their home countries or to third countries if those countries request that they be returned for detention and prosecution.

Will this decision affect treatment of U.S. forces in future operations or conflicts? Will it open them to prosecution before foreign civil courts or international tribunals such as the ICC?

- Our detention of members of the Taliban and al-Qaida should have no legal or practical effect on our own forces.

TREATMENT AND STATUS OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO

January 22, 2002

What is the legal status of the prisoners at Guantanamo? Are they prisoners of war?

- We are treating all of the detainees at Guantanamo humanely and consistent with the principles of the Third Geneva Convention of 1949. The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined.

- All detainees are being provided three appropriate meals a day, medical care, clothing, shelter, showers, and the opportunity to worship. The detainees will not, of course, be subjected to physical or mental abuse. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. We are building enclosed, long-term facilities to house the detainees.

What do you mean when you say that prisoners will be treated "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention? Are the conditions at Guantanamo "consistent with" the principles of the Geneva Convention?

- The conditions in Guantanamo are fully consistent with the Third Geneva Convention's core requirement that all detainees be treated humanely. We are treating all detainees humanely. All detainees are being provided shelter, food, water, and medical care. They are, of course, not being tortured or subjected to any physical or mental abuse. Moreover, we are providing all detainees the treatment provided to POWs under the Convention taking into account appropriate factors such as security and the temporary nature of the facilities in Guantanamo. The International Committee of the Red Cross is being allowed to visit each detainee privately. Other than the fact that the detainees are in detention, their material living conditions are substantially better than they were before they were captured. When in their separate enclosures, detainees are NOT handcuffed or shackled; they are free to move about in their separate enclosures.

What specific benefits are the detainees receiving?

- All detainees are being provided three meals a day that meet Muslim laws with regard to diet; water; medical care; clothing and shoes; shelter; showers; soap and toilet articles; and the opportunity to worship.

- Detainees are being given foam sleeping pads and blankets as well as towels and washcloths.

- They are given correspondence materials and will be allowed to send and receive mail. They will be allowed to receive packages of food and clothing, subject to security screening.

- Money or other personal effects collected from each detainee will be accounted for in his name and safeguarded.

- We will re-evaluate continuously the conditions of the detainees. Detainees will be permitted to raise their concerns and we will attempt to address them to the extent consistent with security.

So what's the practical effect of the determination that the detainees are not prisoners of war? What will they be denied that they would otherwise be entitled to receive as POWs?

- The legal status of the detainees has not yet been determined. Some of the specific treatment conditions provided to POWs by the Third Geneva Convention were suitable for regular soldiers in 1949 but are not appropriate for terrorists in 2002. Some treatment conditions are not compatible with the extraordinary security risk posed by these detainees, who are extremely violent and dangerous and pose a threat to the U.S. forces who are guarding them and to each other.

- For example, we do not plan to install canteens where detainees may purchase food, soap, and tobacco. We will not be giving the detainees at Guantanamo a monthly advance of pay, or allow them to have and consult personal financial accounts. Detainees will not be allowed to receive scientific equipment, musical instruments, or sports outfits.

Some experts have said that the open-air cages in which the prisoners are being held are not consistent with the Geneva Convention? Is that right?

- We do not have facilities in place at Guantanamo ready to house several hundred extremely dangerous individuals. The detainees at Guantanamo are being housed in temporary open-air shelters until long-term facilities can be arranged; these shelters are fully appropriate given the mild climate of Cuba. But we are building facilities in Guantanamo that are more appropriate for housing the detainees on a long-term basis.

- Many detainees at Guantanamo pose a severe security risk both to those responsible for guarding them and to each other. Clearly, many of the detainees have not "surrendered" and continue to fight even while detained. Some of these individuals demonstrated how dangerous they are in uprisings at Mazar-e-Sharif and in Pakistan. The United States must take into account the need for security in establishing the conditions of detention at Guantanamo. It is not possible for us to house them collectively in tents or other open spaces without undue threat to our personnel who are guarding and detaining them.

Will you seek to amend the Geneva Conventions to address the new realities of the war against terrorism?

- I am not aware of any effort to amend the Geneva Conventions at this time. Our conflict with the Taliban and al-Qaida is much different from past conflicts, however. The Taliban and al-Qaida have demonstrated their contempt for the traditional laws and customs of war accepted by all civilized states.

How long will you hold detainees? Until the end of hostilities in Afghanistan? Until the conclusion of the war against terrorism?

- We will hold the detainees until an appropriate disposition can be made for each detainee. We may prosecute certain detainees found to have committed crimes. We will turn other detainees over to their home countries or to third countries for detention and/or prosecution. We may hold other detainees for a longer period if we believe that they still pose a threat to safety and security of our forces or nationals. We may need to detain people if they clearly plan to commit further terrorist attacks against us or others.

How will you decide the disposition of each individual? When will you do this? If they are tried, where will they be tried?

- We will make an individual determination in each case. We may prosecute detainees who have committed specific crimes against us. We may, in some cases, turn detainees over to their home countries or to third countries if those countries request that they be returned for detention and prosecution.

Will this decision affect treatment of U.S. forces in future operations or conflicts? Will it open them to prosecution before foreign civil courts or international tribunals such as the ICC?

- Our detention of members of the Taliban and al-Qaida should have no legal or practical effect on our own forces.
