Subject: Reminder-New Employee Ethics Training

REMINDER!!!!! REMINDER!!!!!

This is a reminder that you are scheduled to attend new employee ethics training tomorrow, September 28, 2005 at 10 a.m. in Conference Room 1160, National Place Building, 1331 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW.

Note:

The National Place Building is not the same as the National Press Building.

You may enter the National Place Building on either Pennsylvania Avenue or F and 13th Street. If arriving by Metro rail, the stop closest to the National Place Building is Metro Center on the Red line/Blue line. The DOJ shuttle bus also stops at the National Place Building via the Green or Black line.

This mandatory training is designed to ensure that new employees are aware of the federal conflict of interest laws and the executive branch standards of conduct.

Thanks!!!!

Sorry for the delay in getting back to you. Here's a version we prepared in an attempt to remove the material that made the memo either (i) appear to condemn AUSAs' current practice or (ii) appear to be insensitive to the bar's concerns about the issue -- both of which we want to avoid. I hope this is of some value.

FYI. I presume that Andy will get you for the picture with her and the AG. I have determined that I will be speaking at the 8th Cir Jud. Conference in Colo. that day and won't be able to be present either. Can I do something with her prior to the party like Wed. of that week or possibly participate in the photo as well? I am alerting Neil so that he can attend the party and represent OASG. Robt.

Robert,
I received your handwritten note on the request for the AG to attend Mildred Seidman's retirement party on October 21. The AG is scheduled to be on international travel that day. We will schedule a time for Mildred to come up to the AG's conference room for a photo prior to the date of the party.

Thanks.

Following up on our meeting this morning, I just got off the phone with John Davis. As you know, the privacy office alternatives memo was circulated to all affected components (OIP, CIV, CRIM, JMD, etc.) about 2 weeks ago, with an invitation for comments by yesterday (Thursday).

As a next step, would it make sense to convene next week another small-ish meeting (OAG, ODAG, OASG, OLP) to discuss the comments we've received? I know John Davis is in town Weds and Thurs. My thought would be that we could work through the comments received and, based on those comments, refine and narrow down our list of possible options (current we have about 7 on the table). Having done that, we might circulate again for comments before reaching a final recommendation for our principals.

Does this make sense? If so, what are your schedules like W and Th?

Best,

NMG

Richard,

It was a genuine pleasure to meet you today. I enjoyed our chat very much; clearly we think alike! Apropos of our discussion, I thought you might find of interest a short paper I did for an FTC conference that was picked up by WLF early this year, before I made the jump to government. http://www.wlf.org/upload/GorsuchWP.pdf#search='gorsuch%20matey'

I do hope we get the chance to work together.

Warm regards,

Importance: High

The authorization bill has been offered as an amendment to the appropriations bill by Sen. Warner this afternoon. .

Along with the authorization bill, Warner proposed a "manager's package" of some 80 amendments (including detainee amendments) that he would like to incorporate into the authorization bill. Talk is still ongoing on whether a deal with Sen Frist Sen Reid would allow the authorization bill to return to the floor as a stand-alone bill.

Sen Stevens,chairman of the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, said he would allow Warner's offering so long as a time agreement is reached that would ensure the appropriations bill passes the Senate by Friday.

I will keep you advised.

Respectfully,

We just a short while ago got a message from the Second Circuit Clerk's office, saying that the decision had been handed down. We then obtained a copy of the decision, written by Judge Sack. While we haven't had time to study it carefully, the decision appears to hold principally that where plaintiff alleged a conspiracy and said what it involved, that's sufficient for Rule 8 purposes.

What They're Saying About Nomination Of Harriet Miers To Supreme Court

Praise For Miers Nomination To Supreme Court:

Jay Sekulow, Chief Counsel, The American Center For Law And Justice: "We Look Forward To A Speedy Confirmation Process And Will Work Aggressively To Ensure That Harriet Miers Gets Full And Fair Consideration Before The Senate. We Call On Members Of The Senate To Reject The Partisan Political Rhetoric And Focus On The Judicial Philosophy Of This Conservative Mainstream Nominee." (American Center For Law And Justice, "CLJ Calls Harriet Miers - President Bush's Supreme Court Nominee - An 'Excellent' Choice Who Embraces The Constitution And The Rule Of Law," Press Release, 10/3/05)

Leonard Leo, Executive Vice President of the Federalist Society (On Leave): "In Nominating Harriet Miers, The President Has Once Again Kept His Commitment To Select Supreme Court Justices Who Are Very Well Qualified And Share His Philosophy Of Interpreting The Law, Not Legislating From The Bench." (Leonard Leo, Memo To Interested Parties Re: Nomination Of Harriet E. Miers, 10/3/05)

Leo: "She Has Also On A Number Of Occasions Demonstrated Her Commitment To Conservative Legal Principles And The Principles Of Judicial Restraint In Fairly Applying The Law, And Not Making Public Policy From The Bench." (Leonard Leo, Memo To Interested Parties Re: Nomination Of Harriet E. Miers, 10/3/05)

Senate Minority Leader Harry Reid (D-NV): "I Like Harriet Miers, As White House Counsel She Has Worked With Me In A Courteous And Professional Manner." (Sen. Harry Reid, Press Release, 10/3/05)

Reid: "I Am Also Impressed With The Fact That [Meirs] Was A Trailblazer For Woman As A Managing Partner Of Major Dallas Law Firm And The First Women President Of The Texas Bar Association." (Sen. Harry Reid, Press Release, 10/3/05)

Association." (Sen. Harry Reid, Press Release, 10/3/05)

Reid: "In My View, The Supreme Court Would Benefit From The Addition Of A Justice Who Has Real Experience As A Practicing Lawyer. The Current Justices Have All Been Chosen From Lower Federal Courts, A Nominee With Relevant Non-Judicial Experience Would Bring A Different And Useful Prospective To The Court." (Sen. Harry Reid, Press Release, 10/3/05)

President Of The Dallas Bar Association, Tim Mountz: "I Think Harriet Miers Would Make An Excellent Judge And For A Number Of Reasons. One Is, Although Harriet Was A Very Good Advocate For Her Clients, She Also Tended To Try To Operate By Consensus Whenever Possible. So I Think That She Would Be A Good Supreme Court Justice For That Reason." (MSNBC's "News Live," 10/3/05)

NBC's Tim Russert: "Harry Reid, The Leader Of The Democrats In The Senate Has Said Favorable Things About Ms. Miers In The Past." (NBC's "Today," 10/3/05)

Russert: "It Is Also Interesting, Historically ... Of The 110 People Who Have Sat On The Supreme Court, Only Half Have Been Sitting Judges When Selected ... History Is Filled With People With Backgrounds Similar To Harriet Miers." (NBC's "Today," 10/3/05)

ABC's Manuel Madrano: "[N]ot Only The First Female To Lead A Major Dallas Texas Law Firm But The First Female To Lead The Texas Bar Association. Overall, A Very Interesting Pick." (ABC's "GoodMorning America," 10/3/05)

CNN's Jeff Toobin: "[Miers] Had Been A Top Corporate Lawyer In Texas. She Was -- Was Head Of The Dallas Bar, Head Of The Texas Bar. Those Are Impressive Positions ..." (CNN's "American Morning," 10/3/05)

CNN's Dana Bash: "We're Told By A Senior Official That A Part Of The Reason They Say That Mr. Bush Felt Comfortable At This Point Nominating Harriet Miers Is Because She Was Recommended To Him Not Just By Republicans But Also By Democrats." (CNN's "American Morning," 10/3/05)

Bash: "A Senior Official Said That The President Took Seriously An Admonition By The Chairman Of The Judiciary Committee And The Senate And The Top Democrat He Should Think Outside Of The Appeals Court, Think Outside The Monastery As Senator Pat Leahy Of Vermont Has Put It ..." (CNN's "American Morning," 10/3/05)

Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY): "[W]hen I Choose Judges In New York, I Look For Practical Experience. And So The Fact That She Hasn't Been A Judge Before, To Me Is Actually A Positive, Not A Negative." (Sen. Charles Schumer, Press Conference, 10/3/05)

CBS' John Roberts: "The President Conducts A Nationwide Extensive Search For The Best Person For The Job To Be The Nominee To Be Associate Justice To Replace Justice Sandra Day O'Connor And Finds Her Down The Hall." (CBS' "The Early Show," 10/3/05)

The Washington Post's Fred Barbash: "[Harriet Miers] Has More Experience, I Think, Than People Are Crediting Her With." (MSNBC's "News Live," 10/3/05)

Previous Praise For Harriet Miers:

Miers Was Awarded The Sandra Day O'Connor Award For Professional Excellence By The Texas Center For Legal Ethics And Professionalism In 2005. (Texas Center For Legal Ethics And Professionalism Website, www.txethics.org <http://www.txethics.org/oconnorinformationcourses.asp> , Accessed 10/3/05

"Harriet Miers, President Of Dallas' Locke Purnell Rain Harrell, Was One Of 20 Other Women Nominated For The [1996 Texas Trailblazer Award]." (Tara Wilkinson, "Newsmakers," Texas Lawyers, 10/28/96)

Antonio Alvarado, Former Director Of The Texas State Bar: 'She Is An Indefatigable Leader, A Lawyer's Lawyer With A Keen Intellect,' Said Antonio Alvarado, Executive Director Of The State Bar. 'She Brings . . . The Highest Ethical Conduct, And We Will Be Well-Served Having Her In This Public Service Role.'" (Gary Susswein, "In Naming Miers As An Aide, Bush Keeps A Trusted Lawyer At His Side," Austin American-Statesman, 1/6/01)

Former Partner R. Bruce Laboon: "Harriet Is Not A Person That Gets Frustrated Easily. She Doesn't Lose Her Temper. She Is Very Cool And Calm In A Storm." (Miriam Rozen, "Bush's Gatekeeper," Texas Lawyer, 3/24/03)

Laboon: "We've All Known For A Long Time What A Talent She Is, And Now The President Knows." ("Inadmissible," Texas Lawyer, 7/14/03)

U.S. District Judge Ed Kinkeade Of Dallas: "She Truly Believes In Doing Right ... No One Can Say She Took The [Texas] Lottery [Commission] Position Because It Was Fun. It Was Something That Was Honorable, And She Did A Great Job." (Miriam Rozen, "Bush's Gatekeeper," Texas Lawyer, 3/24/03)

Former Co-Worker Thomas Connop: "Harriet Is A Hard Worker, Personable, A Client-Oriented Attorney Who Is Extremely Thorough And Not Flamboyant." (T.R. Goldman, "Down To The Last Detail," Legal Times, 12/15/04)

Miers Former Co-Worker Jerry Clements, Of Dallas, TX: "She Just Overcame Any Obstacles With Hard Work And Dedication And Being A Very Good Trial Lawyer." (Michael A. Fletcher, "Quiet But Ambitious White House Counsel Makes Life Of Law," The Washington Post, 6/21/05)

White House Staff Secretary Brett Kavanaugh: "She Is Very Thorough And Very Hard-Working And Very Conscientious And Very Careful, Which Is Why She Was A Good Choice For Staff Secretary And Why She's A Good Choice As Counsel..." (T.R. Goldman, "Down To The Last Detail," Legal Times, 12/15/04)

Texas Supreme Court Justice Nathan Hecht: "Her Clients -- Including Now Maybe The Most Important Client She Ever Had -- Have Implicit Faith In Her Judgments ... She Is Very Sensible." (Gary Susswein, "In Naming Miers As An Aide, Bush Keeps A Trusted Lawyer At His Side," Austin American-Statesman, 1/6/01)

"Miers, 51, Is Well Known As A Tough Commercial Litigator Who Has Juggled An Exhaustive List Of Civic Activities While Racking Up A String Of Professional Firsts, Including First Woman President Of The Dallas Bar In 1985 And First Woman President Of The State Bar In 1992-93." (Susan Hightower, "Harriet Miers Extends String Of Firsts With Locke Purnell Post," Texas Lawyer, 12/16/96)

What They're Saying About Nomination Of Harriet Miers To Supreme Court: Volume II

Praise For Miers' Nomination To Supreme Court:

Vice President Dick Cheney: "I Think [President Bush Has] Found A Good One In Harriet Miers. I Think She'll Do A Great Job." (Vice President Dick Cheney, Telephonic Interview By Rush Limbaugh, The Rush Limbaugh Show, 10/3/05)

Cheney: "[I]'m Confident That She Has A Conservative Judicial Philosophy ..." (Vice President Dick Cheney, Telephonic Interview By Rush Limbaugh, The Rush Limbaugh Show, 10/3/05) *

Cheney: "She Believes Very Deeply In The Importance Of Interpreting The Constitution And The Law As It's Written. She Won't Legislate From The Federal Bench." (Vice President Dick Cheney, Telephonic Interview By Rush Limbaugh, The Rush Limbaugh Show, 10/3/05)

James C. Dobson, Focus On The Family Chairman: "We Welcome The President's Nomination Of Harriet Miers To The U.S. Supreme Court. ... Harriet Miers Appears To Be An Outstanding Nominee For The Supreme Court." (Focus On The Family Action, "Dobson Welcomes Miers' Nomination," Press Release, 10/3/05)

Sen. Ben Nelson (D-NE): "It Appears The President Has Made A Sound Choice In Harriet Miers. From Every Indication It Seems That She Has The Qualifications And Experience To Serve On The Supreme Court. Based On Her Background And Experience, If Confirmed, She Would Undoubtedly Bring A New Perspective And Balance To The Court." (Sen. Ben Nelson, "Nelson Statement On The Nomination Of Harriett Miers To Serve As Associate Justice Of The Supreme Court," Press Release, 10/3/05)

*

Sen. Nelson: "The President Should Be Commended For Taking Such Care And Time To Nominate Someone Who Could Garner The Same Broad Bipartisan Support That John Roberts Did." (Sen. Ben Nelson, "Nelson Statement On The Nomination Of Harriett Miers To Serve As Associate Justice Of The Supreme Court," Press Release, 10/3/05)

Sen. Nelson: "I'd Like To Thank The President For The Effort He Made Reaching Out To Me And Many Of My Colleagues To Discuss This Nomination." (Sen. Ben Nelson, "Nelson Statement On The Nomination Of Harriett Miers To Serve As Associate Justice Of The Supreme Court," Press Release, 10/3/05)

Chuck Colson, Founder And Chairman Of Prison Fellowship Ministries: "You Look At The Sum Total Of Her Record And See Someone Whose Very Much In Line With The President's Thinking, And I Trust George Bush On This. He Gave Us Roberts, Who Is A Clearly One Of The Best Appointees To The Court In My Lifetime, And I Think Harriet's Going To Be A Perfect Vote On That Court Along With Roberts." (Fox News' "Your World," 10/3/05)

Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC): "President Bush Has Made A Solid Pick For The Supreme Court. ... Her Legal Experience Combined With Her Life Experience Makes Her A Solid Choice. ... In My Opinion, There Will Be No Filibuster As She Is A Mainstream Conservative Who Will Be A Strict Constructionist On The Supreme Court. " (Sen. Lindsey Graham, Press Release, 10/3/05)

CNN's Ed Henry: "[I]n The Words Of Veteran Republican Senator John Warner, A Key Swing Vote On All This, It Appears The President Hit A Second Straight Home Run." (CNN's "The Situation Room," 10/3/05)

Henry: "[T]here Was Some Interesting Praise From Top Democrats Like Chuck Schumer And Diane Feinstein Who Voted Against Roberts Saying She Does Not See Any Negatives With This Nomination And More Importantly The Senate Democratic Leader Also Had Very Warm Words And In Fact He Is The Man Who Initially Raised The Name Of Harriet Miers Directly To The President." (CNN's "The Situation Room," 10/3/05) *

Henry: "[T]his May Not Have Been An Orthodox Pick, But From Right To Left, A Lot Of Praise For It." (CNN's "The Situation Room," 10/3/05)

Wendy Long, Former Law Clerk To Justice Clarence Thomas: "She's Going To Modestly And Strictly Interpret The Constitution And Laws. It's A Lot Of What We Heard From John Roberts." (CNN's "Live Today," 10/3/05)

Long: "I've Met Her During The Course Of The Administration. She's A Very Bright Woman, But She's Modest And Understated. She's Very Prudent. She's Discrete. All Those Are Important Qualities For A Judge." (CNN's "Live Today," 10/3/05)

Spence Abraham, Committee For Justice, Co-Chair: "I Have Had The Chance To Work Closely With Harriet Miers For The Past Four Years And Am Confident That She Will Bring The Same Integrity And Intelligence To The Court Which She Has Displayed In The Important Legal And Governmental Posts She Has Held." (Committee For Justice, "CFJ Congratulates President On Miers Nomination," Press Release, 10/3/05)

MSNBC's Mike Viqueira: "In Other Words, He May Have Here A Nominee That Is Acceptable To

MSNBC's Mike Viqueira: "In Other Words, He May Have Here A Nominee That Is Acceptable To Virtually All Republicans, And Enough Democrats In The Senate To Confirm This Nominee, Harriet Miers." (MSNBC's "News Live," 10/3/05)

MSNBC's Pete Williams: "Well, For Groups Who Want To Oppose Her, There's Nothing To Hang Their Hat On This Morning." (MSNBC's "News Live," 10/3/05)

Williams: "There's Some Suggestion That What The Democrats May Be Saying Is That, She's Quote-Unquote Not Qualified For The Job. But At The Same Time That Will Put Them In A Bit Of A Difficult Position. Because Some Congressional Democrats Have Said, What We Need Is More Diversity, A Breadth Of Experience On The Court. Like Days Past, When More Of The Supreme Court Justices Did Not Come From The Federal Bench Farm Team." (MSN BC's "News Live," 10/3/05)

Christian Coalition: "Christian Coalition Of America Is Pleased That President Bush Named A Replacement For Justice O'Connor To The Supreme Court Who He Says Will Not Legislate From The Bench. Even Though She Has No Judicial Experience, She Has Spent Many Years Of Her Career Serving As The Personal Attorney To The President And Supporting His Conservative Agenda While Serving As An Attorney In The White House." (Christian Coalition, Press Release, 10/3/05)

Christian Coalition President, Roberta Combs: "As A Woman, I Am Honored That The President Would Appoint Another Woman To The Supreme Court. Ms. Miers Has An Excellent Career Record And Has Accomplished Many Firsts For Women. She Was The First Woman To Be Elected The Texas State Bar Association And The First Woman To Be Hired In Her Law Firm And To Become President Of The Law Firm. I Trust That She Will Be An Excellent Addition To The High Court And All Americans Will Be Proud Of Her." (Christian Coalition, Press Release, 10/3/05)

NPR's Juan Williams: "The President Once Said That She's A Pit Bull In A Size Six Shoe ... I Think It Hints At Her Tenacity And Her Intellect. You Don't Rise Up To Head The Bar In Texas, To Run For The Number Two Spot In Terms Of The ABA Without Being Someone Who Impresses Your Legal Colleagues As Absolutely One Of The Best. And She's One Of The Best By All Measures, Liberal Or Conservative." (Fox News' "Fox News Live," 10/3/05)

Former Associate Deputy Attorney General And Clerk To Justice O'Connor Andrew McBride: "Harriet Miers Like Justice O'Connor, A Decade Or Two After, Is A Trail Blazer, Is Someone Who Was An Example To Women In The Law." (Fox News' "Fox News Live," 10/3/05)

Former Harriet Miers Colleague Karin Torgerson: "I Think What She Will Bring To Her Job Is The Ability To Study Everything That Comes Before Her And To Boil Down The Facts ... And Apply The Constitution To Those Facts And Circumstances." (Fox News' "Fox News Live," 10/3/05)

Former Attorney General Dick Thornburgh: "She Has Had A Distinguished Record In The Private Practice Of The law. She Has Held Public Office. That's A Refreshing Change From The Long String Of Justice Nominees Who Have Come Strictly From The Federal Judiciary." (Fox News' "Fox News Live," 10/3/05)

William Owens, President Coalition Of African-American Pastors: "We Are Pleased With The President's Nomination Of Harriet Miers To The U. S. Supreme Court. The President Pledged To Appoint Judges Who Will Apply The Law Rather Than Make Up New Law, And We Believe He Has Not Disappointed Us So Far." (Coalition of African-American Pastors, Press Release, 10/3/05)

Owens: "Harriet Miers Is An Excellent Choice And The Coalition Of African-American Pastors Is Very Happy With This Selection." (Coalition of African-American Pastors, Press Release, 10/3/05)

What They're Saying About Nomination Of Harriet Miers To Supreme Court: Volume III

Praise For Miers' Nomination To Supreme Court:

Texas Supreme Court Justice Nathan Hecht: "She's Very Conservative. I Don't Know, Scale 1 To 100, Up There Somewhere. She Works Well With Other People. Everybody Says She's A Very Fair-Minded Person. She Definitely Shares The President's Values." (ABC's "Nightline," 10/3/05)

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison (R-TX): "She Has Been My Friend For A Long Time. We Graduated From Law School In Roughly The Same Era. Both Of Us Had A Hard Time Getting Jobs, Because The Big Law Firms Did Not Hire Women At That Time To Be Partners, And In The Partner Track, And She Overcame That With A Determination, And A Positive Attitude." (ABC's "Nightline," 10/3/05)

CNN's John King: "[Miers Has] Been A Driving Force Behind The Renomination Of Conservative Judges Like Priscilla Owen, Janice Rogers Brown, All Judges Who Have High Approval Ratings From Social Conservatives." (CNN's "Lou Dobbs Tonight," 10/3/05)

National Review's Rich Lowry: "I Think She'll Be Confirmed Easily." (ABC's "Nightline," 10/3/05)

Texas Lawyer's John Council: "Well, What I've Been Doing All Day Long Is Talking To Lawyers In Texas Who Know Harriet Miers And Have Worked With Her ... When I Talked To These Lawyers, They Said, Look, This Is A Perfect Pick For The Court. She's Not An Ideologue, She's Highly Intelligent And She's Got The Trust Of The President. ... This Is From Republicans And Democrats Alike." (MSNBC's "The Abrams Report," 10/3/05)

USA Today: "Neither Miers' Lack Of Judicial Experience Nor Her Ties To Bush Need Be Disqualifying. ... Like O'Connor, Miers, 60, Has Been A Precedent-Setter For Women In The Male-Dominated Legal Field." (Editorial, "Bush Chooses An Even More Mysterious Court Nominee," USA Today, 10/4/05)

CNN's Ed Henry: "[I]t Appears The President, Just As He Did With John Roberts, Found Someone Maybe In The Middle Who Might Be Able To Reach Across The Aisle And Get Wide Bipartisan Support." (CNN's "Lou Dobbs Tonight," 10/3/05)

Henry: "More Telling Is That Leading Democrats Who Voted Against Chief Justice John Roberts Offered Cautious Praise For Miers." (CNN's "Lou Dobbs Tonight," 10/3/05)

Former White House Associate Counsel And Deputy Assistant Attorney General Noel Francisco: "I Don't Think That Anybody Can Seriously Question Harriet Miers' Commitment To The Principles Of Judicial Restraint And The Rule Of Law." (CNN's "Larry King Live," 10/3/05)

What They're Saying About Nomination Of Harriet Miers To Supreme Court: Volume IV

Praise For Miers' Nomination To Supreme Court:

The Houston Chronicle: "According To Texans Who Know White House Counsel And Supreme Court Nominee Harriet Miers Both Professionally And Personally, The 60-Year-Old Former Corporate Lawyer Embodies A Mix Of Qualities Rare In Washington's Cutthroat Atmosphere: Forceful Intelligence, Extreme Discretion And A Principled Civility." (Editorial, "A Lone Star Pick," The Houston Chronicle, 10/4/05)

The Houston Chronicle: "In John Roberts And Now Harriet Miers, President Bush Has Selected Qualified Nominees Of Integrity And Talent Acceptable To A Wide Consensus Of Americans And Worthy Of Our Support." (Editorial, "A Lone Star Pick," The Houston Chronicle, 10/4/05)

Houston Chronicle's Janet Elliot: "I Think A Lot Of People Were Surprised. But When They Thought About It, They Realized That It Makes Sense For The President To Pick Her. She Is Similar To Some Of The Justices He Named To The Texas Supreme Court When He Was Governor And That She Appears To Be A Conservative But Not An Activist Judge." (MSNBC's "News Live," 10/4/05)

Elliot: "Republicans And Democratic Lawyers Who Know Her, Speak Of Her Intelligence, Her Integrity And Her Tenacity. They Say That She Will Do Very Well During The Confirmation Process." (MSNBC's "News Live," 10/4/05)

Former Dallas City Manager And Colleague Of Harriet Miers, Jan Hart Black: "I Think She Had An Incredible Sense Of Fairness And A Very Strong Sense Of Ethics. She Worked Very Well With Her Colleagues." (MSNBC's "News Live," 10/4/05)

Former Colleague Of Harriet Miers Michael Toner: "Everything In Harriet Miers' Background As A Lawyer Is One Of Absolute Excellence. She Is A Lawyer's Lawyer, Tremendous Legal Career Over Many Decades And One Of The Big Strengths I Think She Is Going To Bring Is The Fact That She's Worked In Prior Practice For Many Years, She's Not From Washington, D.C., She's Not From A Cloistered Academic Background. Instead She's Practiced In The Real World And Lived In The Real World." (Fox News' "Fox News Live," 10/4/05)

Toner: "She Is A Very Serious, Extraordinarily Dedicated Attorney Throughout Her Career And Everyone Who Has Worked With Harriet Miers Believes That She Is An Absolute Straight Shooter, Very Independent Minded, Extremely Impartial In Her Judgments ... [And Has An] Excellent Temperament ..." (Fox News' "Fox News Live," 10/4/05)

President Of Dallas Bar Association And Former Colleague Of Harriet Miers Tim Mountz: "There Are Certain Things About Harriet That Have Not Changed At All Over That Period Of Time. She's Always Been A Tremendous Leader. She Has Always Been A Very Gifted Lawyer, And She Has Always Been Known For Her Integrity ..." (Fox News' "Fox News Live," 10/4/05)

Mountz: "There Is No Question That She Is A Trail Blazer, A Bit Of A Pioneer. ... I Agree With The Comments That Have Been Made That She Has A Tremendous Amount Of Respect For The Rule Of Law ..." (Fox News' "Fox News Live," 10/4/05)

Jerry Clements, Friend Of Harriet Miers And Lawyer At Locke Liddell & Sapp: "[I]'m Confident Based Upon What The President Has Said This Morning And What I Know About Harriet, That Her Philosophy And Her Conservative Views Are Consistent With President Bush's." (MSNBC's "Connected: Coast To Coast," 10/4/05)

Former Colleague And Former Texas Supreme Court Judge John Hill Jr.: "If What You Are Look For Is Someone Who Will Make A Decision Based Upon A Thorough Examination Of The Facts And An Application Of The Law To Those Facts, Without Fear Of Favor, Harriet Miers Is The Person That You Will Like." (Fox News' "Dayside," 10/4/05)

Hill Jr.: "I Think That She Is Clearly A Conservative." (Fox News' "Dayside," 10/4/05)

Former Editor At Large For The Dallas Morning News Rena Pederson: "One Of The Things That's Refreshing About Harriet's Success Is She Didn't Get There With Sharp Elbow, She Didn't Get There By Running Other People Over Or Knocking Them Out Of The Way She Got There Out Of Sheer Hard Work And Talent." (CNN's "Live From," 10/4/05)

Pederson: "[H]arriet Is One Of The Top Lawyers In The Country. She Was Rated One Of The Top 100 Lawyers In The Country ... She's One Of The Superstars In The Legal Profession. In Legal Circles, If You Say Harriet, They Know Who It Is." (CNN's "Live From," 10/4/05)

WABC Radio's Mark Simone: "I Think One Thing People Have To Realize, The Fact That She Was Never A Judge, The Fact That She's Not A Constitutional Scholar, Those Are Her Qualifications Here, That's Why She Was Chosen. And You Know, People Point Out That Many Of Our Best Justices Were Never Judges Before. And It's A Lot Of Them, It's 40% Of Our Justices Were Never Judges Before." (MSNBC's "News Live," 10/4/05)

ATTORNEY GENERAL ALBERTO R. GONZALES ANNOUNCES APPOINTMENT OF COURTNEY SIMMONS ELWOOD AS DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Attorney General Alberto R. Gonzales today announced the appointment of Courtney Simmons Elwood to serve as Deputy Chief of Staff at the Department of Justice. Elwood succeeds Kyle Sampson, who now serves as the Department's Chief of Staff.

Elwood has served as Counselor to the Attorney General since February 2005. Prior to joining the Department, she served as Deputy Counsel to the Vice President from 2003 to 2005, and as Associate Counsel to the President from 2001 to 2002. She practiced law at the Washington, D.C., firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans from 1996 to 2001, after clerking for Chief Justice William Rehnquist of the U.S. Supreme Court and Judge J. Michael Luttig of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. Elwood earned her law degree from the Yale Law School, where she served on the editorial board of the Yale Law Journal. She earned her undergraduate degree, summa cum laude, from Washington and Lee University.

ation at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, in order to determine the status of the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay, including whether any such detainee is a lawful enemy combatant or an unlawful enemy combatant.

(b) PROCEDURES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the procedures specified in this subsection are the procedures that were in effect in the Department of Defense for the conduct of the Combatant Status Review Tribunal and the Administrative Review Board on July 1, 2005.

(2) EXCEPTION.—The exceptions provided in this paragraph for the procedures specified in paragraph (1) are as follows:

(A) To the extent practicable, the Combatant Status Review Tribunal shall determine, by a preponderance of the evidence, whether statements derived from persons held in foreign custody were obtained without undue coercion.

(B) The Designated Civilian Official shall be an officer of the United States Government whose appointment to office was made by the President, by and with the advise and consent of the Senate.

DOJ_NMG_ 0148494

(3) MODIFICATION OF PROCEDURES.—The President may modify the procedures and requirements set forth under paragraphs (1) and (2). Any modification of such procedures or requirements may not go into effect until 30 days after the date on which the President notifies the congressional defense committees of the modification.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term "lawful enemy combatant" means person engaging in war or other armed conflict against the United States or its allies on behalf of a state party to the Geneva Convention Relative to the Treatment of Prisoners of War, dated August 12, 1949, who meets the criteria of a prisoner of war under Article 4 of that Convention.

(2) The term "unlawful enemy combatant", with respect to noncitizens of the United States, means a person (other than a person described in paragraph (1)) engaging in war, other armed conflict, or hostile acts against the United States or its allies, [redacted] regardless of location.

Thanks, Dana. FYI re: Barry from the morning's clips. Seems like Mr Barry rather 'actively' disregarded repeated IRS urgings to file returns...

IRS Had Warned Marion Barry About Taxes Since 2002. The Washington Post (10/6, B1, Leonnig, Woodlee) reports, "The Internal Revenue Service launched a criminal investigation into Marion Barry's tax history after urging him for at least three years to file his tax returns, according to two officials familiar with the probe." The Post continues, "The IRS sent delinquency notices to Barry, a D.C. Council member and former mayor, as early as 2002 and eventually assigned fraud investigators to the case, the officials said. The agency was focused on Barry's failure to file federal income tax returns since 1998 and decided early this year to refer the matter to the U.S. attorney's office, the officials said." The Post adds, "During the past few weeks, prosecutors have been presenting information about Barry's income, bank accounts and tax history to a grand jury empaneled in U.S. District Court, according to another source who has been briefed on the case. This source, like the two officials, spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitive stage of the probe. ... The U.S. attorney's office and Barry have been in plea negotiations, according to the two officials. The discussions call for Barry agreeing to plead guilty to the misdemeanor charge of failure to file his returns, the sources have said, and on prosecutors agreeing to recommend that Barry serve no jail time. ... Any deal between Barry and prosecutors would have to be approved by the Justice Department before it was signed, because it involves a criminal prosecution of a tax matter. If the parties all agreed, the plea agreement would go before a federal judge for final approval. Barry, 69, could be in court within the next several days, according to the sources."

Hello Robert -
I don't mean to bother you, but do you know whether you'll be able to attend the Federal Government Pro Bono Recognition Reception hosted by the federal judges on Oct. 20? The judges' committee has asked me to follow up with invitees because the response rate has been low. I know you said you were unsure whether you'd be able to go and, if your schedule doesn't permit you to attend this time, I understand. If that is the case, could you help me to find someone from DOJ leadership who could attend in your place? I think it would be awkward if no senior official from DOJ were to attend since we set the standard for pro bono efforts in the federal government. Perhaps an AAG?

I do hope you can attend. Thank you for your help!

Any objection to submitting the following draft Justice Department comments (submitted by OLP, OLC, and CIV) on the above to OMB? FYI, I have attached the underlying bill text. OMB had requested our comments by close of business today.

While we support the goal of enhancing the protection of emergency volunteers from liability, we have serious concerns about H.R. 3736.

I. Constitutional Concerns

We doubt that this legislation falls within the enumerated powers of Congress. See U.S. Const. art 1, sec. 8; United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 552 (1995) ("The powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite.") (quoting The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). For example, nothing in this legislation suggests a nexus between interstate commerce and the need to immunize volunteers from State tort law liability. See U.S. Const. art 1, sec. 8 (conferring upon Congress the power "to regulate commerce among the several states"). And the Framers of the Constitution considered and rejected a proposal by James Madison that would have given Congress a freestanding power to annul State laws. Therefore, we recommend either that the immunity from suit extend only to liability that might arise under Federal law or that the preemption of State law apply only to liability for acts that occur in interstate commerce.

II. Other Concerns

With exceptions, H.R. 3736 would exempt from liability persons or entities who, "in response to harm caused by Hurricane Katrina of 2005," render aid "to any individual." We believe that the bill is both too narrow and too broad.

First, the bill applies only to Hurricane Katrina, which means that when the next significant disaster occurs, there will be no applicable law that will encourage volunteers to help. We strongly favor broader, more generally applicable liability reform for volunteers (and governmental donors of goods) in the context of disasters, such as those found in title I of S. 1747.

Second, one could imagine that someone inspired by the needs that Katrina caused and the rescue efforts that followed would decide generally to become a volunteer. In the course of that volunteer work, e.g., volunteering to help people in a nursing home - people who are there for reasons unrelated to Katrina - the individual injured someone. The volunteer could argue that he rendered aid "in response to harm caused by Hurricane Katrina."

Third and more important, subsection 2(a) would make immunity turn on the volunteer's "good faith." "Good faith" is a subjective mental state and thus almost never susceptible to determination at the pleading stage. In the past, the "qualified immunity" applicable to government officials in the constitutional tort context turned on their good faith. This worked badly because plaintiffs simply alleged bad faith, survived a motion to dismiss, and proceeded to the discovery phase. The Supreme Court eventually clarified that qualified immunity is objective rather than subjective, and defendants enjoy much greater practical protection from discovery as a result. To reintroduce subjective good faith or bad faith as the touchstone for immunity would be most undesirable.

Fourth, the subparagraph 2(a)(1) would provide no protection if the volunteer's conduct was "willful, wanton, reckless or criminal." This formulation may result in less protection for volunteers than the drafters intended. We assume that the drafters intended to preserve liability where the volunteer acted with a sufficiently bad mental state. However, "willful" conduct might be read to refer merely to conduct that is intentional rather than accidental; it denotes no bad mental state. Second, some criminal conduct, such as violation of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, requires no mens rea. Strict liability crimes such as this should not serve to exclude an individual from the bill's protection against liability. To clarify the scope of the protection conferred, we suggest changing "willful, wanton, reckless or criminal conduct" to "willful, knowing, or reckless misconduct."

Fifth, the bill would create an exception to the avoidance of liability if the aid "was not caused by willful, wanton, reckless, or criminal conduct of that person or entity."

Sixth, the bill would provide no protection for the business partner or employer of a volunteer.

Seventh, the bill would provide protection where a person "without a preexisting duty or expectation of compensation" provided aid. Numerous doctors will have a preexisting duty to render medical assistance to those who need it. Since the bill specifically aims to provide liability protection for "aid (including medical treatment and rescue assistance)", there is no reason to require that the volunteer not have a preexisting duty. However, the bill's exclusion from protection of those who expect compensation for their services should be retained.

Eighth, the obvious intent of the bill is that it prevent liability for suits arising out of Katrina victim assistance after August 2005. However, the bill should provide immunity from suit as well as from liability. The bill is silent as to applicability. Therefore, the presumption is that the legislation applies prospectively only. Instead, the legislation should clarify that it would apply to all suits brought for underlying conduct within its scope that occurred on or after August 29, 2005.

Finally, the wording of subsection 2(a) is uses the term "qualified immunity" to describe the liability protection that it confers upon volunteers. However, "qualified immunity" is a term of art that has a very different meaning than what is intended here, so the use of that phrase risks confusion. We recommend changing the heading of section 2(a) from "qualified immunity from suit" to "liability protection" or the like.

The Honorable Robert D. McCallum
Associate Attorney General
Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20530

Dear Mr. McCallum:

As Co-Chair of the DC Circuit Judicial Conference Standing Committee on Pro Bono Legal Services, and on behalf of Chief Judges Douglas Ginsburg and Thomas F. Hogan, I am writing to invite you to attend the Federal Government Pro Bono Recognition Reception with judges of the DC Circuit courts on October 20, 2005, at the E. Barrett Prettyman United States Courthouse at 333 Constitution Avenue, N.W., beginning at 5:30 pm.

The DC Circuit Judicial Conference has long encouraged pro bono service by lawyers admitted to its courts. In 1998, the DC Circuit Judicial Conference recommended that lawyers perform 50 hours of pro bono legal service annually to fulfill their professional ethical obligations under Rule 6.1 of the District of Columbia Rules of Professional Responsibility. This 50 hour annual goal is mirrored in the A.B.A.'s rule 6.1, in a 1997 Resolution of the District of Columbia Courts, and in the ethical rules of a number of jurisdictions, including Maryland. Several federal agencies, including the Department of Justice, have set the same goals for their attorneys.

Government lawyers face special challenges when they seek to perform pro bono legal work. Agencies such as yours, which have a representative on the Interagency Pro Bono Working Group or which have written pro bono policies and programs in place, have taken important steps to help government lawyers provide much-needed pro bono legal services. I hope you will be able to join Chief Judges Ginsburg and Hogan, and other judges of the DC Courts on October 20 at this special event to recognize the importance of the pro bono legal work done by federal government lawyers.

Please RSVP no later than October 3, 2005, to Committee Member [redacted] at [redacted] or [redacted]@crowell.com. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me at [redacted], or [redacted]@milchev.com, or [redacted]

Subject: S1761, Gulf Coast Recovery (Control -9862)

Any ODAG objection to submitting the following draft Justice Department comments (submitted by OLP, CIV, ENRD, and CRM) on the above to OMB? FYI, I have attached the underlying bill text. OMB had requested our comments by close of business today.

The Department of Justice has the following comments on S. 1761, the "Gulf Coast Recovery Act." For the reasons set forth below, we oppose the bill.

S. 1761 would provide substantial liability protection for contractors engaged in disaster relief work arising from Hurricane Katrina and future disasters requiring Federal assistance of $15 billion or more. The bill's definition of "government contract" includes contracts between persons and entities with Federal, State, or local governments, including all subcontractors under such contracts. See subsection 3(2). The covered work under such contracts would include "construction, demolition, repair, clean-up, alteration, remediation, and related engineering." Id.

Section 4. Specifically, subsection 4(a) says, "a person or entity awarded a government contract to perform rescue, recovery, repair, or reconstruction work in any portion of a disaster zone shall not, as a perform rescue, recovery, repair, or reconstruction work in any portion of a disaster zone shall not, as a result of the performance of that work, be subject to liability that any private party may seek to impose under any provision of Federal law ... that (1) is administered by [EPA, DOT, Corps]; and (2) otherwise permits the filing of a lawsuit by a private individual." Section 4 would provide such contractors complete protection from liability arising under most Federal statutes and regulations. This would appear to bar any tort liability that might arise from, e.g., violations of EPA pollution rules, OSHA construction site regulations, or HUD or FEMA regulations pertaining to which mobile homes are safe for hurricane zones. We are not aware of a need or a justification for such expansive liability protection for contractors (which generally are able to purchase insurance against liability).

Section 5. Section 5 would provide contractors substantial liability protections for claims other that liability arising under most Federal statutes and regulations. It would create a Federal cause of action, with exclusive Federal-court jurisdiction, for claims relating to the performance of a government contract (whether oral or written) in a disaster zone for the listed activities. Recalling that "government contract" is defined to include contracts between private citizens and entities and State and local governments, the creation of a Federal cause of action here would appear to be in significant tension with principles of federalism. That covered contracts could be oral further underscores the extraordinary breadth of this section. Subparagraph 5(a)(3) apparently would limit the newly-minted Federal claims to claims against the person or entity awarded the government contract, even though the injury may well have been caused by a different person or entity.

Subsection 5(d) of the bill would establish a government contractor defense. A government contractor defense as established under the Supreme Court's Boyle decision normally shields a government contractor from tort liability when it complies with the specifications that the Government has established for awarding the contract. In subparagraph 5(d)(1) the bill purports to create a rebuttable presumption of a government contractor defense where the Chief of Engineers certifies that the contract is necessary for the recovery of a disaster zone. However, subparagraph 5(d)(3) provides that the presumption can be overcome "only by evidence showing that a person or entity awarded a government contract acted fraudulently or with willful misconduct in submitting information to the Chief of Engineers in conjunction with the consideration by the Chief of Engineers of the government contract."

Subsection 5(d) would make the government contractor defense presumptively applicable to claims relating to the performance of contracts that the Chief of Engineers certifies as being "necessary for the recovery of a disaster zone." However, under subparagraph 5(d)(4), all that would be required to obligate the Chief of Engineers to so certify would be that a majority of the work under the contract involved the activities listed in 5(a)(1)(A-E). It appears that the bill contemplates that a contractor would approach the Chief of Engineers after being sued and then would ask the Chief of Engineers to make this certification in the context of the lawsuit. We question whether it is wise policy to make a Federal official such an overt gatekeeper in litigation, tasked with deciding whether particular defendants are entitled to the presumptive government contractor defense (over the objection of the plaintiff, who is likely to make his or her own view known to the Chief of Engineers).

In addition, section 5(d)(2)(B) makes the government contractor defense applicable to certain subcontracts under contracts certified by the Chief of Engineers. The Chief of Engineers would not appear to have any occasion to consider such subcontracts in any respect, either at the time of award or even in response to a certification request during litigation. And there appears to be no way to rebut the presumptive applicability of the defense to such subcontracts, since the subcontractor does not need to seek a certification from the Chief of Engineers and thus would have no occasion to defraud the Chief of Engineers. We do not understand why it is appropriate to confer this Federal defense on subcontractors without any Federal review whatever at any stage.

Moreover, the scope of protection is far broader than the standard operation of the government contractor defense. It would allow recovery even when the contractor recklessly submitted inaccurate information to obtain the contract. Moreover, it would allow the government contractor defense to apply even where the contractor did not comply with the contractual terms - even if it intentionally failed to comply with those terms. Under the bill, the only relevant conduct that could prevent applicability of the government contractor defense would be in connection with being awarded the contract. Performance of the contract in accordance with the standards the Government establishes, the normal basis for providing the government contractor defense, would not be required.

It is true that section 5(e)(3) provides that the government contractor defense provision does not "affect[] the liability of any person or entity for recklessness or willful misconduct." Under this provision, injured persons could bring suits (albeit in Federal court and governed by subsection 5(a)) against contractors alleging recklessness or willful misconduct, so this carve-out limits to some extent the dramatic scope of the protections conferred by this bill. Still, however, section 5 would bar claims for shoddy (but not "reckless") construction or design of replacement homes, roads, or power lines. The bill apparently would bar suits arising from garden-variety negligence such as auto accidents if the accident occurs while the driver is working under a government contract. Such expansive protection from liability removes a powerful incentive for contractors to exercise due care. We believe that this bill is extremely generous to contractors at the expense of injured persons, without any demonstrated need or justification. To avoid unnecessary injury, and to adhere to the rationale for a government contractor defense, the bill should allow the rebuttable presumption to be overcome by evidence that the contractor at least recklessly failed to comply with the contract specifications.

We note that because "government contract" would include contracts with State and local governments (as well as subcontracts under such contracts), it would appear that most covered contractors would not submit any information to the Chief of Engineers in connection with the initial award of the contract or in connection with its performance. Rather, this provision seems to contemplate that the government contractor defense would apply unless the contractor defrauded the Chief of Engineers into issuing a (likely post-hoc) certification that the contract was "necessary for the recovery of a disaster zone" under subparagraph 5(d)(4), since that would be the only situation in which the Chief of Engineers would engage in any "consideration . . . of the government contract."

And because the bill as currently written would allow a contractor to avoid liability even if it willfully failed to comply with the contract specifications, the bill is confusing by stating in subparagraph 5(e)(3) that "[n]othing in subsection (b), (c), or (d) affects the liability of any person or entity for recklessness or willful misconduct." The plain language of the bill cannot be reconciled with this statement. At the very least, this contradiction creates an unresolvable ambiguity.

Additionally, the provision seems designed to preclude private suits under environmental regulatory statutes (Clean Air Act, Clean Water Act, etc) and CERCLA (cost recovery). We have some concern that, in limited circumstances, the language might support an argument that the Federal government itself might be precluded from bringing an appropriate action. This is particularly troubling given the long reach of the bill - it would reach all the way into the "reconstruction" phase, which could be years later (e.g., construction of a new building).

One way to address this concern, would be to amend the language of the provision to state that the contractor "shall not ... be subject to SUIT BY any private party [ ] under any provision of Federal law ...." This would focus on the bill's intent - avoiding private suits - without affecting federal enforcement or cost recovery.

Finally, we recommend adding legislative history clarifying that the bill is not intended to shield any contractor from criminal liability for fraud or other offenses.

Any objection to submitting the following draft Justice Department comments (submitted by OLP, OLC, and CIV) on the above to OMB? FYI, I have attached the underlying bill text. OMB had requested our comments by close of business today.

While we support the goal of enhancing the protection of emergency volunteers from liability, we have serious concerns about H.R. 3736.

I. Constitutional Concerns

We doubt that this legislation falls within the enumerated powers of Congress. See U.S. Const. art 1, sec. 8; United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 552 (1995) ("The powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite.") (quoting The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). For example, nothing in this legislation suggests a nexus between interstate commerce and the need to immunize volunteers from State tort law liability. See U.S. Const. art 1, sec. 8 (conferring upon Congress the power "to regulate commerce among the several states"). And the Framers of the Constitution considered and rejected a proposal by James Madison that would have given Congress a freestanding power to annul State laws. Therefore, we recommend either that the immunity from suit extend only to liability that might arise under Federal law or that the preemption of State law apply only to liability for acts that occur in interstate commerce.

II. Other Concerns

With exceptions, H.R. 3736 would exempt from liability persons or entities who, "in response to harm caused by Hurricane Katrina of 2005," render aid "to any individual." We believe that the bill is both too narrow and too broad.

First, the bill applies only to Hurricane Katrina, which means that when the next significant disaster occurs, there will be no applicable law that will encourage volunteers to help. We strongly favor broader, more generally applicable liability reform for volunteers (and governmental donors of goods) in the context of disasters, such as those found in title I of S. 1747.

Second, one could imagine that someone inspired by the needs that Katrina caused and the rescue efforts that followed would decide generally to become a volunteer. In the course of that volunteer work, e.g., volunteering to help people in a nursing home - people who are there for reasons unrelated to Katrina - the individual injured someone. The volunteer could argue that he rendered aid "in response to harm caused by Hurricane Katrina."

Third and more important, subsection 2(a) would make immunity turn on the volunteer's "good faith." "Good faith" is a subjective mental state and thus almost never susceptible to determination at the pleading stage. In the past, the "qualified immunity" applicable to government officials in the constitutional tort context turned on their good faith. This worked badly because plaintiffs simply alleged bad faith, survived a motion to dismiss, and proceeded to the discovery phase. The Supreme Court eventually clarified that qualified immunity is objective rather than subjective, and defendants enjoy much greater practical protection from discovery as a result. To reintroduce subjective good faith or bad faith as the touchstone for immunity would be most undesirable.

Fourth, the subparagraph 2(a)(1) would provide no protection if the volunteer's conduct was "willful, wanton, reckless or criminal." This formulation may result in less protection for volunteers than the drafters intended. We assume that the drafters intended to preserve liability where the volunteer acted with a sufficiently bad mental state. However, "willful" conduct might be read to refer merely to conduct that is intentional rather than accidental; it denotes no bad mental state. Second, some criminal conduct, such as violation of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, requires no mens rea. Strict liability crimes such as this should not serve to exclude an individual from the bill's protection against liability. To clarify the scope of the protection conferred, we suggest changing "willful, wanton, reckless or criminal conduct" to "willful, knowing, or reckless misconduct."

Fifth, the bill would create an exception to the avoidance of liability if the aid "was not caused by willful, wanton, reckless, or criminal conduct of that person or entity."

Sixth, the bill would provide no protection for the business partner or employer of a volunteer.

Seventh, the bill would provide protection where a person "without a preexisting duty or expectation of compensation" provided aid. Numerous doctors will have a preexisting duty to render medical assistance to those who need it. Since the bill specifically aims to provide liability protection for "aid (including medical treatment and rescue assistance)", there is no reason to require that the volunteer not have a preexisting duty. However, the bill's exclusion from protection of those who expect compensation for their services should be retained.

Eighth, the obvious intent of the bill is that it prevent liability for suits arising out of Katrina victim assistance after August 2005. However, the bill should provide immunity from suit as well as from liability. The bill is silent as to applicability. Therefore, the presumption is that the legislation applies prospectively only. Instead, the legislation should clarify that it would apply to all suits brought for underlying conduct within its scope that occurred on or after August 29, 2005.

Finally, the wording of subsection 2(a) is uses the term "qualified immunity" to describe the liability protection that it confers upon volunteers. However, "qualified immunity" is a term of art that has a very different meaning than what is intended here, so the use of that phrase risks confusion. We recommend changing the heading of section 2(a) from "qualified immunity from suit" to "liability protection" or the like.

Thanks, Neil. I'll go ahead and RSVP for you. Is your full title Principal Deputy Associate Attorney General? And I'll let them know that we hope to have an AAG attend as well.

I'm thrilled to hear that you are interested in pro bono work. You can check out our website on DOJ Net for lots of information. Go to http:/10.173.2.12/jmd/ps/volunteer/ or go to DOJ Net and click on "Volunteering" in the lefthand column. You'll see a list of Pro Bono Topics on the left. There's a list of current pro bono opportunities and a link to descriptions of various legal service providers in our area that are generally appropriate for government attorneys. Also, DOJ brings a group of volunteer attorneys to the DC Bar Pro Bono Program's Advice & Referral Clinic four times each year. Robert has participated in it. It is a free legal clinic open on the second Saturday morning of each month. We will be going again on December 10. The Antitrust Division has its own separate commitment to staff the clinic and will be going on November 12. I've attached a brief description of the clinic for you. If you are interested in that opportunity, let me know. If you are more interested in taking on representation, there are some opportunities listed in the current pro bono opportunities on the website, but I can tell you of others as well. Just let me know.

Let me know if you have more questions. And thank again!
Laura

Lee and Peter,

Because of a conflict, Robert has asked me to attend the federal govt pro bono recognition reception hosted by Chief Judges Ginsburg and Hogan on Oct 20, at 5:30, in the federal courthouse (judge's dining room). I was hoping that, to bolster DOJ's presence and confirm its commitment to this cause, you might attend as well. As you know, one of our own, John Cruden, is heading the DC Bar this year and has made govt lawyer pro bono a major part of his agenda. If you could please let me know whether you're able to attend, I will handle the rsvp.

Many thanks,

VIA FACSIMILE

The Honorable Robert D. McCallum
Associate Attorney General
Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20530

Dear Mr. McCallum:

As Co-Chair of the DC Circuit Judicial Conference Standing Committee on Pro Bono Legal Services, and on behalf of Chief Judges Douglas Ginsburg and Thomas F. Hogan, I am writing to invite you to attend the Federal Government Pro Bono Recognition Reception with judges of the DC Circuit courts on October 20, 2005, at the E. Barrett Prettyman United States Courthouse at 333 Constitution Avenue, N.W., beginning at 5:30 pm.

The DC Circuit Judicial Conference has long encouraged pro bono service by lawyers admitted to its courts. In 1998, the DC Circuit Judicial Conference recommended that lawyers perform 50 hours of pro bono legal service annually to fulfill their professional ethical obligations under Rule 6.1 of the District of Columbia Rules of Professional Responsibility. This 50 hour annual goal is mirrored in the A.B.A.'s rule 6.1, in a 1997 Resolution of the District of Columbia Courts, and in the ethical rules of a number of jurisdictions, including Maryland. Several federal agencies, including the Department of Justice, have set the same goals for their attorneys.

Government lawyers face special challenges when they seek to perform pro bono legal work. Agencies such as yours, which have a representative on the Interagency Pro Bono Working Group or which have written pro bono policies and programs in place, have taken important steps to help government lawyers provide much-needed pro bono legal services. I hope you will be able to join Chief Judges Ginsburg and Hogan, and other judges of the DC Courts on October 20 at this special event to recognize the importance of the pro bono legal work done by federal government lawyers.

Please RSVP no later than October 3, 2005, to Committee Member [redacted] or [redacted]@crowell.com. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me at [redacted], or [redacted]@milchev.com, or [redacted].

Sincerely,

[redacted]

The Department of Justice supports and has the following comments on S. 1747, the "Good Samaritan Liability Improvement and Volunteer Encouragement Act of 2005" or the "GIVE Act of 2005."

I. Constitutional Considerations

This bill aims to limit State-law tort liability for the acts of volunteers and "good Samaritans," and also seeks to impose Federal regulations on State-court procedures. The constitutionality of this legislation depends on whether it falls within the enumerated powers of Congress. See U.S. Const. art 1, sec. 8; United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 552 (1995) ("The powers delegated by the proposed Constitution to the federal government are few and defined. Those which are to remain in the State governments are numerous and indefinite.") (quoting The Federalist No. 45, pp. 292-293 (C. Rossiter ed. 1961). To minimize any risk of judicial invalidation, we recommend certain changes as detailed below.

A. Section 2's findings seek to demonstrate that the bill is a valid exercise of Congress' power under the Commerce Clause. We think that these findings could be improved to address the Supreme Court's concerns about the limits of the commerce power. See United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 614-616 (2000). The Court has emphasized that the Commerce Power may not be used to give Congress a general police power. See United States v. Morrison, 529 U.S. 598, 617 (2000); United States v. Lopez, 514 U.S. 549, 566 (1995). In areas of "traditional state regulation," such as the suppression of violent crime, the Court has held that effects on interstate commerce do not suffice to authorize congressional legislation. See Morrison, 529 U.S. at 617-618 ("We accordingly reject the argument that Congress may regulate noneconomic, violent criminal conduct based solely on that conduct's aggregate effect on interstate commerce. . . . We can think of no better example of the police power, which the Founders denied the National Government and reposed in the States, than the suppression of violent crime and vindication of its victims."). The Court has also made clear that Congress' power to regulate intrastate activities that "substantially affect interstate commerce derives from the Necessary and Proper clause rather than the Commerce clause alone. See, e.g., Gonzales v. Raich, 125 S. Ct. 2195, 2208-2209 (2005); Katzenbach v. McClung, 379 U.S. 294, 301-302 (1964); United States v. Wrightwood Dairy Co., 315 U.S. 110, 119 (1942).

The likelihood that federal courts would uphold this law would be increased if Congress were to make the following changes to the findings that would help to describe how the bill's limitations on tort liability are both "necessary" and "proper."

(a) Finding (2) would be strengthened by adding "and to transport goods in interstate commerce to effectuate the provision of their services" before "is deterred."

(b) Finding (3) could be rewritten: "Volunteer disaster relief work constitutes economic activity. Fear of tort liability deters potential volunteers from rendering economic assistance in interstate commerce, resulting either in diminished economic activity of the substitution of fewer and higher cost programs than would be obtainable if volunteers were participating."

(c) Finding (4) would be assisted by striking "provision of" and inserting "interstate travel of volunteers and the goods the volunteers would transport to provide".

(d) Findings (6) through (12) would benefit by adding "tortious" before "acts" and by adding at the end, "reducing the otherwise available quantity of interstate travel and goods that would be provided by volunteers."

(e) Findings (14) through (18) could be changed by adding at the end ",and the use of roads and other channels and instrumentalities of interstate commerce."

(f) A new finding (22) could be inserted: "Volunteers who provide disaster relief services and commit tortious acts do so against people and property that have traveled in interstate commerce. People in disaster areas will be less likely to use the channels and instrumentalities of commerce to flee disasters if they know that fear of liability for tortious acts performed against them or their property would reduce the provision of disaster relief services."

(g) A new finding (23) could be added: "Disaster relief services that are provided in intrastate commerce and tort liability surrounding such services in the aggregate substantially affect interstate economic activity."

(h) A new finding (24) could be added: "Therefore, the following provisions are necessary and proper in order to reduce burdens on the channels and instrumentalities of interstate commerce, to encourage the provision of goods and services in interstate commerce, and to encourage interstate travel by potential volunteers and victims that might otherwise be impaired by tort liability by addressing tort liability by volunteers who provide disaster relief services."

B. Section 2 also asserts that this bill is authorized by Congress's section 5 power. But the bill's findings state only that "liability reform for volunteers, [sic] will . . . uphold constitutionally protected due process rights." The bill says nothing about what those "constitutionally protected due process rights" might be. Although the Supreme Court has invalidated grossly excessive awards of punitive damages by invoking the doctrine of "substantive due process," see, e.g., BMW v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559 (2000), this legislation goes beyond the Court-recognized limits.

If this bill is to qualify as valid legislation under section 5, it must be justified as a "prophylactic" rule, which must be both "congruent" and "proportionate" between the constitutional injury to be prevented and the means adopted to that end. See City of Boerne v. Flores, 512 U.S. 507, 520 (1997); Nevada Dept. of Human Resources v. Hibbs, 538 U.S. 721 (2003). Yet section 2 does not contain adequate legislative findings explaining why limitations on State-law tort liability for the acts of "good Samaritans" are necessary to prevent actual violations of the Constitution, such as the "grossly excessive" punitive damages in BMW, nor is any such connection apparent. We therefore recommend the deletion of the "findings" in section 2(21)(D)(i) and (ii).

C. Sections 107, 202(3), 203(c), seek to regulate State court procedures. The Supreme Court's decision in Jinks v. Richland County, 538 U.S. 456 (2003), strongly suggests, although it does not hold, that the regulation of certain State court procedures is outside the scope of Congress' authority. Jinks considered a constitutional challenge to 28 U.S.C. § 1367(d), a Federal statute that tolled the statute of limitations for certain actions filed in State courts. The Court rejected the respondents' claim that § 1367(d) regulated the "procedures" in State court, and held that "the tolling of limitation period falls on the 'substantive' side of the line." 538 U.S. at 465. More importantly, the Court said that "we do not think that state-law limitations periods fall into the category of 'procedure' immune from congressional regulation," id. at 464-465 (Emphasis added), indicating the Court indeed views the "procedures" used in State court as "immune from congressional regulation." The Jinks opinion also cited with approval a 1989 memorandum from the Office of Legal Counsel that cast doubt on the authority of Congress to "prescribe directly the state court procedures to be followed in products liability cases." 538 U.S. at 464 (quoting Congresional Authority to Require State Courts to Use Certain Procedures in Products Liability Cases, 13 Op. Off. Legal Counsel 372, 373-374 (1989)). For these reasons, we recommend the deletion of section 107, 202(3) , and 203(c). (The opt-out provided in sections 109 and 203(e) does not, in our view, resolve these federalism concerns).

II. Other considerations

A. Title I

We strongly support title I of the bill ("Disaster Relief Volunteer Protection"). This title would provide liability protections to disaster relief volunteers and to governmental and inter-governmental entities that donate disaster relief goods.

Section 101 includes definitions of key terms like "disaster relief volunteer," "disaster relief goods," "disaster relief services," and "declared disaster." The definition of "disaster relief volunteer" makes clear that, if the volunteer is providing services for which a State requires a license (e.g., medical services), the volunteer need only be certified in one State and need not be certified in the particular State in which he or she provides disaster relief services. This is intended to ensure that doctors and other licensed professionals from around the Nation may volunteer to provide disaster relief services where those services are needed.

Section 102 states the general rule that a disaster relief volunteer is not liable for harm caused by acts or omissions within the scope of the volunteer's providing or facilitating the provision of disaster relief services in connection with a declared disaster, except for harm caused by willful, knowing, or reckless misconduct. It also would create one exception to that general rule, preserving ordinary liability rules for car accidents (consistent with the Volunteer Protection Act of 1997, 42 U.S.C.§ 14501 et seq.). This general liability protection rule is intended to encourage people to provide volunteer services in the event of a declared disaster, while still taking appropriate account of the public's interest in deterring misconduct by such volunteers.

Section 103 would bar vicarious liability of employers and business partners of disaster relief volunteers for such volunteers' disaster relief services. This is intended to encourage employers to agree to allow their employees to take leave to provide volunteer services in the event of a declared disaster.

Section 104 would bar vicarious liability of hosts or enabling persons, entities, or organizations that work with, accept services from, or open their facilities to, disaster relief volunteers for such volunteers' disaster relief services. This is intended to encourage such enabling entities and organizations to facilitate volunteers' provision of disaster relief services.

Section 105 states the general rule that a governmental or inter-governmental entity that donates disaster relief goods to a Federal agency in connection with a declared disaster is not liable for harm caused by such goods, except for harm caused by willful, knowing, or reckless misconduct. This is intended to encourage State and local governments, inter-governmental entities, and (where appropriate) foreign governments to donate goods that may be needed in connection with a declared disaster.

Section 106 would establish a clear-and-convincing standard of proof for punitive damages and provide for several, proportionate (as opposed to joint-and-several) liability for non-economic damages.

Section 107 would require a plaintiff to present evidence along with his or her complaint to show that the volunteer or governmental or inter-governmental entity defendant engaged in the requisite willful, knowing, or reckless misconduct. It would require a court to assess the sufficiency of the plaintiff's evidence of misconduct before the case could proceed to the discovery phase. Ordinary rules of notice pleading often permit meritless suits to advance beyond the pleading stage and into discovery, and where a defendant must incur the expense and burden of discovery, even meritless suits often have settlement value. While we are not certain that this provision will have a significant effect in practice, it aims to ensure adherence to the liability limitations created by this title by limiting their circumvention through the pleading of unsupported allegations. To the extent that this provision applies to state courts, it raises certain constitutional concerns discussed above.

Section 108 would provide for a supplemental declaration by the President, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, or the Secretary of Homeland Security in the event of a declared disaster. In such a supplemental declaration, the declarant may take into account the particular facts and circumstances at hand in determining the appropriate temporal and geographic scope of the declared disaster for purposes of this title as well as in declaring other conditions that may be in the public interest.

Section 109 would allow States to opt out of this title under certain circumstances and for certain purposes.

Section 110 would clarify that the protections of title I are in addition to, and not in lieu of, any protections that a volunteer or governmental or inter-governmental entity might possess under the Volunteer Protection Act or any other provision of law.

B. Title II

While we support Title I of this bill, which is narrowly tailored to encourage much-needed services and donations in the special context of declared disasters, we note that Title II is more broadly applicable. Title II would apply to volunteers in general, not simply in the uniquely important context of declared disasters in which recent events have demonstrated that encouraging voluntarism is especially important to the public interest. Accordingly, while we are not opposed to Title II, we believe it would be unfortunate if congressional opposition to the broader Title II ended up preventing enactment of the narrower Title I.

Title II would amend the Volunteer Protection Act of 1997 (42 U.S.C. § 14501 et seq.) in several respects. Section 202 would grant broad liability protection to nonprofit organizations for the torts of their volunteers as defined in § 14503(a), absent willful disregard or reckless indifference by the organization. While we support protecting nonprofit organizations that accept disaster relief services from volunteers in connection with a declared disaster, see section 104, supra, it is less clear that there is a pressing need for section 202's extensive protection in less extraordinary contexts.

Other provisions would grant general liability protection to those who provide facilities to nonprofit organizations (subparagraph 203(a)(2)) or provide them with motor vehicles or aircraft (subparagraph 203(a)(3)). The protection from liability for the provision of facilities, motor vehicles, or aircraft would apply even where the provider was paid by the organization for that use. See §§ 203(a)(2)(B)(ii) and (a)(3)(B)(ii). We are not aware of a need to lower the standard of care for the maintenance of buildings, property, or means of transportation simply because they are to be used by a nonprofit organization, particularly where the entity protected by these provisions was paid by the nonprofit organization.

Amends: H.R.2863
Sponsor: Sen Graham, Lindsey [SC] (submitted 10/4/2005) (proposed 10/5/2005)

AMENDMENT PURPOSE:
To require the President to submit the procedures for the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and Administrative Review Boards to determine the status of detainees held at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

Amendment SA 2004 as modified agreed to in Senate by Unanimous Consent

SEC. __.
(a) Submission of Procedures for Combatant Status Review Tribunals and Administrative Review Boards To Determine Status of Detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.--Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act the President shall submit to the congressional defense committees and committees on Judiciary in the House and Senate the procedures for the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and noticed Administrative Review Boards, in operation at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for determining the status of the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay, including whether any such detainee is a lawful enemy combatant or an unlawful enemy combatant.

(b) Procedures.--The procedures submitted to Congress pursuant to subsection (a) shall ensure that--

(1) in making a determination of status under such procedures, the Combatant Status Review Tribunal and Annual Review Boards may not consider statements derived from persons that, as determined by the Tribunals or Boards, by the preponderance of the evidence, were obtained with undue coercion.

(2) the Designated Civilian Official shall be an officer of the United States Government whose appointment to office was made by the President, by and with the advise and consent of the Senate.

(c) MODIFICATION OF PROCEDURES.--The President shall submit to Congress any modification to the procedures submitted under subsection (a) no less than 30 days before the date on which such modifications go into effect.

Wan,

Because of a conflict, Robert has asked me to attend the federal govt pro bono recognition reception hosted by Chief Judges Ginsburg and Hogan on Oct 20, at 5:30, in the federal courthouse (judge's dining room). I was hoping that, to bolster DOJ's presence and confirm its commitment to this cause, you might attend as well. As you know, one of our own, John Cruden, is heading the DC Bar this year and has made govt lawyer pro bono a major part of his agenda. If you could please let me know whether you're able to attend, I will handle the rsvp.

Many thanks,

Thanks, Neil. I'll go ahead and RSVP for you. Is your full title Principal Deputy Associate Attorney General? And I'll let them know that we hope to have an AAG attend as well.

I'm thrilled to hear that you are interested in pro bono work. You can check out our website on DOJ Net for lots of information. Go to http:/10.173.2.12/jmd/ps/volunteer/ or go to DOJ Net and click on "Volunteering" in the lefthand column. You'll see a list of Pro Bono Topics on the left. There's a list of current pro bono opportunities and a link to descriptions of various legal service providers in our area that are generally appropriate for government attorneys. Also, DOJ brings a group of volunteer attorneys to the DC Bar Pro Bono Program's Advice & Referral Clinic four times each year. Robert has participated in it. It is a free legal clinic open on the second Saturday morning of each month. We will be going again on December 10. The Antitrust Division has its own separate commitment to staff the clinic and will be going on November 12. I've attached a brief description of the clinic for you. If you are interested in that opportunity, let me know. If you are more interested in taking on representation, there are some opportunities listed in the current pro bono opportunities on the website, but I can tell you of others as well. Just let me know.

Let me know if you have more questions. And thank again!
Laura

FYI. I will let you know when I hear back from Lee and Peter. Shall I rsvp that I'm attending in Robert's stead or have you already done so? Also, given your involvement in pro bono here at the department, could you point me to resources/ideas for doing a little pro bono work myself? Many thanks, NMG

Lee and Peter,

Because of a conflict, Robert has asked me to attend the federal govt pro bono recognition reception hosted by Chief Judges Ginsburg and Hogan on Oct 20, at 5:30, in the federal courthouse (judge's dining room). I was hoping that, to bolster DOJ's presence and confirm its commitment to this cause, you might attend as well. As you know, one of our own, John Cruden, is heading the DC Bar this year and has made govt lawyer pro bono a major part of his agenda. If you could please let me know whether you're able to attend, I will handle the rsvp.

Many thanks,

NMG

One real possibility is that OAG could move quickly to appoint someone in the Dept who could act as DAG pending nomination. If so, that would counsel in us moving quickly now. But I think that's a good idea in all events. I've prompted Kyle on this issue a few times and sense that, with everything happening, he hasn't had the chance to focus on the issue; he seems to have let this slide. I suggest that you ask the AG for the chance to brief him one-on-one about the issue as soon as possible.

All,

To aid in wrapping up the a/c waiver memo discussion, Robert has asked me to forward to you three drafts: (1) the most recently circulated draft of Sept. 22; (2) a draft we understand Karin Immergut has prepared; (3) a draft Robert has prepared incorporating certain language from Karin's draft that represents our current thinking on the best approach.

By way of update, Karin has asked Robert for an extra day for comments, so we will finish this process on Wednesday.

If, in the interim, you have any final thoughts or comments, please let Robert or me know.

Subject: components mtg summary

4 items of note; bare bones summary here; if you want more detail, just let me know -

1. ATR. Will do press release on Thurs announcing settlement in DRAM investigation. $300M.

2. CRT. New Orleans incident involved not just 3 local police, but also 2 FBI agents, though the FBI agents apparently were not involved in pre-arrest alleged beating, only after that. CRT is working with the FBI to investigate the incident. It is also monitoring the state investigation into the conduct of the local police officials (and may of course bring charges itself after the state investigation closes).

3. EOUSA anticipates a NYT FOIA request aimed at determining how many credit counselors have been qualified. Cliff anticipates that certain folks will seek to use the information to argue for a nationwide waiver of the credit counseling requirement. He believes, however, that the number and quality of credit counselors nationally is good and getting better.

4. CRS. Reports that it is having trouble working with FEMA in LA, but working relationship is great in MS. Sharee says there's no problem yet meriting our involvement, but she will keep us informed.

Subject: STATEMENT OF THE UNITED STATES CONCERNING APPROVAL OF THE SETTLEMENT OF ROSNER V. UNITED STATES LAWSUIT

Statement of the United States Concerning Approval of the Settlement of Rosner v. United States Lawsuit

The Jewish communities in lands controlled by the wartime Hungarian government suffered unspeakable crimes during the Holocaust at the hands of the Nazis and their Hungarian collaborators. The United States expresses its sympathy and solidarity with these victims and hopes that the settlement approved by the District Court will provide meaningful assistance to those survivors.

More than 175,000 Americans lost their lives combating the scourge of Nazism, and countless more were injured. Under very difficult conditions and at enormous personal sacrifice, American and allied troops defeated a determined enemy, liberated concentration camps, and fed, clothed and provided medical care to millions of starving and sick refugees, Jewish and non-Jewish alike. After the war, the United States Government and its citizens initiated unprecedented programs to aid, repatriate, and resettle Jewish and non-Jewish refugees.

In 1945, in the midst of the chaos of the immediate postwar period, U.S. forces captured what is now known as the Hungarian Gold Train from the Hungarian pro-Nazis. That train contained some of the personal property plundered from the Jewish communities of so-called "Greater Hungary," an area that included territories that had been seized from neighboring countries. Some non-Jewish property was on the train as well. The train, when captured by U.S. forces, was found to contain, among other things, boxes of jewelry, cutlery, thousands of wedding rings, and other personal property commingled without regard to the identity of their owners.

Many of the Jews from whom this property had been stolen were either killed or displaced in the war, and the United States Government at the time found that it had no practical way to identify the property or return it to the individuals from whom it had been stolen, as meaningful traces of individual ownership had been largely obliterated by the Hungarian pro-Nazis. The United States likewise concluded that it could not identify even the national origin of individual items, since the train contained property plundered from Jewish residents of territories that belonged to a number of different countries. Further, transferring the train's contents to the postwar Hungarian government would, in effect, have recognized as legitimate Axis Hungary's annexation of portions of neighboring countries. There was also good reason to doubt that the Hungarian government would return any property to the surviving Jews of Hungary (many of whom were, in any event, no longer in Hungary and would never return there). Indeed, shortly after World War II, the French returned to Hungary certain property that was associated with the Gold Train prior to its capture by the United States, but the post-war communist Hungarian government denied that the property was Jewish in origin and virtually none of the property was returned to its Jewish owners.

The U.S. Government, recognizing the tragic origin of the Gold Train property, sought to use it to help surviving victims. In 1948, after consulting with leading Jewish organizations, and with their approval, the United States transferred the property to the International Refugee Organization ("IRO"). The IRO sold the property at auction and the proceeds were applied for the benefit of victims. Ninety percent of the proceeds were passed to preeminent Jewish relief organizations - including the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee - to be used for the rehabilitation and resettlement of Jewish refugees. The remaining ten percent assisted non-Jewish refugees. None of the proceeds was kept by the United States.

The United States Government takes seriously any allegation that its conduct may have contributed in any way to the suffering or anguish of Hungarian Holocaust survivors, and the United States has thoroughly examined its conduct with respect to the Hungarian Gold Train property. It has also consulted with eminent scholars in the field. On the basis of its examination and consultation, the United States has concluded that, although the conduct of its personnel was appropriate in most respects, it was contrary to U.S. policy and the standards expected of its soldiers in two important areas.

First, some military personnel failed to return Gold Train property that had been requisitioned by the military during the initial post-war period. The requisitioned property included, among other things, typewriters, rugs, cutlery, and linens that were used by American military personnel in offices and official residences in post-war Europe. Although records survive reflecting the return of certain requisitioned Gold Train property to the U.S.-run warehouse from which it had been removed, the United States acknowledges that, in contravention of law and United States policy, some of its military personnel did not return that property upon their departure from Europe, but instead that property was either abandoned, retained or damaged beyond repair.

Second, some property was stolen from the warehouse in which the Gold Train property (as well as other property) was stored before the auction, and at least some of the thefts were perpetrated by members of the United States armed forces. Certain of the wrongdoers were apprehended, prosecuted and punished, but only a portion of the stolen property was recovered.

The United States regrets the improper conduct of certain of its military personnel and seeks in this settlement to provide meaningful assistance to those Hungarian Holocaust survivors still living who qualify as financially needy.

I am not sure about the mention of setting up a "task force." I haven't heard of any suggestion along those lines and thus wouldn't promise it. To reflect more precisely the actual process as I understand it, I might edit the last two sentences of the first para to read something along these lines, though I leave wordsmithing up to you: To date, an internal working group set up by the Department's leadership has outlined different options for the establishment and implementation of such an organization, and submitted those options for review by various affected components within the Department. The working group is in the process of reviewing comments from the affected components and finalizing its recommendation to the Attorney General.

Any objection to submitting the following draft supplemental Justice Department comments (submitted by CIV) on the above to OMB? FYI, I have attached the underlying bill text.

The Justice Department has the following additional comments on S. 1761, the Gulf Coast Recovery Act:

The bill is intended to clarify the liability of government contractors with respect to claims made against them related to the performance of contracts issued in response to Hurricane Katrina or in response to future natiural disasters of a similar general magnitude of damages as Hurricane Katrina. Because the proposed legislation addresses the potential claims of PRIVATE INDIVIDUALS AGAINST GOVERNMENT CONTRACTORS, it is not immediately apparent how the changes to the law might affect Contract Disputes Act ("CDA") litigation of contractor and Government claims in the United States Court of Federal Claims or the boards of contract appeals.

We have concerns about section 5(d)(1), which provides, in lawsuits "filed for claims arising out of, relating to, or resulting from the performance of a [disaster-zone certified] contract," a rebuttable presumption that all elements of the government contractor defense are satisfied. The "government contractor defense" is a defense that a Federal government contractor would normally raise in response to a products-liability type tort claim in situations where the contractor had performed to a very specific government-provided design specifications. Although the government contractor defense is a tort defense that would normally not have any applicability to CDA contract disputes, some of the required elements of the government contractor defense - in particular, the need to establish rigid DESIGN characteristics in the government specifications - overlap with or at least relate to the elements of several claims or defenses (e.g., breach of warranty of specifications, commercial impracticability) which are often raised by contractors in CDA contract disputes. To avoid any possibility that this section would change the current government contracts law, we believe that the current bill should be rewritten to clearly state that nothing in section 5(d)(1) changes the current law regarding a disaster-zone certified contractor's burden of proof for establishing any claim or defense related to CDA litigation in the Court of Federal Claims or the boards of contract appeals. This qualification should be stated expressly in subsection 5(d) and/or stated with the other exclusions provided for in subsection 5(e).

In addition, we recommend two other changes to the language of section 5. First, with respect to the new Federal right of action, provided in subsection 5(a), we believe that the language regarding district court's jurisdiction (subsection (4)) should be defined more clearly. As currently drafted, subsection 5(a) might be interpreted broadly enough to permit non-diversity, loss of property suits brought by subcontractors or suppliers against "disaster zone certified" prime contractors, in situations where no Miller Act jurisdiction would exist. Second, subparagraph 5(d)(4), regarding the "exclusive responsibility" of the Chief of Engineers to review contracts for certification as a "disaster zone contract," does not state clearly whether that certification would be subject to judicial review under any standard. We believe that this should be clarified in the bill, especially as it appears (based upon the section 3 definition of "government contract") that the Chief of Engineers would be requested to certify STATE AND LOCAL government contracts as well as Federal contracts.

Neil,

Should we be reviewing the attached comments in light of the amendments as passed in the Senate and now contained as sections 8154, 8155, and 8163 of the Senate-passed version of H.R. 2863 (which I understand to be headed to conference)? These provisions, as they passed the Senate, contain some differences from our copies of Amendment Nos. 1977 and 2004.

Neil,

Should we be reviewing the attached comments in light of the amendments as passed in the Senate and now contained as sections 8154, 8155, and 8163 of the Senate-passed version of H.R. 2863 (which I understand to be headed to conference)? These provisions, as they passed the Senate, contain some differences from our copies of Amendment Nos. 1977 and 2004.

Neil,

OLC has received through our normal bill-comment channels (OMB via OLA) the DOD appropriation bill as a whole for comment. Comments are due at 1:00 today. We don't want to duplicate (or depart from) the comments you're working on (which we are editing and should have back to you today) but also don't want OMB or anyone else to think that we have no issues with the McCain and Graham additions.

Therefore, unless you prefer something else, we plan to include the following disclaimer, or something to the same effect, in our comments on the bill: "We have reviewed sections 8154, 8155, and 8163, which address detention and interrogation in the present war. OLC understands that any DOJ comments on these sections will be provided by the Associate Attorney General's office. We therefore have provided our comments on these sections to that office and are not separately commenting on them now."

Neil and I have just been told separately that this is not what the WH wants. We HAVE been given authorization to engage on the Graham amendment - and not just authorization . . . they WANT us to engage - to eliminate, if possible, but if not, to fix. DoD, not DOJ, has the lead, which may be what led to DOJ/LA's confusion. But the key point for us is that we have a green light to engage on Graham. Please do not forward.

Just for situational awareness - we do not have the green light from the White House to work with Conference Committee on the Graham or McCain amendments. I do think it will be helpful to have DoJ's comments. DoJ leg affairs contact me yesterday about both amendments and I communicated to them that at the present time we are not allowed to do anything. I will keep you advised. TY

Subject: Car to Pentagon

Kevin: Neil has arranged for a car at 3pm at the 10th St gate to take you guys over to the Pentagon for this afternoon's meeting. You'll need to make sure, probably through Neil's office, that DoD has your security information for entry into the Pentagon. Thanks for covering this!

While nothing is yet firmly scheduled on the Hill, and while the duration of hearings are entirely up to members, Faith tentatively thinks that the hearing on the 20th will begin at 10 and end by 1. So Robert should be able to make a late afternoon flight without difficulty and make his speech on the 21st.

He is scheduled to speak at 10:45 a.m. on Friday, October 21. Linda Long in the Deputies office has been handling the plans for this event and I have passed it along to her. FYI the travel plans were changed to and earlier flight in the day b/c the detail had gotten word that some of the later flights had been canceled and the one he was previously scheduled on was effected by that airline change.

Currie - when is the speech before ca8 and what are the flight options to colo springs?

Faith - what time do they want to hold the hearing?

Get with Currie and get me a later flight to Colo. When is the hearing and how long will it last? Which is the higher priority if there is an irreconcilable conflict: 8th Cir remarks or CFIUS? Robt.

Dear Neil,

I wanted to thank you very much for lunch last Friday. Thank you especially for introducing me to Attorney General Gonzalez; that was quite an honor. I have also been thinking about your comment that, when looking back, people rarely wish that they had worked more; I think that I will keep that in mind over the next months--and years.
I look forward to next time!

Take care,

She did apply but her application package did not indicate that she met the specialized experience required to be considered at the GS-9 program level. Her degree would have qualified her at the GS-7 level but her experience indicated in the application was in administrative capacities. Certain some wording changes could help if she applies for other program type positions.

Neil,

Does Judge G still want that Frontline DVD? The producers sent me a copy, so I could pass it along to you if he did. I'd like to get it back, though.

Can you give me a sense of what you have in mind? The information is presented in a fairly bare bones manner, so I'm not sure how to revise it short of deleting sentences.

I don't disagree with including something along the lines of para 8, but I am concerned the wording really does invite another round. Any way you might revise it?

Subject: RE: DOD polling affidavit in AP v. DOD

The rationale for including it is to provide factual support for our contention that the process ordered by the court does not allow for a meaningful consent (or refusal) by the detainee, and thus the court should not rely on the detainees' answers in determining whether to order disclosure. We said that before doing the polling; but now the process as it played out (i.e., the info. in paragraph 8) has shown that we were right. So I envisioned using the info. in paragraph 8 for a cover letter (not yet drafted - I will circulate it too) to make the point that the detainees' responses are not reliable indicators of whether disclosure is warranted under the exemption. Also, even apart from advancing this argument, it also seems like info. the court should want to know in considering what weight to give the responses (if he's willing to be honest about the hairbrained scheme he devised).

I understand your point though. On balance I think I come out in favor of including paragraph 8. I think it's possible that once even Judge Rakoff thinks about making us go back for more he might realize what a mess he's gotten himself into. I will raise your point internally here and let you know what others think. If you want to convene a call to talk about this more broadly, let me know and I'm happy to organize it.

Does para 8 help us or does it invite the Court to issue a further "clarifying" notice?

Attached is a draft of the declaration Judge Rakoff ordered us to submit by this Friday Oct. 28, summarizing the results of the detainee polling required under his Sept. 26 order. The numbers in brackets represent the results of the polling so far; they will be updated tomorrow so that the final numbers provided to the court will be as of tomorrow's date.

Please give me any comments by no later than 9 am tomorrow, Thurs. Oct. 27, as DOD needs to circulate a final draft for internal approval by then.

Thank you,
Elizabeth

SIXTEEN COMPANIES TO PAY A COMBINED $14.9 MILLION FOR CLEANUP COSTS AT SAN GABRIEL VALLEY SUPERFUND SITE

Cleanup of major drinking water source expected to run over $200 million

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Sixteen firms will pay $14.9 million for cleanup costs at the San Gabriel Valley Area 2 Superfund site, the Justice Department and U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) announced today. The EPA's cleanup calls for removing contaminants from approximately 30 million gallons per day of contaminated groundwater in and near Baldwin Park, California, benefiting some 85,000 households.

The 16 companies involved in today's settlements will pay $14.5 million to the U.S. and $346,000 to the State of California. The settlements follow an earlier agreement between nine of the 16 companies and seven local water agencies that is helping to guide the cleanup. More than $100 million has been spent in the last three years alone on the construction and operation of four large water treatment systems to clean the groundwater and provide a safe and reliable source of drinking water to area residents and businesses. The groundwater cleanup, one of the largest in the country, has been a cooperative effort involving the EPA, the State of California, and seven local water agencies.

"Today's settlement is proof that the cooperative actions of federal and state government and the private industry can have a positive impact on our citizens and the environment," said Acting Assistant Attorney General Kelly A. Johnson for the Justice Department's Environment and Natural Resources Division. "As a result of the cleanup efforts, hundreds of thousands of residents will be able to take comfort in the knowledge that their drinking water is safe and clean."

The 16 companies are: Aerojet-General Corporation; Allegiance Healthcare Corporation; Azusa Land Reclamation Co. Inc.; Fairchild Holding Corp.; Hartwell Corporation; Huffy Corporation; Leach International Corporation; Lockheed Martin Corporation; Mobil Oil Corporation; Oil & Solvent Process Company; Phaostron Instrument and Electronic Company; Philip Morris USA Inc.; Reichhold Inc.; the Valspar

Corporation; White & White Properties; and Winco Enterprises Inc. The settlements also cover several related entities.

"The EPA will continue to oversee cleanup work at this and the other San Gabriel Valley Superfund sites to protect and restore the San Gabriel Basin as a vital source of drinking water for Southern California," said Keith Takata, director of the EPA's Superfund Division for the Southwest Region.

The San Gabriel Valley Superfund site settlements are described in seven consent decrees lodged today with the U.S. District Court in Los Angeles and one bankruptcy settlement lodged with the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Ohio on September 20, 2005. The settlements accomplish three goals: to reimburse state and federal government for their initial efforts to investigate and clean up the contamination; to obtain cash payments from seven of the companies that had not participated in the earlier agreement with the water agencies; and to provide commitments to pay future EPA costs of overseeing the cleanup.

Lockheed Martin Corporation, Mobil Oil Corporation, the Valspar Corporation, and Phaostron Instrument and Electronic Company will pay additional amounts for their failure to perform work required by a June 2000 EPA order. The additional amounts make up $1.5 million of the $14.5 million to be paid to the federal government.

The Baldwin Park area and three adjoining areas of groundwater contamination were declared Superfund sites in 1984. The Baldwin Park area cleanup addresses an area of groundwater contamination more than eight miles long and 1,000 feet deep.

Beginning in the 1940's, companies started using various chemicals at the site, substances that have now contaminated the area's groundwater. Contaminants include trichloroethylene (TCE) and perchloroethylene (PCE), volatile organic compounds that can affect breathing and nervous systems, and perchlorate, a component of rocket fuel that may affect the thyroid.

Copies of the consent decrees and bankruptcy settlement are available at <http://www.usdoj.gov/enrd/open.html>. For more information on the EPA's Superfund program, please visit http://www.epa.gov/superfund/index.htm.

Weekly Regional Report to the Director – Region VII – October 26, 2005

1. Regional Overview/Analysis (Optional) -

None

2. Most Significant Regional Activities Planned or Anticipated for the Next Two Weeks -

a. St. Roberts, Missouri - The Missouri State Conference of the NAACP contacted Region VII on September 29, 2005, indicating that a black officer from the Ft. Leonard Wood Army Base was the victim of alleged police brutality and excessive force. On September 17, 2005, while leaving a night club in St. Roberts, Missouri, the black officer was allegedly clubbed, beaten, maced and handcuffed by local police. St. Roberts is located twenty miles from the army base. He and other witnesses informed local police that they were trying to assist in removing two combatants from the night club as they were leaving. The army officer allegedly received extensive and numerous injuries by St. Roberts police officers. The injuries necessitated that the black army officer be flown by air ambulance to an area hospital. His condition is considered serious. The black family and local and state branches of the NAACP have asked CRS for assistance. CRS will begin assessment activities on October 26, 27, and 28, 2005. CRS will meet with Police officials and representatives of minority community groups. (Case#07-0001-06, Whitcomb – DN previously sent, USA previously notified)

b. St. Louis, Missouri - On October 18, 2005, the Superintendent of the Hazelwood School District contacted CRS regarding a conflict with the Missouri Contractors' Association of St. Louis, Missouri over the issue of minority inclusion in the school district's major construction projects. The contractors' association that represents many minority contractors in the area is alleging discrimination on the part of the Hazelwood School District. The black contractors' association is stating that the district has failed to initiate a minority inclusion plan and has denied opportunity for black to bid on school district construction projects. The school district fears that minority organizations are planning a protest demonstration at the next school board meeting when the projects will be voted on by the board. Also on this date CRS was called by the spokesperson representing the Minority Contractors' Association and stated that they are placing the Hazelwood School Board on notice that they are not happy with measures by the school district that will allegedly ensure maximum minority participation in district-sponsored construction projects. According to the spokesperson for the community group, they will engage in direct disruptive measures. CRS will begin assessment activities on October 27, 2005 with school district officials and representatives of the minority contractor association. (Case #07-0003-06, Whitcomb – DN previously sent, USA previously notified)

c. Des Moines, Iowa - A Mexican male alleged that the Polk County Sheriff's Department, stopped him on August 5, 2005, because of his race. Several other men and a Des Moines group, Citizens for Community Improvement, have echoed these allegations. Some of the men who have made allegations said they will not file formal complaints with the Sheriff's department until they are sure that they will not be retaliated against. Census data shows Iowa's Hispanic population grew by 150% from 1990 to 2000 and current figures show an increased rate of growth since 2000. 2. Impact: The Hispanic community feels targeted because of their national origin and believes that better police/community relations are necessary to heal the rift of mistrust. CRS will conduct telephonic and personal interviews with Polk County sheriff officials and representatives of a minority organization to more thoroughly assess the situation during the week of October 31, 2005. (Case #07-0005-06, Meade – DN sent, USA notified)

d. Waterloo, Iowa - On October 18th, 2005 Black Hawk County Sheriff's Department arrested two men and charged them with assault in violation of human rights. The alleged incident in question allegedly occurred on August 21st, 2005 when an African American passenger of a vehicle carrying him and two white men were assaulted by seven others. Allegedly, racial slurs and threats preceded assault in the form of punches to the head and kicks. The incident is alleged to have taken place just outside Waterloo city limits near Cedar Falls. Records indicate that the parties were acquaintances who had been speaking on cell phones. Officials believe some point of the conversation became heated and racial slurs were first used over the phone before the party of seven approached the vehicle in which the alleged victim was seated and dragged him out. The allegations of brutal mistreatment have upset many in the community and the arrest of some of the alleged perpetrators has renewed community concerns about the incident. CRS will conduct telephonic and on site inquiries with Black Hawk County Sheriff Department Waterloo Human Relations officials on the week of October 31, 2005 to assess the situation in the Waterloo/Cedar Falls area. (Case #07-0004-06, Meade – DN sent, USA notified)

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

FORMER ALABAMA GOVERNOR DON SIEGELMAN, OTHERS INDICTED IN RACKETEERING, BRIBERY AND EXTORTION CONSPIRACY

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Former Alabama Governor Don Eugene Siegelman and three other individuals have been indicted on charges related to a widespread racketeering conspiracy that included bribery and extortion in exchange for official acts, the Department of Justice and the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Middle District of Alabama announced today.

The 30-count superseding indictment was returned by a federal grand jury in Montgomery, Alabama today. The indictment charges Siegelman and former Chief of Staff Paul Michael Hamrick with violating the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) statute while Siegelman served as governor of Alabama from 1999 to 2003, and honest services mail and wire fraud. Siegelman is also charged with obstruction of justice, and with bribery for allegedly accepting money in exchange for actions taken as governor.

Three other individuals have pleaded guilty to public corruption charges in connection with the scheme - Alabama businessman and consultant Clayton "Lanny" Young, former Alabama Department of Economic and Community Affairs Acting Director Nick Bailey and architect William Curtis Kirsch. Today's indictment alleges that Siegelman and Hamrick took hundreds of thousands of dollars in bribes from Young to aid Young's business interests, including the awarding of contracts to companies controlled by Young.

Siegelman is also charged with extortion for allegedly demanding payments from individuals under the threat of harming their business interests with the State of Alabama. Specifically, the indictment alleges that Siegelman demanded $100,000 and accepted $40,000 from one individual under the threat of harming that person's business with the Alabama Department of Transportation (ALDOT). Siegelman also allegedly demanded $250,000 from another individual under the same threat.

The indictment also alleges that Siegelman, Hamrick and others established a criminal enterprise in which official actions were exchanged for bribes. Specifically, the indictment alleges that then-HealthSouth Chief Executive Officer Richard M. Scrushy made two disguised payments totaling $500,000 to Siegelman in exchange for Siegelman's appointment of Scrushy to Alabama's Certificate of Need Review Board. Scrushy - initially named in a sealed indictment filed on May 17, 2005 - is charged with bribery and mail fraud.

Gary Mack Roberts, the former Director of ALDOT, is charged in the indictment with honest services mail and wire fraud for his alleged role in influencing ALDOT actions on behalf of Siegelman.

The RICO and conspiracy to commit RICO charges carry a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a fine of up to $250,000. The maximum penalty for the bribery charges is 10 years in prison and a $250,0000 fine. The maximum penalty for honest services mail and wire fraud is 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine, while the maximum penalty for obstruction of justice is 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

An indictment is merely an accusation and the defendants are presumed innocent until proven guilty at trial beyond a reasonable doubt.

The indictment is the result of a joint investigation initiated by federal and state authorities in early 2001 into numerous alleged improprieties in the Siegelman administration. The federal case is being prosecuted by Louis V. Franklin, Sr., the Acting U.S. Attorney for the Middle District of Alabama in this case, and Assistant U.S. Attorneys Stephen P. Feaga and J.B. Perrine; Trial Attorney Richard Pilger of the Public Integrity Section of the Criminal Division, U.S. Department of Justice, which is headed by Section Chief Noel L. Hillman; and Assistant Attorney General Joseph Fitzpatrick for the State of Alabama, who is also cross-designated as a Special Assistant United States Attorney for this case. The investigation was conducted jointly by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and agents from the Alabama Attorney General's Office, with assistance from the Department of Transportation Office of Inspector General.

Guantanamo Detainees Gain in Ruling

NEIL A. LEWIS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 A federal judge on Wednesday ordered the Bush administration and the military to provide information to defense lawyers about the condition of detainees at the Guantanamo military base in Cuba who are participating in a hunger strike.

The judge, Gladys Kessler of Federal District Court, acted on a petition brought by lawyers for a handful of detainees from Qatar, Yemen, Saudi Arabia and Afghanistan who say they have been forcibly and sometimes brutally fed by tubes placed through their noses.

Justice Department lawyers representing the Pentagon disputed the accounts given by the detainees through their lawyers.

Julia Tarver, a lawyer for three of the detainees, asserted in court papers that when she visited her clients she found them weak and sometimes able to speak only with difficulty because of throat lesions they said were caused by having the feeding tubes forced in. Ms. Tarver said one detainee, Yousef al-Shehri, told her that a feeding tube had been roughly inserted through his nose into his throat, causing him to spit up blood.

The head of the detainee medical center at Guantanamo, Dr. John Edmondson, submitted a statement saying the tubes were always inserted with a lubricant and with a topical anesthetic if necessary and were never administered "in a manner intentionally designed to inflict pain or harm on the detainees."

The government also noted that none of the detainees who were being force-fed, about 20 as of last month, had died.

Judge Kessler said she did not need to wait until someone died before ordering the government to disclose information to the detainees' lawyers.

"It can hardly serve either the national security interests of this country or enhance its image throughout the world to contribute in any way to the death of a detainee in its custody," she said.

The judge ordered the government to inform a defense lawyer within 24 hours of any force-feeding of a client and to provide the detainees' lawyers with medical records beginning a week before force-feeding began, with weekly updates.

A Justice Department spokesman said no decision had been reached as to whether to seek to a review from an appeals court.

The most recent hunger strike, which began in late August, has at times involved as many as 200 prisoners, more than a third of the camp, according to lawyers' accounts. The lawyers said the strike was to protest conditions and the detainees' prolonged confinement without trial.

Judge Kessler's order is the latest development in a vast change in the legal situation at Guantanamo. For the first two years of the camp's existence, the military had total control of procedures there and what it told the public about them. But after a Supreme Court ruling in 2004 allowing lawyers to represent detainees and visit them, the military has had to contend with judicial rulings on procedures and with the ability of defense lawyers to provide an alternative narrative as to events there.

Lawyers must be told before detainees are fed

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawyers for hunger-striking terrorism suspects at the Guantanamo Bay prison in Cuba must be notified before any of their clients are fed against their will, a federal judge ruled Wednesday.

The government also must provide the lawyers of force-fed detainees with their clients' medical records dating to one week before the start of involuntary feeding.

In a victory for the government, U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler denied the lawyers' request for the detainees to be in contact by telephone with their lawyers, relatives and friends. At an Oct. 14 hearing before Kessler, Justice Department lawyer Terry Henry argued against such contacts, citing possible security risks.

Meanwhile, the Kuwaiti parents of a force-fed detainee said they will not approve his request to ask a judge to remove his feeding tube so he could die. The detainee's U.S. lawyer wants the man to get his family's approval and consult with medical specialists not affiliated with the U.S. government.

"We utterly refuse," Fawzi al-Odah's father, Khaled, said Wednesday in Kuwait City. "Fawzi would not have taken such a decision unless he has lost all hope and some of his ability to reason."

The 28-year-old detainee's mother, Souad al-Abdul-Jalil, also complained about the difficulty of not hearing her son's voice or seeing him in several years.

Kessler's ruling was a partial victory for lawyers who argued during an emergency hearing for more frequent access to their clients. About two dozen inmates at Guantanamo have refused to eat to protest more than three years in detention at the U.S. facility, where the military holds about 500 detainees suspected of terrorist activities.

The judge said the military must notify the lawyers at least 24 hours before force feeding begins, and provide updated information at least weekly until detainees are no longer being fed against their will.

The department declined comment on Kessler's ruling, spokesman John Nowacki said.

Julia Tarver, a New York lawyer whose firm represents 10 Saudi nationals in U.S. custody in Cuba, said she was pleased by the ruling but continues to worry about her clients.

"We still have grave concerns about the condition of our clients, some of whom are young boys, who have spent nearly four years without charge, isolated miles away from their families, and are rapidly losing hope that justice will ever prevail for them," she said in a written statement.

The hunger strikers allege inhumane and cruel treatment by medical personnel at the U.S. camp. That includes feeding tubes inserted without using anesthesia or sedatives to minimize pain, and tubes being reused without proper sanitization. Some detainees have been fasting since Aug. 8.

Dr. John Edmondson, commander of the U.S. Navy Hospital at Guantanamo and head of the detainee hospital, denied all of the detainee allegations in a brief filed with the court.

Edmondson said tubes are always inserted using a lubricant, an anesthetic is offered "in all cases" and new tubes are used every time a detainee has to be fed involuntarily.

Some 24 detainees are on hunger strike, including seven who are hospitalized and being force-fed, according to the government. Some of the remaining 17 also are being fed involuntarily, but are not hospitalized.

Investigation rocks Twin Cities firms; Investigators subpoena three medical device companies in kickback probe.

BY JIM MCCARTNEY

The federal investigation into the Twin Cities-dominated cardiac rhythm device industry could take years, cost millions of dollars, spawn a cascade of product liability and shareholder lawsuits, and become a significant distraction to top managers at the companies.

Medtronic Inc., Guidant Corp. and St. Jude Medical, each of which employs thousands of workers in the Twin Cities area, revealed Tuesday that they have received subpoenas from the U.S. Attorney's office in Boston seeking information on the sale and marketing of pacemakers and implantable cardioverter defibrillators.

The U.S. Justice Departent apparently is trying to see if the companies have been inducing doctors and clinics to buy their products and then file for reimbursement to Medicare or other federal health-insurance programs. The activities potentially violate "anti-kickback" and "false claims" statutes.

One patient advocate said the investigation comes on top of recent talk among patients with ICDs about whether their doctors have a financial stake in using a certain company's product.

"Patients with defibrillators are asking more questions now because of what's come out about the reliability of the products," said Lisa Salberg, president of the Hypertrophic Cardiomyopathy Association, which advocates for patients with a condition that involves a thickening of the heart muscle. Salberg is on her fourth ICD.

Some analysts speculate that the Justice Department is looking at reports that companies have paid doctors as much as $2,000 for follow-up patient data.

While pacemakers help spark the heart to achieve a steady, timely beat, ICDs deliver sharp jolts to hearts that go dangerously out of beat. The devices can cost as much as $30,000.

Meanwhile, Guidant -- already under investigation by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration because of warnings and recalls of its pacemakers and ICDs over the summer -- received a separate subpoena from the U.S. Attorney's office in Minneapolis that appears to be related to the FDA inquiry. Guidant's cardiac rhythm management division employs about 3,500 people in Arden Hills.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's office in Minneapolis confirmed the delivery of a subpoena to Guidant but declined further comment.

"This investigation will have a major impact," said Mark DuVal, a Minneapolis attorney who works with drug and medical-device companies on federal investigations into marketing practices and compliance with federal regulations.

"These guys are in a bunker mentality now, I can assure you," said DuVal, who expects the federal inquiry will lead to numerous product liability and shareholder lawsuits against the companies.

The companies, which are the three largest makers of electronic heart devices, declined to talk Wednesday about the subpoenas or their potential impact. Angela Craig, spokeswoman for Little Canada-based St. Jude, said her company would communicate with employees about the subpoena but declined to describe what would be said.

Guidant was the biggest loser of the three on the stock market Wednesday. Its shares dropped $2.25 to $62.45, down3.5 percent. Fridley-based Medtronic's shares fell 23 cents to $56.74 and St. Jude's fell75 cents to $47.52. One reason may be the separate subpoena Guidant received.

"The big question is what that Minneapolis subpoena is all about," said Dr. Robert Hauser of the Minneapolis Heart Institute, a member of a task force to reform the system of reporting and communicating defective heart devices.

Hauser is one of three institute doctors who went public after a Guidant ICD apparently short-circuited when it was needed to give a young Minnesota patient a life-saving shock. The resulting publicity after the man's death precipitated a spate of warnings and recalls from Guidant and put the Indianapolis-based company under a national spotlight.

Guidant's disclosure about the Minneapolis subpoena cites HIPAA, the patient privacy protection act, which is a tip-off where the Justice Department may be headed, said Jan Wald, a securities analyst with A.G. Edwards.

"The legal theory is that if a company violates any federal statutes such as HIPAA, that it is not entitled to reimbursement from the federal government, such as Medicare payments," DuVal said. Medicare pays for most of the devices implanted in older patients.

Another analyst thinks the Minneapolis subpoena may put even more pressure on Guidant's pending $25.4 billion acquisition by health-care giant Johnson & Johnson, which last week indicated it was taking a second look at the deal.

"It might make the cloud over the company and its merger just a little bit darker," said Thomas Gunderson, a securities analyst with Piper Jaffray.

After targeting fraud and winning hundreds of millions of dollars in settlements from hospitals, home-care facilities and drug companies, the feds recently have been setting their sights on the medical-device industry.

"It's a continuation of what we thought would happen," Gunderson said.

A number of device makers already have been hit by federal investigations: Eden Prairie-based Augustine Medical (now Arizant), Medtronic's spine division in Memphis, Tenn., and Plano, Texas-based Advanced Neuromodulation Systems (which recently agreed to be bought by St. Jude for $1.3 billion).

New risk to merger: Guidant subpoenas; U.S. attorneys want documents on heart devices; doubts grow about deal with Johnson & Johnson

By Jeff Swiatek

Guidant Corp. has been served with two federal subpoenas seeking documents about its troubled heart device business, raising further questions about whether it can seal its merger with Johnson & Johnson.

The Indianapolis medical device maker was vague about the reasons for the subpoenas, but at least one seems related to Guidant's recalls of its main brands of implantable defibrillators during the summer.

That's another dose of bad news for Guidant, which is trying to get back into the good graces of its would-be acquirer. Earlier issues had pushed back the completion of the deal beyond September, when both companies had hoped to wrap it up.

Johnson & Johnson dropped a loud hint last week that it may want to change the terms of the $25 billion buyout because of product quality problems Guidant has been having. Some observers said Johnson & Johnson apparently was trying to reduce the acquisition price.

"You have to consider this a real threat to the deal as currently structured," said Walter E. Birch, a director of the New York executive search firm Michael Kelly Associates who is a former vice president at a mergers and acquisitions firm.

"Clearly this will give them (Johnson & Johnson) the opportunity to either renegotiate the deal or walk away from it, if the subpoenas are in any way meaningful, which they appear to be," he said.

Guidant's statement did not elaborate on the subpoenas or comment on the status of the Johnson & Johnson deal, which is in its final phase. The last regulatory hurdle is federal antitrust approval, which both companies expected to occur this month.

Investor doubts about the merger grew after five product recalls by Guidant last spring and summer. The recalls affected more than 100,000 pacemakers and defibrillators used by heart patients worldwide. At least two deaths were linked to the product problems.
Also during the summer, the Food and Drug Administration inspected the plants in St. Paul, Minn., where Guidant makes its heart rhythm products. FDA inspectors cited Guidant for 15 violations, which the company is required to address.

Guidant spokesman Steve Tragash did not return a call for comment.

Guidant's stock price fell $2.25 a share Wednesday, to close at $62.45, well below the $76 purchase offer from Johnson & Johnson 10 months ago.

The closing price was also below the $64.10 it settled at last week after a Johnson & Johnson executive dropped the news that the New Jersey company was looking at alternatives to the proposed deal because of the product quality problems and regulatory investigations at Guidant.

Guidant said it would comply with the subpoenas, which it disclosed late Tuesday.

One subpoena, from the U.S. attorney's office in Minneapolis, wants documents specifically for Guidant's Ventak Prizm and Contak Renewal defibrillators, Guidant said. The Contak Renewal brand was pulled from the market for about five weeks during the summer to design a fix for an internal switch problem that could pose a danger to patients.

The other subpoena, from the U.S. attorney's office in Boston, seeks documents concerning Guidant's pacemakers, defibrillators and related products, Guidant said.

Two other medical device makers, Medtronic and St. Jude Medical, both based in Minnesota, also reported receiving subpoenas from the U.S. attorney's office in Boston.

Medtronic said its subpoena included a request for the company's training and compliance materials relating to fraud and abuse and anti-kickback statutes.

The focus of that subpoena from the Boston office appears to be on Medicare fraud and abuse regulations that have to do with companies using financial inducements to persuade doctors to use their products, Thom Gunderson, a senior research analyst for Piper Jaffray & Co. investment firm, said in a note to investors.

Gunderson said Department of Justice investigations done through U.S. attorneys offices can last for years. One investigation begun in 1998 at Boston Scientific Corp., another medical device maker, wasn't settled until this past June, when Boston agreed to pay $74 million to settle a criminal probe into a recall of its heart stent.

Guidant itself underwent a long federal probe of its former California-based business that made abdominal aortic grafts. That investigation ended with Guidant pleading guilty to covering up thousands of serious medical problems with its graft product and paying a $92 million fine to the government. Guidant later dropped that business.

Dropping the heart rhythm business, however, is hardly an option for Guidant. It accounted for about half of its $3.76 billion in revenue last year and is the most attractive part of Guidant for Johnson & Johnson.

Birch, the former merger specialist, said uncertainty over the federal probe at Guidant could prompt Johnson & Johnson to request an extension to the merger deadline of February.

But "J&J would have to be willing to walk away from the deal to pull that off," he said.

The merger agreement calls for Johnson & Johnson to close the acquisition within two business days after all terms of the deal are met. All the terms appear to be met except the antitrust approval, which may require Johnson & Johnson to sell parts of either companies' businesses.

Johnson & Johnson spokesman Jeffrey Leebaw did not return a call for comment.

3rd Circuit Rules FDA May Order Restitution Over Unapproved Drugs

Shannon P. Duffy

In a significant victory for the Food and Drug Administration, a federal appeals court has ruled that the agency has the right to demand restitution for consumers from companies that sell unapproved drugs.

In its 42-page opinion in United States v. Lane Labs-USA Inc., a unanimous three-judge panel rejected the argument that the FDA cannot demand restitution because the federal Food Drug and Cosmetic Act does not expressly provide for such a remedy.

"Whether or not Congress specifically contemplated restitution under the FDCA, the ability to order this remedy is within the broad equitable power granted to the district courts to further the economic protection purposes of the statute," 3rd Circuit Judge Marjorie O. Rendell wrote in an opinion joined by Judges Maryanne Trump Barry and Edward R. Becker.

The decision upholds a ruling by U.S. District Judge William G. Bassler of the District of New Jersey that required Lane Labs to pay $109 million in restitution to consumers who purchased products that contained shark cartilage and were pitched as treatments for cancer and HIV.

For the FDA, the ruling is a significant endorsement of its practice in recent years to demand not only injunctions, but also disgorgement of profits and restitution.

In the appeal, Lane Labs was supported by an amicus brief from the Washington Legal Foundation that urged the court to reverse Bassler on the grounds that restitution is not authorized anywhere in the text of the FDCA.

WLF attorneys Daniel J. Popeo and Richard A. Samp, along with attorney Jeffrey A. Lamken of Baker Botts in Washington, D.C., argued that the FDCA gives courts the power to "restrain" violations, but does not allow for "backward-looking monetary relief."

Allowing courts to order restitution, they argued, is inconsistent with the FDCA's structure which "provides carefully calibrated remedies for each type of violation, including restitution for other violations but not the violations at issue here."

Bassler's ruling, they argued, "reflects a mode of statutory construction that has a dangerous tendency to expand judicial authority at the expense of the policy judgments Congress itself has made."

Rendell disagreed and found that a pair of decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court "has mapped out the contours of a district court's equitable powers in much more expansive terms."

In its 1946 decision in Porter v. Warner Holding Co., the Supreme Court was faced with the question of whether the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942 allowed the Office of Price Administration to seek restitution to tenants who had been charged excessive rents.

The justices held that although the law did not explicitly grant the power to order restitution, such power was within a district court's equitable jurisdiction.

Rendell found that, based on the "clear and sweeping language" in Porter, "it would appear that a district court sitting in equity may order restitution unless there is an explicit statutory limitation on the district courts equitable jurisdiction and powers."

And in the 1960 decision in Mitchell v. Robert de Mario Jewelry Inc., Rendell said, the Supreme Court "not only reinforced its ruling in Porter, but expanded its scope as well."

In Mitchell, the secretary of labor brought an action under the Fair Labor Standards Act to enjoin discrimination against three employees who sought to recover unpaid wages. The suit also demanded reimbursement of wages lost by the employees who were victims of the discrimination.

The high court held that the secretary had the right to demand the wage reimbursement because "when a statutory provision gives the courts power to 'enforce prohibitions' contained in a regulation or statute, Congress will be deemed to have granted as much equitable authority as is necessary to further the underlying purposes and policies of the statute."

Rendell found that, when read together, the Porter and Mitchell decisions "charted an analytical course that seems fairly easy to follow."

The combined lesson of the two decisions, Rendell said, is that a district court sitting in equity may order restitution "unless there is a clear statutory limitation on the district court's equitable jurisdiction and powers," and that restitution is permitted "only where it furthers the purposes of the statute."

In the years since Porter and Mitchell, Rendell found that only one other appellate court has addressed the question of whether the FDA has the right to seek restitution and concluded that it did.

In its 1999 decision in United States v. Universal Management Services Inc., the 6th Circuit upheld a restitution order imposed on a company that marketed electric gas grill lighters equipped with finger grips as pain reliving devices without obtaining FDA approval.

The Universal Management court held that nothing in the FDCA precludes a district court from ordering restitution and that it was an appropriate remedy to make victims whole.

Since then, the FDA has increasingly used its newfound power. Just two months after Universal Management was decided, the FDA's suit against Abbott Laboratories settled with the company agreeing to pay $100 million.

In October 2000, Wyeth-Ayerst agreed to pay $30 million in disgorgement as part the remedial measures implemented under a consent decree. And in May 2002, Schering-Plough paid $500 million for equitable disgorgement as part of a consent decree.

The trend set off a flurry of criticism from legal commentators who argued that Porter and Mitchell do not, or should not, authorize courts to order restitution or disgorgement under the FDCA.

But Rendell found that the commentators and the WLF were taking too narrow a reading of Porter and Mitchell.

"Their central claim is that awarding restitution under the FDCA would rewrite or improperly expand the remedies available under the statute," Rendell wrote.

"They argue that the ability under [the FDCA] 'to restrain violations' contemplates only forward-looking remedies and that this mandate excludes restitution."

But Rendell found that those arguments "were considered and rejected by the Supreme Court in Porter and Mitchell," and "essentially replicate the positions of the justices who wrote in dissent in each case."

Under a proper reading of Porter and Mitchell, Rendell found that the FDCA must be read to allow restitution.

"Since Congress has placed no unambiguous restriction on equity jurisdiction under [the FDCA], the arguments of amicus and other commentators are little more than entreaties that we ignore or overrule Porter and Mitchell, neither of which we have the power to do," Rendell wrote.

Rendell found that the commentators made "a fundamental error" when analyzing whether restitution is available.

"They view this primarily as a question of what remedies are provided by the FDCA rather than, as we have emphasized, a question of the scope of the express legislative grant of equitable power," Rendell wrote.

Bassler, she said, "did not 'discover' an implied remedy, but rather exercised the equitable power that Congress explicitly granted to it under the FDCA."

Guantanamo Detainees Gain in Ruling

NEIL A. LEWIS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 A federal judge on Wednesday ordered the Bush administration and the military to provide information to defense lawyers about the condition of detainees at the Guantanamo military base in Cuba who are participating in a hunger strike.

The judge, Gladys Kessler of Federal District Court, acted on a petition brought by lawyers for a handful of detainees from Qatar, Yemen, Saudi Arabia and Afghanistan who say they have been forcibly and sometimes brutally fed by tubes placed through their noses.

Justice Department lawyers representing the Pentagon disputed the accounts given by the detainees through their lawyers.

Julia Tarver, a lawyer for three of the detainees, asserted in court papers that when she visited her clients she found them weak and sometimes able to speak only with difficulty because of throat lesions they said were caused by having the feeding tubes forced in. Ms. Tarver said one detainee, Yousef al-Shehri, told her that a feeding tube had been roughly inserted through his nose into his throat, causing him to spit up blood.

The head of the detainee medical center at Guantanamo, Dr. John Edmondson, submitted a statement saying the tubes were always inserted with a lubricant and with a topical anesthetic if necessary and were never administered "in a manner intentionally designed to inflict pain or harm on the detainees."

The government also noted that none of the detainees who were being force-fed, about 20 as of last month, had died.

Judge Kessler said she did not need to wait until someone died before ordering the government to disclose information to the detainees' lawyers.

"It can hardly serve either the national security interests of this country or enhance its image throughout the world to contribute in any way to the death of a detainee in its custody," she said.

The judge ordered the government to inform a defense lawyer within 24 hours of any force-feeding of a client and to provide the detainees' lawyers with medical records beginning a week before force-feeding began, with weekly updates.

A Justice Department spokesman said no decision had been reached as to whether to seek to a review from an appeals court.

The most recent hunger strike, which began in late August, has at times involved as many as 200 prisoners, more than a third of the camp, according to lawyers' accounts. The lawyers said the strike was to protest conditions and the detainees' prolonged confinement without trial.

Judge Kessler's order is the latest development in a vast change in the legal situation at Guantanamo. For the first two years of the camp's existence, the military had total control of procedures there and what it told the public about them. But after a Supreme Court ruling in 2004 allowing lawyers to represent detainees and visit them, the military has had to contend with judicial rulings on procedures and with the ability of defense lawyers to provide an alternative narrative as to events there.

Lawyers must be told before detainees are fed

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawyers for hunger-striking terrorism suspects at the Guantanamo Bay prison in Cuba must be notified before any of their clients are fed against their will, a federal judge ruled Wednesday.

The government also must provide the lawyers of force-fed detainees with their clients' medical records dating to one week before the start of involuntary feeding.

In a victory for the government, U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler denied the lawyers' request for the detainees to be in contact by telephone with their lawyers, relatives and friends. At an Oct. 14 hearing before Kessler, Justice Department lawyer Terry Henry argued against such contacts, citing possible security risks.

Meanwhile, the Kuwaiti parents of a force-fed detainee said they will not approve his request to ask a judge to remove his feeding tube so he could die. The detainee's U.S. lawyer wants the man to get his family's approval and consult with medical specialists not affiliated with the U.S. government.

"We utterly refuse," Fawzi al-Odah's father, Khaled, said Wednesday in Kuwait City. "Fawzi would not have taken such a decision unless he has lost all hope and some of his ability to reason."

The 28-year-old detainee's mother, Souad al-Abdul-Jalil, also complained about the difficulty of not hearing her son's voice or seeing him in several years.

Kessler's ruling was a partial victory for lawyers who argued during an emergency hearing for more frequent access to their clients. About two dozen inmates at Guantanamo have refused to eat to protest more than three years in detention at the U.S. facility, where the military holds about 500 detainees suspected of terrorist activities.

The judge said the military must notify the lawyers at least 24 hours before force feeding begins, and provide updated information at least weekly until detainees are no longer being fed against their will.

The department declined comment on Kessler's ruling, spokesman John Nowacki said.

Julia Tarver, a New York lawyer whose firm represents 10 Saudi nationals in U.S. custody in Cuba, said she was pleased by the ruling but continues to worry about her clients.

"We still have grave concerns about the condition of our clients, some of whom are young boys, who have spent nearly four years without charge, isolated miles away from their families, and are rapidly losing hope that justice will ever prevail for them," she said in a written statement.

The hunger strikers allege inhumane and cruel treatment by medical personnel at the U.S. camp. That includes feeding tubes inserted without using anesthesia or sedatives to minimize pain, and tubes being reused without proper sanitization. Some detainees have been fasting since Aug. 8.

Dr. John Edmondson, commander of the U.S. Navy Hospital at Guantanamo and head of the detainee hospital, denied all of the detainee allegations in a brief filed with the court.

Edmondson said tubes are always inserted using a lubricant, an anesthetic is offered "in all cases" and new tubes are used every time a detainee has to be fed involuntarily.

Some 24 detainees are on hunger strike, including seven who are hospitalized and being force-fed, according to the government. Some of the remaining 17 also are being fed involuntarily, but are not hospitalized.

Investigation rocks Twin Cities firms; Investigators subpoena three medical device companies in kickback probe.

BY JIM MCCARTNEY

The federal investigation into the Twin Cities-dominated cardiac rhythm device industry could take years, cost millions of dollars, spawn a cascade of product liability and shareholder lawsuits, and become a significant distraction to top managers at the companies.

Medtronic Inc., Guidant Corp. and St. Jude Medical, each of which employs thousands of workers in the Twin Cities area, revealed Tuesday that they have received subpoenas from the U.S. Attorney's office in Boston seeking information on the sale and marketing of pacemakers and implantable cardioverter defibrillators.

The U.S. Justice Departent apparently is trying to see if the companies have been inducing doctors and clinics to buy their products and then file for reimbursement to Medicare or other federal health-insurance programs. The activities potentially violate "anti-kickback" and "false claims" statutes.

One patient advocate said the investigation comes on top of recent talk among patients with ICDs about whether their doctors have a financial stake in using a certain company's product.

"Patients with defibrillators are asking more questions now because of what's come out about the reliability of the products," said Lisa Salberg, president of the Hypertrophic Cardiomyopathy Association, which advocates for patients with a condition that involves a thickening of the heart muscle. Salberg is on her fourth ICD.

Some analysts speculate that the Justice Department is looking at reports that companies have paid doctors as much as $2,000 for follow-up patient data.

While pacemakers help spark the heart to achieve a steady, timely beat, ICDs deliver sharp jolts to hearts that go dangerously out of beat. The devices can cost as much as $30,000.

Meanwhile, Guidant -- already under investigation by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration because of warnings and recalls of its pacemakers and ICDs over the summer -- received a separate subpoena from the U.S. Attorney's office in Minneapolis that appears to be related to the FDA inquiry. Guidant's cardiac rhythm management division employs about 3,500 people in Arden Hills.

A spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's office in Minneapolis confirmed the delivery of a subpoena to Guidant but declined further comment.

"This investigation will have a major impact," said Mark DuVal, a Minneapolis attorney who works with drug and medical-device companies on federal investigations into marketing practices and compliance with federal regulations.

"These guys are in a bunker mentality now, I can assure you," said DuVal, who expects the federal inquiry will lead to numerous product liability and shareholder lawsuits against the companies.

The companies, which are the three largest makers of electronic heart devices, declined to talk Wednesday about the subpoenas or their potential impact. Angela Craig, spokeswoman for Little Canada-based St. Jude, said her company would communicate with employees about the subpoena but declined to describe what would be said.

Guidant was the biggest loser of the three on the stock market Wednesday. Its shares dropped $2.25 to $62.45, down3.5 percent. Fridley-based Medtronic's shares fell 23 cents to $56.74 and St. Jude's fell75 cents to $47.52. One reason may be the separate subpoena Guidant received.

"The big question is what that Minneapolis subpoena is all about," said Dr. Robert Hauser of the Minneapolis Heart Institute, a member of a task force to reform the system of reporting and communicating defective heart devices.

Hauser is one of three institute doctors who went public after a Guidant ICD apparently short-circuited when it was needed to give a young Minnesota patient a life-saving shock. The resulting publicity after the man's death precipitated a spate of warnings and recalls from Guidant and put the Indianapolis-based company under a national spotlight.

Guidant's disclosure about the Minneapolis subpoena cites HIPAA, the patient privacy protection act, which is a tip-off where the Justice Department may be headed, said Jan Wald, a securities analyst with A.G. Edwards.

"The legal theory is that if a company violates any federal statutes such as HIPAA, that it is not entitled to reimbursement from the federal government, such as Medicare payments," DuVal said. Medicare pays for most of the devices implanted in older patients.

Another analyst thinks the Minneapolis subpoena may put even more pressure on Guidant's pending $25.4 billion acquisition by health-care giant Johnson & Johnson, which last week indicated it was taking a second look at the deal.

"It might make the cloud over the company and its merger just a little bit darker," said Thomas Gunderson, a securities analyst with Piper Jaffray.

After targeting fraud and winning hundreds of millions of dollars in settlements from hospitals, home-care facilities and drug companies, the feds recently have been setting their sights on the medical-device industry.

"It's a continuation of what we thought would happen," Gunderson said.

A number of device makers already have been hit by federal investigations: Eden Prairie-based Augustine Medical (now Arizant), Medtronic's spine division in Memphis, Tenn., and Plano, Texas-based Advanced Neuromodulation Systems (which recently agreed to be bought by St. Jude for $1.3 billion).

New risk to merger: Guidant subpoenas; U.S. attorneys want documents on heart devices; doubts grow about deal with Johnson & Johnson

By Jeff Swiatek

Guidant Corp. has been served with two federal subpoenas seeking documents about its troubled heart device business, raising further questions about whether it can seal its merger with Johnson & Johnson.

The Indianapolis medical device maker was vague about the reasons for the subpoenas, but at least one seems related to Guidant's recalls of its main brands of implantable defibrillators during the summer.

That's another dose of bad news for Guidant, which is trying to get back into the good graces of its would-be acquirer. Earlier issues had pushed back the completion of the deal beyond September, when both companies had hoped to wrap it up.

Johnson & Johnson dropped a loud hint last week that it may want to change the terms of the $25 billion buyout because of product quality problems Guidant has been having. Some observers said Johnson & Johnson apparently was trying to reduce the acquisition price.

"You have to consider this a real threat to the deal as currently structured," said Walter E. Birch, a director of the New York executive search firm Michael Kelly Associates who is a former vice president at a mergers and acquisitions firm.

"Clearly this will give them (Johnson & Johnson) the opportunity to either renegotiate the deal or walk away from it, if the subpoenas are in any way meaningful, which they appear to be," he said.

Guidant's statement did not elaborate on the subpoenas or comment on the status of the Johnson & Johnson deal, which is in its final phase. The last regulatory hurdle is federal antitrust approval, which both companies expected to occur this month.

Investor doubts about the merger grew after five product recalls by Guidant last spring and summer. The recalls affected more than 100,000 pacemakers and defibrillators used by heart patients worldwide. At least two deaths were linked to the product problems.
Also during the summer, the Food and Drug Administration inspected the plants in St. Paul, Minn., where Guidant makes its heart rhythm products. FDA inspectors cited Guidant for 15 violations, which the company is required to address.

Guidant spokesman Steve Tragash did not return a call for comment.

Guidant's stock price fell $2.25 a share Wednesday, to close at $62.45, well below the $76 purchase offer from Johnson & Johnson 10 months ago.

The closing price was also below the $64.10 it settled at last week after a Johnson & Johnson executive dropped the news that the New Jersey company was looking at alternatives to the proposed deal because of the product quality problems and regulatory investigations at Guidant.

Guidant said it would comply with the subpoenas, which it disclosed late Tuesday.

One subpoena, from the U.S. attorney's office in Minneapolis, wants documents specifically for Guidant's Ventak Prizm and Contak Renewal defibrillators, Guidant said. The Contak Renewal brand was pulled from the market for about five weeks during the summer to design a fix for an internal switch problem that could pose a danger to patients.

The other subpoena, from the U.S. attorney's office in Boston, seeks documents concerning Guidant's pacemakers, defibrillators and related products, Guidant said.

Two other medical device makers, Medtronic and St. Jude Medical, both based in Minnesota, also reported receiving subpoenas from the U.S. attorney's office in Boston.

Medtronic said its subpoena included a request for the company's training and compliance materials relating to fraud and abuse and anti-kickback statutes.

The focus of that subpoena from the Boston office appears to be on Medicare fraud and abuse regulations that have to do with companies using financial inducements to persuade doctors to use their products, Thom Gunderson, a senior research analyst for Piper Jaffray & Co. investment firm, said in a note to investors.

Gunderson said Department of Justice investigations done through U.S. attorneys offices can last for years. One investigation begun in 1998 at Boston Scientific Corp., another medical device maker, wasn't settled until this past June, when Boston agreed to pay $74 million to settle a criminal probe into a recall of its heart stent.

Guidant itself underwent a long federal probe of its former California-based business that made abdominal aortic grafts. That investigation ended with Guidant pleading guilty to covering up thousands of serious medical problems with its graft product and paying a $92 million fine to the government. Guidant later dropped that business.

Dropping the heart rhythm business, however, is hardly an option for Guidant. It accounted for about half of its $3.76 billion in revenue last year and is the most attractive part of Guidant for Johnson & Johnson.

Birch, the former merger specialist, said uncertainty over the federal probe at Guidant could prompt Johnson & Johnson to request an extension to the merger deadline of February.

But "J&J would have to be willing to walk away from the deal to pull that off," he said.

The merger agreement calls for Johnson & Johnson to close the acquisition within two business days after all terms of the deal are met. All the terms appear to be met except the antitrust approval, which may require Johnson & Johnson to sell parts of either companies' businesses.

Johnson & Johnson spokesman Jeffrey Leebaw did not return a call for comment.

3rd Circuit Rules FDA May Order Restitution Over Unapproved Drugs

Shannon P. Duffy

In a significant victory for the Food and Drug Administration, a federal appeals court has ruled that the agency has the right to demand restitution for consumers from companies that sell unapproved drugs.

In its 42-page opinion in United States v. Lane Labs-USA Inc., a unanimous three-judge panel rejected the argument that the FDA cannot demand restitution because the federal Food Drug and Cosmetic Act does not expressly provide for such a remedy.

"Whether or not Congress specifically contemplated restitution under the FDCA, the ability to order this remedy is within the broad equitable power granted to the district courts to further the economic protection purposes of the statute," 3rd Circuit Judge Marjorie O. Rendell wrote in an opinion joined by Judges Maryanne Trump Barry and Edward R. Becker.

The decision upholds a ruling by U.S. District Judge William G. Bassler of the District of New Jersey that required Lane Labs to pay $109 million in restitution to consumers who purchased products that contained shark cartilage and were pitched as treatments for cancer and HIV.

For the FDA, the ruling is a significant endorsement of its practice in recent years to demand not only injunctions, but also disgorgement of profits and restitution.

In the appeal, Lane Labs was supported by an amicus brief from the Washington Legal Foundation that urged the court to reverse Bassler on the grounds that restitution is not authorized anywhere in the text of the FDCA.

WLF attorneys Daniel J. Popeo and Richard A. Samp, along with attorney Jeffrey A. Lamken of Baker Botts in Washington, D.C., argued that the FDCA gives courts the power to "restrain" violations, but does not allow for "backward-looking monetary relief."

Allowing courts to order restitution, they argued, is inconsistent with the FDCA's structure which "provides carefully calibrated remedies for each type of violation, including restitution for other violations but not the violations at issue here."

Bassler's ruling, they argued, "reflects a mode of statutory construction that has a dangerous tendency to expand judicial authority at the expense of the policy judgments Congress itself has made."

Rendell disagreed and found that a pair of decisions from the U.S. Supreme Court "has mapped out the contours of a district court's equitable powers in much more expansive terms."

In its 1946 decision in Porter v. Warner Holding Co., the Supreme Court was faced with the question of whether the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942 allowed the Office of Price Administration to seek restitution to tenants who had been charged excessive rents.

The justices held that although the law did not explicitly grant the power to order restitution, such power was within a district court's equitable jurisdiction.

Rendell found that, based on the "clear and sweeping language" in Porter, "it would appear that a district court sitting in equity may order restitution unless there is an explicit statutory limitation on the district courts equitable jurisdiction and powers."

And in the 1960 decision in Mitchell v. Robert de Mario Jewelry Inc., Rendell said, the Supreme Court "not only reinforced its ruling in Porter, but expanded its scope as well."

In Mitchell, the secretary of labor brought an action under the Fair Labor Standards Act to enjoin discrimination against three employees who sought to recover unpaid wages. The suit also demanded reimbursement of wages lost by the employees who were victims of the discrimination.

The high court held that the secretary had the right to demand the wage reimbursement because "when a statutory provision gives the courts power to 'enforce prohibitions' contained in a regulation or statute, Congress will be deemed to have granted as much equitable authority as is necessary to further the underlying purposes and policies of the statute."

Rendell found that, when read together, the Porter and Mitchell decisions "charted an analytical course that seems fairly easy to follow."

The combined lesson of the two decisions, Rendell said, is that a district court sitting in equity may order restitution "unless there is a clear statutory limitation on the district court's equitable jurisdiction and powers," and that restitution is permitted "only where it furthers the purposes of the statute."

In the years since Porter and Mitchell, Rendell found that only one other appellate court has addressed the question of whether the FDA has the right to seek restitution and concluded that it did.

In its 1999 decision in United States v. Universal Management Services Inc., the 6th Circuit upheld a restitution order imposed on a company that marketed electric gas grill lighters equipped with finger grips as pain reliving devices without obtaining FDA approval.

The Universal Management court held that nothing in the FDCA precludes a district court from ordering restitution and that it was an appropriate remedy to make victims whole.

Since then, the FDA has increasingly used its newfound power. Just two months after Universal Management was decided, the FDA's suit against Abbott Laboratories settled with the company agreeing to pay $100 million.

In October 2000, Wyeth-Ayerst agreed to pay $30 million in disgorgement as part the remedial measures implemented under a consent decree. And in May 2002, Schering-Plough paid $500 million for equitable disgorgement as part of a consent decree.

The trend set off a flurry of criticism from legal commentators who argued that Porter and Mitchell do not, or should not, authorize courts to order restitution or disgorgement under the FDCA.

But Rendell found that the commentators and the WLF were taking too narrow a reading of Porter and Mitchell.

"Their central claim is that awarding restitution under the FDCA would rewrite or improperly expand the remedies available under the statute," Rendell wrote.

"They argue that the ability under [the FDCA] 'to restrain violations' contemplates only forward-looking remedies and that this mandate excludes restitution."

But Rendell found that those arguments "were considered and rejected by the Supreme Court in Porter and Mitchell," and "essentially replicate the positions of the justices who wrote in dissent in each case."

Under a proper reading of Porter and Mitchell, Rendell found that the FDCA must be read to allow restitution.

"Since Congress has placed no unambiguous restriction on equity jurisdiction under [the FDCA], the arguments of amicus and other commentators are little more than entreaties that we ignore or overrule Porter and Mitchell, neither of which we have the power to do," Rendell wrote.

Rendell found that the commentators made "a fundamental error" when analyzing whether restitution is available.

"They view this primarily as a question of what remedies are provided by the FDCA rather than, as we have emphasized, a question of the scope of the express legislative grant of equitable power," Rendell wrote.

Bassler, she said, "did not 'discover' an implied remedy, but rather exercised the equitable power that Congress explicitly granted to it under the FDCA."

WHITE HOUSE OFFICIAL I. LEWIS LIBBY INDICTED ON OBSTRUCTION OF JUSTICE, FALSE STATEMENT AND PERJURY CHARGES RELATING TO LEAK OF CLASSIFIED INFORMATION REVEALING CIA OFFICER'S IDENTITY

WASHINGTON – Senior White House official I. Lewis Libby was indicted today on obstruction of justice, false statement and perjury charges for allegedly lying about how and when in 2003 he learned and subsequently disclosed to reporters then-classified information concerning the employment of Valerie Wilson by the Central Intelligence Agency. Libby was charged with one count of obstruction of justice, two counts of perjury and two counts of making false statements in a five-count indictment returned today by a federal grand jury as its term expired, announced Justice Department Special Counsel Patrick J. Fitzgerald.

The defendant, also known as "Scooter" Libby, has served since January 20, 2001, as Assistant to the President, Chief of Staff to the Vice President, and Assistant to the Vice President for National Security Affairs. Libby, 55, will be arraigned at a later date in U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

The charges allege that Libby lied to FBI agents who interviewed him on October 14 and November 26, 2003; committed perjury while testifying under oath before the grand jury on March 5 and March 24, 2004; and engaged in obstruction of justice by impeding the grand jury's investigation into the unauthorized disclosure – or "leaking" – of Valerie Wilson's affiliation with the CIA to various reporters in the spring of 2003.

Beginning in late May 2003, Libby allegedly began acquiring information about a 2002 trip to the African country of Niger by Joseph Wilson, a former United States Ambassador and career State Department official, to investigate allegations concerning efforts by the former government of Iraq to acquire uranium yellowcake, a processed form of uranium ore. The CIA decided on its own initiative to send Wilson to Niger after an inquiry to the CIA by the Vice President concerning certain intelligence reporting. Wilson orally reported his findings to the CIA upon his return. Subsequently, Libby allegedly lied about information he discussed about the CIA employment of Wilson's wife, Valerie Plame Wilson, in conversations Libby had in June and July 2003 with three news reporters – Tim Russert of NBC News, Matt Cooper of Time magazine, and Judith Miller of The New York Times.

Prior to July 14, 2003, Valerie Wilson's employment status was classified. Prior to that date, her affiliation with the CIA was not common knowledge outside the intelligence community. Disclosure of classified information about an individual's employment by the CIA has the potential to damage the national security in ways that range from preventing that individual's future use in a covert capacity, to compromising intelligence-gathering methods and operations, and endangering the safety of CIA employees and those who deal with them, the indictment states.

"When citizens testify before grand juries they are required to tell the truth," Mr. Fitzgerald said. "Without the truth, our criminal justice system cannot serve our nation or its citizens. The requirement to tell the truth applies equally to all citizens, including persons who hold high positions in government. In an investigation concerning the compromise of a CIA officer's identity, it is especially important that grand jurors learn what really happened. The indictment returned today alleges that the efforts of the grand jury to investigate such a leak were obstructed when Mr. Libby lied about how and when he learned and subsequently disclosed classified information about Valerie Wilson," he added.

Mr. Fitzgerald announced the charges with John C. Eckenrode, Special Agent-in-Charge of the Philadelphia Field Office of the FBI and the lead agent in the investigation. The Washington Field Office and the Inspection Division of the FBI assisted in the investigation.

The indictment alleges that Libby had frequent access to classified information and frequently spoke with officials of the U.S. intelligence community and other government officials regarding sensitive national security matters. With his responsibilities for national security matters, Libby held security clearances giving him access to classified information. Libby was obligated by federal criminal statute, regulations, executive orders, and a written non-disclosure agreement not to disclose classified information to unauthorized persons, and to properly safeguard classified information against unauthorized disclosure.

According to the indictment, on September 26, 2003, the Department of Justice and the FBI began a criminal investigation into the possible unauthorized disclosure of classified information regarding Valerie Wilson's CIA affiliation to various reporters in the spring of 2003. In January 2004, the grand jury investigation began examining possible violations of criminal laws prohibiting disclosing the identity of covert intelligence personnel (The Intelligence Identities Protection Act), improperly disclosing national defense information, making false statements to government agents, and perjury. A major focus of the grand jury investigation was to determine which government officials had disclosed to the media prior to July 14, 2003, information concerning Valerie Wilson's CIA affiliation, and the nature, timing, extent, and purpose of such disclosures, as well as whether any official made such a disclosure knowing that Valerie Wilson's employment by the CIA was classified information.

The over-arching obstruction of justice count alleges that while testifying under oath before the grand jury on March 5 and March 24 2004, Libby knowingly and corruptly endeavored to influence, obstruct and impede the grand jury's investigation by misleading and deceiving the grand jury as to when, and the manner and means by which, he acquired, and subsequently disclosed to the media, information concerning the employment of Valerie Wilson by the CIA. The obstruction count alleges that Libby made the following materially false and intentionally misleading statements:

- When Libby spoke with Tim Russert of NBC on or about July 10, 2003, Russert asked Libby if Libby knew that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, and told Libby that all the reporters knew it; and Libby was surprised to hear that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA; when, in fact, Libby knew Russert did not ask Libby if Libby knew that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did Russert tell Libby that all the reporters knew it. And, at the time of this conversation, Libby was well aware that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA and Libby had participated in multiple prior conversations concerning this topic;

- Libby advised Matt Cooper of Time magazine on or about July 12, 2003, that he had heard that other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, and further advised him that Libby did not know whether this assertion was true; when, in fact, Libby did not advise Cooper during that conversation that Libby had heard other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did Libby advise him that Libby did not know whether this assertion was true. Rather, Libby confirmed to Cooper, without qualification, that Libby had heard that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA; and

- Libby advised Judith Miller of The New York Times on or about July 12, 2003, that he had heard that other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA but Libby did not know whether that assertion was true; when, in fact, Libby did not advise Miller during that conversation that Libby had heard other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did Libby advise her that Libby did not know whether this assertion was true.

Among the events leading up to these conversations, on January 28, 2003, President Bush delivered his State of the Union address which included sixteen words asserting that "The British government has learned that Saddam Hussein recently sought significant quantities of uranium from Africa."

On May 6, 2003, The New York Times published a column by Nicholas Kristof which disputed the accuracy of the "sixteen words" in the State of the Union address. The column reported that, following a request from the Vice President's office for an investigation of allegations that Iraq sought to buy uranium from Niger, an unnamed former ambassador was sent to Niger in 2002 to investigate the allegations. According to the column, the ambassador reported back to the CIA and State Department in early 2002 that the allegations were unequivocally wrong and based on forged documents.

According to the indictment, beginning in late May and throughout June, Libby participated in multiple conversations concerning Valerie Wilson's employment by the CIA, including on the following occasions:

- on or about May 29, 2003, in the White House, Libby asked an Undersecretary of State for information concerning the unnamed ambassador's travel to Niger. The Undersecretary thereafter directed the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research to prepare a report concerning the ambassador and his trip. The Undersecretary provided Libby with interim oral reports in late May and early June 2003, and advised Libby that Wilson was the former ambassador who took the trip;

- on or about June 9, 2003, a number of classified documents from the CIA were faxed to the Office of the Vice President to the personal attention of Libby and another person in the Vice President's office. The documents, which bore classification markings, discussed, among other things, Wilson and his trip to Niger, but did not mention Wilson by name. After receiving these documents, Libby and one or more other persons in the Vice President's office handwrote the names "Wilson" and "Joe Wilson" on the documents;

- on or about June 11 or 12, 2003, Libby was orally advised by the Undersecretary of State that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA and that State Department personnel were saying that Wilson's wife was involved in the organization of his trip;

- on or about June 11, 2003, Libby was informed by a senior officer of the CIA that Wilson's wife was employed by the CIA and was believed to be responsible for sending Wilson on the trip;

DOJ_NMG_ 0148831

- prior to June 12, 2003, Washington Post reporter Walter Pincus contacted the Office of the Vice President about a story he was writing about Wilson's trip. Libby participated in discussions in the Vice President's office concerning how to respond to Pincus;

- on or about June 12, 2003, Libby was advised by the Vice President of the United States that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA in the Counterproliferation Division. Libby understood that the Vice President had learned this information from the CIA;

- on or about June 14, 2003, Libby met with a CIA briefer and expressed displeasure that CIA officials were making comments to reporters critical of the Vice President's office, and discussed with the briefer, among other things, "Joe Wilson" and his wife "Valerie Wilson," in the context of Wilson's trip to Niger;

- shortly after publication on or about June 19, 2003, of an article in The New Republic magazine online entitled "The First Casualty: The Selling of the Iraq War," Libby spoke by telephone with his then Principal Deputy and discussed the article. That official asked Libby whether information about Wilson's trip could be shared with the press to rebut the allegations that the Vice President had sent Wilson. Libby responded that there would be complications at the CIA in disclosing that information publicly, and that he could not discuss the matter on a non-secure telephone line; and

- on or about June 23, 2003, Libby met with Judith Miller of The New York Times. Libby was critical of the CIA and disparaged what he termed "selective leaking" by the CIA concerning intelligence matters. In discussing the CIA's handling of Wilson's trip to Niger, Libby informed Miller Wilson's wife might work at a bureau of the CIA.

On July 6, 2003, The New York Times published an opinion article by Joseph Wilson entitled "What I Didn't Find in Africa." On the same day, the Washington Post published an article about Wilson's 2002 trip to Niger, which was based partially on an interview of Wilson, and he was a guest on the television program "Meet the Press." In the article he wrote, as well as in the print and broadcast interviews of him, Wilson asserted, among other things, that he had taken a trip to Niger at the request of the CIA in February 2002 to investigate allegations that Iraq has sought or obtained uranium yellowcake from Niger, and that he doubted Iraq had obtained uranium from Niger recently, for a number of reasons. Wilson said that he believed, based on his understanding of government procedures, that the Vice President's office was advised of the results of his trip.

Following Wilson's July 6, 2003 statements, according to the indictment, Libby engaged in the following actions:

- on or about July 7, 2003, Libby had lunch with the then White House Press Secretary and advised that individual that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA, noting that such information was not widely known;

- on or about the morning of July 8, 2003, Libby met with Miller of The New York Times. When the conversation turned to the subject of Joseph Wilson, Libby asked that the information he provided on the topic of Wilson be attributed to a "former Hill staffer" rather than to a "senior administration official," as had been the understanding regarding other information that Libby provided to Miller during this meeting. Libby then discussed with Miller Wilson's trip and criticized the CIA reporting concerning Wilson's trip. During this discussion, Libby advised Miller of his belief that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA;

- also on or about July 8, 2003, Libby met with the Counsel to the Vice President in an anteroom outside the Vice President's office. During their brief conversation, Libby asked the individual what paperwork there would be at the CIA if an employee's spouse undertook an overseas trip;

- no earlier than June 2003 but on or before July 8, 2003, the Assistant to the Vice President for Public Affairs learned from another government official that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA and advised Libby of this information;

- on or about July 10, 2003, Libby spoke to NBC's Russert to complain about press coverage of Libby by an MSNBC reporter. Libby did not discuss Wilson's wife with Russert;

- on or about July 10 or July 11, 2003, Libby spoke to a senior White House official ("Official A") who advised Libby of a conversation Official A had earlier that week with columnist Robert Novak in which Wilson's wife was discussed as a CIA employee involved in Wilson's trip. Libby was advised by Official A that Novak would be writing a story about Wilson's wife;

- on or about July 12, 2003, Libby flew with the Vice President and others to and from Norfolk, Va., on Air Force Two. On his return trip, Libby discussed with other officials aboard the plane what Libby should say in response to certain pending media inquiries, including questions from Time's Cooper;

DOJ_NMG_ 0148833

- on or about July 12, 2003, in the afternoon, Libby spoke by telephone to Cooper, who asked whether Libby had heard that Wilson's wife was involved in sending Wilson on the trip to Niger. Libby confirmed to Cooper, without elaboration or qualification, that he had heard this information too; and

- on or about July 12, 2003, in the late afternoon, Libby spoke by telephone with Miller and discussed Wilson's wife, and that she worked at the CIA.

The false statement charge in Count Two of the indictment alleges that Libby lied to FBI agents on October14 and November 26, 2003, regarding the conversation with Russert on July 10, 2003. Count Three charges Libby with making false statements to FBI agents during the same FBI interviews in October and November 2003 relating to his July 12, 2003 conversation with Cooper.

The perjury charge in Count Four alleges that Libby lied while testifying under oath before the grand jury on March 5, 2004, about his conversation with Russert on July 10, 2003, because, in fact, Russert did not ask Libby if Libby knew that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did Russert tell Libby that all the reporters knew it, and at the time of their conversation, Libby was well aware that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA.

Count Five charges Libby with perjury before the grand jury for allegedly lying when he said that he told reporters that he was telling them what other reporters were saying – first, on March 5, 2004, about his conversation with Cooper on or about July 12, 2003, and second, on March 24, 2004, regarding conversations with reporters. In fact, Libby well knew that he did not advise Cooper or other reporters that he had heard other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did Libby advise Cooper or other reporters that he did not know whether this assertion was true.

If convicted, the crimes charged in the indictment carry the following maximum penalties on each count: obstruction of justice – 10 years in prison, and making false statements and perjury –5 years in prison, and each count carries a maximum fine of $250,000, making the maximum penalty for conviction on all counts 30 years in prison and a $1.25 million fine. Note, however, that the Court would determine the appropriate sentence to be imposed.

The public is reminded that an indictment contains only charges and is not evidence of guilt. The defendant is presumed innocent and is entitled to a fair trial at which the government has the burden of proving guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

Neil - thanks so much for your interest in the BJA regional conferences. I do believe that you will find these events a great opportunity to see first hand not just the work of BJA, but more importantly the field's perspective on DOJ, OJP and BJA work. I would recommend one of the following two events for your consideration. If one of these work for you, let me know and we will get back with you and staff to handle all the arrangements.

Midwest Regional - November 8-9 in Minneapolis, MN; or West Regional - November 29-30 in Anaheim, CA

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Holding a Criminal Term
Grand Jury Sworn in on October 31, 2003

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA	) Criminal No.
	) GRAND JURY ORIGINAL
v.	) Count 1: Obstruction of Justice (18 U.S.C. § 1503)
	) Counts 2-3: False Statements (18 U.S.C. § 1001(a)(2))
I. LEWIS LIBBY,	)
also known as "SCOOTER LIBBY"	) Counts 4-5: Perjury (18 U.S.C. § 1623)

INDICTMENT

COUNT ONE
(Obstruction of Justice)

THE GRAND JURY CHARGES:

1. At times material to this indictment:

Defendant's Employment and Responsibilities

a. Beginning on or about January 20, 2001, and continuing through the date of this indictment, defendant I. LEWIS LIBBY, also known as "SCOOTER LIBBY," was employed as Assistant to the President of the United States, Chief of Staff to the Vice President of the United States, and Assistant to the Vice President for National Security Affairs. In the course of his work, LIBBY had frequent access to classified information and frequently spoke with officials of the U.S. intelligence community, as well as other government officials, regarding sensitive national security matters.

b. In connection with his role as a senior government official with responsibilities for national security matters, LIBBY held security clearances entitling him to access to classified information. As a person with such clearances, LIBBY was obligated by applicable laws and regulations, including Title 18, United States Code, Section 793, and Executive Order 12958 (as modified by Executive Order 13292), not to disclose classified information to persons not authorized to receive such information, and otherwise to exercise proper care to safeguard classified information against unauthorized disclosure. On or about January 23, 2001, LIBBY executed a written "Classified Information Nondisclosure Agreement," stating in part that "I understand and accept that by being granted access to classified information, special confidence and trust shall be placed in me by the United States Government," and that "I have been advised that the unauthorized disclosure, unauthorized retention, or negligent handling of classified information by me could cause damage or irreparable injury to the United States or could be used to advantage by a foreign nation."

The Central Intelligence Agency

c. The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) was an agency of the United States whose mission was to collect, produce, and disseminate intelligence and counterintelligence information to officers and departments of the United States government, including the President, the National Security Council, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

d. The responsibilities of certain CIA employees required that their association with the CIA be kept secret; as a result, the fact that these individuals were employed by the CIA was classified. Disclosure of the fact that such individuals were employed by the CIA had the potential to damage the national security in ways that ranged from preventing the future use of those individuals in a covert capacity, to compromising intelligence-gathering methods and operations, and endangering the safety of CIA employees and those who dealt with them.

Joseph Wilson and Valerie Plame Wilson

e. Joseph Wilson ("Wilson") was a former career State Department official who had held a variety of posts, including United States Ambassador. In 2002, after an inquiry to the CIA by the Vice President concerning certain intelligence reporting, the CIA decided on its own initiative to send Wilson to the country of Niger to investigate allegations involving Iraqi efforts to acquire uranium yellowcake, a processed form of uranium ore. Wilson orally reported his findings to the CIA upon his return.

f. Joseph Wilson was married to Valerie Plame Wilson ("Valerie Wilson"). At all relevant times from January 1, 2002 through July 2003, Valerie Wilson was employed by the CIA, and her employment status was classified. Prior to July 14, 2003, Valerie Wilson's affiliation with the CIA was not common knowledge outside the intelligence community.

Events Leading up to July 2003

2. On or about January 28, 2003, President George W. Bush delivered his State of the Union address which included sixteen words asserting that "The British government has learned that Saddam Hussein recently sought significant quantities of uranium from Africa."

3. On May 6, 2003, the New York Times published a column by Nicholas Kristof which disputed the accuracy of the "sixteen words" in the State of the Union address. The column reported that, following a request from the Vice President's office for an investigation of allegations that Iraq sought to buy uranium from Niger, an unnamed former ambassador was sent on a trip to Niger in 2002 to investigate the allegations. According to the column, the ambassador reported back to the CIA and State Department in early 2002 that the allegations were unequivocally wrong and based on forged documents.

4. On or about May 29, 2003, in the White House, LIBBY asked an Under Secretary of State ("Under Secretary") for information concerning the unnamed ambassador's travel to Niger to investigate claims about Iraqi efforts to acquire uranium yellowcake. The Under Secretary thereafter directed the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research to prepare a report concerning the ambassador and his trip. The Under Secretary provided LIBBY with interim oral reports in late May and early June 2003, and advised LIBBY that Wilson was the former ambassador who took the trip.

5. On or about June 9, 2003, a number of classified documents from the CIA were faxed to the Office of the Vice President to the personal attention of LIBBY and another person in the Office of the Vice President. The faxed documents, which were marked as classified, discussed, among other things, Wilson and his trip to Niger, but did not mention Wilson by name. After receiving these documents, LIBBY and one or more other persons in the Office of the Vice President handwrote the names "Wilson" and "Joe Wilson" on the documents.

6. On or about June 11 or 12, 2003, the Under Secretary of State orally advised LIBBY in the White House that, in sum and substance, Wilson's wife worked at the CIA and that State Department personnel were saying that Wilson's wife was involved in the planning of his trip.

7. On or about June 11, 2003, LIBBY spoke with a senior officer of the CIA to ask about the origin and circumstances of Wilson's trip, and was advised by the CIA officer that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA and was believed to be responsible for sending Wilson on the trip.

8. Prior to June 12, 2003, Washington Post reporter Walter Pincus contacted the Office of the Vice President in connection with a story he was writing about Wilson's trip. LIBBY participated in discussions in the Office of the Vice President concerning how to respond to Pincus.

9. On or about June 12, 2003, LIBBY was advised by the Vice President of the United States that Wilson's wife worked at the Central Intelligence Agency in the Counterproliferation Division. LIBBY understood that the Vice President had learned this information from the CIA.

10. On June 12, 2003, the Washington Post published an article by reporter Walter Pincus about Wilson's trip to Niger, which described Wilson as a retired ambassador but not by name, and reported that the CIA had sent him to Niger after an aide to the Vice President raised questions about purported Iraqi efforts to acquire uranium. Pincus's article questioned the accuracy of the "sixteen words," and stated that the retired ambassador had reported to the CIA that the uranium purchase story was false.

11. On or about June 14, 2003, LIBBY met with a CIA briefer. During their conversation he expressed displeasure that CIA officials were making comments to reporters critical of the Vice President's office, and discussed with the briefer, among other things, "Joe Wilson" and his wife "Valerie Wilson," in the context of Wilson's trip to Niger.

12. On or about June 19, 2003, an article appeared in The New Republic magazine online entitled "The First Casualty: The Selling of the Iraq War." Among other things, the article questioned the "sixteen words" and stated that following a request for information from the Vice President, the CIA had asked an unnamed ambassador to travel to Niger to investigate allegations that Iraq had sought uranium from Niger. The article included a quotation attributed to the unnamed ambassador alleging that administration officials "knew the Niger story was a flat-out lie." The article also was critical of how the administration, including the Office of the Vice President, portrayed intelligence concerning Iraqi capabilities with regard to weapons of mass destruction, and accused the administration of suppressing dissent from the intelligence agencies on this topic.

13. Shortly after publication of the article in The New Republic, LIBBY spoke by telephone with his then Principal Deputy and discussed the article. That official asked LIBBY whether information about Wilson's trip could be shared with the press to rebut the allegations that the Vice President had sent Wilson. LIBBY responded that there would be complications at the CIA in disclosing that information publicly, and that he could not discuss the matter on a non-secure telephone line.

14. On or about June 23, 2003, LIBBY met with New York Times reporter Judith Miller. During this meeting LIBBY was critical of the CIA, and disparaged what he termed "selective leaking" by the CIA concerning intelligence matters. In discussing the CIA's handling of Wilson's trip to Niger, LIBBY informed her that Wilson's wife might work at a bureau of the CIA.

The July 6 "Op Ed" Article by Wilson

15. On July 6, 2003, the New York Times published an Op-Ed article by Wilson entitled "What I Didn't Find in Africa." Also on July 6, 2003, the Washington Post published an article about Wilson's 2002 trip to Niger, which article was based in part upon an interview of Wilson. Also on July 6, Wilson appeared as a guest on the television interview show "Meet the Press." In his Op-Ed article and interviews in print and on television, Wilson asserted, among other things, that he had taken a trip to Niger at the request of the CIA in February 2002 to investigate allegations that Iraq had sought or obtained uranium yellowcake from Niger, and that he doubted Iraq had obtained uranium from Niger recently, for a number of reasons. Wilson stated that he believed, based on his understanding of government procedures, that the Office of the Vice President was advised of the results of his trip.

LIBBY's Actions Following Wilson's July 6 "Op Ed" Column

16. On or about July 7, 2003, LIBBY had lunch with the then White House Press Secretary and advised the Press Secretary that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA and noted that such information was not widely known.

17. On or about the morning of July 8, 2003, LIBBY met with New York Times reporter Judith Miller. When the conversation turned to the subject of Joseph Wilson, LIBBY asked that the information LIBBY provided on the topic of Wilson be attributed to a "former Hill staffer" rather than to a "senior administration official," as had been the understanding with respect to other information that LIBBY provided to Miller during this meeting. LIBBY thereafter discussed with Miller Wilson's trip and criticized the CIA reporting concerning Wilson's trip. During this discussion, LIBBY advised Miller of his belief that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA.

18. Also on or about July 8, 2003, LIBBY met with the Counsel to the Vice President in an anteroom outside the Vice President's Office. During their brief conversation, LIBBY asked the Counsel to the Vice President, in sum and substance, what paperwork there would be at the CIA if an employee's spouse undertook an overseas trip.

19. Not earlier than June 2003, but on or before July 8, 2003, the Assistant to the Vice President for Public Affairs learned from another government official that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA, and advised LIBBY of this information.

20. On or about July 10, 2003, LIBBY spoke to NBC Washington Bureau Chief Tim Russert to complain about press coverage of LIBBY by an MSNBC reporter. LIBBY did not discuss Wilson's wife with Russert.

21. On or about July 10 or July 11, 2003, LIBBY spoke to a senior official in the White House ("Official A") who advised LIBBY of a conversation Official A had earlier that week with columnist Robert Novak in which Wilson's wife was discussed as a CIA employee involved in Wilson's trip. LIBBY was advised by Official A that Novak would be writing a story about Wilson's wife.

22. On or about July 12, 2003, LIBBY flew with the Vice President and others to and from Norfolk, Virginia, on Air Force Two. On his return trip, LIBBY discussed with other officials aboard the plane what LIBBY should say in response to certain pending media inquiries, including questions from Time reporter Matthew Cooper.

23. On or about July 12, 2003, in the afternoon, LIBBY spoke by telephone to Cooper, who asked whether LIBBY had heard that Wilson's wife was involved in sending Wilson on the trip to Niger. LIBBY confirmed to Cooper, without elaboration or qualification, that he had heard this information too.

24. On or about July 12, 2003, in the late afternoon, LIBBY spoke by telephone with Judith Miller of the New York Times and discussed Wilson's wife, and that she worked at the CIA.

The Criminal Investigation

25. On or about September 26, 2003, the Department of Justice authorized the Federal Bureau of Investigation ("FBI") to commence a criminal investigation into the possible unauthorized disclosure of classified information regarding the disclosure of Valerie Wilson's affiliation with the CIA to various reporters in the spring of 2003.

DOJ_NMG_ 0148845

26. As part of the criminal investigation, LIBBY was interviewed by Special Agents of the FBI on or about October 14 and November 26, 2003, each time in the presence of his counsel. During these interviews, LIBBY stated to FBI Special Agents that:

a. During a conversation with Tim Russert of NBC News on July 10 or 11, 2003, Russert asked LIBBY if LIBBY was aware that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA. LIBBY responded to Russert that he did not know that, and Russert replied that all the reporters knew it. LIBBY was surprised by this statement because, while speaking with Russert, LIBBY did not recall that he previously had learned about Wilson's wife's employment from the Vice President.

b. During a conversation with Matthew Cooper of Time magazine on or about July 12, 2003, LIBBY told Cooper that reporters were telling the administration that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, but that LIBBY did not know if this was true; and

c. LIBBY did not discuss Wilson's wife with New York Times reporter Judith Miller during a meeting with Miller on or about July 8, 2003.

27. Beginning in or about January 2004, and continuing until the date of this indictment, Grand Jury 03-3 sitting in the District of Columbia conducted an investigation ("the Grand Jury Investigation") into possible violations of federal criminal laws, including: Title 50, United States Code, Section 421 (disclosure of the identity of covert intelligence personnel); and Title 18, United States Code, Sections 793 (improper disclosure of national defense information), 1001 (false statements), 1503 (obstruction of justice), and 1623 (perjury).

28. A major focus of the Grand Jury Investigation was to determine which government officials had disclosed to the media prior to July 14, 2003 information concerning the affiliation of Valerie Wilson with the CIA, and the nature, timing, extent, and purpose of such disclosures, as well as whether any official making such a disclosure did so knowing that the employment of Valerie Wilson by the CIA was classified information.

29. During the course of the Grand Jury Investigation, the following matters, among others, were material to the Grand Jury Investigation:

i. When, and the manner and means by which, defendant LIBBY learned that Wilson's wife was employed by the CIA;

ii. Whether and when LIBBY disclosed to members of the media that Wilson's wife was employed by the CIA;

iii. The language used by LIBBY in disclosing any such information to the media, including whether LIBBY expressed uncertainty about the accuracy of any information he may have disclosed, or described where he obtained the information;

iv. LIBBY's knowledge as to whether any information he disclosed was classified at the time he disclosed it; and

v. Whether LIBBY was candid with Special Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in describing his conversations with the other government officials and the media relating to Valerie Wilson.

LIBBY's Grand Jury Testimony

30. On or about March 5 and March 24, 2004, LIBBY testified before Grand Jury 03-3. On each occasion of LIBBY's testimony, the foreperson of the Grand Jury administered the oath to LIBBY and LIBBY swore to tell the truth in the testimony he was about to give.

31. In or about March 2004, in the District of Columbia,

I. LEWIS LIBBY,
also known as "SCOOTER LIBBY,"

defendant herein, did knowingly and corruptly endeavor to influence, obstruct and impede the due administration of justice, namely proceedings before Grand Jury 03-3, by misleading and deceiving the grand jury as to when, and the manner and means by which, LIBBY acquired and subsequently disclosed to the media information concerning the employment of Valerie Wilson by the CIA.

32. It was part of the corrupt endeavor that during his grand jury testimony, defendant LIBBY made the following materially false and intentionally misleading statements and representations, in substance, under oath:

a. When LIBBY spoke with Tim Russert of NBC News, on or about July 10, 2003:

i. Russert asked LIBBY if LIBBY knew that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, and told LIBBY that all the reporters knew it; and

ii. At the time of this conversation, LIBBY was surprised to hear that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA;

DOJ_NMG_ 0148848

b. LIBBY advised Matthew Cooper of Time magazine on or about July 12, 2003, that he had heard that other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, and further advised him that LIBBY did not know whether this assertion was true; and

c. LIBBY advised Judith Miller of the New York Times on or about July 12, 2003 that he had heard that other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA but LIBBY did not know whether that assertion was true.

33. It was further part of the corrupt endeavor that at the time defendant LIBBY made each of the above-described materially false and intentionally misleading statements and representations to the grand jury, LIBBY was aware that they were false, in that:

a. When LIBBY spoke with Tim Russert of NBC News on or about July 10, 2003:

i. Russert did not ask LIBBY if LIBBY knew that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did he tell LIBBY that all the reporters knew it; and

ii. At the time of this conversation, LIBBY was well aware that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA; in fact, LIBBY had participated in multiple prior conversations concerning this topic, including on the following occasions:

- In or about early June 2003, LIBBY learned from the Vice President that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA in the Counterproliferation Division;
- On or about June 11, 2003, LIBBY was informed by a senior CIA officer that Wilson's wife was employed by the CIA and that the idea of sending him to Niger originated with her;

DOJ_NMG_ 0148849

- On or about June 12, 2003, LIBBY was informed by the Under Secretary of State that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA;

- On or about June 14, 2003, LIBBY discussed "Joe Wilson" and "Valerie Wilson" with his CIA briefer, in the context of Wilson's trip to Niger;

- On or about June 23, 2003, LIBBY informed reporter Judith Miller that Wilson's wife might work at a bureau of the CIA;

- On or about July 7, 2003, LIBBY advised the White House Press Secretary that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA;

- In or about June or July 2003, and in no case later than on or about July 8, 2003, LIBBY was advised by the Assistant to the Vice President for Public Affairs that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA;

- On or about July 8, 2003, LIBBY advised reporter Judith Miller of his belief that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA; and

- On or about July 8, 2003, LIBBY had a discussion with the Counsel to the Office of the Vice President concerning the paperwork that would exist if a person who was sent on an overseas trip by the CIA had a spouse who worked at the CIA;

b. LIBBY did not advise Matthew Cooper, on or about July 12, 2003, that LIBBY had heard other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did LIBBY advise him that LIBBY did not know whether this assertion was true; rather, LIBBY confirmed to Cooper, without qualification, that LIBBY had heard that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA; and

c. LIBBY did not advise Judith Miller, on or about July 12, 2003, that LIBBY had heard other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did LIBBY advise her that LIBBY did not know whether this assertion was true;

In violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1503.

COUNT TWO
(False Statement)

THE GRAND JURY FURTHER CHARGES:

1. The Grand Jury realleges Paragraphs 1-26 of Count One as though fully set forth herein.

2. During the course of the criminal investigation conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Department of Justice, the following matters, among others, were material to that investigation:

a. When, and the manner and means by which, defendant LIBBY learned that Wilson's wife was employed by the CIA;

b. Whether and when LIBBY disclosed to members of the media that Wilson's wife was employed by the CIA;

c. The language used by LIBBY in disclosing any such information to the media, including whether LIBBY expressed uncertainty about the accuracy of any information he may have disclosed, or described where he obtained the information; and

d. LIBBY's knowledge as to whether any information he disclosed was classified at the time he disclosed it.

3. On or about October 14 and November 26, 2003, in the District of Columbia,

I. LEWIS LIBBY,
also known as "SCOOTER LIBBY," defendant herein, did knowingly and willfully make a materially false, fictitious, and fraudulent statement and representation in a matter within the jurisdiction of the Federal Bureau of

DOJ_NMG_ 0148852

Investigation, an agency within the executive branch of the United States, in that the defendant, in response to questions posed to him by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, stated that:

> During a conversation with Tim Russert of NBC News on July 10 or 11, 2003, Russert asked LIBBY if LIBBY was aware that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA. LIBBY responded to Russert that he did not know that, and Russert replied that all the reporters knew it. LIBBY was surprised by this statement because, while speaking with Russert, LIBBY did not recall that he previously had learned about Wilson's wife's employment from the Vice President.

4. As defendant LIBBY well knew when he made it, this statement was false in that when LIBBY spoke with Russert on or about July 10 or 11, 2003:

a. Russert did not ask LIBBY if LIBBY knew that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did he tell LIBBY that all the reporters knew it; and

b. At the time of this conversation, LIBBY was well aware that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA;

In violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1001(a)(2).

COUNT THREE
(False Statement)

THE GRAND JURY FURTHER CHARGES:

1. The Grand Jury realleges Paragraphs 1 and 2 of Count Two as though fully set forth herein.

2. On or about October 14 and November 26, 2003, in the District of Columbia,

I. LEWIS LIBBY,
also known as "SCOOTER LIBBY,"

defendant herein, did knowingly and willfully make a materially false, fictitious, and fraudulent statement and representation in a matter within the jurisdiction of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, an agency within the executive branch of the United States, in that the defendant, in response to questions posed to him by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, stated that:

> During a conversation with Matthew Cooper of Time magazine on July 12, 2003, LIBBY told Cooper that reporters were telling the administration that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, but LIBBY did not know if this was true.

3. As defendant LIBBY well knew when he made it, this statement was false in that: LIBBY did not advise Cooper on or about July 12, 2003 that reporters were telling the administration that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did LIBBY advise him that LIBBY did not know whether this was true; rather, LIBBY confirmed for Cooper, without qualification, that LIBBY had heard that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA;

In violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1001(a)(2).

COUNT FOUR (Perjury)

THE GRAND JURY FURTHER CHARGES:

1. The Grand Jury realleges Paragraphs 1-30 of Count One as though fully set forth herein.

2. On or about March 5, 2004, in the District of Columbia,

I. LEWIS LIBBY,
also known as "SCOOTER LIBBY,"

defendant herein, having taken an oath to testify truthfully in a proceeding before a grand jury of the United States, knowingly made a false material declaration, in that he gave the following testimony regarding a conversation that he represented he had with Tim Russert of NBC News, on or about July 10, 2003 (underlined portions alleged as false):

> . . . . And then he said, you know, did you know that this – excuse me, did you know that Ambassador Wilson's wife works at the CIA? And I was a little taken aback by that. I remember being taken aback by it. And I said – he may have said a little more but that was – he said that. And I said, no, I don't know that. And I said, no, I don't know that intentionally because I didn't want him to take anything I was saying as in any way confirming what he said, because at that point in time I did not recall that I had ever known, and I thought this is something that he was telling me that I was first learning. And so I said, no, I don't know that because I want to be very careful not to confirm it for him, so that he didn't take my statement as confirmation for him.
> Now, I had said earlier in the conversation, which I omitted to tell you, that this – you know, as always, Tim, our discussion is off-the-record if that's okay with you, and he said, that's fine.
> So then he said – I said – he said, sorry – he, Mr. Russert said to me, did you know that Ambassador Wilson's wife, or his wife, works at the CIA? And I said, no, I don't know that. And then he said, yeah – yes, all the reporters know it. And I said, again, I don't know that. I just wanted to be clear that I wasn't confirming anything for him on this. And you know, I was struck by what he was saying in that he thought it was an important fact, but I didn't ask him anymore about it because I didn't want to be digging in on him, and he then moved on and finished the conversation, something like that.

3. In truth and fact, as LIBBY well knew when he gave this testimony, it was false in that:

a. Russert did not ask LIBBY if LIBBY knew that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did he tell LIBBY that all the reporters knew it; and

b. At the time of this conversation, LIBBY was well aware that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA;

COUNT FIVE
(Perjury)

THE GRAND JURY FURTHER CHARGES:

1. The Grand Jury realleges Paragraphs 1-30 of Count One as though fully set forth herein.

2. On or about March 5, 2004 and March 24, 2004, in the District of Columbia,

I. LEWIS LIBBY,
also known as "SCOOTER LIBBY,"

defendant herein, having taken an oath to testify truthfully in a proceeding before a grand jury of the United States, knowingly made a false material declaration, in that he gave the following testimony regarding his conversations with reporters concerning the employment of Joseph Wilson's wife by the CIA (underlined portions alleged as false):

a. Testimony Given on or about March 5, 2004 Regarding a Conversation With Matthew Cooper on or About July 12, 2003:

Q. And it's your specific recollection that when you told Cooper about Wilson's wife working at the CIA, you attributed that fact to what reporters –

A. Yes.

Q. – plural, were saying. Correct?

A. I was very clear to say reporters are telling us that because in my mind I still didn't know it as a fact. I thought I was – all I had was this information that was coming in from the reporters.

. . . .

Q. And at the same time you have a specific recollection of telling him, you don't know whether it's true or not, you're just telling him what reporters are saying?

DOJ_NMG_ 0148857

A. Yes, that's correct, sir. And I said, reporters are telling us that, I don't know if it's true. I was careful about that because among other things, I wanted to be clear I didn't know Mr. Wilson. I don't know – I think I said, I don't know if he has a wife, but this is what we're hearing.

b. Testimony Given on or about March 24, 2004 Regarding Conversations With Reporters:

Q. And let me ask you this directly. Did the fact that you knew that the law could turn, the law as to whether a crime was committed, could turn on where you learned the information from, affect your account for the FBI when you told them that you were telling reporters Wilson's wife worked at the CIA but your source was a reporter rather than the Vice-President?

A. No, it's a fact. It was a fact, that's what I told the reporters.

Q. And you're, you're certain as you sit here today that every reporter you told that Wilson's wife worked at the CIA, you sourced it back to other reporters?

A. Yes, sir, because it was important for what I was saying and because it was – that's what – that's how I did it.

Q. The next set of questions from the Grand Jury are – concern this fact. If you did not understand the information about Wilson's wife to have been classified and didn't understand it when you heard it from Mr. Russert, why was it that you were so deliberate to make sure that you told other reporters that reporters were saying it and not assert it as something you knew?

A. I want – I didn't want to – I didn't know if it was true and I didn't want people – I didn't want the reporters to think it was true because I said it. I – all I had was that reporters are telling us that, and by that I wanted them to understand it wasn't coming from me and that it might not be true. Reporters write things that aren't true sometimes, or get things that aren't true. So I wanted to be clear they didn't, they didn't think it was me saying it. I didn't know it was true and I wanted them to understand that. Also, it was important to me to let them know that because what I was telling them was that I don't know Mr. Wilson. We didn't ask for his mission. That I didn't see his report.

> Basically, we didn't know anything about him until this stuff came out in June. And among the other things, I didn't know he had a wife. That was one of the things I said to Mr. Cooper. I don't know if he's married. And so I wanted to be very clear about all this stuff that I didn't, I didn't know about him. And the only thing I had, I thought at the time, was what reporters are telling us.
> Well, talking to the other reporters about it, I don't see as a crime. What I said to the other reporters is what, you know – I told a couple reporters what other reporters had told us, and I don't see that as a crime.

3. In truth and fact, as LIBBY well knew when he gave this testimony, it was false in that LIBBY did not advise Matthew Cooper or other reporters that LIBBY had heard other reporters were saying that Wilson's wife worked for the CIA, nor did LIBBY advise Cooper or other reporters that LIBBY did not know whether this assertion was true;

In violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1623.

ATTORNEY GENERAL ALBERTO R. GONZALES ANNOUNCES APPOINTMENTS TO INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY TASK FORCE

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Attorney General Alberto R. Gonzales today announced the appointment of several high-level Department of Justice officials to serve on the Department's Task Force on Intellectual Property.

The Task Force was created in 2004 by then-Attorney General John Ashcroft to examine the Department's efforts to protect the intellectual property rights of American citizens and businesses through criminal, civil, and antitrust enforcement; legislation; international coordination; and prevention. In October 2004, the Task Force issued a comprehensive report with recommendations to increase the Department's effectiveness in protecting intellectual property rights and enforcing federal intellectual property laws.

In February 2005, Attorney General Gonzales renewed the Department's commitment to the IP Task Force and appointed Kyle Sampson as Chairman and Arif Alikhan as Vice Chairman and Executive Director. The Attorney General also announced that the Department would implement all of the IP Task Force report's recommendations and would continue to aggressively enforce federal intellectual property laws.

The Attorney General has appointed the following Department of Justice officials to serve on the Intellectual Property Task Force:

- Thomas Barnett, Acting Assistant Attorney General, Antitrust Division
- Michael Battle, Director, Executive Office of United States Attorneys
- Rachel Brand, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Policy
- Paul Clement, Solicitor General of the United States
- Alice Fisher, Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division
- Neil Gorsuch, Principal Deputy Associate Attorney General, Office of the Associate Attorney General
- Peter Keisler, Assistant Attorney General, Civil Division
- William Moschella, Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legislative Affairs

DOJ_NMG_ 0148866

- Louis Reigel, Assistant Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Cyber Division
- Debra Wong Yang, United States Attorney, Central District of California, and Chair of the Attorney General's Advisory Subcommittee on Cyber Crime and Intellectual Property.

"I appreciate the Attorney General appointing me to take on this important role for the Department and appointing such talented members of the Department to serve on the IP Task Force," said Kyle Sampson. "I look forward to working closely with all of the members to implement the recommendations and address the evolving challenges of intellectual property crime in the global marketplace."

Copies of the report of the Department of Justice's Task Force on Intellectual Property are available on the Department's website at www.usdoj.gov <http://www.usdoj.gov> or at www.cybercrime.gov <http://www.cybercrime.gov><http://www.cybercrime.gov>. For more information regarding the Intellectual Property Task Force, contact Vice Chairman and Executive Director Arif Alikhan at Arif.Alikhan2@usdoj.gov.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT SETTLES LAWSUIT WITH S.O.G. SPECIALTY KNIVES, INC. OVER EMPLOYMENT BENEFITS FOR A COAST GUARD RESERVIST

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Justice Department today announced a settlement agreement with S.O.G. Specialty Knives, Inc. (SSK), resolving a lawsuit filed to protect the rights of a United States Coast Guard reservist who served in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

"We have a duty to our men and women in the military to enforce vigorously their legal right to be free of employment discrimination on the basis of their military service," said Bradley J. Schlozman, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division. "Particularly at a time when these brave individuals are putting their very lives on the line in defense of our freedom, such discrimination cannot and will not be tolerated. We are very pleased to see a positive resolution in this case."

The complaint alleges that SSK violated the Uniformed Services Employment and Re-employment Rights Act of 1994 (USERRA) by improperly discharging the plaintiff from his position when he was called to active duty in January 2003. The complaint also alleges that SSK failed to properly re-employ the reservist to a position of similar status and duties upon his return.

The Veterans' Employment and Training Service of the Labor Department referred the serviceman's complaint to the Justice Department upon completion of its investigation. In the consent decree, which must be approved by the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, SSK has agreed to compensate the plaintiff.

Acting Assistant Attorney General Schlozman noted that SSK voluntarily cooperated with the investigation of the Coast Guard reservist's USERRA complaint and, while denying any wrongdoing, agreed to provide him compensation.

This is the eighth USERRA complaint filed by the Justice Department since the Civil Rights Division received enforcement authority for USERRA cases in September 2004. USERRA protects the re-employment rights of service members or veterans upon their return to civilian life from active duty. To learn more about USERRA, go to http//:www.dol.gov/vets/programs/userra/maint.htm.

Neil, I have looked at the usam cite with regard to pleas by corporations, and what we did with the Thompson memo was to cite it in full in the Criminal Resource Manual at 161. See http://www.usdoj.gov/usao/eousa/foia_reading_room/usam/title9/16mcrm.htm #9-16.050

Since the October 21 McCallum memo does not replace the Thompson memo but provides further clarification and the requirement to establish a written review process, I would add the memo in its entirety as Criminal Resource #163. When the Thompson memo was issued back in 2003, the dept made the decision to include it in the resource manual, rather than include it in the usam at 9-16.050 in its entirety. With your okay, we will proceed and add as Criminal Resource #163 and add the cite at 9-16.050. If you should decide to add the entire text at 9-16.050 then we should go back and add the Thompson memo language also. Please let me know if you want us to move ahead and add as CR #163 or take a different approach? Thanks, Judy

STATEMENT OF ATTORNEY GENERAL ALBERTO R. GONZALES ON THE NOMINATION OF SAMUEL A. ALITO, JR.:

"President Bush has chosen a highly qualified, outstanding jurist in selecting Samuel Alito to serve on the Supreme Court of the United States. Judge Alito is one of our Nation's most distinguished judges, and in his nearly 30 years of public service-nearly half of that at the Department of Justice-he has earned a reputation for excellence that few can equal. He served with distinction in the Department's Office of the Solicitor General and the Office of Legal Counsel, and he was recognized as one of the best in his profession as a United States Attorney. As a judge for the past 15 years, he is well-known for his fairness, his character, and his commitment to equal justice and the rule of law. I am confident that, as a Justice on the highest Court in the land, he will continue to serve our Nation with distinction."

ON DOCKET: RELIGIOUS FREEDOM VS. DRUG LAWS

By Warren Richey Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

WASHINGTON In a case with potential important significance for minority religious groups in America, the US Supreme Court this week takes up a clash between the nation's drug laws and a statute protecting religious liberty.

At issue in the case set for oral argument Tuesday is the scope of the 1993 Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA). The law requires the federal government to justify any measure that substantially burdens a person's ability to practice his or her religion.

But what happens when a religious ceremony requires consumption of a drug outlawed under the Controlled Substances Act? That is the essence of the dispute in a case called Gonzales v. O Centro Espirita Beneficiente Uniao Do Vegetal (UDV).

Although the case involves the use of drugs, how the high court resolves the matter could have an impact on a wide array of religious groups in the United States that depend on a robust defense of religious liberty to practice their faith free of government interference. If the nation's drug laws are found to trump religious protections, other laws might also be applied in ways that substantially erode religious freedom, legal analysts say.

On the other hand, if religion may be invoked to easily bypass the nation's criminal laws, that could greatly complicate and undermine federal law-enforcement efforts, analysts say.

The case involves a religious sect of 130 members based in New Mexico. The group, adherents of the Brazil-based religion UDV, believes the use of sacramental tea in its ceremonies helps them connect with God. Consumption of the tea is the central ritual act of their faith. Some analysts liken it to the consecration of wine at a Roman Catholic mass or serving unleavened bread at a Passover Seder.

The problem is that the tea, made from two sacred plants found in the Amazon region of Brazil, contains a hallucinogenic substance banned in the US.

When US narcotics agents discovered this, they confiscated the group's supply of the sacramental tea as an illegal drug and barred them from importing any more from Brazil. The group sued, claiming the government was infringing on their religious rights by blocking a fundamental aspect of their religious worship and threatening to prosecute them should they continue to use the sacramental tea.

A federal judge and federal appeals court agreed with the group and issued a preliminary injunction against the government. The court ordered the government to accommodate the UDV members by allowing them a religious exemption from the drug laws. The courts ruled that such actions were necessary under RFRA.

Government's case

In appealing to the Supreme Court, the Bush administration argues that the government has a compelling interest in the uniform enforcement of the nation's drug laws.

Congress determined that a categorical ban on this hallucinogenic substance was required to help protect the health and safety of Americans, including the followers of UDV, from detrimental effects, government lawyers say. "Religious motivation does not change the science," writes Solicitor General Paul Clement in his brief to the court.

The government also argues that a categorical ban is needed to prevent diversion of the drug into America's illicit recreational drug market. And it is necessary to comply with international treaties banning all trafficking in narcotics and psychotropic substances.

Lawyers for the religious group counter that Congress passed RFRA after it passed the Controlled Substances Act and that since RFRA applies to all federal law, it requires the government to make religious accommodations even from criminal drug laws when individual accommodations are deemed appropriate after a careful case-by-case review.

For example, Congress has created an exemption for the religious use of peyote by native Americans, they say.

"The government's successful accommodation of the sacramental use of peyote, also a (banned) Schedule I substance, belies its claim that such substances require a categorical ban, even for religious use," Nancy Hollander, an Albuquerque lawyer representing the UDV, writes in her brief.

Ms. Hollander accuses the government of playing fast and loose with the facts in claiming there are adverse health effects to the group's use of sacramental tea. She says the only study of sacramental tea use "found no significant health concerns."

On the potential for diversion for recreational drug use, she says use of the tea is tightly controlled during ceremonies, and consumption of the tea outside such ceremonies is considered sacrilegious. Hollander adds that there hasn't been a US conviction for attempting to traffic the hallucinogenic substance contained in the tea in 27 years.

She says the government's argument concerning international treaties is also flawed. The treaty doesn't apply to sacramental tea, she says, and other treaties signed by the US require signatory governments to respect and accommodate religious practices.

Other groups weighing in

Although the New Mexico sect has only 130 members, the case has attracted the attention of a large cross section of religious groups expressing concern about the case. They include the Baptist Joint Committee, the National Association of Evangelicals, Agudath Israel of America, the Minaret of Freedom Institute, the Sikh Coalition, and The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, which publishes this newspaper.

In an appendix to a friend-of-the-court brief supporting the UDV, the Christian Science Church said in part: "Although The First Church of Christ, Scientist, supports the legal arguments made in this brief, neither the church nor the theology of Christian Science supports the use of drugs or any other material substances as an aid or pathway to spirituality or a greater understanding of God."

Supreme Court to Hear Student Loans Case

By DONNA GORDON BLANKINSHIP
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE_James Lockhart was surviving on $874 a month in Social Security disability payments plus $10 in food stamps when his student loans from nearly 20 years earlier caught up with him.

He was told his Social Security checks would be cut by 15 percent, an offset to pay more than $80,000 in delinquent student loans. The next day, he started legal action that has led to a hearing Wednesday before the U.S. Supreme Court.

The case is compelling because many other people are potentially in the same position as Lockhart, at or near retirement age with 20-year-old student loans still unpaid, said Deepak Gupta, an attorney working on his appeal. The government brief on the case said there is nearly $7 billion in delinquent student loan debt, with about half of that amount over 10 years old.

The case hinges on a pair of laws that send mixed messages about whether Social Security payments are shielded from the government's collection efforts: the Debt Collection Act and the Higher Education Act, or HEA.

According to Public Citizen Litigation Group, which is representing Lockhart, one federal appeals court has ruled in another case that the government is barred by the Social Security Act and the Debt Collection Act from offsetting Social Security payments to repay student loans that are more than 10 years old.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, however, ruled in Lockhart's case that the HEA eliminated that bar, Public Citizen says.

Lockhart, now 67 and receiving old age benefits instead of disability payments, wouldn't comment. Speaking by phone from his home in Seattle, he explained that his attorneys advised him not to talk about the case until it has been settled.

Gupta, an attorney with Public Citizen, the public interest law firm founded by Ralph Nader, described Lockhart as an old, disabled man living in public housing and barely getting by on his Social Security payments. He has significant medical expenses following double-bypass heart surgery _ including six different prescriptions _ and because of diabetes.

Gupta said Lockhart had more or less given up on his case before the call from Public Citizen.

"We told him 'You have nothing to lose. They're not going to take away more money from you,'" he said.

The Supreme Court probably agreed to hear Lockhart's appeal because of the conflicting ruling by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in a nearly identical case. The appeal of the 8th Circuit case is on hold until the Supreme Court rules on Lockhart's case.

From 2000 through 2003, the Department of Education collected about $400 million a year in delinquent student loan debt through the offset program.

In a government brief to the Supreme Court, Solicitor General Paul D. Clement wrote that it is essential to eliminate the 10-year limit on collections through Social Security because offset typically only occurs because the student debtor has successfully evaded collection by lenders and collection agencies for many years.

The 8th Circuit case involves Dee Ella Lee of Kansas City, Mo., who took out two government loans to fund her studies. She defaulted in 1984 on more than $4,000, and in 2001 the federal government began offsetting her Social Security benefits, reducing her payment from $814 to $750 a month.

The 8th Circuit ruled that the 10-year limit on Social Security offsets applied and her benefits should not be cut.

Defense Department denies mistreating detainee

CHARLESTON

The Defense Department has denied that a Charleston Naval brig detainee -- charged with being a "sleeper cell" enemy combatant with ties to al Qaeda officials -- was "subjected to any inhumane, degrading or dangerous conditions."

Defense Department attorneys filed the response Thursday in U.S. District Court to a lawsuit filed in August by Ali Saleh Kahlab al-Marri, alleging he's been severely mistreated.

He was arrested on fraud charges in Illinois three months after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks. The charges were dropped in June 2003, and he was moved to the Naval brig in Hanahan after President Bush declared al-Marri an enemy combatant.

Effort to expand radiation compensation continues

An Idaho senator says a radiation exposure compensation program can be expanded to cover all exposed individuals while adopting reforms recommended by the National Academy of Sciences.

Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, who has introduced legislation to expand the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act to include Idaho residents, says he wants to extend compensation to others affected by fallout exposure, as well as reform the act as recommended by the NAS in an April report.

"There are areas in my native Idaho that have demonstrably higher incidences of thyroid dosage of radiation than any other county currently covered by RECA," Crapo said. "It seems unconscionable to me that people living in these areas are not currently eligible for compensation."

The act, referred to as RECA, was written by Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and passed in 1990. It offered compensation to uranium miners, energy workers, on-site test participants and residents exposed to fallout from nuclear bomb tests in Nevada in the 1950s and 1960s. Eligibility, however, is limited to people who lived in 22 counties in southern Utah, Nevada and Arizona during the bomb tests, and who contracted any of 19 cancers, particularly thyroid cancer.

More than $440 million has been paid to eligible victims, including more than 4,700 Utah residents.

Crapo and Judiciary Committee chairman Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Penn., have agreed to work on the need to include all individuals exposed to fallout under the existing compensation program, regardless of geography.

Of the 25 counties in the country with the highest fallout exposures, 15 are in Montana, four in Idaho. None of the residents of those counties are eligible for compensation under RECA.

An equitable compensation program must be based on scientific criteria and similar cases must be treated alike, Specter said, quoting the head of the Environmental Protection Agency's Environmental Carcinogenesis Division.

"Those affected are not asking for special treatment; they are simply asking for fairness," Specter said. "The current geographic limitations are not based on the latest science."

Fallout victims in Utah, Nevada and Idaho recently asked Hatch to join Montana and Idaho senators in asking for the expansion of RECA.

"I agree that there are additional geographical areas that need to be added to RECA, but I want to be careful about expanding the program until I can be sure that we do not affect the benefits of those who are currently being compensated by RECA," said Hatch, who has worked to ensure the existing program is fully funded.

The NAS report recommended doing away with geographic boundaries, recognizing that people all across the country were affected by fallout. It recommended instead a science-based process for determining the likelihood that any particular cancer might have been caused by radiation.

Hatch was disappointed in the report, he said Friday afternoon.

"True, it provided scientific evidence to expand the geographic scope of RECA, but it also said there was no evidence to justify covering additional diseases and called into question the science behind the current eligibility criteria," he said.

The intent of RECA was to compensate those harmed by the federal government's activities, Hatch said.

"I'm not interested in anything that deviates from that intent, and in part, the NAS report seemed to do that," he said.

But the NAS report was only a recommendation, notes J. Preston Truman, director of the group Downwinders, a loose-knit group of fallout victims.

"It is now up to Congress to decide how or if to implement those recommendations," he said.

Court's suicide decision in limbo; Miers' withdrawal throws another wild card into case about unique Oregon law

BY BILL THEOBALD
Statesman Journal

WASHINGTON -- Harriet Miers' withdrawal as a nominee for the U.S. Supreme Court has thrown another wild card into the legal fate of Oregon's physician-assisted-suicide law.

But whether the further delay in replacing retiring Justice Sandra Day O'Connor will tend to favor those who want the law upheld or opponents who want it overturned is unclear, legal experts and those involved in the case say.

"I think it's total speculation," said Clarke Forsythe, senior counsel for Americans United for Life, a group that filed legal papers opposing the Oregon law. "You are reading tea leaves."

Forsythe said the questions by O'Connor during oral arguments before the Supreme Court earlier this month were interpreted as being skeptical of the federal government's position that it has the legal authority to block Oregon physicians from prescribing drugs used to help people die.

Under this scenario, having O'Connor remain on the court for a longer period of time would increase the chance that she will participate in the decision by the nine-member court and possibly provide a swing vote in favor of Oregon's law.

But Forsythe and others point out that the court has no set timetable for making a decision, and could choose to wait until a new justice is in place and repeat the oral arguments.

And President Bush is expected to move quickly to offer a new nominee with more solid conservative legal credentials than Miers.

Miers, the White House counsel, withdrew her name from consideration Thursday amid criticism that she lacked experience in constitutional law. Republican conservatives also questioned her credentials as a conservative.

The lack of a judicial record made it "very hard to predict how she would have voted" on the Oregon law, said Arthur LaFrance, professor at the Lewis & Clark Law School in Portland. LaFrance was among a group of professors of health law who filed a legal brief in support of Oregon's law.

A total of 208 people have used the Oregon law between 1997 and 2004.

LaFrance said he expects the next nominee "will have a clearly conservative record, and that would be adverse to Oregon's position."

But he offered another intriguing scenario.

Perhaps, he said, the court might want to work quickly to release a decision if it appears the vote will be 5-4, presumably in favor of Oregon's law, with O'Connor as the deciding vote.

That way, the "repercussions that might flow would impact a justice who would no longer be on the court."

Supreme Court decisions usually come between three and six months after oral arguments, legal experts say. But the court also has been known to rule quickly, as in the decision giving Bush his victory over Al Gore in the disputed 2000 election. Or the court could take several years to reach a conclusion, as in the Roe v. Wade decision legalizing abortion.

Robert Kenneth at the Death with Dignity National Center in Portland agrees that Miers' withdrawal gives O'Connor more time to have a role in the decision.

That could work in favor Oregon's position, Kenneth said, pointing to comments O'Connor wrote in previous assisted-suicide cases suggesting that such matters be worked out in the "laboratory of the states."

Further confounding any analysis is that the legal issue in the Oregon case centers on a state's right to regulate medicine versus federal authority to regulate drugs. That puts conservatives, who generally oppose assisted suicide, in a bind because they also believe in a limited role for the federal government that favors states' rights.

For their part, Oregon's senators, who will vote on the eventual Supreme Court nominee, had little to say following Miers' withdrawal.

Sen. Gordon Smith, a Republican, had no immediate comment.

Sen. Ron Wyden, a Democrat, said he was troubled by "the right wing's" reaction to Miers.

"Clearly, their insistence that she was not sufficiently ideological has torpedoed her nomination," Wyden said in a statement.

FRAUD WHISTLEBLOWERS CREATE EXPANDING AREA OF LAW

Libby Sander

Steven H. Cohen Tracy L. Netzel Moorman: "Whistleblowers over time have begun to bring more and more cases, and they bring better cases, to be honest." Fraud whistleblowers create expanding area of law Pharmaceutical, health care companies top the list by Libby Sander

In 1863, at the height of the Civil War, President Abraham Lincoln urged Congress to adopt a law that would rein in rampant war profiteering among suppliers to the Union Army. Lawmakers responded by passing the False Claims Act, also known as the "Lincoln Law," allowing private citizens to sue those who bilked the government -- and receive a 50 percent cut of whatever money was recovered.

More than 140 years later, a modern incarnation of the statute is returning billions of dollars to the U.S. Treasury and fueling a parade of lawsuits against companies accused of defrauding the federal government. It is also the backbone of a unique alliance in which the government relies on ordinary citizens -- "whistleblowers" -- to sniff out fraud that might otherwise go undetected.

"The state and federal legislatures recognize that the fraud is so sophisticated that the only way the government can ferret it out is to rely on the private person," said Steven H. Cohen, an attorney with the Cohen Law Group who handles False Claims Act lawsuits. "They've created an incentive for the whistleblower to come forward. The laws really encourage this public-private partnership."

The provision in the federal statute -- some states, including Illinois, also have similar laws -- allowing private citizens to sue on behalf of the government was modeled on the centuries-old English common law term known by its Latin translation, "qui tam." Shortened from the Latin phrase, "Qui tam pro domino rege quam pro se ipso" ("He who sues on behalf of the king as well as for himself"), qui tam in modern times has become synonymous with a whistleblower -- a person who alerts the government to suspicions of fraud.

Though weakened by Congress during World War II and scarcely used from the mid-1940s to the mid-1980s, the False Claims Act's whistleblower provisions were revitalized in 1986 to tackle alleged fraud in the fast-growing defense industry. In the years since, private attorneys and federal prosecutors involved in such cases find themselves at the vanguard of a rapidly developing practice area that was virtually nonexistent 15 years ago.

When Cohen filed his first case under the qui tam provisions of the False Claims Act in 1995, "nobody knew what the heck was going on in this area," he said. "It's still an emerging area, but lawyers know about it. It's becoming an established field of law."

Tracy L. Netzel of Netzel & Associates, one of the handful of attorneys in Chicago who handle qui tam lawsuits, said five or 10 years ago the term "whistleblower" wasn't bandied about very much. "The concept wasn't as common as it is now," she said. But in the wake of corporate scandals at Enron and WorldCom, in which testimony by so-called whistleblowers figured prominently, their status has quickly grown, she said.

Blowing the whistle

Numbers alone tell the recent history of the False Claims Act's qui tam provisions. Since 1986, the federal government has recovered more than $13.5 billion in settlements and judgments under the False Claims Act -- $8 billion of which came from lawsuits filed by whistleblowers, according to Department of Justice statistics. The record year for recoveries under the law was fiscal year 2003, when settlements and judgments yielded more than $2.2 billion. 2005 is expected to be the second-largest year, with $1.5 billion already recovered under the law, according to Taxpayers Against Fraud, a nonprofit organization in Washington, D.C., which acts as a clearinghouse of information for the False Claims Act.

(The whistleblower provisions of the False Claims Act apply only to fraud against the federal government, and the proceedings are often in civil cases. The Sarbanes-Oxley Act, passed in 2002 in the wake of high-profile corporate scandals, has its own corporate whistleblower provisions.)

While the number of False Claims Act lawsuits filed each year has remained fairly steady since 1987, the percentage of those suits initiated by whistleblowers has increased substantially. In 1987, of the 393 matters filed under the Act, only 32 were qui tam suits, according to the Department of Justice statistics. In 1995, the number of suits brought by whistleblowers exceeded, for the first time, the number of those that were not. In 2004, of the 520 suits filed under the False Claims Act, 415 were filed by whistleblowers, the statistics show.

"As time has gone on, a larger and larger percentage of the [False Claims Act] cases have been qui tam," said James W. Moorman, president and chief executive of Taxpayers Against Fraud. "Whistleblowers over time have begun to bring more and more cases, and they bring better cases, to be honest," he added.

In a whistleblower lawsuit, a private citizen known as a "relator" -- the U.S. government is technically the plaintiff -- files suit against an entity that he or she believes is defrauding the government. The case remains under seal for an unspecified amount of time, usually about two years, while the federal government investigates the allegations. If the government thinks the case is a strong one, it will intervene -- as it does in about 25 percent of all qui tam cases -- and federal prosecutors will collaborate with the private attorney representing the whistleblower to prosecute the case. If the government declines to intervene, the whistleblowers and their private attorneys can pursue their cases on their own in federal court.

In the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of Illinois, one of only a few districts around the country accustomed to prosecuting whistleblower suits, intervention rates mirror the national average. Prosecutors in Chicago intervene in about a quarter of the roughly 60 qui tam cases pending at any given time, according to assistant U.S. attorney Linda A. Wawzenski, who is deputy chief of the civil division.

"Intervention helps the case, because the government has badges and guns, and witnesses tend to be more cooperative when an FBI or OIG [Office of Inspector General] agent interviews them than when an attorney takes a deposition," said Ronald E. Osman, a lawyer in downstate Marion who filed his first qui tam case in 1991. "My goal is always to get intervention, but if I do not, if the case is good, I continue without the government's help."

Depending on where a qui tam case is filed, it is either handled by prosecutors in a U.S. Attorney's Office or by lawyers at the Department of Justice in Washington. In addition to Chicago, only a few U.S. Attorney's Offices -- Philadelphia, Boston, Los Angeles and Miami -- have developed the expertise to prosecute whistleblower cases, qui tam lawyers say. Most other districts rely on government lawyers in Washington to handle the suits. Settlements negotiated in the Northern District of Illinois still require approval from main headquarters, Wawzenski said, "but in districts like ours where they know we have a lot of experience and depth, they let us take the lead on the case."

In investigating a case, private and government attorneys look for evidence that the defendant knowingly defrauded the government. This can take many forms: submitting a false or fraudulent claim for payment to the government; using false records or statements to receive payment from the government; or using a false record or statement to conceal, avoid or lessen an obligation to pay money or transmit property to the federal government. Typical examples of health care fraud -- currently the most common type of fraud prosecuted under the False Claims Act -- include billing for goods and services that were never rendered, performing unnecessary medical procedures to boost Medicare reimbursements, charging the government more than once for the same goods or services and "upcoding," or inflating bills by using billing codes that indicate a more expensive treatment or illness, according to Taxpayers Against Fraud.

Bringing a suit

Before a case is even filed, qui tam attorneys say they often spend months or even a year doing their own investigation into a whistleblower's allegations.

"The best way to have a good case taken over by the government is to put in hard work and elbow grease before you even file. For every five I investigate, only one will get filed," said Cohen.

"It's an extremely risky area," said Cohen, whose cases are pending in districts all over the country. "You can have the greatest case in the world with the greatest client, and it may never see the light of day."

Robin B. Potter, a sole practitioner who handles qui tam and employment cases, calls her screening process "grueling."
When a whistleblower comes to Potter's office on the 26th floor of 111 E. Wacker Drive, with its view of Lake Michigan and the Chicago River, "I go right to the core," she said. "I say, 'Tell me what you were being asked to do and why you think it's improper.' "
"You just delve into the details," Netzel said. "A lot of times whistleblowers contact attorneys for other reasons, like they're facing retaliation or harassment. But as you continue asking questions, you get a sense of whether there's something bigger there."

The attorneys who defend companies accused of fraud scrutinize the whistleblower's claims as well. "[Whistleblowers] think they're seeing the whole picture, and they're just not," said Stuart J. Chanen of Katten Muchin Rosenman, a former federal prosecutor who has represented whistleblowers, the federal government and now the defense in qui tam cases. "They might be seeing a single supervisor or manager who's deviating from company policy, or they may see a series of false claims in Column A but don't see the correction in Column B. Something might look out of place or incorrect or fraudulent, but it isn't so.

"I don't dispute that the Act can have value, and that in certain circumstances whistleblowers are correct in what they perceive," Chanen continued. "But I also know there are examples where there are folks who have a financial interest like any other litigant, and what they think they saw in the company often isn't correct."

Heroes or opportunists?

Qui tam attorneys are adamant that their clients are sincere and ethical.

"The whistleblower clients I have encountered are among the most ethical people I've ever met," Netzel said, adding that about half of her clients come to her after being retaliated against for reporting fraud to their employers. "Being a whistleblower is not easy," she said.

Potter is more blunt: "They are the salt of the earth, because without them, there would be no False Claims Act."
Several years ago, when an employee of a South Side nursing home came to Potter with tales of physically and mentally disabled residents suffering from sexual assaults, theft and improper medical care, "She didn't say, 'I want a relator's share,' " Potter remembered. "She came to me in tears."

The facility, Maxwell Manor, was shut down by federal and state authorities in 2000 while the case was still under seal, Potter said. In November 2004, the managers of the home agreed to a $1.6 million partial settlement of the federal lawsuit.
In another of Potter's cases, a leading doctor at the University of Illinois Medical Center at Chicago, Ray Pollak, alleged that the medical center had exaggerated the medical problems of patients awaiting liver transplants so some patients would receive transplants more quickly, and the hospital could secure more Medicaid and Medicare payments. The university paid a $2 million settlement in November 2003.

Other cases brought by whistleblowers are national in scale and result in multimillion-dollar settlements. In March 2005, defense giant Northrop Grumman Corp. agreed to a $134 million settlement in a suit brought in the late 1980s by two whistleblowers represented by Chicago attorneys Michael I. Behn and Steven A. Miller. The whistleblowers worked at the company's Rolling Meadows facility in developing components for military aircraft. It was the largest False Claims Act settlement ever negotiated in the Northern District of Illinois.

Osman, the Marion lawyer, reached a $140 million settlement in 1998 against Blue Cross Blue Shield of Illinois for allegedly falsifying reports to the Health Care Finance Administration regarding processing of Medicare claims. That settlement ranks among the 20 largest qui tam settlements nationwide and is the fourth-largest among suits involving health insurance carriers, according to Taxpayers Against Fraud.

But it is dwarfed by more recent settlements against pharmaceutical companies accused of inflating their drug prices or of marketing their drugs for "off-label" uses, or uses that have not yet been approved by the Food and Drug Administration. (Please see list of largest False Claims Act settlements.)

The largest settlement to date under the False Claims Act was in 2000 for $731.4 million with the nation's largest for-profit hospital chain, the Healthcare Company. The settlement resolved allegations that HCA had engaged in fraudulent billing practices.
As of mid-October 2005, Taxpayers Against Fraud had tallied 22 False Claims Act settlements of more than $100 million -- more than half of which were over $200 million.

One reason the settlements are so large is because the liability exposure under the False Claims Act is so high. The law allows for treble damages, or three times the dollar amount of the initial fraud against the government, plus civil penalties of $5,500 to $11,000 for each false claim. As a result, very few cases, if any, go to trial, attorneys said. "We have never tried a qui tam case in this district," said Wawzenski of the U.S. Attorney's Office.

"Settlements in the $500 million-plus range are now common from the drug companies," Osman said. "I expect the settlements to only get larger unless Congress amends the statute to take the incentive away from the relators and their counsel."
And while there is a clear incentive for whistleblowers to come forward -- they are entitled to between 15 percent and 25 percent of a recovery made in a case where the government intervenes, and up to 30 percent if it does not -- qui tam attorneys insist that the image of a whistleblower as an opportunist out to make a quick buck is a myth.

"It takes tremendous courage to come forward, and in many cases the process takes an immeasurable toll on the relator and [his or her] family," Osman said.

Whatever cut the relator receives from the final settlement is "hard-earned money," said Cohen, noting the strain that the long seal period and drawn-out litigation can take on a relator. "Most whistleblowers are not doing it for the money. They come to us because they're at their wits' end," he added.

Moorman, of Taxpayers Against Fraud, pointed out that "a lot of whistleblowers don't succeed. While the numbers have grown skewed by the large cases, the average case is quite small." The typical settlement in a whistleblower case is about $1 million, and most whistleblowers receive about a 16 percent share, he said.

Chanen, the defense attorney, points out that for every qui tam case the government deems worthy of prosecution, there are four others it declines to pursue. "People should not presume every time a False Claims Act case is filed or a whistleblower trumpets a story in the press that that necessarily means the government is going to find veracity in it," he said.

At the local level

The effectiveness of the federal False Claims Act has caught the attention of lawmakers in statehouses across the country, causing a "sea change" in enforcement of government contracts at the state and local level, Cohen said.

Since the early 1990s, 16 states and the District of Columbia have passed their own versions of the federal law, with rumblings in several others, according to Moorman. In November 2004, Chicago became the first major city to pass a false claims law, and New York followed suit last May.

Illinois' law, the Whistleblower Reward and Protection Act, was adopted in 1992 and is virtually identical to the federal law. Since 2000, the state has recovered $83 million in 55 lawsuits against entities that allegedly defrauded the state, according to the Illinois Attorney General's Office. Of those cases, 48 involved allegations of Medicaid fraud.

"The state has other tools to fight fraud, but the reality is that we need whistleblowers," said Benjamin C. Weinberg, chief of the public interest division in Illinois Attorney General's Office. "We don't have the resources to have free-flowing investigators just looking for fraud. We rely on complaints from whistleblowers to bring certain kinds of fraud to our attention."

Since Attorney General Lisa Murray Madigan took office in early 2003, state prosecutors have been "aggressively and very effectively" investigating fraud using the whistleblower statute, Cohen said. Weinberg added that most of the cases filed under Madigan's watch are still under seal.

In most cases brought under the state law, prosecutors in Madigan's office work alongside their federal counterparts and the relator's attorneys to prepare the case. In the case against the University of Illinois Medical Center, for example, the state intervened and recovered more than $750,000 from the university when the case settled in 2003.

An expanding area of law

As qui tam lawsuits have garnered more media and government attention in recent years, some attorneys said the positions of people who bring whistleblower complaints have changed. With fraudulent activity surfacing in such national programs as Medicare and Medicaid, the resulting cases are often complex, broad in scope and require intimate knowledge of business models that only high-ranking employees would be able to access, attorneys said.

"Back in the mid-1990s, whistleblowers tended to be lower to mid-level employees, most of whom felt they had been harassed, retaliated against or ignored when they raised concerns about what their employers were doing," Cohen said. "They'd come to me because they felt their personal rights were being compromised.

"Now, as the area of law has emerged and become more established and recognized, my clients are doctors, nurses, chief financial officers, high-level sales management. You find a higher sophistication level as well as higher-placed information," he said.
Potter said she is representing more white-collar clients now than ever before -- a fact she attributes to the government's increased scrutiny of white-collar crime and to the whistleblowers' fervent desire to avoid getting caught up in any potential crimes themselves.

While early qui tam lawsuits were related to defense contracts -- and many still are -- the 1990s saw a spike in health care-related cases that has yet to level off, attorneys said. And they are in unanimous agreement that as long as there are government contracts with private companies, fraud will continue and whistleblowers will continue to come forward.

"Anywhere there's a privatization of government-run services, that's where you see the potential for fraud," Cohen said.

I will send it to you after it is finalized. Please call me if you would like to discuss. This issue will likely be discussed at the national criminal chiefs conference at the NAC this week.

Neil --

I have a draft policy in the hands of our criminal chief (Alan Gershel who I am cc'ing with this). He is going to meet early next week with our Ecominc Crimes chief and lead corporate fraud AUSA. They will hammer out what in all likelihood will be our final policy. I can send that to you then or, if you need it now, the more crude draft I wrote. Either way, it will be very short.

Thanks for the inquiry and take care, SJM

Subject: Corporate Privilege Waivers Policy

We have been asked by Main Justice whether we have a policy regarding when and how we seek attorney/client privilege and work product doctrine waivers from corporations or business entities during investigations. I recognize that this is an issue that involves very few of you. I also believe that on those few occasions when we have sought waivers we've done so for good reasons and with the appropriate internal consultation. Nonetheless, we have determined that we should establish the following policy:

Any AUSA intending to request that a corporation or other business entity waive its attorney/client privilege or work product doctrine must first obtain approval from the Chief of the Criminal Division. A request for such approval should be submitted in writing or by email. Any such request should address the factors set forth in the Thompson Memo, a copy of which is attached below, including: (1) the necessity of obtaining the evidence sought by the waiver; (2) the scope of the proposed waiver; and (3) the business entity's response to the investigation, including whether it has sought to shield culpable individuals or whether it has sought to identify and remedy past wrongdoing.

This memorandum transmits to you a copy of the Deputy Attorney General's January 20, 2003, memorandum revising the principles that guide prosecutors as they make the decision whether to seek charges against a business organization. Please carefully review the twelve principles that now govern this important charging decision.

If you have any questions, please contact Bill Mateja at the number listed above.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Heads of Department Components
United States Attorneys

FROM: Larry D. Thompson
Deputy Attorney General

SUBJECT: Principles of Federal Prosecution of Business Organizations

As the Corporate Fraud Task Force has advanced in its mission, we have confronted certain issues in the principles for the federal prosecution of business organizations that require revision in order to enhance our efforts against corporate fraud. While it will be a minority of cases in which a corporation or partnership is itself subjected to criminal charges, prosecutors and investigators in every matter involving business crimes must assess the merits of seeking the conviction of the business entity itself.

Attached to this memorandum are a revised set of principles to guide Department prosecutors as they make the decision whether to seek charges against a business organization. These revisions draw heavily on the combined efforts of the Corporate Fraud Task Force and the Attorney General's Advisory Committee to put the results of more than three years of experience with the principles into practice.

The main focus of the revisions is increased emphasis on and scrutiny of the authenticity of a corporation's cooperation. Too often business organizations, while purporting to cooperate with a Department investigation, in fact take steps to impede the quick and effective exposure of the complete scope of wrongdoing under investigation. The revisions make clear that such conduct should weigh in favor of a corporate prosecution. The revisions also address the efficacy of the corporate governance mechanisms in place within a corporation, to ensure that these measures are truly effective rather than mere paper programs.

Further experience with these principles may lead to additional adjustments. I look forward to hearing comments about their operation in practice. Please forward any comments to Christopher Wray, the Principal Associate Deputy Attorney General, or to Andrew Hruska, my Senior Counsel.

Federal Prosecution of Business Organizations[1]

I. Charging a Corporation: General

A. General Principle: Corporations should not be treated leniently because of their artificial nature nor should they be subject to harsher treatment. Vigorous enforcement of the criminal laws against corporate wrongdoers, where appropriate results in great benefits for law enforcement and the public, particularly in the area of white collar crime. Indicting corporations for wrongdoing enables the government to address and be a force for positive change of corporate culture, alter corporate behavior, and prevent, discover, and punish white collar crime.

B. Comment: In all cases involving corporate wrongdoing, prosecutors should consider the factors discussed herein. First and foremost, prosecutors should be aware of the important public benefits that may flow from indicting a corporation in appropriate cases. For instance, corporations are likely to take immediate remedial steps when one is indicted for criminal conduct that is pervasive throughout a particular industry, and thus an indictment often provides a unique opportunity for deterrence on a massive scale. In addition, a corporate indictment may result in specific deterrence by changing the culture of the indicted corporation and the behavior of its employees. Finally, certain crimes that carry with them a substantial risk of great public harm, e.g., environmental crimes or financial frauds, are by their nature most likely to be committed by businesses, and there may, therefore, be a substantial federal interest in indicting the corporation.

Charging a corporation, however, does not mean that individual directors, officers, employees, or shareholders should not also be charged. Prosecution of a corporation is not a substitute for the prosecution of criminally culpable individuals within or without the corporation. Because a corporation can act only through individuals, imposition of individual criminal liability may provide the strongest deterrent against future corporate wrongdoing. Only rarely should provable individual culpability not be pursued, even in the face of offers of corporate guilty pleas.

Corporations are "legal persons," capable of suing and being sued, and capable of committing crimes. Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, a corporation may be held criminally liable for the illegal acts of its directors, officers, employees, and agents. To hold a corporation liable for these actions, the government must establish that the corporate agent's actions (i) were within the scope of his duties and (ii) were intended, at least in part, to benefit the corporation. In all cases involving wrongdoing by corporate agents, prosecutors should consider the corporation, as well as the responsible individuals, as potential criminal targets.

[1] While these guidelines refer to corporations, they apply to the consideration of the prosecution of all types of business organizations, including partnerships, sole proprietorships, government entities, and unincorporated associations.

Agents, however, may act for mixed reasons -- both for self-aggrandizement (both direct and indirect) and for the benefit of the corporation, and a corporation may be held liable as long as one motivation of its agent is to benefit the corporation. In United States v. Automated Medical Laboratories, 770 F.2d 399 (4th Cir. 1985), the court affirmed the corporation's conviction for the actions of a subsidiary's employee despite its claim that the employee was acting for his own benefit, namely his "ambitious nature and his desire to ascend the corporate ladder." The court stated, "Partucci was clearly acting in part to benefit AML since his advancement within the corporation depended on AML's well-being and its lack of difficulties with the FDA." Similarly, in United States v. Cincotta, 689 F.2d 238, 241-42 (1st Cir. 1982), the court held, "criminal liability may be imposed on the corporation only where the agent is acting within the scope of his employment. That, in turn, requires that the agent be performing acts of the kind which he is authorized to perform, and those acts must be motivated -- at least in part -- by an intent to benefit the corporation." Applying this test, the court upheld the corporation's conviction, notwithstanding the substantial personal benefit reaped by its miscreant agents, because the fraudulent scheme required money to pass through the corporation's treasury and the fraudulently obtained goods were resold to the corporation's customers in the corporation's name. As the court concluded, "Mystic--not the individual defendants--was making money by selling oil that it had not paid for."

Moreover, the corporation need not even necessarily profit from its agent's actions for it to be held liable. In Automated Medical Laboratories, the Fourth Circuit stated:

> [B]enefit is not a "touchstone of criminal corporate liability; benefit at best is an evidential, not an operative, fact." Thus, whether the agent's actions ultimately redounded to the benefit of the corporation is less significant than whether the agent acted with the intent to benefit the corporation. The basic purpose of requiring that an agent have acted with the intent to benefit the corporation, however, is to insulate the corporation from criminal liability for actions of its agents which be inimical to the interests of the corporation or which may have been undertaken solely to advance the interests of that agent or of a party other than the corporation.

II. Charging a Corporation: Factors to Be Considered

A. General Principle: Generally, prosecutors should apply the same factors in determining whether to charge a corporation as they do with respect to individuals. See USAM § 9-27.220, et seq. Thus, the prosecutor should weigh all of the factors normally considered in the sound exercise of prosecutorial judgment: the sufficiency of the evidence; the likelihood of success at trial,; the probable deterrent, rehabilitative, and other consequences of conviction; and the adequacy of noncriminal approaches. See id. However, due to the nature of the corporate "person," some additional factors are present. In conducting an investigation, determining whether to bring charges, and negotiating plea agreements, prosecutors should consider the following factors in reaching a decision as to the proper treatment of a corporate target:

1. the nature and seriousness of the offense, including the risk of harm to the public, and applicable policies and priorities, if any, governing the prosecution of corporations for particular categories of crime (see section III, infra);

2. the pervasiveness of wrongdoing within the corporation, including the complicity in, or condonation of, the wrongdoing by corporate management (see section IV, infra);

3. the corporation's history of similar conduct, including prior criminal, civil, and regulatory enforcement actions against it (see section V, infra);

4. the corporation's timely and voluntary disclosure of wrongdoing and its willingness to cooperate in the investigation of its agents, including, if necessary, the waiver of corporate attorney-client and work product protection (see section VI, infra);

5. the existence and adequacy of the corporation's compliance program (see section VII, infra);

6. the corporation's remedial actions, including any efforts to implement an effective corporate compliance program or to improve an existing one, to replace responsible management, to discipline or terminate wrongdoers, to pay restitution, and to cooperate with the relevant government agencies (see section VIII, infra);

7. collateral consequences, including disproportionate harm to shareholders, pension holders and employees not proven personally culpable and impact on the public arising from the prosecution (see section IX, infra); and

8. the adequacy of the prosecution of individuals responsible for the corporation's malfeasance;

9. the adequacy of remedies such as civil or regulatory enforcement actions (see section X, infra).

B. Comment: As with the factors relevant to charging natural persons, the foregoing factors are intended to provide guidance rather than to mandate a particular result. The factors listed in this section are intended to be illustrative of those that should be considered and not a complete or exhaustive list. Some or all of these factors may or may not apply to specific cases, and in some cases one factor may override all others. The nature and seriousness of the offense may be such as to warrant prosecution regardless of the other factors. Further, national law enforcement policies in various enforcement areas may require that more or less weight be given to certain of these factors than to others.

In making a decision to charge a corporation, the prosecutor generally has wide latitude in determining when, whom, how, and even whether to prosecute for violations of Federal criminal law. In exercising that discretion, prosecutors should consider the following general statements of principles that summarize appropriate considerations to be weighed and desirable practices to be followed in discharging their prosecutorial responsibilities. In doing so, prosecutors should ensure that the general purposes of the criminal law -- assurance of warranted punishment, deterrence of further criminal conduct, protection of the public from dangerous and fraudulent conduct, rehabilitation of offenders, and restitution for victims and affected communities -- are adequately met, taking into account the special nature of the corporate "person."

III. Charging a Corporation: Special Policy Concerns

A. General Principle: The nature and seriousness of the crime, including the risk of harm to the public from the criminal conduct, are obviously primary factors in determining whether to charge a corporation. In addition, corporate conduct, particularly that of national and multi-national corporations, necessarily intersects with federal economic, taxation, and criminal law enforcement policies. In applying these principles, prosecutors must consider the practices and policies of the appropriate Division of the Department, and must comply with those policies to the extent required.

B. Comment: In determining whether to charge a corporation, prosecutors should take into account federal law enforcement priorities as discussed above. See USAM § 9-27-230. In addition, however, prosecutors must be aware of the specific policy goals and incentive programs established by the respective Divisions and regulatory agencies. Thus, whereas natural persons may be given incremental degrees of credit (ranging from immunity to lesser charges to sentencing considerations) for turning themselves in, making statements against their penal interest, and cooperating in the government's investigation of their own and others' wrongdoing, the same approach may not be appropriate in all circumstances with respect to corporations. As an example, it is entirely proper in many investigations for a prosecutor to consider the corporation's pre-indictment conduct, e.g.,voluntary disclosure, cooperation, remediation or restitution, in determining whether to seek an indictment. However, this would not necessarily be appropriate in an antitrust investigation, in which antitrust violations, by definition, go to the heart of the corporation's business and for which the Antitrust Division has therefore established a firm policy, understood in the business community, that credit should not be given at the charging stage for a compliance program and that amnesty is available only to the first corporation to make full disclosure to the government. As another example, the Tax Division has a strong preference for prosecuting responsible individuals, rather than entities, for corporate tax offenses. Thus, in determining whether or not to charge a corporation, prosecutors should consult with the Criminal, Antitrust, Tax, and Environmental and Natural Resources Divisions, if appropriate or required.

IV. Charging a Corporation: Pervasiveness of Wrongdoing Within the Corporation

A. General Principle: A corporation can only act through natural persons, and it is therefore held responsible for the acts of such persons fairly attributable to it. Charging a corporation for even minor misconduct may be appropriate where the wrongdoing was pervasive and was undertaken by a large number of employees or by all the employees in a particular role within the corporation, e.g., salesmen or procurement officers, or was condoned by upper management. On the other hand, in certain limited circumstances, it may not be appropriate to impose liability upon a corporation, particularly one with a compliance program in place, under a strict respondeat superior theory for the single isolated act of a rogue employee. There is, of course, a wide spectrum between these two extremes, and a prosecutor should exercise sound discretion in evaluating the pervasiveness of wrongdoing within a corporation.

B. Comment: Of these factors, the most important is the role of management. Although acts of even low-level employees may result in criminal liability, a corporation is directed by its management and management is responsible for a corporate culture in which criminal conduct is either discouraged or tacitly encouraged. As stated in commentary to the Sentencing Guidelines:

> Pervasiveness [is] case specific and [will] depend on the number, and degree of responsibility, of individuals [with] substantial authority ... who participated in, condoned, or were willfully ignorant of the offense. Fewer individuals need to be involved for a finding of pervasiveness if those individuals exercised a relatively high degree of authority. Pervasiveness can occur either within an organization as a whole or within a unit of an organization.

USSG §8C2.5, comment. (n. 4).

V. Charging a Corporation: The Corporation's Past History

A. General Principle: Prosecutors may consider a corporation's history of similar conduct, including prior criminal, civil, and regulatory enforcement actions against it, in determining whether to bring criminal charges.

DOJ_NMG_ 0148924

B. Comment: A corporation, like a natural person, is expected to learn from its mistakes. A history of similar conduct may be probative of a corporate culture that encouraged, or at least condoned, such conduct, regardless of any compliance programs. Criminal prosecution of a corporation may be particularly appropriate where the corporation previously had been subject to non-criminal guidance, warnings, or sanctions, or previous criminal charges, and yet it either had not taken adequate action to prevent future unlawful conduct or had continued to engage in the conduct in spite of the warnings or enforcement actions taken against it. In making this determination, the corporate structure itself, e.g., subsidiaries or operating divisions, should be ignored, and enforcement actions taken against the corporation or any of its divisions, subsidiaries, and affiliates should be considered. See USSG § 8C2.5(c) & comment. (n. 6).

VI. Charging a Corporation: Cooperation and Voluntary Disclosure

A. General Principle: In determining whether to charge a corporation, that corporation's timely and voluntary disclosure of wrongdoing and its willingness to cooperate with the government's investigation may be relevant factors. In gauging the extent of the corporation's cooperation, the prosecutor may consider the corporation's willingness to identify the culprits within the corporation, including senior executives; to make witnesses available; to disclose the complete results of its internal investigation; and to waive attorney-client and work product protection.

B. Comment: In investigating wrongdoing by or within a corporation, a prosecutor is likely to encounter several obstacles resulting from the nature of the corporation itself. It will often be difficult to determine which individual took which action on behalf of the corporation. Lines of authority and responsibility may be shared among operating divisions or departments, and records and personnel may be spread throughout the United States or even among several countries. Where the criminal conduct continued over an extended period of time, the culpable or knowledgeable personnel may have been promoted, transferred, or fired, or they may have quit or retired. Accordingly, a corporation's cooperation may be critical in identifying the culprits and locating relevant evidence.

In some circumstances, therefore, granting a corporation immunity or amnesty or pretrial diversion may be considered in the course of the government's investigation. In such circumstances, prosecutors should refer to the principles governing non-prosecution agreements generally. See USAM § 9-27.600-650. These principles permit a non prosecution agreement in exchange for cooperation when a corporation's "timely cooperation appears to be necessary to the public interest and other means of obtaining the desired cooperation are unavailable or would not be effective." Prosecutors should note that in the case of national or multi-national corporations, multi-district or global agreements may be necessary. Such agreements may only be entered into with the approval of each affected district or the appropriate Department official. See USAM §9-27.641.

In addition, the Department, in conjunction with regulatory agencies and other executive branch departments, encourages corporations, as part of their compliance programs, to conduct internal investigations and to disclose their findings to the appropriate authorities. Some agencies, such as the SEC and the EPA, as well as the Department's Environmental and Natural Resources Division, have formal voluntary disclosure programs in which self-reporting, coupled with remediation and additional criteria, may qualify the corporation for amnesty or reduced sanctions.[2] Even in the absence of a formal program, prosecutors may consider a corporation's timely and voluntary disclosure in evaluating the adequacy of the corporation's compliance program and its management's commitment to the compliance program. However, prosecution and economic policies specific to the industry or statute may require prosecution notwithstanding a corporation's willingness to cooperate. For example, the Antitrust Division offers amnesty only to the first corporation to agree to cooperate. This creates a strong incentive for corporations participating in anti-competitive conduct to be the first to cooperate. In addition, amnesty, immunity, or reduced sanctions may not be appropriate where the corporation's business is permeated with fraud or other crimes.

One factor the prosecutor may weigh in assessing the adequacy of a corporation's cooperation is the completeness of its disclosure including, if necessary, a waiver of the attorney-client and work product protections, both with respect to its internal investigation and with respect to communications between specific officers, directors and employees and counsel. Such waivers permit the government to obtain statements of possible witnesses, subjects, and targets, without having to negotiate individual cooperation or immunity agreements. In addition, they are often critical in enabling the government to evaluate the completeness of a corporation's voluntary disclosure and cooperation. Prosecutors may, therefore, request a waiver in appropriate circumstances.[3] The Department does not, however, consider waiver of a corporation's attorney-client and work product protection an absolute requirement, and prosecutors should consider the willingness of a corporation to waive such protection when necessary to provide timely and complete information as one factor in evaluating the corporation's cooperation.

Another factor to be weighed by the prosecutor is whether the corporation appears to be protecting its culpable employees and agents. Thus, while cases will differ depending on the circumstances, a corporation's promise of support to culpable employees and agents, either

[2] In addition, the Sentencing Guidelines reward voluntary disclosure and cooperation with a reduction in the corporation's offense level. See USSG §8C2.5)g).

[3] This waiver should ordinarily be limited to the factual internal investigation and any contemporaneous advice given to the corporation concerning the conduct at issue. Except in unusual circumstances, prosecutors should not seek a waiver with respect to communications and work product related to advice concerning the government's criminal investigation.

through the advancing of attorneys fees,[4] through retaining the employees without sanction for their misconduct, or through providing information to the employees about the government's investigation pursuant to a joint defense agreement, may be considered by the prosecutor in weighing the extent and value of a corporation's cooperation. By the same token, the prosecutor should be wary of attempts to shield corporate officers and employees from liability by a willingness of the corporation to plead guilty.

Another factor to be weighed by the prosecutor is whether the corporation, while purporting to cooperate, has engaged in conduct that impedes the investigation (whether or not rising to the level of criminal obstruction). Examples of such conduct include: overly broad assertions of corporate representation of employees or former employees; inappropriate directions to employees or their counsel, such as directions not to cooperate openly and fully with the investigation including, for example, the direction to decline to be interviewed; making presentations or submissions that contain misleading assertions or omissions; incomplete or delayed production of records; and failure to promptly disclose illegal conduct known to the corporation.

Finally, a corporation's offer of cooperation does not automatically entitle it to immunity from prosecution. A corporation should not be able to escape liability merely by offering up its directors, officers, employees, or agents as in lieu of its own prosecution. Thus, a corporation's willingness to cooperate is merely one relevant factor, that needs to be considered in conjunction with the other factors, particularly those relating to the corporation's past history and the role of management in the wrongdoing.

VII. Charging a Corporation: Corporate Compliance Programs

A. General Principle: Compliance programs are established by corporate management to prevent and to detect misconduct and to ensure that corporate activities are conducted in accordance with all applicable criminal and civil laws, regulations, and rules. The Department encourages such corporate self-policing, including voluntary disclosures to the government of any problems that a corporation discovers on its own. However, the existence of a compliance program is not sufficient, in and of itself, to justify not charging a corporation for criminal conduct undertaken by its officers, directors, employees, or agents. Indeed, the commission of such crimes in the face of a compliance program may suggest that the corporate management is not adequately enforcing its program. In addition, the nature of some crimes, e.g., antitrust violations, may be such that national law enforcement policies mandate prosecutions of corporations notwithstanding the existence of a compliance program.

[4] Some states require corporations to pay the legal fees of officers under investigation prior to a formal determination of their guilt. Obviously, a corporation's compliance with governing law should not be considered a failure to cooperate.

DOJ_NMG_ 0148927

B. Comment: A corporate compliance program, even one specifically prohibiting the very conduct in question, does not absolve the corporation from criminal liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior. See United States v. Basic Construction Co., 711 F.2d 570 (4th Cir. 1983) ("a corporation may be held criminally responsible for antitrust violations committed by its employees if they were acting within the scope of their authority, or apparent authority, and for the benefit of the corporation, even if... such acts were against corporate policy or express instructions."). In United States v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 467 F.2d 1000 (9th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1125 (1973), the Ninth Circuit affirmed antitrust liability based upon a purchasing agent for a single hotel threatening a single supplier with a boycott unless it paid dues to a local marketing association, even though the agent's actions were contrary to corporate policy and directly against express instructions from his superiors. The court reasoned that Congress, in enacting the Sherman Antitrust Act, "intended to impose liability upon business entities for the acts of those to whom they choose to delegate the conduct of their affairs, thus stimulating a maximum effort by owners and managers to assure adherence by such agents to the requirements of the Act."[5] It concluded that "general policy statements" and even direct instructions from the agent's superiors were not sufficient; "Appellant could not gain exculpation by issuing general instructions without undertaking to enforce those instructions by means commensurate with the obvious risks." See also United States v. Beusch, 596 F.2d 871, 878 (9th Cir. 1979) ("[A] corporation may be liable for the acts of its employees done contrary to express instructions and policies, but ... the existence of such instructions and policies may be considered in determining whether the employee in fact acted to benefit the corporation."); United States v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 433 F.2d 174 (3rd Cir. 1970) (affirming conviction of corporation based upon its officer's participation in price-fixing scheme, despite corporation's defense that officer's conduct violated its "rigid anti-fraternization policy" against any socialization (and exchange of price information) with its competitors; "When the act of the agent is within the scope of his employment or his apparent authority, the corporation is held legally responsible for it, although what he did may be contrary to his actual instructions and may be unlawful.").

While the Department recognizes that no compliance program can ever prevent all criminal activity by a corporation's employees, the critical factors in evaluating any program are whether the program is adequately designed for maximum effectiveness in preventing and detecting wrongdoing by employees and whether corporate management is enforcing the program

[5] Although this case and Basic Construction are both antitrust cases, their reasoning applies to other criminal violations. In the Hilton case, for instance, the Ninth Circuit noted that Sherman Act violations are commercial offenses "usually motivated by a desire to enhance profits," thus, bringing the case within the normal rule that a "purpose to benefit the corporation is necessary to bring the agent's acts within the scope of his employment." 467 F.2d at 1006 & n4. In addition, in United States v. Automated Medical Laboratories, 770 F.2d 399, 406 n.5 (4th Cir. 1985), the Fourth Circuit stated "that Basic Construction states a generally applicable rule on corporate criminal liability despite the fact that it addresses violations of the antitrust laws."

or is tacitly encouraging or pressuring employees to engage in misconduct to achieve business objectives. The Department has no formal guidelines for corporate compliance programs. The fundamental questions any prosecutor should ask are: "Is the corporation's compliance program well designed?" and "Does the corporation's compliance program work?" In answering these questions, the prosecutor should consider the comprehensiveness of the compliance program; the extent and pervasiveness of the criminal conduct; the number and level of the corporate employees involved; the seriousness, duration, and frequency of the misconduct; and any remedial actions taken by the corporation, including restitution, disciplinary action, and revisions to corporate compliance programs.[6] Prosecutors should also consider the promptness of any disclosure of wrongdoing to the government and the corporation's cooperation in the government's investigation. In evaluating compliance programs, prosecutors may consider whether the corporation has established corporate governance mechanisms that can effectively detect and prevent misconduct. For example, do the corporation's directors exercise independent review over proposed corporate actions rather than unquestioningly ratifying officers' recommendations; are the directors provided with information sufficient to enable the exercise of independent judgment, are internal audit functions conducted at a level sufficient to ensure their independence and accuracy and have the directors established an information and reporting system in the organization reasonable designed to provide management and the board of directors with timely and accurate information sufficient to allow them to reach an informed decision regarding the organization's compliance with the law. In re: Caremark, 698 A.2d 959 (Del. Ct. Chan. 1996).

Prosecutors should therefore attempt to determine whether a corporation's compliance program is merely a "paper program" or whether it was designed and implemented in an effective manner. In addition, prosecutors should determine whether the corporation has provided for a staff sufficient to audit, document, analyze, and utilize the results of the corporation's compliance efforts. In addition, prosecutors should determine whether the corporation's employees are adequately informed about the compliance program and are convinced of the corporation's commitment to it. This will enable the prosecutor to make an informed decision as to whether the corporation has adopted and implemented a truly effective compliance program that, when consistent with other federal law enforcement policies, may result in a decision to charge only the corporation's employees and agents.

Compliance programs should be designed to detect the particular types of misconduct most likely to occur in a particular corporation's line of business. Many corporations operate in complex regulatory environments outside the normal experience of criminal prosecutors. Accordingly, prosecutors should consult with relevant federal and state agencies with the expertise to evaluate the adequacy of a program's design and implementation. For instance, state and federal banking, insurance, and medical boards, the Department of Defense, the Department of Health and Human Services, the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Securities and Exchange Commission have considerable experience with compliance programs and can be very helpful to a prosecutor in evaluating such programs. In addition, the Fraud Section of the Criminal Division, the Commercial Litigation Branch of the Civil Division, and the Environmental Crimes Section of the Environment and Natural Resources Division can assist U.S. Attorneys' Offices in finding the appropriate agency office and in providing copies of compliance programs that were developed in previous cases.

VIII. Charging a Corporation: Restitution and Remediation

A. General Principle: Although neither a corporation nor an individual target may avoid prosecution merely by paying a sum of money, a prosecutor may consider the corporation's willingness to make restitution and steps already taken to do so. A prosecutor may also consider other remedial actions, such as implementing an effective corporate compliance program, improving an existing compliance program, and disciplining wrongdoers, in determining whether to charge the corporation.

B. Comment: In determining whether or not a corporation should be prosecuted, a prosecutor may consider whether meaningful remedial measures have been taken, including employee discipline and full restitution.[7] A corporation's response to misconduct says much about its willingness to ensure that such misconduct does not recur. Thus, corporations that fully recognize the seriousness of their misconduct and accept responsibility for it should be taking steps to implement the personnel, operational, and organizational changes necessary to establish an awareness among employees that criminal conduct will not be tolerated. Among the factors prosecutors should consider and weigh are whether the corporation appropriately disciplined the wrongdoers and disclosed information concerning their illegal conduct to the government.

Employee discipline is a difficult task for many corporations because of the human element involved and sometimes because of the seniority of the employees concerned. While corporations need to be fair to their employees, they must also be unequivocally committed, at all levels of the corporation, to the highest standards of legal and ethical behavior. Effective internal discipline can be a powerful deterrent against improper behavior by a corporation's employees. In evaluating a corporation's response to wrongdoing, prosecutors may evaluate the willingness of the corporation to discipline culpable employees of all ranks and the adequacy of the discipline imposed. The prosecutor should be satisfied that the corporation's focus is on the integrity and credibility of its remedial and disciplinary measures rather than on the protection of the wrongdoers.

[7] For example, the Antitrust Division's amnesty policy requires that "[w]here possible, the corporation [make] restitution to injured parties...."

DOJ_NMG_ 0148930

In addition to employee discipline, two other factors used in evaluating a corporation's remedial efforts are restitution and reform. As with natural persons, the decision whether or not to prosecute should not depend upon the target's ability to pay restitution. A corporation's efforts to pay restitution even in advance of any court order is, however, evidence of its "acceptance of responsibility" and, consistent with the practices and policies of the appropriate Division of the Department entrusted with enforcing specific criminal laws, may be considered in determining whether to bring criminal charges. Similarly, although the inadequacy of a corporate compliance program is a factor to consider when deciding whether to charge a corporation, that corporation's quick recognition of the flaws in the program and its efforts to improve the program are also factors to consider.

IX. Charging a Corporation: Collateral Consequences

A. General Principle: Prosecutors may consider the collateral consequences of a corporate criminal conviction in determining whether to charge the corporation with a criminal offense.

B. Comment: One of the factors in determining whether to charge a natural person or a corporation is whether the likely punishment is appropriate given the nature and seriousness of the crime. In the corporate context, prosecutors may take into account the possibly substantial consequences to a corporation's officers, directors, employees, and shareholders, many of whom may, depending on the size and nature (e.g., publicly vs. closely held) of the corporation and their role in its operations, have played no role in the criminal conduct, have been completely unaware of it, or have been wholly unable to prevent it. Prosecutors should also be aware of non-penal sanctions that may accompany a criminal charge, such as potential suspension or debarment from eligibility for government contracts or federal funded programs such as health care. Whether or not such non-penal sanctions are appropriate or required in a particular case is the responsibility of the relevant agency, a decision that will be made based on the applicable statutes, regulations, and policies.

Virtually every conviction of a corporation, like virtually every conviction of an individual, will have an impact on innocent third parties, and the mere existence of such an effect is not sufficient to preclude prosecution of the corporation. Therefore, in evaluating the severity of collateral consequences, various factors already discussed, such as the pervasiveness of the criminal conduct and the adequacy of the corporation's compliance programs, should be considered in determining the weight to be given to this factor. For instance, the balance may tip in favor of prosecuting corporations in situations where the scope of the misconduct in a case is widespread and sustained within a corporate division (or spread throughout pockets of the corporate organization). In such cases, the possible unfairness of visiting punishment for the corporation's crimes upon shareholders may be of much less concern where those shareholders have substantially profited, even unknowingly, from widespread or pervasive criminal activity. Similarly, where the top layers of the corporation's management or the shareholders of a closely-held corporation were engaged in or aware of the wrongdoing and the conduct at issue was accepted as a way of doing business for an extended period, debarment may be deemed not collateral, but a direct and entirely appropriate consequence of the corporation's wrongdoing.

The appropriateness of considering such collateral consequences and the weight to be given them may depend on the special policy concerns discussed in section III, supra.

X. Charging a Corporation: Non-Criminal Alternatives

A. General Principle: Although non-criminal alternatives to prosecution often exist, prosecutors may consider whether such sanctions would adequately deter, punish, and rehabilitate a corporation that has engaged in wrongful conduct. In evaluating the adequacy of non-criminal alternatives to prosecution, e.g., civil or regulatory enforcement actions, the prosecutor may consider all relevant factors, including:

1. the sanctions available under the alternative means of disposition;

2. the likelihood that an effective sanction will be imposed; and

3. the effect of non-criminal disposition on Federal law enforcement interests.

B. Comment: The primary goals of criminal law are deterrence, punishment, and rehabilitation. Non-criminal sanctions may not be an appropriate response to an egregious violation, a pattern of wrongdoing, or a history of non-criminal sanctions without proper remediation. In other cases, however, these goals may be satisfied without the necessity of instituting criminal proceedings. In determining whether federal criminal charges are appropriate, the prosecutor should consider the same factors (modified appropriately for the regulatory context) considered when determining whether to leave prosecution of a natural person to another jurisdiction or to seek non-criminal alternatives to prosecution. These factors include: the strength of the regulatory authority's interest; the regulatory authority's ability and willingness to take effective enforcement action; the probable sanction if the regulatory authority's enforcement action is upheld; and the effect of a non-criminal disposition on Federal law enforcement interests. See USAM §§ 9-27.240, 9-27.250.

XI. Charging a Corporation: Selecting Charges

A. General Principle: Once a prosecutor has decided to charge a corporation, the prosecutor should charge, or should recommend that the grand jury charge, the most serious offense that is consistent with the nature of the defendant's conduct and that is likely to result in a sustainable conviction.

DOJ_NMG_ 0148932

B. Comment: Once the decision to charge is made, the same rules as govern charging natural persons apply. These rules require "a faithful and honest application of the Sentencing Guidelines" and an "individualized assessment of the extent to which particular charges fit the specific circumstances of the case, are consistent with the purposes of the Federal criminal code, and maximize the impact of Federal resources on crime." See USAM § 9-27.300. In making this determination, "it is appropriate that the attorney for the government consider, inter alia, such factors as the sentencing guideline range yielded by the charge, whether the penalty yielded by such sentencing range ... is proportional to the seriousness of the defendant's conduct, and whether the charge achieves such purposes of the criminal law as punishment, protection of the public, specific and general deterrence, and rehabilitation." See Attorney General's Memorandum, dated October 12, 1993.

XII. Plea Agreements with Corporations

A. General Principle: In negotiating plea agreements with corporations, prosecutors should seek a plea to the most serious, readily provable offense charged. In addition, the terms of the plea agreement should contain appropriate provisions to ensure punishment, deterrence, rehabilitation, and compliance with the plea agreement in the corporate context. Although special circumstances may mandate a different conclusion, prosecutors generally should not agree to accept a corporate guilty plea in exchange for non-prosecution or dismissal of charges against individual officers and employees.

B. Comment: Prosecutors may enter into plea agreements with corporations for the same reasons and under the same constraints as apply to plea agreements with natural persons. See USAM §§ 9-27.400-500. This means, inter alia, that the corporation should be required to plead guilty to the most serious, readily provable offense charged. As is the case with individuals, the attorney making this determination should do so "on the basis of an individualized assessment of the extent to which particular charges fit the specific circumstances of the case, are consistent with the purposes of the federal criminal code, and maximize the impact of federal resources on crime. In making this determination, the attorney for the government considers, inter alia, such factors as the sentencing guideline range yielded by the charge, whether the penalty yielded by such sentencing range ... is proportional to the seriousness of the defendant's conduct, and whether the charge achieves such purposes of the criminal law as punishment, protection of the public, specific and general deterrence, and rehabilitation." See Attorney General's Memorandum, dated October 12, 1993. In addition, any negotiated departures from the Sentencing Guidelines must be justifiable under the Guidelines and must be disclosed to the sentencing court. A corporation should be made to realize that pleading guilty to criminal charges constitutes an admission of guilt and not merely a resolution of an inconvenient distraction from its business. As with natural persons, pleas should be structured so that the corporation may not later "proclaim lack of culpability or even complete innocence." See USAM §§ 9-27.420(b)(4), 9-27.440, 9-27.500. Thus, for instance, there should be placed upon the record a sufficient factual basis for the plea to prevent later corporate assertions of innocence.

A corporate plea agreement should also contain provisions that recognize the nature of the corporate "person" and ensure that the principles of punishment, deterrence, and rehabilitation are met. In the corporate context, punishment and deterrence are generally accomplished by substantial fines, mandatory restitution, and institution of appropriate compliance measures, including, if necessary, continued judicial oversight or the use of special masters. See USSG §§ 8B1.1, 8C2.1, et seq. In addition, where the corporation is a government contractor, permanent or temporary debarment may be appropriate. Where the corporation was engaged in government contracting fraud, a prosecutor may not negotiate away an agency's right to debar or to list the corporate defendant.

In negotiating a plea agreement, prosecutors should also consider the deterrent value of prosecutions of individuals within the corporation. Therefore, one factor that a prosecutor may consider in determining whether to enter into a plea agreement is whether the corporation is seeking immunity for its employees and officers or whether the corporation is willing to cooperate in the investigation of culpable individuals. Prosecutors should rarely negotiate away individual criminal liability in a corporate plea.

Rehabilitation, of course, requires that the corporation undertake to be law-abiding in the future. It is, therefore, appropriate to require the corporation, as a condition of probation, to implement a compliance program or to reform an existing one. As discussed above, prosecutors may consult with the appropriate state and federal agencies and components of the Justice Department to ensure that a proposed compliance program is adequate and meets industry standards and best practices. See section VII, supra.

In plea agreements in which the corporation agrees to cooperate, the prosecutor should ensure that the cooperation is complete and truthful. To do so, the prosecutor may request that the corporation waive attorney-client and work product protection, make employees and agents available for debriefing, disclose the results of its internal investigation, file appropriate certified financial statements, agree to governmental or third-party audits, and take whatever other steps are necessary to ensure that the full scope of the corporate wrongdoing is disclosed and that the responsible culprits are identified and, if appropriate, prosecuted. See generally section VIII, supra.

Subject: 11/18 CFR term member breakfast with [redacted]

Dear Mr. Gorsuch:

I'd like to invite you to a casual breakfast with myself and your fellow term members to discuss all the things that are happening here in the Washington program of CFR. This session will be held on November 18th from 8:00-9:15am at the Washington Club. (15 Dupont Circle, NW, Washington, DC)

At this meeting, I will quickly go over a few things, including:
-- Our religion and foreign policy series.
-- Our series on the nexus of science and technology and foreign policy.
-- The bipartisan initiative.
-- My roundtable with evangelical leaders

Then we'll throw it open to questions, discussions, ideas, etc.

Please RSVP to dcmeetings@cfr.org. If you have any questions about this meeting, please contact [redacted] at [redacted]

I hope you'll be able to join me.

Very best,

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
October 31, 2005

TWELVE CHARGED IN CONNECTION WITH FEDERAL RACKETEERING INVESTIGATION

Indictment Charges 7 Murders, 7 Attempted Murders, Witness Tampering, and Arson

SAN FRANCISCO - The U.S. Attorney's Office for the Northern District of California, the FBI, the San Francisco Police Department, and the ATF announced that a federal grand jury returned an 86-count second superseding indictment against 12 alleged members of the Down Below Gangsters on the following charges, among others:

- Racketeering Conspiracy - RICO (Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organization)
- 7 Murders in Aid of Racketeering
- 7 Attempted Murders in Aid of Racketeering
- Witness Tampering
- Narcotics Conspiracy
- Arson
- Firearms Conspiracy
- Use of a Firearm in Relation to a Crime of Violence

The indictment was returned under seal on October 27, and unsealed on October 28, 2005. The following individuals were charged in the indictment:

- Emile Fort, age 24,
- Edgar Diaz, age 20,
- Ricky Rollins, age 19,
- Don Johnson, age 19,
- Robert Calloway, age 21,
- Dornell Ellis, age 24,
- Allan Calloway, age 23,
- Christopher Byes, age 24,
- Paris Ragland, age 20,
- Ronnie Calloway, age 25, and 2 redacted defendants

"All citizens deserve to live in a safe community, free from gang violence and drug dealing. The scourge of gangs holds residents hostage in their own communities by living in constant fear from retribution and random violence. This is intolerable. We, as federal prosecutors, have powerful tools - the federal racketeering statutes - to dismantle these alleged organizations, and we will use them to their fullest extent when appropriate. I applaud the commitment and determination of the FBI and the San Francisco Police Department as members of the Safe Streets Task Force in working together to end this tragic violence in our communities. I also want to thank the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives for their expertise in analyzing the ballistics evidence in this case."

The indictment alleges three broad conspiracies since at least 1998: a RICO conspiracy, a firearms conspiracy in furtherance of drug distribution, and a narcotics distribution conspiracy.

RICO Conspiracy:

Members of the Down Below Gangsters are alleged to have operated principally around the Sunnydale public housing complex, in San Francisco's Visitacion Valley neighborhood. The alleged purpose of the enterprise included:

- Enriching the members and associates of the enterprise through, among other things, the distribution of narcotics and robbery.
- Preserving and protecting the power, territory and profits of the enterprise through the use of violence, threats of violence, assaults, murder, attempted murder, and obstruction of justice.
- Avoiding criminal prosecution and detection by law enforcement through the use of violence, threats of violence, assaults, murder, and attempted murder against actual, potential and perceived witnesses.

The indictment further alleges that gang members took on roles including, among others, lookout, "gofer", enforcer, hitter, protector, and street seller. The gang is alleged to have had a loosely hierarchical decision-making structure. The leaders of the gang are alleged to have authorized acts of violence, including murder, against members of the enterprise by issuing an order commonly referred to as a "green light."

Joe Ford, Special Agent in Charge of the FBI stated, "Violent gangs are a growing problem and today's indictment is the first of many on-going investigations to combat crime in our streets. It is extremely important to destabilize the gang at all levels, to include leadership as well as those committing the acts of violence. The RICO statute is a critical tool in the FBI's fight against gangs as it enables us to target the entire organization."

Firearms Conspiracy:

The defendants are charged with using firearms, including assault rifles, semi-automatic pistols and revolvers, to commit murders against individuals perceived as potential witnesses against the conspiracy. Defendants are also charged with using firearms in furtherance of a) their own narcotics trafficking, b) to provide an umbrella of armed protection to members of the conspiracy, and to c) intimidate and commit armed assaults, attempt murders, and murders against rival gang members.

San Francisco Police Chief Heather Fong stated, "This indictment sends a clear message that we are working in a collaborative effort with other law enforcement agencies to reduce violent crime in San Francisco. These shootings and homicides must stop."

The following firearms were seized during the course of this investigation:

- 3 AK-47s
- 1 SKS Assault Rifle
- 1 Mini 14 machine pistol
- 1 Mac 11 machine pistol
- 1 Mac 90 machine pistol
- 1 sawed-off shotgun
- 1 sawed-off rifle
- 10-15 pistols (.45, 9mm, .380, .25, .22)

Narcotics Conspiracy:

Gang members are charged with conspiracy to distribute and possession with intent to distribute crack cocaine, marijuana, and ecstasy. The indictment also alleges that gang members were attempting to smuggle narcotics into San Francisco County Jail. It was further part of the alleged conspiracy that narcotics were stored, prior to distribution to customers, in and around designated "stash" locations. The defendants allegedly used these "stash" locations to store crack cocaine, marijuana, ecstasy, and weapons in order to prevent their being found by the police or rivals, and to hide the items' connection to members of the conspiracy. According to the indictment, some of these "stash" locations were also used for processing, cutting, packaging, and distributing the organization's cocaine base, ecstasy, and marijuana.

Allen Calloway and Christopher Byes were arrested on October 27, and made their initial appearances on October 28. Edgar Diaz, Don Johnson, and Rickey Rollins were arrested last March on VICAR charges and are in federal custody and will make their initial appearance on November 3 before Magistrate Judge Chen. Two defendants are fugitives, and the remaining defendants are in state custody and will later be transferred to federal court to face these charges.

Eight of these defendants face life in prison or the death penalty. The other four face life in prison. However, any sentence following conviction would be imposed by the Court after consideration of the U.S. Sentencing Guidelines and the federal statute governing the imposition of a sentence, 18 U.S.C. 3553. An indictment only contains allegations against an individual and, as with all defendants, these defendants must be presumed innocent unless and until convicted.

The prosecution is the result of a joint investigation by the FBI and the San Francisco Police Department. I want to thank Philip Kearney as the lead prosecutor on this case and also Assistant United States Attorneys Richard Cutler and Hartley West and Department of Justice Organized Crime and Racketeering Section Trial Attorney David Malagold for their work on this case. Organized Crime Strike Force Chief Anjali Chaturvedi is supervising the prosecution of the case.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Heads of Department Components
United States Attorneys

FROM: Robert D. McCallum, Jr. RDM
Acting Deputy Attorney General

SUBJECT: Waiver of Corporate Attorney-Client and Work Product Protection

The Department of Justice places significant emphasis on the prosecution of corporate crimes. The Department's policy on charging business organizations is contained in the Memorandum from Deputy Attorney General Larry D. Thompson to Heads of Department Components and United States Attorneys, Re: Principles of Federal Prosecution of Business Organizations (Jan. 20, 2003) (hereinafter "Thompson Memorandum"), reprinted in United States Attorneys' Manual, tit. 9, Crim. Resource Manual, §§ 161-62. The Thompson Memorandum sets forth nine factors that federal prosecutors must consider in determining whether to charge a corporation or other business organization. One of the nine factors is "the corporation's timely and voluntary disclosure of wrongdoing and its willingness to cooperate in the investigation of its agents, including, if necessary, the waiver of corporate attorney-client and work product protection." Thompson Memorandum § II.A.4.

To ensure that federal prosecutors exercise appropriate prosecutorial discretion under the principles of the Thompson Memorandum, some United States Attorneys have established review processes for waiver requests that require federal prosecutors to obtain approval from the United States Attorney or other supervisor before seeking a waiver of the attorney-client privilege or work product protection. Consistent with this best practice, you are directed to establish a written waiver review process for your district or component. The United States Attorneys' Manual will be amended to reflect this policy. Such waiver review processes may vary from district to district (or component to component), so that each United States Attorney or component head retains the prosecutorial discretion necessary, consistent with their circumstances, to seek timely, complete, and accurate information from business organizations.

Subject: National Advisory Committee on Violence Against Women

Mr. McCallum,

On November 14-15, the final meeting of the National Advisory Committee on Violence Against Women will be taking place at the Department of Health and Human Services Building in Washington, DC. The meeting will begin at 9 a.m. on the 14th and 15th. The meeting will end at 5 p.m. on the 14th and at noon on the 15th. OVW would appreciate any involvement you could have in this meeting. Secretary Leavitt has been invited to attend, but has not yet confirmed.

On the 14th, we are arranging for representatives from other Federal agencies working on violence against women issues to give presentations to the committee and attending members of the public. At this time, OVW and HHS have invited representatives from State, Defense, Labor, Education, and Veterans Affairs. Labor and Defense have confirmed that they will participate in the meeting. If possible, we would like for you to provide brief comments in appreciation of the committee's service, present certificates to the committee members, and have pictures taken with each individual committee member (there will likely be no more than 20 present). You are more than welcome to come to the meeting whenever it's convenient for your schedule. However, we have reserved 11:30 to noon on the 14th for the required public comment period. This time will be published in the Federal Register in the next few days as the time for public comment.

If you have any questions, please contact me or Diane. Below is some background information on the committee:

The National Advisory Committee on Violence Against Women was established in 1995 to provide practical and general policy advice concerning the implementation of the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) to the Attorney General and to the Secretary of Health and Human Services. The Committee provides an organized public forum for discussion of issues relating to violence against women, specifically domestic violence, sexual assault, and stalking. The Committee increases the public awareness of these issues and illustrates the importance of a coordinated community response to violence against women through its diverse membership. Members represent a variety of backgrounds, including representatives from law enforcement, prosecutorial agencies, judicial offices, physical and mental health service providers, victim service providers, schools, corporations, faith communities, and federal, state, and tribal governments. As a Federal Advisory Committee under the Federal Advisory Committee Act, the Committee's charter must be renewed every two years. The Committee's membership changes approximately every two years as well.

Thank you,
Natalie

I have just one comment. The phrase "except as otherwise provided in subsection (f)" in subsection (d) should be deleted. That phrase is a vestige from the fallback draft that would have included a different subsection (f) than is in this version, and should have been deleted before our language was given to the Hill.

It may make sense to schedule a brief prep for Robert before the meeting. It probably won't take more than 15 -20 minutes to walk him through some of the proposals on the table. If his schedule is full, I can just try to brief him on the car ride over. I am at your disposal. (If we do schedule a prep, I think Alice would want to join us.) Thanks very much.

Only commentary I've seen about the memo in print so far is that Legal Times piece. As we've discussed, some in the bar will never accept the waiver policy, no matter how carefully we circumscribe waiver requests. But many will see it at least as an acknowledgement of the important interests favoring the privilege, as [redacted] did and [redacted] has as well. We haven't ended the debate, but I do think we will get credit from some of the participants for listening.

Subject: RE: A/C waiver

Neil --

I have a draft policy in the hands of our criminal chief (Alan Gershel who I am cc'ing with this). He is going to meet early next week with our Ecominc Crimes chief and lead corporate fraud AUSA. They will hammer out what in all likelihood will be our final policy. I can send that to you then or, if you need it now, the more crude draft I wrote. Either way, it will be very short.

Thanks for the inquiry and take care, SJM

Steve, Another USAO has asked whether we can recommend any model A/C waiver policies for their consideration. I recall that you were working on a new, state of the art policy and wonder whether it might yet be in a position that you could share it. Warm regards, NMG

Mitch - a couple other things you might want to consider are whether (a) the request for waiver should be directed to a criminal supervisor not involved in the case, and (b) it should be made in writing with an explanation of the scope of the requested waiver (e.g., limited to interview memos, includes contemporaneous opinion wp or a/c communications, extends to privileged communications during the course of the investigation itself), along with a reasoned analysis about the need for such a waiver. Only some thoughts for your consideration. Best, NMG

Only commentary I've seen about the memo in print so far is that Legal Times piece. As we've discussed, some in the bar will never accept the waiver policy, no matter how carefully we circumscribe waiver requests. But many will see it at least as an acknowledgement of the important interests favoring the privilege, as [redacted] did and [redacted] has as well. We haven't ended the debate, but I do think we will get credit from some of the participants for listening.

Can you help me find out whether DOJ weighed in on this bill introduced in 2003? Or chose not to (and if so why)? The bill would've endorsed the concept that a corporate waiver of the attorney client privilege to the SEC doesn't effect a waiver in the civil litigation context. Thanks.

Subject: Schlozman Bio

Steve,

Just tried to reach you. Here is Brad's resume; the voice mail that I left contains additional information.

NMG

Bradley J. Schlozman - Biography

Bradley J. Schlozman is the Acting Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights at the United States Department of Justice. The Civil Rights Division is responsible for enforcing federal civil rights statutes, including those statutes that prohibit discrimination on the basis of race, sex, disability, religion, and national origin in education, employment, credit, housing, public accommodations and facilities, voting, and certain federally funded and conducted programs. As Acting Assistant Attorney General, Mr. Schlozman supervises all activities of the Division (over 700 employees, including 356 attorneys).

Prior to assuming this post, Mr. Schlozman served as a Deputy Assistant Attorney General since May 2003, directly supervising the Criminal, Voting, Employment, and Special Litigation Sections of the Civil Rights Division. Before that, Mr. Schlozman served as Counsel to then-Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson.

A native of Overland Park, Kansas, Mr. Schlozman received his undergraduate degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1993 and his law degree three years later from the George Washington University Law School. After law school, Mr. Schlozman served a two-year federal judicial clerkship with Chief U.S. District Judge G. Thomas VanBebber of the District of Kansas. He then spent a year clerking for U.S. Circuit Judge Mary Beck Briscoe of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit. In 1999, Mr. Schlozman moved to Washington, where he joined the Supreme Court and Appellate Litigation Practice at Howrey, Simon, Arnold & White, LLP, before moving on to the Department of Justice in November 2001.

Bob - The letter looks good to me. The only change I might suggest is in the penultimate paragraph. The sentence about helping prevent antitrust violations in relief efforts is sandwiched between two sentences promising vigorous prosecution of antitrust violations. I suggest putting the criminal enforcement sentences together and the prevention language at the end. I think our audience wants to hear more about enforcement efforts and this organization, I think, will focus the letter a bit more clearly on their concerns. Possible language follows below, but feel free to take or leave. I assume you've run all this by ATR, but if not you may want to make sure they're on board. NMG

The Department of Justice is committed to investigating and prosecuting federal civil antitrust violations in industries in which it has expertise and all criminal antitrust violations, such as horizontal price-fixing, bid-rigging, and market allocation agreements. You may be assured that we will promptly conduct a thorough investigation and take appropriate enforcement action in response to any evidence of possible criminal wrongdoing in the gasoline, or any other, industry, obtained either through its own efforts or through referrals from the FTC or from other federal or state agencies or officials. Finally, you should know that the Department is working with both federal and state agencies and officials to help ensure that relief efforts in response to the devastation of Hurricane Katrina do not violate the federal antitrust laws.

Steve,

Thanks very much for the kind invitation to join you after the FedSoc dinner. Unfortunately, plans have conspired to keep me from the convention this year. It looks like a terrific set of panels--especially as pertains to originalism. And I would have enjoyed very much convening with you after dinner. I hope to run into you again before next year's convention, but if not, I'll see you then.

[redacted](immediately below) indicates the ABA's proposed substitute language for the sentencing guidelines to solve the waiver of attorney-client privilege problem. Do you think this would work? Do you think it's an acceptable alternative from the prosecutor's perspective? I think it is far superior to the efforts at creating a statutory limited waiver, which some parties have been advocating. But I don't have enough direct experience with waivers of privilege to know if this solution makes sense.

[redacted]- We are now far enough along with the work of the ABA Task Force to comfortably say that not only has a chill on the use of lawyers for preventive/compliance self regulation occurred within the corporation, there is evidence that demanding waiver is becoming commonplace at the federal and state level without the presence of a judge to protect the UpJohn right to counsel. [redacted] was on a panel with me where the general counsel of Bethlehem Steel and another major company general counsel reported on undue pressures to waive (in the second situation, the company was not even a target). When the question was put to the general counsels in the room if they had similiar experiences of abuse, over 50 companies represented said yes.

The solution to this situation is for the Commission to drop the phrase "waiver of the privilege" and substitute "providing the facts and documents surrounding the incident".The crime fraud and not obtainable from any other sources" exceptions to privilege and work product protect the government against abuses.

Subject: Several Recent Developments Relating to the Attorney-Client Privilege Waiver Issue Importance: High

Dear All:

The following is a summary of several recent developments relating to the privilege waiver amendment to the Federal Sentencing Guidelines and/or to the general issue of attorney-client privilege waiver that may be of interest to our informal coalition. Although many of you may already be aware of some of the items below, I wanted to be sure that everyone in the coalition was up to date on these developments.

1. Public Meeting/Informal Hearing of the U.S. Sentencing Commission Scheduled for November 15, 2005

We recently learned that in response to the various comment letters that were filed with the U.S. Sentencing Commission in August urging reconsideration of the November 2004 privilege waiver amendment to the Sentencing Guidelines (including the August 15 comment letters filed by our coalition, the ABA, Rep. Dan Lungren, and the nine former Justice Department officials), the Commission has decided to hold a "public meeting" on Tuesday, November 15, 2005 from 3:00-5:00 p.m. to discuss these issues. After seeking input from our coalition, the Commission invited representatives of the ABA, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers (NACDL), and the Association of Corporate Counsel (ACC), and former Attorney General Dick Thornburgh to testify at the event. According to the Commission's staff, who described the event to me as an "informal hearing," each witness will be asked to give a 5-10 minute oral statement, submit a written statement, and then respond to questions from the Commissioners. Appearing at the event for the ABA will be [redacted] ABA Section of Antitrust Law (i.e., the section that wrote the ABA's policy on this issue). A representative of the ABA Task Force on Attorney-Client Privilege may also attend the hearing and confer with [redacted] prior to his testimony.

2. Legal Conference on Waiver of the Attorney-Client Privilege Scheduled for November 16, 2005

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce will host a legal conference on the attorney-client privilege waiver issue on Wednesday, November 16, 2005.
The conference, titled "Erosion of the Attorney-Client Privilege: What Does the Future Hold?", will be held at the Grand Hyatt Washington, 1000 H Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Co-sponsoring the event will be the ABA Task Force on Attorney-Client Privilege, as well as the ACLU, the NACDL, and the ACC. The topics to be discussed will include the recent history of the attorney-client privilege, the effect that the privilege waiver amendment to the Sentencing Guidelines and the Justice Department's policies have had on the privilege, and the future of the privilege. Although the list of speakers is not yet complete, confirmed speakers include our [redacted] ABA Antitrust Section, representatives of the ACLU, the NACDL, and the ACC, House Judiciary Committee Chairman James Sensenbrenner, and former Deputy Attorney General George Terwilliger. The organizers of the conference have also invited other speakers as well, including various current and former officials and staff of the Justice Department, the U.S. Sentencing Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the House and Senate Judiciary Committees. Additional details on the event and online registration are available at the following link: http://www.uschamber.com/event.asp?event=Attny-Client_Privilege_11-10-05 <http://www.uschamber.com/event.asp?event=Attny-Client_Privilege_11-10-0 5> , and I am told that our coalition and Task Force members may attend at the member rate. This should be an excellent event, and I would encourage you to attend if you can. (Note: Pursuant to the CAN-SPAM Act of 2003, if you would like to opt out of receiving future commercial e-mail messages, please see the notice at the end of this e-mail) publicizing the upcoming November 16 legal conference and to generate additional publicity on the issue of attorney-client privilege waiver. The panel of featured speakers included: [redacted] U.S. Chamber of Commerce; [redacted] ACC; [redacted] NACDL; and [redacted] ACLU. Because [redacted] at the time of the briefing and could not attend in person, the ABA issued a written statement at the event. A copy of that written statement, as well the written statements issued by the Chamber, the ACC, the NACDL, and the ACLU are attached. Also attached is my memo summarizing what took place at the event. The media briefing went very well and reporters from at least five publications (i.e., BNA Securities Law Report, Influence, the Legal Times, Bloomberg, and the Financial Times) attended and asked questions. Attached are articles from BNA and the Financial Times regarding the event.

4. Memorandum from Acting Deputy Attorney General McCallum to U.S. Attorneys Dated October 21, 2005

On October 21, 2005, Acting Deputy Attorney General Robert McCallum sent a memorandum to all U.S. Attorneys and to the "Heads of Department Components" of the Justice Department instructing each of them to adopt "a written waiver review process for your district or component." I have corresponded with several members of our coalition regarding this development, and the general feeling seems to be that it has both plusses and minuses. On the plus side, it's encouraging to see that the Department is focusing on the issue and that it recognizes that there should be some limits on its demands for waiver. On the other hand, the memorandum seems to further legitimize the practice of demanding waiver in many cases and it permits the U.S. Attorneys and other Department leaders to establish a number of different waiver policies, some of which may impose only token restraints on the ability to demand waiver. Hopefully, the Department will view the October 21 memorandum as merely a first step towards resolving the privilege waiver problem.

If any other members of our coalition have other developments to report regarding the privilege waiver/Sentencing Guidelines issue, please do so. Otherwise, if you have any questions or comments regarding the items outlined above, please let me know.

You may know [redacted]. He is a former 6th Circ. clerk (Boggs, J.) and a good guy. Now with Koch Industries in Wichita (Counsel for Legal Reform), I have been speaking to him for a couple of years on "our" issue.

He sent this to me today and I forward it FYI as to what the other side is thinking.

My response, if I issue one, is along the lines of "thanks, but I can't speak for the Dept., etc." I'm sure he knows that, but probably wanted me to have this given the topic and our interest in it.

I thought this would interest you and perhaps Robt. (if either of you can find the time!).

Steve,

Thanks very much for the kind invitation to join you after the FedSoc dinner. Unfortunately, plans have conspired to keep me from the convention this year. It looks like a terrific set of panels--especially as pertains to originalism. And I would have enjoyed very much convening with you after dinner. I hope to run into you again before next year's convention, but if not, I'll see you then.

[redacted] (immediately below) indicates the ABA's proposed substitute language for the sentencing guidelines to solve the waiver of attorney-client privilege problem. Do you think this would work? Do you think it's an acceptable alternative from the prosecutor's perspective? I think it is far superior to the efforts at creating a statutory limited waiver, which some parties have been advocating. But I don't have enough direct experience with waivers of privilege to know if this solution makes sense.

[redacted] - We are now far enough along with the work of the ABA Task Force to comfortably say that not only has a chill on the use of lawyers for preventive/compliance self regulation occurred within the corporation, there is evidence that demanding waiver is becoming commonplace at the federal and state level without the presence of a judge to protect the UpJohn right to counsel. [redacted] was on a panel with me where the general counsel of Bethlehem Steel and another major company general counsel reported on undue pressures to waive (in the second situation, the company was not even a target). When the question was put to the general counsels in the room if they had similiar experiences of abuse, over 50 companies represented said yes.

The solution to this situation is for the Commission to drop the phrase "waiver of the privilege" and substitute "providing the facts and documents surrounding the incident".The crime fraud and not obtainable from any other sources" exceptions to privilege and work product protect the government against abuses.

Subject: Several Recent Developments Relating to the Attorney-Client Privilege Waiver Issue Importance: High

Dear All:

The following is a summary of several recent developments relating to the privilege waiver amendment to the Federal Sentencing Guidelines and/or to the general issue of attorney-client privilege waiver that may be of interest to our informal coalition. Although many of you may already be aware of some of the items below, I wanted to be sure that everyone in the coalition was up to date on these developments.

1. Public Meeting/Informal Hearing of the U.S. Sentencing Commission Scheduled for November 15, 2005

We recently learned that in response to the various comment letters that were filed with the U.S. Sentencing Commission in August urging reconsideration of the November 2004 privilege waiver amendment to the Sentencing Guidelines (including the August 15 comment letters filed by our coalition, the ABA, Rep. Dan Lungren, and the nine former Justice Department officials), the Commission has decided to hold a "public meeting" on Tuesday, November 15, 2005 from 3:00-5:00 p.m. to discuss these issues. After seeking input from our coalition, the Commission invited representatives of the ABA, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers (NACDL), and the Association of Corporate Counsel (ACC), and former Attorney General Dick Thornburgh to testify at the event. According to the Commission's staff, who described the event to me as an "informal hearing," each witness will be asked to give a 5-10 minute oral statement, submit a written statement, and then respond to questions from the Commissioners. Appearing at the event for the ABA will be [redacted] of the ABA Section of Antitrust Law (i.e., the section that wrote the ABA's policy on this issue). A representative of the ABA Task Force on Attorney-Client Privilege may also attend the hearing and confer with [redacted] prior to his testimony.

2. Legal Conference on Waiver of the Attorney-Client Privilege Scheduled for November 16, 2005

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce will host a legal conference on the attorney-client privilege waiver issue on Wednesday, November 16, 2005.

Subject: rack-up speech

Neil, an FYI from the strategic initiatives meeting today. Kyle said that he would like for the rack-up speech to be ready to go with the AG on his international trip, so he can work on it--even though the delivery date for the speech is Dec. 1. The AG leaves Saturday morning.

I will give you what I have tomorrow (Tuesday). As Mike Purpura did, I'm leaving the intro and closing for Tucker McNeil (OPA speechwriter) to do, and he said he'd need a couple of hours to do that. He also advised that, to have it ready for the AG, it would need to be staffed by Wednesday night.

OK, I can't figure out how to turn off this shading ... so hang in there:

CFR is asking what our plan will be for the AG's presentation on 12/1:

1. For the CFR speech on 12/1, the Attorney General can: "choose from three different formats including - Format one: a 20 minute speech; Format two: 20 minutes of conversation with the moderator; or Format three: a 10 minute speech followed by 10 minutes of conversation with the moderator. Please note that for all formats, the remarks are followed by a 40 minute question and answer session with the audience."

2. do we want it to be open press?

Kyle and Courtney said to toss this to you guys to make a recommendation.

Top O' The Mornin' Sir. Welcome back.

2 quick items for you to be aware of.

1. I have emailed Brett Gerry twice and called him as well to clear the latest batch of Olesky documents. Have not heard back from him. Do you want me to get this across the finish line (happy to), or does it make sense for you to. Just let me know.

2. Went to the Strategic Initiatives meeting yesterday. You will get some detailed minutes. Gave them a report on the status of our Human Trafficking Report. Short of it is, yesterday morning we had a meeting hosted by CRT with all the relevant players that could contribute to such a report (CRT, OLP, OJP, OVW, CRM). I advised the group what it was we were looking for and we set a deadline of November 28 for each component to provide CRT with relevant data, etc. In the meantime, CRT will be working on a specific outline/narrative and will marry up the data to the outline once received. We will meet again on December 5 with an eye towards having a finished product by year's end (or possibly sooner). One question raised was quality of production/publishing. My thought is to have something nice like the Ashcroft 2001-2004 rack-up, with the caveat that whatever we do, we do it in-house.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT FILES FOR CONTEMPT AGAINST GOLDEN GROVE PRISON AUTHORITIES REGARDING CONDITIONS OF CONFINEMENT

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The Justice Department today announced that it filed a Show Cause Motion with the United States District Court for the Virgin Islands asking the Court to hold the Virgin Islands in contempt of a long standing Consent Decree regarding conditions of confinement at the Golden Grove Prison and Detention Facility in St. Croix.

A Consent Decree was filed in November 1986 that required Golden Grove to remedy unconstitutional conditions including operational and security procedures, medical and mental health care, and fire safety and environmental sanitation deficiencies. In the years following, the United States provided technical assistance to the Virgin Islands in the form of expert consultant reports, staffing needs assessments and other assistance. The United States also obtained supplemental Orders and agreements with the Virgin Islands on several occasions to implement the Consent Decree's requirements. In 2003, 2004 and 2005 the Justice Department conducted expert consultant visits at the facility and received reports, which were shared with the jurisdiction in an attempt to identify current and ongoing conditions that did not meet constitutionally mandated minimum requirements of security and safety. The jurisdiction promised remedial action, but Justice Department attorneys found that conditions at the facility had regressed in all areas. The Department found a routine history of inmate on inmate assaults, lack of correctional officer staffing in housing units, and constitutionally inadequate medical and mental health care for incarcerated individuals.

"The Justice Department has made every effort to assist the Virgin Islands in meeting its obligation to remedy the deplorable current and ongoing violations at Golden Grove," said Bradley J. Schlozman, Acting Assistant Attorney General for the Civil Rights Division. "Today, we are simply asking the court to ensure this prison facility's compliance with constitutional standards."

In its filing, the Department asks the Court to find the Virgin Islands in contempt of the Consent Decree, supplemental Court Orders, and Plan of Compliance and further seeks the appointment of a Special Master to implement the requirements of the Consent Decree.

Tasia, I'm still working on the AG's speech and would like to continue doing so tomorrow and over the weekend. Would it be ok if I e-mail it to you early next week? I know that would mean the AG wouldn't have it for his flight outbound, but he would still have access to it during his various flights thereafter. I'm sorry this is taking longer than anticipated but I've been distracted and haven't yet had the chance to pay this the attention it deserves. NMG

Brad:

Here are the following documents which may be useful to the AG's folks:

1. The AG's comments for the Iftaar event at the EU Amb. house (I don't believe he used all of them)
2. A briefing sheet I completed for the AG for the 4-12-2005 interagency meeting, which includes some talking points
3. Our Post 9/11 Backlash briefing sheet, which I have recently updated. This provides statistics, information on our cases, and detailed information on our outreach efforts.
4. Today's press release announcing the guilty plea of a man who sent an email to the Islamic Center of America threatening to kill Muslims.

Please let me know if you need additional information.

Kyle,

Rajeev Venkayya, Senior Director for Biodefense on the Homeland Security Council staff called a meeting of agency points-of-contact this afternoon to discuss follow-up plans to the issuance of the National Strategy for Pandemic Influenza. They are developing a government-wide Implementation Plan for which they are assembling writing teams and for which they have an initial draft of an outline. They want an initial draft of that done by late November or early December.

They then expect to have a tabletop exercise to which they will invite a subgroup of the Cabinet which they expect will include the Attorney General, in part because they expet there to be issues about authorities. They are looking at December 10 as the likely date for this. As in the past, the AG will likely get a written invitation to participate from the White House.

Finally, they also expect each Department and agency to develop its own implementation plan about how it expects to function in the event of a pandemic. They did not set a date for these but they are targeting the beginning of the year, I think, for completion of the Implementation Plan and presumably the Department/agency plans as well.

I understand there is a fair bit of work that has been done within the Department that we should be in a position to draw on in thinking about DOJ's potential contribution to the broader Implementation Plan, in prepping the Attorney General for the exercise, and in developing our own implementation plan. Representatives of ODAG and several components assisted in the drafting of the National Response Plan and, of relevance to this issue, the Biological Incident Annex. In addition, over the course of the last several years, various components have participated in numerous exercises, including the TOPOFF series, in which biological incidents were included in the scenarios.

Although it would be helpful to have a better sense of what the master Implementation Plan is going to look like, and in particular to have more of a sense from HHS, which will have the lead for any response to a pandemic, about how they want to proceed on some key points and what resources of the Department they would like to draw on, as well as to have some guidance on the Departmental plans, in light of the December 10 likely deadline, James McAtamney and I intend to call two preliminary meetings of people within DOJ to get people thinking about and working on both. As we near the date for the exercise and as the contours of the national implementation plan become more clear, we will be in a better position to suggest the format and timing of a briefing for the Attorney General.

Give me a call at 5-3481 if you have any questions. I'll let you know when we are meeting.

Lee

Tracy - Thanks so much for tackling this. I've made a few minor edits and, subject to any further edits you may have, this seems good to go. The question remains, however: who should sign it? My first instinct is that Regina is an appropriate candidate b/c she directs both BJS and NIJ and because she was a cc recipient of the letter. But you know the lay of the land better and I would appreciate your views. Thanks, NMG

Dear :

Thank you for your recent letter to the Attorney General and myself regarding the research and statistics operations of the Department of Justice. We appreciate your interest and input.

As you are aware, the Department—primarily through the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) and the National Institute of Justice (NIJ)—has a long and distinguished history f conducting and supporting statistical research and analysis. Often, these efforts have contributed significantly to the development of policy and programs designed to carry out the Department's mission, values, and goals – including protecting America against the threat of terrorism, enforcing federal criminal laws, and preventing and reducing crime by assisting state, tribal, local and community-based programs. We take the missions of BJS and NIJ seriously and will continue to ensure that any appointees to potential vacancies in those components are of the highest professional caliber.

Let me assure you as well that all of the Department of Justice's statistical research activities are conducted in accordance with statutory requirements, applicable regulations, as well as quality control guidelines issued by the Department and the Office of Management and Budget. Congress and the Administration are often and quite appropriately involved in determining what issues merit research and analysis. However, to ensure the integrity, accuracy, impartiality, and objectivity of the Department's statistical research, the researcher and/or statistician independently determines the appropriate methodology to be used in each study or analysis in accordance with generally accepted research and statistical standards.

Thank you again for your interest in the Department of Justice's research and statistics.

Sincerely,

Moschella, William

Neil,

The Newshour has asked me to do a segment tonight on the Graham Amendment.
I'm not sure my schedule will permit it, but I'll try hard if (a) it would be desirable from DOJ's perspective, and (b) it would be easy for you to provide me some materials, like a copy of the current version and some talkers. What do you think?

Importance: High

All:

In support of ongoing pandemic influenza planning efforts, we have asked the authors of recent Science and Nature papers on the subject to provide a presentation on their pandemic models and projections of the impact of various interventions on the spread of a pandemic virus. Both papers are attached.

The presentation will take place this Tuesday, Nov. 15 from 2:00-4:00 PM in EEOB Rm. 450. Departments and agencies are invited to send two representatives to the briefing. Clearance information should be provided to Sharon Wells by 3:00 PM on Monday (swells@who.eop.gov)

This work is supported by the NIH/MIDAS program, has been performed in the U.S. and U.K. and was presented at HHS last week. Further information on the MIDAS program can be found here: http://www.nigms.nih.gov/Initiatives/MIDAS/Homeland Security to issue regulations to govern gender-based asylum claims.

The Committee recognizes the important contribution the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) plays in disrupting and dismantling drug organizations and in protecting our national security. The Committee directs the Attorney General, in cooperation with the Director of National Intelligence, to submit a report, not later than 120 days after enactment of this Act, on the practicality of integrating the DEA, or a portion thereof, into the Intelligence Community.

The Committee is extremely disappointed with the amount of time it takes the Department to respond to hearing questions submitted for the record by Members of the Subcommittee. Many of these questions are factual and responses should not require multiple layers of review or require weeks, and often months, to submit. The Committee is concerned that in practice, this has resulted in the needless withholding of budgetary and programmatic information that is necessary to the Committee's work. The Committee believes that the open sharing of information results in a more effective relationship between the branches of government and improves the quality of legislation.

The Committee encourages the Attorney General to ensure that every contract the Department enters into that contemplates the exchange of personal data between the contractor and the Department include a provision requiring that entity to have a security policy in place that contains procedures to promptly notify any individual whose personal information was, or is reasonably believed to have been, lost or acquired by an unauthorized person. Notification could either be delayed or shall not occur if it would impede a law enforcement investigation or cause damage to national security. The Committee is concerned about the security of personal data, as highlighted recently by several security breaches at large companies that resulted in the theft of personal data.

Office of Privacy and Civil Liberties.—Since September 11, 2001, the Congress has provided both significant additional resources and broad legal authorities to the Justice Department to meet its counterterrorism responsibilities. In fiscal year 2004, the Committee directed the Department to designate a senior policy official to assume responsibility for developing appropriate civil rights safeguards, particularly as related to the war on terrorism, and for coordinating the work of all Department components involved in these efforts. For fiscal year 2005, Congress provided funding for 2 additional professional staff positions for the Office and required a report to be submitted this January detailing the specific responsibilities and authorities of the Office, with annual activity reports due in the following years. The Committee is disappointed by the Department's inability to complete the initial report and is concerned that this reflects poorly on the attitude of the Department toward the responsibilities of this Office. The Committee directs the Department of Justice to submit the initial report as soon as possible and to provide subsequent annual reports by January 30 of each year.

Gangs.—According to FBI Congressional testimony, "Gangs and other criminal enterprises, operating in the U.S. and throughout the world, pose increasing concerns for the international law en-submit a report, within 90 days of enactment, to the Committees Appropriations detailing those actions that the Department and th take to implement the recommendations of the National Academ report on the coverage of affected populations by the Radiation E Compensation Act (Public Law 108-375).

Reducing the Number of Alien Absconders.--The conferees rec importance of reducing the rate of aliens who do not comply with Removal, known as absconders. However, the ability to address t not fully within the control of one Federal department. Both the I Homeland Security (DHS) and Department of Justice (DOJ) must together to achieve this goal. The conferees direct DOJ, in conjun to study existing apprehension, detention, appeal, and removal po procedures. The conferees direct DHS and DOJ to jointly submit Committees on Appropriations by February 18, 2006, on the effo Department will take to reduce the absconder rate, including prop existing policies, procedures, and laws to further assist in reducin population.

Office of Privacy and Civil Liberties.--The conference agreement adopts, by reference, language included in the House report expressing disappointment in the Department's inability to complete the initial report on the establishment of this Office. The conferees direct the Department to submit the initial report, as soon as possible, and to provide subsequent annual reports by January 30 of each year. Of the funds provided for the Departmental Leadership Program, not less than $690,000 shall be available for the Office of Privacy and Civil Liberties and for no other purpose.

Justice Information Sharing Technology

The conference agreement provides $125,000,000 for this account, instead of $135,000,000 as proposed by both the House and Senate.

The conference agreement includes $10,000,000 for the Unified Financial Management System and not less than $5,000,000 for the Public Key Infrastructure and Secure Communications program.

Information Technology Governance Board.--Given the Department's recent high profile information technology (IT) failures and the large amount of resources devoted to these programs, the conferees direct the Department to set up an Investment Review Board to be led by the Deputy Attorney General to oversee

FY 05 HOUSE RPT

HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE REPORT 108-576

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The Committee recommends a total of $124,906,000 for General Administration for fiscal year 2005. This amount is $19,342,000 above the level provided in the current year and $61,645,000 below the request.

This account supports the development of policy objectives and the overall management of the Department of Justice. The recommendation fully funds the request for the Office of Intelligence Policy and Review, including a program increase of 30 additional positions and $6,592,000. The recommendation also fully funds the requested program increase of 16 additional positions and $3,020,000 for the Security and Emergency Planning Staff, including $1,500,000 for the implementation of a Department-wide personnel security tracking system. In addition, the recommendation provides an increase of $395,000 to strengthen hiring and diversity policies and $500,000 to enhance attorney recruitment and retention through the student loan repayment program. The Committee strongly supports the request for the Justice Unified Telecom Network, Public Key Infrastructure, enterprise architecture, the information sharing initiative, IT project oversight, the investment management project and the unified financial management system. The Committee recommendation assumes all of these projects will be funded by the Department's Working Capital Fund.

The Committee directs the Department to provide quarterly reports describing Department resources dedicated to Indian Country and to combating illegal activity at Native American Casinos. This report shall include: the number of agents assigned to Indian Country; man-hours worked in Indian Country; the amount and types of training provided; the number of matters initiated; the number of cases; the number of subjects/defendants; the number of convictions; the amount of restitution ordered; and the actions of the Indian Gaming Working Group, including coordination with the National Indian Gaming Commission.

Consistent with direction included in previous years, the recommendation includes necessary sums to continue efforts to replace locks used to store classified information.

Office of Privacy and Civil Liberties.—Since September 11, 2001, the Congress has provided both significant additional resources and broad legal authorities to the Justice Department to meet its counterterrorism responsibilities. In fiscal year 2004, the Committee directed the Department to designate a senior policy official to assume responsibility for developing appropriate civil rights safeguards, particularly as related to the war on terrorism, and for coordinating the work of all Department components involved in these efforts. The Committee understands that the Office of the Deputy Attorney General has appointed two officials with responsibility for reviewing civil rights and civil liberties issues. The recommendation provides not less than $690,000 for the salaries and benefits of this office, including funding for two additional professional staff positions to facilitate the work of the office. The Committee directs the Department of Justice to submit a report to the Congress, detailing the specific responsibilities and authority of the Office of Privacy and Civil Liberties protection within 30 days. Subsequently, the Committee directs the Department of Justice to report to the Committee annually on the activities of the office.

FY 05 CONF RPT

allocation within the operating year with national law enforcement priorities, in particular the counterterrorism and counterintelligence priorities, articulated by the Administration and supported by the Committees on Appropriations.

The conference agreement adopts by reference the House report language concerning fast track programs and directs the Department of Justice to submit a report within 45 days of enactment of this Act providing a list of the fast track programs operating throughout the country, and an estimate of the resources the Department of Justice saves and the costs that are avoided by these programs. The report shall also discuss opportunities to expand fast track programs to other districts.

The conferees believe that the Department of Justice needs to coordinate its efforts to address gang-related crimes. The Department of Justice is directed to submit a report to the Committees on Appropriations no later than 30 days after enactment of this Act on how the Department is addressing gang issues throughout the country.

The conference agreement adopts by reference the House report language concerning the establishment of an international law enforcement alliance.

Office of Privacy and Civil Liberties.—The conference agreement includes not less than $690,000 for the salaries and benefits of this office including funding for 2 additional professional staff positions. The conference agreement adopts by reference the House report language requiring the submission of a report detailing the specific responsibilities and authorities of the Office of Privacy and Civil Liberties within 30 days of enactment of this Act. In addition, the Department of Justice shall report to the Committees on Appropriations annually on the activities of this office. 716

Debt Collection.—The Government Accountability Office recently found that outstanding criminal debt as reported by the Department of Justice totaled about $25,000,000,000 as of September 30, 2002, almost double the amount reported by Justice 3 years earlier. Moreover, the Department of Justice reported collecting only about $800,000,000 of criminal debt for fiscal year 2002.

In view of the increase in reported outstanding criminal debt and low collections of such debt, the conferees are concerned that the Department of Justice along with other agencies still has not taken action to develop a strategic plan for improving criminal debt collection. The conferees understand one of the reasons for this outstanding criminal debt is that the Mandatory Victims Restitution Act of 1996 makes restitution mandatory in all violent crimes and most property crimes regardless of a defendant's ability to pay. Nevertheless, there appears to be criminal debt that may be collectible.

To address the large balances of outstanding criminal debt, the conferees direct the Attorney General to establish a task force within 90 days of enactment of this Act that includes other Federal agencies, including, but not limited to, the Department of the Treasury, the Office of Management and Budget, and the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, to participate in the task force. Led by the Department of Justice, the task force will be responsible for developing a strategic plan for improving criminal debt collection. The strategic plan shall include specific approaches for better managing, accounting for, reporting, and collecting criminal debt. Specifically, the plan shall include steps that can be taken to better and more promptly identify all collectible criminal debt so that a meaningful allowance for uncollectable criminal debt can be reported and used for measuring debt collection performance. The conferees direct the Attorney General to report to the Committees on Appropriations within 180 days of enactment of this Act on the activities of the task force and the development of a strategic plan.

Fugitive Apprehension.—In an October 19, 2004, report, the Department of Justice acknowledges that "the United States Marshals Service is the federal government's primary agency for apprehending fugitives". While the Department does not recommend transferring fugitive apprehension activities to the USMS to ensure continued departmental management flexibility, it recognizes that USMS fugitive efforts free up resources for other Federal law en-

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The Committee recommends a total of $106,664,000 for General Administration for fiscal year 2004. This amount is $16,187,000 above the level provided in fiscal year 2003, excluding supplemental amounts, and $27,108,000 below the request.

This account supports the development of policy objectives and the overall management of the Department of Justice. The recommendation provides inflationary adjustments to maintain the current operating level in fiscal year 2004, and includes an increase of $7,000,000 for the Office of the Chief Information Officer (CIO) to implement information security upgrades. The Committee remains concerned that several information technology programs are occurring throughout the Justice Department with little or no coordination, including LEO, RISS and the FBI's Operation Gateway. Toward that end, the Committee directs the Justice Management Division (JMD) to provide a report to the Committee by January 2, 2004, that catalogs all existing and planned information sharing projects. The Committee reminds the Justice Department that all information technology reprogrammings must be certified by the Department's CIO to ensure coordination of resources.

The recommendation also includes an increase of $6,517,000 for ongoing improvements to physical security at the RFK Justice Building. This funding is in addition to fiscal year 2003 funding of $7,917,611 provided for contract guard costs, backup power supplies, and other building safety needs. The Committee has yet to receive the Justice Department's comprehensive security assessment.

The Committee provided funding above the request to the Justice Department and other agencies within this bill in fiscal year 2003 to aggressively investigate and prosecute corporate fraud. The Justice Department is directed to submit a report by December 15, 2003, in consultation with the Securities and Exchange Commission, providing a status of joint efforts to combat corporate corruption.

The Committee remains concerned with possible illegal activity associated with gambling casinos on Native American reservations, and directs the Justice Department to submit a report to the Committee by October 12, 2003 describing all ongoing Justice Department efforts with regard to this issue.

The Committee continues to strongly support the counterterrorism efforts of the Department. In the aftermath of September 11th, the Congress has provided significant additional resources and broad new legal authorities to the Justice Department. However, the Committee is sensitive to concerns that this enhanced capability may potentially impinge on individual civil liberties. To ensure the continued effectiveness and efficiency of the Department's counterterrorism and law enforcement efforts, the Committee directs the Justice Department to designate a senior policy official to assume responsibility for developing appropriate civil rights safeguards specifically related to the war on terrorism and for coordinating the work of the Office of Inspector General, the Civil Rights Division, the U.S. Attorneys, and the various other Justice Department entities to ensure effective oversight of Departmental activities in this area. The Department is directed to consult with the Committee prior to beginning this effort.

The Committee urges the Attorney General to posthumously award the Public Safety Officers Medal of Valor to the 414 public safety officers who perished on September 11, 2001, as described in House Concurrent Resolution 243.

DIVISION B—COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS, 2004

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

GENERAL ADMINISTRATION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

The conferees recommend a total of $106,687,000 for General Administration, Salaries and Expenses, instead of $106,664,000 as proposed by the House and $116,171,000 as proposed by the Senate.

The conferees note that during fiscal year 2003, the Justice Department announced a number of new initiatives without consulting Congress, including creation of the Terrorist Threat Integration Center, the Terrorist Screening Center, and the Anti-Terrorism Advisory Councils. These follow the proliferation of task forces, a massive and evolving reorganization of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and various database initiatives in the previous fiscal year. No legislative proposals have been submitted to establish any of these entities; it is unclear what the long term funding needs associated with each of these will be; and most importantly, it is unclear what the overarching strategy is to reconcile each of these entities within the current structure of the Justice Department and blend them with other Federal law enforcement entities outside the Justice Department to ensure that law enforcement at all levels has the tools to effectively combat terrorism and protect citizens from traditional crimes. The conferees remain supportive of the Justice Department, and toward that end direct the Justice Department to submit with the fiscal year 2005 budget a rationalization of these various efforts with the goal of consolidating efforts to ensure that Federal law enforcement enhances its ability to prevent terrorist attacks and fight traditional crime.

The conference agreement adopts by reference House and Senate language providing an increase of $7,000,000 for the highest priority activities of the Chief Information Officer (CIO), as well as House language regarding a report on all existing and planned information technology sharing projects, and review and coordination of Justice Department information technology initiatives. The conferees will consider a reprogramming for information technology projects should additional funds be necessary. The conferees remain concerned with the proliferation of database initiatives and direct the Justice CIO to provide quarterly briefings. The conferees request the Justice CIO to submit a prioritized list of information technology projects to the Committees on Appropriations with the FY 2005 budget submission.

The conference agreement adopts by reference Senate language regarding funding for RFK building security needs. The conferees adopt by reference House language regarding corporate fraud and Native American gambling.

The conferees adopt by reference House language regarding the creation of a position to oversee Department of Justice activities with regard to civil rights. The conferees expect this position to be filled by a senior career official with specific knowledge and experience in civil rights. The conferees adopt by reference House language regarding posthumous award of Public Safety Officers Medal of Valor to the 414 public safety officers who perished on September 11, 2001. The conferees adopt by reference House language regarding a comprehensive review of all training programs for State and local law enforcement.

The conferees adopt by reference House and Senate language regarding the Justice Department's core financial management system and direct the Department to consider a cross-servicing arrangement with another Federal agency to provide these services rather than building a system of its own. A study of such a cross-servicing option and other options shall be submitted by March 1, 2004. The conferees will consider a reprogramming for these activities as necessary. The conferees adopt by reference House language regarding locks.

Another White House weekend message. I think I will go just because it may give us a little better idea what people are thinking about actually doing. Would any of the rest of you like to come along? If so can you let Saovaluck know and give her clearance information? Saovaluck, can you get me cleared in and print out this stuff?

Thanks much.

All:

In support of ongoing pandemic influenza planning efforts, we have asked the authors of recent Science and Nature papers on the subject to provide a presentation on their pandemic models and projections of the impact of various interventions on the spread of a pandemic virus. Both papers are attached.

The presentation will take place this Tuesday, Nov. 15 from 2:00-4:00 PM in EEOB Rm. 450. Departments and agencies are invited to send two representatives to the briefing. Clearance information should be provided to Sharon Wells by 3:00 PM on Monday (swells@who.eop.gov)

This work is supported by the NIH/MIDAS program, has been performed in the U.S. and U.K. and was presented at HHS last week. Further information on the MIDAS program can be found here: http://www.nigms.nih.gov/Initiatives/MIDAS/

Thank you.

I think this is great news - looks like we have a green light to pursue this both in NY and DC. [redacted] mentioned at the Term Member conference that he thought this was one of the most important policy debates going on this year.

You free to catch up on this either this evening or tomorrow? We should follow up with [redacted] quickly [redacted]

Dear [redacted] & Neil:

Greetings! I hope this email finds you well. I've just gone over your proposal for a seminar on torture policy with [redacted] and she agrees that it is an important, timely topic to examine for the term members.

- She thinks that it would be worthwhile for you to approach our Army fellow, Col. [redacted] and get his sense on how we can best frame the discussion. The main idea of a policy primer is great; but are we trying to get to a discussion which examines the efficacy of torture? or will it be a pure policy examination? [redacted] also suggested that you contact [redacted] for her opinions.

-We think a panel consisting of a military person, a ngo person, and a DoD person may be best to offer the best perspectives. (The public diplomacy speakers suggested don't seem to fit.)

-We have a date for a New York session, December 12th, from 6:30-8:30 p.m.
We don't have any DC dates available yet. Perhaps we might reprise this event in the spring as suggested on the proposal form? (to coincide with the interpretation of the McCain amendment?)

Please let me know what you think and if I've been unclear in any way.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Should Foreign Terrorists Have the Right to Sue U.S. Troops?

Jon Kyl, November 28, 2005

The U.S. Supreme Court recently decided that even prisoners in the war against terrorism have a legal right to contest their "status" - even those who would kill us in an instant if given half a chance. They can do that by suing their captors under a statute that is available to criminal defendants in U.S. Courts. But this procedure (called a writ of habeas corpus) is not a Constitutional right for non-U.S. citizens. Neither prisoners of war nor terrorist detainees have ever had such a right in previous wars.

The detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, have been called the worst of the worst. These terrorist trainers, bomb makers, recruiters, financiers and bodyguards of Osama bin Laden have indiscriminately targeted civilians. For a variety of reasons, they do not qualify for the protections of the Geneva Conventions. Nonetheless, official U.S. policy is to apply Geneva standards, including access to lawyers, Red Cross visits, and so forth. A Combatant Status Review Tribunal (CSRT) system allows every detainee to challenge his designation as an enemy combatant, and the status of each is assessed annually by an Administrative Review Board. Each detainee is assigned a military officer as a personal representative, to assists in hearing preparation. Detainees have the right to testify before the tribunal, call witnesses, and introduce any other evidence. The question has been their rights to challenge the CSRT decisions in federal court.

An amendment I recently co-sponsored with Senator Lindsey Graham (R-SC) and Carl Levin (D-MI) codified the traditional assumption (overturned by the recent Supreme Court decision) that federal law does not grant enemy combatants detained outside the United States the unfettered right to file suit in U.S. federal courts. The amendment would allow a one-time federal court review of military court decisions at Guantanamo, but it would be limited to the question of whether proper procedures and standards were followed.

The amendment was adopted by a vote of 84-14 and included in the Senate Defense Authorization bill, which is now being merged with the House of Representatives' version.

It's important to make clear that this amendment does not affect the cherished and historic habeas corpus rights of American citizens. It's simply a necessary clarification for detainees since, for the first time in our history, foreign terrorists in large numbers have begun to claim the same benefits as citizens under the Constitution and our laws. More than 160 habeas cases have been brought in the DC Circuit Court on behalf of approximately 300 Guantanamo detainees. Without clarification of the law, all 500 detainees at the facility, and many more in the future, could demand federal court hearings not only on whether the government correctly classified them as enemy combatants, but on any other subject as well. Some have already sued over matters such as the kinds of reading material that are made available to them.

International law allows any nation the right to detain enemy combatants for the duration of a conflict. We certainly never "tried" captured Nazis or Japanese POWs in World War II (with the exception of a few leaders charged with war crimes), although many were held for years. The primary reason we detain members of al Qaeda is to prevent them from killing more Americans, and, secondarily, to gather useful intelligence.

Allowing terrorist detainees to file multiple lawsuits against their captors doesn't just make a mockery of our justice system, it impedes that critical intelligence function. Michael Ratner, a lawyer for numerous Guantanamo detainees, boasted to Mother Jones magazine in March that:

"The litigation is brutal for [the Untied States]. It's huge. We have over one hundred lawyers now from big and small firms working to represent these detainees. Every time an attorney goes down there, it makes it that much harder [for the U.S. military]. You can't run an interrogation...with attorneys."

My colleague Sen. Lindsey Graham of South Carolina recently responded on the Senate floor: "The detainees at Guantanamo are not American citizens facing criminal trial, [but] terrorists who have taken up arms against the United States. There has never been a time in our military history where an enemy combatant or prisoner of war has been allowed access to federal court to bring lawsuits against the people they are fighting."

In other words, foreign terrorists have never had the right to sue U.S. troops. And now is certainly not the time to give it to them.

BRIEFING PROPOSAL

Delighted to touch base again after several years being in the trenches.
I'm working as the policy advisor for the Office of Detainee Affairs under the Office of Secretary of Defense. We do policy for the Department of Defense related to detainee issues Part of our charter is outreach and we have an outreach presentation related to our operations in Guantanamo Bay which I believe would be an interesting forum/presentation for the Council. The four presenters are:

1. [redacted], Principal Director, Office of Detainee Affairs, Office of the Secretary of Defense (DASD-DA)
2. RADM [redacted], Director, Office for the Administrative Review of the Detention of Enemy Combatants (OARDEC)
3. BGEN [redacted], USAF, Legal Adviser to the Appointing Authority, Office of Military Commissions (OMC)

4 COL [redacted], USAF, Detainee Affairs Division Chief, Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS)

Given the dates of the presentation organizational substitutes may be used, but the format will be the same.
The panel is called "the Guantanamo Bay Detainee Policies, Proceses and Operations brief".
The brief is approximately 50 minutes is length and followed by a 30 minute Q and A session. Of course a closed door non attribution session with the Council experts is also possible.

Please discuss with your colleagues and let's discuss. My telephone number is: [redacted]. Hope you are enjoying my favorite town and look forward to seeing you in the near future.

Cheers,
[redacted]

Dec 12 Roundtable

Dear [redacted]

It was great to meet [redacted] last night. I am just sorry I wasn't able to track down [redacted]. Next time.

Per our discussion, [redacted] and I suggest sending out a notice today (or tomorrow) with the speakers we currently have lined up, though we may have more confirmed folks later. We'd also like to rename the roundtable as follows:

Term Member Roundtable on the Interrogation and Treatment of Enemy Combatants in the War on Terror.

The confirmed participants:

Patrick Philbin, Former Associate Deputy Attorney General, and former Deputy Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, U.S. Department of Justice.

[redacted] Human Rights Watch

Presiders/Moderators:

[redacted] and Neil Gorsuch

I also wanted to raise the possibility of repeating this roundtable here in DC where I would be able to draw in some pretty good speakers as well. If you're interested, what dates would work? Mike and I can get busy lining folks up.

Many thanks and best regards,

Neil Gorsuch

Very good letter. My comments are minor:

1. When the letter refers to the current Administration, it is capatizlied, but it is lower case when it refers to the "previous administration." Shouldn't it be consistent?
2. p.1, para. 1, second sentence: insert "to" before "correct".
3. p.2-3, revise carry-over sentence to read: "It is distressing that the Post article omitted all of the information provided by the Department that shows successful and increased enforcement activities by the Civil Rights Division in virtually every area of jurisdiction - including disability rights, voting rights, housing rights, religious liberties, and the rights of institutionalized persons." 4. p.4, first line "3" should be "three"

This is a great letter. I have a few minor edits.
My edits--
(1) Delete the office building line in the inside address.
(2) Pg. 2, third full paragraph, do you want to say "unusually large number" of attorneys who accepted a retirement pkg---I would drop "unusually large." (3) Pg. 3, second full paragraph, third full sentence should begin "Through" our strong commitment. . ., we have (4) Pg. 4, do you need to explain Title IV and explain sec. 504 of the Rehabilitation Act?
(5) Pg. 4, since we are responding to Specter as Chairman we need to cc: The Honorable Patrick Leahy Ranking Minority Member

We have not yet had the chance to meet, but my friend, [redacted], indicates that he's been in touch about our Dec 12 CFR term member roundtable. We'd love to have someone from DoD round out the panel. Currently, we have an NGO rep. and [redacted], a former colleague of mine here at DoJ ([redacted] was in the Deputy AG's office and, before than, in OLC). [redacted] and I will moderate the panel to ensure fairhandedness as much as possible.

We'd be delighted to have anyone from DoD you think best. Admiral [redacted] led a tour of GTMO last month that I attended and I know he'd be a powerful voice if he's interested and available; in any event, please do sent him my regards.

Also, I should mention that we're planning on a similar roundtable in DC on Feb 16th. I had lunch today with [redacted] and have invited him to attend then, but since he's moving to State, if there's someone from Defense that would also like to attend, that would be great as well.

If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to call. My contact info. follows below.

Neil

BRIEFING PROPOSAL

Delighted to touch base again after several years being in the trenches.

I'm working as the policy advisor for the Office of Detainee Affairs under the Office of Secretary of Defense. We do policy for the Department of Defense related to detainee issues Part of our charter is outreach and we have an outreach presentation related to our operations in Guantanamo Bay which I believe would be an interesting forum/presentation for the Council. The four presenters are:

1. [redacted] Principal Director, Office of Detainee Affairs, Office of the Secretary of Defense (DASD-DA) 2. RADM [redacted], Director, Office for the Administrative Review of the Detention of Enemy Combatants (OARDEC) 3. BGEN [redacted], USAF, Legal Adviser to the Appointing Authority, Office of Military Commissions (OMC)

4 COL [redacted], USAF, Detainee Affairs Division Chief, Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) Given the dates of the presentation organizational substitutes may be used, but the format will be the same. The panel is called "the Guantanamo Bay Detainee Policies, Proceses and Operations brief". The brief is approximately 50 minutes is length and followed by a 30 minute Q and A session. Of course a closed door non attribution session with the Council experts is also possible.

Please discuss with your colleagues and let's discuss. My telephone number is: [redacted]. Hope you are enjoying my favorite town and look forward to seeing you in the near future.

Cheers,

Thanks for forwarding. These all look like compelling participants, and I believe Neil Gorsuch, (who is coordinating with me), knows some of the presenters listed below.

Should we follow up with [redacted] or the suggested panelists first?

Subject
BRIEFING PROPOSAL

Delighted to touch base again after several years being in the trenches. I'm working as the policy advisor for the Office of Detainee Affairs under the Office of Secretary of Defense. We do policy for the Department of Defense related to detainee issues Part of our charter is outreach and we have an outreach presentation related to our operations in Guantanamo Bay which I believe would be an interesting forum/presentation for the Council. The four presenters are:

1. [redacted] Principal Director, Office of Detainee Affairs, Office of the Secretary of Defense (DASD-DA)
2. RADM [redacted] Director, Office for the Administrative Review of the Detention of Enemy Combatants (OARDEC)
3. BGEN [redacted] USAF, Legal Adviser to the Appointing Authority, Office of Military Commissions (OMC)

4 COL [redacted] USAF, Detainee Affairs Division Chief, Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS)

Given the dates of the presentation organizational substitutes may be used, but the format will be the same.
The panel is called "the Guantanamo Bay Detainee Policies, Proceses and Operations brief".
The brief is approximately 50 minutes is length and followed by a 30 minute Q and A session. Of course a closed door non attribution session with the Council experts is also possible.

Please discuss with your colleagues and let's discuss. My telephone number is: [redacted] Hope you are enjoying my favorite town and look forward to seeing you in the near future.

Cheers.

GRAHAM AMENDMENT TALKING POINTS

Some Opportunities for Improvement to S.A. 2524:

- As drafted, S.A. 2524 limits only habeas petitions brought DoD detainees at GTMO. It does nothing to curb habeas litigation by detainees in Iraq and Afghanistan.

- As drafted, the Amendment applies only prospectively even to GTMO detainees. It does nothing to address the avalanche of habeas suits already on file seeking everything from access to DVDs, dictionaries, and video messages from their families to more exercise time, faster mail delivery, and free copies of the Koran with commentary instead of the standard Koran without. Detainees' lawyers have even sued because they consider dial-up Internet access at GTMO too slow.

- As drafted, the scope of review for future GTMO lawsuits remains so broad that it is little better than existing habeas review.

- S.A. 2524 likewise limits only habeas suits and does nothing to provide protection against suits for money damages against individual members of our armed forces.

- As passed, the amendment creates an evidence exclusionary rule, prohibiting CSRTs and ARBs from considering statements obtained with "undue coercion." This undefined term is so vague that it might be misread to require even Miranda-style warnings before asking terrorists any questions. We recommend substituting language requiring CSRTs and ARBs to determine how statements were obtained and weigh their evidentiary value accordingly. Because CSRTs and ARBs already weigh such factors in determining evidentiary value, this alternative would simply require them to maintain their present approach.

- As passed, the amendment requires DoD to "submit" its CSRT and ARB procedures to Congress. But these procedures are already publicly available on the Internet. By contrast, the original Graham amendment expressly recognized the President's authority to utilize CSRTs and ARBs. Congress' imprimatur is valuable to validating these tribunals, which are more fair, thorough and extensive than those adopted even for legitimate POWs by any other nation in history, and should be extended to include Military Commissions.

Why Habeas Reform is Necessary:

- Our enemies have clogged our courts with frivolous litigation. There are 160 habeas cases pending on behalf of approximately 300 GTMO detainees.
    - Al Qaeda training manuals expressly promote the use of litigation to thwart our war effort.
    - Detainees have sought to litigate over everything from access to DVDs, dictionaries, and video messages from their families to more exercise time, faster mail delivery and free copies of the Koran with commentary instead of the standard Koran without.
    - Detainees' lawyers have even sued because they consider dial-up Internet access at GTMO too slow.
    - Assuming full trials in habeas challenges by GTMO detainees only, litigation and related costs to U.S. taxpayers could run in the tens or even hundreds of millions of dollars.
- Suits now exist by detainees in Afghanistan and Iraq, as well as GTMO. And they now seek not just habeas relief but money damages from individual soldiers and other government personnel.
- None of these suits would be addressed by the Graham legislation.
- Courts have never granted habeas petitions by detained enemies challenging either their detention or their conditions of confinement. Had these conditions existed during World War II, hundreds of thousands of captured German and Japanese soldiers would have been entitled to lawyers and hearings in federal court.
- Even our own soldiers convicted under the UCMJ are not generally entitled to challenge the substance of their convictions through *habea*s in federal court, but are limited to jurisdictional challenges. If a military court properly exercised jurisdiction and fully and fairly considered the claim, the habeas court will not revisit it.
- Congress has modified habeas many times in the past. For example:
    - Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act ("AEDPA") and the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act, passed in 1996. AEDPA placed a number of limitations on the scope of habeas relief available to persons challenging the judgment of a State court and prohibited the Supreme Court from reviewing the decision of a court of appeals to allow or to bar a state prisoner from filing successive petitions.

- Since 1996, Congress has imposed new restrictions on the availability of habeas in a variety of immigration-related contexts:
    - 8 U.S.C. § 1226a(b) (part of the USA PATRIOT Act of 2001) places limits on habeas for aliens involved in terrorism or other activity endangering national security.
    - 8 U.S.C. § 1201(i) (part of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorist Prevention Act of 2004) bars habeas review of certain visa revocation decisions.
    - 8 U.S.C. § 1252 (part of the REAL ID Act of 2005) eliminates habeas review of decisions not involving constitutional claims or questions in cases involving asylum, removal of criminal aliens, and denials of discretionary relief by DOJ or DHS.

- If Congress can place habeas limits on U.S. citizens and aliens who are located within the U.S. during peacetime, certainly it is appropriate for Congress to limit habeas petitions by aliens captured during wartime who are being held outside of the United States.

- Reform is not an attack on last year's Supreme Court decisions.
    - The Supreme Court in its 2004 Rasul decision recognized that Congress could amend the habeas statute.
    - Several Justices have called strongly for Congress to bring clarity to this area, including Justice Scalia in a written opinion and Justice O'Connor in a recent speech at West Point.
    - The Supreme Court last year clearly upheld the President's authority to detain enemy combatants to prevent them from returning to the battlefield. Reform is consistent with this authority.

- As Senator Graham said on the floor of the Senate, these are terrorists who are suing our own troops and officials in our domestic civilian courts in a time of war. There is no legal or moral imperative to treat them on par with common civilian criminals who are American citizens.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149269

CSRTs:

- Each GTMO detainee is entitled to challenge his status as an enemy combatant before a Combatant Status Review Tribunal.

- CSRT procedures are more extensive than those used by any other nation in any previous conflict to determine combat detainee status.

- The process is modeled on Army Regulation 190-8, which Justice O'Connor's opinion in Hamdi indicated would be sufficient process for an American citizen.

- Senator Graham has described the CSRT procedures as "the Geneva Convention protections on steroids."

- Detainees receive substantial protections, including the opportunity to be heard in person, the ability to present additional evidence they believe might benefit them, and the assistance of a military officer assigned to serve as their personal representative. Non-classified proceedings are open to the media.

- DoD has expended over 150,000 man-hours in holding 558 CSRTs.

- CSRTs determined that 520 detainees were properly detained as enemy combatants and that 38 were no longer enemy combatants.

ARBs:

- Every year, each GTMO detainee is entitled to a hearing to reassess whether his release is appropriate.

- DoD has gone above and beyond anything required by domestic or international law, including the Geneva Conventions, providing enemy combatants a chance to be heard and released even while conflict is ongoing.

- Detainees are allowed to appear in person before the tribunal, to provide information to support their release, and to receive the assistance of an officer to guide them through the process. Home countries and family members are afforded the opportunity to provide additional information. Non-classified proceedings are open to the media.

- To date, DoD has expended almost 200,000 man-hours in holding 400 ARBs, helping to ensure that no one is detained any longer than necessary.

- Of the 247 final ARB decisions to date, 10 have held that the detainee in question should be released, and 76 have concluded that the detainee should be transferred to another country. Through CSRTs, ARBs or other means, over 250 detainees have been released from GTMO since the commencement of hostilities.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149270

Military Commission Procedures:

- Military Commissions have historically been used to prosecute enemy combatants who violate the laws of war. The United States used the Military Commission process during World War II.

- Each Military Commission panel consists of a Presiding Officer who must be a judge advocate and at least three other military officers. The Presiding Officer rules upon all questions of law. All members of the Military Commission panel, except the Presiding Officer, vote on findings and, if necessary, on a sentence.

- Each accused tried by a Military Commission has the following procedural safeguards: the presumption of innocence; proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; the right to call and cross examine witnesses (subject to the rules regarding production of witnesses and protection of information); nothing said by an accused to his attorney, or anything derived therefrom, may be used against him at trial; no adverse inference from remaining silent; and an overall requirement that any military commission proceeding be full and fair. Finally, to assist him in preparing a defense, each accused has a Military Defense Counsel provided at no cost. The accused may also hire a civilian defense counsel.

- A finding of guilt and the imposition of a non-capital sentence must be with the concurrence of two-thirds of the Military Commission panel members, excluding the Presiding Officer. This is the same standard that the military uses in courts-martial, when prosecuting its own soldiers for crimes under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

- If there is a finding of guilt, the Military Commission panel members, excluding the Presiding Officer, may impose any appropriate sentence, including death. A sentence of death requires a unanimous vote from a Military Commission panel consisting of at least seven members (excluding the Presiding Officer).

- Additional layers of review follow:

    - All records of trial must be reviewed by the Appointing Authority, who may return the case to the Military Commission for further proceedings if he determines it is not administratively complete.

    - A three-member Review Panel of military officers will review all cases for material errors of law. Review Panel members may be civilians who were specifically commissioned as military officers to serve on the panel. If a majority of the Review Panel members believe a material error of law has occurred, they may return the case to the Military Commission for further proceedings.

    - Extremely qualified individuals have agreed to serve on the Review Panel:

DOJ_NMG_ 0149271

Judge Griffin Bell, a former U.S. Attorney General and former federal appellate judge from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Judge Edward George Biester, Jr., a sitting judge on the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County, Pennsylvania. He was formerly Attorney General for Pennsylvania and a Member of Congress.

William T. Coleman, former Secretary of Transportation, member of the U.S. delegation to the U.N. General Assembly, and recipient of the Presidential Medal of Freedom and the NAACP's Thurgood Marshall Lifetime Achievement Award.

Judge Frank J. Williams, currently Chief Justice of the Rhode Island Supreme Court. He was a decorated Army captain during the Vietnam War.

o After the Review Panel makes its decision, the Secretary of Defense reviews the record of trial and, if appropriate, may return it to the Military Commission for further proceedings, or forward the case to the President with a recommendation as to disposition.

o The President may either return the case to the Military Commission for further proceedings or make the final decision as to its disposition. The President may delegate final decision authority to the Secretary of Defense, in which case the Secretary may approve or disapprove the findings or change a finding of Guilty to a finding of Guilty to a lesser-included offense, or mitigate, commute, defer, or suspend the sentence imposed, or any portion thereof.

I've requested but not received the new language that Graham is sending to Warner as the "Senate Republican" position so to speak. As you know from our mtgs with staff, we expect it to be close to our approach but we'll have to confirm that. I know we are in good shape with Hunter - the "House Republican" position is close to our approach. Of course, neither side has brought the Ds in yet so the language will get worse we assume once they engage. But we'll stay on top of it to keep the Republicans close to our preference.

Thanks very much for the update, Mike. Do you still expect Auth. Bill to move prior to Christmas?

Also, I assume/trust that the Graham folks understand that the technical advise we sent over covered (at their request) only a couple areas, not all of the 9 pts we need addressed.

I've requested but not received the new language that Graham is sending to Warner as the "Senate Republican" position so to speak. As you know from our mtgs with staff, we expect it to be close to our approach but we'll have to confirm that. I know we are in good shape with Hunter - the "House Republican" position is close to our approach. Of course, neither side has brought the Ds in yet so the language will get worse we assume once they engage. But we'll stay on top of it to keep the Republicans close to our preference.

Rules for Our War

In my view, the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, were an act of war, not a mere crime. Our terrorist enemies don't represent a sovereign nation, wear a uniform, follow the rules of armed conflict or show any regard for humanity. The key difference between them and us is that we care about these things.

Even during a time of war, we have chosen to be a nation of laws, with a different, higher set of values than the terrorists. We should always remember that we are Americans, possessing values superior to those of our enemy, and that there is a proper balance between the protection of our troops and the humane treatment of detainees. This value system is our national strength, not a weakness.

I support President Bush's statement that all detainees should be treated humanely, and I agree with Sen. John McCain that his detainee treatment amendment is about us, not them. With these concepts in mind, the Senate recently acted in a bipartisan fashion in two critical areas of detainee policy.

First, by a vote of 90 to 9 we passed the McCain amendment, which would require all Defense Department interrogation techniques to be standardized and contained within the Army Field Manual. As a military lawyer, I know our original policies concerning interrogation were confusing and contradictory. Unfortunately, our troops have suffered in trying to implement these flawed policies.

By standardizing procedures in one document, our troops will know what's in and out of bounds. To attempt to recapture the moral high ground, we also reaffirm our long-held position that federal agencies will not engage in techniques that violate standards against torture or inhumane treatment of detainees under the laws of armed conflict.

Any efforts to create exemptions to the McCain amendment will, in my opinion, do far more harm than good, as they may set precedents that could jeopardize our troops in future conflicts. We will win this war by showcasing the differences between the United States and the enemy.

I believe we can have sound interrogation techniques and aggressive detention and prosecution policies for enemy combatants without eroding the values for which we are fighting.

The second bipartisan Senate action was the passage, 84 to 14, of the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment, which would create a balanced approach to the laws governing detention and prosecution of enemy combatants.

Congress has been virtually AWOL on the status of enemy combatants, resulting in contradictory federal court decisions about detainees' legal rights. Because of Congress's inaction, the Supreme Court's ruling in the case of Rasul v. Bush allowed foreign national enemy combatants at Guantanamo Bay to be granted habeas corpus rights like American citizens.

In the past, federal courts have reviewed military tribunal verdicts involving enemy combatants who were charged with war crimes, but for the first time in the history of warfare, enemy prisoners were granted access to our federal courts to bring lawsuits against our own forces regarding their detention.

There are now close to 200 habeas petitions filed by enemy combatants requesting better mail delivery, more exercise, judge-supervised interrogation, Internet access and the right to view DVDs.

These lawsuits are undermining our ability to gain good intelligence and are placing federal courts in a role never before known in wartime.

Did we ever intend for enemy combatants captured on the battlefield to be given the same rights as U.S. citizens in our federal courts? The answer from a bipartisan majority in the Senate was a resounding no.

The courts asked Congress to get involved in these issues, and finally, through passage of the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment, we did.

The amendment replaces unlimited habeas petitions with a one-time appeal right to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The review covers whether the formulation and implementation of the practices in place at Guantanamo Bay are constitutional and, in each individual case, whether the military correctly followed procedures.

In addition, the amendment requires federal court review of any military commission conviction involving a war crime and a sentence of 10 or more years. The court can choose to review cases with sentences of less than 10 years, and the Supreme Court will have the right to review lower court actions if petitioned.

The Senate has created legal and congressional oversight over enemy combatant interrogation, detention, and prosecution — all in excess of what is required by the laws of armed conflict. This is something of which our nation can be proud.

The McCain and Graham-Levin-Kyl amendments, taken together, provide a package of detainee reforms recognizing that we're in a war and striking a balance between protecting our nation's interests and ensuring that we adhere to the values for which we are fighting. They should be adopted in the House-Senate conference committee and by Congress as a whole.

John; House is negotiating Privacy Officer today at 2pm (they just called) with Senate. Brian Benczkowski with House staff asked if we have any additional materials on what we're doing, how it's different from proposal, etc.

Do we have any talkers on this. I know you sent me a few things way back when, but I have a new computer as of two weeks ago, and have no archives of email now.

Anything that we can give Brian as ammo, keeping in mind the reasons that they'll push back with, would be really helpful.

Good afternoon.

My name is Kat Blomquist, and I am a new member of the Office of Intergovernmental and Public Liaison.

I received a request from [redacted] of Preston Gates hoping to schedule a meeting with DOJ for his client, Court TV, to discuss DOJ's position on courtroom security / cameras in courtrooms.

The meeting would be attended by [redacted] and [redacted], General Counsel and Executive Vice President of Court TV.

[redacted] will be in Washington, D.C. next Monday and Tuesday (Dec. 12-13), and [redacted] has initially asked if we can set this up for those days. If your component would like to be present at this meeting, please let me know your availability during those days (or direct me to your scheduler) or please direct me to the appropriate person from your office who would attend.

Thank you very much. I look forward to hearing from you and meeting you, as well.

Just a quick note to say how pleased and proud I am of how the Secretary has kicked off her European visit. It is long overdue for the Administration to get out publicly and defend our detention policies, trumpet their successes, while also admitting the inevitable and regrettable errors. We've been in a defensive crouch telling the world to buzz off for a long time; we need more of this open and positive communication. Keep it up!

On this end, I helped draft a speech for the AG that he gave last week to similar effect before the CFR in NY, no easy audience. A copy of his remarks can be found on http://www.usdoj.gov/

Last but not least, I thought you'd find Sen Graham's op/ed in today's Post (attached) of interest, if you hadn't seen it already.

Rules for Our War

In my view, the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, were an act of war, not a mere crime. Our terrorist enemies don't represent a sovereign nation, wear a uniform, follow the rules of armed conflict or show any regard for humanity. The key difference between them and us is that we care about these things.

Even during a time of war, we have chosen to be a nation of laws, with a different, higher set of values than the terrorists. We should always remember that we are Americans, possessing values superior to those of our enemy, and that there is a proper balance between the protection of our troops and the humane treatment of detainees. This value system is our national strength, not a weakness.

I support President Bush's statement that all detainees should be treated humanely, and I agree with Sen. John McCain that his detainee treatment amendment is about us, not them. With these concepts in mind, the Senate recently acted in a bipartisan fashion in two critical areas of detainee policy.

First, by a vote of 90 to 9 we passed the McCain amendment, which would require all Defense Department interrogation techniques to be standardized and contained within the Army Field Manual. As a military lawyer, I know our original policies concerning interrogation were confusing and contradictory. Unfortunately, our troops have suffered in trying to implement these flawed policies.

By standardizing procedures in one document, our troops will know what's in and out of bounds. To attempt to recapture the moral high ground, we also reaffirm our long-held position that federal agencies will not engage in techniques that violate standards against torture or inhumane treatment of detainees under the laws of armed conflict.

Any efforts to create exemptions to the McCain amendment will, in my opinion, do far more harm than good, as they may set precedents that could jeopardize our troops in future conflicts. We will win this war by showcasing the differences between the United States and the enemy.

I believe we can have sound interrogation techniques and aggressive detention and prosecution policies for enemy combatants without eroding the values for which we are fighting.

The second bipartisan Senate action was the passage, 84 to 14, of the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment, which would create a balanced approach to the laws governing detention and prosecution of enemy combatants.

Congress has been virtually AWOL on the status of enemy combatants, resulting in contradictory federal court decisions about detainees' legal rights. Because of Congress's inaction, the Supreme Court's ruling in the case of Rasul v. Bush allowed foreign national enemy combatants at Guantanamo Bay to be granted habeas corpus rights like American citizens.

In the past, federal courts have reviewed military tribunal verdicts involving enemy combatants who were charged with war crimes, but for the first time in the history of warfare, enemy prisoners were granted access to our federal courts to bring lawsuits against our own forces regarding their detention.

There are now close to 200 habeas petitions filed by enemy combatants requesting better mail delivery, more exercise, judge-supervised interrogation, Internet access and the right to view DVDs.

These lawsuits are undermining our ability to gain good intelligence and are placing federal courts in a role never before known in wartime.

Did we ever intend for enemy combatants captured on the battlefield to be given the same rights as U.S. citizens in our federal courts? The answer from a bipartisan majority in the Senate was a resounding no.

The courts asked Congress to get involved in these issues, and finally, through passage of the Graham-Levin-Kyl amendment, we did.

The amendment replaces unlimited habeas petitions with a one-time appeal right to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The review covers whether the formulation and implementation of the practices in place at Guantanamo Bay are constitutional and, in each individual case, whether the military correctly followed procedures.

In addition, the amendment requires federal court review of any military commission conviction involving a war crime and a sentence of 10 or more years. The court can choose to review cases with sentences of less than 10 years, and the Supreme Court will have the right to review lower court actions if petitioned.

The Senate has created legal and congressional oversight over enemy combatant interrogation, detention, and prosecution — all in excess of what is required by the laws of armed conflict. This is something of which our nation can be proud.

The McCain and Graham-Levin-Kyl amendments, taken together, provide a package of detainee reforms recognizing that we're in a war and striking a balance between protecting our nation's interests and ensuring that we adhere to the values for which we are fighting. They should be adopted in the House-Senate conference committee and by Congress as a whole.

The writer is a Republican senator from South Carolina.

Subject Dec 12 Roundtable

Dear [redacted] and [redacted]

It was great to meet [redacted] last night. I am just sorry I wasn't able to track down [redacted] Next time.

Per our discussion [redacted] and I suggest sending out a notice today (or tomorrow) with the speakers we currently have lined up, though we may have more confirmed folks later. We'd also like to rename the roundtable as follows:

Term Member Roundtable on the Interrogation and Treatment of Enemy Combatants in the War on Terror.

The confirmed participants:

[redacted]

Presiders/Moderators:

[redacted] and Neil Gorsuch

I also wanted to raise the possibility of repeating this roundtable here in DC where I would be able to draw in some pretty good speakers as well. If you're interested, what dates would work? Mike and I can get busy lining folks up.

Many thanks and best regards,

Dear Mr. Gorsuch,

Your guests are confirmed for tomorrowâ??s event with President Bush.

Please ensure that your guest receives the following information:

All attendees must have passed through screening and have taken their seats before the President arrives, therefore the doors to the event will close promptly at 10:30 a.m. We will not be able to accommodate any latecomers. Doors will open at 9:00 a.m. We recommend that you arrive between 9:00 a.m. and 10:00 a.m. to make sure there is plenty of time to register and pass through security before the doors to the event close at 10:30 a.m.

The venue is the Blue Ballroom in the Omni Shoreham hotel (2500 Calvert Street, NW, Washington DC, 20005). There will be Council staff in the lobby to direct you to registration and security.

Metro will be your best bet for reaching the venue (Woodley Park/Zoo/Adams Morgan Metro station on the Red line; the hotel is one-half mile from the Metro station). The hotel does have valet parking should you need to drive. There is also a taxi rank at the hotel. Please keep in mind that there will be delays and road closures related to the Presidentâ??s arrival and departure.

We have arranged for a coat check and strongly suggest you check your coat (the coat check is in the hotel lobby; please indicate that you are there for the Council on Foreign Relations event). No briefcases/backpacks, etc., are allowed (a complete list of prohibited items is below); therefore you must check those items at the coat check if you bring them with you.

with you.

Please note the following security requirements:
Â· Everyone will be required to show a valid government-issued photo identification for check-in.
Â· Prohibited items include:
o Duffel Bags/Suitcases/Backpacks/Briefcases o Umbrellas o Bottles, Cans, Drinks, Food o Animals (except guide dogs) o Aerosols of any kind o Knives of any size (including Pocket Knives) o Mace, Real or Simulated Weapons/Ammunition o Fireworks/Firecrackers o Radios, Boom Boxes or other noisemakers o Flags, Banners, or Signs of any type o Laser Pointers Â· You must have on your Council nametag to be admitted to the security screening area.

Thank you and we look forward to seeing you tomorrow.

He suggested Paul McNulty - I told him that would be great - haven't heard back from Peter, though. A trip with Paul and Kyle would be good. Can you see whether Paul is interested?

My report on GTMO was so effusive that a couple of the AG's aides, incl. his Chief of Staff, have gently inquired whether, if there's an extra seat or two in upcoming trips they might be considered. No push on this whatsoever; only if, as, and when it would be something DOD would want to do.

I have just been advised by the cleaning lady that there have been changes made regarding our daily cleaning regimen. First of all, we have a new cleaning lady, Audrey. Also, we will receive vacuuming one day a week, instead of daily.

STATEMENT OF DEPUTY ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL J. BRUCE MCDONALD REGARDING KOREAN FAIR TRADE COMMISSION'S DECISION IN ITS MICROSOFT CASE

WASHINGTON, D.C. - J. Bruce McDonald, Deputy Assistant Attorney General for the Antitrust Division, issued the following statement today after the Korean Fair Trade Commission announced a decision in its antitrust case against Microsoft, ordering Microsoft to sell in Korea a version of its Windows operating system that includes neither Windows Media Player nor Windows Messenger functionality, requiring that Microsoft facilitate consumer downloads of third party media player and messenger products selected by the Commission, and prohibits Microsoft from selling in Korea a version of its server software that includes Windows Media Services:

"The Antitrust Division believes that Korea's remedy goes beyond what is necessary or appropriate to protect consumers, as it requires the removal of products that consumers may prefer. The Division continues to believe that imposing 'code removal' remedies that strip out functionality can ultimately harm innovation and the consumers that benefit from it. We had previously consulted with the Commission on its Microsoft case and encouraged the Commission to develop a balanced resolution that addressed its concerns without imposing unnecessary restrictions. Sound antitrust policy should protect competition, not competitors, and must avoid chilling innovation and competition even by 'dominant' companies. Furthermore, we believe that regulators should avoid substituting their judgment for the market's by determining what products are made available to consumers.

"The European Commission adopted a similar approach in its challenge to Microsoft's bundling Windows Media Player. Since then, demand in Europe for the version of the operating system with the media player code removed has been lackluster, suggesting limited effect on competition from the type of unbundling remedy the Korean Fair Trade Commission is pursuing.

"Addressing Microsoft's exclusionary conduct, the United States' final judgment provides clear and effective protection for competition and consumers. Microsoft is prohibited from preventing computer manufacturers and end users from choosing alternatives to software like Windows Media Player and Windows Messenger. The United States continues to be active in its enforcement of Microsoft's compliance with the judgment, and this work has resulted in substantial changes to Microsoft's business practices.

"Notwithstanding today's divergence, it is important to emphasize the overall strong and positive relationship between the U.S. and Korea on matters of competition policy. The continued success of this working relationship is particularly important in the context of global markets, where the sale and use of products stretch across borders. The Justice Department will continue to work constructively with Korea to develop sound antitrust enforcement policies that benefit consumers in both countries."

Background

In its investigation of Microsoft and the resulting case -- pursued over the course of almost 10 years - the United States challenged a series of exclusionary acts undertaken by Microsoft to maintain its monopoly position in Windows, including conduct designed to prevent computer manufacturers and end users from substituting the Netscape browser for Microsoft's Internet Explorer browser.

The United States filed a complaint against Microsoft in 1998, alleging that Microsoft had restrained competition in violation of U.S. antitrust laws. A lengthy trial and appeal confirmed that Microsoft had violated the Sherman Act.

Following remand of the case to the District Court, the United States reached a settlement, embodied in a final judgment, which was thoroughly reviewed and approved by the District Court and the Court of Appeals.

The final judgment prohibits Microsoft from preventing computer manufacturers and end users from substituting competitors' "middleware," giving them the ability to choose which programs they want to use. The final judgment covers the web browser that was the subject of the United States' lawsuit and the media player and instant messaging programs that are the subject of the Korean Fair Trade Commission's action.

Following these actions by the United States, in 2004 the European Commission (EC) imposed a different remedy to resolve its concerns regarding Microsoft's media player. The EC's 'code removal' order compelled Microsoft to make available to consumers in Europe two versions of its operating system: one version cannot include the software code providing media player functionality; the other, like that available in the United States under the final judgment, is allowed to include such media player functionality.

Sen. Graham's folks apparently cut-and-pasted my conversational blurbs about various GTMO motions directly on his website for all the world to see, complete with "n.b."s and shorthand abbreviations. Yikes, I almost have to cringe. I wish that in the frenetic 30 minutes I was given to compile these things and write up blurbs, someone had informed me that we were ghostwriting for Sen. Graham's website, in which case I sure would have adopted a different tone.

or engaging in "cruel, inhuman, or degrading" treatment of him (n.b. this motion was denied by Judge Bates).

* "Al Odah motion for dictionary internet security forms" -- Kuwaiti detainees seek court orders that they be provided dictionaries in contravention of GTMO's force protection policy and that their counsel be given high-speed internet access at their lodging on the base and be allowed to use classified DoD telecommunications facilities, all on the theory that otherwise their "right to counsel" is unduly burdened.

* "Alladeen -- Motion for TRO re transfer" -- Egyptian detainee who Combatant Status Review Tribunal adjudicated as no longer an enemy combatant, and who was therefore due to be released by the US, files motion to block his repatriation to Egypt.

* "Paracha -- Motion for PI re Conditions" -- Motion by high level al Qaeda detainee complaining about base security procedures, speed of mail delivery, and medical treatment; seeking an order that he be transferred to the "least onerous conditions" at GTMO and asking the court to order that GTMO allow him to keep any books and reading materials sent to him and to "report to the Court" on "his opportunities for exercise, communication, recreation, worship, etc."

* "Motion for PI re Medical Records" -- Motion by detainee accusing military's health professionals of "gross and intentional medical malpractice" in alleged violation of the 4th, 5th, 8th, and 14th Amendments, 42 USC 1981, and unspecified international agreements.

* "Abdah -- Emergency Motion re DVDs" -- "emergency" motion seeking court order requiring GTMO to set aside its normal security policies and show detainees DVDs that are purported to be family videos.

* "Petitioners' Supp. Opposition" -- Filing by detainee requesting that, as a condition of a stay of litigation pending related appeals, the Court involve itself in his medical situation and set the stage for them to second-guess the provision of medical care and other conditions of confinement.

* "Al Odah Supplement to PI Motion" -- Motion by Kuwaiti detainees unsatisfied with the Koran they are provided as standard issue by GTMO, seeking court order that they be allowed to keep various other supplementary religious materials, such as a "tafsir" or 4-volume Koran with commentary, in their cells.

Kat: I sent Court TV to OIPL. OLP would be happy to sit in on such a meeting. The Criminal Division (try [redacted]), the Marshals Service (try [redacted]), and EOUSA (try Natalie Voris) are the biggest stake-holders and the components that drive DOJ's opposition to cameras in the courtroom, so at a minimum they need to participate. To be safe and ensure that civil litigation interests are protected, you should also reach out to the Associate's Office, though I do not know who there would be the appropriate person to contact, so try Neil Gorsuch, the Principal Deputy. rah

Good afternoon.

My name is Kat Blomquist, and I am a new member of the Office of Intergovernmental and Public Liaison.

I received a request from [redacted] of Preston Gates hoping to schedule a meeting with DOJ for his client, Court TV, to discuss DOJ's position on courtroom security / cameras in courtrooms.

The meeting would be attended by [redacted] and [redacted], General Counsel and Executive Vice President of Court TV.

[redacted] will be in Washington, D.C. next Monday and Tuesday (Dec. 12-13), and [redacted] has initially asked if we can set this up for those days. If your component would like to be present at this meeting, please let me know your availability during those days (or direct me to your scheduler) or please direct me to the appropriate person from your office who would attend.

Thank you very much. I look forward to hearing from you and meeting you, as well.

Would appreciate your review. Will fill you in whenever you have a moment to call. Thanks, man.

Talking Points

Critical for you to get engaged in this process now

- We need your help immediately
    - Despite assurances we received from Sen. Graham's staff that problems with this bill would be fixed, we see things headed in the wrong direction
    - We're told that Sen. Levin is vetoing critical changes we need
- This legislation is important
    - We have a flood of lawsuits (160+) distracting our military
    - Detainees have sought to litigate over everything from seeking access to DVDs, more exercise time, free copies of the Koran with commentary instead of the standard Koran without. Detainees' lawyers have even sued because they consider dial-up Internet access at GTMO as slow.
    - One habeas lawyer representing several GTMO detainees has publicly boasted that: "The litigation is brutal for [the United States]. It's huge. We have over one hundred lawyers…. Every time an attorney goes down there, it makes it that much harder [for the U.S. military]. You can't run an interrogation...with attorneys."
    - GTMO detainees are seeking and obtaining from courts more rights than our military personnel, or any enemy allowed in wartime

Need your help with four issues

1. Law must apply retroactively
    - This is the most important point for us.
    - The bill, as drafted, would do nothing to eliminate the 160+ pending suits
    - Original Graham Bill did apply retroactively. Graham promised us that he'd "fix" the problem in his current draft, but now is talking about deferring on this issue to Sen. Levin.

2. Bill must ban all kinds of lawsuits.

- Lawsuit ban can't be limited just to habeas; otherwise, lawyers will just caption their suits differently (Bivens, injunctive relief for due process violations, etc.)

- Sen. Graham and his staff committed to make this change.

3. Bill must apply to all detainees

- We understand that there's now talk of allowing non-GTMO detainees to sue. But there's no reason why non-GTMO detainees held in Afghanistan or Iraq should have more rights to sue in US courts than those at GTMO.

- We understand that there's also talk of allowing those who are released from GTMO from suing. But this just defers the problem, it doesn't solve it. Alien ECs should not have rights to sue in US courts. It's like saying the Germans or Japanese should've sued for conditions at POW camps in WWII. Unprecedented in history.

- Sen. Graham and his staff committed to this objective.

4. Scope of review provision must be improved

- As drafted, the bill would require a court to review the CSRT or MC to determine whether it applied the "correct standards." This is a huge loophole, that would allow courts to impose almost any new "standards" it wishes.

- Review should be limited to determine whether the CSRT or MC followed the procedures specified by the SECDEF.

- Constitutional review must also be limited to one-time challenge on whether subjecting detainees to CSRTs and MCs is, on its face, inconsistent with the Constitution.

- Sen. Graham and staff previously agreed to make these changes, and we provided language.

Unless we get these changes made, we may have to ask Sen. Graham to fulfill his promise to withdraw the legislation if it does not meet DOD/DOJ needs.

SA 2524. Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. LEVIN, and Mr. KYL) proposed an amendment to amendment SA 2515 proposed by Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. KYL, Mr. CHAMBLISS, and Mr. CORNYN) to the bill S. 1042, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2006 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted, insert the following:

SEC. __. REVIEW OF STATUS OF DETAINEES.

(a) Submittal of Procedures for Status Review of Detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.--Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees, and to the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives, a report setting forth the procedures of the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and the noticed Administrative Review Boards in operation at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for determining the status of the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay.

(b) Procedures.--The procedures submitted to Congress pursuant to subsection (a) shall, with respect to proceedings beginning after the date of the submittal of such procedures under that subsection, ensure that--

(1) in making a determination of status of any detainee under such procedures, a Combatant Status Review Tribunal or Administrative Review Board may not consider statements derived from persons that, as determined by such Tribunal or Board, by the preponderance of the evidence, were obtained with undue coercion; and

(2) the Designated Civilian Official shall be an officer of the United States Government whose appointment to office was made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(c) Report on Modification of Procedures.--The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the committees of Congress referred to in subsection (a) a report on any modification of the procedures submitted under subsection (a) not later than 60 days before the date on which such modification goes into effect.

(d) Judicial Review of Detention of Enemy Combatants.--

(1) IN GENERAL.--Section 2241 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

``(e) No court, justice, or judge shall have jurisdiction to hear or consider an application for a writ of habeas corpus filed by or on behalf of an alien outside the United States (as that term is defined in section 101(a)(38) of the Immigration and Naturalization Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(38)) who is detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.".

(2) REVIEW OF DECISIONS OF COMBATANT STATUS REVIEW TRIBUNALS OF PROPRIETY OF DETENTION.--

(A) IN GENERAL.--Subject to subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any decision of a Designated Civilian Official described in subsection (b)(2) that an alien is properly detained as an enemy combatant.

(B) LIMITATION ON CLAIMS.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this paragraph shall be limited to claims brought by or on behalf of an alien--

(i) who is, at the time a request for review by such court is filed, detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and

(ii) for whom a Combatant Status Review Tribunal has been conducted, pursuant to applicable procedures specified by the Secretary of Defense.

(C) SCOPE OF REVIEW.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit on any claims with respect to an alien under this paragraph shall be limited to the consideration of--

(i) whether the status determination of the Combatant Status Review Tribunal with regard to such alien applied the correct standards and was consistent with the procedures specified by the Secretary of Defense for Combatant Status Review Tribunals (including the requirement that the conclusion of the Tribunal be supported by a preponderance of the evidence and allowing a rebuttable presumption in favor the Government's evidence); and

(ii) whether subjecting an alien enemy combatant to such standards and procedures is consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

(D) TERMINATION ON RELEASE FROM CUSTODY.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit with respect to the claims of an alien under this paragraph shall cease upon the release of such alien from the custody of the Department of Defense.

(3) REVIEW OF FINAL DECISIONS OF MILITARY COMMISSIONS.--

(A) IN GENERAL.--Subject to subparagraphs (C) and (D), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision rendered pursuant to Military Commission Order No. 1, dated August 31, 2005 (or any successor military order).

(B) GRANT OF REVIEW.--Review under this paragraph--

(i) with respect to a capital case or a case in which the alien was sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 10 years or more, shall be as of right; or

(ii) with respect to any other case, shall be at the discretion of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

(C) LIMITATION ON APPEALS.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this paragraph shall be limited to an appeal brought by or on behalf of an alien--

(i) who was, at the time of the proceedings pursuant to the military order referred to in subparagraph (A), detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and

(ii) for whom a final decision has been rendered pursuant to such military order.

(D) SCOPE OF REVIEW.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit on an appeal of

a final decision with respect to an alien under this paragraph shall be limited to the consideration of--

(i) whether the final decision applied the correct standards and was consistent with the procedures specified in the military order referred to in subparagraph (A); and

(ii) whether subjecting an alien enemy combatant to such order is consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

(e) Effective Date.--

(1) IN GENERAL.--Except as provided in paragraph (2), this section shall take effect on the day after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) REVIEW OF COMBATANT STATUS TRIBUNAL AND MILITARY COMMISSION DECISIONS.--Paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (d) shall apply with respect to any claim whose review is governed by one of such paragraphs and that is pending on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

YES. The whole point is that it's akin to a parole hearing and the detainee can present anything he thinks that will aid his release.

(1) Graham tonight improved the "standards" language in response to our concerns and recvd Levin's blessing. Rather than requiring CADC to determine whether the CSRT/MC "applied the correct standards and was consistent with the procedures specified by the SECDEF," the scope of review section now requires the CSRT/MC to be "consistent with the standards and procedures specified by the SECDEF." This reduces significantly the potential for judicial creativity.

(2) DoD Asst Secty for LA spoke with HASC Staff Director [redacted] tonight to make all of our pts. [redacted], SECDEF's chief of staff and former Hunter staffer, has a call with [redacted] tomorrow morning. They're going to ask esp. for greater clarity on the retroactivity pt.

What is going on?! I thought we were finished but for Graham talking to McCain about undue coercion.

You should run this by [redacted]DOD. Really their equity.

Since they're shipping language, can you ask them to ship the whole amendment as it stands so we aren't working off notes?

Subject: Graham language
Attachments: 12-9 Graham.doc

In the attached, I have tried to capture the edits made so far to the as-passed Senate language, as described to me over the phone by Graham's staff just now. While I've tried to be exact, I cannot promise that I've captured every word, nor will they share the document with us at this time. Also, as you know, nothing is final and Graham's folks continue to "field calls" from other members. But I thought it would be helpful for you to see the state of play, at least as of this hour.

SA 2524. Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. LEVIN, and Mr. KYL) proposed an amendment to amendment SA 2515 proposed by Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. KYL, Mr. CHAMBLISS, and Mr. CORNYN) to the bill S. 1042, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2006 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted, insert the following:

SEC. __. REVIEW OF STATUS OF DETAINEES.

(a) Submittal of Procedures for Status Review of Detainees at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.--Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees, and to the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and the House of Representatives, a report setting forth the procedures of the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and the noticed Administrative Review Boards in operation at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for determining the status of the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay. Not later than 180 days after the enactment of this Act, the SECDEF shall also submit … a report setting forth procedures in operation in Afghanistan and Iraq for the determination of the status of aliens detained in the custody or under the physical control of the Department of Defense in those countries.

(b) Procedures.--The procedures submitted to Congress pursuant to subsection (a) shall, with respect to proceedings beginning after the date of the submittal of such procedures under that subsection, ensure that--

(1) in making a determination of status of any detainee under such procedures, a Combatant Status Review Tribunal or Administrative Review Board shall consider whether any statement derived from or relating to such detainee was obtained as a result of coercion and what the probative value (if any) of such statement is; and

(2) the Designated Civilian Official shall be an officer of the United States Government whose appointment to office was made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(3) The procedures submitted to Congress pursuant to subsection (a) shall provide for periodic review of new evidence that bears on the enemy combatant status of a detainee.

(4) [Language “under construction”: New reporting requirement for DoD to provide annually a report on what processes were provided to aliens outside the US, in an unclassified version, with classified annex if necessary, including information on how many detainees were processed, as well as what procedures were employed in each location]

(c) Report on Modification of Procedures.--The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the committees of Congress referred to in subsection (a) a report on any modification of the procedures submitted under subsection (a) not later than 60 days before the date on which such modification goes into effect.

(d) Judicial Review of Detention of Enemy Combatants.--

(1) IN GENERAL.--Section 2241 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

``(e) Except as provided in [subsections d2 and 3 below], no court, justice, or judge shall have jurisdiction to hear or consider an application for a writ of habeas corpus filed by or on behalf of an alien outside the United States who is detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, or (ii) any other action against the US or its agents relating to any aspect of the detention by DoD of an alien at GTMO who (a) is currently in military custody or (b) has been determined by CADC in accordance with [sec. below dealing with CSRTs] to have been properly detained as an enemy combatant.''.

(2) REVIEW OF DECISIONS OF COMBATANT STATUS REVIEW TRIBUNALS OF PROPRIETY OF DETENTION.--

(A) IN GENERAL.--Subject to subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision of a CSRT that an alien is properly detained as an enemy combatant.

(B) LIMITATION ON CLAIMS.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this paragraph shall be limited to claims brought by or on behalf of an alien--

(i) who is, at the time a request for review by such court is filed, detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and

(ii) for whom a Combatant Status Review Tribunal has been conducted, pursuant to applicable procedures specified by the Secretary of Defense.

(C) SCOPE OF REVIEW.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit on any claims with respect to an alien under this paragraph shall be limited to the consideration of--

(i) whether the status determination of the Combatant Status Review Tribunal with regard to such alien was consistent with the standards and procedures specified by the Secretary of Defense for Combatant Status Review Tribunals (including the requirement that the conclusion of the Tribunal be supported by a preponderance of the evidence and allowing a rebuttable presumption in favor the Government's evidence); and

(ii) to the extent that the Constitution and laws of the US are applicable, whether the use of such standards and procedures to make the status determination is consistent with the Constitution and laws of the US.

(D) TERMINATION ON RELEASE FROM CUSTODY.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit with respect to the claims of an alien under this paragraph shall cease upon the release of such alien from the custody of the Department of Defense.

(3) REVIEW OF FINAL DECISIONS OF MILITARY COMMISSIONS.--

(A) IN GENERAL.--Subject to subparagraphs (B), (C) and (D), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision rendered pursuant to Military Commission Order No. 1, dated August 31, 2005 (or any successor military order).

(B) GRANT OF REVIEW.--Review under this paragraph--

(i) with respect to a capital case or a case in which the alien was sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 10 years or more, shall be as of right; or

(ii) with respect to any other case, shall be at the discretion of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

(C) LIMITATION ON APPEALS.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this paragraph shall be limited to an appeal brought by or on behalf of an alien--

(i) who was, at the time of the proceedings pursuant to the military order referred to in subparagraph (A), detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and

(ii) for whom a final decision has been rendered pursuant to such military order.

(D) SCOPE OF REVIEW.--The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit on an appeal of a final decision with respect to an alien under this paragraph shall be limited to the consideration of--

(i) whether the final decision was consistent with the standards and procedures specified in the military order referred to in subparagraph (A); and

(ii) to the extent that the Constitution and laws of the United States are applicable, whether the use of such standards and procedures to reach the final decision is consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be construed to confer any constitutional right on an alien detained as an enemy combatant outside the US.

(5) For purposes of this Section, the term the "United States," when used in a geographical sense, is defined in section 101(a)(38) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(38)), and in particular does not include the U.S. Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

(6) The SECDEF shall be the named respondent in any appeal to the CADC under this Section.

(e) Effective Date.--

(1) IN GENERAL.-- This section shall take effect on the day after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) REVIEW OF COMBATANT STATUS TRIBUNAL AND MILITARY COMMISSION DECISIONS.--Paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (d) shall apply with respect to any claim whose review is governed by one of such paragraphs and that is pending on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Staff Opinions Banned In Voting Rights Cases

By Dan Eggen

The Justice Department has barred staff attorneys from offering recommendations in major Voting Rights Act cases, marking a significant change in the procedures meant to insulate such decisions from politics, congressional aides and current and former employees familiar with the issue said.

Disclosure of the change comes amid growing public criticism of Justice Department decisions to approve Republican-engineered plans in Texas and Georgia that were found to hurt minority voters by career staff attorneys who analyzed the plans. Political appointees overruled staff findings in both cases.

The policy was implemented in the Georgia case, said a Justice employee who, like others interviewed, spoke on condition of anonymity because of fears of retaliation. A staff memo urged rejecting the state's plan to require photo identification at the polls because it would harm black rejecting the state's plan to require photo identification at the polls because it would harm black voters.

But under the new policy, the recommendation was stripped out of that document and was not forwarded to higher officials in the Civil Rights Division, several sources familiar with the incident said.

The policy helps explain why the Justice Department has portrayed an Aug. 25 staff memo obtained by The Washington Post as an "early draft," even though it was dated one day before the department gave "preclearance," or approval, to the Georgia plan. The state's plan has since been halted on constitutional grounds by a federal judge who likened it to a Jim Crow-era poll tax.

The policy shift's outlines were first reported by the Dallas Morning News. Sources familiar with the change said it was implemented by John K. Tanner, the voting section chief, who is a career employee.

In response to a request to comment yesterday, Justice Department spokesman Eric Holland wrote in an e-mail: "The opinions and expertise of the career lawyers are valued and respected and continue to be an integral part of the internal deliberation process upon which the department heavily relies when making litigation decisions." He declined to elaborate.

Tensions within the voting section have been rising dramatically, culminating in an emotionally charged meeting last week in which Tanner criticized the quality of work done by staff members analyzing voting rights cases, numerous sources inside and outside the section said. Many employees were so angered that they boycotted the staff holiday party later in the week, the sources said.

Under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, Georgia, Texas and other states with a history of discriminatory election practices are required to receive approval from the Justice Department or a federal court for any changes to their voting systems. Section 5 prohibits changes that would be "retrogressive," or bring harm to, minority voters.

For decades, staff attorneys have made recommendations in Section 5 cases that have carried great weight within the department and that have been passed along to senior officials who make a final determination, former and current employees say.

Preventing staff members from making such recommendations is a significant departure and runs the risk of making the process appear more political, experts said.

"It's an attempt by the political hierarchy to insulate themselves from any accountability by essentially leaving it up to a chief, who's there at their whim," said Jon Greenbaum, who worked in the voting section from 1997 to 2003, and who is now director of the Voting Rights Project at the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law. "To me, it shows a fear of dealing with the legal issues in these cases."

Many congressional Democrats have sharply criticized the Civil Rights Division's performance, and Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Arlen Specter (R-Pa.) said this week that he is considering holding hearings on the Texas redistricting case. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) said in a statement yesterday: "America deserves better than a Civil Rights Division that puts the political agenda of those in power over the interests of the people its serves."

Attorney General Alberto R. Gonzales and other Justice officials have disputed such criticism, saying that politics play no role in civil rights decisions. In a letter to Specter this week, Assistant Attorney General William E. Moschella criticized The Post's coverage and said the department is aggressively enforcing a range of civil rights laws.

"From fair housing opportunities, equal access to the ballot box and criminal civil rights prosecutions to desegregation in America's schools and protection of the rights of the disabled, the division continues its noble mission with vigor," Moschella wrote.

Courtney, Rebecca: I can be available all afternoon.

Because folks have referred to so many different things as an "FDA defense," it would be very helpful to know more about what actually is in the deal apparently in the process of being cut.

Ok. I have done my best to follow some of the email traffic, but I would benefit from someone walking me through where we are and what our objections are. Jeff and/or Michelle: Would you be available today sometime between 3 and 4? Also, what "decision" does Sec. Leavitt want to make? Has the principals meeting been scheduled?

Courtney / Neil - Candi Wolf may call a principals meeting to discuss the "deal" that House and Senate may cut (I have pasted the info below). I am asking WH if I can weigh in with Frist's counsel on this. Jeff/Fred, are you available for a phone call this afternoon with Allen Hicks if I can arrange? we need to provide talkers to AG if he wishes to weigh in. Courtney, we have significant concerns re this FDA defense and the impact it will have on DOJ.

- the solution is to split the difference and put together a package with an FDA defense and a pre and post event comp fund with a trigger so it doesn't score.

Thye have been told that the Administration was not comfortable with an FDA defense and that some of our guys had concerns about a post event comp.
They were not swayed. This looks like the deal they will cut. With industry on board, I am not certain it will be changed even with objections from us.

Candi will likely call a principles meeting to discuss. I know that Sec. Leavitt wants to make this decision. Rebecca, I wanted to give you a chance to brief the AG if he wants to as well.

The 11th is off due to Joint Task Force requirements. Next flight is now the 17th. In discussing this with Detainee Affairs, however, we've agreed that the best course of action, since each VIP visit drains JTF resources, is to wait for the DAG to agree on a date and then build a visit around him.
Can you check to see whether he's available the 17th?

Good afternoon.

My name is Kat Blomquist, and I am a new member of the Office of Intergovernmental and Public Liaison.

I received a request from [redacted] of Preston Gates hoping to schedule a meeting with DOJ for his client, Court TV, to discuss DOJ's position on courtroom security / cameras in courtrooms.

The meeting would be attended by [redacted] and [redacted], General Counsel and Executive Vice President of Court TV.

[redacted] will be in Washington, D.C. next Monday and Tuesday (Dec. 12-13), and [redacted] has initially asked if we can set this up for those days. If your component would like to be present at this meeting, please let me know your availability during those days (or direct me to your scheduler) or please direct me to the appropriate person from your office who would attend.

Thank you very much. I look forward to hearing from you and meeting you, as well.

From at least the civil liability perspective, I agree completely. As we've discussed, to effect this we need a sentence or two making clear that McCain (1) eliminates/limits no existing defenses and, ideally (2) creates no private rt of action. If Hunter can add his language, so much the better for our clients, but the more impt task is to retain clearly current legal protections.

Steve, I just spoke to Kevin. Briefly, I think the best thing we could do is get language preserving any defenses under existing law. It doesn't seem like we're going to be able to get a new provision making it better than the status quo for tort liability, but not having it get worse would be a big victory in context.

Subject: McCain liability protection language

Steve Hadley of NSC has asked whether DOJ can suggest any alternative concept and language for the McCain liability provision. He would like any ideas BY NOON TODAY. We assume that McCain will not budge from his idea that liability protection should turn on whether the person knew his conduct was unlawful or a person of ordinary sense would have known it was unlawful. The question is whether we can come up with any additional sentence that will add to this standard of protection. The previous suggestions referring to AG opinions will not fly. Evidently Duncan Hunter's proposal using the phrase "wantonly and in reckless disregard for the law" is not acceptable to McCain, though Hunter will continue to push for it. Any thoughts or suggestions would be appreciated at your earliest possible convenience. I need to call the NSC back before noon. Thanks!

I don't know about you, but today's meeting had exactly the opposite effect on me that its sponsors intended: I am somewhat alarmed that this bill, having already passed the House, seems to have traction in the Senate and I am also convinced that, if it does have such sunny prospects, we should be more active in opposition for a variety of policy reasons.

Richard - Do you agree with the Ct TV assessment that passage looks likely? If so, should we convene a meeting to discuss strategy with Will?

I would defer to OLA on that question. There are strong forces on both sides, so I think Jacobs was being a bit too rosy in his forecast, though I have no doubt Congress could adopt it next year. Frankly, if it does get passed, it will get signed, especially if it is carried in the omnibus crime bill currently carrying the judicial security bill (rather ironic, that). We ought to involve OLA to get their sense of the legs this bill has. rah

Karin/Pat:

Good to see you guys last week. On the USAO Survey we've talked about, I've spoken with Neil Gorsuch and he'd be happy to do a telephone conference at some point and provide input on what we ought to be trying to solicit. As I think I indicated, Neil has had the point on a lot of our contacts with the outside bar folks pushing this (such as [redacted] from ABA) and has been involved in some our discussions with such groups about what the Department would like from them in terms of documenting claims of "abuse." Thus, he will have good insights on what we need to ourselves try and gather. I leave it to you as to whether it is better for us to chat before somebody starts to really develop something or after there is the beginnings of a survey working draft/outline. In any event, when you think it will be helpful to talk, please just let us know or have a secretary schedule a conference for the four of us.

On a separate but related note (for all three of you), I have my secretary trying to set up a meeting before the holidays to discuss the draft evidence privilege rule. So you or your secretary will likely be getting a call about that also.

I just spoke to the AG. Leavitt wanted to make sure that the Dept wasn't going to stand in the way of this deal. The AG assured him we would not. The AG and Leavitt both expressed concerns with the bill, as others have, but Leavitt thinks this is the best deal we can get.

Moving forward, I think we should continue to point out problems with the draft, and possible solutions where they exist. But ultimately it will be the WH's and HHS's call on whether to accept or reject the final offer.

All --

To help us refine our draft proposal for a new DOJ Privacy and Civil Liberties office, I would like to convene a meeting to hear OIP's views and concerns. OIP is one of the components most affected by the current draft.

For your convenience, I've attached the proposal again below -- this is the same draft that I circulated for comments last week. It contains none of the revisions or edits that have been suggested since then, and it contains no mention of the FOIA EO that was signed by the President last night.

Please let me know your availability Tuesday through Friday of next week. We would like to have this meeting if at all possible before folks leave for the holidays. Many thanks.

Hey Neil,

Thanks to you and Robert for accommodating us on the spent nuclear fuel issue. I am pushing the policy process as hard as I can over her to determine whether anyone wants to weigh in on this, given all the competing consideration.

Different topic: Have you all had a chance to look at the revised draft EO? You had given me comments on the original, and then we annoyingly sent you another version. Thanks.

Neil, I don't think this will relate to the liability issues.

Paul, I don't think you'll need to attend.

As previously announced, the National Security Council will hold a Policy Coordinating Committee (PCC) meeting on the International Containment and Response Strategy on Friday, December 16, from 3:30-4:30 PM in Room 180 of the EEOB. An official invitation will be washfaxed separately with a read-ahead paper.

The purpose of the meeting is to approve the draft International Containment and Response Strategy and discuss policy options for a U.S. contribution to an international stockpile of countermeasures. Policy options for entry/exit restrictions will be addressed in a separate NSC/HSC PCC.

Attendance is limited to principals plus one. Please forward clearance information to Sonyia Matthews (cc'd above) on 202-456-9181. Feel free to call with any questions. Rita

All --

To help us refine our draft proposal for a new DOJ Privacy and Civil Liberties office, I would like to convene a meeting to hear OIP's views and concerns. OIP is one of the components most affected by the current draft.

For your convenience, I've attached the proposal again below -- this is the same draft that I circulated for comments last week. It contains none of the revisions or edits that have been suggested since then, and it contains no mention of the FOIA EO that was signed by the President last night.

Please let me know your availability Tuesday through Friday of next week. We would like to have this meeting if at all possible before folks leave for the holidays. Many thanks.

The plan for tomorrow is to have a draft to send you by 8:00 AM. We would like to have a Speaker staff, Leader staff, [redacted] and company meeting tomorrow at noon. Please let me know if this does not work. We will do it in H-419.

We have a few bracketed issues that will be elevated to the Member level:

1) Tort Reforms - Cap on Non-economic Damages and Punitives 2) Compensation - Exhaustion, exclusivity and election

In the draft you will also see a couple of bracketed pieces that we were unable to resolve at the staff meeting that we hope to use the opportunity of the Administration meeting to resolve between Leadership staff:

1) language [redacted] wants for pandemic vaccine manufacturers and how their products are handled outside of the timeframe specified by the declaration (your comments said it was not necessary and that is where the Senate is, but [redacted] was fighting hard) 2) applying a clear and convincing standard to causation (this is something the Senate will recede to the House)

Following the noon meeting, the Senate plans to hold a Member meeting. It is going to be rough on our side to get this done, but hang with us.

[redacted]

Senate Majority Leader William H. Frist, MD [redacted]@frist.senate.gov

Subject: NYT Editorial
Attachments: BanTortureArticle.pdf

In case you haven't seen it, attached is the lead editorial in today's NYT which focuses the spotlight on the revised Graham amendment more than we've seen so far.

Ban Torture. Period.

It should have been unmitigated good news yesterday when President Bush finally announced that he would back Senator John McCain's proposal to ban torture and "cruel, inhuman or degrading" treatment at United States prison camps. Nothing should be more obvious for an American president than to support a ban on torture.

But this is the president who scrapped the rules on the decent treatment of prisoners in the first place and whose lawyers concocted memos on legalizing torture. On further reflection, the feeling of relief faded fast.

Mr. McCain's amendment is attached to a malignant measure — introduced by Senator Lindsey Graham, Republican of South Carolina, and now cosponsored by Senator Carl Levin of Michigan, the top Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee — that would do grievous harm to the rule that the government cannot just lock you up without showing cause to a court. This fundamental principle of democratic justice must not be watered down so the Bush administration does not have to answer for the illegal detentions of hundreds of men at Guantánamo Bay and other prison camps.

Mr. Graham's original measure would at least have barred the use of coerced confessions from prisoners like those at Guantánamo. But the current version actually appears to allow coerced evidence. Lawmakers were also discussing language that would strip United States courts, including the Supreme Court, of the power to review detentions. Bruce Ackerman, a professor of law at Yale University, said that Congress had not attacked the courts in this fashion since Reconstruction.

Mr. Bush had barely announced his deal with Mr. McCain before Attorney General Alberto Gonzales made it crystal clear that the administration would define torture any way it liked. He said on CNN that torture meant the intentional infliction of severe physical or mental harm, and repeated the word "severe" twice. He would not even say whether that included "waterboarding" — tormenting a prisoner by making him think he is being drowned.

Then Duncan Hunter, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, announced that he would oppose the McCain measure unless the White House guaranteed in writing that it would have no effect on intelligence-gathering. Mr. Hunter's legitimate concerns have already been addressed with a provision that would allow C.I.A. agents to defend themselves against torture charges by saying they were following legal orders. That protection is already provided to uniformed soldiers. The latest objections by Mr. Hunter, who has helped Vice President Dick Cheney try to block Mr. McCain's amendment, are just a smokescreen.

What is at stake here, and so harmful to America's reputation, is the routine mistreatment of prisoners swept up in the so-called war on terror. The Senate voted 90 to 9 for the McCain measure without the extra baggage. And the House passed a nonbinding resolution supporting it. Both should stand firm. The nation and its fighting men and women need moral clarity, not more legalistic wiggle room.

In case you haven't seen it, attached is the lead editorial in today's NYT which focuses the spotlight on the revised Graham amendment more than we've seen so far.

Ban Torture. Period.

It should have been unmitigated good news yesterday when President Bush finally announced that he would back Senator John McCain's proposal to ban torture and "cruel, inhuman or degrading" treatment at United States prison camps. Nothing should be more obvious for an American president than to support a ban on torture.

But this is the president who scrapped the rules on the decent treatment of prisoners in the first place and whose lawyers concocted memos on legalizing torture. On further reflection, the feeling of relief faded fast.

Mr. McCain's amendment is attached to a malignant measure — introduced by Senator Lindsey Graham, Republican of South Carolina, and now cosponsored by Senator Carl Levin of Michigan, the top Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee — that would do grievous harm to the rule that the government cannot just lock you up without showing cause to a court. This fundamental principle of democratic justice must not be watered down so the Bush administration does not have to answer for the illegal detentions of hundreds of men at Guantánamo Bay and other prison camps.

Mr. Graham's original measure would at least have barred the use of coerced confessions from prisoners like those at Guantánamo. But the current version actually appears to allow coerced evidence. Lawmakers were also discussing language that would strip United States courts, including the Supreme Court, of the power to review detentions. Bruce Ackerman, a professor of law at Yale University, said that Congress had not attacked the courts in this fashion since Reconstruction.

We didn't want to have a situation where we went up to the Hill and HHS thought the preemption language was fine and we had serious concerns. Hence the pre-meeting call to get everyone on the same page.

State, Justice Will Appear at MPAC, Causing Concern

BY MEGHAN CLYNE - Staff Reporter of the Sun

WASHINGTON - Outrage and puzzlement are mounting over the Bush administration's participation this weekend in the fifth annual convention of the Muslim Public Affairs Council, to be headlined by a vociferous administration critic and a former ambassador to Iraq, Joseph Wilson. The convention also will include leaders of MPAC who have made statements considered by many to be anti-Israel and anti-Semitic, and to be supportive of the terrorist organizations Hamas and Hezbollah.

"It's really regrettable, because it sends the wrong message," the vice president of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, Malcolm Hoenlein, said. "We try to counter the extremism in other countries and seem here to countenance it."

MPAC is a large and influential national Muslim-American organization with headquarters in Washington and Los Angeles. Its convention, on the theme "Examining Our Role in America," will be held tomorrow at the Long Beach Convention Center in Long Beach, Calif. Among the speakers confirmed for the event are the deputy assistant secretary of state for education and cultural affairs, Alina Romanowski, and the western regional director of community relations for the Department of Justice, Ron Wakabayashi.

They will be joined by representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Council on American Islamic Relations; Britain's consul general in Los Angeles, Robert Peirce; the former counterterrorism chief at the Washington field office of the FBI, Michael Rolince, and, if he is not detained in Washington by votes in the House, Long Beach's Republican congressman, Rep. Dana Rohrabacher.

Conference speakers, according to MPAC, are not receiving honoraria, but are having their mid-December travel expenses to Southern California covered by the organization.

Another participant, by video, is Tariq Ramadan, an author and Muslim scholar who had his visa to teach at the University of Notre Dame revoked by the American government in 2004 over concerns about his alleged ties to terrorism.

Also speaking at the MPAC conference are its executive director, Salam Al-Marayati, and its senior adviser, Maher Hathout, both of whom have made remarks considered to be anti-Israel, anti-Semitic, and supportive of terrorist organizations.

In 2001, for example, following the bombing of a Sbarro pizzeria in Jerusalem that killed 15 people, including seven children, MPAC issued a press release stating that the bombing was "the expected bitter result of the reckless policy of Israeli assassination that did not spare children and political figures," adding that MPAC "holds Israel responsible for this pattern of violence."

Speaking on PBS's NewsHour with Jim Lehrer in November 1999, Mr. Al-Marayati said: "If the Lebanese people are resisting Israeli intransigence on Lebanese soil, then that is the right of resistance and they have the right to target Israeli soldiers in this conflict. That is not terrorism. That is a legitimate resistance." Mr. Al-Marayati's appointment to a Congressional Commission on Counterterrorism was withdrawn by then House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt in July 1999.

In 2001, at an MPAC symposium on Jerusalem held at Cal-State Fullerton, according to an account from the Investigative Project, Mr. Hathout said: "It is obvious that at least from our perspective that the United States is also under Israeli occupation. So, we have a Congress that beats the Knesset in being pro-Zionist."

According to materials made available by the Investigative Project, an October 2000 rally organized by the then-political director of MPAC, Mahdi Bray, featured remarks by a prominent Muslim activist now serving 23 years in federal prison, Aburahman Alamoudi. At the rally, Mr. Alamoudi - who pleaded guilty in 2004 to participating in a Libyan plot to assassinate a Saudi prince, and who was recently identified by the Treasury Department as a financier of Al Qaeda in America - said: "We are all supporters of Hamas," and said, of "the media in New York" that had reported on his alleged ties to terrorism, "I wish they added that I am also a supporter of Hezbollah." An MPAC representative said yesterday that the organization is not responsible for Mr. Alamoudi's statements.

A spokeswoman for MPAC, Edina Lekovic, said yesterday, in response to repeated allegations that MPAC leaders have made anti-Semitic comments: "They're clearly taken out of context. We can go through them one by one."

MPAC, according to many observers, is one of the most moderate Muslim-American groups. Its Web site features a denunciation of recent anti-Israel statements made by Iran's president, Mahmoud Ahmandinejad, and the group, unlike other similar organizations, has as its stated policy a refusal to accept any foreign money.

That the State and Justice Departments would participate in an MPAC conference headlined by Messrs. Hathout and Al-Marayati, however, still drew ire from Jewish leaders and others outraged by their statements.

"I think that in general, this is a mistake, because we undermine the true Muslims in the American community by this giving recognition to those who espouse extremist views," Mr. Hoenlein said of MPAC.

The president of the Zionist Organization of America, Morton Klein, said: "It's absurd that U.S. officials would attend and give credibility to an organization whose leaders have praised terrorist groups, shown sympathy to Holocaust deniers, and who oppose any concessions with Israel."

Mr. Rohrabacher said that if he had attended the conference, "I was planning on telling them that I think the Muslim community in the U.S. is being misled by liberal Democrats to conduct themselves in a way that looks disloyal to average Americans." Representatives of the State and Justice Departments, however, would be "bland government officials there who won't confront someone on the issues I just talked about."

The chairman of the American Islamic Forum for Democracy, Zuhdi Jasser, too, expressed dismay at the government's participation in the conference. "I'm surprised that the administration has agreed to participate," Dr. Jasser, a Phoenix-based internist, said. "Especially with the presence of someone like Joe Wilson, where you have basically so much of the taxpayers' funds being spent on this investigation that has just been going on for years with basically no grounds." Mr. Wilson, who accused the administration of falsifying intelligence in the lead-up to the Iraq war, is married to CIA agent Valerie Plame, the central figure in an ongoing investigation into possible White House leaks revealing her identity.

Mr. Wilson is delivering the keynote address at the conference during its fund-raising segment tomorrow night.

A State Department spokesman, Gregory Sullivan, responded that MPAC was a moderate group that on its Web site had explicitly condemned terrorism in Iraq, and said: "This is an influential organization that has publicly preached as a message of tolerance and engagement."

A spokesman for the Justice Department, Eric Holland, responded to queries about Justice's participation in the MPAC conference by saying that the department's "Community Relations Service serves as a 'peacemaker' for community conflicts," adding: "Part of this mission consists of sending CRS professionals to assist people of different backgrounds to work and live together in harmony."

That is not terrorism. That is a legitimate resistance." Mr. Al-Marayati's appointment to a Congressional Commission on Counterterrorism was withdrawn by then House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt in July 1999.

In 2001, at an MPAC symposium on Jerusalem held at Cal-State Fullerton, according to an account from the Investigative Project, Mr. Hathout said: "It is obvious that at least from our perspective that the United States is also under Israeli occupation. So, we have a Congress that beats the Knesset in being pro-Zionist."

According to materials made available by the Investigative Project, an October 2000 rally organized by the then-political director of MPAC, Mahdi Bray, featured remarks by a prominent Muslim activist now serving 23 years in federal prison, Aburahman Alamoudi. At the rally, Mr. Alamoudi - who pleaded guilty in 2004 to participating in a Libyan plot to assassinate a Saudi prince, and who was recently identified by the Treasury Department as a financier of Al Qaeda in America - said: "We are all supporters of Hamas," and said, of "the media in New York" that had reported on his alleged ties to terrorism, "I wish they added that I am also a supporter of Hezbollah." An MPAC representative said yesterday that the organization is not responsible for Mr. Alamoudi's statements.

A spokeswoman for MPAC, Edina Lekovic, said yesterday, in response to repeated allegations that MPAC leaders have made anti-Semitic comments: "They're clearly taken out of context. We can go through them one by one."

MPAC, according to many observers, is one of the most moderate Muslim-American groups. Its Web site features a denunciation of recent anti-Israel statements made by Iran's president, Mahmoud Ahmandinejad, and the group, unlike other similar organizations, has as its stated policy a refusal to accept any foreign money.

That the State and Justice Departments would participate in an MPAC conference headlined by Messrs. Hathout and Al-Marayati, however, still drew ire from Jewish leaders and others outraged by their statements.

"I think that in general, this is a mistake, because we undermine the true Muslims in the American community by this giving recognition to those who espouse extremist views," Mr. Hoenlein said of MPAC.

The president of the Zionist Organization of America, Morton Klein, said: "It's absurd that U.S. officials would attend and give credibility to an organization whose leaders have praised terrorist groups, shown sympathy to Holocaust deniers, and who oppose any concessions with Israel."

Mr. Rohrabacher said that if he had attended the conference, "I was planning on telling them that I think the Muslim community in the U.S. is being misled by liberal Democrats to conduct themselves in a way that looks disloyal to average Americans." Representatives of the State and Justice Departments, however, would be "bland government officials there who won't confront someone on the issues I just talked about."

The chairman of the American Islamic Forum for Democracy, Zuhdi Jasser, too, expressed dismay at the government's participation in the conference. "I'm surprised that the administration has agreed to participate," Dr. Jasser, a Phoenix-based internist, said. "Especially with the presence of someone like Joe Wilson, where you have basically so much of the taxpayers' funds being spent on this investigation that has just been going on for years with basically no grounds." Mr. Wilson, who accused the administration of falsifying intelligence in the lead-up to the Iraq war, is married to CIA agent Valerie Plame, the central figure in an ongoing investigation into possible White House leaks revealing her identity.

Mr. Wilson is delivering the keynote address at the conference during its fund-raising segment tomorrow night.

A State Department spokesman, Gregory Sullivan, responded that MPAC was a moderate group that on its Web site had explicitly condemned terrorism in Iraq, and said: "This is an influential organization that has publicly preached as a message of tolerance and engagement."

A spokesman for the Justice Department, Eric Holland, responded to queries about Justice's participation in the MPAC conference by saying that the department's "Community Relations Service serves as a 'peacemaker' for community conflicts," adding: "Part of this mission consists of sending CRS professionals to assist people of different backgrounds to work and live together in harmony."

WASHINGTON - Outrage and puzzlement are mounting over the Bush administration's participation this weekend in the fifth annual convention of the Muslim Public Affairs Council, to be headlined by a vociferous administration critic and a former ambassador to Iraq, Joseph Wilson. The convention also will include leaders of MPAC who have made statements considered by many to be anti-Israel and anti-Semitic, and to be supportive of the terrorist organizations Hamas and Hezbollah.

"It's really regrettable, because it sends the wrong message," the vice president of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, Malcolm Hoenlein, said. "We try to counter the extremism in other countries and seem here to countenance it."

MPAC is a large and influential national Muslim-American organization with headquarters in Washington and Los Angeles. Its convention, on the theme "Examining Our Role in America," will be held tomorrow at the Long Beach Convention Center in Long Beach, Calif. Among the speakers confirmed for the event are the deputy assistant secretary of state for education and cultural affairs, Alina Romanowski, and the western regional director of community relations for the Department of Justice, Ron Wakabayashi.

They will be joined by representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Council on American Islamic Relations; Britain's consul general in Los Angeles, Robert Peirce; the former counterterrorism chief at the Washington field office of the FBI, Michael Rolince, and, if he is not detained in Washington by votes in the House, Long Beach's Republican congressman, Rep. Dana Rohrabacher.

Conference speakers, according to MPAC, are not receiving honoraria, but are having their mid-December travel expenses to Southern California covered by the organization.

Another participant, by video, is Tariq Ramadan, an author and Muslim scholar who had his visa to teach at the University of Notre Dame revoked by the American government in 2004 over concerns about his alleged ties to terrorism.

Also speaking at the MPAC conference are its executive director, Salam Al-Marayati, and its senior adviser, Maher Hathout, both of whom have made remarks considered to be anti-Israel, anti-Semitic, and supportive of terrorist organizations.

In 2001, for example, following the bombing of a Sbarro pizzeria in Jerusalem that killed 15 people, including seven children, MPAC issued a press release stating that the bombing was "the expected bitter result of the reckless policy of Israeli assassination that did not spare children and political figures," adding that MPAC "holds Israel responsible for this pattern of violence."

Speaking on PBS's NewsHour with Jim Lehrer in November 1999, Mr. Al-Marayati said: "If the Lebanese people are resisting Israeli intransigence on Lebanese soil, then that is the right of resistance and they have the right to target Israeli soldiers in this conflict. That is not terrorism. That is a legitimate resistance." Mr. Al-Marayati's appointment to a Congressional Commission on Counterterrorism was withdrawn by then House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt in July 1999.

This had not been in any routine reports, oral or written, that we receive from CRS. I have a call into Steve now, and am copying Wan. Yes, any participation in such conferences would and should be cleared through OIPL, and depending on the substance, folks on the law enforcement side of things should be aware as well. Copying Jenny Korn. I am finding out more now.

this weekend in the fifth annual convention of the Muslim Public Affairs Council, to be headlined by a vociferous administration critic and a former ambassador to Iraq, Joseph Wilson. The convention also will include leaders of MPAC who have made statements considered by many to be anti-Israel and anti-Semitic, and to be supportive of the terrorist organizations Hamas and Hezbollah.

"It's really regrettable, because it sends the wrong message," the vice president of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, Malcolm Hoenlein, said. "We try to counter the extremism in other countries and seem here to countenance it."

MPAC is a large and influential national Muslim-American organization with headquarters in Washington and Los Angeles. Its convention, on the theme "Examining Our Role in America," will be held tomorrow at the Long Beach Convention Center in Long Beach, Calif. Among the speakers confirmed for the event are the deputy assistant secretary of state for education and cultural affairs, Alina Romanowski, and the western regional director of community relations for the Department of Justice, Ron Wakabayashi.

They will be joined by representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Council on American Islamic Relations; Britain's consul general in Los Angeles, Robert Peirce; the former counterterrorism chief at the Washington field office of the FBI, Michael Rolince, and, if he is not detained in Washington by votes in the House, Long Beach's Republican congressman, Rep. Dana Rohrabacher.

Conference speakers, according to MPAC, are not receiving honoraria, but are having their mid-December travel expenses to Southern California covered by the organization.

Another participant, by video, is Tariq Ramadan, an author and Muslim scholar who had his visa to teach at the University of Notre Dame revoked by the American government in 2004 over concerns about his alleged ties to terrorism.

Also speaking at the MPAC conference are its executive director, Salam Al-Marayati, and its senior adviser, Maher Hathout, both of whom have made remarks considered to be anti-Israel, anti-Semitic, and supportive of terrorist organizations.

In 2001, for example, following the bombing of a Sbarro pizzeria in Jerusalem that killed 15 people, including seven children, MPAC issued a press release stating that the bombing was "the expected bitter result of the reckless policy of Israeli assassination that did not spare children and political figures," adding that MPAC "holds Israel responsible for this pattern of violence."

Speaking on PBS's NewsHour with Jim Lehrer in November 1999, Mr. Al-Marayati said: "If the Lebanese people are resisting Israeli intransigence on Lebanese soil, then that is the right of resistance and they have the right to target Israeli soldiers in this conflict. That is not terrorism. That is a legitimate resistance." Mr. Al-Marayati's appointment to a Congressional Commission on Counterterrorism was withdrawn by then House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt in July 1999.

In 2001, at an MPAC symposium on Jerusalem held at Cal-State Fullerton, according to an account from the Investigative Project, Mr. Hathout said: "It is obvious that at least from our perspective that the United States is also under Israeli occupation. So, we have a Congress that beats the Knesset in being pro-Zionist."

According to materials made available by the Investigative Project, an October 2000 rally organized by the then-political director of MPAC, Mahdi Bray, featured remarks by a prominent Muslim activist now serving 23 years in federal prison, Aburahman Alamoudi. At the rally, Mr. Alamoudi - who pleaded guilty in 2004 to participating in a Libyan plot to assassinate a Saudi prince, and who was recently identified by the Treasury Department as a financier of Al Qaeda in America - said: "We are all supporters of Hamas," and said, of "the Department as a financier of Al Qaeda in America - said: "We are all supporters of Hamas," and said, of the media in New York" that had reported on his alleged ties to terrorism, "I wish they added that I am also a supporter of Hezbollah." An MPAC representative said yesterday that the organization is not responsible for Mr. Alamoudi's statements.

A spokeswoman for MPAC, Edina Lekovic, said yesterday, in response to repeated allegations that MPAC leaders have made anti-Semitic comments: "They're clearly taken out of context. We can go through them one by one."

MPAC, according to many observers, is one of the most moderate Muslim-American groups. Its Web site features a denunciation of recent anti-Israel statements made by Iran's president, Mahmoud Ahmandinejad, and the group, unlike other similar organizations, has as its stated policy a refusal to accept any foreign money.

That the State and Justice Departments would participate in an MPAC conference headlined by Messrs. Hathout and Al-Marayati, however, still drew ire from Jewish leaders and others outraged by their statements.

"I think that in general, this is a mistake, because we undermine the true Muslims in the American community by this giving recognition to those who espouse extremist views," Mr. Hoenlein said of MPAC.

The president of the Zionist Organization of America, Morton Klein, said: "It's absurd that U.S. officials would attend and give credibility to an organization whose leaders have praised terrorist groups, shown sympathy to Holocaust deniers, and who oppose any concessions with Israel."

Mr. Rohrabacher said that if he had attended the conference, "I was planning on telling them that I think the Muslim community in the U.S. is being misled by liberal Democrats to conduct themselves in a way that looks disloyal to average Americans." Representatives of the State and Justice Departments, however, would be "bland government officials there who won't confront someone on the issues I just talked about."

The chairman of the American Islamic Forum for Democracy, Zuhdi Jasser, too, expressed dismay at the government's participation in the conference. "I'm surprised that the administration has agreed to participate," Dr. Jasser, a Phoenix-based internist, said. "Especially with the presence of someone like Joe Wilson, where you have basically so much of the taxpayers' funds being spent on this investigation that has just been going on for years with basically no grounds." Mr. Wilson, who accused the administration of falsifying intelligence in the lead-up to the Iraq war, is married to CIA agent Valerie Plame, the central figure in an ongoing investigation into possible White House leaks revealing her identity.

Mr. Wilson is delivering the keynote address at the conference during its fund-raising segment tomorrow night.

A State Department spokesman, Gregory Sullivan, responded that MPAC was a moderate group that on its Web site had explicitly condemned terrorism in Iraq, and said: "This is an influential organization that has publicly preached as a message of tolerance and engagement."

A spokesman for the Justice Department, Eric Holland, responded to queries about Justice's participation in the MPAC conference by saying that the department's "Community Relations Service serves as a 'peacemaker' for community conflicts," adding: "Part of this mission consists of sending CRS professionals to assist people of different backgrounds to work and live together in harmony."

Ban Torture. Period.

It should have been unmitigated good news yesterday when President Bush finally announced that he would back Senator John McCain's proposal to ban torture and "cruel, inhuman or degrading" treatment at United States prison camps. Nothing should be more obvious for an American president than to support a ban on torture.

But this is the president who scrapped the rules on the decent treatment of prisoners in the first place and whose lawyers concocted memos on legalizing torture. On further reflection, the feeling of relief faded fast.

Mr. McCain's amendment is attached to a malignant measure — introduced by Senator Lindsey Graham, Republican of South Carolina, and now cosponsored by Senator Carl Levin of Michigan, the top Democrat on the Senate Armed Services Committee — that would do grievous harm to the rule that the government cannot just lock you up without showing cause to a court. This fundamental principle of democratic justice must not be watered down so the Bush administration does not have to answer for the illegal detentions of hundreds of men at Guantánamo Bay and other prison camps.

Mr. Graham's original measure would at least have barred the use of coerced confessions from prisoners like those at Guantánamo. But the current version actually appears to allow coerced evidence. Lawmakers were also discussing language that would strip United States courts, including the Supreme Court, of the power to review detentions. Bruce Ackerman, a professor of law at Yale University, said that Congress had not attacked the courts in this fashion since Reconstruction.

Mr. Bush had barely announced his deal with Mr. McCain before Attorney General Alberto Gonzales made it crystal clear that the administration would define torture any way it liked. He said on CNN that torture meant the intentional infliction of severe physical or mental harm, and repeated the word "severe" twice. He would not even say whether that included "waterboarding" — tormenting a prisoner by making him think he is being drowned.

Then Duncan Hunter, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, announced that he would oppose the McCain measure unless the White House guaranteed in writing that it would have no effect on intelligence-gathering. Mr. Hunter's legitimate concerns have already been addressed with a provision that would allow C.I.A. agents to defend themselves against torture charges by saying they were following legal orders. That protection is already provided to uniformed soldiers. The latest objections by Mr. Hunter, who has helped Vice President Dick Cheney try to block Mr. McCain's amendment, are just a smokescreen.

What is at stake here, and so harmful to America's reputation, is the routine mistreatment of prisoners swept up in the so-called war on terror. The Senate voted 90 to 9 for the McCain measure without the extra baggage. And the House passed a nonbinding resolution supporting it. Both should stand firm. The nation and its fighting men and women need moral clarity, not more legalistic wiggle room.

Pursuant to the deal with the White House, attached is a colloquy among our bosses. You can send edits/changes/insults back to me . . . thanks, [redacted]

Colloquy on Department of Defense Authorization Conference Report

MR. McCAIN. I would like to thank the Chairman and the Ranking Member for their untiring work to bring the Defense Authorization bill to closure. In doing so, Congress takes a major step in ensuring that America stays true to its fundamental values. By establishing uniform standards for the interrogation of Department of Defense detainees, and by ensuring that the United States will not subject any individual to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, we are better able to wage and win the war on terror. This would not have been possible without the work of the Chairman, the Ranking Member, and other members of this committee, including most notably the Senator from South Carolina.

I would also like to thank the President and the National Security Advisor for their efforts in resolving the difficult issues underlying the amendment. In reaching agreement, we make sure that the world knows that the United States does not – and by law cannot – engage in torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment. During our talks, the administration raised legitimate concerns about legal claims facing civilian interrogators. Based on these concerns, the bill includes language that will allow accused civilian interrogators - like military interrogators – a robust defense if a person of ordinary sense and understanding would have believed he was following a lawful directive. It further includes language providing legal counsel to interrogators. These provisions are modeled on provisions drawn from the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

With the detainee treatment provisions, Congress has clearly spoken that the prohibition against torture should be enforced and that anyone engaging in or authorizing torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, whether at home or overseas, is violating the law. Sections 1402 and 1403 of Title XIV of this bill do not create a new private right of action. At the same time, these provisions do not eliminate or diminish any private right of action otherwise available. It's also worth noting that the legal standards provided for under this legislation may apply in a lawsuit brought under another cause of action. It is our intent not to disable that in any way.

MR. WARNER. I am proud to have been at the forefront of the effort to get this particular legislation passed. I would reiterate that the "McCain Amendment" does not create a private right of action, and I note that it will constitute a new legal standard that may be applied to actions brought under other statutes. [plus whatever Warner staff would like to add/change]

MR. LEVIN. I am pleased that the conference report contains the full text of the McCain amendment on torture, without change. This language firmly establishes in law that the United States will not subject any individual in our custody, regardless of nationality or physical location, to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment. The amendment provides a single standard for "cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment," without regard to what agency holds a detainee, what the nationality of the detainee is, or where the detainee is held.

It has never been my understanding that the McCain amendment would, by itself, create a private right of action. I do not believe that the amendment was intended either to create such a private right of action, or to eliminate or undercut any private right of action – such as a claim under the Alien Tort Statute – that is otherwise available to an alien detainee. Rather, the McCain amendment would establish a legal standard applicable to any criminal prosecution or any private right of action that is otherwise available under law. That would not be changed in any way by the affirmative defense added in the new section. [plus whatever Levin staff would like to add/change]

MR. GRAHAM. I was pleased to support this legislation and work toward its enactment from the beginning. Under section 1402, our troops now have one standard – the Army Field Manual – for their interrogations. In section 1403, we close the loophole in the United Nations Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment. As National Security Advisor Stephen Hadley said, "those standards, as a technical, legal matter, did not apply abroad. And that's what Senator McCain, in the second section of his legislation, wanted to address -- wanted to make clear that those would apply abroad. We applied them abroad as a matter of policy; he wanted to make sure they applied as a matter of law. And when this legislation is adopted, it will."

I agree that these sections do not create a new private right of action, but that they are binding on the executive and create a standard applicable to actions brought under other statutes. [plus whatever Graham staff would like to add/change]

FYI, as discussed

Enjoy. We will not agree to this as is...either it creates a private right of action or it doesn't. Can't have it both ways.

State, Justice Will Appear at MPAC, Causing Concern

BY MEGHAN CLYNE - Staff Reporter of the Sun December 16, 2005 URL: http://www.nysun.com/article/24544

WASHINGTON - Outrage and puzzlement are mounting over the Bush administration's participation this weekend in the fifth annual convention of the Muslim Public Affairs Council, to be headlined by a vociferous administration critic and a former ambassador to Iraq, Joseph Wilson. The convention also will include leaders of MPAC who have made statements considered by many to be anti-Israel and anti-Semitic, and to be supportive of the terrorist organizations Hamas and Hezbollah.

"It's really regrettable, because it sends the wrong message," the vice president of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, Malcolm Hoenlein, said. "We try to counter the extremism in other countries and seem here to countenance it."

MPAC is a large and influential national Muslim-American organization with headquarters in Washington and Los Angeles. Its convention, on the theme "Examining Our Role in America," will be held tomorrow at the Long Beach Convention Center in Long Beach, Calif. Among the speakers confirmed for the event are the deputy assistant secretary of state for education and cultural affairs, Alina Romanowski, and the western regional director of community relations for the Department of Justice, Ron Wakabayashi.

They will be joined by representatives of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Council on American Islamic Relations; Britain's consul general in Los Angeles, Robert Peirce; the former counterterrorism chief at the Washington field office of the FBI, Michael Rolince, and, if he is not detained in Washington by votes in the House, Long Beach's Republican congressman, Rep. Dana Rohrabacher.

Conference speakers, according to MPAC, are not receiving honoraria, but are having their mid-December travel expenses to Southern California covered by the organization.

Another participant, by video, is Tariq Ramadan, an author and Muslim scholar who had his visa to teach at the University of Notre Dame revoked by the American government in 2004 over concerns about his alleged ties to terrorism.

Also speaking at the MPAC conference are its executive director, Salam Al-Marayati, and its senior adviser, Maher Hathout, both of whom have made remarks considered to be anti-Israel, anti-Semitic, and supportive of terrorist organizations.

In 2001, for example, following the bombing of a Sbarro pizzeria in Jerusalem that killed 15 people, including seven children, MPAC issued a press release stating that the bombing was "the expected bitter result of the reckless policy of Israeli assassination that did not spare children and political figures," adding that MPAC "holds Israel responsible for this pattern of violence."

Speaking on PBS's NewsHour with Jim Lehrer in November 1999, Mr.
Al-Marayati said: "If the Lebanese people are resisting Israeli intransigence on Lebanese soil, then that is the right of resistance and they have the right to target Israeli soldiers in this conflict. That is not terrorism. That is a legitimate resistance." Mr. Al-Marayati's appointment to a Congressional Commission on Counterterrorism was withdrawn by then House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt in July 1999.

In 2001, at an MPAC symposium on Jerusalem held at Cal-State Fullerton, according to an account from the Investigative Project, Mr. Hathout said: "It is obvious that at least from our perspective that the United States is also under Israeli occupation. So, we have a Congress that beats the Knesset in being pro-Zionist."

According to materials made available by the Investigative Project, an October 2000 rally organized by the then-political director of MPAC, Mahdi Bray, featured remarks by a prominent Muslim activist now serving 23 years in federal prison, Aburahman Alamoudi. At the rally, Mr.
Alamoudi - who pleaded guilty in 2004 to participating in a Libyan plot to assassinate a Saudi prince, and who was recently identified by the Treasury Department as a financier of Al Qaeda in America - said: "We are all supporters of Hamas," and said, of "the media in New York" that had reported on his alleged ties to terrorism, "I wish they added that I am also a supporter of Hezbollah." An MPAC representative said yesterday that the organization is not responsible for Mr. Alamoudi's statements.

A spokeswoman for MPAC, Edina Lekovic, said yesterday, in response to repeated allegations that MPAC leaders have made anti-Semitic comments:
"They're clearly taken out of context. We can go through them one by one."

MPAC, according to many observers, is one of the most moderate Muslim-American groups. Its Web site features a denunciation of recent anti-Israel statements made by Iran's president, Mahmoud Ahmandinejad, and the group, unlike other similar organizations, has as its stated policy a refusal to accept any foreign money.

That the State and Justice Departments would participate in an MPAC conference headlined by Messrs. Hathout and Al-Marayati, however, still drew ire from Jewish leaders and others outraged by their statements.

"I think that in general, this is a mistake, because we undermine the true Muslims in the American community by this giving recognition to those who espouse extremist views," Mr. Hoenlein said of MPAC.

The president of the Zionist Organization of America, Morton Klein, said: "It's absurd that U.S. officials would attend and give credibility to an organization whose leaders have praised terrorist groups, shown sympathy to Holocaust deniers, and who oppose any concessions with Israel."

Mr. Rohrabacher said that if he had attended the conference, "I was planning on telling them that I think the Muslim community in the U.S. is being misled by liberal Democrats to conduct themselves in a way that looks disloyal to average Americans." Representatives of the State and Justice Departments, however, would be "bland government officials there who won't confront someone on the issues I just talked about."

The chairman of the American Islamic Forum for Democracy, Zuhdi Jasser, too, expressed dismay at the government's participation in the conference. "I'm surprised that the administration has agreed to participate," Dr. Jasser, a Phoenix-based internist, said. "Especially with the presence of someone like Joe Wilson, where you have basically so much of the taxpayers' funds being spent on this investigation that has just been going on for years with basically no grounds." Mr. Wilson, who accused the administration of falsifying intelligence in the lead-up to the Iraq war, is married to CIA agent Valerie Plame, the central figure in an ongoing investigation into possible White House leaks revealing her identity.

Mr. Wilson is delivering the keynote address at the conference during its fund-raising segment tomorrow night.

A State Department spokesman, Gregory Sullivan, responded that MPAC was a moderate group that on its Web site had explicitly condemned terrorism in Iraq, and said: "This is an influential organization that has publicly preached as a message of tolerance and engagement."

A spokesman for the Justice Department, Eric Holland, responded to queries about Justice's participation in the MPAC conference by saying that the department's "Community Relations Service serves as a 'peacemaker' for community conflicts," adding: "Part of this mission consists of sending CRS professionals to assist people of different backgrounds to work and live together in harmony."

TITLE XIV—MATTERS RELATING TO DETAINEES

Sec. 1401. Short title
Sec. 1402. Uniform standards for the interrogation of persons under the detention of the Department of Defense
Sec. 1403. Prohibition on cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment of persons under custody or control of the United States Government
Sec. 1404. Protection of United States Government personnel engaged in authorized interrogations
Sec. 1405. Procedures for status review of detainees outside the United States
Sec. 1406. Training of Iraqi security forces regarding treatment of detainees

SEC. 1401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Detainee Treatment Act of 2005''.

SEC. 1402. UNIFORM STANDARDS FOR THE INTERROGATION OF PERSONS UNDER THE DETENTION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense or under detention in a Department of Defense facility shall be subject to any treatment or technique of interrogation not authorized by and listed in the United States Army Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—Subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to any person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense pursuant to a criminal law or immigration law of the United States.

(c) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the rights under the United States Constitution of any person in the custody or under the physical jurisdiction of the United States.

SEC. 1403. PROHIBITION ON CRUEL, INHUMAN, OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT OF PERSONS UNDER CUSTODY OR CONTROL OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No individual in the custody or under the physical control of the United States Government, regardless of nationality or physical location, shall be subject to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment.

(b) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to impose any geographical limitation on the applicability of the prohibition against cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment under this section.

(c) LIMITATION ON SUPERSEDURE.—The provisions of this section shall not be superseded, except by a provision of law enacted after the date of the enactment of this Act which specifically repeals, modifies, or supersedes the provisions of this section.

(d) CRUEL, INHUMAN, OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT DEFINED.—In this section, the term ''cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment''

means the cruel, unusual, and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the Fifth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, as defined in the United States Reservations, Declarations and Understandings to the United Nations Convention Against Torture and Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment done at New York, December 10, 1984.

SEC. 1404. PROTECTION OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PERSONNEL ENGAGED IN AUTHORIZED INTERROGATIONS.

(a) PROTECTION OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PERSONNEL.—In any civil action or criminal prosecution against an officer, employee, member of the Armed Forces, or other agent of the United States Government who is a United States person, arising out of the officer, employee, member of the Armed Forces, or other agent's engaging in specific operational practices, that involve detention and interrogation of aliens who the President or his designees have determined are believed to be engaged in or associated with international terrorist activity that poses a serious, continuing threat to the United States, its interests, or its allies, and that were officially authorized and determined to be lawful at the time that they were conducted, it shall be a defense that such officer, employee, member of the Armed Forces, or other agent did not know that the practices were unlawful and a person of ordinary sense and understanding would not know the practices were unlawful. Good faith reliance on advice of counsel should be an important factor, among others, to consider in assessing whether a person of ordinary sense and understanding would have known the practices to be unlawful. Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit or extinguish any defense or protection otherwise available to any person or entity from suit, civil or criminal liability, or damages, or to provide immunity from prosecution for any criminal offense by the proper authorities.

(b) COUNSEL.—The United States Government may provide or employ counsel, and pay counsel fees, court costs, bail, and other expenses incident to the representation of an officer, employee, member of the Armed Forces, or other agent described in subsection (a), with respect to any civil action or criminal prosecution arising out of practices described in that subsection, under the same conditions, and to the same extent, to which such services and payments are authorized under section 1037 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 1405. PROCEDURES FOR STATUS REVIEW OF DETAINEES OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

(a) SUBMITTAL OF PROCEDURES FOR STATUS REVIEW OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO BAY, CUBA, AND IN AFGHANISTAN AND IRAQ.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives a report setting forth—

(A) the procedures of the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and the Administrative Review Boards established by direction of the Secretary of Defense that are in operation at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for determining the status of the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay or to provide an annual review to determine the need to continue to detain an alien who is a detainee; and

(B) the procedures in operation in Afghanistan and Iraq for a determination of the status of aliens detained in the custody or under the physical control of the Department of Defense in those countries.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149633

(2) DESIGNATED CIVILIAN OFFICIAL.—The procedures submitted to Congress pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) shall ensure that the official of the Department of Defense who is designated by the President or Secretary of Defense to be the final review authority within the Department of Defense with respect to decisions of any such tribunal or board (referred to as the ''Designated Civilian Official'') shall be a civilian officer of the Department of Defense holding an office to which appointments are required by law to be made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(3) CONSIDERATION OF NEW EVIDENCE.—The procedures submitted under paragraph (1)(A) shall provide for periodic review of any new evidence that may become available relating to the enemy combatant status of a detainee.

(b) CONSIDERATION OF STATEMENTS DERIVED WITH COERCION.—

(1) ASSESSMENT.—The procedures submitted to Congress pursuant to subsection (a)(1)(A) shall ensure that a Combatant Status Review Tribunal or Administrative Review Board, or any similar or successor administrative tribunal or board, in making a determination of status or disposition of any detainee under such procedures, shall, to the extent practicable, assess—

(A) whether any statement derived from or relating to such detainee was obtained as a result of coercion; and

(B) the probative value, if any, of any such statement.

(2) APPLICABILITY.—Paragraph (1) applies with respect to any proceeding beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) REPORT ON MODIFICATION OF PROCEDURES.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the committees specified in subsection (a)(1) a report on any modification of the procedures submitted under subsection (a). Any such report shall be submitted not later than 60 days before the date on which such modification goes into effect.

(d) ANNUAL REPORT.—

(1) REPORT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress an annual report on the annual review process for aliens in the custody of the Department of Defense outside the United States. Each such report shall be submitted in unclassified form, with a classified annex, if necessary. The report shall be submitted not later than December 31 each year.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149635

(2) ELEMENTS OF REPORT.—Each such report shall include the following with respect to the year covered by the report:

(A) The number of detainees whose status was reviewed.

(B) The procedures used at each location.

(e) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF DETENTION OF ENEMY COMBATANTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 2241 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) Except as provided in section 1405 of the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005, no court, justice, or judge shall have jurisdiction to hear or consider—

''(1) an application for a writ of habeas corpus filed by or on behalf of an alien detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; or

''(2) any other action against the United States or its agents relating to any aspect of the detention by the Department of Defense of an alien at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, who—

''(A) is currently in military custody; or

''(B) has been determined by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in accordance with the procedures set forth in section 1405(e) of the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005 to have been properly detained as an enemy combatant.''.

(2) REVIEW OF DECISIONS OF COMBATANT STATUS REVIEW TRIBUNALS OF PROPRIETY OF DETENTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision of a Combatant Status Review Tribunal that an alien is properly detained as an enemy combatant.

(B) LIMITATION ON CLAIMS.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this paragraph shall be limited to claims brought by or on behalf of an alien—

(i) who is, at the time a request for review by such court is filed, detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and

(ii) for whom a Combatant Status Review Tribunal has been conducted, pursuant to applicable procedures specified by the Secretary of Defense.

(C) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit on any claims with respect to an alien under this paragraph shall be limited to the consideration of—

(i) whether the status determination of the Combatant Status Review Tribunal with regard to such alien was consistent with the standards and procedures specified by the Secretary of Defense for Combatant Status Review Tribunals (including the requirement that the conclusion of the Tribunal be supported by a preponderance of the evidence and allowing a rebuttable presumption in favor the Government's evidence); and

(ii) to the extent the Constitution and laws of the United States are applicable, whether the use of such standards and procedures to make the determination is consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149638

(D) TERMINATION ON RELEASE FROM CUSTODY.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit with respect to the claims of an alien under this paragraph shall cease upon the release of such alien from the custody of the Department of Defense.

(3) REVIEW OF FINAL DECISIONS OF MILITARY COMMISSIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision rendered pursuant to Military Commission Order No. 1, dated August 31, 2005 (or any successor military order).

(B) GRANT OF REVIEW.—Review under this paragraph—

(i) with respect to a capital case or a case in which the alien was sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 10 years or more, shall be as of right; or

(ii) with respect to any other case, shall be at the discretion of the United

DOJ_NMG_ 0149639

States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

(C) LIMITATION ON APPEALS.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this paragraph shall be limited to an appeal brought by or on behalf of an alien—

(i) who was, at the time of the proceedings pursuant to the military order referred to in subparagraph (A), detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and

(ii) for whom a final decision has been rendered pursuant to such military order.

(D) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit on an appeal of a final decision with respect to an alien under this paragraph shall be limited to the consideration of—

(i) whether the final decision was consistent with the standards and procedures specified in the military order referred to in subparagraph (A); and

(ii) to the extent the Constitution and laws of the United States are applicable, whether the use of such standards and procedures to reach the final decision is consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

(4) RESPONDENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall be the named respondent in any appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this subsection.

(f) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to confer any constitutional right on an alien detained as an enemy combatant outside the United States.

(g) UNITED STATES DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term ''United States'', when used in a geographic sense, is as defined in section 101(a)(38) of the Immigration and Nationality Act and, in particular, does not include the United States Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

(h) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—This section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) REVIEW OF COMBATANT STATUS TRIBUNAL AND MILITARY COMMISSION DECISIONS.—Paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (e) shall apply with respect to any claim whose review is governed by one of such paragraphs and that is pending on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1406. TRAINING OF IRAQI SECURITY FORCES REGARDING TREATMENT OF DETAINEES.

(a) REQUIRED POLICIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense shall prescribe policies designed to ensure that all military and civilian Department of Defense personnel or contractor personnel of the Department of Defense responsible for the training of any unit of the Iraqi Security Forces provide training to such units regarding the international obligations and laws applicable to the humane treatment of detainees, including protections afforded under the Geneva Conventions and the Convention Against Torture.

(2) ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF TRAINING.—The Secretary shall ensure that, for all personnel of the Iraqi Security Forces who are provided training referred to in paragraph (1), there is documented acknowledgment that such training has been provided.

(3) DEADLINE FOR POLICIES TO BE PRESCRIBED.—The policies required by paragraph (1)

shall be prescribed not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) ARMY FIELD MANUAL.—

(1) TRANSLATION.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide for the unclassified portions of the United States Army Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation to be translated into Arabic and any other language the Secretary determines appropriate for use by members of the Iraqi security forces.

(2) DISTRIBUTION.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide for such manual, as translated, to be distributed to all appropriate officials of the Iraqi Government, including, but not limited to, the Iraqi Minister of Defense, the Iraqi Minister of Interior, senior Iraqi military personnel, and appropriate members of the Iraqi Security Forces with a recommendation that the principles that underlay the manual be adopted by the Iraqis as the basis for their policies on interrogation of detainees.

(c) TRANSMITTAL TO CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—Not less than 30 days after the date on which policies are first prescribed under subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives copies of such regulations, policies, or orders, together with a report on steps taken to the date of the report to implement this section.

(d) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not less than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report on the implementation of this section.

Attached is the final language to the McCain / Graham amendments. TY

A good list.

Some potential adds -- (1) avian flu response, both w/r/t security and civil liability; (2) privacy/civil liberties restructuring initiative; (3) continued emphasis on human trafficking efforts; (4) resuscitation of the IP task force; (5) settlement of first Cobell-style tribal claim on very favorable terms; (6) gang training initiative (rationalizing existing programs and focusing on best programs); (7) new bullet proof vest regulatory regime; (8) continued aggressive defense of war on terror related litigation.

The Attorney General has asked us to prepare a list of initiatives or projects that the Department has launched or pursued at his direction during the year that he has been Attorney General (e.g., the gang initiative). Please identify for me any projects or initiatives that you believe fit this description.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Many thanks,
Courtney

Let's check with Tracy to see if there are any other things going on in OJP, OVW (like local justice centers), COPS, CRS, etc. I overlooked several important matters below. What about Katrina related matters? Robt.

Would add sex offender registry , any initiatives we had on judicial security, (copying Tracy to make sure we can claim these), continuation of corporate integrity (i.e. KPMG), and meth initiatives.

Also, I know that we had a historic year in enforcing the language provisions of the Voting Rights Act - that is, we filed more Section 203 cases (giving access to the polls to more folks) than have ever been filed in a single year.

Brad - Per our talk yesterday, a draft for your consideration. NMG

DRAFT 2/15/2017

GRAHAM-LEVIN TALKING POINTS

A Bipartisan Effort We Can Be Proud Of

- Graham-Levin amendment was a bipartisan effort that passed the Senate 84-14, and was later approved as part of the Defense Authorization Bill on a voice vote in the Senate

- The amendment affords each Al Qaeda detainee at Guantanamo with: (1) a guaranteed right of access to the courts to challenge whether he should be detained as an enemy combatant, (2) a second, guaranteed opportunity for judicial review if he is convicted of serious war crimes; and (3) the right to an annual administrative review to determine whether he should be released (akin to a parole board hearing).

- Graham-Levin adopts and codifies the Administration's CSRT, ARB, and MC regime for adjudication of detainees at Guantanamo, endorsing the procedures and protections created by DoD. It is a vindication of the care and thought that went into the development of the Administration's procedures.

- The codified CSRT procedures are more extensive than those used by any other nation in any previous conflict to determine combat detainee status. The process is modeled on Army Regulation 190-8, which Justice O'Connor's opinion in Hamdi indicated would be ample process even for American citizens.

- Detainees receive substantial protections in CSRT proceedings, including the opportunity to be heard in person, the ability to present additional evidence they believe might benefit them, and the assistance of a military officer assigned to serve as their personal representative. Non-classified proceedings are open to the media.

- Every year, each GTMO detainee is also entitled to an ARB hearing to reassess whether his release is appropriate. DoD has gone above and beyond anything required by domestic or international law, including the Geneva Conventions, providing enemy combatants a chance to be heard and released even while conflict is ongoing.

- Through CSRTs, ARBs or other means, over 200 detainees have been released from GTMO since the commencement of hostilities. Showing how it has erred on the side of release, DoD reports that over 10 have been either recaptured or killed on the battlefield fighting against the U.S.

- The Military Commission process now adopted by Congress has historically been used to prosecute enemy combatants who violate the laws of war for fixed terms of confinement. The United States used the Military Commission process during World War II. Each accused tried by a Military Commission has the following procedural safeguards: the presumption of innocence; proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; the right to call and cross examine witnesses (subject to the rules regarding production of witnesses and protection of information); nothing said by an accused to his attorney, or anything derived therefrom, may be used against him at trial; no adverse inference for remaining silent; overall requirement that any military commission proceeding be full and fair. Finally, to assist him in preparing a defense, each accused has a Military Defense Counsel provided at no cost. Alternatively, the accused may also hire a civilian defense counsel.

- Additional layers of review follow, including a three-member Review Panel who will review all cases for material errors of law. Extremely qualified individuals have agreed to serve on the Review Panel: Judge Griffin Bell, a former U.S. Attorney General and former federal appellate judge from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit; Judge Edward George Biester, Jr., a sitting judge on the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County, Pennsylvania and former Attorney General in Pennsylvania and Member of Congress; William T. Coleman, former Secretary of Transportation and member of the U.S. delegation to the U.N. General Assembly; Judge Frank J. Williams, currently Chief Justice of the Rhode Island Supreme Court.

The Need for Litigation Reform

- There was a profound need for Graham-Levin to sort our which litigation rights detainees should and should not have. Our enemies have clogged our courts with frivolous litigation. There are, for example, 160 habeas cases pending on behalf of approximately 300 GTMO detainees.

    - Al Qaeda training manuals expressly promote the use of litigation to thwart our war effort.

    - Detainees have sought to litigate over everything from seeking access to DVDs, dictionaries, more exercise time, faster mail delivery, access to video messages from their families, copies of the Koran with commentary instead of the standard Koran without.

    - Detainees' lawyers have even sued because they consider dial-up Internet access at GTMO as slow.

- Suits now exist from Afghanistan and Iraq, as well as GTMO. And they now seek not just habeas relief but money damages from individual soldiers.

- Detained enemies have never before been allowed to challenge in court either their detention or their conditions of confinement. Had these conditions existed during World War II, hundreds of thousands of captured German and Japanese soldiers would have been entitled to lawyers and hearings in federal court.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149706

- Even our own soldiers convicted under the UCMJ are not entitled to challenge the substance of their convictions through habeas in federal court, only whether the military court had jurisdiction over them as members of the armed forces. The Graham Amendment provides terrorists more process in courts than this.

Why There's Nothing Alarming or Unusual About Limiting Habeas

- Congress has modified the habeas statutes many times in the past. For example:

    - Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act ("AEDPA") and the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act, passed in 1996. AEDPA placed a number of limitations on the scope of habeas relief available to persons challenging the judgment of a State court and prohibited the Supreme Court from reviewing the decision of a circuit court to allow or to bar a state prisoner from filing successive petitions.

    - 8 U.S.C. § 1226a(b) (part of the USA PATRIOT Act of 2001) places limits on habeas for aliens involved in terrorism or other activity endangering national security.

    - 8 U.S.C. § 1201(i) (part of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorist Prevention Act of 2004) bars habeas review of certain visa revocation decisions.

    - 8 U.S.C. § 1252 (part of the REAL ID Act of 2005) eliminates habeas review of decisions not involving constitutional claims or questions in cases involving asylum, removal of criminal aliens, and denials of discretionary relief by DoJ or DHS.

- If Congress can place habeas limits on U.S. citizens and aliens who are located within the U.S. during peacetime, certainly it is appropriate for Congress to limit habeas petitions for aliens captured during wartime who are being held outside of the United States.

- Reform is not an attack on last year's Supreme Court decisions. The Supreme Court in its 2004 Rasul decision recognized that Congress could amend the habeas statute. And several Justices have expressly called strongly for Congress to bring clarity to this area, including Justice Scalia in a written opinion and Justice O'Connor in a recent speech at West Point.

- As Senator Graham said on the floor of the Senate, these are terrorists who are suing our own troops and officials in our domestic civilian courts in a time of war. There is no legal or moral imperative to treat them on par with common civilian criminals who are American citizens. Even so, this bill does not cut off terrorist litigation but specifically allows even those found to be enemy combatants, as well as those found guilty of war crimes in trials before military commissions, the right to appeal to the Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit – the so-called "second highest court in the land."

TITLE XIV—MATTERS RELATING TO DETAINEES

Sec. 1401. Short title.
Sec. 1402. Uniform standards for the interrogation of persons under the detention of the Department of Defense.
Sec. 1403. Prohibition on cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment of persons under custody or control of the United States Government.
Sec. 1404. Protection of United States Government personnel engaged in authorized interrogations.
Sec. 1405. Procedures for status review of detainees outside the United States.
Sec. 1406. Training of Iraqi forces regarding treatment of detainees.

SEC. 1401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ''Detainee Treatment Act of 2005''.

SEC. 1402. UNIFORM STANDARDS FOR THE INTERROGATION OF PERSONS UNDER THE DETENTION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense or under detention in a Department of Defense facility shall be subject to any treatment or technique of interrogation not authorized by and listed in the United States Army Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—Subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to any person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense pursuant to a criminal law or immigration law of the United States.

(c) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect the rights under the United States Constitution of any person in the custody or under the physical jurisdiction of the United States.

SEC. 1403. PROHIBITION ON CRUEL, INHUMAN, OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT OF PERSONS UNDER CUSTODY OR CONTROL OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—No individual in the custody or under the physical control of the United States Government, regardless of nationality or physical location, shall be subject to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment.

(b) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to impose any geographical limitation on the applicability of the prohibition against cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment under this section.

(c) LIMITATION ON SUPERSEDURE.—The provisions of this section shall not be superseded, except by a provision of law enacted after the date of the enactment of this Act which specifically repeals, modifies, or supersedes the provisions of this section.

(d) CRUEL, INHUMAN, OR DEGRADING TREATMENT OR PUNISHMENT DEFINED.—In this section, the term ''cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment'' means the cruel, unusual, and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the Fifth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, as defined in the United States Reservations, Declarations and Understandings to the United Nations Convention Against Torture and Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment done at New York, December 10, 1984.

SEC. 1404. PROTECTION OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PERSONNEL ENGAGED IN AUTHORIZED INTERROGATIONS.

(a) PROTECTION OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT PERSONNEL.—In any civil action or criminal prosecution against an officer, employee, member of the Armed Forces, or other agent of the United States Government who is a United States person, arising out of the officer, employee, member of the Armed Forces, or other agent's engaging in specific operational practices, that involve detention and interrogation of aliens who the President or his designees have determined are believed to be engaged in or associated with international terrorist activity that poses a serious, continuing threat to the United States, its interests, or its allies, and that were officially authorized and determined to be lawful at the time that they were conducted, it shall be a defense that such officer, employee, member of the Armed Forces, or other agent did not know that the practices were unlawful and a person of ordinary sense and understanding would not know the practices were unlawful. Good faith reliance on advice of counsel should be an important factor, among others, to consider in assessing whether a person of ordinary sense and understanding would have known the practices to be unlawful. Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit or extinguish any defense or protection otherwise available to any person or entity from suit, civil or criminal liability, or damages, or to provide immunity from prosecution for any criminal offense by the proper authorities.

(b) COUNSEL.—The United States Government may provide or employ counsel, and pay counsel fees, court costs, bail, and other expenses incident to the representation of an officer, employee, member of the Armed Forces, or other agent described in subsection (b), with respect to any civil action or criminal prosecution arising out of practices described in that subsection, under the same conditions, and to the same extent, to which such services and payments are authorized under section 1037 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 1405. PROCEDURES FOR STATUS REVIEW OF DETAINEES OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.

(a) SUBMITTAL OF PROCEDURES FOR STATUS REVIEW OF DETAINEES AT GUANTANAMO BAY, CUBA, AND IN AFGHANISTAN AND IRAQ.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services and the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives a report setting forth—

(A) the procedures of the Combatant Status Review Tribunals and the Administrative Review Boards established by direction of the Secretary of Defense that are in operation at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, for determining the status of the detainees held at Guantanamo Bay or to provide an annual review to determine the need to continue to detain an alien who is a detainee; and

(B) the procedures in operation in Afghanistan and Iraq for a determination of the status of aliens detained in the custody or under the physical control of the Department of Defense in those countries.

(2) DESIGNATED CIVILIAN OFFICIAL.—The procedures submitted to Congress pursuant to paragraph (1)(A) shall ensure that the official of the Department of Defense who is designated by the President or Secretary of Defense to be the final review authority within the Department of Defense with respect to decisions of any such tribunal or board (referred to as the ''Designated Civilian Official'') shall be a civilian officer of the Department of Defense holding an office to which appointments are required by law to be made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(3) CONSIDERATION OF NEW EVIDENCE.—The procedures submitted under paragraph (1)(A) shall provide for periodic review of any new evidence that may become available relating to the enemy combatant status of a detainee.

(b) CONSIDERATION OF STATEMENTS DERIVED WITH COERCION.—

(1) ASSESSMENT.—The procedures submitted to Congress pursuant to subsection (a)(1)(A) shall ensure that a Combatant Status Review Tribunal or Administrative Review Board, or any similar or successor administrative tribunal or board, in making a determination of status or disposition of any detainee under such procedures, shall, to the extent practicable, assess—

(A) whether any statement derived from or relating to such detainee was obtained as a result of coercion; and

(B) the probative value (if any) of any such statement.

(2) APPLICABILITY.—Paragraph (1) applies with respect to any proceeding beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) REPORT ON MODIFICATION OF PROCEDURES.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the committees specified in subsection (a)(1) a report on any modification of the procedures submitted under subsection (a). Any such report shall be submitted not later than 60 days before the date on which such modification goes into effect.

(d) ANNUAL REPORT.—

(1) REPORT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress an annual report on the annual review process for aliens in the custody of the Department of Defense outside the United States. Each such report shall be submitted in unclassified form, with a classified annex, if necessary. The report shall be submitted not later than December 31 each year.

(2) ELEMENTS OF REPORT.—Each such report shall include the following with respect to the year covered by the report:

(A) The number of detainees whose status was reviewed.

(B) The procedures used at each location.

(e) JUDICIAL REVIEW OF DETENTION OF ENEMY COMBATANTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 2241 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) Except as provided in section 1405 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2006, no court, justice, or judge shall have jurisdiction to hear or consider—

''(1) an application for a writ of habeas corpus filed by or on behalf of an alien detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; or

''(2) any other action against the United States or its agents relating to any aspect of the detention by the Department of Defense of an alien at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, who—

''(A) is currently in military custody; or

''(B) has been determined by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit in accordance with the procedures set forth in section 1405(e) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2006 to have been properly detained as an enemy combatant.''.

(2) REVIEW OF DECISIONS OF COMBATANT STATUS REVIEW TRIBUNALS OF PROPRIETY OF DETENTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision of a Combatant Status Review Tribunal that an alien is properly detained as an enemy combatant.

(B) LIMITATION ON CLAIMS.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this paragraph shall be limited to claims brought by or on behalf of an alien—

(i) who is, at the time a request for review by such court is filed, detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and

(ii) for whom a Combatant Status Review Tribunal has been conducted, pursuant to applicable procedures specified by the Secretary of Defense.

(C) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit on any claims with respect to an alien under this paragraph shall be limited to the consideration of—

(i) whether the status determination of the Combatant Status Review Tribunal with regard to such alien was consistent with the standards and procedures specified by the Secretary of Defense for Combatant Status Review Tribunals (including the requirement that the conclusion of the Tribunal be supported by a preponderance of the evidence and allowing a rebuttable presumption in favor the Government's evidence); and

(ii) to the extent the Constitution and laws of the United States are applicable, whether the use of such standards and procedures to make the determination is consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

(D) TERMINATION ON RELEASE FROM CUSTODY.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit with respect to the claims of an alien under this paragraph shall cease upon the release of such alien from the custody of the Department of Defense.

(3) REVIEW OF FINAL DECISIONS OF MILITARY COMMISSIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit shall have exclusive jurisdiction to determine the validity of any final decision rendered pursuant to Military Commission Order No. 1, dated August 31, 2005 (or any successor military order).

(B) GRANT OF REVIEW.—Review under this paragraph—

(i) with respect to a capital case or a case in which the alien was sentenced to a term of imprisonment of 10 years or more, shall be as of right; or

(ii) with respect to any other case, shall be at the discretion of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit.

(C) LIMITATION ON APPEALS.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this paragraph shall be limited to an appeal brought by or on behalf of an alien—

(i) who was, at the time of the proceedings pursuant to the military order referred to in subparagraph (A), detained by the Department of Defense at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; and

(ii) for whom a final decision has been rendered pursuant to such military order.

(D) SCOPE OF REVIEW.—The jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit on an appeal of a final decision with respect to an alien under this paragraph shall be limited to the consideration of—

(i) whether the final decision was consistent with the standards and procedures specified in the military order referred to in subparagraph (A); and

(ii) to the extent the Constitution and laws of the United States are applicable, whether the use of such standards and procedures to reach the final decision is consistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

(4) RESPONDENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall be the named respondent in any appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit under this subsection.

(f) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to confer any constitutional right on an alien detained as an enemy combatant outside the United States.

(g) UNITED STATES DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term ''United States'', when used in a geographic sense, is as defined in section 101(a)(38) of the Immigration and Nationality Act and, in particular, does not include the United States Naval Station, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

(h) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—This section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) REVIEW OF COMBATANT STATUS TRIBUNAL AND MILITARY COMMISSION DECISIONS.—Paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (e) shall apply with respect to any claim whose review is governed by one of such paragraphs and that is pending on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1406. TRAINING OF IRAQI FORCES REGARDING TREATMENT OF DETAINEES.

(a) REQUIRED POLICIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that policies are prescribed regarding procedures for military and civilian personnel of the Department of Defense and contractor personnel of the Department of Defense in Iraq that are intended to ensure that members of the Armed Forces, and all persons acting on behalf of the Armed Forces or within facilities of the Armed Forces, ensure that all personnel of Iraqi military forces who are trained by Department of Defense personnel and contractor personnel of the Department of Defense receive training regarding the international obligations and laws applicable to the humane detention of detainees, including protections afforded under the Geneva Conventions and the Convention Against Torture.

(2) ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF TRAINING.—The Secretary shall ensure that, for all personnel of the Iraqi Security Forces who are provided training referred to in paragraph (1), there is documented acknowledgment of such training having been provided.

(3) DEADLINE FOR POLICIES TO BE PRESCRIBED.—The policies required by paragraph (1) shall be prescribed not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) ARMY FIELD MANUAL.—

(1) TRANSLATION.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide for the United States Army Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation to be translated into arabic and any other language the Secretary determines appropriate for use by members of the Iraqi military forces.

(2) DISTRIBUTION.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide for such manual, as translated, to be provided to each unit of the Iraqi military forces trained by Department of Defense personnel or contractor personnel of the Department of Defense.

(c) TRANSMITTAL OF REGULATIONS.—Not less than 30 days after the date on which regulation, policies, and orders are first prescribed under subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives copies of such regulations, policies, or orders, together with a report on steps taken to the date of the report to implement this section.

(d) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not less than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, and annually thereafter, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report on the implementation of this section.

DRAFT 2/15/2017

GRAHAM-LEVIN TALKING POINTS

A Bipartisan Effort We Can Be Proud Of

- Graham-Levin amendment was a bipartisan effort that passed the Senate 84-14, and was later approved as part of the Defense Authorization Bill on a voice vote in the Senate

- The amendment affords each Al Qaeda detainee at Guantanamo with: (1) a guaranteed right of access to the courts to challenge whether he should be detained as an enemy combatant, (2) a second, guaranteed opportunity for judicial review if he is convicted of serious war crimes; and (3) the right to an annual administrative review to determine whether he should be released (akin to a parole board hearing).

- Graham-Levin adopts and codifies the Administration's CSRT, ARB, and MC regime for adjudication of detainees at Guantanamo, endorsing the procedures and protections created by DoD. It is a vindication of the care and thought that went into the development of the Administration's procedures.

- The codified CSRT procedures are more extensive than those used by any other nation in any previous conflict to determine combat detainee status. The process is modeled on Army Regulation 190-8, which Justice O'Connor's opinion in Hamdi indicated would be ample process even for American citizens.

- Detainees receive substantial protections in CSRT proceedings, including the opportunity to be heard in person, the ability to present additional evidence they believe might benefit them, and the assistance of a military officer assigned to serve as their personal representative. Non-classified proceedings are open to the media.

- Every year, each GTMO detainee is also entitled to an ARB hearing to reassess whether his release is appropriate. DoD has gone above and beyond anything required by domestic or international law, including the Geneva Conventions, providing enemy combatants a chance to be heard and released even while conflict is ongoing.

- Through CSRTs, ARBs or other means, over 200 detainees have been released from GTMO since the commencement of hostilities. Showing how it has erred on the side of release, DoD reports that over 10 have been either recaptured or killed on the battlefield fighting against the U.S.

- The Military Commission process now adopted by Congress has historically been used to prosecute enemy combatants who violate the laws of war for fixed terms of confinement. The United States used the Military Commission process during World War II. Each accused tried by a Military Commission has the following procedural safeguards: the presumption of innocence; proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; the right to call and cross examine witnesses (subject to the rules regarding production of witnesses and protection of information); nothing said by an accused to his attorney, or anything derived therefrom, may be used against him at trial; no adverse inference for remaining silent; overall requirement that any military commission proceeding be full and fair. Finally, to assist him in preparing a defense, each accused has a Military Defense Counsel provided at no cost. Alternatively, the accused may also hire a civilian defense counsel.

- Additional layers of review follow, including a three-member Review Panel who will review all cases for material errors of law. Extremely qualified individuals have agreed to serve on the Review Panel: Judge Griffin Bell, a former U.S. Attorney General and former federal appellate judge from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit; Judge Edward George Biester, Jr., a sitting judge on the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks County, Pennsylvania and former Attorney General in Pennsylvania and Member of Congress; William T. Coleman, former Secretary of Transportation and member of the U.S. delegation to the U.N. General Assembly; Judge Frank J. Williams, currently Chief Justice of the Rhode Island Supreme Court.

The Need for Litigation Reform

- There was a profound need for Graham-Levin to sort our which litigation rights detainees should and should not have. Our enemies have clogged our courts with frivolous litigation. There are, for example, 160 habeas cases pending on behalf of approximately 300 GTMO detainees.

    - Al Qaeda training manuals expressly promote the use of litigation to thwart our war effort.

    - Detainees have sought to litigate over everything from seeking access to DVDs, dictionaries, more exercise time, faster mail delivery, access to video messages from their families, copies of the Koran with commentary instead of the standard Koran without.

    - Detainees' lawyers have even sued because they consider dial-up Internet access at GTMO as slow.

- Suits now exist from Afghanistan and Iraq, as well as GTMO. And they now seek not just habeas relief but money damages from individual soldiers.

- Detained enemies have never before been allowed to challenge in court either their detention or their conditions of confinement. Had these conditions existed during World War II, hundreds of thousands of captured German and Japanese soldiers would have been entitled to lawyers and hearings in federal court.

- Even our own soldiers convicted under the UCMJ are not entitled to challenge the substance of their convictions through habeas in federal court, only whether the military court had jurisdiction over them as members of the armed forces. The Graham Amendment provides terrorists more process in courts than this.

Why There's Nothing Alarming or Unusual About Limiting Habeas

- Congress has modified the habeas statutes many times in the past. For example:

    - Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act ("AEDPA") and the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act, passed in 1996. AEDPA placed a number of limitations on the scope of habeas relief available to persons challenging the judgment of a State court and prohibited the Supreme Court from reviewing the decision of a circuit court to allow or to bar a state prisoner from filing successive petitions.

    - 8 U.S.C. § 1226a(b) (part of the USA PATRIOT Act of 2001) places limits on habeas for aliens involved in terrorism or other activity endangering national security.

    - 8 U.S.C. § 1201(i) (part of the Intelligence Reform and Terrorist Prevention Act of 2004) bars habeas review of certain visa revocation decisions.

    - 8 U.S.C. § 1252 (part of the REAL ID Act of 2005) eliminates habeas review of decisions not involving constitutional claims or questions in cases involving asylum, removal of criminal aliens, and denials of discretionary relief by DoJ or DHS.

- If Congress can place habeas limits on U.S. citizens and aliens who are located within the U.S. during peacetime, certainly it is appropriate for Congress to limit habeas petitions for aliens captured during wartime who are being held outside of the United States.

- Reform is not an attack on last year's Supreme Court decisions. The Supreme Court in its 2004 Rasul decision recognized that Congress could amend the habeas statute. And several Justices have expressly called strongly for Congress to bring clarity to this area, including Justice Scalia in a written opinion and Justice O'Connor in a recent speech at West Point.

- As Senator Graham said on the floor of the Senate, these are terrorists who are suing our own troops and officials in our domestic civilian courts in a time of war. There is no legal or moral imperative to treat them on par with common civilian criminals who are American citizens. Even so, this bill does not cut off terrorist litigation but specifically allows even those found to be enemy combatants, as well as those found guilty of war crimes in trials before military commissions, the right to appeal to the Court of Appeals for the DC Circuit – the so-called "second highest court in the land."

Hi Dan

Here is a draft memo on GITMO resources. JMD just called wanting to know our ETA as they are under the gun to get recommendations out before 1-4.

Pres is on his way to camp david (so I hear) so the bill will not get signed into law until early next week.

Please let me know if you have changes - are you going to pass this along to Carl et al? (Note my questions in bold).

Neil, sorry, I'm just picking this up now and the info is at work. Deb will be in Tuesday and can give you the exact dollars.
Once you give me your final bonus nominations, I will poll the SERB and this will happen in fairly short order. Have a wonderful holiday!

As I related to Robert, I've been selected for jury duty (EDVa). I will be "on call" for approx the next two weeks. According to a voice mail message I recvd Friday, my first day of service will begin this coming Wednesday. I will be hard to reach at the courthouse - no cell phones and, though the rules aren't clear, I have doubts about the bb too. But I will check in as much as I possibly can and will let you know about the details of my service duties and the specific days I will be serving as soon as they are shared with me. Many thanks to all for your understanding. NMG

Let me know what you think. The prose is leaden, but it's the product of a committee working under time pressure.

The Administration is committed to treating all detainees captured in the war on terror in a manner consistent with applicable law. Title XIV, the Detainee Treatment Act of 2005, addresses certain matters relating to the detention and interrogation of persons by the United States, particularly by the United States Armed Forces. The provisions of this title are an important statement reaffirming the values and principles we share as a nation.

The Constitution makes the President the Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces, a grant that includes the authority -- and duty -- to protect Americans effectively from attacks by our enemies, including the terrorists with whom we are now at war, and to bring those enemies to justice. In some respects, Title XIV simply codifies existing policy. Section 1403, for example, is intended to codify the Administration's existing policy of abiding by the substantive constitutional standard applicable to the United States under Article 16 of the Convention Against Torture in the treatment of detainees. Title XIV nevertheless does touch on an area that involves core presidential responsibility and in which, as a result, Congress traditionally has avoided attempts to regulate. The Executive Branch therefore shall construe this title to ensure that it is consistent with this vital constitutional responsibility for the safety of the Nation.

While this legislation authorizes judicial review of the judgments of military commissions and military detention decisions that is historically unprecedented in scope for any nation at war, it, on balance, will help to ensure that the United States can continue to effectively fight the global war on terror free of a crippling litigation burden. This legislation does not create or authorize any private right of action, and, in section 1404, protects those prosecuting the war on our behalf against litigation or prosecution for authorized detention and interrogation practices undertaken in good faith. Finally, the provisions of this legislation that strictly limit available judicial review will apply in all pending cases.

Gentlemen,
I have received word, on a close hold, that Julie Myers will be recess appointed on or about Jan. 5. PPO has requested that I transition over soon thereafter, but have also indicated that they are willing to work with me as to the timing. While I have all my ducks already in a row, there are a few items that I want to push along in the coming days (trafficking report, gao study, oasg admin, and a few others) to ensure that no momentum is lost. I believe that a good final day for me could be Wed. January 11.

Needless to say, this is a bitter sweet change for me as I look forward to serving the President in this new capacity, but can't help but ponder if I will ever again work on as exciting and interesting issues as I have at Justice, or with such outstanding gentlemen and true legal scholars as Robert D. McCallum, Jr. and Neil Gorsuch.

Al asked me this morning what we were going to say in the signing statement on the DOD Appropriations Bill on the detainee provisions. I told him the President had already issued a signing statement (and a second, public relations statement) last week and that it was available on the White House website. You might want to have somebody print the statements off for him so he can read them.

INFORMATION

The United States charges that:

COUNT ONE

18 U.S.C. § 371 - Conspiracy

GENERAL ALLEGATIONS

Unless specified otherwise, at all relevant times:

1. From in or about 1994 to in or about 2004, defendant JACK A. ABRAMOFF was a Washington, D.C. lobbyist. In 1994, defendant ABRAMOFF joined a law and lobbying firm ("Firm A"). In January 2001, defendant ABRAMOFF joined a second law and lobbying firm ("Firm B").

2. Defendant ABRAMOFF solicited and obtained lobbying business from groups and companies throughout the United States, including Native American tribal governments operating, and interested in operating, gaming casinos. Defendant ABRAMOFF sought to further his clients' interests by lobbying public officials, including, but not limited to, Members of the United States Congress. Defendant ABRAMOFF also sought to further his clients' interests by recommending vendors for grass roots work, public relations services and election campaign support.

3. In or about January 2001, Michael Scanlon ("Scanlon") established a business to provide grass roots work, public relations services and election campaign support. Scanlon also formed other companies that were used primarily to receive money for services and work performed by others (collectively referred to as "CCS").

4. In or about May 2003, defendant ABRAMOFF established a business called GrassRoots Interactive ("GRI"), which had its principal offices in Silver Spring, Maryland. GRI was purportedly formed to provide grass roots work, public relations services, and election campaign support.

5. In July 1999, Abramoff established a private foundation called Capital Athletic Foundation ("CAF") for which he sought and received federal tax-exempt status, in part to provide funding for a non-profit school.

THE CONSPIRACY AND ITS OBJECTS

6. From at least as early as 1997 through at least April 2004, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, the defendant, did knowingly conspire and agree with Scanlon and with others to commit the following offenses against the United States:

JACK A. ABRAMOFF,

(A) to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and deprive defendant ABRAMOFF's clients of their right to defendant ABRAMOFF's honest services, performed free from deceit, fraud, concealment, conflict of interest and self-dealing, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1343, and 1346;

(B) to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and to obtain money and property from the clients of defendant ABRAMOFF and Scanlon through intentionally and materially false and fraudulent misrepresentations, pretenses, and promises, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341 and 1343;

(C) to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and deprive Firm B of its right to defendant ABRAMOFF's honest services, performed free from deceit, fraud, concealment, conflict of interest and self-dealing, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1343, and 1346;

(D) to corruptly give, offer and promise things of value, including money, meals, trips and entertainment, to public officials and their relatives with the intent to influence, and in return for agreements to perform, officials acts benefitting defendant ABRAMOFF, Scanlon, and their clients, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 201(b)(1), 1341, 1343, and 1346; and

(E) to knowingly cause former senior Congressional staff members to make, with the intent to influence, communications to and appearances before Members of Congress, their employees and employees of Congressional Committees, on matters on which the former congressional staff members were seeking official action on behalf of other persons within one year of the Congressional staff members' employment by those Members of Congress or Congressional Committees, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 207(e).

PURPOSES OF THE CONSPIRACY

7. It was a purpose of the conspiracy for defendant ABRAMOFF, Scanlon and others to enrich themselves by obtaining substantial funds from their clients through fraud and concealment. A further purpose of the conspiracy was to obtain benefits for themselves and others through corrupt means.

MANNER AND MEANS

8. The conspiracy was carried out through the following manner and means:

A. Defendant ABRAMOFF and sometimes others would persuade clients that they needed to hire CCS or GRI to perform certain grass roots and public relations services to accomplish the goals that defendant ABRAMOFF identified for them.

B. Defendant ABRAMOFF and sometimes others would cause CCS or GRI to charge clients prices that incorporated huge profit margins for the purpose of generating funds for and concealing kickbacks that would be paid to defendant ABRAMOFF.

C. Defendant ABRAMOFF received approximately fifty percent of the net profits Scanlon, through CCS, obtained from clients referred by defendant ABRAMOFF. Defendant ABRAMOFF would receive this money through entities he owned and controlled. Defendant ABRAMOFF and Scanlon would conceal these kickbacks from their clients.

D. Defendant ABRAMOFF and others would cause clients to falsely believe that some of the fees charged were being used for specific purposes, when in fact, defendant ABRAMOFF and others would use those funds for their own personal benefit and not for the benefit of their clients.

E. On some occasions, defendant ABRAMOFF would falsely represent to his clients that he had no relationship with, or received no financial benefit from, CCS or GRI, when in fact defendant ABRAMOFF received substantial monetary payments from those entities.

F. Defendant ABRAMOFF and others would offer and provide things of value to public officials, including trips, campaign contributions, meals and entertainment in exchange for agreements that the public officials would use their official positions and influence to benefit defendant ABRAMOFF's clients and defendant ABRAMOFF's businesses.

G. Defendant ABRAMOFF and others would hire senior congressional staff members as lobbyists, and those former congressional staff members, with the knowledge and encouragement of defendant ABRAMOFF and others despite the federal one year lobbying ban, would communicate with their former employers, either Members of Congress or Congressional Committees, and their staffs, in order to influence official action.

OVERT ACTS

9. In furtherance of the conspiracy and to achieve its purposes, defendant ABRAMOFF, Scanlon and others committed the following overt acts, among others, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere:

DOJ_NMG_ 0149799

Deprivation of Abramoff's Clients' Right To Abramoff's Honest Services

Mississippi Tribe

10. In or about 1995, defendant ABRAMOFF was hired by a Native American tribal client based in Mississippi ("Mississippi Tribe") to provide lobbying services on various issues, including taxation of the tribe by the Federal government as well as other issues relating to Tribal sovereignty. Defendant ABRAMOFF used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Mississippi Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure and keep the trust and confidence of the Mississippi Tribe.

11. In or about early 2001, defendant ABRAMOFF advised the Mississippi Tribe to hire CCS while concealing the fact that defendant ABRAMOFF would receive approximately fifty percent of the net profits from the Mississippi Tribe's payments to CCS.

12. From in or about June 2001 until in or about April 2004, the Mississippi Tribe paid CCS approximately $14,765,000. Pursuant to their secret profit-sharing agreement, defendant ABRAMOFF and Scanlon concealed from the Mississippi Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $6,364,000, including money that was not passed through CCS, was kicked back to defendant ABRAMOFF pursuant to their secret arrangement.

Louisiana Tribe

13. In or about March 2001, defendant ABRAMOFF and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American tribal client based in Louisiana ("Louisiana Tribe") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services to the tribe. Defendant ABRAMOFF used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Louisiana Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure and keep the trust and confidence of the Louisiana Tribe.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149800

14. In or about March 2001, after CCS had been paid for the first project, defendant ABRAMOFF recommended and advised the Louisiana Tribe to rehire CCS while concealing the fact that defendant ABRAMOFF would receive fifty percent of the net profits from the Louisiana Tribe's payments to CCS.

15. From in or about March 2001 to in or about May 2003, the Louisiana Tribe paid Scanlon and related entities approximately $30,510,000. Defendant ABRAMOFF and Scanlon concealed from the Louisiana Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $11,450,000, including money that was not passed through CCS, was kicked back to defendant ABRAMOFF pursuant to their secret arrangement.

Michigan Tribe

16. In or about January 2002, defendant ABRAMOFF and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American tribal client based in Michigan ("Michigan Tribe") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services to the tribe. Defendant ABRAMOFF used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Michigan Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure and keep the trust and confidence of the Michigan Tribe.

17. In or about June 2002, defendant ABRAMOFF encouraged the Michigan Tribe to expand its contract with CCS while concealing the fact that defendant ABRAMOFF would receive approximately fifty percent of the profits from the Michigan Tribe's payments to CCS.

18. From in or about June 2002 to in or about October 2003, the Michigan Tribe paid CCS approximately $3,500,000. Pursuant to their secret arrangement, defendant ABRAMOFF and Scanlon concealed from the Michigan Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $540,000, was kicked back to defendant ABRAMOFF.

Texas Tribe

19. In or about February 2002, defendant ABRAMOFF and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American tribal client based in Texas ("Texas Tribe #1") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services to the tribe to reopen their casino through federal legislation. After Texas Tribe #1 paid $4,200,000 to CCS, defendant ABRAMOFF concealed his work to oppose Texas Tribe #1's efforts to reopen its casino under state law. Defendant ABRAMOFF falsely represented that he would work for free to represent Texas Tribe #1, all the while concealing from the Texas Tribe #1 that approximately fifty percent of CCS's net profits, approximately $1,850,000, was kicked back to Abramoff pursuant to his secret arrangement with Scanlon.

Fraud Based on Affirmative Misrepresentations

20. On or about June 6, 2002, defendant ABRAMOFF and a lobbying colleague, who was also a former congressional staffer ("Staffer A") successfully solicited one of Firm B's clients, a distilled beverages company, for a $25,000 payment to CAF. Instead of using the money for CAF and contrary to CAF's tax exempt purpose, defendant ABRAMOFF used this money for his personal and professional benefit to partially pay for a golfing trip to Scotland for public officials, members of his staff and others.

Deprivation of Abramoff's Employer's Right To Abramoff's Honest Services

21. In 2001, defendant ABRAMOFF successfully solicited a wireless telephone company ("Wireless Company") to make at least $50,000 in payments to CAF. In exchange for making the payments to this entity, defendant ABRAMOFF stated that no lobbying payments need be made to Firm B, and that defendant ABRAMOFF would undertake a lobbying effort to assist Wireless Company in securing a license to install wireless telephone infrastructure for the United States

DOJ_NMG_ 0149802

House of Representatives. In 2001 and early 2002, defendant ABRAMOFF and his Firm B colleagues lobbied for the Wireless Company without any formal retainer agreement or any payments to Firm B. At no time did defendant ABRAMOFF inform his employer, Firm B, of the payments totaling $50,000 to CAF that were diverted from Firm B.

Bribery and Honest Services Fraud Involving Public Officials

22. From in or about 1999 through in or about April 2004, defendant ABRAMOFF, Scanlon and others, together and separately, provided a stream of things of value to a Member of the United States House of Representatives ("Representative #1") and members of his staff, including but not limited to a lavish trip to Scotland to play golf on world-famous courses, tickets to sporting events and other entertainment, regular meals at defendant ABRAMOFF's upscale restaurant, and campaign contributions for Representative #1, his political action committee, and other political committees on behalf of Representative #1.

23. In exchange for those things of value, from in or about March 2000 through in or about April 2004, defendant ABRAMOFF, Scanlon and others, together and separately, sought and received Representative #1's agreement to perform a series of official acts to benefit defendant ABRAMOFF's businesses, clients and others, including but not limited to, agreements to support and pass legislation, agreements to place statements into the Congressional Record, meetings with defendant ABRAMOFF's clients, and advancing the application of a client of defendant ABRAMOFF for a license to install wireless telephone infrastructure in the House of Representatives.

Post-Employment Restrictions of Congressional Staffers

24. Beginning in March 2002, defendant ABRAMOFF and a former staffer to Representative #1 ("Staffer B") contacted Representative #1, officials employed by the Office of Representative #1, and officials employed by a House Committee ("Committee"), of which Representative #1 was the chairman. These contacts occurred within one year of Staffer B having served as the Staff Director of the Committee and Chief of Staff for Representative #1. Defendant ABRAMOFF intended that Staffer B make these appearances and communications for the purpose of influencing official action on behalf of defendant ABRAMOFF's and Staffer B's clients, including Texas Tribe #1 and Wireless Company.

All in violation of 18 United States Code, Section 371.

COUNT TWO

18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1346 and 2 - Honest Services Mail Fraud of a Public Official

25. Paragraphs 1 through 5, 19, and 22 through 24 are realleged as though fully stated herein.

26. From in or about 1999 through in or about April 2004, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, having devised and intending to devise a scheme and artifice to defraud and deprive the United States, his constituents and the United States House of Representatives of the right to the honest services of a Member of the United States House of Representatives, Representative #1, and his staff, including the right to conscientious, loyal, faithful, disinterested, unbiased service, to be performed free of deceit, undue influence, conflict of interest, self-enrichment, self-dealing, concealment, bribery, fraud and corruption, by corruptly offering and providing a stream of things of value, including money, meals, trips and entertainment to Representative #1 and his staff, in return for their agreements to perform official acts benefitting defendant ABRAMOFF and his clients as described in paragraphs 1 through 5, 19, and 22 through 24, defendant, knowingly and willfully, for the purpose of executing, and aiding and abetting, the above-described scheme and artifice and attempting to do so, that is funding a Scotland golf trip for Representative #1 and his staff, caused a $50,000 check solicited by Texas Tribe # 1 and defendant ABRAMOFF to be delivered by mail and commercial delivery service from Texas on or about August 12, 2002 according to the directions thereon to defendant ABRAMOFF in the District of Columbia.

All in violation of 18 United States Code, Sections 1341, 1346 and 2.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149805

COUNT THREE

26 U.S.C. § 7201 - Tax Evasion

27. Paragraphs 1 through 5 and 7 through 24 are realleged as though fully stated herein.

28. Beginning on or about January 1, 2002, the exact date being unknown, through October 17, 2003, in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, defendant a resident of Silver Spring, Maryland, did willfully attempt to evade and defeat a large part of the income tax due and owing by him to the United States of America for the calendar year 2002, by committing at least one affirmative act of evasion including, but not limited to:

JACK A. ABRAMOFF,

(a) Making and using, and causing to be made and used, false documents, false entries and alterations to financial books and records, and false invoices;

(b) Concealing assets and sources of income through the use of nominees including, but not limited to, tax-exempt organizations;

(c) Concealing substantial amounts of illegally derived income; and

(d) Filing, and causing to be filed, a false joint U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, Form 1040, for the 2002 calendar year all for the purpose of concealing additional unreported taxable income received by, or on behalf of, the defendant during the 2002 calendar year, on which income, as the defendant then and there well knew and believed, there was due and owing to the United States of America a substantial amount of income tax.

All in violation of Title 26, United States Code, Section 7201.

DEPUTY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE
1010 DEFENSE PENTAGON
WASHINGTON, DC 20301-1010

DEC 30 2005

MEMORANDUM FOR SECRETARIES OF THE MILITARY DEPARTMENTS
CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF
UNDER SECRETARIES OF DEFENSE
COMMANDERS OF THE COMBATANT COMMANDS
DIRECTORS OF THE DEFENSE AGENCIES
DIRECTORS OF THE DOD FIELD ACTIVITIES

SUBJECT: Interrogation and Treatment of Detainees by the Department of Defense

The following provision appears in the Defense Appropriations Act, 2006 (§ 1402):

> No person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense or under detention in a Department of Defense facility shall be subject to any treatment or technique of interrogation not authorized by and listed in the United States Army Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation.

Pursuant to the above, effective immediately, and until further notice, no person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense or under detention in a Department of Defense facility shall be subject to any treatment or interrogation approach or technique that is not authorized by and listed in United States Army Field Manual 34-52, "Intelligence Interrogation," September 28, 1992. Department of Defense Directive 3115.09, "DoD Intelligence Interrogations, Detainee Debriefings and Tactical Questioning," November 3, 2005, remains in effect.

This guidance does not apply to any person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense pursuant to a criminal law or immigration law of the United States.

The President's February 7, 2002 direction that all persons detained by the U.S. Armed Forces in the War on Terrorism shall be treated humanely remains in effect. Consistent with the President's guidance, DoD shall continue to ensure that no person in the custody or under the control of the Department of Defense, regardless of nationality or physical location, shall be subject to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment.

- Generally Favorable Decision in Hydropower Case

  On December 30, the United States District Court for the District of Oregon upheld the Army Corps of Engineers' 2006 plan for operating the Columbia River Power System and rejected the National Wildlife Federation's request for further injunctive relief in the form of additional spill and flow augmentation during the spring and summer months. The Court, however, rejected the Corps' proposals to allocate more water for transportation purposes at four dams and to shut down spill after August 15 if 95 percent of the fish had already passed.

DEPUTY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE
1010 DEFENSE PENTAGON
WASHINGTON, DC 20301-1010

DEC 30 2005

MEMORANDUM FOR SECRETARIES OF THE MILITARY DEPARTMENTS
CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF
UNDER SECRETARIES OF DEFENSE
COMMANDERS OF THE COMBATANT COMMANDS
DIRECTORS OF THE DEFENSE AGENCIES
DIRECTORS OF THE DOD FIELD ACTIVITIES

SUBJECT: Interrogation and Treatment of Detainees by the Department of Defense

The following provision appears in the Defense Appropriations Act, 2006 (§ 1402):

> No person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense or under detention in a Department of Defense facility shall be subject to any treatment or technique of interrogation not authorized by and listed in the United States Army Field Manual on Intelligence Interrogation.

Pursuant to the above, effective immediately, and until further notice, no person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense or under detention in a Department of Defense facility shall be subject to any treatment or interrogation approach or technique that is not authorized by and listed in United States Army Field Manual 34-52, "Intelligence Interrogation," September 28, 1992. Department of Defense Directive 3115.09, "DoD Intelligence Interrogations, Detainee Debriefings and Tactical Questioning," November 3, 2005, remains in effect.

This guidance does not apply to any person in the custody or under the effective control of the Department of Defense pursuant to a criminal law or immigration law of the United States.

The President's February 7, 2002 direction that all persons detained by the U.S. Armed Forces in the War on Terrorism shall be treated humanely remains in effect. Consistent with the President's guidance, DoD shall continue to ensure that no person in the custody or under the control of the Department of Defense, regardless of nationality or physical location, shall be subject to cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

THROUGH: THE ACTING DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL

THROUGH: THE ASSOCIATE ATTORNEY GENERAL

FROM: Wan J. Kim
Assistant Attorney General

SUBJECT: Weekly Report[1] for the Week ending December 29, 2005

NEXT WEEK

· Supreme Court to Hear Oral Argument on Title VII Case:
On January 11, the Supreme Court will hear oral argument in Arbaugh v. Y & H Corp. Petitioner brought this action against her former employer, alleging sexual harassment and constructive discharge in violation of Title VII and state tort law. After a jury trial and entry of judgment for petitioner, respondent moved to dismiss the action, contending for the first time that it was not covered by Title VII because it had fewer than the requisite 15 employees. The district court agreed and dismissed the action, ruling that the numerosity requirement in the statute is jurisdictional and, therefore, is not waivable and may be raised at any time. The Fifth Circuit affirmed. The United States will argue as amicus curiae that the numerosity requirement is an element of the plaintiff's cause of action under Title VII, but is not jurisdictional, and that, therefore, the lower courts' dismissal of this action should be reversed.

[1]This report is an internal document that is not intended for distribution outside of the Department of Justice.

- Division to Participate in Seventh Circuit Oral Argument:
  On January 5, the Seventh Circuit will hear oral argument in White v. HUD. The Division will argue that a HUD Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) correctly dismissed a charge of discrimination under the Fair Housing Act because an August 1998 telephone conversation did not indicate an impermissible preference based on familial status in violation of 42 U.S.C. 3604(c). The Division will also argue that the ALJ did not abuse his discretion in refusing to grant petitioner's belated motion to amend the charge of discrimination to add a 42 U.S.C. 3617 claim based on an allegation that the owner of an apartment petitioner was interested in renting twice called petitioner's grandfather in retaliation for petitioner's filing a housing discrimination complaint with the Cook County Commission on Human Rights.

- Trial To Begin in Arkansas Color of Law Case:
  On January 4, trial is scheduled to begin in United States v. Miller (Eastern District of Arkansas). Defendant Jody Ray Miller, a jailer at the Craighead County Jail, is charged with violating two counts of 18 U.S.C. §242, one count of 18 U.S.C. §1519 (falsification of records in a federal investigation), and one count of 18 U.S.C. §1001 (false statements to the FBI). These charges related to the assault of arrestee Terry O'Neil while he was compliant and restrained in handcuffs as well as the assault of a second inmate.

- Trial To Begin Against Border Patrol Agent in Texas:
  On January 4, trial is scheduled to begin in United States v. Sullivan (Southern District of Texas). On September 14, 2005, defendant Scott Anthony Sullivan, a United States Border Patrol Agent, was charged with violating two counts of 18 U.S.C. §242. Defendant Sullivan was indicted for allegedly sexually assaulting a young woman who had been detained at a border checkpoint and for subjecting another minor female to multiple unreasonable searches.

LAST WEEK

- Guilty Plea in Civil Rights Criminal Case:
  On December 22, in United States v. Baalman, et al. (District of Utah), defendants Rob Baalman, a member of a national white supremacist group, entered a guilty plea to violating one count of 18 U.S.C. 245 (interference with a federally protected activity). Defendants Keith Cotter and David Gardner, also members of the national white supremacist group, remain charged with violating 18 U.S.C. §245. On March 12, the defendants allegedly assaulted George Stephenson, an African American male, as he was riding to work on his bicycle. As a result of the assault, the victim's face and scalp were lacerated and his ankle was broken in two places.

- Division Reaches ADA Agreement with City of Waukegan, Illinois:
On December 15, the Division entered into a settlement agreement with the City of Waukegan, Illinois to bring their municipal buildings and services into compliance with title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act. This Agreement is part of Project Civic Access, a departmental initiative to ensure that local governments comply with title II. The City's government officials worked cooperatively with the Department throughout the investigation in order to reach this settlement agreement.

- Division Files Lawsuit against a Milwaukee Nightclub Alleging Discrimination against African Americans:
On December 29, the Division filed a complaint in United States v. Candy II, d/b/a Eve (Eastern District of Wisconsin), alleging that a Milwaukee nightclub violated Title II by discriminating against African Americans. According to the complaint, Eve employees falsely told African Americans that they could not enter because a private party was underway, at the same time the employees admitted whites. On other occasions, the complaint alleges, Eve employees told African Americans that Eve was at capacity, while at the same time the employees admitted whites.

LONG RANGE EVENTS

- Division To Make Presentation at National Home Builder Show:
On January 13, 2006, the Housing and Civil Enforcement Section Chief will speak about multi-family housing accessibility enforcement and other issues at the National Association of Home Builders' International Builders' Show.

Division Contact: Tobi Longwitz – 202/514-3845

THROUGH: THE DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL

THROUGH: THE ASSOCIATE ATTORNEY GENERAL

FROM: Sharee Freeman
Acting Director, Community Relations Service

SUBJECT: Weekly Report[1]

A. Next Week

- CRS to Assess Community Racial Tensions in New Orleans, LA
  On January 12, 2006, CRS will be onsite in New Orleans, LA to meet with New Orleans Police Department officials and local community leaders in response to elevated community racial tensions and concerns surrounding allegations of police use of excessive force following the December 26, 2005 shooting death of an African American male by a Caucasian police officer during a reported confrontation in which the African American suspect lunged at the police officer with a knife. CRS will conduct an assessment and provide appropriate services to defuse immediate tensions where appropriate.

- CRS to Conduct School Problem Identifying and Resolving Issues Together (SPIRIT) Program in Roanoke, AL
  On January 9-11, 2006, CRS will be onsite in Roanoke, AL to conduct a Student Problem Identifying and Resolving Issues Together (SPIRIT) program. The program is being held in response to continued community racial tensions following Hurricane Katrina and Rita disaster recovery efforts. This intervention program is designed to enhance students' cultural awareness and promote a multicultural learning environment.

- CRS to Respond to Community Racial Tensions in McFarland, WI
  On January 16, 2006, CRS will be onsite in McFarland, WI to meet with McFarland High School administrators in response to growing racial tensions surrounding a series of reported physical confrontations and use of racial slurs between African American and White students, following recent demographic shifts in the Madison metropolitan area. CRS will assess tensions and provide information on CRS' School Problem Identifying and Resolving Issues Together (SPIRIT) program.

Hi Brian - Happy new year. [redacted] tells me you're the best contact for a story we're doing on attorney-client privilege waivers. We're doing a story about corporations' growing unease over DOJ and SEC requests for attorney-client privilege waivers in white collar investigations. I'm getting an earful from the business community, which is making a lot of claims about DOJ's supposed increasing demands for waivers, etc.

I need to wrap up the reporting by Thursday p.m. Can we get a backgrounder from someone over there, and also a for-the-record interview? McCallum maybe? Besides the obvious questions (are waiver requests increasing? How do you respond to business' complaints that privilege waivers hinder their ability to conduct internal investigations?, are we asking Congress for some sort of limited waiver?, etc), I have some background questions about what sort of pushback (if any) you're getting from business on this.

Thanks,

Neil --

Happy new year. Hope the holiday season was terrific for you and the family.

I'm betting you know this, but the Fed Soc is sponsoring a presentation of George Terwilliger's paper on the a/c privilege waiver at the National Press Club midday on 1/12. I am thinking of scheduling some meetings at EOUSA I'm overdue for in connection with this so that I can come and attend. I think Mary Beth Buchanan is on the panel.

In any event, I was wondering if you and Robert are around that day. I'd like to say hello, buy you a cup of coffee and pay my respects.

All the best, SJM

PLEA AGREEMENT

Pursuant to Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the United States of America and the defendant, JACK A. ABRAMOFF, agree as follows:

1. The defendant is entering into this agreement and is pleading guilty freely and voluntarily without promise or benefit of any kind, other than contained herein, and without threats, force, intimidation, or coercion of any kind.

2. The defendant knowingly, voluntarily and truthfully admits the facts contained in the attached Factual Basis for Plea.

3. The defendant agrees to waive indictment and plead guilty to the offenses charged in the attached Information which are:

A. one count of conspiracy to violate the following federal laws in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 371:

(1) honest services wire and mail fraud, in violation of Title 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1343 and 1346;

(2) mail and wire fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341 and 1343;

(3) bribery and honest services fraud of public officials, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 201(b), 1341, 1343 and 1346;

(4) post-employment restrictions for former Congressional staff members, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 207(e);

B. one count of honest services mail fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1346 and 2; and

C. one count of evasion of federal income tax, in violation of 26 U.S.C. § 7201.

The defendant admits that he is guilty of these crimes, and the defendant understands that he will be adjudicated guilty of these offenses if the Court accepts his guilty plea.

4. The defendant understands the nature of the offenses to which he is pleading guilty, and the elements thereof, including the penalties provided by law. The maximum penalty for violating the law specified in the Information is:

A. Count 1 (Conspiracy): five years of imprisonment, a fine of $250,000 or not more than the greater of twice the gross gain or twice the gross loss, and a mandatory special assessment of $100;

B. Count 2 (Honest Services Mail Fraud): twenty years of imprisonment, a fine of $250,000 or not more than the greater of twice the gross gain or twice the gross loss, and a mandatory special assessment of $100;

DOJ_NMG_ 0149855

C. Count 3 (Tax Evasion): five years of imprisonment, a fine of $250,000 or not more than the greater of twice the gross gain or twice the gross loss, the costs of prosecution, and a mandatory special assessment of $100;

The parties understand that the statutory maximum term of imprisonment for the three offenses charged in the Information is 30 years. The defendant understands that the Court may impose a term of supervised release to follow any incarceration, in accordance with 18 U.S.C. § 3583. The authorized term of supervised release for each of the counts is not more than three years. The defendant also understands that the Court will impose restitution, and may impose costs of incarceration, supervision and prosecution.

5. The defendant understands and agrees that restitution to victims in the offense described in Count 1 of the Information is mandatory. The loss to the victims as a result of crimes charged in Count 1 of the Information is estimated to be approximately $25,000,000. The defendant agrees not to transfer or otherwise encumber his assets except with notice to, and consent of, the undersigned representatives of the United States until such time as this agreement is filed with the Court, at which point the defendant must seek leave of Court to transfer or otherwise encumber his assets. The parties agree that the defendant will not be required to obtain the consent of the United States for property transfers necessary to pay ordinary living expenses, ordinary business expenses and attorneys fees. The defendant agrees as part of this agreement that he will provide to the United States detailed and accurate information identifying all of his income, assets, expenses and liabilities within 45 days of the date of this agreement in a format requested by the United States and will truthfully answer all questions relative to his finances. Thereafter, the defendant will provide on a monthly basis or as otherwise requested a report of all financial transactions valued at $2,500 or more, including all income, expenditures and transfers of funds or property.

6. This agreement does not resolve the defendant's civil tax liability for any years and does not bind the Internal Revenue Service in any way regarding its efforts to examine or collect defendant's civil tax liabilities. The defendant agrees that he will cooperate fully with the Internal Revenue Service in determining any tax liabilities (civil or criminal) of any entities or persons for any years relating to this prosecution, including but not limited to his personal tax liabilities for the years 2000 through 2003, and in paying all appropriate tax liabilities, penalties and interest. To this end, the defendant specifically agrees to file complete and accurate amended individual income tax returns, Forms 1040X, for tax years 2000 through 2003, as soon as possible upon the signing of this plea agreement, and in any event, no later than the time of the defendant's sentencing. If for any reason complete and accurate returns, prepared in accordance with the revenue agent's report dated November 28, 2005, are not filed by the time of defendant's sentencing, the United States will no longer be bound by the terms of paragraph 11(c) below. The defendant further agrees to waive the statute of limitations with respect to the assessment and collection of his taxes due and owing for these tax years. The defendant also agrees to provide the Internal Revenue Service with all requested documents and information for purposes of any civil audits, examinations, collections, or other proceedings, and to waive any rights regarding disclosure to the Internal Revenue Service Examination and Collection Divisions of all documents obtained and reports produced during the criminal investigation, including but not limited to tax return related information and information obtained from the defendant pursuant to grand jury subpoena. Nothing in this agreement shall limit the Internal Revenue Service in its assessment and collection of any taxes, penalties and interest due from the defendant or other parties. The defendant agrees to waive venue for any tax charges for purpose of this plea agreement and any rights he may have under 18 U.S.C. § 3237(b).

7. The defendant also agrees to pay restitution to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3663(a)(3). The defendant further agrees that, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3663(a)(3) and this agreement, the Court will order as restitution the amount of the criminal tax computation which the defendant agrees is $1,724,054, and which will be applied to the defendant's civil tax liability for the years 2001 through 2003, as later determined by the Internal Revenue Service.

8. If the Court accepts the defendant's plea of guilty and the defendant fulfills each of the terms and conditions of this agreement, the United States agrees that it will not further prosecute the defendant for crimes described in the factual basis attached as Exhibit A or disclosed by the defendant in debriefing sessions with the United States on or before January 3, 2006. Nothing in this agreement is intended to provide any limitation of liability arising out of any acts of violence.

9. The defendant understands and agrees that federal sentencing law requires the Court to impose a sentence which is reasonable and that the Court must consider the advisory U.S. Sentencing Guidelines in effect at the time of the sentencing in determining a reasonable sentence. Defendant also understands that sentencing is within the discretion of the Court and that the Court is not bound by this agreement. Defendant understands that facts that determine the offense level will be found by the Court at sentencing and that in making those determinations the Court may consider any reliable evidence, including hearsay, as well as provisions or stipulations in this plea agreement. Both parties agree to recommend that the sentencing guidelines should apply pursuant to United States v. Booker and the final Sentencing Guidelines offense level as calculated herein provides for a reasonable sentence. Defendant further understands the obligation of the United States to provide all relevant information regarding the defendant, including charged and uncharged criminal offenses, to the United States Probation Office. The United States agrees to recommend that any sentence imposed in this case run concurrently to any sentence imposed in United States v. Jack A. Abramoff, No. 05 CR 60204 (SDFL) ("SDFL Case"). Moreover, the United States agrees to recommend that the conduct at issue in the SDFL Case is not relevant conduct for sentencing purposes in the instant plea provided that the defendant is found guilty in the SDFL Case by plea or otherwise. Defendant also states that he has had ample opportunity to discuss, and has in fact discussed, the impact of the sentencing guidelines and the statutory maximum sentence with his attorney and is satisfied with his attorney's advice in this case.

10. Except to the extent it would be inconsistent with other provisions of this agreement, the United States and the defendant reserve, at the time of sentencing, the right of allocution, that is the right to describe fully, both orally and in writing, to the Court the nature, seriousness and impact of the defendant's misconduct related to the charges against him or to any factor lawfully pertinent to the sentence in this case. The United States will also advise the court of the nature, extent and timing of the defendant's cooperation. The defendant further understands and agrees that in exercising this right, the United States may solicit and make known the views of the law enforcement agencies which investigated this matter.

11. The defendant and the United States agree that the following United States Sentencing Guidelines ("U.S.S.G.") apply based upon the facts of this case:

a. The parties agree that the 2003 Sentencing Guidelines Manual governs the guideline calculations in this case. All references in this agreement to the U.S.S.G. refer to that manual.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149859

b. The parties agree that the total offense level applicable to the defendant's offense conduct is Level 31. This level is calculated as follows:

I. Fraud Offenses:

Base Offense level § 2B1.1	6
§ 2B1.1(b)(1)(L) loss of more than $20,000,000	22
§ 3B1.1(c) organizer or leader	2
§ 3B1.3 abuse of trust	2
	32

II. Corruption Offenses:

Base Offense level § 2C1.1	10
§ 2C1.1(b)(1) more than one bribe	2
§ 2C1.1(b)(2)(b) involving a high level public official	8
	24

III. Tax Offense

Base Offense Level § 2T4.1 tax loss of more than $1,000,000 but less than $2,500,000	22
§ 2T1.1(b)(1) failure to identify the source of income from criminal activity	2
§ 2T1.1(b)(2) sophisticated means	2
	26

DOJ_NMG_ 0149860

IV. Treatment of Multiple Counts/Objects
§3D1.4 (2 total)	2 34
VII. Expected Adjustment under § 3E1.1	- 3
TOTAL	31 (108-135 months)

c. As indicated above, the United States agrees that it will recommend that the Court reduce by three levels the sentencing guideline applicable to the defendant's offense, pursuant to U.S.S.G § 3E1.1, based upon the defendant's recognition and affirmative and timely acceptance of personal responsibility. The United States, however, will not be required to make these recommendations if any of the following occurs: (1) defendant fails or refuses to make a full, accurate and complete disclosure to this office or the probation office of the circumstances surrounding the relevant offense conduct and his present financial condition; (2) defendant is found to have misrepresented facts to the United States prior to entering this plea agreement; (3) defendant commits any misconduct after entering into this plea agreement, including but not limited to, committing a state or federal offense, violating any term of release, or making false statements or misrepresentations to any governmental entity or official; or (4) defendant fails to comply with any terms of this plea agreement.

d. The defendant understands that his Criminal History Category will be determined by the Court after the completion of a Pre-Sentence Investigation by the U.S. Probation Office. The defendant acknowledges that the United States has not promised or agreed that the defendant will or will not fall within any particular criminal history category and that such determinations could affect his guideline range and/or offense level as well as his final sentence. The parties understand that the order in which the pleas are entered or sentences are imposed in the SDFL Case and the instant matter could result in the imposition of an additional criminal history category and an increased period of incarceration. Consequently, if a plea or sentence in the SDFL Case results in a criminal history category greater than I, and the defendant has fully complied with all provisions in this agreement, the United States agrees to recommend a downward departure based on U.S.S.G. Section 4A1.3(b).

12. The defendant and the United States agree that neither party will seek or advocate for or suggest in any way an adjustment to or a departure from the sentencing guidelines other than those explicitly set forth in this agreement or for a sentence outside of the range determined to be applicable under the advisory Sentencing Guidelines, provided that those guidelines are calculated as set forth above. In the event that the defendant breaches any term of the plea agreement, the United States may move for upward departures based on any grounds the United States deems appropriate.

13. The parties agree that U.S.S.G. § 5E1.2 provides that the Court shall impose a fine for a guideline offense at level 31 of $15,000 to $150,000, unless the Court finds that the defendant is unable to pay a fine. The defendant understands that the Court must order that the defendant make restitution to victims of these offenses for the full amount of the loss.

14. The defendant agrees to fully cooperate in this and any other case or investigation with attorneys for the United States of America, and federal and state law enforcement agencies by providing truthful and complete information, evidence and testimony, if required, concerning any matter. The defendant understands that if he makes material false statements intentionally to law enforcement, commits perjury, suborns perjury, or obstructs justice, he may be found to have breached this agreement and nothing in this agreement precludes the United States of America or any other law enforcement authority from prosecuting him fully for those crimes or any other crimes of which he may be guilty and from using any of his sworn or unsworn statements against him. The defendant understands that this plea agreement is explicitly dependent upon his providing completely truthful testimony in any trial or other proceeding, whether called as a witness by the United States, the defense or the Court.

15. Further, in the event that the United States determines in its exclusive discretion that the defendant has fully complied with this agreement and provided "substantial assistance" to law enforcement officers in the investigation and prosecution of others, the United States agrees it will file a motion for a downward departure pursuant to Section 5K1.1 and 18 U.S.C. § 3553(e) of the United States Sentencing Guidelines or Rule 35 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, respectively. Such assistance by the defendant shall include his cooperation in providing truthful and complete testimony before any grand jury and at any trial as requested by the United States and in interviews by investigators. If the United States files a motion either under § 5K1.1 of the guidelines or Rule 35, both parties will have the right to present facts regarding Abramoff's cooperation in any judicial district and to argue for the extent of the departure that is appropriate based on the defendant's cooperation. However, the defendant further understands that the decision whether to depart, and the extent of any departure for substantial assistance is the exclusive province of the Court.

16. The United States cannot and does not make any promise or representation as to what sentence the defendant will receive or what fines or restitution the defendant may be ordered to pay. The defendant understands that the sentence in this case will be determined solely by the Court, with the assistance of the United States Probation Office and that the Court may impose the maximum sentence permitted by the law. The Court is not obligated to follow the recommendations of either party at the time of sentencing. The defendant will not be permitted to withdraw his plea regardless of the sentence recommended by the Probation Office or the sentence imposed by the Court.

17. The defendant, knowing and understanding all of the facts set out herein, including the maximum possible penalty that could be imposed, and knowing and understanding his right to appeal the sentence as provided in 18 U.S.C. § 3742, hereby expressly waives the right to appeal any sentence within the maximum provided in the statutes of conviction or the manner in which that sentence was determined and imposed, including on the grounds set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3742, in exchange for the concessions made by the United States in this plea agreement. This agreement does not affect the rights or obligations of the United States as set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3742(b). If the United States appeals the defendant's sentence, the defendant will be entitled to appeal his sentence as set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3742(a) as to any aspects of his sentence inconsistent with the sentencing provisions of this agreement.

18. If the defendant fails to comply with any of the terms and conditions set forth in this agreement, the United States may fully prosecute the defendant on all criminal charges that can be brought against the defendant. With respect to such a prosecution:

a. The defendant shall assert no claim under the United States Constitution, any statute, Rule 410 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, Rule 11(e)(6) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, or any other federal rule, that the defendant's statements pursuant to this agreement or any leads derived therefrom should be suppressed or are inadmissible;

b. The defendant waives any right to claim that evidence presented in such prosecution is tainted by virtue of the statements the defendant has made; and

c. The defendant waives any and all defenses based on the statute of limitations with respect to any such prosecution that is not time-barred on the date that this agreement is signed by the parties.

19. If a dispute arises as to whether defendant has knowingly committed any material breach of this agreement, and the United States chooses to exercise its rights under Paragraph 18, at the defendant's request, the matter shall be submitted to the Court for its determination in an appropriate proceeding. At such proceeding, the defendant's disclosures and documents shall be admissible and the United States shall have the burden to establish the defendant's breach by a preponderance of the evidence.

20. The parties agree that if the Court does not accept the defendant's plea of guilty, then this agreement shall be null and void.

21. The defendant understands that this agreement is binding only upon the Public Integrity Section and the Fraud Section of the Criminal Division, and the Tax Division of the United States Department of Justice. This agreement does not bind any other prosecutor's office or agency. It does not bar or compromise any civil claim that has been or may be made against the defendant.

22. This agreement and the attached Factual Basis for Plea constitute the entire agreement between the United States and the defendant. No other promises, agreements, or representations exist or have been made to the defendant or the defendant's attorneys by the Department of Justice in connection with this case. This agreement may be amended only by a writing signed by all parties.

ATTACHMENT A

FACTUAL BASIS FOR THE PLEA
OF JACK A. ABRAMOFF

This statement is submitted to provide a factual basis for my plea of guilty to the charges filed against me.

1. From 1994 to 2004, Abramoff was a Washington, D.C. lobbyist. In 1994, Abramoff joined a law and lobbying firm ("Firm A"). In January 2001, Abramoff joined a second law and lobbying firm ("Firm B").

2. At all relevant times, Abramoff solicited and obtained business with groups and companies throughout the United States, including Native American tribal governments operating, and interested in operating, gambling casinos. Abramoff sought to further his clients' interests by lobbying public officials, including Members of the United States Congress. Abramoff also sought to further his clients' interests by recommending vendors for grass roots work, public relations services and election campaign support. Typically, Abramoff communicated with his clients by interstate electronic mail, interstate telephone calls, and private or commercial interstate mail carriers.

3. From March 2000 through 2001, Michael Scanlon ("Scanlon") worked for Firm A and Firm B in Washington, D.C. as a public relations specialist engaged in providing public relations services to clients throughout the United States. At these firms, Scanlon worked on many matters, often together with, and at the direction of, Abramoff. Abramoff was influential in Scanlon being hired by both firms.

4. In or about January 2001, Scanlon established a business called Capital Campaign Strategies LLC which had its principal offices in Washington, D.C. Capital Campaign

DOJ_NMG_ 0149868

Strategies LLC was formed to provide grass roots work, public relations services, and election campaign support. Scanlon also formed other companies that were used primarily to receive money for the services and work performed by others (collectively referred to as "CCS"). The services that CCS provided frequently involved use of interstate mail and telephone calls. Payments were often made by interstate wire transfer or checks that foreseeably caused interstate funds transfers between banks.

5. In May 2003, Abramoff established a business called GrassRoots Interactive ("GRI"), which had its principal offices in Silver Spring, Maryland. Abramoff represented that GRI would provide grass roots work, public relations services, and election campaign support.

6. In July 1999, Abramoff established a private foundation called Capital Athletic Foundation ("CAF") for which he sought and received federal tax-exempt status, in part to provide funding for a non-profit school. In November 2001, Abramoff organized a solely owned entity, Kaygold, LLC. Abramoff used these entities in part to receive funds for his personal benefit, to conceal the destination of the funds, and, with respect to CAF, to evade income taxes. Payments were often made by interstate wire transfer or checks involving interstate funds transfers.

Fraud Based on Violations of Abramoff's Duty of Honest Services

7. Abramoff was hired by at least four Native American tribes with gaming operations to provide professional services and develop programs to limit market competition or to assist in opening casinos. In 2001, Abramoff and Scanlon agreed that Abramoff would encourage his existing and potential clients to obtain grass roots and public relations services as a critical part of the lobbying program and strategy that Abramoff had been hired to provide. Abramoff promoted and recommended primarily CCS to provide this grass roots and public relations work. The prices CCS charged for its services were significantly in excess of CCS's costs.

8. Abramoff and Scanlon knew and agreed that Abramoff would receive fifty percent of the net profits received by CCS from those clients. Most of the payments from clients under the contracts with CCS were made to CCS. Scanlon then paid Abramoff his share of the net profits to various organizations that Abramoff controlled. The transfer of funds to Abramoff foreseeably involved the interstate transfer of funds.

9. Abramoff and Scanlon understood that the payments to Abramoff would not be disclosed to Abramoff's and Scanlon's four clients. Abramoff and Scanlon understood that disclosure of the profit-sharing arrangement to the clients would likely jeopardize the contracts for services and/or the profit margins of both Abramoff's law firm and CCS because disclosure could encourage the clients to seek competitive proposals from other vendors. Abramoff knew that his clients could receive the same services at significantly reduced prices because the quoted prices incorporated the undisclosed fees Scanlon paid to Abramoff of approximately fifty percent of CCS's net profits.

10. Abramoff promoted himself as having knowledge superior to his clients regarding lobbying and grass roots activity. Abramoff encouraged his clients to trust his judgment in these matters. Abramoff knew his clients did in fact trust and rely upon him in these matters. Abramoff further knew he had a duty to disclose all relevant facts to his lobbying clients, including conflicts of interest and any financial interest in fees paid to others.

Mississippi Tribe

11. In 1995, Abramoff was hired by a Native American Indian tribal client based in Mississippi ("Mississippi Tribe") to hire him to provide lobbying services on various issues. Abramoff used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Mississippi Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure the trust and confidence of the Mississippi Tribe.

12. In early 2001, Abramoff recommended and advised the Mississippi Tribe to hire CCS, while concealing the fact that Abramoff would receive approximately fifty percent of the net profits from the Mississippi Tribe's payments to Scanlon.

13. From June 2001 until April 2004, the Mississippi Tribe paid Scanlon and related entities approximately $14,765,000. Abramoff and Scanlon concealed from the Mississippi Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $6,364,000 including money not passed through CCS, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to their undisclosed arrangement.

Louisiana Tribe

14. In March 2001, Abramoff and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American Indian tribal client based in Louisiana ("Louisiana Tribe") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services to the tribe. Abramoff used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Louisiana Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure the trust and confidence of the Louisiana Tribe.

15. In March 2001, after CCS had been paid for the first project, Abramoff advised the Louisiana Tribe to rehire CCS, while concealing the fact that Abramoff would receive fifty percent of the profits from the Louisana Tribe's payments to CCS.

16. From March 2001 to May 2003, the Louisiana Tribe paid CCS and related entities approximately $30,510,000. Abramoff and Scanlon concealed from the Louisiana Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $11,450,000, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to their undisclosed arrangement.

Michigan Tribe

17. In January 2002, Abramoff and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American Indian tribal client based in Michigan ("Michigan Tribe") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services. Abramoff used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Michigan Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure the trust and confidence of the Michigan Tribe.

18. In June 2002, Abramoff advised the Michigan Tribe to expand its contract with CCS, while concealing the fact that Abramoff would receive approximately fifty percent of the profits from the Michigan Tribe's payments to CCS.

19. From June 2002 to October 2003, the Michigan Tribe paid Scanlon and related entities approximately $3,500,000. Abramoff and Scanlon concealed from the Michigan Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $540,000, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to their undisclosed arrangement.

Texas Tribe #1

20. In February 2002, Abramoff and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American Indian tribal client based in Texas ("Texas Tribe #1") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services designed to reopen Texas Tribe #1's gaming operations that had been closed by Texas authorities because Texas Tribe #1 did not have federal or state authority to operate a casino. Specifically, Abramoff and Scanlon represented that they would work first to open the casino as a Class II gaming facility and then work to expand Texas Tribe #1's casino as a more lucrative Class III facility. Abramoff and Scanlon further proposed that, in return for their work, Texas Tribe #1 would pay CCS $4,200,000 in fees and make additional and substantial political campaign contributions at the direction of Abramoff and Scanlon. Abramoff falsely represented that he would work for free to represent Texas Tribe #1, all the while concealing from the Texas Tribe #1 that approximately fifty percent of CCS's net profits, approximately $1,850,000, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to his undisclosed arrangement with Scanlon.

21. At no time did Abramoff, Scanlon, or others working with them disclose to Texas Tribe #1 that, beginning in 2001, Abramoff, Firm B, and Scanlon had collected millions of dollars in fees from the Louisiana Tribe to oppose all gaming in the Texas legislature. Abramoff's conduct prevented consideration by Firm B of whether to disclose his representation of Texas Tribe #1 pursuant to the Lobbying Disclosure Act.

22. After being retained by Texas Tribe #1 in early 2002 to reopen its casino through federal legislation, Abramoff continued representing the Louisiana Tribe for millions of dollars in fees. Pursuant to this representation of the Louisiana Tribe, Abramoff failed to disclose to Texas Tribe #1 that he opposed legislation in the 2003 Texas state legislative session that would have provided a basis to reopen Texas Tribe #1's casino under state law. Abramoff knew that Texas Tribe #1 supported and promoted this legislation while he worked to prevent its passage for the benefit of his other client, the Louisiana Tribe.

Wireless Company

23. From January 2001 until April 2004, Abramoff was employed by Firm B. As an employee of Firm B, Abramoff had a duty to act in Firm B's best interests and not to divert lobbying fees owed to Firm B.

24. In 2001, Abramoff was hired by a wireless telephone company ("Wireless Company") to undertake a lobbying effort to assist Wireless Company in securing a license to install wireless telephone infrastructure for the United States House of Representatives. In 2001 and early 2002, Abramoff and his Firm B colleagues lobbied for the Wireless Company without any formal retainer agreement. Rather than make lobbying payments to Firm B, Abramoff directed Wireless Company to make payments totaling at least $50,000 to CAF.

25. At no time did Abramoff inform his employer, Firm B, of the $50,000 in payments to CAF, of which Firm B was entitled to a portion.

Fraud Based on Abramoff's Affirmative Misrepresentations

Michigan Tribe

26. From June 2002 to November 2002, Abramoff and a former lobbying colleague, who was also a former congressional staffer ("Staffer A") successfully solicited the Michigan Tribe for a $25,000 payment to CAF. Instead of using the funds for CAF, Abramoff used this money for his personal and professional benefit to partially pay for a golfing trip to Scotland for himself, public officials, members of his staff and others.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149874

Distilled Beverages Company

27. On or about June 6, 2002, Abramoff and Staffer A successfully solicited one of Firm B's clients, a distilled beverages company, for a $25,000 payment to CAF. Instead of using the funds for CAF, Abramoff used this money for his personal and professional benefit to partially pay for a golfing trip to Scotland for himself, public officials, members of his staff and others.

New Mexico Tribe

28. In February 2002, Abramoff and others successfully solicited a Native American Indian tribal client based in New Mexico ("New Mexico Tribe") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services to the tribe.

29. In March 2002, the New Mexico Tribe paid Scanlon and related entities approximately $2,750,000. Abramoff and Scanlon materially understated to the New Mexico Tribe the size of CCS's profit margins and concealed from the New Mexico Tribe that CCS's profit margin was approximately eighty percent and that approximately fifty percent of the net profit, $1,175,000, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to the undisclosed arrangement. At no time prior to March 2004 did Abramoff or others inform Firm B or the New Mexico Tribe of the undisclosed payments.

Manufacturing and Services Company

30. On May 2, 2003, Abramoff sent a business proposal to a manufacturing and services company ("Company A") to handle its lobbying effort regarding a tax issue. In addition to his services, Abramoff recommended that Company A hire GRI, while concealing from Company A his interest in GRI. In his proposal, Abramoff falsely advised that GRI had no relationship with Abramoff's law and lobbying firm, even though GRI was controlled by Abramoff and paid the vast majority of its profits to Abramoff or entities he controlled. Additionally, Abramoff represented to Company A that he was negotiating on their behalf with GRI to try to save Company A money, when in fact he was simply setting a high price on services that he controlled and from which he would profit.

31. In May and June 2003, Company A paid GRI, directly and through Firm B's bank account, approximately $1,841,429. Abramoff and entities he controlled received approximately $1,655,695 from GRI.

Corruption of Public Officials

32. Beginning as early as January 2000, Abramoff, Scanlon and others engaged in a course of conduct through which one or both of them offered and provided a stream of things of value to public officials in exchange for a series of official acts and influence and agreements to provide official action and influence. These things of value included, but are not limited to, foreign and domestic travel, golf fees, frequent meals, entertainment, election support for candidates for government office, employment for relatives of officials, and campaign contributions. As one part of this course of conduct, things of value were offered to and given to a Member of the United States Congress ("Representative #1") and members of Representative #1's staff, including, but not limited to:

a. All-expenses-paid trips, including a trip to the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands ("CNMI") in 2000, a trip to the Super Bowl in Tampa, Florida in 2001, and a golf trip to Scotland in 2002;

b. Numerous tickets for entertainment, including concerts and sporting events;

c. Fundraising events, including providing box suites and food at various sport and concert venues and at a restaurant in the Washington, D.C. area owned by Abramoff;

d. Campaign contributions to campaign committees and to political action committees and organizations, including, but not limited to, the following:

i. $4,000 in contributions to Representative #1's campaign committee in 2000; and

ii. A $10,000 contribution to the National Republican Campaign Committee ("NRCC") in 2000 at Representative #1's request;

e. Regular meals and drinks at an upscale restaurant owned by Abramoff in Washington, D.C.; and

f. Frequent golf and related expenses at courses in the Washington, D.C area.

33. As part of this course of conduct, Abramoff, Scanlon and others provided things of value to public officials in exchange for a series of official acts and influence, and agreements to provide official acts and influence, including, but not limited to, agreements to support and pass legislation, agreements to place statements in the Congressional Record, agreements to contact personnel in United States Executive Branch agencies and offices to influence decisions of those agencies and offices, meetings with Abramoff and CCS's clients, and awarding contracts for services with CCS and Abramoff's law firms. As one part of this course of conduct, Representative #1 and members of his staff agreed to use and did use their official positions and influence, including, but not limited to, the following:

a. Travel by a senior staff member of Representative #1 with others in January 2000 to CNMI for the purpose of assisting Abramoff, his firm and others in obtaining and maintaining lobbying clients;

b. Representative #1's agreement in March 2000 to place a statement drafted by Scanlon into the Congressional Record that was critical of the then-owner of a Florida gaming company, and was calculated to pressure the then-owner to sell on terms favorable to Abramoff and his partners;

c. Representative #1's agreement in October 2000 with Scanlon to insert a statement into the Congressional Record which praised the new owner of the Florida gaming company, Abramoff's business partner;

d. Representative #1's agreement in approximately August 2001 to use his position as Chairman of a Committee of the House to endorse and support a client of Abramoff as the provider of wireless telephone infrastructure to the House of Representatives;

e. Representative #1's agreement in approximately March 2002 that, as the Co-Chairman of a Conference Committee of House and Senate Members of Congress, he would introduce and seek passage of legislation that would lift an existing federal ban against commercial gaming in order to benefit a client of Abramoff and CCS, Texas Tribe #1;

f. Representative #1's agreement in approximately June 2002 that, as the Co-Chairman of a Conference Committee of House and Senate Members of Congress, he would introduce and seek passage of legislation that would lift an existing federal ban against commercial gaming for another Native American Tribe in Texas ("Texas Tribe #2") at Abramoff's request;

g. Representative #1 met in August 2002 with representatives of Texas Tribe #1 to assure them that they were effectively represented by Abramoff and that he continued to agree to work to pass the legislation they wanted;

h. Representative #1's agreement in December 2002 to seek support from a Member of another Committee of the House of Representatives for passage of legislation to lift the federal gaming ban for Texas Tribe #1;

i. Representative #1 met in 2002 with a Native American Tribal client of CCS and Abramoff from California ("California Tribe") to discuss Representative #1's agreement to assist in passing legislation regarding taxation of certain payments received by members of the California Tribe, and to assist in an issue relating to a post office of interest to the California Tribe;

j. Representative #1 agreed to meet with some of Abramoff's clients and others in Russia while Representative #1 was there on official business in August 2003 to, among other things, influence the process of obtaining a visa for travel to the United States for the relative of one of Abramoff's clients; and

k. Representative #1 at various times, directly and indirectly, contacted public officials at additional government agencies and offices on behalf of clients of Abramoff and CCS in an effort to influence decisions and actions by those officials.

34. As one part of the same course of conduct outlined in paragraphs 32 and 33 above, in June 2002, Abramoff informed Representative #1 that Texas Tribe #1 was raising funds to pay for a golfing trip to Scotland that Representative #1 and members of his staff were to, and did, attend. In August 2002, Texas Tribe #2, at the request of Abramoff and Texas Tribe #1, sent a $50,000 check made out to CAF via private interstate mail delivery to Abramoff at 1101 Pennsylvania Ave, N.W., Washington, D.C.

35. As one part of the same conduct outlined in paragraphs 32 and 33 above, beginning at least in 1999 through January 2001, Abramoff and others sought Staffer A's agreement to perform a series of official acts, including assisting in stopping legislation regarding internet gambling and opposing postal rate increases. With the intent to influence those official acts, Abramoff provided things of value including, but not limited to, from June 2000 through February 2001, ten equal monthly payments totaling $50,000 through a non-profit entity to the wife of Staffer A. The total amount paid to the wife of Staffer A was obtained from clients that would and did benefit from Staffer A's official actions regarding the legislation on internet gambling or opposing postal rate increases.

36. As one part of the same course of conduct outlined in paragraphs 32 and 33 above, beginning in March 2002, Abramoff and a former staffer to Representative #1 ("Staffer B") contacted Representative #1, officials employed by the Office of Representative #1, and officials employed by a House Committee ("Committee") of which Representative #1 was the chairman. These contacts occurred within one year of Staffer B having served as the Chief of Staff for Representative #1 and Staff Director of the Committee. Abramoff intended that Staffer B communicate with Representative #1, his staff, and the

Committee staff for the purpose of influencing official action on behalf of Abramoff's and Staffer B's clients, including Texas Tribe #1 and Wireless Company.

Tax Evasion Offense

37. During the calendar year 2002, Abramoff had and received a substantial amount of income from the conduct discussed in paragraphs 1 through 31. In order to conceal this income from the Internal Revenue Service and others, Abramoff used entities exempt from taxation under Title 26, United States Code Section 501(c), including a private foundation he created and a public policy organization for which he served as a director, to receive income and to make expenditures for his own personal benefit. To further conceal this income, Abramoff and others created, or caused to be created, false invoices and false entries to financial records, which made it appear as if the funds had been received and expended for tax-exempt purposes. In fact, Abramoff and others knew that these activities constituted a misuse of these tax-exempt entities. Through these activities, Abramoff and others intended to and did benefit Abramoff, the entities he controlled or financially supported, and the public policy organization.

38. On or about October 15, 2003, Abramoff signed and filed a false and fraudulent joint U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, Form 1040, which underreported Abramoff's total income for 2002. Specifically, Abramoff willfully and intentionally failed to report the income received from the illegal schemes described in paragraphs 1 to 32 above resulting in the evasion of approximately $628,557 in individual income taxes for the 2002 tax year.

39. Abramoff signed and filed false and fraudulent Returns of Private Foundations, Forms 990PF, which misrepresented the receipt of diverted funds as charitable donations and mischaracterized personal and business expenditures as being used for a tax exempt purpose.

40. Furthermore, Abramoff caused false Returns of Organizations Exempt from Income Tax, Forms 990, to be filed by a public policy organization, which misrepresented the receipt of diverted funds as charitable donations and mischaracterized personal and business expenditures of Abramoff as being used for a tax exempt purpose.

41. Abramoff engaged in similar evasive conduct for the tax years 2001 and 2003. Due to this and other evasive conduct, Abramoff attempted to evade approximately $1,724,054 in individual income taxes for the 2001 through 2003 tax years.

The preceding statement is a summary, made for the purpose of providing the Court with a factual basis for my guilty plea to the charges against me. It does not include all of the facts known to me concerning criminal activity in which I or others engaged. I make this statement knowingly and voluntarily and because I am in fact guilty of the crimes charged.

FORMER LOBBYIST JACK ABRAMOFF PLEADS GUILTY TO CHARGES INVOLVING CORRUPTION, FRAUD CONSPIRACY, AND TAX EVASION

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Former lobbyist Jack A. Abramoff has pleaded guilty to a three-count information charging him with conspiracy, aiding and abetting honest services mail fraud, and tax evasion, Assistant Attorney General Alice S. Fisher of the Criminal Division announced today.

Abramoff, 47, entered his plea today in U.S. District Court in the District of Columbia, before Judge Ellen Segal Huvelle. Under the terms of a plea agreement, Abramoff faces up to 30 years in prison, a fine of more than $750,000 and mandatory restitution estimated to be approximately $26.7 million. Abramoff has agreed to cooperate with law enforcement officials in an ongoing criminal investigation. Abramoff's former business partner, Michael Scanlon, previously pleaded guilty in this investigation and is cooperating with law enforcement officials.

According to the plea agreement signed by Abramoff, from 1994 through early 2004 he was employed in the Washington, D.C. offices of two law firms. During this time, Abramoff lobbied public officials in the federal government, principally members of Congress. He also sought to further his client's interests through grassroots work, public relations services and election campaign support.

The information charges Abramoff with receiving undisclosed kickbacks from Scanlon, who owned and operated Capital Campaign Strategies, LLC (CCS). Abramoff and Scanlon conspired to defraud four Native American Indian tribes that either operated or were interested in operating gaming casinos. Each of these four clients, which were tribes located in Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, and Michigan, hired Abramoff through his employers to give advice regarding how best to limit competition from competing casinos or, in one instance, to re-open a previously closed casino. Once Abramoff had established a relationship with the tribal clients, he recommended Scanlon and CCS as the primary provider for grassroots work and public relations services. As Abramoff and Scanlon knew, the clients relied on Abramoff's recommendation because of his expertise in these matters.

As part of the scheme described in the information and plea agreement, Abramoff and Scanlon charged fees that incorporated huge profit margins and then split the net profits in a secret kickback arrangement. As both men knew, the secrecy of the kickback arrangement was crucial to the success of their scheme, and

Scanlon and Abramoff concealed the arrangement from the tribal clients. Scanlon also formed other companies which were used essentially to receive funds from clients for work performed by CCS and others.

Abramoff also admitted that as one means of accomplishing results for their clients, he, Scanlon, and others engaged in a pattern of corruptly providing things of value to public officials, including trips, campaign contributions, and meals and entertainment, with the intent to influence acts by the public officials that would benefit Abramoff and Abramoff's clients.

For example, Abramoff and Scanlon provided things of value to a public official (described as Representative #1) and members of his staff, including, but not limited to, a lavish trip to Scotland to play golf on world-famous courses, tickets to sporting events and other entertainment, regular meals at Abramoff's upscale restaurant, and campaign contributions for the Representative, his political action committee, his campaign committee, and other political committees on behalf of the Representative. At the same time, and in exchange for these things of value, Scanlon and Abramoff sought and received the Representative's agreement to perform directly and through others a series of official acts, including but not limited to agreements to support and pass legislation, and agreements to place statements in the Congressional Record. Count Two of the criminal information charged Abramoff with aiding and abetting honest services fraud for arranging with a Texas Indian tribe to solicit another Indian tribe to mail a $50,000 payment, in order to assist Abramoff in paying for the golf trip he offered and provided to Representative #1 and some of his staff members.

As stipulated in the agreement, through Abramoff's scheme with Scanlon as well as several frauds he committed with others not including Scanlon, Abramoff received approximately $25 million in undisclosed criminal kickbacks and other fraudulently obtained funds.

The tax evasion charge stems largely from Abramoff's failure to report and pay taxes on income payments which he attempted to hide by causing them to be sent instead to certain non-profit entities that he controlled. Abramoff used the unreported income for his personal benefit and to carry out the fraud and corruption schemes described in the plea agreement and information. Abramoff also admitted that, in order to carry out his tax evasion, he caused others to prepare false invoices and false entries in books and records of certain non-profit entities and he caused them to file false reports with the Internal Revenue Service. Through this conduct, Abramoff evaded payment of approximately $1.7 million in federal income tax from 2001 to 2003.

"Government officials and governmental action are not for sale," said Assistant Attorney General Fisher. "The Justice Department will aggressively investigate and prosecute these types of cases, which have such a devastating impact on the public's trust of the government. We will not shy away from this responsibility."

"Today's plea is the result of determined efforts by United States investigators and attorneys working to vindicate the trust the American people deserve to have in the institutions of their government, including the tax system that supports it," said Eileen J. O'Connor, Assistant Attorney General for the Tax Division. "People who enrich themselves by engaging in illegal activities compound their crimes by failing to pay taxes on their ill-gotten gains."

"Beyond the illegal evasion of $1.7 million in taxes owed, one of the most disturbing elements of this whole sordid story is the blatant misuse of charities in a scheme to peddle political influence," said IRS Commissioner Mark W. Everson. "At the IRS, one of our four service-wide enforcement priorities is deterring abuse within tax-exempt entities for tax avoidance or other unintended purposes."

"Today's pleas are not a victory, but rather milestones in ensuring that our citizens are indeed provided honest government services," said FBI Assistant Director Chris Swecker of the Criminal Investigative Division.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149908

"This has been a lengthy and exhaustive investigation involving multiple FBI Field Offices, the Internal Revenue Service, and Inspectors General of the Department of Interior and General Services Administration. Protecting the interests of our government processes is the number one criminal priority of the FBI.. No criminal resources of the FBI will be spared in support of this important mission. "

The Inspector General for the Department of the Interior, Earl E. Devaney, said, "As a partner in this task force for over two years, our focus has been on ensuring the integrity of both the Department's programs and the officials who oversee them. To the extent that Mr. Abramoff can shed light in this regard, we welcome today's events."

This case is being prosecuted by Trial Attorneys Mary K. Butler and M. Kendall Day of the Public Integrity Section, which is headed by Chief Noel L. Hillman; Guy D. Singer and Nathaniel B. Edmonds of the Fraud Section, which is headed by Acting Chief Paul E. Pelletier; and Stephanie D. Evans of the Tax Division's Southern Criminal Enforcement Section, which is headed by Chief Bruce M. Salad. The case was investigated by various law enforcement agencies, including Special Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Internal Revenue Service Criminal Investigation Division, General Services Administration Office of Inspector General, and the Department of the Interior Office of the Inspector General.

Abramoff has also been indicted by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Florida. The Miami prosecution is being handled by U.S. Attorney R. Alexander Acosta and Assistant U.S. Attorneys Lawrence D. LaVecchio and Paul F. Schwartz.

	:	(Tax Evasion)

PLEA AGREEMENT

Pursuant to Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the United States of America and the defendant, JACK A. ABRAMOFF, agree as follows:

1. The defendant is entering into this agreement and is pleading guilty freely and voluntarily without promise or benefit of any kind, other than contained herein, and without threats, force, intimidation, or coercion of any kind.

2. The defendant knowingly, voluntarily and truthfully admits the facts contained in the attached Factual Basis for Plea.

3. The defendant agrees to waive indictment and plead guilty to the offenses charged in the attached Information which are:

A. one count of conspiracy to violate the following federal laws in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 371:

(1) honest services wire and mail fraud, in violation of Title 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1343 and 1346;

(2) mail and wire fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341 and 1343;

(3) bribery and honest services fraud of public officials, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 201(b), 1341, 1343 and 1346;

(4) post-employment restrictions for former Congressional staff members, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 207(e);

B. one count of honest services mail fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341, 1346 and 2; and

C. one count of evasion of federal income tax, in violation of 26 U.S.C. § 7201.

The defendant admits that he is guilty of these crimes, and the defendant understands that he will be adjudicated guilty of these offenses if the Court accepts his guilty plea.

4. The defendant understands the nature of the offenses to which he is pleading guilty, and the elements thereof, including the penalties provided by law. The maximum penalty for violating the law specified in the Information is:

A. Count 1 (Conspiracy): five years of imprisonment, a fine of $250,000 or not more than the greater of twice the gross gain or twice the gross loss, and a mandatory special assessment of $100;

B. Count 2 (Honest Services Mail Fraud): twenty years of imprisonment, a fine of $250,000 or not more than the greater of twice the gross gain or twice the gross loss, and a mandatory special assessment of $100;

DOJ_NMG_ 0149911

C. Count 3 (Tax Evasion): five years of imprisonment, a fine of $250,000 or not more than the greater of twice the gross gain or twice the gross loss, the costs of prosecution, and a mandatory special assessment of $100;

The parties understand that the statutory maximum term of imprisonment for the three offenses charged in the Information is 30 years. The defendant understands that the Court may impose a term of supervised release to follow any incarceration, in accordance with 18 U.S.C. § 3583. The authorized term of supervised release for each of the counts is not more than three years. The defendant also understands that the Court will impose restitution, and may impose costs of incarceration, supervision and prosecution.

5. The defendant understands and agrees that restitution to victims in the offense described in Count 1 of the Information is mandatory. The loss to the victims as a result of crimes charged in Count 1 of the Information is estimated to be approximately $25,000,000. The defendant agrees not to transfer or otherwise encumber his assets except with notice to, and consent of, the undersigned representatives of the United States until such time as this agreement is filed with the Court, at which point the defendant must seek leave of Court to transfer or otherwise encumber his assets. The parties agree that the defendant will not be required to obtain the consent of the United States for property transfers necessary to pay ordinary living expenses, ordinary business expenses and attorneys fees. The defendant agrees as part of this agreement that he will provide to the United States detailed and accurate information identifying all of his income, assets, expenses and liabilities within 45 days of the date of this agreement in a format requested by the United States and will truthfully answer all questions relative to his finances. Thereafter, the defendant will provide on a monthly basis or as otherwise requested a report of all financial transactions valued at $2,500 or more, including all income, expenditures and transfers of funds or property.

6. This agreement does not resolve the defendant's civil tax liability for any years and does not bind the Internal Revenue Service in any way regarding its efforts to examine or collect defendant's civil tax liabilities. The defendant agrees that he will cooperate fully with the Internal Revenue Service in determining any tax liabilities (civil or criminal) of any entities or persons for any years relating to this prosecution, including but not limited to his personal tax liabilities for the years 2000 through 2003, and in paying all appropriate tax liabilities, penalties and interest. To this end, the defendant specifically agrees to file complete and accurate amended individual income tax returns, Forms 1040X, for tax years 2000 through 2003, as soon as possible upon the signing of this plea agreement, and in any event, no later than the time of the defendant's sentencing. If for any reason complete and accurate returns, prepared in accordance with the revenue agent's report dated November 28, 2005, are not filed by the time of defendant's sentencing, the United States will no longer be bound by the terms of paragraph 11(c) below. The defendant further agrees to waive the statute of limitations with respect to the assessment and collection of his taxes due and owing for these tax years. The defendant also agrees to provide the Internal Revenue Service with all requested documents and information for purposes of any civil audits, examinations, collections, or other proceedings, and to waive any rights regarding disclosure to the Internal Revenue Service Examination and Collection Divisions of all documents obtained and reports produced during the criminal investigation, including but not limited to tax return related information and information obtained from the defendant pursuant to grand jury subpoena. Nothing in this agreement shall limit the Internal Revenue Service in its assessment and collection of any taxes, penalties and interest

due from the defendant or other parties. The defendant agrees to waive venue for any tax charges for purpose of this plea agreement and any rights he may have under 18 U.S.C. § 3237(b).

7. The defendant also agrees to pay restitution to the Internal Revenue Service pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3663(a)(3). The defendant further agrees that, pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3663(a)(3) and this agreement, the Court will order as restitution the amount of the criminal tax computation which the defendant agrees is $1,724,054, and which will be applied to the defendant's civil tax liability for the years 2001 through 2003, as later determined by the Internal Revenue Service.

8. If the Court accepts the defendant's plea of guilty and the defendant fulfills each of the terms and conditions of this agreement, the United States agrees that it will not further prosecute the defendant for crimes described in the factual basis attached as Exhibit A or disclosed by the defendant in debriefing sessions with the United States on or before January 3, 2006. Nothing in this agreement is intended to provide any limitation of liability arising out of any acts of violence.

9. The defendant understands and agrees that federal sentencing law requires the Court to impose a sentence which is reasonable and that the Court must consider the advisory U.S. Sentencing Guidelines in effect at the time of the sentencing in determining a reasonable sentence. Defendant also understands that sentencing is within the discretion of the Court and that the Court is not bound by this agreement. Defendant understands that facts that determine the offense level will be found by the Court at sentencing and that in making those determinations the Court may consider any reliable evidence, including hearsay, as well as provisions or stipulations in this plea agreement. Both parties agree to recommend that the sentencing guidelines should apply pursuant to United States v. Booker and the final Sentencing Guidelines offense level as calculated herein provides for a reasonable sentence. Defendant further understands the obligation of the United States to provide all relevant information regarding the defendant, including charged and uncharged criminal offenses, to the United States Probation Office. The United States agrees to recommend that any sentence imposed in this case run concurrently to any sentence imposed in United States v. Jack A. Abramoff, No. 05 CR 60204 (SDFL) ("SDFL Case"). Moreover, the United States agrees to recommend that the conduct at issue in the SDFL Case is not relevant conduct for sentencing purposes in the instant plea provided that the defendant is found guilty in the SDFL Case by plea or otherwise. Defendant also states that he has had ample opportunity to discuss, and has in fact discussed, the impact of the sentencing guidelines and the statutory maximum sentence with his attorney and is satisfied with his attorney's advice in this case.

10. Except to the extent it would be inconsistent with other provisions of this agreement, the United States and the defendant reserve, at the time of sentencing, the right of allocution, that is the right to describe fully, both orally and in writing, to the Court the nature, seriousness and impact of the defendant's misconduct related to the charges against him or to any factor lawfully pertinent to the sentence in this case. The United States will also advise the court of the nature, extent and timing of the defendant's cooperation. The defendant further understands and agrees that in exercising this right, the United States may solicit and make known the views of the law enforcement agencies which investigated this matter.

11. The defendant and the United States agree that the following United States Sentencing Guidelines ("U.S.S.G.") apply based upon the facts of this case:

a. The parties agree that the 2003 Sentencing Guidelines Manual governs the guideline calculations in this case. All references in this agreement to the U.S.S.G. refer to that manual.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149915

b. The parties agree that the total offense level applicable to the defendant's offense conduct is Level 31. This level is calculated as follows:

I. Fraud Offenses:

Base Offense level § 2B1.1	6
§ 2B1.1(b)(1)(L) loss of more than $20,000,000	22
§ 3B1.1(c) organizer or leader	2
§ 3B1.3 abuse of trust	2
	32

II. Corruption Offenses:

Base Offense level § 2C1.1	10
§ 2C1.1(b)(1) more than one bribe	2
§ 2C1.1(b)(2)(b) involving a high level public official	8
§ 3B1.1(a) organizer or leader or was involving more than five participants or was otherwise extensive	4
	24

III. Tax Offense

Base Offense Level § 2T4.1 tax loss of more than $1,000,000 but less than $2,500,000	22
§ 2T1.1(b)(1) failure to identify the source of income from criminal activity	2
§ 2T1.1(b)(2) sophisticated means	2
	26

DOJ_NMG_ 0149916

IV. Treatment of Multiple Counts/Objects
§3D1.4 (2 total)	+2 34
VII. Expected Adjustment under § 3E1.1	-3
TOTAL	31 (108-135 months)

c. As indicated above, the United States agrees that it will recommend that the Court reduce by three levels the sentencing guideline applicable to the defendant's offense, pursuant to U.S.S.G § 3E1.1, based upon the defendant's recognition and affirmative and timely acceptance of personal responsibility. The United States, however, will not be required to make these recommendations if any of the following occurs: (1) defendant fails or refuses to make a full, accurate and complete disclosure to this office or the probation office of the circumstances surrounding the relevant offense conduct and his present financial condition; (2) defendant is found to have misrepresented facts to the United States prior to entering this plea agreement; (3) defendant commits any misconduct after entering into this plea agreement, including but not limited to, committing a state or federal offense, violating any term of release, or making false statements or misrepresentations to any governmental entity or official; or (4) defendant fails to comply with any terms of this plea agreement.

d. The defendant understands that his Criminal History Category will be determined by the Court after the completion of a Pre-Sentence Investigation by the U.S. Probation Office. The defendant acknowledges that the United States has not promised or agreed that the defendant will or will not fall within any particular criminal history category and that such determinations could affect his guideline range and/or offense level as well as his final sentence. The parties understand that the order in which the pleas are entered or sentences are imposed in the SDFL Case and the instant matter could result in the imposition of an additional criminal history category and an increased period of incarceration. Consequently, if a plea or sentence in the SDFL Case results in a criminal history category greater than I, and the defendant has fully complied with all provisions in this agreement, the United States agrees to recommend a downward departure based on U.S.S.G. Section 4A1.3(b).

12. The defendant and the United States agree that neither party will seek or advocate for or suggest in any way an adjustment to or a departure from the sentencing guidelines other than those explicitly set forth in this agreement or for a sentence outside of the range determined to be applicable under the advisory Sentencing Guidelines, provided that those guidelines are calculated as set forth above. In the event that the defendant breaches any term of the plea agreement, the United States may move for upward departures based on any grounds the United States deems appropriate.

13. The parties agree that U.S.S.G. § 5E1.2 provides that the Court shall impose a fine for a guideline offense at level 31 of $15,000 to $150,000, unless the Court finds that the defendant is unable to pay a fine. The defendant understands that the Court must order that the defendant make restitution to victims of these offenses for the full amount of the loss.

14. The defendant agrees to fully cooperate in this and any other case or investigation with attorneys for the United States of America, and federal and state law enforcement agencies by providing truthful and complete information, evidence and testimony, if required, concerning any matter. The defendant understands that if he makes material false statements intentionally to law enforcement, commits perjury, suborns perjury, or obstructs justice, he may be found to have breached this agreement and nothing in this agreement precludes the United States of America or any other law enforcement authority from prosecuting him fully for those crimes or any other crimes of which he may be guilty and from using any of his sworn or unsworn statements against him. The defendant understands that this plea agreement is explicitly dependent upon his providing completely truthful testimony in any trial or other proceeding, whether called as a witness by the United States, the defense or the Court.

15. Further, in the event that the United States determines in its exclusive discretion that the defendant has fully complied with this agreement and provided "substantial assistance" to law enforcement officers in the investigation and prosecution of others, the United States agrees it will file a motion for a downward departure pursuant to Section 5K1.1 and 18 U.S.C. § 3553(e) of the United States Sentencing Guidelines or Rule 35 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, respectively. Such assistance by the defendant shall include his cooperation in providing truthful and complete testimony before any grand jury and at any trial as requested by the United States and in interviews by investigators. If the United States files a motion either under § 5K1.1 of the guidelines or Rule 35, both parties will have the right to present facts regarding Abramoff's cooperation in any judicial district and to argue for the extent of the departure that is appropriate based on the defendant's cooperation. However, the defendant further understands that the decision whether to depart, and the extent of any departure for substantial assistance is the exclusive province of the Court.

16. The United States cannot and does not make any promise or representation as to what sentence the defendant will receive or what fines or restitution the defendant may be ordered to pay. The defendant understands that the sentence in this case will be determined solely by the Court, with the assistance of the United States Probation Office and that the Court may impose the maximum sentence permitted by the law. The Court is not obligated to follow the recommendations of either party at the time of sentencing. The defendant will not be permitted to withdraw his plea regardless of the sentence recommended by the Probation Office or the sentence imposed by the Court.

17. The defendant, knowing and understanding all of the facts set out herein, including the maximum possible penalty that could be imposed, and knowing and understanding his right to appeal the sentence as provided in 18 U.S.C. § 3742, hereby expressly waives the right to appeal any sentence within the maximum provided in the statutes of conviction or the manner in which that sentence was determined and imposed, including on the grounds set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3742, in exchange for the concessions made by the United States in this plea agreement. This agreement does not affect the rights or obligations of the United States as set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3742(b). If the United States appeals the defendant's sentence, the defendant will be entitled to appeal his sentence as set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3742(a) as to any aspects of his sentence inconsistent with the sentencing provisions of this agreement.

18. If the defendant fails to comply with any of the terms and conditions set forth in this agreement, the United States may fully prosecute the defendant on all criminal charges that can be brought against the defendant. With respect to such a prosecution:

a. The defendant shall assert no claim under the United States Constitution, any statute, Rule 410 of the Federal Rules of Evidence, Rule 11(e)(6) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, or any other federal rule, that the defendant's statements pursuant to this agreement or any leads derived therefrom should be suppressed or are inadmissible;

b. The defendant waives any right to claim that evidence presented in such prosecution is tainted by virtue of the statements the defendant has made; and

c. The defendant waives any and all defenses based on the statute of limitations with respect to any such prosecution that is not time-barred on the date that this agreement is signed by the parties.

19. If a dispute arises as to whether defendant has knowingly committed any material breach of this agreement, and the United States chooses to exercise its rights under Paragraph 18, at the defendant's request, the matter shall be submitted to the Court for its determination in an appropriate proceeding. At such proceeding, the defendant's disclosures and documents shall be admissible and the United States shall have the burden to establish the defendant's breach by a preponderance of the evidence.

20. The parties agree that if the Court does not accept the defendant's plea of guilty, then this agreement shall be null and void.

21. The defendant understands that this agreement is binding only upon the Public Integrity Section and the Fraud Section of the Criminal Division, and the Tax Division of the United States Department of Justice. This agreement does not bind any other prosecutor's office or agency. It does not bar or compromise any civil claim that has been or may be made against the defendant.

22. This agreement and the attached Factual Basis for Plea constitute the entire agreement between the United States and the defendant. No other promises, agreements, or representations exist or have been made to the defendant or the defendant's attorneys by the Department of Justice

OF JACK A. ABRAMOFF

This statement is submitted to provide a factual basis for my plea of guilty to the charges filed against me.

1. From 1994 to 2004, Abramoff was a Washington, D.C. lobbyist. In 1994, Abramoff joined a law and lobbying firm ("Firm A"). In January 2001, Abramoff joined a second law and lobbying firm ("Firm B").

2. At all relevant times, Abramoff solicited and obtained business with groups and companies throughout the United States, including Native American tribal governments operating, and interested in operating, gambling casinos. Abramoff sought to further his clients' interests by lobbying public officials, including Members of the United States Congress. Abramoff also sought to further his clients' interests by recommending vendors for grass roots work, public relations services and election campaign support. Typically, Abramoff communicated with his clients by interstate electronic mail, interstate telephone calls, and private or commercial interstate mail carriers.

3. From March 2000 through 2001, Michael Scanlon ("Scanlon") worked for Firm A and Firm B in Washington, D.C. as a public relations specialist engaged in providing public relations services to clients throughout the United States. At these firms, Scanlon worked on many matters, often together with, and at the direction of, Abramoff. Abramoff was influential in Scanlon being hired by both firms.

4. In or about January 2001, Scanlon established a business called Capital Campaign Strategies LLC which had its principal offices in Washington, D.C. Capital Campaign

Strategies LLC was formed to provide grass roots work, public relations services, and election campaign support. Scanlon also formed other companies that were used primarily to receive money for the services and work performed by others (collectively referred to as "CCS"). The services that CCS provided frequently involved use of interstate mail and telephone calls. Payments were often made by interstate wire transfer or checks that foreseeably caused interstate funds transfers between banks.

5. In May 2003, Abramoff established a business called GrassRoots Interactive ("GRI"), which had its principal offices in Silver Spring, Maryland. Abramoff represented that GRI would provide grass roots work, public relations services, and election campaign support.

6. In July 1999, Abramoff established a private foundation called Capital Athletic Foundation ("CAF") for which he sought and received federal tax-exempt status, in part to provide funding for a non-profit school. In November 2001, Abramoff organized a solely owned entity, Kaygold, LLC. Abramoff used these entities in part to receive funds for his personal benefit, to conceal the destination of the funds, and, with respect to CAF, to evade income taxes. Payments were often made by interstate wire transfer or checks involving interstate funds transfers.

Fraud Based on Violations of Abramoff's Duty of Honest Services

7. Abramoff was hired by at least four Native American tribes with gaming operations to provide professional services and develop programs to limit market competition or to assist in opening casinos. In 2001, Abramoff and Scanlon agreed that Abramoff would encourage his existing and potential clients to obtain grass roots and public relations services as a critical part of the lobbying program and strategy that Abramoff had been hired to provide. Abramoff promoted and recommended primarily CCS to provide this grass roots and public relations work. The prices CCS charged for its services were significantly in excess of CCS's costs.

8. Abramoff and Scanlon knew and agreed that Abramoff would receive fifty percent of the net profits received by CCS from those clients. Most of the payments from clients under the contracts with CCS were made to CCS. Scanlon then paid Abramoff his share of the net profits to various organizations that Abramoff controlled. The transfer of funds to Abramoff foreseeably involved the interstate transfer of funds.

9. Abramoff and Scanlon understood that the payments to Abramoff would not be disclosed to Abramoff's and Scanlon's four clients. Abramoff and Scanlon understood that disclosure of the profit-sharing arrangement to the clients would likely jeopardize the contracts for services and/or the profit margins of both Abramoff's law firm and CCS because disclosure could encourage the clients to seek competitive proposals from other vendors. Abramoff knew that his clients could receive the same services at significantly reduced prices because the quoted prices incorporated the undisclosed fees Scanlon paid to Abramoff of approximately fifty percent of CCS's net profits.

10. Abramoff promoted himself as having knowledge superior to his clients regarding lobbying and grass roots activity. Abramoff encouraged his clients to trust his judgment in these matters. Abramoff knew his clients did in fact trust and rely upon him in these matters. Abramoff further knew he had a duty to disclose all relevant facts to his lobbying clients, including conflicts of interest and any financial interest in fees paid to others.

Mississippi Tribe

11. In 1995, Abramoff was hired by a Native American Indian tribal client based in Mississippi ("Mississippi Tribe") to hire him to provide lobbying services on various issues. Abramoff used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Mississippi Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure the trust and confidence of the Mississippi Tribe.

12. In early 2001, Abramoff recommended and advised the Mississippi Tribe to hire CCS, while concealing the fact that Abramoff would receive approximately fifty percent of the net profits from the Mississippi Tribe's payments to Scanlon.

13. From June 2001 until April 2004, the Mississippi Tribe paid Scanlon and related entities approximately $14,765,000. Abramoff and Scanlon concealed from the Mississippi Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $6,364,000 including money not passed through CCS, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to their undisclosed arrangement.

Louisiana Tribe

14. In March 2001, Abramoff and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American Indian tribal client based in Louisiana ("Louisiana Tribe") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services to the tribe. Abramoff used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Louisiana Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure the trust and confidence of the Louisiana Tribe.

15. In March 2001, after CCS had been paid for the first project, Abramoff advised the Louisiana Tribe to rehire CCS, while concealing the fact that Abramoff would receive fifty percent of the profits from the Louisana Tribe's payments to CCS.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149927

16. From March 2001 to May 2003, the Louisiana Tribe paid CCS and related entities approximately $30,510,000. Abramoff and Scanlon concealed from the Louisiana Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $11,450,000, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to their undisclosed arrangement.

Michigan Tribe

17. In January 2002, Abramoff and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American Indian tribal client based in Michigan ("Michigan Tribe") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services. Abramoff used his knowledge of lobbying and grass roots work, which was superior to the Michigan Tribe's knowledge of these areas, to secure the trust and confidence of the Michigan Tribe.

18. In June 2002, Abramoff advised the Michigan Tribe to expand its contract with CCS, while concealing the fact that Abramoff would receive approximately fifty percent of the profits from the Michigan Tribe's payments to CCS.

19. From June 2002 to October 2003, the Michigan Tribe paid Scanlon and related entities approximately $3,500,000. Abramoff and Scanlon concealed from the Michigan Tribe that approximately fifty percent of the profit, approximately $540,000, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to their undisclosed arrangement.

Texas Tribe #1

20. In February 2002, Abramoff and Scanlon successfully solicited a Native American Indian tribal client based in Texas ("Texas Tribe #1") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services designed to reopen Texas Tribe #1's gaming operations that had been closed by Texas authorities because Texas Tribe #1 did not have federal or state authority to operate a casino. Specifically, Abramoff and Scanlon represented that they would work first to open the casino as a Class II gaming facility and then work to expand Texas Tribe #1's casino as a more lucrative Class III facility. Abramoff and Scanlon further proposed that, in return for their work, Texas Tribe #1 would pay CCS $4,200,000 in fees and make additional and substantial political campaign contributions at the direction of Abramoff and Scanlon. Abramoff falsely represented that he would work for free to represent Texas Tribe #1, all the while concealing from the Texas Tribe #1 that approximately fifty percent of CCS's net profits, approximately $1,850,000, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to his undisclosed arrangement with Scanlon.

21. At no time did Abramoff, Scanlon, or others working with them disclose to Texas Tribe #1 that, beginning in 2001, Abramoff, Firm B, and Scanlon had collected millions of dollars in fees from the Louisiana Tribe to oppose all gaming in the Texas legislature. Abramoff's conduct prevented consideration by Firm B of whether to disclose his representation of Texas Tribe #1 pursuant to the Lobbying Disclosure Act.

22. After being retained by Texas Tribe #1 in early 2002 to reopen its casino through federal legislation, Abramoff continued representing the Louisiana Tribe for millions of dollars in fees. Pursuant to this representation of the Louisiana Tribe, Abramoff failed to disclose to Texas Tribe #1 that he opposed legislation in the 2003 Texas state legislative session that would have provided a basis to reopen Texas Tribe #1's casino under state law. Abramoff knew that Texas Tribe #1 supported and promoted this legislation while he worked to prevent its passage for the benefit of his other client, the Louisiana Tribe.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149929

Wireless Company

23. From January 2001 until April 2004, Abramoff was employed by Firm B. As an employee of Firm B, Abramoff had a duty to act in Firm B's best interests and not to divert lobbying fees owed to Firm B.

24. In 2001, Abramoff was hired by a wireless telephone company ("Wireless Company") to undertake a lobbying effort to assist Wireless Company in securing a license to install wireless telephone infrastructure for the United States House of Representatives. In 2001 and early 2002, Abramoff and his Firm B colleagues lobbied for the Wireless Company without any formal retainer agreement. Rather than make lobbying payments to Firm B, Abramoff directed Wireless Company to make payments totaling at least $50,000 to CAF.

25. At no time did Abramoff inform his employer, Firm B, of the $50,000 in payments to CAF, of which Firm B was entitled to a portion.

Fraud Based on Abramoff's Affirmative Misrepresentations

Michigan Tribe

26. From June 2002 to November 2002, Abramoff and a former lobbying colleague, who was also a former congressional staffer ("Staffer A") successfully solicited the Michigan Tribe for a $25,000 payment to CAF. Instead of using the funds for CAF, Abramoff used this money for his personal and professional benefit to partially pay for a golfing trip to Scotland for himself, public officials, members of his staff and others.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149930

Distilled Beverages Company

27. On or about June 6, 2002, Abramoff and Staffer A successfully solicited one of Firm B's clients, a distilled beverages company, for a $25,000 payment to CAF. Instead of using the funds for CAF, Abramoff used this money for his personal and professional benefit to partially pay for a golfing trip to Scotland for himself, public officials, members of his staff and others.

New Mexico Tribe

28. In February 2002, Abramoff and others successfully solicited a Native American Indian tribal client based in New Mexico ("New Mexico Tribe") to hire them to provide lobbying and grass roots services to the tribe.

29. In March 2002, the New Mexico Tribe paid Scanlon and related entities approximately $2,750,000. Abramoff and Scanlon materially understated to the New Mexico Tribe the size of CCS's profit margins and concealed from the New Mexico Tribe that CCS's profit margin was approximately eighty percent and that approximately fifty percent of the net profit, $1,175,000, was paid to Abramoff pursuant to the undisclosed arrangement. At no time prior to March 2004 did Abramoff or others inform Firm B or the New Mexico Tribe of the undisclosed payments.

Manufacturing and Services Company

30. On May 2, 2003, Abramoff sent a business proposal to a manufacturing and services company ("Company A") to handle its lobbying effort regarding a tax issue. In addition to his services, Abramoff recommended that Company A hire GRI, while concealing from Company A his interest in GRI. In his proposal, Abramoff falsely advised that GRI had no relationship with Abramoff's law and lobbying firm, even though GRI was controlled by Abramoff and paid the vast majority of its profits to Abramoff or entities he controlled. Additionally, Abramoff represented to Company A that he was negotiating on their behalf with GRI to try to save Company A money, when in fact he was simply setting a high price on services that he controlled and from which he would profit.

31. In May and June 2003, Company A paid GRI, directly and through Firm B's bank account, approximately $1,841,429. Abramoff and entities he controlled received approximately $1,655,695 from GRI.

Corruption of Public Officials

32. Beginning as early as January 2000, Abramoff, Scanlon and others engaged in a course of conduct through which one or both of them offered and provided a stream of things of value to public officials in exchange for a series of official acts and influence and agreements to provide official action and influence. These things of value included, but are not limited to, foreign and domestic travel, golf fees, frequent meals, entertainment, election support for candidates for government office, employment for relatives of officials, and campaign contributions. As one part of this course of conduct, things of value were offered to and given to a Member of the United States Congress ("Representative #1") and members of Representative #1's staff, including, but not limited to:

a. All-expenses-paid trips, including a trip to the Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands ("CNMI") in 2000, a trip to the Super Bowl in Tampa, Florida in 2001, and a golf trip to Scotland in 2002;

b. Numerous tickets for entertainment, including concerts and sporting events;

c. Fundraising events, including providing box suites and food at various sport and concert venues and at a restaurant in the Washington, D.C. area owned by Abramoff;

d. Campaign contributions to campaign committees and to political action committees and organizations, including, but not limited to, the following:

i. $4,000 in contributions to Representative #1's campaign committee in 2000; and

ii. A $10,000 contribution to the National Republican Campaign Committee ("NRCC") in 2000 at Representative #1's request;

e. Regular meals and drinks at an upscale restaurant owned by Abramoff in Washington, D.C.; and

f. Frequent golf and related expenses at courses in the Washington, D.C area.

33. As part of this course of conduct, Abramoff, Scanlon and others provided things of value to public officials in exchange for a series of official acts and influence, and agreements to provide official acts and influence, including, but not limited to, agreements to support and pass legislation, agreements to place statements in the Congressional Record, agreements to contact personnel in United States Executive Branch agencies and offices to influence decisions of those agencies and offices, meetings with Abramoff and CCS's clients, and awarding contracts for services with CCS and Abramoff's law firms. As one part of this course of conduct, Representative #1 and members of his staff agreed to use and did use their official positions and influence, including, but not limited to, the following:

a. Travel by a senior staff member of Representative #1 with others in January 2000 to CNMI for the purpose of assisting Abramoff, his firm and others in obtaining and maintaining lobbying clients;

b. Representative #1's agreement in March 2000 to place a statement drafted by Scanlon into the Congressional Record that was critical of the then-owner of a Florida gaming company, and was calculated to pressure the then-owner to sell on terms favorable to Abramoff and his partners;

c. Representative #1's agreement in October 2000 with Scanlon to insert a statement into the Congressional Record which praised the new owner of the Florida gaming company, Abramoff's business partner;

d. Representative #1's agreement in approximately August 2001 to use his position as Chairman of a Committee of the House to endorse and support a client of Abramoff as the provider of wireless telephone infrastructure to the House of Representatives;

e. Representative #1's agreement in approximately March 2002 that, as the Co-Chairman of a Conference Committee of House and Senate Members of Congress, he would introduce and seek passage of legislation that would lift an existing federal ban against commercial gaming in order to benefit a client of Abramoff and CCS, Texas Tribe #1;

f. Representative #1's agreement in approximately June 2002 that, as the Co-Chairman of a Conference Committee of House and Senate Members of Congress, he would introduce and seek passage of legislation that would lift an existing federal ban against commercial gaming for another Native American Tribe in Texas ("Texas Tribe #2") at Abramoff's request;

g. Representative #1 met in August 2002 with representatives of Texas Tribe #1 to assure them that they were effectively represented by Abramoff and that he continued to agree to work to pass the legislation they wanted;

h. Representative #1's agreement in December 2002 to seek support from a Member of another Committee of the House of Representatives for passage of legislation to lift the federal gaming ban for Texas Tribe #1;

i. Representative #1 met in 2002 with a Native American Tribal client of CCS and Abramoff from California ("California Tribe") to discuss Representative #1's agreement to assist in passing legislation regarding taxation of certain payments received by members of the California Tribe, and to assist in an issue relating to a post office of interest to the California Tribe;

j. Representative #1 agreed to meet with some of Abramoff's clients and others in Russia while Representative #1 was there on official business in August 2003 to, among other things, influence the process of obtaining a visa for travel to the United States for the relative of one of Abramoff's clients; and

k. Representative #1 at various times, directly and indirectly, contacted public officials at additional government agencies and offices on behalf of clients of Abramoff and CCS in an effort to influence decisions and actions by those officials.

34. As one part of the same course of conduct outlined in paragraphs 32 and 33 above, in June 2002, Abramoff informed Representative #1 that Texas Tribe #1 was raising funds to pay for a golfing trip to Scotland that Representative #1 and members of his staff were to, and did, attend. In August 2002, Texas Tribe #2, at the request of Abramoff and Texas Tribe #1, sent a $50,000 check made out to CAF via private interstate mail delivery to Abramoff at 1101 Pennsylvania Ave, N.W., Washington, D.C.

35. As one part of the same conduct outlined in paragraphs 32 and 33 above, beginning at least in 1999 through January 2001, Abramoff and others sought Staffer A's agreement to perform a series of official acts, including assisting in stopping legislation regarding internet gambling and opposing postal rate increases. With the intent to influence those official acts, Abramoff provided things of value including, but not limited to, from June 2000 through February 2001, ten equal monthly payments totaling $50,000 through a non-profit entity to the wife of Staffer A. The total amount paid to the wife of Staffer A was obtained from clients that would and did benefit from Staffer A's official actions regarding the legislation on internet gambling or opposing postal rate increases.

36. As one part of the same course of conduct outlined in paragraphs 32 and 33 above, beginning in March 2002, Abramoff and a former staffer to Representative #1 ("Staffer B") contacted Representative #1, officials employed by the Office of Representative #1, and officials employed by a House Committee ("Committee") of which Representative #1 was the chairman. These contacts occurred within one year of Staffer B having served as the Chief of Staff for Representative #1 and Staff Director of the Committee. Abramoff intended that Staffer B communicate with Representative #1, his staff, and the

Committee staff for the purpose of influencing official action on behalf of Abramoff's and Staffer B's clients, including Texas Tribe #1 and Wireless Company.

Tax Evasion Offense

37. During the calendar year 2002, Abramoff had and received a substantial amount of income from the conduct discussed in paragraphs 1 through 31. In order to conceal this income from the Internal Revenue Service and others, Abramoff used entities exempt from taxation under Title 26, United States Code Section 501(c), including a private foundation he created and a public policy organization for which he served as a director, to receive income and to make expenditures for his own personal benefit. To further conceal this income, Abramoff and others created, or caused to be created, false invoices and false entries to financial records, which made it appear as if the funds had been received and expended for tax-exempt purposes. In fact, Abramoff and others knew that these activities constituted a misuse of these tax-exempt entities. Through these activities, Abramoff and others intended to and did benefit Abramoff, the entities he controlled or financially supported, and the public policy organization.

38. On or about October 15, 2003, Abramoff signed and filed a false and fraudulent joint U.S. Individual Income Tax Return, Form 1040, which underreported Abramoff's total income for 2002. Specifically, Abramoff willfully and intentionally failed to report the income received from the illegal schemes described in paragraphs 1 to 32 above resulting in the evasion of approximately $628,557 in individual income taxes for the 2002 tax year.

39. Abramoff signed and filed false and fraudulent Returns of Private Foundations, Forms 990PF, which misrepresented the receipt of diverted funds as charitable donations and mischaracterized personal and business expenditures as being used for a tax exempt purpose.

40. Furthermore, Abramoff caused false Returns of Organizations Exempt from Income Tax, Forms 990, to be filed by a public policy organization, which misrepresented the receipt of diverted funds as charitable donations and mischaracterized personal and business expenditures of Abramoff as being used for a tax exempt purpose.

41. Abramoff engaged in similar evasive conduct for the tax years 2001 and 2003. Due to this and other evasive conduct, Abramoff attempted to evade approximately $1,724,054 in individual income taxes for the 2001 through 2003 tax years.

The preceding statement is a summary, made for the purpose of providing the Court with a factual basis for my guilty plea to the charges against me. It does not include all of the facts known to me concerning criminal activity in which I or others engaged. I make this statement knowingly and voluntarily and because I am in fact guilty of the crimes charged.

This would be on background. So in other words you wouldn't be quoted by name but it would quote you attributing it to a 'Senior DOJ official.'

Let's try for tomorrow at 1:30.

Hi Brian - Happy new year. [redacted] tells me you're the best contact for a story we're doing on attorney-client privilege waivers. We're doing a story about corporations' growing unease over DOJ and SEC requests for attorney-client privilege waivers in white collar investigations. I'm getting an earful from the business community, which is making a lot of claims about DOJ's supposed increasing demands for waivers, etc.

I need to wrap up the reporting by Thursday p.m. Can we get a backgrounder from someone over there, and also a for-the-record interview? McCallum maybe? Besides the obvious questions (are waiver requests increasing? How do you respond to business' complaints that privilege waivers hinder their ability to conduct internal investigations?, are we asking Congress for some sort of limited waiver?, etc), I have some background questions about what sort of pushback (if any) you're getting from business on this.

Thanks,

Dear Friend,

I am sorry for contacting you through this medium without a Previous notice,I had to use E-mail because it is an easier and more confidential way of making contact with people around the world. My name is Sgt Ryan Morgan, I am serving here in Iraq as a member of the American 1st Armoured Division.
Last year I and my partners discovered some of the stolen money looted by the former Iraq leader Saddam Hussien which he kept in one of the Security finance Firm near his home town. The amount involved here is $9.5 million.

As an American serving soldiers, you should agree with me that we should not be in position of such huge amount while we are still in active service to our dear country. We want to move this funds to you so that you can assist us to invest it in a lucrative business or alternatively keep our share in a safety keep. We have made every arrangement to deliver the funds to you cash via diplomatic courier means which is more safety and easiest way of delivering the funds.

As soon as the funds is delivered to you, do remember that you be given 20% percent of the total funds while 80% percent will be left for me and my partners. If you are ready to proceed and work with us, Kindly furnish us with this below infomation of yours:

(1) FULL NAME
(2) CONTACT ADDRESS
(3) CONTACT TELEPHONE NUMBER
(4) YOUR AGE AND WHAT YOU DO FOR A LIVING

The above information of yours will assist us and the diplomats who will be delivering the funds to you for speedy delivery. NOTE: that the diplomats that will be delivering the funds to you does not know the content of the consignment, we told them that the consignment is containing some highly qaulity fabric while my partners, you and I are the only one that knows the real content of the consignment. Do remember that this transaction os 100% rick free and will never in any way put you into any trouble is as much as you will follow all my rules and regulation guiding this transaction.

I await your immediate response,

Sincerely,

For those that will be departing soon (Liz & Luis), I will have the voice feature activated so when/if the unit is reassigned we don't have to worry about getting it done.

Thanks.

JCON-S Computer Security Awareness and Training Certification

The Computer Security Awareness and Training Certification is to be completely filled out, originally signed and returned to your component point of contact (POC) before system access will be granted.

Please note that if the form is not completed the form will be returned to the component POC.

Please note that the Computer Security Awareness training is provided to users on a DVD and written presentation is provided via CD.

JCON - S Network User Agreement Form

Computer Security Awareness Certification

I understand that as result of performing my duties, I am being granted access to United States SECRET level information. I understand that my being granted access to this information involves me in this position of special trust and confidence concerning matters of national security. I hereby acknowledge that I have been briefed concerning my obligations with respect to such access.

I understand that safeguarding SECRET Level information is of the utmost importance and that the loss or compromise could cause serious or exceptionally grave damage to the national security of the United States. I understand that I am obligated to protect the SECRET Level information and I have been instructed in the special nature of this information and the reasons for the protection of such information. I agree to comply with any special instructions issued by my department or office regarding unofficial foreign travel or contracts with foreign nationals.

I understand fully the information presented in the DVD, oral and/or written briefing I have received. I have read this certificate and my questions if any, have been satisfactorily answered. I understand that, if I willfully disclose to any unauthorized person any of SECRET Level information to which I might have access, I may be subject to prosecution under the criminal laws of the United States, as appropriate. I understand and accept that unless I am released in writing by an authorized representative of my department or office, the terms of this certificate and my obligation to protect SECRET Level information to which I have access, apply during the time of my access and at all time thereafter.

JCON-S User Account Application

The User Account Application consists of two forms: 1) JCON-S Network User Agreement Form and 2) The COMSEC Access Certification Form. Each form consists of pertinent information and a signature block. Please be sure to fully complete, sign, and obtain approval (if necessary). All forms must be completely filled out, originally signed and returned to your component point of contact (POC) before system access will be granted.

Please note that if sections of the forms are not completed they will be returned to the component POC.

JCON - S Network User Agreement Form

This check-in brief outlines basic computer or automated information system (AIS) security practices that shall be followed while utilizing JCON - S System workstations processing Collateral Secret Information. Users requesting access to the AIS, shall:

1. Read pages 7-11 of this package. Initial the bottom of each page.
2. Fill out, sign, and date the JCON - S User Agreement Form, COMSEC Form and CSAT Form.
3. Have your Supervisor fill out, sign and date his/her section of the JCON - S User Agreement Form. Please be sure to fill in the reason you need system access.
4. Keep pages 1-5 for your reference.
5. Send the originally signed package to your Component Point of Contact for processing.

Basic User Responsibilities are discussed below. More detailed information is available in the Department of Justice SPOM and individual JCON-S SOPs.

USER RESPONSIBILITIES

AIS Security Officials	The Information System Security Manager (ISSO) is responsible for establishing and enforcing AIS security policy for the JCON-S system. The system ISSO implements AIS security policy and procedures on individual workstations. Each user shall know how to contact the security officials for the information system that he/she is authorized to access.
User Access	Each user will protect the confidentiality, integrity and availability of the JCON-S system and the information it contains. Users will not employ JCON-S assets for private or personal use. JCON-S users will not attempt to have multiple concurrent active sessions.
Physical Security	Physical security and environmental controls will be used to provide an acceptable level of security to all information systems. Physical security can be achieved through basic measures such as challenging strangers/unknown personnel in your workplace or computer area and by never leaving an active terminal unattended. In temporary classified workspaces the cubicle or office should be prepared for classified processing. Preparation activities include ensuring that the computer monitor is not facing the entrance ways or windows or that the monitor has a privacy filter covering the screen, glass doors are covered with paper, and a notification sign is posted on the outside of the door. The removable hard drive and Crypto Ignition Key (CIK) may be retrieved from the safe. The safe must then be closed and secured. The cubicle or office door has been locked the session may begin. At the end of a session the printer and computer must be shut down and powered off for at least 10 seconds. Secure everything (hard drive, CIK key and all classified materials) in the GSA-approved safe except the key to the hard drive. As an added precaution (layered defense) the key to the hard drive should not be stored in the same location as the hard drive. These are important practices that safeguard against unauthorized use. Individuals providing escort duty are responsible for ensuring the person being escorted does not gain unauthorized access to a JCON - S automated information system. Failure to do so may result in a security incident and adverse action
System Monitoring	Users activities on the JCON-S system may be monitored by the Department of Justice and by DISA. JCON-S users have no expectation of privacy while using the system.

DOJ_NMG_ 0149961

Passwords	Every user of a JCON - S system will use a "strong" password of twelve ALPHANUMERIC CHARACTERS (combination of numbers and letters). A "strong" password must contain all four types of characters: upper case letter, lower case letter, western Arabic numeric and non-alphanumeric. To prevent passwords from being easily guessed, they shall not be names/numbers that can easily be associated with your person (i.e. well known nicknames, spouse's or close relatives (son, daughter, mother, etc.) name, favorite sports teams, type of car you drive, etc.) nor should they be dictionary words (e.g. "SPIDER" or "OFFICE"). Choose a password that is easy for you to remember but is not easily guessed. Passwords are for individual use only. The sharing of passwords is prohibited as is writing it down in easily accessible places (such as "post-it" notes on your desk or in your organizer file under "P", etc.). Your password is used to authenticate you and only you as a valid user of the system. Protect passwords, when combined with user account names, at the highest classification level of the system to which the passwords allow access. If you feel your password has been compromised or that unauthorized personnel are accessing your files, report it immediately to the system ISSO.
Individual Account Protection	To ensure individual account and system protection log-off the system each time you leave the workstation. Ensure this is always done! Failure to secure the workstation by logging off is a practice dangerous to security and may result in adverse administrative action.
Processing Restrictions	Information systems connected to the JCON - S LAN can process, store, and transmit information up to a classification level of SECRET. If higher classification is inadvertently processed on the JCON - S LAN, report the incident immediately to the ISSO and his/her Security Program Manager (SPM). The contaminated workstation(s) and servers will be disconnected from the network and sanitized. Users will not forward E-mails automatically outside the JCON-S system. The JCON-S network is a closed network, except for the SIPRNet connection. Users will not attempt to connect any JCON-S assets or resources to any other system.
Hardware	JCON-S users will not introduce new hardware to the JCON-S workstation or workstation suite. The use of modems, wireless adapters, or USB devices on JCON-S. is strictly prohibited.
Software	Requests to use non-standard JCON - S software, including free and unsolicited demonstration software, shall be submitted to the JCON - S ISSO. Personally owned software, regardless of source, may not be introduced into JCON - S computers.
Removable Media	All removable magnetic media must bear a label indicating the classification level of information to which the media contains. A color-coded security classification label must be affixed to media. Place the labels in a conspicuous place where they will not adversely affect operation of the equipment. Media may not be moved from the JCON-S workstation suite to an unclassified system.

	JCON-S users will protect media that has been used on JCON-S at the SECRET Level, even if they believe the media contains only unclassified information. Users will dispose of medial when it is no longer required for mission completion.
Output	Users will ensure that all output contains proper classification and control markings and is adequately protected, including classified information cover sheets. This includes all messages and correspondence generated on electronic mail systems. Printed Secret information that does not leave the restricted area is normally exempt from accountability. See the ISSO with questions regarding printed collateral Secret material.
Electronic Mail	E-mail is a DOJ owned communications system used to supplement the record message system. It is subject to the same for official use only constraints as government mail or telephones, and shall be used to conduct Government business only. Users should be aware that administrators and technicians have the ability to review e-mail and disseminate it as necessary. There is no expectation of privacy while using DOJ information systems!
Electronic Equipment	Items generally prohibited in restricted areas include personally owned: photographic, video, audio recording equipment, computers & associated media, and cell phones. Personally owned electronic calculators, electronic spell-checkers, wristwatches, receive only pagers and radios are allowed in a Restricted Area.
Virus/Malicious Programs	Users shall make every effort to prevent the transmission of computer viruses and Trojan horses. Anti-virus software is installed on all JCON - S workstations. Users will use the installed anti-viral software to scan any removable media introduced to the JCON-S system prior to its being accessed by other JCON-S resources.
Disposal and Output media.	JCON S users will dispose of classified material properly. Disposal methods may in clued burning, shredding, pulping, melting, mutilating, using chemical decomposition, pulverizing, or degaussing. Users will properly dispose of toner cartridges.

To begin using the classified system:

1. Make sure the hard drive key is accessible.

Note: Some workstations may not have removable hard drives. If working on a machine without a hard drive please disregard the steps referring to the removable hard drives.

2. Clear work area of all unauthorized personnel.

3. Review System Security Plan.

4. Do not leave classified material unattended or unsecured during processing.

5. Retrieve removable hard drive and Crypto Ignition Key (CIK) from GSA-approved container.

6. Insert and lock the hard drive.

7. Turn the computer on.

8. Insert the CIK into the TACLANE and turn the key 1/8th of a turn in the clockwise direction.

9. Turn the TACLANE on and use the following procedure to establish a secure connection.
   - After the start up process runs the "-----Offline Main Menu-----" should appear.
   - Use the arrows on the key pad to move the selection cursor '>' to the "Operation" option and press the select button.
   - Use the arrows to select the "Select Lvl" option and press the Select button.
   - Use the arrows to select "Secret" as the level and press the Select button.
   - Select "Operation" and press the Select button.
   - Select "Secure Comm" and press the Select button. Note: The Green Run light blinks when Secure Comm mode is functioning properly.

10. Upon completion of the computer boot-up, Log on, and initiate desired program.

11. If storage media is needed ensure that it is properly labeled and insert it into its drive.

12. If system malfunctions, immediately notify the TSVC Help Desk at 202-307-5368.

13. If you need to print, use only the locally associated printer. (Network printing is not allowed.)

14. Ensure all printer material is properly labeled with highest level of classification contained therein.

15. Do not load any unauthorized software on system.

To shut down the system:

Note: Some workstations may not have removable hard drives. If working on a machine without a hard drive please disregard the steps referring to the removable hard drives.

1. Save any material to the A: drive or the removable hard drive.

2. Remove any diskettes in the A: drive or CDs, label them with appropriate classification and set aside for storage in the GSA-approved container.

3. Shut down the computer. Note: A logoff script will run when the computer is shutting down. Depending upon the type of printer (inkjet or laser) the printer may print 3 sheets of paper to clear the memory and clean the drum.

4. Turn off the printer.

5. Shut down the TACLANE using the following procedures.
   - Select "Operations" and press the Select button.
   - Select the "Shutdown" and press the Select button.
   - The prompt "Perform Shutdown?" will appear.
   - Select "Yes". – Wait a moment until the TACLANE states you may shut the TACLANE off.
   - Turn off the TACLANE.
   - Turn the CIK key 1/8th of a turn in the counter clockwise direction and remove the CIK.

6. Remove the hard drive from the workstation.

7. Ensure all products/media are properly marked.

8. Place all classified media (hard drive and the CIK key) into the GSA-approved security container.

9. Store the hard drive key.

Scope of Authorization

Subject to the limitations detailed in the User Responsibilities of this brief and the respective system Standard Operating Procedures (SOP), the user is authorized access to JCON - S information systems classified Secret as required. This authorization contains no implied authorization to access any computer system of the United States Government not specifically identified herein. This authorization shall be revoked upon separation, retirement, reassignment of duties, change of organization or when determined by the Information Systems Security Officer (ISSO) to be in the best interest of the Government.

WARNING: Only Authorized Users May Use These Systems. Individuals using DOJ computer systems without authority, or in excess of their authority, are subject to having all of their activities on these systems monitored and recorded by system personnel. In the course of monitoring individuals improperly using these systems, or in the course of system maintenance, the activities of authorized users may be monitored. Anyone using these systems expressly consents to such monitoring and is advised that if such monitoring reveals possible evidence of criminal activity, management may authorize system personnel to provide the evidence of such monitoring to law enforcement officials.

3. Have your Supervisor fill out, sign and date his/her section of the JCON - S User Agreement Form. Please be sure to fill in the reason you need system access.
4. Keep pages 1-5 for your reference.
5. Send the originally signed package to your Component Point of Contact for processing.

Basic User Responsibilities are discussed below. More detailed information is available in the Department of Justice SPOM and individual JCON-S SOPs.

USER RESPONSIBILITIES

AIS Security Officials	The Information System Security Manager (ISSO) is responsible for establishing and enforcing AIS security policy for the JCON - S system. The system ISSO implements AIS security policy and procedures on individual workstations. Each user shall know how to contact the security officials for the information system that he/she is authorized to access.

The removable hard drive and Crypto Ignition Key (CIK) may be retrieved from the safe. The safe must then be closed and secured. The cubicle or office door has been locked the session may begin. At the end of a session the printer and computer must be shut down and powered off for at least 10 seconds. Secure everything (hard drive, CIK key and all classified materials) in the GSA-approved safe except the key to the hard drive. As an added precaution (layered defense) the key to the hard drive should not be stored in the same location as the hard drive. These are important practices that safeguard against unauthorized use. Individuals providing escort duty are responsible for ensuring the person being escorted does not gain unauthorized access to a JCON - S automated information system. Failure to do so may result in a security incident and adverse action
System Monitoring	Users activities on the JCON-S system may be monitored by the Department of Justice and by DISA. JCON-S users have no expectation of privacy while using the system.

Processing Restrictions	Information systems connected to the JCON - S LAN can process, store, and transmit information up to a classification level of SECRET. If higher classification is inadvertently processed on the JCON - S LAN, report the incident immediately to the ISSO and his/her Security Program Manager (SPM). The contaminated workstation(s) and servers will be disconnected from the network and sanitized. Users will not forward E-mails automatically outside the JCON-S system. The JCON-S network is a closed network, except for the SIPRNet connection. Users will not attempt to connect any JCON-S assets or resources to any other system.
Hardware	JCON-S users will not introduce new hardware to the JCON-S workstation or workstation suite. The use of modems, wireless adapters, or USB devices on JCON-S. is strictly prohibited.
Software	Requests to use non-standard JCON - S software, including free and unsolicited demonstration software, shall be submitted to the JCON - S ISSO. Personally owned software, regardless of source, may not be introduced into JCON - S computers.
Removable Media	All removable magnetic media must bear a label indicating the classification level of information to which the media contains. A color-coded security classification label must be affixed to media. Place the labels in a conspicuous place where they will not adversely affect operation of the equipment. Media may not be moved from the JCON-S workstation suite to an unclassified system. JCON-S users will protect media that has been used on JCON-S at the SECRET

	Level, even if they believe the media contains only unclassified information. Users will dispose of medial when it is no longer required for mission completion.
Output	Users will ensure that all output contains proper classification and control markings and is adequately protected, including classified information cover sheets. This includes all messages and correspondence generated on electronic mail systems. Printed Secret information that does not leave the restricted area is normally exempt from accountability. See the ISSO with questions regarding printed collateral Secret material.
Electronic Mail	E-mail is a DOJ owned communications system used to supplement the record message system. It is subject to the same for official use only constraints as government mail or telephones, and shall be used to conduct Government business only. Users should be aware that administrators and technicians have the ability to review e-mail and disseminate it as necessary. There is no expectation of privacy while using DOJ information systems!
Electronic Equipment	Items generally prohibited in restricted areas include personally owned: photographic, video, audio recording equipment, computers & associated media, and cell phones. Personally owned electronic calculators, electronic spell-checkers, wristwatches, receive only pagers and radios are allowed in a Restricted Area.
Virus/Malicious Programs	Users shall make every effort to prevent the transmission of computer viruses and Trojan horses. Anti-virus software is installed on all JCON - S workstations. Users wil use the installed anti-viral software to scan any removable media introduced to the JCON-S system prior to its being accessed by other JCON-S resources.
Disposal and Output media.	JCON S users will dispose of classified material properly. Disposal methods may in clued burning, shredding, pulping, melting, mutilating, using chemical decomposition, pulverizing, or degaussing. Users will properly dispose of toner cartridges.

To begin using the classified system:

1. Make sure the hard drive key is accessible.

Note: Some workstations may not have removable hard drives. If working on a machine without a hard drive please disregard the steps referring to the removable hard drives.

2. Clear work area of all unauthorized personnel.

3. Review System Security Plan.

4. Do not leave classified material unattended or unsecured during processing.

5. Retrieve removable hard drive and Crypto Ignition Key (CIK) from GSA-approved container.

6. Insert and lock the hard drive.

7. Turn the computer on.

8. Insert the CIK key into the TACLANE and turn the key 1/8th of a turn in the clockwise direction.

9. Turn the TACLANE on and use the following procedure to establish a secure connection.
   - After the start up process runs the "-----Offline Main Menu-----" should appear.
   - Use the arrows on the key pad to move the selection cursor '>' to the "Operation" option and press the select button.
   - Use the arrows to select the "Select Lvl" option and press the Select button.
   - Use the arrows to select "Secret" as the level and press the Select button.
   - Select "Operation" and press the Select button.
   - Select "Secure Comm" and press the Select button. Note: The Green Run light blinks when Secure Comm mode is functioning properly.

10. Upon completion of the computer boot-up, Log on, and initiate desired program.

11. If storage media is needed ensure that it is properly labeled and insert it into its drive.

12. If system malfunctions, immediately notify the TSVC Help Desk at 202-307-5368.

13. If you need to print, use only the locally associated printer. (Network printing is not allowed.)

14. Ensure all printer material is properly labeled with highest level of classification contained therein.

15. Do not load any unauthorized software on system.

To shut down the system:

1. Save any material to the A: drive or the removable hard drive.

Note: Some workstations may not have removable hard drives. If working on a machine without a hard drive please disregard the steps referring to the removable hard drives.

2. Remove any diskettes in the A: drive or CDs, label them with appropriate classification and set aside for storage in the GSA-approved container.

3. Shut down the computer. Note: A logoff script will run when the computer is shutting down. Depending upon the type of printer (inkjet or laser) the printer may print 3 sheets of paper to clear the memory and clean the drum.

4. Turn off the printer.

5. Shut down the TACLANE using the following procedures.
   - Select "Operations" and press the Select button.
   - Select the "Shutdown" and press the Select button.
   - The prompt "Perform Shutdown?" will appear.
   - Select "Yes". – Wait a moment until the TACLANE states you may shut the TACLANE off.
   - Turn off the TACLANE.
   - Turn the CIK key 1/8th of a turn in the counter clockwise direction and remove the CIK.

6. Remove the hard drive from the workstation.

7. Ensure all products/media are properly marked.

8. Place all classified media (hard drive and the CIK key) into the GSA-approved security container.

9. Store the hard drive key.

COMSEC ACCESS BRIEFING

You have been selected to perform duties requiring access to sensitive COMSEC information. It is, therefore, essential that you are made fully aware of certain facts relative to the protection of this information before access is granted. This briefing will provide you with a description of the types of COMSEC information you may have access to, the reasons why special safeguards are necessary for protecting this information, the directives and rules, which prescribe those safeguards, and the penalties that you will incur for willful disclosure of this information to unauthorized persons.

COMSEC equipment and keying material are especially sensitive because they are used to protect other sensitive information against unauthorized access during the process of communicating that information from one point to another. Any particular piece of COMSEC equipment, keying material, or other cryptographic material may be the critical element, which protects large amounts of sensitive information from interception, analysis, and exploitation. If the integrity of the COMSEC system is weakened at any point, all the sensitive information protected by that system might be compromised; even more damaging, this loss of sensitive information may never be detected. The procedural safeguards placed on physical security, covering every phase of their existence from creation through disposition, are designed to reduce or eliminate the possibility of such compromise.

Communications Security (COMSEC) is the general term used for all steps taken to protect information of value when it is being communicated. COMSEC is usually considered to have four main components: Transmission security, physical security, emission security, and cryptographic security. Transmission security is that component of COMSEC which is designed to protect transmissions from unauthorized intercept, traffic analysis, imitative deception and disruption. Physical security is that component of COMSEC, which results from all physical measures to safeguard cryptographic materials, information, documents, and equipment from access by unauthorized persons. Emission security is that component of COMSEC which results from all measures taken to prevent compromising emanations from cryptographic equipment or telecommunications systems. Finally, cryptographic security is that component of COMSEC which results from the use of technically sound cryptosystems, and from their proper use. To ensure that telecommunications are secure, all four of these components must be considered.

Part of the physical security protection given to COMSEC equipment and materials is afforded by the special handling it receives from distribution and accounting. There are two separate channels used for handling of such equipment and materials: "COMSEC channels" and "administrative channels". The COMSEC channel, called the COMSEC Material Control System (CMCS) is used to distribute accountable COMSEC items such as keying material, maintenance manuals, and classified and CCI equipment. (EXCEPTION: Some military departments have been authorized to distribute CCI equipment through their standard logistics system.) The CMCS channel is comprised of a series of COMSEC accounts, each of which has an appointed COMSEC Custodian who is personally responsible and accountable for all COMSEC material charged to the account. The COMSEC Custodian assumes responsibility for the material upon receipt, and then controls its dissemination to authorized individuals on a need-to-know basis. The administrative channel is used to distribute COMSEC information and material other than that which is accountable in the CMCS.

Particularly important to the protection of COMSEC equipment and material are an understanding of all security regulations and the timely reporting of any compromise, suspected compromise, or other security problem involving these materials. If a COMSEC system is compromised but the compromise is not reported, the continued use of the system, under the incorrect assumption that it is secure, can result in the loss of all information that was ever protected by that system. If the compromise is reported, steps can be taken to change the system, replace the keying material, etc. to reduce the damage done. In short, it is your individual responsibility to know and to put into practice all the provisions of the appropriate publications, which relate to the protection of the COMSEC equipment and material to which you will have access.

Public disclosure of any COMSEC information is not permitted without the specific approval of your Government contracting office representative or the National Security Agency (NSA). This applies to both classified and unclassified COMSEC information, and means that you may not prepare newspaper articles, speeches, technical papers, or make any other "release" of COMSEC information without the specific Government approval. The best personal policy is to avoid any discussions, which reveal your knowledge of, or access to COMSEC information and thus avoid making yourself of interest to those who would seek the information you possess.

Finally, you must know that should you willfully disclose or give to any unauthorized persons any of the classified or CCI COMSEC equipment, associated keying material, or other classified COMSEC information to which you have access, you will be subjected to prosecution under the criminal laws of the United States. The laws, which apply, are contained in Title 18, United States Code, and sections 641, 793, 794, 798, and 952.

If your duties include access to classified COMSEC information, in addition to the above, you should avoid travel to any countries which are adversaries of the United States, or to their establishments/facilities within the U.S. Should such travel become necessary, however, your security office must be notified sufficiently in advance so that you may receive a defense security briefing. Any attempt to elicit the classified COMSEC information you have, either through friendship, favors, or coercion must be reported immediately to your security office.

COMSEC ACCESS CERTIFICATION

I understand that as result of performing my duties as Primary/Alternate COMSEC Representative, I am being granted access to United States cryptographic information. I understand that my being granted access to this information involves me in this position of special trust and confidence concerning matters of national security. I hereby acknowledge that I have been briefed concerning my obligations with respect to such access.

I understand that safeguarding United States Cryptographic information is of the utmost importance and that the loss or compromise could cause serious or exceptionally grave damage to the national security of the United States. I understand that I am obligated to protect U. S. cryptographic information and I have been instructed in the special nature of this information and the reasons for the protection of such information. I agree to comply with any special instructions issued by my department or office regarding unofficial foreign travel or contracts with foreign nationals.

I understand fully the information presented in the written briefing I have received. I have read this certificate and my questions if any, have been satisfactorily answered. I understand that, if I willfully disclose to any unauthorized person any of the U. S. cryptographic information to which I might have access, I may be subject to prosecution under the criminal laws of the United States, as appropriate. I understand and accept that unless I am released in writing by an authorized representative of my department or office, the terms of this certificate and my obligation to protect U. S. cryptographic information to which I have access, apply during the time of my access and at all time thereafter.

JCON-TS (JWICS) User Agreement Form

The User Account Application consists of two forms: 1) JCON-TS User Agreement Form and 2) The COMSEC Access Certification Form. Each form consists of pertinent information and a signature block. Please be sure to fully complete, sign, and obtain approval (if necessary). All forms must be completely filled out, originally signed and returned to your component point of contact (POC) before system access will be granted.

Please note that if sections of the forms are not completed they will be returned to the component POC.

JCON-TS (JWICS) User Agreement Form

This check-in brief outlines basic computer or automated information system (AIS) security practices that shall be followed while utilizing DOJ JWICS System workstations processing Top Secret / SCI Information. Users requesting access to the AIS, shall:

1. Read pages 5-7 of this package. Initial the bottom of each page.
2. Fill out, sign, and date the DOJ JWICS User Agreement Form.
3. Have your Supervisor fill out, sign and date his/her section of the DOJ JWICS User Agreement Form.
4. Keep pages 1-3 for your reference.
5. Send the package to the system Information System Security Officer (ISSO) for processing.

Basic User Responsibilities are discussed below. More detailed information is available in the SPOM and individual system SOPs.

USER RESPONSIBILITIES

AIS Security Officials	The Information System Security Manager (ISSO) is responsible for establishing and enforcing AIS security policy for the DOJ JWICS system. The system ISSO implements AIS security policy and procedures on individual workstations. Each user shall know how to contact the security officials for the information system that he/she is authorized to access. The ISSO is Dale Long and he can be reached at 202-353-9856.
Passwords	Every user of a DOJ JWICS system will use a "strong" password of eight ALPHANUMERIC CHARACTERS (combination of numbers and letters). A "strong" password must contain all four types of characters: upper case letter, lower case letter, western Arabic numeric and non-alphanumeric. To prevent passwords from being easily guessed, they shall not be names/numbers that can easily be associated with your person (i.e. well known nicknames, spouse's or close relatives (son, daughter, mother, etc.) name, favorite sports teams, type of car you drive, etc.) nor should they be dictionary words (e.g. "SPIDER" or "OFFICE"). Choose a password that is easy for you to remember but is not easily guessed. Passwords are for individual use only. The sharing of passwords is prohibited as is writing it down in easily accessible places (such as "post-it" notes on your desk or in your organizer file under "P", etc.). Your password is used to authenticate you and only you as a valid user of the system. Protect passwords, when combined with user account names, at the highest classification level of the system to which the passwords allow access. If you feel your password has been compromised or that unauthorized personnel are accessing your files, report it immediately to the system ISSO.
Physical Security	Physical security and environmental controls shall be used to provide an acceptable level of security to all information systems. Physical security can be achieved through basic measures such as challenging strangers/unknown personnel in your workplace or computer area and by never leaving an active terminal unattended. At the end of a session the printer and computer must be shut down and powered off for at least 10 seconds. These are important practices that safeguard against unauthorized use. Individuals providing escort duty are responsible for ensuring the person being escorted does not gain unauthorized access to a DOJ JWICS automated information system. Failure to do so may result in a security incident and adverse action
Individual Account Protection	To ensure individual account and system protection log-off the system each time you leave the workstation. Users are required to logoff when departing for the day. Ensure this is always done! Failure to secure the workstation by logging off is a practice dangerous to security and may result in adverse administrative action.

Processing Restrictions	Information systems connected to the DOJ JWICS LAN can process, store, and transmit information up to a classification level of Top Secret/ SCI. If higher classification is inadvertently processed on the DOJ JWICS LAN, report the incident immediately to the ISSO. The contaminated workstation(s) and servers will be disconnected from the network and sanitized.
Software	Requests to use non-standard DOJ JWICS software, including free and unsolicited demonstration software, shall be submitted to the DOJ JWICS ISSO. Personally owned software, regardless of source, may not be introduced into DOJ JWICS computers.
Modems	The use of modems is prohibited.
Wireless adapters	The use of wireless adapters are prohibited.
Removable Media	All removable magnetic media must bear a label indicating the classification level of information to which the media contains. A color-coded security classification label must be affixed to media. Place the labels in a conspicuous place where they will not adversely affect operation of the equipment. For destruction, return removable media to the system ISSO.
Output	Users will ensure that all output contains proper classification and control markings and is adequately protected, including classified information cover sheets. This includes all messages and correspondence generated on electronic mail systems. Printed Top Secret information that does not leave the restricted area is normally exempt from accountability. See the ISSO with questions regarding printed collateral Top Secret material.
Toner Cartridges	Return used toner cartridges from classified laser printers and secure fax to the system ISSO for recycling or disposal. Generally, used toners from classified systems, that have successfully completed a printing cycle, are considered unclassified.
Copying Files	Users are not authorized to move files between systems with differing classifications unless designated in writing by the ISSO. When a user has a requirement to copy or move files between systems with differing classifications, the user shall contact the system ISSO for assistance. The ISSO has software utilities and procedures to comply with secure copy policy.
Electronic Mail	E-Mail is a DOJ owned communications system used to supplement the record message system. It is subject to the same for official use only constraints as government mail or telephones, and shall be used to conduct Government business only. Users should be aware that administrators and technicians have the ability to review e-mail and disseminate it as necessary. There is no expectation of privacy while using DOJ information systems!
Electronic Equipment	Items generally prohibited in restricted areas include personally owned: photographic, video, audio recording equipment, computers & associated media, and cell phones. Personally owned electronic calculators, electronic spell-checkers, wristwatches, receive only pagers and radios are allowed in a Restricted Area.
Virus/Malicious Programs	Users shall make very effort to prevent the transmission of computer viruses and Trojan horses. Anti-virus software is installed on all DOJ JWICS workstations. Any removable media introduced from outside DOJ shall be inspected by the ISSO prior to being placed into a DOJ JWICS workstation.

Scope of Authorization

Subject to the limitations detailed in the User Responsibilities of this brief and the respective system Standard Operating Procedures (SOP), the user is authorized access to DOJ JWICS information systems classified Top Secret/ SCI as required. This authorization contains no implied authorization to access any computer system of the United States Government not specifically identified herein. This authorization shall be revoked upon separation, retirement, reassignment of duties, change of organization or when determined by the Information Systems Security Officer (ISSO) to be in the best interest of the Government.

WARNING: Only Authorized Users May Use These Systems. Individuals using DOJ computer systems without authority, or in excess of their authority, are subject to having all of their activities on these systems monitored and recorded by system personnel. In the course of monitoring individuals improperly using these systems, or in the course of system maintenance, the activities of authorized users may be monitored. Anyone using these systems expressly consents to such monitoring and is advised that if such monitoring reveals possible evidence of criminal activity, management may authorize system personnel to provide the evidence of such monitoring to law enforcement officials.

This briefing will provide you with a description of the types of COMSEC information you may have access to, the reasons why special safeguards are necessary for protecting this information, the directives and rules, which prescribe those safeguards, and the penalties that you will incur for willful disclosure of this information to unauthorized persons.

COMSEC equipment and keying material are especially sensitive because they are used to protect other sensitive information against unauthorized access during the process of communicating that information from one point to another. Any particular piece of COMSEC equipment, keying material, or other cryptographic material may be the critical element, which protects large amounts of sensitive information from interception, analysis, and exploitation. If the integrity of the COMSEC system is weakened at any point, all the sensitive information protected by that system might be compromised; even more damaging, this loss of sensitive information may never be detected. The procedural safeguards placed on physical security, covering every phase of their existence from creation through disposition, are designed to reduce or eliminate the possibility of such compromise.

Communications Security (COMSEC) is the general term used for all steps taken to protect information of value when it is being communicated. COMSEC is usually considered to have four main components: Transmission security, physical security, emission security, and cryptographic security. Transmission security is that component of COMSEC which is designed to protect transmissions from unauthorized intercept, traffic analysis, imitative deception and disruption. Physical security is that component of COMSEC, which results from all physical measures to safeguard cryptographic materials, information, documents, and equipment from access by unauthorized persons. Emission security is that component of COMSEC which results from all measures taken to prevent compromising emanations from cryptographic equipment or telecommunications systems. Finally, cryptographic security is that component of COMSEC which results from the use of technically sound cryptosystems, and from their proper use. To ensure that telecommunications are secure, all four of these components must be considered.

Part of the physical security protection given to COMSEC equipment and materials is afforded by the special handling it receives from distribution and accounting. There are two separate channels used for handling of such equipment and materials: "COMSEC channels" and "administrative channels". The COMSEC channel, called the COMSEC Material Control System (CMCS) is used to distribute accountable COMSEC items such as keying material, maintenance manuals, and classified and CCI equipment. (EXCEPTION: Some military departments have been authorized to distribute CCI equipment through their standard logistics system.) The CMCS channel is comprised of a series of COMSEC accounts, each of which has an appointed COMSEC Custodian who is personally responsible and accountable for all COMSEC material charged to the account. The COMSEC Custodian assumes responsibility for the material upon receipt, and then controls its dissemination to authorized individuals on a need-to-know basis. The administrative channel is used to distribute COMSEC information and material other than that which is accountable in the CMCS.

Particularly important to the protection of COMSEC equipment and material are an understanding of all security regulations and the timely reporting of any compromise, suspected compromise, or other security problem involving these materials. If a COMSEC system is compromised but the compromise is not reported, the continued use of the system, under the incorrect assumption that it is secure, can result in the loss of all information that was ever protected by that system. If the compromise is reported, steps can be taken to change the system, replace the keying material, etc. to reduce the damage done. In short, it is your individual responsibility to know and to put into practice all the provisions of the appropriate publications, which relate to the protection of the COMSEC equipment and material to which you will have access.

Public disclosure of any COMSEC information is not permitted without the specific approval of your Government contracting office representative or the National Security Agency (NSA). This applies to both classified and unclassified COMSEC information, and means that you may not prepare newspaper articles, speeches, technical papers, or make any other "release" of COMSEC information without the specific Government approval. The best personal policy is to avoid any discussions, which reveal your knowledge of, or access to COMSEC information and thus avoid making yourself of interest to those who would seek the information you possess.

Finally, you must know that should you willfully disclose or give to any unauthorized persons any of the classified or CCI COMSEC equipment, associated keying material, or other classified COMSEC information to which you have access, you will be subjected to prosecution under the criminal laws of the United States. The laws, which apply, are contained in Title 18, United States Code, and sections 641, 793, 794, 798, and 952.

If your duties include access to classified COMSEC information, in addition to the above, you should avoid travel to any countries which are adversaries of the United States, or to their establishments/facilities within the U.S. Should such travel become necessary, however, your security office must be notified sufficiently in advance so that you may receive a defense security briefing. Any attempt to elicit the classified COMSEC information you have, either through friendship, favors, or coercion must be reported immediately to your security office.

COMSEC ACCESS CERTIFICATION

I understand that as result of performing my duties as Primary/Alternate COMSEC Representative, I am being granted access to United States cryptographic information. I understand that my being granted access to this information involves me in this position of special trust and confidence concerning matters of national security. I hereby acknowledge that I have been briefed concerning my obligations with respect to such access.

I understand that safeguarding United States Cryptographic information is of the utmost importance and that the loss or compromise could cause serious or exceptionally grave damage to the national security of the United States. I understand that I am obligated to protect U. S. cryptographic information and I have been instructed in the special nature of this information and the reasons for the protection of such information. I agree to comply with any special instructions issued by my department or office regarding unofficial foreign travel or contracts with foreign nationals.

I understand fully the information presented in the written briefing I have received. I have read this certificate and my questions if any, have been satisfactorily answered. I understand that, if I willfully disclose to any unauthorized person any of the U. S. cryptographic information to which I might have access, I may be subject to prosecution under the criminal laws of the United States, as appropriate. I understand and accept that unless I am released in writing by an authorized representative of my department or office, the terms of this certificate and my obligation to protect U. S. cryptographic information to which I have access, apply during the time of my access and at all time thereafter.

This was extracted from the original email sent in November.

In accordance with the April 8, 2005 memorandum from then DAG James Comey directing Continuity of Government cadre members to attend orientation sessions at the site semiannually, AAG for Administration Dr. Paul Corts has determined that there will be an Emergency Relocation Facility deployed training session on January 26, 2006. If unforeseen events require postponement, the session will take place on February 2, 2006. The session will take place from 10:00 a.m. until 3:00 p.m.. and will include site orientation and training activities utilizing IT/communication systems.

Please provide this office with the names of those cadre members who will participate. We recommend that your office take this opportunity to select cadre members who neither participated in last June's Pinnacle exercise nor have attended an orientation session since Pinnacle. Participants must have JCON-S and JCON-TS accounts and training prior to the training session.

If there are any questions please call 202-616-2288.

Thanks for your time.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3 - The Bush administration notified federal trial judges in Washington that it would soon ask them to dismiss all lawsuits brought by prisoners at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, challenging their detentions, Justice Department officials said Tuesday.

The action means that the administration is moving swiftly to take advantage of an amendment to the military bill that President Bush signed into law last Friday. The amendment strips federal courts from hearing habeas corpus petitions from Guantánamo detainees.

On Tuesday, the Justice Department sent notices to all the federal judges in Washington who have cases involving challenges brought by Guantánamo inmates, informing them of the new amendment. The officials said the department would file formal notices within several days asking the judges to dismiss more than 160 cases involving at least 300 detainees.

If the administration wins its argument it would mean an abrupt end to a wide effort by dozens of lawyers to use the right of habeas corpus in federal courts to challenge the imprisonment of suspected terrorists at Guantánamo as enemy combatants.

The administration had selected Guantánamo as the site for a detention camp for terrorism suspects in the expectation that its actions would not be subject to review by federal courts. But in June 2004, the Supreme Court ruled that the naval base at Guantánamo was not outside the jurisdiction of United States law and that the habeas corpus statute that allows prisoners to challenge their detentions was applicable.

The challenges were brought in various district courts in Washington. After some federal judges disagreed over the meaning of the Supreme Court ruling, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit took up the issue, and during arguments in September, the appeals judges seemed skeptical of the administration's contentions.

In addition to arguing in court, the administration separately pressed its case in Congress and found a strong ally in Senator Lindsey Graham, Republican of South Carolina, who said the challenges brought by Guantánamo inmates were frivolous and were clogging the courts. Mr. Graham, along with Senators Carl Levin, Democrat of Michigan, and Jon Kyl, Republican of Arizona, sponsored the amendment to the Defense Act eliminating habeas corpus jurisdiction in federal courts.

The amendment instead allows the District of Columbia appellate court to review the results of military tribunals at Guantánamo in which the prisoners were found to have been properly deemed imprisoned as enemy combatants.

Administration critics have complained that the tribunals at Guantánamo, in which panels of three officers decide whether a prisoner is an enemy combatant, are unfair in several respects. The prisoners are not represented by lawyers and they often may not see evidence used against them for national security reasons.

Tasia Scolinos, the Justice Department spokeswoman, said the detainees had ample opportunity to be heard.

"We are aware of no other country that has provided their enemies with such extensive legal review during an ongoing conflict," Ms. Scolinos said. "Detainees are entitled to legal review both within the military system and to the highest civilian courts in the country."

The Justice Department requests asking the district judges to dismiss all the habeas corpus petitions are expected to be challenged by lawyers for the detainees, making it likely that the issue will be resolved by the appeals court or the Supreme Court.

Although the courts and Congress are co-equal branches of government, the Constitution allows Congress to define the scope of jurisdiction for all federal courts below the Supreme Court.
