WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Department of Justice announced today that the 4th annual Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Symposium will be held in Washington, D.C. on Oct. 4 and 5, 2005. The annual training conference is part of the Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative, which was established in October 2002 to spearhead the Department's expanded efforts to address election fraud and voting rights violations.

The initiative is headed by the Assistant Attorneys General of the Criminal and Civil Rights Divisions. The goal of the initiative is to protect the integrity of the election process by increasing the Department's efforts and effectiveness in combating election fraud by: publicizing election fraud convictions to deter similar crimes in the future; ensuring nationwide compliance with the federal laws protecting voting rights; and assuring the public that the Department will combat election fraud and voting rights abuses vigorously, fairly and effectively.

"The power to vote is one of the greatest opportunities we share as Americans," said Attorney General Alberto R. Gonzales. "The very fiber of our Nation rests on the zealous protection of certain inalienable rights for every citizen, and we cannot grow complacent in the safeguarding of those rights. The Department of Justice will continue to aggressively protect each person's right to vote - and just as important - preserve the value of that vote from those who would corrupt the election process."

The Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative includes:

Annual Training. Prosecutors serving as District Election Officers in the 94 U.S. Attorneys' Offices are required to attend annual training conferences on fighting election fraud and voting rights abuses. Previous conferences were held in October 2002, September 2003 and July 2004. These conferences are sponsored by the Voting Section of the Civil Rights Division and the Public Integrity Section of the Criminal Division, and feature presentations by Civil Rights officials and senior prosecutors from the Public Integrity Section and the U.S. Attorneys' Offices. As a result of these conferences, there is a nationwide increase in Department expertise relating to the prosecution of election crimes and the enforcement of voting rights.

State Coordination. Each U.S. Attorney is required to meet with the state Attorney General, Secretary of State, or other state official responsible for handling election matters in his or her district. These meetings underscore the Department's commitments to: prosecute election fraud and to protect voting rights; coordinate investigation of criminal matters involving joint federal and state jurisdiction; help ensure state compliance with federal voting rights laws; and avoid interference with the administration of elections, a function left primarily to the states by the Constitution. In addition, several U.S. Attorneys have established task forces with their state counterparts to increase their effectiveness in addressing election fraud and in deterring both discrimination at the polls and electoral corruption.

Prioritization of Election Fraud Enforcement. The initiative requires that all components of the Department place a high priority on the investigation and prosecution of election fraud. The Criminal Division's Public Integrity Section oversees the national effort to ensure that election fraud investigations and charges have sufficient factual and legal predication, that they will not interfere with an ongoing election, and that a national standard is maintained in this critical area of criminal law enforcement. As a result of the initiative, nationwide enforcement of election fraud matters has increased dramatically.

More than 120 election fraud investigations are currently pending throughout the country, all but four of which were opened after the initiative began in October 2002. In addition, over 60 election fraud matters have been closed after investigation since the initiative began. Finally, since the start of the initiative, 89 individuals have been charged with election fraud offenses. To date, 52 of these individuals have been convicted.

The following are examples of the Department's enforcement successes under the Ballot

CRIMINAL DIVISION

- In Illinois, four precinct officials pleaded guilty to vote buying in the 2004 general election and five more people are awaiting trial on these charges. Also, an election official pleaded guilty to forging ballots in the 2002 general election.

- In Kentucky, seven persons were convicted of vote buying in the 1998 primary in Knott County, two at trial and five through guilty pleas. Another three persons recently were indicted for vote buying for a candidate for the state senate in the 2000 primary in Knott County and neighboring counties. Finally, four persons were convicted by juries of vote buying and related offenses in the 2002 general election in Pike County, including the county district judge. Another person also pleaded guilty to these charges.

- In New Hampshire, two political party officials and another person were indicted on charges relating to a scheme to prevent voters from getting to the polls in the November 2002 general election by jamming phone lines of local organizations. Two of the defendants pleaded guilty to telephone harassment charges and the third is awaiting trial for conspiring to violate the right to vote for federal officials and other related offenses.

- In Kansas and Missouri, three Kansas residents have been convicted, one in Kansas and two in Missouri, of voting in both Kansas and Missouri in the 2002 and 2000 elections.

- In Florida, 14 non-citizens, including a candidate for the state legislature, pleaded guilty or were convicted at trial of voting-related offenses in 1998 or later elections.

- In Louisiana, a candidate for St. Martinsville City Council pleaded guilty to conspiring to submit false voter registration information in 2002.

- In North Carolina, five persons were convicted of vote buying in the 2002 general election, three by a jury and two through guilty pleas.

- In West Virginia, four individuals, including the sheriff, the former chief of police, and the treasurer of a candidate for state representative, pleaded guilty to vote buying and related offenses in Logan County in the 2004 or 2002 elections. Also, five people have been indicted and are awaiting trial on charges of vote buying in Lincoln County in 2004 and earlier elections.

- In Wisconsin, four individuals have been charged with multiple voting, and six people have been charged with providing false information regarding their felon status, in the 2004 general elections.

CIVIL RIGHTS DIVISION

- Election Coverage. On Election Day in November 2004, the Division sent out 251 employees from the Division and 822 federal observers from the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) to monitor elections in 86 political subdivisions in 25 states. The number of monitors and observers used for that election was more than were used in all of 2000. During all of 2004, the Division sent a total of 1,996 individuals (533 department personnel; 1,463 OPM observers) to monitor 163 elections in 105 political subdivisions in 29 states.

- Sections 203, 208 and 4(f)(4) of the Voting Rights Act. The Civil Rights Division has undertaken the most vigorous enforcement of section 203 in the history of the Act. Since 2001, the Division has filed as many section 203 cases as in the previous 23 years, and the pace is accelerating, with more cases filed and successfully resolved since May 2004 than in the previous 11 years. These latter lawsuits alone provided comprehensive minority language programs to more citizens than all previous Section 203 and 4(f)(4) cases combined. During this period the Civil Rights Division filed the first-ever cases to protect Filipino voters (San Diego, California) and Vietnamese voters (San Diego) and in addition it negotiated a private agreement in Harris County, Texas. The Division also used sections 2, 4(e) and 208 to protect the rights of Haitian voters (Miami-Dade, Florida), Arab voters (Hamtramck, Michigan), and Puerto Rican voters (Berks County, Pennsylvania).

- Section 2. In July 2005, the Civil Rights Division filed a case against Osceola, Florida under section 2 alleging that the at-large method of election for the county commission dilutes Hispanic voting strength. It also filed a case against Boston, Massachusetts for discriminatory treatment of Chinese, Vietnamese and Hispanic voters at the same time. In February 2005, the Division filed a case in Noxubee County, Mississippi under section 2, alleging that local officials routinely discriminated against white voters on the basis of their race. That case has already resulted in a consent decree with several local officials and litigation of the claims against remaining defendants is ongoing. The Noxubee County case marks the first time the Division has filed a case under the Voting Rights Act on behalf of white voters.

- HAVA. The Civil Rights Division is charged with enforcing the requirements of the Help America Vote Act of 2002, which mandates uniform and non-discriminatory election procedures for federal office. The Division has actively informed state and local officials of the Act's requirements through an extensive outreach effort, including the creation of a HAVA section on the Division website, responses to questions from election officials, and speeches given to election official conferences. The Division has worked closely with the Election Assistance Commission, which also has responsibilities under the Act, to ensure that the federal government gives consistent views to election officials about HAVA. The Division has obtained extensive voluntary compliance, but has also filed two lawsuits to ensure HAVA compliance, and has filed amicus briefs in several private HAVA cases to ensure consistency in interpretation of its provisions.

- UOCAVA. During 2004, the Civil Rights Division ensured that members of the armed forces and other persons protected by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act were able to request, receive and cast a ballot for federal offices in a timely manner in the 2004 elections. The Voting Section was able to resolve problems with state officials without the necessity of litigation, and also initiated litigation against Pennsylvania in April 2004 and Georgia in July 2004, successfully obtaining court orders requiring changes in the deadlines for the return of ballots so that overseas and military ballots would be counted in each state's 2004 primary election.

- NVRA. The Division brought two lawsuits under the National Voter Registration Act, a law designed to expand registration opportunities for all citizens and to ensure proper maintenance of voter registration lists. In United States v. Pulaski County (E.D. Ark.), the Division obtained a consent decree requiring the county to establish procedures to ensure that eligible voters were not improperly removed from the list of registered voters. The second lawsuit, United States v. State of New York (N.D.N.Y.), challenged the state's failure to provide registration opportunities at public college offices that provide services to persons with disabilities. This case remains in litigation. A third NVRA lawsuit remains pending in New York.

"As these election fraud and voting rights cases demonstrate, the Department's Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative is a balanced law enforcement effort that is designed to make voting easier and cheating harder," said Acting Assistant Attorney General John C. Richter of the Criminal Division. "The Criminal Division, through the hard work of the Public Integrity Section, will continue its vigorous enforcement of voter fraud laws to ensure that elections are not corrupted and that every vote counts."

"Protecting access to the ballot for all eligible voters is a major priority of the Civil Rights Division," said Bradley J. Schlozman, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division. "The Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative has been an important instrument in ensuring the effectiveness of our enforcement efforts."

Cybele raised with me the logistics of a briefing for the AG on body armor. I told her that he was effectively unavailable until the week of August 15 -- which is quickly filling up on his calendar.

As we iron out the substance of the body armor proposal, I wanted your thoughts on some "process" questions: (1) Will the Associate's office recommend that the AG be briefed by OJP and NIJ on the report and recommendations? (My instinct is yes, but would value your views and, in particular, your understanding of past practices on similar matters.) (2) Will the Associate's office have a recommendation on whether the AG should do a press event in connection with the release of this report, etc.?

<< File: Attorney General_Final.pdf >> As you will see, it asks for the AG to designate someone to serve as agency rep on the MTS Coordinating Body at "assistant secretary level or above." (If you feel we really need to appoint someone at this level, perhaps we can do it in name only, and have that rep delegate any meeting attendance responsibilities to one of us underlings!) Pls advise on how you wish us to handle. This letter will no doubt go into Exec Sec and take its time coming to us all, but wanted to give you a heads up.

Do you want me to check Robert's schedule for Aug 19?

Cybele raised with me the logistics of a briefing for the AG on body armor. I told her that he was effectively unavailable until the week of August 15 -- which is quickly filling up on his calendar.

As we iron out the substance of the body armor proposal, I wanted your thoughts on some "process" questions: (1) Will the Associate's office recommend that the AG be briefed by OJP and NIJ on the report and recommendations? (My instinct is yes, but would value your views and, in particular, your understanding of past practices on similar matters.) (2) Will the Associate's office have a recommendation on whether the AG should do a press event in connection with the release of this report, etc.?

Courtney -- Sarah and Regina are available on Friday, August 19th to brief AG. Sarah will make the adjustment to her vacation. Since you are out the following week and Regina will be on travel the fist part of the week of the 22nd I thought we should get at least the briefing scheduled.

Thanks

Robert,

This seeks to summarize the results of my conversations with the team about the division of labor in a post-Wiggins world. I think all are happy with something like this, but it merits your review and final yea or nay as I think folks would appreciate the guidance.

After having looked to see how it's been done in the past w/r/t the pdag, I haven't assigned myself any particular components on the theory that I will likely touch many of them -- not on the theory that I bear no responsibility!

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE TO HOLD BALLOT ACCESS AND VOTING INTEGRITY SYMPOSIUM

Conference to Focus on Election Fraud, Voting Rights

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Department of Justice announced today that the 4th annual Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Symposium will be held in Washington, D.C. on Oct. 4 and 5, 2005. The annual training conference is part of the Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative, which was established in October 2002 to spearhead the Department's expanded efforts to address election fraud and voting rights violations.

The initiative is headed by the Assistant Attorneys General of the Criminal and Civil Rights Divisions. The goal of the initiative is to protect the integrity of the election process by increasing the Department's efforts and effectiveness in combating election fraud by: publicizing election fraud convictions to deter similar crimes in the future; ensuring nationwide compliance with the federal laws protecting voting rights; and assuring the public that the Department will combat election fraud and voting rights abuses vigorously, fairly and effectively.

"The power to vote is one of the greatest opportunities we share as Americans," said Attorney General Alberto R. Gonzales. "The very fiber of our Nation rests on the zealous protection of certain inalienable rights for every citizen, and we cannot grow complacent in the safeguarding of those rights. The Department of Justice will continue to aggressively protect each person's right to vote - and just as important - preserve the value of that vote from those who would corrupt the election process."

The Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative includes:

Annual Training. Prosecutors serving as District Election Officers in the 94 U.S. Attorneys' Offices are required to attend annual training conferences on fighting election fraud and voting rights abuses. Previous conferences were held in October 2002, September 2003 and July 2004. These conferences are sponsored by the Voting Section of the Civil Rights Division and the Public Integrity Section of the Criminal Division, and feature presentations by Civil Rights officials and senior prosecutors from the Public Integrity Section and the U.S. Attorneys' Offices. As a result of these conferences, there is a nationwide increase in Department expertise relating to the prosecution of election crimes and the enforcement of voting rights.

State Coordination. Each U.S. Attorney is required to meet with the state Attorney General, Secretary of State, or other state official responsible for handling election matters in his or her district. These meetings underscore the Department's commitments to: prosecute election fraud and to protect voting rights; coordinate investigation of criminal matters involving joint federal and state jurisdiction; help ensure state compliance with federal voting rights laws; and avoid interference with the administration of elections, a function left primarily to the states by the Constitution. In addition, several U.S. Attorneys have established task forces with their state counterparts to increase their effectiveness in addressing election fraud and in deterring both discrimination at the polls and electoral corruption.

Prioritization of Election Fraud Enforcement. The initiative requires that all components of the Department place a high priority on the investigation and prosecution of election fraud. The Criminal Division's Public Integrity Section oversees the national effort to ensure that election fraud investigations and charges have sufficient factual and legal predication, that they will not interfere with an ongoing election, and that a national standard is maintained in this critical area of criminal law enforcement. As a result of the initiative, nationwide enforcement of election fraud matters has increased dramatically.

More than 120 election fraud investigations are currently pending throughout the country, all but four of which were opened after the initiative began in October 2002. In addition, over 60 election fraud matters have been closed after investigation since the initiative began. Finally, since the start of the initiative, 89 individuals have been charged with election fraud offenses. To date, 52 of these individuals have been convicted.

The following are examples of the Department's enforcement successes under the Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative:

CRIMINAL DIVISION

* In Illinois, four precinct officials pleaded guilty to vote buying in the 2004 general election and five more people are awaiting trial on these charges. Also, an election official pleaded guilty to forging ballots in the 2002 general election.

* In Kentucky, seven persons were convicted of vote buying in the 1998 primary in Knott County, two at trial and five through guilty pleas. Another three persons recently were indicted for vote buying for a candidate for the state senate in the 2000 primary in Knott County and neighboring counties. Finally, four persons were convicted by juries of vote buying and related offenses in the 2002 general election in Pike County, including the county district judge. Another person also pleaded guilty to these charges.
* In New Hampshire, two political party officials and another person were indicted on charges relating to a scheme to prevent voters from getting to the polls in the November 2002 general election by jamming phone lines of local organizations. Two of the defendants pleaded guilty to telephone harassment charges and the third is awaiting trial for conspiring to violate the right to vote for federal officials and other related offenses.
* In Kansas and Missouri, three Kansas residents have been convicted, one in Kansas and two in Missouri, of voting in both Kansas and Missouri in the 2002 and 2000 elections.
* In Florida, 14 non-citizens, including a candidate for the state legislature, pleaded guilty or were convicted at trial of voting-related offenses in 1998 or later elections.
* In Louisiana, a candidate for St. Martinsville City Council pleaded guilty to conspiring to submit false voter registration information in 2002.
* In North Carolina, five persons were convicted of vote buying in the 2002 general election, three by a jury and two through guilty pleas.
* In West Virginia, four individuals, including the sheriff, the former chief of police, and the treasurer of a candidate for state representative, pleaded guilty to vote buying and related offenses in Logan County in the 2004 or 2002 elections. Also, five people have been indicted and are awaiting trial on charges of vote buying in Lincoln County in 2004 and earlier elections.
* In Wisconsin, four individuals have been charged with multiple voting, and six people have been charged with providing false information regarding their felon status, in the 2004 general elections.
* Election Coverage. On Election Day in November 2004, the Division sent out 251 employees from the Division and 822 federal observers from the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) to monitor elections in 86 political subdivisions in 25 states. The number of monitors and observers used for that election was more than were used in all of 2000. During all of 2004, the Division sent a total of 1,996 individuals (533 department personnel; 1,463 OPM observers) to monitor 163 elections in 105 political subdivisions in 29 states.
* Sections 203, 208 and 4(f)(4) of the Voting Rights Act. The Civil Rights Division has undertaken the most vigorous enforcement of section 203 in the history of the Act. Since 2001, the Division has filed as many section 203 cases as in the previous 23 years, and the pace is accelerating, with more cases filed and successfully resolved since May 2004 than in the previous 11 years. These latter lawsuits alone provided comprehensive minority language programs to more citizens than all previous Section 203 and 4(f)(4) cases combined. During this period the Civil Rights Division filed the first-ever cases to protect Filipino voters (San Diego, California) and Vietnamese voters (San Diego) and in addition it negotiated a private agreement in Harris County, Texas. The Division also used sections 2, 4(e) and 208 to protect the rights of Haitian voters (Miami-Dade, Florida), Arab voters (Hamtramck, Michigan), and Puerto Rican voters (Berks County, Pennsylvania).
* Section 2. In July 2005, the Civil Rights Division filed a case against Osceola, Florida under section 2 alleging that the at-large method of election for the county commission dilutes Hispanic voting strength. It also filed a case against Boston, Massachusetts for discriminatory treatment of Chinese, Vietnamese and Hispanic voters at the same time. In February 2005, the Division filed a case in Noxubee County, Mississippi under section 2, alleging that local officials routinely discriminated against white voters on the basis of their race. That case has already resulted in a consent decree with several local officials and litigation of the claims against remaining defendants is resulted in a consent decree with several local officials and litigation of the claims against remaining defendants is ongoing. The Noxubee County case marks the first time the Division has filed a case under the Voting Rights Act on behalf of white voters.

* HAVA. The Civil Rights Division is charged with enforcing the requirements of the Help America Vote Act of 2002, which mandates uniform and non-discriminatory election procedures for federal office. The Division has actively informed state and local officials of the Act's requirements through an extensive outreach effort, including the creation of a HAVA section on the Division website, responses to questions from election officials, and speeches given to election official conferences. The Division has worked closely with the Election Assistance Commission, which also has responsibilities under the Act, to ensure that the federal government gives consistent views to election officials about HAVA. The Division has obtained extensive voluntary compliance, but has also filed two lawsuits to ensure HAVA compliance, and has filed amicus briefs in several private HAVA cases to ensure consistency in interpretation of its provisions.

* UOCAVA. During 2004, the Civil Rights Division ensured that members of the armed forces and other persons protected by the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act were able to request, receive and cast a ballot for federal offices in a timely manner in the 2004 elections. The Voting Section was able to resolve problems with state officials without the necessity of litigation, and also initiated litigation against Pennsylvania in April 2004 and Georgia in July 2004, successfully obtaining court orders requiring changes in the deadlines for the return of ballots so that overseas and military ballots would be counted in each state's 2004 primary election.

* NVRA. The Division brought two lawsuits under the National Voter Registration Act, a law designed to expand registration opportunities for all citizens and to ensure proper maintenance of voter registration lists. In United States v. Pulaski County (E.D. Ark.), the Division obtained a consent decree requiring the county to establish procedures to ensure that eligible voters were not improperly removed from the list of registered voters. The second lawsuit, United States v. State of New York (N.D.N.Y.), challenged the state's failure to provide registration opportunities at public college offices that provide services to persons with disabilities. This case remains in litigation. A third NVRA lawsuit remains pending in New York.

* "As these election fraud and voting rights cases demonstrate, the Department's Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative is a balanced law enforcement effort that is designed to make voting easier and cheating harder," said Acting Assistant Attorney General John C. Richter of the Criminal Division. "The Criminal Division, through the hard work of the Public Integrity Section, will continue its vigorous enforcement of voter fraud laws to ensure that elections are not corrupted and that every vote counts."

* "Protecting access to the ballot for all eligible voters is a major priority of the Civil Rights Division," said Bradley J. Schlozman, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division. "The Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Initiative has been an important instrument in ensuring the effectiveness of our enforcement efforts."

I e-mailed Aloma the information that David had already given to me. It has the website and the number of people at the conference etc.....When I canceled the flight for Tracy I did not cancel her room so we can switch it into Neils name. I have already spoken with Aloma and she is going to call me back. David was going to give the proper people a call at NW3C to let them know so all should be just about taken care of!

H. R. 3541

To affirm that the United States may not engage in torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment, and for other purposes.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

JULY 28, 2005

Mr. CONYERS (for himself, Mr. SKELTON, Mr. SERRANO, Ms. ZOE LOFGREN of California, Mr. MEEHAN, and Ms. LINDA T. SáNCHEZ of California) introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on Armed Services, and in addition to the Committee on International Relations, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned

A BILL

To affirm that the United States may not engage in torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Promoting Responsible Interrogation Standards Enforcement Act of 2005" or "PRISE Act of 2005".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND SENSE OF CONGRESS.

(a) Findings.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) After World War II, the United States and its allies created a new international legal order based on respect for human rights. One of its fundamental tenets was a universal prohibition on torture and ill treatment.

(2) On June 26, 2003, the International Day in Support of Victims of Torture, President George W. Bush stated, "The United States is committed to the world-wide elimination of torture and we are leading this fight by example. I call on all governments to join with the United States and the community of law-abiding nations in prohibiting, investigating, and prosecuting all acts of torture and in undertaking to prevent other cruel and unusual punishment.".

(3) The United States is a party to the Geneva Conventions, which prohibit torture, cruel treatment, or outrages upon personal dignity, in particular, humiliating and degrading treatment, during armed conflict.

(4) The United States is a party to 2 treaties that prohibit torture and cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment, as follows:

(A) The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, done at New York on December 16, 1966.

(B) The Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, done at New York on December 10, 1984.

(5) The United States filed reservations to the treaties described in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (4) stating that the United States considers itself bound to prevent "cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment" to the extent that phrase means the cruel, unusual, and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the 5th amendment, 8th amendment, or 14th amendment to the Constitution.

(6) Army Regulation 190-8 entitled "Enemy Prisoners of War, Retained Personnel, Civilian Internees and Other Detainees" provides that "Inhumane treatment is a serious and punishable violation under international law and the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ). . . . All prisoners will receive humane treatment without regard to race, nationality, religion, political opinion, sex, or other criteria. The following acts are prohibited: murder, torture, corporal punishment, mutilation, the taking of hostages, sensory deprivation, collective punishments, execution without trial by proper authority, and all cruel and degrading treatment. . . . All persons will be respected as human beings. They will be protected against all acts of violence to include rape, forced prostitution, assault and theft, insults, public curiosity, bodily injury, and reprisals of any kind. . . . This list is not exclusive.".

(7) The Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation of the Department of the Army states that "acts of violence or intimidation, including physical or mental torture, threats, insults, or exposure to inhumane treatment as a means of or an aid to interrogation" are "illegal". Such Manual defines "infliction of pain through . . . bondage (other than legitimate use of restraints to prevent escape)", "forcing an individual to stand, sit, or kneel in abnormal positions for prolonged periods of time", "food deprivation", and "any form of beating" as "physical torture", defines "abnormal sleep deprivation" as "mental torture", and prohibits the use of such tactics under any circumstances.

(8) The Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation of the Department of the Army states that "Use of torture and other illegal methods is a poor technique that yields unreliable results, may damage subsequent collection efforts, and can induce the source to say what he thinks the interrogator wants to hear. Revelation of use of torture by U.S. personnel will bring discredit upon the U.S. and its armed forces while undermining domestic and international support for the war effort. It may also place U.S. and allied personnel in enemy hands at a greater risk of abuse by their captors.".

(b) Sense of Congress.—It is the sense of Congress that the reservation filed by the United States to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment ("Convention") regarding the obligation under Article 16 of the Convention—

(1) should be interpreted as a substantive definition of the term "cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment" under Article 16 of the Convention and not as a geographical limitation on the obligations of the United States under Article 16 of the Convention; and

(2) should reflect the original intent of the Senate and preserve the objectives and purposes of the Convention.

SEC. 3. HUMANE TREATMENT OF DETAINEES.

(a) Prohibition on Torture or Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.—(1) No person in the custody or under the physical control of the United States shall be subject to torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment that is prohibited by the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.

(2) Nothing in this section shall affect the status of any person under the Geneva Conventions or whether any person is entitled to the protections of the Geneva Conventions.

(b) Rules, Regulations, and Guidelines.—(1) Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall prescribe the rules, regulations, or guidelines necessary to ensure compliance with the prohibition in subsection (a)(1) by the members of the Armed Forces and by any person providing services to the Department of Defense on a contract basis.

(2) The Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees the rules, regulations, or guidelines prescribed under paragraph (1), and any modifications to such rules, regulations, or guidelines—

(A) not later than 30 days after the effective date of such rules, regulations, guidelines, or modifications; and

(B) in a manner and form that will protect the national security interests of the United States.

(c) Report to Congress.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall submit, on a timely basis and not less than twice each year, a report to Congress on the circumstances surrounding any investigation of a possible violation of the prohibition in subsection

(a)(1) by a member of the Armed Forces or by a person providing services to the Department of Defense on a contract basis.

(2) A report required under paragraph (1) shall be submitted in a manner and form that—

(A) will protect the national security interests of the United States; and

(B) will not prejudice any prosecution of an individual involved in, or responsible for, a violation of the prohibition in subsection (a)(1).

(d) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) The term "cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment" means the cruel, unusual, and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the 5th amendment, 8th amendment, or 14th amendment to the Constitution.

(2) The term "congressional defense committees" means the Committees on Armed Services and the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

(3) The term "Geneva Conventions" means—

(A) the Convention for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Wounded and Sick in Armed Forces in the Field, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3114);

(B) the Convention for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Wounded, Sick, and Shipwrecked Members of Armed Forces at Sea, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3217);

(C) the Convention Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3316); and

(D) the Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War, done at Geneva August 12, 1949 (6 UST 3516).

(4) The term "torture" has the meaning given that term in section 2340 of title 18, United States Code.

SEC. 4. ADHERENCE BY UNITED STATES TO OBLIGATIONS UNDER THE CONVENTION AGAINST TORTURE AND OTHER CRUEL, INHUMAN OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT.

(a) Limitation on Assistance With Respect to Obtaining Information From Individuals.—An officer or employee of the United States may not provide assistance to the government of a foreign country for the purpose of obtaining information from an individual held in custody by the foreign government if the officer or employee has reason to believe that torture or cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment will be utilized to obtain the information.

(b) Limitation on Assistance With Respect to Transfer of Individuals.—An officer or employee of the United States may not encourage or otherwise assist the government of a foreign country to transfer, render, expel, return, or extradite an individual to another country if the officer or employee has reason to believe that the individual would be in danger of being subjected to torture in violation of Article 3 of the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "assist" includes the provision of personnel, information, equipment, financial assistance, or any other form of assistance.

Please find a message below from your fellow term members.

Dear DC Term Members,

The Council seeks to improve the orientation program for new term members.
To this end, the Council is looking to the â??buddyâ?? program as a key means of integrating new term members into the term membership and the Councilâ??s programs overall.

We are seeking volunteers from among DC term members to serve as â??buddiesâ?? for the new class of DC term members entering the program this summer. Our aim is to have enough volunteers so that each volunteer will be linked with only one new DC term member. We will try to link new and current term members based on similar professional interests. Each â??buddyâ?? will be asked to contact the new term member he/she is linked up with, explain in general about the Councilâ??s programs, and over the year answer any questions that the new term member has. Also, there will likely be a reception for current and new term members in the early fall at which the â?? buddiesâ?? can meet if they have not done so already.

Please contact [redacted] if you would like to participate or if you have any questions. Also, please list some of your professional interests to facilitate matching. We look forward to yourparticipation.

Thank you.

Subject: FW: Final Draft -- Cuba Claims Press Release

FYI - Mauricio plans to go ahead with the new Cuban claims "program," which was referred to the FCSC by the State Department, and has been working on the below press release with OPA. As a reminder, this is only expected to cover that one claim involving a radio tower that he has been mentioning to us. There will be a six month filing period for filing any claims under the new program.

GOVERNMENT OF CUBA

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
XXXX, August XX, 2005

Phone: [redacted]
Fax: (202) 616-6993

WASHINGTON, D.C.- Mauricio Tamargo, Chairman of the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission, announced today the commencement of a Second Cuban Claims Program to receive claims of U.S. citizens or corporations against the Government of Cuba for previously unajudicated losses of real and personal property taken after May 1, 1967.

In the earlier Cuban Claims Program (under Section 1643 of Title 22, U.S. Code), completed on July 6, 1972, the Commission certified 5,911 claims to the U.S. Department of State. Any new claims certified as valid by the Commission will be added to those already certified in the previous program. Although there are no funds currently available to make payment on any American claims, the certification of the Commission's findings to the Secretary of State will be used as a basis for future negotiation of a claims settlement with the Government of Cuba.

This Second Cuban Claims Program provides for claims of U.S. citizens or corporations that would have been eligible under the earlier Program, but for the fact that they did not arise by the time of the filing deadline of May 1, 1967 and were not otherwise adjudicated by the Commission prior to completion of the earlier Program. The filing deadline for these claims is XXXX XX, 2006. Chairman Tamargo emphasized the program is open only to those who were U.S. citizens or an American corporation at the time their property was taken.

All inquiries concerning these claims should be forwarded directly to the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission of the United States, 600 E Street N.W., Suite 6002, Washington, D.C. 20579, Phone: [redacted], Fax: (202) 616-6993.

The Foreign Claims Settlement Commission of the United States (FCSC) is a quasi-judicial, independent agency within the Department of Justice which adjudicates claims of U.S. nationals against foreign governments. More information about the Commission is available at http://www.usdoj.gov/fcsc/.

Tasia,

This is the draft press release that will be sent out once the official notice appears in the federal register. Please look it over and let me know any changes you think should be made.

As you can see from the draft it is a narrow group that would be eligible to make claims. There is no way to know for sure but we expect only a few claims. We are sure of only one claimant and he is the one who contacted the Secretary of State and requested the referral. That is Starwood Resorts who owned a sizable amount of land in Havana Cuba where they operated a telephone tower for many years until a hurricane put it out of business. According to their documents, which we will investigate, the Government of Cuba confiscated everything in 2003. DOS decided that they needed to refer all new property claims since the end of the old Cuban Claims Program to the FCSC to be added to the already certified American claims against Cuba.

We, (or hopefully you) need to be ready to highlight a few key facts. As in all past 47 claims programs, the claimants must have been American citizens at the time of the confiscation. Also the claim cannot be for a personal injury or death - only property. If they ask why only property, I would suggest they ask the State Department. The claim must be only for new confiscations that arose after the end of the last Cuban Program. If they ask why only takings after May 1, 1967, the answer to that one is that all takings that occurred before that date already had an opportunity to file a claim in the earlier program and it would not be fair to give them a second shot at the apple.

The draft press release below should be sent out the day the notice appears in the federal register. The dates and deadlines will be added when we know the dates of publication in the fed register. I believe it should go out all major news outlets. Certainly all print, maybe not TV, if you wish to eliminate any. I will understand if the Attorney General does not wish to be included in this announcement.

I look forward to meeting you sometime and thank you for your help with this.

SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK, ss.:

ROBERT FULLER, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is a Special Agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and charges as follows:

COUNT ONE

From at least in or about 2001, up to and including in or about May 2005, in the Southern District of New York and elsewhere, MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, a/k/a "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," the defendant, and others known and unknown, unlawfully and knowingly combined, conspired, confederated and agreed together and with each other, within the United States, to provide material support and resources, as that term is defined in Title 18, United States Code, Section 2339A, to a foreign terrorist organization, namely, Lashkar-e-Taiba.

(Title 18, United States Code, Section 2339B.)

The bases for my knowledge and the foregoing charge are, in part, as follows:

1. I have been a Special Agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation ("FBI") for the past approximately five years and am a member of the FBI/New York City Police Department Joint Terrorism Task Force ("JTTF"). I have been personally involved in the investigation of this case. I am currently assigned to a squad whose principal responsibility is to investigate the activities of al Qaeda and its founder Usama Bin Laden. I have been investigating the criminal activities of members and associates of al Qaeda for approximately four years. This affidavit is based upon my personal participation in this investigation, conversations with witnesses, other agents, and other law enforcement officers, and review of relevant documents, reports, court documents, Web postings, audio recordings, and transcripts.

2. Because this affidavit is being submitted for the limited purpose of establishing probable cause, it does not include all the facts that I have learned during the course of my investigation. Where the contents of documents and the actions, statements and conversations of others are reported herein, they are reported in substance and in part.

Lashkar-e-Taiba

3. Markaz Dawa Wa'al Irshad, which roughly translated means "Center or Invitation [to Islam] and Instructions," was founded in or about 1986 to organize Pakistani mujahideen participating in the jihad against Russians in Afghanistan. As it expanded, education and jihad sections were separated. Thereafter, the military wing of the Markaz Dawa Wa'al Irshad was established in the name of Lashkar-e-Taiba, also known as Lashker-e-Taiba, Lashkar-e-Toyeba, Lashkar-e-Toiba, Lashkar e-Tayyiba, and Lashkar-I-Taib (hereinafter abbreviated as "LET"). Later, Lashkar-e-Taiba expanded its focus to include jihad against the Government of India and conducted military operations in Kashmir. India and Pakistan have long disputed the territorial rights to the Kashmir region, and violence between the factions seeking control of the area is commonplace.

4. Lashkar-e-Taiba, which roughly translated means "Army of the Pure" or the "Army of the Righteous," claims to have trained thousands of mujahideen to fight in areas including Afghanistan, Kashmir, Bosnia, Chechnya, Kosovo, and the Philippines. Lashkar-e-Taiba is known to have operated training camps in Pakistan for training mujahideen from around the world.

5. Following the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, several electronic bulletin board-type messages were sent, with headlines linking directly back to the Lashkar-e-Taiba web site, in which a purported Lashkar-e-Taiba spokesperson, "Abu Osama," stated, in substance: "Lashkar-e-Taiba will not leave Afghan brethren in the lurch. They will sacrifice their lives along with other Muslims against America and other disbelievers in case they attack Afghanistan. Lashkar-e-Taiba is intended to uphold the flag of Islam by jihad in the battlefield."

6. On or about December 13, 2001, terrorists attacked India's Parliament while it was in session, resulting in approximately 12 deaths. Media outlets reported that the Government of India blamed two groups for the attack, including Lashkar-e-Taiba.

7. On or about December 24, 2001, the United States designated Lashkar-e-Taiba a foreign terrorist organization pursuant to Section 219 of the Immigration and Nationality Act. That designation was renewed effective December 23, 2003, and remains in effect.

Evidence of Material Support

8. During the course of this investigation, I have interviewed on a number of occasions a confidential source ("CS-1").[1] CS-1 advised me and other law enforcement officers, in part and in substance, of the following:

a. Between in or about October 2003 and in or about December 2003, CS-1 was in contact with an individual named Tarik Shah. During various conversations with CS-1 during this approximate time period, many of which were consensually recorded, Shah discussed with CS-1 the duty of "jihad" (i.e., holy war).

b. Shah indicated to CS-1, in substance, that he was a "professor" of the "martial arts" although he was currently not "training" any "brothers." In that regard, Shah noted, in substance, that after the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001, various mosques had, in fact, prevented Shah from continuing such training.

[1] In or about 1990, CS-1 was convicted of certain state crimes relating to robberies. While serving his state sentence, CS-1 agreed to cooperate with the Government regarding certain terrorism investigations and, in return, the Government wrote the state sentencing judge for sentencing consideration. After serving his sentence, CS-1 continued to cooperate with the Government and currently provides information as a paid informant. CS-1's information has proven to be reliable and has been corroborated by other sources of information, including surveillance and recordings.

DOJ_NMG_ 0145963

c. Shah informed CS-1 that he had previously discussed with other "brothers" how "we could pass" knowledge on to "brothers who are ready" [to fight jihad].

9. In or about December 2003, Shah was arrested by New York state law enforcement authorities for petit larceny. During a search incident to that arrest, authorities recovered from Shah an address book that included the following entries:

a. "Mahmud Almutazzim (973) 393-7666, (240) 350-0051, (973) 792-0973, (202) 528-0567."

b. "Sayfullah (703) 461-3339."

Telephone records demonstrate that (240) 350-0051 was subscribed to in the name of "Taisha Abdel-Aziz," which is the name of MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT's wife, at 5306 Gwynn Oak Avenue, Gwynn Oak, Maryland, from September 21, 2000, through February 10, 2005. The telephone number (973) 792-0973 was listed as the contact number in a passport application submitted by "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," as detailed below. The telephone number (703) 461-3339 was subscribed to at an address in Alexandria, Virginia, known to have been a residence of Seifullah Chapman.[2]

10. Later, between in or about January 2004 and in or about February 2004, Shah and CS-1 had several discussions regarding "training," which were consensually recorded. During these discussions, CS-1 told Shah (at the FBI's direction) that CS-1 was in contact with a recruiter for jihad from the Middle East (in reality, an FBI Special Agent acting in an undercover capacity ("UC-1")) and advised Shah that the recruiter (UC-1) was interested in someone who could train a small number of individuals overseas in hand-to-hand combat and martial arts. Shah advised CS-1, in substance, that he was interested and that he had a close associate, Rafiq Sabir, a "doctor," who lived in Florida, and who would also be interested in joining the jihad.

[2] On or about March 4, 2004, Chapman and two of his co-conspirators were convicted in the Eastern District of Virginia of, among other charges, providing material support to Lashkar-e-Taiba. Chapman was a member of the Virginia Jihad Network in which members interested in jihad were trained in combat techniques, which involved, among other things, paintball exercises. At trial, Chapman testified on his own behalf and admitted that he had attended a Lashkar-e-Taiba training camp in or about 2001. Chapman was sentenced to ~~85 years~~ an extensive term of imprisonment, which he is currently serving.

DOJ_NMG_ 0145964

Shah suggested that CS-1 present Shah and Sabir as, in essence, a "package" to the recruiter and indicated again that Shah could provide martial arts services and his "partner," a medical doctor, could provide medical services. Shah also indicated that he would be interested in meeting with the "recruiter" (UC-1). Later, during these discussions, CS-1 told Shah that UC-1 was willing to meet with Shah alone and that the meeting would probably take place in upstate New York, near the Canadian border.

11. On March 4 and 5, 2004, Shah met with UC-1 in a city in upstate New York. Those meetings were consensually recorded. During those meetings, and throughout his dealings with Shah, UC-1 posed as a recruiter for "brothers" overseas who were seeking other "brothers" to wage jihad. The following points were discussed, among others:

a. Shah talked with UC-1 about the "end point" and indicated that he "may not really be interested in coming back here ever." Shah mentioned that the "very serious" brothers might recognize Shah's "usefulness" and put him to use for jihad and the fight against the United States.

b. Shah discussed his specialty in the "martial arts" and informed UC-1 that he has been trained in jujitsu, which he described as the Japanese art and culture of hand-to-hand combat, and knife and stick fighting, and that he was "blessed" to have studied with a mujahideen who had previously fought a war in Malaysia in or about 1969.

12. On or about April 1 and 2, 2004, Shah and UC-1 met again, this time in Florida. These meetings were consensually recorded. The following was discussed, among other things:

a. Shah informed UC-1 that he would like to learn at the camps about "chemical stuff" and later Shah specified that he wanted training about "explosives and firearms." UC-1 and Shah also discussed training on AK-47 assault rifles and hand grenades.

b. Shah explained to UC-1 that he had previously trained many "brothers" and that a "lot of my brothers" who were trained by him would "go over" and "got hooked up," although nobody ever came in and told Shah that they were "gonna walk in a place and blow up." The "brothers," Shah indicated, "don't even talk like that."

c. Shah mentioned the names of several students who studied martial arts with Shah and who had gone overseas to training camps in Afghanistan and Yemen, including "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," a name used by MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, the defendant. In particular, Shah indicated, in substance, that Al Mutazzim was "over there" around the time frame of September 11, 2001, and had to keep on traveling to "different provinces and moving around in different places" before ultimately being able to return to the United States. Shah explained his belief that Al Mutazzim had been given the names of people to contact at the camps by a white American Muslim convert.[3] Shah also stated that Al Mutazzim had told Shah how difficult it was to be back in the United States and not to be in training. Shah stated that he would call Al Mutazzim to enlist his help to prepare the demonstration video for martial arts training requested by UC-1 and assured UC-1 that Shah trusted Al Mutazzim. Shah also told UC-1 that Al Mutazzim could be trusted because he was a longtime student of Shah who, after leaving school, started "seeking the way to become Mujahideen."

13. Toll and pen register records show that on or about August 21, 2004, a 16 minute call was placed from telephone number (240) 350-0051 to telephone number (914) 489-9526. As detailed above, (240) 350-0051 was subscribed to in the name of MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT's wife at BRENT's home. Records indicate that (914) 489-9526 was subscribed to in the name of Shah's wife, and Shah's business cards listed that number as his telephone number.

14. On or about May 20, 2005, Shah met with CS-1 and UC-1 at CS-1's apartment in the Bronx, New York. Soon after the meeting had begun, Rafiq Sabir arrived and joined the meeting. This meeting was consensually recorded. During this meeting, the following, among other things, was discussed:

a. Shah and UC-1 discussed training camps overseas and spoke generally about jihad.

b. Shah asked UC-1 whether he was familiar with the "brothers" in Washington, D.C., and then indicated that Shah knew one of the brothers who was "fully prepared." Shah indicated that this "brother" was a paramedic and that Shah was happy because this brother followed his orders. Shah stated that, around the time of September 11, 2001, the paramedic took Shah to meet with a "white brother" in D.C. who had done training with the "Mujahideen" and had extensive knowledge about al Qaeda.[4] Shah also indicated, in substance, that the "brother was taking brothers out" for paintball training exercises.

[3] Based upon Shah's post-arrest statements and my discussions with agents involved in the Virginia Jihad Network investigation, I believe that the "white brother" to whom Shah refers is Seifullah Chapman. As mentioned above, Chapman's name and telephone number were found in Shah's possession.

c. UC-1 told Shah and Sabir that al Qaeda needed trusted people in the organization and that he was authorized to deliver a message from his leader. UC-1 explained to Shah and Sabir that he was authorized to give bayat, i.e., the oath of loyalty to al Qaeda.

d. UC-1 explained bayat and subsequently both Shah and Sabir committed themselves to the path of Holy War, to the oath of secrecy, and to abide by the directives of al Qaeda. Both Shah and Sabir both indicated that they understood the oath and agreed that they would obey the guardians of the oath, namely Usama Bin Laden.

15. On or about May 28, 2005, Shah and Sabir were arrested by the FBI on charges of conspiring to provide material support to a foreign terrorist organization, namely, al Qaeda. Following Shah's arrest, Shah was advised of his constitutional rights, agreed to speak with the agents, and made the following statements, among others:

a. Shah was a martial arts trainer who had previously trained many individuals committed to jihad, including "Mahmud Al Mutazzim" (a name used by MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, the defendant), and Al Mutazzim remained committed to jihad and lived in the vicinity of Baltimore, Maryland.[5]

b. Beginning in or about Summer 2001, Shah had trained Al Mutazzim in martial arts when Shah lived in Beacon,

[4] As explained below, MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT works as a paramedic, and the "white brother" to whom Shah referred was Seifullah Chapman.

[5] Pursuant to a search warrant executed at Shah's residence in the Bronx, law enforcement authorities recovered, among other items, an envelope bearing the name "Mahmud Al-Mutazzim," with the address "2707 Upshur St., Apt. 6, Mt. Ranier, Maryland 27012," and telephone number "(301) 484-1415." Telephone records show that number (301) 484-1415 was subscribed to by "Mahmud Al-Mutazzim" at this address.

DOJ_NMG_ 0145967

New York, and Al Mutazzim had lived with Shah during this time period. Shah also indicated that while Al Mutazzim lived with Shah in Beacon, New York, Al Mutazzim frequently viewed martial arts training videos and other videos about jihad in Bosnia.

c. Al Mutazzim, in the time period around the September 11 terrorist attacks, had introduced Shah to Seifullah Chapman in the Washington, D.C.-area, whom Shah understood to be a military trainer and Muslim convert who had traveled to training camps overseas. Chapman was the "white brother" and "white convert" to whom Shah had been referring in his previous conversations with UC-1.

d. Al Mutazzim's martial arts training with Shah ended after the September 11 attacks when the officials at the local mosque in Beacon, New York, where they sometimes practiced, essentially "kicked" them out. Sometime thereafter, Shah learned from a mutual associate that Al Mutazzim had "traveled." Shah interpreted this to mean that Al Mutazzim had been overseas to receive jihad training.

e. Later, when Al Mutazzim returned to the United States in or about 2002, Al Mutazzim mentioned to Shah that he had gone to a camp but did not specify to Shah what camp it had been.

16. On or about May 28, 2005, at the direction of the FBI, Shah made a consensually recorded call to a number Shah had previously used to contact Al Mutazzim. Shah spoke to MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, a/k/a "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," the defendant, and BRENT agreed to meet with Shah in Maryland.[6]

17. Later on or about May 28, 2005, Shah agreed to travel with FBI agents to the vicinity of Columbia, Maryland, to meet with MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, a/k/a "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," the defendant. Shah and BRENT met at a hotel in the vicinity of Columbia, Maryland. At the outset of the meeting, BRENT was accompanied by three other individuals who were not present for most of the ensuing meeting. This meeting was monitored and recorded using audio and video surveillance. During the meeting,

[6] At the time of the calls, Shah was cooperating with the Government. At present, no cooperation agreement exists between Shah and the Government. However, Shah's information has been corroborated by other evidence, including audio recordings and surveillance, which are described herein.

DOJ_NMG_ 0145968

the following, among other things, was discussed in substance between BRENT and Shah:

a. Shah indicated that he wanted to "travel." In response, BRENT replied that his "connections" were "kinda gone," in light of what had been happening in the community and that his only "connect" was "doing time now."[7]

b. BRENT explained that he never really "knew names" since that was the "way that they had it set up" over there and that, at the time he went to the camps, everything was "really organized."

c. BRENT described the difficulties he encountered in reaching the "camps" and the process by which he was able to find a connection to get into the camps, although he told Shah that he would not "mention" his connection's name to Shah.

d. BRENT encouraged Shah to travel overseas to the camps and told Shah that it was a question of "how much" Shah was willing to "sacrifice" and whether Shah was willing to "take a risk."

e. BRENT also explained that watching the videotapes of Muslim brothers "suffering" while he was "up" at Shah's residence (i.e., in Beacon, New York) had an impact on him and that this experience "kind of like pushed me over the, over the edge" about "going there."[8]

f. BRENT explained how difficult it was to make the trip since it was difficult to "trust" people in the current climate and noted that "we don't know who is who," and that "we were not in a position to make new friends."

g. BRENT indicated that he had traveled to Pakistan. When Shah inquired whether BRENT had stayed in the city, BRENT responded that he had not been in the cities but had been up in the "mountains" training "and stuff" with "the mujahideen, the fighters." BRENT stated that because of "treaties with Bush," it became dangerous for "foreigners," like BRENT, to stay in the camps, and so they moved him around from place to place.

h. BRENT stated that he had agreed to provide whatever "assistance" he could over there and expressed his hope that Allah would bless him for his efforts.

i. BRENT stated that he would never "go back" on his decision to go to the camps and that it was "one of the better decisions in my life."

j. Near the conclusion of the meeting, the three individuals who had accompanied BRENT returned to the meeting location and at least one of the individuals asked Shah about "the doctor" in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. Shah proceeded to discuss Sabir's job as a doctor at a military hospital in Saudi Arabia with BRENT and the other individuals present.

18. On or about June 2, 2005, another FBI agent and I interviewed two cooperating witnesses ("CW-1" and "CW-2," respectively) who pled guilty to their crimes based on their involvement with the Virginia Jihad Network and their travel to LET training camps in Pakistan.[9] Based upon the interview of CW-1 and CW-2, and my review of reports and court documents, I learned the following, among other things:

a. Both CW-1 and CW-2, along with other members of the Virginia Jihad Network, including Seifullah Chapman, Ibrahim Ahmed Al-Hamdi, Randall Todd Royer, and others, participated in paintball training exercises and other tactics training in Virginia in preparation for jihad.

b. Between in or about 2000, up to and including in or about 2001, both CW-1 and CW-2 (and other members of the Virginia Jihad Network, including Seifullah Chapman and Ibrahim Ahmed Al-Hamdi) were given recommendations by Randall Todd Royer, another member of the Virginia Jihad Network who was the first member of the group to obtain entrance into the LET training camp in Pakistan. Subsequently, in or about 2001, both CW-1 and CW-2 traveled separately to the LET training camp in Pakistan. To reach the LET camp, both CW-1 and CW-2 traveled to the city of Lahore, Pakistan, to report to the LET office. After reporting to the office in Lahore, both CW-1 and CW-2 traveled by bus for several hours to the LET camps in the mountains.

[9] CW-1 and CW-2 have provided information and testimony that has been reliable and corroborated by other evidence. Both CW-1 and CW-2 are cooperating with the authorities in the hopes of receiving a reduction of their sentences.

c. The training at the LET camp was organized into several phases, including weapons and tactics training, and battlefield commands. CW-1 also indicated that the LET camp divided trainees into several groups, including one group made up of "foreigners." CW-1 indicated that the LET cadre members referred to themselves using "kuniyat" names (or aliases). CW-1 described, in detail, the weapons training that he received at the LET camp and stated that his intent was to use this training to enable CW-1 to travel to Afghanistan to wage jihad.

d. In or about April 2000, Randall Todd Royer entered Pakistan to serve with the Lashkar-e-Taiba at an LET camp in Pakistan.

e. In or about August 2000, Ibrahim Ahmed Al-Hamdi traveled to Pakistan to serve with the Lashkar-e-Taiba at an LET camp in Pakistan.

f. In or about July 2001, Seifullah Chapman traveled to Pakistan to serve with the Lashkar-e-Taiba at an LET camp in Pakistan.

g. Neither CW-1 nor CW-2 are aware of any other training camp that members of the Virginia Jihad Network had "connections" to other than the LET camp in Pakistan.

h. An individual not named as a co-conspirator herein ("Individual-1") who lived in the vicinity of Baltimore, Maryland, also participated in various paintball exercises with CW-1, CW-2 and other members of the Virginia Jihad Network, and participated in discussions among members about jihad and the possibility of traveling to train for jihad at LET training camps in Pakistan.

19. In or about June 2005, I reviewed travel records, including a passport application for "Mahmud Al Mutazzim" and a copy of the United States passport issued to "Mahmud Al Mutazzim." Based upon my review of the passport application, which was dated on or about March 6, 2000, it appears that BRENT requested an expedited passport to travel to a religious conference in Saudi Arabia. In support of his expedited passport application, BRENT attached a letter of support from Seifullah Chapman, dated on or about March 3, 2000. Further, based upon my review of the passport, it appears that BRENT entered Lahore, Pakistan, on or about February 25, 2002, and departed from Lahore, Pakistan, on or about June 4, 2002.

20. The photograph on the "Mahmud Al Mutazzim" passport depicts the person I know to be MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, a/k/a "Mahmud Al Mutazzim;" the defendant, from my review of other identification documents, including a Washington, D.C. driver's license and a second United States passport, each of which were issued in the name "Mahmud Faruq Brent," and from my own observations of BRENT. A database search using the Social Security number ("SSN") provided on employment records by "Mahmud Al Mutazzim" reveals that the same SSN has been used in association with both the name "Mahmud Al Mutazzim" and the name "Mahmud Faruq Brent."

21. Based upon my review of the "Mahmud Al Mutazzim" passport and other travel records, I also learned that on or about November 26, 2002, MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT traveled from the United Arab Emirates to the United States on the same flight as Individual-1.

22. Toll and pen register records show at least two telephone calls between telephones used by MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, a/k/a "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," the defendant, and Seifullah Chapman, in May 2001, approximately two months prior to Chapman's travel to Pakistan to serve with the Lashkar-e-Taiba. Toll and pen register records also show that in or about March 2001, there was a telephone call between telephones used by Ibrahim Ahmed Al-Hamdi and BRENT. In addition, an address book seized from Chapman in July 2003 reflects a Maryland telephone number for "Mahmud Brent." Records for a telephone calling card believed to be used by BRENT reflect this same Maryland telephone number as the originating number for hundreds of telephone calls.

23. On or about June 2, 2005, other law enforcement agents interviewed an official at a medical services company based in Silver Springs, Maryland (the "Medical Services Company"). During this interview, the Medical Services Company official confirmed that between in or about December 2003 up to and including in or about November 2004, MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, a/k/a "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," the defendant, had been working as a paramedic at the Medical Services Company.

24. On or about June 6, 2005, other FBI agents and I interviewed an individual with ties to the mosque in Beacon, New York ("Witness-1"). Witness-1 indicated that Shah had conducted martial arts training at the Beacon mosque in or about 2001. Witness-1 also indicated that Shah had invited a male from the Baltimore area to train at the mosque although Witness-1 did not recall the name of this individual. Witness-1 further indicated that, in essence, Shah was asked by officials at the mosque to cease the martial arts training soon after September 11, 2001, because it was inappropriate. Witness-1 was shown surveillance photos of BRENT. He did not recognize BRENT from those photos.

DOJ_NMG_0145972

25. On or about June 14, 2005, other FBI agents and I interviewed a second individual with ties to the mosque in Beacon ("Witness-2"). Witness-2 stated that, in or around July 2002, he learned that Shah had sought permission for a person from Baltimore to live at the mosque for a period of time. Witness-2 saw this person with Shah. I showed Witness-2 surveillance photos of MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, and he identified BRENT as the individual he had seen with Shah at the mosque.

WHEREFORE, deponent prays that an arrest warrant issue for MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, a/k/a "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," the defendant, and that he be arrested and imprisoned or bailed, as the case may be.

U.S. ARRESTS MARYLAND MAN FOR PROVIDING MATERIAL SUPPORT TO FOREIGN TERRORIST ORGANIZATION

DAVID N. KELLEY, the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York, MARK J. MARSHON, the Assistant Director in Charge of the New York Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and RAYMOND W. KELLY, the Commissioner of the New York City Police Department, announced today the arrest of MAHMUD FARUQ BRENT, also known as "Mahmud Al Mutazzim," on a criminal complaint charging him with conspiracy to provide material support or resources to the Lashkar-e-Taiba foreign terrorist organization.

The complaint alleges that BRENT, of Gwynn Oak, Maryland, conspired to provide material support or resources to Lashkar-e-Taiba ("Lashkar") from in or about 2001 up through May 2005, by, among other things, attending a terrorist training camp run by Lashkar in Pakistan. Lashkar was designated as a Foreign Terrorist Organization in December 2001. The complaint also alleges that BRENT received martial arts training from Tarik Shah, who is presently under indictment in the Southern District of New York on similar charges.

Shah was allegedly found to be in possession of an address book containing telephone numbers for "Mahmud Almutazzim" and "Sayfullah." Telephone records reveal that one of the numbers listed for "Almutazzim" was subscribed to by BRENT's wife at his home in Gwynn Oak, Maryland, and that the number listed for "Sayfullah" was subscribed to at an address known to have been used by Seifullah Chapman. Chapman has been convicted in the Eastern District of Virginia of multiple terrorism and firearms charges as part of the Virginia Jihad Network prosecutions.

In a recorded conversation with an undercover FBI agent, Shah allegedly mentioned the names of several students with whom he had studied martial arts and who had gone overseas to training camps in Afghanistan and Yemen, including "Mahmud Al Mutazzim." It is alleged, among other things, Shah reported that Al Mutazzim had told him how "difficult" it was to be back in the United States and not to be in training. Shah allegedly said that Al Mutazzim could be trusted because he was a longtime student of his who, after leaving school, started "seeking the way to become Mujahideen." Shah also allegedly told the undercover agent that he intended to call Al Mutazzim to enlist his help to prepare a demonstration video to be used for martial arts training of jihadists. Phone records reveal a subsequent 16-minute telephone call between phones used by Shah and Al Mutazzim.

After Shah was arrested on May 28, 2005, he provided additional details regarding his relationship with Al Mutazzim. Specifically, Shah admitted that he had trained Al Mutazzim in martial arts when they both lived in Beacon, New York, in 2001, and that they often watched martial arts training videos and other videos about jihad in Bosnia. During this period, Al Mutazzim allegedly introduced Shah to Seifullah Chapman in the Washington, D.C. area. It is alleged that later, when Al Mutazzim returned to the United States in or about 2002, Al Mutazzim mentioned to Shah that he had gone to a "camp."

On the same day as Shah's arrest, Shah agreed to meet with BRENT and to allow the FBI to record the encounter. Shah and BRENT met at a hotel in the vicinity of Columbia, Maryland. Allegedly, during that meeting, when Shah indicated that he wanted to "travel," BRENT replied that his "connections" were "kinda gone," in light of what had been happening in the community and that his only "connect" was "doing time now." According to the complaint, BRENT explained that he never really "knew names" since that was the "way that they had it set up" over there and that, at the time he went to the camps, everything was "really organized." BRENT allegedly described the difficulties he encountered in reaching the "camps" and the process by which he was able to find a connection to get into the camps, although he told Shah that he would not "mention" his connection's name to Shah. It is alleged that BRENT encouraged Shah to travel overseas to the camps and told Shah that it was a question of "how much" Shah was willing to "sacrifice" and whether Shah was willing to "take a risk." BRENT allegedly explained how difficult it was to make the trip since it was difficult to "trust" people in the current climate and noted that "we don't know who is who," and that "we were not in a position to make new friends." BRENT also allegedly indicated that he had traveled to Pakistan. The complaint charges that, when Shah inquired whether BRENT had stayed in the city, BRENT responded that he had not been in the cities but had been up in the "mountains" training "and stuff" with "the mujahideen, the fighters." BRENT allegedly stated that because of "treaties with Bush," it became dangerous for "foreigners," like BRENT, to stay in the camps, and so they moved him around from place to place. BRENT also allegedly stated that he had agreed to provide whatever "assistance" he could over there and expressed his hope that Allah would bless him for his efforts. BRENT allegedly stated that he would never "go back" on his decision to go to the camps and that it was "one of the better decisions in my life."

BRENT is scheduled to appear this afternoon before United States Magistrate Judge FRANK MAAS in Manhattan federal court.

A search warrant was executed at BRENT's home in Maryland at approximately the same time as BRENT's arrest by members of the Baltimore Joint Terrorism Task Force.

Mr. KELLEY praised the efforts of the New York Joint Terrorism Task Force, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the New York City Police Department, for their efforts in this continuing investigation. Mr. KELLEY also thanked the members of the New Jersey and Maryland Joint Terrorism Task Forces who assisted with the arrest and search.

Assistant United States Attorneys VICTOR L. HOU and KARL METZNER are in charge of this prosecution.

The charges in the complaint are merely accusations, and the defendant is presumed innocent unless and until proven guilty.

NATIONAL WHITE COLLAR CRIME CENTER
INTEGRITY QUALITY SERVICE

Background on the National White Collar Crime Center:
The mission of National White Collar Crime Center (NW3C) is to provide a nationwide support system for agencies involved in the prevention, investigation, and prosecution of economic and high-tech crimes and to support and partner with other appropriate entities in addressing homeland security initiatives, as they relate to economic and high-tech crimes.

NW3C is a federally-funded, non-profit corporation whose membership primarily comprises law enforcement agencies, state regulatory bodies with criminal investigative authority, and state and local prosecution offices.

While NW3C has no investigative authority itself, its job is to help law enforcement agencies better understand and utilize tools to combat economic and high-tech crime. These tools include:

- Training to educate investigators and computer forensic examiners on how to conduct searches and seizures, locate and maintain computer related evidence, and how to testify in computer related cases.

- NW3C will also assist agencies with investigations by providing access to computer forensic examiners, intelligence analysts, and can provide funding needed to assist with complex economic and high-tech cases.

- Public records searches help members gather intelligence on their investigations targets for locator information, address history, assets owned, and business associations. Analytical services assist our member agencies with the mounds of paperwork associated with any financial case.

- The Internet Fraud Complaint Center (IFCC) is a partnership between the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) and the National White Collar Crime Center (NW3C). Their mission is to address fraud committed over the Internet. For victims of Internet fraud a convenient and easy-to-use reporting mechanism that alerts authorities of a suspected criminal or civil violation. For law enforcement and regulatory agencies at all levels, a central repository for complaints related to Internet fraud, works to quantify fraud patterns, and provides timely statistical data of current fraud trends.

- The coordination of information sharing with members, partners, and other constituencies is essential to the core functions of training, investigative support, and research. The most prominent is "The Informant" magazine published 3 times in FY04 with 47,232 distributed (target was 40,500).

Background on the NW3C Economic Summit:

- This s the 9th year NW3C has been conducting Economic Crime Summits, the project began in 1997.

- 2005 is the second year for the "regional" approach to the Summits.

- In 2004, there were over 750 attendees (in total) who participated in one of the three regional summits.

- Who attends? Law enforcement personnel, security professionals in the private and public sector, victim and consumer services advocates, fraud investigators, auditors, loss prevention specialists, corporate officials, prosecutors, research and academic professionals interested in fraud prevention and economic crime, technology and business professionals.

Information about Economic Summit in Minneapolis, MN:

- Expected number of attendees is over 200.

- Subjects highlighted at the Summit:
  - Identity Theft
  - Elder Fraud
  - Internet Related Crimes

- Minneapolis is the second Summit for 2005 with the final being in Phoenix, AZ in November. (the first Summit for 2005 was in Tampa, FL, in May)

- The Department of Justice/Office of Justice Programs is a co-sponsor of the event.

- The focus of the Summit is to build the bridges that:
  - Encourages networking between private companies and public sector agencies

  - Provides information on model programs

  - Shares best practices addressing economic and high-tech crime issues at many levels.

Talking Points for the National White Collar Crime Economic Summit

Minneapolis, MN
August 9-10, 2005

Identity Theft

- Identity theft has been referred to by some as the crime of the new millennium. Due to its ability to be accomplished anonymously, easily, and through a variety of means.

- As you know from working in the field the impact upon the victim is devastating, not to mention the impact and strain on agencies to investigate and then prosecute.

- In 2004, Consumer Sentinel, the complaint database developed and maintained by the FTC, received over 635,000 consumer fraud and identity theft complaints. Consumers reported losses from fraud of more than $547 million.

- Credit card fraud (28%) was the most common from of reported identity theft followed by phone or utilities fraud (19%), bank fraud (18%) and employment fraud (13%).

- FTC also reported that during the study's final year, losses to businesses and financial institutions totaled nearly $48 billion and consumer victims reported $5 billion in out-of-pocket expenses. Clearly, this is an epidemic that must be brought under control.

- In 1998, Federal legislation was enacted under the "Identity Theft and Assumption Deterrence Act" that created a new offense of identity theft, which prohibits knowingly transfer[ring] or us[ing], without lawful authority, a means of identification of another person with the intent to commit, or to aid or abet, any unlawful activity that constitutes a violation of Federal law, or that constitutes a felony under any applicable State or local law.

- Recent Cases:
    - Central California - A woman pleaded guilty to federal charges of using a stolen Social Security number to obtain thousands of dollars in credit and then filing for bankruptcy in the name of her victim.

    - California - a man was indicted, pleaded guilty to federal charges and was sentenced to 27 months' imprisonment for obtaining private bank account information about an insurance company's policyholders and using that information to deposit $764,000 in counterfeit checks in his account.

    - Kansas - A defendant pleaded guilty to conspiracy, odometer fraud, and mail fraud for operating an odometer "rollback" scheme on used cars. The defendant used false and assumed identities, including the identities of deceased persons, to obtain false ID documents and fraudulent car titles.

Eldery Fraud

- According to the 2000 Census, one 1 in 7 Americans is a senior citizen, with those 60 and over making 15% of the US population. This means 30 % of all fraud is committed against this group. That's twice the normal rate.

- The top frauds victimizing people 60 and over include Lotteries/Lottery Clubs, Phishing(pronounced FISHING – getting personal information about an individual through the Internet), Information/Adult Services, and Nigerian Money Offers

- Why is this group a target? Due to retirement, isolation, and/or declining health they are there to open the door or answer the phone. This makes them a target for fraud schemes and con artists.

- The unique element of Elder Fraud is it can occur just as easily, if not easier, through technology and the con artist doesn't even have to face the victim. As you know telemarketing schemes and phone scams are attacking our elderly on a daily basis.

- The sad story, many of the victims from this group do not report they have been victimized because they are embarrassed to admit they had been conned. Not only is it important to investigate and make arrest on these crimes, but educating this group is extremely important. This requires investigators and prevention officers to work closely in an effort to educate and encourage reports of this type of fraud.

- Examples:
    - A Virginia woman paid a door-to-door yard service worker a total of $26,310 over a three-month period for pruning and planting work in her modest yard. After completing an initial job costing $1,710, the worker showed up repeatedly to solicit more work. He made outright demands for work and payment until the terrified homeowner called the police, who promptly arrested the man.

    - In one case, a telemarketer was trying to get potential investors to buy space for a satellite on a space shuttle. The space would cost $2.5 million for the company to reserve, but the telemarketer said it could sell the space to another company in another five years for as much as $5 million. The pitch urged investors to "act now and not to let anyone in on the great deal" that they were about to receive.

    - As part of Operation Roaming Charge, U. S. Postal Inspectors and other law enforcement agencies have convicted 64 individuals for fraud, and Postal Inspectors have responded to over 158,000 mail fraud complaints since 2003.

Internet Related Crimes

- When I think of computer crimes I remember the 1983 movie "War Games," with Matthew Broderick and Ally Sheedy who play high school students who inadvertently access the NORAD computer network, thinking that they are merely playing a "war game" with the computers. Sheedy asks: "Isn't that a crime"? Broderick's reply: "Not if you are under eighteen."

- As futuristic as that was for 1983, as you know, the teens of today have the equipment, technology, knowledge, and ability to hack into systems, steal codes, find the highly guarded version of new video games, not only from their home, but right under the same roof as the unknowing parents.

- We are all aware that the Internet continues to grow as do the new methods to commit some type of crime. Though traditional spam categories--medication, mortgage and pornography--continue to dominate, new ones such as stock scams are growing, according to the study, which covered the first six months of 2005.

- Phishing attacks have led to an estimated $2.75 billion in losses related to ATM and debit cards over the past 12 months. These numbers come from a recent Gartner report. The report also included a survey of US bank customers that lead Gartner to estimate that 3 million Americans have lost an average of more than $900 each due to online scams over the past year. (2004)

- The Federal Cyber Crime program works to prevent criminals, sexual predators and others intent on malicious destruction from using the Internet and online services to steal from, defraud and otherwise victimize citizens, businesses and communities. Although to really address these issues a stronger working relationship is needed between all levels of government, especially at the local level where these types of crimes are being committed in homes in each of our neighborhoods.

- Cases:
    - Disgruntled Phillies fan was convicted of 79 counts of computer fraud and identity fraud for hacking into computers belonging to numerous individuals and then launching hundreds of thousands of spam e-mails complaining about the Phillies. He used e-mail addresses of writers at the Philadelphia Daily News, Philadelphia Inquirer, The Sporting News, Fox Sports, ESPN, and officials at Knight Ridder, the parent company of the Inquirer and Daily News. The spammer was sentenced to 4 years in prison

    - A Minnesota man was sentenced to 18 months in prison for creating and unleashing a variant of the MS Blaster Computer Worm. The government estimated 48,000 computers were infected. The Judge stated "What you've done is a terrible thing. Aside from injuring people and their computers you shook the foundation of technology." The individual was only 19 years old.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
XXXX, August XX, 2005

Phone: [redacted]
Fax: (202) 616-6993

WASHINGTON, D.C.- Mauricio Tamargo, Chairman of the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission, announced today the commencement of a Second Cuban Claims Program to receive claims of U.S. citizens or corporations against the Government of Cuba for previously unajudicated losses of real and personal property taken after May 1, 1967.

In the earlier Cuban Claims Program (under Section 1643 of Title 22, U.S. Code), completed on July 6, 1972, the Commission certified 5,911 claims to the U.S. Department of State. Any new claims certified as valid by the Commission will be added to those already certified in the previous program. Although there are no funds currently available to make payment on any American claims, the certification of the Commission's findings to the Secretary of State will be used as a basis for future negotiation of a claims settlement with the Government of Cuba.

This Second Cuban Claims Program provides for claims of U.S. citizens or corporations that would have been eligible under the earlier Program, but for the fact that they did not arise by the time of the filing deadline of May 1, 1967 and were not otherwise adjudicated by the Commission prior to completion of the earlier Program. The filing deadline for these claims is XXXX XX, 2006. Chairman Tamargo emphasized the program is open only to those who were U.S. citizens or an American corporation at the time their property was taken.

All inquiries concerning these claims should be forwarded directly to the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission of the United States, 600 E Street N.W., Suite 6002, Washington, D.C. 20579, Phone: [redacted], Fax: (202) 616-6993.

The Foreign Claims Settlement Commission of the United States (FCSC) is a quasi-judicial, independent agency within the Department of Justice which adjudicates claims of U.S. nationals against foreign governments. More information about the Commission is available at http://www.usdoj.gov/fcsc/.

Subject: FW: Final Draft -- Cuba Claims Press Release

Tasia,

This is the draft press release that will be sent out once the official notice appears in the federal register. Please look it over and let me know any changes you think should be made.

As you can see from the draft it is a narrow group that would be eligible to make claims. There is no way to know for sure but we expect only a few claims. We are sure of only one claimant and he is the one who contacted the Secretary of State and requested the referral. That is Starwood Resorts who owned a sizable amount of land in Havana Cuba where they operated a telephone tower for many years until a hurricane put it out of business. According to their documents, which we will investigate, the Government of Cuba confiscated everything in 2003. DOS decided that they needed to refer all new property claims since the end of the old Cuban Claims Program to the FCSC to be added to the already certified American claims against Cuba.

We, (or hopefully you) need to be ready to highlight a few key facts. As in all past 47 claims programs, the claimants must have been American citizens at the time of the confiscation. Also the claim cannot be for a personal injury or death - only property. If they ask why only property, I would suggest they ask the State Department. The claim must be only for new confiscations that arose after the end of the last Cuban Program. If they ask why only takings after May 1, 1967, the answer to that one is that all takings that occurred before that date already had an opportunity to file a claim in the earlier program and it would not be fair to give them a second shot at the apple.

The draft press release below should be sent out the day the notice appears in the federal register. The dates and deadlines will be added when we know the dates of publication in the fed register. I believe it should go out all major news outlets. Certainly all print, maybe not TV, if you wish to eliminate any. I will understand if the Attorney General does not wish to be included in this announcement.

I look forward to meeting you sometime and thank you for your help with this.

I spoke to Cybele Daley, OJP DAAG. She agrees with our concerns about protocol here. She will call OJJDP leadership and pull the plug on tomorrow's WH briefing. She will require OJJDP to walk us through the tool first. There is, however, a deadline in that FLOTUS staff want to be briefed before POTUS and FLOTUS go to Crawford this week. So we will need to schedule our briefing in the next day or so. Raul, I know you are out tomorrow. Are you back on Wed.? If not, do you want me to handle alone, or Courtney would you like to sit in if Raul cannot? Please let me know. But the immediate issue of tomorrow's briefing appears to have been taken care of. rah

Tasia reported that she is getting an increasing number of press inquiries (Newsweek, NYT, et al.) asking who, if anyone, will oversee Fitzgerald once Comey leaves and what procedures, if any, there are for Fitzgerald's oversight (e.g., any documents laying out the terms of the investigation). Mercer said he'd look into an answer for Tasia. Thought you'd also want to know. It may be a good idea for you and Bill to get a handle on what procedures were set in place at the outset of the investigation, if any, and perhaps to get a download from Comey before he departs.

Separately, FYI, Tasia reported that sh's working to schedule a conference for US Attys here in DC this Fall; first time such a conf will be held in about 8 years.

Prepared Remarks of Attorney General John Ashcroft
Announcement of "Operation Cyber Sweep"
Thursday, November 20, 2003

(Please Note: The Attorney General Often Deviates From Prepared Remarks)

The Information Superhighway should be a conduit for communication, information and commerce, not an expressway to crime. It is a top federal law enforcement priority to stop crime on the Internet.

That is why the DOJ is announcing Operation Cyber Sweep, the most productive, coordinated law enforcement operation that law enforcement has ever conducted against online crime.

The nationwide dimension of Operation Cyber Sweep began on October 1 of this year and already has been an unqualified success. Over the past seven weeks, this coordinated criminal investigation has netted:

- More than 125 investigations, in which more than 125,000 victims lost more than $100 million;
- More than 350 targeted subjects, resulting in more than 125 arrests or convictions thus far; and,
- More than 70 indictments to date, and the execution of more than 90 search/seizure warrants.

Although it closely resembles traditional economic crime in many ways, online economic crime has two distinctive features:

- First, the online crimes are increasingly multi-jurisdictional. The criminals may be half-way around the world, but the Internet gets them close enough to pick the virtual pockets of consumers faster than it takes to send an e-mail.

- Second, online criminals are using more sophisticated techniques to conceal their true identities or locations from law enforcement.

Law enforcement faces the challenge of adapting and outthinking Internet criminals and online abusers. So we are upgrading our capacity to make the World Wide Web a safer place by using the combined resources of federal, state, local and international law enforcement agencies.

Operation Cyber Sweep is the largest, most successful Internet investigation undertaken by law enforcement to date. It involves the collective efforts of:

- 34 United States Attorneys' Offices
- FBI
- Postal Inspection Service
- Federal Trade Commission
- Secret Service
- Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and
- The Criminal Division of the Justice Department.

These agencies have joined together to conduct Operation Cyber Sweep, a concentrated series of prosecutions and other enforcement actions that have targeted major forms of online economic crime, including:

- Identity theft. In one case, an individual pleaded guilty in Alexandria, Virginia, to conspiracy to possess unauthorized access devices. This individual engaged in so-called "phishing" - sending thousands of fake e-mail messages to America Online customers, and advising them to update their credit card or personal information with AOL to maintain their accounts.
- Investment fraud. An individual pleaded guilty for his role in two separate online-investment-fraud schemes in Virginia and Tennessee. The first scheme involved an Internet website for a fictitious investment club that offered investors tax-free, double-digit, returns. His other scheme involved another bogus investment website built using information and photos stolen from other, legitimate business websites.
- Software piracy. An individual was indicted in the Eastern District of Missouri on fraud and copyright infringement charges for selling counterfeit copies of computer software programs on eBay.

- Counterfeit product fraud. In a precursor case that led up to Operation Cyber Sweep, a Southern California computer supply company executive was convicted of criminal trademark violations. At trial, the evidence showed that the defendant had counterfeited at least $5 million to $7 million of Compaq computer memory modules, which numbered in the tens of thousands.

Our last operation of this type, Operation E-Con, ran from January 1 to May 16, 2003. That operation involved more than 90 investigations, the execution of more than 70 search and seizure warrants, and the charging or conviction of more than 130 individuals. Combined, these online investigations have saved consumers and businesses hundreds of millions of dollars.

After "Operation E-Con", federal law enforcement recognized the need to secure cooperation from a number of foreign countries in investigating and prosecuting major international Internet fraud schemes.

Over the past six months, I am pleased to say the level of cooperation we have obtained from foreign law enforcement has increased dramatically. As a result of cooperation from the Ghana Police Department, under the leadership of Deputy Inspector General Patrick Acheampong [ACK-ey-pong], we made substantial progress in a number of Internet investigations. We are deeply indebted to the Ghana Police Department for its valuable contributions to Operation Cyber Sweep.

In addition, the FBI Legal Attaché in Lagos, Nigeria, works closely with the newly created Nigerian Economic and Financial Fraud Commission against various international online fraud schemes. As a result of the joint efforts between the FBI and law enforcement officers in Nigeria, the Legal Attaché has to date assisted in the recovery of more than $100,000 in merchandise and $2.1 million in fraudulent cashier's checks.

I emphasize that the significant accomplishments of this operation are due, in large measure, to the contributions of state and local law enforcement. State and local prosecutors from across the nation and police departments from Lewiston, Maine to Kent, Washington, played an integral part in Operation Cyber Sweep.

In addition, the National White Collar Crime Center proved yet again to be a valued and effective partner with the FBI in operating the Internet Fraud Complaint Center. In the first nine months of 2003, the IFCC has referred more than 58,000 Internet-related fraud complaints to law enforcement. Glen Gainer, who is the Chairman of the National White Collar Crime Center, is here with us, and I thank him and his staff for their continuing contributions.

If citizens or companies believe they have been the victims of on-line fraud, complaint forms can be found on-line at www.ifccfbi.gov <http://www.ifccfbi.gov>. That is: www.ifccfbi.gov <http://www.ifccfbi.gov>. The Federal Trade Commission also has forms at www.ftc.gov <http://www.ftc.gov>.

I am also pleased to note that a number of major corporations and trade associations have been strong supporters of Operation Cyber Sweep. Our success in combating cyber-crime depends on the alliance between law enforcement and the private sector to share information that identifies and roots out cyber-schemes of all types.

Finally, I want to call attention to the roles played by two Sections of the Department's Criminal Division: the Fraud Section, which oversees the Department's nationwide initiative on Internet fraud prosecutions, and the Computer Crime and Intellectual Property Section, which is overseeing the Department's prosecutorial efforts against intellectual property crimes and computer-related crimes.

I turn now to FBI Assistant Director Jana Monroe for her remarks.

Prepared Remarks of Attorney General John Ashcroft
World Economic Forum - Davos, Switzerland
January 22, 2004

(Please Note: The Attorney General Often Deviates From Prepared Remarks)

Thank you. It is a pleasure to join you here in Switzerland. I thank President [Klaus] Schwab and the World Economic Forum for the invitation to speak with you today.

Last year when many of us met here, the focus was quite naturally on our common effort against global terrorism. Our terrorist enemies have sworn to decimate liberty, to undermine the rule of law and to disrupt free markets. We, in turn, have banded together in defense of our ideals. Terrorists sought a world divided by hate and oppression, but instead have helped to unite all freedom-loving nations.

We are winning this war against terrorism. But there are other threats to our values, and to the capacity of business and government to work together to end the plague of poverty and expand human achievement. I would like to discuss one of the most pressing threats to opportunity and human achievement today … corruption … and how the world is uniting to combat it.

The fight against corruption has commanded my attention since my first days of service as Attorney General. My first international responsibility was to lead the U.S. delegation to the second World Forum on corruption held in The Hague in 2001. In the intervening years, the international effort against terrorism has not obscured my dream of government integrity and public trust. In fact, last month, I joined with officials of 94 other nations in Merida, Mexico, for the signing of the landmark United Nations International Convention Against Corruption.

Just as our most basic ideals of liberty and the rule of law can be traced back to the time of Hammurabi, so, too, can the threat corruption poses to those ideals.

Moses warned the children of Israel, quote, "Do not accept a bribe, for a bribe blinds the eyes of the wise and twists the words of the righteous." Mohammed, referring to giving what is due the people, said, quote, "Give full measure and full weight in justice. Do not evil in the earth, causing corruption."

The 20th Century taught us forcefully that free people operating in free markets are the greatest force man has ever known for overcoming the scourge of poverty, while creating opportunity and achievement for all.

The success of this system, though, depends on a marketplace of integrity. When governments play favorites … when they award contracts and make decisions based on corruption that favors the connected, rather than competition that favors the citizenry … freedom is stymied.

When corruption intrudes, the invisible hand that guides the market is replaced by a greased palm. And officials who pocket payoffs do not just violate the integrity of the marketplace.

They tax the poor to benefit the corrupt.

They deny their people better roads, cleaner water, and stronger schools.

They strangle the culture of productivity that is the death knell of impoverishment and the life force of human achievement.

The goal of law enforcement, then, is clear: Equal opportunity in the marketplace must be defended. Trust must not be abused. Confidence must be sustained. The marketplace of integrity must not be contaminated by a corrupt contagion of greed.

Shockingly, until recently, corruption … and terrorism for that matter … were viewed as regional problems beyond international discussion and cooperation.

In some nations, bribes were actually allowed as tax write-offs, a cost to be deducted at home for doing business abroad. These governments engaged in the delusion that they could subsidize bribe-paying abroad while expecting these same companies to behave morally at home.

But let me be clear: no society has ever been totally free from corruption. Even the most successful and longest-established market societies experience corruption. For example, in 2002, the United States Justice Department dealt with more than 1,000 federal prosecutions of corrupt officials on the federal, state and local levels.

World Bank studies estimate that negative effects of corruption can reduce a country's economic growth rate by as much as a full percentage point each year.

Overall, the World Bank estimates that the cost of corruption represents about seven percent of the annual world economy, roughly 2.3 trillion dollars. This is a staggering amount … a figure that is equal to the entire federal budget of the United States government [2.2 trillion dollars].

Think of the jobs, the infrastructure, and the educational systems that 2.3 trillion dollars could provide if it were redirected from the personal enrichment of the corrupt to the public service of the people. Think of the rising tide of trust and productivity that would result … a tide that would lift all citizens, especially the poor among us.

Today, with accelerated economic globalization and rapid advances in technology, corruption is a contagion that cannot be contained by borders. Corruption facilitates and perpetuates such transnational criminal activity as organized crime, money laundering, drug trafficking, and the smuggling of human beings.

Corruption provides sanctuary to the forces of terror, aiding the smuggling of biological, chemical or nuclear weapons materials.

Corruption draws the business community into a web of deceit and graft, making them co-conspirators in picking the pockets of ordinary people. After all, if businesses must pay to gain a position, they will make certain that position pays off.

Corruption saps the legitimacy of democratic governments. In its extreme forms, corruption even threatens democracy itself, because democracy lives on trust, and corruption destroys trust.

Perhaps worst of all, corruption limits the unique ability of all human beings to flourish in freedom.

Austrian economist and Nobel Prize-winner, Friedrich von Hayek, noted in his seminal book, "The Road to Serfdom," that when man is able to pursue his goals unfettered in an open, competitive market place of integrity, the creative capacity in him is unleashed, benefiting all.

Freedom's greatest gift is the ability of every individual to fulfill his or her God-given potential. When corruption robs us of this gift, it diminishes each and every one of us.

I believe that with an understanding of the threat posed by corruption also comes an opportunity for us to defeat it. If corruption is an age-old threat, the 21st Century presents us with an unparalleled opportunity to defeat it through a combination of visionary leadership, unprecedented cooperation, and openness and transparency.

First, leadership.

To be sustainable over time, the political will necessary to succeed against corruption requires a moral foundation. Economic and political interests may shift, but the morality of fighting corruption is a constant. It is common ground that all governments and private citizens can and should share.

The Honorable Ki Raitu Murungi, the Minister of Justice in Kenya, explained why his country was combating corruption. Quote, "[Corruption] has killed our children. It has destroyed our society. It is the fundamental cause of our high levels of poverty, unemployment and social backwardness. For us in Kenya, the fight against corruption is a matter of life and death. It cannot wait for tomorrow. The time is now."

Notably, Kenya was the first nation to ratify the U.N. anti-corruption treaty, and it is to be congratulated for taking that courageous step. But words of leadership must be backed by actions of leadership, and this is my second point: the unprecedented level of cooperation that is developing to combat corruption.

Back in the 1970s, investigations by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission revealed unethical and immoral practices on the part of American firms seeking business abroad. In response to public outrage, the United States passed the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act in 1977.

This act, with its strong criminal penalties, influenced American businesses to develop corporate compliance codes and to establish ethical guidelines to fight bribery and corruption. To enlist other countries in the movement toward good governance, the United States strongly supported the OECD Anti-bribery Convention, which entered into force in 1999 and now has 35 nations working together to help strengthen its implementation.

Over the past ten years, multilateral organizations such as the Organization of American States, the Council of Europe, and the Southern African Development Community have all committed to some form of a mutual peer review process designed to identify, combat and prevent corruption.

In addition, we have seen the creation of the Global Forum on Fighting Corruption and Safeguarding Integrity, which on two occasions during the past three years has gathered more than 100 nations to discuss ways to combat corruption.

These regional and multilateral efforts culminated in the signing of the U.N. treaty to combat corruption in Merida, Mexico, last month. As evidenced by the 95 nations that signed the U.N. treaty, there is now a worldwide conviction that the crime of corruption … which sacrifices prosperity for personal profit, and human achievement for human greed … must be defeated. With each prosecution of a corrupt government official, we reinforce the principle that the purpose of government is to serve the people.

We must use the tools of investigation and prosecution to bring the corrupt to justice, but we must also do more.

We know from our war against terrorism that it is not enough to act after attacks have been perpetrated. To defeat terrorism we must prevent acts from occurring in the first place. Just as we cannot wait for the next terrorist to strike, we must not wait for the next bribe to be paid before moving to stop future corrupt activity.

Technology gives us the tools we need to be forward-looking in the fight against corruption … to achieve a world in which corruption is not merely prosecuted, but prevented … not merely detected, but deterred.

This is my third point: Information - or transparency - is the enemy of corruption. Corruption feeds and breeds from secrecy and ignorance. It cannot thrive under the light spread by an open, informed society.

Today, with the explosive growth of the Internet and 500-channel digital satellite broadcasting, information has never moved more quickly, to more people, with more purpose. As the various financial crises and our effort to deal with the corporate scandals in the United States has confirmed, information is the most therapeutic resource we have in achieving integrity in our markets and in our government.

When evidence of corruption is presented to the public, institutions are held accountable. In this way, open government becomes an essential tool to creating good government.

One example of this is in Uganda. When the government there published the amount of funds allocated to local school districts, the amount actually received by the schools rose from 28 percent to 90 percent.

Transparency and openness facilitates not only a flow of information, but also a flow of capital. This is particularly helpful in developing nations, where investors have shown an unwillingness to make large commitments to development efforts without signs of governmental integrity.

To encourage transparency and accountability, President Bush created the Millennium Challenge Account, which pledges $5 billion in development aid over the next three years. But this new assistance will only be made available to countries that rule justly, invest in their people and stand firmly against corruption.

The United States is committed to working with other governments, citizens, businesses and non-governmental organizations to defeat corruption. By declaring that corruption is not an acceptable part of doing business, we will spread the blessings of freedom and the rule of law. Impoverishment will be vanquished. Opportunity and human achievement will be available to all, not just the privileged and corrupt few.

Twenty-eight months ago, all free nations were called to defend freedom from terrorism. Today we are called to defend our freedom from corruption. Each of us must pledge to answer this call, because, in the end, government alone cannot promote the opportunity and achievement that flourish in the absence of corruption. It is up to business leaders and government leaders alike to set high ethical standards. And if we do, we will turn a zero-sum contest of corruption into a framework of freedom that benefits all.

For with each word of leadership, we send the unmistakable message that government will not be sold to the highest bidder.

With each example of courage, we send the message that the poor will not be held hostage by the greedy and corrupt.

And with each act of justice, we send the message that citizens - all citizens - will not be denied the opportunity to achieve a better, more prosperous life in a world of freedom.

Thank you very much.

FACT SHEET

SECOND YEAR ANNIVERSARY OF PRESIDENT BUSH'S CORPORATE FRAUD TASK FORCE

President Bush's Leadership in Restoring Confidence to the Marketplace

"[I]t is time to reaffirm the basic principles and rules that make capitalism work - truthful books and honest people, and well-enforced laws against fraud and corruption."

- President George W. Bush, announcing the Task Force's formation on July 9, 2002

"The President's Corporate Fraud Task Force ... can, however, do one thing, and that is what we are here today to do: to restore public confidence in our financial markets and in our criminal justice system - to make people know we will continue to work like crazy until we have brought all corporate crooks to justice."
- Deputy Attorney General James Comey, announcing charges from the Enron investigation on July 8, 2004

The Task Force's Second-Year Anniversary. During its second year, the President's Corporate Fraud Task Force improved on its strong first year record in combating corporate fraud and punishing corporate wrongdoers. Not only did Task Force members equal their efforts and accomplishments from the year prior, in many instances, they far surpassed them. On the criminal enforcement front, federal prosecutors began to try a number of high profile cases resulting in important convictions in the Adelphia, Craig Consumer Electronics,

DOJ_NMG_ 0146027

Dynegy, Martha Stewart, Frank Quattrone, Unify, Graham-Field Health Products, and U.S. Technologies matters. On the civil enforcement front, the SEC obtained a $2.25 billion penalty, the largest in SEC history, against WorldCom, and settled significant financial fraud, reporting, and disclosure cases with companies including Gemstar-TV Guide International, Lucent Technologies Inc., and Vivendi Universal, S.A. The SEC also brought and settled significant cases against mutual funds and their executives, financial services providers, and brokers for alleged fraudulent conduct relating to market timing and late trading in fund shares, including settlements with Alliance Capital Management L.P. and Massachusetts Financial Services Co.

President Bush created the Corporate Fraud Task Force by Executive Order No. 13271 on July 9, 2002. It is chaired by Deputy Attorney General James B. Comey and includes senior Department of Justice officials, the heads of the Departments of Treasury and Labor, and the heads of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Commodity Futures Trading Commission, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, Federal Communications Commission, Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight, and United States Postal Inspection Service.

Through fair, swift and decisive actions, the Task Force continues to remove suspicion, doubt, and uncertainty that pervaded the marketplace only two years ago. Investor confidence is returning and the public is recognizing that the vast majority of corporate leaders are honest and ethical stewards of their shareholders and employees. The Task Force's actions are successfully working to:

- Restore confidence to the marketplace;
- Provide fair and accurate information to the investing public;
- Reward shareholder and employee trust; and
- Protect jobs and savings of hard-working Americans.

Prosecuting Corporate Fraud Criminally. Justice Department prosecutors throughout the country, working hand in hand with regulatory Task Force members and investigators from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Internal Revenue Service's Criminal Investigation division, and U.S. Postal Inspection Service, have responded to President Bush's call to get tough on corporate crime. Since the inception of the Task Force through May 31, 2004, prosecutors and investigators had:

- Obtained over 500 corporate fraud convictions or guilty pleas;

- Charged over 900 defendants and over 60 corporate CEOs and presidents with some type of corporate fraud crime in connection with over 400 filed cases; and

- Obtained charges against 31 Enron defendants, including 21 former Enron executives, obtained the convictions of 11 Enron defendants including its former CFO and treasurer, and seized over $161 million for the benefit of victims of the frauds at Enron.

Aggressively Pursuing Civil and Regulatory Enforcement Actions. During the Task Force's second year, civil and regulatory Task Force members, often in actions parallel to criminal actions, and in coordination with criminal investigators and prosecutors, actively pursued enforcement actions to protect investors and consumers from corporate fraud.

Securities and Exchange Commission: During fiscal year 2003 (October 1, 2002-September 30, 2003), the SEC filed 199 financial fraud and reporting cases. From October 1, 2003 through June 21, 2004, the SEC filed 350 enforcement actions, 72 of which involved financial fraud or reporting. Thirty-two companies have been suspended from trading, and the SEC has sought asset freezes against individuals and companies in 36 cases. In addition, the SEC has sought to bar 110 corporate executives and directors from again serving in publicly traded companies. The SEC has used its new enforcement authority under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, which the President signed into law on July 30, 2002, to it's fullest extent in seeking to improve corporate responsibility and protect America's shareholders and workers, including using the "Fair Funds" provision in many recent settlements. The SEC has collected over $432 million to be returned to victims of the Enron fraud, pursuant to this authority.

Last fall, when a number of disturbing scandals involving mutual funds came to light, the SEC responded. During fiscal year 2003 through the present, the SEC filed 41 mutual fund-related enforcement actions and obtained orders for close to one billion dollars in penalties and disgorgements related to mutual funds, all of which will be returned to investors. Moreover, the SEC has proposed some 15 new mutual fund reforms, all in response to these mutual fund scandals.

Commodity Futures Trading Commission: From July 1, 2003 to June 30, 2004, the CFTC instituted 68 enforcement actions - a 17% increase over the prior year - against 193 defendants. It obtained permanent injunctions against 58 defendants and restraining orders to freeze assets and preserve books and records against 77 defendants. It also obtained cease and desist orders against 51 respondents in administrative proceedings. The CFTC secured nearly $315 million in civil monetary penalties, an increase of nearly 137% from the prior year, and over $67 million in restitution and disgorgement. It obtained trading prohibitions against 18 individuals during this time.

Much of the CFTC's enforcement activity over the last year centered around the energy markets. The CFTC focused on the widespread practice by energy companies - most of them public entities - of falsely reporting the prices and quantities of natural gas or electricity transactions to reporting services, often to influence the prices reported by these services and to consequently benefit energy derivative positions held by these companies.

Federal Energy Regulatory Commission: FERC's numerous investigations into the manipulation of energy markets, including anomalous bidding practices, physical withholding of capacity, gaming practices, and violations of standards of conduct resulted in settlements valued at in excess of $500 million. Energy companies entering into settlements with FERC included Reliant Energy Services, Duke Energy and Trading, Williams Power Company, Dynegy, Inc., Portland General Electric, El Paso Electric, Avista Corporation, Cleco Corp., Nicor Gas, National Fuel Gas Company, and Center Point Gas Transmission Company. FERC still has underway several proceedings in which it is pursuing refunds of up to $3 billion for sales in California, as well as additional disgorgement of profits from sellers who are found to have violated FERC tariffs.

Employee Security Benefits Security Administration (Department of Labor): EBSA continues to aggressively protect employee benefit plans from the effects of corporate fraud. Since the inception of corporate fraud as an investigative priority, EBSA has identified 44 civil investigations as having potential corporate fraud issues including investigations into Global Crossing, WorldCom, and ULLICO. In May 2004, EBSA announced the filing of settlements (which must be approved by the court) to restore at least $66.5 million to the Enron savings and employee stock ownership plans and to restrict the ability of named corporate officers, directors, and administrative committee members from future service as ERISA fiduciaries. In July 2004, EBSA entered into settlement agreements with five former officers and directors of Global Crossing significantly restricting their ability to serve as fiduciaries of ERISA plans for a period of five years without the Department's approval. EBSA also secured $25 million for the plan from Gary Winnick, the former chairman of Global Crossing's Board of Directors and was instrumental in facilitating the recovery of an additional $54 million for the plan through the private class action settlement, bringing the total recovery for workers and retirees to $79 million. In September 2003, EBSA obtained a consent decree against former Rite Aid CFO and plan trustee, Franklyn M. Bergonzi. The court's order permanently barred Bergonzi from representing any employee benefit plan in any capacity.

DOJ_NMG_ 0146029

Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight (Department of Housing and Urban Development): OFHEO brought civil actions against Freddie Mac executives for, among other things, their failure to maintain adequate internal controls and negotiated with Freddie Mac a record civil money penalty for a safety and soundness violation - $125 million - as well as entering into a consent order that required the Board and senior management to address corporate governance and culture at Freddie Mac. OFHEO continues its oversight of Freddie Mac while currently conducting a review of accounting and controls at Fannie Mae.

Restoring Investor Confidence. The Task Force's swift, fair and decisive actions are helping to restore confidence to the marketplace. CEOs and other executives who fudged the numbers and deceived their investors and workers are being held accountable. The actions of the Task Force are helping to demonstrate something equally important to the American people: the vast majority of corporate leaders are honest and ethical who work hard to earn the trust of their shareholders and employees.

Prepared Remarks of Attorney General John Ashcroft
United States Chamber of Commerce
Tuesday, October 19, 2004

Thank you for the invitation to join you here at the United States Chamber of Commerce. The members of the U.S. Chamber personify the success that comes from hard work, focus and dedication. These efforts have transformed the American and global economies.

At the United States Department of Justice, we also understand what hard work, focus and dedication can achieve for the American people. In the past three years, we have achieved remarkable successes in protecting and enhancing the lives and liberties of our citizens.

A little over three years ago, after suffering a terrorist attack that took more than 3,000 innocent lives, many experts said it would be impossible to protect America from another attack from our enemy.

The Department of Justice reorganized and worked with law enforcement on every level to make America safer and more secure. In the past three years, we have not suffered another major terrorist attack on our soil.

For three years, our nation has been blessed. But the hand of Providence has been assisted by the dedicated men and women of the Department of Justice. In three years, we have compiled a record of achievement that is impressive by peacetime standards. In a time of war, it is inspiring. We have:

- Dismantled terrorist operations and cells that presented clear threats to the safety of our citizens from New York to Oregon, Florida to Ohio, and Virginia to California;
- Brought criminal charges against 364 individuals;
- Secured convictions against 193 of them; and,
- Incapacitated 3,000 individuals worldwide who enlisted in the campaign of terror against America.

Pessimists long told us that violent crime is a fact of life - especially for poorer groups of Americans.

Last month, the Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics reported that violent crime rates in America have been driven down to record 30-year lows. This record level of safety has been achieved for all Americans - across every economic category in our nation.

In the past three years - 2001 to 2003 - we have seen the overall rate of violent crime decline 27 percent from the previous three-year period prior to the Bush Administration.

Over the past three years, we have seen double-digit reductions in the rate of:

- Rape and sexual assault: down 31 percent
- Robbery: down 31 percent
- Assault: down 26 percent

These are not mere statistics. Behind these numbers are real people - 1.7 million Americans who were spared the pain of violent crime.

The three-year reduction in the rate of violent crime means that:

- 1.4 million fewer friends and co-workers have been assaulted;
- 229,000 fewer citizens have been robbed; and,
- 93,000 fewer women have been raped.

There were experts who said that tough enforcement of the laws that were already on the books would never work in reducing crimes committed with a gun.

Well today, gun crime prosecutions are at a record high and gun crime is at a record low.

In the past three years, under President Bush's Project Safe Neighborhoods initiative, we have increased federal prosecutions of gun crime by 68 percent. These prosecutions have led to a decrease of more than 250,000 gun crimes. That represents an 18 percent drop in the incidence of gun crime.

In 2003 alone, we charged a record 13,000 defendants with federal firearms offenses, and more than 9,500 individuals were convicted-the largest number ever convicted in the federal system in a single year.

Four years ago, our nation's financial markets were rocked by scandals. The chattering classes said we could never restore the trust that had been lost.

But that was before the Department of Justice charged 900 defendants in 400 corporate fraud cases. And that was before more than 500 individuals, including 60 CEOs, were convicted of defrauding investors.

For the past three years, the men and women of the Department of Justice have been steadily focused on protecting the lives and the liberties of the American people. We have faced serious challenges, but the Justice Department has showed what can be achieved with focus, determination, and hard work. Still, challenges remain.

The protection of our nation's intellectual property has been a top priority of the Justice Department from my first days as Attorney General. But serious threats to intellectual property endanger our nation's economy and our citizens. The Justice Department's response to this threat must be every bit as forceful and aggressive as its response to terrorism or violent crime.

In the increasingly knowledge-driven economy, intellectual property is our nation's most important economic resource. Taken as a whole, intellectual property helps to employ hundreds of million of people around the world and generates revenue in the trillions. It follows then that if intellectual property unleashes our nation's potential, the theft of intellectual property limits our nation's capacity to grow.

When jobs and wages are lost due to intellectual property crimes, our nation's economy is weakened.

The United States Trade Representative estimates that intellectual property theft and counterfeiting worldwide costs United States companies $250 billion annually. Industries from software designers to auto-parts manufacturers estimate that they have lost more than 300,000 jobs due to the cost of intellectual property theft.

When counterfeit pharmaceuticals reach America's medicine cabinets, they threaten the health of our citizens. For example, a pharmaceutical company discovered a counterfeit version of its pills that was made with a combination of floor wax and yellow lead-based paint normally used to mark roads.

And when profits from counterfeited fashions or illegally distributed DVDs help finance the operations of organized crime, and potentially terrorists, intellectual property crimes undercut our nation's security.

The Department of Justice takes seriously its mission to protect intellectual property from the criminals of the new millennium ... thieves who steal our nation's innovative ideas and hard work. For example:

- In the past two years, the Justice Department and the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement have seized hundreds of thousands of counterfeit batteries. These batteries contained unsafe levels of mercury, and were so poorly manufactured that exposure to sunlight might have caused the batteries to explode.

- In April 2003, a South Carolina man was sentenced to seven years in prison and ordered to pay $3.5 million in restitution for selling fake Nike shoes and fashion apparel.

- In August 2004, Operation Digital Gridlock seized more than 40 terabytes of illegally distributed movies, music and computer software on computers located in Texas, New York, and Wisconsin. This was the first federal enforcement action against a "peer to peer" network. The 40 terabytes were the equivalent of 60,000 movies or 10.5 million songs.

These are successes, and over the past four years there have been others, but there is much more to be done. That is why on March 31, 2004, I created the Department of Justice's Task Force on Intellectual Property. My charge to the Task Force was to find new and innovative ways to protect Americans from the theft of intellectual property.

Earlier this month, I received the Task Force final report. It is a blueprint for the most aggressive, ambitious and far-reaching law enforcement effort against intellectual property crimes in Justice Department history.

The Task Force recommendations - which I have embraced - include significant proposals in the areas of criminal, civil, and antitrust enforcement, international cooperation, legislative initiatives, and public outreach and education. Today I would like to highlight three sections of the report that feature significant initiatives:

First: criminal enforcement.

In 2001, I established the national Computer Hacking and Intellectual Property Unit network, or CHIP network. CHIP Units are comprised of specially trained prosecutors and investigators who focus on intellectual property crimes. They are located in thirteen U.S. Attorneys offices where intellectual property crimes enforcement is especially important.

The results have been dramatic. In 2003, the first year all units were operational, the CHIP Program filed charges against 46 percent more defendants than they had averaged in each of the four years prior to the formation of the units.

In order to build on this success, the Justice Department will create five new CHIP Units to be based here in Washington, D.C., in Sacramento, California; Nashville, Tennessee; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; and Orlando, Florida.

We will also designate a CHIP Coordinator in every U.S. Attorney Office in the nation. This coordinator will be a prosecutor who specializes in intellectual property crime. We will enhance training programs for prosecutors and investigators of intellectual property crime, including those based overseas.

This brings me to the second area: international cooperation.

Geographic borders do not limit intellectual property theft and counterfeiting. Borders must not limit our investigation, prosecution, and prevention efforts against such crimes.

Eastern Europe and Asia are two regions where large, organized networks of intellectual property counterfeiters and thieves operate. Therefore we will place new federal prosecutors to focus on intellectual property crime at United States embassies in Hong Kong and Budapest, Hungary.

To assist these prosecutors, we will recommend that the FBI deploy specially trained FBI agents to the embassies. These prosecutors and agents will also be armed with updated legal tools.

Last year, representing the United States, I signed the first ever Mutual Legal Assistance and Extradition treaties with the European Union. This treaty allows intellectual property counterfeiting and theft as extraditable offenses.

The United States is now working with each of the 25 Member States of the EU to complete the instruments that will bring the treaties into force. In fact, earlier this month at EU meetings in The Hague, I signed implementing instruments with the Dutch and French governments.

Many of the intellectual property cases we develop would not be possible were it not for the cooperation of the victims of the crime. This brings me to the final area, education and outreach.

The prosecution - and, critically, the prevention - of intellectual property crime requires cooperation from the individuals, businesses and industries that have been victimized. Victims must have the information and resources necessary to protect their hard work and innovation.

We will expand the Department of Justice's programs to educate and encourage a respect for intellectual property. The Task Force has developed and recommended national implementation of an education program targeting America's young people.

The expansion of the Justice Department's protection of intellectual property, and the prosecution of intellectual property crimes, will go a long a way to undercutting what I call the "culture of uncompensated use."

People who illegally download a movie online, or who steal the formula for a new pesticide, are not "pirates" or "spies." They are thieves, pure and simple. And these thieves are a threat to the economic strength and innovative spirit of our nation.

Whether it is an entrepreneur in his home office or a corporation with four factories, each must be given the opportunity to succeed in an environment where enterprise, creativity and innovation are respected and where there is a marketplace that offers potential reward for their efforts.

If the environment in this country is not conducive to creativity and innovation, the innovators will find an environment elsewhere that is. And that is an outcome our nation cannot afford.

The Intellectual Property Task Force and its recommendations are ensuring that the Department of Justice will have the strongest, most aggressive legal assault against intellectual property crime in our nation's history.

The Justice Department will continue to expand and enhance the environment for creativity and innovation that is the hallmark of our nation.

We will continue to protect Americans on the streets, in their workplaces and in their homes.

We will continue to protect the lives and liberties of our citizens, so that America remains a beacon to all who seek opportunity and all who cherish freedom.

Thank you very much.

PREPARED REMARKS OF
ATTORNEY GENERAL ALBERTO R. GONZALES
AT THE
U.S. ATTORNEYS CONFERENCE

THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 2005
SCOTTSDALE, ARIZONA

Thank you for that introduction. It's good to be with you today.

This is my first chance to meet with many of you since becoming Attorney General. That means it's also my first chance to say thank you.

You are vital to this Department - and to our Nation. So thank you for your constant efforts on behalf of the American people. They appreciate your hard work and so do I.

I want to take a moment to say a word about one of your alumni, who announced yesterday that he is returning to the private sector. Jim Comey has served this Department with great distinction for almost 15 years. President Bush entrusted Jim with two very important assignments, Deputy Attorney General and U.S. Attorney, and he applied his impressive talents to both jobs with energy and enthusiasm. In both capacities, Jim has been a respected leader in helping to combat crime, both in the boardroom and on our streets, and in defending America against terrorism.

On a personal level, I have very much enjoyed working with Jim both while I was at the White House and as Attorney General, and he will be missed at the Department. I appreciate the sacrifices made by Jim's wife Patrice and their five children during the long period of Jim's government service. On behalf of everyone at the Department, I thank Jim for his service and wish him all the very best as he moves on to a new phase in his career.

I'd also like to thank Mary Beth Buchanan for her service over the past year as U.S. Attorney and Director of the Executive Office of U.S. Attorneys. Last week, I had the pleasure of appointing Michael Battle to be her successor as Director. Mike brings a wealth of experience to this new challenge - as a prosecutor, civil attorney, judge, and public defender - so I know that he is up to the task. We will miss his expertise in the Western District of New York, but you will each gain from his work in this new role.

I also appreciate the continued guidance of the Advisory Committee under Bill Mercer's strong leadership. The Committee's efforts in all areas of the Department's mission have been critical to our success. The work of the AGAC shows that with input and communication from the field, we can achieve our goals.

That's because most of the Department's work doesn't just happen inside the Beltway of Washington, D.C. It happens across the country, in courthouses and federal buildings and in your offices.

Personally, I rely heavily on the work you perform across the country each and every day. No matter how much I travel, most citizens will never see or meet with me. You represent the Attorney General in your district. For many, the only interaction they have with the Justice Department - with their government - will be through you. This is an enormous responsibility, but one I know you are capable of shouldering.

The President has the highest confidence in each of you and he has entrusted you with a great deal of responsibility. I know that you will continue to execute your duties with the humility, integrity, and wisdom the President expects of all his appointees.

Finally, I want to remind you that we are not here to play little ball, we are here to play big ball, to go for the big inning. President Bush often notes that we are "here to make a difference, not to mark time…to confront problems directly and forcefully, not pass them on to future generations."

This is our charge. We cannot stand idly by and allow this opportunity to pass. We must use this second term and exercise bold leadership to fulfill our mission and achieve justice for all. And we can do it by working together as a team.

I'd like to take a moment to highlight some of the areas in which I believe we can make important progress for the American people.

I know you all understand that on September 11th, 2001, the collective mission of the federal government was instantly transformed. At that moment, the top priority of the United States government became - and remains today - to protect our citizens against terrorism.

Thanks to your efforts and those of millions of men and women in federal, state, and local law enforcement, the intelligence community, and our military, we've made some real progress in the war on terror. Yet, despite our successes, the threat posed by al Qaeda and other similar groups is still very real.

Our new challenge is to remain ever vigilant. We cannot grow complacent. We cannot afford to assume the quiet of today will mean peace for tomorrow. As President Bush has reminded us, "we must not allow the passage of time or the illusion of safety to weaken our resolve in this new war."

All of us in the Department of Justice are keenly aware of the continuing threat posed by terrorists - I see it every morning when I begin my day with an intelligence briefing, and you surely see it every day when you work to investigate, track down, and prosecute terrorists.

I am committed to giving you the tools and resources you need to confront this present danger. And that's why we need to reauthorize the PATRIOT Act.

I know how important the tools of the PATRIOT Act are to you in the fight against terror. The PATRIOT Act is working. The law enforcement and intelligence communities are now sharing important information. You are bringing the tools you already use on a daily basis in other criminal areas to bear in the new war on terror subject to the oversight of federal judges and the Congress. No one has provided me with evidence that the PATRIOT Act is being abused or misused.

We are currently engaged in a nationwide discussion about the PATRIOT Act. As I have said, I welcome the views of those who have concerns about the Act and hope that we can have a productive discussion based on the facts. This debate has provided the Department a chance to rebut many of the misconceptions that have emerged about the Act. As I have said, what I will not accept in this debate are changes to our laws that would make America less safe against terror and crime.

I appreciate your advocacy on the front lines regarding the PATRIOT Act. But there is still a great deal of work that must be done to explain to Congress and the American people why the provisions scheduled to sunset in this critical piece of legislation should be renewed.

I will be actively engaged in this debate, as I know you will, for many months. But we cannot forget that prosecuting the war on terror is only one element of our multi-dimensional mission. We must also continue to be vigilant and move aggressively in several other areas to fully promote equal justice for all.

I know that you face a variety of challenges. Some are specific to your district, others - such as the prevalence of illegal drugs and drug-related crimes - are common to most, if not all, of you. I am mindful of those concerns - and have several of my own.

In my first weeks in office, I laid out some of the issues that I consider special priorities for my time as Attorney General, in addition to our top priority of protecting America against terrorism. They are the President's Project Safe Neighborhoods initiative, obscenity prosecutions, victims' rights, human trafficking, immigration reform, and confirmation of judges. In nearly every one, I will need your help to achieve important goals.

Over the past four years, you have made Project Safe Neighborhoods a tremendous success. Not only have you increased federal firearms prosecutions by impressive margins, you've made systematic changes to the way we fight gun crime and violence on our streets. You've employed new strategies that are increasingly helpful to communities working to fight violent crime. Now that this groundwork has been laid, it is time to build new and better methods for even more success.

While the premise of the safe neighborhoods program is to rely on local information and partners to fight local crime, we can also share best practices to deal with common problems across the country - such as the prevalence of gang violence.

The President and the First Lady have spoken about the gang problem, and combating that problem is one of my priorities.

It's clear that gangs have become an increasingly deadly threat to our neighborhoods - nearly seventy percent of you report a significant gun crime problem associated with gangs in your district. So, today, I am announcing several steps we will take to strengthen Department-wide efforts to combat gang violence and reduce crime.

First, I am establishing the Attorney General's Anti-Gang Coordination Committee. This Committee will report directly to the Deputy Attorney General, who will lead the Department's anti-gang activities. The Committee will advise the Department on resource allocation, policy, and budget recommendations that will help us continue to drive down violent crime from gangs. I will be asking two of you to serve on this Committee and I look forward to working with you to make this new effort a success.

Second, I am asking that each of you - in the next month -appoint an Assistant U.S. Attorney to serve as the anti-gang coordinator in your district. I expect this person to prepare a comprehensive, district-wide strategy - in consultation with partners from federal and local law enforcement, social services, and community and faith-based groups - to coordinate anti-gang activity across the board. This strategy should be submitted to the new Anti-Gang Coordination Committee within ninety days.

Lastly, I am directing the Committee to develop a single, integrated, advanced level training regimen. This comprehensive protocol will cover a broad range of topics from gang prevention to investigation to re-entry - and will draw on information and best practices from a variety of experts throughout the Department. When these training methods are put into place, everyone striving to combat gang violence will be working from the same playbook.

For this plan to succeed - for us to achieve measurable reductions in gang activity and violent crime - we must work together at the national and local levels. We'll coordinate processes through the new Committee to be sure you have the tools you need; then you will put those tools into action in the neighborhoods you serve.

To help you do that, we are making available at this Conference the National Gang Threat Assessment. This report gives a "ground-level" view of the gang problem facing our country from those who know it well - state and local gang investigators.

It was prepared by the National Alliance of Gang Investigators Associations with the combined expertise of the FBI, ATF, the Bureau of Justice Assistance, and the National Drug Intelligence Center. With a contribution from all stakeholders, especially those close to the problem at the state and local level, this document can help us develop an effective national - and regionally appropriate - strategy to combat gang crime and violence.

One of the recommendations of the report is to continue with programs already in place, such as Project Safe Neighborhoods. It's one of the most important tools we have to combat violent crime - which is why you may decide that your coordinator for that program will also serve as your anti-gang coordinator.

With the strong foundation you've built through Project Safe Neighborhoods and the road map provided in the Gang Threat Assessment, we can now create a proactive plan to dismantle gangs and incapacitate their leaders. This includes taking advantage of the powerful federal laws at our disposal - gun laws, drug laws, and the RICO and VICAR statutes - to eradicate this violent threat from our neighborhoods.

For instance, as you may know, Pat Fitzgerald recently testified before Congress on how he has used the Project Safe Neighborhoods program in Chicago to investigate and prosecute the Black Disciples and Mafia Insane Vice Lords street gangs.

We'd also like to enhance our prevention efforts. I encourage you to work with community and faith-based organizations to offer at-risk youth alternatives to gangs and to support re-entry programs for those released from prison - as many of you have already done with great success across the country. To remove the scourge of gangs - and gang violence - from the experience of our Nation's youth, we must depend on an integrated and comprehensive approach that includes prosecution and prevention.

The proactive investigation of gangs and the long-term benefits of prevention programs are difficult to measure. I realize that the results may not be seen right away. But that doesn't mean they aren't worthwhile.

Gang violence is not the only thing tearing at the fabric of our neighborhoods. From street corners to websites, obscenity and child pornography rip at the heart of our moral values and too easily corrupt our communities. I've made it clear that I intend to aggressively combat the purveyors of obscene materials.

I am strongly committed to protecting free speech. The right of ordinary citizens - and of the press - to speak out and to express their views is one of the greatest strengths of our Republic. But, the Supreme Court has ruled that the First Amendment does not protect obscene materials. And in today's world, those materials are often unavoidable. Enforcement is absolutely necessary if we are going to protect citizens from unwanted exposure to obscene materials.

You've done a good job of prosecuting child pornographers and sexual predators - and we've significantly increased obscenity prosecutions since the beginning of this Administration. But we can go further.

As you know, individual community standards are an integral part of determining which cases are appropriate for prosecution; so you are in the best position to assess the situation in your district and proceed accordingly. But I want you to remember that this Department has an obligation to protect not only our children, but all citizens, from obscenity.

There are examples you can follow. In the Western District of Texas, Johnny Sutton helped win a guilty plea from John Kenneth Coil - a long-time pornography merchant - on charges that included obscenity. Coil ran twenty-seven adult businesses throughout the southwest and defrauded the IRS out of millions of tax dollars. He was sentenced to sixty-three months in jail and ordered to forfeit property estimated at more than eight million dollars.

And just recently, thanks to the work of Richard Roper in the Northern District of Texas and the Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section of the Criminal Division, a grand jury returned an indictment in the Wedelstedt case that includes obscenity charges related to the alleged operation of dozens of video arcades featuring obscene materials across the United States.

Both of these cases involve large-scale operations with fraud, conspiracy, and tax violations - common related offenses for obscenity offenders. You must be prepared to prosecute these complex offenses to ensure that perpetrators are held fully accountable for their crimes.

I have directed Department officials to carefully review these and other federal laws to determine how we can further strengthen our hand in prosecuting obscenity. And I would like you to assess what methods you can use - or what tools you still need - to more effectively investigate and prosecute these crimes in your district…and report back to me through the Executive Office of U.S. Attorneys within ninety days.

The protection of justice cannot sit solely on your shoulders or on mine - or on any one of the Department's 110,000 employees. It's going to be a complete team effort. And while you will play an integral role as we rise to the many challenges that confront us, our goals will not be yours alone to achieve. We will have help from our partners in government at the federal, state, and local level.

For instance, we've partnered with other federal agencies and U.S. Attorneys offices to create more than twenty anti-trafficking task forces across the country to combat the heinous crime of human trafficking. This form of modern-day slavery does not only exist in far away lands; it happens here on our shores. Aliens are smuggled into our country, held in bondage, treated as commodities, and stripped of their humanity. You've already shown large increases in prosecutions and investigations into this evil practice - and I expect that will continue. That's why we're providing copies of our tough, model state legislation to the governors and legislative leaders of more than forty states that don't yet have their own anti-trafficking laws.

As we battle crime, we must also defend the rights of crime victims and assist them in their recovery. That is why this Administration has been the first to urge Congress to pass the Victims' Rights Amendment, which would ensure that victims have a constitutional right to information about the proceedings and to participate appropriately in the proceedings. This is a priority for the President and a priority for me.

There are also measures now pending in Congress that would reform the immigration litigation system. The Department's immigration judges and the Board of Immigration Appeals are charged with making important decisions every day about which aliens will be granted asylum or removed to their own countries.

Under the current system, however, criminal aliens generally receive more opportunities for judicial review than non-criminal aliens. Everyone should be given hearings that are fair and complete. These reforms would ensure that the system does not reward criminals or overburden our court system with unnecessary appeals - and I have urged Congress to send them to the President for his signature.

Lastly, Congress must act to confirm the qualified judges nominated by the President to administer justice in our courts. I know this point needs no further explanation to this audience - you've certainly observed first-hand the crowded courtrooms and full dockets that overburden our federal courts. And you understand as well as anyone that the full protection of the law - the freedom and opportunity that we've each pledged to provide to every American - requires justice in the courtroom.

Justice in the courtroom requires judges who respect the Constitution. President Bush has consistently nominated to the federal bench men and women of the highest integrity that will strictly and faithfully interpret the law. They deserve an up-or-down vote in the Senate, and I hope they each get one soon.

Ladies and gentlemen, there is no time to waste. We have a great deal of work ahead of us and we will need every one of our resources to get it done.

The famed mathematician Archimedes said: "Give me a lever long enough and a fulcrum on which to place it, and I shall move the world."

You are the lengthy lever of this Department. Your collective strength multiplies the effectiveness of our efforts and guarantees the success of our mission. I see my job as providing the fulcrum on which you can go to work: a vision for our country that is secure for freedom, safe from crime, and sure to make good on the promise of justice for all.

Together, we can achieve great things as the President has asked. Together, we can accomplish our goals through strong leadership. Together, we can serve the American people with hard work. Together, we can move the world.

Thank you.

There may be some errors, but the central message seems hard to argue with: "the Service has a great deal to do, and one hopes that it will choose its concerns wisely." As Prof Hill notes, the likelihood that the Service will not impose a serious sanction here may welll embolden others to push the political speech envelope and itself raises questions about why the Service is investing its resources here when it might do better by providing clearer guidance to all about the line between political and nonpolitical speech.

This article was in today's tax news: Tax Notes Today. I've just skimmed it, but notice a couple of errors:

- the author is unaware of the similar IRS inquiries that have come to light in the past couple of weeks, as exempt organizations have themselves announced that the IRS made similar inquiries and they repsonded to them and the IRS has gone away happy.
- the author supposes that the IRS inquiries are related to a potential termination assessment, when they are merely in furtherance of determining whether an intermediate sanction is in order.

Aah yes, my nemisis. Only thing left to do is just walk down there unannounced and just see what is going on.

My recommendation is that we go ahead and send it out as an agency to agency email to all the relevant GC offices. Don't need OPA sign off for that.

In any event, I WILL talk to OPA to make sure the release issue isn't just dangling out there. From a process standpoint, I want to know what guidance OPA has issued to the litigating divisions and the underlying reasons.

I have all the emails of the relevant GCs (and some of their staff) and we shoot out an email under the guise of apprising them of new personnel at the Justice Deaprtment that can serve as possble points of contact. Pretty standard. Email would be from me, you, or Robert.

I did the last time that I was acting DAG but hadn't really focused on it or other aspects of the DAG's schedule yet. Should have but Monday is upon me before I realized it. I am meeting with the security detail on Monday afternoon at 5pm to iron out the details and should consult with you about the DAG schedule on Monday am after I get into the office. What other things are regular obligations for the DAG that I should attend? Any special events next week of which I should be aware? Robt.

On a macro level, I think this makes a lot of sense. It's sound policy, and it may blunt some (but by no means all) of the criticism DOJ has been taking for its allegedly cavalier attitude toward the attorney-client privilege and the work product protection.

On a micro level, I would suggest the following changes:

1. Last sentence of the second paragraph: I would delete the phrase "clarifies the Thompson Memorandum and". I do not think it's necessary to concede that the Thompson Memorandum is unclear.

2. Third paragraph, second sentence: This should read "the attorney-client privilege and the work product protection," not "the attorney-client and work product privileges."

3. First two full paragraphs, page 2: These paragraphs are written as if federal prosecutors can determine beforehand whether a particular level of disclosure will be sufficient. In most cases, though, this will be an educated guess informed by experience and knowledge of the situation. I would acknowledge this uncertainty by using phrases like "prosecutors believe" when discussing whether, e.g., "alternatives to a waiver are [would be] insufficient to acquire timely and complete information."

4. Page 2, third full paragraph, last sentence: I would refer to "privileged or protected communications," and I would substitute "inquiry" for "intrusion."

5. Last sentence, penultimate paragraph: I would substitute "inquiry" for "intrustion."

6. Last paragraph, sentence beginning with "Prosecutors": I would substitute "events" for "transactions," as there is no certainty that all relevant events will be transactions.

7. Last paragraph, sentence beginning with "Prosecutors": I would add "and compliance" to the end of this sentence to include improvements that do not necessarily implicate corporate governance issues.

1. I decided to ask EOUSA directly to place you on the agenda for Tuesday at 12:30 (same time as Mary Beth and Karin) rather than ask Bill again.

2. In speaking with Mary Beth, we think the way to go on Tuesday is specifically NOT to ask for a vote, but simply to outline where we are headed and invite any comments on the memo. The AGAC, as it turns out, typically does not vote on things and does so only when asked by the AG. We can and should invite all possible

Subject: personal vouchers

In response to the DPC request pertaining to personal vouchers I contacted OJP, COPS, and OVW. OVW has not responded. COPS has responded saying that personal vouchers could be possible in some of their programs, but not advisable. OJP has provided the attached. There are issues that would have to be addressed (many of which are identified in the attached) prior to "vouchers" being implemented in any of the programs mentioned.

Issue

Does OJP have any programs where implementing the use of personal choice vouchers may be possible? If so, what, if any, statutory authority would be required?

Response

Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP)

While OJJDP has a number of programs that might present opportunities to test the concept of underwriting the cost of certain services (in whole or in part) through the use of personal choice vouchers, there are issues that would need to be addressed before implementing such a concept. First, certifications may not exist for certain types of services and in some cases may be needed. For example, vouchers for school choice are typically limited to educational programs that have been reviewed and granted certification. Any personal voucher program must include some protection from ineffective or sham programs that simply provide an "easy out" for a price. Second, the best rehabilitation and/or counseling programs may also be the most demanding. This creates a danger that individuals who most need the tougher programs may be the least likely to choose them. Third, it is important to consider the practical and legal issues that may apply to juveniles. In some cases, the "choice" of a represented juvenile may lie with the juvenile himself. In other cases, the choice may belong to his parents. In many cases involving drugs/and or other delinquency issues, neither the parent nor the juvenile may be responsible enough to make appropriate choices.

Assuming that these issues above can be addressed through certification and approved-provider lists, and assuming that the legal issues can be resolved with regard to juvenile decision-making authority, OJJDP has several programs that make service referrals and might be able to test the use of vouchers for services. Those programs are (1) Juvenile Drug Courts; (2) SVORI (and other re-entry efforts); and (3) Truancy reduction sites/truancy courts.

Note that while these programs provide opportunities for the use of vouchers, the vouchers would be used for subordinate services (e.g., drug rehabilitation, mental health services, special education referrals, transportation services to job training or school, day care, transitional housing in support of education or employment opportunities, and job training) rather than for the larger wrap-around program itself. Therefore, we do not believe that OJJDP could provide personal choice vouchers directly to its grantees. It may be possible, however, for an OJJDP grantee to implement the use of vouchers for direct services. OJP's Office of General Counsel (OGC) has reviewed the authorizing statutes for each of the programs and has not found any provisions that it believes would preclude OJJDP grantees from implementing the use of vouchers. If the program were structured in such a way, however, that required OJJDP grantees to use vouchers, OJP/OGC would want to consider whether additional statutory authority may be required/advised.

Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA)

While BJA has several programs where it might be able to implement the use of vouchers, accounting for the use of vouchers by the target population in these programs would be a challenge. Therefore, several elements must be in place before BJA would want to implement or encourage a voucher concept. One, the use of effective case management would be essential. Case management coordinates and monitors all of the services provided to a client or group of clients thereby limiting problems arising from fragmentation of services, staff turnover, and inadequate coordination between providers. Case management promotes public safety by ensuring continuity of services and coordination with the supervision of offenders so that offenders are held accountable for their participation in the program and that there is swift and certain consequences when they fail to comply. Two, it would be critical that requirements be in place with service providers to assure the continuing efficacy of these programs. The service providers would have to be approved or certified providers according to established evidence-based standards.

If these elements were in place, BJA would support the concept of vouchers and believes that four BJA programs may be candidates for the use of vouchers: Drug Court Discretionary Grant Program, Mental Health Court Program, the Aftercare-Community Integration components of the Residential Substance Abuse Treatment (RSAT) Program and the Prisoner Reentry Initiatives (Reentry). It is important to note, however, that in these programs (with the exception of pre-release programming in RSAT and Reentry) the funding BJA provides is generally not used to pay for direct services, but rather it is seed money to build a collaborative approach. Through this collaboration, the partners (both criminal justice agencies and service providers) seek to leverage other federal, state and local funds to provide the direct services such as substance abuse treatment, mental health services, housing, employment and other direct services. All these types of services could be provided using the vouchers. Therefore, BJA would support the use of vouchers by its grantees in these programs if the vouchers could be purchased using funding that is supplemental to the program funds.

OGC has reviewed the authorizing statutes for each of the programs and has not found any provisions that it believes would preclude BJA grantees from implementing the use of vouchers. If the program were structured in such a way, however, that required BJA grantees to use vouchers, OJP/OGC would want to consider whether additional statutory authority may be required/advised. RSAT is a formula program so it would not be possible to mandate a voucher program with its funding.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE (USDA)

USDA's efforts to support military families are designed to help families while troops are away from home and are focused around food assistance programs. USDA does not have specific benefits or considerations for men and women returning from service.

USDA contact for an interagency working group would be: [redacted] to the Under [redacted] Food Nutrion and Consumer Services, at [redacted]

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE (DOC)

The DOC is supporting the Department of Defense in the launching of a program for wounded service members from conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The initiative is to provide short term, temporary assignments of 20 – 30 hours per week, not to exceed 90 days, to provide wounded military personnel with re-entry experience to facilitate their transition from military to civilian service. Federal departments have been invited to provide assignments for the service members. The program will begin with military personnel from Walter Reed Army Medical Center, due to their proximity to Federal agencies in the Washington Metropolitan area. DOD will pay the salaries of the service members.

We anticipate the start dates will be in mid-June or July 2005.

DOC contacts are: [redacted], [redacted] or [redacted], [redacted], Office of Human Capital Management and Strategic Recruitment, [redacted], [redacted]@doc.gov

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE (DOD)

DOD is involved in numerous programs supporting our men and women as they return from service. Specifically there is a DOD program called America Supports You, www.americasupportsyou.mil which offers suggestions on how Americans can help support the troops.

DOD contact for an interagency working group would be [redacted], [redacted]@osd.mil

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

The Department of Education does not have programs that provide services to our troops when they return from service. However, the Department uses the authority provided by the Higher Education Relief Opportunities for Students Act of 2003 (HEROES) to provide financial relief to soldiers that have been called to active duty. Specifically, the Department waived or modified a number of requirements in the federal student aid programs to help those called to active duty. The Department has recommended that HEROES be extended in the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act.

The Department also encourages institutions to provide a full refund of tuition, fees, and other institutional charges for the period of instruction a student was unable to complete or for which the student did not receive academic credit because he or she was called to active duty. The Department recommends that institutions consider providing easy and flexible reenrollment options for such students.

DOEd contact for an interagency working group would be: [redacted], Office of Communications, [redacted]

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

There are various tax benefits for Reservists, military members, and soldiers recently in a combat zone:

The election to treat combat pay as earned income for purposes of the earned income tax credit. This rule, which expires at the end of 2005, generally increases the amount of the credit for military personnel by up to 40 percent of the combat pay received during the year. The President's FY 2006 Budget proposes extension of this rule. (Code sec. 32)

Exclusion from income of various military benefits, including combat pay and housing allowances. (Code sec. 134)

Effective extension, by the period of overseas military service, of the time during which service personnel can take advantage of the home-sale exclusion. (Code sec. 121)

More than ever before, employers are continuing to pay the wages of their employees who are Reservists or National Guardsmen called to active duty. Treasury plans to confirm that these Reservists and National Guardsmen may continue to use §401(k) plans (and similar plans) to save part of their wages for retirement.

The Treasury FY 2006 budget proposes to provide Reserve and National Guard members called to active duty the same administrative relief that is currently available to members of the Armed Forces serving in a combat zone. For Reservists and Guard members, this relief would suspend tax assessment and collection actions during active duty periods, extend the time to comply with tax obligations, such as the filing of returns, generally for six months after active duty ends, and suspend the accrual of interest and penalties on Federal tax liabilities during active duty periods.

The Treasury FY 2006 budget proposes extension through 2006 of the Work Opportunity Tax Credit. This is a credit of up to $2,400 for employers who hire members of certain targeted groups, including veterans eligible for food stamp assistance.

Treasury's Office of Financial Education is very interested in exploring possible opportunities to help returning troops. In particular, Treasury could use its expertise to help improve access to financial education resources, which are customized to meet the unique needs of troops returning from service. Treasury's Office of Financial Education also leads a twenty-agency Federal Commission to improve financial literacy. The Commission recently launched a financial education website, as well as a toll-free hotline (www.mymoney.gov and 1-888-mymoney), which are both available in English and Spanish. It currently features a direct link to the Department of Defense's financial education website.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE (USDA)

USDA's efforts to support military families are designed to help families while troops are away from home and are focused around food assistance programs. USDA does not have specific benefits or considerations for men and women returning from service.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE (DOC)

The DOC is supporting the Department of Defense in the launching of a program for wounded service members from conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan.

The initiative is to provide short term, temporary assignments of 20 – 30 hours per week, not to exceed 90 days, to provide wounded military personnel with re-entry experience to facilitate their transition from military to civilian service. Federal departments have been invited to provide assignments for the service members. The program will begin with military personnel from Walter Reed Army Medical Center, due to their proximity to Federal agencies in the Washington Metropolitan area. DOD will pay the salaries of the service members.

We anticipate the start dates will be in mid-June or July 2005.

The Department of Education does not have programs that provide services to our troops when they return from service. However, the Department uses the authority provided by the Higher Education Relief Opportunities for Students Act of 2003 (HEROES) to provide financial relief to soldiers that have been called to active duty. Specifically, the Department waived or modified a number of requirements in the federal student aid programs to help those called to active duty. The Department has recommended that HEROES be extended in the reauthorization of the Higher Education Act.

The Department also encourages institutions to provide a full refund of tuition, fees, and other institutional charges for the period of instruction a student was unable to complete or for which the student did not receive academic credit because he or she was called to active duty. The Department recommends that institutions consider providing easy and flexible reenrollment options for such students.

Treasury plans to confirm that these Reservists and National Guardsmen may continue to use §401(k) plans (and similar plans) to save part of their wages for retirement.

The Treasury FY 2006 budget proposes to provide Reserve and National Guard members called to active duty the same administrative relief that is currently available to members of the Armed Forces serving in a combat zone. For Reservists and Guard members, this relief would suspend tax assessment and collection actions during active duty periods, extend the time to comply with tax obligations, such as the filing of returns, generally for six months after active duty ends, and suspend the accrual of interest and penalties on Federal tax liabilities during active duty periods.

DOJ_NMG_ 0146151

The Treasury FY 2006 budget proposes extension through 2006 of the Work Opportunity Tax Credit. This is a credit of up to $2,400 for employers who hire members of certain targeted groups, including veterans eligible for food stamp assistance.

Treasury's Office of Financial Education is very interested in exploring possible opportunities to help returning troops. In particular, Treasury could use its expertise to help improve access to financial education resources, which are customized to meet the unique needs of troops returning from service. Treasury's Office of Financial Education also leads a twenty-agency Federal Commission to improve financial literacy. The Commission recently launched a financial education website, as well as a toll-free hotline (www.mymoney.gov and 1-888-mymoney), which are both available in English and Spanish. It currently features a direct link to the Department of Defense's financial education website.

Some of the ideas the proposed grantee has aren't likely to bear on (let alone advance) civil justice reform. Others are downright inimical to that effort. I suggested that Jeff and I speak with [redacted] et al. to see if they can help us outline other possible statistical/empirical studies for our grantee. Any objection to our pursuing this?

Jeff mentioned that [redacted] also had suggested to you a "blue ribbon" panel of some sort. While ambitious, if we aim to do something like this, it would be most effective if it is both high level and ambitious in scope -- perhaps a presidentially or AG-appointed commission to study potential remedies to our civil justice system? We have a presidential cmsn on bioethics, and have had many other similar cmsns in the past; why not one on our broken civil justice system that is instructed to recommend legislation, changes to procedural rules, etc.? Something like this is a super idea. I think

Robert, would you or someone in OASG (I am comfortable with Neil or one of your other deputies) please represent the Department at the White House meeting at 4pm on Monday re Veterans Benefits? The below e-mail sets forth the requirements for the meeting. I've cc'd Tasia, as it appears that OPA has provided info to the White House on this topic before. Thanks; please confirm that OASG will handle.

This has been a frustration for me since I have been here. There is no mechanism in place that ensures timely compliance with reporting requirements or review of reports. Furthermore, there is no central repository for reports that go to the Hill as far as I can tell. This is a management issue that ODAG should take a look at.

It isn't just tracking so that we comply with deadlies, but some sort of mechanism so that we ensure reports are getting appropriate review. Ie there are reports out od OVW or OJP that go straight to hill and at times may have policy implications. Winnie just brought to my attention a report on DNA and JFAA that was was required of DOJ by an approps bill (and also required that we contact with outside groups to do). It was ready to go to hill with only review by JMD. This is something that should have OLP / ODAG review.

Bill - Will wanted me to bring this to your attention. We currently have no adequate means of tracking reports, no mechanism - what reports are required by Congress, when they are provided to the Hill, etc. Also, we really need to establish a procedure for review- what kind of review process is needed for them to go through internally to DOJ (i.e. Associate's / ODAG review etc), and when is it ok for them to go straight from component. There is much confusion here, and we need more oversight. Will suggested that ODAG convene a group (ODAG, OASC, Exec Sec, OLP, Associate's office, for starters) to discuss and establish mechanism / procedures. OLA would be happy to participate as well. thoughts?

Ugh. It was a very tightly held draft executive order that Jennifer Newstead and Harriet Miers were talking to the hill about. I gather that the thinking was that this could stave off legislative action. It would have required agencies to designate a chief FOIA officer and facilitate FOIA processing. (I can try to dig up an earlier draft, but I don't really think you need to see it.)

You won't be surprised to hear that, shortly after Rachel shared with a very few people in DOJ a draft to be "tightly held," Dick and Dan sent Robert comments on the draft. (Oops. We didn't give it to them, though; someone in Civil did.) At some point, DOJ seemed to have been taken out of the loop on this. Dick and Dan were hearing that it seemed to have leaked all over the rest of the government. We did let the WH know that this didn't seem to be all that tightly held.

Subject: briefly

Robert: Dick and I have an accumulation of things that we need to talk over with you, including further concerns with any possible FOIA executive order, and we were hoping that we could catch you about that briefly after the DAG farewell this past week. We're not looking to impinge on your time unduly, especially recognizing that it likely will be tighter now as Acting DAG, but one unusual item actually is a pending ODAG one (on which we've recently met with Glenn Fine, David Margolis, and Bill Mercer) having to do with IG/DAG relations that we want to make sure we brief you on as soon as we can just in case. Dick and I will both be in town only Monday through Thursday of this coming week; is it OK with you if we try to get on your calendar for just about 15-20 minutes anytime morning, afternoon, or evening on one of those four days? Thanks in advance. Dan

Do you think we can/should send it to ODAG while you are reviewing? We really need to get the AG's sign off no later than Friday, which means getting it through your office and ODAG by mid-day on Thursday.

Prepared Remarks of Attorney General Alberto R. Gonzales at the Farewell for Deputy Attorney General Jim Comey

Washington, D.C.
August 15, 2005-3:00 pm

Good afternoon.

Like many of you in this room, I have mixed emotions on this occasion.

It's a privilege to be here with you to honor Deputy Attorney General James Comey. Jim has been such a valuable member of the President's team.

But I am also sad today-sad that we will be losing such an outstanding public servant here at the Department of Justice.

When President Bush appointed Jim he chose a man distinguished by a lifetime of achievement and accomplishment.

Since his move to Washington, D.C., Jim has headed our Corporate Fraud Task Force, he has helped lead our Nation's war on terror, and he has helped to drive down violent crime to records lows.

As Deputy Attorney General, Jim sought to make our DOJ team stronger in every way. He has traveled far and wide-visiting more than 60 of our U.S. Attorney's Offices.

That meant sacrifices for a man 6-feet, 8-inches tall crammed into tiny planes on the way to so many districts.

Jim has a reputation as a tough, hard-charging prosecutor, but I'm sure he won't mind me saying that he has a softer side as well. I often talk about the importance of DOJ employees spending time with their families. Jim is a model husband and father. You can see it by the way he interacts with his family.

Jim's service to our Nation extends beyond just his two years here in Washington.

For two decades now, Jim has been an integral part of this Department's war on terror, our fight against drugs and crime, and our struggle to build a better, safer America.

Jim has given most of his adult life to this cause-and he has made a difference.

Of course, we will miss Jim. And we are going to have to brace for some changes here at the Department.

For instance, we don't have to worry about Jim taking up all the room in the DOJ suburban, so we can finally put the middle seat back in.

The DOJ basketball team is going to have to adjust, too. As I understand it, the Vegas odds of us beating Homeland Security have skyrocketed to 300 to 1. Dave Margolis is now the tallest-and fastest-guy on our team.

With Jim leaving we will also lose his trademark good humor-which means we might finally get some work done in meetings. I can't count the number of meetings where Jim had us laughing.

Of course, at those meetings, we also became accustomed to an equal number of insights and bold ideas.

For more than four years, the President has challenged all of us in public service to dare great things on behalf of the American people. We are not here-as the President would say-to play "little ball." We are here to play "big ball."

Jim has dared great things during his service. Throughout his life, everywhere he has served, as many of you know, Jim has proven there was never a case too tough or too complex for him. If he thought trying a case would result in safer streets, safer homes, or more opportunity for all, he'd take it.

Whether he was prosecuting gun crime and drug deals in Richmond or corporate fraud and terrorism in New York, Jim Comey has devoted himself to the cause of justice.

We will miss Jim's boundless energy and action. We will miss Jim's eloquence and personal example. They are reminders of the high ideals we uphold and the American people we serve.

Thanks to Jim, I believe America is safer, our fight against terrorism is stronger, and every American now lives in a society more just and more fair and filled with greater hope and opportunity.

Thank you, Jim Comey. And as a small token of appreciation and respect, I present the Edmund Randolph Award.

Checked with Tasia this afternoon and DOJ has nothing new to add to its report. So it doesn't sound like we'd have much to say at this mtg. I'm very happy to attend if you don't want to.

I returned from the White House meeting on Vet Benefits. They would like from us a set of bullets detailing anything we are doing that helps servicemen or their families, either while in service abroad, or after they return. A very broad order. And they want the bullets by tomorrow night!

Eric, I would appreciate your help with some bullets outlining what USERRA is and how we've employed it? Also, if you could do some bullets on the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act, and how we've employed it? Finally, are there any other things you know of that the Dept is doing for vets or the military, however apparently small? Eg, some departments have adopted a base, or raised funds for families of wounded soldiers, etc.

Brad, Since so much of this has a civil rights overlay, I would appreciate any bullets your shop might add. Eg, what about our efforts in the 2004 elections to ensure the military had a meaningful right to vote under the Uniformed and Overseas Absentee Voting Act? A bullet on the law, and some additional ones on our suits would be very helpful. Also, have we brought any discrimination actions on behalf of disabled Iraqui vets? Anything your folks can think of would be very helpful.

Many thanks!

Subject: Call with Mary Beth

Just got off the phone with Mary Beth who reports that she has now spoken with Richter and Coleman and Margolis; all are apparently on board with the memo conceptually, though obviously they've not vetted and signed off on all of our proposed language. Alice Fisher, as you know, falls in the same category. You and/or Mary Beth may wish to make use of some or all of the foregoing tomorrow in your talks. (Richter is concerned, rightly, with the press message we craft introducing any new policy.)

Rachel today apparently made a strong impression at the AGAC, driving home the point that, while others may not be hearing criticisms, she is hearing them loud and clear and thinks something should be done to put DOJ in a better light.

Mary Beth also reported that Pat Fitzgerald has weighed in with a lukewarm response -- he personally sees no need for a statement, but if others do, then he can see some benefits flowing from such a statement. It is significant, I think, that he is not a staunch opponent.

Mary Beth expects Mike Battle and Roslynn Mauskopf to speak up in favor of the memo at tomorrow's meeting.

I continue to worry that Karin and others may wish to push for a "vote" or announce a "vote" of the subcommittee. From our conversation Friday, I believe that Paul knows that isn't what we have in mind. But you may want to make the point yourself not only to Paul, but also to the whole gathering, so there isn't any ambiguity once you leave the room about what the committee has been asked to do, explaining in the gentlest possible way that a vote isn't what you have in mind b/c: (a) this is a work in progress; and (b) the AG is the one who decides policy here, you've merely been asked to advise on this issue, and in turn you think the process would benefit from any and all advice this group wishes to share with you. To provide further direction, it might be a good idea to invite for all comments of any kind within a week, or say 10 days.

Neal, thanks for this. Tracy has noted that Uttam was involved in this for ODAG. Unfortunately, he's out of the country. If Robert sees no need for additional ODAG review on this, we will stay out of it given the timing and involvement of y'all and Regina.

I am a little nervous that we are going to get held up when it goes to ODAG -- since they haven't had the introduction and time with it that we have. Do you think we can/should send it to ODAG while you are reviewing? We really need to get the AG's sign off no later than Friday, which means getting it through your office and ODAG by mid-day on Thursday.

It arrived late Friday. Tracy is out of the office, but I'm overnighting a copy to her. I will also look at it asap. Hope to have it to you by mid-week at latest. Beyond the policy formulation itself, have you already reviewed the proposed AG letter and other materials?

Thanks.

Eric, I would appreciate your help with some bullets outlining what USERRA is and how we've employed it? Also, if you could do some bullets on the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act, and how we've employed it? Finally, are there any other things you know of that the Dept is doing for vets or the military, however apparently small? Eg, some departments have adopted a base, or raised funds for families of wounded soldiers, etc.

Brad, Since so much of this has a civil rights overlay, I would appreciate any bullets your shop might add. Eg, what about our efforts in the 2004 elections to ensure the military had a meaningful right to vote under the Uniformed and Overseas Absentee Voting Act? A bullet on the law, and some additional ones on our suits would be very helpful. Also, have we brought any discrimination actions on behalf of disabled Iraqui vets? Anything your folks can think of would be very helpful.

Many thanks!

Neil

Given the AG's inquiry about what he could do/say about our meth initiatives at upcoming events, it struck me that OJP is doing quite a bit of "real" work that he could highlight. You may be aware of all this but, if not, I thought you might want to have a brief summary. The attached is just that, a very brief summary, but I am sure OJP would be very glad to give you much more detail if you want it.

METHAMPHETAMINE

The Office of Justice Programs does not have funding specifically devoted to combating methamphetamine (meth), but funds anti-meth initiatives through several programs:

- Residential Substance Abuse Treatment (RSAT): The Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) administers the RSAT Program, which assists states and local governments in developing and implementing residential substance abuse treatment programs in state and local correctional and detention facilities. This program provides the ability to offer long term drug treatment to those addicted to meth.

- Justice Assistance Grant (JAG): BJA launched the Byrne JAG Program in FY05, which is a formula grant program that allows states and local governments to support a broad range of activities to prevent and control crime and to improve the criminal justice system. Byrne funds can be used to support task force meth enforcement, pseudoephedrine monitoring, and prevention, education, and treatment programs across the nation.

In addition, OJP addresses the meth problem by developing resources and providing training and technical assistance that support our state and local law enforcement partners:

- Drug Courts: BJA recently released a report, Drug Courts: An Effective Strategy for Communities Facing Methamphetamine, which documents the successes of drug courts in addressing meth and provides recommendations for addressing meth through drug courts.

- Task Force Training: BJA provides training to drug task force commanders on meth and drug task force management and operations through its Center for Task Force Management (CenTF). BJA has provided funds to triple the number of CenTF meth training courses provided to law enforcement through FY 06.

- Prosecutor Training: BJA has partnered with the National District Attorney's Association (NDAA) to provide local prosecutors with training related to handling drug cases. "Illegal Drugs: New Problems, New Solutions for Prosecutors" is a two-day course that covers meth and other drug issues including drug endangered children, the links between drug trafficking and terrorism, and the connection between drugs, gangs, and guns. This course will be provided through FY 06.

- Repository/Technical Assistance: BJA works closely with the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) and the National Alliance on Model State Drug Laws (NAMSDL) to establish a repository of information on current state laws addressing meth and its precursor chemicals. Technical assistance on developing model state statutes is also provided through NAMSDL and a National Summit on methamphetamine is planned for December 2005.

- Information Sharing: BJA supports the Regional Information Sharing System (RISS) to provide secure communication capabilities and other support to address multi-jurisdictional criminal activity. Support services provided free-of-charge to law enforcement member agencies include information sharing resources, analytical services, loan of specialized investigative and surveillance equipment, confidential funds for drug investigations, and training conferences and technical assistance. RISS operates a secure intranet, known as RISSNET™, to facilitate law enforcement communications and information sharing nationwide.

- MethResources.gov: BJA is working in partnership with ONDCP to develop and launch a new national meth resource, MethResources.gov, which will provide a centralized resource for the most current and reliable information on meth. MethResources.gov will link policymakers, practitioners, researchers, and community members with information on the most promising research, policy, and practices around the country and ways to prevent meth abuse.

- Victim Resources: The Office for Victims of Crime (OVC) released a bulletin in 2003 focusing on victims of methamphetamine use who are too often overlooked – children found living or visiting methamphetamine laboratories. These children face severe health and safety risks, including fires and explosions. The bulletin, Children at Clandestine Methamphetamine Labs: Helping Meth's Youngest Victims, explains that the best way to help these children is through coordinated multi-disciplinary efforts, such as, medical/mental health services, child protective services, law enforcement, prosecutors, and public safety officials.

- Drug Endangered Children programs: A number of communities have addressed the immediate crisis presented when children are found at meth lab sites by instituting Drug Endangered Children (DEC) programs. In September of 2003, OVC provided funding to the United States Attorney's Office in the Southern District of California (USAO/SDCA) to hire a National DEC training coordinator. The National DEC coordinator develops a standardized curriculum, draws upon expertise in a number of regions with effective DEC programs, establishes methods to evaluate and respond to training requests from communities, develops performance measures, and shares information regarding best practices. OVC provided the USAO/SDCA with $133,000 in 2003 and an additional $100,000 in 2005 to continue to support training efforts across the country.

Department of Justice Civil Rights Division

Uniform Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act (USERRA)

USERRA was enacted to protect veterans of the Armed Services of the United States when they seek to resume the job they left to serve their country. The goal is to protect those in the uniformed services and their families from financial hardship because they chose to serve their country.

USERRA recognizes the sacrifice made by those in the uniformed services who are often separated from their work and families for training, National Guard duty, and active service. USERRA enables those who serve their country to return to their civilian positions with the seniority, status, rate of pay, health and pension benefits they would have received if they had worked continuously for their employer.

The Department of Justice represents these service men and women personally, they do not have to hire outside lawyers. Among the remedies DOJ pursues are reinstatement to the prior position and all hire outside lawyers. Among the remedies DOJ pursues are reinstatement to the prior position and all benefits of employment including lost wages (and interest on the wages) and pension contributions. These remedies are important because if these veterans had not sacrificed their time to serve, they would have been earning these benefits at their places of employment.

Because our country's service men and women come from a wide range of career fields - they are our teachers, government employees, computer technicians and law enforcement community- USERRA protects all jobs, regardless of whether the business is large or small, public or private.

The Civil Rights Division assumed responsibility for USERRA in September 2004. Since that time, the Civil Rights Division has filed 6 cases this fiscal year and successfully negotiated three settlement agreements resulting in reemployment for veterans and a recovery of lost wages. The Division currently has more than twenty USERRA investigations it is actively and aggressively pursuing, so that uniformed service men and women will quickly be placed back into the life and career they put on hold for service to their country.

Tennessee - The Division successfully resolved a USERRA complaint filed against Bridgestone/Firestone, on behalf of Charles Goodreau in March 2005. The company agreed to pay Mr. Goodreau $6,128.00 in back pay and interest for the time he was performing his obligated service in the Army National Guard.

New Jersey - Upon completion of active military service, Anthony Lincoln's employer, First Express, Inc., refused to promptly reemploy him. The Department of Labor successfully persuaded the company to reinstate Mr. Lincoln, but he was refused the lost wages owed to him had he been reinstated immediately. Following our lawsuit, the employer agreed to provide $3,740 in lost wages.

Indiana - The Indiana Department of Corrections suspended and then terminated James Lowell AmRhein for violating the leave policy while participating in uniformed service. The Division filed suit on behalf of Mr. AmRhein in August 2005, and the parties have agreed to a settlement that will compensate Mr. AmRhein for lost wages, reinstate seniority and related benefits, and remove the suspension and termination for his records.

Servicemembers Civil Relief Act (SCRA)

The Servicemembers Civil Relief Act provides a number of benefits to servicemembers with financial hardships caused by their military service. It can, for example, provide relief from civil default judgments, and reduce the interest rate on some loans to 6%.

Any servicemember can claim the relief provided by the SCRA. They can also seek the assistance of military lawyers to invoke the SCRA's protections.

The Civil Rights Division is the DOJ component with principal authority to enforce the SCRA. We have been working with DOD to establish a mechanism for litigating the SCRA, where appropriate. While the SCRA does not provide for enforcement by DOJ, we have long opined that 28 USC 517 authorizes us to represent individuals in certain instances, as with the SCRA.

Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (UOCAVA)

Protecting the Voting Rights of Military and Civilian Citizens Overseas. UOCAVA requires states to allow uniformed services voters and other overseas citizens to register to vote and vote absentee for all elections for federal office. With respect to enforcement of UOCAVA, we obtained a preliminary injunction in April, 2004 from a district court against the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in an action alleging that the time schedule for mailing absentee ballots for the June primary election violated UOCAVA. In May 2004, the Division worked with Alabama state and local officials to remedy a violation in Tuscaloosa County, which was successfully resolved by a state court order to extend the deadline for receipt of overseas ballots. On July 15, 2004, the Division obtained an emergency order in a suit against Georgia, providing broad relief for its failure to ensure overseas voters could vote in the 2004 primary and run-off elections. In July 2005, the Department reached a court approved settlement agreement with Georgia providing permanent remedy for overseas voters. The Division has also engaged in extensive outreach to states in 2004 about their duties under UOCAVA.

I returned from the White House meeting on Vet Benefits. They would like from us a set of bullets detailing anything we are doing that helps servicemen or their families, either while in service abroad, or after they return. A very broad order. And they want the bullets by tomorrow night!

Eric, I would appreciate your help with some bullets outlining what USERRA is and how we've employed it? Also, if you could do some bullets on the Soldiers and Sailors Civil Relief Act, and how we've employed it? Finally, are there any other things you know of that the Dept is doing for vets or the military, however apparently small? Eg, some departments have adopted a base, or raised funds for families of wounded soldiers, etc.

Brad, Since so much of this has a civil rights overlay, I would appreciate any bullets your shop might add. Eg, what about our efforts in the 2004 elections to ensure the military had a meaningful right to vote under the Uniformed and Overseas Absentee Voting Act? A bullet on the law, and some additional ones on our suits would be very helpful. Also, have we brought any discrimination actions on behalf of disabled Iraqui vets? Anything your folks can think of would be very helpful.

Many thanks!

Neil

Bill, Courtney:

FYI:

Just wanted to advise that the DOJ Community Relations Service has asked for clearance/guidance on whether or not to deploy to New Orleans. We have advised them to standby. CRS's mandate is to deploy to areas where there are "existing" racial conflicts (typically with law enforcement) and help in conciliation efforts. Of particluar note, Congress specifically stated in a '99 Conference Report that CRS should not be involved in emergency disaster planning absent an existing racial conflict or a request by local law enforcement. Law enforcement in the affected areas has not requested a CRS presence at this time, and while there is unrest, an "existing" racial conflict is not readily identifiable. Additionally, there would need to be close coordination with relevant USAOs and DHS before prematurely throwing more folks into the mix of an already confusing situation. As a result, OASG has advised CRS to closely monitor and standby as the situation develops, but no more. It may be that as the water resides and the call to restore order comes it would be appropriate for CRS to infuse, but at this point, I believe the course is to monitor and observe.

this point, I believe the course is to monitor and observe.

DOJ Privacy Office Proposal

OLP Comments

We agree that there is value in bolstering the Department's ability to manage information privacy issues. We also agree with many of the concerns articulated in John's draft memo. In particular, we agree that any restructuring of DOJ's information privacy efforts should be careful to avoid the creation of a "mini-IG's office" and that care should be taken to avoid combining information privacy and "civil liberties" responsibilities. We suggest enforcing this distinction by using the term "information privacy," not just "privacy."

With respect to structural options for addressing information privacy issues, we do not support creating another Assistant Attorney General position. In addition, we have the following comments:

Enhancing OIP's mandate to include all information privacy issues doesn't make sense if OIP maintains all of its existing responsibilities. Currently, it handles issues related to both FOIA and the Privacy Act, but the vast majority of its work is FOIA compliance. FOIA compliance responsibilities do not need to reside in an office dedicated to information privacy issues. The FOIA administration functions of OIP could be placed in JMD, either as a new unit or under one of the current DAAGs. A new OIP (which should be called the "Office of Information Privacy," instead of the "Office of Information and Privacy"), if it is retained at all, could retain its Privacy Act functions and take on additional information privacy-related issues.

We don't have strong feelings about where the Department's senior information privacy officer should be administratively located, but we don't think reporting through the CIO would be workable. The CIO handles technical information management issues that don't involve the same policy considerations that an information privacy officer would handle. The information privacy officer could be an ADAG with a small staff reporting to him or her in the DAG's office, a Deputy Associate AG, also with a small staff, or a DAAG in JMD.

Just wanted to advise that the DOJ Community Relations Service has asked for clearance/guidance on whether or not to deploy to New Orleans. We have advised them to standby. CRS's mandate is to deploy to areas where there are "existing" racial conflicts (typically with law enforcement) and help in conciliation efforts. Of particluar note, Congress specifically stated in a '99 Conference Report that CRS should not be involved in emergency disaster planning absent an existing racial conflict or a request by local law enforcement. Law enforcement in the affected areas has not requested a CRS presence at this time, and while there is unrest, an "existing" racial conflict is not readily identifiable. Additionally, there would need to be close coordination with relevant USAOs and DHS before prematurely throwing more folks into the mix of an already confusing situation. As a result, OASG has advised CRS to closely monitor and standby as the situation develops, but no more. It may be that as the water resides and the call to restore order comes it would be appropriate for CRS to infuse, but at this point, I believe the course is to monitor and observe.

Regina asked that the OJP bureaus and program offices submit additional suggestions for how OJP might contribute to the DOJ Katrina response. The attached document, still very much a draft, is a good collection of ideas from each of the bureaus. We've sent it over to JMD as they are collecting similar information from all of the components (we sent it under draft cover).

As always, let us know if you have any questions or would like any additional information.

Many thanks,

DRAFT 2/15/2017

OJP Contributions to DOJ Hurricane Katrina Response

Summary

The Office of Justice Programs is prepared to facilitate for the Attorney General approximately $5 million in additional, immediate grant funding to state/local law enforcement in the affected areas. The Bureau of Justice Assistance, through the Byrne/JAG grant program, is capable of directing additional funds at the request of the Attorney General within 24 to 48 hours.

Additionally, OJP grant offices have sought to ease reporting requirements and other administrative requirements on the one thousand-plus DOJ grantees in the affected areas, thus allowing maximum flexibility for grantees to use existing federal funds in the course of responding to and recovering from the hurricane.

Finally, OJP bureaus and program offices have raised numerous suggestions/ideas, outlined below, for additional response to the disaster.

Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA)

1) Facilitate, provide for, and/or fund from LLEBG accounts the use of used mobile homes from neighboring states to be converted to police centers, youth programming facilities, classrooms, etc. These homes can be placed directly in neighborhoods to allow for more immediate contact with residents. This has been done many years ago so there has been precedence.

2) Technical and Direct Assistance – BJA has been working with our partners at American University and Justice Management Institute (our ongoing funding) who can assist the Courts in handling continuity of operations issues, including assessing damage to records/reinstatement of records; location to operate court operations, especially hearings given the news that we have heard with regard to looting; and long term needs for court operations. These partners could assist with the planning and strategy development.

3) VOI/TIS Funds (Violent Offender Incarceration Truth In Sentencing) – we have previously sent letters to states that have funds remaining in this account to allow them to use the funds for monitoring of sexual offenders in their communities. However, given the specific situation in these three states, BJA could permit these funds to be used for short term privatization and prisoner transportation. These funds must be spent by September 2006, and many states have no approved plans to expend the money. The current remaining balances for the affected states are: MS – 500,000; LA – 31.7 million; and AL - 6.8 million.

4) Volunteers in Police Services (VIPS). This is a program of BJA implemented by the International Association of Chiefs of Police Association in partnership with DHS and Citizen Corps. DHS has many of the citizen corps pieces in place, however VIPS has been involved in Hurricane relief in Florida in years past.

Currently over 30,000 people are being evacuated from the Superdome in New Orleans to the Astrodome in Houston. Since there is a security issue with large crowds, one suggestion would be to pull the VIPS in Houston (and the Houston area) to assist with both the evacuation, resettlement and the security. They have been trained for this type of situation.

We have already been in contact with DHS as they are sending their Medical Reserve Corps teams down to the area to assist those injured. They coordinate with the Red Cross in this mission on where to go etc. MRC said that VIPS would be of assistance to them as security in some of the medical facilities that are set up. This could be facilitated in a joint DOJ/DHS/Red Cross mission and be very effective.

Additionally, VIPS could poll the registered VIPS groups to see what organizations are available to assist (who has what, who can travel, etc.) from around the country. This has been implemented before and often times are more costly than the benefit. Due to liability issues, they need to be federalized and then would need to be coordinated on site and housed in order to be effective. Again, an option I mention, but not easily accomplished. The most effective utilization of VIPS is on site in Houston and in surrounding communities where evacuees are being taken. This requires less support.

5) Outreach to Tribal Nations within the identified states that may be affected by the hurricane to assess damage and provide special assistance via special programming funds directed toward Tribal communities.

Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP)

OJJDP Strategies:

1) Coordinating Council on Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (Council) is a forum for coordinating child and youth focused efforts across fed agencies. As an existing coordinating body with membership comprised of the Departments of Labor, HHS, HUD, Justice, Education, CNCS, the Immigration and Customs Enforcement bureau in Homeland Security, and the Office of National Drug Control Policy, the Council is well suited to be used as a forum for coordinating efforts to support child, youth and families displaced by Katrina. Staff of the member agencies already work together in formal sessions, ancillary working groups and informal associations to address at-risk children and youth by joining program efforts and coordinating policy. The DHS is already marshaling resources focused on disaster relief. As the immediate needs of evacuation, clean water, food, medical care, temporary shelter and clean up are addressed, the Council can be used to coordinate efforts to address the immediate, intermediate and longer term needs of children and families that address their educational, emotional, and social needs.

The first opportunity to do so will take place on September 9th. That morning, the Council is scheduled to meet in Main Justice. Ex-officio members are the cabinet and agency heads of the member agencies. The Attorney General could use this opportunity to initiate plans for collective work and plans to reallocate each agency's resources for children and families displaced from affected areas.

2) The Federal Advisory Committee on Juvenile Justice (FACJJ) is a vehicle for coordinating child and youth focused efforts at the state level. The FACJJ is another vehicle for marshaling resources. This group is comprised of representatives of the governors and juvenile justice advisory groups in each state and six territories. Through this forum the FACJJ members can be challenged to work within their states and networks to identify state resources that could be directed to assist at-risk youth in the affected states, and most importantly, to coordinate that with the other states.

   The FACJJ's next formal meeting is October 24-25, but membership can be convened and accessed prior to that through conference calls and email.

OJJDP Programs:

3) Gang Technical Assistance

   The Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention will be able to offer any local law enforcement agency that has jurisdiction over the area where displaced residents are a being sent, training, technical assistance and access to gang prevention and intervention materials. In addition to making this available through the Nation Youth Gang Center in Tallahassee, Florida, OJJDP will be able to provide assistance to local law enforcement agencies to share gang related intelligence between agencies. This may be particularly helpful for New Orleans PD to share their intelligence with other LE agencies where many of these youth are resettling

4) National Youth Gang Center

   The proliferation of gang problems in large and small cities, suburbs, and even rural areas over the last two decades led to the development of a comprehensive, coordinated response to America's gang problem by the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP). The OJJDP response involves five major components, one of which is the implementation and operation of the National Youth Gang Center (NYGC).

   The purpose of the NYGC is to assist policymakers, practitioners, and researchers in their efforts to reduce youth gang involvement and crime by contributing information, resources, practical tools, and expertise towards the development and implementation of effective gang prevention, intervention, and suppression strategies. To accomplish this mission, the Center conducts assessments of the scope and characteristics of youth gang activity in the United States, develops resources and makes them available to the field, and provides training and technical assistance in support of community-based prevention, intervention, and suppression efforts.

5) PAL

OJJDP has talked to the National Police Athletic League located in North Palm Beach, Florida and they re willing to dedicate some of the grant resources received from OJJDP in FY 2004 to supporting temporary services for relocated youth from South Eastern Louisiana, Southern Mississippi, and Southern Alabama. They have sites in the region and will work with existing PALs to absorb incoming youth from the disaster region.

The National Association of Police Athletic Leagues (NAPAL) will provide services by creating new PAL chapters to support community based and out of school time programming. The NAPAL will implement programs during non school hours that increase the participation of juveniles involved in delinquent activity. These programs include mentoring, academic assistance recreational and athletic activities, and technology training. NAPAL will also provide drug, alcohol and gang prevention activities, health and nutritional counseling, cultural and social programs, conflict resolution training, anger management, peer pressure training and job skill preparation. NAPAL outcomes will focus on improved academic success and reduced negative behaviors of the participants, increased knowledge and improved health of the youth in these programs.

6) Boys and Girls Club of America

OJJDP has talked to the Boys and Girls Club of America located in Atlanta, Georgia. And they are agreeable to dedicating some of the grant resources received from OJJDP in FY 2005 to supporting temporary services for relocated youth from South Eastern Louisiana, Southern Mississippi, and Southern Alabama. They will work with us to determine the extent of what they can do and where.

7) The Family, Career, and Community Leaders of America (FCCLA) and Youth Courts could mobilize to make a significant difference to help the hurricane victims. About 7,100 FCCLA programs have 225,000 youth volunteers involved and about 1,100 youth courts have 115,000 youth volunteers involved with another 20,000 adult volunteers and youthful offenders at about 120,000.

8) "Art in a Bag" projects. Local programs like FCCLA and Youth Court could prepare and send "art in a bag" projects for multiple age ranges to the 3 or 4 states most affected. These projects would help keep children occupied. Survival kits with such things as tooth paste, tooth brushes, granola and power bars, hard candy and gum, deodorant and soap, etc. could also be prepared by FCCLA and Youth Court volunteers in the regions. Funds for the supplies and the transportation could perhaps be donated by corporate sponsors.

9) National Center for Missing and Exploited Children: The Center's capacity to provide assistance in identifying and locating missing children could be used to assist affected areas to set up systems for identifying, locating and reunifying family members separated through the evacuation process or by the hurricane. We already have requested the Texas and Arkansas Missing Children State Clearinghouses to assist with calls for the Mississippi, Louisana and Alabama Clearinghouses that are not functional at this time. We are waiting for FEMA to give us direction on specifics for assistance.

10) National Center for Children Exposed to Violence: The National Center for Children Exposed to Violence (NCCEV) has significant experience helping individuals and communities to reduce the incidence and impact of violence on children and families. They can be expected to be available to assist in providing crisis counseling, to train police and mental health clinicians to work together to support traumatized families, and to provide information and education to help parents, teachers, youth workers and care takers to deal effectively with the aftermath of this tragedy.

National Institute of Justice (NIJ)

Technological:

1) Through an Interagency Agreement with the Department of Energy's Savannah River National Laboratory (SRNL), NIJ funds can be applied to having SRNL remote control submersible vehicles made available for underwater search and rescue and recovery operations.

2) NIJ can provide replacement equipment through its excess Federal Property Program.

3) The NIJ National Law Enforcement and Corrections Technology Center System can provide technical and engineering support to local criminal justice agencies. Most specifically, NIJ's Southeast Center, operated through a cooperative agreement with the South Carolina Research Authority, can provide particular expertise in the area of information technology.

Forensic Sciences:

4) NIJ can redirect funding to the University of North Texas Health Center (UNTHC) to provide DNA analysis assistance in the identification of victims and unidentified remains. In addition the UNTHC can provide family reference collection kits that can be given to law enforcement authorities to assist in the identification process. UNTHC can also provide technical assistance in the collection and identification process.

5) NIJ can provide the resources of the Forensic Resource Network (FRN) to assist in the identification process and the recovery process for forensic laboratories.

6) NIJ can provide authorities with copies of a working draft of NIJ's Kinship and Data Analysis (KADAP) Report for mass fatalities and critical incidents and technical assistance in its use. (This report is still in draft format but as a draft it has been provided to tsunami emergency response teams.)

7) NIJ can provide authorities with copies of the NIJ Mass Fatality Guide and technical assistance in its use.

Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS)

BJS will advise the Criminal History Records Repository Directors in Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama that they may utilize FY 2005 NCHIP funds and unobligated prior year NCHIP balances for insuring proper backups and relocation of existing criminal history records from any vulnerable locations and to insure connectivity between the State and FBI records systems (NCIC, IAFIS, III, NICS, etc.). The States will submit a simple GAN request to us, via telephone and subsequently in writing at the earliest opportunity, to re-task their projects to maintain and protect their record systems.

Office for Victims of Crime (OVC)

OVC is inventorying all grantees in the affected areas and will adjust reporting requirements to allow flexibility for appropriate use of federal funds.

Community Capacity Development Office (CCDO)

CCDO would proposed to give all communities from a county designated a federal disaster by the President an extension in submitting applications, reports, etc. CCDO did the same last year for the folks in Florida and it worked out well. CCDO has also suggested planning their major annual conference (1500 attendees) to be in New Orleans next year if the community is prepared to host such events.

Office of Police Corps and Law Enforcement Education (OPCLEE)

The Hurricane has had a major impact on the training academy that is to begin in Missippissi at Camp Shelby this Saturday. Most of the Mississippi Police Corps staff fled Hattisburg and FEMA and the Red Cross has taken over Camp Shelby as a command post for relief efforts. OCPLEE has been unable to contact any of the Mississippi staff to determine how they will proceed with training the nine recruits they were to begin training.

OPCLEE could consult to determine if the North Carolina Training Academy currently in session might be dispatched to assist with clean up in Mississippi (each academy has in the past had a community service component).

An Uncivil Division

Political appointees to the Justice Department's civil rights division are driving career lawyers to retirement—then skipping the retirement parties.

By William R. Yeomans

"MAY IT PLEASE THE COURT, MY NAME IS WILLIAM YEOMANS, and I represent the United States." With those words, I began my first presentation in court for the civil rights division of the United States Department of Justice some 23 years ago. In the years that followed, as a career attorney at Justice, I used that opening on many occasions and always with pride, as did my career colleagues.

We shared in a tradition of public service that included attorneys who had successfully prosecuted Deputy Sheriff Cecil Ray Price and others for conspiring to kill Michael Schwerner, Andrew Goodman, and James Cheney in Mississippi, but failed to persuade a jury there to convict Ray Killen (a failure recently corrected); risked life and limb and suffered untold insults to bring desegregation to schools across the South and to metropolitan areas of the North; and prosecuted racists who burned crosses, churches, and homes. This tradition of public service and its attorneys brought to justice hundreds of abusive police officers, including those who beat Rodney King; challenged egregious conditions of confinement in prisons and psychiatric hospitals; and helped win passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act enforcing it in ways that made the daily activities of life easier for millions of people. As a trial lawyer and a manager, I was humbled every day to be a part of this tradition.

During the change from the Clinton to Bush administrations, however, the tradition began to be undermined. Political appointees who arrived in the division lacked experience in enforcement of the nation's civil rights laws or in managing a large organization, yet they were convinced that the career attorneys greeting them could not be trusted. As a result, the political leadership embarked on a very different path from the one marked by past Republican and Democratic administrations.

Rather than emerge from open discussion, decisions increasingly were made in isolation from career attorneys and were communicated as orders. Attorneys who sought to engage in discussion or propose alternative approaches were viewed as disloyal and suffered the consequences. Not too long after the change of administrations, a long-serving deputy chief of the employment section, which enforces federal prohibitions against discrimination in public employment, was told that he would be reassigned to the civil division, the unit at the Department of Justice that defends the government against such charges. Career attorneys widely perceived the move as an effort to punish him for leading litigation teams that defended affirmative action programs and that pursued large cases challenging discrimination by public employers, and for his attempts to discuss those issues with the new arrivals.

Many longtime career leaders of the division have left or have been removed, and personnel practices have been revamped to foster the removal of attorneys viewed as insufficiently loyal and replace them with attorneys selected because of ideology. Recently, one attorney with sterling credentials, who was hired into the division in the Clinton Administration, was told that she would be transferred involuntarily out of the appellate section. Another, also hired in that administration, was told that she would no longer be permitted to work on civil rights cases. If she stayed, she would be assigned a steady diet of deportation orders from the criminal division to defend.

It is the duty of career attorneys to follow the instructions of the political leadership, so long as they are lawful and ethical. It is also a duty to ensure that political leaders are fully informed about the law and facts and have been presented relevant options before deciding on a course of conduct. Career attorneys owe the political leadership the full benefit of their expertise and their experience. They owe a duty to political leaders and the institution they serve to maintain the confidentiality of the advice they give political leaders. Occasionally, career attorneys in various parts of the government have lost sight of these obligations, meriting rebuke from political appointees.

Personnel practices in the civil rights division during the current administration, however, have gone far beyond responding to those rare situations. As a result, the dialogue between career and political appointees has been stifled. Political appointees are not getting the benefit of the career staff's expertise and experience. Morale among career attorneys has plummeted, the division's productivity has suffered, and the pace of civil rights enforcement has slowed.

This is not the first period of tension I have witnessed between political and career appointees. Notably, during the 1980s, career and political attorneys differed on a number of issues—the lawfulness of affirmative action plans, for example, and the scope of school desegregation decrees. During that period, the political leadership occasionally felt the need to rule by directive. It sometimes assigned to political appointees particularly sensitive matters that would normally have been handled by career attorneys, tasks like the argument of a particularly contentious case in a court of appeals challenging race-conscious relief in employment.

However, the conversation between the political and career attorneys never broke down completely. The assistant attorney general in charge of the civil rights division, William Bradford Reynolds, who was regarded by many as having curtailed the enforcement efforts of career attorneys, was nonetheless an accomplished lawyer who avidly discussed the law and individual cases with career lawyers. Despite the commitment of the Reagan era political leadership to change civil rights law in fundamental ways, there was no comparable effort to exclude career attorneys and replace them based on ideology.

AS IN OTHER COMPONENTS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, the president appoints the top layer of leadership, which usually includes a half dozen to a dozen lawyers. These political appointees come and go with changes in administrations. One such appointee used to refer to her colleagues and herself as the Christmas help. In reality, of course, the political leadership is empowered to make ultimate decisions regarding the division's activities. Over the years, some extraordinary people have led the division, including Burke Marshall, who shepherded it through the tumultuous years of the early 1960s and began to make the federal government an effective force for civil rights, and John Doar, who led the charge to enforce the newly enacted Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Voting Rights Act, and the mandate of Brown v. Board of Education to desegregate public schools. These men and their successors helped to reshape our society by opening opportunities to many who had been excluded because of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, or disability.

By convention, one or more senior career attorneys have served alongside the political appointees to assist in managing the civil rights division. Below the political leadership work the 700 career employees of the division, roughly 300 of them attorneys. The career employees work in 10 substantive sections, each led by a chief and a variable number of deputy chiefs. Traditionally, litigation and other legal activities have been conducted by trial attorneys under the immediate supervision of a career person. Major decisions, such as the initiation of a large civil investigation, the empaneling of a grand jury, or the determination to file a lawsuit or an appellate brief have been approved by political appointees based on recommendations from the career staff.

Historically, this arrangement has worked because there has been considerable interaction between career and political staff in the division. For much of the division's existence, major decisions have been discussed extensively between career and political attorneys. This conversation—dubbed "government by discussion" by former Attorney General Edward Levi—has encompassed law and policy.

The collapse of the conversation was brought home poignantly to me recently when I attended the retirement party for Joe Rich, a senior career attorney who was serving as chief of the voting section and leaving after almost 37 years in the division. A podium had been erected in front of the fountain in the center of the courtyard, and the afternoon's speakers were seated in chairs near the podium when I arrived. Scanning the crowd, I saw Jim Turner, the longtime career deputy assistant attorney general who led the failed effort to indict the Alabama law enforcement officers who beat civil rights marchers as they attempted to march from Selma to Montgomery on the day known as Bloody Sunday, before becoming the paragon of career attorneys in the division and retiring a decade ago. I saw Paul Hancock, the longtime chief of the housing section, who left the division several years ago after leading the effort to fulfill the promise of the Fair Housing Act.

At the dozens of similar events I'd attended over the past generation, political leaders in the division always used the occasion to reinforce the ties between political and career appointees. It was especially moving when a leader who had clashed with career attorneys expressed his admiration and reminded us of our common purpose. But there was not a single political appointee at the event to celebrate a decorated career that had been dedicated to enforcing the nation's civil rights laws, from leading the effort to desegregate the schools of Texas to enforcing the Voting Rights Act through the tumultuous election of 2000. Whether because none was invited or none chose to come, the absence of political appointees spoke volumes.

Sadly, career attorneys at the event seemed relieved. Many attorneys were upset—stunned and frightened—by the working conditions that they face. One career manager proclaimed in exasperation: "It's like working for Caligula!" He meant that he never knows what the rules are or when he will fall out of favor. The line between loyal disagreement and disloyal dispute is narrow. Another career manager said he felt lucky because he and his section seemed to be under the radar, and he estimated that he saw the political head of the division roughly once a year. He hoped that he could keep it that way and survive.

THE EFFORT TO SILENCE THE CONVERSATION between the career attorneys and the political appointees has been taken to an unprecedented level in the division's hiring practices. Traditionally, career attorneys were hired into the division in two ways. First, every year a handful of applicants who had just graduated from law school or finished a judicial clerkship were hired through the Attorney General's honors program. This program was conducted department-wide and was extremely competitive, attracting some of the nation's top recent law graduates. To identify these people, the division established a hiring committee composed of career attorneys from the division's various sections. The career attorneys traveled the country, interviewing applicants, and on their return made a committee recommendation to the assistant attorney general about who should be offered career positions in the division. These recommendations were almost always accepted without further examination of the applicants. Through this process, the experienced career attorneys, who knew best what it took to do their jobs well, were able to provide a steady flow of outstanding young civil rights attorneys into the division. I participated in this process for a number of years and supervised it for several more. It produced and maintained a corps of talented and dedicated career attorneys.

In 2003, the assistant attorney general abolished the hiring committee. Since then, only political appointees have reviewed incoming resumes and interviewed applicants for the honors program. Gradually, this process has largely taken over the hiring of experienced attorneys as well. Political officials screen resumes and interview applicants. Section chiefs are told that attorneys they have never met will report for work in their sections. Increasingly, experienced hires have been identified because they are friends or former associates of political appointees. Few bring any experience in enforcing civil rights laws. Most bring an ideological commitment that is inconsistent with vigorous enforcement of civil rights laws. Overall, career managers say, their records and preparation do not compare well with the hires made when career attorneys were more involved.

Declining morale and talent drain have contributed to a decline in the division's enforcement activity. Part of the decline reflects a policy determination to reduce the vigor of civil rights enforcement. Many attorneys have expressed frustration at delays in getting work approved at the political level, and they complain that they are not permitted to pursue investigations or court filings that would have been undertaken in the past.

Some of these complaints result from legitimate decisions to emphasize different priorities. For example, the division has been more active in prosecuting individuals for trafficking in persons, which includes forcing individuals to engage against their will in commercial sex, or farm, factory, or domestic labor, and it has emphasized ensuring that individuals of limited proficiency in English receive the language services to which they are entitled. It is plain, however, that the loss of experience and talent, combined with decisions to de-emphasize enforcement in a number of areas, has made the division less productive.

TRAC, the Transactional Records Access Clearinghouse at Syracuse University, recently released a report showing that the division has misreported the number of cases it has pursued in recent years. TRAC concluded that the division's enforcement activity has dropped off, despite protestations from political appointees to the contrary. Among career attorneys, there is no doubt that enforcement activity has declined, except in those few areas emphasized as priorities. They report that not only are fewer cases being pursued, but that those being pursued are generally smaller and designed to have less impact than in previous years.

A look at the division's appellate section is instructive. The section handles the appellate work generated by litigation in the other sections of the division, and it files briefs as amicus curiae at the appellate level in civil rights cases in which the United States has an interest. The number of cases coming up from the other sections is small by historic standards because of the decline in enforcement activity. Similarly, the number of amicus filings in the Courts of Appeals for 2004 (6) was less than a third of the number filed five years before (22), even though the number of attorneys in the section has increased.

These discretionary filings are a good barometer of the division's enforcement activity. The division filed no amicus brief in an appeals court addressing, much less opposing, such things as discrimination in housing, employment, or education on the basis of race or gender. Perhaps most disturbingly, the section has been drafted into the business of filing briefs in cases rising out of the criminal division's office of immigration litigation. These are briefs in support of deportation orders, decidedly not a traditional civil rights function.

CIVIL RIGHTS ENFORCEMENT HAS ALWAYS BEEN CONTROVERSIAL. First, that was largely because of geography: The division was launched in 1957 in the wake of Brown, when Southern states determinedly resisted the Supreme Court's ruling. Later, it was because the field became a prime subject for partisan politics: Either the division was doing too much or too little, depending on the administration and the era.

Career attorneys who stayed through political changes have provided the stability, consistency, and expertise necessary to the credibility of any civil rights enforcement program. They have reassured courts and the public that enforcement was grounded in the law rather than in the prevailing partisan political mood. They have supplied the experience needed for navigating difficult questions that inevitably confront political leaders of the division. The conversation between those leaders and career attorneys is as necessary today as it has been since the division was founded.

William R. Yeomans served in the Justice Department's civil rights division from 1981 until this year.

Just curious, didn't we issue a release for the arrival of the Principal in the Deputy's Office? I believe there is value in announcing for Neil, the new Principal Deputy Associate, who just arrived in June.
As to the other two folks on the release, there is a plus factor value, but no need to make exceptions to newly established procedures. Please let me and Neil know what you advise. Thanks.

Luis,

I think you're right in that it's too late to put this out; we would have to include something in the release about the date of the appointments. Also, we've standardized our release criteria for all offices and components, and -- while there have been a few exceptions in the past -- we are now issuing releases for component head matters (resignations, for example; appointments are usually announced by the White House) only.

ANTITRUST DIVISION NAMES NEW DEPUTY ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL

WASHINGTON D.C. -- Thomas O. Barnett, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Antitrust Division, today announced that Gerald F. Masoudi has been appointed to serve as the Deputy Assistant Attorney General in charge of International, Policy, and Appellate Matters for the Division.

"Jerry's antitrust experience, including his extensive background in appellate litigation, will be a valued asset to the Division," Barnett said. "The Department is fortunate to have someone of his expertise to lead our international, appellate, and policy efforts."

Masoudi currently serves as Deputy Chief Counsel at the United States Food and Drug Administration (FDA), where he also served for a time as Acting Chief Counsel. Before joining the FDA in 2004, Masoudi was a partner in the trial and appellate litigation group at Kirkland and Ellis, L.L.P. in Washington, D.C. Masoudi's practice included matters in the areas of antitrust, pharmaceuticals, telecommunications, and toxic torts.

Masoudi earned his B.A. in economics from Amherst College in 1990. In 1993, he graduated with high honors from the University of Chicago Law School, where he served as an editor of the University of Chicago Law Review and was a John M. Olin Fellow in Law and Economics. Masoudi clerked for Judge Frank H. Easterbrook of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Tasia - Personally this doesn't matter much to me. But, if policy does permit it -- and it seems to given the ATR announcement -- I do think it might be helpful to alert the legal community to the three talented new deputies in this office. I note that similar releases have been done for new deputies in the Associates office in the recent past. I believe Luis has already forwarded a draft release to you for consideration. Thanks. Neil

WASHINGTON D.C. -- Thomas O. Barnett, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Antitrust Division, today announced that Gerald F. Masoudi has been appointed to serve as the Deputy Assistant Attorney General in charge of International, Policy, and Appellate Matters for the Division.

"Jerry's antitrust experience, including his extensive background in appellate litigation, will be a valued asset to the Division," Barnett said. "The Department is fortunate to have someone of his expertise to lead our international, appellate, and policy efforts."

Masoudi currently serves as Deputy Chief Counsel at the United States Food and Drug Administration (FDA), where he also served for a time as Acting Chief Counsel. Before joining the FDA in 2004, Masoudi was a partner in the trial and appellate litigation group at Kirkland and Ellis, L.L.P. in Washington, D.C. Masoudi's practice included matters in the areas of antitrust, pharmaceuticals, telecommunications, and toxic torts.

Masoudi earned his B.A. in economics from Amherst College in 1990. In 1993, he graduated with high honors from the University of Chicago Law School, where he served as an editor of the University of Chicago Law Review and was a John M. Olin Fellow in Law and Economics. Masoudi clerked for Judge Frank H. Easterbrook of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

Tasia - Personally this doesn't matter much to me. But, if policy does permit it -- and it seems to given the ATR announcement -- I do think it might be helpful to alert the legal community to the three talented new deputies in this office. I note that similar releases have been done for new deputies in the Associates office in the recent past. I believe Luis has already forwarded a draft release to you for consideration. Thanks. Neil

Guys, please help me in understanding why the Principal Deputy Associate Attorney General did not have a similar release cleared as the one for an ATR Deputy when we were discussing this several weeks back. John, your past email and my unreplied to response is pasted below. Thanks. --LR

Just curious, didn't we issue a release for the arrival of the Principal in the Deputy's Office? I believe there is value in announcing for Neil, the new Principal Deputy Associate, who just arrived in June.
As to the other two folks on the release, there is a plus factor value, but no need to make exceptions to newly established procedures. Please let me and Neil know what you advise. Thanks.

Luis,

I think you're right in that it's too late to put this out; we would have to include something in the release about the date of the appointments. Also, we've standardized our release criteria for all offices and components, and -- while there have been a few exceptions in the past -- we are now issuing releases for component head matters (resignations, for example; appointments are usually announced by the White House) only.

ASSOCIATE ATTORNEY GENERAL ROBERT D. MCCALLUM, JR. ANNOUNCES APPOINTMENT OF NEW DEPUTY ASSOCIATE ATTORNEYS GENERAL

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Associate Attorney General Robert D. McCallum, Jr. announced today the appointment of three new Deputy Associate Attorneys General in the Office of the Associate Attorney General (OASG).
In announcing the new appointments to his office, Associate Attorney General Robert D. McCallum, Jr. said, "Our new Deputy Associate Attorneys General bring considerable practical experience and legal skills of the highest caliber to the Associate Attorney General's Office. We are excited to have them aboard."

Neil M. Gorsuch has been appointed Principal Deputy Associate Attorney General. Prior to his appointment, Mr. Gorsuch was a partner at the Washington firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd, Evans & Figel, PLLC, where his practice focused on complex trial and appellate litigation, including antitrust and securities matters. Mr. Gorsuch served as a law clerk to the Honorable Byron R. White and the Honorable Anthony M. Kennedy of the U.S. Supreme Court, as well as to the Honorable David B. Sentelle of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit. Mr. Gorsuch holds a doctorate in legal philosophy from Oxford, where he was a Marshall scholar; a J.D. from the Harvard Law School, where he studied as a Truman scholar; and a B.A. from Columbia University. Among other items in his new portfolio, Mr. Gorsuch will oversee terrorism-related litigation matters and advise the Associate Attorney General on all issues that reach the office for consideration.

Luis A. Reyes has been appointed Chief of Staff and Deputy Associate Attorney

General. From 2003 to 2005, Mr. Reyes served as Counselor to the Assistant Attorney General for the Department's Civil Rights Division. As the Assistant Attorney General's senior legal counsel he was involved in a wide range of litigation, legislative, and policy-related matters. Mr. Reyes was heavily involved in the Department's efforts to combat human trafficking, appearing before state legislative bodies and civil rights groups to speak on the topic. Prior to joining the Civil Rights Division, Mr. Reyes served as Counsel to the Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Division where he advised on administrative and litigation related matters. Mr. Reyes joined the Department of Justice in 2001, after serving as an Assistant Attorney General for the State of Texas for three years under then state Attorney General John Cornyn. Mr. Reyes is a graduate of the University of Texas at Austin, and the University of Texas School of Law. In his new role, Mr. Reyes will work with the Department's Tax Division, the Community Relations Service, and will be involved in internal and organizational issues as assigned by the Associate Attorney General.

Lily Fu Swenson has been appointed Deputy Associate Attorney General. Ms. Swenson joins the OASG from the Washington office of Mayer, Brown, Rowe and Maw LLP where she served as hiring partner and a member of the firm's antitrust and litigation practice groups. Ms. Swenson's practice focused primarily on class action and appellate litigation, including antitrust, securities and professional liability matters. Ms. Swenson graduated from the University of Minnesota School of Law in 1993 and the University of Wisconsin at Madison in 1990. Prior to joining Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw, she clerked for the Honorable Michael S. Kanne of the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit. In her new post, Ms. Swenson will oversee antitrust as well as commercial, health care fraud and immigration litigation matters.

With the strong caveat that proper and meticulous coordination is done with the relevant USAO and DHS/FEMA personnel, I believe that deployment of CRS is appropriate and justified at this time. Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain

On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard

Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday

President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters

In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

Puzzling. I would think and trust that direct contact from this Office to FEMA eagerly offering CRS's assistance would help smooth the way for interagency cooperation, not the reverse. I think you're right to reach out to FEMA, keeping Sharee in the loop. We should aim to get CRS deployed TODAY.

Per our discussion earlier, I left a voice mail message this morning on Sharee's cell phone indicating that I concur in her deployment recommendation and asking her to ensure that her deployment is coordinated with FEMA so that we don't do anything that might, albeit inadvertently, divert FEMA's attention our resources from rescue efforts. Cries for help spread across New Orleans

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain
On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots
While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard
Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Mary Beth,

Following up on our conversation Wednesday morning, I've sought to move some of your very good changes up to the top of the memo, seeking to emphasize right up front our confidence that the Thompson memo has been applied correctly in most cases. I've made a few other wordsmithing edits, and would very much appreciate your additional views. Your edits are in red; mine are in blue.

You should know that Robert has not yet had a chance to review this, and probably won't be able to get to it until Tuesday. To keep things moving, however, I thought I would forward my tentative edits to you now for any comments you may have.

DRAFT DRAFT DRAFT DRAFT DRAFT

MEMORANDUM

To: ALL UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS AND DEPARTMENT COMPONENT HEADS

From: Robert D. McCallum, Jr.
Acting Deputy Attorney General

Subject: Guidance for Federal Prosecutors Regarding Requests for Corporate Waiver of the Attorney-Client Privilege and Work Product Protection

In recent years, the Department has placed significant emphasis on the prosecution of corporate crimes, with historic rises in the number and scale of those prosecutions. In connection with the Department's initiative in this area, on January 20, 2003, former Deputy Attorney General Larry D. Thompson issued a Memorandum to all United States Attorneys' Offices regarding Principles of Federal Prosecution of Business Organizations. This memorandum, commonly known as the Thompson Memorandum, found at USAM 9-162, remains the Department's policy on charging business organizations and includes factors to be considered in making charging decisions.

One of the nine factors the Thompson Memorandum sets forth in determining whether to charge a corporation or other business organization is "the corporation's timely and voluntary disclosure of wrongdoing and its willingness to cooperate in the investigation of its agents, including, if necessary, the waiver of corporate attorney-client and work product protection." Thompson Memorandum, Section II.B.4. The Thompson Memorandum elaborates on this factor by providing that a federal prosecutor may ensure the complete and truthful cooperation of a corporation by requesting, "in appropriate circumstances[,]" that the corporation waive the attorney-client privilege and attorney work-product protection, which the Memorandum recognizes also may be "critical in enabling the government to evaluate the completeness of a corporation's voluntary disclosure and cooperation." Id., Section VI.B.

Since this guidance was issued, the Department has periodically reviewed its use and application. These examinations strongly suggest that the federal prosecutors have taken an appropriate and measured approach in seeking waivers of the attorney-client privilege and work-product protection. For example, the Department recently conducted a study of corporate charging decisions at 28 United States Attorneys' Offices and the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section. The study revealed that, out of 52 cases involving corporate entities reported, in 25 cases prosecutors decided not to charge the entities while in 14 cases dispositions were negotiated with the entities. The negotiated dispositions include seven cases that resulted in deferred prosecution agreements, four that resulted in cooperation/non-prosecution agreements, and three that resulted in guilty pleas. Of the 14 negotiated dispositions, in only nine cases was a privilege waiver reported to play a significant role.

DRAFT DRAFT DRAFT DRAFT DRAFT

The Department's periodic examinations of practices under the Thompson Memorandum have also provided insights into a number of preferred practices with respect to waiver requests. This memorandum provides further guidance to federal prosecutors regarding waiver requests consistent with the Thompson Memorandum and the preferred practices that have emerged since the Thompson Memorandum's adoption.

In applying the factors set forth in the Thompson Memorandum, federal prosecutors have always considered and should continue to consider carefully whether and the extent to which a request to a business entity for a waiver of attorney-client privilege or attorney work-product protection is necessary to establish corporate cooperation in an investigation. While cooperation is an important factor in the Department's charging decision regarding a corporate target, the Thompson Memorandum recognizes that the attorney-client privilege and work product protections serve important, long-recognized public policies encouraging candid communications between counsel and client and promoting sound corporate governance. Accordingly, the Thompson memorandum acknowledges that a business organization's full cooperation does not always require a waiver, expressly stating that the Department "does not . . . consider waiver of a corporation's attorney-client and work product protection an absolute requirement, and prosecutors should consider the willingness of a corporation to waive such protection when necessary to provide timely and complete information as one factor in evaluating the corporation's cooperation." Id. (emphasis added).

By its terms, the Thompson Memorandum, without in any way limiting the ability of federal prosecutors to obtain relevant evidence, instructs prosecutors to consider carefully whether available alternatives exist before deciding to seek a waiver. . At the most basic level, a business organization may, for example, provide complete access to its employees, business records, organizational charts, compliance program, and any third-party witnesses over which it may have influence, such as customers, vendors, accountants, and former employees. In many cases, such action may be sufficient for the government to obtain timely and complete information concerning a suspected crime. In other instances involving complex business organizations or large volumes of evidence, obtaining timely and complete information may require the corporation to take additional steps, such as identifying for investigators specific witnesses and documents central to the suspected criminal conduct. A business organization could, without providing counsel's notes or reports, identify promptly and make available to investigators all of the witnesses and documents involved in its own internal investigation by corporate counsel and provide assurances that the witnesses will make full disclosure. If such actions would be adequate for federal investigators to determine timely the complete underlying facts, then the federal prosecutors should, consistent with the Thompson Memorandum, consider them before requesting a waiver.

If the alternatives to a waiver are believed to be insufficient to acquire timely and complete information, federal prosecutors should seek supervisory approval before requesting that attorney-client privilege or work-product protection be waived. United States Attorneys and Department officials who oversee corporate prosecutions should institute a system of supervisory review in their offices for this purpose.

If approval for a waiver request is obtained, the Thompson Memorandum instructs that the "waiver should ordinarily be limited to the factual internal investigation and any contemporaneous advice given to the corporation concerning the conduct at issue." Id., Section VI.B, n.3. The Thompson Memorandum further provides that, "[e]xcept in unusual circumstances, prosecutors should not seek a waiver with respect to communications and work product related to advice concerning the government's criminal investigation." Id. The Thompson Memorandum, therefore, draws an important distinction between underlying factual information and factual work product, on the one hand, and opinion work product or attorney-client communications, on the other hand. It also draws a significant distinction between legal advice rendered "contemporaneous[ly]" with "the conduct at issue" and "advice concerning the government's criminal investigation." Id. By drawing these distinctions, the Thompson Memorandum seeks to balance the interests associated with long-recognized legal privileges and those required for the vigorous enforcement of the federal criminal law.

Consistent with the Thompson Memorandum, a waiver, when deemed necessary, should be limited in most cases to factual information gleaned by the corporation's own investigation, including, where warranted by the circumstances, corporate counsel's interview notes and other factual findings, as opposed to privileged communications or counsel's opinion work product.

As the Thompson Memorandum outlines, a waiver request seeking privileged communications or opinion work product created contemporaneously with the underlying conduct under investigation may also be sometimes appropriate. Id. (discussing "contemporaneous advice"). The need for such information, however, should be evaluated independently from the necessity of factual findings, interview notes, and other fact work product. Frequently, inquiry into "contemporaneous advice" may not be necessary.

Finally, the Thompson Memorandum indicates that a waiver request for opinion work product or attorney-client communications concerning the government's criminal investigation itself may be warranted. The Memorandum instructs, however, that "prosecutors should not seek a waiver with respect" to such information except in "unusual circumstances." Id. Prosecutors should exercise similar care when evaluating the need for a waiver for opinion work product or attorney-client communications that were created after the events under investigation and involve self-evaluation activities, so that companies are not discouraged from candidly engaging in self-evaluation and assessing ways to improve corporate governance and compliance. Of course, there may be cases in which even information falling into these categories may benecessary. One example would be a case in which there is strong reason to believe that counsel's advice about the government's current investigation constitutes an obstruction of justice, though undoubtedly there will be others as well.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain

On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard
Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday
President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters
In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

search and rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain
On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots
While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard

Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain
On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots
While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard

Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday

President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters

In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center
Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain
On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard

Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday

President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters

In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear
The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

I know (as you said) that this is your arena of expertise and that you're working your own contacts at FEMA to ensure close coordination, but if we can provide any further support please don't hesitate to let me know. As indicated below, Lu is trying to help support your coordination efforts.

Please do keep us apprised of your deployments and coordination with FEMA.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain

On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard
Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday
President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters
In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain

On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Chen Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard
Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday
President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters

In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

ODAG has asked all components to supply, by 10 am tomorrow, a very short statement of any programmatic initiatives they have underway, or may be contemplating, to assist those affected by Katrina, both in the short term and in the long term. Obviously, the need is great and all efforts are appreciated. Please forward statements (distinguishing between short and long term plans) to Bill Mercer and me and feel free to call me if you have any questions.

Many thanks,

As indicated below, Lu is trying to help support your coordination efforts.

Please do keep us apprised of your deployments and coordination with FEMA.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

Full magnitude unclear.

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. “This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy.”

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: “Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people.”

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

“I don't treat my dog like that,” Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. “I buried my dog.”

“You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here.”

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

“We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help,” said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain

On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: “It's like they're punishing us.”

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard

Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday
President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters
In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees
With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Subject: Current Talking Points on DOJ Katrina Efforts from OPA

These are the current talking points so far on DOJ efforts. OPA is updating daily. Still premature to put CRS on this.

The Department of Justice (DOJ) is committed to helping maintain law and order in the affected areas.

Federal Law Enforcement Operations - DOJ agencies and personnel are securing Federal law enforcement facilities and are working on-site and from relocation sites in Shreveport and Baton Rouge to continue enforcing Federal laws.

Assistance to State and Local Law Enforcement Agencies - DOJ components are drawing upon our longstanding close relations with state and local law enforcement to assist them to the maximum extent possible. The Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives (ATF), the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), the United States Marshals Service (USMS), and the Bureau of Prisons (BOP) are responding to requests from state and local agencies for communications, air support, HAZMAT, medical, and other assistance. DEA is coordinating with Texas and Arkansas Pharmacy Boards to provide assistance with emergency prescription refill procedures due to requests that have started to come from Louisiana residents. USMS personnel have been deployed to assist with the transport and security of stockpile supplies. The Bureau of Justice Assistance will also be making millions of dollars of grant money immediately available to state and local law enforcement entities in the affected areas.

Federal Courts - Federal court facilities are being secured and USMS is also assisting the Federal courts in the Eastern District of Louisiana to re-deploy staff and judges to resume operations in Baton Rouge. USMS and BOP have provided assistance in prisoner transfer and relocation of federal and state prisoners.

Protecting the Integrity of Relief Efforts - DOJ has begun work on a task force to deter, investigate, and prosecute disaster-related crimes such as insurance fraud, and charity fraud, and to ensure that fuel and other prices remain at competitive levels.

On Tuesday, September 6, at noon the Center will go live with a toll free number (1-888544-5475 - Katrina Missing Persons Hotline), to assist in putting children and families back together. They will take information on both minors and adults. We are working on coordinating the adult information with another grantee, the National Center for Missing Adults, who will stand up a phone service (1-800-690-FIND) on Tuesday morning.

Bill -- One, I wanted to make sure we have the group we need to help look into/set up the TF on insurance fraud, charity fraud, etc., that the AG mentioned on Wednesday. I suggest this be headed by ODAG, with respresentatives from at least the following: CRM, CIV, OLP, Associate AG, FBI, and OAG. Possibly others as you see fit. The mission as I see it (though the group should modify as necessary) is to deter, investigate, and prosecute any disaster-related insurance fraud, charity fraud, or similar crimes.

Two, I think we should get CIV started proactively on establishing a group (ODAG-led in the first instance, possibly with Associate AG or CIV ultimately taking the de facto lead) to deal with disaster-related litigation. Perhaps this would be Fed Programs's bailiwick, or Torts'. The idea would be to make sure we have a centralized POC & process for dealing with any such claims -- so that we make sure Main Justice gets a timely heads-up about any such cases and opportunity to lead the response in coordinated fashion.

Can you please make sure those are moving forward? Thanks.

Jeff -- I think you should be the OAG rep to the first group (crim-related). Courtney -- I think you should be the OAG rep to the second group (civ-related). Let me know if you guys have a different view.

Thanks all.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center
Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain
On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots
While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard
Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday
President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters

In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

September 1, 2005

The Community Relations Service (CRS) is prepared to deploy an eight to ten person team of diverse mediators with both language and cultural skills to Louisiana and a six person team to Mississippi and/or Alabama. Wherever FEMA deems CRS is needed, CRS, as in past crisis situations such as: the attack on the World Trade Center, Hurricanes Hugo and Andrew, Earthquakes Loma Pieta and Northridge, and the 1992 Los Angeles Civil Unrest is prepared to conduct an assessment of the issues in minority communities to determine levels of racial /ethnic tension, needs and strategies for improving communications between these communities and law enforcement, FEMA, first responders and other disaster assistance agencies. Following this preliminary assessment, CRS will conduct debriefings for disaster assistance agencies and is prepared to implement the following actions as needed:

1. CRS may assist FEMA in outreach efforts to minority communities including those in hard to reach communities.
2. CRS may organize and conduct community forums to defuse tensions, control rumors and improve communication between disaster assistance agencies and minority communities.
3. CRS may conduct Critical Stress Debriefing sessions to help minority victims adjust and cope with the shock of personal disaster.
4. CRS may assist law enforcement, disaster assistance agencies and community leaders in the development of contingency plans to counter acts of civil unrest, curfews, delayed distribution of resources, and other possible problematic issues.
5. CRS may serve as a liaison between law enforcement and community groups to ensure open communication, cooperation, and/or defuse tensions.
6. CRS may assist in planning and managing crowds in Disaster Assistance Centers and other gatherings as they become necessary.
7. CRS will continue to conduct assessments and provide feedback for improving disaster assistance services with an emphasis on minority and non-English speaking communities.
8. CRS may provide technical assistance and training on strategies for integrating diverse communities in public accommodation housing or service centers, deescalating conflicts, and cultural awareness protocols and practices.
9. CRS may conduct individual and group dialogues or mediations to resolve disputes that often occur during such stressful circumstance.

CRS is a component of the U.S Department of Justice and is prepared to be of any assistance in helping to respond to Hurricane Katrina. Please do not hesitate to contact the following persons should you need additional information:

Bill -- One, I wanted to make sure we have the group we need to help look into/set up the TF on insurance fraud, charity fraud, etc., that the AG mentioned on Wednesday. I suggest this be headed by ODAG, with respresentatives from at least the following: CRM, CIV, OLP, Associate AG, FBI, and OAG. Possibly others as you see fit. The mission as I see it (though the group should modify as necessary) is to deter, investigate, and prosecute any disaster-related insurance fraud, charity fraud, or similar crimes.

Two, I think we should get CIV started proactively on establishing a group (ODAG-led in the first instance, possibly with Associate AG or CIV ultimately taking the de facto lead) to deal with disaster-related litigation. Perhaps this would be Fed Programs's bailiwick, or Torts'. The idea would be to make sure we have a centralized POC & process for dealing with any such claims -- so that we make sure Main Justice gets a timely heads-up about any such cases and opportunity to lead the response in coordinated fashion.

Can you please make sure those are moving forward? Thanks.

Jeff -- I think you should be the OAG rep to the first group (crim-related). Courtney -- I think you should be the OAG rep to the second group (civ-related). Let me know if you guys have a different view.

Thanks all.

All -- In response to Hurricane Katrina, OJP and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children have been discussing issues surrounding separated and/or missing children. On Tuesday, September 6, at noon the Center will go live with a toll free number (1-888544-5475 - Katrina Missing Persons Hotline), to assist in putting children and families back together. They will take information on both minors and adults. We are working on coordinating the adult information with another grantee, the National Center for Missing Adults, who will stand up a phone service (1-800-690-FIND) on Tuesday morning.

Our Office of Communications has been in contact with OPA.

OVW is currently assessing the needs of our current grantees and determining how to best respond. Both Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) State Administrators and Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Coalition directors are being contacted, and resource possibilities are being researched. Additionally, I was on the phone today with a group that is taking folks in and asked them to keep our office apprised of their needs on the ground. Coordination with the administrators of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (FVPSA) at HHS will take place in the next week.

In the long term, administrative flexibility will be considered, including the possibility of extending application deadlines if necessary.

The Community Relations Service (CRS) has expertise in helping resolve racial and ethnic tensions. CRS has assisted FEMA in past crisis situations such as: the attack on the World Trade Center, Hurricanes Hugo and Andrew, Earthquakes Loma Pieta and Northridge, and the 1992 Los Angeles Civil Unrest.

Bob:

Here is some information on the New Orleans Interop award:

The City of New Orleans was awarded an Interoperable Communications Technology Program grant in September 2003 with a Federal award of $5,510,412. Due to procurement issues, the City changed its approach to the project late last year and COPS approved a significant modification to the project in May 2005. The project now includes the following partners: Orleans Parish (New Orleans), Jefferson Parish, Plaquemines Parish and St. Bernard Parish. These parishes are the closest in proximity to the City.

The current scope of the project is to expand the four site Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Office 800 MHz Motorola Smart Zone system to a seven site system and then linking it to the City of New Orleans Public Safety 800 MHz M/A-COM trunked radio system. The expanded seven site system will offer 800 MHz coverage into the adjoining parishes of St. Bernard and Plaquemines. When linked to the City of New Orleans, it will provide 100% 800 MHz trunked radio coverage for first responders over the four parish region.

The budget includes $6,055,090 for equipment purchases (site equipment and a small number of subscriber radios), $873,818 for design and engineering consulting costs, plus $368,308 for project management costs. The total project costs (including travel for technical assistance conferences provided by COPS) is $7,347,216. The local matching requirement for New Orleans and their partner parishes is $1,836,804.

As of today, only $275,428 has been drawn, which leaves a balance of $5,234,983. The COPS program manager was working with the New Orleans staff just last week on a final procurement issue. With bad timing this week, COPS just approved the procurement of nearly $5.5 million in equipment using the existing Jefferson Parish contract with Motorola.

Please let me know if you need additional information.

Jackson Blasts Bush Over Katrina Aid

By DOUG SIMPSON
The Associated Press
Friday, September 2, 2005; 3:48 PM

BATON ROUGE, La. -- Racism is partly to blame for the deadly aftermath of Hurricane Katrina, the Rev. Jesse Jackson said, calling President Bush's response to the disaster "incompetent."

"Today, as the President comes to Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi for his ceremonial trip to look at the victims of the devastation, he would do well to have a plan more significant than a ceremonial tour," Jackson said Friday.

"His whole response is unacceptable."

Bush has acknowledged that the federal response has not been acceptable, but promised that the government would get supplies to survivors and crack down on violence in New Orleans.

Jackson questioned why Bush has not named blacks to top positions in the federal response to the disaster, particularly when the majority of victims remaining stranded in New Orleans are black: "How can blacks be locked out of the leadership, and trapped in the suffering?"

"It is that lack of sensitivity and compassion that represents a kind of incompetence."

U.S. Army Lt. Gen. Russell Honore, head of the military task force overseeing operations in the three states, is black. His task force is providing search and rescue, medical help and sending supplies to the three states in support of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Jackson was in Baton Rouge to take part in a local project using a caravan of buses to pick up people stranded in New Orleans and transport them out. He spoke at a news conference at the state emergency center.

The civil rights leader said the flooding that caused thousands to be trapped inside the city was caused by a lack of federal funding for its levee system and hurricane planning. The resulting tragedy, he said, has largely hit New Orleans' black residents, because they were too poor to evacuate before the storm hit.

"There's a historical indifference to the pain of poor people and black people" in this country, he said.

Jackson also said the news media has "criminalized the people of New Orleans" by focusing on violence in the city.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center
Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain
On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard

Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday
President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters
In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees
With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain

On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

Sharee,

Just want to reiterate, as I expressed on our call this morning, that we are counting on you to deploy asap -- and to make sure that CRS does so in close coordination with FEMA. I know (as you said) that this is your arena of expertise and that you're working your own contacts at FEMA to ensure close coordination, but if we can provide any further support please don't hesitate to let me know. As indicated below, Lu is trying to help support your coordination efforts.

Please do keep us apprised of your deployments and coordination with FEMA.

Many thanks again,

Neil

Also, as soon as possible please have forwarded to me what you sent to FEMA about CRS and who it was sent to.

Thank you.

Cries for help spread across New Orleans
Local official blames FEMA for 'national disgrace'; mayor issues 'SOS'

NBC, MSNBC and news services

Updated: 4:58 p.m. ET Sept. 1, 2005

NEW ORLEANS - Fights and fires broke out, corpses lay out in the open, and rescue helicopters and law enforcement officers were shot at as flood-stricken New Orleans slipped toward anarchy Thursday.

"This is a desperate SOS," the mayor said.

While a mass evacuation got under way at the city's Superdome, where thousands of restless people were waiting for help, there was desperation and mounting anger at a separate refuge, the city's convention center, where storm victims grew increasingly hungry and thirsty and pleaded for relief.

Officials said thousands more National Guardsmen were being sent to the city, and Congress planned a special session Thursday night to approve emergency aid. But across the city, residents complained that aid was not arriving and a local official blamed the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

"This is a national disgrace," said Terry Ebbert, head of New Orleans' emergency operations. "FEMA has been here three days, yet there is no command and control," Ebbert said. "We can send massive amounts of aid to tsunami victims but we can't bail out the city of New Orleans."

"We have got a mayor who has been pushing and asking but we're not getting supplies," he said. He said the evacuation was almost entirely a Louisiana operation. "This is not a FEMA operation. I haven't seen a single FEMA guy."

Mayor Ray Nagin, in issuing his dire plea in a statement to CNN, said: "Right now we are out of resources at the convention center and don't anticipate enough buses. Currently the convention center is unsanitary and unsafe and we are running out of supplies for 15,000 to 25,000 people."

Dead bodies outside center

Outside the center, people complained that they were evacuated, taken to the convention hall by bus, dropped off and given nothing.

At least seven bodies were scattered outside, and hungry people broke through the steel doors to a food service entrance and began pushing out pallets of water and juice and whatever else they could find.

An old man in a chaise lounge lay dead in a grassy median as hungry babies wailed around him. Around the corner, an elderly woman lay dead in her wheelchair, covered with a blanket, and another body lay beside her wrapped in a sheet.

"I don't treat my dog like that," Daniel Edwards said as he pointed at the woman in the wheelchair. "I buried my dog."

"You can do everything for other countries but you can't do nothing for your own people," he said. "You can go overseas with the military but you can't get them down here."

The street outside the center, above the floodwaters, smelled of urine and feces, and was choked with dirty diapers, old bottles and garbage.

"We are out here like pure animals. We don't have help," said the Rev. Isaac Clark, 68.

People there, some holding crying babies or elderly barely able to stand up, shouted for help as TV news crews passed by.

A sea of pain

On the front steps of the convention center, one woman, screaming, led the crowd in reciting the 23rd Psalm.

John Murray, 52, said: "It's like they're punishing us."

The Superdome, where some 25,000 people were being evacuated by bus to the Houston Astrodome, descended into chaos as well.

Huge crowds, hoping to finally escape the stifling confines of the stadium, jammed the main concourse outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, outside the dome, spilling out over the ramp to the Hyatt hotel next door — a seething sea of tense, unhappy, people packed shoulder-to-shoulder up to the barricades where heavily armed National Guard troops stood.

At the front of the line, heavily armed policemen and guardsmen stood watch and handed out water as tense and exhausted crowds struggled onto buses. At the back end of the line, people jammed against police barricades in the rain. Luggage, bags of clothes, pillows, blankets were strewn in the puddles.

Many people had dogs and they cannot take them on the bus. A police officer took one from a little boy, who cried until he vomited. "Snowball, snowball," he cried. The policeman told a reporter he didn't know what would happen to the dog.

Other parts of the city saw similar desperation. "We need help," Polly Boudreaux, clerk of the St. Bernard Parish Council, told WAFB-TV in a phone interview in which she broke down crying.

"We're just been absolutely devastated," she said, and many residents still need to be rescued.

Little outside aid has reached the parish, she added. "We are not seeing it."

Doctors at two desperately crippled hospitals with 360 patients called The Associated Press pleading for rescue, saying they were nearly out of food and power and had been forced to move patients to higher floors to escape looters.

"We have been trying to call the mayor's office, we have been trying to call the governor's office. ... We have tried to use any inside pressure we can. We are turning to you. Please help us," said Dr. Norman McSwain, chief of trauma surgery at Charity Hospital.

Mob fears, gunshots

While most stranded residents were orderly, police warned reporters to be careful given the desperation.

"We were told don't drink or eat in public as it could lead to a mob situation," NBC's Michelle Hofland said. "We were told that by sundown to get out of here."

Federal rescue workers were pulled back from some areas of the city where gunfire was heard or reported, a Department of Homeland Security official told NBC News.

"Hospitals are trying to evacuate," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Cheri Ben-Iesan, spokesman at the city emergency operations center. "At every one of them, there are reports that as the helicopters come in people are shooting at them. There are people just taking potshots at police and at helicopters, telling them, "You better come get my family."

Police Capt. Ernie Demmo said a National Guard military policeman was shot in the leg as the two scuffled for the MP's rifle. The man was arrested.

"These are good people. These are just scared people," Demmo said.

'We need a thousand' National Guard

Earlier, as the situation at the Superdome deteriorated. Paramedics were alarmed by the sight of people with guns.

An air ambulance service official said helicopter transfers of the sick and injured were suspended after report of a helicopter being fired on overnight.

Able-bodied evacuees were still being moved by bus to Houston's Astrodome, the National Guard said, correcting a Guard official who said that operation was on hold as well.

Texas on Thursday announced that it would house 25,000 more evacuees in San Antonio.

The Superdome helicopter operation was suspended "until they gain control of the Superdome," said Richard Zuschlag, head of Acadian Ambulance, which was handling the evacuation of sick and injured people.

He said the National Guard told him that it was sending 100 military police officers to gain control. "That's not enough," Zuschlag. "We need a thousand."

Medics were calling him and crying for help because they were so scared of people with guns at the Superdome, he added.

Zuschlag said shots were fired at a military helicopter over the Superdome before daybreak, but a National Guard officer said he had a report of just one shot being fired at the helicopter.

Zuschlag added that when another evacuation helicopter tried to land at a hospital in the outlying town of Kenner overnight, the pilot reported that 100 people were on the landing pad, and some of them had guns.

"He was frightened and would not land," Zuschlag said.

Bush to visit Friday

President Bush will tour <http://msnbc.msn.com/id/9157866/> the hurricane-devastated Gulf Coast region on Friday and has asked former Presidents Clinton and Bush to lead a private fund-raising campaign to help victims recover, the White House said Thursday.

An additional 10,000 National Guard troops from across the country were ordered into the Gulf Coast to shore up security, rescue and relief operations. The new units brought the number of troops dedicated to the effort to more than 28,000, in what may be the largest military response to a natural disaster.

Looting has also been a problem in Mississippi.

"The truth is, a terrible tragedy like this brings out the best in most people, brings out the worst in some people," said Mississippi Gov. Haley Barbour on NBC's "Today" show Thursday. "We're trying to deal with looters as ruthlessly as we can get our hands on them."

New Orleans police focus on looters

In New Orleans, Nagin on Wednesday night ordered the city's 1,500 police officers to leave their search-and-rescue mission and focus on stopping the looting.

Police were asking residents to give up any firearms before they evacuated neighborhoods because officers desperately needed the firepower: Some officers who had been stranded on the roof of a hotel said they were shot at.

Nagin called for an all-out evacuation of the city's remaining residents. Asked how many people died, he said: "Minimum, hundreds. Most likely, thousands."

Struggle to plug the breached levees

With most of the city under water, Army engineers struggled to plug New Orleans' breached levees with giant sandbags and concrete barriers, and authorities drew up plans to clear out the tens of thousands of remaining people and practically abandon the below-sea-level city.

Nagin said there will be a "total evacuation of the city. We have to. The city will not be functional for two or three months." And he said people would not be allowed back into their homes for at least a month or two.

If the mayor's death-toll estimate holds true, it would make Katrina the worst natural disaster in the United States since at least the 1906 San Francisco earthquake and fire, which have blamed for anywhere from about 500 to 6,000 deaths. Katrina would also be the nation's deadliest hurricane since 1900, when a storm in Galveston, Texas, killed between 6,000 and 12,000 people.

In Mississippi, meantime, bodies are starting to pile up at the morgue in hard-hit Harrison County. Forty corpses have been brought to the morgue already, and officials expect the death toll in the county to climb well above 100.

Tempers were beginning to flare in the aftermath of the storm. Police said a man fatally shot his sister in the head over a bag of ice in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Full magnitude unclear

The federal government dispatched helicopters, warships and elite SEAL water-rescue teams in one of the biggest relief operations in U.S. history, aimed at plucking residents from rooftops in the last of the "golden 72 hours" rescuers say is crucial to saving lives.

In addition to the Astrodome solution, the Federal Emergency Management Agency was considering putting people on cruise ships, in tent cities, mobile home parks, and so-called floating dormitories.

The death toll has reached at least 121 in Mississippi alone. But the full magnitude of the disaster had been unclear for days — in part, because some areas in both coastal Mississippi and New Orleans are still unreachable, but also because authorities' first priority has been the living.

In Mississippi, for example, ambulances roamed through the passable streets of devastated places such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, in some cases speeding past corpses in hopes of saving people trapped in flooded and crumbled buildings.

STATEMENT OF ATTORNEY GENERAL ALBERTO R. GONZALES ON THE DEATH OF CHIEF JUSTICE WILLIAM H. REHNQUIST:

"I was deeply saddened to learn of the passing of Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist. On behalf of the entire Department of Justice, I offer our condolences to his children and the Rehnquist family. We join the President and the American people in mourning the death of this great jurist and public servant.

"Chief Justice Rehnquist served his country with distinction for decades, including at the Department of Justice as head of the Office of Legal Counsel. As Chief Justice, he presided over the Supreme Court and the entire federal judiciary with honor. I know that judges and lawyers around the country respected him as a model of fairness, integrity, and faithfulness to the rule of law.

"He also will be remembered for his role as a steward and historian of the Court. During his tenure as Chief Justice, the Court became known for its collegiality, even during times of profound disagreement on questions of law. He demonstrated a reverence for the Court's role and history that ensures that future generations of Americans will continue to respect the important place of the Court in our constitutional democracy. He will surely be remembered as one of our Nation's greatest Chief Justices, and his leadership, courage, and humility will be missed."

I also heard he was overwhelmed with grief. FEMA said that they want us to be ready to facilitate and to be in all meetings that are set up with local community leaders to handle any frustrations that may pop up.

Neil,
Nothing has changed on BRAC since this email, thankfully. I am going to do the NJ PI tomorrow. It looks like we have everything covered (at least on the present schedule); thanks very much for being willing to jump in.

Nothing has happened in the Roberts FOIA case, probably because the Plaintiffs haven't filed a separate TRO/PI motion. We're told that the Judge -- Dale Fisher -- is pretty good for us; and in any event NARA claims that there's nothing bad at all in the docs at issue.

In BRAC, here's the current rundown. Unless otherwise noted, they now involve challenges to BRAC's recommendation to move planes from one state to another.

PA: no change from Monday. BRAC's report is different from SECDEF's recommendation at issue in the Court's opinion -- we would take position that it's consistent with that opinion -- and although he has threatened to do so, Rendell hasn't gone back to Court (yet).

IL: TRO hearing today; Judge has TRO under advisement. Will decide by Tuesday at noon. If she denies TRO, no PI hearing; if she grants TRO, PI hearing Weds morning at 10am.

CT: TRO granted; PI hearing Weds.

TN: TRO hearing today; Judge has TRO under advisement. No PI hearing scheduled.

Missouri: Court will have PI papers and decide if wants to hear from parties telephonically Tuesday or Weds.

NJ: This is not an Air Nat'l Guard case, but a challenge to the recommendation to close Fort Monmouth. No TRO motion; PI hearing scheduled for Tuesday at 1pm.

Carl, Could you please give me a quick squib update on the BRAC cases, and also let me know whether anything's happened in the Roberts FOIA litigation? Please also keep me in loop over the weekend with any developments so I might give a somewhat coherent update Tuesday morning to the leadership. Finally, I've boned up on the BRAC CT briefs this afternoon and will leap in as necessary. Thanks, NMG

[redacted]

Director Freeman and I understand from what you said this evening on the phone that we have currently been cleared for 5 CRS employees to infuse in the FEMA deployment process. Thomas Battles who is the Regional Director (RD) for 8 southern states is our liaison for Mississippi and will attend the FEMA training in Atlanta and one addition CRS person Grace Sage, who is [redacted], will also attend, since that complies with FEMA's initial request of us to make sure our Mississippi team included someone with a [redacted] background. RD Battles is still working on housing for both of them and additional staff. After training, they will move to Jackson, Mississippi.

We are sending Carmelita Freeman, who is the Regional Director in Dallas, which includes responsibility for Louisiana, to Baton Rouge as the liaison for Louisiana. She already has comfortable housing in Baton Rouge for her and Walter Atkinson who will be joining her. They will also go to Atlanta for the required FEMA training.

FEMA has cleared 5 CRS staff members, but the Housing Task Force is not yet developed, according to Mary. We are offering to you our services to help put that task force in place for FEMA given our experience in assisting in the resettlement of South Asians throughout the United States and the Cuban/Haitian resettlement in Florida. Since the task force is not in place, we will use one of our 5 slots on the trainers described below.

Tony Russell discussed with us and Mary, and we understood it was a green light that CRS was needed and would provide a 45 minute cultural competency training program in Atlanta for preparation in deploying some 4,000 Forest Service employees. We have sent two trainers, Rosa Salamanca and Patricia Glenn.

We discussed with Mary and Tony an amendment and sent language for 2 trainers. That is where Mary left off and turned this matter over to you. Tony, experienced with CRS work, said that he anticipated infusing all 18 of our CRS team as soon as possible.

It is our understanding, per your request, that we will coordinate our activities, through your field staff, [redacted] and [redacted] and they will advise you.

However, we await your further guidance, regarding the FEMA clearance of additional CRS staff. We are in the process of securing housing for our people and have our staff on standby. We seek a decision on the deployment of the additional CRS staff and whether we should move forward in this regard.

We are sending Carmelita Freeman, who is the Regional Director in Dallas, which includes responsibility for Louisiana, to Baton Rouge as the liaison for Louisiana. She already has comfortable housing in Baton Rouge for her and Walter Atkinson who will be joining her. They will also go to Atlanta for the required FEMA training.

FEMA has cleared 5 CRS staff members, but the Housing Task Force is not yet developed, according to Mary. We are offering to you our services to help put that task force in place for FEMA given our experience in assisting in the resettlement of South Asians throughout the United States and the Cuban/Haitian resettlement in Florida. Since the task force is not in place, we will use one of our 5 slots on the trainers described below.

Tony Russell discussed with us and Mary, and we understood it was a green light that CRS was needed and would provide a 45 minute cultural competency training program in Atlanta for preparation in deploying some 4,000 Forest Service employees. We have sent two trainers, Rosa Salamanca and Patricia Glenn.

We discussed with Mary and Tony an amendment and sent language for 2 trainers. That is where Mary left off and turned this matter over to you. Tony, experienced with CRS work, said that he anticipated infusing all 18 of our CRS team as soon as possible.

It is our understanding, per your request, that we will coordinate our activities, through your field staff, [redacted] and [redacted] and they will advise you.

However, we await your further guidance, regarding the FEMA clearance of additional CRS staff. We are in the process of securing housing for our people and have our staff on standby. We seek a decision on the deployment of the additional CRS staff and whether we should move forward in this regard.

FYI, the September 7 DC meeting will now apparently only address the "humane assurances" framework issue, and the Uighurs will be taken up at a September 13 DC meeting. This is obviously a moving target, so -- as you suggest -- we'll arrange prep sessions once they're set and we have the read-aheads, etc. Also, FYI, I don't think it's critical that you be the one to attend the September 7 meeting, but I do think it's important that you attend the September 13 meeting. Thanks.

LCMS Steering Committee members,

Attached is the LCMS briefing deck presented last week by Van Hitch to Associate Attorney General McCallum. The briefing went well, and as a result, the Associate's office has designated Luis Reyes as OASG's representative on the LCMS Executive Steering Committee.

As LCMS moves closer to issuing an RFP (November 05) and awarding a contract (March 06), we look forward to working with all of you to ensure the project continues on its successful path. The Steering Committee will play an important role in addressing and resolving policy and change management issues that emerge as part of Task Force planning efforts.

Litigation Case Management System (LCMS)

Litigation Case Management at DOJ

Briefing for the Office of the Associate Attorney General

August 23, 2005

Vance E. Hitch
Chief Information Officer

THE PROBLEM

Instead of operating as an efficient, unified law firm, DOJ litigating components are disconnected entities that operate expensive, redundant information technology (IT) systems. These IT silos cause:

- Barriers to information sharing
- Lack of management transparency and accountability
- Inefficient and weak executive reporting abilities
- Wasted taxpayer dollars and DOJ resources

DOJ spends millions each year supporting 7 separate core litigation case management (CM) systems. 5 of 7 litigating components were independently planning new case management systems.

Litigation CM - Current State Summary

Impetus for Change – OMB and OAG

OMB launched the "Lines of Business" initiative in FY04 to identify functional areas of duplicative IT spending. Case Management was identified, and DOJ designated as the lead agency for a common solution.

Attorney General Ashcroft, FY 2006 Budget Guidance:

"The Department's Chief Information Officer (CIO) is leading the e-government initiative on case management for the President's Management Agenda as the Department of Justice is to be the leader of this transformation. I am directing the investigating, litigating, and appropriate administrative components to work with the Justice Management Division to drive toward a common enterprise solution to case management, and you should include the appropriate request. Duplicative, stove-piped systems will give way to a solution that shares information efficiently and seamlessly, within and between components and partners." (April 26, 2004)

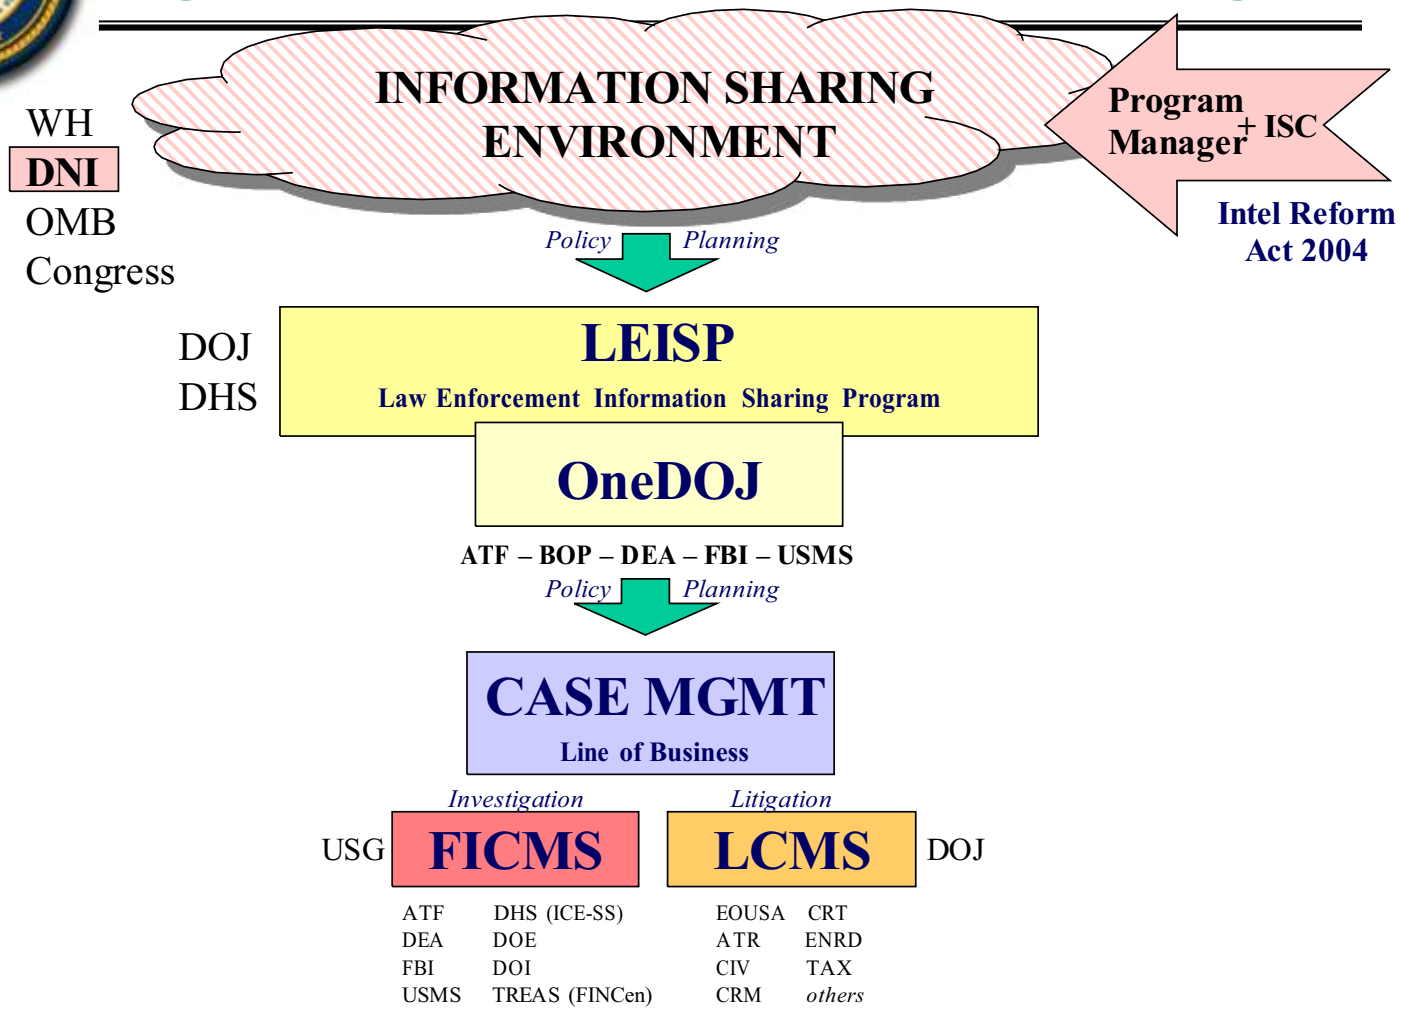
The Path Behind DOJ

Richard Thornburg
U.S. Attorney General
1988-1991

First significant attempt to streamline DOJ case management occurred during the Savings & Loan crisis in the late 1980s.

Subsequent efforts have been attempted, all have failed.

Why LCMS will succeed:



- Ground-up approach (component buy-in)
- Respect component needs/requirements but build Departmentally
- Philosophy: "Less is more"
- Burning platform (immediate IT needs)

THE SOLUTION

The Litigation Case Management System (LCMS) will move DOJ from the current, inefficient model to a common solution platform that promotes information sharing across organizations and saves taxpayer dollars.

Today		Tomorrow (2007+)
7 separate CM systems, independently operated and maintained	→	Single solution that meets both common and specialized CM requirements
Manual referral of matters/cases to USAOs & duplicative data entry	→	Automated referral process
Limited ability to share information & track cases across components	→	"Virtual" matter/case database to facilitate information sharing
Inefficient Dept-level case reporting from disparate data sources	→	Rationalized, timely reporting from a single data source

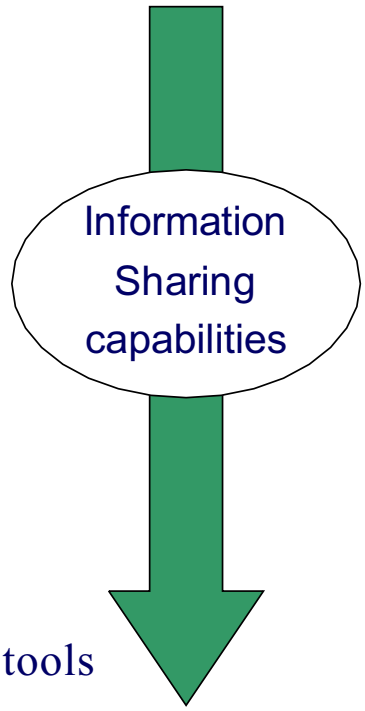
LCMS Phase 1

- A common "core" case management system for the 94 U.S. Attorneys Offices and the 6 major DOJ litigating divisions (ATR, CIV, CRM, CRT, ENRD, TAX).
- LCMS will capture, manage, and report the litigation case management information needed by supervisors and managers to manage workload, monitor performance, report time spent, and meet reporting requirements.
- Phase 1 of LCMS will not be a "total solution." LCMS will take a phased approach.
  - Success for Phase 1 is defined as migrating existing functionality to a common case management platform.
  - The common solution sets the stage for future success, e.g., automated data interfaces with US Courts, additional attorney tools, etc.



DOJ_NMG_ 0146639

Functional Impact

Version 1.0 ("Core") – 2007-2010

Move existing functionality to a common system:

- Matter/case tracking
- Management reporting
- Time reporting

Version 2.0 ("Enhanced") – 2010+*

- Document management
- Electronic records management
- Data exchange with U.S. Courts
- Integration with Automated Litigation Support (ALS) tools

* Note: These enhancements could be integrated earlier with adequate funding

OAAG Leadership Needed on Policy Issues

Standard definition of "case" vs. "matter"

- Most components consider a matter a case when it is filed in Court
- ENRD and TAX have different case definitions

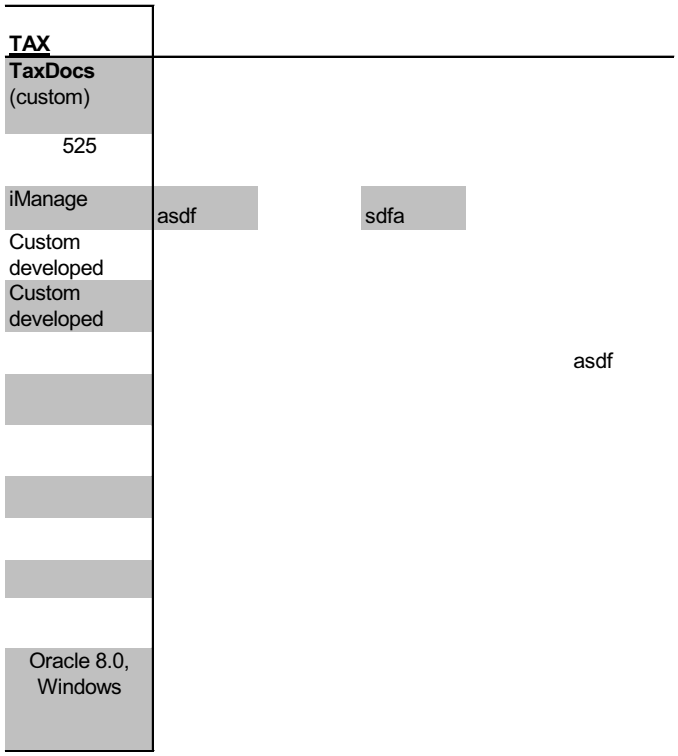
Standardized case/matter categories

- No common definition for case categories (each component defines their own)
- e.g., counterterrorism

Standardized component performance metrics/reporting

- Standard metrics needed across components to facilitate efficient resource allocation and executive reporting
- e.g., standard definition of a "favorable outcome"

Information Sharing



- Coordination with DOJ's Law Enforcement Information Sharing Program (LEISP)

Next Steps

- OASG representation on the LCMS Executive Steering Committee
- OASG leadership on policy issues, as needed

Robert, [redacted] Neil and I have kicked this around and have come to the conclusion the Lily would serve well as the OASG rep for this steering committee. She knows the folks in CIO and is already involved in some peripherally related matters (i.e. her role is web mistress). Her involvement would be to remain in the loop as things develop and weigh in when it comes time to deliberate on policy issues that arise. Alternatively, Neil would serve.

Neil, hope you had a good Labor Day sir. We started to talk about this last week. For some reason the CIO office has assumed that I will sit on the steering committee for this. I am inclined to disabuse them of that notion as I fear it would not be fearful for me to get involved only to shift this over to someone else within the month or so. Robert and I had discussed having you on the committee. If not, maybe Lily or Jeff Senger? Attached is the PP that CIO used to brief Robert last week. Let me know your thoughts on the member of the committee from ASG and I will let CIO know. Mainly our function will be to stay in the loop and when the time comes for a policy call, to weigh in.

LCMS Steering Committee members,

Attached is the LCMS briefing deck presented last week by Van Hitch to Associate Attorney General McCallum. The briefing went well, and as a result, the Associate's office has designated Luis Reyes as OASG's representative on the LCMS Executive Steering Committee.

As LCMS moves closer to issuing an RFP (November 05) and awarding a contract (March 06), we look forward to working with all of you to ensure the project continues on its successful path. The Steering Committee will play an important role in addressing and resolving policy and change management issues that emerge as part of Task Force planning efforts.

The next meeting is Wednesday, October 5.

National Hispanic Heritage Month 2005 Celebration
"Hispanic Americans: Strong and Colorful Threads in the American Fabric"

September 15 - October 15 is annually designated by Presidential Proclamation as "National Hispanic Heritage Month." This commemoration was established to honor and recognize the cultural and historical contributions of Hispanic Americans to our country.

The Department of Justice will present its commemorative program in observance of National Hispanic Heritage Month 11:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon, Wednesday, September 14, 2005, in the Great Hall of the Robert F. Kennedy MAIN Building. Speakers include Alberto Gonzales, Attorney General; Robert Flores, Administrator, OJJDP, Office of Justice Programs; Jennifer Sevilla Korn, Deputy Director, Office of Intergovernmental and Public Liaison; and Michael Battle, Director, Executive Office for U.S. Attorneys. The program will feature music performances by Christina Perez and Starr Acosta, recent talent show contestants of the Greater Washington Hispanic Youth Symposium. A sign language interpreter and assistive listening devices will be available. Managers are encouraged to grant employees in the Washington Metropolitan Area reasonable official time to participate. An ethnic food sampling will follow the program.

Status of U.S. Postal Service (USPS) Operations in the South

Due to significant network disruption and catastrophic damage, Express Mail sales have been suspended to certain areas of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. USPS also announced that, effective immediately, it is not accepting any Standard Mail or Periodicals Mail – from any source – addressed for delivery within these three-digit ZIP Code ranges: 369, 393, 394, 395, 396, 700 and 701. This emergency action has been taken as a result of severe facility damage, evacuations and other issues associated with Hurricane Katrina. USPS is now formulating plans to address the handling of Standard and Periodicals Mail already in the mail stream and addressed for delivery to these seven ZIP Code areas.

Temporary Closure of the 10th Street Entrance of the RFK MAIN Justice Building

During the upcoming restoration of the exterior ornamental gates at the 10th street entrance, both the vehicular and pedestrian entrances will be closed for one week. Beginning at 6:00 p.m., Friday, September 9 through 6:00 a.m., Monday, September 19, the entrances will be closed. In addition, both the north and south revolving doors along the 1200 corridor exiting into the portico from the corridor will also be closed to pedestrian traffic during this same time period. Please use the exterior doors by elevator lobbies 4 and 5 to cross the courtyard to go to the other side of the building. Foot traffic will be prohibited in the portico. During this period, the 9th street entrance will be open for both vehicular and pedestrian traffic.

In addition, the Attorney General's ramp on 10th street near Constitution Avenue will be open from 6:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. beginning Monday, September 12 through Friday, September 16 for delivery vehicles that normally access the RFK MAIN Justice Building via the 9th street vehicular entrance.

Information for Employees in the Military Service Member's Group Life Insurance (SGLI):

Both active duty and Reserve components eligible for SGLI will be automatically insured for $400,000 as of September 1, 2005. The amount of coverage available has also increased from $10,000 to $50,000. The monthly premium, however, will remain the same, $3.25 per $50,000 of coverage. Full coverage, based on this formula, will cost $26 per month. Service members can reduce or decline SGLI by filling out an SGLV-8286 form. The revised form is available at http://www.insurance.va.gov/sgliSite/forms/forms.htm. For more information, please visit the Department of Veterans Affairs life insurance web page at http://www.insurance.va.gov .

TRICARE:
Effective September 1, 2005, the Extended Care Health Option (ECHO) will replace the existing Program for Persons with Disabilities. ECHO will continue to:

1. Financially assist active duty family members who have a qualifying condition as defined by law; and

2. Offer an integrated set of services and supplies that supplement the basic TRICARE program options – TRICARE Prime, TRICARE Standard and TRICARE Extra.

ECHO requires all eligible dependents to enroll in the Exceptional Family Member Program, available through any branch of the service, and register with their regional contractor to obtain ECHO benefit authorization. I need someone to contact FEMA and explain what CRS does, there is a view that we do what their equal rights – EEO, Title 6 office does. This is just odd to me. I need someone in FEMA to clear 18 CRS folks for deployment with the appropriate FEMA paperwork to support us. I need someone to make a decision whether CRS can take a major role or the lead in assisting in setting up the Housing Task Force that will work on resettling evacuees. I need some in FEMA to listen to Tony Russell in FEMA in Atlanta, who understands CRS' role.

Director Freeman and I understand from what you said this evening on the phone that we have currently been cleared for 5 CRS employees to infuse in the FEMA deployment process. Thomas Battles who is the Regional Director (RD) for 8 southern states is our liaison for Mississippi and will attend the FEMA training in Atlanta and one addition CRS person Grace Sage, who is [redacted], will also attend, since that complies with FEMA's initial request of us to make sure our Mississippi team included someone with a [redacted] background. RD Battles is still working on housing for both of them and additional staff. After training, they will move to Jackson, Mississippi.

We are sending Carmelita Freeman, who is the Regional Director in Dallas, which includes responsibility for Louisiana, to Baton Rouge as the liaison for Louisiana. She already has comfortable housing in Baton Rouge for her and Walter Atkinson who will be joining her. They will also go to Atlanta for the required FEMA training.

FEMA has cleared 5 CRS staff members, but the Housing Task Force is not yet developed, according to Mary. We are offering to you our services to help put that task force in place for FEMA given our experience in assisting in the resettlement of South Asians throughout the United States and the Cuban/Haitian resettlement in Florida. Since the task force is not in place, we will use one of our 5 slots on the trainers described below.

Tony Russell discussed with us and Mary, and we understood it was a green light that CRS was needed and would provide a 45 minute cultural competency training program in Atlanta for preparation in deploying some 4,000 Forest Service employees. We have sent two trainers, Rosa Salamanca and Patricia Glenn.

We discussed with Mary and Tony an amendment and sent language for 2 trainers. That is where Mary left off and turned this matter over to you. Tony, experienced with CRS work, said that he anticipated infusing all 18 of our CRS team as soon as possible.

It is our understanding, per your request, that we will coordinate our activities, through your field staff, [redacted] and [redacted] and they will advise you.

However, we await your further guidance, regarding the FEMA clearance of additional CRS staff. We are in the process of securing housing for our people and have our staff on standby. We seek a decision on the deployment of the additional CRS staff and whether we should move forward in this regard.

We have received from our contacts at DHS what appears to be draft language for a bill that could be passed in the Senate as soon as today providing for emergency authority to conduct court proceedings outside the territotial jurisdiction of a given Federal circuit, district, or bankruptcy court. The bill provides general authority nationwide for heads of courts to determine emergency conditions, rather than dealing specifically with Louisiana.

We are treating this as high potential for having an enrolled bill as soon as today or tomorrow. Please let us know if you have any additional information or intelligence.

II. New provisions

SEC. 201. USE OF PRISONER LABOR AND PRODUCTS IN EMERGENCY DISASTER RELIEF

(a) Section 4082 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Attorney General may use the labor of any person in the custody of the Attorney General or the Federal Bureau of Prisons to engage or assist in relief, cleanup, repair, public works, or other functions in response to a Presidentially-declared major disaster or emergency, and may extend the limits of confinement of any such person for that purpose.".

(b) Section 4122 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, Federal Prison Industries may –

"(1) use inmate labor to produce products and perform services for any governmental or not-for-profit nongovernmental entities in support of relief efforts relating to a Presidentially-declared major disaster or emergency; and

"(2) donate goods, services, and labor in support of such relief efforts.".

EXPLANATION

This section provides authorizations to use federal prisoner labor and products in support of relief and rehabilitation efforts relating to the Hurricane Katrina disaster and any similar disaster that may occur in the future.

Subsection (a)

Subsection (a) amends 18 U.S.C. § 4082 to authorize the Attorney General to use prisoner labor in the disaster area, and to extend the area of confinement for prisoners – i.e., have them work outside of the correctional facilities in which they are normally confined – as needed for that purpose. This authority would, for example, allow the Attorney General to operate prisoner work crews in the disaster area to perform such functions as clearing debris, repairing streets and buildings, and doing new construction to replace damaged or destroyed facilities.

Current law already allows the use of federal inmate labor for public works. Specifically, 18 U.S.C. § 4125(a) authorizes the Attorney General to make available to federal government departments the services of federal prisoners "for constructing or repairing roads, clearing, maintaining and reforesting public lands, building levees, and constructing or repairing any other public ways or works financed wholly or in major part by funds appropriated by Congress." However, the list of purposes for which the statute allows inmate labor to be used does not encompass the full range of emergency disaster relief efforts. For example, in responding to an emergency, inmate labor may be useful in constructing or repairing facilities that are not financed through federal appropriations. Current law also contains a provision, 18 U.S.C. § 3622, allowing prisoners to work outside their normal places of confinement, but it is a narrowly defined "furlough" statute that includes many limitations not suitable for the context of emergency disaster relief.

Proposed 18 U.S.C. § 4082(d) in subsection (a) would provide an authorization to use federal prisoner labor in disaster areas that is in some ways broader in scope than the current statutes, but narrower in that its application is limited to activities in disaster areas. The Bureau of Prisons would be responsible for ensuring that inmates providing labor under this statute were appropriately screened and supervised to avoid any additional risk to public safety and would ensure the safety and health of the inmates themselves. An inmate who attempted to escape while engaged in such disaster relief work would remain subject to prosecution under 18 U.S.C. §§ 751 and 4082(a).

Subsection (b)

Federal Prison Industries (FPI), as provided in 18 U.S.C. § 4121 et seq., is responsible for administering operations involving inmate labor in federal correctional facilities. Under existing law, FPI is constrained to market its products to federal government agencies and cannot sell to state or local agencies or private sector entities. See 18 U.S.C. § 4122(a).

The public interest in alleviating the vast human suffering resulting from Hurricane Katrina or similar disasters, and in helping to restore the affected parts of the country, justifies an exception to the normal policy, limited to such disaster situations. Subsection (b) of this section amends 18 U.S.C. § 4122 to provide that FPI may use inmate labor to produce products and perform services for any governmental entity, federal, state, or local, or any not-for-profit non-governmental entity in support of disaster relief efforts and may donate goods, services, and labor in support of such relief efforts. This authority would, for example, allow the Red Cross to contract with FPI for the production of emergency care kits to be used in the disaster area and would allow FPI to provide – even without compensation or payment – goods, such as used computers, for use by persons displaced by the disaster as they begin to rebuild their lives.

SEC. 301. CREATING FEDERAL CRIME OF INTERFERING WITH FEDERAL DISASTER RELIEF EFFORTS

Title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding the following new section:

"§ 1370. Interference with Federal Disaster Relief Efforts.

(a) Prohibited Conduct. Whoever, during a Presidentially-declared major disaster or emergency,

(1) forcibly assaults, resists, opposes, impedes, intimidates, or interferes with any officer or employee of the United States or of any agency in any branch of the United States Government (including any member of the uniformed services) while such officer or employee is engaged in or on account of the performance of official duties relating to, or in support of recovery from, the Presidentially-declared disaster or emergency, or any person assisting such an officer or employee in the performance of such duties or on account of that assistance; or shall, except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than two years, or both.

(2) forcibly assaults, resists, opposes, impedes, intimidates, or interferes with any person providing services in support of disaster relief efforts and working in coordination with a Federal coordinating officer appointed pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 5143,

(b) Enhanced Penalty. Whoever, in the commission of any act described in subsection (a) of this section, carries, possesses or uses a deadly or dangerous weapon or inflicts serious bodily injury, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than 15 years, or, if the death of any person results, by death or life imprisonment.".

EXPLANATION

Subsection (a) of new section 1370 of Title 18 would make it a crime to interfere with any federal officer involved in relief efforts relating to a declared disaster or emergency. Subsection (b) would make it a crime to interfere with the efforts of any private person assisting with those relief efforts, if the private assistance was being provided in coordination with the "federal coordinating officer" in charge of the disaster relief effort. Under 42 U.S.C. § 5143(a), the President appoints a federal coordinating officer who is responsible for coordinating response and relief efforts, including those of the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, and other organizations that "agree to operate under his advice or direction."

The penalty for this new offense would be a fine, or up to two years' imprisonment, or both, except that if the crime was committed by using a deadly weapon or if it inflicted serious bodily injury, it would be punishable by up to fifteen years' imprisonment, unless death results, in which case it would be punishable by death or life imprisonment.

SEC. 401. EXTENSION OF STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS PURSUANT TO STATE OF EMERGENCY

(a) IN GENERAL -- Chapter 213 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

§ 3298. Extension of Statute of Limitations Pursuant to State of Emergency.

"In the case of an emergency situation as provided by section ____, in any district for which the emergency authority was invoked, any limitation period provided by this chapter for the prosecution, trial, or punishment of an offense, is tolled during the period in which the courts are closed pursuant to the emergency, and for one additional year from the date on which all operations resume in the district courts within that district."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT -- The table of sections at the beginning of Chapter 213 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"§ 3298. Extension of Statute of Limitations Pursuant to State of Emergency.".

EXPLANATION

The new section 3298 of title 18, United States Code, would extend the statute of limitations for all federal crimes committed within any district in which the emergency authority to hold special sessions outside the geographic limits of the district court was sought by one year from the date on which all operations resume in the district courts sitting within the district.

This provision does not apply to any cases in which the statute of limitations expired prior to its enactment and cannot be relied upon to revive any such prosecution.

SEC. 501. EMERGENCY AUTHORITY TO DELAY OR TOLL JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL -- Chapter 111 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

§ 1660. Emergency Authority to Delay, or Toll Judicial Proceedings.

"(a) IN GENERAL -- Upon application of the Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee or on his own motion, the chief judge of a district court that has been affected (or, if the chief district judge is unavailable, the most senior available active district judge or the chief judge of the court of appeals including the district) may, in the event of a natural disaster, civil disobedience, or other emergency situation requiring the closure of courts or other circumstances inhibiting the ability of litigants to comply with deadlines imposed by rules of procedure applicable in the courts of the United States, enter such order or orders as may be appropriate to delay, toll, or otherwise grant relief from time deadlines imposed by otherwise applicable statutes and rules of procedure for such period and in such judicial district as may be appropriate, including, without limitation, those affecting all pre-arrest, post-arrest, pre-trial, trial, and post-trial procedures in criminal and juvenile proceedings and all civil process and proceedings, and all appellate proceedings.

"(b) CRIMINAL CASES -- In setting new time limits under this section for criminal cases, the court shall consider the government's ability to investigate, litigate and process defendants during and beyond the emergency situation.

"(c) APPEALS -- Upon application of the Attorney General or the Attorney General's designee or on his own motion, the chief judge of a court of appeals that has been affected or that includes a district court so affected (or, if the chief circuit judge is unavailable, the most senior available active circuit judge) may, in the event of a natural disaster, civil disobedience, or other emergency situation requiring the closure of courts or other circumstances inhibiting the ability of litigants to comply with deadlines imposed by rules of procedure applicable in the courts of the United States, enter such order or orders as may be appropriate to delay, toll, or otherwise grant relief from time deadlines imposed by otherwise applicable statutes and rules of procedure for such period and in such circuit as may be appropriate, including, without limitation, those affecting all appellate proceedings.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.----The table of sections at the beginning of Chapter 111 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"§ 1660. Emergency Authority to Delay or Toll Judicial Proceedings.".

EXPLANATION

The new section 1660 of title 28 allows the chief judge of any district court (or, if the chief district judge is not available, the next most senior active district judge in the district or the chief judge of the court of appeals for the circuit in which the district is located), either on motion of the Attorney General or his designee or on the court's own motion to, to enter an order or orders to delay or toll any and all deadlines imposed by statute or rules of procedure whenever the district court is closed by virtue of any natural disaster, civil disobedience, or other emergency situation. While individuals judges no doubt currently possess this authority, this provision would enable a chief judge of an affected district to ensure that all judges within that district address issues involving time limits in a consistent manner.

Subsection (b) of the new section 1660 would make clear that, in setting new time limits applicable in criminal cases, the court must consider the government's ability to investigate, litigate and process defendants during and beyond the emergency situation. While the court can be expected to give consideration to the difficulties faced by all litigants in such cases, the law is designed to ensure that the court also give appropriate consideration to the unique needs that may be imposed on the federal government in responding to the types of emergencies that could result in the need to seek to invoke the authority provided in section 1660.

The new section would provide like authority to the chief judge of the court of appeals for the circuit when the court of appeals itself is so affected. Such authority may also be exercised by the chief judge of the court of appeals to delay or toll time limits for appellate litigants within specific districts within the circuit when emergency situations affect litigants in that district.

my staff tells me ([redacted]) that, with regard to the legislation you forwarded (attached again here)

Yes, we are aware of it. A similar provision was in the Federal Courts Improvement Act, which the Department commented on last year. We supported the measure, but had some technical concerns.

DOJ has been working directly with the House and Senate Judiciary Committees on this emergency legislation, and we expect to submit a draft views letter in support of the legislation to OMB later this afternoon. We hope for speedy clearance.

We have received from our contacts at DHS what appears to be draft language for a bill that could be passed in the Senate as soon as today providing for emergency authority to conduct court proceedings outside the territotial jurisdiction of a given Federal circuit, district, or bankruptcy court. The bill provides general authority nationwide for heads of courts to determine emergency conditions, rather than dealing specifically with Louisiana.

We are treating this as high potential for having an enrolled bill as soon as today or tomorrow. Please let us know if you have any additional information or intelligence.

Will mentioned both these proposals and the court relief proposal. In fact I didn't realize they were separate pieces rather than one ball of wax. Seems to me that all of these issues would benefit from review by the litigating components as soon as possible, no?

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

Jeff

I hesitate to ask for assistance again, but you're the right person. In light of Katrina, I'm interested in proposing liability protection for volunteer healthcare workers again. I've attached three documents that you've sent me in the past. The "VPA document" was sent in November, and the other two in December, 2004. Suggested Modification to the Volunteer Protection Act

A. Background.

The Volunteer Protection Act of 1997, Pub. L. 105-19, codified at 42 U.S.C. 14501 et seq. (VPA), is a balanced measure that was enacted with extensive bipartisan support. The VPA removes liability for ordinary negligence, while retaining liability for willful misconduct as outlined in the statute.

The proposed VPA revision below would provide substantial protection against tort liability for healthcare volunteers who perform services during public health emergencies, and protect their employers or partners, as well as those persons or entities whose facilities they use during a public health emergency. The suggested approach does not deem volunteers to be federal employees, and would not subject the United States to potential liability under the Federal Tort Claims Act. Adoption of a congressionally sanctioned VPA approach would represent an appropriate accommodation of the volunteers' interest in protection against tort liability, the public's interest in compensation for and deterrence of willful misconduct, and the United States' interest in protecting the public fisc.

B. Text of Proposed Legislation

[DRAFT] An Act to Grant Relief to Volunteers for Healthcare Services Rendered During Public Health Emergencies

(a) A volunteer, as defined in this section, while aiding or facilitating the provision of health or medical services during a public health emergency, shall be deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the "Volunteer Protection Act"), provided that the volunteer is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of another jurisdiction to provide such healthcare. Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter (42 U.S.C. §14503(d)) shall not apply to any claim against a volunteer as defined herein.

(b) A volunteer providing health or medical services during a public health emergency shall be deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides such services if that volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide the healthcare services, activities, practices or related services that he or she voluntarily provides in aid or facilitation of a response to a public health emergency.

(c) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization so long as the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions

(1) "Volunteer" means an individual who provides healthcare services or assistance in a location other than his or her usual place of business or practice without expectation or receipt of remuneration for his or her services.

(2) "Healthcare Facility" means, but is not limited to, a hospital, clinic, outpatient facility, or an emergency or mobile medical services platform or vehicle used for the provision of healthcare.

(3) "Public Health Emergency" means a public health emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. §247d),a determination by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration under 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. For purposes of this section, a public health emergency may be given retroactive effect. A public health emergency can involve the provision of health and medical services and may be limited in geographic scope.

C. Explanation of VPA Revisions

(a) Immunity of Public Health Emergency Volunteer

A volunteer under this subsection, while aiding in or facilitating in the provision of healthcare in a public health emergency, is deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the 'Volunteer Protection Act'). Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter, 42 U.S.C. §14503(d), which provides for liability of volunteers in certain situations, does not apply for purposes of any claim against such a volunteer. Subsection 14503(d) contains certain exceptions to liability protection for volunteers, including one, §14503(d)(4), under which a volunteer could be liable notwithstanding the general rule of the Act if the applicable state law conditions a volunteer's protection from liability on the volunteer's organization's acceptance of vicarious liability. The United States is not intended to be vicariously liable in place of volunteers, and otherwise applicable exception could be read to subject such volunteers to tort liability where state law is as described. Accordingly, the liability exception of 42 U.S.C. §14503(d)(4) is excluded

(b) Constructive State Licensure or Authority

Subsection (b) provides that volunteers who perform services during a public health care emergency are deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which an alleged harm occurs. This constructive licensure or authorization applies so long as the volunteers acts within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities with the healthcare facility, and is limited to those situations where the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide or engage in those healthcare services, activities, or practices involved.

(c) Nonliability of Volunteer's Employer or Partner

Subsection (c) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to the usual employer or business partner of a volunteer for any acts or omissions that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) Nonliability of Host or Enabling Person, Entity or Organization

Subsection (d) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to a person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to the volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance during a public health emergency. The host facility shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization unless the harm was caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions.

Subsection (e) defines the terms "Volunteer", "Healthcare Facility" and "Public Health Emergency". A "Volunteer" is a person who does not expect or receive pay for volunteered services and who does not perform the volunteer services in his or her usual place of business or employment. A "Healthcare Facility" includes hospitals and clinics, but is not limited to them. The term also includes any platform, place or vehicle where the volunteer's services are performed or assistance is rendered. A "Public Health Emergency" is defined as an emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under 42 U.S.C. §247d; an emergency declared by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration issued under the specified sections of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, i..e, 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. A public health emergency may be given retroactive effect, and it may be limited in terms of its geographic scope.

D. Current Text of the VPA.

[42 U.S.C.] §14503. Limitation on liability for volunteers

(a) Liability protection for volunteers

Except as provided in subsections (b) and (d) of this section, no volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity shall be liable for harm caused by an act or omission of the volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity if -

(2) if appropriate or required, the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which the harm occurred, where the activities were or practice was undertaken within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity;

(3) the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer; and

(4) the harm was not caused by the volunteer operating a motor vehicle, vessel, aircraft, or other vehicle for which the State requires the operator or the owner of the vehicle, craft, or vessel to -

(A) possess an operator's license; or

(B) maintain insurance.

(b) Concerning responsibility of volunteers to organizations and entities

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any civil action brought by any nonprofit organization or any governmental entity against any volunteer of such organization or entity.

(c) No effect on liability of organization or entity

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the liability of any nonprofit organization or governmental entity with respect to harm caused to any person.

(d) Exceptions to volunteer liability protection

If the laws of a State limit volunteer liability subject to one or more of the following conditions, such conditions shall not be construed as inconsistent with this section:

(1) A State law that requires a nonprofit organization or governmental entity to adhere to risk management procedures, including mandatory training of volunteers.

(2) A State law that makes the organization or entity liable for the acts or omissions of its volunteers to the same extent as an employer is liable for the acts or omissions of its employees.

(3) A State law that makes a limitation of liability inapplicable if the civil action was brought by an officer of a State or local government pursuant to State or local law.

(4) A State law that makes a limitation of liability applicable only if the nonprofit organization or governmental entity provides a financially secure source of recovery for individuals who suffer harm as a result of actions taken by a volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity. A financially secure source of recovery may be an insurance policy within specified limits, comparable coverage from a risk pooling mechanism, equivalent assets, or alternative arrangements that satisfy the State that the organization or entity will be able to pay for losses up to a specified amount. Separate standards for different types of liability exposure may be specified.

(e) Limitation on punitive damages based on actions of volunteers

(1) General rule

Punitive damages may not be awarded against a volunteer in an action brought for harm based on the action of a volunteer acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities to a nonprofit organization or governmental entity unless the claimant establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the harm was proximately caused by an action of such volunteer which constitutes willful or criminal misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed.

(2) Construction

Paragraph (1) does not create a cause of action for punitive damages and does not preempt or supersede any Federal or State law to the extent that such law would further limit the award of punitive damages.

(f) Exceptions to limitations on liability

(1) In general

The limitations on the liability of a volunteer under this chapter shall not apply to any misconduct that -

(A) Constitutes a crime of violence (as that term is defined in section 16 of title 18) or act of international terrorism (as that term is defined in section 2331 of title 18) for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(B) constitutes a hate crime (as that term is used in the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note));

(C) involves a sexual offense, as defined by applicable State law, for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(D) involves misconduct for which the defendant has been found to have violated a Federal or State civil rights law; or

(E) where the defendant was under the influence (as determined pursuant to applicable State law) of intoxicating alcohol or any drug at the time of the misconduct.

(2) Rule of construction

Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to [a]ffect subsection (a)(3) or (e) of this section.

We are very much in the loop on this and have been working with House and Senate staff on this since last Thursday. We have a previously cleared position on a similar version contained in the court improvement bill. In fact, DHS got this from me this morning. I explained then that this was still being worked on by the Hill and that there are language changes that will likely be made. Obviously, the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts is also playing in this.

We have received from our contacts at DHS what appears to be draft language for a bill that could be passed in the Senate as soon as today providing for emergency authority to conduct court proceedings outside the territotial jurisdiction of a given Federal circuit, district, or bankruptcy court. The bill provides general authority nationwide for heads of courts to determine emergency conditions, rather than dealing specifically with Louisiana.

We are treating this as high potential for having an enrolled bill as soon as today or tomorrow. Please let us know if you have any additional information or intelligence.

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

Jeff

Suggested Modification to the Volunteer Protection Act

A. Background.

The Volunteer Protection Act of 1997, Pub. L. 105-19, codified at 42 U.S.C. 14501 et seq. (VPA), is a balanced measure that was enacted with extensive bipartisan support. The VPA removes liability for ordinary negligence, while retaining liability for willful misconduct as outlined in the statute.

The proposed VPA revision below would provide substantial protection against tort liability for healthcare volunteers who perform services during public health emergencies, and protect their employers or partners, as well as those persons or entities whose facilities they use during a public health emergency. The suggested approach does not deem volunteers to be federal employees, and would not subject the United States to potential liability under the Federal Tort Claims Act. Adoption of a congressionally sanctioned VPA approach would represent an appropriate accommodation of the volunteers' interest in protection against tort liability, the public's interest in compensation for and deterrence of willful misconduct, and the United States' interest in protecting the public fisc.

B. Text of Proposed Legislation

[DRAFT] An Act to Grant Relief to Volunteers for Healthcare Services Rendered During Public Health Emergencies

(a) A volunteer, as defined in this section, while aiding or facilitating the provision of health or medical services during a public health emergency, shall be deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the "Volunteer Protection Act"), provided that the volunteer is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of another jurisdiction to provide such healthcare. Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter (42 U.S.C. §14503(d)) shall not apply to any claim against a volunteer as defined herein.

(b) A volunteer providing health or medical services during a public health emergency shall be deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides such services if that volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide the healthcare services, activities, practices or related services that he or she voluntarily provides in aid or facilitation of a response to a public health emergency.

(c) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization so long as the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions

(1) "Volunteer" means an individual who provides healthcare services or assistance in a location other than his or her usual place of business or practice without expectation or receipt of remuneration for his or her services.

(2) “Healthcare Facility” means, but is not limited to, a hospital, clinic, outpatient facility, or an emergency or mobile medical services platform or vehicle used for the provision of healthcare.

(3) "Public Health Emergency" means a public health emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. §247d),a determination by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration under 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. For purposes of this section, a public health emergency may be given retroactive effect. A public health emergency can involve the provision of health and medical services and may be limited in geographic scope.

C. Explanation of VPA Revisions

(a) Immunity of Public Health Emergency Volunteer

A volunteer under this subsection, while aiding in or facilitating in the provision of healthcare in a public health emergency, is deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the 'Volunteer Protection Act'). Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter, 42 U.S.C. §14503(d), which provides for liability of volunteers in certain situations, does not apply for purposes of any claim against such a volunteer. Subsection 14503(d) contains certain exceptions to liability protection for volunteers, including one, §14503(d)(4), under which a volunteer could be liable notwithstanding the general rule of the Act if the applicable state law conditions a volunteer's protection from liability on the volunteer's organization's acceptance of vicarious liability. The United States is not intended to be vicariously liable in place of volunteers, and otherwise applicable exception could be read to subject such volunteers to tort liability where state law is as described. Accordingly, the liability exception of 42 U.S.C. §14503(d)(4) is excluded

(b) Constructive State Licensure or Authority

Subsection (b) provides that volunteers who perform services during a public health care emergency are deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which an alleged harm occurs. This constructive licensure or authorization applies so long as the volunteers acts within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities with the healthcare facility, and is limited to those situations where the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide or engage in those healthcare services, activities, or practices involved.

(c) Nonliability of Volunteer's Employer or Partner

Subsection (c) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to the usual employer or business partner of a volunteer for any acts or omissions that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) Nonliability of Host or Enabling Person, Entity or Organization

Subsection (d) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to a person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to the volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance during a public health emergency. The host facility shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization unless the harm was caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions.

Subsection (e) defines the terms "Volunteer", "Healthcare Facility" and "Public Health Emergency". A "Volunteer" is a person who does not expect or receive pay for volunteered services and who does not perform the volunteer services in his or her usual place of business or employment. A "Healthcare Facility" includes hospitals and clinics, but is not limited to them. The term also includes any platform, place or vehicle where the volunteer's services are performed or assistance is rendered. A "Public Health Emergency" is defined as an emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under 42 U.S.C. §247d; an emergency declared by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration issued under the specified sections of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, i..e, 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. A public health emergency may be given retroactive effect, and it may be limited in terms of its geographic scope.

D. Current Text of the VPA.

[42 U.S.C.] §14503. Limitation on liability for volunteers

(a) Liability protection for volunteers

Except as provided in subsections (b) and (d) of this section, no volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity shall be liable for harm caused by an act or omission of the volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity if -

(1) the volunteer was acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity at the time of the act or omission;

(2) if appropriate or required, the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which the harm occurred, where the activities were or practice was undertaken within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity;

(3) the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer; and

(4) the harm was not caused by the volunteer operating a motor vehicle, vessel, aircraft, or other vehicle for which the State requires the operator or the owner of the vehicle, craft, or vessel to -

(A) possess an operator's license; or

(B) maintain insurance.

(b) Concerning responsibility of volunteers to organizations and entities

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any civil action brought by any nonprofit organization or any governmental entity against any volunteer of such organization or entity.

(c) No effect on liability of organization or entity

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the liability of any nonprofit organization or governmental entity with respect to harm caused to any person.

(d) Exceptions to volunteer liability protection

If the laws of a State limit volunteer liability subject to one or more of the following conditions, such conditions shall not be construed as inconsistent with this section:

(1) A State law that requires a nonprofit organization or governmental entity to adhere to risk management procedures, including mandatory training of volunteers.

(2) A State law that makes the organization or entity liable for the acts or omissions of its volunteers to the same extent as an employer is liable for the acts or omissions of its employees.

(3) A State law that makes a limitation of liability inapplicable if the civil action was brought by an officer of a State or local government pursuant to State or local law.

(4) A State law that makes a limitation of liability applicable only if the nonprofit organization or governmental entity provides a financially secure source of recovery for individuals who suffer harm as a result of actions taken by a volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity. A financially secure source of recovery may be an insurance policy within specified limits, comparable coverage from a risk pooling mechanism, equivalent assets, or alternative arrangements that satisfy the State that the organization or entity will be able to pay for losses up to a specified amount. Separate standards for different types of liability exposure may be specified.

(e) Limitation on punitive damages based on actions of volunteers

(1) General rule

Punitive damages may not be awarded against a volunteer in an action brought for harm based on the action of a volunteer acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities to a nonprofit organization or governmental entity unless the claimant establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the harm was proximately caused by an action of such volunteer which constitutes willful or criminal misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed.

(2) Construction

Paragraph (1) does not create a cause of action for punitive damages and does not preempt or supersede any Federal or State law to the extent that such law would further limit the award of punitive damages.

(f) Exceptions to limitations on liability

(1) In general

The limitations on the liability of a volunteer under this chapter shall not apply to any misconduct that -

(A) Constitutes a crime of violence (as that term is defined in section 16 of title 18) or act of international terrorism (as that term is defined in section 2331 of title 18) for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(B) constitutes a hate crime (as that term is used in the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note));

(C) involves a sexual offense, as defined by applicable State law, for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(D) involves misconduct for which the defendant has been found to have violated a Federal or State civil rights law; or

(E) where the defendant was under the influence (as determined pursuant to applicable State law) of intoxicating alcohol or any drug at the time of the misconduct.

(2) Rule of construction

Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to [a]ffect subsection (a)(3) or (e) of this section.

I think this is an impt idea that can be passed now, but which will be much more likely to be caught up in the tort reform/med mal debate and thus difficult to pass if we wait until after the emergency has passed.

Neil and Jeff: OLP has reviewed these proposals and we support them in concept. As to the different proposals, we would prefer the second one, as it most explicitly addresses the issue of punitive damages. We see no basis for interposing any objection to moving forward expeditiously to seek the enactment of one of these proposals.

We believe that OMB will be considering a number of Katrina-related legislative items, and we think this type of legislation ought to be included in an administration package of some kind. Therefore, we encourage you to push HSC to move forward with seeking OMB clearance promptly.

Please let me know if OLP can provide any further assistance regarding this matter. rah

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

Jeff

The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(c) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization.

(B) maintain insurance.

(b) Limitation on punitive damages based on actions of volunteers

(1) General rule

(2) Construction

Paragraph (1) does not create a cause of action for punitive damages and does not preempt or supersede any Federal or State law to the extent that such law would further limit the award of punitive damages.

Suggested Modification to the Volunteer Protection Act

A. Background.

The Volunteer Protection Act of 1997, Pub. L. 105-19, codified at 42 U.S.C. 14501 et seq. (VPA), is a balanced measure that was enacted with extensive bipartisan support. The VPA removes liability for ordinary negligence, while retaining liability for willful misconduct as outlined in the statute.

The proposed VPA revision below would provide substantial protection against tort liability for healthcare volunteers who perform services during public health emergencies, and protect their employers or partners, as well as those persons or entities whose facilities they use during a public health emergency. The suggested approach does not deem volunteers to be federal employees, and would not subject the United States to potential liability under the Federal Tort Claims Act. Adoption of a congressionally sanctioned VPA approach would represent an appropriate accommodation of the volunteers' interest in protection against tort liability, the public's interest in compensation for and deterrence of willful misconduct, and the United States' interest in protecting the public fisc.

B. Text of Proposed Legislation

[DRAFT] An Act to Grant Relief to Volunteers for Healthcare Services Rendered During Public Health Emergencies

(a) A volunteer, as defined in this section, while aiding or facilitating the provision of health or medical services during a public health emergency, shall be deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the "Volunteer Protection Act"), provided that the volunteer is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of another jurisdiction to provide such healthcare. Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter (42 U.S.C. §14503(d)) shall not apply to any claim against a volunteer as defined herein.

(b) A volunteer providing health or medical services during a public health emergency shall be deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides such services if that volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide the healthcare services, activities, practices or related services that he or she voluntarily provides in aid or facilitation of a response to a public health emergency.

(c) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization so long as the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions

(1) "Volunteer" means an individual who provides healthcare services or assistance in a location other than his or her usual place of business or practice without expectation or receipt of remuneration for his or her services.

(2) "Healthcare Facility" means, but is not limited to, a hospital, clinic, outpatient facility, or an emergency or mobile medical services platform or vehicle used for the provision of healthcare.

(3) "Public Health Emergency" means a public health emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. §247d),a determination by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration under 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. For purposes of this section, a public health emergency may be given retroactive effect. A public health emergency can involve the provision of health and medical services and may be limited in geographic scope.

C. Explanation of VPA Revisions

(a) Immunity of Public Health Emergency Volunteer

A volunteer under this subsection, while aiding in or facilitating in the provision of healthcare in a public health emergency, is deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the 'Volunteer Protection Act'). Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter, 42 U.S.C. §14503(d), which provides for liability of volunteers in certain situations, does not apply for purposes of any claim against such a volunteer. Subsection 14503(d) contains certain exceptions to liability protection for volunteers, including one, §14503(d)(4), under which a volunteer could be liable notwithstanding the general rule of the Act if the applicable state law conditions a volunteer's protection from liability on the volunteer's organization's acceptance of vicarious liability. The United States is not intended to be vicariously liable in place of volunteers, and otherwise applicable exception could be read to subject such volunteers to tort liability where state law is as described. Accordingly, the liability exception of 42 U.S.C. §14503(d)(4) is excluded

(b) Constructive State Licensure or Authority

Subsection (b) provides that volunteers who perform services during a public health care emergency are deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which an alleged harm occurs. This constructive licensure or authorization applies so long as the volunteers acts within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities with the healthcare facility, and is limited to those situations where the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide or engage in those healthcare services, activities, or practices involved.

(c) Nonliability of Volunteer's Employer or Partner

Subsection (c) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to the usual employer or business partner of a volunteer for any acts or omissions that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) Nonliability of Host or Enabling Person, Entity or Organization

Subsection (d) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to a person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to the volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance during a public health emergency. The host facility shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization unless the harm was caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions.

Subsection (e) defines the terms "Volunteer", "Healthcare Facility" and "Public Health Emergency". A "Volunteer" is a person who does not expect or receive pay for volunteered services and who does not perform the volunteer services in his or her usual place of business or employment. A "Healthcare Facility" includes hospitals and clinics, but is not limited to them. The term also includes any platform, place or vehicle where the volunteer's services are performed or assistance is rendered. A "Public Health Emergency" is defined as an emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under 42 U.S.C. §247d; an emergency declared by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration issued under the specified sections of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, i..e, 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. A public health emergency may be given retroactive effect, and it may be limited in terms of its geographic scope.

D. Current Text of the VPA.

[42 U.S.C.] §14503. Limitation on liability for volunteers

(a) Liability protection for volunteers

Except as provided in subsections (b) and (d) of this section, no volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity shall be liable for harm caused by an act or omission of the volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity if -

(1) the volunteer was acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity at the time of the act or omission;

(2) if appropriate or required, the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which the harm occurred, where the activities were or practice was undertaken within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity;

(3) the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer; and

(4) the harm was not caused by the volunteer operating a motor vehicle, vessel, aircraft, or other vehicle for which the State requires the operator or the owner of the vehicle, craft, or vessel to -

(A) possess an operator's license; or

(B) maintain insurance.

(b) Concerning responsibility of volunteers to organizations and entities

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any civil action brought by any nonprofit organization or any governmental entity against any volunteer of such organization or entity.

(c) No effect on liability of organization or entity

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the liability of any nonprofit organization or governmental entity with respect to harm caused to any person.

(d) Exceptions to volunteer liability protection

If the laws of a State limit volunteer liability subject to one or more of the following conditions, such conditions shall not be construed as inconsistent with this section:

(1) A State law that requires a nonprofit organization or governmental entity to adhere to risk management procedures, including mandatory training of volunteers.

(2) A State law that makes the organization or entity liable for the acts or omissions of its volunteers to the same extent as an employer is liable for the acts or omissions of its employees.

(3) A State law that makes a limitation of liability inapplicable if the civil action was brought by an officer of a State or local government pursuant to State or local law.

(4) A State law that makes a limitation of liability applicable only if the nonprofit organization or governmental entity provides a financially secure source of recovery for individuals who suffer harm as a result of actions taken by a volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity. A financially secure source of recovery may be an insurance policy within specified limits, comparable coverage from a risk pooling mechanism, equivalent assets, or alternative arrangements that satisfy the State that the organization or entity will be able to pay for losses up to a specified amount. Separate standards for different types of liability exposure may be specified.

(e) Limitation on punitive damages based on actions of volunteers

(1) General rule

Punitive damages may not be awarded against a volunteer in an action brought for harm based on the action of a volunteer acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities to a nonprofit organization or governmental entity unless the claimant establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the harm was proximately caused by an action of such volunteer which constitutes willful or criminal misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed.

(2) Construction

Paragraph (1) does not create a cause of action for punitive damages and does not preempt or supersede any Federal or State law to the extent that such law would further limit the award of punitive damages.

(f) Exceptions to limitations on liability

(1) In general

The limitations on the liability of a volunteer under this chapter shall not apply to any misconduct that -

(A) Constitutes a crime of violence (as that term is defined in section 16 of title 18) or act of international terrorism (as that term is defined in section 2331 of title 18) for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(B) constitutes a hate crime (as that term is used in the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note));

(C) involves a sexual offense, as defined by applicable State law, for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(D) involves misconduct for which the defendant has been found to have violated a Federal or State civil rights law; or

(E) where the defendant was under the influence (as determined pursuant to applicable State law) of intoxicating alcohol or any drug at the time of the misconduct.

(2) Rule of construction

Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to [a]ffect subsection (a)(3) or (e) of this section.

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

Jeff

Paul,

I hesitate to ask for assistance again, but you're the right person. In light of Katrina, I'm interested in proposing liability protection for volunteer healthcare workers again. I've attached three documents that you've sent me in the past. The "VPA document" was sent in November, and the other two in December, 2004. Could you take a look and let me know what you recommend that we use for draft VPA amendment language, with any changes that you think are appropriate.? If the freestanding amendment is still a reasonable approach, any edits to the "Emergency Health Freestanding Section" document would also be appreciated. Thanks in advance for your help.

Thanks, Richard. (Just for clarification, the first two documents are intended to produce identical results, one by amending and incorporating the VPA, the other by enacting a free-standing statute modeled on the VPA. In other words, the existing VPA contains the same limits on punitives as the second attachment would enact as a stand-alone provision.)

Neil and Jeff: OLP has reviewed these proposals and we support them in concept. As to the different proposals, we would prefer the second one, as it most explicitly addresses the issue of punitive damages. We see no basis for interposing any objection to moving forward expeditiously to seek the enactment of one of these proposals.

We believe that OMB will be considering a number of Katrina-related legislative items, and we think this type of legislation ought to be included in an administration package of some kind. Therefore, we encourage you to push HSC to move forward with seeking OMB clearance promptly.

Please let me know if OLP can provide any further assistance regarding this matter. rah

Rajeev, Marc - Just a heads-up to let you know that DOJ Leg Affairs, in conjunction with OLP, intends to send over to WH Leg Affairs tomorrow some language for consideration that would effect the change to the Volunteer Act discussed below. The aim is to encourage volunteerism in the wake of Katrina among out-of-state (and foreign) medical professionals by shielding them from tort liability under certain circumstances. This proposal will join a larger set of Katrina-related proposals sent to the WH today.

Subsections (c) and (d) of section 4 of such chapter (42 U.S.C. §14503(c) and (d)) shall not apply to any claim arising from acts of a volunteer as defined herein.

(b) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(c) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization.

(d) Definitions
(1) "Volunteer" means an individual who provides healthcare services or assistance in a location other than his or her usual place of business or practice without expectation or receipt of remuneration for his or her services.
(2) "Healthcare Facility" means, but is not limited to, a hospital, clinic, outpatient facility, or an emergency or mobile medical services platform or vehicle used for the provision of healthcare.
(3) "Declared Healthcare Emergency" means a public health emergency declared under this section by the President, the Secretary of Health & Human Services or the Secretary of Homeland Security. For purposes of this section, a Declared Healthcare Emergency may be given retroactive effect. A Declared Healthcare Emergency may be limited in time and geographic scope.

Sec. __ Relief to Volunteers for Healthcare Services Rendered During Declared Healthcare Emergencies

(a) A volunteer, as defined in this section, while aiding or facilitating the provision of health or medical services during a Declared Healthcare Emergency, who is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of some jurisdiction to provide such healthcare, shall not be liable for harm caused by an act or omission of the volunteer if -

(1) the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer; and

(2) the harm was not caused by the volunteer operating a motor vehicle, vessel, aircraft, or other vehicle for which the state requires the operator or the owner of the vehicle, craft, or vessel to -

(A) possess an operator's license; or

(B) maintain insurance.

(b) Limitation on punitive damages based on actions of volunteers

(1) General rule

Punitive damages may not be awarded against a volunteer in an action brought for harm based on the action of a volunteer during a declared healthcare emergency unless the claimant establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the harm was proximately caused by an action of such volunteer which constitutes willful or criminal misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed.

(2) Construction

Paragraph (1) does not create a cause of action for punitive damages and does not preempt or supersede any Federal or State law to the extent that such law would further limit the award of punitive damages.

(c) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency.

(d) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a declared healthcare emergency.

Suggested Modification to the Volunteer Protection Act

A. Background.

The Volunteer Protection Act of 1997, Pub. L. 105-19, codified at 42 U.S.C. 14501 et seq. (VPA), is a balanced measure that was enacted with extensive bipartisan support. The VPA removes liability for ordinary negligence, while retaining liability for willful misconduct as outlined in the statute.

The proposed VPA revision below would provide substantial protection against tort liability for healthcare volunteers who perform services during public health emergencies, and protect their employers or partners, as well as those persons or entities whose facilities they use during a public health emergency. The suggested approach does not deem volunteers to be federal employees, and would not subject the United States to potential liability under the Federal Tort Claims Act. Adoption of a congressionally sanctioned VPA approach would represent an appropriate accommodation of the volunteers' interest in protection against tort liability, the public's interest in compensation for and deterrence of willful misconduct, and the United States' interest in protecting the public fisc.

B. Text of Proposed Legislation

[DRAFT] An Act to Grant Relief to Volunteers for Healthcare Services Rendered During Public Health Emergencies

(a) A volunteer, as defined in this section, while aiding or facilitating the provision of health or medical services during a public health emergency, shall be deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the "Volunteer Protection Act"), provided that the volunteer is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of another jurisdiction to provide such healthcare. Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter (42 U.S.C. §14503(d)) shall not apply to any claim against a volunteer as defined herein.

(b) A volunteer providing health or medical services during a public health emergency shall be deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides such services if that volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide the healthcare services, activities, practices or related services that he or she voluntarily provides in aid or facilitation of a response to a public health emergency.

(c) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization so long as the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions

(1) "Volunteer" means an individual who provides healthcare services or assistance in a location other than his or her usual place of business or practice without expectation or receipt of remuneration for his or her services.

(2) “Healthcare Facility” means, but is not limited to, a hospital, clinic, outpatient facility, or an emergency or mobile medical services platform or vehicle used for the provision of healthcare.

(3) "Public Health Emergency" means a public health emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. §247d),a determination by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration under 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. For purposes of this section, a public health emergency may be given retroactive effect. A public health emergency can involve the provision of health and medical services and may be limited in geographic scope.

C. Explanation of VPA Revisions

(a) Immunity of Public Health Emergency Volunteer

A volunteer under this subsection, while aiding in or facilitating in the provision of healthcare in a public health emergency, is deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the 'Volunteer Protection Act'). Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter, 42 U.S.C. §14503(d), which provides for liability of volunteers in certain situations, does not apply for purposes of any claim against such a volunteer. Subsection 14503(d) contains certain exceptions to liability protection for volunteers, including one, §14503(d)(4), under which a volunteer could be liable notwithstanding the general rule of the Act if the applicable state law conditions a volunteer's protection from liability on the volunteer's organization's acceptance of vicarious liability. The United States is not intended to be vicariously liable in place of volunteers, and otherwise applicable exception could be read to subject such volunteers to tort liability where state law is as described. Accordingly, the liability exception of 42 U.S.C. §14503(d)(4) is excluded

(b) Constructive State Licensure or Authority

Subsection (b) provides that volunteers who perform services during a public health care emergency are deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which an alleged harm occurs. This constructive licensure or authorization applies so long as the volunteers acts within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities with the healthcare facility, and is limited to those situations where the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide or engage in those healthcare services, activities, or practices involved.

(c) Nonliability of Volunteer's Employer or Partner

Subsection (c) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to the usual employer or business partner of a volunteer for any acts or omissions that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) Nonliability of Host or Enabling Person, Entity or Organization

Subsection (d) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to a person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to the volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance during a public health emergency. The host facility shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization unless the harm was caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions.

Subsection (e) defines the terms "Volunteer", "Healthcare Facility" and "Public Health Emergency". A "Volunteer" is a person who does not expect or receive pay for volunteered services and who does not perform the volunteer services in his or her usual place of business or employment. A "Healthcare Facility" includes hospitals and clinics, but is not limited to them. The term also includes any platform, place or vehicle where the volunteer's services are performed or assistance is rendered. A "Public Health Emergency" is defined as an emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under 42 U.S.C. §247d; an emergency declared by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration issued under the specified sections of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, i..e, 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. A public health emergency may be given retroactive effect, and it may be limited in terms of its geographic scope.

D. Current Text of the VPA.

[42 U.S.C.] §14503. Limitation on liability for volunteers

(a) Liability protection for volunteers

Except as provided in subsections (b) and (d) of this section, no volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity shall be liable for harm caused by an act or omission of the volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity if -

(1) the volunteer was acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity at the time of the act or omission;

(2) if appropriate or required, the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which the harm occurred, where the activities were or practice was undertaken within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity;

(3) the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer; and

(4) the harm was not caused by the volunteer operating a motor vehicle, vessel, aircraft, or other vehicle for which the State requires the operator or the owner of the vehicle, craft, or vessel to -

(A) possess an operator's license; or

(B) maintain insurance.

(b) Concerning responsibility of volunteers to organizations and entities

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any civil action brought by any nonprofit organization or any governmental entity against any volunteer of such organization or entity.

(c) No effect on liability of organization or entity

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the liability of any nonprofit organization or governmental entity with respect to harm caused to any person.

(d) Exceptions to volunteer liability protection

If the laws of a State limit volunteer liability subject to one or more of the following conditions, such conditions shall not be construed as inconsistent with this section:

(1) A State law that requires a nonprofit organization or governmental entity to adhere to risk management procedures, including mandatory training of volunteers.

(2) A State law that makes the organization or entity liable for the acts or omissions of its volunteers to the same extent as an employer is liable for the acts or omissions of its employees.

(3) A State law that makes a limitation of liability inapplicable if the civil action was brought by an officer of a State or local government pursuant to State or local law.

(4) A State law that makes a limitation of liability applicable only if the nonprofit organization or governmental entity provides a financially secure source of recovery for individuals who suffer harm as a result of actions taken by a volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity. A financially secure source of recovery may be an insurance policy within specified limits, comparable coverage from a risk pooling mechanism, equivalent assets, or alternative arrangements that satisfy the State that the organization or entity will be able to pay for losses up to a specified amount. Separate standards for different types of liability exposure may be specified.

(e) Limitation on punitive damages based on actions of volunteers

(1) General rule

Punitive damages may not be awarded against a volunteer in an action brought for harm based on the action of a volunteer acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities to a nonprofit organization or governmental entity unless the claimant establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the harm was proximately caused by an action of such volunteer which constitutes willful or criminal misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed.

(2) Construction

Paragraph (1) does not create a cause of action for punitive damages and does not preempt or supersede any Federal or State law to the extent that such law would further limit the award of punitive damages.

(f) Exceptions to limitations on liability

(1) In general

The limitations on the liability of a volunteer under this chapter shall not apply to any misconduct that -

(A) Constitutes a crime of violence (as that term is defined in section 16 of title 18) or act of international terrorism (as that term is defined in section 2331 of title 18) for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(B) constitutes a hate crime (as that term is used in the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note));

(C) involves a sexual offense, as defined by applicable State law, for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(D) involves misconduct for which the defendant has been found to have violated a Federal or State civil rights law; or

(E) where the defendant was under the influence (as determined pursuant to applicable State law) of intoxicating alcohol or any drug at the time of the misconduct.

(2) Rule of construction

Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to [a]ffect subsection (a)(3) or (e) of this section.

Following up on our conversation Wednesday morning, I've sought to move some of your very good changes up to the top of the memo, seeking to emphasize right up front our confidence that the Thompson memo has been applied correctly in most cases. I've made a few other wordsmithing edits, and would very much appreciate your additional views. Your edits are in red; mine are in blue.

MEMORANDUM

To: ALL UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS AND DEPARTMENT COMPONENT HEADS

From: Robert D. McCallum, Jr.

Subject: Guidance for Federal Prosecutors Regarding Requests for Corporate Waiver of the Attorney-Client Privilege and Work Product Protection

In recent years, the Department has placed significant emphasis on the prosecution of corporate crimes, with historic rises in the number and scale of those prosecutions. In connection with the Department's initiative in this area, on January 20, 2003, former Deputy Attorney General Larry D. Thompson issued a Memorandum to all United States Attorneys' Offices regarding Principles of Federal Prosecution of Business Organizations. This memorandum, commonly known as the Thompson Memorandum, found at USAM 9-162, remains the Department's policy on charging business organizations and includes factors to be considered in making charging decisions.

One of the nine factors the Thompson Memorandum sets forth in determining whether to charge a corporation or other business organization is "the corporation's timely and voluntary disclosure of wrongdoing and its willingness to cooperate in the investigation of its agents, including, if necessary, the waiver of corporate attorney-client and work product protection." Thompson Memorandum, Section II.B.4. The Thompson Memorandum elaborates on this factor by providing that a federal prosecutor may ensure the complete and truthful cooperation of a corporation by requesting, "in appropriate circumstances[,]" that the corporation waive the attorney-client privilege and attorney work-product protection, which the Memorandum recognizes also may be "critical in enabling the government to evaluate the completeness of a corporation's voluntary disclosure and cooperation." Id., Section VI.B.

Since this guidance was issued, the Department has periodically reviewed its use and application. These examinations strongly suggest that the federal prosecutors have taken an appropriate and measured approach in seeking waivers of the attorney-client privilege and work-product protection. For example, the Department recently conducted a study of corporate charging decisions at 28 United States Attorneys' Offices and the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section. The study revealed that, out of 52 cases involving corporate entities reported, in 25 cases prosecutors decided not to charge the entities while in 14 cases dispositions were negotiated with the entities. The negotiated dispositions include seven cases that resulted in deferred prosecution agreements, four that resulted in cooperation/non-prosecution agreements, and three that resulted in guilty pleas. Of the 14 negotiated dispositions, in only nine cases was a privilege waiver reported to play a significant role.

The Department's periodic examinations of practices under the Thompson Memorandum have also provided insights into a number of preferred practices with respect to waiver requests. This memorandum provides further guidance to federal prosecutors regarding waiver requests consistent with the Thompson Memorandum and the preferred practices that have emerged since the Thompson Memorandum's adoption.

In applying the factors set forth in the Thompson Memorandum, federal prosecutors have always considered and should continue to consider carefully whether and the extent to which a request to a business entity for a waiver of attorney-client privilege or attorney work-product protection is necessary to establish corporate cooperation in an investigation. While cooperation is an important factor in the Department's charging decision regarding a corporate target, the Thompson Memorandum recognizes that the attorney-client privilege and work product protections serve important, long-recognized public policies encouraging candid communications between counsel and client and promoting sound corporate governance. Accordingly, the Thompson memorandum acknowledges that a business organization's full cooperation does not always require a waiver, expressly stating that the Department "does not . . . consider waiver of a corporation's attorney-client and work product protection an absolute requirement, and prosecutors should consider the willingness of a corporation to waive such protection when necessary to provide timely and complete information as one factor in evaluating the corporation's cooperation." Id. (emphasis added).

By its terms, the Thompson Memorandum, without in any way limiting the ability of federal prosecutors to obtain relevant evidence, instructs prosecutors to consider carefully whether available alternatives exist before deciding to seek a waiver. . At the most basic level, a business organization may, for example, provide complete access to its employees, business records, organizational charts, compliance program, and any third-party witnesses over which it may have influence, such as customers, vendors, accountants, and former employees. In many cases, such action may be sufficient for the government to obtain timely and complete information concerning a suspected crime. In other instances involving complex business organizations or large volumes of evidence, obtaining timely and complete information may require the corporation to take additional steps, such as identifying for investigators specific witnesses and documents central to the suspected criminal conduct. A business organization could, without providing counsel's notes or reports, identify promptly and make available to investigators all of the witnesses and documents involved in its own internal investigation by corporate counsel and provide assurances that the witnesses will make full disclosure. If such actions would be adequate for federal investigators to determine timely the complete underlying facts, then the federal prosecutors should, consistent with the Thompson Memorandum, consider them before requesting a waiver.

If the alternatives to a waiver are believed to be insufficient to acquire timely and complete information, federal prosecutors should seek supervisory approval before requesting that attorney-client privilege or work-product protection be waived. United States Attorneys and Department officials who oversee corporate prosecutions should institute a system of supervisory review in their offices for this purpose.

If approval for a waiver request is obtained, the Thompson Memorandum instructs that the "waiver should ordinarily be limited to the factual internal investigation and any contemporaneous advice given to the corporation concerning the conduct at issue." Id., Section VI.B, n.3. The Thompson Memorandum further provides that, "[e]xcept in unusual circumstances, prosecutors should not seek a waiver with respect to communications and work product related to advice concerning the government's criminal investigation." Id. The Thompson Memorandum, therefore, draws an important distinction between underlying factual information and factual work product, on the one hand, and opinion work product or attorney-client communications, on the other hand. It also draws a significant distinction between legal advice rendered "contemporaneous[ly]" with "the conduct at issue" and "advice concerning the government's criminal investigation." Id. By drawing these distinctions, the Thompson Memorandum seeks to balance the interests associated with long-recognized legal privileges and those required for the vigorous enforcement of the federal criminal law.

Consistent with the Thompson Memorandum, a waiver, when deemed necessary, should be limited in most cases to factual information gleaned by the corporation's own investigation, including, where warranted by the circumstances, corporate counsel's interview notes and other factual findings, as opposed to privileged communications or counsel's opinion work product.

As the Thompson Memorandum outlines, a waiver request seeking privileged communications or opinion work product created contemporaneously with the underlying conduct under investigation may also be sometimes appropriate. Id. (discussing "contemporaneous advice"). The need for such information, however, should be evaluated independently from the necessity of factual findings, interview notes, and other fact work product. Frequently, inquiry into "contemporaneous advice" may not be necessary.

Finally, the Thompson Memorandum indicates that a waiver request for opinion work product or attorney-client communications concerning the government's criminal investigation itself may be warranted. The Memorandum instructs, however, that "prosecutors should not seek a waiver with respect" to such information except in "unusual circumstances." Id. Prosecutors should exercise similar care when evaluating the need for a waiver for opinion work product or attorney-client communications that were created after the events under investigation and involve self-evaluation activities, so that companies are not discouraged from candidly engaging in self-evaluation and assessing ways to improve corporate governance and compliance. Of course, there may be cases in which even information falling into these categories may benecessary. One example would be a case in which there is strong reason to believe that counsel's advice about the government's current investigation constitutes an obstruction of justice, though undoubtedly there will be others as well.

Rajeev, Marc - Just a heads-up to let you know that DOJ Leg Affairs, in conjunction with OLP, intends to send over to WH Leg Affairs tomorrow some language for consideration that would effect the change to the Volunteer Act discussed below. The aim is to encourage volunteerism in the wake of Katrina among out-of-state (and foreign) medical professionals by shielding them from tort liability under certain circumstances. This proposal will join a larger set of Katrina-related proposals sent to the WH today.

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

Jeff

[DRAFT] An Act to Grant Relief to Volunteers for Healthcare Services Rendered During Declared Healthcare Emergencies

(a) A volunteer, as defined in this section, while aiding or facilitating the provision of health or medical services during a Declared Healthcare Emergency, shall be deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the "Volunteer Protection Act"), provided that the volunteer is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of some jurisdiction to provide such healthcare. Subsections (c) and (d) of section 4 of such chapter (42 U.S.C. §14503(c) and (d)) shall not apply to any claim arising from acts of a volunteer as defined herein.

(b) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(c) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization.

(d) Definitions
(1) "Volunteer" means an individual who provides healthcare services or assistance in a location other than his or her usual place of business or practice without expectation or receipt of remuneration for his or her services.
(2) "Healthcare Facility" means, but is not limited to, a hospital, clinic, outpatient facility, or an emergency or mobile medical services platform or vehicle used for the provision of healthcare.
(3) "Declared Healthcare Emergency" means a public health emergency declared under this section by the President, the Secretary of Health & Human Services or the Secretary of Homeland Security. For purposes of this section, a Declared Healthcare Emergency may be given retroactive effect. A Declared Healthcare Emergency may be limited in time and geographic scope.

Sec. __ Relief to Volunteers for Healthcare Services Rendered During Declared Healthcare Emergencies

(a) A volunteer, as defined in this section, while aiding or facilitating the provision of health or medical services during a Declared Healthcare Emergency, who is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of some jurisdiction to provide such healthcare, shall not be liable for harm caused by an act or omission of the volunteer if -

(1) the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer; and

(2) the harm was not caused by the volunteer operating a motor vehicle, vessel, aircraft, or other vehicle for which the state requires the operator or the owner of the vehicle, craft, or vessel to -

(A) possess an operator's license; or

(B) maintain insurance.

(b) Limitation on punitive damages based on actions of volunteers

(1) General rule

Punitive damages may not be awarded against a volunteer in an action brought for harm based on the action of a volunteer during a declared healthcare emergency unless the claimant establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the harm was proximately caused by an action of such volunteer which constitutes willful or criminal misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed.

(2) Construction

Paragraph (1) does not create a cause of action for punitive damages and does not preempt or supersede any Federal or State law to the extent that such law would further limit the award of punitive damages.

(c) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency.

(d) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a declared healthcare emergency.

(3) "Declared Healthcare Emergency" means a declared healthcare emergency declared under this section by the President, the Secretary of Health & Human Services, or the Secretary of Homeland Security. For purposes of this section, a Declared Healthcare Emergency may be given retroactive effect. A Declared Healthcare Emergency may be limited in time and geographic scope.

Suggested Modification to the Volunteer Protection Act

A. Background.

The Volunteer Protection Act of 1997, Pub. L. 105-19, codified at 42 U.S.C. 14501 et seq. (VPA), is a balanced measure that was enacted with extensive bipartisan support. The VPA removes liability for ordinary negligence, while retaining liability for willful misconduct as outlined in the statute.

The proposed VPA revision below would provide substantial protection against tort liability for healthcare volunteers who perform services during public health emergencies, and protect their employers or partners, as well as those persons or entities whose facilities they use during a public health emergency. The suggested approach does not deem volunteers to be federal employees, and would not subject the United States to potential liability under the Federal Tort Claims Act. Adoption of a congressionally sanctioned VPA approach would represent an appropriate accommodation of the volunteers' interest in protection against tort liability, the public's interest in compensation for and deterrence of willful misconduct, and the United States' interest in protecting the public fisc.

B. Text of Proposed Legislation

[DRAFT] An Act to Grant Relief to Volunteers for Healthcare Services Rendered During Public Health Emergencies

(a) A volunteer, as defined in this section, while aiding or facilitating the provision of health or medical services during a public health emergency, shall be deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the "Volunteer Protection Act"), provided that the volunteer is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of another jurisdiction to provide such healthcare. Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter (42 U.S.C. §14503(d)) shall not apply to any claim against a volunteer as defined herein.

(b) A volunteer providing health or medical services during a public health emergency shall be deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides such services if that volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide the healthcare services, activities, practices or related services that he or she voluntarily provides in aid or facilitation of a response to a public health emergency.

(c) An employer or business partner of a volunteer shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of a volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare in a declared healthcare emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) A person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to a volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance under subsection (a) of this section shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization so long as the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions

(1) "Volunteer" means an individual who provides healthcare services or assistance in a location other than his or her usual place of business or practice without expectation or receipt of remuneration for his or her services.

(2) "Healthcare Facility" means, but is not limited to, a hospital, clinic, outpatient facility, or an emergency or mobile medical services platform or vehicle used for the provision of healthcare.

(3) "Public Health Emergency" means a public health emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. §247d),a determination by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration under 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. For purposes of this section, a public health emergency may be given retroactive effect. A public health emergency can involve the provision of health and medical services and may be limited in geographic scope.

C. Explanation of VPA Revisions

(a) Immunity of Public Health Emergency Volunteer

A volunteer under this subsection, while aiding in or facilitating in the provision of healthcare in a public health emergency, is deemed a volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the 'Volunteer Protection Act'). Subsection (d) of section 4 of such chapter, 42 U.S.C. §14503(d), which provides for liability of volunteers in certain situations, does not apply for purposes of any claim against such a volunteer. Subsection 14503(d) contains certain exceptions to liability protection for volunteers, including one, §14503(d)(4), under which a volunteer could be liable notwithstanding the general rule of the Act if the applicable state law conditions a volunteer's protection from liability on the volunteer's organization's acceptance of vicarious liability. The United States is not intended to be vicariously liable in place of volunteers, and otherwise applicable exception could be read to subject such volunteers to tort liability where state law is as described. Accordingly, the liability exception of 42 U.S.C. §14503(d)(4) is excluded

(b) Constructive State Licensure or Authority

Subsection (b) provides that volunteers who perform services during a public health care emergency are deemed to be duly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which an alleged harm occurs. This constructive licensure or authorization applies so long as the volunteers acts within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities with the healthcare facility, and is limited to those situations where the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice by another jurisdiction to perform or provide or engage in those healthcare services, activities, or practices involved.

(c) Nonliability of Volunteer's Employer or Partner

Subsection (c) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to the usual employer or business partner of a volunteer for any acts or omissions that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply for purposes of any claim against an employer or partner of a volunteer under this section.

(d) Nonliability of Host or Enabling Person, Entity or Organization

Subsection (d) extends the liability protections of the volunteer to a person, entity or organization, including a healthcare facility, that works with, accepts services from, or opens its facilities to the volunteer to enable the volunteer to render medical services or assistance during a public health emergency. The host facility shall not be liable for any acts or omissions of the volunteer that occur while the volunteer is aiding in or facilitating the provision of healthcare services during a public health emergency. The otherwise applicable liability provision of 42 U.S.C. §14503(c) shall not apply to a claim against such a person, entity or organization unless the harm was caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference of the person, entity or organization to the rights or safety of an individual harmed by the volunteer.

(e) Definitions.

Subsection (e) defines the terms "Volunteer", "Healthcare Facility" and "Public Health Emergency". A "Volunteer" is a person who does not expect or receive pay for volunteered services and who does not perform the volunteer services in his or her usual place of business or employment. A "Healthcare Facility" includes hospitals and clinics, but is not limited to them. The term also includes any platform, place or vehicle where the volunteer's services are performed or assistance is rendered. A "Public Health Emergency" is defined as an emergency declared by the Secretary of Health and Human Services under 42 U.S.C. §247d; an emergency declared by the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security in accordance with 42 U.S.C. § 300hh-11, or an emergency or disaster declaration issued under the specified sections of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, i..e, 42 U.S.C. §5191 or 42 U.S.C. §5170. A public health emergency may be given retroactive effect, and it may be limited in terms of its geographic scope.

D. Current Text of the VPA.

[42 U.S.C.] §14503. Limitation on liability for volunteers

(a) Liability protection for volunteers

Except as provided in subsections (b) and (d) of this section, no volunteer of a nonprofit organization or governmental entity shall be liable for harm caused by an act or omission of the volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity if -

(1) the volunteer was acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity at the time of the act or omission;

(2) if appropriate or required, the volunteer was properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities for the activities or practice in the State in which the harm occurred, where the activities were or practice was undertaken within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities in the nonprofit organization or governmental entity;

(3) the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer; and

(4) the harm was not caused by the volunteer operating a motor vehicle, vessel, aircraft, or other vehicle for which the State requires the operator or the owner of the vehicle, craft, or vessel to -

(A) possess an operator's license; or

(B) maintain insurance.

(b) Concerning responsibility of volunteers to organizations and entities

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any civil action brought by any nonprofit organization or any governmental entity against any volunteer of such organization or entity.

(c) No effect on liability of organization or entity

Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the liability of any nonprofit organization or governmental entity with respect to harm caused to any person.

(d) Exceptions to volunteer liability protection

If the laws of a State limit volunteer liability subject to one or more of the following conditions, such conditions shall not be construed as inconsistent with this section:

(1) A State law that requires a nonprofit organization or governmental entity to adhere to risk management procedures, including mandatory training of volunteers.

(2) A State law that makes the organization or entity liable for the acts or omissions of its volunteers to the same extent as an employer is liable for the acts or omissions of its employees.

(3) A State law that makes a limitation of liability inapplicable if the civil action was brought by an officer of a State or local government pursuant to State or local law.

(4) A State law that makes a limitation of liability applicable only if the nonprofit organization or governmental entity provides a financially secure source of recovery for individuals who suffer harm as a result of actions taken by a volunteer on behalf of the organization or entity. A financially secure source of recovery may be an insurance policy within specified limits, comparable coverage from a risk pooling mechanism, equivalent assets, or alternative arrangements that satisfy the State that the organization or entity will be able to pay for losses up to a specified amount. Separate standards for different types of liability exposure may be specified.

(e) Limitation on punitive damages based on actions of volunteers

(1) General rule

Punitive damages may not be awarded against a volunteer in an action brought for harm based on the action of a volunteer acting within the scope of the volunteer's responsibilities to a nonprofit organization or governmental entity unless the claimant establishes by clear and convincing evidence that the harm was proximately caused by an action of such volunteer which constitutes willful or criminal misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed.

(2) Construction

Paragraph (1) does not create a cause of action for punitive damages and does not preempt or supersede any Federal or State law to the extent that such law would further limit the award of punitive damages.

(f) Exceptions to limitations on liability

(1) In general

The limitations on the liability of a volunteer under this chapter shall not apply to any misconduct that -

(A) Constitutes a crime of violence (as that term is defined in section 16 of title 18) or act of international terrorism (as that term is defined in section 2331 of title 18) for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(B) constitutes a hate crime (as that term is used in the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note));

(C) involves a sexual offense, as defined by applicable State law, for which the defendant has been convicted in any court;

(D) involves misconduct for which the defendant has been found to have violated a Federal or State civil rights law; or

(E) where the defendant was under the influence (as determined pursuant to applicable State law) of intoxicating alcohol or any drug at the time of the misconduct.

(2) Rule of construction

Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to [a]ffect subsection (a)(3) or (e) of this section.

Rajeev, Marc - Just a heads-up to let you know that DOJ Leg Affairs, in conjunction with OLP, intends to send over to WH Leg Affairs tomorrow some language for consideration that would effect the change to the Volunteer Act discussed below. The aim is to encourage volunteerism in the wake of Katrina among out-of-state (and foreign) medical professionals by shielding them from tort liability under certain circumstances. This proposal will join a larger set of Katrina-related proposals sent to the WH today.

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's email below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

Jeff

I hesitate to ask for assistance again, but you're the right person. In light of Katrina, I'm interested in proposing liability protection for volunteer healthcare workers again. I've attached three documents that you've sent me in the past. The "VPA document" was sent in November, and the other two in December, 2004. Could you take a look and let me know what you recommend that we use for draft VPA amendment language, with any changes that you think are appropriate.? If the freestanding amendment is still a reasonable approach, any edits to the "Emergency Health Freestanding Section" document would also be appreciated. Thanks in advance for your help.

I just read this very quickly. Do you think that eliminating liability for "ordinary negligence," but not "for gross negligence and worse" is sufficient? Won't the poor volunteer just end up litigating whether his negligence amounted to "gross" negligence? I am certainly in favor of maitaining potential liability for "wilful misconduct," but should it also extend to "gross negligence"?

It has been a long time since I took a torts class, so perhaps I am missing something.

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

Jeff

Paul,

I hesitate to ask for assistance again, but you're the right person. In light of Katrina, I'm interested in proposing liability protection for volunteer healthcare workers again. I've attached three documents that you've sent me in the past. The "VPA document" was sent in November, and the other two in December, 2004. Could you take a look and let me know what you recommend that we use for draft VPA amendment language, with any changes that you think are appropriate.? If the freestanding amendment is still a reasonable approach, any edits to the "Emergency Health Freestanding Section" document would also be appreciated. Thanks in advance for your help.

For timing purposes, DOJ is putting this provision into final legislative form with a section-by-section analysis. We hope to submit it to OMB by COB today after a very short internal circulation.

We have already provided to OMB (last night) a package of Katrina related proposals on other subjects.

Chris,

As the events of the past week unfolded, it once again became clear that we need to address the issue of liability of volunteer healthcare providers, and that this might be an opportune time to take it to the Hill. I ran a working group on the subject last year, and we took an option of amendment of the Volunteer Protection Act all the way to Deputies and received approval. There was a desire to fold it into the MedMal legislation, and not much happened after that.

DOJ was extremely helpful in the original assessment of this issue, and provided legislative language to address the problem at that time. I contacted them today and asked them to update documents that they had prepared in Nov 2004, and they provided the attached revision.

DOJ just informed me that they plan to formally submit this to OLA tomorrow to be considered as part of a broader legislative package. I will leave it to them to officially transmit that language, but I wanted you to know that this approach has already been vetted by the HSC Deputies Committee, and we fully support it. Please let me know if I can provide you with any additional background information. Thanks.

Rajeev,

I think the "Emergency Health Freestanding Section" document is a sound approach and would resolve many of the problems we have had this week. In the attached version I have added two passages, neither of which is essential but might prove helpful later on.

The first change is to add the bolded language in paragraph (a):

the volunteer is properly licensed, certified, or authorized by the appropriate authorities of some jurisdiction (including foreign countries) to provide such healthcare.

This is consistent with the discussions we had last year that a Canadian doctor who helped out at 9/11 should receive the same protection as a Massachusetts doctor. Explicitly mentioning foreign countries may make it easier to recruit foreign health care volunteers.

The second change is to add the bolded language in the next sentence:

Subsection (b) of section 3 and subsections (c) and (d) of section 4 of such chapter (42 U.S.C. § § 14502(b) and 14503(c) and (d)) shall not apply to any claim arising from acts of a volunteer as defined herein.

This change addresses the opt-out language of the VPA. 42 U.S.C. § 14502(b) provides that the VPA's protections do not apply if a state has specifically elected to make the VPA inapplicable. This change would remove the opt-out option for declared national emergencies. We have researched Louisiana or Mississippi law on the issue, and it does not appear that either has enacted such legislation. It would probably expedite relief efforts in future catatrosphes if the opt-out question were taken off the table. I don't know whether the issue is worth including in emergency legislation.

One other small matter. The "Emergency Health Freestanding Section" document contains the language, "for purposes of chapter 139 of title 42, United States Code (popularly known as the "Volunteer Protection Act"), ... and subsections (c) and (d) of section 4 of such chapter ...." I have not found the reference that section 4 is Section 14503; but, relying on it I have referred to the previous section (14502) as "section 3."

Please call if I can be of further assistance.

Paul

Courtney: Good question. The existing VPA preserves liability for gross negligence and worse. In an ideal world, I agree that we would eliminate liability for gross negligence as well as ordinary negligence, for precisely the reason you articulate. The HSC working group that developed this proposal last year was trying to stick closely to the balance struck by the VPA to increase the chances that the proposal would be broadly acceptable. I certainly don't have any objection to taking the opportunity in a new bill to go beyond the VPA and eliminate additional liability, if others think that we could still get the bill through quickly and successfully.

The existing VPA provides that the volunteer shall not be liable if "the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer." 42 USC 14503(a)(3). If we were to propose a bill that amended the VPA (which otherwise would seem like the simplest way to proceed), we'd probably have to include a provision that amended section 14503(a)(3) and thus called attention to the departure from the existing VPA re: gross negligence. If we were to propose a stand-alone bill that didn't incorporate or refer to the VPA, we could include a provision that paralleled 14503(a)(3) except for omitting the words "gross negligence," and then we could see whether anyone noticed that those two little words were missing.

Paul,

I hesitate to ask for assistance again, but you're the right person. In light of Katrina, I'm interested in proposing liability protection for volunteer healthcare workers again. I've attached three documents that you've sent me in the past. The "VPA document" was sent in November, and the other two in December, 2004. Could you take a look and let me know what you recommend that we use for draft VPA amendment language, with any changes that you think are appropriate.? If the freestanding amendment is still a reasonable approach, any edits to the "Emergency Health Freestanding Section" document would also be appreciated. Thanks in advance for your help.

Will, Richard, Rebecca: See Courtney's e-mail below asking whether our medical volunteer bill should bar liability for gross negligence as well as ordinary negligence (thus providing liability protection beyond what the VPA provides). Doing so seems desirable from a policy perspective, but not if it would make the bill less likely to pass quickly. What do you think? Thanks,

Why don't you give it some thought and talk to others. Perhaps a broader exemption could be a starting point in the legislation and, if we encounter push back, we could retreat to this position.

I defer to others, though.

Courtney: Good question. The existing VPA preserves liability for gross negligence and worse. In an ideal world, I agree that we would eliminate liability for gross negligence as well as ordinary negligence, for precisely the reason you articulate. The HSC working group that developed this proposal last year was trying to stick closely to the balance struck by the VPA to increase the chances that the proposal would be broadly acceptable. I certainly don't have any objection to taking the opportunity in a new bill to go beyond the VPA and eliminate additional liability, if others think that we could still get the bill through quickly and successfully.

The existing VPA provides that the volunteer shall not be liable if "the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer." 42 USC 14503(a)(3). If we were to propose a bill that amended the VPA (which otherwise would seem like the simplest way to proceed), we'd probably have to include a provision that amended section 14503(a)(3) and thus called attention to the departure from the existing VPA re: gross negligence. If we were to propose a stand-alone bill that didn't incorporate or refer to the VPA, we could include a provision that paralleled 14503(a)(3) except for omitting the words "gross negligence," and then we could see whether anyone noticed that those two little words were missing.

I just read this very quickly. Do you think that eliminating liability for "ordinary negligence," but not "for gross negligence and worse" is sufficient? Won't the poor volunteer just end up litigating whether his negligence amounted to "gross" negligence? I am certainly in favor of maitaining potential liability for "wilful misconduct," but should it also extend to "gross negligence"?

It has been a long time since I took a torts class, so perhaps I am missing something.

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. Please make sure Fred Ansell is copied on all messages involving this issue.

On the substance, my concern has been that our work reflect the substance of the HSC-led working group of last year. Those efforts resulted in a proposal to permit liability for "gross negligence." We can draft it either way, but we need to finalize this either way promptly. rah

Will, Richard, Rebecca: See Courtney's e-mail below asking whether our medical volunteer bill should bar liability for gross negligence as well as ordinary negligence (thus providing liability protection beyond what the VPA provides). Doing so seems desirable from a policy perspective, but not if it would make the bill less likely to pass quickly. What do you think? Thanks,

Jeff

Why don't you give it some thought and talk to others. Perhaps a broader exemption could be a starting point in the legislation and, if we encounter push back, we could retreat to this position.

I defer to others, though.

Courtney: Good question. The existing VPA preserves liability for gross negligence and worse. In an ideal world, I agree that we would eliminate liability for gross negligence as well as ordinary negligence, for precisely the reason you articulate. The HSC working group that developed this proposal last year was trying to stick closely to the balance struck by the VPA to increase the chances that the proposal would be broadly acceptable. I certainly don't have any objection to taking the opportunity in a new bill to go beyond the VPA and eliminate additional liability, if others think that we could still get the bill through quickly and successfully.

The existing VPA provides that the volunteer shall not be liable if "the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer." 42 USC 14503(a)(3). If we were to propose a bill that amended the VPA (which otherwise would seem like the simplest way to proceed), we'd probably have to include a provision that amended section 14503(a)(3) and thus called attention to the departure from the existing VPA re: gross negligence. If we were to propose a stand-alone bill that didn't incorporate or refer to the VPA, we could include a provision that paralleled 14503(a)(3) except for omitting the words "gross negligence," and then we could see whether anyone noticed that those two little words were missing.

I just read this very quickly. Do you think that eliminating liability for "ordinary negligence," but not "for gross negligence and worse" is sufficient? Won't the poor volunteer just end up litigating whether his negligence amounted to "gross" negligence? I am certainly in favor of maitaining potential liability for "wilful misconduct," but should it also extend to "gross negligence"?

It has been a long time since I took a torts class, so perhaps I am missing something.

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

Jeff

Paul,

I hesitate to ask for assistance again, but you're the right person. In light of Katrina, I'm interested in proposing liability protection for volunteer healthcare workers again. I've attached three documents that you've sent me in the past. The "VPA document" was sent in November, and the other two in December, 2004. Could you take a look and let me know what you recommend that we use for draft VPA amendment language, with any changes that you think are appropriate.? If the freestanding amendment is still a reasonable approach, any edits to the "Emergency Health Freestanding Section" document would also be appreciated. Thanks in advance for your help.

Two issues: First, OLP looked at the documents and believes (from a quick drafting standpoint) a stand alone bill would be easier and quicker to put together. It is there believe that amending current law is more complicated than was previously thought.

Second, I am not adverse to proposing eliminating gross negligence and to point out to the Hill the differences between our proposal and current law. It might be worth pushing the envelope in this environment because we always have a fall back position. Also, since OLP is drafting a stand alone bill, it would be distinguishable from prior law.

Neil, you should contact the WH to see whether there would be any hold up there on the policy issue. If not, I say we try to get this done without gross negligence in the House.

I think we need advice from OLA and OLP on what is do-able and the best tactical approach. The most pressing need is to encourage volunteers from out of state to help equally with those in state. Doing so would be a minor amendment to the law. It would be a much bigger deal, I suspect, to change the law to eliminate liability for gross negligence for all volunteers.

I just read this very quickly. Do you think that eliminating liability for "ordinary negligence," but not "for gross negligence and worse" is sufficient? Won't the poor volunteer just end up litigating whether his negligence amounted to "gross" negligence? I am certainly in favor of maitaining potential liability for "wilful misconduct," but should it also extend to "gross negligence"?

It has been a long time since I took a torts class, so perhaps I am missing something.

Following up from our conversation at the OASG component meeting this afternoon, here is a piece of draft legislation that was considered last year to extend the Volunteer Protection Act to cover volunteers who are certified by a medical (or other appropriate) authority in SOME jurisdiction even if not the jurisdiction where the volunteer is performing services. The proposal carves out liability for negligence but not willful misconduct. (Question for Torts: Is the "some jurisdiction" language sufficiently clear to protect foreign workers who wish to come to the US to help?)

Adding something along these lines to our legislative package could do much to help encourage additional volunteers, both from across the US and abroad. Certainly CIV seems to have received a lot of questions from entities and countries who would (otherwise) like to help but who are concerned about potential tort liability. Note that it appears from Jeff's email that the WH HSC is taking a look at this.

Neil: As I mentioned before, last year Paul Figley was part of a working group chaired by Rajeev Venkayya of the HSC that considered issues relating to health care in emergency situations. The group developed a proposal basically to adapt the Volunteer Protection Act to ensure that it applied in such situations and to extend it in a few respects. The outline of the liability protection approach that the group developed was the same as in the existing VPA: the volunteer isn't liable for ordinary negligence (except car accidents) but is liable for gross negligence and worse. The refinements/extensions of the VPA included (1) specifying that the employer or business partner of the volunteer isn't liable for the conduct of the volunteer (such vicarious liability may exist under the existing VPA); and (2) specifying that the volunteer need only be certified by medical or other appropriate authorities in some jurisdiction (as opposed to the jurisdiction in which the volunteer provides services, as is the case under the existing VPA). The trigger for these protections is a declaration by the Secretary of HHS of a public health emergency.

I thought this proposal made good sense last year and still do. The working group didn't end up proposing legislation last year, for reasons not clear to me. But now, as you can see from Rajeev's e-mail below, Rajeev is revisiting the issue and intends to propose the approach developed by the group last year. I don't have any concerns about the proposal, but I wanted to make sure you knew about it. (Paul raised one additional refinement/extension of the VPA to suggest to Rajeev, with which I agree. The VPA allows states to opt out of its provisions. LA, AL, and MS haven't opted out, so that's not a concern in the current emergency, but while we're at it legislatively I thought it might be worthwhile to eliminate the opt-out right in the context of an HHS-declared emergency.)

Please let me know if you'd like more info. Thanks,

I just want to note a couple things

1) I think folks would notice the 2 little words that would be missing - fyi [redacted]on Leahy's staff would be involved in any Hill action on this. trust me, [redacted] will notice and [redacted] will go ballistic. Passing in House will give leverage, but it likely won't go in Senate (but we should still press to say that willful misconduct is all that is needed). Doing as a standalone is helpful - but everyone (especially [redacted] will look for analogous provisions in current law, and I believe [redacted] is very familiar with VPA.
2) that being said - I agree, go for all and have fallback. I remember when we were doing Terrorism Insurance - WH went to the Hill with a good, balanced proposal which would have been a good final compromise doc. of course it became starting point for negotiations instead of end point and went downhill.

Two issues: First, OLP looked at the documents and believes (from a quick drafting standpoint) a stand alone bill would be easier and quicker to put together. It is there believe that amending current law is more complicated than was previously thought.

Second, I am not adverse to proposing eliminating gross negligence and to point out to the Hill the differences between our proposal and current law. It might be worth pushing the envelope in this environment because we always have a fall back position. Also, since OLP is drafting a stand alone bill, it would be distinguishable from prior law.

Neil, you should contact the WH to see whether there would be any hold up there on the policy issue. If not, I say we try to get this done without gross negligence in the House.

I think we need advice from OLA and OLP on what is do-able and the best tactical approach. The most pressing need is to encourage volunteers from out of state to help equally with those in state. Doing so would be a minor amendment to the law. It would be a much bigger deal, I suspect, to change the law to eliminate liability for gross negligence for all volunteers.

Courtney: Good question. The existing VPA preserves liability for gross negligence and worse. In an ideal world, I agree that we would eliminate liability for gross negligence as well as ordinary negligence, for precisely the reason you articulate. The HSC working group that developed this proposal last year was trying to stick closely to the balance struck by the VPA to increase the chances that the proposal would be broadly acceptable. I certainly don't have any objection to taking the opportunity in a new bill to go beyond the VPA and eliminate additional liability, if others think that we could still get the bill through quickly and successfully.

The existing VPA provides that the volunteer shall not be liable if "the harm was not caused by willful or criminal misconduct, gross negligence, reckless misconduct, or a conscious, flagrant indifference to the rights or safety of the individual harmed by the volunteer." 42 USC 14503(a)(3). If we were to propose a bill that amended the VPA (which otherwise would seem like the simplest way to proceed), we'd probably have to include a provision that amended section 14503(a)(3) and thus called attention to the departure from the existing VPA re: gross negligence. If we were to propose a stand-alone bill that didn't incorporate or refer to the VPA, we could include a provision that paralleled 14503(a)(3) except for omitting the words "gross negligence," and then we could see whether anyone noticed that those two little words were missing.

I can put such language in the proposal. Note that the healthcare volunteer is not the only situation in which this comes up. The HSC group's proposal also made life easier than the VPA for the entity that opens up its facility to the healthcare volunteer and to the employer of the healthcare volunteer. They were exempted from various restrictions contained in the VPA unless their own conduct was, among other things, grossly negligent. I assume from the discussion that the draft should provide immnuity not only for the healthcare volunteer based on gross negligence, but from the healthcare volunteer's employer/business partner and the entity where the services are rendered as well based on gross negligence.

Subject: OVW grant solicitation template
Attachments: Fiscal Year 2006 template.doc

Diane Stuart asked that I send you a copy of our solicitation template, in case you (or someone on your staff) would like to review it. The template will be used as the basis for all of our grant solicitations, so that they have common language as much as possible. There will be some changes to this language made later, due to the conversion from the OJP Grants Management System to Grants.gov, but the changes will not be substantive. We are working with OJP to determine the necessary changes as soon as possible.

I would greatly appreciate your comments, if any, by September 16, because the individual solicitations are already under development and in need of this template language. Also, please let me know if you would like to review copies of the individual grant program solicitations.

Thank you very much!

About the Office on Violence Against Women

The Office on Violence Against Women (OVW) is a component of the U.S. Department of Justice. Created in 1995, OVW implements the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) and subsequent legislation and provides national leadership against domestic violence, sexual assault, and stalking. Since its inception, the Office has launched a multifaceted approach to responding to these crimes. By forging state, local and tribal partnerships among police, prosecutors, the judiciary, victim advocates, health care providers, faith leaders, and others, OVW grants help provide victims with the protection and services they need to pursue safe and healthy lives and enable communities to hold offenders accountable.

Letter of Intent

All applicants who intend to apply for FY 2006 funding under this program are encouraged to submit a non-binding letter of intent, (please see Appendix [insert appropriate letter]), to OVW by [insert date]. You may fax the letter to OVW at [insert fax number]. OVW will use these letters to forecast the number of peer review panels needed to review competitive applications.

Application Due Date

Please note that final applications are due by 5:30 pm (EST) [insert date], and will be accepted only through Grants.gov, an e-Government initiative that is included in the President's Management Agenda. Please note that Grants.gov is not the Grants Management System (GMS) that OVW applicants have submitted applications to in previous years. Applicants should register with Grants.gov by [Insert date]. First-time registering will take up to one week to be validated and confirmed and for you to receive your user names and passwords. In addition, an original hard copy must be sent to Aspen Systems Corporation via overnight delivery not later than [insert date]. We strongly recommend that you use a trackable shipping method which will allow you to confirm the delivery of your application. Activities that May Compromise Victim Safety

Ensuring victim safety is the guiding principle underlying this Program. Experience has shown that certain practices may compromise victim safety rather than enhance it. Certain responses by the authorities may have the effect of minimizing or trivializing the offender's criminal behavior. Accordingly, consistent with the goals of ensuring victim safety while holding perpetrators accountable for their criminal conduct, applicants are strongly discouraged from proposing projects that include any activities that may compromise victim safety such as the following:

- [Insert program specific activities]

Review Process

[NOTE: This section is not needed for STOP Formula and State Coalitions]

All applications will be subject to internal review by OVW staff and peer review and will be scored according to the criteria set forth in this solicitation. If the application fails to meet the criteria listed below for the initial internal review, the application will not receive further consideration. If applications that are partially beyond the scope of the program are sent to peer review, only those sections of the application that are within scope will be reviewed. Criteria for the initial internal review follow:

- Whether the application is complete;
- Whether the proposed activities are within the scope of the program (see page [insert page number]);
- Whether all statutory eligibility criteria are met (see page [insert page number]);
- [If applicable: Whether the minimum requirements for the program are met (see page [insert page number])];
- [If applicable: Whether the certification requirements for the program are met (see page [insert page number])];
- Whether the application proposes significant activities that may compromise victim safety (see page [insert page number])];

DOJ_NMG_ 0146890

- Whether the proposed budget is within the established limits (see page [insert page number])];

In addition, applications for continuation funding will be reviewed for prior compliance with Program and Office requirements and the status of current grant-funded activities. (See page [insert page number] for further details on criteria for this review.)

OVW will establish panels of experts and practitioners to review applications. [Insert language about tribal applications if appropriate.] Each panel will review the information provided in the application against the selection criteria for the program. Following peer review, a second internal review will consider the geographic distribution of the applications for a national and statewide perspective, the ratio of population to services, the existence of underserved communities, and the type of projects already funded within an applicant's state or community. The total points possible for an application are 100 (65 points for Narrative, 15 points for Budget, and 20 points for the MOU [use EMOU, IMOU, and/or MOE as applicable]. Applications with the highest composite scores will be considered for funding.

Application Content

Applicants must complete each of the following sections as part of their proposals. It is the responsibility of the applicant to ensure the application is complete. OVW will remove the application from consideration prior to peer review if the application is incomplete. For each section listed below, please note the corresponding maximum point value that may be assigned during the review process. The proposal should follow the order below for easy reading. Please be sure to number each page of the application. Please note that incomplete applications may not be considered for funding. Peer reviewers will not receive materials submitted beyond those required by this solicitation.

Applications must use the following page format requirements:

- Double spaced (except for the Summary Data Sheet and Abstract which should be single spaced)
- 8 ½ x 11 inch paper
- One inch margins
- Type no smaller than 12 point, Times New Roman font
- No more than one page each for Summary Data Sheet and Abstract
- No more than 5 pages for Status of the Project (if applicable)
- No more than 20 pages for the Project Narrative
- Include your application number on every page and all attachments

Peer reviewers will not review applications exceeding the page limits, or their equivalent.

The following will be submitted online through Grants.gov.

DUNS Number

DOJ_NMG_ 0146891

A Dun and Bradstreet (D&B) Data Universal Numbering System (DUNS) number must be included in every application for a new award or renewal of an award. The DUNS number will be entered into Grants.gov by the applicant. An application will not be considered complete until a valid DUNS number is provided by the applicant. Individual persons who receive a grant or cooperative agreement from the Federal government are exempt from this requirement.

Applicants can receive a DUNS number at no cost by calling the dedicated toll-free DUNS Number request line at 1-800-333-0505.

If you have any questions about the DUNS number requirement, please contact the Office of the Comptroller's Customer Service Center at 1-800-458-0786.

Application for Federal Assistance (SF-424)

The SF-424 will be filled out online through Grants.gov. However, it should also be printed out and included in the hard copy that it submitted. The Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance number for this program is [Insert number] (block 10). The cognizant Federal audit agency and fiscal year of the applicant organization should be listed in block 11 of the form. Please be sure that the amount requested matches the amount in the submitted budget.

Applicants must ensure that the information for the authorizing official and alternate contact is filled out correctly. The authorizing official is the individual authorized to accept grant funds on behalf of the jurisdiction or non-governmental private entity applying. If the individual applying online is not the authorizing official, that individual must list the authorizing official's name and contact information where appropriate.

Standard Assurances and Certifications Regarding Lobbying; Debarment, Suspension, and Other Responsibility Matters; and Drug-Free Workplace Requirements (Form 4061/6)

Review the assurances and certification forms. Agreement to these assurances and certifications will be assumed upon receipt of an application received through Grants.gov. NOTE: If the authorizing official is not the individual submitting the application via Grants.gov, be sure the correct authorizing official information has been entered.

The following will be submitted as attachments in Grants.gov. Please save your attachments with names that indicate the substance of the attachment (e.g. save your program narrative as "Program Narrative").

Abstract/Proposal Summary:

DOJ_NMG_ 0146892

Status of the Current Project: [Do not include this section for STOP or State Coalitions]. Applicants for continuation funding only. This section will be used for internal review only. The application may receive a deduction in points based on the criteria listed below. This section should be provided on a separate page as it is a separate section from the program narrative and does not count toward the page limits of the narrative. State what has been accomplished with previous funding under the [Insert program], including the following:

- A description of the goals and objectives from the prior grant period and a brief discussion of the status of the existing project:
- The status of any project products;
- Any unanticipated obstacles to project implementation.

This section should be as clear and succinct as possible.

Current projects will be rated by OVW using the following criteria:

- Whether progress reports submitted by the applicant, in conjunction with monitoring conducted by OVW, demonstrate the effectiveness of the current project, indicating progress toward meeting project goals and objectives, and demonstrate that the current project has progressed in a timely manner as outlined in the original proposal;
- Whether the grantee has demonstrated that past activities supported with [Insert program] funds have been limited to program Purpose Areas;
- Whether the grantee has complied with all special conditions of its existing grant award from the Department of Justice;
- Whether the grantee has adhered to programmatic and financial reporting requirements;
- Whether the grantee has completed the project goals, objectives, and products according to the approved time line;
- Whether the grantee has demonstrated a commitment to sustaining the project after federal funds are no longer available;
- Whether the grantee appropriately utilized and actively participated in OVW-sponsored workshops and other technical assistance events as required by a special condition of the current award;
- Whether the grantee has received financial clearances on all current grants from DOJ;
- Whether the grantee has complied with the Office of Management and Budget audit requirement;
- How much funding is remaining in the current award.

Project Narrative:

The narrative should include the following (totaling 65 [This should be 85 for Tribal Coalitions] points): [NOTE: For STOP and State Coalitions, leave out point values]

Need for the Project: 10 points

DOJ_NMG_ 0146893

What Will be Done: 40 points
[Insert program specific information]

Who Will Implement the Project: 10 [30 For Tribal Coalitions] points
[Insert program specific information]

Sustainability Plan: 5 points [Not included for STOP or State Coalitions]
Because this is a competitive, discretionary program, there is no guarantee of continuation funding. Applicants are required to include a plan describing their commitment and capacity to continue the project if Federal funding through the [Insert program] were no longer available.

The plan will be evaluated on whether it proposes feasible strategies to preserve project activities long-term. Continuation or supplemental funding is not guaranteed and applicants are encouraged to seek additional means of support to sustain their current projects.

Budget Detail Worksheet and Narrative: 15 Points
Each application must include a detailed budget and budget narrative for the project. The budget must be complete, reasonable, and cost-effective in relation to the proposed project. The budget should provide the basis for the computation of all project-related costs. It should cover the cost of all components of the project. There must be a clear link between the proposed activities and the proposed budget items. The budget should include only those activities, products, and resources that are necessary for project implementation and discussed in the project narrative.

In developing the budget, applicants should fairly compensate all project partners for their participation in any project-related activities, including but not limited to compensation for time and travel expenses to attend or provide project development, training, and implementation. The budget must include compensation for all services rendered by project partners, including nonprofit, nongovernmental domestic violence and/or sexual assault victim services programs and state and tribal domestic violence and/or sexual assault coalitions.

Budget Caps
[Insert program specific information]

OVW has the discretion to make grants for greater or lesser amounts than requested and to negotiate the scope of work and budget with applicants prior to award of a grant.

[If appropriate (STOP, STOP VAIW, and Coalitions), insert section on match here]

Budget requirements
The following is a short list of budget guidelines:

- Applicants are strongly discouraged from requesting consultant rates in excess of $450 per day because they require prior approval from the Director of the Office on Violence Against Women.

DOJ_NMG_ 0146894

- Applicants may not allocate any funds for building renovations. This includes such seemingly minor things as painting or carpeting.

- [Do not include this for STOP, STOP VAIW, and the Coalition Programs. Instead add a separate section on match as indicated above] A contribution of non-Federal dollars ("match") is not required for this program, but applicants are encouraged to maximize the impact of federal dollars by contributing to the costs of their projects. Supplemental contributions may be cash, in-kind services, or a combination of both. Any non-Federal contributions can be discussed in the project narrative; however, these supplemental contributions should not be included in the budget or budget narrative.

- All applicants are required to allocate funds ([Insert appropriate amount]), to support travel costs associated with technical assistance and capacity-building activities sponsored by OVW-designated technical assistance providers. Applications selected for funding which do not include the entire recommended amount will not receive additional funds for this purpose, but will be required to adjust their budgets to cover these costs prior to final approval of the proposal. This required amount must be included in the "travel" category. Please provide an estimated breakdown for this amount (include the number of trips, number of travelers, airfare or mileage, lodging, per diem, etc.). These funds are to be used only for OVW-designated technical assistance unless otherwise approved by OVW. Travel funds should be used to support travel by all partners, including nonprofit, nongovernmental victim services providers.

- Applicants are also encouraged to include funds in their budgets to attend Financial Management Training Seminars sponsored by OJP's Office of the Comptroller. These seminars instruct participants in the financial administration of OJP and OVW formula and discretionary grant programs. A schedule listing the financial training seminars is available at www.ojp.usdoj.gov/oc/fmts.htm.

A Sample Budget Detail Worksheet is included in Appendix [Insert letter] of this solicitation. The budget and budget narrative should be submitted online as one attachment. When preparing these items, please use the Budget Detail Worksheet as a guide and be sure to include all necessary budget categories. The budget should clearly describe the proposed amounts and uses of grant funds for the duration of the grant period and how the amounts of the specific budget items were determined.

The following can be submitted either via fax to [Insert fax number], or electronically through Grants.gov. Please be sure to include your application number prominently on the cover sheet and all pages of the fax.

Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) [EMOU, IMOU, and MOE can also be included here if appropriate. Leave this out for Tribal Coalitions.]: 20 points

[Insert program specific information]

The MOU should be a single document that includes signatures and dates from all partners.

Letter of Nonsupplanting
Applicants must submit a letter to OVW's Director, Diane M. Stuart, certifying that Federal funds will not be used to supplant State or local funds should a grant award be made. This letter must be faxed to [Insert fax number] or electronically scanned and submitted as an attachment via Grants.gov. If faxed, the application number must be prominently included on the fax cover page as well as the letter. Please refer to Appendix [Insert letter] for a sample letter.

Financial Capability Questionnaire
[Insert the following section, if appropriate:] All nonprofit, nongovernmental organizations that apply for funding with OVW that have not previously (or within the last 3 years) received funding from OVW or OJP must complete a Financial Capability Questionnaire. The form can be found at http://www.ojp.usdoj.gov/oc. Please fax this form to [Insert number] and include the application number predominantly on the cover page and on each page of the form. When submitting your application, please make sure that your current year's audit report has been submitted to the Federal Audit Clearinghouse, Bureau of the Census, 1201 East 10th Street, Jacksonville, IN 47132.

Indirect Cost Rate Agreement [Leave out for STOP]
If your organization is requesting indirect costs for this project, please include a copy of your current, signed indirect cost rate agreement.

[Insert other program specific sections of the application in the appropriate application content section (i.e. on Grants.gov, attachment, or fax)]

Additional Program Requirements

Technical Assistance

Performance Measurement
There are two [Change this to "three" for STOP, Campus, and Safe Havens] statutory requirements that require OVW grantees to collect and maintain data that measures the effectiveness of the funded projects. First, the Government Performance and Results Act of 1993 (GPRA) requires agencies to report on the results of government programs and activities. Second, the Violence Against Women Act of 2000 mandates that all OVW grant recipients report on the effectiveness of their programs. [For STOP, Safe Havens, and Campus, add a description of the third requirement – see Jen Kaplan for language)] To address these statutory requirements, OVW has developed a(n) [Insert program] semi-annual Progress Report that requests specific data on grantee activities. Information that grantees must collect for this progress report includes:

[Insert program specific information. You may want to check with Jen Kaplan or Marylouise Kelley to make sure you have the most current measures.]

Reporting Requirements

DOJ_NMG_ 0146896

Grantees will be required to submit quarterly Financial Status Reports and semi-annual Progress Reports. In addition, grant recipients who expend $500,000 or more in Federal funds during their fiscal year are required to submit a single organization-wide audit. Additional information on these reporting requirements will be provided to successful applicants in the award package.

OJP Financial Guide

All grantees are required to comply with the regulations and requirements outlined in the OJP Financial Guide. The Financial Guide includes information on allowable costs, methods of payment, audit requirements, accounting systems, and financial records. Copies are available from the Department of Justice Response Center (1-800-421-6770) and also through the OJP web page: http://www.ojp.usdoj.gov/FinGuide.

Suspension or Termination of Funding

OVW may suspend funding in whole or in part, terminate funding, or impose another sanction on a recipient who has failed to comply substantially with the following:

- The requirements of VAWA and statutory objectives of [Insert program];
- Timely submission of quarterly Financial Status Reports;
- Timely submission of semi-annual Progress Reports;
- The regulations and/or guidelines issued for the [Insert program] and any other regulations applicable to OVW grantees; or
- The application submitted in accordance with the provisions of VAWA or any other applicable federal Act.

OVW will provide reasonable notice of its intent to impose sanctions and will attempt informally to resolve the problem. Hearing and appeal procedures will follow those in the Department of Justice regulations at 28 CFR Part 18. References to the Office of Justice Programs and its components are deemed to refer to the Office on Violence Against Women. The responsible agency official, as defined by 28 CFR § 18.3(h), is the Director, Office on Violence Against Women.

Single Point of Contact Review

Executive Order 12372 requires applicants from State and local units of government or other organizations providing services with a State to submit a copy of the application to the State Single Point of Contact (SPOC) if one exists, and if this program has been selected for review of the State. Applicants must contact the State SPOC to determine if the program has been selected for State review. The date that the application was sent to the SPOC or the reason such submission is not required should be indicated on the Form SF-424. The list of SPOCs can be found at: http://www.whitehouse.gov/omb/grants/spoc.html.

Faith-Based Organizations

Consistent with President Bush Executive Order 13279, December 12, 2002, and 28 CFR Part 38, it is OVW policy that faith-based and community organizations, that statutorily qualify as eligible applicants under OVW programs, are invited and encouraged to apply for assistance awards. Faith-based and community organizations will be considered for awards on the same basis as other eligible applicants and, if they receive assistance awards, will be treated on an equal basis with non faith-based and community organization grantees in the administration of such awards. No eligible applicant or grantee will be discriminated against on the basis of its religious character or affiliation, religious name, or the religious composition of its board of directors or persons working in the organization.

Civil Rights Compliance

All recipients of Federal grant funds are required to comply with nondiscrimination requirements contained in various Federal laws. In the event that a court or administrative agency makes a finding of discrimination on grounds of race, color, religion, national origin, gender, disability, or age against a recipient of funds after a due process hearing, the recipient must agree to forward a copy of the finding to the Office for Civil Rights of OJP. All applicants should consult the Assurances required with the application funds to understand the applicable legal and administrative requirements.

Services to Limited-English-Proficient (LEP) Persons:

National origin discrimination includes discrimination on the basis of limited English proficiency (LEP). To ensure compliance with Title VI and the Safe Streets Act, recipients are required to take reasonable steps to ensure that LEP persons have meaningful access to their programs. Meaningful access may entail providing language assistance services, including interpretation and translation services, where necessary. Grantees are encouraged to consider the need for language services for LEP persons served or encountered both in developing their proposals and budgets and in conducting their programs and activities. Reasonable costs associated with providing meaningful access for LEP individuals are considered allowable program costs. The U.S. Department of Justice has issued guidance for grantees to assist them in complying with Title VI requirements. The guidance document can be accessed on the Internet at www.lep.gov or by contacting the Office of Justice Program's Office for Civil Rights at (202) 307-0690, or by writing to the following address:

Office for Civil Rights
Office of Justice Programs

Anti-Lobbying Act

In 2002, the Anti-Lobbying Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1913, was amended to expand significantly the restriction on use of appropriated funding for lobbying. This expansion also makes the anti-lobbying restrictions enforceable via large civil penalties, with civil fines between $10,000 and $100,000 per each individual occurrence of lobbying activity. These restrictions are in addition to the anti-lobbying and lobbying disclosure restrictions imposed by 31 U.S.C. § 1352. The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) is currently in the process of amending the OMB cost circulars and the common rule (codified at 28 C.F.R. part 69 for DOJ grantees) to reflect these modifications. However, in the interest of full disclosure, all applicants must understand that no federally-appropriated funding made available under this grant program may be used, either directly or indirectly, to support the enactment, repeal, modification or adoption of any law, regulation, or policy, at any level of government, without the express approval of OVW. Any violation of this prohibition is subject to a minimum $10,000 fine for each occurrence. This prohibition applies to all activity, even if currently allowed within the parameters of the existing OMB circulars.

How To Apply

Applicants must submit a fully executed application to OVW through Grants.gov, including all required supporting documentation. Faxed applications will not be accepted. However, certain supporting documentation may be submitted to Grants.gov via fax as described below. Applications submitted via Grants.gov must be in the following work processing formats: Microsoft Word (.doc), PDF files, (.pdf) or Text Documents (.txt). Tom - Thanks for the email. It's good hear from you. I'd be honored to serve as a reference for you in any capacity. In terms of DOJ, all of the available civil service (ie, nonpolitical) jobs are posted on-line under "Employment" on the usdoj.gov. The best way to proceed is to apply online and then let me know which job you're seeking so I can put in a note of recommendation to the appropriate office. As to the book, Princeton wants to wait until just after the Supreme Court rules in the Oregon case to issue the book, so it'll probably be out around this time next year. I am deeply grateful for all your help and will definitely keep you abreast of any changes on the publication schedule. All the best, Neil

It's rewarding to feel like we might actually effect a change here. The calls from State and HHS on behalf of groups asking, quite legitimately, about potential tort liability if out of state and foreign medical professionals volunteer in LA and MS and AL was just too depressing and it just seemd that we had to do something.

I apologize for the delay in my response. We have been preparing for the AG's visit and the office retreat we held yesterday. Your changes have improved and made the memo more positive. My only suggestion is that we strike the last sentence of the next to last paragraph. (Frequently, inquiry into "contemporaneous advice" may not be necessary). I think this was one of the changes we talked about last week. It may still be a good idea to send this to a select group of people --at least Alice Fisher-- before sending it to the larger group including Karin immergut and others from the AGAC. Mary Beth,

Following up on our conversation Wednesday morning, I've sought to move some of your very good changes up to the top of the memo, seeking to emphasize right up front our confidence that the Thompson memo has been applied correctly in most cases. I've made a few other wordsmithing edits, and would very much appreciate your additional views. Your edits are in red; mine are in blue.

You should know that Robert has not yet had a chance to review this, and probably won't be able to get to it until Tuesday. To keep things moving, however, I thought I would forward my tentative edits to you now for any comments you may have.

All the best,

Good Morning,

The Law Enforcement/Public Safety Working Group of the White House Hurricane Katrina Task Force will meet at 2:00 p.m. today, September 8, 2005, at the Department of Justice in the Justice Command Center, Room 6100. The purpose of the meeting is to answer the questions posed in the attached memorandum from the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security

- Identify preliminary recommendations or clusters of policy options or other measures under consideration. Of course, at this stage you may only be able to identify problems, rather than fixed solutions or policy options.

To begin the discussion, we have prepared the attached list of issues that affect the law enforcement community within and responding to the affected areas. We welcome additional suggestions based on the experiences of personnel from your organizations.

Please review the issue paper and be prepared to discuss it and the two taskings at the meeting. If you believe additional issues should be included, please send them to the above addressees so all will be prepared to discuss them as well.

For clearance in to the Department of Justice, please confirm your attendance with my assistant, Sonya Sesker, e-mail above, or at 514-4834.

For your information, attached is a map to the Department. The visitor entrance is at 950 Constitution Ave. NW. Nearest metro is Archives/Navy Memorial.

September 5, 2005

Dear Colleague:

As you know, last Thursday, President Bush formed the Cabinet-level White House Hurricane Katrina Task Force, which is chaired by Secretary Chertoff. This letter outlines details about the Task Force staffing and next steps for our work together.

Secretary Chertoff has appointed [redacted] to head the staff that we have assembled to support the Task Force. [redacted] will report directly to me. For now, he can be reached through our HSOC [redacted]) and by email at [redacted]@dhs.gov. We are physically setting up this office today, and will shortly circulate a more complete point-of-contact list, as suggested in today's coordination call.

One of the key components of the Task Force staff will be a "problem buster" unit lead by [redacted] [redacted]. [redacted] also can be contacted through the HSOC or by email at [redacted]@dhs.gov. The idea for this small group is to help bird-dog high-impact or highly visible issues that are quickly resolvable. This is not a substitute for the FEMA coordination functions or the in-theater decision process; rather, it is an adjunct to the Secretary's staff that will allow us to slice through certain problems faster and, for example, to assure that we are conducting appropriate follow-up to the immediate issues that you ask Secretary Chertoff or me personally to address.

As to next steps, at our deputies meeting last Friday, we initially identified thirteen possible Working Groups to manage mid- and long-term policy development and operational integration issues. After further discussion among deputies -- and with the support of DPC and HSC at the White House -- I have consolidated closely related tasks to yield eight Working Groups. Please see the attached list.

Most of these groups are well underway. With two exceptions, we have identified a lead agency for each, and we are asking the Deputy Secretary of each lead agency to assume the formal lead for Working Groups assigned to your department. We'd ask that agency leads also appoint an alternate.

Participation by a department or agency in Working Groups will be by self-nomination, but I'd ask both Working Group leads and participants to review the attached list and email a name and full contact information for participation in those groups for which your agency has an equity or interest. Participants for these groups should be at the assistant secretary level or higher, and individuals should enjoy direct access to your views and those of your department or agency head. These names should be sent to [redacted] by 11:00am Tuesday.

We will convene a meeting of Working Group chairs on Tuesday, September 6, 2005, from 4:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building Room 180 to discuss the way ahead. Please provide clearance information to Elliott Langer of the Homeland Security Council Executive Secretariat at 202-456-1990 or elanger@who.eop.gov. Also on Tuesday, we hope to circulate a listing of all Working Group members to each of you.

We ask that each Working Group meet on Wednesday, September 7 (time and place to be determined by the lead) and to produce a brief initial assessment and status report. At that meeting, each Working Group must accomplish at least two common tasks:

1. Outline the major challenges, objectives and milestones for the Working Group.

2. Identify preliminary recommendations or clusters of policy options or other measures under consideration. Of course, at this stage you may only be able to identify problems, rather than fixed solutions or policy options.

The two tasks are due to the Task Force staff ([redacted]) by close of business on Thursday, September 8, 2005.

Once we have compiled the results of the initial Working Group meetings, we will convene a Deputies Committee meeting to scope the process to ensure that our efforts are properly focused to achieve measurable results. I look forward to working with you and your team to make this effort a success.

Also, I have attached a list of ten tasks that are near-term priorities on the ground. Those priorities are being addressed by FEMA, DOD and other interagency partners in-theater. At DHS, we are using this to capture a list of the major moving parts, and I thought this may be useful information for you.

Thank you for your efforts and on-going support. If you have any questions, please contact me or [redacted].

Sincerely,

Robert -

I've attached just a couple minor nits for your consideration. Also, Mary Beth reports that she very much liked the last draft I sent her so I'm willing to bet she'll like this one even more. She did make one suggestion, proposing the elimination of the last sentence of the penultimate paragraph ("Frequently, federal prosecutors have determined that inquiry into 'contemporary advice' is not necessary.") I don't feel strongly about this (and don't think Mary Beth did either), but if pushed, I'd recommend retaining the sentence -- we should recognize that contemporary advice is worthy of particular respect and the prior discussion doesn't fully accomplish that (noting only that the need for contemporary advice should be weighed "independently" from the need for other work product and communications).

Once you review and decide this, I'm happy to run the comment process traps, inviting comments to you or me from, I think, this group in the initial distribution: OAG (Jeff, Ted, Courtney, Kyle), ODAG (Mercer, Margolis), EOUSA (Battle, Buchanan), CRIM (Fisher), OLP (Brand, McIntosh). Let me know if you think I've missed anyone. I suggest we ask for return comments by Monday so we can distribute to the larger group the same day (hopefully).

MEMORANDUM

To: ALL UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS AND DEPARTMENT COMPONENT HEADS

From: Robert D. McCallum, Jr.
Acting Deputy Attorney General

Subject: Guidance for Federal Prosecutors Regarding Requests for Corporate Waiver of the Attorney-Client Privilege and Work Product Protection

In recent years, the Department has placed significant emphasis on the prosecution of corporate crimes. In connection with the Department's initiative in this area, former Deputy Attorney General Larry D. Thompson issued a Memorandum on January 20, 2003, to all United States Attorneys' Offices regarding Principles of Federal Prosecution of Business Organizations. This memorandum, commonly known as the Thompson Memorandum, found at USAM 9-162, remains the Department's policy on charging business organizations and includes factors to be considered in making charging decisions.

One of the nine factors the Thompson Memorandum sets forth in determining whether to charge a corporation or other business organization is "the corporation's timely and voluntary disclosure of wrongdoing and its willingness to cooperate in the investigation of its agents, including, if necessary, the waiver of corporate attorney-client and work product protection." Thompson Memorandum, Section II.B.4. The Thompson Memorandum elaborates on this factor by providing that a federal prosecutor may ensure the complete and truthful cooperation of a corporation by requesting, "in appropriate circumstances[,]" that the corporation waive the attorney-client privilege and attorney work-product protection, which the Memorandum recognizes also may be "critical in enabling the government to evaluate the completeness of a corporation's voluntary disclosure and cooperation." Id., Section VI.B.

The Thompson Memorandum recognizes that the attorney-client privilege and work product protection serve important, long-recognized public policies encouraging candid communications between counsel and client and promoting sound corporate governance. Accordingly, the Thompson memorandum acknowledges that, while cooperation is an important factor in the Department's charging decisions, a business organization's full cooperation may not always require a waiver, expressly stating that the Department "does not . . . consider waiver of a corporation's attorney-client and work product protection an absolute requirement, and prosecutors should consider the willingness of a corporation to waive such protection when necessary to provide timely and complete information as one factor in evaluating the corporation's cooperation." Id. (emphasis added). In applying the factors set forth in the Thompson Memorandum, federal prosecutors have always considered and continue to consider carefully whether and the extent to which a request to a business entity for a waiver of attorney-client privilege or attorney work-product protection is necessary to establish corporate cooperation in an investigation.

Since the Thompson Memorandum was issued, the Department has periodically reviewed its use and application. These reviews confirm that federal prosecutors have taken an appropriate and measured approach in seeking waivers of the attorney-client privilege and work-product protection and do not "routinely" request such waivers. For example, the Department recently conducted a study of corporate charging decisions at 28 United States Attorneys' Offices and the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and Asset Forfeiture and Money Laundering Section. The study revealed that, out of 52 cases involving corporate entities reported, in 25 cases prosecutors decided not to charge the entities while in 14 cases dispositions were negotiated with the entities. The negotiated dispositions include seven cases that resulted in deferred prosecution agreements, four that resulted in cooperation/non-prosecution agreements, and three that resulted in guilty pleas. Of the 14 negotiated dispositions, in only nine cases was a privilege waiver reported to play a significant role.

The surveys reflect that, at a most basic level, federal prosecutors have consistently explored as a threshold issue in determining "cooperation" whether a business organization has provided or will provide complete access to its employees, business records, organizational charts, compliance program, and any third-party witnesses over which it may have influence, such as customers, vendors, accountants, and former employees. In many cases, such action has been sufficient for the government to obtain timely and complete information concerning a suspected crime. In other instances involving complex business organizations or large volumes of evidence, obtaining timely and complete information has required the corporation to take additional steps, such as identifying for investigators specific witnesses and documents central to the suspected criminal conduct. Business organizations have, without providing counsel's notes or reports, identified promptly and made available to investigators all of the witnesses and documents involved in their own internal investigations by corporate counsel and provided assurances that witnesses will make full disclosure. When such actions have been adequate for federal investigators to determine timely the complete underlying facts, then the federal prosecutors have, consistent with the Thompson Memorandum, determined a waiver to be unnecessary and have not required one in order to establish cooperation.

The Department's periodic examinations of the actual application of the Thompson Memorandum by federal prosecutors have also revealed one important "best" or "preferred" practice with respect to waiver requests. A majority of United States Attorneys have required either an informal or a formal review by a senior, uninvolved colleague with supervisory experience before their federal prosecutors may request that the attorney-client privilege or work-product protection be waived, and the Department has determined that, consistent with this practice, a formal, written review process for such requests should be instituted by each United States Attorney for his/her district. Such a review process, which may vary from district to district, should be designed to ensure that the "appropriate circumstances" referenced in the Thompson Memorandum are present when federal prosecutors request a waiver. Such a formal review process serves to protect the considerable societal benefits associated with these long-recognized legal privileges in relation to the equally significant societal benefits of vigorous enforcement of the federal criminal law. Each United States Attorney is directed to provide the Executive Office of the United States Attorneys with a copy of the review process adopted in that district within sixty days.

In the formulation of the review process and in the review process itself, the United States Attorneys should continue to apply the factors discussed in the Thompson Memorandum. Specifically, the Thompson Memorandum instructs that the "waiver should ordinarily be limited to the factual internal investigation and any contemporaneous advice given to the corporation concerning the conduct at issue." Id., Section VI.B, n.3. It further provides that, "[e]xcept in unusual circumstances, prosecutors should not seek a waiver with respect to communications and work product related to advice concerning the government's criminal investigation." Id. The Thompson Memorandum, therefore, draws an important distinction between underlying factual information and factual work product, on the one hand, and opinion work product or attorney-client communications, on the other hand. It also draws a significant distinction between legal advice rendered "contemporaneous[ly]" with "the conduct at issue" and "advice concerning the government's criminal investigation." Id. Consistent with the Thompson Memorandum, such waivers, when determined to be necessary, have been and should be limited in most cases to factual information gleaned by the corporation's own investigation, including, where warranted by the circumstances, corporate counsel's interview notes and other factual work product, as opposed to privileged attorney-client communications or counsel's opinion work product.

As the Thompson Memorandum outlines, a waiver request seeking privileged communications or opinion work product created contemporaneously with the underlying conduct under investigation may also be sometimes appropriate. Id. (discussing "contemporaneous advice"). However, the need for such information has generally been evaluated independently from the need for interview notes and other fact work product. Frequently, federal prosecutors have determined that inquiry into "contemporaneous advice" is not necessary.

Finally, the Thompson Memorandum indicates that a waiver request for opinion work product or attorney-client communications concerning the government's criminal investigation itself may be warranted. The Memorandum instructs, however, that "prosecutors should not seek a waiver with respect" to such information except in "unusual circumstances." Id. Prosecutors have exercised care when evaluating the need for a waiver for opinion work product or attorney-client communications that were created after the events under investigation and involve self-evaluation activities, and should continue that practice so that companies are not discouraged from engaging in candid self-evaluation and assessing ways to improve corporate governance and compliance. Of course, there will be cases in which even information falling into these categories may be necessary. One example would be a case in which there is strong reason to believe that counsel's advice about the government's current investigation constitutes an obstruction of justice, though undoubtedly there will be others as well. Under the Thompson Memorandum, federal prosecutors retain the discretion in such circumstances to obtain relevant evidence by requesting waivers after the appropriate formal review process instituted by this additional guidance.

Aloma,

Heard from the FBI and they still have quite a few leads before they complete their investigation. In order to possibly speed things up I'm going to fax you a financial form that Neil needs to sign. This way, the FBI doesn't have to send an investigator to see him. This form is needed to verify state tax records. Please ask him to only sign, date, and put his address. The FBI fills out the rest. I will need you to mail this to me via Intraoffice mail as an original signature is needed. Please let me know when you mail it so I can be on the lookout for it and send it to the FBI. We are at 20 Massachusetts Ave, Room 6221 and put to my attention.

Please let me know your fax# so I can fax the form to you.

Thks,

Good Morning,

The Law Enforcement/Public Safety Working Group of the White House Hurricane Katrina Task Force will meet at 2:00 p.m. today, September 8, 2005, at the Department of Justice in the Justice Command Center, Room 6100. The purpose of the meeting is to answer the questions posed in the attached memorandum from the Deputy Secretary of Homeland Security

- Outline the major challenges, objectives and milestones for the Working Group
- Identify preliminary recommendations or clusters of policy options or other measures under consideration. Of course, at this stage you may only be able to identify problems, rather than fixed solutions or policy options.

To begin the discussion, we have prepared the attached list of issues that affect the law enforcement community within and responding to the affected areas. We welcome additional suggestions based on the experiences of personnel from your organizations.

Please review the issue paper and be prepared to discuss it and the two taskings at the meeting. If you believe additional issues should be included, please send them to the above addressees so all will be prepared to discuss them as well.

For clearance in to the Department of Justice, please confirm your attendance with my assistant,

Sonya Sesker, e-mail above, or at 514-4834.

Homeland Security

September 5, 2005

Dear Colleague:

As you know, last Thursday, President Bush formed the Cabinet-level White House Hurricane Katrina Task Force, which is chaired by Secretary Chertoff. This letter outlines details about the Task Force staffing and next steps for our work together.

Secretary Chertoff has appointed [redacted] to head the staff that we have assembled to support the Task Force. [redacted] will report directly to me. For now, he can be reached through our HSOC ([redacted]) and by email at [redacted]@dhs.gov. We are physically setting up this office today, and will shortly circulate a more complete point-of-contact list, as suggested in today's coordination call.

One of the key components of the Task Force staff will be a "problem buster" unit lead by [redacted]. [redacted] also can be contacted through the HSOC or by email at [redacted]@dhs.gov. The idea for this small group is to help bird-dog high-impact or highly visible issues that are quickly resolvable. This is not a substitute for the FEMA coordination functions or the in-theater decision process; rather, it is an adjunct to the Secretary's staff that will allow us to slice through certain problems faster and, for example, to assure that we are conducting appropriate follow-up to the immediate issues that you ask Secretary Chertoff or me personally to address.

As to next steps, at our deputies meeting last Friday, we initially identified thirteen possible Working Groups to manage mid- and long-term policy development and operational integration issues. After further discussion among deputies -- and with the support of DPC and HSC at the White House -- I have consolidated closely related tasks to yield eight Working Groups. Please see the attached list.

Most of these groups are well underway. With two exceptions, we have identified a lead agency for each, and we are asking the Deputy Secretary of each lead agency to assume the formal lead for Working Groups assigned to your department. We'd ask that agency leads also appoint an alternate.

Participation by a department or agency in Working Groups will be by self-nomination, but I'd ask both Working Group leads and participants to review the attached list and email a name and full contact information for participation in those groups for which your agency has an equity or interest. Participants for these groups should be at the assistant secretary level or higher, and individuals should enjoy direct access to your views and those of your department or agency head. These names should be sent to [redacted] by 11:00am Tuesday.

We will convene a meeting of Working Group chairs on Tuesday, September 6, 2005, from 4:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building Room 180 to discuss the way ahead. Please provide clearance information to Elliott Langer of the Homeland Security Council Executive Secretariat at 202-456-1990 or elanger@who.eop.gov. Also on Tuesday, we hope to circulate a listing of all Working Group members to each of you.

We ask that each Working Group meet on Wednesday, September 7 (time and place to be determined by the lead) and to produce a brief initial assessment and status report. At that meeting, each Working Group must accomplish at least two common tasks:

1. Outline the major challenges, objectives and milestones for the Working Group.

2. Identify preliminary recommendations or clusters of policy options or other measures under consideration. Of course, at this stage you may only be able to identify problems, rather than fixed solutions or policy options.

The two tasks are due to the Task Force staff ([redacted]) by close of business on Thursday, September 8, 2005.

Once we have compiled the results of the initial Working Group meetings, we will convene a Deputies Committee meeting to scope the process to ensure that our efforts are properly focused to achieve measurable results. I look forward to working with you and your team to make this effort a success.

Also, I have attached a list of ten tasks that are near-term priorities on the ground. Those priorities are being addressed by FEMA, DOD and other interagency partners in-theater. At DHS, we are using this to capture a list of the major moving parts, and I thought this may be useful information for you.

Thank you for your efforts and on-going support. If you have any questions, please contact me or [redacted].

Sincerely,

\\original signed\\

We are physically setting up this office today, and will shortly circulate a more complete point-of-contact list, as suggested in today's coordination call.

One of the key components of the Task Force staff will be a "problem buster" unit lead by [redacted]. [redacted] also can be contacted through the HSOC or by email at [redacted]@dhs.gov. The idea for this small group is to help bird-dog high-impact or highly visible issues that are quickly resolvable. This is not a substitute for the FEMA coordination functions or the in-theater decision process; rather, it is an adjunct to the Secretary's staff that will allow us to slice through certain problems faster and, for example, to assure that we are conducting appropriate follow-up to the immediate issues that you ask Secretary Chertoff or me personally to address.

As to next steps, at our deputies meeting last Friday, we initially identified thirteen possible Working Groups to manage mid- and long-term policy development and operational integration issues. After further discussion among deputies -- and with the support of DPC and HSC at the White House -- I have consolidated closely related tasks to yield eight Working Groups. Please see the attached list.

Most of these groups are well underway. With two exceptions, we have identified a lead agency for each, and we are asking the Deputy Secretary of each lead agency to assume the formal lead for Working Groups assigned to your department. We'd ask that agency leads also appoint an alternate.

Participation by a department or agency in Working Groups will be by self-nomination, but I'd ask both Working Group leads and participants to review the attached list and email a name and full contact information for participation in those groups for which your agency has an equity or interest. Participants for these groups should be at the assistant secretary level or higher, and individuals should enjoy direct access to your views and those of your department or agency head. These names should be sent to [redacted] by 11:00am Tuesday.

We will convene a meeting of Working Group chairs on Tuesday, September 6, 2005, from 4:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building Room 180 to discuss the way ahead. Please provide clearance information to Elliott Langer of the Homeland Security Council Executive Secretariat at 202-456-1990 or elanger@who.eop.gov. Also on Tuesday, we hope to circulate a listing of all Working Group members to each of you.

We ask that each Working Group meet on Wednesday, September 7 (time and place to be determined by the lead) and to produce a brief initial assessment and status report. At that meeting, each Working Group must accomplish at least two common tasks:

1. Outline the major challenges, objectives and milestones for the Working Group.

2. Identify preliminary recommendations or clusters of policy options or other measures under consideration. Of course, at this stage you may only be able to identify problems, rather than fixed solutions or policy options.

The two tasks are due to the Task Force staff ([redacted]) by close of business on Thursday, September 8, 2005.

Once we have compiled the results of the initial Working Group meetings, we will convene a Deputies Committee meeting to scope the process to ensure that our efforts are properly focused to achieve measurable results. I look forward to working with you and your team to make this effort a success.

Also, I have attached a list of ten tasks that are near-term priorities on the ground. Those priorities are being addressed by FEMA, DOD and other interagency partners in-theater. At DHS, we are using this to capture a list of the major moving parts, and I thought this may be useful information for you.

Thank you for your efforts and on-going support. If you have any questions, please contact me or [redacted].

Sincerely,

Robert -

I've attached just a couple minor nits for your consideration. Also, Mary Beth reports that she very much liked the last draft I sent her so I'm willing to bet she'll like this one even more. She did make one suggestion, proposing the elimination of the last sentence of the penultimate paragraph ("Frequently, federal prosecutors have determined that inquiry into 'contemporary advice' is not necessary.") I don't feel strongly about this (and don't think Mary Beth did either), but if pushed, I'd recommend retaining the sentence -- we should recognize that contemporary advice is worthy of particular respect and the prior discussion doesn't fully accomplish that (noting only that the need for contemporary advice should be weighed "independently" from the need for other work product and communications).

Once you review and decide this, I'm happy to run the comment process traps, inviting comments to you or me from, I think, this group in the initial distribution: OAG (Jeff, Ted, Courtney, Kyle), ODAG (Mercer, Margolis), EOUSA (Battle, Buchanan), CRIM (Fisher), OLP (Brand, McIntosh). Let me know if you think I've missed anyone. I suggest we ask for return comments by Monday so we can distribute to the larger group the same day (hopefully).

Dear Colleague:

As you know, last Thursday, President Bush formed the Cabinet-level White House Hurricane Katrina Task Force, which is chaired by Secretary Chertoff. This letter outlines details about the Task Force staffing and next steps for our work together.

ATTORNEY GENERAL ALBERTO R. GONZALES OUTLINES ANTI-FRAUD PRIORITIES TO PROTECT THE INTEGRITY OF RELIEF EFFORTS IN HURRICANE KATRINA-STRICKEN REGION

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Attorney General Alberto R. Gonzales travels to Mississippi and Louisiana today with Vice President Dick Cheney to tour areas devastated by Hurricane Katrina and outline priorities for the newly established Hurricane Katrina Fraud Task Force, designed to deter, investigate and prosecute disaster-related federal crimes such as charity fraud and insurance fraud.

In a planned visit to Gulfport, Miss., the Attorney General will meet with Department of Justice personnel who are working out of the Jackson office. In Louisiana, the Attorney General plans to visit a law enforcement detention center in New Orleans and meet with Justice Department staff, including personnel from the U.S. Attorney's Office in the Eastern District of Louisiana (New Orleans), who are presently working out of offices in Baton Rouge.

Recent history, including Hurricane Ivan and the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, has shown that some criminals seek to profit from disaster by means of fraud, and recent reports indicate that fraudulent Internet sites designed to lure those seeking to donate to Hurricane Katrina relief efforts have already been posted.

The Hurricane Katrina Fraud Task Force - chaired by Assistant Attorney General Alice S. Fisher of the Criminal Division - includes members from the FBI, the Federal Trade Commission, the Postal Inspector's Office, and the Executive Office of the United States Attorneys, among others. The Task Force will be directed to track referrals of potential cases and complaints, coordinate with law enforcement agencies to initiate investigations, match referrals with the appropriate U.S. Attorney's offices, and ensure timely and effective prosecution of Katrina fraud cases. The Task Force will be national in scope, working with state and local law enforcement and state attorneys general to identify cases, and will report back to the Attorney General on a periodic basis.

"We cannot allow the kindness of Americans to be exploited in this time of disaster and crisis," said Attorney General Gonzales. "This Task Force will help ensure that those offering a helping hand do not themselves become the victims of fraud, and that the money and support they so graciously and generously offer goes to the intended recipients - the many victims of Hurricane Katrina."

The Task Force will work aggressively with a focus on specific areas of fraud, with the ability to alter its focus if necessary to adapt to whatever fraudulent schemes are created by those who are looking for illegal gain. Examples of those types of fraud include:

- Fraudulent Charities: Cases in which individuals falsely hold themselves out as agents of a legitimate charity, or create a "charity" that is in fact a sham;
- Identity Theft: Cases in which the identities of innocent victims are "stolen" and assumed by criminals who convert the assets of, or otherwise defraud, the victims, and;
- Insurance Fraud: Cases in which false or inflated insurance claims are filed;
- Government Benefit Fraud: Cases in which individuals file false applications seeking benefits to which they are not entitled.

Several existing government websites and resources are available to obtain information about, and report instances of, Katrina-related fraud. The FBI website, www.fbi.gov, <http://www.fbi.gov,> contains updated alerts about particular types of charity-related frauds. Members of the public can also report instances of fraud on the Website for the FBI's Internet Crime Complaint Center, at www.ic3.gov. <http://www.ic.3.gov.> The Fraud Section of the Criminal Division maintains additional information about Internet-related scams at www.internetfraud.usdoj.gov <http://www.internetfraud.usdoj.gov.>. <http://www.internetfraud.usdoj.gov,>The Federal Trade Commission provides additional information at its website, www.ftc.gov <http://www.ftc.gov,><http://www.ftc.gov,>, and a toll-free FTC hotline, 1-877-FTC-HELP (1-877-382-4357, TTY/TDD: 202-326-2502), also allows consumers to report suspected fraud schemes, including Katrina-related fraud.

Neil, attached is the DOJ Reauthorization Bill and our comments on it. I thought you might like to see a copy. Most if it concerns OJP matters, which Tracy is looking over. FYI, there is a section on the Chief Privacy Officer, which I provide below. Let me know if you have any comments.
Jeff

Section 305 would require the Attorney General to designate a "senior official" within the Department of Justice (the "Department") "to assume primary responsibility for privacy policy." The Department recognizes the growing importance of information privacy, and supports creation of a Chief Privacy Officer (CPO) position within DOJ, but strongly believes that more time and study are required before the CPO's duties and responsibilities can or should be specifically delineated. The Department is now actively engaged in assessing its privacy-related functions and personnel, and making recommendations to the Attorney General regarding potential structural changes and resource needs. As this project unfolds, among the difficult questions presented are: what is the scope of the CPO's responsibilities? How does creation of a CPO affect the Department's existing privacy functions? What is the appropriate relationship between the CPO and the Chief Information Officer? Is importing the DHS model the optimal solution for DOJ? The answers to these questions are not obvious, and are not susceptible to "one size fits all" legislation. The Department therefore seeks additional flexibility in the language of the bill, and sufficient time to make an informed recommendation to Congress regarding establishment of a CPO. We submit the following language as a substitute:
Privacy Officer

(a) In General. The Attorney General shall designate a senior official in the Department of Justice to assume primary responsibility for privacy policy.

(b) Responsibilities. The responsibilities of such official shall include -

(1) Advising the Attorney General regarding appropriate privacy protections, relating to the use, collection, and disclosure of personally identifiable information, with respect to the use of information technology policy and information systems; and
(2) Advising the Attorney General regarding the privacy implications of legislative and regulatory proposals affecting the Department and involving the collection, use, and disclosure of personally identifiable information.

(3) In consultation with the Department's Chief Information Officer, ensuring the Department's compliance with Section 208 of the E-Government Act of 2002

(Pub. L. 107-347).

(c) Review of Privacy-Related Functions and Resources and Report. Within 120 days of his designation, the privacy official shall prepare a comprehensive report to the Attorney General and to Congress, describing the organization and resources of the Department with respect to privacy and related information management functions, including access, security, and records management, assessing the Department's current and future needs relating to information privacy issues, and making appropriate recommendations regarding the Department's organizational structure and personnel.

Jim and Jeff,
We are submitting the attached letter for ODAG and OASG review for transmission to OMB asap. This bill will be on the House floor very soon and are trying to get it to as quickly as possible.

A couple of notes. The first three titles are "doj reauth" and our comments are very similar to last year's views letter on HR 3036 (most are identical), as the Committee incorporated none of our suggestions. Titles IV-X are "Reauth of the Violence Against Women Act" Given the length of this letter, I sent it to Tracy Henke so she could begin reviewing as well. Tracy is also resolving a conflict between components in Section 250.

The attached version of the bill is the one Reported out of the Committee. Please do not hesitate to call me with any questions 5-9134.

Thanks,
Sarah

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Of the total amount appropriated for this subpart, the Attorney General shall, except as provided in paragraph (2), allocate—

''(A) 50 percent of such remaining amount to each State in amounts that bear the same ratio of—

''(ii) the average annual number of such crimes reported by all States for such years.

DOJ_NMG_ 0147023

out, shall not apply, and the Attorney General shall instead—

''(A) allocate 0.25 percent of the total amount to each State; and

''(B) using the amount remaining after carrying out subparagraph (A), carry out paragraph (1) in a manner that excludes each minimum allocation State, including the population of and the crimes reported by such State.

''(b) ALLOCATION BETWEEN STATES AND UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—Of the amounts allocated under subsection (a)—

''(1) 60 percent shall be for direct grants to States, to be allocated under subsection (c); and

''(2) 40 percent shall be for grants to be allocated under subsection (d).

DOJ_NMG_ 0147025

able bears to the number of part 1 violent crimes reported by all units of local government in the State in which the unit is located to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for such years.

"(B) TRANSITIONAL RULE.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), for fiscal years 2006, 2007, and 2008, the Attorney General shall allocate the local amount to units of local government in the same manner that, under the Local Government Law Enforcement Block Grants program in effect immediately before the date of the enactment of this section, the reserved amount was allocated among reporting and nonreporting units of local government.

"(3) ANNEXED UNITS.—If a unit of local government in the State has been annexed since the date of the collection of the data used by the Attorney General in making allocations pursuant to this section, the Attorney General shall pay the amount that would have been allocated to such unit of local government to the unit of local government that annexed it.

''(II) more than one such specified geographically constituent unit of local government exceeds 400 percent of the amount allocated to the unit of local government certified pursuant to clause (i), then in order to qualify for payment under this subsection, the unit of local government certified pursuant to clause (i), together with any such specified geographically constituent units of local government described in clause (ii), shall submit to the Attorney General a joint application for the aggregate of funds allocated to such units of local government.

''(3) NON-REPORTING UNITS.—No allocation under this section shall be made to a unit of local government that has not reported at least three years of data on part 1 violent crimes of the Uniform Crime Reports to the Federal Bureau of Investigation within the immediately preceding 10 years.

''(f) FUNDS NOT USED BY THE STATE.—If the Attorney General determines, on the basis of information available during any grant period, that any allocation (or portion thereof) under this section to a State for such grant period will not be required, or that a State will be unable to qualify or receive funds under this subpart, or that a State chooses not to participate in the program established under this subpart, then such State's allocation (or portion thereof) shall be awarded by the Attorney General to units of local government, or combinations thereof, within such State, giving priority to those jurisdictions
