[45] NCRIC told Columbia that the $1 million was to be used for future premium. See SMF2 ¶¶ 36, 157. NCRIC told its auditors and the D.C. Insurance Commissioner a different story, however: that Columbia owed the $1 million as premium. See id. ¶ 36. Columbia understood that NCRIC informed the Commissioner that the deposit would be used as future premium. See id. NCRIC also informed Columbia that it would earn interest on the deposit. Yet, although Columbia continually asked NCRIC to credit it for the interest, NCRIC never did. See id. ¶¶ 101, 157-158, 242.

16d-001298

By contrast, here Columbia did not owe NCRIC money, and did not allow NCRIC to cash the check and take some of the money for itself; rather, NCRIC was to keep the funds as a deposit.

VIII. Columbia's Damages Are Sufficiently Certain to Create an Issue of Fact for the Jury

A. Columbia's Lost Revenue Damage Calculations Are Reasonably Certain

To calculate Columbia's lost revenue damages, its expert, Peter Ben Ezra – who teaches business school courses in management accounting – performed a "lost cash flow" analysis. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 5-6, 231. For this analysis, Mr. Ben Ezra obtained a breakdown of Columbia's actual revenue from patient referrals, sorted by physician. He then compared the revenue streams attributable to the physicians who left the hospital for the year before October 1, 2000 and the year after October 1, 2000, and compared the two numbers. See id. at 5. Then, Mr. Ben Ezra used a textbook "lost cash flow" model to calculate the lost cash flows over time until an estimated year when each physician would have retired, had they stayed at Columbia. See id. at 231-32. This is a well-accepted means of calculating lost cash flow. See id.;[46] Report of Peter Ben Ezra, Expert Witness (1/22/02) (attached to NCRIC Mem. as Exh. 39). This is sufficient to reach a jury. See Garcia v. Llerena, 599 A.2d 1138, 1143 n.9 (D.C. 1991) (lost profits damages "must be based upon evidence which leads to a reasoned conclusion") (internal quotation marks omitted); see, e.g., Tuf Racing Products, Inc. v. American Suzuki Motor Corp., 223 F.3d 585, 591 (7th Cir. 2000) (Posner, J.) (upholding admission of testimony of expert accountant who, based on "financial information furnished by [plaintiff] and assumptions given him by counsel, . . . calculated the discounted present value of the lost future earnings").

B. NCRIC Fundamentally Misunderstands the Expert's Analysis, and Ignores That His Assumptions Are Based on Evidence in the Record

[46] It is undisputed that Mr. Ben Ezra properly performed his calculations based on what he understands to be accurate data, see id. at 230-34 both summarized his conclusions, and showed his calculations, in an extremely detailed report.

16d-001299

Unable to attack his methodology, NCRIC and its "expert," Mary Woodford,[47] attack Mr. Ben Ezra[48] and his assumptions. But none of these criticisms have any merit.

1. The Damages Expert Is Not A Causation Expert, Nor Need He Be

Foremost, NCRIC urges that Mr. Ben Ezra's calculations all are "speculative" because he "assumed" causation. In fact, Mr. Ben Ezra simply leaves proof of causation to Columbia to establish with lay testimony. Once Columbia shows that NCRIC's wrongful conduct caused the NCRIC Group of Doctors to leave or cut back on patients they referred to Columbia (and it has, see supra, pp. __), Mr. Ben Ezra's report will allow the jury to calculate the resulting damages. Since causation is irrelevant to Mr. Ben Ezra's report, NCRIC's criticisms of it fail.

NCRIC offers no basis in law for suggesting that proof of causation by lay testimony and proof of damages by expert testimony is not appropriate in this case. Nor can it. Expert testimony is generally not required if the issue of causation can be "resolved wholly within the realm of ordinary human knowledge and experience," or if "the proof is so obvious as to lie within the ken of the average lay juror." Lasley v. Georgetown Univ., 688 A.2d 1381, 1385 (D.C. 1997). Further, it is well-accepted that lay witness testimony can lay a foundation for the expert's report. See Diversey Corp. v. Chem-Source Corp., 965 P.2d 332, 340 (N.M. Ct. App.)

[47] Despite working at a Big 5 accounting firm, Ms. Woodford apparently has no accounting background. Woodford Decl. Exh 1.

[48] Mr. Ben Ezra is, as NCRIC claims, "not the typical disinterested witness": he is a volunteer officer of Columbia's Board of Directors, see Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 9. Yet it does not follow that he "cannot be considered objective." Mr. Ben Ezra has strived, successfully, to limit his role as an expert by eliminating essentially every element of subjective judgment, to render his calculations unimpeachable. Mr. Ben Ezra declined to enter into more subjective areas of judgment, such as estimating good-faith losses. Further, Mr. Ben Ezra has been sure that his lost cash flow analysis – which, as NCRIC admits, is "little more than adding up the numbers" – has been more conservative, more cautious, and more objective than any disinterested witness would need to be. Every time that he had an opportunity to exercise his judgment between two different numbers, Mr. Ben Ezra choose the value that benefited NCRIC, not Columbia. See id. ¶¶ 10-12, 23, 28 (listing each such decision). As such, any motion to strike on the grounds of lack of objectivity must fail. Compare Conde v. Velsicol Chem. Corp., 804 F. Supp. 972, 984-86 (S.D. Ohio 1992) (allowing testimony of expert damages witness who used objective methodology, despite that he was plaintiff), aff'd, 24 F.3d 809 (6th Cir. 1998).

(rejecting argument that expert's testimony was "based on an assumption, not evidence, that [defendant] caused [plaintiff's] losses," because "it is permissible for non-experts in cases like the instant one to lay the foundation for an expert's testimony") cert. dismissed, 9 P.3d 69 (N.M. 1998). For the claims at issue here, tortious interference and defamation (among others), causation is not outside the "ken" of the average juror: that physicians left the hospital shortly after rumors that the hospital was closing. See SMF2 ¶¶ 217-228. Compare, e.g., Diversity, 965 P.2d at 340-41 (holding that lay witness could properly lay a foundation for damage expert's report in tortious interference case where defendant spread malicious rumors that plaintiff "was going . . . out of business"). Here, the brief time between Dr. Glassman false statements of and the departure of Columbia's Attending Faculty, could lead a reasonable juror to infer that the events were causally related.

Further, NCRIC's so-called expert, Ms. Woodford, offers no learned basis for her opinion that, due to its lack an analysis of causation, Mr. Ben Ezra's method is speculative. (Indeed, Ms. Woodford speculates herself: she posits that Mr. Ben Ezra failed to consider that there are other possibilities for why the physicians departed Columbia, see Woodford Decl. ¶¶ 8-10.) Ms. Woodford also offers no basis for urging that Mr. Ben Ezra should have made an independent inquiry into causation. See id. ¶¶ 9, 20-21. In fact, because Mr. Ben Ezra will offer no opinion regarding causation to the jury, there is no need for an independent inquiry.

While expert testimony is not necessary to prove causation since the reasons that the Attending Faculty left Columbia are fully within the ken of ordinary people and lay witnesses, Mr. Ben Ezra did undertake some independent inquiry to satisfy himself that the physicians he used in his report left due to NCRIC. Specifically, he (1) asked physicians at the hospital to confirm that his list of physicians left because of NCRIC, see Ben Ezra Dep. at 106-08; (2) knew, based on his personal knowledge, that several large groups of physicians left right abruptly after the Retro Plan was not renewed, see id. at 125-26; and (3) determined that the list of physicians he received excluded certain physicians who left during 2001 for other reasons, see id. at 107.

Moreover, by attacking Mr. Ben Ezra's overall figure – $21.5 million – NCRIC ignores the menu of other options offered by his report. For example, the report lists the total amount of lost cash flow, per doctor, for each physician. See Report at 6 (list of physicians with total lost cash flow for each). See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶¶ 18-19. Thus, by using Mr. Ben Ezra's detailed calculations, a jury can calculate the lost cash flows attributable to NCRIC for each individual physician that it concludes NCRIC induced to leave; if it determines that only certain physicians were induced to leave by NCRIC's wrongful conduct, it can eliminate the others from the calculations.

2. The Evidence Supports the Use of 65 As a Retirement Age

NCRIC's purported expert, Ms. Woodford, attacks Mr. Ben Ezra for using age 65 as the end of each physician's period of lost cash flows. Woodford Decl. ¶¶ 17-19. Yet, there is evidence that Attending Faculty with established practices at Columbia have, historically, remained at Columbia, and continued their normal patient practice patterns, until they are 65 or older. See SMF2 ¶¶ 196-197.[49] Because of this Columbia-specific evidence regarding historic physician practices, there is no need for "work life studies," see Woodford Decl. ¶¶ 18-19.[50]

[49] Additionally, this court can take judicial notice of the retirement age for Social Security, and conclude that assuming that age for retirement is reasonable per se.

[50] Even if Department of Labor work life tables are admissible, as Ms. Woodford urges, they are not required – particularly where there is other evidence of retirement age. See, e.g., Brom v. Bozell, Jacobs, Kenyon & Eckhardt, Inc., 867 F.Supp. 686, 691 (N.D. Ill. 1994) (defendant's use of work life table was a matter for the jury).

3. Mr. Ben Ezra's Other Assumptions Are Supported By Evidence

Ms. Woodford's other criticisms of Mr. Ben Ezra's assumptions also fail. First, she is wrong to eschew his use of 30 percent as Columbia's marginal cost, see Woodford Decl. ¶ 23-24. As Mr. Ben Ezra makes clear, thirty percent is a conservative estimate; hospitals have high fixed costs and low marginal costs. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 26; compare Coventry Health Care of Kansas, Inc. v. Via Christi Health System, Inc., 176 F. Supp. 2d 1207, 1224 (D. Kan. 2001) (judge finding that "[g]enerally, 70% of a hospital's costs are viewed as fixed costs"). Further, Mr. Ben Ezra based his marginal cost figure a real-life example from his textbook, and marginal cost does tend to not vary by more than a few percentage points within any given industry. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 29. In addition, Mr. Ben Ezra was unable to review Columbia's cost accounting data because, due to its lack of financial sophistication, it does not have any. See id. ¶ 31. Nor was he required to engage in the onerous task of performing a cost analysis of the hospital simply to perform his report.[51]

4. The Data Shows That The Physicians Left Columbia, Or Substantially Reduced Their Practices

NCRIC and its purported expert also are wrong to suggest that Mr. Ben Ezra simply relied on Columbia's representation that physicians left Columbia. See Woodford Decl. ¶¶ 7, 11. In fact, he performed an independent analysis based on the revenue data he received from Columbia. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 16. If the data suggested that the physician did not leave Columbia or cut down on referring patients – i.e., if the cash flows generated by the physician stayed the same (or even increased) before and after October 1, 2000 – then Mr. Ben Ezra did not perform an analysis for that physician. See id.; Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 16.

[51] Finally, Mr. Ben Ezra was not required to audit the reams of financial data he used to produce his report. Rather, he was entitled to rely on the hospital's financial records, which kept in the regular course of its business, under general ledger control. This is a standard practice in estimating cash flows. Ben Ezra Dep. at 209. Neither NCRIC nor Ms. Woodford offer a legal or learned basis for concluding otherwise. Compare International Adhesive Coating Co., Inc. v. Bolton Emerson Intern., Inc., 851 F.2d 540, 545 (1st Cir. 1988) (accountant testifying as expert witness was not obligated, as a condition of admissibility of his opinion, to present invoices, statements, documents, breakdown or supporting data to support the areas of damages that he testified about). Nor do they offer any factual basis for suggesting that Columbia's data is faulty.

Ms. Woodford also is wrong to suggest that, by taking physicians who increased their admissions out of his model, Mr. Ben Ezra excised some mitigating cash flow streams in his analysis. See Woodford Decl. ¶ 11. In fact, these damages are not "mitigating." The hospital already had excess capacity, and the physicians who increased their referrals already practiced at Columbia. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 16. Thus these physicians could have increased their patient regardless of whether the other physicians left.

Also contrary to Ms. Woodford's assertion, Woodford Decl. ¶¶ 12-14, Mr. Ben Ezra did check to determine whether either of the years used in his analysis were extraordinary. They were not.[52] See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶¶ 32-33 . Further, Mr. Ben Ezra relied on the best available data he had available in performing his report. See id. ¶ 31. And, since he was already familiar with Columbia's financial statements, there was no need for him to re-review them. See id. ¶ 32.

5. The Opinion of NCRIC's "Expert" Is Not Proper Expert Testimony, Should Be Ignored, and Is Subject to a Motion to Strike

Ms. Woodford's declaration is not "expert" testimony. None of her analysis requires any expertise beyond the ken of an average juror. Indeed, much of it is simply relays basic factual information about the supposed failings of Mr. Ben Ezra's report.

Further, Ms. Woodford frequently engages in blatant speculation, none of which requires any expertise. See Woodford Decl. ¶ 10. ("I understand most if not all of the departed doctors joined [other hospitals]. It is possible that either hospital may have been competing for CHW doctors. . . . Doctors may have been concerned about the long-term viability of CHW."); id. ¶ 20 ("doctors may leave CHW in the future for a reason other than one related to NCRIC. . . . either Sibley or GW hospital may recruit doctors. Patients may demand to have their birth at Sibley. Doctors may be interested in the brand new medical office being built at GW."), see id. ¶ 9 (urging that, due to his association with the hospital, Mr. Ben Ezra "could have asked any of all doctors why they left" not without any basis for stating that doctors who left the hospital would explain why to someone associated with the hospital). Since Mr. Ben Ezra is not a causation witness, most of Ms. Woodford's speculative statements are entirely irrelevant to his report. As such, Ms. Woodford's report would be of little benefit to the jury. See Scott v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 789 F.2d 1052, 1055 (4th Cir. 1986) (expert testimony is inadmissible "as to a matter which obviously is within the common knowledge of jurors because such testimony, almost by definition, can be of no assistance"); accord Zimmer v. Miller Trucking Co., 743 F.2d 601, 604 (8th Cir. 1984).

C. Columbia's Proof of Lost Fundraising Activities and Lost Financing Opportunities Is Reasonably Certain

Finally, there is sufficient evidence of damages, even absent Mr. Ben Ezra's lost cash flow analysis, to allow Columbia to proceed on all of its claims. There was simply no need for an expert to establish the facts to support two additional categories of damages.[53]

[53] Columbia listed four categories of damages in its Rule 26(b)(4) report which Mr. Ben Ezra did not analyze. For two of these categories, lost financing opportunities and lost fundraising opportunities, there is sufficient lay witness testimony in the record to establish that Columbia's damages are reasonable. See SMF2 ¶¶ 229-239 (citing Wilson Dep. at 260-65; Deposition of Safa Rifka, M.D., Jr. at 77-81 (June 21, 2001) ("Rifka Dep. I"). Further, there is no support for NCRIC's assertion that, by listing them as expected subjects of expert witness testimony, Columbia "recognized" that these damage categories were "beyond the testimony of lay witnesses." NCRIC Mem. at 43 n.22. NCRIC cites no legal authority to suggest that submission of an expert report on damages forecloses lay witnesses testimony on the subject. Expert testimony is not required simply because it may be of assistance. See Jones v. Fleetwood Motor Homes, 127 F. Supp. 2d 958, 964 (N.D. Ill. 2000) (while it might be of assistance, expert testimony was not required.)

For example, Columbia it lost the opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser, budgeted to garner over $1.5 million in contributions, due to NCRIC's defamation and tortious interference. This gala, scheduled for May 2001 was canceled abruptly in Summer/Fall 2000 by Columbia's volunteer fundraising board, because the pervasive rumors that the hospital was going to close made it essentially impossible to raise contributions. See SMF2 ¶ 231.

In addition, Columbia became ineligible for a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan, which it was reasonably assured of obtaining in light of HUD's support for its candidacy. However, after the Attending Faculty left in Summer/Fall 2000, Columbia's volume and revenues dropped sharply. As a result, HUD advised Columbia that it no longer qualified for the loan. See id. ¶ 237. Denial of this loan meant losing the opportunity to reduce the hospital's cost of capital 10.5% to 4.5% per month. See id. ¶¶ 235-238.

IX. Summary Judgment on NCRIC's Contract Claim Is Appropriate – Against NCRIC

NCRIC's contract claim fails to take into account the oral agreement that it admits governs the parties. Further, NCRIC applies several multipliers improperly when it performs Reconciliations. See Columbia SJ Mem. at 9-10 (oral agreement), 12-13 (failure to produce 2001 Reconciliation), 13-16 (improper application of multipliers). Accordingly, NCRIC owes

Columbia money under the Retro Plan, not vice-versa. As such, Columbia did not breach the Retro Plan, and summary judgment for NCRIC on liability is improper.[54]

It is undisputed that the Retro Plan is unambiguous, and that this Court may interpret it as a matter of law. Accordingly, this Court may review the Retro Plan, determine what the proper terms are, and enter judgment as a matter of law on the contract claim. As explained above, whether the Plan is interpreted with or without the oral agreement, NCRIC owes Columbia substantial Return Premium. See supra, pp. ____. Summary judgment against NCRIC on its contract claim, and for Columbia on its contract claim, is therefore appropriate.

[54] In addition, even if NCRIC had correctly interpreted the Retro Plan, summary judgment for NCRIC would be inappropriate at this time. While Columbia sought documents regarding the calculation of the Subject Premium, many months ago, NCRIC has failed to provide Columbia with these documents to date. Both of these values are necessary for NCRIC to calculate the Subject Premium for each Experience Period; without these figures, there is no way for Columbia to know whether NCRIC's Subject Premium numbers are accurate. And, since Subject Premium is the number from which all other premium amounts are derived, Columbia's inability to audit NCRIC's Subject Premium means that it cannot properly audit whether it owes Additional or Return Premium. In light of NCRIC's failure to produce its Subject Premium calculations and the underlying data necessary to check them – data that NCRIC must have in its possession to calculate the Subject Premium – this Court should not grant summary judgment for NCRIC. The parties are still engaged in negotiations concerning whether NCRIC will produce this data, and Columbia has not moved to compel to date in hopes that NCRIC will produce the requested data. However, if NCRIC fails to produce the information sufficiently in advance of trial, Columbia will request permission to move to compel and/or will make a motion in limine to exclude all evidence of Subject Premium.

16d-001307

Conclusion

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reasons, NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment should be denied in its entirety.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
CIVIL DIVISION

NCRIC, INC.,
Plaintiff,	Civil Action No. 00-0007308 Calendar #8
v.	Judge Blackburne-Rigsby
COLUMBIA HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN MEDICAL CENTER, INC.,	Next Event: Reply Brief in Support of Summary Judgment Motions – March 28, 2002
Defendant.

PLAINTIFF NCRIC'S REPLY BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF ITS MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure 12-I(e) and 56, as well as this Court's Order of March 4, 2002, plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") submits this Reply Brief in Support of its Motion for Summary Judgment filed against defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") in the above captioned case.

I. INTRODUCTION

In an effort to stave off dismissal of legally deficient and factually unsupported claims, Columbia's submits an opposition to NCRIC's summary judgment motion filled with inadmissible hearsay, declarations contradicting sworn deposition testimony, inaccurate legal arguments, and factual assertions without proper foundation. In so doing, Columbia attempts to use the sheer volume and bulk of its papers to play fast and loose with the facts and applicable law. Columbia apparently hopes this Court will not undertake a comprehensive and complete review of the facts and law. NCRIC invites this Court to do so.

In addition to failing to prove any credible improper motive for NCRIC's actions, Columbia's lengthy missive is devoid of any careful analysis of the required legal elements of its claims. Columbia paints with a broad brush in an effort to convince this Court that its counterclaims survive scrutiny. Columbia lacks evidence from any physician that he or she chose to leave Columbia because of NCRIC. Columbia also lacks (or has claimed privilege to protect disclosure of) admissible evidence to establish any of its damage claims.

When it suits Columbia, the hospital describes itself an entity lacking in sophistication and/or business records. See, e.g., Columbia Opp.[1] at 56 ("Mr. Ben Ezra was unable to review Columbia's cost accounting data because, due to its lack of financial sophistication, it does not have any."). Nevertheless, in an effort to invent damages, Columbia proudly brandishes, and relies entirely, upon charts created by its counsel solely for this litigation. See Exs. 11-14 to Columbia Memo; Ex. 32 to Columbia Opp. While Columbia's Chairman of the Board previously refused to sign his report calculating damages because he could not authenticate the figures (see Ben Ezra Dep. at 46-47, attached as Ex. AA), he now submits a sworn declaration under penalty of perjury attesting to his $21 million number. See Ex. 3 to Columbia Opp. Such "evidence" of damages is wholly speculative and unreliable.

Noticeably absent from Columbia's papers is any response to the fundamental issue described by NCRIC in its motion for summary judgment: as a professional liability insurance company, NCRIC has no stake, financial or otherwise, in where a physician practices medicine

[1] The prior briefings and exhibits filed by the parties will be referenced herein as follows: NCRIC's Memorandum in Support of its Motion for Summary Judgment filed February 7, 2002 ("NCRIC Memo), Columbia's Memorandum in Support of its Motion for Summary Judgment filed February 7, 2002 ("Columbia Memo"), NCRIC's Opposition to Columbia's Motion filed February 28, 2001 ("NCRIC Opp."), Columbia's Opposition to NCRIC's Motion filed March 7, 2002 ("Columbia Opp.").

and admits patients. See Fargis Decl. ¶ 6, attached as Ex. 2 to NCRIC's Memo. Even if the Retrospective Rating Plan ("Retro Plan") at Columbia had ended in a previous year, physicians would not have been left without coverage – only the discount to be paid by the hospital would have changed. Columbia's groundless accusations of bad faith and tortious conduct are merely an attempt to shield Columbia from liability for its refusal to pay premiums in breach of the Retro Plan.

II. COLUMBIA'S FINANCIAL CONDITION HAS BEEN POOR FOR YEARS

Columbia admits, as it must, that the financial picture at the hospital has been bleak and deteriorating for many years. Columbia's Chairman of the Board (and its sole designated expert witness), Peter Ben Ezra, testified that from at least 1990 to the present, Columbia has lost money each and every year. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 62, 75. When asked to describe Columbia's financial performance over the past decade, Mr. Ben Ezra testified that Columbia is "in trouble." See id. at 75-76. He stated that Columbia's liquidity was "poor." See id. at 77. Columbia went through bankruptcy in the late 1990's and, even today, is not in a good position to survive. See id. at 38-39, 79. According to Mr. Ben Ezra, Columbia's auditors will not give the hospital a clean opinion because the accountants have a concern (shared by Mr. Ben Ezra) whether Columbia can continue to exist as a going concern. See id. at 80. Columbia's Chairman further testified that the hospital has been able to stay in operation for the past six years mostly through the sale of its assets. See id. at 80. Mr. Ben Ezra even admitted that OB/GYN services – Columbia's specialty – are a loss leader for hospitals in the District of Columbia and that there are an overabundance of hospital beds in D.C. See id. at 56, 74-75, 78.

It is in this desperate financial environment that Columbia seeks to hold NCRIC responsible for seemingly all of its troubles.

III. THE ALLEGED 2000 STATEMENTS CANNOT SUPPORT A DEFAMATION OR INJURIOUS FALSEHOOD CLAIM

Columbia attempts to distract the Court from the key issues regarding its defamation and injurious falsehood claims by citing to evidence in the record that is wholly irrelevant to the issues, entirely speculative, or so riddled with hearsay that it cannot be considered for purposes of summary judgment. Stripped of these diversions, Columbia is faced with the following facts that cannot be disputed: (1) certain alleged statements were never published; (2) some statements were true; (3) there is no evidence that NCRIC made any of the alleged statements, let alone with actual malice; and (4) there is no evidence that any of the alleged statements harmed Columbia.[2] For these reasons, Columbia's defamation and injurious falsehood claims fail as a matter of law.

A. There is no Evidence That Some of the Statements Were Even Published

Columbia pins its injurious falsehood and defamation claims arising from the statements allegedly made in 2000 almost entirely by a single Columbia physician, Dr. Leonard Glassman ("Dr. Glassman"), who allegedly uttered the statements – not at a NCRIC meeting, not on NCRIC's premises, not in conjunction with any NCRIC presentation – but in Columbia's cafeteria and Columbia's Radiology Department.[3] Specifically, Columbia claims that Dr. Glassman stated that:

[2] Columbia has failed to set forth any evidence demonstrating that it suffered harm based on the alleged defamatory and disparaging statements. The absence of harm resulting from Columbia's defamation, injurious falsehood and tortious interference claims are addressed together at pp. 36-40 below.

[3] Columbia argues that whether Dr. Glassman spoke in his capacity as a NCRIC or Columbia representative is a disputed issue of material fact which cannot be resolved on summary judgment. As discussed below, this issue is not material because, regardless of the capacity in which Dr. Glassman allegedly spoke, the statements are, as a matter of law, neither defamatory nor disparaging. In addition, Columbia is entitled to only reasonable inferences as the non-moving party, and based on the manner and location of where Dr. Glassman allegedly uttered the statements, the sole inference is that he was speaking in his capacity as a Columbia physician. See NCRIC Memo at 14 n.6.

> (1) the Entity Policy had expired; (2) Columbia physicians were not covered for work in the clinic; (3) Columbia's self-insurance trust was insufficiently funded; and (4) Columbia was going to cease operations.

See Countercl. ¶ 89; Columbia Opp. at 29-30. Columbia still fails to identify a single individual who heard any of the first three alleged statements. See NCRIC Memo at 13-14. Therefore, to the extent Columbia's defamation and injurious falsehood claims rely on those statements, they must be dismissed. Both defamation and injurious falsehood require publication, and simply stated, conclusory allegations that the statements were published to various unnamed individuals is insufficient to defeat summary judgment.[4] See Howard Univ. v. Best, 484 A.2d 958 (D.C. 1984) (summary judgment proper where evidence failed to identify anyone who received or circulated the report containing the allegedly defamatory statements); Ridgewells Caterer, Inc. v. Nelson, 688 F. Supp. 760, 763 (D.D.C. 1988) (complaint dismissed for failing to identify to whom the statements were communicated); Pinkney v District of Columbia, 439 F. Supp. 519 (D.D.C. 1977) (publication requires statement to third person).

Columbia does, however, attempt to resurrect its defamation and injurious falsehood claims to the extent they rely on Dr. Glassman's alleged statement that Columbia was going to close. For the first time, Columbia puts forth the declarations of various (previously unnamed and undisclosed to NCRIC) Columbia physicians who allegedly "overheard" Dr. Glassman say that Columbia was about to close. Columbia has submitted the declarations of Dr. Jerome O'Connell, Ms. Renee Perkins and Ms. Elizabeth Jackson (Exs. 5, 7, and 8 to Columbia Opp.), none of whom were previously identified in Columbia's discovery responses as having [4] Columbia consistently attempts to distract the Court from the key issues in this case. Its brief cites to its Statement of Material Facts, which, in turn, cites to various deposition excerpts – which either do not support the proposition set forth or are replete with speculation and hearsay – which, as discussed below, does not create a material issue of disputed fact.

knowledge of the matters alleged in the Complaint, or identified in Columbia's Initial List of Fact Witnesses for Trial. See Ex. BB (Columbia's interrogatory responses) & Ex. CC (Columbia's witness list) attached. Accordingly, those declarations should be disregarded in their entirety. The Court's consideration of these statements would prejudice NCRIC because it did not have the opportunity to depose, or otherwise seek discoverable information of the only individuals Columbia now claims to have heard the allegedly defamatory and/or disparaging statements.

Even if the Court chooses to consider the declarations, they do not save Columbia's claims. Both Ms. Perkins and Ms. Jackson are careful to state that they simply "overheard" Dr. Glassman talking to or about unnamed individuals. See Exs. 5, 8 to Columbia Opp. The fact that these individuals happened to hear Dr. Glassman make the alleged statements while he was engaged in private conversations does not translate into a defamation claim.[5] See American Continental Ins. Co. v. Pooya, 666 A.2d 1193 (D.C. 1995); see, e.g., Petersen v. Dacy, 550 N.W.2d 91, 94 (S.D. 1996) ("remarks allegedly . . . overheard by various customers at the store" insufficient to support defamation claim); Allstate Ins. Co. v. LaPore, 762 F. Supp. 268, 271 (N.D. Cal. 1991) (Because defamation "requires proof that the defendant intended to publish the defamatory statement . . .[t]he very nature of defamation precludes the conclusion that it can occur 'accidentally'").

Furthermore, Dr. O'Connell's sworn statement, that he overheard Dr. Glassman allegedly tell a Dr. Gideon Kioko (another previously unnamed Columbia witness) that Columbia was going to close, does not save this claim from dismissal. See Ex. 7 to Columbia Opp. Despite producing volumes of additional information in opposition to NCRIC's Motion for Summary

[5] To the extent Columbia asserts that the statements were published to those individuals to which Dr. Glassman was allegedly speaking, Columbia's claims still fail because, as discussed above, the failure to identify those individuals is fatal to its claims. See p. 5 above.

Judgment, Columbia does not produce any sworn statement from Dr. Kioko himself. It is well-established that only admissible evidence is allowed in support or opposition to summary judgment. See Super. Ct. R. Civ. P. 56(e) (requiring parties to set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence). Dr. O'Connell's affidavit is nothing more than rank hearsay which cannot be considered at summary judgment. See Albert v. Loksen, 239 F.3d 256, 266-67 (2d Cir. 2001) (granting summary judgment on defamation claim where only evidence that statements were made were hearsay); Barber v. Daly, 586 N.Y.S.2d 398, 400 (App. Div. 1992) (plaintiff's "assertion that [two other individuals] 'personally told' him of slanderous statements made by defendant is mere hearsay and insufficient to raise a triable issue of fact").

Finally, Columbia makes a passing reference in its opposition to various individuals "affiliated" with NCRIC (Mr. Osborn, Mr. Hempelman and Dr. Roberts) who Columbia alleges also defamed and/or disparaged Columbia. See Columbia Opp. at 30 n.20. However, the deposition testimony Columbia cites in support of its position does not even address each statement alleged to have been made. See id; Statement of Material Facts submitted with Columbia's opposition ("Columbia Opp. SMF") ¶¶ 169-173. As with the alleged statements by Dr. Glassman, Columbia does not specifically identify who made the alleged statements. Again, the only evidence that any statements were even made is inadmissible hearsay which cannot be considered at summary judgment. See, e.g., Gasser Dep. at 94, attached as Ex. 48 to NCRIC Memo (stating that Drs. Johnson and Koch told him that it was their understanding that they were not covered for care in the ambulatory clinic). In fact, Columbia's assertion that "a representative of NCRIC's Policyholder Services Department (e.g., Mr. Osborn or Mr. Hempelman) informed . . . Dr. Heather Johnson, [among other things that] Columbia's self insurance trust fund was insufficiently funded" is simply wrong. See Columbia's SMF ¶ 173. Mr.

Hempelman was clear in his testimony that he was not aware of any person from NCRIC making any of the alleged statements to Dr. Johnson or anyone. See Hempelman Dep. at 129-30, 135, 139-40, attached as Ex. DD. Indeed, Mr. Gasser himself testified that neither Dr. Johnson, nor anyone else, stated that NCRIC told them Columbia's self insurance trust fund was underfunded. See Gasser Dep. at 111-12 ("I didn't mean to imply that NCRIC had said that. I had not heard that NCRIC had said that.").

B. Columbia Admits the Truth, or Substantial Truth, of Certain Statements

Even if Columbia can overcome the hurdle of publication, its claims still fail because the alleged 2000 statements were true. Columbia flat out admits that the self-insurance trust was insufficiently funded, and, therefore, that statement cannot give rise to a claim of defamation or injurious falsehood. See Columbia Opp. at 35 ("Columbia could not . . . fund the trust to the actuarially recommended level"); NCRIC Memo at 17. Columbia's newly revised assertion that it had committed to pay claims out of its operating expenses does not alter the truth of the alleged statement at the time it was made.

Additionally, the Court must reject Columbia's argument that any statement made by Dr. Glassman on September 1, 2000 that the Entity Policy had expired and that the Columbia physicians were not covered for care in the clinic was false because those events did not take place for a few weeks after the statements were allegedly made. "[W]ith regard to establishing falsity, slight inaccuracies in an allegedly defamatory statement must be tolerated." Pearce v. E.F. Hutton Group, Inc., 664 F. Supp. 1490, 1511 (D.D.C. 1987). "The key is that the 'gist' or 'sting' of the statement cannot be justified." Id. (citation omitted). Columbia's entire argument that both of these statements are defamatory hinges on nothing more than a minor timing difference. As a matter of law, any statements regarding the expiration of the Entity Policy and coverage in the clinic were "substantially true" (particularly given that Columbia cannot even identify a single individual who even heard the statements).[6] As the D.C. District Court noted, "summary judgment 'is often granted to defendants on the issue of substantial truth.'" Id. (citation omitted). Because these alleged statements were substantially true, summary judgment in favor of NCRIC is proper.

IV. THE FALL 1998 STATEMENTS DID NOT DISPARAGE COLUMBIA

Columbia next argues that the following statements, allegedly made in the fall of 1998, somehow disparaged Columbia despite the fact that they simply did not "concern" Columbia:

> (1) that MIIX would not remain in the District of Columbia insurance market; (2) that MIIX would not stand by its guarantee not to raise premiums for two years; (3) that MIIX was an unreliable insurance company; (4) that MIIX planned to raise premiums once it cornered the District of Columbia MMLI market; (5) that the MIIX proposal was cronyism which would benefit members of [Columbia Board as opposed to] Attending Faculty; (6) that [Columbia] had lied to the Attending Faculty by stating that it could not afford to continue the Plan; and (7) that the lawyers with whom NCRIC contracted to defend physicians against medical malpractice claims would not work with MIIX.

See Countercl. ¶ 69. In an attempt to avoid the obvious, Columbia argues that these alleged statements, which strictly concerned MIIX (another professional medical liability insurance company), disparaged Columbia because,"[b]y disparaging the brand of insurance that Columbia has proposed to provide in its insurance program with the Attending Faculty, NCRIC disparaged a service provided by Columbia." See Columbia Opp. at 36. Columbia leaps too far, and cites no case which has stretched the tort beyond its logical boundaries as Columbia would have this Court do.

[6] Columbia also asserts that the statement that the Entity Policy "expired" was false because it was actually "terminated." Again, the alleged statement is not actionable because it was substantially true.

Indeed, Columbia's argument, taken to its logical extreme, would support a finding that every entity could maintain a defamation claim by its mere association, however tenuous, with another entity which is allegedly defamed or disparaged. See Columbia Opp. at 36 n.29 (providing example that "disparaging the brand of radiology equipment at Columbia" would disparage Columbia). Columbia would have this Court hold that the hospital could maintain a defamation action based on a statement, for example, that "Breyer's ice cream is not natural" simply because Columbia served that brand of ice cream in its cafeteria. Columbia's argument that the statements regarding MIIX disparaged Columbia is nothing more than an effort to obscure the obvious: the alleged statements do not concern NCRIC and Columbia has no injurious falsehood claim. See NCRIC Memo at 15-16.[7]

Even if the alleged 1998 statements can somehow be considered to "concern" Columbia, they are still not actionable because they are opinions. Injurious falsehood requires publication of a false statement, and opinions are not actionable because their truth or falsity cannot be determined. See Art Metal-U.S.A., Inc. v. United States, 244 U.S. App. D.C. 1, 5 n.6, 753 F.2d 1151, 1155 n.6 (D.C. Cir. 1985) (injurious falsehood requires publication of a false statement); Rizzuto v. Nexxus Prods. Co., 641 F. Supp. 473, 481 (S.D.N.Y.) (holding that statements of opinion were not actionable in injurious falsehood case), aff'd, 810 F.2d 1161 (2d Cir. 1986). Given that NCRIC's statements were made in an attempt to convey the benefits of [7] The only statements which could conceivably "concern" Columbia are the alleged statements to physicians that (1) the MIIX proposal was "cronyism" which would benefit members of Columbia's Board; and (2) that Columbia lied about its ability to afford to continue the Plan. See Countercl. ¶ 69(5)-(6). As discussed in NCRIC's prior brief, the minimal evidence concerning these statements could only support a finding that, even if spoken, the statements were directed at Dr. Asterbadi and Dr. Rifka in their individual capacities. See NCRIC Memo at 16. Rifka Dep. II at 149-54, attached as Ex. 51 to NCRIC Memo; Asterbadi Dep. at 55, 61, 92-93, attached as Ex. 40 to NCRIC Memo. "Defamation is personal . . . [and] [a]llegations of defamation by an organization or group and its members are not interchangeable." Alexis v. District of Columbia, 77 F. Supp. 2d 35, 40 (D.D.C. 1999). The same is true for injurious falsehood. Columbia does not does not argue otherwise; and accordingly, there can be no disparagement or defamation based on these alleged statements which were not even directed at Columbia.

NCRIC over MIIX, the only reasonable inference is that the alleged statements were strictly NCRIC's opinions which cannot, as a matter of law, support a basis for an injurious falsehood claim.[8]

Finally, the alleged 1998 statements are not actionable because they are privileged communications. In its opposition, Columbia does not dispute that disparagement is permitted on the "basis of mere business competition." See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 649 & cmt. B; NCRIC Memo at 15-16 n.9. Columbia argues, however, that the competitors' privilege is not applicable because the alleged statements were false. See Columbia Opp. at 36. Columbia does not explain which statements were false or how any of the statements can be considered false. Indeed, as discussed above, the alleged statements cannot be false because they constitute opinions. See, e.g., Countercl. ¶ 69 ("MIIX was an unreliable insurance company"). Columbia's claim for injurious falsehood must be dismissed.

V. BECAUSE COLUMBIA IS EITHER A GENERAL OR LIMITED PURPOSE FIGURE, IT MUST PROVE THAT NCRIC MADE THE ALLEGED STATEMENTS WITH ACTUAL MALICE BY CLEAR AND CONVINCING EVIDENCE

Casting aside the testimony of its own witnesses indicating the notoriety Columbia enjoys, Columbia attempts to escape classification as a general public figure because it is not "very, very famous." See Columbia Opp. at 39 n.33. However, as Columbia acknowledges, a corporation is considered a public figure if its notoriety is established within the "community"– the area where the alleged defamation took place. See Waldbaum v. Fairchild Publ'ns, Inc., 201 U.S. App. D.C. 301, 309 n.22, 627 F.2d 1287, 1295 n.22 (D.C. Cir. 1980). Columbia's involvement in the community within which it operates and within which the alleged statements occurred is pervasive. As Columbia concedes, it is an "historic non-profit hospital" and leader in obstetrics, gynecology and various sub-specialties. See Columbia Opp. at 38, 40 n.35; Columbia Opp. SMF ¶ 70. Columbia is wrong that it must be "'famous' to the average person, like General Motors . . . ." See Columbia Opp. at 38. "[N]ationwide fame is not required." Waldbaum, 201 U.S. App. D.C. at 309 n.22, 627 F.2d at 1296 n.22; see also Martin Marietta Corp. v. Evening Star Newspaper Co., 417 F. Supp. 947 (D.D.C. 1976) (publicly held corporation characterized as public figure even though the corporation may not be "household word" like General Motors).

[8] Columbia contends that this Court is barred from holding that NCRIC's statements were protected by the "law of the case" doctrine. See Columbia Opp. at 32 n.23. However, as argued below, the law of the case doctrine does not preclude consideration of an issue on summary judgment simply because such an argument was raised at the motion to dismiss stage. See footnote 20 below.

Alternatively, Columbia has failed to establish that even if it is not a general public figure, it certainly has assumed the role of a limited public figure. See NCRIC Memo at 19 n.11. Columbia correctly acknowledges that in order to qualify as a limited public figure, there must be a public controversy where persons beyond the immediate participants are impacted. See Columbia Opp. at 39. Columbia's own allegations demonstrate the requisite impact. Indeed, Columbia claims that the alleged statements harmed the Columbia physicians and patients who would have otherwise received care at Columbia. It is disingenuous for Columbia to argue that only the participants in the negotiations would have been impacted when, at the same time, it claims far reaching consequences of NCRIC allegedly defamatory statements. See National Life Insurance Co. v. Phillips Publishing, Inc., 793 F. Supp. 627, 637 (D. Md. 1992) (rejecting efforts of plaintiff to redefine controversy as a strictly private dispute).

Columbia criticizes NCRIC for characterizing the public controversy as whether Columbia physicians were covered by malpractice insurance, and instead, offers that the public controversy was whether a "historic non-profit hospital would close its doors." See Columbia Opp. at 40 n.35. In either event, the result is the same. Columbia cannot credibly argue that the possible closing of its doors would not have interested or affected individuals within the community. To the contrary, the closing of one of the self-proclaimed leading womens' hospital would certainly be an issue that ordinary people in the community would discuss. Indeed, Columbia's financial well-being has been the subject of multiple newspaper articles in the general media. See, e.g., Ex. 11 to NCRIC Memo. The case of Lakeshore Community Hosp., Inc. v. Perry, 538 N.W.2d 24 (Mich. Ct. App. 1995) (which Columbia summarily dismisses) is factually indistinguishable. There, the Court held that a hospital is "public figure" where it "assumed the role of being a prominent and critical component of the health care delivery system in the community." Id. at 28. The same result applies here.

A. Even if NCRIC's Statements are Characterized as Commercial Speech, Columbia Must Still Prove Actual Malice

Columbia maintains that whether it is classified as a general or limited figure is irrelevant because the alleged statements constitute "commercial speech," and therefore, it need not prove that NCRIC acted with actual malice. See Columbia Opp. at 36-37. Even if Columbia is able to conveniently lump all 11 alleged statements together and classify them as commercial speech, the actual malice standard still applies and, giving Columbia the benefit of all reasonable inferences as is required when deciding a summary judgment motion, there is still no evidence that NCRIC acted with that requisite degree of fault.

While neither the Supreme Court or the D.C. Court of Appeals has addressed whether the actual malice standard applies to commercial speech, other courts have held that a finding of commercial speech does not negate plaintiff's requirement to prove actual malice. Indeed, Columbia's selective citing of both National Life, 793 F. Supp. at 645-48 and Q-Tone Broadcasting Co. v. MusicRadio of Maryland, Inc., No. Civ. A. 93C-09-021-WTQ, 1995 WL 875438 (Del. Super. Ct. Dec. 22, 1995), obscures the fact that both courts rejected the argument that actual malice need not be proven when the alleged statements constitute commercial speech.

The reasoning of the Maryland court in National Life should be adopted here. See Linkins v. Protestant Episcopal Cathedral Found. of the District of Columbia, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 351, 354, 187 F.2d 357, 360 (D.C. Cir. 1950) ("the common law of Maryland, is the fundamental part of the law in this jurisdiction to which we look in the absence of statutory enactment") (footnote omitted). Like Columbia, the plaintiff in National Life simplistically argued that "because commercial statements receive less First Amendment protection, a defendant's conduct and statements are automatically judged against a negligence standard, and not the traditional malice standard, that is applied when plaintiff is a public figure." 793 F. Supp. at 645. The court disagreed, recognizing that the Supreme Court has articulated two distinct lines of cases addressing First Amendment jurisprudence: one strain involves defamation law and the other involves government regulation of commercial speech. Courts generally do not mix issues of a defamation action involving a public figure with issues of whether a particular expression was properly characterized as commercial speech. National Life, 793 F. Supp. at 645-46 ("In using the mere identification of commercial speech as the analytical tool, Plaintiff operates with a meat clever instead of a scalpel, and would amputate much of the core of protected speech from the body of the First Amendment; and all of this would be done in the name of protecting its own good name and reputation.").[9] Accordingly, Columbia must still prove actual malice, by clear and convincing clarity, regardless of whether the alleged statements constitute commercial speech.

[9] Columbia cites to the case of U.S. Healthcare, Inc. v. Blue Cross of Greater Philadelphia, 898 F.2d 914, 932-39 (3d Cir. 1990) for the proposition that actual malice need not be proved if commercial speech is involved. Apart from the obvious difficulty in reconciling that Court's determination that insurance giants, Blue Cross/Blue Shield and U.S. Healthcare were private figures (which even Columbia must admit does not comport with its own analysis of the law), that decision has also been criticized for its apparent ruling that the malice standard did not apply

B. There is No Evidence of Actual Malice

Columbia argues that "direct" evidence that NCRIC knew the alleged statements were false or acted in disregard for their truth exists, yet does not point to any of this "direct" evidence. Rather, Columbia argues that this Court should find that NCRIC knew the statements were false simply because Columbia says so. This does not satisfy Columbia's heavy burden to defeat dismissal of this claim. Proof of defamation and falsity alone affords an insufficient basis for recovery. Nader v. de Toledano, 408 A.2d 31, 40 (D.C. 1979); see Phillips v. Washington Magazine, Inc., 472 A.2d 98 (Md. 1984) (plaintiff in a defamation case must do more than allege mere bald assertions of actual malice). As discussed previously, the evidence overwhelming supports a finding that a majority of the alleged statements were true, or simply opinions whose truth or falsity cannot be determined. See pp. 8-11 above.

Indeed, even if any of the alleged statements can somehow be considered false, Columbia has not pointed to any evidence that would demonstrate, with convincing clarity, that NCRIC was aware of a "high probability" of the falsity of the alleged statements. See Braden v. News World Comm., Inc., No. CA-10689'89, 1991 WL 161497, at *13 (D.C. Super. Ct. Mar. 1, 1991) (citations omitted). "[T]he pertinent inquiry is not how others perceived defendants' conduct; rather, it is how defendants perceived their own acts." Braden v. News World Comm., Inc., No. CA-10689'89, 1993 WL 625508, at *10 (D.C. Super. Ct. Sept. 3, 1993). In fact, Columbia's own examples[10] demonstrate precisely why it cannot meet its burden. Columbia because the communication was commercial speech. The U.S Healthcare opinion "seems to . . . be an unhelpful and confusing mixture of defamation law and commercial speech." Q-Tone, 1995 WL 875438, at *10; accord National Life, 793 F. Supp. at 647 (recognizing that applying the Central Hudson commercial speech test to defamation cases "underscores an inherent difficulty when these two lines of analysis are conflated").

[10] Columbia does not address each of the statements, explaining how NCRIC acted with actual malice in making them. Rather, Columbia selects various examples and, based on this, summarily concludes that there is "direct asserts that NCRIC acted with actual malice when it allegedly said that MIIX was "unreliable," because NCRIC knew of MIIX's A.M. Best rating at the time it made the statement. See Columbia Opp. at 43. Apart from the obvious fact that this alleged statement is nothing more than an opinion, MIIX's rating is entirely irrelevant because there is no allegation, and no basis to infer, that NCRIC misstated MIIX's rating. In addition, Columbia's allegation that NCRIC acted with actual malice because it knew, when its representatives stated that NCRIC policies did not cover work in the clinic, that the statement was false because it had previously admitted that the physicians were covered at the outset. Id. at 42. Again, Columbia asks this Court to infer actual malice, presumably based on the fact that exclusions became effective a few weeks after the alleged statement was made. Proving actual malice requires more, and Columbia has failed to meet this burden.

VI. COLUMBIA'S CLAIMS FOR TORTIOUS INTERFERENCE FAIL AS A MATTER OF LAW

A. Any Alleged Conduct was Simply Not Tortious

Faced with the prospect of having its tortious interference claims dismissed, Columbia seeks to expand the scope of the allegations in its counterclaim, now asserting that not only did the alleged defamatory statements interfere with Columbia's business expectations, but now, a whole host of other conduct. See Columbia Opp. at 45-46. In effect, Columbia now argues that the manner in which NCRIC terminated the Retro Plan and the Entity Policy constitutes tortious interference. Columbia's argument must be rejected as simply an attempt to translate its ordinary breach of contract claim into a tortious interference claim. All of the evidence" that NCRIC knew the statements were false or somehow acted in reckless disregard for their truth. Columbia is mistaken. Columbia, not NCRIC, has the burden of proving that each statement it bases its defamation and disparagement claim on was made with actual malice. Columbia's citation to a few examples does not satisfy its burden. As such, the claim must be dismissed.

conduct complained of either arises under, or is directly related to, Columbia's allegations for breach of contract. See, e.g., Columbia Opp. at 48 n.41 (asserting tortious interference claim based on termination of the Plan and performing interim reconciliation wrong). It is well-established that one cannot tortiously interfere with its own contract. See Donohoe v. Watt, 546 F. Supp. 753, 757 (D.D.C. 1982) (a "defendant's conduct under his own contract with the plaintiff may or may not rise to the level of a breach of that contract, but it cannot support an action for interference with it"), aff'd, 230 U.S. App. D.C. 70, 713 F.2d 864 (D.C. Cir. 1983).

Even if such allegations could give rise to a separate tortious interference claim, the conduct complained of, as a matter of law, does not rise to the level of "egregious" behavior contemplated under the law.[11] See Genetic Sys. Corp. v. Abbott Labs., 691 F. Supp. 407, 423 (D.D.C. 1988). Columbia, in effect, argues that the following alleged conduct could somehow be considered "egregious:" (1) a decision to stop negotiating; (2) canceling an insurance policy (which was within its legal rights to do) without advance notice or purported justification; (3) billing physicians early; (4) informing the Attending Faculty of the benefits of NCRIC; (5) performing an interim reconciliation improperly; and (6) sending an exclusion for coverage in the clinic (which, again, was within its legal rights to do). See Columbia Ex. 72. Not surprisingly, Columbia cites to not a single case holding that the conduct complained of, or any similar conduct, has been held to constitute the requisite degree of fault for a tortious interference claim. See Columbia Opp. at 48. The conduct alleged falls far short of what is required under the law.

[11] Columbia contends that this Court is barred from holding that the alleged actions do not rise to the level of "egregious" conduct by the "law of the case" doctrine. See Columbia Opp. at 48 n.41. However, as argued below, the law of the case doctrine does not preclude consideration of an issue on summary judgment simply because such an argument was raised at the motion to dismiss stage. See footnote 20 below.

See Genetic Sys., 691 F. Supp. at 423 (egregious conduct includes "libel, slander, physical coercion, fraud, misrepresentation, or disparagement").

Finally, Columbia claims that NCRIC tortiously interfered with Columbia's business relations and prospective business advantage because it "urged" Columbia physicians to leave Columbia. In sole reliance on the deposition testimony of NCRIC's Mr. Fargis, Columbia claims that "NCRIC compiled a list of its insured among the Attending Faculty . . . with the intent to induce the insureds to leave Columbia if the Retro Plan was not continued," see Columbia Opp. SMF ¶ 142, and "contacted its insureds to . . . urge them to participate in the discount programs." Id. ¶ 143. Contrary to Columbia's representation, Mr. Fargis did not testify to this effect and no evidence otherwise supports Columbia's assertion. See Fargis Dep. III at 591, attached as Ex. 16 to Columbia Opp. (the list was to determine whether premium would be lost if a physician went to a different program). Mr. Fargis testified that he did not specifically recall any communications initiated by NCRIC to Columbia physicians for the purpose of urging Columbia physicians to leave. See id. Rather, the evidence, at most, supports a finding that certain physicians may have left Columbia because of any number of factors related to Columbia's well publicized financial problems. Any damages Columbia may have suffered because these physicians left was not due to any tortious conduct by NCRIC. Indeed, in a letter from a Dr. Cooper to Columbia's then CEO, Mr. Wilson, it is clear that other hospitals had courted physicians to join them for years. See Ex. 76 to Columbia Opp. (7/12/00 letter from Dr. Cooper to Mr. Wilson). Columbia cannot attach blame to NCRIC for any alleged consequences of discontinuing the Retro Plan when the parties were not obligated to renew the plan. See pp. 24-25 below.

B. NCRIC did not Tortiously Cause any Columbia Physician to Leave

Even if NCRIC's conduct could be considered to rise to the level of egregious behavior contemplated under the law, Columbia's tortious interference claims still fail. Nowhere in the abundance of "evidence" Columbia has now placed before the Court is there any document or testimony even suggesting any physicians left Columbia because of the alleged defamatory or disparaging statements, or any other alleged conduct by NCRIC. Again, Columbia's request that this Court deny summary judgment based on pure speculation and conclusory allegations must be rejected.

Contrary to Columbia's assertion that NCRIC ignores testimony regarding why physicians left, that testimony does not link any tortious conduct by NCRIC to the departure of any Columbia physician. In fact, the only deposition testimony Columbia cites is that of Dr. Asterbadi who testified that various physicians told him they left because they felt that Columbia was going to close. See Asterbadi Dep. at 160-61, attached as Ex. 12 to Columbia Opp. It is only then that Dr. Asterbadi speculates that their departure was based on "rumors" allegedly started by NCRIC. Stripped of the first layer of hearsay and the second layer of speculation, Columbia is left with no evidence admissible at summary judgment demonstrating that there was any connection between the alleged actions of NCRIC and the departure of physicians from Columbia. See O'Donnell v. Associated Gen. Contractors of Am., Inc., 645 A.2d 1084, 1089 (D.C. 1994) (explaining hearsay cannot be relied upon by one opposing summary judgment); Richardson v. District of Columbia, 522 A.2d 1295, 1298 (D.C. 1987) ("[t]he Eng affidavit is not based on personal knowledge but on what appellants' counsel allegedly told the affiant. On its face it is patent hearsay and, as such, would not be admissible in evidence"); see p. 7 above.[12]

Columbia also asks this Court to consider a list purportedly prepared by Drs. Asterbadi and Rifka[13] of those physicians that they believed left based on "NCRIC's misconduct related to the termination of the Retro Plan and the Entity Policy, and the rumors NCRIC spread about Columbia closing and not providing insurance for the Clinic." See Rifka Decl. ¶ 13, attached as Ex. 9 to Columbia Opp.; Ex. 84 to Columbia Opp. Columbia does not produce any evidence from any one of the physicians on the list that they left Columbia because of any actions, including the alleged defamatory statements, by NCRIC. Once again, Columbia's own self-severing declaration that the doctors listed left because of NCRIC is pure speculation and conjecture. In fact, the only document from physicians who allegedly left because of NCRIC's conduct is a letter to all employees of Columbia from the Columbia Physicians Group – not NCRIC. See Ex. 78 to Columbia Opp. The letter says nothing apart from the fact that the doctors are leaving Columbia and is no more probative of the NCRIC's alleged involvement regarding that departure than any other evidence Columbia has put forth.[14]

[12] Similarly, Columbia's submission of a letter from Dr. Asterbadi to Dr. Roberts discussing alleged rumors regarding the closure of Columbia consists of multiple layers of hearsay. See Ex. 77 to Columbia Opp. "A factual dispute is not created by filing in the record a document consisting of inadmissible hearsay statements." Burleson v. Burleson, 277 A.2d 647, 649 (D.C. 1971). The letter should be disregarded in its entirety.

[14] Indeed, all reasonable inferences (and Columbia's own witness) indicate that any Columbia doctors that may have stopped working in the Clinic did so simply because they were no longer going to be covered by NCRIC for care provided there – a statement which, as discussed above, was indisputably true. See Ex. 70 to Columbia Opp. ("My malpractice carrier, NCRIC, will no longer cover my work through the clinic as of 11/15/00 . . . I understand that the hospital will cover the other [Columbia] physicians . . . [but] I do not want to take a chance on being covered through the hospital and there being insufficient funds to cover a specific year."); Ex. 65 to Columbia Opp. (citing the lack of insurance coverage as reason for leaving Columbia).

VII. NCRIC DID NOT BREACH THE RETRO PLAN OR THE IMPLIED DUTY OF GOOD FAITH AND FAIR DEALING

In its opposition to NCRIC's motion for summary judgment on Counts One and Two of its Counterclaim, Columbia substantially repeats its arguments from its own motion for partial summary judgment. As stated in NCRIC's opposition to that motion, Columbia cannot obtain summary judgment on its contract claim. Moreover, Columbia has no credible evidence that any alleged ultimatums and/or improper calculations forced Columbia to continue with the Retro Plan or that NCRIC otherwise acted in bad faith throughout the term of the Retro Plan in breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing.

A. Columbia owes NCRIC Payment for Additional Premium

In its opposition, Columbia once again argues that NCRIC breached the Retro Plan agreement because proper calculations under the Retro Plan mandate that NCRIC owes Columbia Return Premium for 1993-1995, and that Columbia does not owe NCRIC any Additional Premium at this time. See Columbia Opp. at 10. Columbia's argument rests upon its flawed interpretation of the parties' oral agreement in the fall of 1997 to delay payment of premium until a year was "closed-out." See id. As presented in NCRIC's opposition, the only reasonable inference from the evidence proves that the parties agreed in 1997 to delay payment of premium until a year was closed or until the Retro Plan ended. See NCRIC Opp. at 7-9; Fargis Dep. III at 611-12, attached as Ex. A to NCRIC Opp. Columbia has no credible evidence to dispute this interpretation of the scope of the parties' agreement. See NCRIC Opp. at 7-9. Therefore, payment for the net premium under the Retro Plan was due in September 2000 when the Retro Plan expired upon Columbia's choice not to renew.

Columbia also repeats its argument that it does not owe payment of Additional Premium at this time because NCRIC "failed to provide Columbia with a September 1, 2001 Reconciliation." See Columbia Opp. at 11. NCRIC has presented evidence that a reconciliation calculation and notice of amount due was sent to Columbia both in September 2001 and January 2002. See NCRIC Opp. at 10-11. Columbia's only "evidence" that such notice was not sent in 2001 is an inadmissible declaration from Columbia's counsel that he had not seen any such document produced in discovery. See NCRIC Opp. at 11.[15] Moreover, as noted in NCRIC's opposition, the hospital's notice argument is specious. Columbia's legal obligation to pay Additional Premium was triggered upon the September 1, 2000 reconciliation and demand for payment at the end of the Retro Plan, which Columbia admits it received and never paid. See NCRIC Opp. at 10; Columbia Opp. SMF ¶¶ 75,78; Rifka Dep. II at 255. Thus, any allegedly improper notice in 2001 does not excuse Columbia's breach of contract in 2000. Columbia simply has not paid the Additional Premium it owes NCRIC.

B. Columbia has no Credible Evidence that NCRIC Improperly Calculated Retro Plan Amounts

NCRIC has presented testimony from individuals knowledgeable about Retro Plan calculations explaining that NCRIC's calculations under the Retro Plan used the mathematically proper figures based on the agreement of the parties. See NCRIC Opp. at 14-19. Columbia attempts to create disputed issues of material fact to avoid summary judgment by asserting that certain factors were never applied properly in the calculations. Columbia's only evidence of such "miscalculations" is inconclusive testimony by lay witnesses that they thought the numbers did not [15] NCRIC has previously objected to the use of a testimonial declaration from Columbia's counsel and documentary evidence created by Columbia's counsel for the purposes of summary judgment. See NCRIC Opp. at 5 n.2, 14. Such evidence would not be admissible at trial cannot form the basis of a disputed fact for summary judgment. See p. 7 above. Thus, these exhibits should be disregarded by the Court.

"look right" and spreadsheets re-calculating the Retro Premium created by Columbia's counsel which reflect counsel's interpretation of the Retro Plan. See NCRIC Opp. at 14; Declaration of Joseph K. Leahy, attached as Ex. 6 to Columbia Opp.; Exs. 11-14 to Columbia Memo and Ex. 32 to Columbia Opp. (documents created by Columbia's counsel for purposes of summary judgment).[16] Columbia has no lay or expert testimony regarding the parties intent for application of these factors and, in fact, Columbia withdrew its witnesses who were designated to testify on these subjects. Columbia is left with nothing but raw, unsupported speculation. Such conjecture is not sufficient to insulate Columbia from a motion for summary judgment on Columbia's breach of contract, bad faith, and fiduciary duty claims.

The lack of credible evidence proving exactly what calculations were allegedly improper is highlighted by Columbia's vague accusations that NCRIC reconciliations presented to Columbia sometimes overstated the amount Columbia owed under the plan, yet sometimes understated the amount of premium due from Columbia. See, e.g., Columbia Opp. SMF ¶¶ 8, 11. Columbia attempts to compensate for the lack of factual support for its claims by contending that the proper calculation under the Retro Plan is a "pure question of law" which can be determined by reading the Retro Plan alone. See Columbia Opp. at 11 n.3, 12. Thus, Columbia alleges, without any expert or lay testimony regarding how insurance premiums are calculated, that NCRIC's Retro Plan calculations were each incorrect in some way. However, as illustrated in NCRIC's opposition, the Retro Plan does not unambiguously explain the application of each mathematical factor within a reconciliation. See NCRIC Opp. at 14-19. In support of its calculations, NCRIC has provided evidence which explains both the parties' intent, and the mathematical logic, for the application of certain factors. See id. Columbia has not, and indeed cannot, dispute this evidence.

[16] The fact that Mr. Fargis testified that certain numbers on a particular calculation sheet did not appear correct, without the ability to recalculate the numbers on the spot, does not equal evidence that NCRIC admits that it consistently miscalculated items under the Retro Plan. See Columbia Opp. at 11-12. Indeed, Mr. Fargis also testified that any errors in calculations were corrected in subsequent quarterly calculations, which were cumulative. See Fargis Decl. ¶¶ 20-21, attached as Ex. 2 to NCRIC Memo.

C. NCRIC Did Not Act in Bad Faith or Breach a Duty Of Fair Dealing Under The Retro Plan

Columbia's opposition offers two theories to support its allegation that NCRIC breached the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing during the operation of the Retro Plan. However, in both cases, Columbia fails to provide sufficient evidence of the required intent for bad faith or willful imperfect performance to survive summary judgment.

Columbia first argues that NCRIC manipulated Columbia in 1997 during negotiations for renewal of the Retro Plan by offering the hospital's new, and allegedly inexperienced, CEO an "ultimatum." See Columbia Opp. at 20-21. The evidence demonstrates that as a part of the renewal negotiations, NCRIC presented Columbia with a reconciliation calculating Additional Premium of over $1 million due to NCRIC should the Retro Plan end. See NCRIC Memo at 7, 30. As a condition of renewal, and in response to Columbia's financial difficulties and impending bankruptcy, NCRIC and Columbia negotiated a partial payment towards that Additional Premium owed of $1 million. See id. at 30. There is simply no evidence of bad faith. The terms of a discretionary renewal were simply modified. The parties then negotiated the final amount and terms of the payment. See Ex. 8-9 to NCRIC Memo. Columbia's argument is contradicted by its own CEO, who during his deposition, admitted there was no obligation for NCRIC or Columbia to renew the Retro Plan in Fall 1997. See Wilson Dep. I at 199, attached as Ex. EE. Columbia could have refused these terms of renewal and discontinued its Retro Plan with NCRIC.[17] Columbia chose not to do so.

As illustrated above, Columbia has no credible evidence that the reconciliation presented by NCRIC in 1997 was incorrect. Columbia was always free to have outside legal counsel or its own insurance consultants review the reconciliation and renewal proposal, as indeed it did at other times. See pp. 28-30 below. That Columbia did not do so is not evidence of bad faith by NCRIC. Nor did NCRIC's alleged failure to educate Columbia's CEO regarding the terms of the oral agreement constitute bad faith. As discussed above, the oral agreement provided for payment upon the conclusion of the Retro Plan – the situation the parties were facing in 1997 without a renewal agreement signed. NCRIC was following the terms of the oral agreement.

Columbia also argues that NCRIC's alleged miscalculations under the Retro Plan prove NCRIC "willfully rendered imperfect performance," thereby breaching the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing. See Columbia Opp. at 22-23. However, as stated above and in NCRIC's opposition, Columbia has not presented any credible evidence of willful misconduct by NCRIC. Columbia argues in its opposition that Mr. Fargis' use of 62% in the calculations instead of the 67% figure listed in some of the parties agreements is conclusive proof of willful misconduct and bad faith. See Columbia Opp. at 22. Yet, NCRIC has presented evidence that 62% is the mathematically correct factor and that it is mathematically impossible to achieve the parties' agreed-to discount rate while using 67% for this factor. See NCRIC Opp. at 16-17; Ex. 54 to Columbia Opp. (reflecting Columbia's acceptance of this explanation for use of 62%

[17] If the Retro Plan had not been renewed in 1997 no doctor or hospital would have lost insurance coverage. All that would have changed were future discounts on premiums paid. See p. 3 above. Columbia was fully within its rights to not renew the plan and then search for another discount program if it chose, while explaining to its loyal doctors that some transition time would be needed. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 175 (doctors were supportive of Columbia). NCRIC did not have the power to "force" Columbia to renew the Retro Plan.

factor). Additionally, documents contemporaneous to the parties' negotiation of the changed discount reflect a 62% number for the Deposit Premium. See Exs. 5-6 to NCRIC Memo; Exs. 26-27 to Columbia Opp.

Columbia has no credible evidence to dispute NCRIC's contention that the 62% number was proper and any reference to 67% in some documents must have been an inadvertent typographical mistake. Even if NCRIC's figure is ultimately determined to be factually incorrect, it does not rise to the level of willful misconduct which could prevent the entry of summary judgment in NCRIC's favor. As Mr. Fargis testified, it is not bad faith if NCRIC applied the factor it believed was the negotiated, mathematically correct factor in the reconciliations presented to Columbia for review. Columbia has no credible evidence to prove any nefarious explanation for the discrepancy.

The only reasonable inference drawn from the evidence is that NCRIC made good faith efforts to implement the contractual terms of the parties.[18] NCRIC extended discounts to faculty while renewal negotiations continued in many years, and revised terms in Columbia's favor, such as increasing the discount and decreasing the Minimum Premium prospectively.[19] Columbia cannot prove the "willful" level of intent required to support its claim under Count 2.

VIII. COLUMBIA HAS NOT PROVEN A FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE PARTIES

Despite Columbia's protestations of ignorance and naiveté, there is no basis for Columbia's breach of fiduciary duty claim because there was no fiduciary relationship between [18] Columbia's witnesses concede that NCRIC's actions did not interfere with Columbia's performance under the contract. See NCRIC Memo at 31.

[19] Columbia has no evidence that the decreased Minimum Premium was intended by the parties to apply retroactively as opposed to all the other changes in 1996-1997 which applied proposepctively. See NCRIC Opp. at 14-16.

16d-001344

Columbia and NCRIC as a matter of law. Columbia cannot refute the fact that the Retro Plan was a contract between two business entities to provide a commercial service. The Retro Plan does not contain any contractual language naming NCRIC as a fiduciary to Columbia, nor do any other circumstances give rise to a fiduciary relationship. Columbia's only remedy for alleged wrongdoing is a breach of contract claim.[20]

A. NCRIC did not Have a Fiduciary Obligation to Columbia Under the Retro Plan

The undisputed facts in this case do not meet the legal standard for a fiduciary duty. The general rule is that arms-length negotiated contracts between two sophisticated business parties do not create a fiduciary relationship between the parties. See Steele v. Isikoff, 130 F. Supp. 2d 23, 36 (D.D.C. 2000); Church of Scientology Int'l v. Eli Lilly & Co., 848 F. Supp. 1018, 1028 (D.D.C. 1994). Columbia does not dispute that there is no language in the Retro Plan which names NCRIC as the fiduciary of Columbia, acting on its behalf or creates "a relationship of trust and confidence between the parties." See Columbia Opp. at 17 (quoting GLM Corp. v. Klein, 665 F. Supp. 283, 286 (S.D.N.Y. 1987)).

[20] Columbia assertion that the Court is precluded from even considering this question under the "law of the case" doctrine is misleading and simply wrong on the law. See Columbia Opp. at 16 n. 7. Columbia maintains that Judge Davis' order partially granting NCRIC's Motion to Dismiss decided, as a binding matter of law, that NCRIC had a fiduciary duty to Columbia. See id. However, the law of the case doctrine only precludes consideration of a legal issue when the "same question of law" has been ruled upon in a "final" ruling during a prior proceeding in the case. See P.P.P. Prods., Inc. v. W & L, Inc., 418 A.2d 151, 152 (D.C. 1980). D.C. law does not apply law of the case preclusion automatically to an issue raised in a motion for summary judgment simply because the issue was considered at the motion to dismiss stage. See Washington v. Government of District of Columbia, 152 A.2d 191 (D.C. 1959) (holding denial of motion to dismiss was not sufficiently "final" to apply law of the case preclusion to summary judgment motion); Davis v. Boyle Bros., 73 A.2d 517 (D.C. 1950) (same). As this Court is aware, a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is judged by a different legal standard than a Rule 56 motion for summary judgment. In fact, Judge Davis' order simply held that Columbia brought a claim which, depending on the facts, could state a claim for breach of fiduciary duty. See Order dated July 3, 2001 at 2. The court did not hold that as a matter of law, there was a fiduciary duty between Columbia and NCRIC. See id. Therefore, the decision to deny NCRIC's motion to dismiss Columbia's fiduciary duty claim does not preclude this Court from concluding now – on the basis of undisputed facts gathered in discovery – that Columbia has not proven a fiduciary relationship at summary judgment. The law of the case doctrine is inapplicable. Columbia's breach of fiduciary duty claim fails as a matter of law.

Nor is there any evidence that the parties were in an unequal bargaining position at the time they created the Retro Plan in 1993, which would make the transaction anything but arms-length. Columbia argues in its opposition that there is no evidence regarding the bargaining position of the parties at the time of the negotiations and, therefore, NCRIC has not shown that the parties were equals. See Columbia Opp. at 17-18. Yet, documents recently produced by Columbia provide evidence that Columbia negotiated the terms of the Retro Plan deal and had the benefit of outside legal review of the agreement before signing in 1993. See Ex. FF attached.

Indeed, Columbia bears the burden of proving that the parties were unequal during the negotiations, as it is Columbia's claim for breach of fiduciary duty. Columbia admits that it has no such evidence which counters the evidence showing its active negotiation and consultation with outside legal advice at the time the Retro Plan was signed. Therefore, Columbia's argument that a fiduciary duty between the parties was created based upon the negotiation of the Retro Plan must fail.

B. No Fiduciary Relationship "Evolved" During the Implementation of the Retro Plan

Columbia tries to evade the lack of fiduciary language in the contract, and the absence of any evidence of unequal bargaining during the negotiation of the Retro Plan by asserting that a fiduciary duty developed during the years when the Retro Plan was in effect. See Columbia Opp. at 14-15. Yet, Columbia has cited no case that supports the concept of a "joint undertaking" between contractual parties which gives rise to a fiduciary duty under D.C. law. See id. The cases cited by Columbia in support of its position that a fiduciary duty can develop during a contractual relationship are clearly distinguishable from the facts here. Columbia's cases involved either (1) individuals entering into personal services contracts which traditionally create a fiduciary relationship, or (2) employees acting on behalf of their employer. See Shapiro, Lifschitz & Schram, P.C. v. Hazard, 24 F. Supp. 2d 66 (D.D.C. 1998) (attorney/client relationship); Cafritz v. Corporation Audit Co., 60 F. Supp. 627 (D.D.C. 1945) (client/ accountant/auditor relationship); Lavin v. Kaufman, Greenhut, Lebowitz & Forman, 640 N.Y.S.2d 57 (App. Div. 1996) (applying New York fiduciary duty law to the client/accountant relationship); GLM Corp.v. Klein, 665 F. Supp. 283 (S.D.N.Y. 1987) (applying New York fiduciary duty law to corporation/employee relationship); Mandelblatt v. Devon Stores, Inc., 521 N.Y.S.2d 672 (App. Div. 1987) (same). The logic of these cases simply does not apply to the negotiated arms-length commercial contract between the business parties here.

Indeed, Columbia's reliance on Humana Health Plan, Inc. v. Heritage Indiana Medical Group, PC, No. 99 C 6276, 2001 WL 8878 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 3, 2001) actually supports a finding that NCRIC never "evolved" into a fiduciary for Columbia. See Columbia Opp. at 14-15; Humana Health Plan, No. 99 C 6276, 2001 WL 8878 (N.D. Ill. Jan. 3, 2001). There, the court explained that "'[n]ormal trust between friends or businesses, plus a slightly dominant business position, do not operate to turn a formal, contractual relationship into a confidential or fiduciary relationship.'" Id. at *3 (citation omitted). In fact, the court held there was no fiduciary relationship between the contractual parties in that case regarding allegations of miscalculations and improper bookkeeping similar to Columbia's:

> Heritage's allegation that Humana's ability to exercise discretion with respect to the Funds and its IBNR estimated setoffs created a relationship of trust, confidence and dependence, similar to that of a fiduciary duty is simply not sufficient to establish that a fiduciary relationship existed . . . . Heritage's claims regarding Humana's discretion to contribute fewer dollars to the Funds based on "medical necessity" and Humana's practice of charging balance estimates for claims to be paid later and its failure to credit the Funds with the interest are not sufficient.

Id. (emphasis added). Likewise, under D.C. law a contractual relationship is insufficient to establish a fiduciary duty. See Steele, 130 F. Supp. 2d at 36.

Even if a fiduciary duty could evolve between two contractual parties, Columbia has not presented credible evidence that it has occurred in this case. First, there is evidence that Columbia periodically consulted with outside legal counsel and consultants regarding the Retro Plan and its various amendments and renewals. For example, Columbia's Finance Committee Meeting Minutes for November 20, 1996 state:

> After discussion with the Committee, the Consultants recommended that we continue with our current plan to become effective January 1, 1997 with a three year cumulative reconciliation. The Committee requested that NCRIC present the new proposal to our insurance consultant and legal counsel for review and comment prior to the December 18 meeting.

See Ex. 30 to Columbia Opp. (emphasis added); see also Ex. 44 to Columbia Opp. (referring to negotiations between Columbia in-house counsel and NCRIC). Columbia was fully within its rights to consult with such legal counsel at all times during the Retro Plan. To the extent Columbia chose to act without consulting legal counsel and consultants at certain times, that is a business decision by Columbia which does not impose a fiduciary duty on NCRIC.

Next, the fact that NCRIC was an "expert" in Retro Plans and kept the books for the premium billing under the Retro Plan does not translate into a finding that NCRIC was acting on behalf of Columbia as a fiduciary. In most commercial settings, businesses hire other businesses to perform services in which they lack expertise – or else they would perform those functions themselves. If Company A signs a contract with Company B to design and build a complicated machine for the business, the fact that Company A does not have the expertise to design and build the machine themselves does not impose any fiduciary duty on Company B. If

Company A is unhappy with the product and discovers that Company B has made mistakes in the design and building, then Company A has a proper cause of action for breach of contract – nothing more. Columbia's argument that NCRIC had a fiduciary duty to Columbia because it was an expert in the Retro Plan insurance business and Columbia did not have the knowledge or expertise to perform the Retro Plan calculations themselves logically extends to the imposition of a fiduciary duty on Company B and all other commercial parties which contract for services with other businesses. Such a result is obviously not supported by the law.

Columbia's opposition attempts to paint a picture of Columbia as a small health care provider naïve to the world of business which can be taken advantage of by savvy companies who wish to do business with Columbia. Common sense devalues this argument. Columbia is a medical facility which has been in business for over 180 years. The hospital boasts about its state of the art facilities and its modernization efforts. It is disingenuous for Columbia to now argue that the hospital is an unsophisticated business party and not a "typical market competitor." See Columbia Opp. at 14. The hospital must deal on a daily basis with numerous commercial contracts for everything from cafeteria catering to medical supplies. Columbia is a sophisticated company who is capable of arms-length negotiated commercial contracts.[21]

Columbia has not refuted evidence showing many negotiated changes to the Retro Plan were instigated by Columbia, and that the parties extensively negotiated over the terms of each renewal of the Retro Plan. See NCRIC Memo at 33. Columbia has not refuted the evidence

[21] Columbia's opposition also includes numerous declarations from former CEOs and Risk Managers professing their inexperience and ignorance regarding malpractice insurance premium calculations, and stating that they trusted NCRIC's numbers to be correct. See Exs. 2, 4, 9, 11 to Columbia Opp. Inexperience of subsequent management does not impose a fiduciary duty which did not exist in the Retro Plan. It is Columbia's responsibility to find people who are experienced enough to handle the positions they are assigned. Moreover, there is evidence that Columbia on occasion hired outside legal counsel and "insurance consultants" to supplement the knowledge of showing that it used the services of outside legal counsel and insurance consultants when reviewing the Retro Plan and its renewals. See pp. 28, 30 above. Finally, Columbia has no credible evidence that NCRIC "forced" Columbia to renew the Retro Plan at any time. Like any commercial contractor, NCRIC competes for business with other malpractice insurance providers. NCRIC did not breach any legal duty to Columbia by attempting to illustrate the business reasons why the Retro Plan should be continued instead of Columbia switching their contract to a competitor.[22] NCRIC was in a position of a commercial contractor, not a fiduciary which owed extra-contractual duties and obligations to act for the benefit of Columbia.

To the extent Columbia has any viable cause of action against NCRIC for alleged miscalculations under the Retro Plan it is under a breach of contract theory. See Humana Health Plan, 2001 WL 8878, at *3 ("Humana either complied with the provisions of the contract between the two parties or it did not, and Heritage's remedy if it did not is its breach of contract action."). There is no evidence of a fiduciary obligation accepted by NCRIC and Columbia's breach of fiduciary duty claim fails as a matter of law.

its own staff. Columbia cannot escape its contractual agreements and claim the benefit of a fiduciary relationship by simply hiring inexperienced management officials.

[22] Columbia argues that NCRIC's "scare tactics" with the Attending Faculty forced Columbia to reject other insurance contracts (such as MIIX) which it believed were "a better deal for the hospital" and effectively precluded Columbia from seeking insurance elsewhere. See Columbia Opp. at 19. Even assuming that Columbia can prove that NCRIC talked with its physicians and encouraged them to lobby for the Retro Plan's renewal, this does not overwhelm Columbia's power and negotiating position. If a soft drink vendor tried to convince doctors that they should fight against a plan to not renew their contract with the cafeteria in favor of a new contract with its main rival, this is nothing more than marketing and competition between contractors competing for Columbia's business. Columbia still has the final say and NCRIC did not "force" them to renew the Retro Plan instead of other offers.

IX. COLUMBIA'S FRAUDULENT OR CONSTRUCTIVE OR NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION CLAIMS FAIL AS A MATTER OF LAW

Columbia's claims for fraudulent and/or negligent misrepresentation depend upon the same allegations of miscalculations of Retro Plan premiums by NCRIC discussed above. See Columbia Opp. at 23-29. Once again, Columbia has not provided any credible proof that NCRIC's reconciliations under the Retro Plan were false. See NCRIC Memo at 34-36; pp. 21-24 above. Falsity of the statement is a necessary element for both of Columbia's misrepresentation claims. See Goldsmith v. Tapper, 748 A.2d 416, 419 (D.C. 2000) (listing elements of fraud). As discussed above, NCRIC's evidence shows that the reconciliations were proper and any errors were corrected in subsequent cumulative calculations. See pp. 21-24 above. Because Columbia's evidence of miscalculations by NCRIC consists of nothing more than interpretation of the Retro Plan and calculations by Columbia's counsel, it has not met its burden to prove falsity of the reconciliations by clear and convincing evidence.[23]

Additionally, Columbia has not presented evidence that NCRIC did not use due care, and was therefore negligent in its calculations. See Columbia Opp. at 28-29. Aside from Columbia's counsel's assertions regarding the "proper" calculations of the plan, Columbia offers no testimony regarding the standard of care for NCRIC in performing complicated Retro Plan calculations. It is Columbia's burden to prove that NCRIC did not use due care – not simply that a few mistakes were made throughout the years of the Retro Plan. Moreover, Columbia has not proven detrimental reliance on any of the Retro Plan calculations. Conclusory assertions that Columbia was "forced" to renew the Retro Plan to its detriment and that it would have paid some unspecified amount less than $1 million in 1997 does not amount to sufficient proof. Columbia cannot quantify its detrimental reliance because it is purely speculative and based upon Columbia's counsel's notions of proper insurance calculations. These allegations do not state a claim for negligent misrepresentation.

X. COLUMBIA'S CONVERSION CLAIM FAILS BECAUSE ALL PAYMENTS WERE CREDITED TOWARD PREMIUM ACTUALLY OWED

Columbia attempts to salvage its claim for conversion by alleging that material facts are disputed regarding whether the $1 million Columbia paid to NCRIC in 1997-1998 was a "deposit." See Columbia Opp. at 50-51. Columbia now contends that its conversion action is proper because "the parties agreed in 1998 to treat the money as a deposit" and Columbia repeatedly "demanded in vain that its $1 million deposit be returned." Id. at 50. However, Columbia has no credible evidence to counter the contemporaneous documentary evidence demonstrating that the $1 million was an agreed partial payment on premium owed by Columbia. Any claim Columbia has for money owed under the Retro Plan is the subject of its breach of contract claim and does not support a separate claim for conversion.

Columbia submits declarations of witnesses in support of its claim that the parties agreed that the $1 million payment was a deposit for which NCRIC would pay Columbia interest. See Columbia Opp. at 50; Columbia Opp. SMF ¶¶ 36, 157. Even if simple characterization of the payment as a "deposit" was sufficient to establish a conversion claim, after-the-fact, self-serving testimony cannot contradict the contemporaneous documentary evidence which shows the parties agreed to treat the money as payment on premium owed and did not agree to any payment of interest. Both the December 1997 and January 1998 letters which set forth the terms for the $1 million payment refer to the money as "payment on the current liability incurred upon Columbia" and "billed premium."[24] See Exs. 9-10 to NCRIC's Mem; Ex. GG attached. Neither of these documents, nor the Promissory Note, contain any agreed terms providing interest to Columbia. See id. Both the D.C. Insurance Commission and NCRIC's auditors report in 1998 approved the treatment of the payment as $1 million as premium. See Exs. 36-37 to Columbia Opp. Columbia's testimonial evidence simply reflects its current litigation position that no payments were due under the Retro Plan in 1997 and that Columbia is entitled to lost interest. Such declarations are not credible evidence to refute the contemporaneous documents which prove the terms of the parties agreement.[25]

Columbia has no evidence that it is entitled to interest on the $1 million dollar payment. Therefore, Columbia is simply left with a claim for overpayment of premium under the Retro Plan. As discussed in NCRIC's prior submission, under D.C. law "[a] cause of action for conversion . . . may not be maintained to enforce a mere obligation to pay money." Curaflex Health Servs., Inc. v. Bruini, 877 F. Supp. 30, 32 (D.D.C. 1995); see also NCRIC Memo at 39-40. Count 11 fails as a matter of law.

[24] Columbia places great emphasis on the fact that some of the NCRIC reconciliation spreadsheets used the phrase "Columbia Deposit" on the line item subtracting the $1 million from premium owed by Columbia. See Columbia Opp. at 51. However, some reconciliation spreadsheets refer to this line as "Columbia Payment." See Ex. 33 to NCRIC Memo. Columbia cannot impose a legally binding term on the parties' agreement which is not reflected in the documents from 1997 and 1998 based simply upon what shorthand phrase NCRIC used in some of its calculations.

[25] Columbia's Opposition assertion that Columbia repeatedly "demanded" the return of its "deposit" contradicts prior testimony by its witnesses in this case. This Court should disregard the affidavit by Larry Wilson submitted with Columbia's Opposition as his statements in the affidavit are inconsistent with prior deposition testimony. Compare Wilson Decl. ¶ 2, attached as Ex. 11 to Columbia Opp. ("I told them that Columbia wanted its deposit back several times while I was CEO. . . .") with Wilson Dep. I at 127 (testifying that no demand was made for NCRIC to pay the money back, but only a request to credit the money forward). Columbia cannot defeat summary judgment by using such affidavits to create disputed facts. See p. 37 below.

XI. ALL OF COLUMBIA'S CLAIMS FAIL AS A MATTER OF LAW AS ITS DAMAGES ARE SPECULATIVE

Throughout discovery, Columbia alternatively claimed that factual information concerning its damages was subject to protection from disclosure by the attorney work product doctrine (see, e.g., Wilson Dep. II at 218-19, attached as Ex. HH) or would be detailed by their designated expert witnesses (see Columbia's Rule 26(b)(4) statement, attached as Ex. II). Because Columbia refused to substantively put forward the facts supporting its damage claims on the advice of counsel, NCRIC was forced to file a Motion to Compel.[26] Near the close of discovery, Columbia withdrew two of its designated experts and only put forward one witness to testify as to damages – Peter Ben Ezra, who happens to be Columbia's Chairman of the Board.

A. A "Sham Affidavit" Cannot Preclude the Entry of Summary Judgment

Recognizing that Mr. Ben Ezra's deposition testimony illustrated the speculative nature of Columbia's damage calculations, See NCRIC Memo at 41-44, Columbia has now provided this Court with a supplemental declaration of Mr. Ben Ezra in an effort to prevent judgment as a matter of law. As explained below, that declaration should be stricken or otherwise disregarded by this Court as it amounts to no more than a "sham affidavit," put forward in an effort to create a genuine issue where none exists.

"Courts have long held that a party may not create a material issue of fact simply by contradicting its prior sworn testimony." Pyramid Secs. Ltd. v. IB Resolution, Inc., 288 U.S. App. D.C. 157, 166, 924 F.2d 1114, 1123 (D.C. Cir. 1991). "[T]he objectives of summary judgment would be seriously impaired if the district court were not free to disregard [the later testimony.]" Martin v. Merrell Dow Pharm., Inc., 851 F.2d 703, 706 (3d Cir. 1988). While it is not the function of this Court to weigh evidence or to make credibility determinations while deciding a summary judgment motion, the rejection of statements that are implausible and contrary to other statements made by the same person is not "a credibility determination but rather [the] recognition of a sham issue." Camfield Tires, Inc. v. Michelin Tire Corp., 719 F.2d 1361, 1365 (8th Cir. 1983). cf. D.C. Super. Ct. R. Civ. P. 56(g). "The upshot is that the prior sworn statement will receive controlling weight unless the shifting party can offer persuasive reasons for believing the supposed correction." Pyramid Secs. Ltd., 288 U.S. App. D.C. at 166, 924 F.2d at 1123. Columbia does not even attempt to put forward any such reasons here.

NCRIC demonstrated that as a matter of law Mr. Ben Ezra's single damage calculation should be disregarded as unsupported, rank speculation because: (a) he simply accepted as true the representation of Columbia's counsel with respect to the doctors who allegedly left Columbia (see Ben Ezra Dep. at 140); (b) he did no analysis or investigation why doctors left Columbia (see Ben Ezra Dep. at 140); (c) he did no analysis or research to determine causation (see Ben Ezra Dep. at 133); (d) he presumed that each doctor would work until he or she turned age 65 without reviewing any studies or analysis concerning the retirement age of physicians (see Ben Ezra Dep. at 154-55); and (e) he assumed a 20 year damage projection without offering any facts as to why he selected that time period (see Ben Ezra Dep. at 151-153).

Recognizing the weaknesses exposed by NCRIC's moving papers, Columbia has attempted to bolster Mr. Ben Ezra by contradicting his sworn deposition testimony.[27] See Ben Ezra Decl., attached as Ex. 3 to Columbia Opp. With a revised declaration, Columbia attempts to [27] In his declaration, Mr. Ben Ezra bravely states he volunteers his services at Columbia because of his personal commitment to community service and that he received no monetary compensation for his time. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 9. During his deposition, however, Mr. Ben Ezra stated that he would send a bill for his services and that he "expect[ed] to be compensated" for his work. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 85-86. Mr. Ben Ezra also testified that he previously received $25,000 or $26,000 for work done for Columbia. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 32.

address the deficiencies in Mr. Ben Ezra's deposition testimony. For example, in his deposition, Mr. Ben Ezra conceded he simply received a list of doctors from counsel for Columbia and accepted counsel's representation concerning who was on the list, see Ben Ezra Dep. at 95-96,[28] and that he did not participate in creating the list of physicians. See id. Understanding such speculation is a ground for striking the report, in a supplemental declaration, Mr. Ben Ezra now opines he "first obtained a list of physicians from Columbia" as well as other documents supporting that list from Columbia – not counsel. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶¶ 4, 5, 14. Contrary to his deposition testimony, Mr. Ben Ezra now states he relied on his personal knowledge concerning what the list represented. See id. ¶ 14.

While Columbia concedes Mr. Ben Ezra knows absolutely nothing about causation, the hospital attempts to bolster Mr. Ben Ezra unsupported assertions concerning physician retirement age, marginal costs, and hospital historical data. With respect to the retirement age for D.C. physicians, during his deposition, Mr. Ben Ezra testified as follows[29]:

> Q: Have you done any studies or analysis with respect to what the average retirement date of a physician in the District of Columbia is?
> A: No, I have not.
> Q: Do you know what that number would be?
> A: No, I do not.
> Q: Sixty-five is your presumption?
> A: That is a presumption, yes.

[28] Q: Do you know where this list came from? How were these doctors selected? Let's try it that way. [objection noted as to form] A: I was furnished that by counsel to Columbia. Q: Do you have any idea how this group was picked? A: No. Q: You accepted the representation on its face? A: Yes. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 95-96.

[29] At one point, Mr. Ben Ezra stated under oath that counsel for Columbia told him when a certain physician would retire. Mr. Ben Ezra testified: "A: ... It's been represented to me that [a Columbia physician] will retire on 11/1/[20]01. Q: Who represented that to you? A: My counsel, counsel for the hospital." See Ben Ezra Dep. at 195-96. This answer rasies other questions concerning Mr. Ben Ezra's testimony which will be addressed, if necessary, in a motion to strike. At a minimum, it shows Mr. Ben Ezra's lack of objectivity and hypothetical nature of his conclusions.

See Ben Ezra Dep. at 154. In his declaration, Mr. Ben Ezra now attempts to improperly bolster his presumption based on alleged "observation and experience at Columbia." See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 23. Such guesswork, changing over time, must not be permitted to go forward to a jury.

Columbia's next effort to bolster Mr. Ben Ezra's testimony on marginal costs is even more egregious. Columbia routinely refers to the "textbook" model used by Mr. Ben Ezra. See Columbia Opp. at 52, 56. The marginal cost figure relied upon by Mr. Ben Ezra is taken from a workbook-type problem in a textbook:

> Q: And you circled a provision in that page?
> A: Right. The sentence says, and its Problem No. 2-32, "Hospital costs and pricing," and its begin, "St. Vincent Hospital" -- it's on page 70 of the textbook. It says, "St. Vincent Hospital has overall variable costs of 30 percent of total revenue and fixed costs of $42 million per year."
> Q: Do you know what St. Vincent Hospital in the textbook is referring to?
> A: No, I do not.
> Q: Do you know if this textbook is referring to a real St. Vincent Hospital somewhere in America?
> A: No, I do not, but I believe there are some St. Vincent Hospitals somewhere in America.
> Q: You didn't know what St. Vincent Hospital they are referring to and if this 30 percent referenced in the problem is true or not?
> A: No. What's true is in the problem it says variable costs are 30 percent.
> Q: And you don't know where the authors got that from?
> A: No. I have used other textbooks, and I would say I've seen similar problems, and they may be even on the CPA exam, similar problems.

See Ben Ezra Dep. at 181-82. In other words, Mr. Ben Ezra simply lifted the 30% marginal cost number from a hypothetical workbook problem in a book – without knowing anything regarding how the figure was selected – and asks this Court to rely upon it as an important component for Columbia's damages. In his declaration, Mr. Ben Ezra now claims the textbook "in his experience, uses reasonable, representative, real-life examples" (see Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 29), but apparently, he still does not know where the 30% figure comes from. It should be disregarded.

Moreover, Mr. Ben Ezra admits, as he must, that he only used one year of unaudited, historical data in his calculations. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 161; Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 30. He only used that single year worth of data "due to the limitations in the data available at Columbia" and due "to [Columbia's] lack of a cost accounting system." See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶¶ 30-31. In his deposition, Mr. Ben Ezra reviewed data for other years, but did not use it. He testified:

> Q: You did this analysis, I think, for -- how many years did you do this analysis for?
> A: The analysis is based on the difference between two years. I did look at the prior year data that was furnished to me. I elected not to use it. I was not comfortable in using that data.
> Q: Why?
> A: I don't think it was complete.
> Q: And how did you know it wasn't complete?
> A: It didn't look right.
> Q: I'm sorry, I don't mean, again, to argue with you but what does, "It didn't look right," mean?
> A: The number of records and the totals I couldn't rely on. I mean, I'm not going to use data in my analysis that I don't feel is correct.

See Ben Ezra Dep. at 161. Columbia sole damage witness, its Chairman of the Board, selected among the data, choosing one year and disregarding others without sufficient explanation or analysis. As noted above, Columbia cannot on the one hand decry the fact that it lacks complete and accurate data, yet at the same time have its Chairman of the Board testify under oath that Columbia is entitled to $21.5 million in damages because he picked one year of data that he determined was correct. The law does not support such a chance result.

B. Columbia Cannot Prove any Damages Proximately Caused by NCRIC's Alleged Breach

Columbia's witnesses, including Mr. Ben Ezra, testified that a dispute with one of the hospital's largest creditors created the need for Chapter 11 reorganization. See NCRIC Memo at 29 (referencing deposition testimony of various Columbia witnesses); Ben Ezra Dep. at 38-39. Columbia's opposition now presents new declarations that contradict this former deposition testimony and state that Columbia never considered bankruptcy before the $1 million negotiated payment with NCRIC and NCRIC's request of such payment as a condition of renewal in 1997 "was a contributing cause to Columbia's bankruptcy." See Columbia Opp. at 13; Asterbadi Decl. ¶ 9, attached as Ex. 1 to Columbia Opp. Thus, Columbia argues that NCRIC is liable for "the share of the damages that it caused." See Columbia Opp. at 13 n.6.

This effort to revise history must fail. Columbia has presented no evidence of causation on this point except for the self-serving declarations filed with its opposition that attempt to contradict past deposition testimony. NCRIC has presented undisputed evidence illustrating Columbia's financial difficulties in 1997 and 1998 caused by sources wholly unrelated to NCRIC's administration of the Retro Plan. See NCRIC Memo at 6-7; Exs. 11, 21 to NCRIC Memo. Even assuming Columbia could prove NCRIC's actions were a partial cause of the bankruptcy, Columbia has no evidence calculating an apportionment of bankruptcy damages. Without any evidence to support its allegations, Columbia's claim for bankruptcy damages must fail on summary judgment.

In addition, Columbia's opposition asserts that its damages for breach of contract include the $1 million paid to NCRIC towards the Additional Premium due in 1997. See Columbia Opp. at 12-13. First, this claim fails because it relies upon speculative allegations regarding NCRIC miscalculations. Columbia has little credible evidence to support its assertion that the calculation presented to Columbia in 1997 overstated the amount of premium due. See p. 25 above. Moreover, Columbia has no reliable evidence to support its claim that if the number presented to Columbia was lower it would have negotiated a lower payment in 1997 than $1 million. See Columbia Opp. at 12-13. Conclusory statements by Columbia witnesses that if NCRIC had asked for less than $1.7 million they would have paid less than $1 million is not reliable proof. See Asterbadi Decl., attached as Ex. 1 to Columbia Opp. There is not even an assertion in Columbia's argument, much less evidence to support, any quantifiable measure damages under this theory. How much less would Columbia have paid? Columbia cannot say. Therefore, these damages are wholly speculative and without support and cannot survive summary judgment.[30]

Next, as Columbia has little evidence from sources outside of Columbia's counsel regarding the "proper" calculations under the Retro Plan, it cannot prove any amount of damages for breach of contract. Columbia cannot claim that NCRIC's calculations of amount due under the plan at this time has caused any damages because Columbia has not made any payment to NCRIC for premium owed since the $1 million payment in 1997-98. Moreover, Columbia has nothing more than a conclusory allegation to support its claim that it has suffered damages because NCRIC allegedly owes Columbia money under the Retro Plan. Columbia has presented no reliable evidence showing premium not properly paid to Columbia.

Similarly, Columbia has offered no credible evidence of damages concerning defamation, injurious falsehood, or breach of fiduciary duty. Columbia now claims that lay testimony can establish damages. See Columbia Opp. at 53. While lay testimony certainly can establish certain types of damages, Columbia has no evidence to support its claims.

[30] Columbia argues that it would at least be entitled to nominal damages for NCRIC's alleged miscalculations in breach of contract. See Columbia Opp. at 12 n.4. Under D.C. law, nominal damages for breach of contract are equal to one dollar. See Patel v. Howard Univ., 896 F. Supp. 199, 205 (D.D.C. 1995). Moreover, as damages are an element of breach of contract, Columbia must still prove some harm in order to succeed on its claim. See pp. 43-44 below.

C. Summary Judgment is Proper Where Damages are Speculative

As damages are an essential element of any tort claim, courts routinely dismiss claims when the proponent fails to offer credible evidence concerning damages. For example, in Weinberg v. Whatcom County, 241 F.3d 746 (9th Cir. 2001), the court affirmed summary judgment where a party had failed to offer sufficient proof of damages, which the court characterized as an essential element of the party's claims. "'Where discovery has been completed, summary judgment is appropriate when a party challenged by motion fails to offer evidence supporting an element of a claim on which that party bears the burden of proof at trial.'" Weinberg, 241 F.3d at 751 (quoting Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-24 (1986)). "Because [the plaintiff] failed to offer competent evidence of damages, dismissal on summary judgment was appropriate with respect to all claims for which [the plaintiff] bore the burden of establishing the amount of actual harm he suffered as a result of the County's actions. We have observed that plaintiffs '"must provide evidence such that the jury is not left to speculation or guesswork in determining the amount of damages to award."'" Id. (quoting McGlinchy v. Shell Chem. Co., 845 F.2d 802, 808 (9th Cir. 1988)) (quoting Dolphin Tours, Inc. v. Pacifico Creative Serv. Inc., 773 F.2d 1506, 1509 (9th Cir. 1985)). Thus, "[s]ummary judgment is appropriate where appellants have no expert witnesses or designated documents providing competent evidence from which a jury could fairly estimate damages." McGlinchy, 845 F.2d at 808 (citing Rickards v. Canine Eye Registration Found., Inc., 704 F.2d 1449, 1452 (9th Cir.1983)). See also Solow v. Liebman, 692 N.Y.S.2d 693 (App. Div. 1999) (affirming summary judgment where expert affidavit was based on conclusory allegations without any independent factual basis); Alaska Travel Specialists, Inc. v. First Nat'l Bank of Anchorage, 919 P.2d 759

(Alaska 1996) (affirming summary judgment dismissal when party's lost profits damages were speculative).

Such is the case here with Columbia and Mr. Ben Ezra. What the hospital has put forward is nothing but unsupported speculation and conjecture created by its counsel and Chairman of the Board in an effort to prevent dismissal of deficient claims on which Columbia has no competent evidence of damages.

Furthermore, in its brief, Columbia has now again reversed course and intends to rely on lay testimony and newly created documents – produced for the first time during briefing summary judgment – in an effort to prove damages it could not during discovery. See Columbia Opp. at 53-54; Exs. 6, 25, 32, 71, 73, 84 to Columbia Opp. As other courts have rejected claims as a matter of law based on unsupported damage calculations, so should this Court should reject Columbia's untimely and speculative calculations.

XII. CONCLUSION

Columbia continues its litigation strategy of making legal arguments lacking support and stretching the facts in an effort to salvage dubious claims. Columbia has attempted to overwhelm this Court with sheer bulk, lacking substance. Those efforts must fail. A comprehensive review of the facts and applicable law mandates dismissal of Columbia's counterclaims as a matter of law.

NCRIC, INC.,
Plaintiff,	Civil Action No. 00-0007308
	Calendar #8
v.
	Judge Blackburne-Rigsby
COLUMBIA HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN MEDICAL CENTER, INC.,	Next Event: Reply to Summary Judgment Motions -- March 28, 2002
Defendant.

PLAINTIFF NCRIC'S OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT COLUMBIA'S STATEMENT OF MATERIAL FACTS NOT IN DISPUTE

Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), submits this opposition to Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.'s ("Columbia") Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute submitted in support of Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment. NCRIC filed a Statement of Material Facts in support of its Motion for Summary Judgment ("NCRIC Facts" & "NCRIC Memo"), and incorporated by reference that statement as a refutation of Columbia's similar statement in NCRIC's opposition dated February 28, 2002 ("NCRIC Opp."). This statement further refutes Columbia's statement by specific reference to each numbered paragraph within Columbia's statement.

1. Not disputed.

2. Not disputed.

3. The effective date of the Retro Plan speaks for itself. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 1, 4.

4. The Retro Plan was negotiated between the parties. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 1, 4.

5. The original term of the Retro Plan was three years. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 4.

6. The Retro Plan was amended and extended. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 18-21.

7. The parties renewed the Retro Plan retroactively to September 1, 1996. After a full exchange of information regarding the then-current status of the Retro Plan and the possible amendment of terms prospectively, the parties agreed to renew the Retro Plan. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 21-26.

8. The parties also agreed to amend certain terms of the Retro Plan prospectively from January 1, 1996 forward to correspond to an increased physicians' discount of 30%. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 18-21, 37-38, 45, 50.

9. On or about June 28, 2000, NCRIC informed Columbia that, in response to the desire of Columbia's Board to terminate the Retro Plan agreement, the Plan would end as of its expiration date of September 1, 2000. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 54-55. The remainder of paragraph 9 contains impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

10. The terms of the Retro Plan speak for themselves. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 1-6.

11. The terms of the Retro Plan speak for themselves. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 5.

12. The terms of the Retro Plan speak for themselves. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 18.

13. The terms of the Retro Plan speak for themselves. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 20. The last sentence of Columbia's proposed fact 13 is not supported in the record.

14. The increased discount of 30% and corresponding changes to other factors in the Retro Plan to accommodate the revised discount took effect prospectively from January 1, 1996. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 20.

15. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan, it is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

16. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 18-21, 37-38, 45, 50. To the extent terms are defined in the Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan, these documents speak for themselves. See Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan).

17. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 7, 12. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan, this document speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

18. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 12. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan, this document speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

19. NCRIC provided Columbia all quarterly and annual reconciliation calculations required by the Retro Plan. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 7, 12, 22, 46, 57, 58. To the extent terms and notice provisions are defined in the Retro Plan, it is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

20. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 8, 15. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan, this document speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

21. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 15. Aside from the first statement that "[a]ll premiums under the Retro Plan are calculated by applying multipliers to the Subject Premium," the remainder of paragraph 21 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

22. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan, this document speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan). The remainder of paragraph 22, starting with the phrase "Columbia could not be expected to make the complicated calculations...," constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

23. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan).

24. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan). Any revision to the Deposit Premium was effective prospectively from January 1, 1996 according to agreement by the parties to change that factor to 62%. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 20; Ex. 5 to NCRIC Memo. The remainder of paragraph 24, starting with the phrase "This restriction was consistent with the explicit limitation...," constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

25. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan). Mr. Fargis testified as to how the Deposit Premium is related to the discount. See Fargis Dep. III at 758-59; Ex. 19 to Columbia Memo.

26. The entirety of paragraph 26 is improper conjecture by Columbia's counsel without cites to the record and does not require a response. Moreover, Mr. Fargis testified as to how the Deposit Premium is related to the discount. See Fargis Dep. III at 758-59; Ex. 19 to Columbia Memo.

27. The entirety of paragraph 27 is improper conjecture by Columbia's counsel without cites to the record and does not require a response.

28. The entirety of paragraph 28 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

29. The entirety of paragraph 29 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

30. The entirety of paragraph 30 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

31. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 12, 15. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

32. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 16. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan). The negotiated changes to various factors in the Retro Plan as a result of the increased discount agreed to by the parties in 1995 applied prospectively from January 1, 1996. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 18-20; Ex. 5 to NCRIC Memo. The remainder of paragraph 32, beginning with the phrase "The language of the Plan places no limitations," constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

33. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 16. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan). The negotiated changes to various factors in the Retro Plan as a result of the increased discount agreed to by the parties in 1995 applied prospectively from January 1, 1996. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 18-20; Ex. 5 to NCRIC Memo. The second sentence of paragraph 33, beginning with the phrase "[a]s with the similar Minimum Premium," constitutes an impermissible legal argument and conclusion interpreting the Retro Plan which is inappropriate in a statement of material facts, does not require a response, and should be disregarded in its entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

34. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 37-38. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan). The negotiated changes to various factors in the Retro Plan as a result of the increased discount agreed to by the parties in 1995 applied prospectively from January 1, 1996. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 18-20; Ex. 5 to NCRIC Memo.

35. The first two sentences of paragraph 35 are improper conclusions of Columbia's counsel without cites to the record which do not require a response. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 37-38. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are a documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan).

36. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 15. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan this is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

37. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 15. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan this is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

38. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 12, 15. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan this is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

39. The entirety of paragraph 39 is an improper conclusion of counsel for Columbia without cites to the record which does not require a response.

40. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 9,13. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan this is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

41. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 15. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan this is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan). The remainder of paragraph 41, starting with the phrase "[b]ecause of the Development Factors...," constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

42. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan this is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan).

43. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 19-20, 37-38. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan).

44. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 50. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan).

45. Exhibit E to the Retro Plan is labeled as an example of Retro Plan operation. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan). Paragraph 13 of the Retro Plan states that Exhibit E is "not to vary, alter or amend the terms hereof or of the Plan." See id.

46. The entirety of paragraph 46 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

47. The entirety of paragraph 47 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

48. The entirety of paragraph 48 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

49. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan). This is an unsupported conclusion put forward by counsel for Columbia.

50. NCRIC applied the Deposit Premium factor as agreed by the parties in 1996 to mathematically correspond with the increased discount. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 19-20; Ex. 5 to NCRIC Memo.

51. The entirety of paragraph 51 is an unsupported conclusion put forward by counsel for Columbia without cites to the record which does not require a response.

52. NCRIC applied the Minimum Premium factor prospectively from January 1, 1996, as agreed by the parties in 1996. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 19-20; Ex. 5 to NCRIC Memo.

53. NCRIC applied the Minimum Premium factor prospectively from January 1, 1996, as agreed by the parties in 1996. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 19-20; Ex. 5 to NCRIC Memo.

54. NCRIC applied the Development Factors as mathematically required by the Retro Plan. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 5, 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan); Fargis Dep. III at 697-700; 715-20.

55. NCRIC provided two different September 1, 2001 reconciliations to Columbia on or about September 1, 2001 with letters demanding payment of Additional Premium due. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 57-58; Fargis Dep. III at 655-57. Counsel for Columbia improperly asserts himself as a witness in this case. See e.g. United States v. Morris, 714 F.2d 669, 671 (7th Cir. 1983) ("[t]hat counsel should avoid appearing both as advocate and witness except under special circumstances is beyond question"); United States v. Birdman, 602 F.2d 547, 551 (3rd Cir. 1979) (court condemns practice of serving as both lawyer and witness); Lau Ah Yew v. Dulles, 257 F.2d 744, 746 (9th Cir. 1958) ("[A]n attorney who assumes the burden of a witness while representing his client in a lawsuit does so at a very great detriment to the credibility of his testimony.").

56. NCRIC provided two different September 1, 2001 reconciliations to Columbia on or about September 1, 2001 with letters demanding payment of Additional Premium due. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 57-58; Fargis Dep. III at 655-57. The remainder of paragraph 56, beginning with the phrase "According to NCRIC...," constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972). See also Response to ¶ 55.

57. Paragraph 57 in its entirety is a conclusion by counsel supported only by cites to his own improper testimony. See Response to ¶ 55. NCRIC provided two different September 1, 2001 reconciliations to Columbia on or about September 1, 2001 with letters demanding payment of Additional Premium due. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 57-58; Fargis Dep. III at 655-57. The remainder of paragraph 57, beginning with the phrase "Further, despite attempts...," constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972). See also Response to ¶ 55.

58. At the meetings, NCRIC explained the current status of the Retro Plan. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 22-23.

59. No changes were made "in an effort to avoid paying the Return Premium" to Columbia. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 10-11, 24-26.

60. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 10-11, 25-26.

61. The parties agreed that payments would be delayed until all the claims in a particular Experience Period closed or the Retro Plan ended. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 10-11, 25-26; Fargis Dep. III at 611-12, 639, 643, 731-32.

62. The parties agreed that payments would be delayed until all the claims in a particular Experience Period closed or the Retro Plan ended. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 10-11, 25-26; Fargis Dep. III at 611-12, 639, 643, 731-32.

63. Neither NCRIC nor Columbia made any payments under the Retro Plan as a result of the fall 1996 Reconciliation. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 26. The first sentence of paragraph 63, starting "In consideration for the benefit it received...," constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

64. NCRIC presented Columbia with a Reconciliation dated September 1, 1997 calculating Additional Premium due from Columbia. See Ex. 7 to Columbia Memo.

65. The Reconciliation dated September 1, 1997 is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 7 to Columbia Memo. The remainder of paragraph 65 is an impermissible legal conclusion interpreting the Retro Plan which is inappropriate in a statement of material facts, does not require a response, and should be disregarded in its entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

66. During negotiations regarding the possible renewal of the Retro Plan in September 1997, the parties negotiated a partial payment towards Additional Premium due as financial security because of Columbia's impending bankruptcy. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 35-36. Contemporancous documents reflecting the parties' negotiations and agreement treat this payment as credit towards premium due from Columbia. See Exs. 8-9 to NCRIC Memo.

67. The $1 million was not a deposit, but was premium owed by Columbia. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 35-36; Exs. 8-9 to NCRIC Memo.

68. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 37-38; Ex. 10 to NCRIC Memo. To the extent terms are defined in the Retro Plan and its various Amendments and Addenda, these are documents which speak for themselves. See Ex. 4 to NCRIC Memo (Retro Plan); Exs. 10, 20, 23 to NCRIC Memo (Amendments and Addenda to the Retro Plan).

69. The September 1, 1998 document speaks for itself. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 46.

70. The $1 million was not a deposit to be held by NCRIC, but was premium owed by Columbia. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 35-36; Exs. 8-9 to NCRIC Memo.

71. As the final reconciliation for the 1993-94 year revealed that NCRIC owed Columbia $172,815, and NCRIC paid that amount to Columbia. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 46.

72. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 46; see also Response to ¶ 71.

73. NCRIC presented Columbia with a Reconciliation dated September 1, 1999 calculating Additional Premium due from Columbia. See Ex. 8 to Columbia Memo.

74. The entirety of paragraph 74 is an unsupported conclusion put forward by counsel for Columbia without cites to the record which does not require a response. The Reconciliation dated September 1, 1999 is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 8 to Columbia Memo.

75. The Reconciliation dated September 1, 2000 is a document which speaks for itself. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 57; Ex. 33 to NCRIC Memo.

76. The Reconciliation dated September 1, 2000 is a document which speaks for itself. See Ex. 33 to NCRIC Memo. As of September 1, 2000, the Retro Plan had expired and all payment of net premium was due. See NCRIC Facts ¶¶ 55-57; Fargis Dep. III at 611-12.

77. The entirety of paragraph 77 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972). This is also an unsupported conclusion put forward by counsel for Columbia.

78. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 57; Ex. 33 to NCRIC Memo.

79. NCRIC provided two different September 1, 2001 reconciliations to Columbia on or about September 1, 2001 with letters demanding payment of Additional Premium due. See NCRIC Facts ¶ 58, 67-68; Fargis Dep. III at 655-57. The remainder of paragraph 79, beginning with the phrase "However, there is no way to tell...," constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

80. The entirety of paragraph 80 constitutes impermissible legal arguments and conclusions interpreting the Retro Plan which are inappropriate in a statement of material facts, do not require a response, and should be disregarded in their entirety by the Court. See NCRIC Opp. at 2-4; Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222, 223-24 (D.C. 1972).

81. NCRIC incorporates by reference its Statement of Material Facts submitted with its Motion for Summary Judgment.

REPLY IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

The Opposition of Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ["NCRIC"] to Defendant Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment ("NCRIC SJ Opp.") does nothing to undermine Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.'s ("Columbia") argument for summary judgment. While NCRIC claims that there is "no evidence" that it miscalculated premiums due under the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Retro Plan" or "Plan"), these calculations were governed by the unambiguous Retro Plan, and hence, they were wrong as a matter of law (Point I, infra). NCRIC also largely ignored most of Columbia's Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute ("Columbia's SMF" or "SMF"), thereby conceding those facts for the purpose of Columbia's motion for summary judgment (Point II, infra). In addition, NCRIC's argument that the parties' oral agreement ended along with the Retro Plan has no basis in fact, since Columbia never agreed to it, or in law, since the Plan never ended (Point III, infra). Finally, there is no evidence that Columbia owed NCRIC premium as of September 1, 2001, regardless of whether NCRIC performed a Reconciliation of the Retro Plan effective on that date (Point IV, infra).

I. NCRIC Miscalculated the Premium Due Under the Retro Plan As a Matter of Law

A. There Is No Factual Dispute About How NCRIC Performed Its Calculations

Whether NCRIC correctly calculated the amount of premium due under the Retro Plan is not, as it argues, a "factual issue[] . . . in dispute," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 14. Columbia's claim that NCRIC miscalculated the premium due is founded entirely on (1) underlying dollar amounts that NCRIC calculated itself (and admits are correct); (2) multiplier terms set forth in the Retro Plan, including in the Retrospective Rating Premium Formula ("Retro Formula"); and (3) the addition, subtraction or multiplication of these admitted dollar amounts and/or Retro Plan terms. See Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment at 3-10 ("Columbia SJ Mem.") (setting forth terms of the Retro Plan and NCRIC's undisputed calculations); id. at 8, 13-17 (explaining how NCRIC misapplied terms of the Plan).

There is not a single disputed material fact underlying Columbia's argument that, absent the parties' oral agreement, NCRIC owes approximately $559,000 in Additional Premium to Columbia. See Performing a Proper Reconciliation of the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement at 1, passim (Exh. 1 hereto) ("Performing a Proper Reconciliation") (describing each step for performing a Reconciliation, including application of the Retro Formula, using the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation as an example).[1] In particular, there is no dispute about how NCRIC applies the Minimum Premium factor, the Deposit Premium factor and the Development Factors – the key multipliers that it misapplies in all reconciliations of the Plan.[2] NCRIC does not dispute that, for the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (and all subsequent reconciliations), it (1) applied a Deposit Premium factor of 62%, rather than 67%, for all Experience Periods beginning on or [1] Further, under the parties' oral agreement to exchange premium only for "closed" Experience Periods, NCRIC owes Columbia about $765,000. See infra pp. 10-11.

[2] See Columbia SJ Mem. at 5, 8, 13-14 (NCRIC misapplies the Minimum Premium factor); id. at 4, 8, 14-15 (NCRIC misapplies the Deposit Premium factor); id. at 7, 8, 15-17 (NCRIC misapplies the Development Factors).

after September 1, 1995; (2) applied a Minimum Premium factor of 75%, rather than 60%, for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods; and (3) applied Development Factors the relevant number of months before, rather than after, the end of each Experience Period – just as Columbia explained in its moving papers, see Columbia SJ Mem. at 8.

Nor could NCRIC colorably dispute how it applied these multipliers. Its calculations appear on what it admits are its reconciliation spreadsheets. See, e.g., Responses to Defendant's Requests for Admissions, passim ("RFAs" or "RFA Response No.") (Exh. 22 to SMF) (admitting that amounts appearing on the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation and the December 1, 2000 Interim Reconciliation were its Retro Plan calculations); Spreadsheet Entitled "Columbia Hospital for Women Retro-Program Years Sept. 01, 1993 - August 31, 2000" (Sept. 1, 2000) (Exh. 10 to SMF) ("September 1, 2000 Reconciliation").[3] Further, NCRIC has repeatedly admitted that it applies the three above-mentioned multipliers exactly as Columbia describes. See SMF ¶¶ 48, 50-54.

B. Whether NCRIC Miscalculated the Premium Due Under the Retro Plan Is a Question of Law, Not a Factual Dispute.

Unable to dispute what its calculations were, NCRIC attempts in vain to create a factual dispute about whether they were correct. A factual dispute exists, NCRIC argues, because "individuals knowledgeable" about "calculations under retrospective plan[s]" testified that the calculations were correct, whereas Columbia offered "no evidence from any witnesses" that the calculations were incorrect. NCRIC SJ Opp. at 13-14.[4] [3] An exact, line-numbered copy of this Reconciliation (with a slightly different date) is attached hereto as Exhibit 2.

[4] See also NCRIC SJ Opp. at 14-19 (testimony explaining why NCRIC's calculations purportedly were correct).

In fact, whether NCRIC properly calculated the premium due under the Plan is not a factual question. The process for calculating the amount of premium due under the Retro Plan – a Reconciliation – and all of the correct multipliers to be applied in a Reconciliation, are set by the terms of the Plan. See Addendum B to Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. A, at 4-8 ("Addendum B") (Exh. 5 to SMF) (describing the process for performing a Reconciliation); Performing a Proper Reconciliation, passim (performing the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, step by step, pursuant to the Plan). Hence, the correct way to perform a Reconciliation and calculate the premium due under the Plan is a matter of contract interpretation – a pure question of law for the Court to decide. See Brown v. Union Station Venture Corp. No. P-5, 727 A.2d 878, 881 (D.C. 1999); Doggett v. McLachlen Bancshares Corp., 663 A.2d 511, 516 (D.C. 1995).

1. The Plan's Plain Language, Not Parol Testimony, Is the Proper Basis For Ascertaining the Parties' Intended Minimum Premium Factor – Which Is 60%

NCRIC's contention that Columbia has "no testimony" to show that the parties agreed to a Minimum Premium factor of 60%, NCRIC SJ Opp. at 15, is entirely misguided. Because the Retro Plan is unambiguous[5] – as NCRIC readily admits, see Memorandum of Law in Support of the Motion for Summary Judgment Filed by Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. at 44, 45 ("NCRIC SJ Mem.") – this Court must determine what Minimum Premium factor applies solely from the language of the Plan, see Holland v. Hannan, 456 A.2d 807, 815 (D.C. 1983) ("absent [any] ambiguity, a written contract duly signed and executed speaks for itself and binds the parties without the necessity of extrinsic evidence"); accord Brown, 727 A.2d at 881; Doggett, 663 A.2d at 516.

[5] The Court should accept NCRIC's admission that the Plan is unambiguous. Cf. Carey Canada, Inc. v. Columbia Cas. Co., 940 F.2d 1548, 1556, 291 U.S. App. D.C. 284, 292 (1991) ("The court may not create ambiguity where none exists."); Lowman v. United States, 632 A.2d 88, 92 n.6 (D.C. 1993) (the court must resolve any ambiguity, not beget one). Nor is the Retro Plan rendered ambiguous simply because the parties interpret its terms differently. See Bagley v. Foundation for Preservation of Historic Georgetown, 647 A.2d 1110, 1113 (D.C. 1994).

Testimony that NCRIC offers to support its interpretation of the Minimum Premium, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 14-15, is therefore inadmissible parol evidence, see 1010 Potomac Assocs. v. Grocery Mfrs. of Am., Inc., 485 A.2d 199, 205-06 (D.C. 1984) ("[e]xtrinsic evidence of the parties' subjective intent may be resorted to only if the [contract] is ambiguous"; if the contract is unambiguous, "its language . . . provid[es] the best objective manifestation of the parties' intent"); Affordable Elegance Travel, Inc. v. Worldspan, L.P., 774 A.2d 320, 327 (D.C. 2001) (under the parol evidence rule, extrinsic evidence of the parties' intent must be excluded, and may not be used to interpret an unambiguous written contract).

Under the unambiguous language of the Retro Plan, the Minimum Premium factor is 60%, not 75%. See SMF ¶¶ 32, 34. Each time NCRIC performs a Reconciliation, it must apply that minimum to every Experience Period – just as it applies every other term of the Plan to every Experience Period, unless the term's application is limited to certain Experience Periods by the Plan's language (as with the Attending Faculty discount, see id. ¶ 13), or its internal logic (as with the Deposit Premium, see id. ¶¶ 26-28). See Columbia SJ Mem. at 13-14.

There is no logical basis for applying the new 60% Minimum Premium factor, as NCRIC urges, only to Experience Periods that began after the factor was amended, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 14-15. To the contrary, due to the structure of the Retro Plan – essentially, it is a road map for performing each Reconciliation – logic demands that the current terms of the Plan be applied to every Experience Period, regardless of what terms applied to those Experience Periods in past reconciliations. This is true even for terms that have been amended, like the Minimum Premium factor. For example, there is no dispute that the new Development Factors (which, like the Minimum Premium factor, were amended in the Addendum effective September 1, 1996, see SMF ¶¶ 8, 34, 43) apply to all Experience Periods – not just to those periods beginning after the amendment, see id. ¶ 49; see, e.g., September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (applying new Development Factors to all Experience Periods).

Nor would using the current Minimum Premium factor provide Columbia with an "unjustified windfall," as NCRIC contends, NCRIC SJ Opp. at 15. Because the Plan's Maximum Premium factor increased at the same time its Minimum Premium factor decreased (i.e., the new maximum also applies to all years of the Plan), see SMF ¶ 34, Columbia took on a greater premium risk (the higher maximum) in return for its greater chance of reward (the lower minimum).[6] Any additional payment to Columbia would be compensation for this greater risk, not a windfall.

2. The Parties' Agreement, Not the Opinion of NCRIC's "Expert," Defines the Proper Deposit Premium Factor – 67%

NCRIC is wrong to claim that the proper Deposit Premium factor is 62% because that number is (it claims) "mathematically correct," see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 16-17. The proper factor is the one that the parties agreed to – not the "correct" one according to the parol testimony of NCRIC's supposedly "knowledgeable" witnesses.[7] The Court must ascertain what the parties agreed to based on the plain language of the current version of the Retro Plan, and nothing

[6] It is also plausible that, due to Columbia's dire financial straights, NCRIC simply agreed to share its windfall from the 1993-94 and 1995-96 Experience Periods – when its cost of operating the Plan (i.e., the Retro Premium) was far below the minimum amount of premium it would keep under the Plan, see September 1, 2000 Reconciliation. Cf. Deposition of Stephen S. Fargis, Tr. at 184-85, 231 ("Fargis Dep.") (Exh. 4 hereto) (stating that NCRIC agreed to lower the minimum premium to benefit Columbia). Indeed, the parties contemplated doing exactly that in Fall 2000, see Statement of Material Facts in Dispute ¶ 56 ("SMF2") (discussions about lowering the minimum to 45%).

[7] In fact, there is no "mathematically correct" Deposit Premium factor. To determine (what it calls) the "correct" Deposit Premium factor, NCRIC calculated the value that (it contends) must be used so that the amount of premium it receives from the physicians, due to the increase in the Attending Faculty discount that occurred in the 1995-96 Experience Period, corresponds exactly with the increase in Columbia's liability under the Plan – i.e., so that the increased discount costs NCRIC essentially nothing. See Fargis Dep. at 150-51. There is no basis in the Plan for concluding that the discount must cost NCRIC nothing, however. Further, there is no factual connection between the reduced Minimum Premium factor and the increased physician discount. The minimum did not change until Fall 1997, nearly two years after the discount changed. Compare September 1, 1996 Reconciliation (Exh. 15 to SMF) (applying 75% minimum) with September 1, 1997 Reconciliation (Exh. 7 to SMF) (applying 60% minimum).

more.[8] See 1010 Potomac Assocs., 485 A.2d at 205-06; Affordable Elegance Travel, 774 A.2d at 327. Indeed, since the interpretation of the Plan is a pure question of law, expert testimony regarding how to perform a Reconciliation is impermissible and subject to a motion to strike. See G.F. Co. v. Pan Ocean Shipping Co., 23 F.3d 1498, 1507 n.6 (9th Cir. 1994) (striking expert affidavit that offered opinion on question of law); see, e.g., Kmart Corp. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 88 F. Supp. 2d 767, 773 (E.D. Mich. 2000) (excluding testimony when a party tried to "have it both ways" by maintaining that an insurance contract was "unambiguous," yet offering the parol testimony of an insurance expert regarding the proper interpretation of that contract).[9]

NCRIC also argues, incorrectly, that a factual dispute exists because Columbia adduced "no evidence" that the Deposit Premium factor actually listed in the Plan – which NCRIC admits is 67%, not 62% – was not "a typographical mistake," see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 17 n.5. However, NCRIC offers no legal or factual basis for placing on Columbia the onerous burden of *dis*proving the existence of a unilateral error. In fact, the onerous burden of proving the existence of such a mistake falls on NCRIC. See Sudul v. Computer Outsourcing Servs., Inc., 917 F. Supp. 1033, 1044 (S.D.N.Y. 1996) (unilateral mistake is an affirmative defense); U.S. Durum Milling, Inc. v.

[8] Moreover, NCRIC's parol testimony explaining why the Deposit Premium factor was initially changed to 62% (to effectuate the 38% discount), even if true, does not prove that the parties intended that factor to remain unchanged for all time. In fact, there is a perfectly logical explanation for the change to 67%: the parties always intended the Deposit Premium factor to be 67% (and correspondingly, the Attending Faculty discount to be 33%) in the long run, but they briefly used a Deposit Premium factor of 62% (and correspondingly, an Attending Faculty discount of 38%), to create the effect of a 33% discount for the 1995-96 Experience Period. See SMF ¶¶ 14, 27.

[9] See, e.g., Cooper Cos. v. Transcontinental Ins. Co., 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 508, 511 (Cal. Ct. App. 1995) (holding that the meaning of an insurance policy "is a question of law about which expert opinion testimony is inappropriate"); Dawe's Labs., N.V. v. Commercial Ins. Co., 313 N.E.2d 218, 226 (Ill. App. Ct. 1974) (expert opinion regarding meaning of language in an insurance contract "is inadmissible and patently unacceptable").

Frescala Foods, Inc., 785 F. Supp. 1369, 1373 (E.D. Mo. 1992) (same). Here, NCRIC has offered no evidence that it made a "typo."[10]

More significantly, even if NCRIC had produced evidence that it made a mistake, no relief would be warranted, because the drafting "error" occurred due to NCRIC's own negligence, through no fault of Columbia. See Kramer v. Schaeffer, 751 A.2d 241, 246 (Pa. Super. Ct. 2000) ("unilateral mistake . . . due to the negligence of one now claiming the mistake, affords no basis for relief from an agreement"); Zink v. Maple Inv. & Dev. Corp., 617 N.E.2d 1269, 1274 (Ill. App. Ct. 1993) (unilateral mistake may not be relied upon to relieve a party from the obligations of the contract where the party's own negligence caused the mistake); see, e.g., Trans World Airlines, Inc. v. Skyline Air Parts, Inc., 193 A.2d 72, 74-75 (D.C. 1963) (holding that "the unilateral negligent mistake of appellant did not discharge its duty to carry out the contract terms"). Here, the parties signed an Addendum changing the Deposit Premium factor from 62% to 67%, and then confirmed that change by signing another Addendum. See SMF ¶¶ 8, 24, 29. There is simply no evidence that Columbia knew of NCRIC's two-time "typo,"[11] and therefore, no basis for varying the contract's unambiguous terms.

3. Exhibit E to the Plan, Not NCRIC's Parol Testimony or Expert Opinions, Governs How the Development Factors Must Be Applied – After the End of Each Experience Period

Nor does a factual dispute exist regarding the correct application of the Development Factors simply because NCRIC presented "testimony regarding the[ir] purpose" whereas Columbia offered "no evidence" of "the parties' intent," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 17-19. Application of the Development Factors is governed by the terms of the Plan, not the opinion of NCRIC's purported expert. NCRIC cannot create an issue of material fact by offering parole testimony to vary the terms of an unambiguous, integrated contract. See 1010 Potomac Assocs., 485 A.2d at 205-06; Affordable Elegance Travel, 774 A.2d at 327; Kmart Corp., 88 F. Supp. 2d at 773.

[10] NCRIC offered no evidence that the 67% Discount Premium factor did not reflect its intent at the time it drafted the Addenda. (Indeed, there is evidence that it knew the proper Deposit Premium factor was 67%. See Fargis Dep. at 475-76 (admitting that NCRIC applied 67% Deposit Premium in one Reconciliation)). Absent any evidence that NCRIC made a "typo," the Addenda must be assumed to reflect the drafter's intent.

The only question regarding the proper application of the Development Factors involves textual interpretation: does Exhibit E to the Retro Plan show the Development Factors being applied to the applicable Experience Period the relevant number of months before or after it ends? As Columbia explained (in a textual analysis – not, as NCRIC describes it, the "lay opinion of counsel"), Exhibit E clearly shows Development Factors being applied the specified number of months after, not before, the relevant Experience Period. See SMF ¶¶ 46-47. NCRIC does not apply the Development Factors this way. See id. ¶ 48 (citing Fargis Dep. at 716-18 (admitting NCRIC applies Development Factors differently than called for by Exhibit E)).

Further, NCRIC's claim that the definition of Development Factors in the Plan "undercuts" Columbia's view of how they should be applied, NCRIC SJ Opp. at 18, is belied by NCRIC's own argument. NCRIC admits that the definition of Development Factors "does not address" how they are to be applied, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 18 (citing SMF ¶¶ 42-44). As such, Exhibit E – the "'Example of Operation of the Plan'" included "'for [purpose of] clarification,'" SMF ¶ 45 (quoting Retro Plan at 4, ¶ 13; id. at 7) – shows that the Development Factors must be applied the relevant number of months after an Experience Period ends. See SMF ¶¶ 44-46. This interpretation of Exhibit E does not "vary, alter or amend" the terms of the Plan, as NCRIC urges, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 18. It simply fills in the gaps.

[11] Even if Columbia's management knew the reasons why NCRIC agreed to change the Deposit Premium factor to 62% in 1996, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 16 (arguing that factor was changed for "complicated mathematical" reasons), there is no evidence that Columbia's new management knew these reasons in 1998, when the Addenda were signed.

16d-001393

In addition, NCRIC's argument that the parties "inten[ded] not to be bound" by Exhibit E, NCRIC SJ Opp. at 18 n.6, has no evidentiary support. NCRIC cannot create a material dispute of fact regarding Exhibit E by testifying that "it does not know who developed" the exhibit or by asserting that Columbia failed to present "testimony that the parties intended to be bound" by the exhibit, NCRIC SJ Opp. at 18 n.6. NCRIC admits that it entered into the Retro Plan, SMF ¶¶ 3, 8, of which Exhibit E undoubtedly is a part, see id. ¶ 45. No other evidence of NCRIC's intent to be bound by Exhibit E is necessary. See 1010 Potomac Assocs., 485 A.2d at 205-06; Affordable Elegance Travel, 774 A.2d at 327.

C. No Expert Testimony Was Necessary Regarding Retro Plan Damages

NCRIC's contention that Columbia has "no proof of damages," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 12-13, 14, also rests upon the flawed premise that proper performance of a Reconciliation is a factual issue. As explained above, the entire process for performing a Reconciliation, from start to finish, is set by (1) unambiguous contract language; (2) dollar amounts admitted to by NCRIC; and/or (3) simple math. See supra p. 2; see, e.g., Performing a Proper Reconciliation at 1-16 (walking through each step of the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation). As such, there can be no factual dispute about how to perform a Reconciliation properly and obtain the total premium due under the Plan. Therefore, the Court must make this calculation as a matter of law, without the assistance of any expert testimony. Indeed, such testimony is inadmissible. See supra pp. 6-7.

Further, the result of the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation – that NCRIC owes Columbia over $559,000 absent the parties' oral agreement (or about $765,000 under the oral agreement), see Performing a Proper Reconciliation at 16; SMF, Exh. 14; Columbia SJ Mem. at 12, 17[12] – is Columbia's damage. NCRIC was required to inform Columbia of the correct amount due by November 1, 2000 and pay that amount by December 1, 2000. See SMF ¶ 22 (a Reconciliation is due 60 days after September 1 and payment is due 30 days after that). However, NCRIC did neither, see id. ¶¶ 76-77, and thereby, damaged Columbia.

II. The Uncontested Facts Proffered by Columbia Should Be Deemed Established

A. NCRIC Failed to Rebut Most of the Material Facts Proffered by Columbia

NCRIC has, to date, filed no counter-statement of material facts in response to Columbia's SMF. Instead, NCRIC has incorporated the Statement of Material Facts ("NCRIC SMF") accompanying its own motion for summary judgment into its opposition brief as a "general refutation." NCRIC SJ Opp. at 2. However, few of the statements in the NCRIC SMF specifically rebut statements of fact in Columbia's SMF. See Chart Entitled "Statements in Columbia's SMF," passim ("Columbia SMF Chart") (Exh. 3 hereto) (listing numerous statements in Columbia's SMF that NCRIC admitted or failed to contest).[13] NCRIC therefore has failed to comply with its burden under the rules. See Super. Ct. Civ. R. 56(e) (non-moving party "must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial"); id. 12-I(k) (requiring a point by point refutation of the moving party's statement); Miller v. American Coalition of Citizens With Disabilities, Inc., 485 A.2d 186, 191 (D.C. 1984) ("the court will grant the motion [for summary judgment] unless the moving party's factual allegations are countered with specificity"); see, e.g., Lynch v. Meridian Hill Studio Apts., Inc., 491 A.2d 515, 521 (D.C. 1985) (granting summary judgment for this reason).[14] As a result, the Court should treat all of the facts that NCRIC failed to contest specifically as conceded for purposes of Columbia's motion. See Super. Ct. Civ. R. 12-I(k) (on a summary judgment motion, "the Court may assume that the facts as claimed by the moving party are admitted" except to the extent that they are "controverted in a statement filed in opposition to the motion"); see also id. 56(e) (if the non-moving party fails to set forth "specific facts" showing a genuine factual dispute, "summary judgment . . . shall be entered against" it); Miller, 485 A.2d at 191; Lynch, 491 A.2d at 521.

B. Columbia's SMF Is Proper and May Not Be Disregarded

1. The SMF Is Replete with Facts

NCRIC cannot escape the effect of its failure to file a counter-statement of material facts by asserting, erroneously, that Columbia's SMF is "replete with legal arguments" and "should be disregarded," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 2, 3.[15] The vast majority of statements in Columbia's SMF are based in objective fact. See Columbia SMF Chart, passim (list of statements in Columbia's

[13] Further, in its opposition brief, NCRIC offered evidence to contest statements in only seven paragraphs of Columbia's SMF. See Columbia SMF Chart at 5, 7, 8, 13, 15, 17, 18.

[14] See also Super. Ct. Civ. R. 12-I(e) ("If a statement of opposing points and authorities is not filed . . . the Court may treat the motion as conceded.").

[15] Nor does Columbia's SMF contain "arguments . . . not contained" in Columbia's opening brief, as NCRIC asserts, NCRIC SJ Opp. at 2 n.1. In fact, the sole example that NCRIC cites – a factual statement that the December 1, 2001 Interim Reconciliation (performed in January 2002) did not inform Columbia of the premium due effective September 1, 2001, see id. (citing SMF ¶ 79) – supports Columbia's argument that NCRIC never informed it of the amount of premium due on September 1, 2001, see Columbia SJ Mem. at 12-13. NCRIC offers the Court no reason to ignore Columbia's statement simply because Columbia failed to cite the statement in its brief.

SMF, by paragraph, showing that most if not all are based in fact). Indeed, most of the statements that NCRIC labels as "legal conclusions," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 3-4, are steeped in fact.

First, Columbia's statement that "there is no logical basis for imposing any implicit limitations on the application of the Minimum Premium," SMF ¶ 32, is a logical inference. It is a statement that no evidence in the record logically leads to implicit (i.e., factual), as opposed to explicit (i.e., contractual), limitations on the interpretation of the Minimum Premium factor. Such statements, which propose the existence of a fact and are divorced from analysis of legal texts or authority, arguably are factual – and NCRIC cites no authority to the contrary.[16] Other logical inferences stated in Columbia's SMF are similarly proper. See, e.g., SMF ¶ 28.

Second, neither Columbia's discussion of the language of Exhibit E, see, e.g., id. ¶ 47, nor its other statements concerning the terms of the Retro Plan, see generally Chart of Statements, passim (listing statements describing or explaining terms of the Plan) – are, as NCRIC claims, "legal conclusions," see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 4. Quotations of the language in a contract, and statements concerning the logical and linguistic effect of such language, are factual statements; by contrast, arguments regarding the legal effect of such words are statements of law. As such, the terms of a contract properly may be described and discussed in a statement of material facts. This practice is common, see, e.g., Oppedahl & Larson v. Network Solutions, Inc., 3 F. Supp. 2d 1147, 1155 (D. Colo. 1998) (moving party listed terms of legal agreement in statement of material facts); Tube City, Inc. v. Boston & Maine Corp., 170 F. Supp. 2d 35, 35 (D.

[16] NCRIC is wrong to characterize this statement as "argumentative," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 3. It is no more argumentative than inferential statements that NCRIC makes in its own statement of facts. Compare NCRIC SMF ¶ 14 (arguing that "an error . . . uncovered during a quarterly reconciliation of the Retro Plan . . . would not impact Columbia" due to the parties' oral agreement). Further, NCRIC offers no legal authority to support its contention that factual statements may be disregarded by the Court simply because they are unduly "argumentative."

Me. 2001) (non-moving party listed contract terms in statement of material facts)[17] – and NCRIC does it repeatedly in its own statement of material facts, see, e.g., NCRIC SMF ¶¶ 8, 9, 16, 18, 19, 38 (describing and/or discussing terms of Retro Plan).

Third, Columbia's mixed statements of law and fact may not be disregarded, as NCRIC urges, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 4 (citing SMF ¶ 63 (Columbia's description of the oral agreement between the parties)). Mixed statements are based in fact, and therefore, are perfectly appropriate for inclusion in a statement of material facts. See, e.g., Lloyd v. Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, No. 96-CV-348, 1999 WL 47153, at *9 (N.D.N.Y. Jan. 26, 1999) (describing oral agreement in statement of material facts); Lehman Bros. v. Canadian Imperial Bank of Com., No. 97 Civ. 8226, 2000 WL 1425098, at *1 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 27, 2000) (same). NCRIC cites no legal authority to the contrary, and in fact, statements mixing law and fact abound in its own statement of facts. See, e.g., NCRIC SMF ¶¶ 6, 8, 11, 14, 18, 19, 21, 45, 50, 55, 57, 58. Indeed, some of the exact same types of mixed statements that NCRIC labels "legal conclusions" also appear in its own statement. Compare NCRIC SJ Opp. at 4 (criticizing Columbia SMF ¶ 80 ("Columbia does not . . . owe any more money" under the oral agreement)) with NCRIC SMF ¶ 68 ("Columbia owes . . . $2.1 million" under the latest reconciliation of the Plan).

Like the foregoing statements, the bulk of the statements in Columbia's SMF set forth undisputed facts, terms of the Plan, logical inferences, or mixed questions of law and fact.[18] See [17] See also, e.g., Local 1219, AFSCME v. Donovan, 683 F.2d 511, 514, 221 U.S. App. D.C. 170, 173 (1982) (terms of settlement agreement in statement of material facts); Dahlberg v. Avis Rent a Car Sys., Inc., 92 F. Supp. 2d 1091, 1094 (D. Colo. 2000) (terms of agreement in statement of material facts).

[18] Columbia's statement that the Deposit Premium must be the inverse of the Attending Faculty discount in order to represent the premium deposited by the Attending Faculty, see SMF ¶ 26, is not, as NCRIC urges, unsupported, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 16. Rather, this factual statement is based on simple algebra: to represent the premium paid to NCRIC by the physicians, the Deposit Premium must be the difference between 100% and the discount. (E.g., if the discount is 33% of the Subject Premium, the amount the physicians paid NCRIC is 67% of the Subject Premium.)

Chart of Statements, passim. These statements must not be disregarded.[19]

2. Undisputed Statements of Law May Be Considered As Background

In addition, even some legal conclusions, if undisputed, are properly included in a statement of material facts. Background legal statements assist the court by clearing away undisputed legal issues, narrowing other legal issues, and setting up the legal framework for understanding the parties' dispute. NCRIC apparently recognizes this, because it makes myriad legal statements (although not all are undisputed) in the NCRIC SMF, including some pure statements of law. See, e.g., NCRIC SMF ¶¶ 5, 15, 20, 55, 57, 60, 64, 68.[20]

Further, neither Williams v. Gerstenfeld, 514 A.2d 1172 (D.C. 1986), nor Dillard v. Travelers Ins. Co., 298 A.2d 222 (D.C. 1972), holds that "legal conclusions" in statements of material facts must be "disregarded," as NCRIC argues, NCRIC SJ Opp. at 3. Rather, both cases apply Rule 56(e), which requires that a party opposing summary judgment come forward with "affidavits or other [evidence]." See Williams, 514 A.2d at 1176-77 (applying Rule 56(e)) ("failure of a party opposing summary judgment" to provide evidentiary support for its legal contentions will result in "acceptance of the movant's statement of facts as undisputed"); accord Dillard, 298 A.2d at 224 (applying Rule 56(e) to same effect). That aspect of the rule does not apply to a moving party, which may make its motion "with or without supporting affidavits," Super. Ct. Civ. R. 56(a); see, e.g., McBride v. Pizza Hut, Inc., 658 A.2d 205, 208 n.6 (D.C. 1995). Since Columbia is the moving party here, both Williams and Dillard are inapposite.

As such, Columbia's statement that "the language of the Plan makes . . . notice a condition precedent," SMF ¶ 22, was proper because there is no dispute that the statement is true,

[19] At a minimum, such statements must be considered to the extent that they are factual.

[20] Moreover, even if some statements in Columbia's SMF could be characterized as disputed legal conclusions (and NCRIC points to none), NCRIC does not argue, or offer support for the proposition, that such statements taint the entire SMF. At most, this Court may disregard only the statements it deems to be legal conclusions.

see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 9-11 (not disputing that notice is a condition precedent). The few other legal statements in Columbia's SMF also are undisputed background law. See Columbia SMF Chart at 3, 5, 6, 7, 13, 15 (listing such statements).

III. NCRIC Owes Columbia Money Under the Parties' Oral Agreement

A. NCRIC's Characterization of The Agreement Is Unsupported and Ineffective

There is simply no "factual dispute," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 5, regarding the terms of the parties' oral agreement. As NCRIC has repeatedly admitted, the parties agreed that no payments would be due for any Experience Period until "all the claims for that [P]eriod were closed." NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7; accord NCRIC SMF ¶ 10 ("NCRIC and Columbia agreed not to begin making actual payments . . . until "all claims for a certain year . . . were closed."); id. ¶ 14 ("NCRIC and Columbia agreed not to pay any Additional Premium or Return Premium [for a particular Experience Period] until the claims were closed"). Further, NCRIC's own calculations show that it owes Columbia money for the Plan's only closed year. See September 1, 2000 Reconciliation ($177,806 in Return Premium owed for the 1994-95 Experience Period).[21]

However, NCRIC now urges that premium for each Experience Period was due "at the end of the Retro Plan," even if all the claims for the Period were not yet closed. NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7 (bold in original omitted). As such, NCRIC claims that Columbia owes Additional Premium for several unclosed Experience Periods. See id. This attempt to create a factual dispute out of whole cloth by adding a second, conflicting clause to the oral agreement must fail. NCRIC's characterization of the terms of the oral agreement cannot be reconciled with its previous concessions that, under the agreement, premium would not be due "until all claims for a certain year reached final resolution, i.e., until all of the pending claims were closed." NCRIC SMF ¶ 10; accord id. ¶¶ 11, 14, 26; NCRIC SJ Mem. at 6; Fargis Dep. at 210-15, 220-21, 318-21.

NCRIC's new characterization of the parties' oral agreement also finds no support in the record. None of the testimony that NCRIC cites or quotes, when taken in context, reasonably describes the parties' agreement. Rather, that testimony describes: (1) how NCRIC operated the Plan under the oral agreement, see Fargis Dep. at 611-12 (describing the meaning of NCRIC's invoices); id. at 643 (same); (2) how NCRIC understood its operation of the Plan under the oral agreement, id. at 639-40; (3) why NCRIC ceased operating under the oral agreement after September 1, 2000, see id. at 729-33; or (4) whether Columbia understood that NCRIC had ceased operating under the oral agreement, id. at 731. Crucially, there is no evidence that Columbia ever agreed that the oral agreement would remain in effect only until the Plan ended. Indeed, as NCRIC admits, it first informed Columbia that the Plan would cease to operate as it had under the oral agreement in "March or April" of 2000. Id. at 731-32. NCRIC's testimony that it unilaterally decided to cease operating the oral agreement in Spring 2000, and informed Columbia of that fact, is not evidence that Columbia agreed to the change.

Moreover, even if Columbia had agreed to pay for unclosed Experience Periods once the Plan ended, it owes no money now because the Retro Plan has not ended. The parties did not terminate the Retro Plan effective September 1, 2000, because they could not: the Plan "remain[s] in full force and effect until all claims applicable to the final Experience Period . . . are finally closed."[22] Retro Plan at 4, ¶ 12. Instead, the parties simply stopped adding new Experience Periods to the Plan, and thereby discontinued the accrual of future potential obligations for Additional Premium or Return Premium. See id. at 4, ¶ 15 (allowing parties to discontinue adding new liabilities by not adding more Experience Periods). Though there are no new Experience Periods, the Plan continues to govern the process of performing Reconciliations of past Experience Periods. See id., Exh. A ¶ 5 (explaining that reconciliations "will continue to be conducted . . . until all losses . . . [for] the applicable Experience Periods are finally closed"). Indeed, by continuing to perform reconciliations long after September 1, 2000, and by stating that such reconciliations are "required by" the Plan, see, e.g., NCRIC SMF ¶ 58, NCRIC has implicitly acknowledged that the Plan remains in effect today.[23]

[22] There is no dispute that all of the claims for several Experience Periods are not yet closed.

B. NCRIC Mischaracterizes Columbia's Testimony Regarding the Agreement

In addition, Dr. Safa Rifka's testimony is not consistent with NCRIC's interpretation of the oral agreement. Although Dr. Rifka did not testify "that the parties agreed in 1996 to not make payments when the Retro Plan ended," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 8 (emphasis added), he said the exact same thing in a different way. Dr. Rifka testified that the parties agreed not to pay money under any circumstances until claims for a given year were closed, see Affidavit of Dr. Safa Rifka in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment ¶ 6 ("Rifka Aff.") (Exh. 17 to SMF), and that the oral agreement remains in effect, see id. ¶ 7. These statements contradict NCRIC's (unsupported) claim that the oral agreement ended when (it claims) the Plan ended.

NCRIC also posits, erroneously, that Dr. Rifka "lacks personal knowledge" as to the scope of the parties' oral agreement because he missed a meeting where the parties "confirmed their understanding" of the agreement in March 2000, NCRIC SJ Opp. at 8 (citing Fargis Dep. at [23] Columbia does not, as NCRIC argues, "concede that the Retro Plan expired on or about September 1, 2000," NCRIC SJ Opp. at 10 (citing Deposition of Larry Wilson, Jr., Tr., at 129 (Exh. C to NCRIC SJ Opp.). Columbia only admits that NCRIC purported to terminate the Plan on that date. Further, the lay witness whose testimony NCRIC cites for this proposition was not qualified to interpret, and did not purport to interpret, the Retro Plan.

731-32). The parties' oral agreement occurred in November 1996, in Dr. Rifka's presence[24] – and there is no evidence that Columbia agreed to amend it in March 2000 or at any other time. Even if the parties "confirmed" their understanding of their prior agreement in March 2000, as NCRIC contends, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 8, such a confirmation did not change the scope of the existing agreement. Moreover, the record shows that no mutual confirmation actually occurred at the parties' meeting in March 2000. Rather, at that meeting, NCRIC simply expressed to Columbia that, once the Plan "closed," NCRIC would cease to operate under the oral agreement – and, as a result, Columbia "knew . . . that [was] the way it was going to operate." Fargis Dep. at 731-32. There is no evidence whatsoever that Columbia agreed to this arrangement.[25] See id.

Accordingly, since the parties' oral agreement remains in effect, NCRIC must pay Columbia $765,000 for the closed Experience Periods, see Performing a Proper Reconciliation at 16; Columbia SJ Mem. at 12, and continue to perform reconciliations until all periods are closed.

IV. NCRIC Cannot Prove That Columbia Owed Premium Effective September 1, 2001 and It Cannot Recalculate the Amount Due Until September 1, 2002

NCRIC posits that "two reconciliations were sent [to Columbia] as of September 1, 2001; one for settlement purposes and one with [a] letter demanding payment per the Retro Plan."[26] NCRIC SJ Opp. at 10 (citing Fargis Dep. at 655-57). However, this Reconciliation spreadsheet is not in evidence. Further, the only testimony that it ever existed is equivocal at best. See Fargis Dep. at 655-56 (accepting Columbia's proffer that Fargis Deposition Exhibit 68 was the [24] There is no dispute that Dr. Rifka attended the meetings in November and December 1996 at which the agreement was discussed. See Rifka Aff. ¶¶ 2-6; accord Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Finance Committee Meeting Minutes (Nov. 20, 1996) (Exh. 30 to SMF2) (listing Dr. Rifka as present); Columbia Hospital for Women Foundation, Finance Committee Meeting Minutes (Nov. 7, 1996) (Exh. 29 to SMF2) (same); Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Finance Committee Meeting Minutes (Dec. 18, 1996) (Exh. 31 to SMF2) (same).

[25] At a minimum, there is a sufficient evidence to create a factual dispute in Columbia's favor.

[26] Under the Retro Plan (1) NCRIC was required to provide Columbia with a Reconciliation within 60 days of September 1, 2001 and (2) its provision of the Reconciliation was a condition precedent to Columbia owing premium for that Reconciliation 30 days later. See Columbia SJ Mem. at 12-13. NCRIC does not dispute this.

only spreadsheet it received purporting to be a September 1, 2001 Reconciliation, and yet, still equivocating about whether that spreadsheet was a settlement document).

Further, even if this equivocal testimony is enough to create a factual dispute regarding whether the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation spreadsheet existed at one time, and was sent to Columbia, there is no evidence that it still exists. Columbia does not have the spreadsheet, see SMF ¶ 55, and NCRIC never produced it in discovery, despite Columbia's repeated requests, see id. ¶¶ 55-57.[27] Nor did NCRIC attach the spreadsheet to its opposition brief. Indeed, it is implausible that NCRIC would not have produced the spreadsheet by now if it still existed.[28]

Without the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation, NCRIC cannot prove that Columbia owed any premium as of September 1, 2001, much less prove how much was due on that date.[29] NCRIC produced no other testimony or documentary evidence showing whether (or how much) premium Columbia owed as of September 1, 2001. This failure to produce any evidence that Columbia owed it money under the Retro Plan is fatal to NCRIC's contract claim. See Super. Ct. Civ. R. 56(e). Further, since the September 1, 2000 reconciliation is the most recent Reconciliation in evidence, Columbia must prevail on its contract claim. See Columbia SJ Mem. at 17 (NCRIC owed Columbia about $559,000 as of September 1, 2000); id. at 12 (NCRIC owed about $765,000 as of September 1, 2000 under the parties' oral agreement).[30]

[27] NCRIC is wrong to argue that it was improper for Columbia's counsel to testify, in a declaration, that NCRIC never produced the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation. Counsel was the only person in a position to make the statement, and it was well within his ambit. The declaration relates solely to discovery, and does not touch on the merits of the case, so it would never result in counsel testifying at trial. At most, it would be used in a discovery motion (with the Court's permission) or a motion in limine.

[28] If the spreadsheet does exist, NCRIC's failure to produce it renders it subject to a motion in limine or a motion to dismiss. See Super. Ct. Civ. R. 37; see, e.g., Deep South Constr., Inc. v. Slack, 546 S.E.2d 302, 305-06 (Ga. Ct. App. 2001) (dismissing breach of contract action for failure to produce evidence of the amount due).

[29] NCRIC's refusal to concede that it failed to produce the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation spreadsheet in discovery, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 11, is not evidence that it did produce the spreadsheet in discovery.

[30] Even if NCRIC had not miscalculated the amount of premium due as of the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, Columbia would only owe the amount due as of that date, not the amount due as of December 1, 2001.

NCRIC argues, incorrectly, that all it needed to produce was the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 10. However, even if Columbia owed Additional Premium as of September 1, 2000 (and it did not, see Columbia SJ Mem. at 17), that is no proof that it still owed premium one year later. As NCRIC admits, the amount of premium due can fluctuate from year to year. See NCRIC SMF ¶ 11; compare September 1, 1996 Reconciliation (showing that NCRIC owed $159,000) with September 1, 1997 Reconciliation (showing that Columbia owed $1.77 million).[31] That is why the Plan requires that NCRIC perform a Reconciliation to determine the amount of premium due, every year. See Addendum B, Exh. A, at 5, ¶ 5 (calling for annual Reconciliation on September 1 of each year). Moreover, there is no basis in the Retro Plan for allowing NCRIC to bill Columbia for premium based on a year-old Reconciliation. Compare id. at 5, ¶ 6 ("[t]he amount of additional or return premium due" after each Reconciliation is based on the result of that Reconciliation). As such, a Reconciliation from September 1, 2001, and not before, is necessary to prove that Columbia owes money now.

Nor did NCRIC cure its failure to produce a September 1, 2001 Reconciliation, as it contends, by producing an interim reconciliation, effective December 1, 2001, in January 2002, see NCRIC SJ Opp. at 11 n.3. Even if NCRIC had performed this interim reconciliation properly (and it did not, see supra n.2), Columbia would not owe the amount of Return Premium listed as due. Return Premium is due only once a year, within 90 days of the September 1 Reconciliation. See Addendum B, Exh. A, at 5, ¶ 5 (listing annual Reconciliation dates, and stating that the Reconciliation must provided to Columbia within 60 days, and premium is due 30 days after that). Interim reconciliations are not annual Reconciliations for which Additional Premium is due; they are quarterly updates, for informational purposes only. See Addendum B at 1, ¶ 10 (describing interim calculations as update regarding the "status of the . . . Plan"); compare id., Exh. A, at 5, ¶ 6 (making no mention of premium being due except at each annual Reconciliation). Further, NCRIC provided the interim reconciliation in January 2002, long after the 90-day period during which NCRIC is allowed to bill Columbia for its yearly Reconciliation. See SMF ¶ 22. As such, NCRIC missed its opportunity to bill Columbia for any amount it owed on September 1, 2001, and must wait until September 1, 2002.

[31] So far as Columbia or this Court knows, the addition of the 1999-2000 Experience Period to the Reconciliation as of September 1, 2001 could have led to a large swing in the amount of premium due, in Columbia's favor.

Yet, even if NCRIC were allowed to cure its error and bill Columbia belatedly for the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation, the December 1, 2001 Interim Reconciliation did not serve that function. There is no way to tell from that spreadsheet what amount was due on September 1, 2001 – and what additional amounts have accrued since then (e.g., new Loss Reserves, new Paid Losses, etc.). See SMF ¶ 79. Plus, NCRIC applied the (higher) Development Factors applicable to December 1, 2001, rather than the factors applicable September 1, 2001. Compare September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (applying annual Development Factors) with Spreadsheet Entitled "Columbia Hospital for Women Retro-Program Years: Sept 30, 1993 – Sept 30, 2000" (Jan. 7, 2002) (applying interim Development Factors). Since there is no evidence of what amount, if any, Columbia owed on September 1, 2001, NCRIC's contract claim must fail.

Conclusion

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reasons, Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment should be granted in its entirety. (An errata proposed order is submitted herewith.)

Performing a Proper Reconciliation of the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ["Retro Plan"] (Example: September 1, 2000 Reconciliation)

I. Calculate the Retrospective Rating Premium ("Retro Premium") for each Experience Period by using the Retrospective Rating Premium Formula ("Retro Formula"). See Addendum B to Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. A at 5, ¶ 3 ("Addendum B") (Exh. 5 to Statement of Material Facts Not In Dispute ("SMF")).

II. Limit the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by applying the Minimum Premium or Maximum Premium, if applicable. See id.

III. Calculate the Additional Premium or Return Premium due for each Experience Period by subtracting the Retro Premium (as limited by any applicable minimum or maximum) from the Deposit Premium for each Experience Period. See id. ¶ 6.

IV. Calculate the total Additional Premium or Return Premium for all Experience Periods that are properly subject to Reconciliation. See id. ¶ 6.

V. Apply a credit for Columbia's deposit and/or for NCRIC's payment to obtain the current total premium due. See NCRIC's Statement of Material Facts ¶ 68 ("NCRIC SMF").

I. Calculate the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by using the Retro Formula:

Retro Premium = { [(Loss Reserves x Development Factor) + Paid Losses] x Discount Factor } + Basic Premium. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 5, ¶ 3.

A. Calculate: (Loss Reserves x Development Factor) = "Developed Losses"

1. Obtain NCRIC's Loss Reserves from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

Here, NCRIC's September 1, 2000 Reconciliation is used as an example.[1] See Spreadsheet Entitled "Columbia Hospital for Women Retro-Program Years: Sept. 01, 1993 – August 31, 2000" (Sept. 6, 2000) (Exh. 2 to Defendant's Reply in Support of Motion for Summary Judgment ("Reply")) ("Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation").

NCRIC's Loss Reserves appear in Row 7 (entitled "Total Reserves") of its reconciliation spreadsheets. See Answers of Plaintiff to Interrogatories of Defendant, Interrogatory Response No. 3 (Exh. 21 to SMF) ("Interrogatory Response No.") (explaining that Row 7 is the sum of indemnity and expense reserves – i.e., Loss Reserves as defined in the Plan).

As of September 1, 2000, NCRIC listed its Loss Reserves as:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$0	$0	$1,185,000
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$1,352,000	$1,040,000	$3,565,000

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (listing Loss Reserves for 1994-95 through 1998-99 Experience Periods); Spreadsheet Entitled "Columbia Hospital for Women Retro-Program Years 9/1/1993 – 8/31/1999" (Oct. 11, 1999) (Exh. 8 to SMF) ("September 1, 1999 Reconciliation") (listing Loss Reserves for 1993-94 Experience Period).[2]

[1] This step-by-step Reconciliation also is summarized in spreadsheet form. See Spreadsheet Entitled "Se[pt]ember 1, 2000 Reconciliation – NCRIC's Calculations With All Three Changes" (Exh. 14 to SMF) ("Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation") (summary exhibit performing Reconciliation using dollar values used by NCRIC, except applying proper Deposit Premium factor, Minimum Premium factor and Development factors).

[2] NCRIC does not list its calculations for the 1993-94 Experience Period on the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation spreadsheet. Instead, those calculations appear on the September 1, 1999 Reconciliation spreadsheet. Because all claims for the 1993-94 period are closed, that year is "closed," and the totals for that period do not change from year to year. See Deposition of Stephen S. Fargis, Tr. at 305 ("Fargis Dep.") (Exh. 4 hereto) (explaining that dollar amounts do not change after a year is "closed"). As such, all dollar values for the 1993-94 Experience Period were the same on September 1, 2000, as they were on September 1, 1999.

2. Obtain the proper Development Factors from the Retro Plan, as amended.

The Development Factors used by NCRIC appear in Row 12 (entitled "Development Factor") of its reconciliation spreadsheets.[3] See Responses to Defendant's Requests for Admissions, Response Nos. 52-61 ("RFA Response No.") (Exh. 22 to SMF). However, NCRIC applied those Development Factors incorrectly. See Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment at 8, 15-17 ("Columbia SJ Mem.").

For the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, the proper Development Factors, set by the Retro Plan were:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
105%	105%	105%
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
80%	65%	55%

See id. (explaining proper application of Development Factors); see also id. at 6-8 (explaining Development Factors); Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. E at 1-2 (Exh. 1 to SMF) ("Retro Plan") (example of proper application of Development Factors); SMF ¶¶ 46-47 (discussing Exh. E to Retro Plan); Addendum B-1999 to Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. A.1., at 1 (Exh. 6 to SMF) ("Addendum B-1999") (definition of Development Factors); Addendum B, Exh. A at 5, ¶ 7 (same); compare Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (listing proper Development Factors).

3. For each Experience Period, multiply the applicable Loss Reserve, see supra, I.A.1, by the proper Development Factor, see supra, I.A.2, to obtain the Developed Losses.[4]

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$0 x 105% = $0	$0 x 105% = $0	$1,185,000 x 105% = $1,244,250
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$1,352,000 x 80% = $1,081,600	$1,040,000 x 65% = $676,000	$3,565,000 x 55% = $1,960,750

[3] For the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC used the following Development Factors: 105% for the 1993-94 through the 1996-97 Experience Periods, 80% for the 1997-98 Experience Period, and 65% for the 1998-99 Experience Period.

[4] All amounts used throughout this example are rounded to the nearest whole dollar amount.

16d-001412

B. Calculate: [Developed Losses + Paid Losses] = "Total Losses"

1. Obtain NCRIC's Paid Losses from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

NCRIC's Paid Losses appear in Row 10 (entitled "Total Paid") of its reconciliation spreadsheets. See Interrogatory Response No. 4 (explaining that Row 10 is total of indemnity and expense payments -- i.e., Paid Losses as defined by the Plan). As of September 1, 2000, NCRIC listed its Paid Losses as:

1993-94 Experience Period $960,368	1994-95 Experience Period $1,716,454	1995-96 Experience Period $1,052,447
1996-97 Experience Period $1,785,648	1997-98 Experience Period $648,723	1998-99 Experience Period $581,307

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (1994-95 through 1998-99 Experience Periods); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (1993-94 Experience Period).

2. Add the Developed Losses, see supra, I.A.3, to the Paid Losses, see supra, I.B.1, to obtain the Total Losses.

1993-94 Experience Period $0 + $960,368 = $960,368	1994-95 Experience Period $0 + $1,716,454 = $1,716,454	1995-96 Experience Period $1,244,250+ $1,052,447 = $2,296,697
1996-97 Experience Period $1,081,600 + $1,785,648 = $2,867,248	1997-98 Experience Period $676,000+ $648,723 = $1,324,723	1998-99 Experience Period $1,960,750 + $581,307 = $2,542,057

16d-001413

C. Calculate: { [Total Losses] x Discount Factor } = "Discounted Total Losses"

1. Obtain the Discount Factor from the Retro Plan.

The Discount Factor is the same for every Experience Period – 86.33%. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (definition of Discount Factor). The Discount Factor does not appear on NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets.

2. Multiply the Discount Factor, see I.C.1, supra, by the Total Losses, see I.B.2, supra, to obtain the Discounted Total Losses.

As of September 1, 2000, the Discounted Total Losses were:

1993-94 Experience Period
$960,368 x 86.33% = $829,086

1994-95 Experience Period
$1,716,454 x 86.33% = $1,481,815

1995-96 Experience Period
$2,296,697 x 86.33% = $1,982,739

1996-97 Experience Period
$2,867,248 x 86.33% = $2,475,295

1997-98 Experience Period
$1,324,723 x 86.33% = $1,143,633

1998-99 Experience Period
$2,542,057 x 86.33% = $2,194,558

16d-001414

D. Calculate: Discounted Total Losses + Basic Premium = Retro Premium

1. Obtain the Basic Premium for each Experience Period from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Basic Premium is calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium for each Experience Period by the Basic Premium factor. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (definition of Basic Premium listing multiplier known as the "Basic Premium Factor").[5] However, because Columbia does not dispute NCRIC's Basic Premium calculations,[6] the Basic Premium may be taken directly from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Basic Premium for each Experience Period appears in Row 4 (entitled "Basic") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets. See Interrogatory Response No. 2; RFA Response Nos. 38-51.

As of September 1, 2000, the Basic Premium for each Experience Period was:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$465,631	$479,083	$553,728
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$588,609	$562,555	$607,868

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (1994-95 through 1998-99 Experience Periods); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (1993-94 Experience Period).

[5] To calculate the Basic Premium: First, the Basic Premium factor is 16.84% for every Experience Period. See RFA Response Nos. 37, 40, 43, 46, 49 (Basic Premium factor is calculated by adding the administrative expense charge of $14.04% to the insurance charge factor of 2.8%); see also Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7. The Basic Premium factor appears in Row 3 (entitled "Basic Premium Ch.") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets. See RFA Response Nos. 37-51. Second, the Subject Premium calculated by NCRIC for each Experience Period appears in Row 1 (entitled "Subject (1st 500 Layer)") of its reconciliation spreadsheets, see RFA Response Nos. 4-13; Interrogatory Response No. 2 (explaining purported Subject Premium calculations). Third, the Basic Premium factor and the Subject Premium are multiplied together to obtain the Basic Premium. See RFA Response Nos. 37-51; see also Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (definition of Basic Premium); Interrogatory Response No. 2. (explaining Basic Premium calculations).

[6] Columbia assumes (but does not admit), for the purposes of its motion, that NCRIC's Subject Premium calculations are correct. See SMF ¶ 21.

2. Add the Discounted Total Losses, see I.C.2, supra, to the Basic Premium, see I.D.1, supra, to obtain the Retro Premium.

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$829,086 + $465,631 = $1,294,717	$1,481,815 + $479,083 = $1,960,898	$1,982,739 + $553,728 = $2,536,467
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$ 2,475,295 + $588,609 = $3,063,904	$1,143,633 + $562,555 = $1,706,188	$2,194,558 + $607,868 = $2,802,426

Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the proper Retro Premium for each Experience Period was:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$1,294,717	$1,960,898	$2,536,467
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$3,063,904	$1,706,188	$2,802,426

Compare Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (same Retro Premiums, with minor differences due to rounding).[7]

16d-0014-16

[7] The Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation lists the Retro Premium for each Experience Period twice. For the 1993-94 Experience Period, the upper Retro Premium listed is correct; the lower listing is a typographical error. (It is actually the Minimum Premium.) This error has no effect on the overall calculations.

II. Limit the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by applying the Minimum Premium or Maximum Premium, if applicable.

A. Calculate Minimum Premium for each Experience Period.

1. Obtain the Minimum Premium for some Experience Periods from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Minimum Premium for each Experience Period is calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium for each Experience Period by the Minimum Premium factor for that Experience Period. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (definition of Minimum Premium listing multiplier known as the "Minimum Premium factor"). Because Columbia does not dispute NCRIC's Minimum Premium calculations for the 1995-96 Experience Period through the 1998-99 Experience Period,[8] the Minimum Premium for those periods may be taken from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Minimum Premium for each Experience Period appears in Row 18 (entitled "Min. Premium") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets. See RFA Response Nos. 102-03, 106-07, 110-11, 114-15, 118-19.

As of September 1, 2000, the Minimum Premiums for Experience Periods 1995-96 through 1998-99 were:

1995-96 Experience Period
$1,972,902
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$2,097,183	$2,004,354	$2,165,800

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation.

[8] But see supra, n.6.

16d-0041417

2. Calculate the proper Minimum Premium for other Experience Periods.

a. Obtain the proper Minimum Premium factor for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods from the Retro Plan, as amended.

The proper Minimum Premium factor for the 1993-94 Experience Period and the 1994-95 Experience Period is the same as for every other Experience Period – 60%. See Columbia SJ Mem. at 8, 13-14 (explaining proper application of Minimum Premium factor); see also Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (definition of Minimum Premium); Addendum to Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (Exh. 4 to SMF) ("Addendum") (same).[9]

b. Obtain the Subject Premium for the 1993-94 Experience Period and the 1994-95 Experience Period from NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Subject Premium NCRIC calculates for each Experience Period appears in Row 1 (entitled "Subject (1st 500 Layer)") of its reconciliation spreadsheets. See RFA Response Nos. 4-13; Interrogatory Response No. 2.

As of September 1, 2000, NCRIC calculated the Subject Premiums for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods as:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period
$2,765,029	$2,844,913

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (1994-95 Experience Period); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (1993-94 Experience Period).

c. Multiply the Subject Premium, see II.A.2.b, supra, by the Minimum Premium factor, see II.A.2.a, supra, to obtain the Minimum Premium.

$2,765,029 x 60% = $1,659,017	$2,844,913 x 60% = $1,706,948

[9] The text in the Addendum is a typographical error, which NCRIC fixed in Addendum B. See Fargis Dep. at 453.

3. Substitute the Minimum Premium for the Retro Premium for any year where the latter falls below the former. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (Minimum Premium is the minimum Retro Premium).

As of September 1, 2000, the Retro Premium fell below the Minimum Premium for the 1993-94 and 1997-98 Experience Periods. Compare supra, I.D.2 with supra, II.A.1 & II.A.2.c.

Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the proper Retro Premium (as limited by the proper Minimum Premium) for each Experience Period was:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$1,659,017	$1,960,898	$2,536,467
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$3,063,904	$2,004,354	$2,802,426

B. Calculate the Maximum Premium for each Experience Period (not necessary for this Reconciliation).

The Maximum Premium for each Experience Period is calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium for each Experience Period by the Maximum Premium factor for that Experience Period.[10] See Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (definition of Maximum Premium listing multiplier known as the "Maximum Premium factor"). However, neither party disputes that, as of September 1, 2000, no Retro Premium for any Experience Period exceeded the Maximum Premium.[11] See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation. Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the Maximum Premiums did not impact the calculation of any amount of Additional Premium or Return Premium.

[10] To calculate the Maximum Premiums: First, the proper Maximum Premium factor for every Experience Period is 133%, see Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (definition); SMF ¶ 33. Second, NCRIC's Subject Premium for each Experience Period appears in Row 1 of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheet. See supra, p. 9; Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation. Third, these two values for each Experience Period must be multiplied together to obtain the Maximum Premium for each Experience Period.

III. Calculate the Additional Premium or Return Premium due for each Experience Period by subtracting the Retro Premium (as limited by any applicable minimum or maximum) from the Deposit Premium for each Experience Period.

A. Calculate the proper Deposit Premium.

1. Obtain the proper Deposit Premium for some Experience Periods from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Deposit Premium for each Experience Period is calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium for each Experience Period by the Deposit Premium factor for that Experience Period. See RFA Response Nos. 14-17, 24-27 (NCRIC's Deposit Premium calculations for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods). However, because Columbia does not dispute NCRIC's Deposit Premium calculations for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods,[12] the Deposit Premium for those periods may be taken from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Deposit Premium appears in Row 2 (entitled "Deposit") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets. See RFA Response Nos. 14-26.

As of September 1, 2000, the correct Deposit Premiums for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods are:

$2,246,587	$2,311,491

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (1994-95 Experience Period); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (1993-94 Experience Period).

16d-001420

[12] But see supra, n.6.

2. Multiply the Subject Premium by the Deposit Premium factor for other Experience Periods to Determine Deposit Premium.

a. Obtain the Subject Premium for the 1995-96 Experience Period through the 1998-99 Experience Period from NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheet.

As of September 1, 2000, NCRIC lists the Subject Premium, see supra, p. II.A.2.b., as:

$3,288,170

1996-97 Experience Period
$3,495,306

1997-98 Experience Period
$3,340,590

1998-99 Experience Period
$3,609,667

b. Obtain the Deposit Premium factor for the 1995-96 Experience Period through the 1998-99 Experience Period.

NCRIC uses a Deposit Premium factor of about 62% for the 1995-96 through 1998-99 Experience Periods. See RFA Response Nos. 18-23, 28-36. However, the proper Deposit Premium factor for those Experience Periods is 67%. See Columbia SJ Mem. at 8, 14-15 (explaining proper Deposit premium factor); see also Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (definition of Deposit Premium listing multiplier known as the "Deposit Premium factor").

c. Multiply the Subject Premium, see supra, III.A.2.a, by the Deposit Premium factor, see supra, III.A.2.b, to determine the Deposit Premium.

1995-96 Experience Period
$3,288,170 x 67% = $2,203,074

1996-97 Experience Period
$3,495,306 x 67% = $2,341,855

1997-98 Experience Period
3,340,590 x 67% x = $2,238,195

1998-99 Experience Period
$3,609,667 x 67% = $2,418,476

16d-001421

B. Calculate the proper Additional Premium or Return Premium for each Experience Period.

1. Subtract the Retro Premium (as limited by the minimum) for each Experience Period from the Deposit Premium for that period.[13]

$2,246,587 - $1,659,017 = $587,570

1994-95 Experience Period
$2,311,491 - $1,960,898 = $350,593

1995-96 Experience Period
$2,203,074 - $2,536,467= ($333,393)

1996-97 Experience Period
$2,341,855 - $3,063,904 = ($722,049)

1997-98 Experience Period
$2,238,195 - $2,004,354 = $233,841

$2,418,476 - $2,802,426 = ($383,950)

2. A positive balance for an Experience Period means that Return Premium is due for that period, whereas a negative balance means that Additional Premium is due for that period. [14]

* * *

Therefore, for the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, the proper Additional Premium or Return Premium for each Experience Period was:

1993-94 Experience Period
Return Premium $587,570

1994-95 Experience Period
Return Premium $350,593

1995-96 Experience Period
Additional Premium $333,393

1996-97 Experience Period
Additional Premium $722,049

1997-98 Experience Period
Return Premium $233,841

1998-99 Experience Period
Additional Premium $383,950

[13] NCRIC subtracts the Deposit Premium from the Retro Premium. The difference in sign has no effect on the overall premium calculations.

[14] Because NCRIC subtracts backwards, see supra, n.13, on its reconciliation spreadsheets, the opposite is true: a negative balance means that Return Premium is due and a positive balance means that Additional Premium is due, see SMF ¶¶ 36, 37.

IV. Calculate the total Additional Premium or Return Premium for all Experience Periods that are properly subject to Reconciliation.

A. Under the Plan as modified by the parties' oral agreement, calculate the Additional Premium and/or Return Premium is due only for "closed" Experience Periods. See NCRIC SMF ¶ 10; Columbia SJ Mem. at 9, 10-11.

1. Determine which Experience Periods are "closed."

Closed Experience Periods are those for which there are no outstanding claims – and therefore, no Loss Reserves. See Fargis Dep. at 648-49.

As of September 1, 2000, only the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods had no Loss Reserves, and therefore, were closed. See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (showing no Loss Reserves for 1994-95 Experience Period); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (showing no Loss Reserves for 1993-94 Experience Period).

2. Obtain the total Additional Premium or Return Premium, see supra, III.B.2., for each closed Experience Period, see supra, IV.A.1. Add these amounts to obtain the total Additional or Return Premium.

1993-94 Experience Period		1994-95 Experience Period		Total Return Premium
$587,570	+	$350,593	=	$938,163

Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the proper total Return Premium due under the parties' oral agreement was $ 938,163.

16d-001423

B. Absent the oral agreement, calculate the cumulative Additional Premium or Return Premium for all Experience Periods that are properly subject to Reconciliation.

1. Determine what Experience Periods are subject to Reconciliation.

As of September 1, 2000, all Experience Periods prior to the 1999-2000 Experience Period were properly subject to reconciliation. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 5, ¶ 5 (Reconciliation date for experience periods; 1998-99 Experience Period is first subject to reconciliation on September 1, 2000); Addendum B-1999, Exh. A.1., at 1 (1999-2000 Experience Period is first subject to reconciliation on September 1, 2001).

2. Obtain the sum of the Additional Premium and/or Return Premium, see supra, III.B.2, for each Experience Period that is properly subject to Reconciliation, see supra, IV.B.1, to obtain the cumulative Additional Premium.

1993-94 Experience Period		1994-95 Experience Period		1995-96 Experience Period
$587,570	+	$350,593	+	($333,393)
1996-97 Experience Period		1997-98 Experience Period		1998-99 Experience Period
($722,049)	+	$233,841	+	($383,950)

	Cumulative Additional Premium
=	($ 267,388)

* * *

Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the proper cumulative Additional Premium, absent the oral agreement, was $ 267,388.

16d-001424

V. Apply a credit for Columbia's deposit and/or for NCRIC's payment, to obtain the current total premium due.

A. Under the oral agreement, credit NCRIC for the amount it already paid to Columbia.

NCRIC paid Columbia $172,815 for 1993-94 Experience Period. See NCRIC SMF ¶ 46; SMF ¶ 71. This credit must be subtracted from the total Return Premium, see supra, IV.A.2, to determine the current total due.

Return Premium		NCRIC Credit		Current Total Premium Due

Therefore, for the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, under the parties oral agreement, the proper current total Return Premium is $765,348.[15] Compare Columbia SJ Mem. at 12.

B. Absent the oral agreement, both NCRIC's payment and Columbia's deposit must be credited.

NCRIC admits that Columbia's deposit must be credited towards any cumulative total due under the Retro Plan. See NCRIC SMF ¶ 68; accord Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (applying $1,000,000 credit to Columbia).

Therefore, for the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, absent the oral agreement, the proper current total Return Premium due is approximately $ 559,797.[16] Compare Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation; (showing amount due of $559,798, due to different rounding); Columbia SJ Mem. at 17.

---

[15] The amount does not include any interest that Columbia is owed for the $1 million deposit, about which there is a dispute of material fact. See Statement of Material Facts in Dispute ¶¶ 36, 68.

Statements in Columbia's SMF[1]

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
1	Columbia is a non-profit hospital specializing in care for women.	Fact	None
2	NCRIC provides malpractice liability insurance to physicians in, among other jurisdictions, the District of Columbia.	Fact	None
3	On or about October 23, 1993, Columbia and NCRIC entered into the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Retro Plan" or "Plan").	Mixed fact and law	None
4	The Plan was drafted by representatives of NCRIC, including David Little and/or David Bickerstaff.	Fact	None
5	The Plan was to be effective for three years, from September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1996.	Terms of Plan	NCRIC SMF ¶ 4 (admitted).[2]
6	The parties agreed to two, related amendments of the Plan in January 1996.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SMF ¶¶ 17-18 (admitted).
6	Amendment A was drafted by Mr. Fargis.	Fact	None
7	The Plan initially expired on September 1, 1996.	Mixed fact and law	None
7	Soon thereafter, on November 7, November 20, and December 18, 1996, NCRIC representatives Steve Fargis and William Burgess met with Columbia's Board of Directors, and the Finance Committee of the Board.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶ 22 (admitted).
7	Based on NCRIC's representations at that meeting about the cost of the Plan, Columbia agreed to renew the Plan, effective January 1, 1997, for one year	Mixed fact and law	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
7	The parties engaged in extensive negotiations concerning new terms for the Plan, but did not agree on the terms of the amendment.	Fact	None
8	NCRIC admits that the Retro Plan subsequently was renewed by three separate addenda.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶¶ 21, 45, 50 (admitted).
8	First, on or about January 26, 1998, representatives of NCRIC and Columbia signed an addendum with an effective date of September 1, 1996.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SMF ¶ 21 (admitted).
8	Second, on or about December 3, 1998, representatives of NCRIC and Columbia signed an addendum with an effective date of September 1, 1998.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SMF ¶ 45 (admitted).
8	Third, on or about August 23, 1999, representatives of NCRIC and Columbia signed an addendum with an effective date of September 1, 1999.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SMF ¶ 50 (admitted).
8	NCRIC drafted each of these amendments.	Fact	None
9	On June 28, 2000, NCRIC informed Columbia that the Retro Plan was "terminated" effective September 1, 2000.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶ 55 (admitted).
9	NCRIC's notice of "termination" failed to provide Columbia with "(90) days' written notice prior to the end of any Experience Period," as required by the Plan.	Mixed fact and law	None
9	Yet, even if the Plan was discontinued, it "remain[s] in full force and effect until . . . [all] Experience Period[s] . . . are finally closed."	Terms of Plan	None
10	Columbia and NCRIC entered into the Plan in order to share the risk of sponsoring a discount on NCRIC medical malpractice liability insurance for a group of physicians practicing at Columbia, known as "Attending Faculty."	Fact	None
10	Under the Plan, each Attending Faculty member was to receive a Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsement from NCRIC, which entitled the holder to a substantial discount off the premium for $500,000 of malpractice coverage by NCRIC.	Terms of plan	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
11	When the parties entered into the Retro Plan, the premium discount ("Attending Faculty discount") was 19% off the cost of $500,000 in malpractice coverage.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SMF ¶ 5 (admitted).
11	The discount to physicians remained at that level through December 31, 1995.	Mixed fact and law	None
12	The Attending Faculty discount increased to 33% effective September 1, 1995.	Mixed fact and law	None
13	This increase in the Attending Faculty discount was not retroactive.	Undisputed background law	None
13	That is, the discount did not cause NCRIC to refund premium to Attending Faculty.	Fact	None
14	Nor did the increase in the Attending Faculty discount, to 33%, actually occur on September 1, 1995.	Mixed fact and law	None
14	In fact, the discount changed on January 1, 1996.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SMF ¶ 20 (admitted).
14	As such, a higher discount – 38% – was used temporarily, to give effect to the 33% discount over the course of the September 1, 1995 to September 1, 1996 year.	Terms of Plan	None
14	Using a 38% discount for three quarters after employing a 19% discount for one quarter resulted in a 33% discount for the year [i.e., (¼ * 19%) + (¾ * 38%) = approximately 33%)].	By calculation	None
15	The Plan was originally comprised of three one-year periods, called Experience Periods.	Terms of Plan	None
15	The first Experience Period ran from September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1994; the second Experience Period ran from September 1, 1994 to September 1, 1995; the third Experience Period ran from September 1, 1995 to September 1, 1996.	Terms of Plan	None
16	Subsequent amendments, NCRIC admits, added the fourth and fifth Experience Periods, from September 1, 1996 to September 1, 1998; the sixth Experience Period, from on September 1, 1998 to September 1, 1999; and the seventh Experience Period from September 1, 1999 to September 1, 2000.	Terms of Plan	None
16	No additional Experience Periods have been added since then.	Mixed fact and law	None

16d-001431

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
17	The Retro Plan calls for NCRIC to perform retrospective calculations, or Reconciliations, each year, starting with September 1, 1996.	Terms of Plan	NCRIC SMF ¶ 7 (admitted).
18	Individual Experience Periods are reconciled separately to determine whether, for that such Period, Columbia owes NCRIC money or vice versa.	Terms of Plan	None
18	Then, the amount for each Experience Period is added up to obtain a cumulative total.	Terms of Plan	None
19	Typically, after each Reconciliation, NCRIC provides Columbia with a spreadsheet listing all the individual Experience Periods, with a cumulative total at the right side.	Fact	None
19	NCRIC is required to provide this spreadsheet, or similar notice, within 60 days of the end of each Experience Period – after which time Columbia has 30 days to pay any premium due.	Terms of Plan	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 9, 10 (admitted).
19	Further, Reconciliations are performed anew, every year for every Experience Period.	Terms of Plan	None
19	This repeated recalculation continues to occur until all claims for each Period are closed.	Terms of Plan	None
20	Subject Premium is "the total of the undiscounted premiums that would be charged to physician[s] for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim . . . if the physician[s] were not Plan Participants."	Terms of Plan	None
21	All premiums under the Retro Plan are calculated by applying multipliers to the Subject Premium.	Terms of Plan	None
21	As such, it is an extremely important number to be able to evaluate.	Fact	None
21	However, the process by which NCRIC calculates the Subject Premium is opaque, since the Plan only provides a range, not an exact formula.	Logic	None
21	Further, the Plan puts the actual determination of the amount of Subject Premium in the hands of NCRIC's consulting actuary.	Terms of Plan	None
21	Columbia has not, to date, received from NCRIC the data necessary to perform a full audit [of] the Subject Premium number.	Terms of Plan	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
21	(Yet, even without performing even a detailed audit, Columbia has identified several errors in NCRIC's past Subject Premium calculations.)	Fact	None
21	Accordingly, Columbia assumes for the purposes of its motion, but does not concede, that NCRIC's Subject Premium numbers are correct.	Fact	None
22	The Reconciliation Date is September 1 of each year.	Terms of Plan	None
22	NCRIC must complete its Reconciliation and notify Columbia of the details concerning the amount it owes, in writing, "[w]ithin (60) days" of each Reconciliation Date.	Terms of Plan	None
22	Columbia could not have been expected to make the complicated calculations necessary to determine what was owed at each Reconciliation, particularly since it did not have access to much of the information necessary to make the calculations (e.g., information about Loss Reserves).	Logic	None
22	As such, NCRIC's notice is no mere formality. Indeed, the language of the Plan makes notice a condition precedent to Columbia's being liable for any amount due under the Plan.	Undisputed background law	None
23	In the original Plan, the first Reconciliation of each Experience Period was two years after the Period ended.	Terms of Plan	None
23	Since the Plan was (allegedly) amended effective September 1, 1996, Experience Periods are now reconciled for the first time just one year after they end.	Terms of Plan	None
24	Deposit Premium is "the Subject Premium multiplied [by] sixty-seven (67%)." [alteration in SMF]	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 16 (denied).[3]
24	The current Deposit Premium was first documented in the Addendum, which was signed in January 1998 and retroactive to September 1, 1996 – yet, the actual effective date for the current Deposit Premium is September 1, 1995.	Terms of Plan	None

16d-001433

[3] Opposition of Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. to Defendant Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment ("NCRIC SJ Opp.").

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
24	As set forth in the Addendum, the 67% Deposit Premium was to be effective for the "three-year term of the Plan" – that is, for the most recent three Experience Periods only.	Terms of Plan	None
24	This restriction was consistent with the explicit limitation on an earlier, temporary amendment to the Deposit Premium which "[did] not adjust the Agreement prior to [its effective] date" (January 1, 1996).	Mixed fact and law	None
24	Further, the restriction on the new Deposit Premium precisely matched the restriction on the Deposit Premium's mirror term, Attending Faculty discount.	Terms of Plan	None
24	In short, the Addendum modified the Deposit Premium so that – as NCRIC concedes – the 67% number does not apply to the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods, in any Reconciliation.	Undisputed background law	None
25	Originally, the Plan defined Deposit Premium as "the Subject Premium multiplied by eighty-one percent (81%)."	Terms of Plan	None
25	By making Deposit Premium (1) the inverse of the Attending Faculty discount (which is the Subject Premium less a 19% discount and (2) a set-off against the Retrospective Premium (which is the actual cost of providing the insurance, the Plan carefully defined the role of Deposit Premium: it is the total amount on "deposit" with NCRIC as a result of the Attending Faculty premium payments for $500,000 each in medical malpractice coverage.	Terms of Plan	None
25	In short, Deposit Premium is a credit to Columbia for the Attending Faculty's premium.	Mixed fact and law	None
26	In order to retain its function as the Attending Faculty's "deposit," the Deposit Premium multiplier must remain the inverse of the Attending Faculty discount.	Fact	None
26	If the Attending Faculty discount changes, the Deposit Premium must change.	Fact	None
26	In fact, throughout the life of the Plan, the terms have moved together: originally, they were 81% and 19%; then, briefly, they were 62% and 38%; finally, they are 67% and 33%.	Terms of Plan	None
26	(This connection is well-known to NCRIC, and particularly, Steve Fargis.)	Fact	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
27	Similarly, when the 67% Deposit Premium was amended effective September 1, 1995, the change occurred in exactly the same way as the change to the 33% Attending Faculty discount occurred.	Mixed fact and law	None
27	First, the Deposit Premium actually changed on January 1, 1996.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SMF ¶ 20 (admitted).
27	Second, a temporary Deposit Premium multiplier – here, 62% – was used to give effect to the new 67% Deposit Premium multiplier over the course of the full 1995-96 year.	Terms of Plan	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 16-17 (denied).
27	Third, the result was, effectively, a change on September 1, 1995 – because nine months of a 62% Deposit Premium, after three months of an 81% Deposit Premium, is the same as a 67% discount of over 12 months [i.e., (¼ * 81%) + (¾ * 62%) = approximately 67%)].	Mixed fact and law	None
27	In sum, the change in the Deposit Premium to 62% occurred, on its face, simply to effectuate the new 67% Deposit Premium part-way through a Plan year.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 16 (denied).
28	Although the Plan does not make the connection between Deposit Premium and Attending Faculty discount explicit, the logic of the Plan makes the connection implicit.	Logic	None
28	Indeed, NCRIC concedes that the connection exists by employing, in current Reconciliations, the 81% Deposit Premium for the Experience Periods where the Attending Faculty discount was 19%.	Mixed fact and law	None
28	Indeed, NCRIC admits that 81% is the correct multiplier to apply for those years.	Mixed fact and law	None
28	As such, there is no doubt: the new Deposit Premium applies only to the last five Experience Periods.	Undisputed background law	None
29	In addition, there is no doubt that Deposit Premium factor stated in the Plan is 67%, not 62%.	Terms of Plan	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 17 n.5 (admitted).
29	NCRIC's 30(b)(6) designee, Stephen Fargis, has repeatedly affirmed this.	Fact	None
29	Since NCRIC drafted of the language changing the Deposit Premium – not once but twice – and also reviewed it, it knew that the Plan said 67%, not 62% from the outset.	Fact	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
30	Finally, the Plan's language places no limitations on the applicability of the Deposit Premium to any particular Experience Period.	Terms of Plan	None
30	Yet, the term's role as the inverse of the Attending Faculty discount reflects the parties' intent to limit its applicability, as set forth above.	Mixed fact and law	None
31	Retrospective Premium ("Retro Premium") represents, for each Experience Period, the total cost of providing $500,000 in malpractice insurance coverage to all the Attending Faculty.	Mixed fact and law	None
31	As such, the Retro Premium is subtracted from the Deposit Premium to determine how much is owed (and by whom) for each year.	Terms of Plan	None
31	Each year, the Retro Premium for each Experience Period is recalculated as of each Reconciliation Date, by applying the Retrospective Rating Premium Formula ("Retro Formula"): "Retrospective Premium (Subject to established Minimum and Maximum Premium) = {[[(Loss Reserves) x (Development Factor)] + Paid Losses] x Discount Factor} + Basic Premium."	Terms of Plan	None
32	Minimum Premium is the minimum Retro Premium for a[n] Experience Period, currently, "sixty percent (60%) of the Subject Premium."	Terms of Plan	NCRIC SMF ¶ 16 (admitted).
32	The language of the Plan places no limitations whatsoever on the application of the Minimum Premium to any particular Experience Period(s).	Terms of Plan	None
32	Unlike with the Deposit Premium, there is no logical basis for imposing any implicit limitations on the application of the Minimum Premium to certain Experience Periods.	Logic	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 10 (denied).
33	Maximum Premium is the maximum Retro Premium for a particular Experience Period, currently "one hundred and thirty-three percent (133%) of the Subject Premium."	Terms of Plan	NCRIC SMF ¶ 16 (admitted).
33	As with the similar Minimum Premium, the Plan's definition does not limit the applicability of the Maximum Premium to any particular Experience Period(s).	Terms of Plan	None
34	In the original Plan, the Minimum Premium was 75% of the Subject Premium.	Terms of Plan	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
34	The Minimum Premium was first changed in January 1998, effective September 1, 1996.	Mixed fact and law	None
34	(In the original Plan, the Maximum Premium was 115% of the Subject Premium; it changed to 133% effective September 1, 1996.)	Terms of Plan	None
35	An obvious typographical error in the first amended definition of Minimum Premium was corrected by the second amendment.	Fact	None
35	(A similar error in the amended definition of Maximum Premium was similarly repaired.)	Fact	None
35	NCRIC caught its prior error, and corrected it, while reviewing the first amendment and drafting the second.	Fact	None
36	Additional Premium is indicated by a positive balance (i.e., in NCRIC's favor), either for an individual Experience Period or cumulative for the entire Plan, in a Reconciliation spreadsheet.	Fact	None
36	Additional Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is greater than the Deposit Premium.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶ 15 (admitted).
37	Return Premium is indicated by a negative balance (i.e., in Columbia's favor), either for an individual Experience Period or cumulative for the entire Plan, in a Reconciliation spreadsheet.	Fact	None
37	Return Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is less than the Deposit Premium.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶ 15 (admitted).
38	Experience Period: each year of the Plan is a separate Experience Period.	Terms of Plan	None
39	For each Experience Period, the total Retro Premium and Deposit Premium are both recalculated, every year, until all claims for that year are closed.	Terms of Plan	None
40	Loss Reserves are "allocations to pay losses that have been incurred, or are likely to be incurred, and reported during the time the Plan is in effect, but that have not yet been paid."	Terms of Plan	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
40	The reserves (which become Paid Losses if paid) fall into two categories, indemnity payments for medical malpractice claims against the Attending Faculty and exp[e]nses for defending those claims.	Terms of Plan	NCRIC SMF ¶ 9 (admitted).
40	In its Reconciliation spreadsheets, NCRIC lists Indemnity Reserves and Expense Reserves ("ALAE Reserves") separately.	Fact	None
40	The two categories are tallied to obtain the total Loss Reserves.	Fact	None
41	Development Factors are "the factors by which Loss Reserves are multiplied for purposes" of calculating the Retro Premium.	Terms of Plan	None
41	The Development Factors are a schedule of multipliers that increase as Experience Periods progress, and as a claim matures, to "develop" []NCRIC's Loss Reserves as its level of certainty about the accuracy of the Loss Reserves increases.	Terms of Plan	None
41	Because of the Development Factors, Columbia was responsible (under the Plan as originally drafted) only for developed losses, not for all of NCRIC's Loss Reserves.	Mixed fact and law	None
41	The effect of Development Factors is that, even in the (unlikely) event that the total Loss Reserves for a particular Experience Period remain exactly the same over the course of several Reconciliations, the "developed" losses captured by the Plan will steadily increase.	Mixed fact and law	None
42	Over time, the Plan has been amended to change the value of – but not the procedure for applying – the Development Factors.	Mixed fact and law	None
42	Originally, the Development Factors were: Year 1 Reconciliation - 88.5% Year 2 Reconciliation - 87.5% Year 3 Reconciliation - 90.5% Year 4 Reconciliation - 96.0% Year 5 Reconciliation - 100.0% All Subsequent Reconciliations - 100.0%	Terms of Plan	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
43	Effective September 1, 1996, the Development Factors were lowered: Year 1 Reconciliation - 55.0% Year 2 Reconciliation - 65.0% Year 3 Reconciliation - 80.0% Year 4 Reconciliation - 105.0% Year 5 Reconciliation - 105.0% All Subsequent Reconciliations - 100.0%	Terms of Plan	None
43	This change in the amounts did not effect any substantive change in the manner in which the Development Factors were applied.	Mixed fact and law	None
44	In 1999, the parties added interim Development Factors: Months / Factor 12 / 0.55 (unchanged) 15 / 0.58 18 / 0.60 21 / 0.63 24 / 0.65 (unchanged) 27 / 0.69 30 / 0.73 33 / 0.76 36 / 0.81 (unchanged) 39 / 0.86 42 / 0.93 45 / 0.99 48+ / 1.05 (unchanged)	Terms of Plan	None
44	These interim Development Factors were solely for informational purposes, to be used in NCRIC's quarterly updates.	Terms of Plan	None
44	(In 1998, NCRIC start[ed] producing quarterly reports on a regular basis, as required by the Plan.	Fact	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
44	The interim factors were merely an informational tool, use[d] to smooth out the quarterly reconciliation updates.)	Fact	None
44	Introduction of the interim factors was not intended to change, and did not in fact change, the manner in which the Development Factors were applied.	Mixed fact and law	None
45	Exhibit E to the Retro Plan is explicitly an "Example of Operation of the Plan."	Terms of Plan	None
45	It also is expressly incorporated into the Plan to be used "for clarification" of concepts like Development Factors.	Terms of Plan	None
46	By showing several cumulative Reconciliations, Exhibit E helps explain how they work over time.	Terms of Plan	None
46	In particular, Exhibit E indicates that Development Factors are to be applied the relevant number of months after the end of an Experience Period, not that number of months before the end of an Experience Period.	Terms of Plan	None
46	For example, on Exhibit E, the first Development Factor – the "Year 1 Reconciliation," or 88.5% Development Factor – is always applied to an Experience Period the first time it is reconciled.	Terms of Plan	None
46	To apply the current Development Factors in this way, the 12-month Factor (55%), not the 24-month Factor (65%), would be applied to an Experience Period the first time it is reconciled.	Mixed fact and law	None
46	Indeed, NCRIC admits that the 55% Factor was meant to replace the 88.5% Factor.	Fact	None
47	Of course, Exhibit E, being older, is in a different format, and differs substantively from the NCRIC spreadsheets in some respects.	Fact	None
47	(I.e., Exhibit E, which is part of the original Plan, was drafted to include Experience Periods two years after they were complete, like the original Plan.	Mixed fact and law	None
47	Moreover, Exhibit E is, as an example, based on a 1/1 Reconciliation Date rather than a 9/1 Reconciliation Date.	Terms of Plan	None

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
47	Further, its format is something different than the NCRIC spreadsheets, in that the years move in the opposite direction.)	Fact	None
47	Nonetheless, Exhibit E provides clear guidance that Development Factors are to be applied the relevant number of months after the end of an Experience Period, not that number of months before the end of a Period.	Terms of Plan	None
48	NCRIC did not comport with Exhibit E in performing any of its recent Reconciliations.	Mixed fact and law	None
49	There is no dispute that the Development Factors apply to all Experience Periods.	Undisputed background law	None
50	In performing Reconciliations, NCRIC uses a Deposit Premium multiplier of 62% for Experience Periods from 1995-96 to the present.	Fact	None
51	NCRIC does not use 67% as the Deposit Premium multiplier for any Experience Period, for any Reconciliation.	Fact	None
52	NCRIC applies the 60% Minimum Premium multiplier only for Experience Periods beginning after September 1, 1995.	Fact	None
52	For the first two Experience Periods (one of which it treats as closed) NCRIC uses the old 75% Minimum Premium multiplier.	Fact	None
53	NCRIC did not use the 60% Minimum Premium factor to calculate the $172,815 in Return Premium that it sent to Columbia on November 30, 1998.	Fact	None
53	Rather, it used a 75% factor.	Fact	None
54	NCRIC applies each Development Factor the relevant number of months after an Experience Period begins, not the relevant number of months after an Experience Period ends.	Fact	None
55	NCRIC did not provide Columbia with the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 10 (denied).

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
56	A spreadsheet that NCRIC sent to Columbia on September 5, 2001, which purported to be the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation of the Plan, was not, in fact, the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation.	Fact	None
56	According to NCRIC (through its Rule 30(b)(6) representative Steve Fargis), the September 5 spreadsheet may have contained "certain assumptions to try to reach settlement," and therefore, it could not be counted on to reflect a proper Reconciliation.	Fact	None
56	Indeed, if the spreadsheet were the Reconciliation, it would have included a "letter requesting payment of an amount" – which it did not.	Fact	None
57	Columbia never received from NCRIC any other spreadsheet purporting to be a September 1, 2001 Reconciliation spreadsheet, with or without a letter requesting a payment of an amount.	Fact	None
57	Further, despite attempts to obtain the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation from NCRIC since the issue recently came to light, Columbia has not been able to obtain a September 1, 2001 Reconciliation.	Fact	None
57	Accordingly, Columbia cannot determine the amount of Additional Premium, if any, that was due as of September 1, 2001.	Fact	None
58	NCRIC representatives, including Steve Fargis and Bill Burgess, presented NCRIC's Reconciliation of the first Experience Period of the Retro Plan at meetings with Columbia's Board of Directors and Finance Committee on or about November 20, 1996.	Fact	None
58	At the meetings, NCRIC explained that it currently owed Columbia approximately $159,000 in Return Premium for the first Experience Period.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶ 23 (admitted).
59	In an effort to avoid paying the Return Premium that it owed to Columbia, NCRIC proposed the following modification of the Plan: neither party would pay Additional Premium or Return Premium for any Experience Period (regardless of whether, for that Experience Period, the Reconciliation indicated that Additional or Return Premium was due) until all claims for that Experience Period were closed.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 6-7 (admitted).

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
60	Further, NCRIC's representatives, including Mr. Fargis, proposed that once all claims for an Experience Period were closed (i.e., once the Experience Period was "closed"), the Additional Premium or Return Premium for that Experience Period – and only that Period – would be paid.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 6-7 (admitted).
61	Importantly, as part of this proposal, NCRIC's representatives, including Mr. Fargis, indicated to Columbia that the parties' oral agreement would continue to operate until all Experience Periods were closed, regardless of whether the Plan remained in effect.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7-8 (denied).
61	At no point did any NCRIC representative suggest that, under any circumstances, the parties might exchange money for a year of the Plan before all claims for that year closed.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7-8 (denied).
62	Columbia accepted NCRIC's proposed oral modification of the Retro Plan.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 6-7 (admitted); NCRIC SMF ¶¶ 10, 26 (admitted).
63	In consideration for the benefit it received under the parties' oral agreement, each party gave up the right to demand payment of Additional Premium or Return Premium for any Experience Period until that Period was closed.	Undisputed background law	None
63	In particular, Columbia did not demand, and NCRIC did not pay, the Return Premium that NCRIC otherwise would have owed under the Plan, effective September 1, 1996.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶ 26 (admitted).
64	In the Fall of 1997, NCRIC provided Columbia with a Reconciliation effective September 1, 1997.	Fact	None
64	That Reconciliation indicated that approximately $1.77 million in cumulative Additional Premium.	Fact	None
65	None of the Plan's Experience Periods were closed at this time.	Mixed fact and law	None
65	Accordingly, due to the parties' oral agreement to pay premium only for closed years, Columbia did not owe NCRIC any Additional Premium at this time.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7 (denied).

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
66	Regardless, NCRIC demanded that, as a condition for adding an additional (1998-99) Experience Period to the Plan, Columbia must pay $1 million as "financial security" for "future liabilit[ies]" under the Plan.	Fact	None
66	This security would remain on deposit with NCRIC, even if Columbia was owed Return Premium by NCRIC under the parties' oral agreement.	Fact	None
66	NCRIC also repeatedly characterized the payment as a deposit in its dealings with Columbia.	Fact	None
67	Columbia paid the $1 million in installments of $250,000 each, between January and March 1998.	Fact	None
67	As NCRIC admits, the $1 million deposit constituted a one-time exception to the parties' oral agreement.	Mixed fact and law	None
68	Subsequently, the parties amended the Plan to reflect that Columbia would, henceforth, provide for its contingent liabilities under the Plan by providing security to NCRIC.	Terms of Plan	None
68	To date, NCRIC has not demanded additional financial security	Fact	None
69	NCRIC presented Columbia with the September 1, 1998 Reconciliation on or about October 23, 1998.	Fact	None
70	In light of Columbia's $1 million payment, the September 1, 1998 Reconciliation showed a balance of $670,000 in cumulative Return Premium.	Fact	None
70	Due to the parties' oral agreement, NCRIC did not pay this amount to Columbia.	Mixed fact and law	None
70	Indeed, NCRIC continued to hold Columbia's $1 million on deposit instead of paying Return Premium.	Fact	None
71	However, the 1993-94 Experience Period had recently closed.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7 (admitted).
71	Further, NCRIC's Reconciliation showed a balance $172,815 in Return Premium due for this Experience Period.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7 (admitted).

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
71	Under the parties' oral agreement, this meant NCRIC owed Columbia money.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7 (admitted).
72	Sure enough, on about November 30, 1998, NCRIC paid Columbia $172,815 in Return Premium for the 1993-94 Experience Period.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7 (admitted).
73	NCRIC presented Columbia with the September 1, 1999 Reconciliation on or about October 11, 1999.	Fact	None
73	This Reconciliation indicated an amount of $903,814 in Additional Premium due from Columbia ($1,903,814 less Columbia's $1 million deposit), albeit including all of the years (the latest of which was not permitted to be reconciled at that time).	Mixed fact and law	None
74	However, no additional Experience Periods had closed since the 1993-94 period.	Mixed fact and law	None
74	Accordingly, pursuant to the terms of the parties' oral agreement, NCRIC did not demand any money from Columbia at this time.	Mixed fact and law	None
75	NCRIC presented Columbia with the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation on or about September 1, 2000.	Fact	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 10 (admitted); NCRIC SMF ¶ 57 (admitted).
75	This Reconciliation indicated a cumulative amount of $1,286,525.00 in Additional Premium due.	Fact	None
76	As of the September 1, 2000 Experience Period, one additional Experience Period – 1994-95 – was deemed closed by NCRIC.	Fact	None
76	As NCRIC admits, this Experience Period showed a balance of Return Premium due in the amount of $177,806.	Fact	None
76	NCRIC did not pay this amount to Columbia.	Fact	None
77	Since there were no closed Experience Periods for which Additional Premium was due, Columbia owed NCRIC no money under the parties' oral agreement.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7-8 (denied).

SMF ¶	Statement in Columbia's SMF	Statement Type	NCRIC Response?
77	Rather, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium, because the second (1994-95) Experience Period had recently closed, and Return Premium was due for that Period.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7-8 (denied).
78	On October 1, 2000, NCRIC presented Columbia with a bill for $1,285,525.00.	Fact	None
79	Subsequent to the October 1, 2000 bill, NCRIC has provided Columbia with several quarterly reconciliation updates.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶ 58 (admitted).
79	The most recent update, dated January 8, 2002, is the quarterly update effective November 30, 2001.	Fact	None
79	This update indicates that the current amount of cumulative Additional Premium due is $2,144,978.	Fact	NCRIC SMF ¶ 68 (admitted).
79	However, there is no way to tell from this spreadsheet what the amount due was, as of September 1, 2001.	Fact	None
79	Since that time, the Loss Reserves could have increased; NCRIC undoubtedly has incurred more Paid Losses, if just for ALAE Expenses – and the Development Factors have changed due to the passage of time.	Fact	None
79	Columbia therefore cannot discern what it owes from this spreadsheet.	Fact	None
80	Columbia does not, however, owe any more money under the parties['] oral agreement.	Mixed fact and law	NCRIC SJ Opp. at 7-8 (denied).
80	As the most recent spreadsheet shows, no additional Experience Periods have closed since the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation.	Mixed fact and law	None that means there is more money at NCRIC credited towards losses. Is that correct?

A. That means this plan shows that there is more money. However, I believe your question asked if you raise that factor but kept the credit at 30 percent, which you couldn't do. That is illogical.
Q. This would simply mean that NCRIC -- strike that.
When you say it is illogical, you mean it is not neutral with regard to the amount of money that NCRIC has. NCRIC would have to give up more cash. Correct?
A. What NCRIC would be doing is crediting premium that isn't there. It would be putting in saying there is more premium, because we would not have actually received that premium because it has given that credit away to the physicians. It is giving 30 cents on the dollar off but yet it is saying only 19 cents on a dollar is given up or 15 cents on the dollar.

Q. So, in effect, NCRIC would be providing the discount to the doctors and not Columbia?
A. Correct.
Q. And in 1996, or late 1995 when this agreement or the discussions with regard to the agreement of reducing -- excuse me, increasing the premium discount from 15 to 30 percent occurred, NCRIC, to your recollection, was not willing to provide the discount to the physicians, it wanted Columbia to provide the discounts to the physicians. Is that correct?
A. You will have to restate that. That was lengthy.
Q. Let me rephrase it. By reducing the subject premium from 81 percent to 62 percent -- I am sorry, the deposit premium, reducing that from 81 to 62 percent in order to increase the discount from 15 to 30 percent for the physicians, Columbia was providing the discount in its entirety to the physicians.

Is that correct?
A. No, that is not -- that is not how I would phrase it. That is not correct.
Q. With regard to the amount of deposit premium -- strike that. Would it be a fair characterization to say by reducing the deposit premium from 81 percent to 62 percent it neutralized the increase in premium discount to the physicians such that it did not increase NCRIC's financial stake in the discount to the physicians?
A. No, that is not a correct way.
Q. What was NCRIC's additional financial stake in the discount to the physicians as a result of the change in the reduction of premium discount as long as a corresponding change was made in the discount premium?
A. Again, restating, in a retrospective rating plan, normally you receive all of your premium up front. So whether the discount was 1, 2, 10 or 30 percent, in a retro plan, we are not receiving that money that we would otherwise have received because we have given that credit up front.

Q. So that is cash flow effect. Is that correct?
A. That is right.
Q. It is true, though, isn't it, that that effect was necessitated because of the fact there were three parties in this retro plan, the discount was not provided to the same party that was guaranteeing the risk, the discount was provided to the physicians and Columbia Hospital was providing the risk?
MR. NIEDERMAYER: Objection. Argumentative.
MR. LEAHY: You can answer.
THE WITNESS: The discount was provided to the physicians. Columbia was at risk to make up additional premium dollars if losses went beyond or increased above what it calculated as retrospective plan premium due or refund.

Page 182

Q. I am sorry?
A. There is a current list.
Q. What person at NCRIC keeps the list up-to-date?
A. No one person keeps the list up-to-date. It is in the system. We keep a list on the system. Grant Sohm maintains a list but he is not the keeper.
Q. He doesn't enter the data into the computer, you are saying?
A. The underwriters would renew files every year. We can go back by pulling out a list of who is in the plan.
Q. When, in the past, during the period of the plan, when someone at Columbia sent to NCRIC additional members who have been added to the attending faculty in the retro plan, who then adjusted this list?
A. I guess it would depend on the underwriter. Likely it could have been Grant. I don't know who it was prior to me.
Q. But it would have been an

underwriter, even if it wasn't at the time of the renewal but rather in the middle of a cycle?
A. Yes.
Q. Referring you back to Exhibit 4, this letter, the 19th of December, 1995, were there any negotiations between NCRIC and Columbia with regard to any of these terms listed in the letter?
A. No.
Q. Did NCRIC simply inform Columbia what the terms of the change would be?
A. Yes.
Q. Who at NCRIC made that determination? Was that Dave Little?
A. Dave made these terms, Dave made the terms with regards to this letter.
Q. After this letter you said there were further conversations. Were there negotiations of the terms of the agreement that were going to occur after the December 19th letter?

A. There weren't negotiations. They were accommodations that we made for the hospital that were to benefit the hospital and the plan.
Q. Did some representative of Columbia request that those accommodations be made?
A. No.
Q. Who came up with the accommodations?
A. Ray and I discussed those accommodations that might be fair for the hospital and more accommodating for the hospital under the terms of the plan than they were otherwise stated in the plan.
Q. Was Columbia informed --
A. Yes.
Q. -- that these were accommodations?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the subject of the discussion? Did any discussions occur with regard to the accommodations?
A. No, we informed them of what we felt we could do for the plan to just be more accommodating for the plan.

Q. Was it Susan Hansen that you informed?
A. Well, we informed Sue as well as we informed continually all of the CEOs what we have had over the history of the plan.
(Document referred to marked Deposition Exhibit No. 7 for identification.)
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. If I can now refer to Exhibit 6 which is -- Exhibit 7, which is a fax message from Jim Rogers to Steve Fargis, if you could just check that out for a minute.
A. (Witness reviewing document.)
Q. Have you had an opportunity to familiarize yourself with it? Do you recognize this fax?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you receive this?
A. I did.
Q. The first line there, Jim Rogers says "Attached is my spreadsheet analysis."

Page 210

the minimum premium irregardless of when it showed that change to Columbia?
A. We did it at the time we implemented the new deposit.
Q. So was NCRIC contemplating the change around the time of January, 1996?
A. I think so. Yes.
Q. But didn't express that change until later?
A. Well, I am not sure if we didn't express the change until later.
Q. You don't recall expressing it until later?
A. That is what I recall.
Q. You also mentioned the basic premium charge. Do you recall any other changes in the retro formula besides the subject premium -- besides the deposit premium, the minimum, and the basic premium charges?
A. Yes, in front of the finance committee we also discussed at the first reconciliation that we would not move into affecting the payments, the premium due or premium refund, until all claims were closed out in the year. In essence, the decision made at that meeting is that we would actually wind up operating this as an actual paid/loss retro.

Q. How was that issue initiated at the meeting? Did NCRIC bring that up?
A. We brought it up because it was shown what was going to be due to Columbia at the end of this reconciliation. I think at the first year of that period they were due a bonus. But we also showed them that the trend for the most recent two years showed they would then owe us money on those years. Since all claims weren't closed out, what would wind out happening is that every quarter of reconciliation moneys, checks would just be going back and forth until all claims were closed and settled out. So we suggested, again in accommodating the hospital, we would wait until all claims were closed and paid out in the final year and then payments were made and refunds would be due.

Q. So your recollection is at the time of the first reconciliation there was an amount of a return premium owed to Columbia?
A. There was. But there were still outstanding claims. And, again, I am trying to recall this, I want to say, for instance, it was $150,000 in that first year that NCRIC owed Columbia at the reconciliation. However there were a number of claims still outstanding where it could have been six months later when that year closed out they could owe us money. And the next two years, the 1994/1995, 1995/1996 year showed pretty heavy amounts of what they owed us. So if you look at it on a cumulative basis for the three years of the program they would owe us money.
But, tending on how losses -- particularly in the most recent years, the losses were green, meaning we just put up reserves on it and there may not have been a lot of developed information just on it yet. Actually, we keep that year out of it. But as we went forward, what you would wind up doing is until all claims were closed and settled, checks going back and forth. If we had sent them a check for $150,000, I think we later paid them 177,000 on that year, that we could have been back at the table a short time later saying it is really 140,000, they send us $10,000 back, and then a short time later it is 170 and we send them 10,000 back. And then you get into your second year. Now they owe us $1 million. Well, we still will send you a check for $10,000 and you send another one -- it is just --

So, really, trying to keep the accounting a little simpler and seeing where the losses were going, particularly in that one year that was turning out to be a bad year for them, we would wait to see how the total claims closed out.
Q. It was an accommodation to Columbia because, although Columbia was owed money at first, in the long run NCRIC was also saying, a couple of years down the road, it is already looking to turn out badly and we won't ask money from you then. Is that correct?

A. No, what we were saying -- yes, we were saying when the reconciliation period came up, because there were a lot of open claims in it and the year was bad, we wouldn't be asking for a check. Whether we owe you money or you owe us money, what we will do is wait until all of the claims are closed out in a year.

Q. So NCRIC actually expressed to Columbia it could get its money now, but as part of the agreement, NCRIC would not pay money now. That was an agreement that was made then?

A. Yes, we agreed. And the finance committee acknowledged that that made sense. We give them $150,000 now and six months later they give us $1 million. But at the same time, that million, or whatever that amount is, would be a different number later. So we agreed that it made sense.

What it does for NCRIC it actually puts us a little behind. Because if we paid, say, in the first year, we already paid $1 million in claims on the '93 year but we are making this accommodation in 1996, we have been out that million dollars for two years, we already paid, we have not received any money.

Let me put the example this way. We received 2 million premium and the losses are 2 million. If that is the case, then we are even. But if losses are still outstanding and open claims for another million, we have got to wait, we are waiting years afterwards to see how that year closes out before we see if Columbia pays us any money or not.

Q. Columbia would have gotten some money out front but it would just have to return it and you are saying there wasn't much time to develop interest on that?

A. Yes. And when we did that first reconciliation, they would -- the next couple of years were not looking good.

Q. Were there a lot of claims?

A. I think --

Q. If you recall?

A. I think the second or third year it was beginning to turn sour.

Q. You have mentioned many checks going back and forth. Was it contemplated that a check would be exchanged for each experience period or that they all be added up after each reconciliation?

A. It was first contemplated, the plan designed for it would do it on each reconciliation period. And then what we felt would be better is, since we were actually doing it as actual running it as if it was a paid loss plan, that we would do it on a cumulative basis.

Q. So, you are saying originally it was contemplated that for 1995 you might send a check -- for 1995 to 1996 you might send a check to Columbia, but Columbia at the same time would be sending you a check for the next year?

A. That is originally how the plan was set up. It could have been operated that way. What we are saying is when the year finally closes out -- for instance, we did this. We sent them a check for the 1993/1994 year, even though on a cumulative basis. Because of open claims in all of the other years that were still open, they owed us money.

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. I will show you what we have marked as Exhibit 10. Is this the reconciliation that you have been referring to? Take some time to look at it.

A. I think this is it.

Q. I am not going to proffer that it is. You make your own judgment there.

A. I believe this is.
Q. Again, I will come around because I have misplaced my spreadsheets. You believe this is the first reconciliation?
A. Yes, I think this is the one that we presented to the finance committee.
Q. And when you say the money was owed by NCRIC to Columbia, what amount are you referring to?
A. This. (Indicating.) The 159,093 would be owed by NCRIC to Columbia. But we were showing years two and three that, in fact, the way the losses were, they would owe us money.
Q. At this time, you are saying that is a positive number, it is not surrounded by parenthesis. But that meant -- strike that. This positive number indicated an amount to go from NCRIC to Columbia. Is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. That isn't the way the plan operates currently, right? You use a parenthesis to indicate a negative number for returned premium. Right?

A. Correct.
Q. So, the next two years --
A. I think so.
Q. I will show you some spreadsheets either later today or later tomorrow.
MR. NIEDERMAYER: You won't be showing him tomorrow, I can guarantee that.
MR. LEAHY: Later in the deposition. If you are wrong you can always correct your testimony. I will make a proffer that is my understanding of the way it works.
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. You are saying at the bottom of the second column, 651,000, that is what Columbia was going to be owing on the 1994/1995 year?
A. Yes.
Q. But that year was not yet reconciled, only the 1993 year was reconciled at the time of 1996?

Page 220

A. Reconciled, what I mean by that, in accordance with the plan, we were at the end of two years. I think the first reconciliation date was -- I forget what it was, but it began two years after the start of the year. You would go two years, and we were in 1996 and a reconciliation was, quote, due. And in this case we were owing at that time, it showed 159,000, but you see there was still almost one million dollars, 883,500, still in reserves out there that would influence what that number would be.
Q. Even that year might not turn out positive for Columbia is what you are saying?
A. I would have to do the analysis.
Q. It was possible at the time?
A. It is possible that this number could be a lot lower.
Q. And looking at the next column you had already had large amounts. I just want to make sure, I want to make sure I know what the paid items for each year were at this time.

Page 221

ALAE, that is a reserve item, under loss reserves?
A. Yes.
Q. Total, that is indemnity reserves, ALAE reserves, and total reserves, those three items in the second group?
A. That is just the total of loss reserves and ALAE.
Q. And it guess into indemnity paid, expense paid, total paid. Total paid is the addition of the two lines before it. Correct?
A. Yes.
Q. What does this at the right column mean, per loss run, do you know? Do you recall? Let me back up. Did you do this, perform this spreadsheet?
A. Yes, I did. I think I may have been referring to this, right here.
Q. So you are now referring to the pages after the first page of the spreadsheet?
A. Yes.
Q. And that is what you would be still exists in NCRIC, who is still an executive, let's say, who would be familiar with the Sibley retro plan that existed prior to the Columbia plan?

A. Bill Burgess may have some knowledge of that. He was there during the time. I don't know how involved he was with the Sibley retro plan.
MR. LEAHY: Can I mark the next exhibit here?
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. I am showing you what has been marked as Exhibit 16. Do you recognize this being a letter from you to Sue Hansen dated March 6, 1996?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember sending this letter to Ms. Hansen?
A. No, I don't really. But it is my signature.

Page 303

Q. With regard to the first sentence, do you remember having a meeting with her in March of 1996 with regard to, quote, unquote, progress with the retro program?
A. I don't recall the details of that meeting.
Q. Did you discuss renewing and expanding the program with Ms. Hansen around March of 1996?
A. We must have for me to write this letter.
Q. Is it possible that the minimum premium was also discussed at this meeting, if you recall?
A. I don't recall.
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. I am showing you what has been marked as Exhibit 17. Do you know who Lynn Petersons is?
A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me who she is?
A. She was a consultant to Columbia Hospital for Women and had had a prior working relationship with Melinda Murray who was then the risk manager at Columbia Hospital. And Melinda brought Lynn in to -- I think Lynn primarily was handling some of the placement for the reinsurance and Melinda engaged her on Columbia's behalf with regard to the retro plan, no longer Jim Rogers at SIMA, from what I understood.
Q. Do you recall receiving this memorandum from Lynn Petersons in the fall of 1996?
A. I don't recall receiving it but I must have received it.
Q. Do you remember the substance of the first sentence speaking with her and her request for quotes for various retro options?
A. I think I recall this.
Q. Now, she next says in that sentence one of the proposals is a one year option effective 1/1/97 with a current deposit premium percentage of 67 percent. Do you know who indicated to her that the current deposit premium percentage was 67 percent?

A. No, I don't.
Q. Do you know if you sent her a copy of, right or wrong, Exhibit Number 10?
A. I don't know if I sent it or not.
Q. The paragraph below the bottom indicates that Columbia would prefer not to have another incurred loss retro.
A. I am sorry, where are you?
Q. Second paragraph from the bottom, "Though, we would obviously prefer not to have another incurred loss retro, dollars are exchanged in a pay loss retro." Isn't that correct?
A. Depending on how you set it up. But not necessarily because once a year it is closed out, it is closed out. That year can't be effected up our down anymore.
Q. Did you understand this to mean not sentence? Without regard to the amount of the number, is it correct that there was a representation by the consultant, and here I assume they mean Lynn Petersons, that this, the cumulative number was the worst case scenario? Do you recall that being said at the meeting?

A. Lynn Petersons didn't participate in our presentation on this, so I don't know who they were referring to, consultants or us.

Q. Do you recall saying that?

A. This is what I have referred, that we were recommending, because of the projection of how the years look, that we don't begin a reconciliation now on year one, that we wait until the years begin to close out.

Q. The next sentence, the however sentence?

A. I am sorry, maybe I was reading the wrong sentence.

Q. Yes, that is what you were referring to previously, that you suggested no interim settlement be made. I was referring to the prior sentence. Do you remember saying that?

A. I don't. Again, I don't know if their consultants -- if they are referring to -- again, Lynn didn't participate with this. I don't know who they are referring to there.

Q. Can you tell me about the next -- the final sentence on the first page, the final complete sentence on the first page, "they also noted." Is that a correct statement of what NCRIC presented at the meeting?

A. No. I can state that if we were earning 12 percent on our average investments, it would be -- it would be great. 6 percent is our average return. I don't know where the 12 percent came from.

Q. But is it a correct statement that the amount due -- it was said by that the amount due to the hospital would accrue an interest rate at whatever NCRIC's rate of earnings was irregardless of the 12 percent figure?

A. No, what we are referring to here is what is in the retro plan, which is there is a discount factor and we applied on the loss side relative to -- at that time the plan was established I think it was a 6 percent factor which earns a discount factor of .8633. So I will try to explain it this way, as opposed to giving interest credit on the premium side we take it down on the loss side.

Q. I am just trying to get at how that sentence is to be read as to what you said. Is that a correct statement if you read it that 6 percent is applied to the 159,000, would that be a correct statement of what you said?

A. No. Unfortunately, it is misstated.

Q. With regard to the next sentence, Is that a correct -- I will go line by line -- statement of what was said by NCRIC, either yourself or I guess Mr. Burgess was there? I am sorry, of what transpired at the meeting.

MR. NIEDERMAYER: Excuse me.

MR. LEAHY: The next sentence after the discussion or after discussion.

THE WITNESS: I don't -- I don't know.

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. Were you there when they agreed to leave 159,000 on deposit? Did they do that?

A. I recall them being in agreement on us not starting the checks going back and forth on the reconciliations.

Q. How about with regard to the current plan expired on 9/30/96? Is that something that you or Mr. Burgess said?

A. Well, what is confusing is -- well. The plan expired on 1996. The physicians were continuing with their discount and plan, to just continue the plan. We would continue to roll it forward on the September 1 date. I don't recall a discussion about changing the regard to the time, with regard to the does the date of Columbia's informing NCRIC of its going into bankruptcy help you place in time when NCRIC decided not to become a creditor?

A. No.
Q. Mr. Fargis, there came a time when Columbia Hospital and NCRIC did enter into an amendment of the plan which renewed it from September of '96 to September of '98. Is that correct?
A. Yes.
MR. LEAHY: Can we go off th record?
(Discussion off the record.)
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. Mr. Fargis, I'm showing you what is marked as Exhibit 25, a letter from yourself to Mr. Beaulieu, as we discussed earlier. Can you take a minute to look at the attachment to that letter.
A. Okay.
Q. Do you remember approximately the date on which this agreement was countersigned by NCRIC?

Page 451

A. I don't. I would think it would be around this January date, though.
Q. Your letter says that this language was approved by the NCUI board. Do you recall about when the board approved the language for the renewal?
A. I don't. I'd have to refer to the minutes.
Q. Mr. Pate signed this on behalf of NCRIC. Correct?
A. Correct.
Q. But am I correct that it's your recollection that you expressed that you drafted this addendum?
A. I believe I did.
Q. And you attend NCUI board meetings generally, right, you did?
A. Yes.
Q. When the board approved the agreement here would the board have looked at the language at the meeting?

A. I can't recall.
Q. Would everyone at the meeting have received a copy of the language?
A. I can't recall.
Q. Do you recall if you read this before Mr. Pate signed it?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. I'm going to just refer you to Page 5 of the agreement and the definition for deposit premium. You see there it says, "Deposit premium means subject premium multiplied by 67," and then in parentheses, 67 percent, do you see that sentence?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recall seeing this sentence before Mr. Pate signed the agreement?
A. I don't recall seeing the sentence before Mr. Pate signed the agreement.
Q. Do you have any reason to doubt that this sentence was in the agreement at the time Mr. Pate signed it?

A. I don't have any doubt that it was in the agreement.
Q. Let's go to Page 6. There's the definition for maximum and minimum premiums there. Can you read those definitions?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you see how it says the maximum premium shall be equal to 115 percent and then in brackets it says 133 percent?
A. Yes.
Q. Had you changed that 133 percent but not, just as an oversight, not changed the 115 percent?
A. Obviously.
Q. And the same thing with the minimum. It says "shall be equal to 75 percent" and 60 percent is in brackets. It was actually changed to 60 percent. Correct?
A. Correct.
Q. Do you see anything in that sentence which refers to which years of the plan the minimum must be applied when was asked and answered.

MR. LEAHY: You can answer, because I don't remember it being asked and answered.
MR. NIEDERMAYER: If you can remember your prior answer.
THE WITNESS: Exhibit 10 would appear to be October 1st, 1996. I'm just looking at the date at the top. I don't recall when Exhibit 18 was performed.
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. So your recollection is that's the actual date of the spreadsheet, not the effective date of when you were looking at the reserves.
A. No, it's not the -- I don't believe it would be the effective date we're looking at the reserves.
Q. Can you tell whether from looking at this -- and actually I have a calculator if you wanted to use that because I don't want to make misrepresentations to you -- the same deposit factor is used in both these spreadsheets or can you tell that without a calculator?

A. It appears that it is. The deposit factors are the same. Each of the years one, two and three on Exhibit 18 match up with the year one, year two, year three on Exhibit 10.
Q. And on Exhibit 10 it says use 81 percent for the first year and second year and 67 percent for the third year. Do you want to verify, can you verify with regard to whether or not that's correct? Would you do that for me?
MR. NIEDERMAYER: Off the record.
(Discussion off the record.)
(Mr. Wilson departs.)
THE WITNESS: 81 percent on Exhibit 10. It would be the same on Exhibit 18.
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. For which years?

Page 476

A. Year one. I get .80999, et. cetera, on year two. And year three is 67.5. I'm not sure of the exact, I'd have to recalculate that.
Q. So it's approximately 81 percent for the first two years and 67 percent, 67.5 percent you said, for the third year on both spreadsheets?
A. Yes.
Q. I'm going to ask you to look then at the maximum-minimum on the spreadsheets. Do you see that those are also the same? The maximum, the row maximum-minimum for both spreadsheets is the same except for the cumulative year on Exhibit 18?
A. Yes. They're not exactly the same, but years one, two and three are -- it looks like the Exhibit 18 is rounded.
Q. And do you see that on Exhibit 10 it says that 75 percent of subject premium is used for the minimum? If I represent to you that I've done those calculations and that is in fact 75 percent, would you accept that or would you like to confirm for your own self whether or not 75 percent was used?

A. I'll confirm. Okay.
Q. So would you agree that on both spreadsheets 75 percent was used as the minimum factor for all three years?
A. Yes.
Q. If you could take a moment to look at Exhibit 10, in the row that says ALAE it says, "Per Loss Run." Earlier you testified that that means that comes from the loss run that's attached here. Is that correct?
A. I believe I testified that it would appear that it may come from this.
Q. Could I ask you to look at Page 2 of the loss run and see if you can determine if in fact it does come from there, referring you to the bottom three rows on that second page in the loss run. See how the total for ALAE, reserve total is 358,500? And that's the number that you have there for ALAE for that they could still need a reserve if they were above the actual amount, if the losses were high.

Now, what I can answer because we're talking about theory is that are we talking about an incurred or paid loss or reconciliation periods, one year, two years, three years, I don't know. I mean this is all theory.

Q. I'm trying to get a narrow point which my understanding is previously you had testified that in the fall of 1996 the parties agreed to operate as effectively an actual loss retro program. Is that right?

A. In the late fall of '96 we did not change the terms of the agreement and agreed in principal with them that we would, in effect, almost operate this as a paid loss Retro Plan.

Q. If I'm speaking correctly, a paid loss Retro Plan that may be confusing. In such a paid loss retro program the point is you pay after all the years are closed. Correct?

A. You pay after all the years are closed. You pay -- reconciliations are made when all the claims are closed, in a period year.

Q. So when there are a lot of reserves for a particular experience period and therefore there is a large additional premium due on a cumulative basis, and in a paid loss program you wouldn't necessarily pay it if those claims weren't closed. Correct?

A. You don't pay it but what the plan shows you is there are indications of what your liability potential is because we're not saying it is all of those reserves against just that premium. We actually bring those reserves down by a development factor.

Q. Right. I guess what I'm saying is when you send someone a reconciliation, a paid loss program, it's not an invoice. It's an accounting of how much each party should be reserving for their potential future liabilities.

A. The only exception to that is if the plan ends.

Q. In which case everything has to be paid. Correct?

A. That's correct.

(Marked, Exhibit # 60, Slide Presentation Document.)

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. I'm showing you what is marked as Fargis 60. Do you know what this is? Strike that.

Is this a draft of the PowerPoint that you later showed at that September 9th meeting?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Do you know if this was ever shown to the attending faculty?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Let me go to the second slide. You see the first bullet point?

Page 613

A. Yes.

Q. That's a true statement. Correct?

A. That's correct.

MR. PAGE: That's the second slide you're referring to?

MR. LEAHY: Yes.

MR. PAGE: Okay. Go ahead.

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. Let's go to the fourth page, which should be the eighth slide, the bottom slide on the fourth page. Was this particular slide ever shown to the attending faculty?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Do you know if this information was conveyed in that September 9th, '98 meeting by NCRIC to the attending faculty?

A. I believe several of these points were made.

Q. Was it NCRIC's understanding at that point that all these were true?

A. Our understanding at the time is that all of these were true.

BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. And, again, you'll note that on the left-hand side near the bottom left, kind of the middle bottom left, it says, "Columbia Deposit." And that's, again, referring to what you've expressed to the Insurance Commissioner as paid premium. Correct? That's that $1 million?
A. It's not what we expressed to the Insurance Commission. It was what was deemed by the Retro Plan and in an agreement with the Commissioner.
Q. The Commissioner agreed --
A. That it's premium.
Q. Premium.
A. Correct.
Q. Now, the one line there that's 669,403, can you explain to me what that is?
A. That line reflects whether money is at the balance of the plan to be refunded or due, refunded to Columbia or due to NCRIC.
Q. But that money wasn't actually refunded to Columbia. Correct?

A. No.
Q. Was that because there was the understanding that the $1 million would be kept by NCRIC?
A. The understanding is that the plan would not settle until all claims were closed and paid or until the agreement ended.
Q. So what I was getting at earlier, this Page 2 of Exhibit 65 is not an invoice. Columbia wasn't owed 669,403 by NCRIC at that time. Correct?
A. This Page 2 is not an invoice.
Q. Especially because if you look at the '97-98 year that is included, that's not supposed to be included under the plan. Right?
A. Again, this is where I would have to look at the calculation, but the most recent year is to be excluded.
Q. I'll represent to you I've done the math and that includes, the 330,597 number includes the 81,640 number, in which case you would agree with me, if that is true, that the 330 number is not the amount that is reconciled for that year under the plan. Correct?

A. If the '97-98 year is included in the cumulative calculation, then it's inaccurate.
Q. Well, it's not inaccurate if this isn't being presented to Columbia as a bill. Correct?
A. It's inaccurate in calculating the cumulative amount, refund or due.
Q. That would be due under the Retro Program as originally drafted. Correct?
A. As the plan is operating at this time without reconciling those periods and exchanging monies, it would be an inaccurate reflection of what is net refund or due if the '97-98 year is included in the cumulative amount.
Q. Right. But if this is not viewed as cumulative amount that is due, it's not inaccurate; it is simply a representation of the current status of each year of the plan. Correct?

A. That is correct.
Q. And so because this is the way the plan was being operated, that you're only exchanging for closed years, this including the '97-98 year is not inaccurate in this particular spreadsheet. Correct?
THE WITNESS: Can you read that back?
(The pending question was read.)
THE WITNESS: Correct.
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. Did you say not accurate?
A. Yes.
Q. That is not what I meant to ask. So let me ask it again. Let me do it a different way. You created this spreadsheet. Correct?
A. Correct.

Q. You knew when you created this spreadsheet at around the time of the date on the top left-hand corner that you wouldn't include the '97-98 year in the cumulative total owed. Correct?
A. That would have been the correct calculation. I was just looking at the letter to see if for some reason the hospital wanted to see it on a cumulative basis, since the plan ends on a plan year at August 31st, and wanted to have the final year end. I don't see an indication of that.
Q. If you look at the second sentence in the paragraph that's under Point A.
A. Yes.
Q. Does that indicate that this spreadsheet is just a current status, an explanation of what the potential adjustment would be including all years of the plan?
A. This includes all years of the plan.
Q. And I'll represent to you that 330,000 number does. You wouldn't have included that last year if you were billing Columbia, correct, at that time?

A. At that time if we were to present them with an invoice in the instance of, A, either the plan ending, the agreement ending or, B, that all the years had been closed out, we would have only presented them with a bill for the years through '96-97.
Q. So what I'm getting at is because you weren't overbilling them, the fact that '97-98 is included indicates that this is just an accounting, an explanation of where the plan stands.
A. The quarterly reconciliations are to provide both parties with an understanding of the balance of the plan.
Q. Right. But if you hadn't been operating under the system where you weren't going to exchange premiums except for in closed years, you would have had to give them a bill at every quarterly reconciliation.

Correct? Or you were entitled to give them a bill.
A. I would have to refer back to the plan for that. I'd have to refer back to when the balance of the reconciliations begin. And I know that was changed at one time from a 24-month to a 12-month period. I'm not sure what period we were operating with under this time.
Q. Let me refer you to Exhibit 1 of your deposition. We're going to go to the page which says, it's the second page of Exhibit A, or Modifications to Exhibit A. The page actually says 4 at the bottom. On that Page 4 look at No. 5, Reconciliations.
A. Yes.
Q. Does that refresh your memory with regard to at this time whether there was a 24-month delay or a 12-month delay? Is that not dated? If you look on the Page 1 that says Addendum to Retro Plan, it's been marked as Exhibit 1-B, you'll see it's the addendum that goes from September 1 of '96 to September 1 of '98, which is not, unfortunately, dated.

A. Okay.
Q. So that's the one that was signed in January of '98. Right?
A. Right.
Q. So this was in effect in October of '98, which is when this spreadsheet was.
A. Okay.
Q. So it was one year back.
A. It was one year back.
Q. Is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. I'm trying to establish here that certainly you weren't trying to overbill Columbia with Exhibit 65, Page 2. Right?
A. This is not an invoice.
Q. Right, okay. By the way, what was Mr. Marsh's involvement at around that time, fall of '98, with regard to the Retro Plan?
A. Mr. Marsh had assumed responsibilities in the policyholder services area. And part of his responsibilities were related to Columbia Hospital for Women.

Q. But he didn't have anything to do with performing the calculations on the Retro Plan, did he?
A. I can't recall if Mr. Marsh did any calculations on the plan.
Q. If you could turn to Exhibit 66 now, you see it's a spreadsheet with a date of October 11, 1999.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recognize this to be the fall 1999 reconciliation?
A. I don't know if it's the final or working draft.
Q. Does NCRIC know, is your information, as NCRIC's representative?
A. Looking at this one sheet of paper, I can't state that. I would have to review my files to try to determine the sequence of orders in my files.
Q. If I represented to you that this is the only spreadsheet from the fall of 1999 that we received that was produced to us by you, NCRIC, would that cause you to believe that this is the fall of 1999 reconciliation?

A. It most likely may be.
Q. Again, looking at the column that says "Y98-99," you're including the final year in -- let me represent to you that the cumulative total includes that year, you've included that on the spreadsheet. Correct?
A. The year is on the spreadsheet, yes.
Q. If I represent to you, again, that in the cumulative total the 1,903,814 that is listed as Retro Premium there, if I represent to you that that one million is included in that 1 million 9 number, it must be true that this is not a bill to Columbia. Correct?
A. This is not an invoice.
Q. This is, again, an accounting of the status of the plan including all years?
A. Including all years, yes.

Q. And it didn't matter that you put all five years because Columbia wasn't going to have to pay that total amount anyway. Correct?
A. Not until all claims are closed and paid.
Q. So, for example, on this '99 spreadsheet no years other than the year that you have in the far right-hand side, the '93-94 year, had closed. That was the only year that payment should have been exchanged for. Correct?
A. I'm sorry?
Q. As of the time of this 1999 spreadsheet the only year that any payment under the plan should have been exchanged was that closed year on the far right-hand side, because if you look there are loss reserves, right, for each of the other years? If you need me to rephrase that question, I'll be glad to.
A. Okay. Could you restate the question?

Q. Do you see that for all the years except for the far -- all the experience periods except for the far right hand experience period, being '93-94, all the other experiences have loss reserves stated under the rows for loss reserves. Is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. So those years would not be closed. Correct?
A. Those years are not closed.
Q. As of the time of this spreadsheet.
A. That's correct.
Q. So for none of those years should the two parties as of this time have exchanged money. Correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. On the other hand, the far right-hand column, there are no loss reserves. Correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. So for that year the parties should is so much going all over the place. Is that the fall of 2001 reconciliation?

MR. PAGE: That being 68?
MR. LEAHY: 68.
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. Do you recall?
A. Can I have a -- I'm a little perplexed right here for a minute on a legality issue which I don't know.
Q. Do you want to speak with your counsel?
A. Yes, if I can.
Q. There's a question pending. I'd appreciate if you answer the question to the best of your ability. If you then speak with your counsel after that and you need to change your answer because there's some legality problem, that's fine.
MR. PAGE: Let's do that. The question was, as I understand it, what is this document, basically?
MR. LEAHY: Yes.

Page 655

MR. PAGE: What do you remember this being?
THE WITNESS: This is a reconciliation on the plan, I believe, as it stood through the end of August 31st, 2001.
MR. LEAHY: Okay. Do you want to talk with your counsel?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
MR. LEAHY: Go ahead.
(Recessed from 12:39 to 12:41 p.m.)
THE WITNESS: Exhibit 68 was developed during settlement discussions with Mr. Wilson. I would need to take a look and see within this spreadsheet if we were making certain assumptions to try to reach settlement. So I'm not certain that this spreadsheet in and of itself contains certain assumptions outside of the way that we had settled and ended the Retro Plan.
The reason I state that is that Mr. Wilson was provided a reconciliation at this period that was also accompanied with a letter requesting payment of an amount. That's not what is presented here. This is something that was presented during settlement.

BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. Let me just make a representation to you. My understanding was he did not receive that, and I will check with my client to make sure I'm not wrong; the "that" being what you have described, which is a letter requesting payment. So this was the only thing that we had as the September 1st, 2001 reconciliation.
Do you have any reason to believe that this is not, being that it was sent on September 5, that this does not actually accurately reflect the August 31, 2001 reconciliation?
A. Again, Mr. Wilson and I were in discussions about settlement. And there were during those discussions iterations and assumptions made to try to reach settlement on worksheets. And since this cover letter refers to the settlement and a counteroffer from Mr. Wilson, I'm not sure if this spreadsheet contains some of those assumptions.

Q. What I want to represent to you is, I didn't mean to present you with the spreadsheet. There were others where I know you made assumptions. So I thought this was your reconciliation. I will not ask you about this any further then until I get word from my client whether or not he got an actual reconciliation from you. But that was my understanding. So I just want to put your mind to ease there that we weren't trying to catch you on something. We're not going to talk about 68 any more. Let's come back to some of these other ones. Okay.
If you can just refer back to 66. 65, I'm sorry.
A. 65?
Q. Page 2. The top column there is

Page 714

Q. If you look, do you see how the columns, would you agree the 1/1/93 column applies all the way down and therefore looks like an experience period being reconciled?
A. It could be.
Q. If that is in fact true -- I guess we've got to ask for an "if." It is true then that the first development factor listed as the year one development factor is applied to the first year being reconciled 1/1/96. Correct?
A. Are we assuming that this is looking at a January 1, 2000 date?
Q. I was starting up at 1/1, the 1/1/96 date.
A. But I'm not sure. Obviously you got to look -- you're asking me to look back and I don't know what date I'm looking back from.
Q. If this is an operation of the plan the 1/1/96 under the plan, you would just be reconciling one year. So that makes sense.

Although they're running out a January calendar because everything is 1/1, it makes sense that's the first year reconciliation and when they reconcile two years, that's the second year reconciliation.
A. Whoever is doing this should be applying a third year factor three years out not one year out from your reserves.
Q. The first year factor is actually applied one year out. Correct?
A. No. According to what you're saying if this is 1996 and it's the '93 year you should be three years out. It should be .905 not .885.
Q. Wouldn't you use .55? If you were running this on the Retro Plan you would use .65 in that situation, wouldn't you, for the 1/1/96?
A. .80.
Q. .80, because you're three years out.
A. You're three years out.

Page 716

Q. What has subsequently changed is now they're the first year being reconciled which is just one year out. Right?
A. Apparently what it looks like is that they're applying a first year to a year three years later.
Q. If you go to 1/1/97 they're applying to the first year --
A. Three years later.
Q. And then if you go to 1/1/98, it's always the first year being reconciled. Right?
A. It appears that they're applying it to two years after the end of the period.
Q. Right, which is not the way you do it. You do it one year after the period. Correct?
A. Right.
Q. So in any event, whatever the value of this is, this appears to be operating different than the way you currently do the Retro Plan.

A. It not only operates different but, again, if you applied our factors they'd still be lower, we'd be applying a .80 and not a .885. But that's beside the point, because we never used this as a form for which we would do a reconciliation. Again, I'm not sure who developed the form or their intent behind it, but studying it it appears that they're not applying development factors until the reconciliation period starts, which was 24 months at that time. And I would disagree that you can't do that because you're not giving your client the benefit of the doubt of what is happening with their reserves for 24 months.
Q. But I guess putting aside, I just want to establish that it's done differently. I can't prove to you with this document what it is, but I do want to ask you have you ever seen this spreadsheet that we're talking about, Exhibit 1-A, before?
A. Yes.

Page 718

Q. Does NCRIC have a copy of it?
A. Yes.
Q. But you don't know as you stand here who created it and what its purpose is. Correct?
A. No. I mean that's evident because we've never reproduced this.
Q. I'm going to show you again what's marked as Exhibit 50. And I'm going to ask you to look at the spreadsheet. First of all, I'm going to ask you to look at the letter and the spreadsheet. And the font is a little different. It may or may not refresh you. This is a letter from Bickerstaff & Whatley. Correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you see the format the spreadsheet is done in, the next two pages? That's the same format although a different font and adding bar lines as the Exhibit 1-A that we're looking at. Correct?
A. It looks different to me.

Page 719

Q. That's all I can ask is your opinion.
A. Yes.
Q. You just said whoever was doing Exhibit 1-A you think they applied it wrong. Is that right?
A. Our interpretation of how this applies, we would not apply it this way simply because you're given no indication of what you're using as your first year development factor. It gives no indication really what happens in that first year or the second year or third year or subsequent. In addition though, what these development factors are, which are one of the reasons why we changed it, we felt like they were too high to apply in that manner.
And even looking at this today and recognizing that if you went out three years and utilized this, compared it to how the plan operates today, again, which is really all that matters, even the .80 is a lower development factor. So, again, emphasizing the point that we felt that, senior management at the time after Dave Little, we felt that these were too high.

Q. But I guess what I'm trying to get at is your decision to change the development factors and Columbia went along with it with regard to the amount of each development factor. You did not go about explicitly intending to change the application of the development factors as to when the first development factor applied and the second and so on. Is that correct?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Previously you've talked at length about the agreement between the parties to operate I think as a paid loss retro. Correct?
A. We didn't agree to operate it as a paid loss retro. The manner in which we agreed to operate the plan is in effect like a paid loss retro.

Q. As we discussed before, you testified that that occurred in November of 1996. Correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Approximately. Do you recall who on NCRIC's side gave NCRIC's agreement as a factual matter to that operation, that setup? Was that yourself?
A. Yes.
Q. Who else was there from NCRIC to -- I think this was at the finance meeting, as I recall that you testified. Who else was there to give NCRIC's ascent?
A. Bill Burgess was also there. But I gave the ascent on behalf of NCRIC.
Q. Do you remember who gave Columbia's ascent? And if you don't remember a person, do you remember a position?
A. I can't recall if they gave immediate ascent or they came back to us later after discussing it. But Sue Hansen was at that meeting as well as their CFO or head of without the assumption that the program was operating and leap to a year later and say had it been operating that would have been returned. Under that assumption they would have paid far more than that a year prior.

Q. Right. So my point is isn't it true then that this million dollars, the reason it wasn't paid back is because it wasn't part of the existing agreement which was to exchange only for closed years, it was an exception made to provide security for Columbia's future liability? Correct?
A. Correct.
Q. And let's go to 1999, Exhibit 66. If you look at this exhibit you see the '98-99 year was not to be recycled. If the plan was operating as originally it kind of washes with the million dollar deposit, but someone would have owed money were it not for the fact that you were rolling the million dollars forward and operating on what effectively was a paid loss basis. Correct?

Page 727

A. You mean the '96-97 year.
Q. What I'm saying is for the full, the 1999 reconciliation, you didn't exchange money at that time between Columbia and NCRIC. Right?
A. No, we did not.
Q. And the only money that had been exchanged is for the one closed year. Right?
A. That's correct.
Q. And the reason this occurred was because this was operating that you were only paying each other for paid years, correct, and the million dollars was to be kept by NCRIC to roll it forward? That's two questions.
A. We only paid on closed years. Secondly, the million dollars is shown here to show what has been paid into the program just like any other premium. It wasn't to show that "we've got your money and we're holding it over here in a little account." It is to give Columbia credit, if you will, for what has been paid against the losses for the program.

Q. Right. But under the way you were operating it wasn't due, it was a credit for a future amount that you expected to be due.
A. Well, we were showing what could be applied against what was expected to be due.
Q. Right. That's a security.
A. It's more.
Q. The point is they didn't owe you the million dollars at that point. It was a security because you knew that down the road they were going to owe a million dollars.
A. No. It was a security because of the financial situation. And they weren't booking a contingent liability for this.
Q. You essentially had to keep their reserves for them.
A. In essence, that's what the million dollars wound up becoming is a credit for them against the program; security because they couldn't otherwise book the contingent liability.

Q. They would have spent the million dollars is your concern. Right?
A. No. Our concern is that they had no reserve for that. And, you know, we benefited them through this time period because we never went to the Bankruptcy Court and said "There's further outstanding liabilities in this program."
Q. So what I want to ask you now is if you turn to Exhibit 67, this is after the plan ended but Columbia actually was billed 1 million 286. Why at this time was NCRIC billing Columbia even though there were years that were not closed?
A. Because the plan had ended. The plan ended. They needed to pay the money. But we would continue to operate the plan and depending on if they owed us more money we would bill them more. If it went less than 1.286525, then we would pay that money back. But if the expectation was if those reserves or losses changed again and we needed more money, we would come back for more money.

Q. Let me back up. To understand this, you see that the 1994-95 year had been September 1, 2000 closed. Correct?
A. Correct.
Q. There's no reserves but you didn't send Columbia a check for 177,806. Right?
A. No. We gave that in as a credit against the 1.2 million.
Q. Because as of this point the plan was no longer operating as a paid loss retro.
A. No. We weren't going to send them a check for 177,806 and ask them to pay us 1.4 million when you add that back in.
Q. Right. But what I'm asking is, I'm sorry to jump in, what I'm asking is previously you had not billed Columbia for unclosed years.
A. That's correct.
Q. Now you're billing them for unclosed years.
A. Correct.

Q. What was the basis for that?
A. There is no plan.
Q. And was it NCRIC's understanding that once the plan had closed the operational agreement was over?
A. Absolutely. Once the plan closed then they need to secure that. The agreement was prior to this and with their consent that they wanted to end the plan, settle that plan and start a new plan in 2000. We never reached that agreement with Columbia on a new plan because they could never secure the amount in the old plan. We did not want to take that financial risk with the hospital.
Q. I'm trying to figure out when did you express to Columbia, if ever, that once the plan closed the paid retro aspect would no longer be in effect?
A. I believe it was in a meeting with Michael Feldman and Bill Morton from Riggs Counselman representing the Hospital in, it may have been as early as March of that year,

Page 732

March or April of that year.
Q. They knew though when you were closing it that's the way it was going to operate if the plan was terminated.
A. Absolutely.
Q. Sometimes the questions seem dumb, but I was never there. And who else was there? It was Morton and Feldman and yourself and who else?
A. Dave Osborn.
Q. Subsequently you've continued to operate the plan as it was originally drafted not as a paid retro paying for only paid years because the plan has ended. Correct?
A. The plan has ended. We have continued to provide quarterly reconciliations with an invoice for the amount that is due.
Q. Just to be picky on a fine point though, under the plan as written there wouldn't be a quarterly amount due, it would be a reconciliation every year. Right?
A. Well, the plan has ended. So they need to pay what needs to be secured for that program.

Q. I guess what I'm saying is it's only a reconciliation every fall, correct? There are interim reconciliations and obviously you contend they owe a bill.
A. That's correct.
Q. But the reconciliation officially under the plan only happens once a year. Right?
A. No. When the plan ends they need to pay what is due under the plan.
(Marked, Exhibit # 74, Fax, 1/27/98, Attachments.)
BY MR. LEAHY:
Q. I'm showing you now what's been marked as Fargis 74. Do you know what this is? I'm now referring to the first page.
A. Yes.
Q. What is it?
A. A fax, it looks like, from Tom Hampton to Jeff Marsh.

WHEREFORE, upon consideration of the points and authorities submitted by the parties, and any oral argument presented by the parties, Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment is hereby GRANTED, and it is hereby ORDERED that:

1. As to Count I (Breach of Contract), the sole count of Plaintiff NCRIC's Amended Complaint for Damages, judgment is hereby entered in favor of Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia").

2. And FURTHER, in any future Reconciliations of the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, the following terms have been adjudicated to have the following meanings:

a. the Deposit Premium multiplier shall be 67% for all Experience Periods beginning on or after September 1, 1995, and 81% for all other Experience Periods;

b. the Minimum Premium multiplier shall be 60% for all Experience Periods;

c. each Development Factor shall be applied to an Experience Period the relevant number of months after the Experience Period ends.

3. And FURTHER, as to Count I (Breach of Contract) of Defendant's Amended Answer and Counterclaims, judgment is entered in favor of Columbia as to liability alone. Damages will be determined at the close of this case.

1. Describe in detail the facts of the case and the claims being raised:

As set forth in Columbia's counter-claims, Columbia has provided high-quality medical care to women and newborns for the last 130 years. But the not-for-profit hospital encountered serious financial difficulties in the early 1990s. At the same time, Columbia entered into an agreement with NCRIC to provide discounted medical malpractice insurance for Columbia's faculty. NCRIC drafted the agreement and took responsibility for administering it and performing the necessary bookkeeping. Because of the structure of the agreement, and because of NCRIC's superior knowledge and skill with regard to the agreement, the parties' working relationship developed into a confidential relationship. NCRIC breached that relationship. When it came time to renew the plan, Columbia relied on NCRIC's calculations, which erroneously made the plan appear economical for Columbia. In violation of the parties' earlier agreements, NCRIC also demanded payment of a $1 million deposit as a condition for continuing the plan.

In 1998, Columbia arranged for discounted insurance with a different company. Upon hearing about Columbia's new insurance program, NCRIC called secret meetings of Columbia's faculty, at which it urged the physicians to leave Columbia if NCRIC's agreement was not renewed. NCRIC made false, disparaging statements and employed scare tactics at the meetings, in an effort to induce the doctors to leave. In retaliation for Columbia's failure to renew the insurance plan with NCRIC, NCRIC canceled the policy it provided for Columbia's Ambulatory Care Clinic. In the Summer and Fall of 2000, NCRIC insiders among the faculty began circulating rumors that Columbia would close and that its clinic was uninsured. Nearly 30 faculty members moved their practices to other D.C. hospitals. The departure of these physicians caused patient admissions and revenues at Columbia to drop drastically. The departures also forced Columbia to cancel a fundraising gala and prevented it from securing a low-interest HUD loan.

2 (a). Describe the type and scope of injuries and any monetary and/or equitable relief being sought (please list items separately, such as lost wages, medical costs, etc.):

Columbia seeks actual and punitive damages, as well as costs, including reasonable attorney fees. Columbia estimates its lost revenue damages attributable to physicians leaving the hospital to be $21.5 million. Columbia also was damaged by the need to cancel its gala fundraiser, through which it reasonably expected to raise $1.5 million, and by its failure to obtain a HUD loan with an interest rate of 4.5% rather than Columbia's usual 10.5% cost of capital. Further, Columbia is entitled to the interest on a $1 million deposit that it furnished NCRIC in 1998, and to $765,346 - the amount due under the agreement when the proper contractual calculations are performed.

2(b). List any expert witnesses and the claims their testimony will support:

Mr. Peter Ben Ezra's testimony will support Columbia's calculation of damages resulting from the lost revenue it suffered following the departure of certain physicians from Columbia.

3. Describe any settlement offers that have been made and the current status of settlement discussions:

During the Summer and Fall of 2001, the parties engaged in substantial discussions toward a settlement involving voluntary dismissal (without prejudice) of the parties' respective claims and an agreement not to sue until all claims at issue in the contract had closed. Columbia made a number of settlement offers, but the negotiations broke off when NCRIC insisted upon Columbia's posting a bond as security for any settlement. The parties have not engaged in settlement discussions since that time.

4. How do you assess the value of this case for settlement purposes?

minimum $ 1.7 million maximum $ 25 million +

5(a). What additional information, if any, is required by you in order to engage in meaningful settlement negotiations? (Remember that the discovery deadline precedes the mediation date.)

None, though an audit of NCRIC's calculation of "subject premium" under the agreement would be useful.

5(b). Describe any pending motions:

Columbia has opposed NCRIC's motion for summary judgment as to Columbia's counter-claims.

1. Describe the facts of the case and the contentions of the opposing part(ies) as you understand them:

In 1993, Columbia and NCRIC entered into an agreement through which they would share the risk of providing medical malpractice insurance for Columbia's attending faculty. The parties subsequently agreed orally that neither party would pay the other any money due for a particular period until all claims for that period had closed. According to NCRIC, the parties also agreed orally that money could, alternatively, be due when the agreement between the parties ended. The contract expired on September 1, 2000, and NCRIC contends that Columbia now owes NCRIC $1,943,530. Columbia maintains that there are no exceptions to the oral agreement providing that no money is due until all claims have closed for a given period. Accordingly, no money is due for 2000; to the contrary, NCRIC owes Columbia $177,806 for the 1994-95 period, for which it is undisputed that all claims have closed and for which NCRIC's calculations have determined that money is owed to Columbia. Columbia contends that NCRIC has in any event miscalculated - to NCRIC's advantage - the amount NCRIC argues is due pursuant to the agreement.

2. Describe the defenses or counterclaims being raised:

Columbia maintains that NCRIC, not Columbia, breached the contract. Columbia's defenses also include NCRIC's failure to satisfy conditions precedent; estoppel, waiver, and/or unclean hands; unenforceability; and duress. Columbia has raised counter-claims for breach of contract; breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; breach of fiduciary duty; tortious interference with business relations; tortious interference with prospective business advantage; fraud; negligent misrepresentation; defamation; commercial disparagement; and conversion. These counter-claims have survived a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss filed by NCRIC.

3. Describe any settlement offers that have been made, and the current status of settlement discussions:

During the Summer and Fall of 2001, the parties engaged in substantial discussions toward a settlement involving voluntary dismissal (without prejudice) of the parties' respective claims and an agreement not to sue until all claims at issue in the contract had closed. Columbia made a number of settlement offers, but the negotiations broke off when NCRIC insisted upon Columbia's posting a bond as security for any settlement. The parties have not engaged in settlement discussions since that time.

4. How do you assess the value of this case for settlement purposes?

minimum $_____ maximum $_____

Because the contract at issue covers many claims that have not yet closed, it is not presently possible to determine the value of the case; the value will continue to change as claims close until all claims from periods covered by the contract ultimately close.

5(a). What additional information, if any, is required by you in order to engage in meaningful settlement negotiations? (Remember that the discovery deadline precedes the mediation date.)

None, though an actuarial estimate as to the anticipated final value of the claims at issue could potentially be useful.

5(b). Describe any pending motions:

Columbia has moved for summary judgment with respect to NCRIC's contract claim.

6(a). Are the claims at issue covered by insurance? ☐ yes ☒ no

6(b). If yes, what are the policy limits?

6(c). If yes, please identify the insurance company and the name of the claims representative or any other entities that must approve any settlement, and indicate their availability during the session.

PLAINTIFF NCRIC, INC.'S MOTION TO ENLARGE TIME FOR DISCOVERY

Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 26(e), Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") moves this Court for an Order enlarging the time for discovery in this matter. As set forth in the accompanying Memorandum of Points and Authorities, "good cause" exists within the meaning of Rule 26 for limited additional discovery to take place. Pursuant to Rule 12I-(e), a proposed Order setting forth the specific discovery NCRIC seeks is attached.

Accordingly, NCRIC moves for leave to take additional discovery as indicated in the proposed Order.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFF NCRIC, INC'S MOTION TO ENLARGE TIME FOR DISCOVERY

Following the close of discovery as well as briefing on the motions for summary judgment (which remain pending), Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") publicly announced in May 2002, that the hospital had suspended operations and abruptly closed its facility. In September 2002, Columbia announced that it is in the process of selling, or indeed has sold, its real estate assets and that it will shortly dissolve and distribute any remaining assets it may have to "charity." See Exhibit 1.

Given the significant change in circumstances, Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") has moved to re-open discovery for the limited purpose of determining what the closure of Columbia and sale of Columbia's assets mean to its claims. In this case, Columbia has maintained in its pleadings and briefs that NCRIC is the cause of much of its financial distress because of a contract dispute over Columbia's failure to pay insurance premiums for physician malpractice coverage. Since the recent events may bear directly on any claims that Columbia may ultimately have for damages in the unlikely event that its claims survive summary judgment and or other scrutiny as to liability, NCRIC has moved the Court, pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure 12-I(e) and 26(e), for leave to take additional, limited discovery for the purpose of examining the recent events. NCRIC believes that this additional discovery will further demonstrate that Columbia's own gross mismanagement and intervening causes inherent in the healthcare marketplace are the real cause of Columbia's demise, not alleged unfair behavior by NCRIC.

In addition, Columbia's damage theory in this case was premised on its continuing operations as a hospital. The principal damage evidence on which Columbia relies in this case is the testimony of its own Chairman of the Board, designated by the hospital as an "expert" for these purposes, who submitted a report analyzing Columbia's claimed losses over a twenty year period. The recent transactions will have a direct bearing on any such claims, since the hospital is no longer in operation. The nature of any redeployment or reinvestment of its assets, whether in a new "charity" or not, would bear directly on the claims made by Columbia in this case about future losses.

Accordingly, NCRIC seeks discovery on the following topics:

1. The May 2002 closing of Columbia Hospital for Women;

2. The September 2002 sale of the real estate assets of Columbia to Trammell Crow Co. and the subsequent distribution of sale proceeds by Columbia; and

3. The proposed dissolution of Columbia.

NCRIC moves the Court for leave to serve ten (10) interrogatories, ten (10) requests for production of documents, and conduct two depositions, including a Rule 30(b)(6) corporate designee deposition on these topics. NCRIC intends to complete the discovery within 45 days of an order permitting it to begin.

This case is not presently scheduled for trial or pretrial conference. The discovery proposed here will not unduly delay the resolution of this matter. The evidence sought is, in fact, necessary to an appropriate disposition at trial of the claims made by Columbia and could not have been obtained sooner. Moreover, Columbia will not be prejudiced by the additional discovery, since it is specific and limited in its nature to materials relevant or likely to be relevant to its claim for damages.

In these circumstances, "good cause" within the meaning of Rule 26(e) exists to grant additional discovery, and the discovery plan listed above is specific and time-limited, as required by the Rule. This motion is filed at a practicable time, since the apparent sale of assets by Columbia was just concluded and was announced only in late September 2002.

Wherefore, Plaintiff NCRIC moves for leave to take additional discovery as indicated in the proposed order filed herewith. An appropriate Order is attached.

Developer Pays $26 Million For Columbia Hospital Site

By Avram Goldstein
Washington Post Staff Writer

Trammell Crow Co. plans to build condominium apartments above street-level shops on the Columbia Hospital for Women site. (Lucian Perkins - The Washington Post)

The nonprofit board that ran Columbia Hospital for Women until its financial collapse in May has sold the site to a developer for $26.2 million, likely clearing the way for luxury apartments in the District's posh West End.

District officials appraised the land and buildings at $40.8 million for the 2003 tax year. However, that apparently does not account for a 1987 covenant that restricts a developer from building anything larger than the existing 230,000-square-foot building, which is set back from L Street NW between 24th and 25th streets.

People familiar with the deal said the purchaser, Trammell Crow Co., a publicly traded real estate firm, is interested in building condominium apartments above street-level shops. The oldest part of the hospital is not designated for historic preservation, but developers have assumed that it will be and are planning accordingly, officials said.

The sale price is relatively high compared with other residential land in Washington, said Jim Abdo, whose firm, Abdo Development, was a bidder on the Columbia site. It might have been higher were it not so much more expensive to renovate a building that may receive historic designation.

"Any time you're taking a building built in the early 1900s and transforming it into something it was never intended to be, from a hospital to a residential building, systems are going to have to be very creatively designed," Abdo said.

The closing of the sale began last week, and the purchase price was filed with the District on Friday. By yesterday, however, the money remained in escrow because of pending title searches.

Since the sale, lawyers for 28 creditors of the hospital have been sorting out their claims with attorneys for Columbia and Trammell Crow. Safa Rifka, Columbia's board chairman, said yesterday it is not yet clear how much money will be left after all the liens are satisfied and the money is released today.

"We will see when the money changes hands," he said.

Officials at Trammell Crow, which manages 25 million square feet of real estate in the Washington area, declined to comment.

Columbia once was a strong institution with a healthy balance sheet and an adjacent medical office building for its doctors. But in the past 10 years, Columbia has been saddled with financial crises, including bankruptcy, poor management and damaging internal battles for control of the board of directors.

After delivering more than 275,000 babies in its 136 years, Columbia shut down when it ran out of cash.

Proceeds of the sale of land and medical equipment will be used to pay off the hospital's many creditors, said Michael M. Barch, Columbia's chief executive. Remaining funds will be donated to a nonprofit group to be chosen later, he said, and the Columbia corporation will be dissolved.

ORDER EXTENDING DISCOVERY

This matter is before the Court on the Motion of Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. to Enlarge the Time for Discovery pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 26(e), together with the Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of the Motion and the response of Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. For the reasons stated in the Motion, and the issues being fully considered, the Court finds that good cause exists to grant the Motion, and, therefore, it is this ___ day of October 2002, ORDERED, that Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. may proceed to initiate discovery for a period of 45 days from the entry of this Order concerning:

1. The May 2002 closing of Columbia Hospital for Women;

2. The September 2002 sale of the real estate assets of Columbia Hospital for Women to the Trammell Crow Co. and the subsequent distribution of sale proceeds by Columbia; and

3. The proposed dissolution of Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

NCRIC is permitted leave of Court to serve ten (10) interrogatories, ten (10) requests for production of documents, and conduct two depositions, including a Rule 30(b)(6) corporate designee deposition on these topics.

OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION TO ENLARGE TIME FOR DISCOVERY

In response to recent reports of Columbia's closing and the unfortunate realization that Columbia's liabilities exceed its assets, NCRIC has decided to utilize every litigation tool at its disposal to learn about Columbia's finances – for reasons that have nothing to do with this litigation, but everything to do with seeking alternate ways to pursue Columbia's (non-existent) money. Under this guise, NCRIC seeks not to enlarge the time allotted to ongoing discovery, but to re-open already-closed discovery after summary judgment has been fully briefed. This motion, NCRIC's transparently improper opening salvo in that effort, should be denied.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

On September 26, 2002, an article appearing in The Washington Post reported on the sale of Columbia's property to a real estate developer. Exh. 1. Reacting to a portion of the article that suggested Columbia would donate any remaining proceeds from its sale to charity, NCRIC that day wrote to Columbia threatening action: "This letter is notice to Columbia and its officers and directors that NCRIC will look to any responsible individual or corporate entity for redress if the distribution of Columbia's assets are [sic] not handled in the manner required by D.C. law." Exh. 2 (Letter from Page to Hansen and Schulman of 9/26/02) at 2.

Columbia responded by assuring NCRIC of Columbia's unqualified intent to act lawfully: "Columbia has every intention of complying fully with all applicable provisions of law. The Hospital has no intention of donating any money to charity before meeting its obligations to secured and unsecured creditors." Exh. 3 (Letter from Schulman to Page of 9/27/02) at 1.[1] Columbia added that, regrettably, it "in fact expects its liabilities to exceed its assets," id., making the hypothetical donation of any remaining assets a non-issue. In multiple conversations with NCRIC, Columbia reaffirmed both that it intended to comply fully with applicable law and that, in any event, Columbia would not have any assets remaining to donate to charity or to use for any other purpose.

But neither these repeated assurances, nor the obligations imposed by law, are enough for NCRIC. Instead, NCRIC has made clear that it will employ any and all means available to learn the details of Columbia's finances and then to act against Columbia on the basis of that information. After expressing "skeptic[ism]" concerning Columbia's reply to NCRIC's letter, see Exh. 4 (Letter from Page to Schulman of 9/27/02), NCRIC now repeats in its present motion papers as a purported basis for re-opening discovery what it knows to be untrue: "The nature of any redeployment or reinvestment of its assets, whether to a new 'charity' or not, would bear directly on the claims made by Columbia in this case about future losses." NCRIC Mem. at 2. As Columbia has made clear to NCRIC (and as NCRIC could readily determine on the basis of public sources), there simply will not be any Columbia assets to redeploy or reinvest, whether to a new charity or not.

[1] Columbia's letter explained that its CEO, Mr. Michael Barch, had been misquoted in the article: "Mr. Barch indicated to the reporter that in the event there remain any proceeds after Columbia pays all debts and liens, the Hospital – as a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit entity – could not keep those funds, but rather would be obligated under applicable law to donate the money to another charitable cause. This was misquoted in the newspaper." Exh. 3 at 1 (emphasis added).

It is not surprising, then, that much as it tries, NCRIC cannot articulate any connection between the discovery it seeks and this litigation. NCRIC fails to articulate any coherent theory of causation (Point 1, infra) or damages (Point 2, infra) that would justify re-opening discovery. Moreover, an enlargement of time at this juncture would prejudice Columbia (Point 3, infra), and NCRIC's sudden interest in re-opening discovery flies in the face of its intransigence vis-à-vis the discovery that Columbia has requested from NCRIC (Point 4, infra). Accordingly, the Court should deny NCRIC's motion to enlarge time for discovery.

ARGUMENT

1. First, NCRIC claims that additional discovery will demonstrate that "the real cause of Columbia's demise" was Columbia's own mismanagement and (unspecified) "intervening causes inherent in the healthcare marketplace" rather than "alleged unfair behavior by NCRIC." NCRIC Mem. at 2 (emphasis added). But facts relating to the topics about which NCRIC claims to desire further discovery – the closing, sale, and dissolution of Columbia – on their face have no connection whatsoever to the causes of Columbia's demise, only its results. Take, for instance, the distribution of the proceeds from the sale of Columbia's property. NCRIC nowhere explains (nor could it) how an inquiry into the selling off of assets after the hospital has closed somehow could shed light on the causes for the closing. Had Columbia sought to re-open discovery on the grounds that its damages were now greater in light of the hospital's closing, then NCRIC would have had a right to pursue further discovery seeking to undermine such a theory. But Columbia has not made such a motion, preferring instead to proceed to trial without unnecessary delay. Of course, facts about the distribution of the sale proceeds would be relevant to NCRIC's future interest in such funds – the true motivation underlying this motion, but one having nothing to do with the merits of this litigation.

2. Second, NCRIC theorizes that Columbia's damages theory "was premised on its continuing operations as a hospital." NCRIC Mem. at 2. Therefore, NCRIC contends, "[t]he recent transactions will have a direct bearing on any such claims, since the hospital is no longer in operation." Id. But this theory is a non-starter for at least two reasons. First, it could hardly be the case that Columbia could be entitled to damages only if NCRIC harmed Columbia and Columbia also survived, but that because Columbia has not survived it is then as though no harm occurred. To borrow an analogy from the medical malpractice context: it is inconceivable that in the event a doctor's tortious conduct caused the loss of a limb the doctor might be liable for damages, but that if the patient died, the doctor would be liable for lesser damages. Likewise, Columbia's closing could not somehow lessen NCRIC's damages. Indeed, NCRIC fails to cite a single case supporting its untenable damages theory. Moreover, to the extent NCRIC wishes to prove at trial that the hospital closed, that is a matter of public record and one to which Columbia of course would stipulate. No discovery is necessary to prove that point, and certainly not discovery into the unrelated details of Columbia's finances.

3. Re-opening discovery at this juncture would prejudice Columbia. NCRIC speculates that "[t]he discovery proposed here will not unduly delay the resolution of this matter." Id. at 3. But, of course, the opposite is true. What NCRIC seeks is hardly some limited discovery with no collateral impact on the litigation. On the contrary, NCRIC seeks a wholesale re-opening of the case purportedly to explore evidence going to the very merits of the most fundamental issues, including "the real cause of Columbia's demise." NCRIC Mem. at 2 (emphasis added). To the extent that is NCRIC's intent, NCRIC could easily seek to re-open summary judgment itself following a new phase of discovery, causing Columbia further prejudice. But summary judgment has been fully briefed. After the Court rules on those motions, Columbia expects a trial on the merits of its counterclaims, without NCRIC injecting unnecessary delay for an improper purpose.

4. Finally, NCRIC's sudden desire to re-open discovery carries more than a small dose of irony, for before NCRIC's recent interest in the disposition of Columbia's assets, NCRIC repeatedly rebuffed Columbia's efforts to obtain additional discovery. See, e.g., Exh. 5 (Letter from Leahy to Badami of 4/18/02). Were the Court to order further discovery, it should also order NCRIC to comply with the 15-plus long-outstanding discovery requests detailed in Columbia's correspondence, attached as Exhs. 5 & 6.

In sum, the Court should not permit NCRIC's transparent ploy. Rule 26(e) firmly places the burden of this motion on NCRIC, and NCRIC has failed to cite any authority whatsoever that would justify re-opening discovery, let alone any authority supporting the proposition that the discovery NCRIC now seeks is somehow relevant to NCRIC's damages theory or otherwise appropriate. NCRIC should not be permitted to re-open discovery to undertake a fishing expedition of Columbia's finances in order to facilitate collateral litigation aimed at obtaining Columbia's assets. Columbia is entitled to its day in court without the delay that a re-opening of discovery undoubtedly would engender.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, NCRIC's Motion To Enlarge Time for Discovery should be denied.

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women

Gentlemen:

An article in The Washington Post reports that Columbia Hospital for Women ("Columbia") has completed a sale of the hospital property to Trammell Crow Co. for a sale price of $26.2 million. Today's article repeats a statement made on previous occasions by Columbia CEO Michael Barch that any sale proceeds remaining after secured liens on the property are satisfied will be "donated to a nonprofit group to be chosen later" and that the corporation will be dissolved.

As you are well aware, NCRIC, Inc. is a creditor of Columbia and has been seeking payment due under the Retro Plan for over two years. Despite our requests, Columbia has not provided NCRIC with any information regarding the distribution of sale proceeds or the dissolution of the corporation, although you have told me your client may be willing to discuss this matter in person. (I am awaiting word from you on this point.)

We believe Columbia has a legal duty to provide for all creditors, including NCRIC, before any final dissolution or donation of the sale proceeds to another charity. Under D.C. Code § 29-301.48, a non-profit must first make full payment of all liabilities and obligations of the corporation before proceeds may be donated to another charity upon corporate dissolution. Pursuant to D.C. Code § 29-301.47, Columbia has an obligation to immediately notify NCRIC, as a known creditor, of its intent to dissolve and distribute all corporate assets. Columbia cannot legally dissolve the corporation while NCRIC's lawsuit is pending and unresolved. D.C. Code § 29-301.51. Finally, Columbia cannot convey property with an actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud NCRIC as one of its creditors. D.C. Code § 28-3104.

This letter is notice to Columbia and its officers and directors that NCRIC will look to any responsible individual or corporate entity for redress if the distribution of Columbia's assets are not handled in the manner required by D.C. law.

I have enclosed copies of this letter for Safa Rifka M.D. and Michael Barch. Since you are counsel for the corporation, I ask that you forward these notices to them and advise them of our position immediately.

Sincerely yours,

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

Dear Rodney:

I write in response to your letter of yesterday, which raised concerns about statements attributed to Michael Barch in a Washington Post story suggesting that Columbia Hospital for Women ("Columbia," or the "Hospital") intends to donate to charity proceeds from the sale of Columbia's property.

I have looked into your concerns and am advised that Mr. Barch was misquoted. Mr. Barch indicated to the reporter that in the event there remain any proceeds after Columbia pays all debts and liens, the Hospital – as a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit entity – could not keep those funds, but rather would be obligated under applicable law to donate the money to another charitable cause. This was misquoted in the newspaper.

Let me therefore assure you that Columbia has every intention of complying fully with all applicable provisions of law. The Hospital has no intention of donating any money to charity before meeting its obligations to secured and unsecured creditors. I might add that I have also been advised that Columbia in fact expects its liabilities to exceed its assets – unless, perhaps, it secures a judgment against NCRIC on the Hospital's counterclaims, which Columbia continues to believe have merit.

Finally, I was puzzled by your assertion that "[d]espite [y]our requests," Columbia had not provided NCRIC with any information but "may be" willing to discuss this matter in person. In fact, as I indicated to your colleague Mr. Badami on September 20, 2002, Columbia welcomes the opportunity to address NCRIC's requests for information and, indeed, to discuss the possible resolution of this matter. Until you contacted me yesterday, I had been waiting to hear back from Mr. Badami as to when NCRIC might be willing to meet in order to do so. I am pleased that both parties are now working to make such a meeting occur as soon as possible.

Please feel free to be in touch if you would like to discuss your concerns further.

Sincerely,

Eli C. Schulman

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women

Dear Mr. Schulman:

Thank you for your letter of today's date.

I am skeptical of your clients' explanation that Mr. Barch was simply misquoted in yesterday's Washington Post article regarding Columbia's intent to donate sale proceeds to charity. This statement by Mr. Barch has been repeated in a number of articles in the last few months. As such, it seems unlikely that yesterday's article simply misquoted Mr. Barch.

In any event, I request that Columbia provide NCRIC with the details regarding its secured liabilities. If it is true, as you assert in your letter, that "Columbia in fact expects its liabilities to exceed its assets," then there is little reason not to share Columbia's schedule of assets and liabilities with NCRIC. This information would also facilitate a discussion between our clients when they meet.

We continue to be available to meet with you in person on a phone call's notice to discuss these issues.

Sincerely,

Rodney F. Page

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc., Civil Action No. 0007308-00

Dear Scott:

As you will recall, in our telephone conversation on January 31, 2002, you and I agreed to continue our dialogue about whether NCRIC would produce certain outstanding discovery after it completed its summary judgment briefs. As we discussed, it made more sense to find out what further agreements could be reached regarding outstanding discovery before engaging in discovery motion practice. As such, you promised to speak with your client about certain discovery compromises that I proposed in our conversation, and in return, I agreed that Columbia would not move to compel production of outstanding discovery at that time.

Now that NCRIC has filed its summary judgment briefs, I ask that you respond to my compromise proposals promptly, so that we may conclude discovery. (If you do not respond by April 26, 2002, I will assume that NCRIC will not agree to any of the proposals.) For your assistance, I have summarized my January 31 proposals below (they are numbered to correspond to the paragraphs of my January 31, 2002 letter regarding outstanding discovery issues).

1. Columbia would agree to forgo its right to depose NCRIC's Vice President of Information Services as part of its Rule 30(b)(6) deposition if NCRIC would agree to produce either Kevin O'Shaunessey (or, preferably, Ed Livingston – who Bill Burgess testified works as a consultant for NCRIC regarding the PLUS/OASIS systems) for a frank, two-hour telephone interview. As I explained, this interview is necessary to allow Columbia to understand NCRIC's contention that some documents cannot be produced by the PLUS or OASIS systems.

(15) Please inform me whether NCRIC intends to produce any other rebuttal expert(s) in response to Peter Ben Ezra's expert report, and if so, please immediately provide Columbia with a detailed Rule 26(b)(4) rebuttal statement regarding such expert(s).

(20) Rather than producing all documents related to investment income NCRIC earned on the $1 million (regardless of what fund it was placed into), please just provide an accurate estimate of the income earned on that money over the past four years.

9(1) Please confirm that James Hurley is a consultant for NCRIC, and that his files were searched for responsive documents.

9(8)+ Please confirm that NCRIC will make documents that were tabbed but not produced available for re-review by Columbia, if it determines that such a review is necessary.

10. Please confirm that NCRIC will produce responsive documents in the possession of Deloitte & Touche, in particular that memorandum that I requested.

11. Instead of producing David Osborne's forwarding address, which I understand NCRIC may not have, please produce his last known address.

12. Please confirm that NCRIC will produce the missing claim files for Columbia to review and copy if it determines that such a review is necessary.

Finally, I made several other follow-up requests for outstanding discovery items (e.g., the list of all NCRIC endorsements and the list of Columbia physicians who had the Retro Plan endorsement) in January 2002. Please respond to this correspondence by April 26, 2002, as well.

I look forward to speaking with you about these matters.

Sincerely,

Joseph K. Leahy

ORDER DENYING COLUMBIA'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

This matter comes before the Court on defendant, Columbia Hospital for Women's ("Columbia") Motion for Summary Judgment. A motions hearing on the cross summary judgment motions in this case was held on December 12, 2002. Columbia argues that there are no genuine issues of material fact concerning NCRIC, Inc.'s ("NCRIC") breach of contract claim or Columbia's counter-claim for breach of contract against NCRIC. Specifically, Columbia argues that based on the November 1996 oral agreement between Columbia and NCRIC, and alleged miscalculations performed by NCRIC, Columbia is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on NCRIC's breach of contract claim. Many material facts are disputed in this case and the Court therefore denies Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment.

Background

In October of 1993, Columbia, a non-profit hospital specializing in care for women and NCRIC, a provider of malpractice liability insurance to physicians in the District of Columbia, established the Retrospective Rating Plan ("Retro Plan"). The purpose of the plan was to establish a malpractice liability program for the physicians at Columbia (the "Attending Faculty") to help reduce the costs to physicians through a sharing of malpractice risk between the hospital and physicians. The Attending Faculty benefited by receiving a Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsement from NCRIC, which entitled the holder to a discount off the premiums up to $500,000. Physicians not participating in the Retro Plan would have to pay Subject Premiums, a total of undiscounted premiums that would be charged to physicians for coverage limits of $500,000 for each claim.

September 1996 Amendment

The Retro Plan was devised of three one–year periods, called Experience Periods. Originally, the Retro Plan was to be effective from September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1996. Subsequently, the parties agreed to amend and renew the Retro Plan in September1996. The Retro Plan amended the Deposit Premium (subject premium multipled by Deposit Premium Multiplier) and increased the physician's discount that was origionally 19% to 30%. The parties also agreed to renew the Retro Plan for one year, effective September 1, 1996.

The Reconciliation Process

The Retro Plan is retrospective in that it required NCRIC to perform calculations or Reconciliations at the end of each Experience Period and compare the cost to the amount of premium NCRIC received from the Attending Faculty. If the cost of providing the malpractice insurance to the Attending Faculty exceeded the total amount of premium NCRIC received, Columbia was required to pay the difference, up to a set maximum. The difference was called Additional Premium. If the Attending Faculty paid NCRIC more than it cost to provide them with the malpractice coverage, under the Retro

16d-001521

Plan, NCRIC was required to pay Columbia a refund or Return Premium, as limited by a set minimum.

Included in the Retro Plan was a measure to self-check the correctness of the calculations. To determine if the appropriate amount of premium was collected to pay losses under the Retro Plan, the Retro Premium was compared to the Deposit Premium. The Retro Premium represents for each Experience Period the total cost of providing $500,000 in malpractice insurance coverage to all of the Attending Faculty. The Deposit Premium was the Subject Premium multiplied by the Deposit Premium Multiplier (Columbia claims that the Deposit Premium Multiplier should be 67% and NCRIC claims it should be 62% in the Reconciliations over the disputed Experience Periods). If the Retro Premium is less than the Deposit Premium, the Return Premium is due to Columbia. If the Retro Premium is more than the Deposit Premium, Columbia owes NCRIC Additional Premium to pay against the losses.

According to the original plan, an exchange of cumulative premium or return premium was to be reconciled for each experience period. According to Columbia, NCRIC typically would provide them with a spreadsheet listing all the individual Experience Periods, with the corresponding cumulative total. Additionally, Columbia argues that NCRIC is obligated as a condition precedent to provide Columbia with this spreadsheet or similar notice within sixty days of the end of each Experience Period before Columbia is required to pay any premium due within thirty days. NCRIC asserts that Columbia was provided all quarterly and annual reconciliation calculations required by the Retro Plan and such reports or notice was not a condition precedent that needed to be performed before Columbia would be obligated to pay NCRIC any premium owed.

November 1996 Oral Agreement

In November 1996, NCRIC and Columbia agreed orally that neither party would pay premium for any Experience Period until it was "closed" regardless of whether the Reconciliation for any given Experience Period, indicated that Additional or Return Premium was due. In September 1997, the parties negotiated a partial payment towards Additional Premium due as financial security. According to Columbia, this $1 million dollars was a deposit to renew the Retro Plan and to NCRIC it was premium owed by Columbia. On June 28, 2000, NCRIC informed Columbia that the Retro Plan would end as of its expiration date of September 1, 2000.

However, based on the parties oral agreement, Columbia argues that they do not owe NCRIC any money because no additional Experience Periods have closed since the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation. Instead, Columbia argues that NCRIC owes Columbia for the closed Experience Period of the 1994-1995 term. Columbia argues that pursuant to the oral agreement, NCRIC has paid Columbia $172,815 for the first Experience Period, but it has paid Columbia nothing for the second Experience Period.

NCRIC interpreted the oral agreement differently. According to NCRIC, there was an oral agreement that premium was not to be paid by either party until the close of an Experience Period unless the Retro Plan ended. Because of this difference in interpretation, Columbia has not paid any premium to NCRIC since September 1, 2002. NCRIC then responded with this instant lawsuit for breach of contract against Columbia for premium due now that the Retro Plan has been terminated and while expectancy periods are still open.

Columbia also argues that absent the parties' oral agreement, Columbia still does not owe NCRIC the amount of Additional Premium that NCRIC demands at this time, because NCRIC failed to provide within sixty days of the Reconciliation date, notice of any Additional Premium due following the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation. This, Columbia argues is a condition precedent to Columbia's obligation to pay, which is due and payable within thirty days after it receives NCRIC's notice. Thus, Columbia argues that the 2001 payment is not due.

In opposition NCRIC argues that Columbia's arguments are based on factual questions rather than the amendment and administration of the Retro Plan. NCRIC argues that notice was not a condition precedent and that it should be stricken from Columbia's pleadings as a factual conclusion. Despite this contradiction, NCRIC declares that even if notice was not produced in discovery that this is not conclusive evidence that such notice was never given.

Miscalculations

Columbia also moves the Court to grant summary judgment on its breach of contract claim against NCRIC, alleging that NCRIC misapplied the Minimum Premium Factor, the Deposit Premium Factor and the Development Factors. Columbia argues that NCRIC misapplied the original 75% Minimum Premium factor to the first two years of the Plan after the 1996 amendment reduced the Minimum Premium to 60%. NCRIC argues that the 1996 change was to be interpreted prospectively from the amendment made in 1996 forward—not retrospectively. NCRIC claims that Columbia wrongfully relies upon its counsel's unsupported argument that the amendment does not expressly prohibit the Minimum Premium Factor from being applied to all Experience Periods. However, NCRIC argues that the whole purpose for amending certain figures was the mathematical consequence of the increased premium discount effective from 1996 forward.

Next, Columbia argues that NCRIC uses a Deposit Premium multiplier of approximately 62% for all Experience Periods beginning after 1995-1996 when the Retro Plan states that the multiplier should be 67%. By employing the wrong Deposit Premium factor, Columbia claims that NCRIC credits Columbia with five percent less Deposit Premium than it should for each of the five most recent Experience Periods. As a result, when the Deposit Premium is subtracted from the Retro Premium for each Experience Period, Columbia is billed substantially more than required by the Plan. Columbia demonstrated that when NCRIC's September 1, 2000 Reconciliation applies the correct deposit premium factor, the cumulative amount due drops from $1,286,524 to $627,304.

NCRIC argues that Columbia relies only on its counsel's interpretation instead of expert testimony regarding the complex analysis of retrospective insurance. Columbia argues that the Deposit Premium must be the inverse of the 19% discount originally provided to physicians under the Retro Plan. Thus, when the discount increased to 33%, the Deposit Premium must be 67%. NCRIC argues that this interpretation comes from a "simple" reading of the Retro Plan, but that this evidence cannot counter NCRIC's testimony by "individuals knowledgeable about retrospective insurance plan calculations, as to why 62% is the proper Deposit Premium to properly arrive a the reduced premium for physicians affected by the 1996 Amendment to the Retro Plan."

Finally, Columbia claims that NCRIC applies each Development Factor to the relevant number of months after an Experience Period begins, rather than after it ends. Columbia bases this opinion on the comparison of Exhibit E of the 1993 Retro Plan to NCRIC's reconciliation calculations. Columbia argues that the effect of this is a substantial decrease in the cumulative additional premium that drops from $1, 286,524 to $686,961. In response, NCRIC argues that even if Exhibit E of the Retro Plan, a tabbed example of the Retro Plan operation, shows the Development Factor being applied at the end of the years, NCRIC is not in breach of contract by not following the calculation examples in Exhibit E. NCRIC argues that the Retro Plan states that Exhibit E is "not to vary alter or amend the terms hereof or of the Plan." Moreover, NCRIC asserts that Columbia is using exhibit E to impose additional obligations and not merely to clarify the application of the Development Factors. Further, NCRIC highlights again that Columbia has no lay or expert testimony in support of its interpretation that the Development Factors are correct.

Summary Judgment Standard

Summary judgment is proper under Rule 56(b) where the record shows that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Big Builders, Inc. v. Israel, 709 A.2d 74 (D.C. 1998). The court must view all facts and inferences in the light most favorable to the non-movant, and summary judgment should not be granted unless the moving party can show that no reasonable juror could find for the non-moving party. Big Builders, 709 A.2d 74, 76 (D.C. 1998). Once the movant has met the burden of demonstrating the absence of material disputed issues and the right to judgment as a matter of law, the nonmovant has the burden of producing adequate evidence to support a factual dispute requiring the trier of fact to resolve the dispute. Graff, v. Malawer, 592 A.2d 1038, 1040 (D.C. App. 1991).

The party opposing summary judgment may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleading but must come forward with affidavits or other evidence to controvert the movant's showing that there is a genuine issue of material fact for trial. Graff, 592 A.2d 1038, 040 (D.C. App. 1991). It is therefore imperative upon the non-movant to disclose credible evidence of it position because summary judgment cannot be defeated by conclusive allegations. Id. A motion for summary judgment is therefore properly granted if taking all reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, a reasonable juror, acting reasonably could not find for the nonmoving party, under the appropriate burden of proof. Id.

Analysis

There are material issues of fact in dispute, and therefore the Court denies Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment. First, there is a factual dispute whether NCRIC gave notice to Columbia that premium was due, and whether such notice was a condition precedent to NCRIC's ability to receive the owed premium. Columbia says it did not get notice and NCRIC claims that notice was not a condition precedent but that they complied with all the requirements under the Retro Plan. Both parties rely on their interpretation of the oral agreement in support to their argument that there was or was not a condition precedent.

Under D.C. law, for a contract to exist, there must be both agreement to all material terms and the intention of the parties to be bound. "Absent any contrary requirement under the statute of frauds, parties may enter into enforceable oral contracts, as long as the parties agree to all material terms and intend to be bound by their oral agreement." Baker v. Office Space Dev. Corp., 664 A. 2d 1236, 1238 (D.C. 1995).

Here, both parties agree that an oral contract exists and have made such in-court representations before the Court at the December 12, 2002 motions hearing on the cross summary judgment motions in this case. Thus, the statute of frauds is satisfied. Wemhoff v. Investors Management Corporation of America, et al., 528 A.2d 1205, 1208 (DC 1987). The determination therefore, is whether the parties agreed to all of the material terms and intended to be bound by their agreement. The jury should make this determination.

Here, the contract is ambiguous. The parties did not appear to consider the ramifications of their oral contract if the Retro Plan was terminated. The parties agree that no premium would be due by either party until all Experience Periods had closed. This agreement seems to have been made in light of the Retro Plan being in existence. However, the parties have different interpretations as to what would happen if the Retro Plan ended and open Experience Periods still existed.

Issues of fact regarding oral contract ambiguity are for the jury to resolve. The use of extrinsic evidence is permitted "to determine the circumstances surrounding the making of the agreement, so that it may be ascertained what a reasonable person in the position of the parties would have thought the words meant." Noonan v. Williams, 688 A.2d 237 (DC 1996) (citing Lamphier v. Washington Hospital Center, 524 A.2d 729 (D.C. 1987).

The different interpretations by the parties are an ambiguity in the contract, as opposed to a failure to agree to all material terms of the contract. "The policy favoring freedom of contract requires that within broad limits, the agreement of the parties should be honored even though forfeiture results. When, however, it is doubtful whether or not the agreement makes an event a condition of an obligor's duty, an interpretation is preferred that will reduce the risk of forfeiture." RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONTRACTS § 227(1) (1971).

Here, Columbia argues that the closing of an Experience Period, is the event that must occur before Columbia must pay NCRIC any owed premium. On the other hand, NCRIC argues that whether an Experience Period is closed or open, Columbia owes NCRIC now because the Retro Plan has been terminated. Because of this factual dispute, the Court will not decide the harsher alternative that no contract was formed. The intent of the parties is a factual issue for the jury to decide.

There are additional factual disputes for a jury to resolve such as whether notice was ever given. There is also a factual dispute regarding the mechanics of the calculations. Specifically, there is a dispute regarding whether the 1996 Amendment decreasing the Minimum Premium to 60% should be applied prospectively or retrospectively and whether the Deposit Premium Multiplier was properly adjusted from 67% to 62% to comply with the 1986 amendment, reducing the premium for the Attending Faculty. Finally, there is a factual dispute as to the whether Exhibit E is a controlling example of how the Reconciliations should be performed.

16d-001529

Accordingly, for the foregoing reasons and upon consideration of Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment[1], and Opposition thereto, it is by the Court this 2nd day of April, 2003

ORDERED, that the Motion is DENIED.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART NCRIC's MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY BY DESIGNATION UNDER SCR 30(b)(6) AND APPEARANCE AT DEPOSITION

On August 7, 2001, NCRIC filed this instant Motion to Compel Discovery By Designation Under SCR 30(b)(6) and Appearance at Deposition. Specifically, NCRIC asks the Court to compel Columbia to designate persons to appear at deposition and answer questions about subject matters described in plaintiff's Notice of 30(b)(6) Deposition pertaining to numbers 1-14, 28-29, 51-52, 56-57. On November 19, 2001, Columbia filed its Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motions to Compel. The Court has reviewed the motion and the particular objections. The Court's disposition on these issues is detailed below:

#1: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories[1] specific to this subject area. Such information should be obtained from interrogatories. The Court has considered Columbia's objections based on work product privilege. However, certain underlying facts must have been the basis for Columbia's eleven-count counterclaim. Thus, the Court does not recognize a work-product privilege as to this

[1] The Court will allow NCRIC to reopen discovery in the form of interrogatories only for the specified areas. This is not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter stated in specific area.

#2: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories to this subject area. (See #1 above).

#3: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories to this subject area. (See #1 above).

#4: Granted. Columbia is instructed to provide designees to be deposed on this specific subject area.

#5: Granted. Certain underlying facts as these must have been the basis for Columbia to file an eleven-count counterclaim. Columbia is instructed to provide designees to be deposed on this specific subject area.

#6: The Court will reserve ruling on these issues until this issue is addressed in the Court's ruling on NCRIC's Summary Judgment Motion.

#7: The Court will reserve ruling on these issues until this issue is addressed in the Court's ruling on NCRIC's Summary Judgment Motion.

#8: Denied: The Court agrees with Columbia that this subject area improperly asks the designees to speak to the law of fiduciary relationships.

#9: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories specific to this subject area. Such information should be obtained from interrogatories. The Court has considered Columbia's objections based on work product privilege. However, certain underlying facts must have been the basis of the eleven-count counterclaim. Thus, the Court does not recognize a work-product privilege as to this specific area. Moreover, the Court compels Columbia to provide financial accounts or plaintiff's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6), but only to allow such relevant and pertinent information to be obtained properly through limited interrogatories.

statements as to their financial situation at the time Columbia authorized the $1 million check to be given to Columbia.

#10: Granted in part. Certain underlying facts, such as these, must have the basis of Columbia's eleven-count counterclaim. The Court reserves ruling on the remaining issue until it issues a ruling on NCRIC's Summary Judgment Motion.

#11: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories specific to this subject area. Such information should be obtained from interrogatories. The Court has considered Columbia's objections based on work product privilege. However, certain underlying facts must have been the basis of Columbia's eleven-count counterclaim. Thus, the Court does not recognize a work-product privilege as to this specific area.

#12: Denied. NCRIC already has within its possession the allegations of errors by plaintiff from the pleadings.

#13: Granted. Columbia counter-claimed that NCRIC knew about Columbia's financial situation. Columbia should designate person(s) to speak to the underlying facts regarding the "bases for the allegations of plaintiff's knowledge about defendant's financial situation."

#14: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories specific to this subject area. Such information should be obtained from interrogatories. The Court does not recognize a work-product privilege as to this specific area.

#28: The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories to this subject area. (See #1 above).

16d-001535

#29: Denied. The Court acknowledges Columbia's objection that this is a moot issue. However, the Court agrees with Columbia's objection that NCRIC will only be able to obtain information concerning the results of Columbia's insolvency, not the cause.

#51: Granted. Columbia is instructed to provide designees to be deposed on this specific subject area.

#52: Denied. Columbia can not be expected to testify as to the intent of NCRIC.

#56: Granted: Columbia is instructed to provide designees to be deposed on this specific subject area.

#57: Denied. The Court acknowledges that Columbia's prayer for attorney's fees was dismissed and therefore this subject area is moot.

So Ordered.

ORDER DENYING NCRIC's MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

This matter comes before the Court on National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company, Inc.'s ("NCRIC") motion for summary judgment against Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center ("Columbia")[1]. A motions hearing on the cross summary judgment motions in this case was held on December 12, 2002. NCRIC seeks summary judgment on Columbia's counterclaims for breach of contract (count I), breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (count II), breach of fiduciary duty (count III), tortious interference with business relations (count four), prospective business advantage (count five), negligence (count six)[2], actual and constructive fraud (count seven), negligent misrepresentation (count eight), defamation and libel (count nine), injurious falsehood (count 10), and conversion (count 11).

Background

In September of 1993, NCRIC, a provider of medical malpractice insurance, and Columbia, a not-for-profit hospital in the District of Columbia negotiated the (See Columbia's description of retaliation).

Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("The Retro Plan"). The purpose of the Retro Plan was to provide to certain physicians, a reduction or discount on their insurance premiums on a preferred risk basis by participating in the Attending Faculty Program. The Retro Plan was originally designed to last for three one-year periods, known under the plan as experience periods. Columbia agreed to be solely responsible for any additional premium due in accordance with the terms of the Plan. Columbia would also be entitled to receive any return premium or return investment.

Summary Judgment Standard

Super. Ct. Civ. R. 56(c) provides for summary judgment when there are no genuine issues of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Summary judgment is warranted after "(1) taking all reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, (2) a reasonable juror, acting reasonably, could not find for the non-moving party, (3) under the appropriate burden of proof. Sherman v. Adoption Ctr. Of Washington, Inc., 741 A.2d 1031 (D.C. 1999). In responding to a motion for summary judgment, the non-moving party may not rest upon mere allegations or conclusory statements but must, through affidavits or as otherwise provided in Rule 56, set forth specific facts showing there is a genuine issue for trial. Beard v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 587 A.2d 195, 198-99 (D.C. 1991).

A. Count One: Breach of Contract

Columbia claims that NCRIC breached the Retro Plan in three regards. As a result, Columbia claims that NCRIC caused Columbia damages to the point of filing for bankruptcy. First, Columbia argues that NCRIC breached their oral agreement by failing

[2] To the extent that the summary judgment motion and the opposition thereto discussed only discussed negligence in regards to negligent misrepresentation (count 8), the Court will not discuss negligence, count to notify and pay Columbia $765,000 in return premium for the 1993-1994 and 1994-1995 closed experience periods. Absent the oral agreement, Columbia argues that because NCRIC failed to perform the September 1, 2001 reconciliation, NCRIC would still owe Columbia $560,000.

Second, Columbia alleges that NCRIC breached the Retro Plan by performing a series of miscalculations of the Retro Premium in quarterly reports and annual reconciliations. Specifically, NCRIC allegedly used a greater percentage of its loss reserves than it was allowed to consider, "added extra years" to the Plan and/or reconciled too few years in the calculations, did not apply the corrected Deposit Premium and did not apply the proper Minimum premium.

NCRIC supports their calculations and argues that Columbia has not proffered any evidence to disprove NCRIC's miscalculations. Columbia argues that NCRIC has admitted that they made a mistake in calculating the reconciliations. Further, Columbia argues that the Court should determine the accuracy of the calculations. Columbia believes that the one million dollars that it deposited to NCRIC, was a contributing cause to Columbia's bankruptcy. Also, Columbia argues that had NCRIC performed the 1997 reconciliation correctly, the spreadsheet would have shown that Columbia owed NCRIC $1.2 million instead of $1.8 million.

Clearly, there is a material dispute as to how the reconciliations should be calculated. Each party has their own theory but the Retro Plan says nothing as to how the calculations are to be performed. Although Exhibit E of the Retro Plan is identified as an example, the Retro Plan negates any complete, and total reliance on Exhibit E, when it states "Exhibit E is not meant to vary, alter or amend the terms of the Plan." Exhibit E, six in this opinion. The issue of negligence will be presented at trial.

P.4 202 879-0041 Jude, Blackburne-Rigsby Apr 21 03 03:38p

according to the Retro Plan, is meant to clarify the manner of calculations. Therefore, the parties are in disagreement on the "how" to perform reconciliations, and therefore the formula is one that must be decided by the jury.

Third, Columbia claims that NCRIC breached the Retro Plan by refusing to provide Columbia with reports concerning the loss reserves as required under the Retro Plan. On the other hand, NCRIC argues that they provided Columbia with quarterly reports reflecting the current status of claims under the Retro Plan. Further, NCRIC argues that it was at Columbia's request that the parties did not always meet to discuss the quarterly reports provided by NCRIC. Here, there is obviously a dispute as to whether NCRIC provided Columbia with the necessary reports concerning loss reserves required under the Retro Plan, and therefore summary judgment is denied.

B. Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing (Count II)

Columbia claims that NCRIC evaded the spirit of the contract when they demanded that NCRIC pay $1.7 million in October of 1997 to renew the Retro Plan because it denied Columbia the benefit of the oral agreement[3]. Columbia was only able to pay $1 million dollars but argues that even if this amount was negotiated, Columbia still had no choice but make the payment, or lose its physicians. Columbia argues that NCRIC used the oral agreement to avoid paying money when it was convenient and demanded money as an exception to the oral agreement at the height of Columbia's fiscal woes. Further, Columbia argues that NCRIC rendered imperfect performance by performing reconciliations inaccurately.

NCRIC refutes Columbia's allegations that it breached the duty of good faith and [3] This refers to the oral agreement made in November 1996 that claimed that no premium would be paid until all experience periods were closed.

P.5 202 879-0041 Judge Blackburne-Rigsby Apr 21 03 03:38p fair dealing. NCRIC argues that it simply wanted a security payment before Columbia filed for bankruptcy. In addition, NCRIC emphasizes that the $1 million dollars was negotiated between the parties and that Columbia was under no obligation to renew the Retro Plan. Moreover, NCRIC denies that it "evaded the spirit of the contract" because it consistently provided the Attending Faculty with discounted insurance premiums: the purpose of the Retro Plan.

NCRIC's motion for summary judgment on Columbia's claim that NCRIC breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing must fail because there is a factual dispute regarding whether the $1 million Columbia gave to NCRIC was a deposit or a payment on outstanding premium.

Under District of Columbia law, "every contract contains an implied covenant that neither party shall do anything which will have the effect of destroying or injuring the right of the other party to receive the fruits of the contract, which means that in every contract there exists an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing." Hais v. Smith, 547 A.2d 986,987 (D.C. 1988) See Steele v. Issikoff, 130 F. Supp. 2d 23, 32 (D.D.C. 2000); Paul v. Howard Univ.,754 A. 2d 297, 310 (D.C. 2000). The implied duty of good faith and fair dealing "prevents a party from evading the spirit of the contract, willfully rendering imperfect performance or interfering with the other party's performance. Id. at 987.

Here, the issue of whether the $1 million dollars was intended to be a deposit or payment is a material issue in dispute. Both parties dispute how the million dollars was classified in the negotiations. The classification is material because if the $1 million dollars was negotiated security payment, agreed to by Columbia, the grounds for this p.6

breach of good faith and fair dealing is not viable because there was no deception. This is true despite Columbia's allegation that they were forced to pay the amount to renew the plan. Other medical malpractice insurance companies exist in the District. However, if the money is a deposit, one that Columbia thought that they would able to receive back and was not a payment, NCRIC's refusal to return the $1 million supports the allegation that such a covenant has been breached.

Therefore, the counterclaim for implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing must be reserved for the jury to decide and NCRIC's summary judgment fails.

C. Breach of Fiduciary Duty (Count Three)

Columbia claims that NCRIC owed a fiduciary duty to Columbia by:

> NCRIC's responsibility, stated in the Plan to perform all bookkeeping on behalf of Medical Center[4] under the Plan; b) Medical Center's trust and reliance on NCRIC to administer the Plan, of which NCRIC was fully aware; c) Medical Center's reliance on NCRIC to properly and honestly perform reconciliations and accurately calculate Additional or Return Premium, of which NCRIC was fully aware; and d) Medical Center's dependence on NCRIC for certain information necessary to perform retro calculations under the Plan, of which NCRIC was fully aware. See Retrospctive Rating Plan.

First, Columbia asserts that because NCRIC was to perform all bookkeeping, including all Reconciliation calculations for both parties and Columbia never received adequate information to audit the calculations[5], the Retro Plan was structured in a way that acknowledged NCRIC's superior skill and knowledge. Second, Columbia argues that even if the original Retro Plan had not envisioned a fiduciary relationship, the evolution of their relationship into a "joint undertaking" gave rise to such a duty.

[4] It is inferred from the Retro Plan provided by the parties that Columbia Hospital For Women is the "Medical Center" depicted in the Plan.

P.7 202 879-0041 Judge, Blackburne-Rigsby Apr 21 03 03:38p
16d-001542

Columbia describes the evolutionary circumstances as the time period around late 1997 when Columbia changed their administration dramatically, and new management had to familiarize itself with the Retro Plan[6].

Further, Columbia argues that the parties fiduciary relationship was reinforced when the parties met at quarterly meetings to review the reconciliation process. Columbia asserts that NCRIC represented to them that: 1) the calculations were accurate; 2) all errors had been corrected; 3) and that they were watching out for Columbia's best interest when performing the reconciliations. Moreover, Columbia argues that although Columbia was present at the quarterly meeting concerning reconciliations, a fiduciary duty still existed because the parties' bargaining power was not equal.

NCRIC does not concede that the parties bargaining power was unequal, instead NCRIC views the Retro Plan as a negotiated agreement between two distinct and sophisticated corporate entities. NCRIC argues that Columbia was not obligated to renew their plan with Columbia, as there were other professional malpractice insurance companies in the District.

A fiduciary relation exists when one party "is under a duty to act for or give advice for the benefit of another upon matters within the scope of the relation. Church of Scientology Int'l v. Eli Lilly & Co., 848 F. Supp. 1018, 1028 (D.D.C. 1994)." Whether there exists a fiduciary relationship is a fact-intensive question, involving a searching inquiry into the nature of the relationship, the promises made, the type of services or advice given and the legitimate expectations of the parties. Id. However such [6] Columbia claims that members of their personnel were unable to audit NCRIC's numbers because the spreadsheets do not show all of the multipliers used in the Retro formula, and Columbia did not have access to any of the underlying data.

Apr 21 03 03:39p Judge Blackburne-Rigsby 202 879-0041 p.8

parties, through past history of the relationship and their conduct, had extended the relationship beyond the limits of the contractual obligations. Id.

The Court does not believe that a fiduciary relationship was envisioned from the inception of the Retro Plan. The Retro Plan envisioned NCRIC to be the book and record keeper in the administration of the Retro Plan, but does not deprive Columbia of an opportunity to review these books and records. Although NCRIC may have been more familiar with retrospective insurance, this did not diminish Columbia's bargaining power. Further, the Retro Plan is a negotiated instrument, as agreed by all the parties. Columbia did not raise a concern of unequal bargaining power at the inception of the Retro Plan. This considerably weakens Columbia's claim that the parties bargaining power was unequal because of its failure to exercise in more depth its contractual rights to inquire into and review the records and calculations made by NCRIC.

However, the Court denies summary judgment on the counterclaim for breach of fiduciary duty because there is a factual dispute as to whether such a relationship could have evolved beyond the four corners of the contract. Columbia claims that through its fiscal woes, it trusted the representations NCRIC made to Columbia, and NCRIC was aware of this reliance. To the extent that Columbia will proffer testimony to the alleged deception and misrepresentation at trial, and that a fiduciary duty is inherently a factual inquiry, this counterclaim will survive the motion for summary judgment.

D. Summary Judgment is Denied as to Columbia's Tortious Interference With Business Relations (Count Four) and Tortious Interference With Prospective Business Advantage Claims (Count Five)

Based on the statements, Columbia claimed that NCRIC interfered with its [6] This included the resignation of the entire board of directors; the departure of several CEOs; a crisis concerning the Bank of Tokyo; and Columbia's filing for bankruptcy.

Apr 21 03 03:39p Judge Blackburne-Rigsby 202 879-0041 p.9
16d-001544

business relationships with Columbia's Attending Faculty, and Columbia's expectancy of business from patient referrals by using scare tactics to make the Attending Faculty move their practices to George Washington University ("GW") and Sibley Memorial Hospital ("Sibley").

NCRIC argues that there is no evidence demonstrating that any physician terminated his or her relationship with Columbia because of the alleged defamatory statements. Additionally, NCRIC argue that there is no evidence that Columbia physicians left because NCRIC representatives urged them to do so or because NCRIC decided not to renew the Retro Plan. Specifically, NCRIC argues failure to renew the Retro Plan was lawful and can not be the basis of tortious interference with a business relationship. Moreover, NCRIC argues that if a disputed issue of material fact exists as to whether the alleged statements were false, there is no evidence that NCRIC knew that at the time they were allegedly published. Specifically, NCRIC argues that since Columbia's defamation and injurious falsehood claims fail as a matter of law, so too must its tortious interference claims to the extent they rely on those alleged statements.

Columbia argues that their damages are not speculative, but rather unambiguous, based on their long-standing relationship with their physicians. Specifically, Columbia argues that they had a long-standing relationship with at least sixty physicians, who referred many, if not all, of their patients to Columbia. Additionally, Columbia argues that Columbia has a history of many of its physicians staying until retirement. Further, Columbia argues that historically admission patterns and the number of births had remained stable. Moreover, Columbia argues that they have not seen such a drastic leave of physicians since September 2000 when about one-third of its patient referrals leave of physicians since September 2000 when about one-third of its patient referrals and a substantial number of the Attending Faculty left Columbia, all within two months.

Columbia also alleges that every group of physicians that left Columbia in September 2000 told a Columbia Board Member that they were leaving due to the alleged rumors spread by Dr. Glassman. Columbia asserts that the rumors and scare tactics had a direct effect of the rumors and the physicians leaving, based on the immediate timing that several physicians left and moved to GW and Sibley.

NCRIC's summary judgment motion must fail because there are factual disputes as to whether NCRIC's tactics amounted to untruthful scare tactics and whether these tactics ultimately caused the physicians to leave. To establish a claim for tortuous interference with prospective economic advantage, a plaintiff ordinarily must plead 1) the existence of a valid business relationship or expectancy, 2) knowledge of the relationship or expectancy on the part of the interferer, 3) intentional interference inducing or causing a breach or termination of the relationship or expectancy, and or 4) resultant damage. Genetic Systems Corp. v. Abott Laboratories, 691 F. Supp. 407, 423 (D.D.C. 1988).

Unfair competition is essentially an unprivileged interference with prospective advantage. Id. A general intent to interfere or knowledge that conduct will injure the plaintiff's business dealings is insufficient to impose liability. Id. A competitor's conduct must be more egregious, for example, it must involve libel, slander, physical coercion, fraud, misrepresentation, or disparagement. Id.

There are factual disputes concerning whether the statements were truthful, as to provide a qualified privilege and not interfere with business relations. If the comments were not truthful, there is a dispute as to whether NCRIC knew that the statements would interfere with Columbia's business relations. There is also an issue in dispute as to whether Dr. Glassman spoke as a Columbia physician or a NCRIC representative.

Jude Blackburne-Rigsby 202 879-0041

16d-001546

D. Summary Judgment is Denied As to Columbia's Fraudulent (Count 7) and Negligent Misrepresentation Claims (Count 8)

In counts seven and eight of their counterclaim, Columbia alleges that NCRIC fraudulently and negligently misrepresented that Columbia owed more money than that which was due and that NCRIC was not due any money. NCRIC stands behind their calculations in arguing that at all times they used due care when calculating the premiums and corrected any minor miscalculations immediately.

Columbia alleges that NCRIC falsely represented that Columbia owed additional premium for each closed experience period, and that a cumulative amount was due. Columbia claims that they were financially injured because NCRIC demanded more money than that which was owed. Further, Columbia argues that had NCRIC correctly represented to them, Columbia would have paid the correct amount of additional premium or would have demanded the correct amount of return premium. Moreover, Columbia asserts that they relied on these false reconciliations by paying or collecting the wrong amounts, and that this reliance was known to NCRIC.

Columbia also asserts that at minimum, the evidence shows that NCRIC's misrepresentations were negligent. Specifically, Columbia argues that NCRIC's failure to check its work gave rise to a claim for negligent misrepresentation.

To prove fraud, the proponent must prove by clear and convincing evidence: 1) a false representation; 2) in reference to a material fact; 3) made with knowledge of its falsity; 4) with intent to deceive; 5) reliance upon the representation; and 6) resulting provable damages. Railan v. Katyal, 766 A.2d 998, 1009 (D.C. 2001). Here, there are material issues as to whether NCRIC made false representations and knew those representations were false.

To prove negligent misrepresentation the proponent must prove: 1) the negligent communication of false information; 2) which defendant intended or should have recognized that plaintiff would take actions in reliance upon, and 3) reasonable detrimental reliance.

NCRIC's motion for summary judgment fails because there is a material dispute in regard to each element of Columbia's counterclaim for fraud and negligent misrepresentation. First, there is a factual dispute as to whether a false representation was made. Second, if a false representation was made, there is a factual dispute regarding NCRIC's intent. Third, the parties dispute whether Columbia could plausibly argue that they relied on any misrepresentation. NCRIC argues that Columbia is an independent entity from NCRIC. Further, NCRIC argues that a fiduciary relationship was never formed.

E. Summary Judgment is Granted in part as to Columbia's Defamation Claims (Count 9) and Denied as to Columbia's Injurious Falsehood Claims (Count 10)

In its counterclaim, Columbia claims NCRIC committed defamation and injurious falsehood against them through two distinct episodes of communication, in 1998 and in 2000. NCRIC moves the court to grant summary judgment because there are no material issues of fact concerning these statements. NCRIC refutes the defamation claim because the alleged statements are true and constitutionally protected. In addition, NCRIC argues that Columbia is a public figure and that Columbia would have to prove by clear and convincing evidence that NCRIC committed actual malice when making these statements. The Court will first settle the issue of whether Columbia is a public figure, and then address Columbia's claims of defamation (Count 9) and injurious falsehood (Count 10) claims.

Apr 21 03 03:40p Judge Blackburne-Rigsby 202 879-0041 p.13

The Court finds that Columbia is not a public figure and Columbia must prove NCRIC committed defamation and injurious falsehood by a preponderance of the evidence. In Gertz v. Robert Welch, Inc., 418 U.S. 323, 341, 41 L. Ed. 2d 789, 94 S. Ct. 2997 (1974), the Supreme Court classified two distinct types of public figures. "For the most part those who attain this status have assumed roles of special prominence in the affairs of society. Some occupy positions of such persuasive power and influence that they are deemed public figures for all purposes. More commonly, those classified as public figures have thrust themselves to the forefront of particular public controversies in order to influence the resolution of the issues involved." The other type is a limited public figure. Here, the Court must determine whether 'an individual has assumed a role of special prominence in the affairs of society... that invites attention and comment." Pearce v. E.F. Hutton Group, Inc., et al, 664 F. Supp. 1490 (D.D.C. 1997).

In the instant case, Columbia does not meet the Supreme Courts standard for either type of public figure. Columbia is a private, not-for-profit institution which provides medical care and services appear to be involved or at the forefront of any important public issues nor do they shape events of society in any kind of large scale. It appears that NCRIC's attempt to classify Columbia as a public figure is nothing more than a strategic ploy to make Columbia's defamation claim more burdensome. A plaintiff who is a public figure has significantly more demanding burden of proof than a private plaintiff. Id. A public figure must prove that the publication was false and the defendants published it in knowing or reckless disregard as to its falsity, that is "with a high degree of awareness of its probable falsity." Joseph v. Xerox Corporation, et al. 594 F. Supp. 330, 334 (D.D.C. 1984). Moreover, those charged with defamation cannot, by their own conduct, create their own defense by making the claimant a public figure. Thus, the Court finds that Columbia is not a public figure and therefore Columbia must prove defamation and injurious falsehood by a preponderance of the evidence.

Summary Judgment is Appropriate Regarding the alleged August 1998 Defamatory Statements

The basis of Columbia's counterclaims of defamation and injurious falsehood surround two different episodes of communications. First, in August 1998, Columbia decided that it could no longer afford to continue the Retro Plan because it had entered into bankruptcy proceedings. Thereafter, Columbia worked out a deal with another insurance carrier, Medical Inter-Insurance Exchange ("MIIX"). Columbia alleges that upon hearing this, NCRIC called a secret meeting of the Attending Faculty where NCRIC made false disparaging statements and used scare tactics in efforts to make the doctors leave Columbia. NCRIC allegedly made the following statements at the August 1998 meeting:

> 1)MIIX would not remain in the District of Columbia insurance market; 2) That MIIX would not stand by its guarantee not to raise premiums for two years; 3) that MIIX was an unreliable insurance company; 4) that MIIX planned to raise premiums once it cornered the District of Columbia MMLI market; 5) that the MIIX proposal was a cronyism which would benefit members of [Columbia Board as opposed to] Attending Faculty; 6) that [Columbia] had lied to the Attending Faculty by stating that it could not afford to continue the Plan; and 7) that the lawyers which whom NCRIC contracted to defend physicians against medical malpractice claims would not work with MIIX.

NCRIC's summary judgment motion is granted as to the 1998 alleged defamatory

p.15 202 879-0041 Judge Blackburne-Rigsby Apr 21 03 03:40p

statements but fails as to the defamatory statements of the second episode of communication. The Court finds that the 1998 statements can not be defamatory to Columbia as a matter of law because the alleged statements were not concerning Columbia. To prove defamation there must be: 1) false statements, 2) published, 4) which caused the plaintiff to receive damages. Crowley v. North Am. Telecomms. Ass'n, 691 A.2d 1169, 1173 (D.C. 1997).

NCRIC argues that the August 1998 statements do not concern Columbia and therefore could not disparage Columbia. Further, NCRIC argues that statements about MIIX do not concern Columbia because they don't concern Columbia's business reputation. NCRIC claims that defamation must be personal, and that allegations concerning these statements are too remote to assert that Columbia was defamed. Columbia argues that a "rumor mill" allegedly began circulating that Columbia would close and that their Clinic was uninsured. Columbia contends that NCRIC's Chairman of the Board, Dr. Leonard Glassman and NCRIC's Policyholder Services Department spread this rumor.

According to Columbia, these statements were false when they were made at the alleged secret meeting. Further, on the expiration date of the final Experience Period of the Retro Plan, nearly thirty Attending Faculty moved their practices to other hospitals. Columbia points out that the rumors caused many of the Attending Faculty, which had been practicing for many years to leave. However, because these statements were not against Columbia, but another separate and distinct insurance company, summary judgment is granted with respect to the 1998 statements.

Summary Judgment is Denied Regarding the September 2000 Alleged Defamatory Statements

p.16 202 879-0041 Judge Blackburne-Rigsby Apr 21 03 03:40p
16d-001551

Columbia alleges that in September 2000, NCRIC made the following statements in Columbia's cafeteria:

> that the [Medical Entity] Policy had expired; (2) that CPG physicians... were not covered by NCRIC's [individual insurance] policy while practicing at the [ambulatory clinic]; (3) that [Columbia's] self-insurance trust was insufficiently funded to insure the [physicians], and (4) that [Columbia's ambulatory clinic was a dangerous place to work

Also in September 2000, Dr. Glassman allegedly stated, with his door open so staff members in Columbia's Radiology Department could hear him telling patients to pick up their films and bring them to his office in the suburbs because Columbia was planning to close and telling physicians employed by the hospital to start looking for jobs elsewhere for the same reason. Around the same time, Dr. Glassman, in the presence of other physicians, allegedly told physician, Dr. Gideon Kioko to move to Sibley because Columbia was about to close. Finally, Dr. Glassman told a physician in the hallway that because the hospital was closing, Dr. Evelyn Karson was leaving.

NCRIC argues that the September 2000 statements are true statements. Specifically, NCRIC asserts that the Medical Entity Policy was no longer in effect after September 15, 2000. Further, NCRIC allege that Columbia's self-insurance trust was under funded. Moreover, NCRIC argue that these statements were truthful and don't give rise to defamation.

Columbia disagrees that the 2000 statements were true. First, Columbia asserts that Dr. Glassman's statement that the Entity Policy had expired was false, when the Entity Policy actually was terminated by NCRIC two weeks after the statements were made. Columbia also denies that the self-insurance trust was ever under funded. Columbia argues that the trust was always funded precisely to the level necessary to pay the claim.

Summary Judgment is Denied Regarding Columbia's Injurious Falsehood

Even if the Court conceded the facts underlying to 1998 and 2000 statements, NCRIC argues that Columbia's injurious falsehood claims still fail as matter of law because the 1998 and 2000 statements do not concern a product or service of Columbia as a required element in proving injurious falsehood. Further, NCRIC points out that even if the Court were to find that NCRIC made the statements, a complete and absolute defense is that the statements were true.

The distinguishing element between defamation and injurious falsehood is that the later adds the element that false statements must disparage the claimant's property, goods and services. Thus, injurious falsehood is a disparagement of quality of property. This business tort may consist of an adverse expression of opinion, and the prerequisites for liability are falsity, special damages and lack of privilege. Golden Palace, Inc. v. National Broad Co., 386 F. Supp. 107, 108 (D.D.C. 1974). Columbia argues that by disparaging Columbia's brand of insurance, NCRIC disparaged Columbia's service. Further, Columbia argues that NCRIC's statements concerning Columbia were false. Hence, any qualified privilege NCRIC would have had in making commercial speech is inapplicable since the statements were false.

There are several material disputes regarding the defamation issue. First, there is a defense as to whether the statements made were true at the time they were made as opposed to some of the statements becoming true after the statements were made. Second, there is a dispute as to whether the statements physicians made, were made as representatives of NCRIC. Third, the parties dispute whether certain statements were even published. There is also a dispute as to damages and whether NCRIC's alleged statements were the cause for many of the Attending Faculty decision to leave Columbia, and the snowball effect it may have had to Columbia's patient referrals, annual fundraiser and prospective loan. Thus, summary judgment on the defamation and injurious falsehood claims are denied.

F. Summary Judgment is Denied with respect to Columbia's Conversion Claim (Count Eleven)

In count eleven of their counterclaim, Columbia alleges that NCRIC converted money from them when they paid the $1 million dollar negotiation deposit to renew the Retro Plan in 1998. NCRIC argues that the $1 million dollars was not a deposit but a negotiated premium payment towards Columbia's debt to NCRIC. NCRIC moves the Court to grant summary judgment in their favor on this counterclaim because it does not matter whether the $1million dollars is classified as a deposit or payment, the money represents a payment that Columbia owed to NCRIC and by law can not be considered converted.

Columbia alleges that the parties agreed that the money would be treated as a deposit. Thereafter, Columbia argues that they became aware that NCRIC was handling reconciliations incorrectly and asked that the money be returned. As a result of requesting the money be returned in vein, Columbia claims injury due to the loss of interest on the deposit. Further, Columbia refutes NCRIC's explanation that the money was a premium payment because at the time the money was paid, no experience period had closed as of September 1, 1997 and because of the oral contract, premium would not be due until experience periods had closed. Columbia distinguishes their case from a situation where a debtor owes money. Columbia argues that they did not owe NCRIC any money and that the deposit was not intended for NCRIC to cash the check and take some of the money for itself.

16d-001554

Damages

There are material issues in dispute over the damages element to all of Columbia's counterclaims. Generally, NCRIC argues that Columbia fails to prove the essential damages element as to all of the counterclaims. First, there is a dispute as to whether Columbia accomplished what their expert witness Ben Ezra was expected to do in his 26(b)(4) statement[7]. Thus, there are general issues of dispute as to the damage elements for all claims.

Accordingly, for the foregoing reasons, plaintiff NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment is DENIED.

[7] In its Rule 26(b)(4) statement, Columbia informed NCRIC and this Court that its proposed expert damages witness would provide testimony:

> With regard to the calculation of damages proximately caused by NCRIC's torts, including 1) economic effects, such as lost revenue from deceased patient volume, of certain practice groups moving their practices from Columbia to competing hospitals, and any reputational harms stemming from related events; 2) the lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fundraising activities and events; and 3) the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been available to Columbia.

CONSENT MOTION TO CONTINUE PRETRIAL HEARING

The Superior Court Clerk's Office has issued a notice scheduling a pretrial hearing in this matter before the Honorable Anna Blackburne-Rigsby on May 6, 2003. Counsel for NCRIC, Inc. has authorized counsel for Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") to move this Court on behalf of both parties to continue the pretrial hearing pending decision by the Court of outstanding motions. Because the Court's rulings will substantially frame the issues for trial, rescheduling the pretrial hearing upon issuance of those rulings will promote efficiency and conserve resources by allowing the parties to undertake the extensive preparations provided for in Rule 16 of the Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure at such time as it becomes clear which claims must be readied for trial. Alternatively, because of scheduling conflicts, Columbia requests that the pretrial hearing be rescheduled for a date following June 9, 2003.

MOTION BY NCRIC, INC. TO RESCHEDULE PRETRIAL HEARING

1. Pursuant to the notice issued from Superior Court Clerk's Office on February 26, 2003, the above captioned case is scheduled for a pretrial hearing before Judge Blackburne-Rigsby on May 6, 2003 at 4:30 pm.

2. On October 26, 2000, NCRIC filed its Motion to Compel Discovery By Designation under SCR 30(b)(6) and Appearance at Deposition ("Motion to Compel").

3. On April 7, 2003, the Court granted in part, and denied in part, NCRIC's Motion to Compel. The Court ordered Columbia to respond to provide supplemental interrogatory responses, produce Rule 30(b)(6) designees on various topics and to provide certain financial accounts or statements.

4. On April 11, 2003 the parties filed a Consent Motion to Move the Pretrial Conference as cross-motions for summary judgment were outstanding. At that time, neither counsel for NCRIC or Columbia had received the Court's Order regarding NCRIC's Motion to Compel Discovery.

5. On April 14, 2003 the Court denied the parties' Consent Motion to Postpone the Pretrial Conference because all outstanding motions had been ruled upon. Counsel for NCRIC did not receive a copy of the Order from the Court and only learned of it in a telephone conference with counsel for Columbia on April 28, 2003.

6. In accordance with the Court's Order compelling discovery, NCRIC timely served its Supplemental Interrogatories and Rule 30(b)(6) Deposition Notice on April 21, 2003. Ex. 1.

7. D.C. Superior Court Rule 33 requires that Columbia respond to NCRIC's interrogatories within thirty days after service or May 22, 2003 which is sixteen (16) days after the currently scheduled pretrial conference. Counsel for Columbia has represented that it will serve complete interrogatory responses at some time during the week of May 6, 2003. Ex. 2.

8. NCRIC has previously been required to engage in lengthy negotiations and motions practice regarding Columbia's failure to respond completely to NCRIC's discovery requests.

9. NCRIC intends to take the 30(b)(6) deposition(s) promptly after it has had an opportunity to review complete discovery responses from Columbia.

10. On April 29, 2003, NCRIC proposed and sent to Columbia a draft Consent Motion to Postpone the Pretrial Conference in light of the Court's Order compelling discovery. Ex. 3.

11. The supplemental interrogatory responses and deposition testimony will likely have a bearing on the parties' pretrial preparation and will assist the parties and this Court in conducting a meaningful pretrial conference.

12. Among the discovery compelled are explanations from Columbia regarding all facts and reasons forming the basis for Columbia's claim that the amounts NCRIC claims are due under the Retro Plan are incorrect and the amounts and calculations Columbia alleges are proper.

Ex. 1. These responses will inevitably have a significant impact on the parties' pretrial preparation and the issues to be resolved at trial

13. Columbia was also compelled to identify, for the first time, the amount of damages it claims based on each of its counterclaims. Ex. 1.

14. D.C. Superior Court Rule 16 requires that three weeks before the pretrial conference, the parties exchange exhibits and agree on various matters including, but not limited to, the formulation and simplification of issues for trial, the avoidance of unnecessary proof, and the form and substance of the pretrial order.

15. Columbia's responses will likely have an impact on the tasks required under Rule 16 including motions in limine required under Rule 16(d).

16. On May 1, Columbia's counsel rejected the Consent Motion and proposed to meet the following day or the following Monday.

17. NCRIC informed Columbia that it doubted either a meaningful pre-conference meeting or pretrial conference could take place given the outstanding discovery and contemporaneously served Columbia with a copy of the underlying motion. Ex. 4.

18. Any items accomplished at a pretrial meeting and conference at this stage would likely have to be significantly revised depending on the discovery Columbia has been compelled to produce.

19. NCRIC seeks to postpone the pretrial conference only so long as necessary to accomplish those tasks required under Rule 16 in the manner intended. Doing so will enable the parties to conduct pretrial preparation in accordance with the timeframe laid out in the Rule.

20. Based on the above facts and representations, counsel for NCRIC proposes a new pretrial conference date during the week of July 14th or at a subsequent date as the Court deems proper and convenient. This would provide sufficient time after the completion of discovery for the parties to satisfy their pretrial obligations in accordance with D.C. Superior Court Rule 16.

21. In the alternative, NCRIC requests that the pretrial conference scheduled for May 6, 2003 be reset as a status conference at which time a revised pretrial schedule can be set.

NCRIC'S SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORIES TO COLUMBIA SERVED PURSUANT TO THE COURT'S ORDER DOCKETED APRIL 7, 2003

Pursuant to the Court's Order docketed April 7, 2003 and Rule 33 of the District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure, plaintiff, counter-defendant NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") requests that defendant, counter-plaintiff Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") answer separately and fully in writing, under oath, each of the following interrogatories and serve the answers on the undersigned within 30 days after service.

DEFINITIONS

1. "NCRIC" means plaintiff, counter-defendant NCRIC, Inc. and its owner(s), agent(s), subcontractor(s), employees, affiliate(s), predecessor(s), officer(s), director(s) and persons acting on its behalf.

2. "You" or "your" or "Columbia" means defendant, counter-plaintiff Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center and your agent(s), attorney(s), employee(s) and persons acting on your behalf.

3. The "Complaint" means the complaint filed by NCRIC in this action. The "Counterclaim(s)" means the counterclaim(s) filed by Columbia in this action.

4. "Contract" refers to the Retrospective Rating Plan entered into between Columbia and NCRIC in 1993.

5. "Person" means a natural person, and a corporation, partnership, joint venture, unincorporated association, estate, trust, or other entity recognized in law, and shall include the owners, directors, employees, agents, trustees, parents, subsidiaries, affiliates, assigns, predecessors and successors of such "person."

6. "Document" is used in the broadest sense of that term and includes, but is not limited to, the complete original and each non-identical copy (whether different from the original because of notes made on the copy or otherwise) of any writings or recordings of any kind and description in any language including, but not limited to, all notes, correspondence, memoranda, drawings, graphs, books, charts, maps, pamphlets, periodicals, telegrams, studies, reports, records, books of account, ledgers, vouchers, checks, drafts, bankbooks, plant logs, telephone logs, worksheets, diaries, calendars, invoices, notebooks, films, photographs, audio tapes, video tapes, digital tapes, analog tapes, computer print-outs, computer disks, or any other information whether inscribed by hand or by mechanical, digital, electronic, computer, photographic or other means.

7. The term "communication(s)" means, without limitation of its generality, letters, notes, memoranda, telefaxes, statements, discussions, meetings, face to face conversations, telephone conversations, speeches, remarks, questions, answers, panel discussions, symposiums or any other kind of transmittal of information, whether written or oral.

8. "Relates" or "relating to" means constituting, defining, containing, embodying, discussing, referencing, reflecting, identifying, stating, referring to, dealing with, or in any way pertaining to.

9. "And" shall include "or" and vice versa; the singular shall include the plural and vice versa.

10. The term "describe" means to set forth in detail all known facts and circumstances related to the subject of the interrogatory, including, but not limited to, the date, time and place of any oral or written statement, conversation, report, study or meeting, the identify of the participants, and the substance and purpose of the events or communications so described.

11. "Identify" or "identity" when used in reference to a natural person, means to state the following:

(a) the person's full name;

(b) the person's present or last known home address and telephone number;

(c) the person's present or last known employer, title, business address and telephone number;

(d) the person's employer at the time to which the interrogatory relates.

12. "Identify" or "identity" when used in reference to an entity other than a natural person, means to state the following:

(a) the full name of the entity;

(b) the legal form of the entity (e.g., corporation, partnership, committee);

(c) a brief description of the nature and business purpose of the entity;

(d) the present or last known address of the entity's principal office, principal place of business, and other places of business.

13. "Identify," when used in reference to a document means to state the following:

(a) the date the document was prepared;

(b) the author(s) of the document;

(c) the identity of the addressees of the document;

(d) the identity of the persons or entities that received copies of the document;

(e) the subject matter and substance of the document;

(f) a description of the document (i.e. memorandum, letter, etc.);

(g) the name and address of the custodian of the document.

14. In lieu of providing a full description of a document in accordance with paragraph 13 you may attach a copy of the document for which a description is requested, and in your answer to the interrogatory only provide those items of description requested which do not appear on the face of the document.

INSTRUCTIONS

A. Each interrogatory is to be answered separately and as completely as possible. The omission of any name, fact, or other item of information from the answers shall be deemed a representation that such name, fact or item is not known to you or counsel at the time of the service of your answer to the interrogatory.

B. To the extent that you believe that an interrogatory is objectionable, answer so much of the interrogatory as is, in your view, not objectionable and separately state the portion of each interrogatory to which you object and the grounds for your objection.

C. To the extent that you believe that an interrogatory calls for information subject to a privilege, answer so much of each interrogatory that is, in your view, not privileged and separately set forth the basis of your claim of privilege with respect to the specific information you refuse to give and set forth the nature of the material claimed to be privileged (e.g., documents, conversations, etc.).

D. Words used in the plural shall include the singular; words used in the singular shall include the plural; and the words "and" and "or" shall be construed liberally, in the conjunctive and disjunctive, depending on the context, to bring within the scope of these interrogatories any information that might otherwise be construed to be outside their scope.

E. These interrogatories are continuing in nature and must be supplemented promptly if the plaintiff obtains additional or different information related to any response at any time before the termination of this action.

INTERROGATORIES

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

Dear Jenifer:

I write in response to your proposal that the parties move jointly to continue the pretrial conference scheduled for May 6, 2003 before Judge Blackburne-Rigsby. In light of the Court's explicit denial of the most recent motion to continue the pretrial conference, I believe that it would be inappropriate to ask the Court for the same relief that it denied just days ago. Moreover, your proposed schedule would create months of unnecessary delay in bringing this matter to trial. Barring unforeseen circumstances, Columbia expects to complete the recently propounded written discovery and identify its corporate designees the week of the May 6, 2003 conference, and the 30(b)(6) deposition can be held any agreeable day thereafter.

Accordingly, rather than putting off the pretrial preparations any further, we believe that those preparations should begin immediately. We therefore propose that the parties meet prior to the May 6, 2003 conference in order to complete the preparations envisioned by Rule 16(c). We are available to meet at any time other than Saturday, May 3, 2003 to accomplish this.

Please let me know when you would be prepared to meet pursuant to Rule 16(c) to move this matter to a resolution.

Sincerely,

Eli C. Schulman

Re: NCRIC v. Columbia Hospital, C.A. No. 00-0007308

Dear Eli:

In accordance with my letter of yesterday's date, I think it is imperative that we promptly advise the Court of the status of pretrial preparation and jointly propose a revised pretrial schedule. I have taken the liberty of drafting the attached Consent Motion to Continue the Pretrial Hearing based on the fact that the Court ordered additional discovery that is currently outstanding. Please let me know if you disagree with this approach, and if not, please provide any edits or comments you have by May 1, 2003.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely yours,

Jenifer Berger

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
CIVIL DIVISION

NCRIC, INC.,
Plaintiff,	Civil Action No. 00-0007308
	Calendar #8
v.
	Judge Blackburne-Rigsby
COLUMBIA HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN MEDICAL CENTER, INC.,	Next Event: Pretrial Date – 5/6/03
Defendant.

CONSENT MOTION TO RESCHEDULE PRETRIAL HEARING

1. Pursuant to the notice issued from Superior Court Clerk's Office on February 26, 2003, the above captioned case is scheduled for a pretrial hearing before Judge Blackburne-Rigsby on May 6, 2003 at 4:30 pm.

2. Counsel for Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") has authorized counsel for NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") to move this Court on behalf of both parties to continue the pretrial hearing pending completion of outstanding discovery.

3. On October 26, 2000, NCRIC filed its Motion to Compel Discovery By Designation under SCR 30(b)(6) and Appearance at Deposition ("Motion to Compel").

4. On April 7, 2003, the Court granted in part, and denied in part, NCRIC's Motion to Compel. The Court ordered Columbia to respond to provide supplemental interrogatory responses, produce Rule 30(b)(6) designees on various topics and to provide certain financial accounts or statements . NCRIC timely served its Supplemental Interrogatories and Rule 30(b)(6) Deposition Notice on April 21, 2003. Ex. 1.

5. D.C. Superior Court Rule 33 requires that Columbia respond to NCRIC's interrogatories within thirty days after service or May 22, 2003 which is sixteen (16) days after the currently scheduled pretrial hearing. Counsel for Columbia has represented that it will serve complete interrogatory responses in a timely manner.

6. NCRIC intends to take the 30(b)(6) depositions promptly after it has had an opportunity to review those responses. The parties believe those depositions will be completed by June 16, 2003.

7. On April 11, 2003 the parties filed a Consent Motion to Move the Pretrial Conference as cross-motions for summary judgment were outstanding. At that time, neither counsel for NCRIC or Columbia had received the Court's Order regarding NCRIC's Motion to Compel Discovery.

8. On April 14, 2003 the Court denied the parties' Consent Motion to Postpone the Pretrial Conference because all outstanding motions had been ruled upon. Counsel for NCRIC did not receive a copy of the Order from the Court and only learned of it in a telephone conference with counsel for Columbia on April 28, 2003.

9. The supplemental interrogatory responses and deposition testimony will likely have a bearing on the parties' pretrial preparation and will assist the parties and this Court in conducting a meaningful pretrial hearing.

10. Based on the above facts and representations, counsel for Columbia and NCRIC propose a new pretrial conference date during the week of July 14th or at a subsequent date as the Court deems proper and convenient. This would provide sufficient time after the completion of discovery for the parties to satisfy their pretrial obligations in accordance with D.C. Superior Court Rule 16.

11. In the alternative, counsel jointly request that the pretrial conference scheduled for May 6, 2003 be reset as a status conference at which time a revised pretrial schedule can be set.

Re: NCRIC v. Columbia Hospital, C.A. No. 00-0007308

Dear Eli:

I received your letter dated April 30 on May 1 as it was not faxed until after the close of business on April 30. While I understand your concern regarding the Court's denial of the Motion to Postpone the Pretrial Conference filed on April 11, I believe that should not impact our obligation to inform the Court of the current issues regarding the outstanding discovery. In fact, as I stated in my letter dated April 29, I believe it is incumbent upon the parties to fully advise the Court where both parties stand with respect to their obligations under Rule 16 and the impact the outstanding discovery will have on those obligations.

While I appreciate your suggestion to meet before the pretrial conference, that only leaves us the possibility of meeting today or Monday as the conference is scheduled for Tuesday, May 6. As you may be aware, at the meeting, each party must provide to opposing counsel all documentary exhibits intended for use at trial. I assume you would agree that it is impossible for NCRIC to know what exhibits it intends to use until Columbia has complied with the Court's order compelling discovery, including production of those documents requested as part of the Rule 30(b)(6) notice as well as the financial documents for which the Court compelled production in its Order. In addition, a meeting at this stage would not comply with Rule 16(c) as the parties are obligated to make a good faith effort to reach agreement on a variety of issues which we firmly believe will be impacted by the discovery Columbia was compelled to produce. As you are aware, that discovery goes to the heart of this case and includes, among other things, Columbia's calculation of the amounts it deems proper under the Retro Plan (an obviously integral component of the parties' breach of contract claims), as well as Columbia's claim for damages under each of its counterclaims. Agreement on these issues is necessary for the joint pretrial statement that Rule 16(e) requires be delivered to the Court one week before the pretrial conference (i.e. April 29).

NCRIC does not intend to unnecessarily delay the pretrial but seeks from the Court a revised pretrial schedule in the spirit of Rule 16. The DC Rules clearly contemplate that all discovery be completed prior to the pretrial conference and that various other tasks are accomplished prior to that date. While I appreciate your effort to begin pretrial preparation immediately, NCRIC would prefer to ensure that it is done in a manner that is not only expeditious but also meaningful so that the parties are not forced to revisit the issues after NCRIC receives Columbia's discovery responses and conducts the 30(b)(6) depositions ordered by the Court. Accordingly, please find attached NCRIC's Motion to Postpone the Pretrial Conference currently scheduled for May 6.

Sincerely yours,

Jenifer Berger

STATEMENT OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF THE NCRIC'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO AMEND THE COMPLAINT

D.C. Superior Court Rule 15(a) provides that a party may request leave of the Court to amend its pleadings. Such leave "shall be freely given when justice so requires." See Rule15(a). Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") hereby seeks leave to amend its Complaint to include the recovery of reasonable attorneys' fees for breach of contract by Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"), as contracted for by the parties pursuant to their original October 20, 1993 agreement.

Specifically, NCRIC seeks to add a paragraph 10 in its Complaint as the following: "As a result of Columbia's failure and refusal to pay NCRIC the amount owed in conjunction with the contracted provisions of the Retrospective Ratings Plan (the "Retro Plan"), Columbia must pay NCRIC's reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in this legal dispute." Additionally, the term "reasonable attorneys' fees" would be added to the conclusion. The Second Amended Complaint is attached as Exhibit A. If leave to amend is denied, NCRIC would be forced to file a separate action against Columbia to assert its rights to attorneys' fees.

Granting leave to amend will serve the interests of justice and judicial economy by deciding the issue in conjunction with the pending case.

I. Background

NCRIC is a provider of medical professional liability insurance to District of Columbia licensed physicians on a claims-made basis, for which contracted parties pay annual premiums. Columbia has been a District of Columbia not-for-profit hospital utilizing physicians insured with NCRIC. By establishing and participating in a plan for the Attending Faculty at Columbia, a program designed to reduce the risks associated with patient care, certain physicians secured a reduction or discount on their insurance premiums on a preferred risk basis. NCRIC provided such a reduction or discount on said insurance premiums to those physicians, on the condition that Columbia agreed to assume financial responsibility for certain premium amounts as provided in the contracted Retro Plan.

As contracted in the Retro Plan, paragraph 6 provides the parties agree that "[i]n the event [Columbia] fails to make any payment for which it is responsible hereunder when due, [NCRIC] shall have the right to recover reasonable attorneys' [sic] fees incurred in recovering such payment from Medical Center." See Ex. B, Retro Plan, ¶ 6.

As stated in NCRIC's Complaint, Columbia owes NCRIC the sum or $1,943,530 or such amount as is currently due from defendant to plaintiff after calendar quarterly recalculations of premium pursuant to the contract between the parties.[1] See Second Amended Complaint For Damages, ¶ 8. As a result of this failure to pay, NCRIC is entitled to reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in litigating its cause of action.

[1] The most recent reconciliation reveals that Columbia owes NCRIC $2.8 million.

II. Argument

Pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rule 15(a), "leave [to amend] shall be freely given when justice so requires." The D.C. Court of Appeals has expressed a "virtual presumption" that leave should be granted in the absence of sound reasons which necessitate denial of the request. See Crowley v. North Am. Telecomm. Ass'n, 691 A.2d 1169, 1174 (D.C. 1997) (citations omitted). The relevant factors for granting a leave to amend are: "(1) the number of requests to amend; (2) the length of time that the case has been pending; (3) the presence of bad faith or dilatory reasons for the request; (4) the merit of the proffered amended pleading; and (5) any prejudice to the non-moving party." See id. (citations omitted).

None of the reasons historically used to deny motions for leave to amend are present in this case. As an initial matter, this request for leave to amend is the first such request to this Court, nor has this motion been brought before any other judge or in any other court involving the instant proceeding.

The second factor, the length of time that the case has been pending, also does not prohibit the granting of NCRIC's motion. To illustrate, in Johnson v. Fairfax Vill. Condo. IV Unit Owners Ass'n, 641 A.2d 495, 501 (D.C. 1994), the court affirmed that the trial court reasonably exercised its discretion to allow a leave to amend despite the fact the case had been pending nearly four years. The court reasoned that the balancing of factors favored a leave to amend when weighed against the other considerations. Id; s*ee also District of Columbia v. Tinker*, 691 A.2d 57, 61 (D.C. 1997) (denial of leave to amend on the basis of undue delay would only be warranted "if that delay had caused substantial prejudice"). The Court should follow these principles because the amendment is not prejudicial to Columbia (as NCRIC could simply file another lawsuit for these fees) and judicial efficiency supports resolving all the matters between the parties in this one single case.

Next, there are no issues of bad faith or dilatory reasons for the request. In the case at hand, there are no indications of such motives on NCRIC's part. Additionally, no "undue delay" will be caused by NCRIC adding a claim for attorneys' fees as no additional discovery or briefing is necessary. NCRIC is either entitled to its attorneys' fees pursuant to this contractual claim or it is not. Columbia cannot argue that NCRIC intends this motion as a means to stall litigation, as no trial date has yet been set for the case.

The fourth factor weighs the merit of the proffered amended pleading, which strongly tips in favor of NCRIC because, as stated above, Columbia and NCRIC specifically contracted for the attorneys' fees provision. NCRIC's demand for such compensation falls within Columbia's expectancy for litigation regarding its breach of contract.

Finally, Columbia will not be prejudiced if the Court grants NCRIC's leave to amend because the amendment triggers no additional discovery. The provision regarding attorneys' fees in the Retro Plan should come as no surprise to Columbia. The simple amendment adding a demand for such fees does not change any of the parties' positions or analysis of this case and should not affect any preparation for trial that Columbia has completed thus far. Indeed, amendment of the complaint at this time would be more efficient for all parties and the Court as it will obviate the need for NCRIC to file a second complaint against Columbia for recovery of attorneys' fees under the Retro Plan once this Court has ruled that Columbia is liable for additional premium due.

In light of the relative strength of four of the five factors in favor of NCRIC, including the lack of prejudice that would result to Columbia, leave to amend should be granted in adoption of a meritorious result of adding attorneys' fees as a component of the Second Amended Complaint For Damages. By doing such, this Court would procure the expectation of the contract as agreed to by NCRIC and Columbia, and follow the precedence established by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals as aforementioned for analogous situations.

III. Conclusion

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above, NCRIC respectfully requests that this Court allow the Motion for Leave to Amend the Complaint to include the recovery of reasonable attorneys' fees.

SECOND AMENDED COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES

NCRIC, Inc., Plaintiff, by counsel, sues Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. as follows:

1. NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") is a corporation in the business of providing liability insurance and doing business in the District of Columbia. It is the successor in interest to National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company.

2. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Hospital") is a medical hospital with its principal place of business in the District of Columbia.

3. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to D.C. Code § 11-921.

4. NCRIC and Hospital are parties to Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement for insurance (the "Agreement") by which NCRIC provided medical doctors at the Hospital with certain insurance against liability resulting from described events, including professional negligence in consideration for which Hospital agreed to pay certain premiums. A copy of the Agreement is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

5. Pursuant to the terms of the Agreement, Hospital owed NCRIC payment of additional insurance premiums based on the Agreement.

6. NCRIC performed all its obligations pursuant to the Agreement by providing the agreed insurance coverage.

7. Hospital breached the Agreement by failing to pay NCRIC the additional premiums due under the Agreement.

8. Hospital owes NCRIC the sum of $1,943,530 or such amount as is currently due from defendant to plaintiff after calendar quarterly recalculations of premium pursuant to the contract between the parties.

9. Despite written demand for payment therefore, and compliance with all its other obligations under the Agreement, Hospital has failed and refused to pay NCRIC the amount owed.

10. As a result of Columbia's failure and refusal to pay NCRIC the amount owed in conjunction with the contracted provisions of the Retro Plan, Columbia must pay NCRIC's reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in this legal dispute.

WHEREFORE, NCRIC demands judgment against Hospital in the amount One Million Nine Hundred Forty-three Thousand Five Hundred Thirty Dollars ($1,943,530) or such amount as is currently due from defendant to plaintiff after calendar quarterly recalculations of premium pursuant to the contract between the parties, interest, such reasonable attorneys' fees and costs incurred herein as may be proved at trial.

Dear Mr. Kane:

I am enclosing two copies of the signed retrospective rating plan agreements accompanied by two copies of Exhibit A, policy endorsement and example of plan operation.

Based on the list of plan participants provided under cover of your letter dated October 15, the Underwriting Department will proceed with the implementation of premium discounts effective September 1, 1993. There are several participants not currently insured with NCRIC that will require some additional time to process but the discount will be effective at the same time as the policy effective date.

We are proceeding with the discounts with the understanding that executed copies of attending faculty program agreements between Columbia Hospital and each plan participant will be provided to me by not later than December 1, 1993. 1994 discounts will otherwise have to be withheld until the documents are received.

I sincerely hope this to be the beginning of a long and mutually beneficial agreement.

Sincerely,

RETROSPECTIVE RATING PLAN AGREEMENT

This Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Agreement") is made and entered into effective the first day of September, 1993, by and between National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company, 2170 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007 ("NCRIC" or the "Company"), and Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, 2425 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037 ("Medical Center").

WHEREAS, NCRIC offers medical professional liability insurance to physicians duly licensed as such by the District of Columbia Government ("physicians") on a claims-made basis, for which an annual premium is assessed and paid; and

WHEREAS, Medical Center operates and conducts a not-for-profit hospital in the District of Columbia which has on its medical staff duly licensed physicians who are insured with NCRIC; and

WHEREAS, certain of these physicians desire to secure a reduction or discount on their insurance premiums on a preferred risk basis through the establishment of and participation in an Attending Faculty Program ("AFP"), which shall be designed to reduce the risks involved in the delivery of medical care to patients as set forth in the Attending Faculty Program Agreement entered into between the physicians and Medical Center; and

WHEREAS, NCRIC is willing to provide such a reduction or discount on said insurance premiums to those physicians who agree to participate in the AFP on condition that Medical Center agrees to be financially responsible for certain premium amounts as hereinafter provided; and

WHEREAS, as a mechanism for reducing its own exposure for professional liability, Medical Center is willing to assume such responsibility;

NOW, THEREFORE, the parties hereto agree as follows:

1. NCRIC has established a three-year Retrospective Rating Plan, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A (the "Plan") and incorporated herein by reference. NCRIC makes available the benefits of the Plan to its physician insureds who are parties to the AFP Agreement, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit B and incorporated herein by reference, and who are issued a Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsement, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit C. With the exception of the Plan Participants listed on Exhibit D, attached hereto and incorporated herein by this reference, the effective date of any Plan Participant's participation, or termination of participation, in the Plan shall be the date on which NCRIC receives notice thereof from Medical Center.

2. NCRIC agrees to issue Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsements to its physician insureds who otherwise qualify in accordance with the standard underwriting practices of NCRIC and who are members of the AFP.

3. As an inducement to NCRIC to cause it to issue the Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsements to its physician insureds who are members of the AFP, Medical Center agrees to be solely responsible for, and to pay, any Additional Premium due in accordance with the terms of the Plan.

4. Medical Center shall correspondingly be entitled to receive Return Premium, if any, and investment return thereon, if any, in accordance with the terms of the Plan.

5. Notice of any Additional Premium due from Medical Center, or any Return Premium due to Medical Center, shall be provided to Medical Center within 60 days following the close of the Reconciliation Period, and payment due, whether to Medical Center or from Medical Center, shall be due and payable within 30 days of receipt of said notice.

6. Medical Center's obligations hereunder are primary, and not secondary, and NCRIC shall have no right to seek recourse or payment of any Additional Premium due pursuant to the Plan from any Plan Participant. In the event Medical Center fails to make any payment for which it is responsible hereunder when due, the Company shall have the right to recover reasonable attorneys fees incurred in recovering such payment from Medical Center.

7. NCRIC hereby represents and warrants that any claims made against Plan Participants will be processed, including the setting of loss reserves, in the normal and ordinary course of the Company's business, without consideration of the insured's status as a Plan Participant.

8. Medical Center hereby represents and warrants that it has made, and will continue to make, adequate provision for the contingent liabilities it has assumed hereunder.

9. Medical Center will provide NCRIC with the following:

   a. a list of all Plan Participants, and any additions or deletions thereto;

b. copies of Medical Center's Agreement between Medical Center and Participants in the Attending Faculty Program who are Insured with NCRIC, and amendments, if any, as made from time to time, with each Plan Participant, which contract shall include an authorization by the Plan Participant in form and substance satisfactory to NCRIC to release to Medical Center the information set forth in Paragraph 10(a)(iii) below;

c. copies of, and any amendments to, the AFP Agreement; and

d. a review and summary of risk management activities undertaken pursuant to the Attending Faculty Program Agreement.

10. NCRIC and a Medical Center representative will meet quarterly to review the status of the operation of the Retrospective Rating Plan.

a. At such meetings, NCRIC will provide Medical Center with the following:

i. for purposes of cross-reference and confirmation of participation or termination of participation in the Plan, a list of all Plan Participants participating in the Plan, together with their effective date of participation and termination date, as applicable;

ii. the aggregate amount of losses reserved under the Plan, and the verification thereof by NCRIC's consulting actuary;

iii. with respect to any medical incident or professional liability claim reported to NCRIC by a Plan Participant under the Plan (hereinafter, "incident"), and subject to a Plan Participant's authorization to release same to Medical Center, the name of the physician, the date of the incident, the date said incident was reported to NCRIC, any complaint or suit filed in a court of law with respect to such claim; and any payments made on behalf of said Plan Participant by NCRIC; and

iv. a review of Medical Center risk management activities.

b. Annually, at such meeting taking place in the first quarter of each year, Medical Center will provide NCRIC with the statement of Medical Center's consulting actuary that adequate reserves have been made for the contingent liabilities Medical Center has assumed under this Agreement.

11. This Agreement shall remain in full force and effect as to any renewal, extension or new issuance of Insurance Policies with Plan Endorsements issued to Plan Participants during any Experience Period, and Medical Center waives notice of any and all such renewals, extension, or new issuances.

12. This Agreement shall remain in full force and effect until all claims applicable to the final Experience Period of the Plan are finally closed or upon payment of maximum premium amount required by paragraph 3 hereof applicable to the final Experience Period, whichever occurs first. For purposes of this Paragraph 12, any claim "closed" without payment made to, and a release having been signed by, the claimant shall be subject to reopening, and any payments made on behalf of such reopened claims shall be subject to, and part of, the retrospective adjustment according to the Plan.

13. For purposes of clarification, and not to vary, alter or amend the terms hereof or of the Plan, attached hereto as Exhibit B and incorporated herein by reference is an example of the operation of the Plan.

14. All bookkeeping and record keeping shall be handled by NCRIC.

15. Upon ninety (90) days' written notice prior to the end of any Experience Period, to be effective after the last day of such Experience Period, the Plan may be discontinued by either party for cause, provided that such discontinuance shall not affect any obligation or liability accrued prior to the date of such discontinuance. For purposes of this Paragraph 15, "cause" shall mean any material breach of the terms of this Agreement, or any change in any applicable federal, state or local law which would render any of the terms of this Agreement unlawful.

16. If notice is required to be given by either party to the other, it may be given by registered or certified mail return receipt requested, postage prepaid, or personal delivery to the other party addressed as follows:

THREE YEAR RETROSPECTIVE RATING PLAN

The National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company Retrospective Rating Plan, hereinafter referred to as the "Plan," is available only to physicians insured by National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company ("NCRIC") who are participants in the Medical Center's Attending Faculty Program ("AFP") referenced in the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement between NCRIC and Medical Center dated September 1, 1993, (the "Agreement") and who have been issued a retrospective rating plan premium adjustment endorsement by NCRIC. The AFP has been established for the primary purpose of implementing practice protocols relating to delivery of patient health care. Individual medical professional liability policies issued to Plan Participants are subject to retrospective rating in accordance with the following terms and conditions:

1. Plan Term. The term of the Plan shall be three years, beginning on September 1, 1993 and ending on September 1, 1996. The Plan shall consist of three separate and distinct Experience Periods of:

Beginning 12:01 A.M. on	and Ending 12:01 A.M. on
September 1, 1993	September 1, 1994
September 1, 1994	September 1, 1995
September 1, 1995	September 1, 1996

2. Premiums Charged to Plan Participants. The premium charged to and paid by Plan Participants for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim for Coverage A, "Physicians and Surgeons Individual Professional Liability" shall be discounted by 19% of the otherwise applicable premium for such coverage. Although that premium is subject to retrospective adjustment as set forth below, no Plan Participant shall be responsible for, or entitled to, any additional or return premium. The obligation to pay additional premium (if any), and the right to receive return premium (if any), shall be solely that of Medical Center.

3. Retrospective Rating Premium Formula. The retrospective premium for any Reconciliation will be calculated as follows:

Retrospective Premium (Subject to established Minimum and Maximum Premiums) =

((((Loss Reserves) x (Development Factor)) + Paid Losses) x Discount Factor) + Basic Premium.

Note: The amount of Losses included in the calculation of the retrospective premium is subject to the Loss Limitation as hereinafter defined.

REDACTED

CHW MC 000043

4. Combination of Experience Periods. Each Experience Period shall be reconciled individually utilizing applicable premium amounts, plan factors and the retrospective rating premium formula. As reconciliations become due for each Experience Period, the completed, individually reconciled retrospective premiums for applicable Experience Periods shall be combined to determine the total Retrospective Premium.

5. Reconciliations. Reconciliations to determine additional or return premium amounts which may be due will be performed according to the following schedule:

Experience Period	First Reconciliation Date
September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1994	September 1, 1996
September 1, 1994 to September 1, 1995	September 1, 1997
September 1, 1995 to September 1, 1996	September 1, 1998

Additional reconciliations will continue to be conducted at subsequent twelve month intervals until all losses reported during the applicable Experience Period are finally closed. A reported loss shall not be deemed finally closed until the earlier of payment to the claimant and execution of a release by the claimant, or the expiration of the statute of limitations for the claim. Any claim closed without payment shall not be deemed finally closed; any claim closed without payment shall be subject to reopening, and any payments made on behalf of such reopened claims shall be subject to, and part of, the reconciliation process.

Within sixty (60) days of the Reconciliation Date, Reconciliations will be performed by NCRIC and a report containing the Plan calculations and a statement reflecting amounts which are due to ("return premium") or due from ("additional premium") Medical Center under the terms of the Plan will be presented to Medical Center. Any amounts due either to or from Medical Center shall be due and payable within thirty (30) days of the date of the statement for same.

6. Determination of Additional or Return Premiums Due. The amount of additional or return premium due after each Reconciliation will be calculated by subtracting the retrospective premium from the applicable Deposit Premium for the subject Experience Period(s).

7. Definitions. As used herein, the following terms shall have the meanings indicated:

"Basic Premium" means the combined amount of the administrative expense charge and the insurance charge due to NCRIC. The administrative expense charge shall be 14.04% of the Subject Premium; the insurance charge shall be calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium by the insurance charge factor set forth below:

Three(3) Year Subject Premium	Insurance Charge Factor
$ 1,539,000 - $ 2,565,999	20.7%
$ 2,566,000 - $ 3,591,999	13.2%

"Deposit Premium" means the Subject Premium multiplied by eighty-one percent (81%). This percentage shall remain unchanged for the three year term of the Plan.

"Development Factor" means the factors by which Loss Reserves are multiplied for purposes of determining developed losses. These factors shall apply as follows and shall remain unchanged for the three year term of the Plan and all reconciliations applicable thereto:

Year 1 Reconciliation	-	88.5%
Year 2 Reconciliation	-	87.5%
Year 3 Reconciliation	-	90.5%
Year 4 Reconciliation	-	96.0%
Year 5 Reconciliation	-	100.0%
All Subsequent Reconciliations	-	100.0%

REDACTED

"Discount Factor" means a factor of 86.33%. This factor shall remain unchanged for the three-year term of the plan.

"Experience Period" shall mean the initial twelve (12) month period commencing September 1, 1993 and each subsequent twelve (12) month period during which the Plan is in effect. Should the Plan be terminated prior to the end of any Experience Period, the pro-rated period involved shall be deemed to be an Experience Period.

"Insurance Policy" means the Company's Physicians and Surgeons Modified Claims-Made Medical Professional Liability Coverage Policy, Revised January 1, 1993, or any replacement policy subsequently issued, and any endorsements thereto.

"Losses" means the obligations assumed by the Company on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with the terms and conditions contained in and applicable to Coverage A of Section I of the Insurance Policy.

"Loss Limitation" - for the purpose of application of the retrospective rating premium formula, losses shall be limited to Allocated Loss Adjustment Expenses plus the lower of (i) $500,000 in indemnity, or (ii) the actual amount of the loss. Notwithstanding the foregoing, however, for claim amounts in excess of $500,000, the amount Allocated Loss Adjustment Expenses shall be limited to a pro-rated amount equal to the ratio of $500,000 to the total indemnity amount applicable.

"Loss Reserves" means allocations to pay losses that have been incurred, or are likely to be incurred, and reported during the time the Plan is in effect, but that have not yet been paid.

"Maximum Premium" means the maximum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan. The Maximum Premium shall be equal to one hundred and fifteen percent (115%) of the Subject Premium amount.

"Minimum Premium" means the minimum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan. The Minimum Premium shall be equal to seventy-five percent (75%) of the Subject Premium amount.

"Paid Losses" means loss amounts paid by NCRIC on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with Coverage A - Physicians and Surgeons Individual Professional Liability - Section I, Subsection 2 (Coverage Agreements) and Subsection 6 (Supplementary Payments) of the Insurance Policy. Paid Losses are subject to Loss Limitation, defined above.

"Plan Participants" means those physicians insured by NCRIC pursuant to Insurance Policies endorsed with the retrospective rating plan premium adjustment endorsement and who are members of the AFP.

"Subject Premium" means the total of the undiscounted premiums that would be charged to physician-insureds for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim under Section I, Subsection 2, Coverage A, of the Insurance Policy if said physician-insureds were not Plan Participants. For the second and third Experience Periods, the Subject Premium shall be determined by NCRIC's consulting actuary, but shall not exceed 83%, nor be less than 77%, of the undiscounted premium charged for coverage limits of $1 million each claim/$3 million aggregate.

NCRIC'S MOTION FOR REFERENCE TO A SPECIAL MASTER

Pursuant to D. C. Superior Court Rule 53, Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), moves this Court to issue an order referring certain calculations critical to the resolution of this case to an appointed Special Master to determine the complicated issues of fact and law surrounding the operation of the Retrospective Ratings Plan (the "Retro Plan") and the calculations of additional or return premium due under the Retro Plan. The operation of the Retro Plan is a specialized and complicated issue, and reference to a Special Master would promote judicial efficiency and simplify the presentation of evidence at trial. Pursuant to D. C. Superior Court Rule 12-I(e), a Proposed Order and Statement of Points and Authorities in Support of this Motion are also attached.

STATEMENT OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF NCRIC'S MOTION FOR REFERENCE TO A SPECIAL MASTER

Pursuant to D. C. Superior Court Rule 53, Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), moves this Court to issue an order referring certain calculations critical to the resolution of this case to an appointed Special Master to determine complicated issues of fact and law surrounding the operation of the Retrospective Ratings Plan (the "Retro Plan") and the calculations of additional or return premium due under the Retro Plan. In its April 2, 2003 Order Denying Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.'s ("Columbia's") Motion for Summary Judgment, the Court stated there remains "a factual dispute regarding the mechanics of the [Retro Plan] calculations," which must be decided at trial. See April 2, 2003 Order at 10. The operation of the Retro Plan is a specialized and complicated issue, and reference to a Special Master would promote judicial efficiency and simplify the presentation of evidence at trial.

I. THE RETRO PLAN CALCULATIONS

Both NCRIC's claim against Columbia and Columbia's counterclaim counts 1-3, 7-8 and 11 (the "Retro Plan Claims") rely upon the calculations of premium under the Retro Plan. A brief summary of the positions of the two parties with respect to the Retro Plan's calculations is required to illustrate why these factual matters are so complicated that the interests of judicial efficiency and economy would be served by reference to a Special Master.

The original three-year Retro Plan between NCRIC and Columbia in 1993 was a malpractice insurance program for physicians at Columbia to help reduce the cost of insurance to the doctors through a sharing of the malpractice risk between Columbia and the physicians. A copy of the original Retro Plan is attached as Exhibit 1. The Retro Plan provided a 19% (later increased to 30%) discount to physicians on their malpractice premiums. Columbia agreed to pay the amount of such discount should losses from claims under the Retro Plan reach a certain level.

A Retro Plan, such as the one at issue here, requires a "reconciliation" that looks back over the term of each year to compare the premiums to the claims to determine: (1) if additional premium amounts are due to the insurance company because losses under the plan exceeded the physician premiums by a predetermined calculated amount ("Additional Premium"); or (2) if a return of premium is due the hospital, should losses have been less than the predetermined calculated amount ("Return Premium").

Thus, the Retro Plan is driven by two key financial factors: (1) the premiums paid by the physicians; and (2) the claimed losses incurred by the physicians. The reconciliation includes setting a "reserve" amount for claims that represents the potential liability and the associated expenses of handling the claims, such as attorneys' fees and costs. NCRIC and Columbia agreed to defer making actual payments to one another until all claims arising in a certain year reached final resolution, i.e., until all of the pending claims were closed. This was largely because the parties expressly recognized that reserve amounts could change, which would cause fluctuations in the reconciliation that could result in payments being made simultaneously between the parties at the time of a reconciliation.

Every three months, a reconciliation is made for each year of the Retro Plan to determine the amount of the Additional Premium or Return Premium. This is called the Retro Premium. Those calculations are, in part, based on open claims, and are correct to the best of NCRIC's knowledge. The Retro Premium formula contained in Exhibit A to the Retro Plan is:

Retro Premium (subject to Minimum and Maximum Premiums) = [(Loss Reserves) x (Development Factor) + Paid Losses] x Discount Factor + Basic Premium

See Exhibit 1 at Exhibit A, ¶ 3.

Each of these factors is a defined term within the Retro Plan as agreed by the parties. See Exhibit 1 at Exhibit A, ¶ 7.

- "Minimum Premium" is defined as the "minimum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan" and was defined as 75% of the Subject Premium in the 1993 Retro Plan (later reduced to 60%).
- "Maximum Premium" is defined as "the maximum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan."
- "Loss Reserves" is defined as "allocations to pay losses that have been incurred, or are likely to be incurred, and reported during the time the Plan is in effect, but that have not yet been paid."
- "Development Factor" is defined as "the factors by which Loss Reserves are multiplied for purposes of determining developed losses." A specific list of development factors to be applied to each year of a reconciliation (ranging from 88.5% to 100%) are listed in the 1993 Retro Plan.
- "Paid Losses" is defined as "loss amounts paid by NCRIC on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with Coverage A . . . . "

- "Discount Factor" is defined as "a factor of 86.33%."
- "Basic Premium" is defined as "the combined amount of the administrative expense charge and the insurance charge due to NCRIC."

To determine if the appropriate amount of premium was collected to pay losses under the Retro Plan, the Retro Premium is then compared to the "Deposit Premium." See Exhibit 1 at Exhibit A, ¶ 6. The "Deposit Premium" is defined in the 1993 Retro Plan as "the Subject Premium multiplied by eighty-one (81%)." See Exhibit 1 at Exhibit A, ¶ 7. If the Retro Premium is less than the Deposit Premium, Return Premium is due to Columbia. If the Retro Premium is more than the Deposit Premium, Columbia owes NCRIC Additional Premium to pay against the losses. See Exhibit 1 at Exhibit A, ¶ 6. A "floor" and a "ceiling" are set to financially protect both Columbia and NCRIC from large swings in risk (the Minimum and Maximum Premiums).

These calculations under the Retro Plan were performed by NCRIC and provided to Columbia both as interim quarterly statements and as annual Reconciliations. Examples of the quarterly reports and annual reconciliations performed by NCRIC are attached as Exhibits 2 & 3.

The Retro Plan originated as a three-year plan, beginning September 1, 1993. At that time, the plan provided that NCRIC would provide a 19% discount on malpractice insurance premiums to physicians at Columbia. In late 1995, Columbia requested that the Retro Plan be amended to increase the physicians' premium discount to 30%. NCRIC and Columbia negotiated the accompanying changes to the Deposit Premium, from 81% to 62%, to accommodate the increased discount. The parties amended the Retro Plan to reflect the revised discount and Deposit Premium in effect beginning January 1, 1996. The documents reflecting this amendment and renewal are attached as Exhibits 4 & 5.

Another renewal and modification of the Retro Plan was ultimately signed in January 1998. The 1996 changes also were reflected in this Addendum to the Retro Plan signed in January 1998 which extended the expiration of the Retro Plan to September 1, 1998. This Addendum is attached as Exhibit 6. The modifications to the Retro Plan applied the revised 30% discount for claims in 1996, 1997 and 1998 and made appropriate mathematical changes to the Retro Premium calculations for those years. See id. at 5. Amendments were also signed in 1998 and 1999 to extend the Retro Plan for additional years. These amendments are attached as Exhibits 7 & 8. As NCRIC and Columbia could not agree on terms to again renew the Retro Plan, the insurance program ended in September 2000.

The dispute between NCRIC and Columbia focuses on the interpretation and application of three of the components of the Retro Plan Formula: (1) the Minimum Premium, (2) the Deposit Premium, and (3) the Development Factors. The parties dispute the proper values of these factors and how these factors were or were not changed during the subsequent amendments to the 1993 Retro Plan. Columbia has also alleged that NCRIC improperly set and maintained Loss Reserves such that the final Retro Premium calculations provided by NCRIC were improper.

Finally, although the parties agree that NCRIC and Columbia entered into an oral agreement in November 1996 to avoid interim payments of Retro Premium by exchanging money only when a year was "closed-out" under the plan, the parties disagree about the specific terms of that agreement. NCRIC contends that it was agreed that premium would be exchanged when a period was "closed-out" or when the Retro Plan ended; Columbia contends that there was no arrangement requiring payment when the Plan ended if all years were not yet "closed-out."

II. REFERENCE TO A SPECIAL MASTER IS APPROPRIATE HERE

D.C. Superior Court R. Civ. P. 53(a) authorizes this Court to appoint and refer certain matters to a "Special Master" for consideration of testimony and documents and findings of fact. The Special Master's authority and the scope of the tasks assigned are defined by a court order of reference. See Rule 53(c). Once reference to a Special Master is made, the Special Master may convene proceedings to hear testimony of live witnesses and the parties' presentation of evidence on the factual issues listed in the order of reference. See Rule 53(d). The Special Master's findings are contained in a report which is submitted as evidence to the jury at trial. See Rule 53(e).

Use of a Special Master promotes judicial efficiency and helps to simply a jury's task of understanding complicated matters outside the experience of a lay person. Rule 53(b) provides the standard for when reference to a Special Master is appropriate:

> A reference to a master shall be the exception and not the rule. In actions to be tried by a jury, a reference shall be made only when the issues are complicated; in actions to be tried without a jury, save in matters of account and of difficult computation of damages, a reference shall be made only upon a showing that some exceptional condition requires it.

See Rule 53(b) (emphasis added); House of Wines, Inc. v. Sumter, 510 A.2d 492 (D.C. 1986).

Some examples of the "complicated issues" which have been held appropriate for reference to a Special Master are: the accounting of a dissolution of a partnership and distribution of assets (Beckham v. Farmer, 579 A.2d 618 (D.C. 1990)); the accounting of assets of an estate (In re Estate of Elkins, 692 A.2d 910 (D.C. 1995)); the accounting of amount of proceeds realized from the sale of wine (House of Wines, 510 A.2d at 496)); and the determination of individual's income for purposes of determining child support amounts (Quarles v. Quarles, 353 A.2d 285 (D.C. 1976)). In each of these cases, the fact-finding burden required specialized calculations and a level of sophistication and comfort with accounting which most juries lack. Therefore, a Special Master was appointed to consider the evidence from each side and provide a reasoned and knowledgeable finding of fact and accounting to clarify issues for the finder of fact.

The Retro Plan calculations are prime examples of "complicated" matters which would be better served by reference to a Special Master. Although there does not appear to be any published opinion in D.C. where a Special Master was appointed for a insurance premiums calculation case, at least one case with similar facts was found where a Special Master was used pursuant to the Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 53. See Kentucky Carbon Corp. v. Tennessee Valley Auth., 875 F.2d 865 (6th Cir. 1989) (unpublished) (magistrate sitting as Special Master to determine claims regarding price adjustments and possible overpayment of premium paid under insurance plans, including a retrospective rating plan for workers compensation insurance).

Similarly, the Retro Plan requires complex accounting and understanding of insurance premiums, loss reserves, allocations of risk, and the application of specific mathematical factors which would be very difficult for the average juror to comprehend without expert help. The crux of the dispute in this case is that the parties differ as to their interpretation of the Retro Plan and the appropriate use of the various factors. A Special Master would be able to sort through the evidence submitted by both the parties, including the calculations done by NCRIC over the years of the Retro Plan, and make factual findings as to the specific methodology and calculations which are proper under the Retro Plan. The Special Master can also issue a finding of fact as to the final amount of Additional or Return Premium due at this time under the proper methodology and calculations. These findings would be presented to the jury as prima facie evidence on these points and would greatly simplify the presentation of evidence and conduct of trial. House of Wines, 510 A.2d at 497.

The most appropriate Special Master for this case would be an individual familiar with the medical malpractice insurance industry and knowledgeable about premium calculations in general, the setting and adjustment of loss reserves, and other workings of such plans.[1/] The parties can work to submit a joint nomination for an individual so qualified, or, if the parties cannot agree on the nomination, the Court may appoint an individual after considering the merits of various nominations from both parties. Beckman, 579 A.2d at 633.

The methodology and calculations of the Retro Plan are at least as complicated as the other accounting cases which have been held by D.C. Courts to warrant the appointment of a Special Master. Not only do these calculations require sophisticated accounting, but these issues arise in the specialized field of malpractice insurance, and the proper interpretation of the Retro Plan calculations requires an understanding of that particular industry. Both parties and this Court would be best

1/ Although Rule 53(a) provides than an Auditor-Master is available as an employee of D.C. Superior Court, the specialized nature of the Retro Plan calculations requires that it would be more appropriate to appoint a Special Master with specific qualifications and experience relevant to this case. See Rule 53(a).

16d-001661

served by appointment of a Special Master to make findings regarding the Retro Plan calculations.

III. CONCLUSION

Accordingly, for the reasons stated throughout, the Retro Plan calculations and methodology are sufficiently complicated such that the Court and the finder of fact in this matter will be greatly assisted by reference of these matters to a Special Master. Additionally, referring the Retro Plan matters to a Special Master will be an appropriate effort to conserve judicial resources while providing the parties with an expert knowledgeable in a complex field.

ORDER OF REFERENCE TO A SPECIAL MASTER

The Court having reviewed NCRIC's Motion to Refer to a Special Master and any opposition thereto, it is this ____ day of _____, 2003,

ORDERED that NCRIC's Motion for Reference to a Special Master is hereby GRANTED; and it is further ORDERED that the parties shall each submit nominations for individuals which the Court will consider in appointing a Special Master to assist in this case; and it is further ORDERED that the Special Master shall conduct proceedings in accordance with Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 53, receive evidence and hear witness testimony, and prepare and file a report of his findings regarding the following issues:

1. The application of the Deposit Premium, Minimum Premium, and Developmental Factors in the calculation of Additional and/or Return Premium under the Retro Plan;

2. The reconciliation of all Experience Periods under the Retro Plan from 1993 to the end of the plan in 2000, as of June 2003;

3. The amount of Return Premium due to Columbia, or Additional Premium due to NCRIC, as of June 2003;

4. The proper adjustments to loss reserves that might or might not have been required throughout the time of the Retro Plan;

5. Whether or not NCRIC's Retro Plan calculations presented to Columbia from 1993 to the present were in compliance with the terms of the Retro Plan.

Washington, D.C. 20037

Dear Mr. Kane:

I am enclosing two copies of the signed retrospective rating plan agreements accompanied by two copies of Exhibit A, policy endorsement and example of plan operation.

Based on the list of plan participants provided under cover of your letter dated October 15, the Underwriting Department will proceed with the implementation of premium discounts effective September 1, 1993. There are several participants not currently insured with NCRIC that will require some additional time to process but the discount will be effective at the same time as the policy effective date.

We are proceeding with the discounts with the understanding that executed copies of attending faculty program agreements between Columbia Hospital and each plan participant will be provided to me by not later than December 1, 1993. 1994 discounts will otherwise have to be withheld until the documents are received.

I sincerely hope this to be the beginning of a long and mutually beneficial agreement.

Sincerely,

David K. Little

RETROSPECTIVE RATING PLAN AGREEMENT

This Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Agreement") is made and entered into effective the first day of September, 1993, by and between National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company, 2170 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007 ("NCRIC" or the "Company"), and Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, 2425 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037 ("Medical Center").

WHEREAS, NCRIC offers medical professional liability insurance to physicians duly licensed as such by the District of Columbia Government ("physicians") on a claims-made basis, for which an annual premium is assessed and paid; and

WHEREAS, Medical Center operates and conducts a not-for-profit hospital in the District of Columbia which has on its medical staff duly licensed physicians who are insured with NCRIC; and

WHEREAS, certain of these physicians desire to secure a reduction or discount on their insurance premiums on a preferred risk basis through the establishment of and participation in an Attending Faculty Program ("AFP"), which shall be designed to reduce the risks involved in the delivery of medical care to patients as set forth in the Attending Faculty Program Agreement entered into between the physicians and Medical Center; and

WHEREAS, NCRIC is willing to provide such a reduction or discount on said insurance premiums to those physicians who agree to participate in the AFP on condition that Medical Center agrees to be financially responsible for certain premium amounts as hereinafter provided; and

WHEREAS, as a mechanism for reducing its own exposure for professional liability, Medical Center is willing to assume such responsibility;

NOW, THEREFORE, the parties hereto agree as follows:

1. NCRIC has established a three-year Retrospective Rating Plan, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A (the "Plan") and incorporated herein by reference. NCRIC makes available the benefits of the Plan to its physician insureds who are parties to the AFP Agreement, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit B and incorporated herein by reference, and who are issued a Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsement, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit C. With the exception of the Plan Participants listed on Exhibit D, attached hereto and incorporated herein by this reference, the effective date of any Plan Participant's participation, or termination of participation, in the Plan shall be the date on which NCRIC receives notice thereof from Medical Center.

2. NCRIC agrees to issue Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsements to its physician insureds who otherwise qualify in accordance with the standard underwriting practices of NCRIC and who are members of the AFP.

3. As an inducement to NCRIC to cause it to issue the Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsements to its physician insureds who are members of the AFP, Medical Center agrees to be solely responsible for, and to pay, any Additional Premium due in accordance with the terms of the Plan.

4. Medical Center shall correspondingly be entitled to receive Return Premium, if any, and investment return thereon, if any, in accordance with the terms of the Plan.

5. Notice of any Additional Premium due from Medical Center, or any Return Premium due to Medical Center, shall be provided to Medical Center within 60 days following the close of the Reconciliation Period, and payment due, whether to Medical Center or from Medical Center, shall be due and payable within 30 days of receipt of said notice.

6. Medical Center's obligations hereunder are primary, and not secondary, and NCRIC shall have no right to seek recourse or payment of any Additional Premium due pursuant to the Plan from any Plan Participant. In the event Medical Center fails to make any payment for which it is responsible hereunder when due, the Company shall have the right to recover reasonable attorneys fees incurred in recovering such payment from Medical Center.

7. NCRIC hereby represents and warrants that any claims made against Plan Participants will be processed, including the setting of loss reserves, in the normal and ordinary course of the Company's business, without consideration of the insured's status as a Plan Participant.

8. Medical Center hereby represents and warrants that it has made, and will continue to make, adequate provision for the contingent liabilities it has assumed hereunder.

9. Medical Center will provide NCRIC with the following:

a. a list of all Plan Participants, and any additions or deletions thereto;

b. copies of Medical Center's Agreement between Medical Center and Participants in the Attending Faculty Program who are Insured with NCRIC, and amendments, if any, as made from time to time, with each Plan Participant, which contract shall include an authorization by the Plan Participant in form and substance satisfactory to NCRIC to release to Medical Center the information set forth in Paragraph 10(a)(iii) below;

c. copies of, and any amendments to, the AFP Agreement; and

d. a review and summary of risk management activities undertaken pursuant to the Attending Faculty Program Agreement.

10. NCRIC and a Medical Center representative will meet quarterly to review the status of the operation of the Retrospective Rating Plan.

a. At such meetings, NCRIC will provide Medical Center with the following:

i. for purposes of cross-reference and confirmation of participation or termination of participation in the Plan, a list of all Plan Participants participating in the Plan, together with their effective date of participation and termination date, as applicable;

ii. the aggregate amount of losses reserved under the Plan, and the verification thereof by NCRIC's consulting actuary;

iii. with respect to any medical incident or professional liability claim reported to NCRIC by a Plan Participant under the Plan (hereinafter, "incident"), and subject to a Plan Participant's authorization to release same to Medical Center, the name of the physician, the date of the incident, the date said incident was reported to NCRIC, any complaint or suit filed in a court of law with respect to such claim; and any payments made on behalf of said Plan Participant by NCRIC; and

iv. a review of Medical Center risk management activities.

b. Annually, at such meeting taking place in the first quarter of each year, Medical Center will provide NCRIC with the statement of Medical Center's consulting actuary that adequate reserves have been made for the contingent liabilities Medical Center has assumed under this Agreement.

11. This Agreement shall remain in full force and effect as to any renewal, extension or new issuance of Insurance Policies with Plan Endorsements issued to Plan Participants during any Experience Period, and Medical Center waives notice of any and all such renewals, extension, or new issuances.

12. This Agreement shall remain in full force and effect until all claims applicable to the final Experience Period of the Plan are finally closed or upon payment of maximum premium amount required by paragraph 3 hereof applicable to the final Experience Period, whichever occurs first. For purposes of this Paragraph 12, any claim "closed" without payment made to, and a release having been signed by, the claimant shall be subject to reopening, and any payments made on behalf of such reopened claims shall be subject to, and part of, the retrospective adjustment according to the Plan.

13. For purposes of clarification, and not to vary, alter or amend the terms hereof or of the Plan, attached hereto as Exhibit B and incorporated herein by reference is an example of the operation of the Plan.

14. All bookkeeping and record keeping shall be handled by NCRIC.

15. Upon ninety (90) days' written notice prior to the end of any Experience Period, to be effective after the last day of such Experience Period, the Plan may be discontinued by either party for cause, provided that such discontinuance shall not affect any obligation or liability accrued prior to the date of such discontinuance. For purposes of this Paragraph 15, "cause" shall mean any material breach of the terms of this Agreement, or any change in any applicable federal, state or local law which would render any of the terms of this Agreement unlawful.

16. If notice is required to be given by either party to the other, it may be given by registered or certified mail return receipt requested, postage prepaid, or personal delivery to the other party addressed as follows:

THREE YEAR RETROSPECTIVE RATING PLAN

The National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company Retrospective Rating Plan, hereinafter referred to as the "Plan," is available only to physicians insured by National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company ("NCRIC") who are participants in the Medical Center's Attending Faculty Program ("AFP") referenced in the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement between NCRIC and Medical Center dated September 1, 1993, (the "Agreement") and who have been issued a retrospective rating plan premium adjustment endorsement by NCRIC. The AFP has been established for the primary purpose of implementing practice protocols relating to delivery of patient health care. Individual medical professional liability policies issued to Plan Participants are subject to retrospective rating in accordance with the following terms and conditions:

1. Plan Term. The term of the Plan shall be three years, beginning on September 1, 1993 and ending on September 1, 1996. The Plan shall consist of three separate and distinct Experience Periods of:

Beginning 12:01 A.M. on	and Ending 12:01 A.M. on
September 1, 1993	September 1, 1994
September 1, 1994	September 1, 1995
September 1, 1995	September 1, 1996

2. Premiums Charged to Plan Participants. The premium charged to and paid by Plan Participants for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim for Coverage A, "Physicians and Surgeons Individual Professional Liability" shall be discounted by 19% of the otherwise applicable premium for such coverage. Although that premium is subject to retrospective adjustment as set forth below, no Plan Participant shall be responsible for, or entitled to, any additional or return premium. The obligation to pay additional premium (if any), and the right to receive return premium (if any), shall be solely that of Medical Center.

3. Retrospective Rating Premium Formula. The retrospective premium for any Reconciliation will be calculated as follows:

Retrospective Premium (Subject to established Minimum and Maximum Premiums) =

((((Loss Reserves) x (Development Factor)) + Paid Losses) x Discount Factor) + Basic Premium.

Note: The amount of Losses included in the calculation of the retrospective premium is subject to the Loss Limitation as hereinafter defined.

4. Combination of Experience Periods. Each Experience Period shall be reconciled individually utilizing applicable premium amounts, plan factors and the retrospective rating premium formula. As reconciliations become due for each Experience Period, the completed, individually reconciled retrospective premiums for applicable Experience Periods shall be combined to determine the total Retrospective Premium.

5. Reconciliations. Reconciliations to determine additional or return premium amounts which may be due will be performed according to the following schedule:

Experience Period	First Reconciliation Date
September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1994	September 1, 1996
September 1, 1994 to September 1, 1995	September 1, 1997
September 1, 1995 to September 1, 1996	September 1, 1998

Additional reconciliations will continue to be conducted at subsequent twelve month intervals until all losses reported during the applicable Experience Period are finally closed. A reported loss shall not be deemed finally closed until the earlier of payment to the claimant and execution of a release by the claimant, or the expiration of the statute of limitations for the claim. Any claim closed without payment shall not be deemed finally closed; any claim closed without payment shall be subject to reopening, and any payments made on behalf of such reopened claims shall be subject to, and part of, the reconciliation process.

Within sixty (60) days of the Reconciliation Date, Reconciliations will be performed by NCRIC and a report containing the Plan calculations and a statement reflecting amounts which are due to ("return premium") or due from ("additional premium") Medical Center under the terms of the Plan will be presented to Medical Center. Any amounts due either to or from Medical Center shall be due and payable within thirty (30) days of the date of the statement for same.

6. Determination of Additional or Return Premiums Due. The amount of additional or return premium due after each Reconciliation will be calculated by subtracting the retrospective premium from the applicable Deposit Premium for the subject Experience Period(s).

7. Definitions. As used herein, the following terms shall have the meanings indicated:

"Basic Premium" means the combined amount of the administrative expense charge and the insurance charge due to NCRIC. The administrative expense charge shall be 14.04% of the Subject Premium; the insurance charge shall be calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium by the insurance charge factor set forth below:

Three(3) Year Subject Premium	Insurance Charge Factor
$ 1,539,000 - $ 2,565,999	20.7%
$ 2,566,000 - $ 3,591,999	13.2%
$ 3,592,000 - $ 4,617,999	8.4%
$ 4,618,000 - $ 5,643,999	6.9%
$ 5,644,000 - $ 6,669,999	5.7%
$ 6,670,000 - $ 7,696,999	5.0%
$ 7,697,000 - $ 8,722,999	4.3%
$ 8,723,000 - $ 9,748,999	3.9%
$ 9,749,000 - $10,774,999	3.5%
$10,775,000 - $11,800,999	3.1%
$11,801,000 - and over	2.8%

"Deposit Premium" means the Subject Premium multiplied by eighty-one percent (81%). This percentage shall remain unchanged for the three year term of the Plan.

"Development Factor" means the factors by which Loss Reserves are multiplied for purposes of determining developed losses. These factors shall apply as follows and shall remain unchanged for the three year term of the Plan and all reconciliations applicable thereto:

Year 1 Reconciliation	-	88.5%
Year 2 Reconciliation	-	87.5%
Year 3 Reconciliation	-	90.5%
Year 4 Reconciliation	-	96.0%
Year 5 Reconciliation	-	100.0%
All Subsequent Reconciliations	-	100.0%

REDACTED

"Discount Factor" means a factor of 86.33%. This factor shall remain unchanged for the three-year term of the plan.

"Experience Period" shall mean the initial twelve (12) month period commencing September 1, 1993 and each subsequent twelve (12) month period during which the Plan is in effect. Should the Plan be terminated prior to the end of any Experience Period, the pro-rated period involved shall be deemed to be an Experience Period.

"Insurance Policy" means the Company's Physicians and Surgeons Modified Claims-Made Medical Professional Liability Coverage Policy, Revised January 1, 1993, or any replacement policy subsequently issued, and any endorsements thereto.

"Losses" means the obligations assumed by the Company on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with the terms and conditions contained in and applicable to Coverage A of Section I of the Insurance Policy.

"Loss Limitation" - for the purpose of application of the retrospective rating premium formula, losses shall be limited to Allocated Loss Adjustment Expenses plus the lower of (i) $500,000 in indemnity, or (ii) the actual amount of the loss. Notwithstanding the foregoing, however, for claim amounts in excess of $500,000, the amount Allocated Loss Adjustment Expenses shall be limited to a pro-rated amount equal to the ratio of $500,000 to the total indemnity amount applicable.

"Loss Reserves" means allocations to pay losses that have been incurred, or are likely to be incurred, and reported during the time the Plan is in effect, but that have not yet been paid.

"Maximum Premium" means the maximum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan. The Maximum Premium shall be equal to one hundred and fifteen percent (115%) of the Subject Premium amount.

"Minimum Premium" means the minimum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan. The Minimum Premium shall be equal to seventy-five percent (75%) of the Subject Premium amount.

"Paid Losses" means loss amounts paid by NCRIC on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with Coverage A - Physicians and Surgeons Individual Professional Liability - Section I, Subsection 2 (Coverage Agreements) and Subsection 6 (Supplementary Payments) of the Insurance Policy. Paid Losses are subject to Loss Limitation, defined above.

"Plan Participants" means those physicians insured by NCRIC pursuant to Insurance Policies endorsed with the retrospective rating plan premium adjustment endorsement and who are members of the AFP.

"Subject Premium" means the total of the undiscounted premiums that would be charged to physician-insureds for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim under Section I, Subsection 2, Coverage A, of the Insurance Policy if said physician-insureds were not Plan Participants. For the second and third Experience Periods, the Subject Premium shall be determined by NCRIC's consulting actuary, but shall not exceed 83%, nor be less than 77%, of the undiscounted premium charged for coverage limits of $1 million each claim/$3 million aggregate.

PREMIUM ADJUSTMENT ENDORSEMENT

Policy Number:

Effective Date:

This endorsement forms a part of the Policy issued by the National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company (the "Company") and takes effect as of the effective hour and date of said policy unless another effective date is stated herein.

Nothing herein contained shall be held to vary, waive, alter or extend any of the terms, conditions, agreements or declarations of the policy, other than as herein stated.

1. The premium for Coverage A stated in the declarations is a provisional premium and is contingent upon participation by the named insured in a retrospective rating plan. Upon the Company's receipt of notice of the termination of the participation of the named insured in the retrospective rating plan the premium for Coverage A will be adjusted to 100% of the Company's otherwise applicable premium then in effect.

2. All other premiums listed in the declarations and any additional premiums resulting from any policy endorsements are not affected as a result of the named insured's participation in a retrospective rating plan.

This endorsement shall not be binding unless countersigned by a duly authorized Company representative; provided, however, that if this endorsement takes effect as of the effective date of the policy and, at issue of said policy, forms a part thereof, countersignature on the declarations of said policy by a duly authorized Company representative shall constitute valid countersignature of this endorsement.

Re: Physicians' Professional Liability Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement
Reconciliation Statement for Years 1994-1995 through 1998-1999

Dear Larry:

In accordance with the above-mentioned Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement between NCRIC, Inc. and Columbia, attached is the reconciliation calculation for the years 1994-1995, 1995-1996, 1996-1997, 1997-1998, and 1998-1999. This calculation utilizes loss information valued as of August 31, 2000.

The balance of $1,286,525 is due and payable on or before October 01, 2000.

Should you have any questions regarding this calculation, please contact me at (202) 969-3145.

Sincerely,

Dave Osborn
Vice President

Re: Columbia Hospital for Women Retro Plan - September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1996

Dear Ms. Hansen:

In accordance with our meeting last week in which you indicated that you would like to increase the premium discount from 15% to 30% for participating physicians in the above captioned plan effective January 1, 1996, I have compiled a summary of the plan changes that would occur as a result.

1. The overall subject premium volume is projected to decline by approximately $325,000.
2. The loading will increase from 18.34% to 21.84%.
3. The minimum premium will decrease from 75% to 65%.
4. The deposit premium will be 62% of the subject premium instead of 81%.

These revisions can be expected to introduce more volatility to the plan and put Columbia Hospital at increased risk of having to pay some additional premium. However, it is also my understanding that you are also implementing a more stringent risk management program which should be expected to reduce claims to the plan. Another mitigating factor is that the revisions will only be in effect for a total of nine months and the balance of the 2 years and 3 months is at the lower original terms of the 15% discount.

A year end actuarial evaluation of the losses reported to the plan will be submitted in early 1996. At that time, further consideration will be necessary to determine that adequate reserves have been established by Columbia for any contingent liability resulting from the plan.

We are delighted that you are planning to further enhance your risk management program and our offer to assist you in this endeavor still stands.

Sincerely,

David K. Little

Dear Steve,

This letter will confirm that Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center is obligating itself to an increase from 15 to 30 percent for participating members of the Faculty of Columbia Hospital for Women.

As we discussed, this enhanced plan will require carefully monitoring. Dr. Nabil Asterbadi is presenting his plan for monitoring to the Performance Improvement Committee of the Board of Directors on Thursday, January 18. I will forward that plan to you as soon as it is improved. Also, individual members of the faculty will have to sign new agreements reflecting their willingness to adhere to the protocols. As agreements are signed, I will forward names to you. Also as we discussed, the timing of this could present a problem with the due date of the premium notices. Please let me know as soon as possible whether the one-month delay which we discussed is feasible.

This plan will be in effect from January through September 1996, at which time we will review performance with you.

Thanks, Steve. Have a good day.

Sincerely,

Susan M. Hansen
President and CEO

ADDENDUM TO
RETROSPECTIVE RATING PLAN AGREEMENT

This Addendum amends the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Agreement") and Exhibit A. attached, made and entered into effective the first day of September 1,1993 by and between National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company, 2170 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007 ("NCRIC" or the "Company"), and Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, 2425 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037 ("Medical Center").

This Addendum extends the Agreement and Exhibit A from September 1, 1996 to September 1, 1998. For purposes of Modifications, only language amended in the Agreement is noted below and for purposes of Plan calculations in the Agreement, a full Exhibit A, with modifications is included.

Modifications to the Agreement are amended as follows:

8. Medical Center hereby represents and warrants that it has made, and will continue to make financial security to NCRIC, in accordance with permitted statutory accounting practices as prescribed under the D.C. Insurance Code, or otherwise as acceptable by the D.C. Insurance Administration, for the contingent liabilities it has assumed hereunder.

Page 3, Item 10:

10. NCRIC and a Medical Center representative will meet semi-annually to review the status of the operation of the Retrospective Rating Plan.

b. Annually, Medical Center will provide NCRIC with financial security in that is in accordance with permitted statutory accounting practices as prescribed under the D.C. Insurance Code, or otherwise that is acceptable by the D.C. Insurance Administration, for the contingent liabilities Medical Center has assumed under this Agreement. This amount will be adjusted accordingly to the outstanding retrospective premium due.

Page 4, Item 11:

11. This Agreement shall remain in full force and effect as to any renewal, extension, reporting endorsement or new issuance of Insurance Policies with Plan Endorsements issued to Plan Participants by NCRIC during any Experience Period, and Medical Center waives notice of any and all such renewals, extension, reporting endorsements or new issuances. All renewals, extension, reporting endorsements or new issuances represent coverage contracts solely between NCRIC and physicians.

FIVE YEAR RETROSPECTIVE RATING PLAN

The National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company Retrospective Rating Plan, hereinafter referred to as the "Plan," is available only to physicians insured by National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company ("NCRIC") who are participants in the Medical Center's Attending Faculty Program ("AFP") referenced in the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement between NCRIC and Medical Center first entered into on September 1, 1993 and added to by this plan through September 1, 1998 (the "Agreement") and who have been issued a retrospective rating plan premium adjustment endorsement by NCRIC. The AFP has been established for the primary purpose of implementing practice protocols relating to delivery of patient health care. Individual medical professional liability policies issued to Plan Participants are subject to retrospective rating in accordance with the following terms and conditions:

1. Plan Term. The term of the Plan shall be five years, beginning on September 1, 1993 and ending on September 1, 1998. The Plan shall consist of five separate and distinct Experience Periods of:

Beginning 12:01 a.m. on	and Ending 12:01 a.m. on
September 1, 1993	September 1, 1994
September 1, 1994	September 1, 1995
September 1, 1995	September 1, 1996
September 1, 1996	September 1, 1997
September 1, 1997	September 1, 1998

2. Premiums Charged to Plan Participants. The premium charged to and paid by Plan Participants for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim for Coverage A, "Physicians and Surgeons Individual Professional Liability" shall be discounted by 33% of the otherwise applicable premium for such coverage for the last three periods ending 1996, 1997 and 1998 respectively. Although that premium is subject to retrospective adjustment as set forth below, no Plan Participant shall be responsible for, or entitled to, any additional or return premium. The obligation to pay additional premium (if any), and the right to receive return (if any), shall be solely that of Medical Center.

3. Retrospective Rating Premium Formula. The retrospective premium for any Reconciliation will be calculated as follows:

Retrospective Premium (Subject to established Minimum and Maximum Premiums) =
{[(Loss Reserves) x (Development Factor)] + Paid Losses] x Discount Factor}+Basic Premium

Note: The amount of Losses included in the calculation of the retrospective premium is subject to the Loss Limitation as hereinafter defined.

4. Combination of Experience Periods. Each Experience Period shall be reconciled individually utilizing applicable premium amounts, plan factors and the retrospective rating premium formula. As reconciliations become due for each Experience Period, the completed, individually reconciled retrospective premiums for applicable Experience Periods shall be combined to determine the total Retrospective Premium.

5. Reconciliations. Reconciliations to determine additional or return premium amounts which may be due will be performed according to the following schedules:

Experience Period	First Reconciliation Date
September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1994	September 1, 1995
September 1, 1994 to September 1, 1995	September 1, 1996
September 1, 1995 to September 1, 1996	September 1, 1997
September 1, 1996 to September 1, 1997	September 1, 1998
September 1, 1997 to September 1, 1998	September 1, 1999

Reconciliation calculations will continue to be conducted at subsequent twelve month intervals until all losses reported during the applicable Experience Period are finally closed. A reported loss shall not be deemed finally closed until the earlier of payment to the claimant and execution of a release by the claimant, or the expiration of the statute of limitations for the claim. Any claim closed without payment shall be not deemed finally closed; any claim closed without payment shall be subject to reopening, and any payments made on behalf of such reopened claims shall be subject to, and part of, the reconciliation process.

Within sixty (60) days of the end of an Experience Period, reconciliations will be performed by NCRIC and a report containing the Plan calculations and a statement reflecting amounts which are due to ("return premium") or due from ("additional premium") Medical Center under the terms of the Plan will be presented to Medical Center. Any amounts due either to or from Medical Center shall be due and payable within thirty (30) days of the date of the statement for same.

6. Determination of Additional or Return Premiums Due. The amount of additional or return premium due after each Reconciliation will be calculated by subtracting the retrospective premium from the applicable Deposit Premium for the subject Experience Periods.

7. Definitions. As used herein, the following terms shall have the meanings indicated:

"Basic Premium" means the combined amount of the administrative expense charge and the insurance charge due to NCRIC. The administrative expense charge shall be 14.04% of the Subject Premium; the insurance charge shall be calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium by the insurance charge factor set forth below:

Five (5) Year Subject Premium	Insurance Charge Factor
$1,539,000 - $2,565,999	20.7%
$2,566,000 - $3,591,999	13.2%
$ 3,592,000 - $ 4,617,999	8.4%
$ 4,618,000 - $ 5,643,999	6.9%
$ 5,644,000 - $ 6,669,999	5.7%
$ 6,670,000 - $ 7,696,999	5.0%
$ 7,697,000 - $ 8,722,999	4.3%
$ 8,723,000 - $ 9,748,999	3.9%
$ 9,749,000 - $10,774,999	3.5%
$10,775,000 - $11,800,999	3.1%
$11,801,000 - and over	2.8%

"Deposit Premium" means the Subject Premium multiplied by sixty-seven (67%). This percentage shall remain unchanged for the three year term of the Plan, unless both parties agree to a change and amend this Agreement hereunder.

"Development Factor" means the factors by which Loss Reserves are multiplied for purposes of determining developed losses. These factors shall apply as follows and all reconciliations applicable thereto, unless NCRIC claims trending, as actuarially noted, indicates otherwise development at which time applicable development factors of NCRIC will apply.

Year 1 Reconciliation	-	55.0%
Year 2 Reconciliation	-	65.0%
Year 3 Reconciliation	-	80.0%
Year 4 Reconciliation	-	105.0%
Year 5 Reconciliation	-	105.0%
All Subsequent Reconciliations	-	100.0%

"Discount Factor" means the factor currently used by NCRIC at the time of the reconciliation. At the time of this Agreement 86.33% will apply.

"Experience Period" shall mean the initial twelve (12) month period commencing September 1, 1993 and each subsequent twelve (12) month period during which the Plan is in effect. Should the Plan be terminated prior to the end of any Experience Period, the prorated period involved shall be deemed to be an Experience Period.

16d-001713

"Insurance Policy" means the Company's Physicians and Surgeons Modified Claims-Made Medical Professional Liability Coverage Policy, Revised January 1, 1993, or any replacement policy subsequently issued, and any endorsements thereto.

"Losses" means the obligations assumed by the Company on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with the terms and conditions contained in and applicable to Coverage A of Section I of the Insurance Policy.

"Loss Limitation" - for the purpose of application of the retrospective rating premium formula, losses shall be limited to Allocated Loss Adjustment Expenses plus the lower of (I) $500,000 in indemnity, or (ii) the actual amount of the loss. Notwithstanding the foregoing, however, for claim amounts in excess of $500,000, the amount Allocated Loss Adjustment Expenses shall be limited to a pro-rated amount equal to the ratio of $500,000 to the total indemnity amount applicable.

"Loss Reserves" means allocations to pay losses that have been incurred, or are likely to be incurred, and reported during the time the Plan is in effect, but that have not yet been paid.

"Maximum Premium" means the maximum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan. The Maximum Premium shall be equal to one hundred and fifteen percent (133%) of the Subject Premium amount.

"Minimum Premium" means the minimum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan. The Minimum Premium shall be equal to seventy-five percent (60%) of the Subject Premium amount.

"Paid Losses" means loss amounts paid by NCRIC on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with Coverage A - Physicians and Surgeons Individual Professional Liability - Section I, Subsection 2 (Coverage Agreements) and Subsection 6 (Supplementary Payments) of the Insurance Policy. Paid losses are subject to Loss Limitation, defined above.

"Plan Participants" means those physicians insured by NCRIC pursuant to Insurance Policies endorsed with the retrospective rating plan premium adjustment endorsement and who are members of the AFP.

"Subject Premium" means the total of the undiscounted premiums that would be charged to physician-insureds for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim under Section I, Subsection 2, Coverage A, of the Insurance Policy if said physician-insured were not Plan Participants. For the second and third Experience Periods, the Subject Premium shall not exceed 85%, nor be less than 70% of the undiscounted premium charged for coverage limits of $1 million each claim/ $3 million aggregate.

Dear Steve:

Enclosed please find two executed copies of the revised Addendum B to the Plan which amends the Plan and extends it for one year to September 1, 1999 as executed by Gerald Beaulieu, Acting President and CEO. We look forward to receiving a fully executed copy of the Addendum at your earliest convenience.

Thank you for your assistance and that of Jeff Marsh in getting this finalized. We look forward to productive year in claims review and maximizing our combined efforts to decrease potential liabilities for the Plan. I look forward to hearing from Bill Burgess in the near future to set up our quarterly review for the first quarter of the plan. Please feel free to call me at (202) 293-6048 if you have any questions.

Very truly yours,

ADDENDUM B TO
RETROSPECTIVE RATING PLAN AGREEMENT

This Addendum amends the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Agreement") and Exhibit A, attached, made and entered into effective the first day of September 1, 1993 and Addendum amending Agreement January 1, 1997, by and between National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company, 2170 Wisconsin Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20007 ("NCRIC" or the "Company"), and Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, 2425 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20037 ("CHWMC").

This Addendum extends the Agreement, Addendum and Exhibit A from September 1, 1998 to September 1, 1999. For purposes of Modifications, only language amended in the Agreement is noted below and for purposes of Plan calculations in the Agreement, a full Exhibit A, with modifications is included.

10. NCRIC, a Medical Center representative and a Physicians Claims Committee representative will meet quarterly to review the status of the operation of the Retrospective Rating Plan.

A. At such meetings, NCRIC will provide the following:

(I) for purposes of cross-reference and confirmation of participating or termination of participation in the Plan, a list of all Plan Participants participating in the Plan, together with their effective date of participation and termination date, as applicable;

(II) a loss run detailing the following information:

Date of Loss
Date Claim Made
Claimant's Name
Location of Claim (hospital, office)
Brief Description of Claim
Status (Claim/Suit)
Total Indemnity Reserve (in the aggregate only)
Total Expense Reserve (in the aggregate only)

(III) a review of Medical Center risk management activities and risk management issues presented by the claims.

18. This Agreement shall not be assignable under any circumstances, whether in connection with the bankruptcy cases in which CHWMC are currently debtors or otherwise, by any party hereto without the express written consent of other parties, provided that the obligations of NCRIC hereunder shall be assigned to any admitted insurer which is a successor to NCRIC by reason of conversion, reorganization or merger approved by the District of Columbia Commissioner of Insurance. Notwithstanding the foregoing, CHWMC will assume and assign to the reorganized merged entity under its plan of reorganization, this Agreement. This agreement shall terminate (i) upon the conversion of the CHWMC case to Chapter 7 case, or (ii) if greater than 50% of Plan Participants resign their affiliation with CHWMC.

SIX YEAR RETROSPECTIVE RATING PLAN

The National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company Retrospective Rating Plan, hereinafter referred to as the "Plan," is available only to physicians insured by National Capital Reciprocal Insurance Company ("NCRIC") who are participants in the CHWMC's Attending Faculty Program ("AFP") referenced in the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement between NCRIC and Medical Center first entered into on September 1, 1993 and subsequently amended January 1, 1997, and added to by this plan through September 1, 1999 (the "Agreement") and who have been issued a retrospective rating plan premium adjustment endorsement by NCRIC. The AFP has been established for the primary purpose of implementing practice protocols relating to delivery of patient health care. Individual medical professional liability policies issued to Plan Participants are subject to retrospective rating in accordance with the following terms and conditions:

1. Plan Term. The term of the Plan shall be six years, beginning on September 1, 1993 and ending on September 1, 1999. The Plan shall consist of six separate and distinct Experience Periods of:

Beginning 12:01 a.m. on	and Ending 12:01 a.m. on
September 1, 1993	September 1, 1994
September 1, 1994	September 1, 1995
September 1, 1995	September 1, 1996
September 1, 1996	September 1, 1997
September 1, 1997	September 1, 1998
September 1, 1998	September 1, 1999

2. Premiums Charged to Plan Participants. The premium charged to and paid by Plan Participants for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim for Coverage A, "Physicians and Surgeons Individual Professional Liability" shall be discounted by 19%of the otherwise applicable premium for such coverage in the first two years of the Plan and 33% of the otherwise applicable premium for such coverage in the remaining years of the Plan. Although that premium is subject to retrospective adjustment as set forth below, no Plan Participant shall be responsible for, or entitled to, any additional or return premium. The obligation to pay additional premium (if any), and the right to receive return (if any), shall be solely that of CHWMC.

3. Retrospective Rating Premium Formula. The retrospective premium for any Reconciliation will be calculated as follows:

Retrospective Premium (Subject to established Minimum and Maximum Premiums) =
{[(Loss Reserves) x (Development Factor)] + Paid Losses] x Discount Factor}+Basic Premium.

Note: The amount of Losses included in the calculation of the retrospective premium is subject to the Loss Limitation as hereinafter defined.

4. Combination of Experience Periods. Each Experience Period shall be reconciled individually utilizing applicable premium amounts, plan factors and the retrospective rating premium formula. As reconciliations become due for each Experience Period, the completed, individually reconciled retrospective premiums for applicable Experience Periods shall be combined to determine the total Retrospective Premium.

5. Reconciliations. Reconciliations to determine additional or return premium amounts which may be due will be performed according to the following schedules:

Experience Period	First Reconciliation Date
September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1994	September 1, 1995
September 1, 1994 to September 1, 1995	September 1, 1996
September 1, 1995 to September 1, 1996	September 1, 1997
September 1, 1996 to September 1, 1997	September 1, 1998
September 1, 1997 to September 1, 1998	September 1, 1999
September 1, 1998 to September 1, 1999	September 1, 2000

Reconciliation calculations will continue to be conducted at subsequent twelve month intervals until all losses reported during the applicable Experience Period are finally closed. A reported loss shall not be deemed finally closed until the earlier of payment to the claimant and execution of a release by the claimant, or the expiration of the statute of limitations for the claim. Any claim closed without payment shall be not deemed finally closed; any claim closed without payment shall be subject to reopening, and any payments made on behalf of such reopened claims shall be subject to, and part of, the reconciliation process.

Within sixty (60) days of the end of an Experience Period, reconciliations will be performed by NCRIC and a report containing the Plan calculations and a statement reflecting amounts which are due to ("return premium") or due from ("additional premium") CHWMC under the terms of the Plan will be presented to CHWMC. Any amounts due either to or from CHWMC shall be due and payable within thirty (30) days of the date of the statement for same.

6. Determination of Additional or Return Premiums Due. The amount of additional or return premium due after each Reconciliation will be calculated by subtracting the retrospective premium from the applicable Deposit Premium for the subject Experience Period(s).

7. Definitions. As used herein, the following terms shall have the meanings indicated:

"Basic Premium" means the combined amount of the administrative expense charge and the insurance charge due to NCRIC. The administrative expense charge shall be 14.04% of the Subject Premium; the insurance charge shall be calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium by the insurance charge factor set forth below:

Six (6) Year "Subject" Premium	Insurance Charge Factor
$1,539,000 - $2,565,999	20.7%
$2,566,000 - $3,591,999	13.2%
$ 3,592,000 - $ 4,617,999	8.4%
$ 4,618,000 - $ 5,643,999	6.9%
$ 5,644,000 - $ 6,669,999	5.7%
$ 6,670,000 - $ 7,696,999	5.0%
$ 7,697,000 - $ 8,722,999	4.3%
$ 8,723,000 - $ 9,748,999	3.9%
$ 9,749,000 - $10,774,999	3.5%
$10,775,000 - $11,800,999	3.1%
$11,801,000 - and over	2.8%

"Deposit Premium" means the Subject Premium multiplied by sixty-seven (67%). This percentage shall remain unchanged for the one year term of the Plan, unless both parties agree to a change and amend this Agreement hereunder.

"Development Factor" means the factors by which Loss Reserves are multiplied for purposes of determining developed losses. These factors shall apply as follows and all reconciliations applicable thereto, unless NCRIC claims trending, as actuarially noted, indicates otherwise development at which time applicable development factors of NCRIC will apply.

Year 1 Reconciliation	-	55.0%
Year 2 Reconciliation	-	65.0%
Year 3 Reconciliation	-	80.0%
Year 4 Reconciliation	-	105.0%
Year 5 Reconciliation	-	105.0%
All Subsequent Reconciliations	-	100.0%

"Discount Factor" means the factor currently used by NCRIC at the time of the reconciliation. At the time of this Agreement 86.33% will apply.

16d-001722

"Experience Period" shall mean the initial twelve (12) month period commencing September 1, 1993 and each subsequent twelve (12) month period during which the Plan is in effect. Should the Plan be terminated prior to the end of any Experience Period, the prorated period involved shall be deemed to be an Experience Period.

"Insurance Policy" means the Company's Physicians and Surgeons Modified Claims-Made Medical Professional Liability Coverage Policy, Revised January 1, 1993, or any replacement policy subsequently issued, and any endorsements thereto.

"Losses" means the obligations assumed by the Company on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with the terms and conditions contained in and applicable to Coverage A of Section I of the Insurance Policy.

"Loss Limitation" - for the purpose of application of the retrospective rating premium formula, losses shall be limited to Allocated Loss Adjustment Expenses plus the lower of (I) $500,000 in indemnity, or (ii) the actual amount of the loss. Notwithstanding the foregoing, however, for claim amounts in excess of $500,000, the amount Allocated Loss Adjustment Expenses shall be limited to a pro-rated amount equal to the ratio of $500,000 to the total indemnity amount applicable.

"Loss Reserves" means allocations to pay losses that have been incurred, or are likely to be incurred, and reported during the time the Plan is in effect, but that have not yet been paid.

"Maximum Premium" means the maximum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan. The Maximum Premium shall be equal to one hundred and thirty three percent (133%) of the Subject Premium amount.

"Minimum Premium" means the minimum retrospective premium which shall be due under the Plan. The Minimum Premium shall be equal to sixty percent (60%) of the Subject Premium amount.

"Paid Losses" means loss amounts paid by NCRIC on behalf of Plan Participants in accordance with Coverage A - Physicians and Surgeons Individual Professional Liability - Section I, Subsection 2 (Coverage Agreements) and Subsection 6 (Supplementary Payments) of the Insurance Policy. Paid losses are subject to Loss Limitation, defined above.

"Plan Participants" means those physicians insured by NCRIC pursuant to Insurance Policies endorsed with the retrospective rating plan premium adjustment endorsement and who are members of the AFP.

16d-001723

"Subject Premium" means the total of the undiscounted premiums that would be charged to physician-insureds for coverage limits of $500,000 each claim under Section I, Subsection 2, Coverage A, of the Insurance Policy if said physician-insured were not Plan Participants. For the second and third Experience Periods, the Subject Premium shall not exceed 85%, nor be less than 70% of the undiscounted premium charged for coverage limits of $1 million each claim/ $3 million aggregate.

RE: Program Renewal for September 1, 1999 - September 1, 2000.

Dear Ann:

Please find enclosed an Addendum B - 1999 that renews the existing retrospective program for an annual term of September 1, 1999 to September 1, 2000. This Addendum extends the original agreement, all subsequent Addendums and Exhibit A for the above period.

To help smooth out the premium (refund)/due over the quarters we review, we have developed interpolated loss development factors to be utilized on a rolling three (3) month basis. The current program as noted in Exhibit A provides for annual loss development factors and, on an annual basis, these remain unchanged. Thus, no change in the agreement is needed regarding these factors; however, Plan Term (para. 2) and Reconciliations (para. 5) are amended to add the new program year.

Also, it is our understanding that Mr. Larry Wilson has assumed the position as President and Chief Executive Officer. We would be pleased to meet with Mr. Wilson to discuss the program and the benefits it brings to CHW and its physicians.

Enclosed are two copies: one is for your records. We look forward to working with you again on the program over the next year. Should you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at 202-969-3110. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Stephen S. Pargis

MOTIONS IN LIMINE OF DEFENDANT

Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Civil Procedure Rule 16(d), Defendant/Counter-Plaintiff Columbia Hospital For Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") respectfully moves the Court (1) for an Order setting the proof at trial to conform to the evidence, such that Columbia will present evidence and arguments on its ten claims before NCRIC presents evidence and arguments on its one claim; and (2) for an Order setting a pre-trial hearing concerning the admissibility of documentary exhibits at trial.[1]

ARGUMENT

Although NCRIC initiated this lawsuit with a claim for breach of contract, Columbia responded to NCRIC's complaint with eleven counterclaims, including one for breach of the same contract upon which NCRIC sued. Columbia has defeated motions to dismiss and/or for summary judgment with respect to ten of its eleven counterclaims. Accordingly, at trial Columbia will be required to shoulder the burden of proof with respect to the vast majority of issues. By contrast, NCRIC will bear the burden of proof only with respect to its more limited contract claim, which is a relatively minor issue in the panoply of points that a jury will be required to consider and which in any event largely overlaps Columbia's contract claim. In order to aid the jury's comprehension of the case and promote judicial efficiency, Columbia now moves this Court for an order setting the sequence for presentation of proof and arguments at trial.

[1] Separately, Columbia has also moved the Court for an Order excluding the testimony of NCRIC's purported expert witnesses.

I. THE COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO SET THE PRESENTATION OF PROOF AT TRIAL TO CONFORM TO THE EVIDENCE SUCH THAT COLUMBIA WILL PRESENT ITS PROOF AND ARGUMENTS FIRST

Courts throughout the country recognize that the order of presentation of proof at trial lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. See, e.g., Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v. John Labatt Ltd., 89 F.3d 1339, 1344 (8th Cir. 1996) ("A district court has wide discretion to set the order of proof at trial."); Johnson v. Mortham, 915 F. Supp. 1574, 1581 (N.D. Fla. 1996) ("[A] trial court has broad discretion to exercise control over the order of presentation at trial."); Control Data Corp. v. The Babcock & Wilcox Co., Nos. C6-93-472, C2-93-579, 1993 Minn. App. LEXIS 989, at *16 (Minn. App. Oct. 12, 1993) (affirming decision to permit defendant to present evidence first when defendant "had 'the affirmative of the issue to be tried' on a majority of the issues before the jury").

Because NCRIC brings only a single contract claim against Columbia, its case-in-chief will be relatively narrow and short, as compared to Columbia's case-in-chief, which will touch upon the contract issues as well as other, much broader, issues relating to the relationship between the parties and NCRIC's interference with Columbia's relations vis-à-vis third parties. Thus, Columbia will have the burden of proof on most issues, and "[n]ormally the party with the burden of proof has the right to open and close the argument to the jury." Martin v. Chesebrough-Pond's, Inc., 614 F.2d 498, 501 (5th Cir. 1980). As the Johnson court recognized,

"if the evidence will be more clearly presented by requiring a particular party to come forward first, a trial court may alter the order of presentation at trial." Johnson, 915 F. Supp. at 1581. "Indeed, trial judges have not hesitated to change the order of presentation at trial where the circumstances warranted such a change." Id.

Here, Columbia will bring ten claims to trial, NCRIC one. Moreover, among Columbia's ten claims is one for breach of contract, and the proof with respect to that claim will substantially overlap the proof concerning NCRIC's lone contract claim. For instance, both parties will offer evidence at trial concerning such matters as the terms of the parties' November 1996 oral agreement, as well as the proper calculation of Deposit Premium, Minimum Premium, and Development Factors under the Plan. Because Columbia's claims are so much broader than the claims advanced by NCRIC, it would greatly aid the jury's comprehension and promote efficiency to allow the entire case to be presented to the jury at the outset, rather than limiting the jury's initial view of the evidence to the sliver of the case upon which NCRIC bears the burden of proof and which in any event will be raised in Columbia's claims. Accordingly, the Court should set the order of presentation at trial such that Columbia, whose claims will form the focus of the case, will proceed first.

II. THE COURT SHOULD SET A PRE-TRIAL HEARING CONCERNING THE ADMISSIBILITY OF DOCUMENTARY EXHIBITS AT TRIAL

Resolution before trial of any issues concerning the admissibility of documentary evidence would promote efficiency and facilitate the most expeditious use of time during trial. Such a procedure would also aid the jury in comprehending the evidence at trial, particularly in a document-intensive case like this one. And it would add clarity to the proceedings, as it will allow the parties to know in advance the documents to which they may refer in opening statements. When Columbia raised this proposal during the parties' meet and confer, NCRIC indicated that it was receptive to the suggestion and that it would take Columbia's proposal under advisement.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Columbia's motions in limine should be granted, as follows: (1) the Court should enter an Order directing that the presentation of proof at trial conform to the evidence, such that at trial Columbia shall present evidence on its ten claims, and its opening and closing statements, first; and (2) the Court should enter an Order setting a pre-trial hearing to address the admissibility of documentary exhibits at trial.

MOTION IN LIMINE OF DEFENDANT TO EXCLUDE TESTIMONY OF NCRIC'S PURPORTED EXPERT WITNESSES

Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Civil Procedure Rule 16(d), Defendant/Counter-Plaintiff Columbia Hospital For Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") respectfully moves the Court for an order in limine excluding the testimony of NCRIC's purported expert witnesses Mary A. Woodford, W. McKay Henderson, Steve Moore, and Martin Cohen, and in support thereof states as follows:[1]

INTRODUCTION

NCRIC has indicated its intent to call Ms. Woodford and Messrs. Henderson, Moore, and Cohen as expert witnesses in this trial. However, none of them should be permitted to testify in this case. As to Messrs. Henderson, Moore, and Cohen (collectively, the "non-supplementing proposed experts"), NCRIC submitted an admittedly incomplete Rule 26(b)(4) statement almost two years ago. Despite the fact that NCRIC supplemented that statement with respect to Ms. Woodford in 2002 in order to give the outlines of the facts and opinions to which she would testify, it failed to do so with respect to the non-supplementing proposed experts. This failure seasonably to disclose the facts and opinions to which they intend to testify bars them from testifying at trial. (Point I, infra).

Although NCRIC supplemented its Rule 26(b)(4) statement with respect to Ms. Woodford, her testimony must still be excluded for four independent reasons. First, her proposed testimony is not beyond the ken of the ordinary juror, and therefore is not proper expert testimony. Second, Ms. Woodford seeks to offer legal opinions in portions of her testimony. Third, Ms. Woodford's testimony is far more prejudicial to Columbia than it is probative of any issue in the case. And finally, Ms. Woodford has not been shown to possess qualifications warranting her designation as an expert on the subject of her proposed testimony. Accordingly, her testimony should be excluded as well. (Point II, infra).

ARGUMENT

I. W. MCKAY HENDERSON, STEVE MOORE, AND MARTIN COHEN MUST BE EXCLUDED AS A RESULT OF NCRIC'S FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH RULE 26(b)(4)

NCRIC filed its initial Rule 26(b)(4) Statement as Opponent of a Claim on August 9, 2001. In that statement, NCRIC acknowledged that its disclosure of the topics upon which its proposed experts would testify was incomplete because they had not yet analyzed Columbia's damages expert report. NCRIC stated that "[u]pon receipt of" that report, each proposed expert could "provide the substance and facts to which they are expected to testify." NCRIC Rule 26(b)(4) Statement (attached hereto as Exh. 1) at 3.

Following Columbia's production of the expert report of Peter Ben Ezra and Mr. Ben Ezra's deposition, NCRIC filed a supplemental Rule 26(b)(4) statement on February 14, 2002. That statement set forth the proposed testimony for NCRIC's "experts." Despite NCRIC's use of the plural, however, the only proposed expert mentioned in the supplemental statement was Ms. Woodford, and consequently only her proposed testimony was described. See NCRIC Supp. Rule 26(b)(4) Statement (attached hereto as Exh. 2). Not a word can be found in the supplemental Rule 26(b)(4) statement regarding additional testimony by the non-supplementing proposed experts. See id.

Under these circumstances, the non-supplementing proposed experts must be excluded from testifying for failure to comply with Rule 26(b)(4). NCRIC itself conceded when it filed its initial Rule 26(b)(4) statement that its bare-bones description of the substance of their testimony was incomplete and would be supplemented at a later date. Once NCRIC chose to supplement its expert disclosures only with respect to Ms. Woodford, it abandoned the possibility that it would also seek to present the testimony of the non-supplementing proposed experts. District of Columbia courts stringently apply the disclosure requirements of Rule 26(b)(4), and do not allow testimony by purported experts not encompassed by their Rule 26(b)(4) statements. See, e.g., Sowell v. Walker, 755 A.2d 438, 446 (D.C. 2000) (upholding trial judge's decision to strike portion of damages when plaintiff's expert had previously failed to disclose proposed testimony on such damages in Rule 26(b)(4) disclosures); Dada v. Children's Nat'l Med. Ctr., 763 A.2d 1113, 1115 (D.C. 2000) (upholding grant of summary judgment based on inability of appellant to submit sufficient proof after failing to provide disclosures on expert testimony regarding causation and standard of care). Despite NCRIC's indication that it would supplement its initial Rule 26(b)(4) disclosures to give sufficient disclosure as to the proposed testimony of the non-supplementing proposed experts, NCRIC never did so. Columbia therefore would be prejudiced if their testimony were now allowed, and it must be excluded.

II. MS. WOODFORD'S PROPOSED TESTIMONY SHOULD BE EXCLUDED

Though NCRIC made an effort to comply with Rule 26(b)(4) with respect to Ms. Woodford, her testimony should nevertheless be excluded. District of Columbia courts follow a three-part test in determining the admissibility of purported expert testimony. These three prongs are:

> (1) the subject matter must be so distinctively related to some science, profession, business or occupation as to be beyond the ken of the average [juror], (2) the witness must have sufficient skill, knowledge, or experience in that field or calling as to make it appear that his opinion or inference will probably aid the trier in his search for truth, and (3) expert testimony is inadmissible if the state of the pertinent art or scientific knowledge does not permit a reasonable opinion to be asserted even by an expert.

Nixon v. United States, 728 A.2d 582, 587 (D.C. 1999) (quoting Dyas v. United States, 37 A.2d 827 (D.C. 1977)). The testimony that is proposed by Ms. Woodford flunks this test for several independent reasons:

A. The Proffered Testimony is Not Beyond the Ken of Ordinary Jurors.

Ms. Woodford does not purport to measure Columbia's claimed damages. She does not purport to measure NCRIC's claimed damages. She does not suggest a methodology for ascertaining the damages of either party, and she does not even disagree with the lost cash flow models used by Mr. Ben Ezra in his damages calculation. Instead, Ms. Woodford seeks only to quibble with the accuracy of the data used by Mr. Ben Ezra as inputs into his damages model. See Woodford Declaration ¶ 6. Specifically, she attacks Mr. Ben Ezra's use of a list of doctors that left Columbia without sufficient procedures to "verify its reasonableness or accuracy." Id. ¶ 8. She questions Mr. Ben Ezra's use of FY 2000 data as to whether it is the "best/most relevant data." Id. ¶ 14. She doubts whether the data "provided to him by CHW w[as] accurate." Id. at 5. See also id. ¶ 19 (questioning accuracy of work life expectancy inputs); id. ¶ 23 (questioning accuracy of marginal cost estimate). Even while questioning Mr. Ben Ezra's data, Ms. Woodford points to no other available data in the record which she believes is more reasonable or accurate than that upon which he relied.[2]

Ms. Woodford's proffered testimony cannot be said to be "beyond the ken" of a juror. Courts in the District of Columbia, and elsewhere, regularly exclude proposed testimony such as Ms. Woodford's as not being of aid to the trier of fact because it is not beyond the ken of an average juror and would add nothing not known or understood as a matter of common sense or common experience. See, e.g., Green v. United States, 718 A.2d 1042, 1053 (D.C. 1998) (affirming the exclusion of proposed expert testimony on the reliability of eyewitnesses because it "did not deal with subject matter beyond the ken of an average juror and would present information unnecessary to this particular jury"), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1011 (1999); Fennekohl v. United States, 354 A.2d 238, 240 (D.C. 1976) (upholding the exclusion of purported expert testimony on obscenity because "the subject of obscenity is not 'beyond the ken of the average layman'"); Darby v. System Transport, Inc., No. 99-CV-0075E(Sr), 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16541, at *17 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 3, 2001) (refusing to accept a purported expert affidavit on loading procedures for tractor-trailers because such procedures "would not be beyond the ken of

[2] It is axiomatic that disputes over the accuracy of data relied on by Mr. Ben Ezra go only to the weight of his testimony, not its admissibility. See Washington Metropolitan Transportation Authority v. Davis, 606 A.2d 165, 172 n.19 (D.C. 1992) (criticism of data used by expert because he had not personally visited accident scene went to weight, not admissibility, of opinion); District of Columbia v. Anderson, 597 A.2d 1295, 1300-01 (D.C. 1991); see also State of Ohio ex rel. Montgomery v. Trauth Dairy, 925 F. Supp. 1247, 1253 (S.D. Ohio 1996) ("Problems in selection of a sample bear on the weight of the testimony, not its admissibility.") (citing Berry v. City of Detroit, 25 F.3d 1342, 1352-53 n.11 (6th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1111 (1995)); Allapattah Servs. v. Exxon Corp., 61 F. Supp. 2d 1335, 1341 (S.D. Fla. 1999) (the court may not "simply 'pick' one expert over the other, because that expert is more credible or convincing, under the guise of exercising the gate-keeping function. To do so would improperly usurp the jury's function.").

the average juror"); Roback v. V.I.P. Transport, Inc., No. 91 C 5902, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14054, at *10 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 4, 1994) (excluding purported expert testimony on the effect of distractions on drivers as "within ordinary human experience" and thus "not beyond the ken of an average person"). None of the criticisms that Ms. Woodford levels at Mr. Ben Ezra's damages model are any more complex than these issues, upon which purported expert testimony has not been allowed.

In fact, the questions raised in Ms. Woodford's proffered testimony are nothing more than cross-examination going to the weight the jury should give to Mr. Ben Ezra's testimony. Each of Ms. Woodford's attacks on the data used by Mr. Ben Ezra can self-evidently be made by an attorney cross-examining Mr. Ben Ezra. Indeed, they have been. Ms. Woodford's entire declaration is built around the deposition cross-examination conducted of Mr. Ben Ezra by NCRIC's counsel, as is ably demonstrated by the extensive snippets of Mr. Ben Ezra's deposition testimony attached to Ms. Woodford's declaration. In fact, Mr. Ben Ezra's deposition is the only evidence to which she adverts in support of her declaration.

NCRIC's objections to the inputs to Mr. Ben Ezra's damages model can be, and have already been, set forth by attorneys. There is no reason to permit testimony on these points, and Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony should be excluded.

B. Ms. Woodford Seeks to Render Legal Opinions.

In at least one portion of Ms. Woodford's declaration, she takes Mr. Ben Ezra to task for (supposedly) not employing "expected work life studies" of the sort that are "typically accepted by courts." Woodford Decl. ¶ 18. But neither Ms. Woodford nor any witness is permitted to render legal opinions, and her testimony on this score must be excluded as a matter of law. See, e.g., In re Initial Public Offering Securities Litig., 174 F. Supp. 2d 61, 64 (S.D.N.Y. 2001)

16d-001743

(discussing the "well established" "rule prohibiting experts from providing their legal opinions or conclusions") (citing cases); In re Midland Enterprises, Inc., No. 00-3750, 2002 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23851, at *12 (E.D. La. Dec. 11, 2002) ("Expert testimony that offers a legal opinion is inadmissible.") (citing cases).

C. Ms. Woodford's Testimony Holds Little Probative Value.

Even if Ms. Woodford's testimony is considered to be proper expert testimony under the Dyas test, it should still be excluded for the independent reason that its prejudicial effect outweighs its probative value. The D.C. Court of Appeals has recognized the additional weight that jurors are likely to place on testimony that has been designated as expert testimony. See, e.g., Proctor v. United States, 728 A.2d 1246, 1249 (D.C. 1999) ("Because of the authoritative quality which surrounds expert opinion, courts must reject testimony which might be given undue deference by jurors and which could thereby usurp the truthseeking function of the jury.") (quoting Smith v. United States, 389 A.2d 1356, 1359 (D.C. 1978)); In re Melton, 597 A.2d 892, 905 (D.C. 1991) (en banc) (noting "the trial court's broad discretion to exclude expert testimony that is more prejudicial than probative"); Lampkins v. United States, 401 A.2d 966, 971 (D.C. 1979) (recognizing "the danger that a jury might forego independent analysis of the facts and bow too readily to the opinion of an expert"). In this instance, it would be highly prejudicial to Columbia to have the attorney arguments and legal opinions that NCRIC wishes to present delivered from the stand by a witness who has donned the mantle of an "expert." Although, in reality, the criticisms that Ms. Woodford has put forward are based on attorney argument regarding perceived flaws with Mr. Ben Ezra's testimony and not on any independent interpretation of the evidence in this case, NCRIC will seek to bolster its various objections to Mr. Ben Ezra's methodology through Ms. Woodford. Allowing NCRIC to do so would not be conducive to the search for the truth in this trial. It would only lend undue weight to NCRIC's attorney arguments regarding the flaws that it believes are present in Mr. Ben Ezra's methodology. Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony should be excluded on this ground as well.

D. Ms. Woodford Lacks Relevant Skills or Knowledge.

Finally, courts will not allow expert testimony to be given by those who are not qualified in the relevant field. See, e.g., Johnson v. District of Columbia, 728 A.2d 70, 75 (D.C. 1999) (upholding decision of trial court to exclude purported expert testimony of master plumber on warnings associated with commercial water heaters where relevant work experience was not shown).

It is difficult to say what the relevant skills or knowledge involved in the presentation of Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony would be, given that the proposed testimony appears to involve no more than lawyer-driven cross-examination and the rendering of legal opinions. However, to the extent her criticisms can be construed as critiquing his model as a result of his accounting principles and applications, nothing in Ms. Woodford's resume suggests that she has any experience as an accountant. Instead, she holds a graduate degree in management and has worked as a consultant for accounting firms. Thus, there is no showing that she has any relevant knowledge of accounting to contradict Mr. Ben Ezra's model.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, this Court should enter an Order in limine excluding Mary A. Woodford, W. McKay Henderson, Steve Moore, and Martin Cohen from testifying as expert witnesses in the trial of this case.

RULE 26(b)(4) STATEMENT AS OPPONENT OF A CLAIM

Plaintiff, by and through its attorney Roy Niedermayer, hereby states in accordance with SCR 26(b)(4) that it expects to call the following expert witnesses at the trial of this matter:

1. W. McKay Henderson and Mary Woodford
   1900 K Street, NW Suite 900
   Washington DC, 20006

Mr. Henderson and Ms. Woodford, whose curriculum vitae are attached hereto as Exhibits A and B, are expected to testify with regard to analysis and rebuttal to the calculation of damages as alleged by the experts for Columbia Hospital for Women. While defendant has not provided a report or the detailed substance of calculations for the damages it alleges or the bases for any opinions which he will render, and the deposition of defendant's expert noticed for August 22, 2001 has not yet taken place, and defendant has informed plaintiff that its expert Mr. Peter Ben Ezra has not yet prepared his calculations or analysis, it is anticipated that Mr. Henderson and Ms. Woodford will be assessing the various damage elements that defendants have stated, including loss of revenue, damaged reputation in the community, and the loss of good will. Mr. Henderson and Ms. Woodford are expected to testify that the damages allegedly suffered by defendant are substantially if not wholly the result of factors other than those alleged by defendant. To the extent the damages are found to be related to any tortious activity by plaintiff, Mr. Henderson and Ms. Woodford are further expected to testify that the amount of damages caused by plaintiff's activities is less than as calculated by defendant's experts.

Upon receipt of damage information from defendant, Mr. Henderson and Ms. Woodford can provide the substance and facts to which they are expected to testify. It would be expected that the factual data Mr. Henderson and Ms. Woodford will consider in evaluating alleged damages may include analysis of Columbia's historical records and reports, operating statistics and financial results for the Hospital and specific doctors that were impacted and other relevant market data.

For his expected opinion testimony, Mr. Henderson, a Partner with PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP, and a Certified Public Accountant, will draw upon his professional training, knowledge and experience in the fields of accounting and financial analysis, knowledge of the healthcare field and knowledge of methodologies for the calculation of economic damages. He has been qualified as an expert to testify on economic damages in other courts.

Ms. Woodford, a Director with PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP, with a Masters in Business Administration, will draw upon her professional training, knowledge and experience in the fields of accounting and financial analysis, and knowledge of methodologies for the calculation of economic damages. She has been qualified as an expert to testify on economic damages in other courts.

2. Steve Moore
1900 K Street, NW Suite 900
Washington DC, 20006.

Mr. Moore, whose curriculum vitae is attached hereto as Exhibit C, is expected to testify with regard to analysis and rebuttal of damages as alleged by Columbia Hospital for Women. While defendant has not provided a report or the detail substance or calculations for the tens of millions of dollars in damages it alleges, it is anticipated that Mr. Moore will provide testimony involving a market analysis of the hospital and healthcare market in the District of Columbia Metro area, impact of certain financial and market factors such as admissions, reimbursement levels, demographics, staffing, revenue cycles, etc. on the financial stability of a hospital and the defendant. Mr. Moore is expected to testify that the damages allegedly suffered by defendant are the result of factors other than those alleged by defendant. To the extent the damages are found to be related to any tortious activity by plaintiff, Mr. Moore is further expected to testify that the amount of damages caused by plaintiff's activities is less than as calculated by defendant's experts.

Upon receipt of damage information from the plaintiffs Mr. Moore can provide the substance and facts to which he is expected to testify. It is expected that the factual data Mr. Moore will consider in evaluating alleged damages may include analysis of Columbia's historical records and reports, financial statements, operating statistics and financial results for the Hospital.

For his expected opinion testimony, Mr. Moore, a Partner with PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP, and a Certified Public Accountant, will draw upon his professional training, knowledge and experience in the fields of accounting and financial analysis, knowledge of the healthcare operations, and knowledge of financial and market factors effecting hospitals in the District of Columbia Metro area.

3. Martin Cohen
1900 K Street, NW Suite 900
Washington DC, 20006.

Mr. Cohen, whose curriculum vitae is attached hereto as Exhibit D, is expected to testify with regard to analysis and rebuttal of damages as alleged by Columbia Hospital for Women. While defendant has not provided a report or the detail substance or calculations for the tens of millions of damages it alleges, it is anticipated that Mr. Cohen will provide testimony on the impact from a financial, competitive market, and staffing position that bankruptcy filings have on a hospital and various related issues that arise in negotiations and relationships with physicians. Mr. Cohen is expected to testify that the damages allegedly suffered by defendant are the result of factors other than those alleged by defendant. To the extent the damages are found to be related to any tortious activity by plaintiff, Mr. Cohen is further expected to testify that the amount of damages caused by plaintiff's activities is less than as calculated by defendant's experts.

Upon receipt of damage information from the plaintiffs, Mr. Cohen can provide the substance and facts to which he is expected to testify. It is expected that the factual data Mr. Moore will consider in evaluating alleged damages might include analysis of Columbia's historical financial records and reports, bankruptcy filings, financial statements, and operating statistics.

For his expected opinion testimony, Mr. Cohen, a Partner with PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP, will draw upon his professional training, knowledge and experience in the fields of finance and financial analysis, knowledge of the healthcare operations, and knowledge of the bankruptcy process as related to healthcare entities.

PLAINTIFF NCRIC'S SUPPLEMENTAL RULE 26(B)(4) STATEMENT AS OPPONENT OF A CLAIM

Pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rule 26(b)(4) plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), hereby supplements its prior statement filed August 9, 2001 regarding the following expert witnesses NCRIC expects to call at trial:

1. Mary Woodford
   PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP
   1900 K Street, NW Suite 900
   Washington DC 20006

As stated in NCRIC's prior Rule 26(b)(4) statement, Ms. Woodford will testify with regard to analysis and rebuttal of the calculation of damages presented by defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") through defendant's designated damages witness, Peter Ben Ezra. On January 23, 2001, NCRIC received the damages calculations report by Mr. Ben Ezra, and NCRIC deposed Mr. Ben Ezra regarding his damages calculations on January 24, 2001. Mr. Ben Ezra's opinion relates to Columbia's claim for lost income as a result of alleged conduct by NCRIC as detailed in Columbia's Amended Counterclaim.

Upon review of the materials submitted by Columbia's expert, Ms. Woodford will testify regarding the reasonableness of Mr. Ben Ezra's damages calculations. Specifically, Ms. Woodford will testify that Mr. Ben Ezra's calculations have not been made to a reasonable degree of economic certainty due to his lack of independent inquiry and lack of reasonable and supportable bases for the assumptions underlying his conclusions. Ms. Woodford will testify that due to the significant defects in Mr. Ben Ezra's conclusions, Columbia's damages calculations are baseless and speculative.

Ms. Woodford will base her testimony on a review of the documents Columbia designated and produced as the data relied upon by Mr. Ben Ezra in his calculations and preparation of his report. Ms. Woodford will also analyze available documents produced by Columbia regarding Columbia's historical operating and financial statistics and relevant market data.

Ms. Woodford is a Director with PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP, and has a Masters in Business Administration, as indicated on her curriculum vitae submitted with NCRIC's 26(b)(4) Statement filed August 9, 2001. Ms. Woodford has extensive professional training, knowledge and experience in the fields of accounting and financial analysis, and specific expertise in calculation of economic damages. Ms. Woodford has been qualified to testify as an expert on economic damages in other courts.

NCRIC respectfully reserves the right to supplement this disclosure should a more detailed review of Mr. Ben Ezra's report reveal that additional testimony is required. Finally, the other disclosures contained in NCRIC's initial Rule 26(b)(4) report remain valid.

STATEMENT OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE DOCUMENTS AND CALCULATIONS

Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") submits the following Memorandum in Support of its Motion seeking an order excluding certain documents listed as evidence to be offered at trial by Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"). These documents are inadmissible hearsay created by Columbia's counsel during the course of this litigation and cannot be introduced as substantive evidence of Columbia's claims at trial.

I. BACKGROUND

Throughout this litigation, Columbia has struggled to present any documentary or testimonial evidence to support its claims that NCRIC miscalculated the Retro Premium under the terms of the Retrospective Rating Plan (the "Retro Plan") and that a proper calculation would result in premium returned to Columbia. Without such evidence, Columbia cannot prove that NCRIC breached the Retro Plan or that Columbia is entitled to a specific amount of damages as a result of that alleged breach. The parties have explained the complicated formula set forth in the Retro Plan for calculation of additional or return premium in prior memoranda filed with this Court.[1/] In short, an inquiry into the proper calculations under the Retro Plan involves the presentation of factual evidence regarding what calculations were required by the Retro Plan and its various amendments, the parties' intent regarding the application of amendments, the calculations made by NCRIC, and any counter-calculations by Columbia.

Each time NCRIC has requested factual evidence to support Columbia's allegations of "miscalculations" by NCRIC and the "correct" calculations under the Retro Plan, Columbia has changed its tune. First, Columbia refused to allow its designated witnesses, such as Columbia's then-CEO, Larry Wilson, to testify regarding the alleged miscalculations and proper calculations because Columbia reserved such testimony to its designated expert witnesses. See Wilson Dep. at 139-141; 162-162, Exhibit A. Columbia then withdrew its expert witness designation before any such expert analysis was presented to NCRIC. At this point, Columbia was left without any evidence in the record supporting its allegations against NCRIC and claims of damages.

Columbia finally provided some "evidence" of its alleged miscalculations and counter-calculations under the Retro Plan by submitting a series of spreadsheets accompanied by a declaration from Columbia's lawyer, Joseph Leahy, in support of its motion for summary judgment on the contract claims. As explained in his declaration, Columbia's lawyer created these spreadsheets for the purposes of the summary judgment motion. In addition, Columbia attached another new piece of "evidence" – a lengthy primer entitled "Performing a Proper Reconciliation of the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement" – to its reply brief, without any declaration as to its authorship. NCRIC can only assume that this document was also prepared by Columbia's lawyer during the litigation. Columbia has now designated these same spreadsheets and summary as exhibits to be used at trial. A copy of Columbia's exhibit list is attached as Exhibit B, and copies of the spreadsheets and summary listed as Columbia Trial Exhibits 82 – 85 and 93 are attached as Exhibit C (the "Proposed Exhibits"), and a copy of the Leahy Declaration is attached as Exhibit D. These documents are inadmissible and must be excluded from use at trial as evidence in support of Columbia's contract claims.

II. ARGUMENT

A. The Proposed Exhibits are Statements of Counsel, not Admissible Substantive Evidence

Columbia cannot deny that spreadsheets and summary which are listed by Columbia as substantive evidence were created by counsel during the course of this litigation. The spreadsheets purporting to illustrate the "proper" calculations under the Retro Plan first surfaced as exhibits to Columbia's motion seeking summary judgment on the contract claims. The Declaration of Joseph Leahy submitted with those documents clearly reveals their origin:

> In addition, attached as exhibits to Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment are several spreadsheets created by persons in my office, on behalf of Defendant, for the purpose of this motion.

See Exhibit D ¶ 5.

These documents are not factual evidence created at or near the time of the events in question, nor an expert's analysis to accompany expert testimony at trial. The spreadsheets are merely a lawyer's own creations based on counsel's own analysis, in

Mr. Leahy's own words, "for the purpose of [the summary judgment] motion." As such, the spreadsheets are not admissible evidence for use at trial.

Interestingly – and perhaps tellingly – Columbia's trial exhibit list does not include the declaration of authorship of these materials by Mr. Leahy. See Exhibit B. It is unclear how Columbia will attempt to authenticate these documents and what witness it will put on the stand to explain and attempt to admit these documents. Mr. Leahy has since left the Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans law firm and he is not listed as a potential witness on Columbia's trial witness list. Columbia cannot now state that these spreadsheets were created by another witness, as Mr. Leahy's declaration clearly establishes that counsel's office was the author and creator. There is simply no way for Columbia to authenticate and lay a foundation for admissibility of these documents. In the interest of avoiding such a futile exercise at trial, the spreadsheets listed as Trial Exhibits 82-85 should be excluded at this time.

The authorship of the summary listed as Trial Exhibit 93 is a bit unclear. Columbia cannot dispute that this document was first produced to NCRIC as an exhibit to Columbia's Reply Brief in Support of its Motion for Summary Judgment. This summary purports to walk through, step-by-step, the Retro Plan calculations using the "proper" factors as alleged by Columbia. However, Columbia did not include any declaration attesting to the authorship of this document. Because Columbia has withdrawn its experts previously designated to testify about the Retro Plan calculations, and no other witness has testified to creating such an explanatory document, it can only be assumed that this summary was also the work of Mr. Leahy's office for the purposes of the summary judgment briefing.

As must be clear even to Columbia, Mr. Leahy did not have personal knowledge of the contracting history of the Retro Plan as he was not a participant in the original drafting, negotiations, subsequent amendment process, or any of the discussions regarding the operation of the Retro Plan between Columbia and NCRIC from 1993 to 2000. Mr. Leahy was simply performing an ad hoc analysis in his position as a former counsel for Columbia in this litigation. Any document created by Mr. Leahy is not authentic or admissible as factual substantive evidence. See Northwestern Nat'l Ins., Co. v. Baltes, 15 F.3d 660, 662 (7th Cir. 1994) (rejecting the use of an affidavit from defense counsel as substantive evidence for summary judgment because lawyer did not have personal knowledge and was not competent to testify to the underlying factual matters).

To the extent Columbia resurrects its argument from the summary judgment briefing that these documents created by Mr. Leahy represent an appropriate and logical analysis which are properly admissible because the Retro Plan calculations are purely a question of law, the April 2, 2003 Order denying Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment held that the proper calculations and methodology under the Retro Plan was an issue of fact. See April 2, 2003 Order at 10. Therefore, Columbia must provide authentic and admissible factual evidence to the jury in order to support its allegations that NCRIC miscalculated the Retro Premium and that a "proper" calculation results in damages due to Columbia. Once again, there is no way that Columbia can authenticate this summary document, or lay the foundation for its admission as substantive evidence.

Because the spreadsheet calculations and summary document are creations of Columbia's counsel during the litigation they are not authentic or admissible substantive evidence in support of Columbia's claims. These documents must be excluded from trial.

B. The Proposed Exhibits are Inadmissible Hearsay

Even if Columbia could somehow produce a witness to authenticate these proposed exhibits at trial, these documents are inadmissible hearsay and must be excluded. Although D.C. has not specifically adopted the Federal Rules of Evidence, it is well settled law that the definition of hearsay in the Federal Rules is consistent with D.C. law. Puma v. Sullivan, 746 A.2d 871, 875 (D.C. 2000). Federal Rule 801(c) defines hearsay as follows:

> "Hearsay" is a statement, other than one made by the declarant while testifying at the trial or hearing, offered in evidence to prove the truth of the matter asserted.

Fed. R. Evid. 801 (c).

The proposed exhibits are all documents created outside of court and are statements other then those made by a witness testifying at trial. There is no witness whom NCRIC could even cross-examine at trial about the reliability of the assertions in these documents. Moreover, these spreadsheets and summary serve no other purpose than as evidence to prove the truth of the matter asserted therein. Columbia seeks to introduce these spreadsheets as evidence of the "proper" calculations under the Retro Plan and/or to prove the truth of Columbia's position that NCRIC miscalculated the Retro Plan and that these spreadsheets show the amount of damages allegedly due to Columbia. Columbia will introduce the summary as evidence of the truth of the explained methodology and calculations under the Retro Plan contained within the document. Therefore, the proposed exhibits are all inadmissible hearsay.

As this Court is aware, D.C. Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 43-I(a) does provide an exception to the hearsay rule which allows the admission of certain "business records." See also Allstate Ins. Co. v. Curtis, 781 A.2d 725, 727 (D.C. 2001); Clyburn v. District of Columbia, 741 A.2d 395, 397 (D.C. 1999). However, the proposed exhibits cannot possibly meet this exception. The foundation for business records requires the following:

1. the [documents] were made in the regular course . . . of business;
2. that it was the regular course of [the] business to make such [documents];
3. that the [documents] were made at, or within a reasonable time after, the acts which they reported; . . . and
4. that the author(s) of the [documents] either had personal knowledge of the facts they recited, or else acquired those facts from someone who had . . . such personal knowledge.

Allstate, 781 A.2d at 727.

The proposed Columbia exhibits do not meet any of these requirements. Most importantly, these spreadsheets and summary were created by counsel during litigation, not by Columbia in the regular course of its business. Moreover, these spreadsheets and summary were not created at the time of the Retro Plan, its amendments, or the exchange of reconciliations throughout 1993 to 2000, but later, in 2002 during the litigation of this case. Finally, as discussed above, Mr. Leahy and his colleagues had no personal knowledge of the factual calculations and assertions contained within the proposed exhibits.

As such, the spreadsheets and summary are rank hearsay, they do not meet the business records exception, and they must be excluded from presentation at trial.

C. The Proposed Exhibits are not Relevant and are Unfairly Prejudicial

Finally, the proposed exhibits should be excluded because they are irrelevant and will be unfairly prejudicial to NCRIC if presented to the jury. See Fed. R. Evid. 401 & 403. Because these spreadsheets and summaries were prepared by counsel and reflect nothing more than his litigation position regarding the Retro Plan calculations, they are irrelevant to the actual fact questions to be determined at trial: what was the agreement of the parties with regard to the Retro Plan calculations, how did the parties intend the amendments to the Retro Plan to be applied to future calculations, and what was the scope of the parties' oral agreement regarding payment of Retro Premium. In effect, these documents are merely defense counsel's opinion regarding these questions of fact – not relevant evidence from the time of the events in question or from witnesses who have personal knowledge of the contractual relationship between Columbia and NCRIC from 1993 to 2000.

The submission of such irrelevant evidence to the jury will be unfairly prejudicial to NCRIC. The spreadsheets and summary appear to provide expert-like analysis of the Retro Plan and offer expert-like opinions on the subject. These documents are therefore likely to have great persuasive effect with the members of the jury struggling to understand the complex Retro Plan calculations. However, Columbia chose to withdraw its expert regarding the Retro Plan calculations, and cannot now attempt to benefit from expert-like analysis to prove its case. There is a real danger that the jury will give undue weight to these spreadsheets and summaries as expert analysis in favor of Columbia's position. This risk of prejudice to NCRIC, combined with the little probative value offered by these irrelevant documents, weighs in favor of exclusion of the proposed exhibits.

III. CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the documents numbered as Trial Exhibits 82 – 85 and 93 on Columbia's pretrial exhibit list should be excluded from introduction at trial.

A. State the question again.

Q. Are you able to describe for me the damages that the hospital is claiming under Count One, breach of contract, in its counterclaims?

MR. LEAHY: I'm going to instruct you not to answer to the extent that there's knowledge that is from your attorney or that's expert knowledge. You may answer to the extent that Columbia knows what its damages are.

THE WITNESS: I can give you an example of damages.

BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:

Q. Why don't you do that to start with.

A. Okay. Well, in my opinion we've suffered damages in the tens of millions of dollars to the extent that our reputation has been damaged, we've lost volume, we've lost face in the community, and I could go on just as an example of a few.

Q. Some of those have to do with reputation, they are in later counts. This says breach of contract. I just want to know what damages you claim the hospital claims have been suffered as a result of NCRIC's breach of contract. Can you tell me that?

A. Yes. The part of the reputation that goes back to that dim day in August when our physicians came in one morning to go to work in the clinic and they didn't go as a result of information that some physicians claim they got from NCRIC. It was that morning that I talked with at least Mike Feldman and spoke with Dave Osborne to pass the word on to our physicians that it was in fact okay for them to go to work. That did a heck of a lot of damage to the reputation of Columbia Hospital for Women. It probably did a lot of damage to patient care, a possibility of damages in patient care.

Q. When did that happen?

A. It was on the 31st of August if that was a Friday. Or September 1st, to be more specific. Friday, September 1st.

Q. Which physicians said these things to you?

A. I could tell you physicians that was reported to me that was said, not heard by myself.

Q. Tell me their names.

individual doctor's policy. We only assume part of the risk in exchange for a discount. So to the extent that there are special provisions in a doctor's policy, I don't know.

Q. Do you contend that NCRIC offers insurance programs at other hospitals that it doesn't offer at Columbia Hospital for Women?

A. That's what it appears to me.

Q. Why does it appear that way to you?

A. Because I have not heard of any other hospital with a clinic that excluded, where the physicians were excluded.

Q. Do you contend that NCRIC offers a Retro program at other hospitals but won't offer one to Columbia?

A. Not on the terms and conditions that I wanted or the hospital wanted. I mean you can get anything for a price. In my opinion, the Retro plan as constituted with NCRIC was a bad business deal for the hospital. I think NCRIC agreed to that.

Q. My question was, let me make it more pointed, do you think that NCRIC offers an insurance program at Sibley Hospital that's not available to be implemented at Columbia Hospital?

A. I don't know what the plan is at Sibley.

Q. Do you contend that NCRIC offers an insurance plan at George Washington Hospital that's not available to be implemented to Columbia Hospital for Women?

A. I don't know the specifics of that plan. I have heard that the plans at Sibley and George Washington are subsidized plans.

Q. Isn't it true that the plan that is currently in effect at Columbia Hospital is less expensive than the plan offered by NCRIC?

MR. LEAHY: Object to the form. It assumes a fact not in the record.

MR. NIEDERMAYER: What fact?

MR. LEAHY: That there is a plan in effect.

BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:

Q. Mr. Wilson, is there a plan in effect at Columbia Hospital for Women for physicians?

A. No. We don't have an attending faculty plan.

Q. Do you have insurance coverage for physicians at Columbia Hospital?

A. The hospital does not have coverage for attending faculty.

Q. Does it have a plan whereby it offers a discount to physicians at Columbia Hospital through some plan with an insurance company?

A. It does not offer a discount, not for the plan. We offer a discount for risk management incentives.

Q. Do you know whether the premiums being paid by doctors who practice at Columbia Hospital are the same or less than doctors practicing at Sibley or George Washington Hospital?

Page 162

A. I think the premiums at Columbia are less.

Q. Let's see if we can go back --

A. That's how we made our comparisons and the rates that were quoted by NCRIC were certainly higher than the ones we had at the time.

Q. Let's go back to Count One. Can you describe for me each type of damage that you claim under Count One has been incurred by the hospital?

MR. LEAHY: I'm going to object and instruct you not to answer to the extent that you got knowledge from work product of your attorney, that it's not Columbia's knowledge. If you have information that's Columbia Hospital's, give it.

THE WITNESS: As you know, this has been discussed with attorneys. So maybe I should not answer that.

MR. NIEDERMAYER: This witness has been proffered as being able to answer these questions. Are you telling me he can't answer any of these questions?

MR. LEAHY: He's not our expert. To the extent the party has knowledge, the party can answer. To the extent the knowledge is the party's lawyer's knowledge or the expert witness' knowledge, you'll have to depose those people. To the extent the party has information, go ahead and answer. I'm sure the party has some information. But don't answer about what your lawyer knows.
THE WITNESS: Yeah. We contend there were damages as a result. Damage to reputation, damage to lost opportunities, damage to loss of volume.
BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:
Q. Those aren't breach of contract, but tell me how much is the damages for loss of reputation.
A. We haven't been able to quantify that. Considerable.
Q. Who is going to quantify it?

Page 164

A. Our damage expert.
Q. When will that be done?
MR. LEAHY: You can answer to the extent you know.
THE WITNESS: We're working on it now.
BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:
Q. What's the basis on which he's quantifying it?
A. The best information we have available, whatever that is.
Q. Did you provide any information to that expert?
A. We've provided some information.
Q. What information have you provided?
A. We had discussions about inflammatory remarks that were made that caused damage to the hospital. We are trying to quantify or will quantify the loss of opportunities as a result of physicians not coming to, physicians leaving the clinic that day; damages to the extent that we may have exposure through future lawsuits because of inadequate coverage in the clinic that day, as an example.

Q. What are the inflammatory comments that you referred to in your testimony?
A. Inflammatory remarks like the clinic is an unsafe place to work.
Q. You contend that someone at NCRIC said that?
A. It was reported to me that someone at -- let me see. It was third-hand, but I heard something to that effect. I don't recall exactly.
Q. Who at NCRIC said that?
A. The comment was not made to me directly, I can say that.
Q. Who was it made to?
A. That was anecdotal comments I heard all along.
Q. Are they from the people other than Dr. Cook and Dr. Glassman?

Page 166

A. Not from NCRIC. I can't tell you I heard anyone from NCRIC make that statement.
Q. So if I understand your testimony, you cannot identify any person at NCRIC that made the statement that had been attributed to NCRIC.
A. Not firsthand, no, I cannot.
Q. Do you know of anyone other than Drs. Cook and Glassman who have firsthand knowledge that NCRIC made any inflammatory statements about the hospital?
A. No.
MR. LEAHY: What was that answer?
(Record read by the reporter.)
BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:
Q. Can you tell me what facts you have provided to your experts for their calculation of damages to the reputation of the hospital?
A. We provided facts to substantiate that our foundation board did in fact cancel a gala that we had planned; provided the fact to

Performing a Proper Reconciliation of the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ["Retro Plan"] (Example: September 1, 2000 Reconciliation)

I. Calculate the Retrospective Rating Premium ("Retro Premium") for each Experience Period by using the Retrospective Rating Premium Formula ("Retro Formula"). See Addendum B to Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. A at 5, ¶ 3 ("Addendum B") (Exh. 5 to Statement of Material Facts Not In Dispute ("SMF")).

II. Limit the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by applying the Minimum Premium or Maximum Premium, if applicable. See id.

III. Calculate the Additional Premium or Return Premium due for each Experience Period by subtracting the Retro Premium (as limited by any applicable minimum or maximum) from the Deposit Premium for each Experience Period. See id. ¶ 6.

IV. Calculate the total Additional Premium or Return Premium for all Experience Periods that are properly subject to Reconciliation. See id. ¶ 6.

V. Apply a credit for Columbia's deposit and/or for NCRIC's payment to obtain the current total premium due. See NCRIC's Statement of Material Facts ¶ 68 ("NCRIC SMF").

I. Calculate the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by using the Retro Formula:

Retro Premium = { [(Loss Reserves x Development Factor) + Paid Losses] x Discount Factor } + Basic Premium. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 5, ¶ 3.

A. Calculate: (Loss Reserves x Development Factor) = "Developed Losses"

1. Obtain NCRIC's Loss Reserves from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

Here, NCRIC's September 1, 2000 Reconciliation is used as an example.[1] See Spreadsheet Entitled "Columbia Hospital for Women Retro-Program Years: Sept. 01, 1993 – August 31, 2000" (Sept. 6, 2000) (Exh. 2 to Defendant's Reply in Support of Motion for Summary Judgment ("Reply")) ("Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation").

NCRIC's Loss Reserves appear in Row 7 (entitled "Total Reserves") of its reconciliation spreadsheets. See Answers of Plaintiff to Interrogatories of Defendant, Interrogatory Response No. 3 (Exh. 21 to SMF) ("Interrogatory Response No.") (explaining that Row 7 is the sum of indemnity and expense reserves – i.e., Loss Reserves as defined in the Plan).

As of September 1, 2000, NCRIC listed its Loss Reserves as:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$0	$0	$1,185,000
$1,352,000	$1,040,000	$3,565,000

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (listing Loss Reserves for 1994-95 through 1998-99 Experience Periods); Spreadsheet Entitled "Columbia Hospital for Women Retro-Program Years 9/1/1993 – 8/31/1999" (Oct. 11, 1999) (Exh. 8 to SMF) ("September 1, 1999 Reconciliation") (listing Loss Reserves for 1993-94 Experience Period).[2]

[1] This step-by-step Reconciliation also is summarized in spreadsheet form. See Spreadsheet Entitled "Se[pt]ember 1, 2000 Reconciliation – NCRIC's Calculations With All Three Changes" (Exh. 14 to SMF) ("Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation") (summary exhibit performing Reconciliation using dollar values used by NCRIC, except applying proper Deposit Premium factor, Minimum Premium factor and Development factors).

[2] NCRIC does not list its calculations for the 1993-94 Experience Period on the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation spreadsheet. Instead, those calculations appear on the September 1, 1999 Reconciliation spreadsheet. Because all claims for the 1993-94 period are closed, that year is "closed," and the totals for that period do not change from year to year. See Deposition of Stephen S. Fargis, Tr. at 305 ("Fargis Dep.") (Exh. 4 hereto) (explaining that dollar amounts do not change after a year is "closed"). As such, all dollar values for the 1993-94 Experience Period were the same on September 1, 2000, as they were on September 1, 1999.

2. Obtain the proper Development Factors from the Retro Plan, as amended.

The Development Factors used by NCRIC appear in Row 12 (entitled "Development Factor") of its reconciliation spreadsheets.[3] See Responses to Defendant's Requests for Admissions, Response Nos. 52-61 ("RFA Response No.") (Exh. 22 to SMF). However, NCRIC applied those Development Factors incorrectly. See Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment at 8, 15-17 ("Columbia SJ Mem.").

For the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, the proper Development Factors, set by the Retro Plan were:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
105%	105%	105%
80%	65%	55%

See id. (explaining proper application of Development Factors); see also id. at 6-8 (explaining Development Factors); Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. E at 1-2 (Exh. 1 to SMF) ("Retro Plan") (example of proper application of Development Factors); SMF ¶¶ 46-47 (discussing Exh. E to Retro Plan); Addendum B-1999 to Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. A.1., at 1 (Exh. 6 to SMF) ("Addendum B-1999") (definition of Development Factors); Addendum B, Exh. A at 5, ¶ 7 (same); compare Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (listing proper Development Factors).

3. For each Experience Period, multiply the applicable Loss Reserve, see supra, I.A.1, by the proper Development Factor, see supra, I.A.2, to obtain the Developed Losses.[4]

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$0 x 105% = $0	$0 x 105% = $0	$1,185,000 x 105% = $1,244,250
$1,352,000 x 80% = $1,081,600	$1,040,000 x 65% = $676,000	$3,565,000 x 55% = $1,960,750

[3] For the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC used the following Development Factors: 105% for the 1993-94 through the 1996-97 Experience Periods, 80% for the 1997-98 Experience Period, and 65% for the 1998-99 Experience Period.

[4] All amounts used throughout this example are rounded to the nearest whole dollar amount.

16d-001803

B. Calculate: [Developed Losses + Paid Losses] = "Total Losses"

1. Obtain NCRIC's Paid Losses from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

NCRIC's Paid Losses appear in Row 10 (entitled "Total Paid") of its reconciliation spreadsheets. See Interrogatory Response No. 4 (explaining that Row 10 is total of indemnity and expense payments – i.e., Paid Losses as defined by the Plan). As of September 1, 2000, NCRIC listed its Paid Losses as:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$960,368	$1,716,454	$1,052,447
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$1,785,648	$648,723	$581,307

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (1994-95 through 1998-99 Experience Periods); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (1993-94 Experience Period).

2. Add the Developed Losses, see supra, I.A.3, to the Paid Losses, see supra, I.B.1, to obtain the Total Losses.

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$0 + $960,368 = $960,368	$0 + $1,716,454 = $1,716,454	$1,244,250+ $1,052,447 = $2,296,697
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$1,081,600 + $1,785,648 = $2,867,248	$676,000+ $648,723 = $1,324,723	$1,960,750 + $581,307 = $2,542,057

16d-001804

C. Calculate: { [Total Losses] x Discount Factor } = "Discounted Total Losses"

1. Obtain the Discount Factor from the Retro Plan.

The Discount Factor is the same for every Experience Period – 86.33%. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (definition of Discount Factor). The Discount Factor does not appear on NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets.

2. Multiply the Discount Factor, see I.C.1, supra, by the Total Losses, see I.B.2, supra, to obtain the Discounted Total Losses.

As of September 1, 2000, the Discounted Total Losses were:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$960,368 x 86.33% = $829,086	$1,716,454 x 86.33% = $1,481,815	$2,296,697 x 86.33% = $1,982,739
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$2,867,248 x 86.33% = $2,475,295	$1,324,723 x 86.33% = $1,143,633	$2,542,057 x 86.33% = $2,194,558

16d-001805

D. Calculate: Discounted Total Losses + Basic Premium = Retro Premium

1. Obtain the Basic Premium for each Experience Period from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Basic Premium is calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium for each Experience Period by the Basic Premium factor. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (definition of Basic Premium listing multiplier known as the "Basic Premium Factor").[5] However, because Columbia does not dispute NCRIC's Basic Premium calculations,[6] the Basic Premium may be taken directly from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Basic Premium for each Experience Period appears in Row 4 (entitled "Basic") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets. See Interrogatory Response No. 2; RFA Response Nos. 38-51.

As of September 1, 2000, the Basic Premium for each Experience Period was:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$465,631	$479,083	$553,728
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$588,609	$562,555	$607,868

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (1994-95 through 1998-99 Experience Periods); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (1993-94 Experience Period).

[5] To calculate the Basic Premium: First, the Basic Premium factor is 16.84% for every Experience Period. See RFA Response Nos. 37, 40, 43, 46, 49 (Basic Premium factor is calculated by adding the administrative expense charge of $14.04% to the insurance charge factor of 2.8%); see also Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7. The Basic Premium factor appears in Row 3 (entitled "Basic Premium Ch.") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets. See RFA Response Nos. 37-51. Second, the Subject Premium calculated by NCRIC for each Experience Period appears in Row 1 (entitled "Subject (1st 500 Layer)") of its reconciliation spreadsheets, see RFA Response Nos. 4-13; Interrogatory Response No. 2 (explaining purported Subject Premium calculations). Third, the Basic Premium factor and the Subject Premium are multiplied together to obtain the Basic Premium. See RFA Response Nos. 37-51; see also Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (definition of Basic Premium); Interrogatory Response No. 2. (explaining Basic Premium calculations).

[6] Columbia assumes (but does not admit), for the purposes of its motion, that NCRIC's Subject Premium calculations are correct. See SMF ¶ 21.

16d-001806

2. Add the Discounted Total Losses, see I.C.2, supra, to the Basic Premium, see I.D.1, supra, to obtain the Retro Premium.

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$829,086 + $465,631 = $1,294,717	$1,481,815 + $479,083 = $1,960,898	$1,982,739 + $553,728 = $2,536,467
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$ 2,475,295 + $588,609 = $3,063,904	$1,143,633 + $562,555 = $1,706,188	$2,194,558 + $607,868 = $2,802,426

* * *

Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the proper Retro Premium for each Experience Period was:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$1,294,717	$1,960,898	$2,536,467
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$3,063,904	$1,706,188	$2,802,426

Compare Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (same Retro Premiums, with minor differences due to rounding).[7]

16d-001807

[7] The Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation lists the Retro Premium for each Experience Period twice. For the 1993-94 Experience Period, the upper Retro Premium listed is correct; the lower listing is a typographical error. (It is actually the Minimum Premium.) This error has no effect on the overall calculations.

II. Limit the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by applying the Minimum Premium or Maximum Premium, if applicable.

A. Calculate Minimum Premium for each Experience Period.

1. Obtain the Minimum Premium for some Experience Periods from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Minimum Premium for each Experience Period is calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium for each Experience Period by the Minimum Premium factor for that Experience Period. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (definition of Minimum Premium listing multiplier known as the "Minimum Premium factor"). Because Columbia does not dispute NCRIC's Minimum Premium calculations for the 1995-96 Experience Period through the 1998-99 Experience Period,[8] the Minimum Premium for those periods may be taken from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Minimum Premium for each Experience Period appears in Row 18 (entitled "Min. Premium") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets. See RFA Response Nos. 102-03, 106-07, 110-11, 114-15, 118-19.

As of September 1, 2000, the Minimum Premiums for Experience Periods 1995-96 through 1998-99 were:

1995-96 Experience Period
$1,972,902
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$2,097,183	$2,004,354	$2,165,800

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation.

16d-001808

[8] But see supra, n.6.

2. Calculate the proper Minimum Premium for other Experience Periods.

a. Obtain the proper Minimum Premium factor for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods from the Retro Plan, as amended.

The proper Minimum Premium factor for the 1993-94 Experience Period and the 1994-95 Experience Period is the same as for every other Experience Period – 60%. See Columbia SJ Mem. at 8, 13-14 (explaining proper application of Minimum Premium factor); see also Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (definition of Minimum Premium); Addendum to Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (Exh. 4 to SMF) ("Addendum") (same).[9]

b. Obtain the Subject Premium for the 1993-94 Experience Period and the 1994-95 Experience Period from NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Subject Premium NCRIC calculates for each Experience Period appears in Row 1 (entitled "Subject (1st 500 Layer)") of its reconciliation spreadsheets. See RFA Response Nos. 4-13; Interrogatory Response No. 2.

As of September 1, 2000, NCRIC calculated the Subject Premiums for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods as:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period
$2,765,029	$2,844,913

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (1994-95 Experience Period); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (1993-94 Experience Period).

c. Multiply the Subject Premium, see II.A.2.b, supra, by the Minimum Premium factor, see II.A.2.a, supra, to obtain the Minimum Premium.

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period
$2,765,029 x 60% = $1,659,017	$2,844,913 x 60% = $1,706,948

16d-001809

[9] The text in the Addendum is a typographical error, which NCRIC fixed in Addendum B. See Fargis Dep. at 453.

3. Substitute the Minimum Premium for the Retro Premium for any year where the latter falls below the former. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (Minimum Premium is the minimum Retro Premium).

As of September 1, 2000, the Retro Premium fell below the Minimum Premium for the 1993-94 and 1997-98 Experience Periods. Compare supra, I.D.2 with supra, II.A.1 & II.A.2.c.

* * *

Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the proper Retro Premium (as limited by the proper Minimum Premium) for each Experience Period was:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$1,659,017	$1,960,898	$2,536,467
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$3,063,904	$2,004,354	$2,802,426

B. Calculate the Maximum Premium for each Experience Period (not necessary for this Reconciliation).

The Maximum Premium for each Experience Period is calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium for each Experience Period by the Maximum Premium factor for that Experience Period.[10] See Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (definition of Maximum Premium listing multiplier known as the "Maximum Premium factor"). However, neither party disputes that, as of September 1, 2000, no Retro Premium for any Experience Period exceeded the Maximum Premium.[11] See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation. Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the Maximum Premiums did not impact the calculation of any amount of Additional Premium or Return Premium.

[10] To calculate the Maximum Premiums: First, the proper Maximum Premium factor for every Experience Period is 133%, see Addendum B, Exh. A at 7, ¶ 7 (definition); SMF ¶ 33. Second, NCRIC's Subject Premium for each Experience Period appears in Row 1 of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheet. See supra, p. 9; Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation. Third, these two values for each Experience Period must be multiplied together to obtain the Maximum Premium for each Experience Period.

[11] The Maximum Premium employed by NCRIC for each Experience Period appears in Row 17 (entitled "Max. Premium") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets, see RFA Response Nos. 104-05, 108-09, 112-13, 116-17, 120-21, and the Maximum Premium factor employed by NCRIC appears in Row 19 (entitled "Max Factor") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheet, see RFA Response Nos. 84-85, 88-89, 92-93, 96-97, 100-01.

16d-001810

III. Calculate the Additional Premium or Return Premium due for each Experience Period by subtracting the Retro Premium (as limited by any applicable minimum or maximum) from the Deposit Premium for each Experience Period.

A. Calculate the proper Deposit Premium.

1. Obtain the proper Deposit Premium for some Experience Periods from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Deposit Premium for each Experience Period is calculated by multiplying the Subject Premium for each Experience Period by the Deposit Premium factor for that Experience Period. See RFA Response Nos. 14-17, 24-27 (NCRIC's Deposit Premium calculations for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods). However, because Columbia does not dispute NCRIC's Deposit Premium calculations for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods,[12] the Deposit Premium for those periods may be taken from the applicable reconciliation spreadsheet.

The Deposit Premium appears in Row 2 (entitled "Deposit") of NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheets. See RFA Response Nos. 14-26.

As of September 1, 2000, the correct Deposit Premiums for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods are:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period
$2,246,587	$2,311,491

See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (1994-95 Experience Period); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (1993-94 Experience Period).

16d-001811

[12] But see supra, n.6.

2. Multiply the Subject Premium by the Deposit Premium factor for other Experience Periods to Determine Deposit Premium.

a. Obtain the Subject Premium for the 1995-96 Experience Period through the 1998-99 Experience Period from NCRIC's reconciliation spreadsheet.

As of September 1, 2000, NCRIC lists the Subject Premium, see supra, p. II.A.2.b., as:

1995-96 Experience Period
$3,288,170

1996-97 Experience Period
$3,495,306

1997-98 Experience Period
$3,340,590

1998-99 Experience Period
$3,609,667

b. Obtain the Deposit Premium factor for the 1995-96 Experience Period through the 1998-99 Experience Period.

NCRIC uses a Deposit Premium factor of about 62% for the 1995-96 through 1998-99 Experience Periods. See RFA Response Nos. 18-23, 28-36. However, the proper Deposit Premium factor for those Experience Periods is 67%. See Columbia SJ Mem. at 8, 14-15 (explaining proper Deposit premium factor); see also Addendum B, Exh. A at 6, ¶ 7 (definition of Deposit Premium listing multiplier known as the "Deposit Premium factor").

c. Multiply the Subject Premium, see supra, III.A.2.a, by the Deposit Premium factor, see supra, III.A.2.b, to determine the Deposit Premium.

1995-96 Experience Period
$3,288,170 x 67% = $2,203,074

1996-97 Experience Period
$3,495,306 x 67% = $2,341,855

1997-98 Experience Period
3,340,590 x 67% x = $2,238,195

1998-99 Experience Period
$3,609,667 x 67% = $2,418,476

16d-001812

B. Calculate the proper Additional Premium or Return Premium for each Experience Period.

1. Subtract the Retro Premium (as limited by the minimum) for each Experience Period from the Deposit Premium for that period.[13]

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
$2,246,587 - $1,659,017 = $587,570	$2,311,491 - $1,960,898 = $350,593	$2,203,074 - $2,536,467= ($333,393)
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
$2,341,855 - $3,063,904 = ($722,049)	$2,238,195 - $2,004,354 = $233,841	$2,418,476 - $2,802,426 = ($383,950)

2. A positive balance for an Experience Period means that Return Premium is due for that period, whereas a negative balance means that Additional Premium is due for that period.[14]

* * *

Therefore, for the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, the proper Additional Premium or Return Premium for each Experience Period was:

1993-94 Experience Period	1994-95 Experience Period	1995-96 Experience Period
Return Premium $587,570	Return Premium $350,593	Additional Premium $333,393
1996-97 Experience Period	1997-98 Experience Period	1998-99 Experience Period
Additional Premium $722,049	Return Premium $233,841	Additional Premium $383,950

[13] NCRIC subtracts the Deposit Premium from the Retro Premium. The difference in sign has no effect on the overall premium calculations.

[14] Because NCRIC subtracts backwards, see supra, n.13, on its reconciliation spreadsheets, the opposite is true: a negative balance means that Return Premium is due and a positive balance means that Additional Premium is due, see SMF ¶¶ 36, 37.

16d-001813

IV. Calculate the total Additional Premium or Return Premium for all Experience Periods that are properly subject to Reconciliation.

A. Under the Plan as modified by the parties' oral agreement, calculate the Additional Premium and/or Return Premium is due only for "closed" Experience Periods. See NCRIC SMF ¶ 10; Columbia SJ Mem. at 9, 10-11.

1. Determine which Experience Periods are "closed."

Closed Experience Periods are those for which there are no outstanding claims – and therefore, no Loss Reserves. See Fargis Dep. at 648-49.

As of September 1, 2000, only the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods had no Loss Reserves, and therefore, were closed. See Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (showing no Loss Reserves for 1994-95 Experience Period); September 1, 1999 Reconciliation (showing no Loss Reserves for 1993-94 Experience Period).

2. Obtain the total Additional Premium or Return Premium, see supra, III.B.2., for each closed Experience Period, see supra, IV.A.1. Add these amounts to obtain the total Additional or Return Premium.

1993-94 Experience Period		1994-95 Experience Period		Total Return Premium
$587,570	+	$350,593	=	$938,163

Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the proper total Return Premium due under the parties' oral agreement was $ 938,163.

16d-001814

B. Absent the oral agreement, calculate the cumulative Additional Premium or Return Premium for all Experience Periods that are properly subject to Reconciliation.

1. Determine what Experience Periods are subject to Reconciliation.

As of September 1, 2000, all Experience Periods prior to the 1999-2000 Experience Period were properly subject to reconciliation. See Addendum B, Exh. A at 5, ¶ 5 (Reconciliation date for experience periods; 1998-99 Experience Period is first subject to reconciliation on September 1, 2000); Addendum B-1999, Exh. A.1., at 1 (1999-2000 Experience Period is first subject to reconciliation on September 1, 2001).

2. Obtain the sum of the Additional Premium and/or Return Premium, see supra, III.B.2, for each Experience Period that is properly subject to Reconciliation, see supra, IV.B.1, to obtain the cumulative Additional Premium.

1993-94 Experience Period		1994-95 Experience Period		1995-96 Experience Period
$587,570	+	$350,593	+	($333,393)
1996-97 Experience Period		1997-98 Experience Period		1998-99 Experience Period
($722,049)	+	$233,841	+	($383,950)
	=	Cumulative Additional Premium
		($ 267,388)

* * *

Therefore, as of September 1, 2000, the proper cumulative Additional Premium, absent the oral agreement, was $ 267,388.

16d-001815

V. Apply a credit for Columbia's deposit and/or for NCRIC's payment, to obtain the current total premium due.

A. Under the oral agreement, credit NCRIC for the amount it already paid to Columbia.

NCRIC paid Columbia $172,815 for 1993-94 Experience Period. See NCRIC SMF ¶ 46; SMF ¶ 71. This credit must be subtracted from the total Return Premium, see supra, IV.A.2, to determine the current total due.

Return Premium		NCRIC Credit		Current Total Premium Due

Therefore, for the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, under the parties oral agreement, the proper current total Return Premium is $765,348.[15] Compare Columbia SJ Mem. at 12.

B. Absent the oral agreement, both NCRIC's payment and Columbia's deposit must be credited.

NCRIC admits that Columbia's deposit must be credited towards any cumulative total due under the Retro Plan. See NCRIC SMF ¶ 68; accord Line-numbered September 1, 2000 Reconciliation (applying $1,000,000 credit to Columbia).

Therefore, for the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation, absent the oral agreement, the proper current total Return Premium due is approximately $ 559,797.[16] Compare Revised September 1, 2000 Reconciliation; (showing amount due of $559,798, due to different rounding); Columbia SJ Mem. at 17.

---

[15] The amount does not include any interest that Columbia is owed for the $1 million deposit, about which there is a dispute of material fact. See Statement of Material Facts in Dispute ¶¶ 36, 68.

[16] See supra, n.15.

DECLARATION OF JOSEPH K. LEAHY IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

JOSEPH K. LEAHY, an attorney admitted to practice before this Court, affirms the following under penalty of perjury:

1. I am an associate with the firm of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., which is counsel for Defendant in the above-captioned case. I submit this declaration in support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment.

September 1, 2001 Reconciliation

2. In January, at the deposition of Stephen Fargis, I learned that NCRIC, Inc. had not provided Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center ("Columbia") with a September 1, 2001 Reconciliation of the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Retro Plan"). Mr. Fargis testified that a September 5, 2001 spreadsheet it had provided to Columbia was, in all likelihood, not the Reconciliation.

3. I followed up with Columbia after that, in an attempt to locate the Reconciliation. The client was unable to locate any Reconciliation it received during the relevant time, except the September 5, 2001 document, which Mr. Fargis testified probably was not the Reconciliation.

4. In addition, I repeatedly contacted opposing counsel to determine whether we had received the Reconciliation, but to no avail. For example, I called counsel on January 31, 2002, and sent at least one follow-up email during this week, in an attempt to find out the status of the Reconciliation. I never heard back from opposing counsel about the matter, even though I had asked counsel to get back to me on an expedited basis – even if the answer was that the spreadsheet did not exist or had been produced. Due to my inability to obtain the Reconciliation from opposing counsel, I must assume that it does not exist.

Reconciliation Spreadsheets

5. In addition, attached as exhibits to Defendant's Motion for Summary are several spreadsheets that were created by my office, on behalf of Defendant, for the purpose of this motion. To the best of my knowledge, these spreadsheets are exactly what they purport to be: reproductions of NCRIC's Reconciliations, but with one or more multipliers changed.

6. I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE OF CERTAIN COUNTERCLAIM DAMAGES

Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") moves to exclude from trial in this matter any evidence defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") may seek to introduce regarding the following categories of its counterclaim damages: (1) alleged reputational harm to Columbia; (2) alleged loss of financing and partnership opportunities; (3) alleged loss of revenue associated with fundraising activities; and (4) the expenses associated with the bankruptcy. As described in the accompanying Memorandum of Points and Authorities, Columbia's expert set forth no opinion regarding the categories of alleged damages; Columbia has not provided other evidence concerning these amounts; and lay testimony on these damages is not appropriate and should be precluded.

Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rule 12-I(e), a Proposed Order and Statement of Points and Authorities in Support of this Motion are also attached.

STATEMENT OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE OF CERTAIN COUNTERCLAIM DAMAGES

I. Introduction

In Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center Inc.'s ("Columbia") Rule 26(b)(4) statement, Columbia affirmed that Peter Ben Ezra would testify with regard to the calculation of damages proximately caused by Plaintiff NCRIC's torts, including:

> (1) the economic effects, such as lost revenue from decreased patient volume, of certain practice groups from Columbia to competing hospitals, and any reputational harms stemming from related events; (2) the lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fundraising activities and events; and (3) the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been available to Columbia.

See Defendant's Rule 26(b)(4) Statement as a Proponent of a Claim at Ex. A. On January 22, 2002, one day before his deposition and less than one week before discovery closed, Mr. Ben Ezra submitted a single report in this case which focuses solely on a purported lost revenue stream resulting from a decrease in patient admissions alleged to have resulted because of NCRIC's conduct.[1/] Mr. Ben Ezra provided no opinions with respect to the other bases for damages as stated in Columbia's Rule 26(b)(4) statement (hereinafter, "Other Damages"). Columbia objected to providing other witnesses to testify as to these factual matters and failed to produce or identify documentary evidence in support of these claims. As such, in the event this Court permits Mr. Ben Ezra to testify at all,[2/] Columbia should be precluded from offering any evidence beyond the scope of the opinions expressed in his report.

Additionally, if it is Columbia's intent to introduce evidence of Other Damages based on the testimony of lay witnesses associated with Columbia, this effort should be rejected. Opinions regarding the complex economic and financial aspects underlying these categories of damages issues require, as a matter of law, a qualified expert and simply cannot be provided by lay testimony. Significantly, Columbia has failed to establish the factual predicate regarding the Other Damages, and the record to date strongly suggests that any lay testimony would be wholly speculative and would violate the principles of Fed. R. Evid. 403 adopted by this Court. See Johnson v. United States, 683 A.2d 1087, 1099 (D.C. 1996) ("regarding the admission of evidence generally, this jurisdiction will follow the policy set forth in Federal Rule of Evidence 403 –'evidence [otherwise relevant] may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice . . . .'").

[1/] Columbia also later submitted a revised declaration from Mr. Ben Ezra in its Opposition to NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment. That declaration also focuses solely on alleged decreased patient admissions.

[2/] NCRIC has separately moved to exclude the opinions of Mr. Ben Ezra in their entirety because they are not based on principles and methodology reasonably relied upon by experts in the field. See Motion to Exclude the Testimony and Opinions of Peter Ben Ezra dated June 5, 2003.

Finally, less than one month ago and long after the close of discovery, in its Supplemental Responses to NCRIC Interrogatories compelled by this Court, Columbia appears to have set forth yet another potential claim for damages of $1.5 million in expenses incurred in connection with its bankruptcy in 1998. Because Columbia has never before identified these damages in connection with the underlying suit and because there is not a shred of evidence connecting NCRIC's alleged unlawful conduct to these expenses, Columbia should not be permitted to introduce any evidence regarding the $1.5 million in expenses it allegedly incurred as a result of NCRIC's conduct.

For the reasons discussed below, the Court should preclude Columbia from introducing evidence or seeking damages regarding alleged reputational harm, loss of financing and partnership opportunities, the loss of revenue associated with fundraising activities, and the expenses associated with the bankruptcy.

II. Argument

A. Mr. Ben Ezra Cannot Testify Beyond the Scope of his Report

Columbia must concede that Mr. Ben Ezra did not inquire into or express any opinion beyond the "estimated total lost cashflow to the Columbia Hospital for Women as a result of the NCRIC group of doctors leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women." See generally Ben Ezra Report dated January 22, 2002 attached as Ex. B. Mr. Ben Ezra confirmed this during his deposition.

> Q: I would like to ask you just a couple questions about what you were designated to do in this case. Does your expert report contain any information with respect to any loss of goodwill suffered by Columbia Hospital?
>
> A. Negative. It does not.

Q. Does your report contain any calculations for damages related to the reputation of Columbia in the community?

A. No, it does not.

Q. Does your report contain any information or calculations concerning the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been made available to Columbia?

A. No, it does not.

Q. Does your report contain any information concerning the lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fund raising activities?

A. No, it does not.

See Ben Ezra Dep. at 10-11, Ex. C. Mr. Ben Ezra testified that he was not requested to express an expert opinion on these issues, but, if so requested, he would do so. Id. at 12. However, he has never amended or supplemented his report to express any opinion on Other Damages.

Mr. Ben Ezra cannot be permitted to testify at trial regarding the Other Damages identified in Columbia's Rule 26(b)(4) statement but not included in his report. "An obvious purpose of Rule 26(b)(4) is to allow meaningful deposition of expert witnesses concerning their opinions." District of Columbia v. Kora & Williams Corp., 743 A.2d 682, 689 (D.C. 1999); see Mizrahi v. Schwarzmann, 741 A.2d 399, 404 (D.C. 1999). While Columbia disclosed that Mr. Ben Ezra would testify as to multiple subject matters, Mr. Ben Ezra in fact expressed no such opinion regarding the Other Damages. Accordingly, NCRIC was not able to inquire into any such opinions during Mr. Ben Ezra's deposition. It would be fundamentally unfair and prejudicial in these circumstances, to the extent Mr. Ben Ezra is permitted to testify at trial, to allow him to express any opinion regarding alleged reputational harms to Columbia, lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fundraising activities and events, and the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been available to Columbia.

B. An Expert is Required to Testify Regarding the Other Damages

NCRIC anticipates that Columbia will assert that it can present evidence of Other Damages through the testimony of certain lay witnesses. This Court must not permit Columbia to do so. "The jury may evaluate the facts without expert assistance only if the ultimate issue is 'within the realm of common knowledge and everyday experience.'" District of Columbia v. Freeman, 447 A.2d 713, 718 (D.C. 1984) (quoting Matthews v. District of Columbia, 387 A.2d 731, 734-35 (D.C.1978)). "Expert testimony must be presented at trial when the matter to be determined is 'so distinctly related to some science, profession, business or occupation as to be beyond the ken of the average layman.'" District of Columbia v. Freeman, 477 A.2d 713, 719 (D.C. 1984) (citations omitted).

The categories of Other Damages cannot be characterized as those within the "common knowledge and everyday experience" of the jury.[3/] As one of Columbia's 30(b)(6) designated witness aptly stated with respect to reputational harm: "it would be difficult for me to calculate [the damage to the reputation of the hospital] without having the methodology, an econometric model to follow." See Deposition of Larry Wilson at 334, Ex. D; see also Designers of Georgetown, Inc. v. E.C. Keys & Son, 436 A.2d 1280

[3/] Columbia itself implicitly recognized that an expert is required to testify regarding Other Damages when it designated Mr. Ben Ezra to testify regarding these categories of damages.

(D.C. 1981) (affirming trial court's exclusion of testimony regarding harm to reputation because witness was not an expert).

With respect to Columbia's claim for a "loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities," Columbia has not identified any specific lost "partnership opportunity" or any associated (and for that matter, quantifiable) loss. Indeed, in its most recent responses to NCRIC's Supplemental Interrogatories, nowhere does Columbia mention that it seeks damages related to lost partnership opportunities. See Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's Supplemental Interrogatories, Nos. 5-14, Ex. E. Accordingly, NCRIC understands that Columbia has abandoned any such claim for damages.

The only identified loss of "financing" Columbia has asserted relates to Columbia's alleged inability to obtain a HUD loan. See Defendant's Objections and Responses to Supplemental Interrogatories, Nos. 8 & 9, Ex. E. In response to NCRIC's interrogatory requesting Columbia to identify the amount of damages it allegedly suffered, Columbia states:

> Columbia was eligible for a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan . . . . But after the Attending Faculty left in Summer/Fall 2000, Columbia's volume and revenues dropped sharply. As a result, HUD advised Columbia that it no longer qualified for the loan. Denial of this loan meant losing the opportunity to reduce the hospital's cost of capital from 10.5% to 4.5% per month.

Id. Apart from the fact that Columbia has not introduced any credible evidence that the inability to obtain the HUD loan was, in any way, related to NCRIC's alleged conduct,[4/] it is self-evident that any related damage calculations would require an expert, with [4/] It is axiomatic that Columbia cannot recover for damages not reasonably foreseeable. See, e.g., District of Columbia v. Doe, 524 A.2d 30, 35 n.6 (D.C. 1987) (approving jury instruction noting, in pertinent part, '[m]oreover, it must be shown that the injury or damage was either a direct result or a reasonably probable consequence of the act or omission.'") (citation omitted).

financial expertise, to perform some type of damages model and calculation regarding the alleged "[loss] of capital from 10.5% to 4.5% per month." In the absence of any expert testimony, the jury would simply be left to impermissibly speculate the alleged damages related to the HUD loan. See Jiminez v. Hawk, 683 A.2d 457, 461-62 (D.C. 1996) ("[A] jury should never be permitted to guess as to a material element of the case such as damages, negligence, or causation.").

Finally, an expert would also be required to testify regarding Columbia's allegation that, because of NCRIC, it has suffered the loss of "more than $1.5 million in contributions" because of "the lost opportunity to hold a gala." See Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 8 & 9, attached as Ex. E. An expert would be required to evaluate the history of fundraising at Columbia, the success and failure of fundraising at comparable institutions in a relevant geographic area, and the state of the economy leading up to and at the time of the event. As discussed below, the only evidence Columbia has set forth regarding this category of alleged damages is a single statement by Columbia's witness, Dr. Safa Rifka, that the prior year's event raised $1.5 million. See Deposition of Dr. Rifka dated June 21, 2001 at 79, Ex. F. And, in any event, Columbia failed to provide documentary evidence of other counterclaim damages.

C. Evidence Regarding Other Damages Should be Excluded as Speculative

Even if the Court deems lay testimony proper regarding the Other Damages, Columbia will not be able to put forth anything but raw speculation and conjecture regarding the amount of those alleged damages. Columbia designated Larry Wilson, in part, to testify concerning damages and his testimony, as described below, revealed no substantive evidence on these points.

For example, with respect to any alleged loss of a partnership opportunity, Mr. Wilson specifically testified that he was unaware of any specific partnership opportunities that Columbia lost as a result of any acts by NCRIC.

> Q. Were there any partnership opportunities the hospital lost as a result of the actions of NCRIC?
>
> A. Possibly.
>
> * * *
>
> Q. Did you have any discussions with any other business, hospital, entity about forming a partnership?
>
> A. In 1998, you say?
>
> Q. From 1998 through the present.
>
> A. We've had several discussions with the possibility of affiliation and partnerships, yes.
>
>
> Q. I want to know the partnership opportunities that you sought out that you lost because of something that NCRIC did or something you claim NCRIC did.
>
> A. Oh, I'm saying something NCRIC could have done. I mean this whole lawsuit, the whole insurance suit could have something to do with it. I'm not saying, I didn't make the allegation that it definitely did. You asked me the question is it possible. And I answered that yes, it is possible it could have negatively impacted Columbia Hospital for Women.
>
> Q. Is there a specific opportunity that Columbia was pursuing that it lost from 1998 to the present?
>
> A. I'm saying, again, it could have lost.
>
> Q. So there is nothing specific that there was.
>
> A. Right.

See Larry Wilson Dep. dated July 16, 2001 at 336-40, Ex. D. Similarly, both Mr. Wilson and Dr. Rifka could only generally testify that it was their belief that rumors (speculated to have begun by NCRIC) was a "major concern" for the cancellation of an annual gala to be held in April 2001. Apart from the wholly speculative testimony regarding the cause of the cancellation, neither Dr. Rifka nor Mr. Wilson (or any other Columbia witness) have any basis to testify regarding the amount of damages that allegedly resulted from the cancellation. While Dr. Rifka testified that the 2000 gala raised $1.5 million, see Rifka Dep. at 79, there is no basis to infer that Columbia would have raised the same, more or less, in the following year. See Responses to Plaintiff's Supplemental Responses to Interrogatories Nos. 8, 9, 12 (unsigned by client representative) (asserting that 2001 gala fundraiser "reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions"). Mr. Wilson similarly testified that he ["did not] have the exact numbers [that the hospital suffered from its inability to do the fundraising] . . ."). See Wilson Dep. at 343-44.. Similarly, Dr. Rifka again only responds in generalities and platitudes about NCRIC's conduct without providing any specifics. See Rifka Dep. II, at 129, Ex. F.

D. Columbia Should Be Precluded from Introducing Evidence Regarding the Expenses it Incurred in Bankruptcy

As mentioned above, Columbia has, for the first time, seemingly asserted that its damages claims have expanded by $1.5 million related to expenses it incurred in connection with its bankruptcy in 1998. See Defendant's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 5, 6, 7 & 10, Ex. E. Columbia has not produced a single document relating to these expenses and has not provided any calculation regarding how it arrives at the $1.5 million figure.[5/] NCRIC and this Court are left to guess at what amounts even comprise the claim and whether any of those amounts, perhaps, overlap with any other

[5/] NCRIC sought discovery from Columbia regarding the "method of calculation and factual bases for any monetary damages [Columbia] claimed against [NCRIC] by way of counterclaim . . ." and identification of all supporting documents. See Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories, Nos. 6, 7, 12 (attached as Ex. G). Columbia failed to respond with any information regarding the now asserted $1.5 million expenses incurred in bankruptcy. Columbia was specifically requested to supplement these discovery responses on July 15, 2001. See Ex. H. Again, Columbia failed to produce any response regarding this category of alleged damages.

damage claim Columbia has already asserted. Columbia cannot be permitted to expand the claims in its Answer and Amended Counterclaims by interjecting offhanded assertions in belated discovery responses more than a year after discovery closed, and doing so in such a manner as to preclude NCRIC from obtaining anything of substance with respect to the specific facts behind the claim.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons discussed above, NCRIC, Inc. respectfully requests that the Court preclude Columbia from introducing any evidence or seeking damages regarding alleged reputational harm, loss of financing and partnership opportunities, the loss of revenue associated with fundraising activities, and the expenses associated with the bankruptcy. A proposed order is attached.

DEFENDANT'S RULE 26(B)(4) STATEMENT
AS A PROPONENT OF A CLAIM

Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"), by counsel, hereby states, pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure 16(b)(3) and 26(b)(4), that it expects to call at trial, as an expert witness on its behalf:

1. Peter Ben Ezra, 4930 Fort Sumner Drive, Bethesda, MD 20816-1945.

Mr. Ben Ezra (whose curriculum vitae is attached hereto as Exhibit A) is expected to testify with regard to the calculation of damages proximately caused by NCRIC's torts, including (1) the economic effects, such as lost revenue from decreased patient volume, of certain practice groups moving their practices from Columbia to competing hospitals, and any reputational harms stemming from related events; (2) the lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fundraising activities and events; and (3) the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been available to Columbia.

The substance of the facts and opinions to which Mr. Ben Ezra is expected to testify is: that, as a proximate result of NCRIC's torts, Columbia has suffered and will suffer economic harm including loss of revenue, damaged reputation in the community, and loss of good will; and further, that the total sum of economic harm that Columbia has suffered and will suffer as a result of NCRIC's torts runs in the tens of millions of dollars.

For his expected opinion testimony, Mr. Ben Ezra, a Certified Public Accountant and Professorial Lecturer in the Department of Accountancy at the George Washington University, draws upon his professional training, knowledge and experience in the fields of financial accounting, managerial accounting, and financial statement analysis. The factual data upon which Mr. Ben Ezra's expected testimony depends includes his analysis of Columbia's historical records and reports, operating statistics and financial results, and other relevant market and financial data. Mr. Ben Ezra's expected testimony also will draw upon the intimate knowledge of Columbia's financial affairs the he developed as a financial advisor and consultant to the hospital for several years, from the period of receivership through the period of bankruptcy.

2. Ms. Julia M. Brill, Esq. 2105 Bay Front Terrace, Annapolis, MD 21401

Ms. Brill (whose curriculum vitae is attached hereto as Exhibit B), or any similarly-qualified expert who may assist her, is expected to testify with regard to (1) methods, formulas and criteria for setting loss reserves by hospitals and/or insurers for medical malpractice liability claims in the District of Columbia and/or surrounding metropolitan area; and (2) the reasonableness and propriety, in light of the industry standards for setting loss reserves for medical malpractice liability claims in the District of Columbia and/or surrounding metropolitan area, and in light of other loss reserves of the same nature set by NCRIC in the same region, of the loss reserves set by NCRIC under the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement.

Due to NCRIC, Inc.'s untimely production of documents, Ms. Brill has not had an adequate opportunity to review and analyze all of the documents necessary for her to evaluate the reasonableness and propriety of NCRIC's loss reserves. As such, Ms. Brill has not yet fully developed her factual and opinion testimony. However, Columbia expects that, once Ms. Brill complete her review of the relevant NCRIC claim files, she may testify that NCRIC's loss reserves are unreasonable and improper, in light of the aforementioned industry standards.

The factual basis for Ms. Brill's opinions, should she complete her review of NCRIC's claim files and fully develop her testimony, will be a detailed understanding of each claim for which NCRIC set a loss reserve, developed through a careful review of the files. Ms. Brill's opinion will be based, it is expected, on her experience as an attorney and risk management consultant in this area.

* * *

Columbia makes the forgoing statements regarding the experts it expects to call at trial subject to the following qualifications: (1) Columbia reserves the right to call any witness listed in Defendant's Initial Rule 26(B)(4) Statement as a Proponent of a Claim (March 12, 2001), or any other suitable person later discovered by Columbia, if it is unable to retain Ms. Brill as an expert; (2) Columbia reserves its right to supplement or change this statement, including its expert witness designations, at any time during the course of discovery, or if its currently-pending motion to extend the time for filing this statement is granted; and (3) Columbia reserves its right to designate any of the foregoing, or others, as rebuttal expert witnesses at a later time.

DEPOSITION EXHIBIT

01/22/02

Opinion of Peter Ben Ezra, Expert Witness:

It is my expert opinion that the Total Lost Cashflow to the Columbia Hospital for Women as a result of the NCRIC Group of Doctors leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women in total dollars lost is about $50 million and the present value of the dollars lost discounted at the hospital's highest (marginal) cost of capital is about $21.5 million.

FINDINGS: 1/22/02 13:51

Estimated Total Lost Cashflow to the Columbia Hospital for Women as a result of the NCRIC Group of Doctors leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women (in total dollars lost and the present value of the dollars lost discounted at the cost of capital) projected over the next 20 years.

1 The estimated net realizable value is calculated by taking total charges less adjustments which is the total amount available for collections times the percentage of charges collected to date for the previous one year period. The percentage of charges collected based on the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women for the previous year ended 9/30/2000 was 94.22%

2 As a result of the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women, the total available for collections from the patient referrals to the the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, decreased by $ 3,932,163.09

from the one year period "October 1, 1999 to September 30, 2000" to the one year periiod "October 1, 2000 to September 30, 2001".

3 As a result of the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women, the total available for collections from the patient referrals to the the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, percentage decreased by 75.04%

($ 3,932,163.09 divided by $ 5,239,792.64 = 75.04%)
from the one year period "October 1, 1999 to September 30, 2000" to the one year periiod "October 1, 2000 to September 30, 2001".

16d-001844

4 The net realizable value of the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women was $ 3,704,918.38 calculated as follows

(94.22% times $ 3,932,163.09 = $ 3,704,918.38)

5 Assuming that the marginal cost of providing services is equal to 30% of the net realizable value, then the cost savings as of a result of the the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, decreased by $ 1,111,475.51

($ 3,704,918.38 times 30% = $ 1,111,475.51)

from the one year period "October 1, 1999 to September 30, 2000" to the one year periiod "October 1, 2000 to September 30, 2001".

6 Assuming that the marginal cost of providing services is equal to 30% of the net realizable value, then the conbtribution margin as of a result of the the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, decreased by $ 2,593,442.86

from the one year period "October 1, 1999 to September 30, 2000" to the one year periiod "October 1, 2000 to September 30, 2001".

7 Assuming that the cost of capital for the Columbia Hospital for Women is 10.50% and the annual loss in contribution margin (lost net income) as a result of the the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, decreased by a total of: $ 2,593,442.86 per year,

8 Then the net present value of the total loss to the Columbia Hospital for Women was $ 22,013,195.55 over the next 20 years assuming an interest rate (or discount rate) of 10.50%

as of September 1, 2001.

16d-001845

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

NCRIC, INC.,

Plaintiff,

vs. : CA No. 00-0007308
: Calendar # 8
COLUMBIA HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN : Judge Davis
MEDICAL CENTER, INC.,

Defendant.

January 24, 2002

Washington, D.C.

Deposition of:

PETER BEN EZRA

called for examination by counsel for the Plaintiff, pursuant to Agreement, taken at the offices of Bryan Cave, LLP, 700 Thirteenth Street, N.W., Suite 700, Washington, D.C. 20005-3960, before John W. Whitman, RMR, Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, commencing at 10:04 a.m., when were present on behalf of the respective parties:

of which are called major procedures, some of which are called minor procedures. I have the quantities for those procedures; I don't have the prices; and until I get prices that I can depend on I can't do that extension, price times quantity equals total. It would be a good way of checking the results in the model that we have in front of us today.

Q. Have you made a request of Columbia or its lawyers to provide you with this additional data?

A. Yes, I have. But to this point in time there is not acceptable data. In other words, I can't rely on the data they have given me.

MR. LEAHY: I represent on the record Mr. Ben Ezra has been working for about four or five months to try and get this and hasn't yet successfully gotten this data. He can testify to that if you want.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. I would like to ask you just a couple questions about what you were designated to do in this case. Does your expert report contain any information with respect to any loss of goodwill suffered by Columbia Hospital?

A. Negative. It does not.

Q. Does your report contain any calculations for damages related to the reputation of Columbia in the community?

A. No, it does not.

Q. Does your report contain any information or calculations concerning the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been made available to Columbia?

A. No, it does not.

Q. Does your report contain any information concerning the lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fund raising activities?

A. No, it does not.

Q. How about any reputational harms stemming from related events?

MR. LEAHY: Objection; asked and answered.

Whenever I object, you can answer the question.

THE WITNESS: No, it does not.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Do you anticipate doing any further calculations or analysis with respect to goodwill?

A. If I'm requested to, I will.

Q. Have you been requested to?

A. At this point I have not been requested.

Q. Would your answer be the same for damages to reputation in the community?

A. Yes, it is. If requested I will be glad to furnish an expert opinion on that.

Q. But you haven't been requested to do so at this point?

A. No, I have not been requested to do that.

Q. Can I get you to confirm, sir, that you are the witness who will be testifying at trial in this case?

A. I assume I am.

Q. Has anybody been working with you, try it that way, on this report?

A. No. I did this report. I'm the only person that worked on this report. This is my product.

Q. In addition to the other forms of damages, which I have just asked you about, are you aware of other damages that you did not calculate?

A. There was supposed to be a series of galas for fund raising. I know that the hospital was planning to receive net proceeds, in the order of magnitude of about $2 million on an annual basis, I believe, for about two or three years. That has not happened.

Q. Have you done any work related to those?

A. I have been at meetings where that has been discussed.

Q. I'm sorry, for the purposes of this case, have you done any damage calculation with respect to those issues?

A. No, I haven't, other than I am aware that they expected about $2 million a year.

Q. But that's not contained in your report?

A. No, it is not contained in my report.

Q. And you're not going to testify about that that I used. So I used the highest marginal cost of capital range, which is 10.5 percent. To my knowledge, they are not paying a higher interest rate to anybody else.

Q. In the D.C. market is there an overabundance of hospital beds, or do you know?

MR. LEAHY: Objection to the form.

THE WITNESS: It is my understanding that there is an overabundance of hospital beds. That's why in the hospital area there is a specific need or procedure that the hospital has to go through to obtain additional hospital beds.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Given the factors that we've just discussed the fact that Columbia is a boutique, that was your word, we discussed the financial results, I think yours was not good?

A. I think I said -- well, do you want to read that back?

MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. The record will reflect what it is. We talked about Columbia being a boutique. Talked about financial results, talked about current liquidity, talked about access to capital, there being an overabundance of hospital beds in this market. Given those factors, what's your opinion, can Columbia survive?

MR. LEAHY: Objection to form.

THE WITNESS: Yes, it has. It had to prove that to the bankruptcy court to emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. How about today?

A. Can Columbia survive, yes.

Q. Is it well positioned to survive?

A. It's not in a good position. I don't want to represent that it is in a good position, but it has survived, and just the very act of getting out of receivership, getting out of bankruptcy, we want to believe that there is a potential for Columbia to survive.

I think I should say for the record, and maybe I didn't ask the question, we might as well get to it, one of the concerns of the auditors for the last two or three years has been the going concern assumption, and the auditors will not give a clean opinion because they express a concern that Columbia can continue to exist as a going concern. As a fiduciary, I have that same concern.

I could have said that when we started in '96. Remember that the former board imploded and, basically, asked the D.C. Government to take over its operations. So that was almost six years ago. So if you were to ask me six years ago what the probability that we would be here today talking about whether they would continue or not, I would have given you a very low percentage possibility.

So through whatever, and most of it has been asset sales, Columbia has been able to stay in operation during that six-year period.

Q. We seem to be going forward. Are you here testifying this morning that any conduct of my client has been responsible for Columbia's financial condition?

MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. All right, we'll get to that. Columbia's operating margins, are you familiar with those?

A. No. That data does not exist. We're looking for cost accounting data. What I used for my analysis was marginal revenue and marginal cost.

MR. BADAMI: Do you want to take a break?

MR. LEAHY: I would like to take a break. Is this a new topic?

MR. BADAMI: Sure.

MR. LEAHY: Off the record.

(A short recess was taken.)

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, we're back on the record.

A. Very good, sir.

Q. Are you aware, sir, of a physician retention or recruitment program at Columbia Hospital?

Cal. 8 - Judge Davis

Washington, D.C.
July 16, 2001

Resumed Deposition of:
LARRY WILSON, JR.
called for examination by counsel for the Plaintiff, pursuant to notice, held at the offices of NCRIC, 1115 30th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C., beginning at 10:00 a.m., before Lynell C.S. Abbott, a Notary Public, RMR.

about the nature or type.
MR. LEAHY: I think he was going to give the substance or generality with regard to the types of damages occurred. It was Dr. Rifka that testified with regard to the nature of the reputation. Perhaps I misunderstood your question. If it's targeted to the nature of the reputation rather than the nature of the damages, he's not designated.
BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:
Q. I'll try and ask it this way: Is the hospital contending that its reputation as a financial institution, or its financial condition was harmed?
A. I don't think so.
Q. Is it claiming that anything NCRIC said harmed its reputation for the quality of care or services it delivered?
A. I think so.
Q. Prior to August or September of 2000 were there rumors about the hospital's financial condition?

A. Yes.
MR. LEAHY: Same objection.
BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:
Q. Would you agree that there was public knowledge about the Chapter 11 filings of the hospital done in February of 1998?
A. There were public accounts, yes. But public knowledge to the extent that the public knew, I don't know. I don't know how many people keep up with that stuff.
Q. Do you know whether there was anything in the newspapers when Columbia Hospital filed its Chapter 11 proceedings?
A. Yes.
Q. There were articles in the newspapers.
A. Yes.
Q. In The Washington Post?
A. Yes.
Q. And that would have been in 1998?
A. 1998.

Page 334

Q. How much of the damage to the reputation of the hospital was caused by things that NCRIC did in contrast to what other persons did, such as The Washington Post?
MR. LEAHY: I'll object that he's not our expert.
THE WITNESS: That would be difficult for me to calculate.
BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:
Q. You can't proportionalize, is that what you are saying?
A. I mean it would be difficult for me to calculate without having the methodology, an econometric model to follow.
Q. Can you tell me what specific damages to reputation were caused by the things that NCRIC did?
A. I can't tell you that.
Q. These rumors about the hospital, I think you had testified before that it had been reported to you who was restating these rumors in the cafeteria of the hospital; isn't that right?

A. That is correct.
Q. Would one of the names you mentioned be Dr. Glassman?
A. Yes.
Q. Was any action taken against Dr. Glassman for stating these rumors?
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: You mean by the hospital?
BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:
Q. Yes.
A. No.
Q. The hospital didn't sue Dr. Glassman, did they?
A. No.
Q. Are there any other persons who were reported to you were repeating the rumors?
A. There were several, I just don't recall exactly who at the time.

Page 336

Q. Did the hospital take any action against any person other than NCRIC who it learned was repeating the rumors?
A. No.
Q. The hospital didn't sue anybody for repeating any of these rumors. Is that right?
A. No.
Q. As a result of the actions of NCRIC, did the hospital lose any other type of economic or financial opportunities?
A. The same economic opportunities and opportunity costs that I cited before, they have to do with volume, associated with volume to include any contribution of fixed costs.
Q. Were there any partnership opportunities the hospital lost as a result of the actions of NCRIC?
A. Possibly.
Q. Can you tell me what they were?
A. I'm just thinking out loud. There may have been some opportunities that if we had increased volume that could have been brought by some partnerships or affiliations that could have been beneficial to the hospital. Certainly the loss in volume didn't help us with the HUD-242 loan. That could be considered as a real partnership.

Q. Let me hold that separately and define that as a loan.
A. Okay.
Q. Did you have any discussions with any other business, hospital, entity about forming a partnership?
A. In 1998, you say?
Q. From 1998 through the present.
A. We've had several discussions with the possibility of affiliation and partnerships, yes.
Q. Tell me with whom you had those discussions.
A. Well, we raised the issue with almost every health care organization around town in the Washington, D.C. area.

Q. Can you identify them for me or would you identify them for me?
A. All of them.
Q. Every hospital in the Washington region?
A. Every hospital in the Washington region, well, in the Washington, D.C. -- not area. If you exclude D.C. General, we've had discussions, yes. The major hospitals, let's put it that way.
Q. Since 1998 you've had discussions with Sibley Memorial?
A. Even with Sibley, yes.
Q. What was the nature of the affiliation that you were looking for?
A. Just an inquiry.
Q. And what was the response you got?
A. No interest at this time.
Q. How about George Washington University Hospital?
A. There is some interest.

Page 339

Q. Columbia Hospital was seeking some sort of association or affiliation with George Washington?
A. And several other -- yes.
Q. And has it been turned down by all of them?
A. No.
Q. Which ones hasn't it been turned down by?
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form. I'm not clear.
THE WITNESS: Yeah, I'm not clear either.
BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:
Q. Tell me what you're not clear about.
A. Well, we've had discussions. I mean are you saying, I mean I'm asking what more do you want me to add other than we've had a discussion? We don't have an affiliation, no.
Q. I want to know the partnership opportunities that you sought out that you lost because of something that NCRIC did or something you claim NCRIC did.

A. Oh, I'm saying something NCRIC could have done. I mean this whole lawsuit, the whole insurance suit could have something to do with it. I'm not saying, I didn't make the allegation that it definitely did. You asked me the question is it possible. And I answered that yes, it is possible it could have negatively impacted Columbia Hospital for Women.

Q. Is there a specific opportunity that Columbia was pursuing that it lost from 1998 to the present?

A. I'm saying, again, it could have lost.

Q. So there is nothing specific that there was.

A. Right.

Q. Besides the gala in 2001, were there any other fundraising opportunities that

Page 341

Columbia lost because of NCRIC?

A. Yes.

Q. What were they?

A. Some that we did not pursue as a result of -- again, it hampered our planning. For example, we curtailed our fundraising activities as a result of a lot of this.

Q. That was a decision made by the Board of Directors of the hospital?

A. Yes.

Q. Describe for me in particular the fundraising activities that you curtailed as a result of things that NCRIC --

A. I'm saying planning for those activities were not as aggressive as they could have been.

Q. Did those fundraising activities still take place though?

A. Some. All I'm saying to you is let's assume that if you got a board that's very active and they're very aggressive and things are going well, they might plan a hundred events. But if things aren't going as well or if we have this kind of situation on the forefront that you're confronted with with the negative press, et cetera, with losing our physicians to Sibley as a result of the NCRIC lawsuit, for example, which was in The Washington Post, it could hamper the fundraising events. So they obviously would not be as excited about arranging the fundraising events had it not been for those negative NCRIC articles about losing physicians to Sibley, et. cetera.

Q. First, what article was in the newspaper about a lawsuit that NCRIC brought?

A. I said losing physicians to Sibley as a result of, well, losing volume as a result of physicians going to Sibley.

Q. You called it NCRIC articles. Why did you do that?

A. Strongly implied -- well, when you look at the -- I refer you to those articles. You mentioned the article about bankruptcy.

Page 343

I'm sure you have the article about Columbia losing patients. It was implied. And I have to go back and take a look. I'm not exactly sure about that. I think the insurance issue is mentioned in that article.

Q. Is it your contention that NCRIC planted that article in The Washington Post?

A. I didn't say that.

MR. LEAHY: Objection. He is not designated on this topic.

BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:

Q. Is it your contention NCRIC supplied any of the information within the article in The Washington Post?

MR. LEAHY: Same objection.

THE WITNESS: I don't know.

BY MR. NIEDERMAYER:

Q. How much loss did the hospital suffer from its inability to do the fundraising?

A. I don't have the exact numbers because -- again, one is the gala alone, and another cost you'd have to compute is the fundraising that didn't take place as a result of what's going on at this time. So we would have to take a look at it.

Q. Are there specific events other than the gala that Columbia repetitively has for fundraising?

A. Yes.

Q. What events are those?

A. The low income mammography annual awards dinner is one. That's a repetitive one. But, again, we had just brought on a new women's board, and the purpose -- not women's board. Correct that. A new foundation board that focused on fundraising alone. That was their reason for existing. And they had some very ambitious goals and thoughts and ideas.

Q. Was this dinner that you just referred to not held in 2000?

A. That dinner there, awards dinner was held in 2000.

Q. Was it held in 2001?

Page 345

A. It will be held and it was not held in 2001. This is 2001.

Q. It is to be held before the end of the year.

A. That's correct.

Q. So it's not been canceled.

A. No.

Q. Who was in charge of the gala for 2001?

A. I'd have to go back and get the name.

Q. The date for the gala was postponed, as I recall. Is that right?

A. Right.

Q. Has it ever been rescheduled?

A. It has not been rescheduled as of yet.

Q. Why not?

A. Because, again, the whole issue with loss in volume, those kind of negative issues was the primary reason.

Q. Why would donors not want to give to the hospital if it suffered a loss in volume of revenues?

A. Well, my opinion is donors would not want to give if they think the hospital is going to go out of business. They want to support a going concern, something that's going to be around. To the extent that there's doubt in their mind as to whether the hospital will survive or not will definitely impact whether a donor would make that contribution.

Q. Did the hospital lose any recruiting opportunities as a result of anything NCRIC did?

MR. LEAHY: Same objection. I don't think he's designated.

MR. NIEDERMAYER: These are damages.

MR. LEAHY: I'm wrong. He's designated. That's topic 25. My mistake. Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: In my opinion, yes.

Page 347

For example, right now we're having difficulties, we've encountered difficulties hiring a perinatologist. We lost our perinatology group as a result of volume. We lost our radiology group as a result of volume. As a matter of fact, Dr. Glassman, who is a member of WRA, stated specifically that with the physicians that left Columbia Hospital for Women it decreased volume, thereby, decreasing his volume in radiology. He cited that to me as one of the reasons for his --

Q. So it's your testimony that Dr. Glassman's radiology group, the Washington Radiology --

A. Association.

Q. -- Association left because of things that NCRIC did.

A. That was not your question. That was not the way I understood you asked the question.

Q. You're saying they left because

DEFENDANT'S OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES
TO PLAINTIFF'S SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORIES

COMES NOW Defendant, Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"), by and through its attorneys, Mark C. Hansen, Esquire, David E. Ross, Esquire, Eli C. Schulman, Esquire, and Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., and in response to Plaintiff's Supplemental Interrogatories ("Plaintiff's Interrogatories"), propounded by Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), states as follows:

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following General Objections apply to each and every interrogatory and form an integral part of Columbia's response to each interrogatory:

1. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information that Columbia already has provided to NCRIC in this litigation. The discovery at issue was sought by NCRIC at the outset of this case, some two and a half years ago. By the time that the parties completed discovery and undertook extensive briefing of cross-motions for summary judgment, Columbia had provided NCRIC with detailed discovery in the form of documents, interrogatory responses, and depositions concerning the subject matter of these Supplemental Interrogatories and had necessarily gone on the record in Columbia's papers about the issues that NCRIC now raises in these Interrogatories. For instance, Columbia has explained in great detail the proper calculations under the Retro Plan, but this topic serves as the focus of several of NCRIC's Supplemental Interrogatories.

2. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories to the extent that they disregard the Court's express admonition that its Order authorizing NCRIC to serve these Supplemental Interrogatories "is not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter stated in plaintiff's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6)." Order of 4/7/03 at 1-2 n.1.

For instance, the Court authorized NCRIC to serve a supplemental interrogatory on the topic of "Defamatory actions or statements by plaintiff about defendant." But NCRIC has proceeded to lodge three separate interrogatories relating to NCRIC's defamation of Columbia, addressing not only the substance of the defamatory statements but also such matters as who heard the statements – matters plainly exceeding the scope of the Court's Order.

3. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with information sufficient to answer the Interrogatories. For instance, calculations under the Plan depend upon the proper calculation of Subject Premium – but NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to verify NCRIC's calculation of Subject Premium.

4. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories to the extent that they are duplicative.

5. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information that is in NCRIC's possession.

16d-001903

6. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information not in Columbia's possession.

7. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek disclosure of information protected by the peer review privilege, the attorney-client privilege, the work-product privilege, the party-communication privilege or the investigative privilege. Columbia further objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they call for information otherwise protected under the District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable law. Columbia does not intend by these responses or objections, or by the inadvertent production of any privileged documents, to waive any protection to which it is entitled.

8. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories to the extent that they are vague, ambiguous, overly broad, burdensome, harassing, and/or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this action.

9. Columbia reserves the right to modify or supplement its objections and responses based on such pertinent information as it may subsequently discover.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 1: Identify and describe all facts and reasons forming the basis for Columbia's claim that any of the calculations or numbers in Columns A-E, lines 1-20 of Exhibit A attached to Columbia's Answer to Interrogatories and Responses and Requests for Admissions are incorrect or fail to comply with the terms, provisions or formulas of the contract between the NCRIC and Columbia.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 1: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous and insofar as it is unduly burdensome. In particular, there is no pleading or pleadings denominated in whole or in part Columbia's Answer to Interrogatories and Responses and Requests for Admissions, and none of Columbia's responses to NCRIC's interrogatories or NCRIC's requests for admissions has attached an Exhibit A. Columbia also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Columbia's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession. For example, upon information and belief, the data necessary to calculate most of the amounts shown on Exhibit 1, infra, are in NCRIC's sole possession.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows: Exhibit 1 to Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories and Exhibit 1 to Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's First Request for Admissions ("Exhibit 1") each includes a grid to set off each column and row of the exhibit. The columns are labeled 1 through 20; the rows are labeled A through F. Each of Columns A through E corresponds to a one-year period that the Plan was in operation (e.g., Column A, which is labeled "Y94-95," corresponds to the period between September 1, 1994 to and August 31, 1995). Each row corresponds to a specific term defined in the Plan or concept contemplated by the Plan (e.g., Row 2 corresponds to the term "Deposit Premium," as defined in the Plan; Row 5 corresponds to the concept of indemnity reserves contemplated by the Plan).

Columbia contends that, for Columns B through E of Row 2 ("Deposit"); for Columns C through E of Row 12 ("Development Factor"); for Columns C through E of Row 13 ("Retrospective Premium"); for Columns A through E of Row 14 ("Return Premium" or "Additional Premium" due); and for Column A of Rows 17 ("Maximum Premium"), 18 ("Minimum Premium"), 19 (Maximum Premium multiplier) and 20 (Minimum Premium multiplier), the amount shown on Exhibit 1 is not the correct amount set by the Plan, for the term or concept corresponding to that row and the period corresponding to that column.

Further, upon information and belief, for each column of Rows 1 (corresponding to the term "Subject Premium"), 5, 6 (corresponding to the concept of ALAE reserves), 7

(corresponding to the term "Loss Reserves") and 11 (Paid Losses plus Loss Reserves), Columbia cannot determine whether the numbers are incorrect or fail to comply with the terms, provisions, or formulas of the contract, because the information necessary for making such a determination is solely in the possession of NCRIC.

As to the basis for Columbia's conclusion that the foregoing calculations or numbers are incorrect or fail to comply with the terms, provisions, or formulas of the contract between NCRIC and Columbia, subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections Columbia responds as follows:

(a) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Row 2 must be calculated by applying a multiplier. The proper multiplier is .67 for the periods corresponding to Columns B through E. NCRIC applied an incorrect multiplier, approximately .62, when calculating all the amounts in Columns B through E of Row 2, thereby miscalculating each corresponding amount in Row 2.

(b) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Rows 13 and 14 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 12. The multiplier shown in Columns C through E of Row 12 is incorrect. The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 12 of Exhibit 1 is: "80%" for the period corresponding to Column C; "65%" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "55%" for the period corresponding to Column E, rather than: "105%" for the period corresponding to Column C; "80%" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "65%" for the period corresponding to Column E. NCRIC applied the incorrect multiplier in calculating each amount in Columns C through E of Rows 13 and 14, thereby miscalculating each such amount.

(c) The Plan dictates that the amounts for the term corresponding to Row 17 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 19, and that the amounts for the term corresponding to Row 18 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 20. The multiplier shown in Column A of Rows 19 and 20 is incorrect. Under the Plan, the correct amount for the term corresponding to Row 19, for the period corresponding to Column A, is "1.33," not "1.15"; for that same period, the correct amount for the term corresponding to Row 20 is ".60", not ".75". By applying the incorrect multiplier from Column A of Rows 19 and 20, NCRIC thereby miscalculated each amount in Column A of Rows 17 and 18.

(d) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Row 14 must be determined by a calculation that subtracts from the term corresponding to Row 2 another term corresponding either to Row 13 or Row 18, whichever is greater (subject to a further limitation not relevant here). By applying the incorrect multiplier in Column A of Row 20 and thereby miscalculating the amount in Column A of Row 18, NCRIC thereby miscalculated the amount in Column A of Row 18, see supra (c), which also led NCRIC to miscalculate the amount in Column A of Row 13 and, in turn, Column A of Row 14. And by miscalculating the amount in Column B of Row 2, see supra (a), NCRIC thereby miscalculated the amount in Column B of Row 14.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment at 13-17, Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute & Exhs. 10, 14; and Reply in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment Exh. 1. To the extent that this or any of these supplemental interrogatories seeks further facts and reasons forming the basis for these conclusions, Columbia hereby incorporates by reference Columbia's Answer and Counterclaims; Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment ("SJ Mem."); Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute ("SMF"); Reply in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment ("SJ Reply"); Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment ("SJ Opp."); Statement of Material Facts in Dispute ("SMF2"); and the exhibits to the foregoing papers (collectively, "Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers").

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 2: Identify and describe the amounts Columbia believes to be the correct amounts in Columns A-E, lines 1-20 of Exhibit A attached to Columbia's Answer to Interrogatories and Responses and Requests for Admissions to comply with the terms, provisions or formulas of the Contract between the NCRIC and Columbia.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 2: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Columbia's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession. For example, upon information and belief, the data necessary to calculate most of the amounts shown on Exhibit 1 – and particularly the amounts in Rows 1, 2, 4, 5 through 11, 13, and 14 – is in NCRIC's sole possession. Without this data, Columbia cannot determine how and in what manner the amounts referred to in its response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 1 are incorrect. The amounts in Exhibit 1 (and therefore those in these Responses) necessarily reflect, inter alia, the assumption that NCRIC correctly and fairly calculated Subject Premium and Loss Reserves under the Plan – an assumption that Columbia is unable to verify because NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to verify these amounts. Nonetheless, Columbia has been able to determine that NCRIC's miscalculations of some amounts shown on Exhibit 1 resulted in part from NCRIC's improper application of the retro formula under the Plan, and Columbia therefore responds accordingly.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds, based on the facts presently known to it, as follows:

(a) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 2 of Exhibit 1 is: "$2,203,073.90" for the period corresponding to Column B; "$2,341,855.02" for the period corresponding to Column C; "$2,238,195.30" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "$2,418,476.89" for the period corresponding to Column E.

(b) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 12 of Exhibit 1 is: "80%" for the period corresponding to Column C; "65%" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "55%" for the period corresponding to Column E.

(c) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 13 of Exhibit 1 is: "$3,063,904.73" for the period corresponding to Column C; "$1,706,188.72" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "$2,802,425.73" for the period corresponding to Column E.

(d) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 14 of Exhibit 1 is: "($350,593.73)" for the period corresponding to Column A; "$333,392.45" for the period corresponding to Column B; "$722,049.71" for the period corresponding to Column C; "($233,841.30)" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "$383,948.84" for the period corresponding to Column E.

(e) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 17 of Exhibit 1 is: "$3,783,734.29" for the period corresponding to Column A.

(f) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 18 of Exhibit 1 is: "$1,706,947.80" for the period corresponding to Column A.

(g) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 19 of Exhibit 1 is: "1.33" for the period corresponding to Column A.

(h) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 20 of Exhibit 1 is: ".60" for the period corresponding to Column A.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; and SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 3: Describe and identify the facts and reasons why Columbia believes the amounts contained in your response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 2 to be the proper amounts and calculations to be used in calculating the amount of premium due Columbia under the Contract.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 3: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds, based on the facts presently known to it, as follows: Columbia incorporates by reference its Responses to Supplemental Interrogatories Nos. 1 & 2.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 4: Identify and describe the amount of premium that should have been charged to Columbia in each year of the Contract and the method of calculation of any refund premium Columbia claims it is owed.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 4: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous. In particular, Columbia is unable to determine the meaning of the phrase "the amount of premium that should have been charged to Columbia." For instance, this Interrogatory speaks generically of "premium," but the Plan refers to numerous types of premium, including "Subject Premium," "Deposit Premium," "Retro Premium," "Minimum Premium," and

"Additional Premium." This Interrogatory also speaks of "refund premium," a term not defined in the Plan. The term "charged to Columbia" is vague, as well.

Columbia also objects to the extent that this Interrogatory asks for "the amount of premium that should have been charged to Columbia" insofar as any such amount depends on the fair and correct calculation of Subject Premium under the Plan – but NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to verify NCRIC's calculation of Subject Premium.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows: Columbia believes that this Interrogatory is most coherently understood to be asking about any "Additional Premium" or "Return Premium" due after performance of a Reconciliation. Therefore, for each year, or Experience Period, a Reconciliation should be performed (correctly, per Interrogatories Nos. 1-3) to determine whether Columbia owes Additional Premium or is due Return Premium. Additional Premium is any positive balance (i.e., in NCRIC's favor); Additional Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is greater than the Deposit Premium. Return Premium is any negative balance (i.e., in Columbia's favor); Return Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is less than the Deposit Premium.

According to the September 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$587,568.66" for the Experience Period 1993-94; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$350,593.73" for the Experience Period 1994-95; Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$333,392.45" for the Experience Period 1995-96; Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$722,049.71" for the Experience Period 1996-97; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$233,841.30" for the Experience Period 1997-98; and Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$383,948.84" for the Experience Period 1998-99. This totals $267,387.31 in Additional Premium that Columbia owed NCRIC. Taking into account the $172,815.00 that NCRIC paid Columbia for the first Experience Period and the $1,000,000.00 that Columbia deposited with NCRIC leaves NCRIC owing Columbia Return Premium of $559,797.69.

The parties, however, agreed orally that they would exchange Additional or Return Premium only for those Experience Periods for which all claims were closed. The amounts calculated under the September 2000 Reconciliation therefore are not the actual amounts owed, for as of September 2000, only the Experience Periods 1993-94 and 1994-95 had closed. According to the September 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$587,568.66" for the Experience Period 1993-94; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$350,593.73" for the Experience Period 1994-95. NCRIC paid Columbia $172,815.00 for the 1993-94 Experience Period. Therefore, NCRIC in fact owes Columbia $765,347.39 in Return Premium (in addition to owing Columbia its $1 million deposit back, plus interest).

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; and SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 5: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 1 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 5: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC breached the Plan by failing in performing its Reconciliations to apply the proper Minimum Premium factor, the proper Deposit Premium factor, and/or the proper Development

16d-001912

Factors. NCRIC further breached the parties' agreement by seeking payment for Experience Periods for which not all of the claims had closed, in violation of the parties' oral agreement.

Through NCRIC's failure to perform its obligations under the Plan, NCRIC caused Columbia damages. According to NCRIC's own calculations, NCRIC owes Columbia Return Premium for the two Experience Periods that are closed. NCRIC has paid Columbia $172,815 for the first Experience Period, but it has paid Columbia nothing for the second Experience Period. Accordingly, even under NCRIC's own interpretation of the terms in the Retro Plan, NCRIC owes Columbia $177,806.

But even that amount understates NCRIC's liability to Columbia. As explained, in its Reconciliations, NCRIC employs the wrong Minimum Premium factor for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods. When the correct Minimum Premium factor is applied (assuming all of NCRIC's other calculations are correct), NCRIC owes Columbia $587,568.66 (less $172,815 it already paid) for the 1993-94 Experience Period and $350,593.73 for the 1994-95 Experience Period, for a total of $765,347.49, plus interest.

In addition, NCRIC's miscalculations, including but not limited to those in the 1997 Reconciliation, caused Columbia to overpay Additional Premium and to make an unwarranted $1 million deposit, thereby causing Columbia to become insolvent and to file for bankruptcy. Columbia incurred expenses of over $1.5 million in connection with its bankruptcy.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; SJ Reply Exh. 1; and SMF2 ¶¶ 29, 35-36, 157-59. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 6: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 2 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

16d-001913

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 6: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC willfully rendered imperfect performance by performing Reconciliations inaccurately. Columbia's damages include the amount due according to the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation – $765,347.39, plus interest, see Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 5. That is, NCRIC was required to inform Columbia by November 1, 2000 of the correct amount due and pay that amount by December 1, 2000. NCRIC did neither.

In addition, Columbia was damaged by the $1 million that it deposited with NCRIC in installments between January 1998 and March 1998, plus interest. Had NCRIC performed the September 1, 1997 Reconciliation correctly, the spreadsheet would have shown that (absent the oral agreement) Columbia was owed $78,000 in Return Premium, not that Columbia owed approximately $1.77 million in Additional Premium. NCRIC thus had no basis for seeking a $1 million deposit as a condition for renewing the Plan. NCRIC's demand for this payment also violated the parties' oral agreement. NCRIC should have returned the $1 million, plus interest, when Columbia demanded that it be returned.

In addition, NCRIC's miscalculations, including but not limited to those in the 1997 Reconciliation, caused Columbia to overpay Additional Premium and to make an unwarranted $1 million deposit, thereby causing Columbia to become insolvent and to file for bankruptcy. Columbia incurred expenses of over $1.5 million in connection with its bankruptcy.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; SJ Reply Exh. 1; and SMF2 ¶¶ 29, 35-36, 157-59. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 7: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 3 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 7: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC breached its fiduciary duty to Columbia by failing to perform Reconciliations honestly and accurately. NCRIC failed to alert Columbia that under the September 2000 Reconciliation, Columbia was owed $765,347.39 in Return Premium, plus interest.

NCRIC also breached its fiduciary duty to Columbia by demanding the $1 million deposit when it was not due and by refusing to return the $1 million.

NCRIC further damaged Columbia by refusing to allow Columbia to audit NCRIC's calculations – in particular, by refusing to give Columbia access to information concerning the premiums of individual members of the Attending Faculty used to calculate Subject Premium and concerning indemnity and expense reserves for individual malpractice claims that comprise the Loss Reserves.

In addition, NCRIC's miscalculations, including but not limited to those in the 1997 Reconciliation, caused Columbia to overpay Additional Premium and to make an unwarranted $1 million deposit, thereby causing Columbia to become insolvent and to file for bankruptcy. Columbia incurred expenses of over $1.5 million in connection with its bankruptcy.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; SJ Reply Exh. 1; and SMF2 ¶¶ 29, 35-36, 157-59. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 8: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 4 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 8: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

As a direct and proximate result of NCRIC's wrongful conduct, about 30 Attending Faculty members terminated their association with Columbia and moved (the bulk of) their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals. These physicians ceased or cut back referring patients to Columbia. The steep drop in patient referrals cost Columbia substantial revenues each year for the foreseeable future.

Mr. Peter Ben Ezra applied a generally accepted "lost cash flow" model to calculate Columbia's lost revenue damages resulting from the departure of the Attending Faculty. See generally Report of Peter Ben Ezra, Expert Witness; Deposition of Peter Ben Ezra; Declaration of Peter Ben Ezra in Support of Defendant's Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment. For his analysis, Mr. Ben Ezra obtained a breakdown of Columbia's actual revenue from patient referrals, sorted by physician. He then compared the revenue streams attributable to the physicians who left the hospital for the year before October 1, 2000, and the year after October 1, 2000, and compared the two numbers. Then, Mr. Ben Ezra used a textbook "lost cash flow" model to calculate the lost cash flows over time until an estimated year when each physician would have retired, had they stayed at Columbia. He excluded from consideration any physician who left the hospital for non-NCRIC-related reasons. This is a well-accepted means of calculating lost cash flow. Mr. Ben Ezra concluded that the present value of Columbia's damages under this analysis total $21.5 million.

Columbia also suffered other damages about which lay witnesses testified. First, due to NCRIC's wrongful conduct Columbia lost the opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser, reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions. This gala, scheduled for May 2001, was canceled abruptly in late 2000 by Columbia's volunteer fundraising board, because the pervasive rumors that the hospital was going to close made it essentially impossible to raise contributions.

Second, Columbia was eligible for a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan, which it was reasonably assured of obtaining in light of HUD's support for its candidacy. But after the Attending Faculty left in Summer/Fall 2000, Columbia's volume and revenues dropped sharply. As a result, HUD advised Columbia that it no longer qualified for the loan. Denial of this loan meant losing the opportunity to reduce the hospital's cost of capital from 10.5% to 4.5% per month.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SMF2 ¶¶ 193-238 and SJ Opp. at 53-60, in addition to Mr. Ben Ezra's Report, Deposition, and Declaration. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 9: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 5 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 9: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC's tortious interference with prospective business advantage caused doctors to terminate their association with Columbia and move their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals. These physicians ceased or cut back referring patients to Columbia, causing Columbia $21.5 million in lost cash flow and other damages, including the lost opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions, and the lost opportunity to obtain a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan that would have reduced the hospital's cost of capital form 10.5% to 4.5% per month. Columbia incorporates by reference its Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 8.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 10: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 7 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 10: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC and/or its agents made false representations to Columbia, including NCRIC's improper Retro Plan calculations. NCRIC also concealed from Columbia material facts which amounted to a misrepresentation by refusing to provide information concerning Loss Reserves as provided for by the Plan, among other things. NCRIC refused to provide Columbia access to data necessary to independently verify NCRIC's bookkeeping.

Columbia has been directly and proximately damaged by NCRIC's false representations and concealments. Columbia's damages include the amount due according to the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation – $765,347.39, plus interest, see Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 5. That is, NCRIC was required to inform Columbia by November 1, 2000 of the correct amount due and pay that amount by December 1, 2000. NCRIC did neither.

In addition, Columbia was damaged by the $1 million that it deposited with NCRIC in installments between January 1998 and March 1998, plus interest. Had NCRIC performed the September 1, 1997 Reconciliation correctly, the spreadsheet would have shown that (absent the oral agreement) Columbia was owed $78,000 in Return Premium, not that Columbia owed approximately $1.77 million in Additional Premium. NCRIC thus had no basis for seeking a $1 million deposit as a condition for renewing the Plan.

In addition, NCRIC's miscalculations, including but not limited to those in the 1997 Reconciliation, caused Columbia to overpay Additional Premium and to make an unwarranted $1 million deposit, thereby causing Columbia to become insolvent and to file for bankruptcy. Columbia incurred expenses of over $1.5 million in connection with its bankruptcy.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; SJ Reply Exh. 1; and SMF2 ¶¶ 29, 35-36, 157-59. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 11: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 8 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 11: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC negligently made false representations because, among other things, it miscalculated in performing Reconciliations. NCRIC also failed to ensure that it maintain Loss Reserves in accord with the industry standards and refused to provide information regarding Loss Reserves as provided for by the Plan, among other things. Columbia has been directly and proximately damaged by NCRIC's negligent actions. Columbia incorporates by reference its Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 10.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 12: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 9 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 12: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

As a result of its false and defamatory statements, NCRIC directly and proximately caused Columbia damages in the form of harm to its reputation and substantial economic loss. NCRIC's defamatory statements caused doctors to terminate their association with Columbia and move their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals. These physicians ceased or cut back referring patients to Columbia, causing Columbia $21.5 million in lost cash flow and other damages, including the lost opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions, and the lost opportunity to obtain a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan that would have reduced the hospital's cost of capital form 10.5% to 4.5% per month. Columbia incorporates by reference its Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 8.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 13: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 10 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 13: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC made and false and misleading representations of fact that disparaged the quality of Columbia's services as a health care facility. NCRIC made the false representations intentionally and with full knowledge that these statements would cast doubt upon the quality of Columbia's services as a health care facility. As a result of these false representations, NCRIC proximately caused Columbia damages in the form of harm to its reputation and substantial economic loss. NCRIC's defamatory statements caused doctors to terminate their association with Columbia and move their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals. These physicians ceased or cut back referring patients to Columbia, causing Columbia $21.5 million in lost cash flow and other damages, including the lost opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions, and the lost opportunity to obtain a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan that would have reduced the hospital's cost of capital form 10.5% to 4.5% per month. Columbia incorporates by reference its Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 8.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 14: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 11 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 14: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC unlawfully exercised ownership, dominion, and control over Columbia's $1 million deposit, in denial or repudiation of Columbia's rights thereto. The parties agreed in 1998 to treat Columbia's $1 million as a deposit, and once it was realized that NCRIC was performing Reconciliations inaccurately, Columbia demanded in vain that its money be returned. Columbia is owed the $1 million deposit, plus interest.

16d-001921

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SMF2 ¶¶ 35-36, 157-59; SJ Opp. at 51-53. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 15: Identify each and every individual who made any of the statements alleged to be defamatory that remain in Columbia's counterclaim and provide the statement or statements each individual is alleged to have made.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 15: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it blatantly disregards the Court's express admonition that its Order authorizing NCRIC to serve these Supplemental Interrogatories "is not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter stated in plaintiff's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6)." Order of 4/7/03 at 1-2 n.1. That Notice identified the following topic (No. 10): "Defamatory actions or statements by plaintiff about defendant." That topic arguably encompasses Supplemental Interrogatory No. 17, which concerns the substance of the defamatory statements. But the subject matter of this Interrogatory – who made the defamatory statements – and the subject matter of Supplemental Interrogatory No. 16 – who heard the defamatory statements – is not fairly encompassed in Topic No. 10 of NCRIC's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6) that was at issue in the motion to compel. Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 15 & 16 thus plainly exceed the scope of the discovery authorized by the Court's Order.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

(a) Dr. Leonard Glassman, Chairman of the Board of NCRIC, Inc., announced in Columbia's cafeteria on September 1, 2000 that (1) the Entity Policy covering Columbia's Clinic and the physicians working there (the Columbia Physicians Group ("CPG")) had expired; (2) CPG physicians with NCRIC individual medical malpractice insurance policies were not covered under those policies when practicing at the Clinic; (3) Columbia's self-insurance trust fund was insufficiently funded to insure the Clinic; and (4) Columbia was planning to cease operations.

Many physicians overheard Dr. Glassman make these statements, including Dr. Nabil Asterbadi and Dr. Safa Rifka.

Also in about September 2000, staff members in the Radiology Department at Columbia, where Dr. Glassman worked, repeatedly overheard him telling patients to pick up their films and bring them to his office in the suburbs because Columbia was planning to close, and telling physicians employed by the Hospital to start looking for jobs elsewhere for the same reason. Those who heard these statements include Elizabeth Jackson and Francis Renee Perkins. Because Dr. Glassman's door was open, other radiology patients in the office also could hear his statements.

Around that same time, Dr. Glassman told another physician, Dr. Gideon Kioko, to move his group to Sibley, because (Dr. Glassman urged) Columbia was about to close. Other physicians who were eating in the cafeteria at the time heard these remarks – including Dr. Richard Newman, who shortly thereafter moved to Sibley, and Dr. Jerome O'Connell.

Later, Dr. Glassman told Dr. O'Connell in the hallway at Columbia that, because the hospital was closing, another physician, Dr. Evelyn Karson, was leaving.

(b) Dr. Morton Roberts, a physician who often passed along information from NCRIC purporting to speak on its behalf, informed a nurse anesthetist, David Young, in early July 2000 that Young should start looking for a job elsewhere because Columbia was closing. Dr. Roberts also made this statement to other staff members at about the same time. Dr. Asterbadi sent Dr. Roberts a cease-and-desist letter, in an effort to get him to cease disparaging Columbia.

(c) On or about September 1, 2000, a representative of NCRIC's Policyholder

Services Department (i.e., either David Osborn, Eric Hempelman or Grant Sohm -- the identity of the individual that made these statements is solely in NCRIC's possession, and NCRIC has not provided that information to Columbia) informed Attending Faculty member Dr. Heather Johnson that (1) the Entity Policy covering CPG physicians had expired; (2) CPG physicians with NCRIC medical malpractice insurance were not covered under their individual policies when practicing at the Clinic; (3) Columbia's self-insurance trust fund was insufficiently funded to insure the CPG and its physicians; and (4) due to the Retro Plan's termination, Columbia was ceasing operations.

A representative of NCRIC's Policyholder Services Department also made these statements to other physicians, including Dr. Edward Koch, who also is a member of NCRIC's Board of Directors.

Dr. Koch and Dr. Johnson informed Columbia's management and other physicians at Columbia what they had been told.

Other unnamed individuals heard and repeated the defamatory statements, as well.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SMF2 ¶¶ 160-75 and SJ Opp. at 30-44. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 16: Identify each and every individual who heard any of the statements alleged to be defamatory that remain in Columbia's counterclaim and indicate what statement was allegedly heard.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 16: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia further responds as follows: Columbia incorporates by reference its Objections and Response to Interrogatory No. 15.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 17: Identify and describe the substance of each and every statement made by anyone identified in the answer to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 15 that Columbia claims to be defamatory.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 17: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia further responds as follows: Columbia incorporates by reference its Objections and Response to Interrogatory No. 15.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 18: Describe how Columbia claims NCRIC should have calculated: (a) its loss reserves; (b) adjustment of loss reserves; (c) positive loss experiences of Columbia under the Contract; (d) use of additional years in calculating premiums, and (e) each element of the formula or other requirements for reconciliation of premiums due under the Retro Plan.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 18: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to audit NCRIC's calculation of Loss Reserves. Columbia also specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous. In particular, it is unclear what is meant by the phrase, "how Columbia claims NCRIC should have calculated." The terms "additional years" and "formula" are vague, as well. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

(a) NCRIC should have calculated its Loss Reserves in accordance with generally accepted standards in the insurance industry.

(b) NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care failed adequately to adjust its loss reserves downward in response to Columbia's positive loss experience under the Plan. As a result, for some claims NCRIC maintained higher Loss Reserves than were reasonably necessary to cover malpractice claims under the Retro Plan, and improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

16d-001925

Further, NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care used incorrect Development Factors when calculating the Retro Premium, and thereby considered a greater percentage of its Loss Reserves than it was allowed to consider under the Retro Plan. As a result, NCRIC improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

Moreover, for each quarterly reconciliation that NCRIC sent to Columbia, NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care adjusted its Loss Reserves upwards based on increases in its Loss Reserves during that quarter. But NCRIC knew or should have known that under the Plan it was proper to bill Columbia for Loss Reserves based only on yearly Reconciliations.

(c) NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care failed adequately to adjust its loss reserves downward in response to Columbia's positive loss experience under the Plan. As a result, for some claims NCRIC maintained higher Loss Reserves than were reasonably necessary to cover malpractice claims under the Retro Plan, and improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

Further, NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care used incorrect Development Factors when calculating the Retro Premium, and thereby considered a greater percentage of its Loss Reserves than it was allowed to consider under the Retro Plan. As a result, NCRIC improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

(d) NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care reconciled too many Experience Periods. NCRIC thereby improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

For instance, in performing the September 1997 Reconciliation, NCRIC included the 1995-96 Experience Period in its calculations. Proper operation of the Plan at that time, however, dictated that a Reconciliation should not include calculations for either of the prior two

16d-001926

Experience Periods. Accordingly, the September 1997 Reconciliation should not have included calculations for either the 1995-96 or 1996-97 Experience Periods. As a result of this error by NCRIC in performing the September 1997 Reconciliation, NCRIC informed Columbia that Columbia would owe approximately $1.77 million in Additional Premium. Had NCRIC performed the 1997 Reconciliation correctly and not included in its calculations the 1995-96 or 1996-97 Experience Periods, that Reconciliation would have shown that Columbia was owed $78,000 in Return Premium.

(e) Proper Reconciliations under the Retro Plan should have been performed as follows:

1. Calculate the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by using the Retro Formula.

2. Limit the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by applying the Minimum Premium or Maximum Premium, if applicable.

3. Calculate the Additional Premium or Return Premium due for each Experience Period by subtracting the Retro Premium (as limited by any applicable minimum or maximum) from the Deposit Premium for each Experience Period.

4. Calculate the total Additional Premium or Return Premium for all Experience Periods that are properly subject to Reconciliation.

5. Apply a credit for Columbia's deposit and/or for NCRIC's payment to obtain the current total premium due.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 1-4; SMF2 ¶¶ 86-88, 106-07; Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

16d-001927

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 19: Identify the specific errors, miscalculations and overstatements in the statement(s) from NCRIC referenced in paragraphs 72 and 101 of the counterclaim including the reasons and bases for the errors and the corrections required to make the bill accurate.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 19: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

Paragraph 72 of the counterclaim concerns the September 1998 reconciliation. In performing that Reconciliation, NCRIC applied an incorrect Minimum Premium factor, an incorrect Deposit Premium factor, and incorrect Development Factors. NCRIC also disregarded the oral agreement between NCRIC and Columbia that the parties would exchange Additional or Return Premium only for those Experience Periods for which all claims were closed. NCRIC failed to pay Columbia interest on Columbia's $1 million deposit, and NCRIC ignored Columbia's demand that the deposit be returned.

Had NCRIC applied the proper Minimum Premium factor, the proper Deposit Premium factor, and the proper Development Factors, and had NCRIC complied with the parties' oral agreement, NCRIC would have concluded that it owed Columbia $670,000 in Return Premium (rather than the $172,000 that NCRIC paid Columbia after performing that Reconciliation). NCRIC also should have paid Columbia interest on the $1 million deposit and, in fact, should have returned the $1 million to Columbia.

Paragraph 101 of the counterclaim concerns the September 2000 Reconciliation. In performing that Reconciliation, NCRIC applied an incorrect Minimum Premium factor, an incorrect Deposit Premium factor, and incorrect Development Factors. NCRIC also disregarded the oral agreement between NCRIC and Columbia that the parties would exchange Additional or

Return Premium only for those Experience Periods for which all claims were closed. NCRIC failed to pay Columbia interest on Columbia's $1 million deposit, and NCRIC ignored Columbia's demand that the deposit be returned.

Had NCRIC applied the proper Minimum Premium factor, the proper Deposit Premium factor, and the proper Development Factors, and had NCRIC complied with the parties' oral agreement, NCRIC would have concluded that it owed Columbia $765,347.39 in Return Premium. NCRIC also should have paid Columbia interest on the $1 million deposit and, in fact, should have returned the $1 million to Columbia, plus interest.

Columbia incorporates by reference the Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 1-4, which describe in further detail the specific errors, miscalculations, and overstatements in NCRIC's Reconciliations generally and the September 2000 Reconciliation in particular, as well as the reasons and bases for the errors, and the corrections required to make the Reconciliation accurate.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. & SMF; SMF Exhs. 10, 14; SMF2 ¶¶ 115-33, 239-42; SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 20: Identify the amount of Return Premium Columbia claims it is owed from 1993 to date and describe how each amount was calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 20: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as the term "to date" is vague and ambiguous. Columbia also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Columbia's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession. In particular, the amount that Columbia is owed "to date" is in NCRIC's sole possession. Columbia cannot know how much it is owed because NCRIC has not furnished Columbia with the 2001 or 2002 Reconciliations. Columbia's Responses therefore utilize the numbers from the September 2000 Reconciliation. Columbia further objects insofar as any accurate calculation of Return Premium depends on the fair and correct calculation of Subject Premium under the Plan – but NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to verify NCRIC's calculation of Subject Premium.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows: For each year, or Experience Period, a Reconciliation should be performed (correctly, per Interrogatories Nos. 1-4) to determine whether Columbia owes Additional Premium or is due Return Premium. Additional Premium is any positive balance (i.e., in NCRIC's favor); Additional Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is greater than the Deposit Premium. Return Premium is any negative balance (i.e., in Columbia's favor); Return Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is less than the Deposit Premium.

According to the September 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$587,568.66" for the Experience Period 1993-94; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$350,593.73" for the Experience Period 1994-95; Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$333,392.45" for the Experience Period 1995-96; Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$722,049.71" for the Experience Period 1996-97; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$233,841.30" for the Experience Period 1997-98; and Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$383,948.84" for the Experience Period 1998-99. This totals $267,387.31 in Additional Premium that Columbia owed NCRIC. Taking into account the $172,815.00 that NCRIC paid Columbia for the first Experience Period and the $1,000,000.00

that Columbia deposited with NCRIC leaves NCRIC owing Columbia Return Premium of $559,797.69.

The parties, however, agreed orally that they would exchange Additional or Return Premium only for those Experience Periods for which all claims were closed. The amounts calculated under the September 2000 Reconciliation therefore are not the actual amounts owed, for as of September 2000, only the Experience Periods 1993-94 and 1994-95 had closed. According to the September 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$587,568.66" for the Experience Period 1993-94; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$350,593.73" for the Experience Period 1994-95. NCRIC paid Columbia $172,815.00 for the 1993-94 Experience Period. Therefore, NCRIC in fact owes Columbia $765,347.39 in Return Premium (in addition to owing Columbia its $1 million deposit back, plus interest).

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. & SMF; SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

Q. Was this gala in April-May 2001, was it an annual event?

A. Yeah, annual event. We did one in 1997. Then when we went into Chapter 11, obviously you could not fund-raise. And then we planned one for the year 2001.

Q. Do you know how much you raised in 1997?

A. $1.5 million.

Q. Were the rumors in the fall of 2000 the sole reason why the gala was canceled?

A. Yes. I think that the rumors -- and I want to say that the rumors did not start at 6:00 o'clock on September and ended at 9:00 o'clock. Rumors take time to die, and rumors proliferate, and rumors disseminate, and rumors require a humongous effort by an institution to go and quell it by mounting a positive PR campaign, hospital cannot meet its malpractice obligations, has instilled fear in the hospital and physicians to go out and practice somewhere else.

That translated into tremendous logistic problems for Columbia, retention of administrative staff, staying viable, bad PR problem, Washington Post article, cancelling of a gala that would have netted the hospital millions of dollars, messing up our HUD refinancing, and then establishing a similar analogous program across the circle with George Washington Hospital that will give physicians a 30 percent discount and asking them to go across the circle and go to GW.

I think that the war that NCRIC had launched against this community-owned hospital has been devastating and has precluded our efforts in complete recovery, refinancing, establishing long-term debt with long interest, and really raising money from the community -- devastating effects.

DEFENDANT'S OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES
TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

COMES NOW Defendant, Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Medical Center"), by and through its attorneys, Mark C. Hansen, Esquire, Steven F. Benz, Esquire, Joseph K. Leahy, Esquire, and Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., and in response to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories ("Plaintiff's Interrogatories"), propounded by Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), states as follows:

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following General Objections apply to each and every interrogatory and form an integral part of Medical Center's response to each interrogatory:

1. Defendant Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek disclosure of information protected by the peer review privilege, the attorney-client privilege, the work-product privilege, the party-communication privilege or the investigative privilege. Medical Center further objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they call for information otherwise protected under the District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable law. Medical Center does not intend by these responses or objections, or by the inadvertent production of any privileged documents, to waive any protection to which it is entitled.

2. Medical Center objects to the numbering of Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as some of the interrogatories have "subparts" that constitute more than one interrogatory as defined by District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure 33(a).

3. Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as the information sought by such interrogatories is more appropriate for disclosure in deposition and can be more efficiently and less burdensomely obtained thereby.

4. Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories to the extent that they are vague, ambiguous, overly broad, burdensome, harassing, and/or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this action.

5. Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information that is already in NCRIC's possession.

6. Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information not in Medical Center's possession.

7. Medical Center has not yet completed its investigation relating to the litigation and anticipates that as the litigation proceeds, further information may be discovered. Medical Center reserves the right to modify or supplement its objections and responses based on such pertinent information as it may subsequently discover.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES

INTERROGATORY NO. 1: State the names and addresses of any individuals who you know or believe have any information or knowledge of any matters concerning the subject matter of (i) this action, (ii) your defenses to plaintiff's claims, and (iii) your counterclaims, including as to each individual: what that information is (or you believe it to be), and whether the individual was an eye-witness or claims to have been eye-witnesses to the event(s) which is the subject of this litigation.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 1: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 1, and will not respond thereto insofar as it seeks disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege and/or the work-product privilege. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous. This interrogatory is vague and ambiguous because, among other reasons, it is not clear what event or events this Interrogatory refers to as "the subject of this litigation."

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds that it knows or believes that the following people possess knowledge or information concerning NCRIC's claim, Medical Center's defenses thereto, and/or Medical Center's counterclaims:

INTERROGATORY NO. 2: Identify any individuals you intend to call at the trial of this matter and state the subject matter and information known as to each.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 2: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 2 insofar as it is premature at this early stage of the litigation. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds as follows: Medical Center has not presently identified any of the witnesses it expects to call at trial. The information sought by this Interrogatory will be provided at the time and in the form compliant with District of Columbia Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 16.

INTERROGATORY NO. 3: Provide the name, address, title and phone number of all persons who investigated for you the matters concerning the subject matter of (i) this action, (ii) your defenses to plaintiff's claims, and (iii) your counterclaims, the dates of the investigation and describe what each person did. In the event that you claim any privilege exempts these from production, provide the information requested in Instruction 3.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 3: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 3, and will not respond thereto insofar as it seeks disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege and/or the work-product privilege. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds as follows: The investigation on behalf of Medical Center was performed by counsel.

INTERROGATORY NO. 4: State the name and address of each and every expert whom you expect to call as an expert witness at trial, and as to each state:

(a) the subject matter on which the expert is expected to testify;
(b) the substance of the facts and opinions to which the expert is expected to testify; and
(c) a summary of the grounds for each opinion.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 4: See General Objections. Medical Center objects to Interrogatory No. 4 insofar as it is premature at this stage of the litigation.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds as follows: Medical Center has not presently identified which experts, if any, it expects to call as witnesses at trial. The information sought by this Interrogatory will be provided at the time and in the form compliant with District of Columbia Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 16.

INTERROGATORY NO. 5: Describe all of your oral communications with plaintiff and its agents or representatives concerning the subject matter of (i) this action, (ii) your defenses to plaintiff's claims, and (iii) your counterclaims.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 5: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 5 insofar as it seeks information that is more appropriately disclosed in a deposition and can be more efficiently and less burdensomely obtained thereby. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it seeks information in NCRIC's possession, and insofar as it seeks information not in Medical Center's possession.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center will respond by producing selected non-privileged, business records pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 33(d).

INTERROGATORY NO. 6: State the method of calculation and factual bases for any monetary damages you claim against defendant by way of counterclaim, setoff, recoupment or otherwise.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 6: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 6, and will not respond thereto insofar as it seeks disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege and/or the work-product privilege. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it seeks information in NCRIC's possession, and insofar as it seeks information not in Medical Center's possession.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds as follows: At this early point in the litigation, Medical Center has not yet completed the process of assessing and calculating its damages. At present, Medical Center is unable to accurately assess and calculate its damages because, among other reasons, it does not possess the data necessary to determine the exact amount NCRIC owes Medical Center pursuant to the alleged agreement between the parties ("the Plan"). Upon information and b1elief, this data is solely in NCRIC's possession. After Medical Center obtains this data, it will assess and calculate its damages, and supplement its response to this Interrogatory.

INTERROGATORY NO. 7: Identify by reference to interrogatory number they support, all documents which support your answers.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 7: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 7, and will not respond thereto insofar as it seeks disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege and/or the work-product privilege. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar it is vague, ambiguous, overly broad and unduly burdensome. This Interrogatory is unclear because, without limitation: (1) it is not clear to what "answers" the Interrogatory refers and (2) the language "documents which support your answers" is unintelligible.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center will respond by producing non-privileged documents that Medical Center or its representatives consulted or reviewed in the process of preparing these Interrogatories.

INTERROGATORY NO. 8: Identify each amount shown on the attached Exhibit A by reference to row/line and column which you contend is incorrect, overstated, or not accurate of the true amounts in any way (collectively defined as "incorrect").

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 8: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is unduly burdensome, and insofar as it is vague and ambiguous. The Interrogatory is vague and ambiguous because, without limitation: it is not clear whether the Interrogatory seeks verification that the amounts shown on Exhibit A correctly reflect (1) the amounts that NCRIC represented to Medical Center were determined by the Plan and/or (2) the actual amounts set by the Plan. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Medical Center's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession. For example, upon information and belief, the data necessary to calculate most of the amounts shown on Exhibit A is in NCRIC's sole possession.

Medical Center also objects insofar as this Interrogatory is premature at this early stage in the litigation. Medical Center has not yet completed its investigation relating to this litigation, and has not yet received any discovery from NCRIC. Accordingly, Medical Center reserves the right to modify or supplement its response to this Interrogatory at any time, based on pertinent information it may subsequently discover in its continuing investigation.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds as follows: Attached hereto as Exhibit 1 is a photocopy of Exhibit A, overlaid by a grid to set off each column and row. The columns are labeled 1 through 20; the rows are labeled A through F. Each column except F corresponds to a one-year period that the Plan was in operation (e.g., Column A, which is labeled "Y94-95," corresponds to the period between September 1, 1994 to and August 31, 1995); Column F corresponds to the five-year period from September 1, 1994 to August 31, 1999. Each row corresponds to a specific term defined in the Plan or concept contemplated by the Plan (e.g., Row 2 corresponds to the term "Deposit Premium," as defined in the Plan; Row 5 corresponds to the concept of indemnity reserves contemplated by the Plan).

Medical Center contends that, for Columns B through F of Row 2; for Columns C through E in Row 12 ("Development Factor"); for each Column in Rows 13 ("Retrospective Premium"), 14 ("Return Premium" or "Additional Premium" due), and 16 (total "Return Premium" or "Additional Premium" less funds deposited by Medical Center); and for Column A of Rows 17

("Maximum Premium"), 18 ("Minimum Premium"), 19 (Maximum Premium multiplier) and 20 (Minimum Premium multiplier), the amount shown on Exhibit 1 is not the correct amount set by the Plan, for the term or concept corresponding to that row and the period corresponding to that column. Further, upon information and belief, for each column of Rows 5, 6 (corresponding to the concept of ALAE reserves), 7 (corresponding to the term "Loss Reserves") and 11 (Paid Losses plus Loss Reserves), the amount shown on Exhibit 1 is not the correct amount, for the term or concept corresponding to that row and the period corresponding to that column.

INTERROGATORY NO. 9: For each amount identified in your answer to Interrogatory No. 8, state:

a. The factual bases for your contention;
b. How or in what manner the amount is incorrect;
c. The correct amount for the amount you claim is incorrect; and
d. The method of calculation of the amount you claim is correct.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 9: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous. Medical Center objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Medical Center's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession. Upon information and belief, the data necessary to calculate most of the amounts shown on Exhibit A is in NCRIC's sole possession.

Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is premature at this early stage in the litigation. Medical Center has not yet completed its investigation relating to this litigation, and has not yet received any discovery from NCRIC. Accordingly, Medical Center reserves the right to modify or supplement its response to this Interrogatory at any time, based on pertinent information it may subsequently discover in its continuing investigation.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds, based on the facts presently known to it, as follows:

(1) For Medical Center's factual bases for contending, in its response to Interrogatory No. 8, that certain amounts shown on Exhibit 1 are incorrect, see Medical Center's Answer and Counterclaims, including inter alia paragraphs 27 through 43 and 46 through 54 thereof.

(2) For each column of Rows 1, 2, 4, 5 through 11, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of Exhibit 1, Medical Center does not possess the data necessary to calculate the correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term or concept corresponding to the row and the period corresponding to the column. Upon information and belief, such data is in NCRIC's sole possession. Until Medical Center obtains this data, it cannot determine how and in what manner the amounts referred to in its response to Interrogatory No. 8 are incorrect.

(3) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 12 of Exhibit 1 is: "80%" for the period corresponding to Column C; "65%" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "55%" for the period corresponding to Column E. Under the Plan, the correct amount for the term corresponding to Row 19, for the period corresponding to Column A, is "1.33"; for that same period, the correct amount for the term corresponding to Row 20 is ".60". For each column of Rows 1, 2, 4, 5 through 11, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of Exhibit 1, Medical Center does not possess the data necessary to calculate the correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term or concept corresponding to the row and the period corresponding to the column.

(4) Despite lacking the data necessary to calculate many amounts set by the Plan, Medical Center determined that NCRIC's miscalculations of some amounts shown on Exhibit 1 resulted in part from its improper application of the retro formula under the Plan. See Medical Center's Answer and Counterclaims, including inter alia paragraphs 39 through 41, and 45 through 54.

NCRIC's miscalculations of the retro formula include, without limitation:

(a) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Row 2 must be calculated by applying a multiplier. The proper multiplier is .67 for the periods corresponding to Columns C through F, and ((.81 * 1/3) +(.67 * 2/3)) for the period corresponding to Column B. NCRIC applied an incorrect multiplier, approximately .62, when calculating all the amounts in Columns B through F of Row 2, thereby miscalculating each corresponding amount in Row 2. As a result, NCRIC also improperly calculated the amounts in Column F of Rows 14 and 16, which are all based in part on the miscalculated amounts in Columns B through F of Row 2.

(b) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Rows 13 and 14 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 12. As set forth above, the multiplier shown in Columns C through E of Row 12 is incorrect. NCRIC applied this incorrect multiplier in calculating each amount in Columns C through E of Rows 13 and 14, thereby miscalculating each such amount. As a result, NCRIC also improperly calculated the amount in Column F of Rows 13, 14 and 16, which are all based in part on the miscalculated amounts in Rows 13 and 14.

(c) The Plan dictates that the amounts for the term corresponding to Row 17 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 19, and that the amounts for the term corresponding to Row 18 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 20. As set forth above, the multiplier shown in Column A of Rows 19 and 20 is incorrect. NCRIC applied this incorrect multiplier in calculating each amount in Column A of Rows 17 and 18, and thereby miscalculated each such amount. As a result, NCRIC also improperly calculated the amounts in Column F of Row 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18, all of which are based in part on the amounts in Column A of Rows 17 and 18.

(d) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Column F of Row 16 must be calculated based in part on data from the period between September 1, 1993 and August 31, 1994. NCRIC did not include such data (which is not shown on Exhibit 1) in its calculations of Column F of Row 16. As a result, NCRIC miscalculated that amount.

INTERROGATORY NO. 10: State the factual bases supporting any denial by you of any allegation of the complaint and identify any documents on which you rely to support your denial.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 10: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 10, and will not respond thereto insofar as it seeks disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege and/or the work-product privilege. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar it is vague, ambiguous, overly broad and unduly burdensome.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds by referring NCRIC to the detailed allegations set forth in Medical Center's Answer and Counterclaims, including but not limited to the allegations set forth in Paragraphs 20 through 55. Medical Center also will respond by producing non-privileged documents that Medical Center or its representatives consulted or referred to in preparing its Answer and Counterclaims.

INTERROGATORY NO. 11: State the factual bases supporting and related to any affirmative defense you raise in your answer to the complaint.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 11: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 11 insofar it is vague, ambiguous, overly broad and unduly burdensome. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information that is not in Medical Center's possession, and insofar as it requests information that is in NCRIC's possession.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds by referring NCRIC to the detailed allegations set forth in Medical Center's Answer and Counterclaims, including but not limited to the allegations set forth in Paragraphs 20 through 63.

INTERROGATORY NO. 12: State the factual bases for each allegation made by you, and identify all documents supporting, concerning or related to, any counterclaim, setoff, or recoupment you assert or allege against plaintiff.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 12: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 12 insofar it is vague, ambiguous, overly broad and unduly burdensome.

Medical Center also objects insofar as this Interrogatory is premature at this early stage in the litigation. Medical Center has not yet completed its investigation relating to this litigation, and has not yet received any discovery from NCRIC. Accordingly, Medical Center reserves the right to modify or supplement its response to this Interrogatory at any time, based on pertinent information it may subsequently discover in its continuing investigation.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds by referring NCRIC to the detailed allegations in Medical Center's Answer and Counterclaims. Medical Center also will respond by producing selected non-privileged, business records pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 33(d).

INTERROGATORY NO. 13: If you contend that you do not owe the amount of money claimed by plaintiff in the complaint, describe each and every factual or legal basis for your contention.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 13: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 13 insofar it is vague, ambiguous, overly broad and unduly burdensome. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Medical Center's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession.

Medical Center also objects insofar as this Interrogatory is premature at this early stage in the litigation. Medical Center has not yet completed its investigation relating to this litigation, and has not yet received any discovery from NCRIC. Accordingly, Medical Center reserves the right to modify or supplement its response to this Interrogatory at any time, based on pertinent information it may subsequently discover in its continuing investigation.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds by referring NCRIC to the detailed allegations in Medical Center's Answer and Counterclaims.

INTERROGATORY NO. 14: Describe each and every factual basis for your denial of any admission requested of you by plaintiff.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 14: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 14 insofar it is vague, ambiguous, overly broad and unduly burdensome. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Medical Center's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession.

Medical Center also objects insofar as this Interrogatory is premature at this early stage in the litigation. Medical Center has not yet completed its investigation relating to this litigation, and has not yet received any discovery from NCRIC. Accordingly, Medical Center reserves the right to modify or supplement its response to this Interrogatory at any time, based on pertinent information it may subsequently discover in its continuing investigation.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds by referring NCRIC to the detailed allegations set forth in Medical Center's Answer and Counterclaims and to its Objections and Response to Plaintiff's First Request for Admissions.

INTERROGATORY NO. 15: Describe all of your oral communications with persons other than plaintiff and its agents or representatives, including Michael Feldman, concerning the subject matter of (i) this action, (ii) your defenses to plaintiff's claims, and (iii) your counterclaims.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 15: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 15, and will not respond thereto insofar as it seeks disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client and/or the work-product privileges.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center will respond by producing selected non-privileged, business records pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure Rule 33(d).

STATEMENT OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE THE OPINIONS AND TESTIMONY OF COLUMBIA'S DESIGNATED DAMAGES EXPERT

Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") submits this Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of its Motion to Exclude the opinions and expected testimony of Ddefendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.'s ("Columbia") designated damages expert, Peter Ben Ezra. The testimony of this alleged expert is inherently defective, speculative, and unqualified. Columbia cannot be permitted to put forward and rely upon a witness: (1) who without independent verification accepted Columbia's counsel's representations concerning the group of physicians who allegedly stopped (or reduced) admitting patients at Columbia, a fact upon which his entire damage analysis is premised; (2) who used unaudited and speculative data having no reliable support; (3) who simply presumed causation of damages; (4) who performed no analysis or investigation related to the other factors which may have been involved in a physician's decision to leave or reduce the number of patients he or she admitted to Columbia; and (5) who cannot be independent or objective because he is the Chairman of the Board of Columbia.

I. Introduction

In this case, Columbia has asserted a number of tort and contract based claims under which it alleges NCRIC damaged the hospital. During discovery, it was incumbent upon Columbia to put forward evidence of its claimed damages which were proximately caused by NCRIC's conduct. Columbia failed to do so.

In its Rule 26(b)(4) statement, Columbia informed NCRIC and this Court that its proposed expert damages witness would provide testimony:

> with regard to the calculation of damages proximately caused by NCRIC's torts, including (1) the economic effects, such as lost revenue from decreased patient volume, of certain practice groups moving their practices from Columbia to competing hospitals, and any reputational harms stemming from related events; (2) the lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fundraising activities and events; and (3) the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been available to Columbia.
>
> The substance of the facts and opinions to which Mr. Ben Ezra is expected to testify is: that, as a proximate result of NCRIC's torts, Columbia has suffered and will suffer economic harm including loss of revenue, damaged reputation in the community, and loss of good will . . . .

See Columbia's Rule 26(b)(4) statement, attached as Exhibit A.

Contrary to Columbia's direct representation, Mr. Ben Ezra did little analysis. Specifically, Mr. Ben Ezra admitted that he did no damage calculations and had no conclusions (and did no investigation) resulting from NCRIC's alleged torts concerning: (1) loss of good will (Ben Ezra Dep. at 10-11) (Excerpts of the Deposition of Peter Ben Ezra attached as Exhibit B); (2) damaged reputation in the community (Ben Ezra Dep. at 11); (3) loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities (Ben Ezra Dep. at 11); and (4) lost revenue from the non-occurrence fundraising activities and events (Ben Ezra Dep. at 10-14).[1]

[1] Under separate cover, NCRIC has also submitted a separate Motion in Limine concerning additional categories of damages which Columbia failed to provide factual support and which should be excluded at trial.

16d-001967

With respect to the single damage claim for which he attempted to establish a damage number (estimated lost cash flow), Mr. Ben Ezra: (a) simply accepted as true the representation of counsel with respect to the doctors who allegedly left Columbia (Ben Ezra Dep. at 140); (b) did no analysis or investigation why doctors left Columbia (Ben Ezra Dep. at 140); (c) used unaudited data (Ben Ezra Dep. at 164); (d) did no analysis or research to determine causation (Ben Ezra Dep. at 133);[2] (e) presumed that each doctor would work until he or she turned age 65 without reviewing any studies or analysis concerning the retirement age of physicians (Ben Ezra Dep. at 154-55); and (f) simply assumed a 20 year damage projection without offering any facts as to why he selected that time period (Ben Ezra Dep. at 151-153).

Based upon these "facts," Columbia seeks to have Mr. Ben Ezra opine that Columbia will incur over $20 million in damages over the next 20 years based on the conduct of NCRIC. Mr. Ben Ezra's report is fundamentally flawed and must be excluded as a matter of law.

Mr. Ben Ezra's report and its findings are based on unreliable data, which is not the type reasonably relied upon by experts calculating damages. See Dyas v. United States, 376 A.2d 827, 832 (D.C. 1977); In re Melton, 597 A.2d 892, 901 n.10 (D.C. 1991) (en banc). Mr. Ben Ezra's opinion fails to satisfy even the minimal standard for admissibility of expert opinion testimony imposed by District of Columbia courts. See Washington Metro. Area Transit Auth. v. Davis, 606 A.2d 165, 177-78 (D.C. 1992) (holding that speculative expert testimony about lost earnings should be excluded where unsupported by sufficient facts); Toy v. District of Columbia,

2 "Question: 'I just want to make clear, you don't have any information with respect to causation? You're not here for that purpose, are you?' Answer: 'No. I was just given a list and ran my analysis.' " (Ben Ezra Dep. at 133).

549 A.2d 1, 7-8 (D.C. 1988) (finding that expert testimony lacked a sufficient factual basis to establish national standard of care for police departments). To be admissible, expert opinion testimony must be based on facts or data "of a type reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field," although "the facts or data need not be admissible in evidence." Melton, 597 A.2d at 901-02 (adopting Federal Rule of Evidence 703 in the District of Columbia). Although the Court should give an expert latitude to choose the sources of information on which to base an opinion, it has an "independent responsibility" to determine whether this underlying data "meet[s] minimum standards of admissibility." See Melton, 597 A.2d at 903. If the data underlying an expert's opinion "are so lacking in probative force and reliability that no reasonable expert could base an opinion on them, an opinion which rests entirely on them must be excluded." Id.

Additionally, any relevance that can be attributed to Mr. Ben Ezra's opinions is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice to NCRIC. See Johnson v. United States, 683 A.2d 1087, 1099 (D.C. 1996) ("regarding the admission of evidence generally, this jurisdiction will follow the policy set forth in Federal Rule of Evidence 403 –'evidence [otherwise relevant] may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice.'"). For the reasons discussed below, Mr. Ben Ezra's testimony should be excluded in its entirety.

II. Mr. Ben Ezra's Purported Testimony is Sheer Speculation and is Inadmissible

Less than one day before the scheduled deposition (and one week before the close of discovery), counsel for Columbia provided NCRIC the Report of Peter Ben Ezra dated January 22, 2002 (the "Ben Ezra Report," attached as Ex. C). Mr. Ben Ezra's report purports to quantify the "estimated total lost cashflow to the Columbia Hospital for Women as a result of the NCRIC group of doctors leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women . . . ." See Ben Ezra Report at 1.

Mr. Ben Ezra professed to calculate the estimated lost cash flow using two alternative damages analyses. Each analysis relies on a list, provided by Columbia's counsel, of doctors who allegedly left Columbia, or remained there but admitted fewer patients, because of alleged unlawful acts of NCRIC.[3/] As he admitted, Mr. Ben Ezra conducted no independent investigation or inquiry to determine why those doctors left Columbia or admitted fewer patients, and he has no understanding if NCRIC was even a factor. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 140.

Both of Mr. Ben Ezra's damage analyses are based on the same underlying data. Although he admitted that he was unsure of the sources upon which he relied, Mr. Ben Ezra nonetheless relied exclusively on Columbia documents indicating: (1) total "charges" of patients admitted by NCRIC doctors, and (2) total "adjustments" for those admitted patients.[4/] Mr. Ben Ezra used data for only fiscal year 2000 (before the alleged wrongdoing) and fiscal year 2001 (after). Mr. Ben Ezra performed a simple mathematical calculation to arrive at the difference between the fiscal year 2000 and 2001 net charges for those doctors who, according to representations made only by Columbia's counsel, have left or decreased patient admissions due to NCRIC's conduct. Mr. Ben Ezra's first model assumes lost cash flow will continue for 20 years, while the second model projects damages to continue for three to thirty years depending on a doctor's retirement age, which he assumed to be 65.

[3/] For convenience only with respect to this motion, those doctors on the list provided by Columbia counsel to Mr. Ben Ezra will be referred to as the "NCRIC doctors." See Ben Ezra Report (Ex. C at 1).

[4/] Mr. Ben Ezra testified that he "did not know what goes into the adjustment column." See Ben Ezra Dep. at 59-60, 160. He also admitted the data was unaudited. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 164.

While Mr. Ben Ezra purported to use a "scientifically valid methodology"-- a discounted cash flow analysis -- his application of this method warrants exclusion because: (1) there is no evidence that the underlying benchmark data he used was statistically meaningful or appropriate; (2) he applied a marginal cost percentage strictly (and literally) based on an accounting textbook example with no assurance that such percentage approximates Columbia's true variable costs; and (3) he relied upon a list of doctors provided by Columbia counsel which finds no support in the record. Although a discounted cash flow analysis may well in theory be based on sound economic principles, Mr. Ben Ezra's application of this methodology here is unreasonable and unreliable. See K.W. Plastics v. United States Can Co., 131 F. Supp. 2d 1289, 1292 (M.D. Ala. 2001) (excluding expert's calculation of lost profits, which was based on "impermissibly flawed" application of "sound economic principles").

The underlying facts and assumptions relied upon by Mr. Ben Ezra find no support in the record, and cannot be relied upon by a reasonable expert calculating damages. Mr. Ben Ezra's opinion should be excluded because it amounts to mere conjecture and raw speculation derived from an impermissibly flawed application of economic principles. See Washington v. Washington Hosp. Ctr., 579 A.2d 177, 181 (D.C. 1990) (noting that, "[t]he purpose of expert opinion testimony is to avoid jury findings based on mere speculation and conjecture . . . [and] [t]he sufficiency of the foundation for those opinions should be measured with this purpose in mind.").

A. Mr. Ben Ezra's Use of One Year of Benchmark Data is Improper.

When calculating the amount Columbia allegedly lost due to NCRIC's actions, Mr. Ben Ezra did not conduct an historical analysis of Columbia's rate of collections based on services provided over time. Rather, he chose an arbitrary single year of data -- fiscal year 2000

-- as his benchmark and simply compared that data to the subsequent fiscal year.[5] Mr. Ben Ezra testified that his primary objective was simply to ascertain a "delta," or change, between the two years. Ben Ezra Dep. at 165.

Mr. Ben Ezra's use of a single data point does not represent the type of data reasonably relied upon in conducting a cash flow analysis. In effect, Mr. Ben Ezra assumed that a single data point could represent an historical trend, and took no measures to verify whether this sole data point represented a typical year for Columbia. Ben Ezra Dep. at 165 ("I'm not sure what a good year or a bad year would be."). Essentially, Mr. Ben Ezra speculated that, because that data was the most current, he was justified in using it. Additionally, Mr. Ben Ezra admits that he chose to ignore data for other years simply because "[i]t didn't look right." Ben Ezra Dep. at 161.

It cannot be credibly asserted that a reasonable expert conducting the type of analysis performed by Mr. Ben Ezra would blindly rely upon limited, incomplete and speculative data. When the facts underlying an expert's opinion "are so lacking in probative force and reliability that no reasonable expert could base an opinion on them, an opinion which rests entirely upon them must be excluded." See In re Melton, 597 A.2d at 903; Davis, 606 A.2d at 177-78; Carter v. Shoppers Food Warehouse Md. Corp., 727 A.2d 958, 963 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1999) (stating, "[a]n expert's opinion 'has no probative force unless there is a sufficient basis upon which to support his conclusions.'") (citation omitted) . There is nothing to suggest that the damages Mr. Ben Ezra estimated for 2001 will extend at an identical rate for the subsequent nineteen years. By his own admission, he did nothing to verify this critical assumption upon which he relied. See Keranen v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 743 A.2d 703, 717 (D.C. 2000)

[5] Q . . . [Y]ou chose one year as your benchmark where you had the data, correct? A. Correct. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 164-65.

(stating that the facts on which experts rely must permit "reasonably accurate conclusions, as distinguished from guesswork or conjecture," and "'must be in terms of the probable and not of the possible'") (citation omitted) ; see also Anderson v. Whittaker Corp., 692 F. Supp. 764, 769-70 (W.D. Mich. 1988) (rejecting expert's calculation of future earnings, which were based on growth rates calculated using data from earnings over only "a few recent years"), rev'd on other grounds, 894 F.2d 804 (6th Cir. 1990); K.W. Plastics, 131 F. Supp.2d at 1295 (excluding an expert opinion based on a simplistic extrapolation where expert failed "'to give more than fleeting thought to numerous matters that are relevant'") (citation omitted). In fact, Mr. Ben Ezra seemingly ignored other data in Columbia's files. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 161. He did not review any data that could justify his assumption that the decrease in patient revenues of the NCRIC doctors would continue at a constant rate, despite having access to this type of information as Chairman of Columbia's Board of Directors.

B. Mr. Ben Ezra Relied on a Marginal Cost Figure Which Does Not Bear Any Relation to Columbia's Actual Marginal Costs.

In calculating the contribution margin lost by Columbia as a result of the NCRIC doctors leaving or cutting back on patient admissions at Columbia, Mr. Ben Ezra utilized a marginal cost of providing services equal to 30% of the net realizable value. This assumption drives his calculation of damages by deducting the marginal cost from each doctor's estimated revenues. Columbia proudly touts this figure as a "textbook" methodology.

The 30% figure assumed by Mr. Ben Ezra, however, is wholly speculative. The number was taken from a random accounting textbook problem at the end of a chapter, rather than from a review of Columbia's financial records. Ben Ezra Dep. at 181. Mr. Ben Ezra testified that "because [he] was looking for a number for marginal cost, the best [he] could find was [an] example problem in the textbook that [he] use[d] for the management accounting course" he taught. Ben Ezra Dep. at 180. Mr. Ben Ezra admitted that he had no knowledge regarding whether St. Vincent's Hospital (the entity named in the workbook problem contained in the book), was comparable to Columbia, or even that it existed. Ben Ezra Dep. at 181. Despite acknowledging that finding a percentage was very difficult (Ben Ezra Dep. at 179), Mr. Ben Ezra performed no analysis at Columbia to ascertain true marginal costs or to test the 30% figure that he simply applied from a textbook example. He failed to review actual cost accounting information or any other financial documents at Columbia, all of which would certainly be available to him in his role as Chairman of the Board of Directors.

Mr. Ben Ezra's assumption that Columbia had an overall 30% variable cost figure is pure speculation, and his assertion that he found the number to be "reasonable" does not suffice for the type of expert analysis required of him under the standards imposed by this Court. See Melton, 597 A.2d at 903 (noting that "the court may not abdicate its independent responsibilities to decide if the bases meet minimum standards of reliability as a condition of admissibility"); K.W. Plastics, 131 F. Supp. 2d at 1294 (excluding expert testimony in part because the expert "was unable to articulate with any degree of specificity the basis for his cost calculations[,] . . . explain how his experience led to his conclusion, ... or even [explain] why his experience is a sufficient basis for the conclusion"); see also Skrabak v. Skrabak, 673 A.2d 732, 739-40 (Md. Ct. Spec. App. 1996) (affirming exclusion of expert valuation testimony with "no logical basis, other than guesswork and speculation"). It is unreasonable for an expert to rely on an unproven, speculative figure -- taken blindly from a problem in a book -- and the calculations based on this unwarranted reliance should be excluded.

C. The List of NCRIC Doctors Finds No Support in the Record.

The reliability of Mr. Ben Ezra's report is further undermined by its unreasonable reliance on a list of departing doctors supplied by counsel, which is central to the damage calculations. It is axiomatic that an expert's opinion cannot be based on speculation or conjecture. See, e.g., Keranen v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 743 A.2d at 717 (acknowledging that the facts on which experts rely must permit "reasonably accurate conclusions, as distinguished from guesswork or conjecture," and "'must be in terms of the probable and not of the possible'") (citation omitted). When an expert uses assumptions in arriving at his conclusions, those assumptions must find some support in the record. See, e.g., Pennsylvania Dental Ass'n v. Med. Serv. Ass'n, 745 F.2d 248, 262 (3d Cir. 1984) ("the factual predicate of an expert's opinion must find some support in the record"); Shaw v. Strackhouse, 920 F.2d 1135, 1142 (3d Cir. 1990) (holding that where an expert's opinion is predicated on factual assumptions, those assumptions must find some support in the record); Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 207 F.3d 1039, 1057 (8th Cir. 2000) (noting that an "expert opinion cannot sustain a jury's verdict when it 'is not supported by sufficient facts to validate it in the eyes of the law, or when indisputable record facts contradict or otherwise render the opinion unreasonable'" and that "[e]xpert testimony that is speculative is not competent proof and contributes 'nothing to a "legally sufficient evidentiary basis."'") (citation omitted).

Mr. Ben Ezra's entire analysis relies on a list of doctors provided by Columbia's counsel, and counsel's unsupported representation that these doctors left or decreased admissions to Columbia because of NCRIC's alleged conduct. It is undisputed that Mr. Ben Ezra did nothing to ensure the accuracy of the data provided by Columbia's counsel.[6/] He accepted the list as it was presented to him, and took no measures to verify its reasonableness or accuracy. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 96-97 ("I relied on this list as represented by counsel."); id. at 106 ("My presumption is if they were on the list . . . it is because of the NCRIC dispute."). Mr. Ben Ezra made no independent investigation regarding the reasons why the NCRIC doctors left Columbia or admitted fewer patients in fiscal year 2001 than in fiscal year 2000. In his capacity as Chairman of Columbia's Board of Directors, it can hardly be said that Mr. Ben Ezra did not have access to the doctors included on the list provided by Columbia counsel.

Mr. Ben Ezra failed to consider the possibility that doctors on the list may have left Columbia for reasons unrelated to NCRIC, and did not factor this likelihood into his analysis. For example, the list includes doctors who admitted fewer patients to Columbia in fiscal year 2001, but does not consider whether these doctors, for any reason, also admitted fewer patients to other hospitals at which they enjoy admitting privileges. See Ben Ezra Dep. at 139-40 (acknowledging that he made no inquiry regarding whether physicians maintained hospital admitting privileges at other hospitals).

Without even attempting to discover why these doctors admitted fewer patients to Columbia, Mr. Ben Ezra cannot reasonably attribute the decrease to NCRIC.[7/] Any damages calculated on the basis of this list are the result of unreasonable reliance on speculative facts, and should not be admitted into evidence.

[6/] Significantly, Mr. Ben Ezra also failed to make any independent inquiry in support of his opinions in this case. He did not review a single deposition, Columbia's financial statements or data related to actual cash collections and patient mix.

[7/] Inexplicably, Mr. Ben Ezra excludes from his analysis any physician who he characterizes as "non dilutive." See Ben Ezra Dep. at 102. Those doctors created net charges in fiscal year 2001 that were greater than fiscal year 2000 and therefore, Mr. Ben Ezra reasons, must be excluded.

16d-001976

D. Mr. Ben Ezra Speculates the Length of Time Damages Would Accrue

As discussed above, Mr. Ben Ezra presented two cash flow methodologies: the first based on an assumed damages period of 20 years and the second is based on a retirement age of 65. Mr. Ben Ezra conducted no analysis to arrive at either of these projections. First, there is no evidence in the record that Columbia will be damaged for the next twenty years. Second, Mr. Ben Ezra had no basis for assuming that the NCRIC doctors would retire at age 65. He testified as follows concerning his assumptions:

> Q: Have you done any studies or analysis with respect to what the average retirement date of a physician in the District of Columbia is?
>
> A: No, I have not.
>
> Q: Do you know what the number would be?
>
> A: No, I do not.

See Ben Ezra Dep. at 154.

Mr. Ben Ezra then admitted that he had no data to support the assumed retirement age except his "general experience." See Ben Ezra Dep. at 243. Both of these assumptions are critical to the alleged damages estimated by Mr. Ben Ezra. Neither figure, however, is supported by facts in the record, and his reliance on both is speculative and unreasonable.

E. Mr. Ben Ezra's Opinion Must be Excluded Under the Principles Espoused in Fed. R. Evid. 403

Mr. Ben Ezra's report and proposed testimony should also be excluded because its probative value is substantially outweighed by the very real danger of unfair prejudice to NCRIC. See Johnson, 683 A.2d at 1099. Courts regularly reject evidence under Rule 403 when the "evidence" might mislead a jury because of an impression of scientific or economic infallibility. See, e.g., United States v. Carswell, 287 U.S. App. D.C. 348, 922 F.2d 876, 879

(D.C. Cir. 1991) (noting if a witness' expertise on a subject appears to be attenuated or questionable, then the trial court may conclude the danger of prejudice by labeling the witness an expert outweighs the possibility the testimony may be helpful).

To illustrate application of this principle, in City of New York v. Pullman Inc., 662 F.2d 910, 915 (2d Cir. 1981), the appellate court affirmed the decision of the trial judge in excluding a report that had "'an aura of special reliability and trustworthiness'" but was actually based largely on hearsay, was incomplete, and was prepared for purposes different than those for which it was offered. Similarly, Mr. Ben Ezra's unreasonable reliance on an insufficient benchmark for data, an arbitrary and unsupported marginal cost figure, as well as an unchecked list of physicians who allegedly left or decreased admissions to Columbia, fails the test for admission under Rule 403 as it will be difficult for a jury to understand the inherent problems with its accuracy.

The reasons for excluding the proffered expert testimony here are magnified by the involvement of the witness as a Board Member of Columbia. Mr. Ben Ezra is not a disinterested expert, but is a party representative. By claiming he is an expert, Columbia and its counsel hope to dress up their speculative damage claim and pass it off in front of a jury as if it has a sound economic or scientific basis. Nothing could be further from the truth. Mr. Ben Ezra and Columbia's counsel should not be permitted to conduct that charade at trial.

III. Conclusion

Taken together, Mr. Ben Ezra's mistakes and inaccuracies combine to produce an unreliable and prejudicial report and proposed testimony, the admission of which at trial would significantly and unfairly prejudice the jury against NCRIC.

DEFENDANT'S RULE 26(B)(4) STATEMENT
AS A PROPONENT OF A CLAIM

Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"), by counsel, hereby states, pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure 16(b)(3) and 26(b)(4), that it expects to call at trial, as an expert witness on its behalf:

1. Peter Ben Ezra, 4930 Fort Sumner Drive, Bethesda, MD 20816-1945.

Mr. Ben Ezra (whose curriculum vitae is attached hereto as Exhibit A) is expected to testify with regard to the calculation of damages proximately caused by NCRIC's torts, including (1) the economic effects, such as lost revenue from decreased patient volume, of certain practice groups moving their practices from Columbia to competing hospitals, and any reputational harms stemming from related events; (2) the lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fundraising activities and events; and (3) the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been available to Columbia.

The substance of the facts and opinions to which Mr. Ben Ezra is expected to testify is: that, as a proximate result of NCRIC's torts, Columbia has suffered and will suffer economic harm including loss of revenue, damaged reputation in the community, and loss of good will; and further, that the total sum of economic harm that Columbia has suffered and will suffer as a result of NCRIC's torts runs in the tens of millions of dollars.

For his expected opinion testimony, Mr. Ben Ezra, a Certified Public Accountant and Professorial Lecturer in the Department of Accountancy at the George Washington University, draws upon his professional training, knowledge and experience in the fields of financial accounting, managerial accounting, and financial statement analysis. The factual data upon which Mr. Ben Ezra's expected testimony depends includes his analysis of Columbia's historical records and reports, operating statistics and financial results, and other relevant market and financial data. Mr. Ben Ezra's expected testimony also will draw upon the intimate knowledge of Columbia's financial affairs the he developed as a financial advisor and consultant to the hospital for several years, from the period of receivership through the period of bankruptcy.

2. Ms. Julia M. Brill, Esq. 2105 Bay Front Terrace, Annapolis, MD 21401

Ms. Brill (whose curriculum vitae is attached hereto as Exhibit B), or any similarly-qualified expert who may assist her, is expected to testify with regard to (1) methods, formulas and criteria for setting loss reserves by hospitals and/or insurers for medical malpractice liability claims in the District of Columbia and/or surrounding metropolitan area; and (2) the reasonableness and propriety, in light of the industry standards for setting loss reserves for medical malpractice liability claims in the District of Columbia and/or surrounding metropolitan area, and in light of other loss reserves of the same nature set by NCRIC in the same region, of the loss reserves set by NCRIC under the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement.

Due to NCRIC, Inc.'s untimely production of documents, Ms. Brill has not had an adequate opportunity to review and analyze all of the documents necessary for her to evaluate the reasonableness and propriety of NCRIC's loss reserves. As such, Ms. Brill has not yet fully developed her factual and opinion testimony. However, Columbia expects that, once Ms. Brill complete her review of the relevant NCRIC claim files, she may testify that NCRIC's loss reserves are unreasonable and improper, in light of the aforementioned industry standards.

The factual basis for Ms. Brill's opinions, should she complete her review of NCRIC's claim files and fully develop her testimony, will be a detailed understanding of each claim for which NCRIC set a loss reserve, developed through a careful review of the files. Ms. Brill's opinion will be based, it is expected, on her experience as an attorney and risk management consultant in this area.

* * *

Columbia makes the forgoing statements regarding the experts it expects to call at trial subject to the following qualifications: (1) Columbia reserves the right to call any witness listed in Defendant's Initial Rule 26(B)(4) Statement as a Proponent of a Claim (March 12, 2001), or any other suitable person later discovered by Columbia, if it is unable to retain Ms. Brill as an expert; (2) Columbia reserves its right to supplement or change this statement, including its expert witness designations, at any time during the course of discovery, or if its currently-pending motion to extend the time for filing this statement is granted; and (3) Columbia reserves its right to designate any of the foregoing, or others, as rebuttal expert witnesses at a later time.

Deposition of:

called for examination by counsel for the Plaintiff, pursuant to Agreement, taken at the offices of Bryan Cave, LLP, 700 Thirteenth Street, N.W., Suite 700, Washington, D.C. 20005-3960, before John W. Whitman, RMR, Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, commencing at 10:04 a.m., when were present on behalf of the respective parties:

of which are called major procedures, some of which are called minor procedures. I have the quantities for those procedures; I don't have the prices; and until I get prices that I can depend on I can't do that extension, price times quantity equals total. It would be a good way of checking the results in the model that we have in front of us today.

Q. Have you made a request of Columbia or its lawyers to provide you with this additional data?

A. Yes, I have. But to this point in time there is not acceptable data. In other words, I can't rely on the data they have given me.

MR. LEAHY: I represent on the record Mr. Ben Ezra has been working for about four or five months to try and get this and hasn't yet successfully gotten this data. He can testify to that if you want.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. I would like to ask you just a couple questions about what you were designated to do in this case. Does your expert report contain any information with respect to any loss of goodwill suffered by Columbia Hospital?

A. Negative. It does not.

Q. Does your report contain any calculations for damages related to the reputation of Columbia in the community?

A. No, it does not.

Q. Does your report contain any information or calculations concerning the loss of specific sources of financing and partnership opportunities that otherwise would have been made available to Columbia?

A. No, it does not.

Q. Does your report contain any information concerning the lost revenue resulting from the non-occurrence of specific fund raising activities?

A. No, it does not.

Q. How about any reputational harms stemming from related events?

MR. LEAHY: Objection; asked and answered.

Whenever I object, you can answer the question.

THE WITNESS: No, it does not.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Do you anticipate doing any further calculations or analysis with respect to goodwill?

A. If I'm requested to, I will.

Q. Have you been requested to?

A. At this point I have not been requested.

Q. Would your answer be the same for damages to reputation in the community?

A. Yes, it is. If requested I will be glad to furnish an expert opinion on that.

Q. But you haven't been requested to do so at this point?

A. No, I have not been requested to do that.

Q. Can I get you to confirm, sir, that you are the witness who will be testifying at trial in this case?

A. I assume I am.

Q. Has anybody been working with you, try it that way, on this report?

A. No. I did this report. I'm the only person that worked on this report. This is my product.

Q. In addition to the other forms of damages, which I have just asked you about, are you aware of other damages that you did not calculate?

A. There was supposed to be a series of galas for fund raising. I know that the hospital was planning to receive net proceeds, in the order of magnitude of about $2 million on an annual basis, I believe, for about two or three years. That has not happened.

Q. Have you done any work related to those?

A. I have been at meetings where that has been discussed.

Q. I'm sorry, for the purposes of this case, have you done any damage calculation with respect to those issues?

A. No, I haven't, other than I am aware that they expected about $2 million a year.

Q. But that's not contained in your report?

A. No, it is not contained in my report.

Q. And you're not going to testify about that today?

A. I don't think so. I thought the subject was going to be my report.
Q. I'm just asking all the things you considered, sir, that's all.
A. In addition, it was my understanding that they were trying to seek financing from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.
Q. When you say, "they," do you mean Columbia Hospital?
A. It's interesting. When we say Columbia Hospital, there is really a Columbia Hospital Foundation and then there is also a Columbia Hospital Medical Center and so we'll just talk about an entity called Columbia Hospital, but legally they are different legal entities.
Q. I appreciate that.
A. Yes. As I recall, the scope of magnitude was somewhere in the order of about $15 million to $20 million on a refinancing, which would have allowed the hospital to borrow funds from HUD at the Treasury cost of borrowing plus maybe a quarter or a half a point, but that would be very favorable.

Q. That's not contained in that report?
A. That is not contained in that report at all.
Q. And you're not expected to testify about that?
A. No. However, would it would have affected the calculations here if they had obtained that financing, because I used the cost of capital being the current cost of financing on the real estate, which is the highest cost of capital.
So for purposes of discussion the Treasury cost of borrowing today for 30 years is five percent, and if HUD were to put a quarter or a half point on that the cost of borrowing to the hospital would be 5 1/4 or 5 1/2 as opposed to 10 1/2 that I did use for my analysis.
MR. BADAMI: I would like to ask the court reporter to mark this as Exhibit No. 2.

(Ben Ezra Exhibit 2 was marked for identification.)
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, I'm showing you what's been marked as Ben Ezra Exhibit No. 2 and ask you, sir, if you recognize this?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me what it is, please?
A. It's basically my curriculum vitae. It's like a resume. It explains my professional experience.
Q. Is this resume accurate?
A. Yes, it is.
Q. Can you tell me about your post-high school education?
A. I graduated Montgomery Blair High School. Then I went to the University of Maryland. My major was information systems management, and my minor was accounting. I graduated with high honors from the University of Maryland.
I then got my graduate degree at George Washington University. My major was managerial accounting.

From there I passed the CPA exam on the first sitting and was one of the highest scorers in the State of Maryland on the CPA exam.
Subsequently, I've been working at George Washington University from about 1976 --
Q. You have '78, I believe.
A. -- from 1978 to current. I'm an adjunct professor.
Q. What does that mean?
A. Basically, a part-time professor. I don't get full benefits as a full-time professor would. I'm called a professorial lecturer, which is the highest rank for an adjunct professor. And I've been doing that since 1978 to the current time.
And I brought a couple of my textbooks, if you're interested in them. I encourage everybody to take a managerial accounting course and a financial accounting course.
Q. I appreciate that. Let me ask you about differences in non-NCRIC doctors, and this is a unit cost data.

Q. Okay, so when you say that, what was Columbia's net revenue per discharge?

A. Assuming a discharge is a patient.

Q. Right.

A. Let's go to the -- where it says, "Total doctors"?

Q. Right.

MR. LEAHY: Do you want him to write on the exhibit?

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. You can write on the exhibit.

A. I'm sorry.

Q. That's all right.

A. For the period, let's say, 10/1/2000 to 9/30/2001.

Q. Okay.

A. The number of patients in total were 33,688.

Q. That's the number of patients at Columbia

Hospital for that year?

A. That is correct. Based on the information provided to me by the hospital.

Q. If that information is wrong your data is wrong?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Okay.

A. When I took that number and divided it into the total charges I got $1,975.56 was the average charge for each one of the patients. On the records of the hospital they have the amount of adjustments. I would use the term, write downs.

Q. Let's talk about that. You say adjustments; what are you including in adjustments?

A. It's whatever they had in that field that they provided me for adjustments, I'll use the term, discounts, that they provide to the health insurers because health insurers, like, Blue Cross-Blue Shield don't pay 100 percent of the bill charged, and they pay something less than that. And that adjustment figure is the amount of the discount, and this is based on various contracts.

Q. You list the number of adjustments and you said the Blue Cross contract. What about the Medicare contract?

A. Medicare.

Q. Other HMOs?

A. All of them. No one seems to pay full price anymore.

Q. How about bad debts?

A. I believe the charity cases are probably part of that adjustment column.

Q. You believe, or do you know?

A. I don't know for a fact. It's whatever the write-downs were.

Q. You're not sure what encompassed all of those write-downs?

A. No, I don't know, nor did I audit that.

Q. You took what Columbia gave you and ran with it?

A. That's exactly it.

Q. Keep going.

A. Therefore, taking the total payments that they received to date, dividing it by the number patients, I arrived at the payments per patient. I did that for the NCRIC doctor group, which is a group of doctors that there is a list of. It's in the reports.

Q. We'll get there.

A. And subtracted the NCRIC doctors group from the total doctors to arrive at the non-NCRIC doctors group. So that explains the top.

MR. LEAHY: By non-NCRIC, you don't know whether those doctors who have NCRIC insurance, you simply are designating them as such?

THE WITNESS: It's the difference between the doctors that are on the list that I have in here --

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Right.

A. -- and the total doctors.

Q. Right.

A. This a mathematical process.

(Discussion off the record.)
MR. BADAMI: I ask the court reporter to mark the next exhibit, numbered CHWMC 5640 as, I guess, Ben Ezra 8.
(Ben Ezra Exhibit 8 was marked for identification.)
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, I'm showing you what's been marked as Ben Ezra Deposition Exhibit No. 8, and I'll ask you, sir, if you recognize this document?
A. Okay, the first sheet I recognize. It was a sheet that was faxed to me containing the doctors' names and numbers.
Q. Right.
A. That's labeled 5640.
Q. Right.
A. This other physician listing has never been furnished to me, to my knowledge.
Q. I've just been informed by my colleague that was a copying error. You were only supposed to get the first page. I apologize for that.

A. No problem.
MR. LEAHY: May I point out this document is designated for counsel only, so Mr. Fargis is not supposed to see it.
MR. BADAMI: He has not seen it.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Ben Ezra Exhibit 8, 5640, the single page, did you review this document in doing your report?
A. I utilized this document in doing my report, yes.
Q. How did you use this document for your report?
A. I used it to select the physicians that I have in tables in which I used to generate the projections for the total dollars lost to Columbia and their present value.
Q. Do you know where this list came from? How were these doctors selected? Let's try it that way.
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: I was furnished that by counsel to Columbia.

BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Do you have any idea how this group was picked?
A. No.
Q. You accepted the representation on its face?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the representation about who these doctors represent?
A. These represented doctors that either left, or have no one providing patients to Columbia, or potentially have cut back on the patients that they have sent to Columbia.
Q. Let's talk about that for a minute. When you say potentially cut back, what does that mean?
A. Well, when I looked at some of these doctors it looked like they didn't cut back.
Q. So is this list, then, in your opinion inaccurate?
A. It's a list of doctors' names and numbers. I don't know whether it's accurate or not. I didn't audit it. I relied on this list as represented by counsel. This represents the population or pool of doctors that may have left or cut back at Columbia.

Q. And I apologize if I am misspeaking, but I thought that you testified a minute ago that you found that some of these doctors either didn't leave Columbia or didn't cut back, is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Which doctors are those?
A. The ones that are not part of my report. I can do that match if you like.
Q. Yes, I would appreciate that.
A. I would like to refer your attention to Page 8713.
Q. Referring to your report, Page 8713?
A. Yes.
Q. I'm with you.
A. So as we go down the list the first doctor that I used was Dr. 202, which means Dr. 19, 20 and 222 were not used in the report.
Q. Dr. 19, 20 and --

A. Yes.
Q. Do you have any idea how this list was created?
A. What we were looking for is the doctors that have left or cut back at Columbia.
Q. Did you participate in creating this list?
A. No.
Q. You just testified to that you have excluded a number of doctors from your report?
A. Yes.
Q. Tell me why you did that.
A. When I did the analysis, for example, I think it was Dr. 44039, there was no data. There was nothing there.
Q. How about Dr. Becker, No. 19?
A. Dr. Becker, as I recall, he was either close to retirement or had retired. Basically, to use my phrase, was not dilutive in nature; in other words, was not significant or actually may have increased.
Q. So he might have been improperly put on this list?

A. That's correct.
Q. How about Dr. Berryman, No. 20?
A. The same.
Q. You say, "The same." Could you -- either he didn't have enough admissions or it could have increased?
A. Yes.
Q. Dr. Birnkrant, No. 222?
A. The same.
Q. Is it the same for all the doctors?
A. Yes. Basically, if they are not dilutive in nature I did not include them.
Q. When you say dilutive in nature, did you make a determination it was dilutive?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the criteria whether it was dilutive?
A. When I did the analysis, if the number of cases had gone up or even the money had gone up, then it would not be dilutive in nature.
Q. So if the number of cases or the dollars went down a little they were included on your list?

A. That's correct.
Q. Let's talk about the reasons why some of that might have happened. Do you know why a doctor might have referred either less patients or less dollar value to Columbia?
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: Do I know on an individual case?
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Generally, and then we'll get to specifics.
A. In general, no, I don't.
Q. You don't know why a doctor would switch from, you say, Columbia to Sibley?
A. No. The presumption is they have all left because of the NCRIC dispute.
Q. And when you say that presumption, what facts do you -- what facts underlie that presumption?
A. Basically, that is a list of doctors that was furnished to me by counsel.
Q. So you're not making any independent determination as to why the doctors left?

A. That's correct.
Q. I don't mean this to come out wrong, is your answer to my question because counsel told you these are the people who left because of the NCRIC dispute?
A. Basically, that's the list that was furnished to me, yes.
Q. Have you done any analysis with respect to why any of these specific doctors, in your opinion, left Columbia?
A. Independent analysis, no.
Q. Have you reviewed any analysis or any study that might have indicated why these doctors left Columbia?
A. No, I have not.
MR. LEAHY: Are you asking for an expert opinion with regard to why these doctors left Columbia?
MR. BADAMI: I'm asking for his opinion why they left Columbia.

MR. LEAHY: I object to that.
Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: I don't have any independent knowledge of why they left Columbia. My presumption is if they were on the list and indeed it went down it is because of the NCRIC dispute.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Did you interview any of these doctors to find out why they would have left Columbia?
A. No, I did not.
MR. BADAMI: Off the record.
(Discussion off the record.)
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. I think when we broke Mr. Ben Ezra, you were saying you had done no analysis with respect to why doctors had left Columbia?
A. No, that's correct. I relied on the list that was furnished to me.
Q. So if the list is incorrect, then the data in your report is incorrect?
A. No.

Q. No. Why is that if the list isn't correct?
A. If there are additional doctors that have left as a result of this dispute, and those doctors were not on the list, then it is not included on the report.
Q. I was imprecise. Let's say, for example, Dr. Heather Johnson, who is on your list, No. 333, if she left Columbia for a reason other than what counsel has represented to you as a dispute with NCRIC, she should not be on this report, is that correct?
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: There are two factors, if she left totally for factors not related to the dispute with NCRIC, then she should not be on the list, but if she -- in other words, I have a dating in here, too, as you'll see, so it, basically, would depend on the facts and circumstances of each individual case.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. But you did no analysis of the facts and circumstances of each individual case?
A. No. However, if those were brought to my attention and agreed to by counsel, I would make adjustments to this report to accurately reflect the true nature.

Q. You don't know if any of these doctors left, first, because of the NCRIC dispute or otherwise?
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: Again, this is a list presented to me by counsel representing the doctors that left because of the NCRIC dispute.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. I'm sorry, I don't know if I asked this, do you know why doctors would choose to leave hospitals in general?
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: Doctors would leave hospitals for an assorted number of reasons.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Tell me some of those reasons.
A. Dr. Oweiss, Zacharia, murdered his wife this summer, so he would no longer be practicing at Columbia Hospital, but it's my understanding that he handed off his patients to other doctors which are on this list, but those patients are not reflected here on this report.

Q. Let me try it this way: Do you know, for example, if managed care organizations pay a higher rate at a different hospital than Columbia, that might not be a reason for a physician to want to move?
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: I don't think so.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. You don't think so?
A. No.
Q. How about if another hospital, for example, paid a portion of the physician's malpractice insurance premium?
MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.
THE WITNESS: Repeat the question, please.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Would a reason for a physician to leave one hospital to go to another hospital, would a reason be

MR. LEAHY: Do you want a representation?
MR. BADAMI: If you can tell me when he talked to you about the counterclaim, sure.
MR. LEAHY: My representation is that my recollection with regard to when I spoke with Mr. Ben Ezra is sometime shortly before the 26(b)(4) Statement in which the tens of millions of dollars figure that he used was drafted and filed, at about that time.
MR. BADAMI: I'll accept that representation.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. But you haven't read the counterclaim that was filed by Columbia against NCRIC in this case?
A. I haven't read it. We did discuss that particular wording.
Q. How did you come up with the tens of millions figure that you used in your Rule 26(b)(4) Statement?
A. I'm not even sure. If you're going to represent that's where it was.
Q. That's what Mr. Leahy just represented to us.

MR. LEAHY: I represented on the record that is what a pleading filed in this action to summarize what it is expected the expert will testify to, Mr. Ben Ezra was consulted with regard to, although he didn't have the data at the time, what it was he expected he would testify to. That's my representation.
THE WITNESS: That is correct.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Can you tell me how you estimated at that time the tens of millions of dollars?
A. That was an educated guess.
Q. What's on what data?
A. I didn't have data. I had a feeling or belief.
Q. Where did you get the feeling or belief?
A. Based upon my knowledge of the hospital and what was going on and its financial condition.
Q. There is nothing specific you can point to?
A. No.

MR. BADAMI: I would like to show you the 26(b)(4) Statement, if I might. I would ask the court reporter to mark it as Ben Ezra Exhibit No. 11.
(Ben Ezra Exhibit 11 was marked for identification.)
MR. BADAMI: Mr. Ben Ezra, I'm showing you what's been marked as Ben Ezra Exhibit No. 11, and I'll ask you, sir, if you have ever seen it. I'll represent to you that it's two pages long. The document was originally longer, but No. 1 on the first two pages references you, which is what's been copied, which is what identifies you, and what's been copied.
MR. LEAHY: Are you going to represent who this has been signed by?
MR. BADAMI: Off the record.
(Discussion off the record.)
MR. LEAHY: This document was signed by myself, I believe if this is, in fact, the document counsel purports it to be.
MR. BADAMI: I believe it is.
THE WITNESS: I have received Exhibit No.

11. I have not seen Exhibit 11 before.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Can I ask you to look at the paragraph closest to the bottom on Page 1 where it talks about the substance of the facts and opinions to which Mr. Ben Ezra is expected to testify is, and then it talks about as a proximate result of NCRIC's torts, do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. I want to just make clear, you don't have any information with respect to causation? You're not here for that purpose, are you?
A. No. I was just given a list and ran my analysis.
Q. Have you reviewed any other pleadings or filings in this case?
A. No, I have not.
Q. Have you reviewed any deposition transcripts in this case?
A. No, I have not.
Q. Have you done any interviews or had any to show the model and the procedure I used to generate those estimates.

Q. But with the exception, then, of that one, I guess, group, or one line in your report, was the rest of your report the same?

A. It was basically the same, yes.

Q. When you say basically the same, I don't mean to split hairs with you, what else?

A. Basically, the model was there. It may have had a couple of typos, but, basically, what you see is that model.

Q. You mentioned this draft report. Were there other previous drafts of your report?

A. No.

Q. So you consider what you produced to us today Version 2?

A. I would say this would be Version 1.

Q. What do you --

A. The draft was, basically, a working paper, a draft of this version.

MR. BADAMI: Off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, I'd like to focus your attention now on your report.

A. Yes.

Q. On the first page of your report, which is marked 8708, you refer to the NCRIC group of doctors?

A. That's correct.

Q. We've talked about this a little bit, but I would like to confirm again who the NCRIC group of doctors is.

A. The NCRIC group of doctors are the physicians that are listed on Page 8713.

Q. Right.

A. Where I defined the NCRIC group of doctors by their physician name and their number.

Q. Did you determine if any of these doctors maintained hospital privileges at any other District of Columbia hospital?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Did you determine if any of these physicians maintained hospital admitting privileges in either Suburban Maryland or Northern Virginia?

A. No, I did not. However, I know from my own knowledge that Dr. Edward G. Koch does maintain an office in, I guess it is, Virginia.

Q. We also briefly touched upon this, but I like to focus on the first page with respect to leaving or cutting back. Obviously, leaving means they stopped referring patients at all to Columbia, is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And tell me how you defined cutting back.

A. That the amount of business they brought to the hospital was less than the previous year.

Q. But, again, you made no analysis or investigation into why those doctors may have cut back or left Columbia?

A. No. It was from -- this is a subset of the list that was furnished to me by counsel, which is Exhibit No. 8.

Q. In doing your analysis, Mr. Ben Ezra, did you take into account that some of these doctors might switch back to Columbia Hospital in the future?

A. It's my hope that they will.

Q. Is that included anywhere in your report?

A. No, it is not.

Q. So if a doctor made the decision two years from now to go back to Columbia your numbers would be in error?

A. That's correct. Without saying error, if you would tell me which doctors are going to return, I could run the numbers accordingly and determine the net economic lost.

Q. You indicated a moment ago it is your hope, I believe is your word, that these doctors would return to Columbia. Why is it your hope?

A. So we would not have the scope and magnitude of damages, that the hospital would have their business.

Q. I asked you earlier a little bit about insurance. Do you have any knowledge with respect to the effective dates or the insurance coverages of the breakdown?

A. No, I did not break it down into a subset.
Q. Would that have been helpful to do that analysis?
A. Probably not.
Q. Why not?
A. We don't have the data available. That's part of -- I would like to break it down between inpatient and outpatient, major procedure, minor procedure, even mix of payers, but I don't have that data.
Q. But you'd like to do that if you had the data?
A. If the data was available I certainly would like to do that analysis.
Q. But your testimony is Columbia has not provided you that data?
A. That is correct, has not provided me with the data.
Q. Have you asked for that data?
A. Yes, I have.

Q. Do you know if they have that data?
A. As late as yesterday evening, no, they did not.
Q. You did a projection over the next 20 years?
A. Two different ways.
Q. I'm trying to -- I would like to start, I guess, with how you picked 20 years out in the way you did your analysis?
A. The reason I did 20 years was when you look at the present value of future cash flow, and I draw your attention to the column 20 years will be on Page 8712.
Q. Right.
A. As you go further and further out in time that discount rate eventually goes to zero. So if I had done it for a hundred years the result would not have been much different.
I did it for 20 years in this analysis. I, also, did it by expected age of retirement, which we presumed or I presumed to be 65, and actually I took the month in which the doctor would turn 65.

Q. We'll get to that. Let's start with the 20 years, first.
A. This analysis shows the present value of future cash flow over a 20-year period, but if you were to say, for example -- let's do only ten years, then I have the results for ten years. So for 20 years, using this approach the present value of the lost cash flows would be approximately $22 million. If you were to say, "What if it's only ten," the answer would be a little over $16.5 million.
Q. I recognize that. I recognize that you picked 20 years as the front page of your report.
A. That's correct.
Q. I'm trying to figure out what facts led you to take that 20-year period?
A. That was my experience. I assumed, and this is an assumption, that the lost cash flow would be over a period of 20 years. If you want to say, well, we think ten is better than 20, then the answer would be different, but that answer is disclosed in this report.

Q. Again, you just assumed it. You didn't do any further investigative analysis with respect to why the 20-year number works?
MR. LEAHY: Objection to form.
THE WITNESS: My initial approach was to do it for the 20 years. Then when I did it based on the age of the physician, the result was not much different than the 20 years. Actually, the first approach I used was the 20 years. Then, when I found I could get the data for how old they were and when I could presume, that's an assumption that they would retire on their 65th birthday, I ran those numbers. The results are not materially different between the two.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. You mentioned the age 65 issue and I was going to come to that. How did you make the decision to choose 65 as the date that the physician would retire?
A. Okay, again, that's a presumption. My experience has been many doctors work past 65. At the Columbia Hospital there is a Dr. Savarese who I believe is still working, but has worked into his 70s.

At the World Bank, where I'm also a consultant, there is a mandatory retirement around that happens to be 65.

I have a client that found he was separated at age 65 and he had about four days' notice.

Q. I appreciate that. Have you done any studies or analysis with respect to what the average retirement date of a physician in the District of Columbia is?

A. No, I have not.

Q. Do you know what that number would be?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Sixty-five is your presumption?

A. That is a presumption, yes.

Q. Specifically, with respect to OB/GYN doctors, do you know if there is a -- let me start the question over.

With respect to OB/GYN physicians, do you know if they typically practice longer, in other words, years, an opposed to, say, surgeons?

A. No, I have not done any formal analysis, but, however, Dr. Savarese, I believe was an OB/GYN that has practiced into his 70s.

Q. But do certain OB/GYNs retire when they are 50?

A. I would assume that some do.

Q. Some retire in their early 60s?

A. I assume that there would be a continuum. I assume it's going to be some sort of a bell-shaped curve.

Q. You did no analysis as to when the doctors retire?

A. No. However, when you do the present value of future cash flows as the years go out the value that's contributing to that present value declines tremendously. So even if I was off by one year that present value is way off in time, as you can see in the analysis. So the dollar today is worth a lot more than, let's say, a dollar 20 years from now.

Q. We talked about this a little bit in the beginning, we're back to Page 8710, the 94.22 percentage?

A. Right.

Q. Did you do any analysis with respect to hospitals and their collection rates here in the District of Columbia?

A. No, I did not.

Q. Why not?

A. It's not necessary for this analysis.

Q. If other hospitals collected, say, 60 percent, wouldn't that be relevant to your analysis?

A. Negative.

Q. Why not?

A. I'd like to refer you to Page 8715.

Q. Sure.

A. This is why I felt very comfortable with this model. I had from the printouts, and let's look under total NCRIC doctors group.

Q. That's the top of the chart?

A. The top of the chart. I point your direction to that top third --

Q. Okay.

A. -- which represents a year ago. Okay, my presumption is if I take the total charges, subtract total adjustments, I will arrive at total charges less adjustments; okay.

I was given by the hospital the total charges and the total adjustments. I imputed mathematically the difference, okay, then I compared the actual payments against that difference and found that they had collected about 94.22 percent, okay, and I still know that they still have about another six percent to collect, and maybe they won't collect all that six percent, so in my analysis I'm trying to be objective and free from bias. I used the conservative 94.22 percent, what they have actually collected to date, in imputing the net realizable value.

So your question is why didn't I look at anybody else's. I see that I've got a good indicator here of the difference between total charges and total adjustments as to the amount that is collectable, and the record of the hospital for that particular year was to date they have collected 94.22 percent.

Q. Do you have a document, have you even a document that shows that, that they have collected 94.22 percent?

A. Yes. I have the numbers. I computed the 94.22 percent.

Q. I recognize that. I'm asking you do you have a document from Columbia Hospital that shows that's what they collected. Mr. Ben Ezra, I think that is an extraordinarily high percentage. I'm unaware that any hospital has ever collected that high percentage.

A. Okay, then I need to clarify your understanding, so let me explain, okay? Please bear with me.

They bill in this case $11,695,055.78.

Q. Unaudited?

A. Yes, based on the numbers provided to me on the printout.

Q. Okay.

A. They also have another field for adjustments. Basically, they know they're not going to collect the 11.6 million, they are going to collect something less, so they put an adjustment there, $6,455,263.14, and for our purposes when I compute that, when I look at the ratio of total charges -- I'm sorry, the adjustments to the total charges, we see they are writing off, right off the bat, 55.2 percent.

Q. Right.

A. Which means they expect to collect or what is collectable is only 44.8 percent. In this case that's $5,239,792.64.

To date of that amount they have collected is $4,936,978.35. So based on the records provided to me by the hospital they have collected 42.21 percent of what they billed. And that's a number I think that's within reason. I would expect about 45 percent, just based on my experience, past experience with the hospital, and so I'm showing 42.21 percent.

So if you were to say to me as you did before, I find it unusual to collect 94.22 percent, well, in reality they have collected for this particular year 42.21 percent, but that represents, the 94.22 percent represents what I call the net collectable value.

Q. Which is less the adjustments?

A. Which is less the adjustments.

Q. Do those collections include Medicare?

A. I assume it's every discount the hospital gets.

Q. But you don't know what those assumptions are?

A. I don't know what goes into the adjustment column. I assume, and my presumption is it's the discounts asked by all these HMOs and Blue Cross-Blue Shield and Medicare and everybody else that wants a discount.

Q. Would it have been helpful in your analysis, to know what makes you have the adjustments?

A. No. What I care about is the money, how much money they expect to receive. I'm looking strictly cash. I'm not using the accrual basis of accounting. I'm using the cash basis of accounting.

Q. You did this analysis, I think, for -- how many years did you do this analysis for?

A. The analysis is based on the difference between two years. I did look at the prior year data that was furnished to me. I elected not to use it. I was not comfortable in using that data.

Q. Why?

A. I don't think it was complete.

Q. And how did you know it wasn't complete?

A. It didn't look right.

Q. I'm sorry, I don't mean, again, to argue with you but what does, "It didn't look right," mean?

A. The number of records and the totals I couldn't rely on. I mean, I'm not going to use data in my analysis that I don't feel is correct.

Q. What year was this data?

A. It was data acquired two years from here.

Q. I guess you were uncomfortable with that data?

A. Yes.

MR. BADAMI: It's a good time for a lunch break.

(Whereupon, at 1:10 p.m. a luncheon recess was taken until 2:05 p.m. that same day.)

AFTERNOON SESSION.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, when we left off I had asked you some questions about data which you said did not look right. I believe that is the data for 1997 and 1998?

A. Right, it's data I did not use. It appeared to me to be a subset of the entire file. It did not appear to me to be the entire file.

Q. To your knowledge, does audited data for 1997 and 1998 exist?

A. I'm not sure.

Q. Should it exist? Let me try it that way.

MR. LEAHY: Object to the form of the question.

THE WITNESS: I'm not sure. I know that there were audits that were performed. Whether there is an actual audit report, I don't recall. Was it furnished for the record, here?

MR. LEAHY: Let me just ask, are you asking audited financial status or this type of data that has actually been produced to him?

MR. BADAMI: Data that was produced to him that he would have relied on for his report.

MR. LEAHY: We produced audited financial statements. I'm not aware of anything else, but if you are, ask for it and he'll produce it.

THE WITNESS: To my knowledge, this data has not been audited.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Would it have been helpful to your analysis to have data for 1997 and 1998, as well?

MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.

THE WITNESS: No, not for this purpose.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Why not?

A. The most current data was the most useful data. I don't have audited data. I don't think I would have utilized it.

Q. I guess where I'm trying to go is you chose one year as your benchmark where you had the data, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. What if that year was a particularly good year or a particularly bad year, away from the mean, wouldn't that skew your result?

MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.

THE WITNESS: That year's data was the most current data, and then the next year we have the comparable results. I'm not sure what a good year or a bad year would be. What I'm trying to do is find that delta, that change.

Basically, I came up with the difference and tried to quantify that in terms of cash. I need to caution, when you're talking about audited financial data you're talking about the accrual basis of accounting.

I used the cash basis. I'm looking for cash collections, not what they earned on the accrual basis, how much cash did they collect, how much cash will they collect.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Could I turn now to Page 8710, Section 2?

purposes of your report, did you?
A. No.
Q. Can we flip to Page 8711, please?
A. Sure.
Q. I'd like to focus on the marginal cost issue?
A. Okay.
Q. I believe you noted a 30 percent marginal cost?
A. That's correct.
Q. I'd like to know how you got there.
A. Initially, I used it sort of as a rule of thumb.
Q. And where did you --
A. And I've asked the hospital management, and, personally, I think 30 is too high because the marginal cost is the extra cost that would be incurred for the next patient to come in, and most of the costs at the hospital are fixed, and my guess is it is between 70 and 80 percent fixed costs.
Q. Are those fixed costs accommodated or referenced in your report, here?

A. No. What is accommodated is the marginal cost, because that's the relevant cost for making this decision.
Q. So the fixed costs and the labor costs don't come into play?
A. No. If you've got a hundred percent of the costs, you subtract the fixed cost, you'll have your marginal costs. So if the fixed costs are 70 to 80 percent and your marginal costs will be 20 to 30 percent. Quite frankly, finding a percentage was very difficult. But in a course I was teaching this semester, I found a chapter in a textbook.
Has that been provided to them?
MR. LEAHY: Indeed, it has.
THE WITNESS: That's one of the benefits of teaching a management accounting course.
MR. BADAMI: Mr. Ben Ezra, let me have it marked.
MR. LEAHY: Let's just use the exhibit.
MR. BADAMI: I ask the court reporter to mark the next exhibit as Ben Ezra Exhibit No. 12.

(Ben Ezra Exhibit 12 was marked for identification.)
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, I'm showing you what has been marked as Ben Ezra Exhibit No. 12. I'm wondering if this is the page in the textbook you were referring to?
A. Yes, it is, sir.
Q. I notice that phrase has been circled?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me, did you do that circling?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. What did you use this textbook to determine?
A. I used the textbook, because I was looking for a number for marginal cost, the best I could find was this example problem in the textbook that I use for the management accounting course at the undergraduate level.
Q. Could you give me the title and the authors of that textbook?

A. Sure. It is "Introduction to Management Accounting," it is the 12th edition, which is the most current edition, just got off the press. The authors are Horngren, Sundem and Stratton.
Q. You can keep going, thank you.
A. It's published by Prentice Hall.
Q. And you circled a provision in that page?
A. Right. The sentence says, and it's Problem No. 2-32, "Hospital costs and pricing," and it begins, "St. Vincent Hospital" -- it's on Page 70 of the textbook. It says, "St. Vincent Hospital has overall variable costs of 30 percent of total revenue and fixed costs of $42 million per year."
Q. Do you know what St. Vincent Hospital in the textbook is referring to?
A. No, I do not.
Q. Do you know if this textbook is referring to a real St. Vincent Hospital somewhere in America?
A. No, I do not, but I believe there are some St. Vincent Hospitals somewhere in America.

of revenue and cash flow that you have for that year was not sustainable?

MR. BADAMI: Object to the form of the question.

THE WITNESS: I have no knowledge of that being the case at all.

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. As a member of board of Columbia who is actively involved in understanding, although not auditing the hospital's financials, do you have any reason whatsoever to believe that had the NCRIC doctors not left Columbia would have in the year, 2000 and subsequently -- those years covered by your report -- done much worse than 1999?

MR. BADAMI: Object to the form of the question.

THE WITNESS: No. Based upon my analysis and understanding of the operating activities of Columbia Hospital, there would be a significant increase in cash flow from operations or from operating activities had the NCRIC doctors stayed.

MR. LEAHY: Mr. Ben Ezra, I'm sorry for burdening you with the additional questions. I'm done, although I assume opposing counsel may have a few follow ups.

MR. BADAMI: Mr. Leahy is correct. Do you want to take a break?

THE WITNESS: I would like a break.

(A brief recess was taken.)

EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR THE PLAINTIFF

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, I want to close a loop on a couple items that Mr. Leahy raised.

I want to make clear, you have acknowledged you're speculating with respect to the retirement age of the physicians?

A. That is an assumption that I used for the model.

Q. It is an assumption you used without any data to back it up?

A. Other than my general experience that most doctors retire around age 65.

Q. But you have no data that's been provided to me or that you reviewed to support that conclusion?

A. That's correct. This is a basic underlying assumption. The other assumption I used was 20 years straight out. I was quite surprised to find that the results were quite comparable.

Q. But, again, that was your assumption that you used for purposes of this compilation?

A. That's correct. I call it a model. I wouldn't call it a compilation. A compilation has a different connotation.

Q. You retired in your 40s, though, didn't you?

A. I retired at age 47 1/2, yes, I did.

Q. I also want to make clear that nowhere in your report or your testimony today have you indicated that NCRIC was -- there is any causation of any damages that are in your report?

MR. LEAHY: Object to the form.

THE WITNESS: That's not true.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q. What facts have you provided that NCRIC has been responsible for these damages?

A. I was given a list of doctors. I did the analysis. I found that there was a reduction in the revenue to Columbia Hospital for Women as a result of any of them leaving or cutting back, and then I attempted to quantify the dollar amount of each one of these doctors, so I would say there is a cause and effect.

Q. Perhaps I was imprecise and I apologize. You testified that you were given the list of doctors to begin your analysis with?

A. That's correct.

Q. If that list is incorrect, then your analysis fails?

A. No.

Q. No?

A. If, let's say, there is a doctor on that list that for purposes of discussion left for a different reason, then I have a schedule which appears on Page 8713, the amount of that cash flow that was

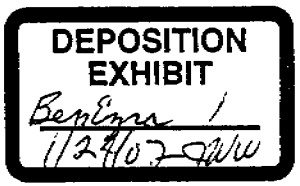
Report of:
Peter Ben Ezra
Expert Witness

Estimated Total Lost Cashflow to the Columbia Hospital for Women as a result of the NCRIC Group of Doctors leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women (in total dollars lost and the present value of the dollars lost discounted at the cost of capital)

01/22/02



16d-002004

1/22/02 13:51

Opinion of Peter Ben Ezra, Expert Witness:

It is my expert opinion that the Total Lost Cashflow to the Columbia Hospital for Women as a result of the NCRIC Group of Doctors leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women in total dollars lost is about $50 million and the present value of the dollars lost discounted at the hospital's highest (marginal) cost of capital is about $21.5 million.

FINDINGS:

1/22/02 13:51

Estimated Total Lost Cashflow to the Columbia Hospital for Women as a result of the NCRIC Group of Doctors leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women (in total dollars lost and the present value of the dollars lost discounted at the cost of capital) projected over the next 20 years.

1 The estimated net realizable value is calculated by taking total charges less adjustments which is the total amount available for collections times the percentage of charges collected to date for the previous one year period. The percentage of charges collected based on the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women for the previous year ended 9/30/2000 was 94.22%

2 As a result of the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women, the total available for collections from the patient referrals to the the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, decreased by $ 3,932,163.09

(from $ 5,239,792.64 to $ 1,307,629.55 = $ 3,932,163.09)
from the one year period "October 1, 1999 to September 30, 2000" to the one year period "October 1, 2000 to September 30, 2001".

3 As a result of the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women, the total available for collections from the patient referrals to the the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, percentage decreased by 75.04%

($ 3,932,163.09 divided by $ 5,239,792.64 = 75.04%)
from the one year period "October 1, 1999 to September 30, 2000" to the one year period "October 1, 2000 to September 30, 2001".

16d-002006

4 The net realizable value of the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women was $ 3,704,918.38 calculated as follows

(94.22% times $ 3,932,163.09 = $ 3,704,918.38)

5 Assuming that the marginal cost of providing services is equal to 30% of the net realizable value, then the cost savings as of a result of the the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, decreased by $ 1,111,475.51

($ 3,704,918.38 times 30% = $ 1,111,475.51)

from the one year period "October 1, 1999 to September 30, 2000" to the one year periiod "October 1, 2000 to September 30, 2001".

6 Assuming that the marginal cost of providing services is equal to 30% of the net realizable value, then the conbtribution margin as of a result of the the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, decreased by $ 2,593,442.86

($ 3,704,918.38 less $ 1,111,475.51 = $ 2,593,442.86)

from the one year period "October 1, 1999 to September 30, 2000" to the one year periiod "October 1, 2000 to September 30, 2001".

7 Assuming that the cost of capital for the Columbia Hospital for Women is 10.50% and the annual loss in contribution margin (lost net income) as a result of the the NCRIC Doctors Group leaving or cutting back on patients referred to the Columbia Hospital for Women by this group, decreased by a total of: $ 2,593,442.86 per year,

8 Then the net present value of the total loss to the Columbia Hospital for Women was $ 22,013,195.55 over the next 20 years assuming an interest rate (or discount rate) of 10.50% as of September 1, 2001.

16d-002007

NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE THE TESTIMONY OF COLUMBIA'S NEWLY NAMED WITNESSES

Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rules 16, 26, and 37 and based on the submissions in the accompanying Memorandum in Support, plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") moves that the following witnesses – only recently identified by defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center Inc. ("Columbia") – be excluded from giving evidence in this case and that their names be stricken from defendant's witness list:

Elizabeth Jackson

Francis Renee Perkins

Gideon Kioko

Jerome O'Connell

David Young

Pursuant to D. C. Superior Court Rule 12-I(E), a Proposed Order and Statement of Points and Authorities in Support of this Motion are also attached.

Oral Hearing Requested.

STATEMENT OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE COLUMBIA'S NEWLY IDENTIFIED WITNESSES

Both the scheduling orders issued by this Court, as well as the D.C. Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure, require that parties identify their witnesses promptly, as well as amending discovery responses when new information is discovered. In the instant case, initial witness lists were submitted in March 2001 and June 2001. Discovery closed at the end of January 2002.

Following the pretrial meeting between the parties mandated by D.C. Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 16(c) on May 29, 2003, Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") identified the following individuals it intends to call as witnesses at trial for the first time:[1/]

1/ The first notice to NCRIC that Columbia intended to add more witnesses, in addition to any named in Columbia's Rule 16 disclosures, came during the parties' Rule 16(c) conference, a year and a half after the close of discovery. On May 30, 2003, the parties exchanged witness lists, and Columbia disclosed the names of witnesses identified for the first time. NCRIC anticipates these names will be incorporated into Columbia's witness list in the Final Pretrial Statement.

Elizabeth Jackson

Francis Renee Perkins

Gideon Kioko

Jerome O'Connell

David Young

None of these persons (collectively, the "Newly Named Witnesses") had been included in two previous listings of witnesses provided by Columbia pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rule 16 and the Court's Scheduling Order setting out the deadline for the exchange of witness lists. See Order dated May 16, 2001 attached as Ex. A. Nor were any of these individuals identified in response to NCRIC's discovery request seeking the names of individuals with relevant knowledge. Indeed, three of the proposed witnesses (Ms. Jackson, Ms. Perkins and Dr. Kioko) were only first identified after the close of discovery – in Columbia's Opposition to NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment. The two other witnesses, Dr. O'Connell and Mr. Young, were mentioned briefly in the depositions of Dr. Safa Rifka (O'Connell and Young) and Dr. Nabil Asterbadi (O'Connell). Columbia never amended its witness list or discovery response to include the names of these individuals. The prejudice to NCRIC is manifest. Columbia unfairly withheld this information and prevented NCRIC from obtaining any information about these witnesses.

Finally, in response to this Court's Order granting NCRIC's Motion to Compel Discovery, less than one month ago, Columbia named all five of the individuals in its answers to the supplemental interrogatories propounded by NCRIC. See Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's Supplemental Interrogatories, No. 15, attached as Ex. B.

The belated designation of these individuals as trial witnesses by Columbia is an abuse of the orderly pretrial process by which the Court has managed this case. Permitting them to testify would unfairly prejudice NCRIC. Exclusion of this testimony would be an appropriate sanction under D.C. Superior Court Rule 16(b) (2) and the inherent authority of the Court. See Nolan v. Nolan, 568 A.2d 479, 487 (D.C. 1990) ("A trial court has inherent power to protect the integrity of the discovery process by imposing a wide range of sanctions for a party's violation of the discovery rules, including the exclusion of evidence.").

ARGUMENT

A. Exclusion is the Proper Remedy for Failure to Disclose Witnesses.

D.C. Superior Court Rule 16 mandates automatic disclosure of the names of potential witnesses. Rule 16(b)(2) states that "[n]o witness may be called at trial, except for rebuttal or impeachment purposes, unless he or she was named on the list filed by one of the parties on or before [the date set by the Court] or the calling party can establish that it did not learn of the witness until after this date." The Court's initial Scheduling Order set a deadline of June 12, 2001 to exchange witness lists. See Ex. A.

On March 12, 2001, Columbia served its Initial List of Fact Witnesses for Trial. See Ex. C. The list did not include any of the Newly Named Witnesses. On June 12, 2001, Columbia amended its list adding four new potential witnesses. See Ex. D. Again, none of the Newly Named Witnesses were identified. Columbia's witness submissions contained a reservation of rights to supplement the witness lists, but the record shows no such supplementation by Columbia in the three years that have elapsed since the last list was filed.[2/]

[2/] D.C. Super. Ct. Rule 16(e) further provides that no party may offer the testimony of any witness not listed in the pretrial statement. This provision clearly contemplates the earlier disclosure of witnesses pursuant to > the names and addresses of any individuals who [Columbia] know[s] or believe[s] [to] have any information or knowledge of any matters concerning the subject matter of (i) this action, (ii) [Columbia's] defenses to [NCRIC's] claims, and (iii) [Columbia's counterclaims, including as to each individual: what the information is (or [Columbia] believes it to be) and whether the individual was an eye-witness or claims to have been eye-witnesses to the event(s) which is the subject of this litigation.

Moreover, NCRIC sought in its First Set of Interrogatories:

See Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories dated November 27, 2000, No. 1, attached as Ex. E. None of the Newly Named Witnesses were identified in response to this interrogatory. Columbia now asserts that the Newly Named Witnesses have knowledge of the alleged 2000 statements which are the very foundation of Columbia's defamation, injurious falsehood, and tortious interference claims. Accordingly, there can be no credible argument that their identification does not fall squarely within the scope of NCRIC's interrogatory request.

In addition, Columbia never supplemented its discovery response with the names of the Newly Named Witnesses.[3/] D.C. Superior Court Rule 26 (f)(1) provides, in relevant part:

> A party is under a duty seasonably to supplement the [discovery] response with respect to any question directly addressed to (A) the identity and location of persons having knowledge of discoverable matter . . .

"The purpose of the duty to supplement is to prevent unfair surprise and to narrow and define the issues prior to trial so that the progress of the trial may be efficient and orderly." Williams v.

16(b)(2). To allow a party to first disclose a potential witness in the pretrial statement would undermine the purpose of pretrial discovery.

3/ On July 5, 2001, NCRIC served its Request for Supplementation of Discovery Responses seeking a supplementation of all prior discovery responses including Columbia's Response to NCRIC's First Set of Interrogatories in which Columbia identified those individuals with knowledge of matters relevant to its counterclaims. Ex. F.

Washington Hosp. Ctr., 601 A.2d 28, 34 (D.C. 1991). This Court may enforce the "duty of supplementation . . . through sanctions . . . including exclusion of evidence . . . ." Corley v. BP Oil Corp., 402 A.2d 1258, 1261 (D.C. 1979); Hollins v. Sneed, 300 A.2d 447, 449 n.4 (D.C. 1973) (same); Williams, 601 A.2d at 34; see also Freedmen's Hosp. v. Heath, 318 A.2d 593, 595 (D.C. 1974) (striking testimony of expert based on late notification); cf. Black v. Columbus Public Schs., 124 F. Supp. 2d 550, 561 (S.D. Ohio 2000) (striking the use of an affidavit of an individual pursuant to Rule 37(a)(1) because that individual was not named as a witness during discovery);[4/] Wilson v. Bradlees of New England, Inc., 250 F.3d 10, 20-21 (1st Cir. 2001) (noting that Rule 37(c)(1) "requires the near automatic exclusion of Rule 26 information that is not timely disclosed . . . [and] it is the obligation of the party facing sanctions for belated disclosure to show that its failure to comply with the Rule was either justified or harmless and therefore deserving of some lesser sanction.").

Columbia's withholding of the names of its witnesses was not harmless. Allowing their testimony at this late date would unfairly prejudice NCRIC.

B. Permitting the Testimony of Newly Named Witnesses Would be Unfair.

It is self-evident that the lack of an opportunity to conduct discovery from witnesses who are expected to testify about meaningful issues puts NCRIC at a significant disadvantage. NCRIC suspects, based on the affidavits submitted in support of Columbia's Opposition to Summary Judgment and Columbia's belated discovery responses, that the 4/ The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure establish a substantially similar scheme regarding the exclusion of witnesses not properly identified during discovery. "[I]f a Superior Court rule is identical to or substantially identical to a corresponding federal rule, it would have, just as the federal rule, the force and effect of law." In re C.A.P., 356 A.2d 335, 343 (D.C. 1976) (citing Campbell v. United States, 295 A.2d 498, 501 (D.C. 1972)); see also Weiner v. Kneller, 557 A.2d 1306, 1310 n.3 (D.C. 1989) ("Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(e)(1)(b) is identical to Super. Ct. Civ. R. 26(f)(1)(b) and federal cases interpreting it are therefore relevant to our interpretation of the latter rule, though not controlling.").

---

individuals will testify that they overheard individuals, alleged to be affiliated with NCRIC, that Columbia was going to close. See Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's Supplemental Interrogatories, No. 15, attached at Ex. B; Declarations of Dr. O'Connell, Ms. Perkins and Ms. Jackson, Exs. 5, 7, and 8 to Columbia Opposition to NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment; attached as Ex. G-I. Based on these representations, it would be important to NCRIC to be able to learn from these individuals, prior to trial, the precise nature of their testimony since the alleged statements form the basis of Columbia's defamation, injurious falsehood claims and tortious interference claims. See Columbia counterclaims ¶¶ 123-34, 154-64. Without this discovery, NCRIC would have to essentially fly blind in cross-examining these witnesses because Columbia failed to disclose their identity. See Corley, 402 A.2d at 1262 (recognizing that "[t]he purpose of discovery is to explore everything available and narrow down the fact issues in controversy so that the trial process may be efficient and economical" and that late identified witnesses "would unfairly destroy the means for informative cross-examination on the basis of pretrial preparation").

Any suggestion that because the names of Mr. Kioko and Mr. O'Connell surfaced in depositions so that NCRIC could have deposed them is without merit. Probably close to one hundred names of individuals were discussed in depositions. To hold that this puts NCRIC on sufficient notice that Columbia may call these witnesses at trial would ignore that the purpose of providing identification of witnesses early on and timely supplementing such identification is so NCRIC is not forced to guess at who to depose.

If any assumptions NCRIC may hold about the relevant knowledge of the Newly Named Witnesses (and hence the purpose for their testimony) is incorrect, the cross-examiner would be at an even greater disadvantage. This uncertainty serves to illustrate NCRIC's predicament. It cannot establish the extent of the harm of nondisclosure because it was prevented by the nondisclosure from learning in advance the details of the witnesses' testimony. Representations by Columbia at this late date about the Newly Named Witnesses and the nature of their testimony cannot cure the harm. Columbia willfully denied NCRIC the opportunity to learn about these Newly Named Witnesses through proper discovery. NCRIC must not now be forced to cross-examine these witnesses without having the opportunity to obtain discovery from them (or Columbia) concerning issues of relevance to the claims and defenses raised in this case.

CONCLUSION

Persuasive precedents and this Court's own procedures dictate that Columbia's Newly Named Witnesses not be allowed to testify at trial. NCRIC's motion to exclude them should therefore be granted.

DEFENDANT'S OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES
TO PLAINTIFF'S SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORIES

COMES NOW Defendant, Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"), by and through its attorneys, Mark C. Hansen, Esquire, David E. Ross, Esquire, Eli C. Schulman, Esquire, and Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., and in response to Plaintiff's Supplemental Interrogatories ("Plaintiff's Interrogatories"), propounded by Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), states as follows:

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following General Objections apply to each and every interrogatory and form an integral part of Columbia's response to each interrogatory:

1. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information that Columbia already has provided to NCRIC in this litigation. The discovery at issue was sought by NCRIC at the outset of this case, some two and a half years ago. By the time that the parties completed discovery and undertook extensive briefing of cross-motions for summary judgment, Columbia had provided NCRIC with detailed discovery in the form of documents,

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SMF2 ¶¶ 35-36, 157-59; SJ Opp. at 51-53. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 15: Identify each and every individual who made any of the statements alleged to be defamatory that remain in Columbia's counterclaim and provide the statement or statements each individual is alleged to have made.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 15: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it blatantly disregards the Court's express admonition that its Order authorizing NCRIC to serve these Supplemental Interrogatories "is not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter stated in plaintiff's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6)." Order of 4/7/03 at 1-2 n.1. That Notice identified the following topic (No. 10): "Defamatory actions or statements by plaintiff about defendant." That topic arguably encompasses Supplemental Interrogatory No. 17, which concerns the substance of the defamatory statements. But the subject matter of this Interrogatory – who made the defamatory statements – and the subject matter of Supplemental Interrogatory No. 16 – who heard the defamatory statements – is not fairly encompassed in Topic No. 10 of NCRIC's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6) that was at issue in the motion to compel. Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 15 & 16 thus plainly exceed the scope of the discovery authorized by the Court's Order.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

(a) Dr. Leonard Glassman, Chairman of the Board of NCRIC, Inc., announced in Columbia's cafeteria on September 1, 2000 that (1) the Entity Policy covering Columbia's Clinic and the physicians working there (the Columbia Physicians Group ("CPG")) had expired; (2) CPG physicians with NCRIC individual medical malpractice insurance policies were not covered under those policies when practicing at the Clinic; (3) Columbia's self-insurance trust fund was insufficiently funded to insure the Clinic; and (4) Columbia was planning to cease operations.

Many physicians overheard Dr. Glassman make these statements, including Dr. Nabil Asterbadi and Dr. Safa Rifka.

Also in about September 2000, staff members in the Radiology Department at Columbia, where Dr. Glassman worked, repeatedly overheard him telling patients to pick up their films and bring them to his office in the suburbs because Columbia was planning to close, and telling physicians employed by the Hospital to start looking for jobs elsewhere for the same reason. Those who heard these statements include Elizabeth Jackson and Francis Renee Perkins. Because Dr. Glassman's door was open, other radiology patients in the office also could hear his statements.

Around that same time, Dr. Glassman told another physician, Dr. Gideon Kioko, to move his group to Sibley, because (Dr. Glassman urged) Columbia was about to close. Other physicians who were eating in the cafeteria at the time heard these remarks – including Dr. Richard Newman, who shortly thereafter moved to Sibley, and Dr. Jerome O'Connell.

Later, Dr. Glassman told Dr. O'Connell in the hallway at Columbia that, because the hospital was closing, another physician, Dr. Evelyn Karson, was leaving.

(b) Dr. Morton Roberts, a physician who often passed along information from NCRIC purporting to speak on its behalf, informed a nurse anesthetist, David Young, in early July 2000 that Young should start looking for a job elsewhere because Columbia was closing. Dr. Roberts also made this statement to other staff members at about the same time. Dr. Asterbadi sent Dr. Roberts a cease-and-desist letter, in an effort to get him to cease disparaging Columbia.

(c) On or about September 1, 2000, a representative of NCRIC's Policyholder

Services Department (i.e., either David Osborn, Eric Hempelman or Grant Sohm – the identity of the individual that made these statements is solely in NCRIC's possession, and NCRIC has not provided that information to Columbia) informed Attending Faculty member Dr. Heather Johnson that (1) the Entity Policy covering CPG physicians had expired; (2) CPG physicians with NCRIC medical malpractice insurance were not covered under their individual policies when practicing at the Clinic; (3) Columbia's self-insurance trust fund was insufficiently funded to insure the CPG and its physicians; and (4) due to the Retro Plan's termination, Columbia was ceasing operations.

A representative of NCRIC's Policyholder Services Department also made these statements to other physicians, including Dr. Edward Koch, who also is a member of NCRIC's Board of Directors.

Dr. Koch and Dr. Johnson informed Columbia's management and other physicians at Columbia what they had been told.

Other unnamed individuals heard and repeated the defamatory statements, as well.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SMF2 ¶¶ 160-75 and SJ Opp. at 30-44. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 16: Identify each and every individual who heard any of the statements alleged to be defamatory that remain in Columbia's counterclaim and indicate what statement was allegedly heard.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 16: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia further responds as follows: Columbia incorporates by reference its Objections and Response to Interrogatory No. 15.

DEFENDANT'S OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES
TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

COMES NOW Defendant, Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Medical Center"), by and through its attorneys, Mark C. Hansen, Esquire, Steven F. Benz, Esquire, Joseph K. Leahy, Esquire, and Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., and in response to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories ("Plaintiff's Interrogatories"), propounded by Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), states as follows:

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following General Objections apply to each and every interrogatory and form an integral part of Medical Center's response to each interrogatory:

1. Defendant Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek disclosure of information protected by the peer review privilege, the attorney-client privilege, the work-product privilege, the party-communication privilege or the investigative privilege. Medical Center further objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they call for information otherwise protected under the District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable law. Medical Center does not intend by these responses or objections, or by the inadvertent production of any privileged documents, to waive any protection to which it is entitled.

2. Medical Center objects to the numbering of Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as some of the interrogatories have "subparts" that constitute more than one interrogatory as defined by District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure 33(a).

3. Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as the information sought by such interrogatories is more appropriate for disclosure in deposition and can be more efficiently and less burdensomely obtained thereby.

4. Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories to the extent that they are vague, ambiguous, overly broad, burdensome, harassing, and/or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this action.

5. Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information that is already in NCRIC's possession.

6. Medical Center objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information not in Medical Center's possession.

7. Medical Center has not yet completed its investigation relating to the litigation and anticipates that as the litigation proceeds, further information may be discovered. Medical Center reserves the right to modify or supplement its objections and responses based on such pertinent information as it may subsequently discover.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES

INTERROGATORY NO. 1: State the names and addresses of any individuals who you know or believe have any information or knowledge of any matters concerning the subject matter of (i) this action, (ii) your defenses to plaintiff's claims, and (iii) your counterclaims, including as to each individual: what that information is (or you believe it to be), and whether the individual was an eye-witness or claims to have been eye-witnesses to the event(s) which is the subject of this litigation.

RESPONSE TO INTERROGATORY NO. 1: See General Objections. Medical Center specifically objects to Interrogatory No. 1, and will not respond thereto insofar as it seeks disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege and/or the work-product privilege. Medical Center also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous. This interrogatory is vague and ambiguous because, among other reasons, it is not clear what event or events this Interrogatory refers to as "the subject of this litigation."

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Medical Center responds that it knows or believes that the following people possess knowledge or information concerning NCRIC's claim, Medical Center's defenses thereto, and/or Medical Center's counterclaims:

DECLARATION OF JEROME O'CONNELL, SR., IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

JEROME O'CONNELL, SR., affirms the following under penalty of perjury:

I am over 18 years of age. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein, and if called as a witness, I could testify competently thereto.

1. I am Chief of the Pathology Department at Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center ("Columbia"), a position I have held since July 1, 2000.

2. In approximately late 2000, in the cafeteria at Columbia, I overheard Dr. Leonard Glassman, a member of NCRIC's Board of Directors, tell Dr. Gideon Kioko that Columbia was going to close. During this conversation, Dr. Glassman also told Dr. Kioko that he should move his practice to Sibley Memorial Hospital and use Georgetown for neonatology. Other physicians present, including Dr. Richard Newman, also witnessed these statements.

3. At around the same time, in a hallway outside of Columbia's Clinic, Dr. Glassman informed me that Dr. Evelyn Karson was leaving Columbia because the hospital was closing. Dr. Karson subsequently confirmed that she was leaving Columbia because (she believed) the hospital was closing, and further, that Dr. Glassman had encouraged her to leave.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

FRANCIS RENEE PERKINS affirms the following under penalty of perjury:

I am over 18 years of age. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein, and if called as a witness, I could testify competently thereto.

1. I am employed as Director of Radiology of the Radiology Department at Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center ("Columbia"), a position I have held for approximately twelve years.

2. In October 2000, I overheard Dr. Leonard Glassman, talking loudly on the telephone in the Department, repeatedly tell other physicians not to refer patients to the Radiology Department anymore because Columbia was planning to close.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

DECLARATION OF ELIZABETH JACKSON IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT'S MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

ELIZABETH JACKSON affirms the following under penalty of perjury:

I am over 18 years of age. I have personal knowledge of the facts stated herein, and if called as a witness, I could testify competently thereto.

1. I am employed as Chief Technician of the Radiology Department at Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center ("Columbia"), a position I have held for approximately eleven years.

2. In September 2000, on several occasions, I overheard Dr. Leonard Glassman, talking loudly on the telephone in the Department's ultrasound room, telling patients to pick up their films and bring them to his office in the suburbs because Columbia was planning to close. The door to the ultrasound room was open when he made these statements, so I could hear him from across the hall in the reading room. Patients in the ultrasound room next door also overheard his statements.

I declare under penalty of perjury that the foregoing is true and correct.

STATEMENT OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO REQUIRE DEFENDANT TO PROVIDE SECURITY FOR COSTS

Under D.C. Superior Court Rule 54(d), trial judges have the discretion to award costs (such as witness fecs, expert fees, copying, and deposition transcripts) to the prevailing party. See, e.g., Harris v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 695 A.2d 108 (D.C. 1997). Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") requests this Court to exercise its discretion to require defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") to post a bond or other security in this case to ensure Columbia is able to pay costs associated with the trial in this action.

Although not produced during discovery to NCRIC or sent directly to NCRIC as a valid creditor of the hospital, Columbia has sent letters to other creditors in which Columbia describes that "there are no remaining assets available to satisfy these debts and claims." See Columbia's October 15, 2002 Letter at 1, attached as Exhibit A. The letter further requests of its creditors that "pending litigation ... be ceased and no additional litigation initiated" as "no funds are available to pay debts owed or judgment obtained." Id. This letter is signed by two individuals who identify themselves as Liquidating Trustees of Columbia. Thus, it is clear that, on the one hand, Columbia is attempting to convince certain creditors to dismiss meritorious claims pending against the hospital because Columbia will not be able to pay, while at the same time Columbia is proceeding with the instant case as if nothing has changed.

Even if Columbia were proceeding in forma pauperis (which it has not so claimed), that fact alone "does not absolve a party from the ultimate responsibility of paying the costs of litigation." Robinson v. Howard Univ., 455 A.2d 1363, 1366 (D.C. 1983). The D.C. Court of Appeals has made clear that no party should be entirely relieved of the costs of litigation because:

> [paying costs] ensures that an indigent party, like any other litigant, will have access to the courts for the resolution of disputes, but will weigh the costs of litigation against the likelihood of success before proceeding in court.

Id. at 1367.

Columbia portrays itself as "judgment proof" when any party presents a valid claim to it while still attempting to recover on weak or non-existent claims here. Here, perhaps because Columbia has raised numerous counterclaims, it pretends that it is still a financially responsible litigant. This Court should exercise its discretion under Rule 54 to require Columbia to post a bond or other security to protect NCRIC in the event, as NCRIC expects, Columbia fails on its claims and then attempts to avoid payment of valid costs and fees incurred in a lengthy jury trial.

A bond is particularly appropriate here as NCRIC has not been provided with Columbia's decree of dissolution or its plans for distribution of assets as set forth in D.C. law. See D.C. Code § 29-301.48. NCRIC believes that the self-identified "Liquidating Trustees" of Columbia may be responsive to any valid order of this Court awarding costs.

It would be patently unfair to NCRIC to allow Columbia to incur substantial costs in this case after Columbia has publicly informed other creditors and litigants – but not this Court – that it is financially unable to pay anything to creditors. The only way to prevent an abuse being visited on NCRIC is for this Court to require Columbia to provide security in the form of a bond, or otherwise, in an amount reasonably calculated to cover awardable costs during a lengthy, multi-witness jury trial. NCRIC believes a reasonable amount for such security will be $35,000.00.

The Court has ample authority in the exercise of its inherent equitable power to prevent Columbia from proceeding to trial without providing necessary security.

RE: Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc., (the "Hospital")

Dear Sir/Madam:

The records of the Hospital indicate that you may be a creditor of or claimant against the Hospital, and this letter is being forwarded to you pursuant to §29-301.47 of the District of Columbia Code in order to advise you of the status of the Hospital's financial affairs.

The Hospital's assets included its real estate located at 2425 L Street, NW., Washington, DC 20037 (the "Real Estate"), accounts receivable (the "Receivables") and equipment (the "Equipment"). As you may know, these assets have been encumbered by indebtedness, which exceeds the Collective value of these assets. The Real Estate and much of the Equipment has been sold to unrelated and unaffiliated third parties, and the proceeds of such sales were substantially less than the indebted secured thereby. The Receivables have been placed in the hands of a third party for collection, and after payment if amounts outstanding to the Hospital's accounts receivable lender (including, interest, late charges, etc.), and costs of collection, it is unlikely that any significant amount will be available for unsecured creditors. In light of these circumstances, the Hospital will be unable to pay you any additional amounts or satisfy any claims you may now or hereafter have against the Hospital. Unfortunately, there are no remaining assets available to satisfy these debts and claims.

Although the Hospital has pursued an orderly liquidation of its assets, the debts of and claims against the Hospital far exceed its assets. Regretfully, there is no further action the Hospital can take to alter this situation.

The undersigned have been appointed as Liquidating Trustees, to continue the wind-down of the affairs of the Hospital. We expect the continuing wind-down will take between 90 to 120 days, during which time we will be addressing any remaining medical-related or business issues that may arise. You may contact us at (202)293-6512, but please understand that the Hospital has virtually no remaining assets, and no additional payments are expected to be made to you or your organization. In light of the unavailability of any assets for recovery, we would hope that pending litigation would be ceased and no additional litigation initiated, but of course, that is in your discretion. We would like to make it clear, however, that the Hospital's operations have ceased, and no funds are available to pay debts owed or judgments obtained.

Again, we regret having to advise you of this situation, and more importantly, we regret the loss of Columbia Hospital for Women, which has served our community well for more than 100 years.

Very truly yours,

Michael M. Barch, Liquidating Trustee

BACKGROUND 5

ARGUMENT 7

I. NCRIC'S MOTION IS PROCEDURALLY BARRED AND SHOULD BE SUMMARILY DENIED 7

A. NCRIC Failed To Meet in an Effort To Resolve the Matter Before Filing this Motion 7

B. NCRIC Failed To Seek Leave of Court Before Filing this Motion 8

II. COLUMBIA'S INTERROGATORY RESPONSES ARE COMPLETE 9

A. Columbia's Referencing Previously Submitted Materials Is Entirely Proper 9

B. NCRIC Is Unable to Identify Any Response That Is Not Complete 11

1. Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 3 Is Complete 11
2. Columbia's Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 5-7, 10-11 Are Complete 13
3. Columbia's Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 8-9, 12-13 Are Complete 16
4. Columbia's Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 15-17 Are Complete 16
5. Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 19 Is Complete 17
6. Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 20 Is Complete 18

C. Columbia's Objections Are a Non-Issue 20

III. COLUMBIA'S RULE 30(b)(6) WITNESS GAVE COMPLETE RESPONSES 23

A. NCRIC Fails to Show that Columbia Did Not Respond to Any Question 23

B. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions 24

1. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions on the Attending Faculty 24
2. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions on NCRIC's Awareness of Columbia's Financial Situation 26
3. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions on Doctors Leaving Columbia 27
4. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions on Preventing Performance 27
5. Dr. Rifka Properly Referred to Other Case Materials 28

C. NCRIC's Unauthorized Document Requests Were Improper, and NCRIC Has Not Even Attempted to Justify Them 28

CONCLUSION 30

16d-002107

NCRIC's motion is but one more in a series of last-ditch efforts to delay a trial on the merits by seeking to prolong discovery. The suggestion that NCRIC has not had an opportunity to learn the facts underlying Columbia's counterclaims cannot withstand actual review of either Columbia's interrogatory responses or of the deposition transcript of Columbia's Rule 30(b)(6) designee. Nor can NCRIC's accusations be squared with the entire record of the extensive discovery to which NCRIC has had access in this case. The motion is baseless and should be denied.

As a threshold matter, NCRIC's motion is procedurally barred. NCRIC failed to comply with this Court's General Order by declining to hold a "reasonable," "face to face" meeting in an effort to resolve this matter before filing this motion. And NCRIC failed to comply with Superior Court rules requiring leave of court to file a discovery motion after the discovery period set by the Court's Scheduling Order has closed. These are more than shortcomings in technical compliance; these failures improperly defy a framework that seeks both to avoid needless disputes and to rein in boundless discovery. (Point I, infra.)

Even looking to the merits, NCRIC's complaints concerning Columbia's interrogatories are unfounded. NCRIC elevates form over substance, failing to point to anything that makes Columbia's answers incomplete.

First, NCRIC objects that Columbia's interrogatory responses ("Responses") refer to previously submitted materials. Though NCRIC would have the Court believe that Columbia has done no more than reference other materials, in each instance Columbia in fact has made such references by way of supplementation, only after first supplying a detailed, self-standing response. Moreover, as explained more fully below, referencing other materials in a discovery response is entirely proper. It is particularly so in the unusual posture present here, where the parties' positions were necessarily fleshed out in detail throughout the course of extensive summary judgment briefing, including the painstaking preparation by Columbia of detailed statements of material facts, which lay out the factual bases for Columbia's claims. NCRIC's interrogatories ask questions that are answered straightforwardly in those materials. (Point II.A., infra.)

Again elevating form over substance, NCRIC objects that Columbia answered one interrogatory by incorporating by reference an earlier response. There is nothing improper about incorporating by reference, and NCRIC offers no basis for concluding that there is – particularly where doing so merely makes use of an earlier comprehensive response that went beyond what may have been strictly necessary in crafting a coherent response. (Point II.B.1, infra.)

In those instances in which NCRIC does attempt to point to actual facts allegedly missing from Columbia's Responses, that feeble effort in fact demonstrates how far NCRIC has overreached in this motion. For instance, NCRIC complains that in response to interrogatories about damages, Columbia has not provided evidence of causation. But the interrogatories at issue did not come close to asking for any information about causation. Those interrogatories asked, as to each of Columbia's claims, as follows: "Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count [1-11] of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated." See Supp. Interrogs. Nos. 5-14 (attached to NCRIC's Mem. as Exh. A). Inquiry into the amount of damages suffered and how that amount has been calculated plainly does not require an excursion into causation. It is NCRIC's obligation to "frame an interrogatory calculated to elicit [the] information" that NCRIC desires. See, e.g., Wolf v. Dickinson, 15 F.R.D. 407, 408 (E.D. Pa. 1953). Its failure to do so does not justify a motion to compel. (Point II.B.2, infra.)

NCRIC similarly complains that it is unable to determine Columbia's asserted contract damages. But it is difficult to understand how Columbia could be more specific than it was in its answer to NCRIC's interrogatory on the subject: Columbia provided a dollar figure down to the penny. See Response to Supp. Interrog. No. 5 (identifying damages for breach of contract of $765,347.49) (attached to NCRIC's Mem. as Exh. B).[1] Indeed, Columbia's Response specifies both the amount and, in detail, the specific calculations that yield this figure. See id. (Point II.B.6, infra.)

NCRIC also objects to certain Responses on the ground that Columbia has provided new information – specifically, damages arising out of Columbia's bankruptcy. Setting aside the irony of the assertion, it is wrong. Columbia identified the matter as far back as its counterclaims themselves and produced documents substantiating the point, as well. (Point II.B.2, infra.)

NCRIC makes unjustified assumptions that create issues where none exist. NCRIC objects to Columbia's referencing unnamed individuals who heard and repeated NCRIC's defamatory statements. But Columbia is not seeking to conceal trial witnesses, as NCRIC assumes. Rather, Columbia is producing evidence relevant to the extent of the statements' circulation, as it is entitled to do for purposes of establishing damages from the defamation. (Point II.B.4, infra.)

Driving home its attempt to use this discovery as an excuse to re-litigate summary judgment, NCRIC argues that Columbia allegedly has withheld information "lest this Court

[1] As further explained in Response No. 5, Columbia also deems the $1 million deposit demanded by NCRIC to be a breach of the parties' oral agreement, and has alleged that that payment caused Columbia to become insolvent, leading to some $1.5 million in bankruptcy expenses. NCRIC's criticism regarding Columbia's contract damages center on the calculation of Return Premium due to Columbia under the parties' contract itself.

discover what little substance there is behind Columbia's outward swagger." Statement of Points and Authorities in Support of NCRIC's Motion to Compel and for Sanctions Pursuant to Rules 33(b) and 37(a) ("NCRIC Mem.") at 8. Of course, the Court already has evaluated the "substance" of Columbia's claims, finding that Columbia has created material issues of fact requiring resolution by a jury. Similarly, NCRIC's rehashing of its argument at summary judgment that Columbia depends on statements of counsel rather than on evidence supporting its claims is also stale and irrelevant at this point in the proceedings. (Point II.B.1, infra.)

In sum, NCRIC's motion papers are filled with conclusory statement after conclusory statement alleging that Columbia's Responses are inadequate. But NCRIC offers little detail concerning specific information that NCRIC believes it is lacking. And the information that NCRIC wishes it had simply was not called for by NCRIC's interrogatories. Columbia's answers are complete and warrant neither further discovery nor sanctions. (Point II, infra.)

NCRIC's throw-in complaints about the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition are no more availing. NCRIC merely lists topics about which NCRIC claims Columbia's designee, Dr. Safa Rifka, failed to respond. But NCRIC does not even attempt to demonstrate how any specific answers by Dr. Rifka fall short of adequately answering the particular questions posed, as NCRIC must under Superior Court Rule 37(a). (Point III.A., infra.) Nor could it, because the record shows otherwise. In only one of the instances raised by NCRIC was Dr. Rifka arguably unable to respond to NCRIC's question: where NCRIC insisted that Dr. Rifka recite, one by one, the names of each of the scores of physicians that had practiced as members of Columbia's Attending Faculty. Such a question plainly disregards the established principle that a deposition not be transformed into a "memory contest." In any event, NCRIC ignores Dr. Rifka's response alluding to documents produced by Columbia that contain the answer (much as NCRIC's own documents provide the answer), demonstrating further that NCRIC is not genuinely interested in obtaining the information but in devising excuses for delay.[2] (Point III.B., infra.)

The Court should put an end to NCRIC's gamesmanship. NCRIC has been given extensive opportunities to learn information in order to prepare for trial, including the supplemental interrogatories and supplemental Rule 30(b)(6) deposition. The time has come to accept the close of discovery and to ready the case for trial. Accordingly, the Court should deny NCRIC's motion and remove this latest attempt to delay trial.

BACKGROUND

NCRIC filed this suit in October 2000. Days later, NCRIC plunged into discovery, propounding requests for admissions, requests for production of documents, and interrogatories. Over the course of the ensuing months, NCRIC engaged in robust discovery through the close of discovery in January 2002. NCRIC sought additional documents in January and August 2001; it served additional interrogatories in June 2001; and it issued deposition notices in March, June, July, August, and December 2001. Columbia produced to NCRIC thousands of documents (more than three times as many as NCRIC) in approximately six boxes over the course of 26 productions.

When Columbia objected to a number of NCRIC's 30(b)(6) deposition topics and contended that the subject matter was more appropriate for interrogatories, NCRIC moved to compel. The Court largely agreed with Columbia and, in April 2003, authorized limited supplemental discovery: the Court directed that most of NCRIC's 30(b)(6) topics instead be lodged as interrogatories, and the Court authorized a circumscribed Rule 30(b)(6) deposition on five topics. The Court put NCRIC on notice: the Order authorizing further limited discovery was "not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter" that was at issue in NCRIC's motion. Exh. 2 (Order of 4/7/03) at 1-2 n.1.

Columbia furnished some 30 pages of detailed Responses. In order to facilitate completion of the outstanding discovery, Columbia in fact expedited completion of the Responses, serving them a full week before the deadline set under the local rules. Exh. 3 (Letter from Schulman to Badami of 5/14/03). Columbia also produced a corporate designee some three weeks earlier than NCRIC requested him, and Columbia accommodated NCRIC's schedule for the deposition. Exh. 4 (Letter from Schulman to Badami of 5/23/03). In short, Columbia took multiple steps to provide complete and prompt discovery to NCRIC.

But NCRIC has attempted to use this discovery to concoct one excuse after another for delaying trial. For instance, NCRIC lodged document requests nowhere authorized by the Court, purportedly as a prerequisite to the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition. See Exh. 5 (Letter from Badami to Schulman of 4/21/03) (enclosing deposition notice and document requests). NCRIC then sought to use the supplemental discovery as an excuse to avoid beginning pretrial preparations, taking the baseless position that Columbia's "responses and depositions [were] prerequisites to NCRIC's obligations under Rule 16." See Exh. 6 (Letter from Schulman to Berger of 5/13/03). When the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition convened, NCRIC criticized Columbia's witness for being unable to recite from memory the names of every doctor that practiced at Columbia and threatened to move to compel whenever Columbia voiced objection to questions that exceeded the scope of the authorized topics. See infra. And, tellingly, NCRIC filed this motion without first seeking to resolve any of its purported concerns.

ARGUMENT

I. NCRIC'S MOTION IS PROCEDURALLY BARRED AND SHOULD BE SUMMARILY DENIED

A. NCRIC Failed To Meet in an Effort To Resolve the Matter Before Filing this Motion

This Court's General Order provides that before filing motions to compel discovery or motions otherwise relating to discovery, the parties must meet "face to face, for a reasonable period of time (usually at least 60 minutes) in an effort to resolve the matter before filing a motion." Exh. 1 at 2. According to the General Order, motions lacking certification that such a meeting took place "will be summarily denied." Id.

NCRIC's motion was filed without any such good-faith effort to resolve the matter. Rather, during a telephonic meet-and-confer held on June 3, 2003 to discuss anticipated motions in limine in advance of the then-scheduled June 19, 2003 Pretrial Conference, NCRIC indicated for the first time that it intended to move to compel with respect to Columbia's supplemental interrogatory responses. See Exh. 7 (Letter from Schulman to Badami of 6/4/03). In the weeks that had passed since Columbia has supplied the Responses, NCRIC had never raised any concerns with these Responses. See id. When Columbia expressed surprise and immediately inquired as to the basis for any motion to compel, NCRIC spoke in generalities about such matters as its objection to referencing of previously submitted materials but declined to identify any specific answer that it believed was in fact incomplete. See id.

Columbia promptly wrote to NCRIC the following day inquiring about the specifics of any areas that NCRIC deemed incomplete and encouraging NCRIC to discuss these matters further with Columbia in order to avoid needlessly involving the Court. See id. NCRIC simply repackaged these motion papers in the form of a letter (faxed long after close of business) and rushed to file this motion mere hours later, before Columbia could have a chance to respond. Exh. 8 (Letter from Badami to Schulman of 6/4/03 (received 6/5/03)). NCRIC did not invite Columbia to a face-to-face meeting or otherwise seek to confer beyond the passing telephone conversation of June 3, 2003.

NCRIC's failure to confer meaningfully with Columbia has led it to create disputes where none exist. For instance, when NCRIC objected that Columbia had not included a verified signature for the Responses, Columbia committed to correct the oversight – and has supplied one. Exh. 9 (Letter from Schulman to Badami of 6/19/03) (enclosing verified signature of Larry Wilson). Likewise, straightforward inquiries concerning Columbia's position on such issues as the damages from its bankruptcy, see infra, and the repetition of defamatory statements, see infra, could have been clarified without involving the Court.

B. NCRIC Failed To Seek Leave of Court Before Filing this Motion

NCRIC's motion also must be denied because of NCRIC's failure to seek leave to file this discovery motion after the Court's discovery cutoff. Superior Court Rule 16 expressly provides that once the date identified on the Court's Scheduling Order as the close of discovery has passed, the filing of any discovery motion requires leave of court. SCR 16(b)(5), (6). The discovery period closed in January 2002, about a year and a half ago, and the Court's order authorizing the discovery here at issue did not re-open discovery in wholesale fashion. NCRIC did not seek the requisite leave of court before filing this motion. Rule 16(b)(5) promotes the important interest of achieving some finality in discovery, and NCRIC flouts that goal with this motion.

II. COLUMBIA'S INTERROGATORY RESPONSES ARE COMPLETE

A. Columbia's Referencing Previously Submitted Materials Is Entirely Proper

Contrary to NCRIC's portrayal, Columbia's Responses do not merely refer to previously submitted materials, but comprise some 30 pages providing detailed responses to each interrogatory posed. Where, however, the interrogatory pointed to subjects about which Columbia had already gone on the record in some detail, Columbia referenced those prior submissions in order to offer further elucidation via an even more extensive discussion of the topic than was necessary to answer the interrogatory or that read the interrogatories as not seeking a mammoth answer that would be unduly burdensome.

To the extent that the Responses reference prior discovery, that is entirely proper, and it is particularly so here. NCRIC's rigid approach notwithstanding, "[a]nswering interrogatories is more a matter of art than of science," and "the sufficiency of an answer to an interrogatory frequently depends on the surrounding circumstances." Faigin v. Kelly, 184 F.3d 67, 84 (1st Cir. 1999). Consequently, "[p]arties sometimes can answer interrogatories satisfactorily by reference to information previously produced." Id. (deeming sufficient interrogatory responses that did so).

Indeed, such flexibility is expressly built into the Superior Court Rules themselves. Those rules, like the Federal Rules, permit a party in certain circumstances simply to respond to an interrogatory by referencing business records. See SCR 33(d); Fed. R. Civ. P. 33(d); McKesson Corp. v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 185 F.R.D. 70, 82 (D.D.C. 1999) (holding interrogatory response adequate when it identified specific documents from which opposing party could obtain the requested information).

Though Rule 33(d) does not apply here, the present situation remains precisely the type of case calling for the contextualized analysis to which Faigin refers. NCRIC initially identified these topics two years ago. Since that time, much discovery has taken place and the parties filed detailed cross-motions for summary judgment in which Columbia fleshed out in considerable detail its position on many of the very issues that were addressed in NCRIC's supplemental interrogatories. Unlike usual circumstances, in which the answering of interrogatories takes place during an early stage of a case's development, NCRIC's supplemental interrogatories were lodged after Columbia had developed its positions in exhaustive detail. Though Columbia provided detailed, self-standing responses, by way of supplementation and for the sake of efficiency Columbia directed NCRIC to prior submissions where appropriate and made clear that it stood by those accounts.

Tellingly, the only authority that NCRIC cites for the supposed proposition that answers to interrogatories may not reference other submissions are cases that held references to the complaint or answer to be improper. See King v. E.F. Hutton & Co., 117 F.R.D. 2, 6 (D.D.C. 1987) (complaint); Zatko v. Rogers Mfg. Co., 37 F.R.D. 29, 33 (N.D. Ohio 1964) (answer); NCRIC Mem. at 7. Such a result is not surprising, for a complaint or answer includes only allegations, and ones that have yet to be developed through discovery. But pleadings that spell out those allegations in detail, such as Statements of Material Facts that Columbia cites, are a different story altogether. Moreover, the crux of the holding in Zatko was the unremarkable proposition that one cannot reply to interrogatories seeking elucidation of the answer by referencing that very answer. See Zatko, 37 F.R.D. at 33.[3] Columbia's Responses hardly seek to employ such a circular approach.

[3] Notably, the objectionable responses in both King and Zatko, which NCRIC cites, apparently

In sum, as Wright and Miller put it, "when the answers as a whole disclose a conscientious endeavor to understand the questions and to answer fully those questions as are proper, the rule has been satisfied" and the answers will be deemed sufficient. 8A Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 2177 (2d ed. 1994). As is evident from Columbia's detailed Responses and its explanation laid out below, Columbia has undertaken a more than "conscientious endeavor" in furnishing its Responses – Responses that are complete and require no further elaboration.

B. NCRIC Is Unable to Identify Any Response That Is Not Complete

1. Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 3 Is Complete

NCRIC protests that in responding to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 3, Columbia "merely incorporate[d] by reference its answers to [interrogatories] 1 and 2." NCRIC Mem. at 9. NCRIC misses the point. There is no rule against incorporating by reference; the issue is whether the Response is complete, and Columbia's plainly is.

Supplemental Interrogatory No. 1 had asked about certain calculations that Columbia deemed incorrect. See Supp. Interrog. No. 1 ("Identify and describe all facts and reasons forming the basis for Columbia's claim that" certain of NCRIC's calculations were incorrect). That is, as to NCRIC's calculations that Columbia believed to be incorrect, Supplemental Interrogatory No. 1 asked Columbia both (1) to identify the calculations at issue and (2) to describe why Columbia believed those calculations to be incorrect. Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 2 and 3 then asked parallel questions about calculations that Columbia believed to be relied on references to the complaint or answer alone. See, e.g., King, 117 F.R.D. at 6 (rejecting plaintiff's assertion that the details requested by the defendant's interrogatories were set forth adequately in the complaint). Here, in stark contrast, Columbia nowhere relies on references to previously submitted materials alone, but merely cites those documents for further elucidation after first supplying in each instance a detailed interrogatory response.

correct. But instead of combining the two inquiries into a single question, as NCRIC had in Supplemental Interrogatory No. 1, this time (for reasons that are not apparent) NCRIC asked the two questions separately: Supplemental Interrogatory No. 2 asked Columbia only to identify the correct calculations, while Supplemental Interrogatory No. 3 asked Columbia to explain the "why" of No. 2 – i.e., why Columbia believed the calculations in Supplemental Interrogatory No. 2 were in fact correct. Compare Supp. Interrog. No. 2 ("Identify and describe the amounts Columbia believes to be the correct amounts . . .") with Supp. Interrog. No. 3 ("Describe and identify the facts and reasons why Columbia believes the amounts contained in your response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 2 to be the proper amounts and calculations to be used in calculating the amount of premium due Columbia under the Contract.") (attached to NCRIC's Mem. as Exh. A).

In order to provide meaningful responses to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 2 in the first instance, Columbia delved into detail concerning not merely which numbers were correct, but why that was so – rather than providing less coherent responses and artificially saving the "why" for Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 3 alone. And Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 1 had necessarily provided further explication of the why, in detailing Columbia's position as to which calculations were incorrect. It was thus entirely proper to answer No. 3 by referencing the earlier responsive answers to Nos. 1 and 2, which included all of the information necessary to answer No. 3 – and in a more coherent form than would have been possible had Columbia artificially broken up the two issues of (1) which numbers were correct, and (2) why Columbia believed those calculations to be correct. As noted, NCRIC had itself combined the two inquiries in Interrogatory No. 1. If there is a deficiency here, it would be in NCRIC's structuring of its interrogatories. But all this demonstrates as to Columbia is its good faith in responding meaningfully to NCRIC's interrogatories. Incorporating by reference does not make Columbia's Response incomplete; rather, doing so pointed NCRIC to the precise location that addressed the question asked. To the extent that NCRIC sought further detail, the incorporated Responses referred to specific earlier submissions in which Columbia had addressed the issue in even greater detail.

NCRIC's dissatisfaction with Columbia's Response amounts to nothing more than another attempt by NCRIC to re-litigate summary judgment. NCRIC made the very same arguments in its summary judgment briefs that it advances here – namely, that Columbia was relying on statements of counsel rather than on evidence supporting its claims – and the Court did not adopt NCRIC's self-serving characterizations. Compare, e.g., NCRIC Mem. at 10 (criticizing Columbia's supposed "rel[iance] on counsel to attempt to perform calculations") with Exh. 10 (4/2/03 Order Denying Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment) at 5 (describing NCRIC argument that "Columbia wrongfully relies upon its counsel's unsupported argument"); id. at 6 (describing NCRIC contention that "Columbia relies only on its counsel's interpretation instead of expert testimony"); and id. at 8 (denying motion for summary judgment because "[t]here are material issues of fact in dispute"). Those characterizations are no more helpful to NCRIC here than they were there, and they provide no basis for a conclusion that Columbia's Responses are deficient in any way.

2. Columbia's Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 5-7, 10-11 Are Complete

These Responses identify various damages caused to Columbia by NCRIC. NCRIC challenges the Responses because, purportedly, "these specific damages were not previously identified in the pleadings." NCRIC Mem. at 11. This argument is remarkable in two respects. First, it is strikingly inconsistent with the very foundation of NCRIC's motion: NCRIC has moved to compel on the theory that Columbia has not provided NCRIC with the information that NCRIC seeks, yet here NCRIC somehow criticizes Columbia's Response for providing the new information that NCRIC ostensibly was seeking. NCRIC cannot have it both ways. It seems that the real problem with the Responses is that NCRIC does not like the arguments advanced by Columbia – which NCRIC may point out at trial but which it may not now use as a basis for continuing discovery.

Second, NCRIC's contention that "these specific damages were not previously identified in the pleadings" is demonstrably false. NCRIC has been on notice since the filing of Columbia's counterclaims at the outset of this case in January 2001 that Columbia claims damages from NCRIC relating to Columbia's bankruptcy. See, e.g., Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.'s Amended Answer and Counterclaims ¶ 63 ("In February 1998, Medical Center filed for bankruptcy, and remained in bankruptcy until early 1999. During this time, Medical Center incurred additional expenses as a result of its bankruptcy, including several hundred thousand dollars per month in legal fees"); id. ¶ 109 ("As a result of NCRIC's failure to perform its obligations under the Plan, NCRIC caused Medical Center damages including the overpayment of Additional Premium, thereby causing Medical Center to become insolvent."); id. ¶ 116 (same allegation as ¶ 109); id. ¶ 138 ("NCRIC 's negligence proximately caused Medical Center damage by causing it to overpay Additional Premium and fail to demand Return Premium it was due, and further, by causing Medical Center to become insolvent."); id. ¶ 146 ("Medical Center has been directly and proximately damaged by NCRIC's false representations and concealments by, among other things, overpaying premium, which in turn proximately and directly led Medical Center to become insolvent"); id. ¶ 153 (same allegation as ¶ 146).

Moreover, Columbia's assertion of these damages is supported by documents that Columbia produced to NCRIC long ago. For instance, a statement that Columbia incurred over $1.5 million in administrative expenses can be located at bates number CHWMC 0002511. That is part of a pleading (which begins at CHWMC 0002504), titled "Debtors' Amended Joint Plan of Reorganization (Second Revised) Under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code"; the pleading was filed January 8, 1999 in In re Columbia Hospital for Women, No. 98-0200, in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the District of Columbia. Columbia produced the document to NCRIC almost two years ago, on July 23, 2001, as part of Columbia's thirteenth production in the case.

NCRIC's protestations greatly overreach. The interrogatories addressing damages, like Supplemental Interrogatory No. 5, straightforwardly ask that Columbia identify an amount of damages and describe how that amount was calculated:

> Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 1 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

Supp. Interrog. No. 5 (attached to NCRIC's Mem. as Exh. A).

Columbia's Responses answer the question posed. They both (1) identify the amount of damages claimed in connection with each claim, and (2) describe how that amount was calculated. NCRIC's allegation that the Responses are incomplete because they do "not provide any factual evidence" demonstrating that NCRIC caused those damages, see NCRIC Mem. at 12, bears no connection to the interrogatories actually posed: causation simply is not a topic raised by these interrogatories. The same can be said for NCRIC's criticism that Columbia's Responses fail to refer to "documents or testimonial evidence to support" its figures, id. at 11: no such references are called for by the interrogatory. Thus, to the extent that Columbia has not provided further evidence in support of its Responses, that is because NCRIC's interrogatories did not ask for it. NCRIC's arguments have little to do with the actual questions asked and the actual Reponses given.

3. Columbia's Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 8-9, 12-13 Are Complete

In attacking these Responses, NCRIC parrots its objections to the previous group of Responses – namely, that Columbia has not provided sufficient evidence of such issues as causation. As before, however, the interrogatory does not call for such information. Columbia has answered the question actually posed, and NCRIC's description of what it wishes it had asked cannot serve as a basis for a motion to compel.

4. Columbia's Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 15-17 Are Complete

These Responses address the details of NCRIC's defamation of Columbia. NCRIC acknowledges, as it must, that "Columbia's Responses do include some named individuals identified as either speaking or hearing the alleged defamatory statements." NCRIC Mem. at 14. That is not enough for NCRIC, however, and NCRIC objects to Columbia's pointing out that the statements at issue were heard and repeated by other, unnamed individuals.

NCRIC misconstrues Columbia's Responses. Columbia has no intention of calling someone not named on its witness list to testify as to the substance of the defamatory statements. But the fact that the statements were repeated is itself of consequence, for as a matter of defamation law, circulation of the defamatory statements is relevant to proof of damages. See, e.g., Ingber v. Ross, 479 A.2d 1256, 1265 (D.C. 1984) ("the fact finder has substantial latitude in awarding compensatory damages for slander," and "'may take into account,'" inter alia, "'the extent of distribution of the defamation'") (quoting Robert Sack, Libel, Slander, & Related Problems 354-55 (1980)); Manbeck v. Ostrowski, 384 F.2d 970, 977, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 1, 8 (D.C. Cir. 1967) (in evaluating damages, "trier of fact may consider such relevant factors as 'the character of the defamatory publication and the probable effect of the language used as well as the effect which it is proved to have had. So too, it may consider the area of dissemination and the extent and duration of the circulation of the publication.'") (citing Restatement of Torts § 621, cmt. c (1938)); Moss v. Stockard, 580 A.2d 1011, 1036 (D.C. 1990) (same); Grossman v. Goemans, 631 F. Supp. 972, 974 (D.D.C. 1986) (same); Collins v. Brown, 268 F. Supp. 198, 202 (D.D.C. 1967) (same); see also, e.g., Murdaugh Volkswagen, Inc. v. First Nat'l Bank of S. Carolina, 801 F.2d 719, 727 (4th Cir. 1986) (upholding jury instruction on defamation, which invited jury to consider the extent of defamatory statements' circulation).[4] Accordingly, NCRIC's objection as to these interrogatories is beside the point.

5. Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 19 Is Complete

"Similar to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 3," NCRIC suggests, Supplemental Interrogatory No. 19 does not include "any documentary or testimonial evidence." NCRIC Mem. at 15. Aside from implicitly acknowledging that this interrogatory is duplicative of Supplemental Interrogatory No. 3, NCRIC explicitly concedes that "Columbia's Responses identified the Minimum Premium factor, Deposit Premium factor and Development factors as allegedly incorrect." As to both paragraphs 72 and 101, respectively, Columbia did the three things requested: Columbia (1) identified specific errors, miscalculations and overstatements; (2) identified the reasons and bases for the errors; and (3) identified the corrections required to make the bill accurate. That is all that is called for. See Supp. Interrog. No. 19 ("Identify the specific errors, miscalculations and overstatements in the statement(s) from NCRIC referenced in paragraphs 72 and 101 of the counterclaim including the reasons and bases for the errors and the corrections required to make the bill accurate.") (attached to NCRIC's Mem. as Exh. A). Ultimately, NCRIC fails to explain how Columbia's Responses fall short in any of these respects. NCRIC now wishes that it had asked for more, but it did not. It is NCRIC's obligation to frame appropriate interrogatories, calculated to elicit the information that it desires. See, e.g., Wolf, 15 F.R.D. at 408-09.

[4] NCRIC certainly has not cited any authority suggesting that to recover damages for defamation it is necessary to name every person who heard the defamatory statements. Nor could that be the law. See, e.g., Affordable Elegance Travel, Inc. v. Worldspan, L.P., 774 A.2d 320, 329 (D.C. 2001) (once "fact of damages" is proven, it is settled law that a plaintiff "need prove damages only with reasonable certainty.") (quoting Edmund J. Flynn Co. v. LaVay, 431 A.2d 543, 550 (D.C. 1981)); District of Columbia v. Gandy, 450 A.2d 896, 901 (D.C. 1982) (damages claimed by a plaintiff "need not be susceptible of computation with exactitude"), modified on other grounds, 458 A.2d 414 (D.C. 1983).

6. Columbia's Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 20 Is Complete

Columbia answered this interrogatory unambiguously, summing up as follows: "NCRIC in fact owes Columbia $765,347.39 in Return Premium." Yet somehow NCRIC maintains that Columbia has not provided a calculation as to the damages that Columbia alleges under the Plan. In particular, NCRIC complains that Columbia did not use the numbers contained in certain quarterly updates that NCRIC sent to Columbia after September 2000. See NCRIC Mem. at 16.

NCRIC's objection is off the mark. Under the terms of the Retro Plan, the date for performing the calculations known as a "Reconciliation" is September 1 of each year. See Addendum B ¶ 5; Retro Plan ¶ 5 & Exh. A ¶ 5; Addendum ¶ 5. At that time, NCRIC must complete its Reconciliation and, within 60 days of the Reconciliation Date, notify Columbia in writing of any amount owed. Id.[5] "Any amounts due either to or from" Columbia are then "due and payable within thirty (30) days" after Columbia receives notice from NCRIC. Id. The Retro

[5] Columbia was not in a position to make the complicated calculations necessary to determine what it owed or was owed at the time of each September Reconciliation Date, particularly since NCRIC refused to provide Columbia with access to much of the information necessary to make the calculations (e.g., information about Loss Reserves).

Plan thus required NCRIC to provide Columbia with Reconciliations within 60 days of September 1, 2001, and within 60 days of September 1, 2002, respectively.

During briefing of the parties' cross-motions for summary judgment, NCRIC sought to create a factual issue as to whether a September 2001 Reconciliation ever existed. See NCRIC SJ Opp. at 10.[6] If a September 2001 Reconciliation once existed, however, that is all the worse for NCRIC now because there is no evidence that it still exists. Plainly, it was not produced in discovery, despite Columbia's repeated requests for the document. See, e.g., Decl. of Joseph K. Leahy In Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment (Exhibit 20 thereto) ¶ 2. In short, it is not part of the record: Columbia does not have it; NCRIC never produced it in discovery; NCRIC did not attach it to its summary-judgment papers; and NCRIC did not designate it as a trial exhibit. When Columbia again raised the issue during the parties' meet-and-confer, NCRIC remained unable to direct Columbia to a bates number for any such document, notwithstanding Columbia's request that NCRIC do so.

NCRIC has never produced the September 2002 Reconciliation, either (nor has it contended otherwise, except in the parties' meet-and-confer – though NCRIC failed to identify a bates number for that reconciliation, too).

In addition to obligating NCRIC to perform such annual Reconciliations, the Retro Plan also provides for NCRIC's performing quarterly updates. But those calculations are not controlling for the exchange of premium; they are updates for informational purposes only. See Addendum B at 1, ¶ 10 (describing interim calculations as updates regarding the "status of the . . . Plan"); compare id. Exh. A, at 5, ¶ 6 (making no mention of premium being due except at each annual Reconciliation). It would be impossible to tell, for instance, how much premium was due in September 2001 on the basis of numbers reported in January 2002. New paid losses could have accrued, or any number of additional changes could have taken place affecting the Plan's calculations.

In other words, NCRIC is now seeking sanctions for Columbia's inability to provide NCRIC with information that NCRIC has withheld from Columbia. This is even more extraordinary because even NCRIC can't quite bring itself to assert that Columbia in fact has the information necessary to do what NCRIC asks. See NCRIC Mem. at 16 ("Because Columbia has received the information arguably necessary to calculate up to date damages figures, Columbia must be compelled [to do so].") (emphasis added). If NCRIC disagrees with Columbia, NCRIC is free to say so at trial, but that provides no basis for an order compelling Columbia to do more than it has done.

C. Columbia's Objections Are a Non-Issue

1. NCRIC's arguments concerning Columbia's objections do not help NCRIC, either. First, NCRIC's contesting now, for the first time, invocation of privileges that Columbia has made throughout this case is difficult to understand – unless, that is, it represents an attempt to manufacture a dispute where none properly exists. Regardless, though Columbia listed numerous privileges by way of reservation of rights, Columbia has not withheld any information in its Supplemental Interrogatory Responses on the basis of the privileges that NCRIC contests, see NCRIC Mem. at 17 (challenging invocation of peer review privilege, party-communication privilege, and investigative privilege), so the issue does not raise any genuine controversy for the Court.

2. Columbia's specific objection to NCRIC's impermissible broadening of a single, Court-approved defamation topic into three different interrogatories does not present a controversy for the Court, either. Columbia could have stood on its objection. As Columbia points out, the Court expressly emphasized that its Order authorizing NCRIC to serve these Supplemental Interrogatories was "not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter stated in plaintiff's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6)." See Response to Supp. Interrog. No. 15 (attached to NCRIC's Mem. as Exh. B) (quoting Order of 4/7/03, at 1-2 n.1). Topic No. 10 of NCRIC's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6), which was at issue in the motion to compel, identified the topic of: "Defamatory actions or statements by plaintiff about defendant." Nevertheless, NCRIC broadened that topic into three distinct interrogatories: in addition to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 17 concerning the substance of the defamatory statements, Supplemental Interrogatory No. 15 asked who made the defamatory statements, and Supplemental Interrogatory No. 16 asked who heard the defamatory statements.

Even so, and contrary to the impression that NCRIC creates in its papers, Columbia answered these interrogatories despite its objection. Not surprisingly, NCRIC does not identify any issues that Columbia failed to address. See NCRIC Mem. at 18-19. Nor could it. Columbia specifies not only the substance of the defamatory statements, but also who made the statements (e.g., Dr. Leonard Glassman), and who heard the statements (e.g., Dr. Nabil Asterbadi, Dr. Safa Rifka, Elizabeth Jackson, and Francis Renee Perkins). Accordingly, NCRIC's complaints about Columbia's objections as to the defamation interrogatories are without merit.

3. NCRIC flippantly makes light of Columbia's objection to NCRIC's inquiry regarding how much Columbia is owed "to date." See NCRIC Mem. at 19-20. The matter is hardly so simple, however. As is clear from above, however, NCRIC is assuming away a matter of dispute between the parties. Because the Plan provides that reconciliations performed in September control any amounts due between the parties, while updates performed quarterly are for informational purposes only, Columbia could only answer an interrogatory asking for amounts due on the basis of a September reconciliation. But NCRIC has failed to produce to Columbia either the September 2001 or September 2002 Reconciliations, forcing Columbia to calculate any amounts due on the basis of the September 2000 Reconciliation, the last one that NCRIC produced to Columbia.[7] Columbia can only wonder what amounts would be due under the September 2001 or September 2002 Reconciliations. Therefore, the amount owed "to date" is genuinely ambiguous. Columbia did not stand on this objection, however, but proceeded to answer the question the only way that it could – on the basis of the September 2000 numbers, the last figures that are certain. Therefore, it simply is not true that NCRIC does not know Columbia's contract damages. See supra.

In sum, Columbia has provided extensive detail concerning the factual bases for its claims. Columbia's interrogatory responses are complete, and NCRIC's contention that they are not hides behind labels and ignores the substance of the Responses. When NCRIC's conclusory allegations are pealed back, they are empty. NCRIC cannot point to a single Response that fails to provide information actually sought by the interrogatory. NCRIC's rush to seek the Court's intervention is an obvious attempt to prolong discovery and delay trial. The motion should be denied.

[7] NCRIC calls "false" the claim that it has not produced the September 2001 or September 2002 Reconciliations, but when Columbia asked NCRIC on June 3, 2003 to direct Columbia to the bates numbers of such documents, NCRIC was unable or unwilling to do so.

III. COLUMBIA'S RULE 30(b)(6) WITNESS GAVE COMPLETE RESPONSES

A. NCRIC Fails to Show that Dr. Rifka Did Not Respond to Any Question

Not satisfied in seeking to draw out discovery with interrogatories, NCRIC also throws in a couple of pages listing alleged topics that Columbia's Rule 30(b)(6) designee, Dr. Safa Rifka, allegedly did not answer. But NCRIC simply lists the topics and makes no effort to carry its burden of demonstrating that Columbia refused to answer the questions at issue (let alone that its questions were proper). See NCRIC Mem. at 20 (listing topics). It is NCRIC's burden to establish that Dr. Rifka refused to answer a question posed. Superior Court Rule 37(a) requires that a party moving to compel do so with particularity:

> Any motion to compel discovery must set forth verbatim the question propounded and the answer given, or a description of the other discovery requested and the response to this request. The motion must also set forth the reason or reasons the answer or response is inadequate.

SCR 37(a); see also SCR 37(a)(2) (providing for motion to compel "[i]f a deponent fails to answer a question propounded or submitted under Rule 30 or 31."); see also generally Wright & Miller, supra, § 2286 (treating it as axiomatic that motion to compel can be granted only where a party refuses to make a required disclosure).

NCRIC has not so much as attempted to make such a showing, which in and of itself is a sufficient basis for denying NCRIC's motion as to the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition. A party cannot simply re-read a deposition transcript, conclude that it wishes it had gotten more information, and then move to compel. Nor can it throw a list of topics at the Court – without citing a single specific question allegedly not answered and without offering any explanation as to how a particular answer is inadequate – and hope that the Court will do the work on its behalf or that it will come up with an explanation at some later date. NCRIC's failure even to attempt to demonstrate that Dr. Rifka's answers were inadequate is fatal to NCRIC's motion.

B. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions

Moreover, Dr. Rifka did provide satisfactory answers to NCRIC's questions on the topics at issue. The suggestion that Dr. Rifka failed to answer a question propounded on these topics cannot be squared with the record of the deposition.

1. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions on The Attending Faculty

Supplemental Deposition Topic No. 1 refers to any contract, business relationship, or business expectancy between Columbia and "each of the doctors identified in paragraphs 14-18 and 124 of Columbia's amended counterclaims." NCRIC Mem. Exh. C at 2. Contrary to the implication of the topic, paragraphs 14-18 and 124 do not identify any individual doctors but rather refer generally to Columbia's "Attending Faculty" as a group. Though NCRIC cites only selected deposition excerpts in an attempt to create the impression that Dr. Rifka was a recalcitrant witness, see NCRIC Mem. at 20, Dr. Rifka answered numerous questions in detail concerning any "contract, business relationship, or business expectancy" between Columbia and the Attending Faculty. See, e.g., Exh. 11 (Deposition of Safa Rifka, M.D.) at 20 ("Columbia did not have a contract, these are a self-selecting group. . . . These are the physicians who refer the bulk of the hospital, of the patients and the work to the hospital, historically. And who intend to refer the bulk of their work to the hospital futuristically."); id. (There are no contracts."); id. at 36 ("Physicians had, who admit to Columbia had the history of admitting all of their patients there. And the expectancy is if somebody admitted all their patients there for the last 19 or 20 or 15 years that it would continue unabated."); see generally id. at 19-61.

When NCRIC pressed Dr. Rifka to list every member of the attending faculty, however, he pointed out that "there are tens if not hundreds of them." Id. at 29; see also id. ("you're asking me now to list the entire medical staff of Columbia Hospital for Women"). Dr. Rifka also pointed out that Columbia had produced documents to NCRIC containing the names of individual members of the attending faculty. Id. at 30. When Columbia's counsel objected that Dr. Rifka "doesn't have to recall by memory the names of all the members of the attending faculty, id. at 33, NCRIC's counsel conceded that was right: "The point is not necessarily the names of the members of the attending faculty, it's going to be the business relationship that Columbia has with them." Id. at 33-34. But NCRIC promptly ignored that admission, insisting, and now filing a motion contending, that Columbia must produce a Rule 30(b)(6) witness who can list the names of all of the members of the Attending Faculty.

Depositions – even of 30(b)(6) witnesses – are not memory tests. Alexander v. FBI, 186 F.R.D. 137, 143 (D.D.C. 1998) ("Rule 30(b)(6) puts several duties on the designating party and on the deponent, but one of them is not omniscience"); id. ("Deponents under Rule 30(b)(6) must be prepared and knowledgeable, but they need not be subjected to a 'memory contest'") (citation omitted). This is all the more so when a witness points out that the answer to a question – and a list at that – has been produced in discovery. See id. (declining to award sanctions because witness "testified adequately in numerous respects," including his referencing alternate sources of information where the witness could not otherwise testify adequately). And the question is triply absurd here, where NCRIC itself produced documents listing the names of the Attending Faculty. Indeed, NCRIC provided insurance to each of these doctors under the Retro Plan, and of course had to know who its insureds were. NCRIC's insistence on a Columbia witness reciting this information is without basis.[8]

[8] NCRIC's single, general citation of dicta from Alexander, 186 F.R.D. at 141, purportedly in support of its position hardly justifies such a result. To the contrary, Alexander denied a motion for sanctions and insisted that a Rule 30(b)(6) deponent "need not be subjected to a 'memory contest.'" Id. at 143.

16d-002132

2. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions on NCRIC's Awareness of Columbia's Financial Situation

Next, NCRIC suggests that Dr. Rifka failed to explain the basis for Columbia's allegation that NCRIC was aware of Columbia's financial condition. See NCRIC Mem. at 20. NCRIC may not have liked Dr. Rifka's answer, but he certainly answered the question. First and foremost, Dr. Rifka testified that he knew that NCRIC was aware of Columbia's financial condition because NCRIC had told him so. See, e.g., Exh. 11 (Rifka Tr.) at 65 ("NCRIC came and said they know about the tenuous financial position that the hospital is in, and that they demanded either a letter of credit or a CD or cash"); id. at 66 ("[Mr. Fargis of NCRIC] said that he knows our financial situation is bad and he knows that our, we are having difficulty with finances"); id. at 71 ("[they] came and told us, you are in a bad financial position and, hence, we want this, this, and this"); id. at 74 ("they told me that they knew"). Moreover, Dr. Rifka noted that because Columbia is a not-for-profit institution, certain information about its finances is public, see, e.g., id. at 70 ("Columbia Hospital for Women is a not-for-profit. It is, has audited statements and anybody can ask for it. And therefore it is a public knowledge and publicly accessible, to whatever our financial condition is."). Dr. Rifka added that NCRIC attended public hearings in connection with Columbia's bankruptcy ,and that NCRIC was a sophisticated corporate entity doing business with Columbia. Id. at 174-75 ("The hospital has told NCRIC about its financial position. Financial position of the hospital was public . . . . They attended the court's proceeding. . . . So there is no way like a sophisticated company as they are . . . that NCRIC did not have any knowledge. They sure did."). Thus, Dr. Rifka answered the question on multiple levels.

3. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions on Doctors Leaving Columbia

NCRIC contends that Dr. Rifka did not answer questions concerning "physicians who allegedly asked Columbia to stay with NCRIC." NCRIC Mem. at 20. But NCRIC conveniently fails to cite page after page in which Dr. Rifka testified in detail about specific doctors who did just that. See id.

For instance, Dr. Rifka testified that he set up two meetings with doctors from the Horwitz/Safran practice group at the office of Columbia's CEO Larry Wilson. Exh. 11 (Rifka Tr.) at 96. Those meetings were attended by Drs. Newman and Blank from that group. Id. Dr. Rifka explained that those doctors said flatly, "If you don't continue with NCRIC, we're going to leave." Id. Dr. Rifka described less formal conversations with a number of other doctors to the same effect. See, e.g., id. at 99-100 (describing personal conversations such as that with Dr. Heather Johnson in which "[s]he said, If we don't renew with NCRIC, their group is going to go. And their group left."). In addition to such formal and informal exchanges with individual doctors, Dr. Rifka referenced executive committee meetings and general staff meetings at which physicians made similar statements. See id. at 101-05. Dr Rifka added that "it was common knowledge." Id. at 103. Dr. Rifka also reference other submissions in the case that contain further detail on the topic. Id. at 101-02. NCRIC's suggestion that Dr. Rifka did not respond to questions on this topic is puzzling not just because he quite clearly did, but also because, as elsewhere, NCRIC has not pointed to anything suggesting that he did not.

4. Dr. Rifka Adequately Answered NCRIC's Questions on Preventing Performance

NCRIC similarly suggests that Dr. Rifka did not respond to questions concerning "Columbia's allegations that NCRIC somehow prevented Columbia's performance under the Retro Plan."[9] See NCRIC Mem. at 20. But he quite clearly did answer such questions directly. See Exh. 11 (Rifka Tr.) at 155 ("Sitting here today, I cannot recall of anything that Columbia was supposed to do that it did not do."); id. at 157 (responding to the question whether NCRIC excused Columbia from performing any obligation, Dr. Rifka stated: "Other than the oral agreement which said that no money will change hands, I do not recall any."). NCRIC does not explain how it is that these are not responsive answers.

5. Dr. Rifka Properly Referred to Other Case Materials

Finally, NCRIC objects generally that Dr. Rifka referred to materials previously submitted in the case, such as Columbia's Statements of Material Facts. See NCRIC Mem. at 21. Dr. Rifka did so after exhausting his memory on certain topics. Regardless, it is entirely proper for a Rule 30(b)(6) witness to refer to existing pleadings in the case. See supra. NCRIC's failure to follow-up on such references is not a deficiency in Columbia's testimony. Ultimately, NCRIC does not identify any topic or fact on which it claims it cannot determine with clarity Columbia's position on the basis of such a reference by Columbia's witness.[10]

C. NCRIC's Unauthorized Document Requests Were Improper, and NCRIC Has Not Even Attempted To Justify Them

Finally, NCRIC also points out that Columbia's designee did not search for documents responsive to NCRIC's supplemental document request. See NCRIC Mem. at 20. NCRIC fails to mention, however, that NCRIC had no basis for lodging such requests well over a year after the close of discovery and without leave of Court. Indeed, when Columbia wrote to NCRIC

---

[9] NCRIC does not specify the allegations to which it refers, nor does it detail how Dr. Rifka failed to answer any such question.

[10] In the unlikely event that the Court determines NCRIC is somehow entitled to further answers, but that further oral examination would not serve a good purpose, the Court can order that specified outstanding questions be answered in writing. See Alexander, 186 F.R.D. at 143.

16d-002135

pointing that out, NCRIC did not bother to respond and appeared to have dropped the matter. See Exh. 12 (Letter from Schulman to Badami of 5/15/03). Columbia's correspondence to NCRIC explained that NCRIC's document requests contravened the Court's admonition that its Order authorizing further limited discovery was "not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter" that was at issue in NCRIC's motion. Id. (quoting Order of 4/7/03 at 1-2 n.1). Moreover, Columbia added, it had already produced an extensive array of documents responsive to NCRIC's untimely requests.[11]

NCRIC never raised the issue again with Columbia, though its motion papers disingenuously note in passing that Columbia failed to search for such documents. Even so, NCRIC's motion still does not even attempt to justify these supplemental document requests.

Thus, NCRIC's efforts to identify deficiencies in the answers of Columbia's Rule 30(b)(6) designee are no more successful than NCRIC's efforts to identify deficiencies in Columbia's interrogatory responses. Discovery must end, and NCRIC's attempt to delay trial via this motion should be denied.

[11] Indeed, the Court's Order called for production of the following documents only: "financial accounts or statements as to [Columbia's] financial situation at the time Columbia authorized the $1 million check to be given to [NCRIC]." Id. at 2-3. Columbia informed NCRIC that Columbia had in fact produced to NCRIC such financial accounts or statements, and rather than re-producing those documents, Columbia directed NCRIC's attention to the relevant bates range. See Exh. 12.

16d-002136

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, NCRIC's Motion To Compel and for Sanctions Pursuant to Rules 33(b) and 37(a) should be denied.

EXHIBIT 1

GENERAL ORDER
FOR CIVIL II CASES ON ALL CALENDARS

I. SCOPE AND PURPOSE. This General Order supplements the Superior Court Civil Rules (as of July 29, 1996), which apply to every Calendar and with which counsel and pro se parties should be familiar. In addition, a Civil Actions Information Handbook is available at Scheduling Conference for pro se parties and counsel who wish to share it with their clients. All counsel and parties are expected to treat each other and those involved in the case resolution process with dignity, respect and civility, both in court and in out-of-court conferences and discovery proceedings.

II. CHAMBERS, STAFF, AND SCHEDULE FOR CALENDAR 8.

Judge: Anna Blackburne-Rigsby
Chambers: 3540 Moultrie Building
Phone:(202)879-0055 Fax: (202)879-0041
Secretary: Ms. LaVerne Boone
Law Clerk: Ms. Beverly Blackwell
Courtroom Clerk: Mr. Derrick Monroe
Courtroom: A48 Building D (515 Fifth Street, NW)
Phone: (202) 879-2848

Unless otherwise directed, matters on Calendar 8, will take place as follows.
In-court proceedings: Courtroom A48, Building A, 515 Fifth Street, NW
Pretrial/Settlement Conferences: Jury Room for courtroom JM 13 (Judge Mott) Moultrie Building, unless otherwise notified.
Trials: Courtroom A48 Mondays through Thursdays, beginning at 9:30 a.m.
Scheduling Conferences, Oral examinations and Ex Parte Proofs: Fridays in Courtroom A48 from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

III. MOTIONS, OTHER FILINGS and COURT JACKETS. All requests must be by written motion (Rule 7(b)(1), 12-I(d)) filed in the Clerk's Office after payment of fee. The Court will not act on informal correspondence or telephone calls, but appreciates notice by phone that an emergency motion is being filed. Ex parte communications are inappropriate and will not be accepted.

The caption of all filings should include "Calendar 8 – Judge Blackburne-Rigsby" beneath the case number; and on the line below that "Next court event: [date and nature of event]" (e.g., Pretrial Conf: Dec. 4, 1997).

The original and one copy plainly marked "Chambers Copy" shall be filed in the Clerk's Office, JM 170 (Rule 5(e)); no motions should be faxed. The courtesy copy to chambers must be accompanied by (1) a proposed order, Rule 12-I(e); (2) a copy of the scheduling order, Rule 12-I(h); (3) a mailing label for each party entitled to receive a copy of the order, (4) a statement that an attempt was made to obtain consent to the relief sought, Rule 12-I(a), and (5) a certificate of service on all parties and on Chambers, Rule 5-I. Ordinarily, motions which do not comply with these requirements may be summarily denied. Memoranda which exceed ten pages in length and replies to oppositions are discouraged.

STIPULATIONS BETWEEN COUNSEL SHALL NOT BE EFFECTIVE TO CHANGE DEADLINES.

Except on Motions Day Calendars (5, 6, 15, and 16), motions will be decided on the papers alone, unless the Court determines the need for a hearing. Counsel and pro se parties must notify chambers if a pending motion is resolved or a case is settled.

Court jackets are maintained in the Clerk's Office (Room JM-170). They can be reviewed there and not in chambers.

IV. DISCOVERY. Motions to compel discovery and motions relating to discovery must comply with Rule 37(a)and Rule 26(i). The meeting required by these rules must be face to face, for a reasonable period of time (usually at least 60 minutes) in an effort to resolve the matter before filing a motion. Motions lacking this certification, including the date, time, and place at which a meeting was held, will be summarily denied.

V. SETTLEMENT. In order to reduce litigation expense and delay, to eliminate the anxiety of trial and the risk of an unsatisfactory outcome, it is desirable that settlements occur as early as possible in the litigation process. The Court is available to assist the parties in pursuing settlement early in the case. However, the Court will not delay trial to participate in settlement discussions on the day of trial. Counsel must sign a certificate that all case preparation has been completed by the time of mediation. Counsel unable to sign the certificate, and if necessary their clients, will be summoned to appear before the Presiding Judge for consideration of further sanctions.

VI. PRETRIAL/SETTLEMENT CONFERENCE. Violations of any provision of Rule 16 may result in sanctions. The attached form of Joint Pretrial Statement must be used and must include joint voir dire questions, jury instructions and verdict form -- with objections, if any.

Non-party principals with full settlement authority must attend in person or be available by telephone until notified by counsel that the conference has concluded (usually one hour after its scheduled beginning).

ADDENDUM TO GENERAL ORDER AND GUIDELINES FOR TRIAL

1. Courtroom Location and Equipment

Trials will be conducted in Courtroom A-48, Building A, 515 5th Street, NW. The telephone number in the courtroom is 202-879-2848. A small easel is the only equipment available in the courtroom. Counsel requiring technical equipment during the trial must make their own arrangements outside the Court for such equipment. The U.S. Marshal may require a court order to bring such items into the courthouse. If so, counsel must prepare such an order for the Court's signature.

2. First Trial Day

On the day scheduled for trial, all counsel and parties must report to Courtroom A-48 at 9:30 a.m. ready to begin trial. Unlike prior practice in Civil II cases, there will be no initial discussions on the day of trial. If the Court is unable to begin the trial on the date scheduled, all parties and counsel must remain ready on one (1) hour telephone alert to come to the courthouse and begin trial on either of the two following court days.

3. Hours of Trial

Trials will generally be held on Mondays through Thursdays from 9:30 a.m. to approximately 4:30 p.m. The luncheon recess will be from approximately 1:00 p.m. to 2:15 p.m.; there will be one brief mid-morning recess and one brief mid-afternoon recess.

4. Pretrial Order

At trial, the provisions of the Joint Pretrial Order will be enforced except in extraordinary circumstances. Therefore, claims and defenses not set forth in the Joint Pretrial Order will not be entertained.

5. Jury Voir Dire and Challenges for Cause

Upon the jury panel's arrival in the courtroom, the clerk will seat its members in the courtroom, in the order in which their names appear on the panel list. The Court will then explain the purpose and procedures for voir dire and will conduct the voir dire.

Each panel member will be provided a blank index card. Each panel member shall write their jury number on the card. As each question is asked, any panel member who has an affirmative response will write the number of that question on their index card. After all questions have been answered, the Court will individually call to the bench all panel members and will inquire with counsel into their affirmative responses and make any other inquiry that may be appropriate. Any challenges for cause must be presented immediately after each juror is interrogated. Upon the conclusion of voir dire, counsel will simultaneously exercise their peremptory challenges. See Rules 47-I and 48. Thereafter, the jury will be seated in the jury box in the order in which their names appear on the jury list.

6. Preliminary Instructions

After the jury is selected and sworn, the Court will give preliminary instructions to the jury. These instructions will generally include a description of the trial process, the responsibilities of the participants, the burden of proof, procedures governing juror note taking and juror questioning, and the duty not to discuss the case with anyone until deliberations begin. If counsel desire that any additional preliminary instructions be given, they should make that request of the Court before the jury panel arrives.

7. Note Taking and Questioning by Jurors

Jurors will be permitted to take notes in notebooks which the Court will provide. At the end of the trial, the jurors will be permitted to take their notebooks to the jury room for use during deliberation.

8. Opening Statement

Except for especially complex cases, opening statements shall be limited to twenty minutes per side. Opening statements should consist of a straightforward statement of what the evidence will show, not argument. Plaintiff's counsel shall make no reference to the ad damnum clause of the complaint, nor to any claim for punitive damages without prior approval of the Court.

9. The Rule on Witnesses

The rule on witnesses will be in effect throughout the trial until the time of closing arguments and instructions. Other than parties and their representatives, all witnesses must remain outside the courtroom except while testifying. If counsel desire a waiver of the rule with respect to a specific witness (for example, an expert), counsel shall first discuss the matter with opposing counsel and then present the request to the Court prior to the witness' s arrival in the courtroom. Counsel shall instruct witnesses not to discuss their testimony after they leave the stand.

10. Availability of Witnesses

Once the trial begins, witnesses will be put on call at the peril of the calling party. The trial will not be recessed because a witness is unavailable except in extraordinary circumstances. If alerted ahead of time, the Court will endeavor to accommodate witnesses with scheduling problems. In some instances, it may be wise for counsel to arrange a de bene esse deposition of a witness whose schedule makes his or her live appearance at trial problematic. Any objections to de bene esse depositions should be designated and delivered to chambers one week before trial so that the Court can review objections before trial. In the case of videotaped depositions, a transcript must be prepared in order for the Court to rule on objections. In the absence of any objections, the transcript or videotape will be admitted without interruption.

No retained expert (as distinct from a fact witness who is testifying to opinions reached during treatment) may testify during a party's case-in-chief or in rebuttal unless his or her Rule 26(b)(4) statement has been provided prior to the Pretrial.

16d-002145

11. Examination of Witnesses

Counsel may approach the witness stand while handling exhibits. Otherwise, they are requested to remain at the podium or counsel table.

12. Objections

"Speaking objections" from the podium will not be permitted. Counsel will limit objections to shorthand phrases such as "hearsay," "lack of foundation," "asked and answered," etc. If additional discussion is needed, counsel will be called to the bench. Frequent or protracted bench conferences will be discouraged.

13. Exhibits

Except where objections have been reserved in writing at the Pretrial or except in extraordinary circumstances, any exhibits which have been properly pre-marked and submitted will be admitted at trial. Counsel may refer to them in argument or in the testimony and need not lay a foundation for their admissibility. Where objections have been reserved, normally only the grounds of objection reserved will be considered at trial, and counsel should not spend time authenticating or otherwise proving admissibility. Impeachment exhibits (those whose sole purpose is to attack a witness's veracity) need not be disclosed at pretrial, but they should be pre-marked so that they will be immediately useable at trial without the necessity for labeling by the clerk.

Without leave of Court, per Rule 16(e)(5), no party may offer at trial any witness or exhibit not listed in the Pretrial Order, except for purposes of impeachment or rebuttal.

14. Closing Arguments

Closing arguments will generally be limited to thirty minutes per side. Plaintiff may reserve for rebuttal up to one-half of the time actually used during direct argument.

During closing arguments (and opening statements), it is expected that each counsel will treat all other counsel with the courtesy and civility with which he or she would wish to be treated. Counsel are reminded that it is improper to argue matters not in evidence or to express a personal opinion or belief about the case.

15. Jury Instructions

If any party is requesting any non-standard jury instructions, counsel must bring to court on the morning of trial a computer disk containing such instructions compatible with Microsoft Word 97, to facilitate their inclusion in the court's written instructions that go to the jury.

16. Deliberations

The Court will send to the jury at the beginning of deliberations all admitted exhibits, the written jury instructions, and any verdict form which the Court has determined to use. In addition, jurors will be able to take their notebooks with them. Throughout jury deliberations counsel must be available on ten minutes notice in the event that any jury notes are received. Counsel choosing not to remain in the vicinity of the courtroom should be sure the clerk has a telephone number where they can be reached. The jury will normally be brought into the courtroom to be excused at the end of the day, for resumption of deliberations the following day. The courtroom clerk will maintain exhibits, notebooks, and verdict forms until the jury reconvenes its deliberations when all are present the following morning.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART NCRIC's MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY BY DESIGNATION UNDER SCR 30(b)(6) AND APPEARANCE AT DEPOSITION

On August 7, 2001, NCRIC filed this instant Motion to Compel Discovery By Designation Under SCR 30(b)(6) and Appearance at Deposition. Specifically, NCRIC asks the Court to compel Columbia to designate persons to appear at deposition and answer questions about subject matters described in plaintiff's Notice of 30(b)(6) Deposition pertaining to numbers 1-14, 28-29, 51-52, 56-57. On November 19, 2001, Columbia filed its Memorandum of Law in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motions to Compel. The Court has reviewed the motion and the particular objections. The Court's disposition on these issues is detailed below:

#1: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories[1] specific to this subject area. Such information should be obtained from interrogatories. The Court has considered Columbia's objections based on work product privilege. However, certain underlying facts must have been the basis for Columbia's eleven-count counterclaim. Thus, the Court does not recognize a work-product privilege as to this

[1] The Court will allow NCRIC to reopen discovery in the form of interrogatories only for the specified areas. This is not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter stated in specific area.

#2: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories to this subject area. (See #1 above).

#3: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories to this subject area. (See #1 above).

#4: Granted. Columbia is instructed to provide designees to be deposed on this specific subject area.

#5: Granted. Certain underlying facts as these must have been the basis for Columbia to file an eleven-count counterclaim. Columbia is instructed to provide designees to be deposed on this specific subject area.

#6: The Court will reserve ruling on these issues until this issue is addressed in the Court's ruling on NCRIC's Summary Judgment Motion.

#7: The Court will reserve ruling on these issues until this issue is addressed in the Court's ruling on NCRIC's Summary Judgment Motion.

#8: Denied: The Court agrees with Columbia that this subject area improperly asks the designees to speak to the law of fiduciary relationships.

#9: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories specific to this subject area. Such information should be obtained from interrogatories. The Court has considered Columbia's objections based on work product privilege. However, certain underlying facts must have been the basis of the eleven-count counterclaim. Thus, the Court does not recognize a work-product privilege as to this specific area. Moreover, the Court compels Columbia to provide financial accounts or plaintiff's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6), but only to allow such relevant and pertinent information to be obtained properly through limited interrogatories.

---

16d-002150

statements as to their financial situation at the time Columbia authorized the $1 million check to be given to Columbia.

#10: Granted in part. Certain underlying facts, such as these, must have the basis of Columbia's eleven-count counterclaim. The Court reserves ruling on the remaining issue until it issues a ruling on NCRIC's Summary Judgment Motion.

#11: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories specific to this subject area. Such information should be obtained from interrogatories. The Court has considered Columbia's objections based on work product privilege. However, certain underlying facts must have been the basis of Columbia's eleven-count counterclaim. Thus, the Court does not recognize a work-product privilege as to this specific area.

#12: Denied. NCRIC already has within its possession the allegations of errors by plaintiff from the pleadings.

#13: Granted. Columbia counter-claimed that NCRIC knew about Columbia's financial situation. Columbia should designate person(s) to speak to the underlying facts regarding the "bases for the allegations of plaintiff's knowledge about defendant's financial situation."

#14: Granted. The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories specific to this subject area. Such information should be obtained from interrogatories. The Court does not recognize a work-product privilege as to this specific area.

#28: The Court will permit NCRIC ten days leave to file limited interrogatories to this subject area. (See #1 above).

16d-002151

#29: Denied. The Court acknowledges Columbia's objection that this is a moot issue. However, the Court agrees with Columbia's objection that NCRIC will only be able to obtain information concerning the results of Columbia's insolvency, not the cause.

#51: Granted. Columbia is instructed to provide designees to be deposed on this specific subject area.

#52: Denied. Columbia can not be expected to testify as to the intent of NCRIC.

#56: Granted: Columbia is instructed to provide designees to be deposed on this specific subject area.

#57: Denied. The Court acknowledges that Columbia's prayer for attorney's fees was dismissed and therefore this subject area is moot.

So Ordered.

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

Dear Scott and Jenifer:

Enclosed are Columbia's Responses to NCRIC's Supplemental Interrogatories. In order to facilitate prompt resolution of this matter, Columbia has furnished these responses a full week in advance of the time permitted under the local rules. In the same spirit, Columbia will be in touch with you shortly with proposed dates for the remaining Rule 30(b)(6) deposition.

We received today notice from the Court scheduling the pretrial conference for May 19, 2003 at 4:30 p.m. and accordingly renew our proposal to meet pursuant to Rule 16(c) in advance of the conference. We are available to meet any time before the conference other than Saturday, May 17, 2003.

Please let me know when you would be prepared to meet pursuant to Rule 16(c).

Sincerely,

Eli C. Schulman

DEFENDANT'S OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFF'S SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORIES

COMES NOW Defendant, Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"), by and through its attorneys, Mark C. Hansen, Esquire, David E. Ross, Esquire, Eli C. Schulman, Esquire, and Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, P.L.L.C., and in response to Plaintiff's Supplemental Interrogatories ("Plaintiff's Interrogatories"), propounded by Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC"), states as follows:

GENERAL OBJECTIONS

The following General Objections apply to each and every interrogatory and form an integral part of Columbia's response to each interrogatory:

1. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information that Columbia already has provided to NCRIC in this litigation. The discovery at issue was sought by NCRIC at the outset of this case, some two and a half years ago. By the time that the parties completed discovery and undertook extensive briefing of cross-motions for summary judgment, Columbia had provided NCRIC with detailed discovery in the form of documents, interrogatory responses, and depositions concerning the subject matter of these Supplemental Interrogatories and had necessarily gone on the record in Columbia's papers about the issues that NCRIC now raises in these Interrogatories. For instance, Columbia has explained in great detail the proper calculations under the Retro Plan, but this topic serves as the focus of several of NCRIC's Supplemental Interrogatories.

2. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories to the extent that they disregard the Court's express admonition that its Order authorizing NCRIC to serve these Supplemental Interrogatories "is not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter stated in plaintiff's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6)." Order of 4/7/03 at 1-2 n.1.

For instance, the Court authorized NCRIC to serve a supplemental interrogatory on the topic of "Defamatory actions or statements by plaintiff about defendant." But NCRIC has proceeded to lodge three separate interrogatories relating to NCRIC's defamation of Columbia, addressing not only the substance of the defamatory statements but also such matters as who heard the statements – matters plainly exceeding the scope of the Court's Order.

3. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with information sufficient to answer the Interrogatories. For instance, calculations under the Plan depend upon the proper calculation of Subject Premium – but NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to verify NCRIC's calculation of Subject Premium.

4. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories to the extent that they are duplicative.

5. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information that is in NCRIC's possession.

6. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek information not in Columbia's possession.

7. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they seek disclosure of information protected by the peer review privilege, the attorney-client privilege, the work-product privilege, the party-communication privilege or the investigative privilege. Columbia further objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories insofar as they call for information otherwise protected under the District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure or any other applicable law. Columbia does not intend by these responses or objections, or by the inadvertent production of any privileged documents, to waive any protection to which it is entitled.

8. Columbia objects to Plaintiff's Interrogatories to the extent that they are vague, ambiguous, overly broad, burdensome, harassing, and/or not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this action.

9. Columbia reserves the right to modify or supplement its objections and responses based on such pertinent information as it may subsequently discover.

SPECIFIC OBJECTIONS AND RESPONSES

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 1: Identify and describe all facts and reasons forming the basis for Columbia's claim that any of the calculations or numbers in Columns A-E, lines 1-20 of Exhibit A attached to Columbia's Answer to Interrogatories and Responses and Requests for Admissions are incorrect or fail to comply with the terms, provisions or formulas of the contract between the NCRIC and Columbia.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 1: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous and insofar as it is unduly burdensome. In particular, there is no pleading or pleadings denominated in whole or in part Columbia's Answer to Interrogatories and Responses and Requests for Admissions, and none of Columbia's responses to NCRIC's interrogatories or NCRIC's requests for admissions has attached an Exhibit A. Columbia also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Columbia's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession. For example, upon information and belief, the data necessary to calculate most of the amounts shown on Exhibit 1, infra, are in NCRIC's sole possession.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows: Exhibit 1 to Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories and Exhibit 1 to Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's First Request for Admissions ("Exhibit 1") each includes a grid to set off each column and row of the exhibit. The columns are labeled 1 through 20; the rows are labeled A through F. Each of Columns A through E corresponds to a one-year period that the Plan was in operation (e.g., Column A, which is labeled "Y94-95," corresponds to the period between September 1, 1994 to and August 31, 1995). Each row corresponds to a specific term defined in the Plan or concept contemplated by the Plan (e.g., Row 2 corresponds to the term "Deposit Premium," as defined in the Plan; Row 5 corresponds to the concept of indemnity reserves contemplated by the Plan).

Columbia contends that, for Columns B through E of Row 2 ("Deposit"); for Columns C through E of Row 12 ("Development Factor"); for Columns C through E of Row 13 ("Retrospective Premium"); for Columns A through E of Row 14 ("Return Premium" or "Additional Premium" due); and for Column A of Rows 17 ("Maximum Premium"), 18 ("Minimum Premium"), 19 (Maximum Premium multiplier) and 20 (Minimum Premium multiplier), the amount shown on Exhibit 1 is not the correct amount set by the Plan, for the term or concept corresponding to that row and the period corresponding to that column.

Further, upon information and belief, for each column of Rows 1 (corresponding to the term "Subject Premium"), 5, 6 (corresponding to the concept of ALAE reserves), 7

(corresponding to the term "Loss Reserves") and 11 (Paid Losses plus Loss Reserves), Columbia cannot determine whether the numbers are incorrect or fail to comply with the terms, provisions, or formulas of the contract, because the information necessary for making such a determination is solely in the possession of NCRIC.

As to the basis for Columbia's conclusion that the foregoing calculations or numbers are incorrect or fail to comply with the terms, provisions, or formulas of the contract between NCRIC and Columbia, subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections Columbia responds as follows:

(a) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Row 2 must be calculated by applying a multiplier. The proper multiplier is .67 for the periods corresponding to Columns B through E. NCRIC applied an incorrect multiplier, approximately .62, when calculating all the amounts in Columns B through E of Row 2, thereby miscalculating each corresponding amount in Row 2.

(b) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Rows 13 and 14 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 12. The multiplier shown in Columns C through E of Row 12 is incorrect. The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 12 of Exhibit 1 is: "80%" for the period corresponding to Column C; "65%" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "55%" for the period corresponding to Column E, rather than: "105%" for the period corresponding to Column C; "80%" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "65%" for the period corresponding to Column E. NCRIC applied the incorrect multiplier in calculating each amount in Columns C through E of Rows 13 and 14, thereby miscalculating each such amount.

(c) The Plan dictates that the amounts for the term corresponding to Row 17 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 19, and that the amounts for the term corresponding to Row 18 must be calculated by applying a multiplier corresponding to Row 20. The multiplier shown in Column A of Rows 19 and 20 is incorrect. Under the Plan, the correct amount for the term corresponding to Row 19, for the period corresponding to Column A, is "1.33," not "1.15"; for that same period, the correct amount for the term corresponding to Row 20 is ".60", not ".75". By applying the incorrect multiplier from Column A of Rows 19 and 20, NCRIC thereby miscalculated each amount in Column A of Rows 17 and 18.

(d) The Plan dictates that the amount for the term corresponding to Row 14 must be determined by a calculation that subtracts from the term corresponding to Row 2 another term corresponding either to Row 13 or Row 18, whichever is greater (subject to a further limitation not relevant here). By applying the incorrect multiplier in Column A of Row 20 and thereby miscalculating the amount in Column A of Row 18, NCRIC thereby miscalculated the amount in Column A of Row 18, see supra (c), which also led NCRIC to miscalculate the amount in Column A of Row 13 and, in turn, Column A of Row 14. And by miscalculating the amount in Column B of Row 2, see supra (a), NCRIC thereby miscalculated the amount in Column B of Row 14.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment at 13-17, Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute & Exhs. 10, 14; and Reply in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment Exh. 1. To the extent that this or any of these supplemental interrogatories seeks further facts and reasons forming the basis for these conclusions, Columbia hereby incorporates by reference Columbia's Answer and Counterclaims; Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment ("SJ Mem."); Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute ("SMF"); Reply in Support of Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment ("SJ Reply"); Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment ("SJ Opp."); Statement of Material Facts in Dispute ("SMF2"); and the exhibits to the foregoing papers (collectively, "Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers").

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 2: Identify and describe the amounts Columbia believes to be the correct amounts in Columns A-E, lines 1-20 of Exhibit A attached to Columbia's Answer to Interrogatories and Responses and Requests for Admissions to comply with the terms, provisions or formulas of the Contract between the NCRIC and Columbia.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 2: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Columbia's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession. For example, upon information and belief, the data necessary to calculate most of the amounts shown on Exhibit 1 – and particularly the amounts in Rows 1, 2, 4, 5 through 11, 13, and 14 – is in NCRIC's sole possession. Without this data, Columbia cannot determine how and in what manner the amounts referred to in its response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 1 are incorrect. The amounts in Exhibit 1 (and therefore those in these Responses) necessarily reflect, inter alia, the assumption that NCRIC correctly and fairly calculated Subject Premium and Loss Reserves under the Plan – an assumption that Columbia is unable to verify because NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to verify these amounts. Nonetheless, Columbia has been able to determine that NCRIC's miscalculations of some amounts shown on Exhibit 1 resulted in part from NCRIC's improper application of the retro formula under the Plan, and Columbia therefore responds accordingly.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds, based on the facts presently known to it, as follows:

(a) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 2 of Exhibit 1 is: "$2,203,073.90" for the period corresponding to Column B; "$2,341,855.02" for the period corresponding to Column C; "$2,238,195.30" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "$2,418,476.89" for the period corresponding to Column E.

(b) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 12 of Exhibit 1 is: "80%" for the period corresponding to Column C; "65%" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "55%" for the period corresponding to Column E.

(c) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 13 of Exhibit 1 is: "$3,063,904.73" for the period corresponding to Column C; "$1,706,188.72" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "$2,802,425.73" for the period corresponding to Column E.

(d) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 14 of Exhibit 1 is: "($350,593.73)" for the period corresponding to Column A; "$333,392.45" for the period corresponding to Column B; "$722,049.71" for the period corresponding to Column C; "($233,841.30)" for the period corresponding to Column D; and "$383,948.84" for the period corresponding to Column E.

(e) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 17 of Exhibit 1 is: "$3,783,734.29" for the period corresponding to Column A.

(f) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 18 of Exhibit 1 is: "$1,706,947.80" for the period corresponding to Column A.

(g) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 19 of Exhibit 1 is: "1.33" for the period corresponding to Column A.

(h) The correct amount, set by the Plan, for the term corresponding to Row 20 of Exhibit 1 is: ".60" for the period corresponding to Column A.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; and SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 3: Describe and identify the facts and reasons why Columbia believes the amounts contained in your response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 2 to be the proper amounts and calculations to be used in calculating the amount of premium due Columbia under the Contract.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 3: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds, based on the facts presently known to it, as follows: Columbia incorporates by reference its Responses to Supplemental Interrogatories Nos. 1 & 2.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 4: Identify and describe the amount of premium that should have been charged to Columbia in each year of the Contract and the method of calculation of any refund premium Columbia claims it is owed.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 4: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous. In particular, Columbia is unable to determine the meaning of the phrase "the amount of premium that should have been charged to Columbia." For instance, this Interrogatory speaks generically of "premium," but the Plan refers to numerous types of premium, including "Subject Premium," "Deposit Premium," "Retro Premium," "Minimum Premium," and

"Additional Premium." This Interrogatory also speaks of "refund premium," a term not defined in the Plan. The term "charged to Columbia" is vague, as well.

Columbia also objects to the extent that this Interrogatory asks for "the amount of premium that should have been charged to Columbia" insofar as any such amount depends on the fair and correct calculation of Subject Premium under the Plan – but NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to verify NCRIC's calculation of Subject Premium.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows: Columbia believes that this Interrogatory is most coherently understood to be asking about any "Additional Premium" or "Return Premium" due after performance of a Reconciliation. Therefore, for each year, or Experience Period, a Reconciliation should be performed (correctly, per Interrogatories Nos. 1-3) to determine whether Columbia owes Additional Premium or is due Return Premium. Additional Premium is any positive balance (i.e., in NCRIC's favor); Additional Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is greater than the Deposit Premium. Return Premium is any negative balance (i.e., in Columbia's favor); Return Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is less than the Deposit Premium.

According to the September 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$587,568.66" for the Experience Period 1993-94; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$350,593.73" for the Experience Period 1994-95; Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$333,392.45" for the Experience Period 1995-96; Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$722,049.71" for the Experience Period 1996-97; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$233,841.30" for the Experience Period 1997-98; and Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$383,948.84" for the Experience Period 1998-99. This totals $267,387.31 in Additional Premium that Columbia owed NCRIC. Taking into account the $172,815.00 that NCRIC paid Columbia for the first Experience Period and the $1,000,000.00 that Columbia deposited with NCRIC leaves NCRIC owing Columbia Return Premium of $559,797.69.

The parties, however, agreed orally that they would exchange Additional or Return Premium only for those Experience Periods for which all claims were closed. The amounts calculated under the September 2000 Reconciliation therefore are not the actual amounts owed, for as of September 2000, only the Experience Periods 1993-94 and 1994-95 had closed. According to the September 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$587,568.66" for the Experience Period 1993-94; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$350,593.73" for the Experience Period 1994-95. NCRIC paid Columbia $172,815.00 for the 1993-94 Experience Period. Therefore, NCRIC in fact owes Columbia $765,347.39 in Return Premium (in addition to owing Columbia its $1 million deposit back, plus interest).

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; and SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 5: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 1 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 5: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC breached the Plan by failing in performing its Reconciliations to apply the proper Minimum Premium factor, the proper Deposit Premium factor, and/or the proper Development

16d-002165

Factors. NCRIC further breached the parties' agreement by seeking payment for Experience Periods for which not all of the claims had closed, in violation of the parties' oral agreement.

Through NCRIC's failure to perform its obligations under the Plan, NCRIC caused Columbia damages. According to NCRIC's own calculations, NCRIC owes Columbia Return Premium for the two Experience Periods that are closed. NCRIC has paid Columbia $172,815 for the first Experience Period, but it has paid Columbia nothing for the second Experience Period. Accordingly, even under NCRIC's own interpretation of the terms in the Retro Plan, NCRIC owes Columbia $177,806.

But even that amount understates NCRIC's liability to Columbia. As explained, in its Reconciliations, NCRIC employs the wrong Minimum Premium factor for the 1993-94 and 1994-95 Experience Periods. When the correct Minimum Premium factor is applied (assuming all of NCRIC's other calculations are correct), NCRIC owes Columbia $587,568.66 (less $172,815 it already paid) for the 1993-94 Experience Period and $350,593.73 for the 1994-95 Experience Period, for a total of $765,347.49, plus interest.

In addition, NCRIC's miscalculations, including but not limited to those in the 1997 Reconciliation, caused Columbia to overpay Additional Premium and to make an unwarranted $1 million deposit, thereby causing Columbia to become insolvent and to file for bankruptcy. Columbia incurred expenses of over $1.5 million in connection with its bankruptcy.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; SJ Reply Exh. 1; and SMF2 ¶¶ 29, 35-36, 157-59. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 6: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 2 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

16d-002166

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 6: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC willfully rendered imperfect performance by performing Reconciliations inaccurately. Columbia's damages include the amount due according to the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation – $765,347.39, plus interest, see Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 5. That is, NCRIC was required to inform Columbia by November 1, 2000 of the correct amount due and pay that amount by December 1, 2000. NCRIC did neither.

In addition, Columbia was damaged by the $1 million that it deposited with NCRIC in installments between January 1998 and March 1998, plus interest. Had NCRIC performed the September 1, 1997 Reconciliation correctly, the spreadsheet would have shown that (absent the oral agreement) Columbia was owed $78,000 in Return Premium, not that Columbia owed approximately $1.77 million in Additional Premium. NCRIC thus had no basis for seeking a $1 million deposit as a condition for renewing the Plan. NCRIC's demand for this payment also violated the parties' oral agreement. NCRIC should have returned the $1 million, plus interest, when Columbia demanded that it be returned.

In addition, NCRIC's miscalculations, including but not limited to those in the 1997 Reconciliation, caused Columbia to overpay Additional Premium and to make an unwarranted $1 million deposit, thereby causing Columbia to become insolvent and to file for bankruptcy. Columbia incurred expenses of over $1.5 million in connection with its bankruptcy.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; SJ Reply Exh. 1; and SMF2 ¶¶ 29, 35-36, 157-59. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 7: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 3 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 7: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC breached its fiduciary duty to Columbia by failing to perform Reconciliations honestly and accurately. NCRIC failed to alert Columbia that under the September 2000 Reconciliation, Columbia was owed $765,347.39 in Return Premium, plus interest.

NCRIC also breached its fiduciary duty to Columbia by demanding the $1 million deposit when it was not due and by refusing to return the $1 million.

NCRIC further damaged Columbia by refusing to allow Columbia to audit NCRIC's calculations – in particular, by refusing to give Columbia access to information concerning the premiums of individual members of the Attending Faculty used to calculate Subject Premium and concerning indemnity and expense reserves for individual malpractice claims that comprise the Loss Reserves.

In addition, NCRIC's miscalculations, including but not limited to those in the 1997 Reconciliation, caused Columbia to overpay Additional Premium and to make an unwarranted $1 million deposit, thereby causing Columbia to become insolvent and to file for bankruptcy. Columbia incurred expenses of over $1.5 million in connection with its bankruptcy.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. at 13-17; SMF & Exhs. 10, 14; SJ Reply Exh. 1; and SMF2 ¶¶ 29, 35-36, 157-59. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 8: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 4 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 8: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

As a direct and proximate result of NCRIC's wrongful conduct, about 30 Attending Faculty members terminated their association with Columbia and moved (the bulk of) their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals. These physicians ceased or cut back referring patients to Columbia. The steep drop in patient referrals cost Columbia substantial revenues each year for the foreseeable future.

Mr. Peter Ben Ezra applied a generally accepted "lost cash flow" model to calculate Columbia's lost revenue damages resulting from the departure of the Attending Faculty. See generally Report of Peter Ben Ezra, Expert Witness; Deposition of Peter Ben Ezra; Declaration of Peter Ben Ezra in Support of Defendant's Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Opposition to NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment. For his analysis, Mr. Ben Ezra obtained a breakdown of Columbia's actual revenue from patient referrals, sorted by physician. He then compared the revenue streams attributable to the physicians who left the hospital for the year before October 1, 2000, and the year after October 1, 2000, and compared the two numbers. Then, Mr. Ben Ezra used a textbook "lost cash flow" model to calculate the lost cash flows over time until an estimated year when each physician would have retired, had they stayed at Columbia. He excluded from consideration any physician who left the hospital for non-NCRIC-related reasons. This is a well-accepted means of calculating lost cash flow. Mr. Ben Ezra concluded that the present value of Columbia's damages under this analysis total $21.5 million.

Columbia also suffered other damages about which lay witnesses testified. First, due to NCRIC's wrongful conduct Columbia lost the opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser, reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions. This gala, scheduled for May 2001, was canceled abruptly in late 2000 by Columbia's volunteer fundraising board, because the pervasive rumors that the hospital was going to close made it essentially impossible to raise contributions.

Second, Columbia was eligible for a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan, which it was reasonably assured of obtaining in light of HUD's support for its candidacy. But after the Attending Faculty left in Summer/Fall 2000, Columbia's volume and revenues dropped sharply. As a result, HUD advised Columbia that it no longer qualified for the loan. Denial of this loan meant losing the opportunity to reduce the hospital's cost of capital from 10.5% to 4.5% per month.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SMF2 ¶¶ 193-238 and SJ Opp. at 53-60, in addition to Mr. Ben Ezra's Report, Deposition, and Declaration. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 9: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 5 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 9: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC's tortious interference with prospective business advantage caused doctors to terminate their association with Columbia and move their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals. These physicians ceased or cut back referring patients to Columbia, causing Columbia $21.5 million in lost cash flow and other damages, including the lost opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions, and the lost opportunity to obtain a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan that would have reduced the hospital's cost of capital form 10.5% to 4.5% per month. Columbia incorporates by reference its Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 8.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 10: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 7 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 10: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC and/or its agents made false representations to Columbia, including NCRIC's improper Retro Plan calculations. NCRIC also concealed from Columbia material facts which amounted to a misrepresentation by refusing to provide information concerning Loss Reserves as provided for by the Plan, among other things. NCRIC refused to provide Columbia access to data necessary to independently verify NCRIC's bookkeeping.

Columbia has been directly and proximately damaged by NCRIC's false representations and concealments. Columbia's damages include the amount due according to the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation – $765,347.39, plus interest, see Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 5. That is, NCRIC was required to inform Columbia by November 1, 2000 of the correct amount due and pay that amount by December 1, 2000. NCRIC did neither.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 11: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 8 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 11: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC negligently made false representations because, among other things, it miscalculated in performing Reconciliations. NCRIC also failed to ensure that it maintain Loss Reserves in accord with the industry standards and refused to provide information regarding Loss Reserves as provided for by the Plan, among other things. Columbia has been directly and proximately damaged by NCRIC's negligent actions. Columbia incorporates by reference its Response to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 10.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 12: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 9 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 12: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

As a result of its false and defamatory statements, NCRIC directly and proximately caused Columbia damages in the form of harm to its reputation and substantial economic loss. NCRIC's defamatory statements caused doctors to terminate their association with Columbia and move their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals. These physicians ceased or cut back referring patients to Columbia, causing Columbia $21.5 million in lost cash flow and other damages, including the lost opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions, and the lost opportunity to obtain a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan that would have reduced the hospital's cost of capital form 10.5% to 4.5% per month. SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 13: Identify the amount of damages Columbia claims it suffered based on the acts alleged as the basis in count 10 of its counterclaim and describe how that amount has been calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 13: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC made and false and misleading representations of fact that disparaged the quality of Columbia's services as a health care facility. NCRIC made the false representations intentionally and with full knowledge that these statements would cast doubt upon the quality of Columbia's services as a health care facility. As a result of these false representations, NCRIC proximately caused Columbia damages in the form of harm to its reputation and substantial economic loss. NCRIC's defamatory statements caused doctors to terminate their association with Columbia and move their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals. These physicians ceased or cut back referring patients to Columbia, causing Columbia $21.5 million in lost cash flow and other damages, including the lost opportunity to hold a gala fundraiser reasonably expected to garner more than $1.5 million in contributions, and the lost opportunity to obtain a $35 million, low-interest HUD loan that would have reduced the hospital's cost of capital form 10.5% to 4.5% per month. RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 14: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

NCRIC unlawfully exercised ownership, dominion, and control over Columbia's $1 million deposit, in denial or repudiation of Columbia's rights thereto. The parties agreed in 1998 to treat Columbia's $1 million as a deposit, and once it was realized that NCRIC was performing Reconciliations inaccurately, Columbia demanded in vain that its money be returned. Columbia is owed the $1 million deposit, plus interest.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 15: Identify each and every individual who made any of the statements alleged to be defamatory that remain in Columbia's counterclaim and provide the statement or statements each individual is alleged to have made.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 15: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it blatantly disregards the Court's express admonition that its Order authorizing NCRIC to serve these Supplemental Interrogatories "is not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter stated in plaintiff's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6)." Order of 4/7/03 at 1-2 n.1. That Notice identified the following topic (No. 10): "Defamatory actions or statements by plaintiff about defendant." That topic arguably encompasses Supplemental Interrogatory No. 17, which concerns the substance of the defamatory statements. But the subject matter of this Interrogatory – who made the defamatory statements – and the subject matter of Supplemental Interrogatory No. 16 – who heard the defamatory statements – is not fairly encompassed in Topic No. 10 of NCRIC's Notice of Deposition pursuant to Rule 30(b)(6) that was at issue in the motion to compel. Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 15 & 16 thus plainly exceed the scope of the discovery authorized by the Court's Order.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

(a) Dr. Leonard Glassman, Chairman of the Board of NCRIC, Inc., announced in Columbia's cafeteria on September 1, 2000 that (1) the Entity Policy covering Columbia's Clinic and the physicians working there (the Columbia Physicians Group ("CPG")) had expired; (2) CPG physicians with NCRIC individual medical malpractice insurance policies were not covered under those policies when practicing at the Clinic; (3) Columbia's self-insurance trust fund was insufficiently funded to insure the Clinic; and (4) Columbia was planning to cease operations.

16d-002175

Many physicians overheard Dr. Glassman make these statements, including Dr. Nabil Asterbadi and Dr. Safa Rifka.

Also in about September 2000, staff members in the Radiology Department at Columbia, where Dr. Glassman worked, repeatedly overheard him telling patients to pick up their films and bring them to his office in the suburbs because Columbia was planning to close, and telling physicians employed by the Hospital to start looking for jobs elsewhere for the same reason. Those who heard these statements include Elizabeth Jackson and Francis Renee Perkins. Because Dr. Glassman's door was open, other radiology patients in the office also could hear his statements.

Around that same time, Dr. Glassman told another physician, Dr. Gideon Kioko, to move his group to Sibley, because (Dr. Glassman urged) Columbia was about to close. Other physicians who were eating in the cafeteria at the time heard these remarks – including Dr. Richard Newman, who shortly thereafter moved to Sibley, and Dr. Jerome O'Connell.

Later, Dr. Glassman told Dr. O'Connell in the hallway at Columbia that, because the hospital was closing, another physician, Dr. Evelyn Karson, was leaving.

(b) Dr. Morton Roberts, a physician who often passed along information from NCRIC purporting to speak on its behalf, informed a nurse anesthetist, David Young, in early July 2000 that Young should start looking for a job elsewhere because Columbia was closing. Dr. Roberts also made this statement to other staff members at about the same time. Dr. Asterbadi sent Dr. Roberts a cease-and-desist letter, in an effort to get him to cease disparaging Columbia.

(c) On or about September 1, 2000, a representative of NCRIC's Policyholder

16d-002176

Services Department (i.e., either David Osborn, Eric Hempelman or Grant Sohm – the identity of the individual that made these statements is solely in NCRIC's possession, and NCRIC has not provided that information to Columbia) informed Attending Faculty member Dr. Heather Johnson that (1) the Entity Policy covering CPG physicians had expired; (2) CPG physicians with NCRIC medical malpractice insurance were not covered under their individual policies when practicing at the Clinic; (3) Columbia's self-insurance trust fund was insufficiently funded to insure the CPG and its physicians; and (4) due to the Retro Plan's termination, Columbia was ceasing operations.

A representative of NCRIC's Policyholder Services Department also made these statements to other physicians, including Dr. Edward Koch, who also is a member of NCRIC's Board of Directors.

Dr. Koch and Dr. Johnson informed Columbia's management and other physicians at Columbia what they had been told.

Other unnamed individuals heard and repeated the defamatory statements, as well.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 16: Identify each and every individual who heard any of the statements alleged to be defamatory that remain in Columbia's counterclaim and indicate what statement was allegedly heard.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 16: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia further responds as follows: Columbia incorporates by reference its Objections and Response to Interrogatory No. 15.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 17: Identify and describe the substance of each and every statement made by anyone identified in the answer to Supplemental Interrogatory No. 15 that Columbia claims to be defamatory.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 17: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia further responds as follows: Columbia incorporates by reference its Objections and Response to Interrogatory No. 15.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 18: Describe how Columbia claims NCRIC should have calculated: (a) its loss reserves; (b) adjustment of loss reserves; (c) positive loss experiences of Columbia under the Contract; (d) use of additional years in calculating premiums, and (e) each element of the formula or other requirements for reconciliation of premiums due under the Retro Plan.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 18: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to audit NCRIC's calculation of Loss Reserves. Columbia also specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it is vague and ambiguous. In particular, it is unclear what is meant by the phrase, "how Columbia claims NCRIC should have calculated." The terms "additional years" and "formula" are vague, as well. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

(a) NCRIC should have calculated its Loss Reserves in accordance with generally accepted standards in the insurance industry.

(b) NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care failed adequately to adjust its loss reserves downward in response to Columbia's positive loss experience under the Plan. As a result, for some claims NCRIC maintained higher Loss Reserves than were reasonably necessary to cover malpractice claims under the Retro Plan, and improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

Further, NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care used incorrect Development Factors when calculating the Retro Premium, and thereby considered a greater percentage of its Loss Reserves than it was allowed to consider under the Retro Plan. As a result, NCRIC improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

Moreover, for each quarterly reconciliation that NCRIC sent to Columbia, NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care adjusted its Loss Reserves upwards based on increases in its Loss Reserves during that quarter. But NCRIC knew or should have known that under the Plan it was proper to bill Columbia for Loss Reserves based only on yearly Reconciliations.

(c) NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care failed adequately to adjust its loss reserves downward in response to Columbia's positive loss experience under the Plan. As a result, for some claims NCRIC maintained higher Loss Reserves than were reasonably necessary to cover malpractice claims under the Retro Plan, and improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

Further, NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care used incorrect Development Factors when calculating the Retro Premium, and thereby considered a greater percentage of its Loss Reserves than it was allowed to consider under the Retro Plan. As a result, NCRIC improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

(d) NCRIC either knowingly or due to lack of reasonable care reconciled too many Experience Periods. NCRIC thereby improperly raised the incurred cost of the Plan.

For instance, in performing the September 1997 Reconciliation, NCRIC included the 1995-96 Experience Period in its calculations. Proper operation of the Plan at that time, however, dictated that a Reconciliation should not include calculations for either of the prior two

Experience Periods. Accordingly, the September 1997 Reconciliation should not have included calculations for either the 1995-96 or 1996-97 Experience Periods. As a result of this error by NCRIC in performing the September 1997 Reconciliation, NCRIC informed Columbia that Columbia would owe approximately $1.77 million in Additional Premium. Had NCRIC performed the 1997 Reconciliation correctly and not included in its calculations the 1995-96 or 1996-97 Experience Periods, that Reconciliation would have shown that Columbia was owed $78,000 in Return Premium.

(e) Proper Reconciliations under the Retro Plan should have been performed as follows:

1. Calculate the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by using the Retro Formula.

2. Limit the Retro Premium for each Experience Period by applying the Minimum Premium or Maximum Premium, if applicable.

3. Calculate the Additional Premium or Return Premium due for each Experience Period by subtracting the Retro Premium (as limited by any applicable minimum or maximum) from the Deposit Premium for each Experience Period.

4. Calculate the total Additional Premium or Return Premium for all Experience Periods that are properly subject to Reconciliation.

5. Apply a credit for Columbia's deposit and/or for NCRIC's payment to obtain the current total premium due.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 1-4; SMF2 ¶¶ 86-88, 106-07; Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 19: Identify the specific errors, miscalculations and overstatements in the statement(s) from NCRIC referenced in paragraphs 72 and 101 of the counterclaim including the reasons and bases for the errors and the corrections required to make the bill accurate.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 19: See General Objections. Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows:

Paragraph 72 of the counterclaim concerns the September 1998 reconciliation. In performing that Reconciliation, NCRIC applied an incorrect Minimum Premium factor, an incorrect Deposit Premium factor, and incorrect Development Factors. NCRIC also disregarded the oral agreement between NCRIC and Columbia that the parties would exchange Additional or Return Premium only for those Experience Periods for which all claims were closed. NCRIC failed to pay Columbia interest on Columbia's $1 million deposit, and NCRIC ignored Columbia's demand that the deposit be returned.

Had NCRIC applied the proper Minimum Premium factor, the proper Deposit Premium factor, and the proper Development Factors, and had NCRIC complied with the parties' oral agreement, NCRIC would have concluded that it owed Columbia $670,000 in Return Premium (rather than the $172,000 that NCRIC paid Columbia after performing that Reconciliation). NCRIC also should have paid Columbia interest on the $1 million deposit and, in fact, should have returned the $1 million to Columbia.

Paragraph 101 of the counterclaim concerns the September 2000 Reconciliation. In performing that Reconciliation, NCRIC applied an incorrect Minimum Premium factor, an incorrect Deposit Premium factor, and incorrect Development Factors. NCRIC also disregarded the oral agreement between NCRIC and Columbia that the parties would exchange Additional or Return Premium only for those Experience Periods for which all claims were closed. NCRIC failed to pay Columbia interest on Columbia's $1 million deposit, and NCRIC ignored Columbia's demand that the deposit be returned.

Had NCRIC applied the proper Minimum Premium factor, the proper Deposit Premium factor, and the proper Development Factors, and had NCRIC complied with the parties' oral agreement, NCRIC would have concluded that it owed Columbia $765,347.39 in Return Premium. NCRIC also should have paid Columbia interest on the $1 million deposit and, in fact, should have returned the $1 million to Columbia, plus interest.

Columbia incorporates by reference the Responses to Supplemental Interrogatory Nos. 1-4, which describe in further detail the specific errors, miscalculations, and overstatements in NCRIC's Reconciliations generally and the September 2000 Reconciliation in particular, as well as the reasons and bases for the errors, and the corrections required to make the Reconciliation accurate.

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. & SMF; SMF Exhs. 10, 14; SMF2 ¶¶ 115-33, 239-42; SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 20: Identify the amount of Return Premium Columbia claims it is owed from 1993 to date and describe how each amount was calculated.

RESPONSE TO SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORY NO. 20: See General Objections. Columbia specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as the term "to date" is vague and ambiguous. Columbia also objects to this Interrogatory insofar as it requests information not in Columbia's possession, but rather, in NCRIC's possession. In particular, the amount that Columbia is owed "to date" is in NCRIC's sole possession. Columbia cannot know how much it is owed because NCRIC has not furnished Columbia with the 2001 or 2002 Reconciliations. Columbia's Responses therefore utilize the numbers from the September 2000 Reconciliation. Columbia further objects insofar as any accurate calculation of Return Premium depends on the fair and correct calculation of Subject Premium under the Plan – but NCRIC has refused to provide Columbia with data sufficient to verify NCRIC's calculation of Subject Premium.

Subject to and without waiving the foregoing objections, Columbia responds as follows: For each year, or Experience Period, a Reconciliation should be performed (correctly, per Interrogatories Nos. 1-4) to determine whether Columbia owes Additional Premium or is due Return Premium. Additional Premium is any positive balance (i.e., in NCRIC's favor); Additional Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is greater than the Deposit Premium. Return Premium is any negative balance (i.e., in Columbia's favor); Return Premium exists when the Retro Premium (as limited by the Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium) is less than the Deposit Premium.

According to the September 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$587,568.66" for the Experience Period 1993-94; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$350,593.73" for the Experience Period 1994-95; Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$333,392.45" for the Experience Period 1995-96; Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$722,049.71" for the Experience Period 1996-97; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$233,841.30" for the Experience Period 1997-98; and Columbia owed NCRIC Additional Premium of "$383,948.84" for the Experience Period 1998-99. This totals $267,387.31 in Additional Premium that Columbia owed NCRIC. Taking into account the $172,815.00 that NCRIC paid Columbia for the first Experience Period and the $1,000,000.00

that Columbia deposited with NCRIC leaves NCRIC owing Columbia Return Premium of $559,797.69.

The parties, however, agreed orally that they would exchange Additional or Return Premium only for those Experience Periods for which all claims were closed. The amounts calculated under the September 2000 Reconciliation therefore are not the actual amounts owed, for as of September 2000, only the Experience Periods 1993-94 and 1994-95 had closed. According to the September 2000 Reconciliation, NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$587,568.66" for the Experience Period 1993-94; NCRIC owed Columbia Return Premium of "$350,593.73" for the Experience Period 1994-95. NCRIC paid Columbia $172,815.00 for the 1993-94 Experience Period. Therefore, NCRIC in fact owes Columbia $765,347.39 in Return Premium (in addition to owing Columbia its $1 million deposit back, plus interest).

The issues raised in this Interrogatory are addressed with particular detail in, e.g., Columbia's SJ Mem. & SMF; SJ Reply Exh. 1. See also Columbia's Previously Submitted Papers.

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

Dear Scott:

I see no point in engaging in letter-writing wars, so it will suffice to say that we cannot agree with many of the characterizations and much of the rhetoric in your letter of May 16, 2003.

Moving to the substance, I am pleased that NCRIC is now apparently prepared to proceed with the 30(b)(6) deposition and the conference required by Rule 16(c). I wish to confirm that we are able to accommodate your request to hold the 30(b)(6) deposition on Thursday, May 29, 2003 at 2:00 p.m., as well as to accommodate your request that we hold the Rule 16(c) conference following the deposition.

Sincerely,

Eli C. Schulman

Re: NCRIC v. Columbia Hospital, C.A. No. 00-0007308

Dear Eli:

Pursuant to Judge Blackburne-Rigsby's order docketed April 7, 2003, please find attached NCRIC's Supplemental Interrogatories and Supplemental Rule 30(b)(6) deposition notice for the above-captioned case.

For purposes of the deposition notice, I have selected a date which we can certainly negotiate once the interrogatories are answered and the documents are produced.

With the pending motions now resolved by the Court, we might want to discuss the schedule for preparing this case for trial.

Sincerely yours,

Scott Badami

SUPPLEMENTAL NOTICE OF DEPOSITION

Please take notice that pursuant to the Court's Order docketed April 7, 2003 and Rule 30(b)(6) of the District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure, plaintiff/counter-defendant NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") will take the supplemental deposition upon oral examination of defendant, counter-claimant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") before a notary public or duly authorized officer authorized to administer oaths. The deposition will begin on Monday, June 16, 2003 at 10:00 a.m., or at another mutually agreed upon day after the documents identified in Attachment A are produced, at the offices of Bryan Cave LLP, 700 Thirteenth St., N.W., Suite 700, Washington, D.C. 20005.

Pursuant to the Court's order, Columbia shall designate one or more officers, agents, or other persons who can testify on its behalf with respect to the following matters and produce the documents referred to in Attachment A.

1. The identity, terms, and facts concerning any contract, business relationship, or business expectancy between Columbia and each of the doctors identified in paragraphs 14-18 and 124 of Columbia's amended counterclaims.

2. The specific actions and acts of NCRIC constituting the interference with the contract between Columbia and the doctors identified in paragraph 14-18 and 124 of Columbia's counterclaims.

3. The bases for the allegations regarding NCRIC's knowledge about Columbia's financial condition as alleged in paragraph 43 of the amended counterclaims.

4. Performances under the Retrospective Rating Plan prevented, excused or waived by NCRIC.

5. Concealment of facts by NCRIC from Columbia including the identity and substance of the facts concealed, method/means/acts of concealment, persons concealing, and reasons for concealment.

NCRIC'S SUPPLEMENTAL INTERROGATORIES TO COLUMBIA SERVED PURSUANT TO THE COURT'S ORDER DOCKETED APRIL 7, 2003

Pursuant to the Court's Order docketed April 7, 2003 and Rule 33 of the District of Columbia Superior Court Rules of Civil Procedure, plaintiff, counter-defendant NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") requests that defendant, counter-plaintiff Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") answer separately and fully in writing, under oath, each of the following interrogatories and serve the answers on the undersigned within 30 days after service.

DEFINITIONS

1. "NCRIC" means plaintiff, counter-defendant NCRIC, Inc. and its owner(s), agent(s), subcontractor(s), employees, affiliate(s), predecessor(s), officer(s), director(s) and persons acting on its behalf.

2. "You" or "your" or "Columbia" means defendant, counter-plaintiff Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center and your agent(s), attorney(s), employee(s) and persons acting on your behalf.

3. The "Complaint" means the complaint filed by NCRIC in this action. The "Counterclaim(s)" means the counterclaim(s) filed by Columbia in this action.

4. "Contract" refers to the Retrospective Rating Plan entered into between Columbia and NCRIC in 1993.

5. "Person" means a natural person, and a corporation, partnership, joint venture, unincorporated association, estate, trust, or other entity recognized in law, and shall include the owners, directors, employees, agents, trustees, parents, subsidiaries, affiliates, assigns, predecessors and successors of such "person."

6. "Document" is used in the broadest sense of that term and includes, but is not limited to, the complete original and each non-identical copy (whether different from the original because of notes made on the copy or otherwise) of any writings or recordings of any kind and description in any language including, but not limited to, all notes, correspondence, memoranda, drawings, graphs, books, charts, maps, pamphlets, periodicals, telegrams, studies, reports, records, books of account, ledgers, vouchers, checks, drafts, bankbooks, plant logs, telephone logs, worksheets, diaries, calendars, invoices, notebooks, films, photographs, audio tapes, video tapes, digital tapes, analog tapes, computer print-outs, computer disks, or any other information whether inscribed by hand or by mechanical, digital, electronic, computer, photographic or other means.

7. The term "communication(s)" means, without limitation of its generality, letters, notes, memoranda, telefaxes, statements, discussions, meetings, face to face conversations, telephone conversations, speeches, remarks, questions, answers, panel discussions, symposiums or any other kind of transmittal of information, whether written or oral.

8. "Relates" or "relating to" means constituting, defining, containing, embodying, discussing, referencing, reflecting, identifying, stating, referring to, dealing with, or in any way pertaining to.

9. "And" shall include "or" and vice versa; the singular shall include the plural and vice versa.

10. The term "describe" means to set forth in detail all known facts and circumstances related to the subject of the interrogatory, including, but not limited to, the date, time and place of any oral or written statement, conversation, report, study or meeting, the identify of the participants, and the substance and purpose of the events or communications so described.

11. "Identify" or "identity" when used in reference to a natural person, means to state the following:

(a) the person's full name;

(b) the person's present or last known home address and telephone number;

(c) the person's present or last known employer, title, business address and telephone number;

(d) the person's employer at the time to which the interrogatory relates.

12. "Identify" or "identity" when used in reference to an entity other than a natural person, means to state the following:

(a) the full name of the entity;

(b) the legal form of the entity (e.g., corporation, partnership, committee);

(c) a brief description of the nature and business purpose of the entity;

(d) the present or last known address of the entity's principal office, principal place of business, and other places of business.

13. "Identify," when used in reference to a document means to state the following:

(a) the date the document was prepared;

(b) the author(s) of the document;

(c) the identity of the addressees of the document;

(d) the identity of the persons or entities that received copies of the document;

(e) the subject matter and substance of the document;

(f) a description of the document (i.e. memorandum, letter, etc.);

(g) the name and address of the custodian of the document.

14. In lieu of providing a full description of a document in accordance with paragraph 13 you may attach a copy of the document for which a description is requested, and in your answer to the interrogatory only provide those items of description requested which do not appear on the face of the document.

INSTRUCTIONS

A. Each interrogatory is to be answered separately and as completely as possible. The omission of any name, fact, or other item of information from the answers shall be deemed a representation that such name, fact or item is not known to you or counsel at the time of the service of your answer to the interrogatory.

B. To the extent that you believe that an interrogatory is objectionable, answer so much of the interrogatory as is, in your view, not objectionable and separately state the portion of each interrogatory to which you object and the grounds for your objection.

C. To the extent that you believe that an interrogatory calls for information subject to a privilege, answer so much of each interrogatory that is, in your view, not privileged and separately set forth the basis of your claim of privilege with respect to the specific information you refuse to give and set forth the nature of the material claimed to be privileged (e.g., documents, conversations, etc.).

D. Words used in the plural shall include the singular; words used in the singular shall include the plural; and the words "and" and "or" shall be construed liberally, in the conjunctive and disjunctive, depending on the context, to bring within the scope of these interrogatories any information that might otherwise be construed to be outside their scope.

E. These interrogatories are continuing in nature and must be supplemented promptly if the plaintiff obtains additional or different information related to any response at any time before the termination of this action.

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

Dear Jenifer:

I write in response to your letter of May 9, 2003. Though Columbia had expected to complete the recently propounded written discovery and identify its corporate designees last week, intervening events prevented Columbia from doing so. This discovery is not due until at least May 21, 2003. I expect that Columbia will have this discovery completed well before that deadline, and we will serve it upon NCRIC at such time as it is complete.

I disagree, however, with your conclusory assertion that "these responses and depositions are prerequisites to NCRIC's obligations under Rule 16." There is no reason that the parties cannot proceed with their obligations under Rule 16 while completing the limited supplemental discovery that remains. Accordingly, Columbia again proposes that the parties meet as soon as possible pursuant to Rule 16(c). This is all the more imperative given the Court's notice that the Clerk's Office will be rescheduling the pretrial conference for a date in May. Please let me know as soon as possible when you are available to meet pursuant to Rule 16(c).

Sincerely,

Eli C. Schulman

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

Dear Scott:

I was surprised that, during the course of yesterday's meet-and-confer concerning motions in limine, you indicated that you also intended to move to compel with respect to Columbia's responses to NCRIC's supplemental interrogatories. In the several weeks that have passed since we supplied those interrogatory responses, NCRIC has never so much as hinted that it had any concerns with these responses, let alone sought any informal redress from us. The fact that you've waited so long to raise objections seems to suggest that, once again, NCRIC is searching for any means possible to continue discovery – and delay trial – indefinitely.

You also spoke generally of NCRIC's objecting to any reference to previously submitted materials. Rather than giving us a chance to address any legitimate concerns, however, you declined to identify any specific answer that you felt was incomplete or regarding which you required additional information and rested instead only on the general objection that interrogatory answers should not reference any materials outside the answers themselves.

As you know, our interrogatory responses do not just refer to previously supplied discovery, but provide some 30 pages of detail. Referencing prior discovery is, moreover, entirely proper. NCRIC initially identified these topics two years ago. Since that time, much discovery has taken place and the parties filed detailed cross-motions for summary judgment in which Columbia fleshed out in considerable detail its position on many of the very issues that were addressed in NCRIC's supplemental interrogatories. For the sake of efficiency, Columbia directed you to those materials where appropriate and made clear that it stood by those accounts.

Nor have you remotely suggested that NCRIC is unable to understand Columbia's position on any relevant matter.

During our call, you also indicated that you wished a verified signature for the interrogatory answers; we will be happy to supply one.

If you would like to discuss these matters further to avoid potentially needless dispute, please feel free to call me at (202) 326-7936.

Sincerely,

Eli C. Schulman

Re: NCRIC v. Columbia Hospital, C.A. No. 00-0007308

Dear Eli:

This responds to your letter dated earlier today concerning Columbia's responses to the discovery requests compelled by the Court. At the outset, I reject your assertion that NCRIC has "waited so long to raise objections" and is "looking for any possible means to continue discovery – and delay trial – indefinitely." The resumption of the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition took place just last week. The written discovery responses were received less than three weeks ago. Under any reasonable standard, raising the deficient issues in Columbia's responses yesterday – during a call to discuss efforts to resolve possible motions – was appropriate and timely. Indeed, the transcript of the deposition from last week will note in a number of places where Columbia refused to substantively respond to questions covered within the scope of the deposition notice and where you and I discussed the filing of another Motion to Compel. Please note that the only reason NCRIC was forced to file the Motion to Compel was because Columbia failed to comply with the simple rules of discovery.

As we discussed approximately 13 motions yesterday, I am happy to provide additional details concerning why Columbia's discovery responses were inadequate and why yet another Motion to Compel is required. To the extent Columbia submits the additional materials the Court previously required you to provide, NCRIC will certainly withdraw portions (or even all) of the Motion to Compel. Indeed, NCRIC would argue that it is Columbia which is unnecessarily delaying this matter because you and your client have failed to respond to NCRIC's discovery requests – even after the Court issued an order to compel.

Simply because Columbia submitted close to 30 pages of written materials does not comply with the rules and end Columbia's responsibilities. NCRIC is entitled to factual statements made by Columbia regarding the basis of Columbia's claims which may be used as prior sworn statements of fact at trial. This requirement cannot be met by referring to self-serving advocacy pieces written by counsel during briefing.

As an initial matter, NCRIC asserts that Columbia put forward any number of meritless objections, including a peer review privilege, the party communication privilege, and the investigative privilege. NCRIC does not believe the "peer review privilege," the "party-communication privilege" and the "investigative privilege" apply to the interrogatories posed to Columbia. Although the "peer review privilege" is recognized in D.C. courts, it applies solely to information obtained or submitted to a hospital peer review body and is relevant to medical malpractice cases. None of the Supplemental Interrogatories sought information regarding Columbia's medical faculty and the medical decisions made in the treatment of patients.

NCRIC is at a loss to determine how Columbia can assert in good faith the "party-communication privilege" and the "investigative privilege" here. Not only is the "party-communication privilege" not recognized by D.C. courts, but this privilege appears to have only been recognized by the State of Texas for a limited time. The only "investigative privilege" which appears to be recognized by D.C. courts applies to law enforcement officials in order to protect law enforcement investigations. Columbia's objections based upon these privileges serve no purpose but to illustrate Columbia's attempt to avoid disclosure of any factual basis underlying its allegations by any means available.

You have also asserted specific objections to a number of the Supplemental Interrogatories which are improper and seek to limit the information provided to NCRIC. First, you unilaterally narrowed the requirement in the Court's April 3, 2003 Order mandating that Columbia provide information regarding "Defamatory actions or statements by plaintiff about defendant" by arguing that this topic should be limited only to information about the substance of the allegedly defamatory statements. The topic cannot be so drastically narrowed or else NCRIC will be denied factual information about Columbia's evidence on two key elements of the defamation claims: that NCRIC, or NCRIC's agents, made the alleged statements, and that the alleged statements were published.

In your objection to Supplemental Interrogatory 20, Columbia "specifically objects to this Interrogatory insofar as the term 'to date' is vague and ambiguous." This question simply seeks the amount of Return Premium that Columbia claims it is owed "to date," i.e., at this time, that ostensibly forms the basis of its damages claims to be presented at trial.

NCRIC is forced to conclude that Columbia's frivolous objections represent an unwillingness to comply with the April 3, 2003 Order and provide NCRIC with the factual information to which it is entitled.

In response to Supplemental Interrogatory Number 1, Columbia states that the issue of allegedly improper Retro Plan calculations is "addressed with particular detail" in Columbia's briefs submitted to the court in support of Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment, and therefore Columbia incorporates all of these "Previously Submitted Papers" as responsive to the Supplemental Interrogatory. Additionally, you continue to incorporate by reference summary judgment briefs in the responses to Supplemental Interrogatories 2-8, 10, 14-15, and 18–20. Columbia should have provided sworn factual answers to NCRIC free of any argumentative briefing.

Supplemental Interrogatory 3 requested the facts which explain "why Columbia believes the amounts contained in your response to Supplemental Interrogatory 2 to be the proper amounts and calculations." Your response merely incorporated by reference your answers to interrogatories 1 and 2 without further detail. This interrogatory asked Columbia to provide facts which explained and/or supported Columbia's interpretation of the Retro Plan and the use of the specific factors in dispute – the Deposit Premium, the Development Factor, Minimum Premium multiplier and Maximum Premium multiplier. Incorporation by reference of Columbia's Responses to interrogatories 1 and 2 is simply not adequate.

In response to Supplemental Interrogatories 5-7 and 10-11, requesting the amount of damages Columbia claims based on acts alleged in counts 1-3 and 7-8 of the counterclaim, Columbia has apparently attempted to add a $1.5 million claim related to the hospital's bankruptcy. These damages were not previously identified in the pleadings and it is improper to raise such a claim at this time. More importantly, your response did not provide any more detail than this general statement of "over $1.5 million" for this item. Columbia has not referred to documents or testimonial evidence to support this figure and NCRIC has no way of knowing if this claim is anywhere near accurate. Finally, your response is incomplete in that it does not provide any factual evidence showing that NCRIC's alleged actions caused Columbia's bankruptcy.

Similar to the vague and incomplete information given regarding Columbia's claim for bankruptcy expenses as damages, your responses provide almost no useful information supporting Columbia's claims for damages stemming from an allegedly cancelled "gala" and a HUD loan. In response to Supplemental Interrogatories 8-9 and 12-13, requesting information regarding the damages claimed under counts 4-5 and 9-10 of the counterclaim, Columbia provided only general statements which NCRIC contends are inadequate. Columbia also failed to provide any facts which provide a causal link between alleged actions by NCRIC and the cancellation of the gala or the denial of the HUD loan. NCRIC is entitled to specific details of the gala and HUD loan in order to defend against Columbia's accusations that NCRIC caused these events.

Supplemental interrogatories 15-17 requested information about the alleged defamatory statements made by NCRIC: who made the alleged statements, who heard the alleged statements, and the substance of the alleged defamatory statements. It is imperative that Columbia reveal the "who said what to whom" details of its defamation claim in order for NCRIC to defend against these claims at trial.

As you know, Columbia's responses included but a series of vague statements which do not properly identify the individuals who either spoke or heard the alleged defamatory statements. Some examples of these incomplete responses are:

- "Many physicians overheard Dr. Glassman make these statements, including Dr. Nabil Asterbadi and Dr. Safa Rifka." (emphasis added);
- "Dr. Roberts also made this statement to other staff members at about the same time." (emphasis added);
- "A representative of NCRIC's Policyholder Services Department also made these statements to other physicians, including Dr. Edward Koch, who is also a member of NCRIC's Board of Directors." (emphasis added);
- "Other unnamed individuals heard and repeated the defamatory statements, as well." (emphasis added).

While I note that you did include some named individuals identified as either speaking or hearing the alleged defamatory statements, Columbia's response remains inadequate.

Finally, as you well know, Dr. Rifka could not (or would not) respond to any number of questions asked of him during the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition held last week concerning: (1) the specific doctors who made up the Attending Faculty at Columbia referred to in Columbia's Counterclaim; (2) Columbia's allegation that NCRIC was aware of Columbia's financial situation; (3) the names of the Columbia physicians who allegedly asked Columbia to stay with NCRIC; and (4) Columbia's allegations that NCRIC somehow prevented Columbia's performance under the Retro Plan. As you and I discussed on the record, this lack of knowledge of the specifically identified topics which were directed for further factual testimony in the April 3, 2003 Order renders Dr. Rifka's deposition wholly inadequate.

Additionally, Dr. Rifka regularly referred only to the pleadings and motions previously submitted in this case in lieu of responding to the factual questions as this Court ordered Columbia to respond to when this Court compelled the resumption of the Rule 30(b)(6) deposition. For example, when questioned about Columbia's contentions that NCRIC breached the Retro Plan by not providing reconciliations to Columbia as required, Dr. Rifka, as the designated corporate representative, could not provide any answer except a general reference to counsel's advocacy briefs from the summary judgment materials. This does not provide an adequate substitute for sworn factual testimony by the Columbia corporate representative which may be used at trial.

Finally, I do appreciate your offer to provide a signature for the interrogatories. I note you failed to include that signature page with your letter sent earlier today.

I trust this letter provides the additional detail you sought. Let me make clear that NCRIC has no desire to file yet another Motion to Compel. Unfortunately, given Columbia's inadequate responses and the fact that Motions in Limine are due tomorrow, NCRIC has no choice but to file yet again. NCRIC offers to meet and confer in good faith should Columbia voluntarily decide to respond to these issues.

Sincerely yours,

Scott M. Badami

ORDER DENYING COLUMBIA'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

This matter comes before the Court on defendant, Columbia Hospital for Women's ("Columbia") Motion for Summary Judgment. A motions hearing on the cross summary judgment motions in this case was held on December 12, 2002. Columbia argues that there are no genuine issues of material fact concerning NCRIC, Inc.'s ("NCRIC") breach of contract claim or Columbia's counter-claim for breach of contract against NCRIC. Specifically, Columbia argues that based on the November 1996 oral agreement between Columbia and NCRIC, and alleged miscalculations performed by NCRIC, Columbia is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on NCRIC's breach of contract claim. Many material facts are disputed in this case and the Court therefore denies Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment.

Background

In October of 1993, Columbia, a non-profit hospital specializing in care for women and NCRIC, a provider of malpractice liability insurance to physicians in the District of Columbia, established the Retrospective Rating Plan ("Retro Plan"). The purpose of the plan was to establish a malpractice liability program for the physicians at

16d-002237

Columbia (the "Attending Faculty") to help reduce the costs to physicians through a sharing of malpractice risk between the hospital and physicians. The Attending Faculty benefited by receiving a Retrospective Rating Plan Endorsement from NCRIC, which entitled the holder to a discount off the premiums up to $500,000. Physicians not participating in the Retro Plan would have to pay Subject Premiums, a total of undiscounted premiums that would be charged to physicians for coverage limits of $500,000 for each claim.

September 1996 Amendment

The Retro Plan was devised of three one–year periods, called Experience Periods. Originally, the Retro Plan was to be effective from September 1, 1993 to September 1, 1996. Subsequently, the parties agreed to amend and renew the Retro Plan in September1996. The Retro Plan amended the Deposit Premium (subject premium multipled by Deposit Premium Multiplier) and increased the physician's discount that was origionally 19% to 30%. The parties also agreed to renew the Retro Plan for one year, effective September 1, 1996.

The Reconciliation Process

The Retro Plan is retrospective in that it required NCRIC to perform calculations or Reconciliations at the end of each Experience Period and compare the cost to the amount of premium NCRIC received from the Attending Faculty. If the cost of providing the malpractice insurance to the Attending Faculty exceeded the total amount of premium NCRIC received, Columbia was required to pay the difference, up to a set maximum. The difference was called Additional Premium. If the Attending Faculty paid NCRIC more than it cost to provide them with the malpractice coverage, under the Retro

16d-002238

Plan, NCRIC was required to pay Columbia a refund or Return Premium, as limited by a set minimum.

Included in the Retro Plan was a measure to self-check the correctness of the calculations. To determine if the appropriate amount of premium was collected to pay losses under the Retro Plan, the Retro Premium was compared to the Deposit Premium. The Retro Premium represents for each Experience Period the total cost of providing $500,000 in malpractice insurance coverage to all of the Attending Faculty. The Deposit Premium was the Subject Premium multiplied by the Deposit Premium Multiplier (Columbia claims that the Deposit Premium Multiplier should be 67% and NCRIC claims it should be 62% in the Reconciliations over the disputed Experience Periods). If the Retro Premium is less than the Deposit Premium, the Return Premium is due to Columbia. If the Retro Premium is more than the Deposit Premium, Columbia owes NCRIC Additional Premium to pay against the losses.

According to the original plan, an exchange of cumulative premium or return premium was to be reconciled for each experience period. According to Columbia, NCRIC typically would provide them with a spreadsheet listing all the individual Experience Periods, with the corresponding cumulative total. Additionally, Columbia argues that NCRIC is obligated as a condition precedent to provide Columbia with this spreadsheet or similar notice within sixty days of the end of each Experience Period before Columbia is required to pay any premium due within thirty days. NCRIC asserts that Columbia was provided all quarterly and annual reconciliation calculations required by the Retro Plan and such reports or notice was not a condition precedent that needed to be performed before Columbia would be obligated to pay NCRIC any premium owed.

November 1996 Oral Agreement

In November 1996, NCRIC and Columbia agreed orally that neither party would pay premium for any Experience Period until it was "closed" regardless of whether the Reconciliation for any given Experience Period, indicated that Additional or Return Premium was due. In September 1997, the parties negotiated a partial payment towards Additional Premium due as financial security. According to Columbia, this $1 million dollars was a deposit to renew the Retro Plan and to NCRIC it was premium owed by Columbia. On June 28, 2000, NCRIC informed Columbia that the Retro Plan would end as of its expiration date of September 1, 2000.

However, based on the parties oral agreement, Columbia argues that they do not owe NCRIC any money because no additional Experience Periods have closed since the September 1, 2000 Reconciliation. Instead, Columbia argues that NCRIC owes Columbia for the closed Experience Period of the 1994-1995 term. Columbia argues that pursuant to the oral agreement, NCRIC has paid Columbia $172,815 for the first Experience Period, but it has paid Columbia nothing for the second Experience Period.

NCRIC interpreted the oral agreement differently. According to NCRIC, there was an oral agreement that premium was not to be paid by either party until the close of an Experience Period unless the Retro Plan ended. Because of this difference in interpretation, Columbia has not paid any premium to NCRIC since September 1, 2002. NCRIC then responded with this instant lawsuit for breach of contract against Columbia for premium due now that the Retro Plan has been terminated and while expectancy periods are still open.

Columbia also argues that absent the parties' oral agreement, Columbia still does not owe NCRIC the amount of Additional Premium that NCRIC demands at this time, because NCRIC failed to provide within sixty days of the Reconciliation date, notice of any Additional Premium due following the September 1, 2001 Reconciliation. This, Columbia argues is a condition precedent to Columbia's obligation to pay, which is due and payable within thirty days after it receives NCRIC's notice. Thus, Columbia argues that the 2001 payment is not due.

In opposition NCRIC argues that Columbia's arguments are based on factual questions rather than the amendment and administration of the Retro Plan. NCRIC argues that notice was not a condition precedent and that it should be stricken from Columbia's pleadings as a factual conclusion. Despite this contradiction, NCRIC declares that even if notice was not produced in discovery that this is not conclusive evidence that such notice was never given.

Miscalculations

Columbia also moves the Court to grant summary judgment on its breach of contract claim against NCRIC, alleging that NCRIC misapplied the Minimum Premium Factor, the Deposit Premium Factor and the Development Factors. Columbia argues that NCRIC misapplied the original 75% Minimum Premium factor to the first two years of the Plan after the 1996 amendment reduced the Minimum Premium to 60%. NCRIC argues that the 1996 change was to be interpreted prospectively from the amendment made in 1996 forward—not retrospectively. NCRIC claims that Columbia wrongfully relies upon its counsel's unsupported argument that the amendment does not expressly prohibit the Minimum Premium Factor from being applied to all Experience Periods. However, NCRIC argues that the whole purpose for amending certain figures was the mathematical consequence of the increased premium discount effective from 1996 forward.

Next, Columbia argues that NCRIC uses a Deposit Premium multiplier of approximately 62% for all Experience Periods beginning after 1995-1996 when the Retro Plan states that the multiplier should be 67%. By employing the wrong Deposit Premium factor, Columbia claims that NCRIC credits Columbia with five percent less Deposit Premium than it should for each of the five most recent Experience Periods. As a result, when the Deposit Premium is subtracted from the Retro Premium for each Experience Period, Columbia is billed substantially more than required by the Plan. Columbia demonstrated that when NCRIC's September 1, 2000 Reconciliation applies the correct deposit premium factor, the cumulative amount due drops from $1,286,524 to $627,304.

NCRIC argues that Columbia relies only on its counsel's interpretation instead of expert testimony regarding the complex analysis of retrospective insurance. Columbia argues that the Deposit Premium must be the inverse of the 19% discount originally provided to physicians under the Retro Plan. Thus, when the discount increased to 33%, the Deposit Premium must be 67%. NCRIC argues that this interpretation comes from a "simple" reading of the Retro Plan, but that this evidence cannot counter NCRIC's testimony by "individuals knowledgeable about retrospective insurance plan calculations, as to why 62% is the proper Deposit Premium to properly arrive a the reduced premium for physicians affected by the 1996 Amendment to the Retro Plan."

Finally, Columbia claims that NCRIC applies each Development Factor to the relevant number of months after an Experience Period begins, rather than after it ends. Columbia bases this opinion on the comparison of Exhibit E of the 1993 Retro Plan to NCRIC's reconciliation calculations. Columbia argues that the effect of this is a substantial decrease in the cumulative additional premium that drops from $1, 286,524 to $686,961. In response, NCRIC argues that even if Exhibit E of the Retro Plan, a tabbed example of the Retro Plan operation, shows the Development Factor being applied at the end of the years, NCRIC is not in breach of contract by not following the calculation examples in Exhibit E. NCRIC argues that the Retro Plan states that Exhibit E is "not to vary alter or amend the terms hereof or of the Plan." Moreover, NCRIC asserts that Columbia is using exhibit E to impose additional obligations and not merely to clarify the application of the Development Factors. Further, NCRIC highlights again that Columbia has no lay or expert testimony in support of its interpretation that the Development Factors are correct.

Summary Judgment Standard

Summary judgment is proper under Rule 56(b) where the record shows that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Big Builders, Inc. v. Israel, 709 A.2d 74 (D.C. 1998). The court must view all facts and inferences in the light most favorable to the non-movant, and summary judgment should not be granted unless the moving party can show that no reasonable juror could find for the non-moving party. Big Builders, 709 A.2d 74, 76 (D.C. 1998). Once the movant has met the burden of demonstrating the absence of material disputed issues and the right to judgment as a matter of law, the nonmovant has the burden of producing adequate evidence to support a factual dispute requiring the trier of fact to resolve the dispute. Graff, v. Malawer, 592 A.2d 1038, 1040 (D.C. App. 1991).

The party opposing summary judgment may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleading but must come forward with affidavits or other evidence to controvert the movant's showing that there is a genuine issue of material fact for trial. Graff, 592 A.2d 1038, 040 (D.C. App. 1991). It is therefore imperative upon the non-movant to disclose credible evidence of it position because summary judgment cannot be defeated by conclusive allegations. Id. A motion for summary judgment is therefore properly granted if taking all reasonable inferences in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, a reasonable juror, acting reasonably could not find for the nonmoving party, under the appropriate burden of proof. Id.

16d-002243

Analysis

There are material issues of fact in dispute, and therefore the Court denies Columbia's Motion for Summary Judgment. First, there is a factual dispute whether NCRIC gave notice to Columbia that premium was due, and whether such notice was a condition precedent to NCRIC's ability to receive the owed premium. Columbia says it did not get notice and NCRIC claims that notice was not a condition precedent but that they complied with all the requirements under the Retro Plan. Both parties rely on their interpretation of the oral agreement in support to their argument that there was or was not a condition precedent.

Under D.C. law, for a contract to exist, there must be both agreement to all material terms and the intention of the parties to be bound. "Absent any contrary requirement under the statute of frauds, parties may enter into enforceable oral contracts, as long as the parties agree to all material terms and intend to be bound by their oral agreement." Baker v. Office Space Dev. Corp., 664 A. 2d 1236, 1238 (D.C. 1995).

Here, both parties agree that an oral contract exists and have made such in-court representations before the Court at the December 12, 2002 motions hearing on the cross summary judgment motions in this case. Thus, the statute of frauds is satisfied. Wemhoff v. Investors Management Corporation of America, et al., 528 A.2d 1205, 1208 (DC 1987). The determination therefore, is whether the parties agreed to all of the material terms and intended to be bound by their agreement. The jury should make this determination.

Here, the contract is ambiguous. The parties did not appear to consider the ramifications of their oral contract if the Retro Plan was terminated. The parties agree that no premium would be due by either party until all Experience Periods had closed. This agreement seems to have been made in light of the Retro Plan being in existence. However, the parties have different interpretations as to what would happen if the Retro Plan ended and open Experience Periods still existed.

Issues of fact regarding oral contract ambiguity are for the jury to resolve. The use of extrinsic evidence is permitted "to determine the circumstances surrounding the making of the agreement, so that it may be ascertained what a reasonable person in the position of the parties would have thought the words meant." Noonan v. Williams, 688 A.2d 237 (DC 1996) (citing Lamphier v. Washington Hospital Center, 524 A.2d 729 (D.C. 1987).

The different interpretations by the parties are an ambiguity in the contract, as opposed to a failure to agree to all material terms of the contract. "The policy favoring freedom of contract requires that within broad limits, the agreement of the parties should be honored even though forfeiture results. When, however, it is doubtful whether or not the agreement makes an event a condition of an obligor's duty, an interpretation is preferred that will reduce the risk of forfeiture." RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONTRACTS § 227(1) (1971).

Here, Columbia argues that the closing of an Experience Period, is the event that must occur before Columbia must pay NCRIC any owed premium. On the other hand, NCRIC argues that whether an Experience Period is closed or open, Columbia owes NCRIC now because the Retro Plan has been terminated. Because of this factual dispute, the Court will not decide the harsher alternative that no contract was formed. The intent of the parties is a factual issue for the jury to decide.

There are additional factual disputes for a jury to resolve such as whether notice was ever given. There is also a factual dispute regarding the mechanics of the calculations. Specifically, there is a dispute regarding whether the 1996 Amendment decreasing the Minimum Premium to 60% should be applied prospectively or retrospectively and whether the Deposit Premium Multiplier was properly adjusted from 67% to 62% to comply with the 1986 amendment, reducing the premium for the Attending Faculty. Finally, there is a factual dispute as to the whether Exhibit E is a controlling example of how the Reconciliations should be performed.

16d-002246

Accordingly, for the foregoing reasons and upon consideration of Plaintiffs' Motion for Summary Judgment[1], and Opposition thereto, it is by the Court this 2nd day of April, 2003

ORDERED, that the Motion is DENIED.

EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR DEFENDANT

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Good afternoon, Dr. Rifka. My name is Scott Badami. I'm an attorney here with the law office of Bryan Cave. As you may know, my law firm represents NCRIC in the lawsuit that is currently pending between NCRIC and Columbia Hospital.

A Pleased to meet you.

Q I know you have been deposed before. I would like just to briefly go over some of the ground rules and see if you have any questions before we get started. I would ask that you respond orally to my questions, as you know the court reporter is going to be taking down everything we say.

If you don't understand any of my questions, please let me know and I will try to rephrase it. Similarly, if you would like to take a break, if you want a drink, please let me know and we will be certain to accommodate you.

Do you have any questions before we get underway?

A No, sir.

Q Can I ask you, Dr. Rifka, did you do any preparation for this deposition this afternoon?

A I did.

Q Can you tell me what that preparation was?

A I met with my lawyer, Eli Schulman.

Q When did you meet with Mr. Schulman?

A A couple of times.

Q Can you say when the first time was?

A About two weeks ago.

Q About how long did you meet with him?

A Two to three hours.

Q And you said a couple of times, did you meet with him again?

A Yes. About a week ago.
Q And about how long did you meet with him then?
A Two to three hours.
Q Did you review any documents in preparation for this deposition?
A I reviewed the statement of facts, material facts.
Q Okay. The statement of material facts that Columbia provided?
A I saw only one copy that was provided through my attorney.
Q Okay. That's fine. Did you review any other documents?
A No, sir.
Q I want to make clear, I'm not asking you any substance that you talked about with your counsel. That's not the point of my questions here. Other than Mr. Schulman, did you meet with anyone else in preparation for this deposition today?
A No.

Q You didn't meet with Michael Barsh (ph)?
A No.
Q Larry Wilson?
A No.
Q Peter Benezer (ph)?
A No.
Q In your preparations, you did not, then, review what we call the retro plan? Do you understand what I mean when I say the retro plan, with respect to this case?
A I did not --
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, confidential. You may go ahead.
THE WITNESS: I did not review the retro plan.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q When I use the term retro plan, do you understand what I mean?
A I never reviewed the retro plan. It has been explained to me so I have a vague understanding of it.

Q Okay. Did you review any of Columbia's counterclaims when you were preparing for this deposition today?
A I reviewed the statement of material facts, the disputed and the undisputed.
Q Other than Mr. Schulman, does anybody else know that you're testifying on behalf of Columbia here today?
A My office knows that I have a deposition.
Q I'm sorry. I should have been more clear. Anybody related currently or formerly with Columbia Hospital?
A No.
Q Dr. Rifka, do you understand today that you are testifying as a representative, or a designee of Columbia Hospital?
A It has -- I think I do.
Q And under the rules, it's called a Rule 30(b)(6) deposition, your testimony is that essentially of the hospital. Do you understand that?

A If you say so.
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q I would like to mark this as exhibit -- since, Dr. Rifka, you have been deposed before, with Mr. Schulman's consent, I would like to mark these exhibits as Rifka A. Because the previous depositions, I think, went numbers.
MR. SCHULMAN: Sure.
MR. BADAMI: If that's okay? Ask the reporter to mark as Exhibit Rifka A, if that's all right?
(Rifka Exhibit A was marked for identification.)
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Dr. Rifka, I'm showing you what's been marked Rifka Exhibit A. I would ask you, sir, if you have ever seen this document before?
For purposes of the record, I'll state that it's the supplemental notice of deposition that was served in this case for this deposition today.
A I saw Page 2 before.

Q And when did you see that?
A My lawyer showed it to me.
Q Did he show that to you during the one or two preparations sessions that you mentioned?
A Yes, sir.
A Only Page 2.
Q When I asked you before, you only mentioned that you saw a statement of material facts. You have now mentioned that you have seen the supplemental notice of deposition. Were there any other documents that you were shown during the preparation, that you can tell me about?
A Okay. As I can recall now, that's the ones.
Q The statement of material facts and this Page 2 of the supplemental notice of deposition?
A And that was in the statement of material facts, in the book itself, in the detached --

Q Okay. Could I ask you to turn to Page 3, or excuse me, Page 4? It's labeled, Attachment A. Have you ever seen this Attachment A before?
A No, sir.
Q Would it be accurate, then, Dr. Rifka, that you never searched for any of the documents that are listed in Numbers 1, 2, 3 and 4 in Attachment A?
MR. SCHULMAN: I just want to object to that, to the extent that it calls for anything that counsel advised.
MR. BADAMI: I'm not seeking counsel's -- fine.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Can you just respond to my question? Did you search for any of the documents that are requested here in Numbers 1, 2, 3 or 4?
MR. SCHULMAN: I would also like to object to the extent that the question is vague as to time frame.
THE WITNESS: I do not specifically recall any specific research to these points.

BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Okay. Dr. Rifka, do you understand that you're here today because the court ordered that this additional discovery be undertaken?
A I think so.
Q You think so or do you understand that?
A I think I understand.
Q Okay. Do you understand you have an obligation to respond on behalf of Columbia to certain areas of inquiry which the court permitted me to ask you about today?
A Yes, sir.
Q And that you are the designated representative for Columbia Hospital on these matters?
A I guess so.
Q You guess so or yes?
A I guess so, yes.
Q Okay. Can you, Dr. Rifka, I know you have been deposed before, just briefly tell me your history with Columbia Hospital, specifically any elected or appointed positions you might have held at the hospital?

MR. SCHULMAN: I would like to object. Dr. Rifka has been deposed twice before in this case. All of his, those depositions go into detail about his relationship with the hospital. And it seems that would certainly go beyond the scope of the notice.
MR. BADAMI: Are you directing him not to answer or are you just lodging an objection?
MR. SCHULMAN: I'm lodging an objection.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q I recognize that you have been deposed before, and I would just like to briefly go over, if you could say, the elected or appointed positions that you have held at Columbia and when you held them?
A I was elected the vice chief of medical staff in '95, '96, as I recall. And I was elected president of medical staff in '90, around 1997. And the vice chair of the board in late '97 and then acting chair of the board from there on.

Q At any time were you president of the medical staff of Columbia?
A Yes.
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Let me try it this way. When did Columbia close? Let me try it this way.
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection. The closing of the hospital is not a relevant topic for this deposition, Scott.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q When did Columbia close, Doctor?
MR. SCHULMAN: I renew the objection. Is there any reason you can tell me that it is relevant to the topic of the deposition?
MR. BADAMI: Can we go off the record for a second?
(Thereupon, an off-the-record discussion was held.)
MR. SCHULMAN: I'm going to object to the extent that this calls for information dealing with the closing of the hospital. We have litigated this issue, Scott. You asked the judge expressly for an opportunity to have discovery about the closing of the hospital. We objected. We briefed, the parties briefed the issue and the judge ruled that that is not an appropriate topic of discovery in this case.

So I am going to allow Dr. Rifka to answer a base question like his status with respect to the hospital. But there has to be a very short leash on this topic, because we're not going to open the door to further inquiry relating to the closing of the hospital.
MR. BADAMI: I recognize what the court ruled and permitted me to depose Dr. Rifka on today. Those are the areas that I'm going to ask of him.
MR. SCHULMAN: Why don't you go ahead and ask?
MR. BADAMI: I'm trying to do that.
MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.

MR. BADAMI: The closing of the hospital, I'm asking him what his position was at the time of the close. And I believe that is perfectly appropriate for a 30(b)(6) witness to respond to.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q I'm going to try it again, Dr. Rifka. When did the hospital close?
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection. You can go ahead and answer, but we renew our objection. And, you know, he'll be able to answer only the most basic issues relating to that topic. We're not going to delve into the closing of the hospital here today.
MR. BADAMI: If you would like to continue the banter between you and I, I'm happy to do that. I'm here to depose Dr. Rifka and I would really like to get on with it, if that's all right?
MR. SCHULMAN: Please do.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Dr. Rifka, when did the hospital close?
MR. SCHULMAN: You may answer his question,

if you recall.
THE WITNESS: May, I recall somewhere in May of 2002.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q And can you tell me what your positions were at the hospital at the time of the close?
A Chairman of the board.
Q Since the time that the hospital closed, do you, have you maintained that position or has it changed? Or what is the current status of that?
MR. SCHULMAN: I'm going to object and direct the witness not to answer that question.
MR. BADAMI: I'm going to ask that the question be answered. I believe that it is perfectly appropriate for a 30(b)(6) witness to respond to these very basic, very limited questions.
We've already gone through one motion to compel, the motion to compel was granted. That's why we're here today. We're going to have to file another one.

MR. SCHULMAN: Absolutely. If you would like to discuss the topics that are in the motion to compel, I would welcome that. That's what we're here for today. We're not here to discuss any events relating to the closing of the hospital or subsequent events to the closing.

And that issue has been addressed by the court and the court has expressly held that that is not a proper topic for discovery.

MR. BADAMI: The court did not hold anything with respect to the status of your 30(b)(6) deponent, who is the corporate designee that you have stated that is supposed to respond on behalf of the hospital. The court did not address with respect to whether or not I could ask him that type of question. I'm sorry.

MR. SCHULMAN: Well, it's simply not relevant to the issues that are, that the court has allowed you to proceed on.

MR. BADAMI: Again, we're going to have to disagree on that point. You know, I've asked the question and we will have to press it in another motion.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Dr. Rifka, if I use the term attending faculty at Columbia, do you understand the definition of the attending faculty at Columbia?

A Yes, sir.

Q Can you define for me the attending faculty at Columbia?

A The attending faculty of Columbia, a self-selected group who together, because they historically refer most of the patients to Columbia, and who intend to refer the bulk of the work to Columbia Hospital in the future.

Q From the time of approximately 1993 through 2000, were you a member of the attending faculty at Columbia?

A I was.

Q With respect to the physicians who made up the attending faculty at Columbia from 1993 to 2000, did Columbia have a contract in place with any of those members of the attending faculty?

A Columbia did not have a contract, these are a self-selecting group. They banded together clectively, willingly, with the common bondage between them. These are the physicians who refer the bulk of the hospital, of the patients and the work to the hospital, historically. And who intend to refer the bulk of their work to the hospital futuristically.

So this is self-selected, it's a willing, it's a willful thing. It is something that they have instigated, generated, formulated and banded together.

Q But there is no contract?

A There are no contracts.

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.

THE WITNESS: There are no contracts.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Did certain members of the attending faculty from 1993 until 2000, did it change over time?

A It changes with attritions and recruitment. People will get old and retire or, and other new ones would come. So really there hasn't been a tremendous change. The influx and the out-flux were something within reach of each other.

Q Did many of the attending faculty have privileges at more than one hospital here in the District of Columbia metropolitan area?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, vague and ambiguous.

THE WITNESS: I don't know if many. But physicians who voluntarily go to hospitals, sometimes they can have admissions to other hospitals.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Is a member of the attending faculty of Columbia under an obligation to admit all of his or her patients to Columbia?

A I would have to impress on you that the attending faculty of Columbia is not generated by Columbia Hospital for Women, it's generated by the attending faculty themselves who bonded together for support systems.

And who electively, and I underline electively, and voluntarily banded together because they historically admit all their patients to Columbia. And for futuristically, which is more important, they intend to admit the bulk of their patients to Columbia.
Q But a doctor can change his or her mind with respect to which hospital they wish to admit patients, as long as he or she has privileges at the other hospitals?
A Doctors who are private practitioners have the right to admit their patients anywhere they elect to do so. For example, I am on the faculty of Sibley but I admit all my patients to Columbia.
Q But if you wanted to, you could elect to admit patients to Sibley?
A You can elect --
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.
You can go ahead.

THE WITNESS: You can elect, Mr. Badami.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q You stated, Dr. Rifka, that there is no contract between the members of the attending faculty and Columbia Hospital. I'm asking you now, if you could describe the business relationship between the attending faculty and Columbia Hospital?
A The attending faculty would admit their patients to Columbia Hospital, and by admitting their patients to Columbia Hospital there is a business relationship because patients are admitted to the hospital.
They refer their patients to do procedures in the hospital, X-ray, blood test and certain other things, too. So they utilize the hospital as, for all services for their patients.
Q Let me try it this way. Is the business relationship between an attending faculty member and Columbia Hospital, is any of that in writing?
A There is no writing of a business contract between the hospital and the attending faculty. The attending faculty selectively, electively, voluntarily takes their patients to the hospital. And I guess that that's the extent of it.

Q Is a physician free to change the business relationship between him or herself and Columbia Hospital at any time?
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
MR. BADAMI: I would like to mark the next exhibit.
If you can mark it Rifka B for me?
(Rifka Exhibit B was marked for identification.)
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Dr. Rifka, I'm showing you what has been marked as Rifka Exhibit B. And ask if you recognize this document?
A Do you want me to read all of it now?
Q I'm just asking you if you recognize it?

A To recognize it, I have to read through it. And if you bear with me, I will give you an answer.
Q Sure.
A Okay.
MR. SCHULMAN: Scott, if we can go off the record, I might be able to short-circuit this a little bit.
MR. BADAMI: Sure.
(Thereupon, a brief recess was taken.)
MR. BADAMI: We're back on the record.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Dr. Rifka, do you recognize what I've handed you as Rifka Exhibit B?
A I'm reviewing it, Mr. Badami, if you don't mind.
Q Okay. Sure.
A I guess I have seen some paragraphs of it, yes. Sitting here today I think I, my recollection, I have seen some parts of it.

Q Do you recognize the parts of it as Columbia's, I guess, amended answer and counterclaims in this matter?
A I can refer you to certain topics that I recognize, sir, in it. The January '98 renewal, the September '98 renewal. So I am familiar with certain, with certain parts of it, yes.
Q Okay.
A My recollection, I remember certain parts of it, yes.
Q Okay. Let me ask you some questions about it and see if you have some knowledge of these areas. Could you please turn to Page 25, specifically Paragraph 124?
A Yes, sir.
Q And for purposes of the record, I will read Paragraph 124. States, "During the period up to and including August of 2000, Medical Center" -- and it's referring to Columbia -- "had valid business relationships with certain physicians who were associated with Medical Center and an expectancy that such physicians would refer patients to Medical Center."

Did I read that paragraph accurately, Dr. Rifka?
A Yes, sir, you did.
Q Can you please, for me, list the certain physicians who had business relationships with Columbia as outlined in Paragraph 124?
A These would be the entire staff of Columbia and attending faculty in its entirety.
Q Can you list the names of those physicians?
A These are tens of names. It would be, these are the medical staff of Columbia and the attending faculty of Columbia. And they number a lot.
Q I am not unsympathetic to that point of view. In your counterclaims you have alleged certain physicians, and I'm trying to figure out which certain physicians you all are referring to.
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection. I mean, this isn't a memory test. We have produced in discovery, documents that list the names of the physicians.

MR. BADAMI: This is a 30(b)(6) deposition that was specifically authorized by the court.
MR. SCHULMAN: Yes.
MR. BADAMI: He is the representative. I am asking him which physicians he is referring to, as a purely factual question. If he would have had documents that could have talked about this, that's fine. If he's saying he doesn't know and if you're objecting, you know, that's fine. But, you know, I have a right to ask this question. It's certainly within the realm of what the court granted.
MR. SCHULMAN: I object to the extent that you're asking him to, you know, by memory recite all the names of the members of the attending faculty beyond that which we have produced in documents in this case.
MR. BADAMI: The reason this deposition was permitted to go forward is because the court found your responses have been inadequate in this area. And so that's why the question is valid. And I'm asking for the list of the certain physicians.

MR. SCHULMAN: You can go ahead and answer it to the extent that you recall or --
THE WITNESS: Yes. I would list to you the -- I mean, this is the -- what you're asking me is to list the physicians who admit to Columbia Hospital for Women up till August 2000. And I would have to say that my listing would not be totally encompassing because there are tens if not hundreds of them.
And hence, I would refer you to the materials that we have presented and to the names that are included in all of the briefs, papers, statements of facts, interrogatories or whatever. But this is -- you're asking me now to list the entire medical staff of Columbia Hospital for Women.
MR. BADAMI: I'm trying to get you to list as many factual names as you can remember. Your counterclaim seeks a significant amount of damages based on an allegation that my client did something to this group of certain physicians. And I want to make sure I understand the group of physicians we are referring to.

THE WITNESS: And the group of physicians that you are referring to, the names are listed in our numerous papers, facts.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Dr. Rifka, which paper is it listed in? Let me try it that way.

A In the documents that we have presented to you there are adequate number of physicians who admit, those physicians who are expected to admit. And I think that if you, other depositions of other people can point to that, too. If you review the documents you will find them.

But it is for me impossible as a human brain, to recite in front of you hundreds of physicians who admit to the hospital, and call this an entire knowledge.

Q Again, I didn't prevent you from bringing any piece of paper here that, you know, that could have listed the names. Again, the reason we're here is because the court has found Columbia's response to this question inadequate up to this point, and I'm trying to just pin it down.

If you are unable to respond with any more specificity, you know, we can take that up again with the court. And, you know, I was successful with respect to this motion to compel and, you know, I may have to do it again. I mean, I don't know what else to tell you.

MR. SCHULMAN: Is there a question pending?

MR. BADAMI: Yes.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q I mean, are you declining to name the certain physicians that are listed in, that are encompassed in Paragraph 124 of your counterclaim?

A I --

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection. Dr. Rifka has told you that he, that this is not a memory test. He can't recall names of every physician. He's referred you to documents, he's referred you to our statement of material facts.

MR. BADAMI: He's referred me to no specific document. He's referred me to no statement of material facts. You have an obligation to prepare your witness.

MR. SCHULMAN: I think I was not finished, Scott. He's referred you to the whole record in this case. The court did not find that we had not adequately presented the names of doctors that are members of the attending faculty.

MR. BADAMI: The court found that you had responded to this insufficiently, and provided me this opportunity to do so. You had an obligation to prepare your witness to respond to these questions. There's only four or five areas that the court permitted this deposition to go forward on, this is one of them.

MR. SCHULMAN: Dr. Rifka is well prepared for the deposition. I'm confident that the court did not have in mind that he would have to be able to recall by memory the name of every doctor that's a member of the attending faculty.

MR. BADAMI: There is no requirement in the rules, that I'm aware, that he has to do it by memory. He could certainly have --

MR. SCHULMAN: That's correct.

MR. BADAMI: -- a piece of paper with him that you could have provided him, that would have listed this.

MR. SCHULMAN: And he's referred you to things that are in the case. If you would like to show him the statement of material facts and ask him to show you where in the statement of material facts there are listings of doctors, there's information about the attending faculty, you're welcome to do so. But he doesn't have to recall by memory the names of all the members of the attending faculty.

MR. BADAMI: The point is not necessarily the names of the members of the attending faculty, it's going to be the business relationship that Columbia alleges it had with them. And we're going to continue on from that.

MR. SCHULMAN: Well, why didn't you ask him about the business relationship, then, rather than the names of all the members of the attending faculty?

MR. BADAMI: I'm starting with the names and then we're going to get to the business relationship.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.

MR. BADAMI: But, you know --

MR. SCHULMAN: Well, he's answered to the best of his ability with respect to the names, and has referred you to numerous places in the record in the case where there are such names. And I would encourage you to move along and ask him about the business relationship.

MR. BADAMI: And I, for the record, will state that I believe that that is an insufficient response. And again, you know, for the second time, we're probably going to have to go back to the court on a motion to compel for this.

But for purposes of this deposition for right now I'll move on without waiving my rights to this information.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q What I would like to do, Dr. Rifka, and it may be a bit of a challenge here. Is I'm trying to find out when the business relationships with each of these physicians began, when the business relationship with each of these physicians ended? And if it ended, why it ended?

A Okay. Proceed.

MR. SCHULMAN: Is there a question pending?

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Let me try it this way. Can I ask you to look back at Paragraph 124?

A Yes.

Q You'll see at the end it talks about, Columbia had an expectancy that such physicians would refer patients to the medical center. Do you see that?

A Yes, sir.

Q Can you describe for me the expectancy that Columbia had that the physicians would refer patients to the hospital?

A Physicians had, who admit to Columbia had the history of admitting all of their patients there. And the expectancy is if somebody admitted all their patients there for the last 19 or 20 or 15 years that it would continue unabated.

Q Was that expectancy ever in writing, between the hospital and Columbia -- excuse me, between the hospital and the physician?

A The hospital and the physician do not have a writing to that effect. The physicians themselves have selectively and electively, willingly for the last decades admitted patients, in their totality, to Columbia Hospital for Women. And there was no reason for things to change.

Q Could a physician change his or her mind with the respect to that expectancy, at any time?

A If there is something major that has happened, maybe.

Q Only maybe?

A To my best of my knowledge, sitting here today, yes.

Q So a physician could have changed his or her mind with respect to that expectancy? He or she could do --

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.

THE WITNESS: I guess they can.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Was Dr. Arthur Becker a member of the medical staff at Columbia?

A Yes.

Q Did Columbia have a business relationship with him?

A He admits his patients to Columbia Hospital for Women.

Q Do you know when he began admitting patients to Columbia?

A A long time ago.

Q Can you be more specific?
A No.
Q Do you know if Dr. Becker changed his business relationship with the hospital at any time?
A You have to ask him. I guess he did. From my knowledge, sitting here today, I guess he did.
Q Do you know when he did that?
A You would have to ask him that question. But I think around the, around that time of, I would think around that time of September 2000.
Q Around that time he changed his business relationship with Columbia?
A I would have to guess. I'm not sure about it, what time did he really change. You would have to ask him.
Q I'm asking you for Columbia's knowledge, that's all.
A I guess. I do not, I'm not sure about when did he change.

Q Do you know why Dr. Becker may have changed his business relationship with Columbia?
A I have no, I have not -- I don't have any knowledge at the present time. And I don't recall why would he, if he did.
Q Did you have knowledge at a prior time why he might have done that?
A You would have to ask him. I have no recollection about Dr. Becker's practices.
Q How about, did Columbia have a business relation with Dr. John Berryman?
A He used to admit patients to Columbia Hospital for Women. And the bulk of his work was at hospital, at the Columbia hospital.
Q Would Dr. Berryman be one of the certain physicians that are referred to in Paragraph 124 of your counterclaim?
A I guess so.
Q Do you know if Dr. Berryman made a decision to change his business relationship with Columbia?
A I know that after September of 2000 that his admissions to Columbia were severely down.

Q And why was that?
A You probably have to ask him why was that. But that is, he was part of the NCRIC insured physicians.
Q And when you say part of the NCRIC insured physicians, what do you mean?
A He went with NCRIC discount and moved the bulk of his patients to other hospital.
MR. SCHULMAN: Can we go off the record for a second?
MR. BADAMI: Sure.
MR. SCHULMAN: Thank you.
(Thereupon, an off-the-record discussion was held.)
MR. BADAMI: We're back on the record.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Dr. Rifka, I'm going to give you a list of names, and I guess I'm going to ask you if you had a business relationship with these physicians? And we'll see where that goes, if that's all right with you?

A That's fine, sir.
MR. SCHULMAN: By you there, you mean Columbia Hospital?
MR. BADAMI: Columbia Hospital.
THE WITNESS: Okay. Yes, sir.
MR. BADAMI: And Dr. Rifka as the specific designee?
MR. SCHULMAN: Yes.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q How about Dr. Allen Birnkrant, B-I-R-N-K-R-A-N-T?
A Allen Birnkrant, yes.
Q Did Columbia have a business relationship with him?
A Yes.
Q Do you know when that business relationship began?
A Years ago.
Q Can you be more specific?
A Probably in the mid '80s.
Q Do you know when that business relationship ended?

A Around the time of September 2000.
Q Could Dr. Birnkrant have made his decision to -- do you know why he changed his business relationship with Columbia?
A He was part of the NCRIC group that stayed with NCRIC and they moved him to George Washington University, or he moved to George Washington University.
Q You said NCRIC moved him to George Washington, I would like you to -- who at NCRIC moved him to George Washington?
A Well, who, I -- if you read me the names I can help you. But Dr. Birnkrant's, around September of 2000, his admissions to Columbia were severely down to nil. And he is part of the group that stayed with NCRIC when the plan, when the, was not renewed by writing.
Q And plan, you mean the retro plan?
A The retro plan was not renewed. And he moved. It was at that time, just shortly before, that NCRIC structured a retro plan with George Washington. And he was one of the physicians who left Columbia, stayed with NCRIC and went to GW.

Q I'm sorry. Dr. Rifka, I thought you said, though, that Columbia didn't have a contract with Dr. Birnkrant or with any of the attending faculty?
A Nor does GW have any contract.
Q Right.
A But he admitted all of his patients for 15 years to Columbia Hospital. All of a sudden, September of 2000, he admits all of his patients to George Washington.
Q But he had no contract with Columbia; is that correct?
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.
THE WITNESS: He has no contract with Columbia.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q And I believe you testified that the members of the attending faculty were free to change their business relationship as they saw fit?

A I said that.
Q And so how, you know, if he chose to -- isn't it true he chose to do that?
A You asked me about the expectancy. If an organization has a physician admitting to it for 15 years uninterrupted, unabated, and suddenly something happens with NCRIC and all of a sudden that person goes to another hospital. All of this happened around a miraculous September 2000 when a bunch of physicians left Columbia to Sibley or to GW, because of the NCRIC had no deals with Columbia Hospital for Women going forward.
So these physicians, their leaving came synchronous and at the same time that the contract has not been renewed with NCRIC. All the years prior to that, for decades they have admitted patients electively, willingly, happily, satisfactorily to Columbia Hospital. So that's what the expectancy is.
Q But you had no contract with respect to that expectancy, that was never reduced to writing?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered numerous times now.
THE WITNESS: Medicine is not practiced by contracts, Mr. Badami, they are practiced by physicians admitting patients to a hospital. And the business relationship is the continuity of that.
And when all of them come in bulks at the certain day, in a certain month, interrupting decades of day and night, day and night and day and night, and week after week, month after month, year after year, the miraculous happening is that it was the same time with the NCRIC not signing a deal with Columbia going future, of going to the future.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q And do you know that Dr. Birnkrant left because there was no deal as you call it, between NCRIC and Columbia?
A That is correct.

Q How do you know that, did you talk with him?
A The leavings of everybody that have left in September of 2000 has been preceded by a lot of events and has been precipitated by not signing the contract going forward with NCRIC.
So there's, in my mind and in the institution's mind, there is no way we think it's otherwise other than us not being able to sign a deal with NCRIC going for the future.
Q Let me repeat my question. Did you ever speak with Dr. Birnkrant about why he left Columbia?
A Dr. Birnkrant --
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection. Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: Dr. Birnkrant and others spoke about Columbia, if it doesn't have a deal with NCRIC that they are going to leave somewhere else.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q When did you speak to Dr. Birnkrant about that?

A I did not have any direct conversation about it, but in executive committee meetings of the medical staff this was brought up.
Q Was it brought up by Dr. Birnkrant?
A It's brought by everybody, and he's a member of the executive committee.
Q Did you hear him say that?
A I haven't heard him saying that.
Q So you're speculating?
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.
THE WITNESS: It's barely a speculation if everybody left at the time when NCRIC did not have a deal with Columbia. If they were admitting patients for 15 years to a place and then all of a sudden September 1st certain percentage of the faculty just goes some to Sibley and some to GW, there is no, nothing to say about other than the NCRIC deal.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Again, but didn't you testify, Dr. Rifka, that a physician could change his or her view at any time?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, mischaracterizes prior testimony. Asked and answered for multiple times.
MR. BADAMI: Dr. Rifka gives the same answer, Eli. I'm trying to get a different question asked.
MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. You're asking the same question, though.
MR. BADAMI: The record will speak for itself.
MR. SCHULMAN: Indeed it will.
MR. BADAMI: Indeed it will.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q You have mentioned, Dr. Rifka, this September 2000 date, and that's probably a good time to go here. I would like you to testify as to, or let me try it this way. Does Columbia claim that NCRIC interfered with the business relationship it had with, that Columbia had with any of the attending faculty members?
A Yes.
MR. SCHULMAN: I just want to object to the extent that it calls for a legal conclusion. But go ahead.

BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Dr. Rifka, I would like you to tell me the specific actions or acts that Columbia claims NCRIC did that constituted this interference?
MR. SCHULMAN: Same objection.
THE WITNESS: Okay. In 1998 there was, while Columbia was in Chapter 11, we were having problems renewing our relationship with NCRIC, because NCRIC was asking for a huge amount of money from Columbia, money that we didn't have.
And so Columbia had to try to get another insurance company that will insure the physicians at a very competitive rate without any retro plan and risk by Columbia Hospital for Women. We thought this is wise to do, it's fiduciary.
And we were under Chapter 11 so we wanted to make sure that we showed the creditors and the court that we were diligent about that. At that time, NCRIC interfered with that decision.
Q How did NCRIC interfere with that decision?

A NCRIC structured meetings for the attending faculties, first telling them that, putting disparaging remarks about MIIX.
Q Okay, I'm sorry. May I --
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection. Are you finished, Dr. Rifka?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
MR. SCHULMAN: Have you finished your answer?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q You said NCRIC structured meetings for the faculty. Who at NCRIC structured these meetings for the faculty?
A With the attending faculty.
Q Who at NCRIC did this?
A I do not know who structured the meeting, I know who attended them.
Q You were -- I'm sorry, Doctor, you testified that NCRIC, I believe it was, structured the meetings? And I was trying to use your words.

A Correct.
Q And I'm asking you, who at NCRIC structured these meetings?
A Who at NCRIC structured that meeting?
Q That's correct.
A NCRIC. I do not know who structured that meeting.
Q I'm asking you for the name of an individual or individuals at NCRIC?
A I know who attended the meeting, who called for it, I don't know. But from the NCRIC, the ones who attended the meeting was Steve Fargis, Ray Pate, Nelson Trujillo. And the fourth person, which I will see if I remember -- Burgess, a guy by the name Burgess, I think.
Q When did these meetings take place?
A In '98.
Q Can you be more specific?
A August, September '98.
MR. BADAMI: Can we go off the record for a second?

MR. SCHULMAN: Sure.
(Thereupon, a brief recess was taken.)
THE WITNESS: Mr. Badami, at 3:30 I would like a break to call my office to see if there's an update. So if you don't mind?
MR. BADAMI: Sure. As I mentioned at the beginning, if you would ever like to take a break, please let me know.
THE WITNESS: Thank you, sir. Just at 3:30.
MR. BADAMI: Go ahead. If you can point it out, when it hits 3:30, let me know, and we will certainly accommodate.
THE WITNESS: Thank you, sir. You're very kind.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q You mentioned that, I think, in August or September of 1998?
A Yes.
Q And what took place at this meeting?
A As I sit here today, for example, there was a slide show in one meeting at the NCRIC headquarters that was, for example, they were trying to tell the physicians that if, to go to another hospital who had similar programs. In one of the slides, I will refer you actually for more details to the, to the exhibits that is related to the case where this is shown.

Q I don't really want to go there, Dr. Rifka, because then Mr. Schulman and I are going to go back and forth on what is the purpose of this deposition here this afternoon.
I guess I really would like to ask you to focus on how NCRIC interfered with the business relationship that Columbia had with its attending faculty?
A Okay. After the board of directors had agreed to bring MIIX to the picture, which is a larger insurance company rated by the best's as A plus, the, NCRIC started saying bad things about MIIX, scaring the physicians from going with it.
Q What bad things did NCRIC say about MIIX? And then I'm going to ask which specific individuals said something bad about MIIX?

A They said, as I can recall today and I will refer you for greater details to the numerous filings and statements in the case, they said that MIIX is not here to stay, it's a foreign company. MIIX's guarantee of not raising the premium for two years is not true. MIIX is a bad company.
The lawyers that are defending you currently with NCRIC are very good. The lawyers that MIIX will bring will not be available for you for your defense. For example, they said that, they attacked the board on cronyism and they alleged that the board stands to benefit financially from this deal.
And three, they told the physicians that if the deal does not work with Columbia that they can move to another hospital. I think they said, too, that our self-insurance trust has no money in it, spreading panic in front, with all the physicians. And that's for examples. I -- this is by no means an entire picture. So for more details I will refer you to -- but that's what I remember sitting here today.

Q Okay. We're going to have to go over these one by one. Again, Dr. Rifka, with respect to more details, Mr. Schulman and I are going to end up disagreeing. The purpose of this deposition is for me to get all those details.
I'm going to ask you again if there is anything else that you remember. I'm trying to get every fact that Columbia claims that NCRIC interfered with these business relationships. And saying you're relying on other pleadings and things is not going to do it. But, in any event.
MR. SCHULMAN: I'm just want to object there. A 30(b)(6) witness is absolutely entitled to refer you to other submissions in the case. In this particular instance he's referred to the statement of material facts which lays out in detail the very specific statements that Columbia alleges were made at that meeting and at other occasions.
We've briefed this, you know, fully before the court. Columbia stands by those statements, and Dr. Rifka is entitled as a 30(b)(6) witness not to have to recreate the wheel on every detail.

But if you would like to walk him through the statement of material facts and ask him whether or not that's Columbia's position as opposed to a particular individual that may be cited in the statement as a basis for that comment? That might be more productive if you're interested in making sure that you've pinned down Dr. Rifka as the 30(b)(6) witness on all the facts, and he's absolutely prepared to do that.
But to make this into a memory test of the whole case is not appropriate. And the 30(b)(6) witness is absolutely entitled to refer you to other submissions in the case.
MR. BADAMI: A 30(b)(6) witness is not a permitted -- you know, you have an obligation to prepare the 30(b)(6) witness. This deposition is being taken because your previous responses have been found by the court to be inadequate. I'm asking for purely factual questions about how the business relationship was alleged to be interfered with. And I'm asking for every fact and --

MR. SCHULMAN: And he's telling you that if you want every fact he's directing you to where to look. The court didn't find the prior answers to be inadequate after all of the things that have been laid out and the statement of material facts had been laid out.
That pleading didn't exist at the time the court evaluated, at the time the motion was filed. At the time the record was set, in terms of what was provided at the prior circumstances that the court was ruling on.
MR. BADAMI: Eli, the ruling on the motion to compel came in March of -- excuse me, in April of 2003, a year after the statement of material facts had been filed.
MR. SCHULMAN: Yes, but there was no suggestion in the record that the statement of material facts answered the questions that, that NCRIC was seeking. NCRIC was seeking, at the time two and a half years earlier, particular questions well before the statement of material facts had been put together.

So if he's able to make it easier for you and to, and to make it clearer as to what Columbia's position is by referring to the statement of material facts, that's a helpful thing. It should facilitate this deposition for everybody. And a 30(b)(6) witness is entitled to do that.

MR. BADAMI: Well, I'm going to ask my questions and we're going to keep going.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Dr. Rifka, you said the first statement that NCRIC made was that, I believe it was, MIIX is not here to stay. Who said that?

A I do not recall exactly who said that, but I mentioned who was there in the meeting. And I do not recall who is the person exactly from NCRIC who said it. But I would refer you to the slide show which speaks for itself.

And the slide show, I remember numerous slides that what I said is incorporated in the slides themselves. And the slides are made by NCRIC, projected by NCRIC in the NCRIC headquarters.

Q But you don't know who at NCRIC said this? I'm asking you for a name. I'm asking you to tell me who the person was?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.

THE WITNESS: I do not know the specific person.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q You stated that MIIX was a foreign company. Do you know who made that statement?

A Was the NCRIC presenter at the time.

Q But you don't remember who that is, who that was, excuse me.

A Not specifically.

Q Your next issue was that MIIX was going to guarantee not to raise its rates. Do you know who made that statement?

A One of the four NCRIC bosses who attended.

Q Object to the characterization of bosses. But --

A All of them, the four persons who attended there, or the executives.

Q Your next statement, Dr. Rifka, was that MIIX was a bad company. Who made that statement?

A One of the four bosses of NCRIC that were there.

Q Again, I object to the term bosses. But you can't be more specific than that?

A No, sir.

Q Can you be more specific with respect to any of the remaining alleged statements that interfered with your business relationships?

A I think they are on a slide show that was manufactured by NCRIC.

Q I'm just asking if you can tell me who made the statements?

A The statements was made by a slide and one of the NCRIC bosses was reading the slides to the public.

Q Again, I would object to the characterization of bosses.

MR. SCHULMAN: You're objecting to the witness's testimony?

MR. BADAMI: I'm objecting to the characterization.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q In addition to the statements that you have said that took place at the meetings in either August or September of 1998, is there any other event or statement that Columbia claims NCRIC interfered with the relationships between the hospital and its attending faculty?

A As I sit here today these are the ones that I recall.

Q But you can't recall any others?

A What I've enumerated prior to that is, to you, is whatever I recall.

Q Okay.

MR. SCHULMAN: Can we take a break?
MR. BADAMI: Sure.
(Thereupon, a brief recess was taken.)
MR. BADAMI: Back on the record.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Dr. Rifka, I would like you to turn now back to Exhibit B.
A I just want to tell you something about the, to conclude on the 1998.
Q Okay. The statements?
A The statements.
Q Right.
A That, that slide shows that were made by the people at, of authority at NCRIC really hurt us during our bankruptcy situation. Here we are, the hospital is in bankruptcy, trying to reorganize, to increase its business. And we have NCRIC at the other end trying to show our physicians out the door and take them to another institution.
Floating about us that we are, our self-insurance trust has no money and telling them that the hospital is in a tenuous position. And that, encouraging them to leave and decreasing our business.

That has put stress on the hospital board, on the way that we manage ourself out of bankruptcy. Has stressed our relationship with our creditors at that time, or the bankruptcy state guys. And has made it a little bit more difficult to do a quick reorganization plan.
And let me mention, too, that prior to that, in 1997, they came and took a million dollars away from the self-insurance trust. So, something that NCRIC was not entitled to, and they demanded that.
So the relationship really has been nerve-wracking for the hospital. And we were, felt like we were being jerked by them at every single angle at the time when we were trying to reorganize and get out of bankruptcy.
Q Dr. Rifka, your response that you just testified to?

A Yes.
Q You know, it wasn't to a question that I asked. It came after a break. Did you just remember all that on your own during the break?
A Well, I didn't think I concluded the answers to my questions, actually. Did not think that I, the answer to your questions had been concluded, in 1998.
Q Okay. And did you come up with all of these items on your own during the break?
A Mr. Badami, I will -- whatever I say is what my brain cells tell me.
Q I'm just asking if you came up with them on your own?
A That's exactly what I told you.
Q Okay.
MR. SCHULMAN: I would like to object to the asked and answered and the implication of the question.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Let's talk about some of that since you have raised it now?

A Yeah.
Q You said that NCRIC said the self-insurance trust fund was, I think it was underfunded, I want to make sure I get your word?
A Something to that effect, whether underfunded or it is way below, running on empty.
Q Was it way below or running on empty?
A Actually it shouldn't have been weren't it for them taking a million dollars off it.
Q I appreciate that. That wasn't my question.
MR. SCHULMAN: Did you finish your answer, Dr. Rifka?
THE WITNESS: I didn't.
MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. Go ahead and finish.
THE WITNESS: The NCRIC self, our, the, Columbia's Hospital self-insurance trust, in 1997 NCRIC came and said they know about the tenuous financial position that the hospital is in, and that they demanded either a letter of credit or a CD or cash in a certain amount of money. And we knew this was not really due them, that money.

And they explained that this money would stay on Columbia's books, it will accrue interest that Columbia will have. But that they want to keep it with them or else they will not renew the plan.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Who said that, Dr. Rifka?

A The meeting was called actually by Fargis and Burgess, they came to the hospital and met with Jerry Bollier. And I was there, too, and Dr. Asterbadi. And they came to us in order to finalize certain things about the plan.

And the second item of business was that the plan cannot go forward unless Columbia pays a certain amount of money, which exceeded, at that time, a million dollars.

Q And at that meeting, what did Mr. Fargis say?

A He said that he knows our financial position is bad and he knows that our, we are having difficulty with finances. And hence, NCRIC does not feel comfortable going ahead with the plan unless NCRIC has with it a certain amount of money, that will be on Columbia's books and Columbia will accrue interest. But it will be with NCRIC, the money, just in case.

Q And Mr. Fargis said that to you?

A And Burgess, both of them.

Q Well, that was my, my next question was, what did Mr. Burgess say at that meeting?

A Both of them said the same thing.

Q Both of them said the same thing. Did they say anything else at that meeting?

A They called the meeting and they came to Columbia, so we were receiving them as, at Columbia Hospital. So they came to the office of the CEO and broke the news to us. No renewing or going forward with the plan unless Columbia can come with the certain amount of money, or a letter of credit or a CD or something, that would put with them.

It will remain on our books, we will accrue interest on it. But they will have it with them in case something happens to us.

Q You mentioned Columbia's financial condition. Let me ask you, Dr. Rifka, can you describe Columbia's financial condition and start with 1993 for me?

A I can probably start from the time when I really know the financial condition which is probably '96. '97. I was not part of the leadership in '93. I was an attending physician from the attending faculty, therefore I was not privy to all of this information.

Q I appreciate that. But you're here as the designated representative, again, from Columbia. And I would like to start with 1993 because that was the first year of the retro plan. So, you know, if we could just start with '93 to the extent you have knowledge, I would sure appreciate it.

A I'm not sure about exactly '93 but I know from the mid '90s, maybe '94, '95 that the hospital started to lose money at that time.

Q Do you know if it was profitable in 1993, the hospital?

A I know that the hospital was profitable in late '80s early '90s. I do not know exactly when the hospital turned from profit to loss actually.

Q Okay.

A But I know that in the mid '90s it experienced financial difficulties, and I know in 1997 the board put the hospital into receivership.

Q We'll get to there. I apologize. Let's try to take it one year at a time.

A Yes.

Q With respect to 1993, then, your testimony is the hospital might have made a profit? Is that --

A I'm not sure whether, in '93, the hospital has made a profit or not. But I am confident that in '95 the hospital was not making money, was losing money.

Q Let me stay with '93 just for a second. Do you know -- how was NCRIC aware of the financial condition of the hospital in 1993?

A You will have to ask NCRIC how they know. But I will remind you that Columbia Hospital for Women is a not-for-profit. It is, has audited statements and anybody can ask for it. And therefore it is a public knowledge and publicly accessible, to whatever our financial condition is.

Q I appreciate that. I guess I would like to refer you back to Exhibit B, or the amended counterclaims, and ask you to turn to Page 11, specifically Paragraph 43. You see Paragraph 43 on Page 11, Dr. Rifka?

A Yes, sir, I see 43.

Q For purposes of the record, I'll read it in. "Upon information and belief, at all times relevant to this action, NCRIC knew of Medical Center's financial situation and reasonably should have known that Medical Center would have demanded payment of any Returned Premium due under the Plan."

Did I read that paragraph correctly, Dr. Rifka?

A You did.

Q And that's a part of Columbia's counterclaim in this action; is that correct?

A Yes, sir.

Q I would like to -- Columbia has alleged that NCRIC knew of Columbia's financial situation, and I'm trying to find out how NCRIC would have known that.

A NCRIC --

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection. Is there a question?

MR. BADAMI: There is.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q How was NCRIC, how was NCRIC aware of Columbia's financial condition?

MR. SCHULMAN: Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Well, they came to us and told us. I do not know how they came aware. The meeting that I attended was a meeting called for by NCRIC, and came and told us, you are in a bad financial situation and, hence, we want this, this, this and that. So whatever I knew, I learned from them.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q I appreciate that. But again, I need to remind you that you're here as the 30(b)(6) witness representative of Columbia Hospital to discuss the allegations raised in the counterclaim. And in Paragraph 43 you alleged that NCRIC knew of Columbia's financial situation and, starting in 1993, because that's the first year of the retro plan.

I'm just trying to find out how NCRIC was aware, as Columbia has alleged, of the hospital's financial condition at that time?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered. Dr. Rifka just told you that he, that NCRIC called a meeting at which it told Columbia what it's financial --

MR. BADAMI: That was in 1997, Mr. Schulman.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.

MR. BADAMI: I'm asking about 1993.

MR. SCHULMAN: Well, why don't -- okay. Go ahead and answer if you can.

MR. BADAMI: I've made it perfectly clear that I'm asking, I'm going year by year.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.

THE WITNESS: I guess the finances of Columbia Hospital for Women is public, and NCRIC would have accessibility as an insurance company to the finances of the hospital.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Do you know that or are you speculating?

A I do not know if, how did they know but I know that they know.

Q How was the information relayed to NCRIC?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.

THE WITNESS: NCRIC knew --

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.

THE WITNESS: NCRIC knew, and you have to ask them how did they get it.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Dr. Rifka --

A Reminding you that the financial statement of Columbia Hospital for Women is a public affair. How does an insurance company know of a public affair, they know and they always knew. And they told me that they knew.

Q Doctor, I believe that answer is nonresponsive. But --

MR. SCHULMAN: Scott, can you explain to me how you think the topic calls for Columbia understanding how NCRIC knew rather than calling for Columbia's explaining that NCRIC knew? In other words, Dr. Rifka has testified that he's aware that NCRIC, that NCRIC conveyed to Columbia that it was aware of Columbia's financial situation.

I don't see anywhere in Paragraph 43 or in Topic 3, anything that calls for an explanation of how Columbia knew that NCRIC came to that information.

MR. BADAMI: I'm sorry. The allegation is --

MR. SCHULMAN: Yes.

MR. BADAMI: -- that, Columbia is stating NCRIC knew of the hospital's financial situation.

MR. SCHULMAN: Right.

MR. BADAMI: And I'm trying to find out the facts behind how Columbia is alleging that NCRIC knew of its financial situation.

MR. SCHULMAN: And Dr. Rifka is answering, that NCRIC conveyed to Columbia that NCRIC was aware of Columbia's financial situation. They called a meeting saying it was aware.

MR. BADAMI: In 1997.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.

MR. BADAMI: And I'm trying to go year by year, and I'm still at 1993.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. And he's now told you that the finances are public and that NCRIC conveyed to Columbia that it had awareness of that information.

MR. BADAMI: Again, the record will speak for itself. If you would like to testify you can. But I'm trying to go year by year, and the meeting he referred to was 1997.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q You know. Dr. Rifka, let me try it this way. Can you describe Columbia's financial condition in 1994?

A Probably.

MR. SCHULMAN: Just one second. I want to object. I want to understand, Scott, what the basis is for, for asking about Columbia's financial condition, per se, rather than Columbia's understanding of the fact that NCRIC knew of Columbia's financial situation.

MR. BADAMI: With due respect, Eli, I don't think it's appropriate on the record for this deposition, for you and I to get into that debate. The court permitted me to ask these questions and I'm doing what the court permitted -- if you're going do direct your witness not to answer, that's fine. And we can add it to our list of things to take up with the court.

But the court permitted us to find out the facts, the basis for the allegations regarding NCRIC's knowledge about Columbia's financial condition. And I'm trying to find out what Columbia knew when it made these allegations that we were aware of the hospital's financial situation.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. I'm really at a loss to understand how his answers thus far have not addressed that. But you can ago ahead and answer, Dr. Rifka, if you know more than what you have testified to thus far.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Can you describe, Dr. Rifka, Columbia's financial condition in 1994?

MR. SCHULMAN: Same objection.

THE WITNESS: Probably losing money, I would think.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Do you have any other details?

A No.

Q Do you have any knowledge how NCRIC may have been aware of financial condition of Columbia in 1994?

A I have knowledge that in '97 they have told me and others that they know of our financial condition. And that's all what has been relayed to me from their side is that they know our financial condition. And that was in 1997.

Q Do you know how much money Columbia lost in 1994?

A I am not aware. I do not recall exactly the amount.

Q Do you have an estimate for me?

A I do not have any estimate for you.

Q Do you know if that material, that amount would be contained in any of the documents that have been produced to NCRIC by Columbia in this case?

A I am not sure of that.

Q Dr. Rifka, can you describe for me Columbia's financial condition in 1995?

A Probably not, probably losing money, too.

Q Do you know how much money Columbia lost in 1995?

A I am -- I cannot give you a specific number.

Q Can you give me a ballpark number?

A I cannot give you a ballpark number.

Q Do you have any knowledge of how Columbia might be -- excuse me -- how NCRIC might have been aware of Columbia's financial condition in 1995?

A Columbia's financial condition is public. Anybody can know it.

Q But you don't have any specific knowledge how NCRIC might have obtained that information?

A I do not have any specific knowledge, no.

Q Dr. Rifka, can you please describe for me Columbia's financial condition in 1996?

A Losing money.

Q How much?

A I do not know.

Q Not even a ballpark?

A Not even a ballpark.

Q Do you know if NCRIC was aware of Columbia's financial condition in 1996?

A Columbia's financial condition is public and NCRIC knew about the, Columbia's financial condition. That was relayed to me in 1997.

Q But you don't know about 1996?

A You have to ask them this as a cumulative knowledge or an instantaneous knowledge. But that's what they relayed to me.

Q I appreciate that. Again, it's Columbia's allegation that NCRIC knew and I'm trying to find out the facts behind how you made the allegation?

A The facts is, they informed me that they knew that. It was their words and their information relayed to me, and I am relaying to you what I heard from them.

Q Dr. Rifka, can you please describe for me Columbia's financial condition in 1997?

A Losing money.

Q About how much?

A I don't have an accurate figure. Around maybe $10 million, I would say.

Q Can you describe for me Columbia's financial condition in 1998?

A It was in bankruptcy.

Q Did Columbia lose money in 1998?

A I think the way the bankruptcy is calculated it's a little bit different. Because there is a bankruptcy estate and certain things that you can do, certain things that you cannot do. But I do not have accurate figures during bankruptcy, no.

Q Let me try it this way. Do you know if Columbia was profitable in 1998?

A It was not profitable in 1998.

Q How about Columbia's financial condition in 1999?

A 1999, losing less.

Q Do you know about how much?

A No, but losing less.

Q Do you know if it was in the millions?

A In the millions.

Q Five million?
A Can't give you an accurate figure.
Q Can you describe for me Columbia's financial condition in 2000?
A Columbia runs fiscal years June to June, and therefore would have to remind you that the years that you're asking me is June from one year to the other June of one year.
Q I appreciate that.
A And the fiscal year June to, June '99 to June 2000, we were doing well. And I think there were two months which we were profitable.
Q For the entire year, was the hospital profitable?
A Lost money for the entire year.
Q Do you remember about how much?
A I cannot remember accurately but it is a very low amount. Less losses, remarkable, markedly less losses.
Q How about Columbia's financial condition for 2001?
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection. Can you -- the counterclaim states that all relevant times to this action, the counterclaim, was filed. If you look at Page 32 on January 5, 2001.

BY MR. BADAMI:
MR. BADAMI: And the fiscal year would be June of 2000 to June of 2001?
MR. SCHULMAN: So you're asking about fiscal year 2000 now?
MR. BADAMI: I thought I was asking -- but the record will reflect, if I misspoke, I was trying to go year by year.
MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. And I'm asking how that is relevant to Paragraph 43 or Topic 3?
MR. BADAMI: I believe it's reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Are you directing him not to respond?
MR. SCHULMAN: How is it we -- I mean, I know the standards, Scott.
MR. BADAMI: Eli, are you directing him not to respond or not?
MR. SCHULMAN: I would like to know how it's relevant to the -- he, Dr. Rifka, can answer until January 5, 2001.

MR. BADAMI: And after that you're directing him not to respond?
MR. SCHULMAN: Yes.
MR. BADAMI: I don't believe that objection is well taken and we can take that up with the court, as well.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Okay. Dr. Rifka, your counsel has only permitted you to respond up until January of 2001. So I guess for that last 6-month period, can you describe the financial condition of Columbia, from I guess the beginning of the fiscal year until January of 2001, for me?
A From June until about August of 2000 we were doing well.
Q Were you profitable?
A We increased our admissions and there was one month that we were profitable. One month only. And it was by a miniscule amount, like 50,000 or so. And then from September 2000 onwards we had the severe drop of income and admissions and we started to hemorrhage quite a bit.

Q Do you recall how much Columbia started, your word was hemorrhage, do you remember about how much you would have lost during that time?
A On a monthly basis, hundreds of thousands of dollars.
Q Do you know if it's 100,000, 900,000?
A I cannot put a finger on exactly how much month, every month we hemorrhage but we hemorrhaged quite a bit.
Q And so the record is clear, you know, I want to ask about the rest of 2001 and 2002 up until the time the hospital closed.
If you want to object and instruct him not to answer, that's fine. But I want the record to be clear that I'm going to, I would like, I'm asking those questions.
MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. Can you just clarify for me, again, how they would be encompassed by the topics of the deposition?

MR. BADAMI: Sure. Well, this is one of the topics that was given to us, the Medical Center's financial situation throughout the time of the retro plan.
MR. SCHULMAN: Where does it say throughout the time of the retro plan, Scott?
MR. BADAMI: "Upon information and belief" --
MR. SCHULMAN: Yes.
MR. BADAMI: -- "at all times relevant to this action."
MR. SCHULMAN: Yes.
MR. BADAMI: And I believe this time frame, you know, encompasses relevant to this action. If you disagree, Eli, that's fine. It's not worth --
MR. SCHULMAN: No. Scott, I would like to understand, in good faith, your basis. And I'm willing --
MR. BADAMI: The financial condition of the hospital, in my estimation and in Dr. Rifka's testimony, has been losing millions and millions of dollars. I believe that that testimony for the rest of the time is relevant to this case. I think it's perfectly appropriate. Question is on the table.

MR. SCHULMAN: Can you explain to me how a paragraph that states that all times relevant to this action would be relevant beyond the time of the, the date of that filing of that paragraph?
MR. BADAMI: I'm not testifying, I don't believe that's appropriate right now. This is my deposition. If you wish to object and not, instruct him not to answer a question, that is certainly within your right.
MR. SCHULMAN: I'm happy to allow him to answer the question if I can understand what the good faith reading of that paragraph is that would make that a permissible subject for inquiry.
MR. BADAMI: I read it. I think it's clear that the financial condition of the hospital from the time of the retro plan until the hospital closed is relevant to what the court permitted this deposition to encompass. I just think it is.

MR. SCHULMAN: The court permitted, on this topic, the basis, the bases for the allegations regarding NCRIC's knowledge about Columbia's financial condition.
MR. BADAMI: And I'm trying to find out what Columbia's financial condition is so I can find out about NCRIC's knowledge of it.
MR. SCHULMAN: And how would NCRIC's knowledge post the time of the filing of the counterclaim be relevant to the action?
MR. BADAMI: Again, it's reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. I believe that up until the time of the hospital's closing is relevant to this action and I'm entitled to inquire as to it. That's all.
MR. SCHULMAN: Well, I'll let Dr. Rifka answer.
MR. BADAMI: For -- okay.
MR. SCHULMAN: Just to be clear, though, he can answer up until the time of the closing and not discuss any of the finances of the closing itself or post closing.

MR. BADAMI: Okay.
MR. SCHULMAN: We have gone before the court and the court has ruled that that's not a permissible topic for discovery.
MR. BADAMI: I haven't even gotten there yet. I'm still --
MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. I just wanted to be clear.
MR. BADAMI: I'm still at fiscal year 2001.
MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Doctor, can you respond to my question about the financial condition of Columbia for the fiscal year 2001?
A Okay. And let's be clear that we're talking about fiscal year, at that time June to June.
Q Correct.
A And just want to say that, that there was, the hospital went into bankruptcy. So that you would know the relevance of these times.

Q And went into bankruptcy in, I believe, 1998?

A 1998. And we went out, we reorganized in February of '99. As we reorganized, we had revitalized the hospital. Because the reorganization plan was based on decreasing expenses, becoming more efficient, expanding services and doing things in the right way.

Q Did that included selling assets, the reorganization plan?

A Yes. It include selling the professional building, too. And so when we exited we had the strategy that worked, where we have introduced new services to the hospital, we opened new suites for the hospital, we increased our prices.

We successfully negotiated contracts with insurance companies with an increase in 20 to 30 percent of reimbursement. We have cut down on a lot of overtime by structuring a good deal with the nursing union. We outsourced some services. We established plastic surgery unit. And we were on our road to recovery, and we were encouraged by that.

Because physicians stayed admitting to the hospital during the receivership of 1997 and during an entire year of bankruptcy. Hence, our expectancy was, if physicians were admitting patients to the hospital during receivership and during bankruptcy, that they are going to continue admitting patients to the hospital.

Point of fact, that we increased our admissions per day by a substantial percentage. So we had more people coming to the hospital, we had better insurance contract, we had less expenses, and we were sporadically making a little bit of money every month. And we were on our way to recovery. So the financial future of the hospital looked much brighter, that's after the bankruptcy, after 1999.

Now that you have asked about the financial condition. And during that time of improving finances we have structured a board of director, we call it the development board, the board that's going to go and solicit donations and do something to support the hospital financially. Which would be like the fundraising arm of the hospital.

And we were structuring concomitantly with that, HUD financing that will take the hospital out of segmental financing and expensive financing into long-term easy financing.

So between '99, I would say February of, or March of '99 when we exited, up till mid 2000, up till July and August of 2000, the hospital was doing very well and we were becoming cost effective and efficient. Losing less and sporadically making money in certain months.

And we were thinking of all of these good things to happen. A gala that will give money to the hospital, HUD financing, long-term financing, specific donations from the community. A development board, a lawyer medical staff, excellent clinical care that we deliver, which is the Hallmark of the place. That's why patients come to the hospital.

And we were priding ourselves, too, that we were the only hospital in town that does not only cater to a delivering woman, it caters to the whole woman. It has general surgery, it has medical, it has, that's internal medicine. Obesity surgery and breast surgery.

OB/GYN and the three subspecialties of the specialty; cancer, surgery and fertility and high-risk pregnancy. Things that our competitors do not have and do not possess. Plus, our experience of focusing on the woman and the children of the District for a hundred years and all the experience that we have in it. So we were moving forward.

Mrs. Clinton came and dedicated the nursery as Hillary Rodham Clinton's nursery. We had other dignitaries, Mrs. Lott and Mrs. Daschle opened a suite in their name, on the fourth floor, to treat patients.

We opened our clinic to treat free people to gain the goodwill of the community, we continue doing that even during the time when we didn't have a lot of money. We fund raised. So we were own our way to organize and recover and getting out of the bankruptcy.

But I want to stress the fact, too, that during all these upheavals, the medical staff of Columbia Hospital continued to admit patients to a hospital that is in receivership and to a hospital that is in bankruptcy. Hence, our expectancy of our medical staff was tremendous. And that was our basis for our recovery.

All this had came to a stop miraculously in September of 2000, when 30 to 40 percent of our physicians and maybe more, at least, gone somewhere else and started admitting patients somewhere else. And that is at the same time when the NCRIC contract fell through.

So I hope you understand the totality of the picture, of how the hospital was and what we were trying to do. All of this, we're trying to serve the community, actually. We're trying to serve people like you and me and like her, and in many cases people who have no money, to try to bring smiles on their face. And we were hit by a huge rock, and this rock called NCRIC insurance company.

Q I appreciate that response. You indicated the hospital was doing very well and you went through a number of other items. Is it true, though, Dr. Rifka, that during that time the hospital still lost money?

A That the hospital started losing less money and there were certain months that we were profitable, miniscule profitable. I remember one month was 50,000, the other month was 150,000.

So we were turning around, we were turning the corner and we were reaching where we wanted to reach, is to keep the hospital in good financial shape for this, and to keep delivering the best medical care that it does.

Q And it's the hospital's testimony through you today, that when the NCRIC plan was not renewed that that's what caused all the doctors to leave?

A Absolutely.

Q And again, have you talked to any of these doctors?

A I would have to say that some of them -- yes, of course I've talked to some of these doctors.

Q Who did you talk to?

A I had a meeting with the following group, the Horwitz Safran Group, structured two meetings in the CEO's office in the hospital.

Q And when did you have that meeting?

A Had that meeting before the plan expired, somewhere around June, July of 2000. And they forwarned us. And it was attended by Dickey Newman and Kenny Blank. And --

Q What did they say?

A Excuse me?

Q What did they say at that meeting?

A And they said blankly, You, if we don't, If you don't continue with NCRIC, we're going to leave.

Q Do you remember specifically who said that?

A This is the two persons. One of them said it or, and I think both said it.

Q Was anybody from NCRIC at that meeting?

A No, that was a meeting between us and the physicians.

Q I'm just asking if anybody from NCRIC was there?

A And I'm just answering, Mr. Badami.

Q Okay, that's fine.

A Yes.

Q Okay. You had a meeting with this, the Horwitz Safran Group?

A With a representative of the Horwitz Safran Group. It was Richard Newman and it was Kenny Blank. And we met in the CEO's office, Larry Wilson, and we were trying to make sure that, you know, they continued to admit patients. And they said point blank, If you don't renew, we're gone.

Q There was nobody from NCRIC? That was members of the Columbia attending faculty who told you that?

A At that specific --
Q In the meeting?
A That specific event?
Q That's correct.
A Correct.
Q There was nobody from, there was no --
A That is correct.
Q How about any other meetings with doctors?
A We had a personal conversation with Dr. Art Becker who told me that -- Q When was this meeting, I'm sorry?
A In the summer of 2000, it was an encounter in one of the operating room lounges. And he told me, Renew it or else all of us are going to go.
Q And all of us, who is he referring to?
A Maybe his group, because he has a group.
Q When you say renew, renew the retro plan?

A Renew with NCRIC, yes.
Q And was anybody from NCRIC there? I'm sorry, I don't mean to interrupt.
A No, sir.
Q It's just you're --
A Is your question, did I have a meeting with physicians only or with physicians and NCRIC, so that I will know how to answer you?
Q I'm asking if you had meetings with physicians. And I'm just trying to find out if anybody else was there?
A Okay. I'm answering now, meeting between me and physicians only.
Q Okay. Great.
A And then I will include the NCRIC encounters when you ask me for it. Okay?
Q All right. I appreciate that.
A Okay.
Q In addition to Dr. Becker, who else?
A Dr. Heather Johnson.
Q And when did you meet with Dr. Johnson?

A She told me personally in the hospital's corridor.
Q I'm sorry, when was that?
A In this, in that period of time.
Q So in the summer of 2000?
A Yes.
Q And you met her, or you saw her in the hospital corridor?
A I mean in the hospital, maybe in the corridor or around the corner. It was an encounter. And I was -- Q What did Dr. Johnson tell you?
A She said, If we don't renew with NCRIC, their group is going to go. And their group left. Then Dr. Norman Neches, he personally told me that. And Wayne Cooper.
Q I'm sorry, let's go back to Dr. Neches. When did you meet with him?
A Around that time. And he told me that he would love to stay at Columbia but if Columbia does not renew the NCRIC plan he's apt to go somewhere else. Wayne Cooper.

Q When did you meet with Dr. Cooper?
A Now, the meeting with Cooper was, again, in the hospital in a diffuse location. I can't tell you whether it's in the cafeteria or somewhere. But he told me that.
Q What did he tell you?
A Again, the same thing. All of this is the same story, Mr. Badami. You either renew with NCRIC or we're gone. And of course other meetings that happened within the context of the executive committee of the medical staff, general staff meetings. Where people were saying to the administration and to the board, physicians saying, if you don't renew with NCRIC, I might have to go.
Q You know I'm going to ask you to name all those physicians for me.
A This is -- I gave you examples of them.
Q I appreciate that. But --
A But there are a lot more, and I think that this is included in the statements and in the exhibits and in the briefs and in all of the

49b37162-b0b6-4492-8460-df74f0b3bcde
16d-002273

interrogatories about all the case. But I gave you examples, and I will probe my memory. As I remember, I will tell you.

Q I'm asking you to probe your memory to see if you've got any other names for me.

A As I am present now, this is what I remember. I will remember further. These are events that took out three years ago. But I can tell you that this was the numerous, it was the general atmosphere. It was the prevailing knowledge.

There was no hidden stories about it. There is no fact finding that you have to undergo to dig into look at it. It was all over. In meetings of the faculty, in meetings at the medical staff, in meetings of the executive committee. To the extent that the administration had to appoint an insurance committee a year, you know, some time to look at that specific thing. So this was on the forefront of all of the physicians.

And there, there are the physicians that have come up and said that. There are physicians who have pleaded to the president of the medical staff. There are physicians who went to the CEO and talked about it. And, so it was a common knowledge.

Q I just want to make sure I understand you. These are all members of the attending faculty at Columbia who are asking, or telling you to stay with NCRIC?

A Correct. Asking me.

Q In your role as, I guess you were president of the medical staff and chairman of the board?

A They were not, they were asking me, if we do not renew the retro plan and sign with NCRIC for another retro plan, that they are going to go to some other hospital.

Q I just --

A Because NCRIC has structured a similar plan with other hospitals.

Q I just want to make sure I understand you. That these physicians wanted to stay with

NCRIC?

A These physicians wanted to stay with Columbia and they were asking Columbia to try to structure a plan with NCRIC to get the discount.

Q I'm sorry. Dr. Rifka, I don't mean to quibble with you but when you told me about Dr. Becker, Dr. Johnson, Dr. Neches, it was, I thought you were saying these doctors wanted Columbia to renew with NCRIC?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, mischaracterizes the prior testimony.

THE WITNESS: These --

MR. SCHULMAN: Go ahead.

THE WITNESS: These physicians wanted to practice in Columbia Hospital for Women, as they have done for the last many years. Physicians do not practice with insurance company, Mr. Badami. Physicians practice in hospitals. And serve patients and serve the population and serve the oath that they took, which is not loyalty to the insurance company, which is loyalty to their patients.

Hence, physicians wanted to come to Columbia Hospital for Women because this is the best medical atmosphere that is offered to their patients. Physicians, too, wanted to look after the finances of the exorbitant MUDD (ph) practice fees.

And hence, they were pleading with us, saying try your best to reach a deal with NCRIC because I really want to practice in Columbia. And if NCRIC pulls out I would, probably would have to go wherever they steer me to and then I would have to stop practicing at Columbia.

And we took that so seriously that we negotiated in very good faith with NCRIC till the zero hour just to turn around and see that NCRIC was, while we were negotiating in good faith with them, they were trying every single means to put a dagger in our heart.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Who at NCRIC was trying to put a dagger in your heart, Dr. Rifka?

A The people who are in authority, who are the people who have authority from NCRIC.

Q Can you please give me their names?
A The NCRIC management who were looking after the relationship between the retro plan of Columbia and them.
Q I'm sorry, Dr. Rifka. Can you please give me the names of the NCRIC people who, in your words I believe the quote is, to try to put a dagger in your heart?
A The people who are --
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.
THE WITNESS: -- authorized on behalf of NCRIC to deal with us on the retro plan.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q But you don't remember anybody's name?
A I can suggest names for example but this does not mean this is all. There may be others behind the curtain.
Q I'm asking you for your --
A There is Mr. Pate. There is Mr. Fargis. There's Mr. Burgess. There's Mr. Osborne. There's Mr. Song. And there is

Dr. Trujillo.
Q And can you please explain to me how Mr. Pate --
A But these are only examples, more are there, as well. And this is only, the record will show you the entire names.
Q Can you please explain to me how Mr. Pate was, "trying to put a dagger in your heart?"
A I will start with 1997, siphoning a million dollars from the self-insurance trust, threatening us that if we don't renew and give them a million dollars they will not renew. And if they don't renew we lose our doctors and then we lose our patients.
I thought this is a million dollars that they took, which they demanded more actually. They took, which is, that was undue for them, uncalled for. This is when they came to us and they broke the news that they know about our financial condition. And we said, okay, so what do you know? And they said, you're not doing well and therefore we would need this amount of money to go forward with a plan.

The plan had expired, I think, in September of '97. And they came to us, like, November or December of '97, if I remember. Or something. And they said, we're not going to sign on unless you give us the money. And we said, but this is not due, the money under the plan.
Well, the money is really yours. We keep it on our books as your money, you will accrue interest on it. But we're going to keep it with us. At that time, we didn't have no choice. They left us no choice. You pay a million dollars or I will take half of your physicians to another hospital. At that stage we were not --
Q Who said that, Dr. Rifka, that if you don't renew I'll take half of your physicians to another hospital?
A Well, they say, if you don't renew, if -- no, they said --
Q I'm sorry, who said?
A It's my understanding -- this is our understanding. Their slide says that, in 1998. If you review the slide show that NCRIC authorized, printed, exhibited and explained, it says, If Columbia does not renew, we will offer you other hospitals with similar programs. This is an inducement to leave, as early as 1998.

And it's not only an inducement to leave, it's an inducement to kill. Because they told everybody, while we are in bankruptcy, that we are insolvent and the self-insurance trust is underfunded and that Columbia thinks it's going to increase its business and reorganize and get out of Chapter 11.
Let me tell you something, they don't sign with us, we will send your doctors to somebody, to another hospital that has similar programs. Hence, Columbia will not have the number of admissions. Hence, Columbia cannot reorganize. Hence, Columbia will convert from Chapter 12, 11 to Chapter 7. It was a nightmare for us.
So the tactics that they used was heavy-handed tactics, was uncalled for. It was a war that they waged against the reputation of the hospital and against the relationship, the medical relationship between the physicians and the hospital.

And they have thus deprived two things. They deprived the patients from being admitted to a wonderful place and they have really made us suffer as management and as an entity as Columbia Hospital for Women.

So in '97 they took from us, while we are in combat with the Bank of Tokyo about the letter of credit that was to be renewed, or not renewed. And there they were, saying we can't renew it because of your financial condition. Remember, Columbia went out from receivership in 1997.

We're trying to convince them that we are viable, we're a new management. We're fixing the place well, because we came to exist in April of 1997 as a new board. And suddenly they take a million dollars away from us. The Bank of Tokyo does not like that story at all. And hence, they became very aggressive with us. And that precipitated us going into Chapter 11.

And hence, as we were in Chapter 11 -- this did not even end like this. So we were in Chapter 11. They took the million dollars, an institution that doesn't have a lot of money, it has creditors. If it has some money and then it has one million less, it's not going to make it more attractive for your primary creditor. So we went into a Chapter 11.

While we were in Chapter 11, in 1998, NCRIC descended on us with even heavier hand. We tried to get an insurance company that does not put the hospital assets at risk and gives the physician a great insurance, cheaper. And from a better company, point of fact.

And what NCRIC did was heavy-handed tactics. It fought us on NCRIC, it floated allegations of cronyism. It propagated that our self-insurance trust is gone, while we are in bankruptcy. Threatened that if we don't renew the retro plan they will take our physicians somewhere else. And that Columbia board really has the money, they are not saying the truth.

And we were looking at these guys and saying, well, that's not -- that was all heavy-handed tactics. So what we had to do, we had to acquiesce to their demands. Because we were in Chapter 11 and we could not afford to lose patients. Nor can we afford to lose physicians.

Nor can we afford another reputation that our self-insurance is unsolvent. Nor can we afford a risk that the board has cronyism, so that the court will come and take over the hospital. We could not afford any of these unfair fights that they put us, in front of the table. So we had to backtrack and we had to renew.

But that was the first seed that they have planted and the first dagger that they have put in our backs. And then the bigger dagger came, the battle of the year 2000. This is where they continue the thing from '98 to 2000. In the year 2000, you ask me how did they try to kill us? In the year of 2000 --

Q I specifically asked you how Mr. Pate tried to kill?

A Well, Mr. Pate --

Q That was your word.

A -- is the president of the company. He is the, one of the big bosses there. And that's how he tried to kill us. The slide show, the misinformation to the physicians creating panic among physicians. Telling them that they are going to take them to another hospital, there are other programs there. You can leave Columbia.

Telling them the hospital is non-solvent, bankrupt. Going to go, it's in Chapter 11, might not make it. The self-insurance trust is bankrupt. Board is full of cronyism, they're trying to make a buck on you. All of this does not help the hospital at all. And we had to backtrack.

We, the board, while we have decided to go with NCRIC, with MIIX, I mean. I apologize. We then had to eat our words and go back with NCRIC, because we really could not afford what we were faced with. They are threatening on the slide, on their slide show, from their own doing with their own hands. I remember that slide, it put goose bumps on me.

The last line they say, Columbia, if Columbia does not do it, we have other programs and other hospitals can. How do you like that when you are in bankruptcy trying to increase your business, to reorganize? To have an insurance company come and tell your physicians to lure them out of your relationship? These are physicians who stayed with you for years and years.

So we backtracked. And we signed another agreement with NCRIC. Because we were under the gun in bankruptcy court, we didn't want to go to Chapter 7. We want to reorganize, we want to keep serving the community. And we wanted to keep the hospital open as a tradition of the hundreds of years. That's how they killed us. That's how they attempted to.

And then in the year 2000, so the million dollars which is our money, at the worst moment they took it away and they left smiling. Two, we never, it was promised to us, we never saw it. We never even saw the interest that they promised in '97, that this is due us. In '98 they floated, they fought us tooth and nail and floated all kinds of rumors against us, against the hospital. And in 2000 came the big event. And that's how they put the dagger into our back.

We were a hospital that is trying to make it with the help of the community and with the help of the doctors and with the help of the patients. And with the help of the benevolent people in this cosmopolitan area, the hospital was making it and turning the corner every week. From the year mid 1999 till the summer of 2000.

And suddenly you have all of this problems that happened to us, starting September 1st of 2000. And -- this is the story of a struggling hospital that was trying to deliver the best of care, fighting the Goliath, the big insurance company that put daggers in our backs and in our heart. That's how the institution feels, Mr. Badami.

Q I very much appreciate that response.

A If you want me to talk about the year 2000, I am ready to tell you the continuation of the, of the waging war from NCRIC against Columbia Hospital for Women.

Q We'll get there. Your response was extraordinarily long and --

A Forgive me, I am passionate about it because I am, I serve this hospital, which is a non-for-profit hospital out of my own time without any financial incentive other than incentive to serve the community. And evidently the passion of commitment outweighs the passion of finances. So go ahead.

Q Again, I had asked you specifically what Mr. Pate did, and I don't recall if you, in your response you specifically referred to actions that were taken by Mr. Pate.

And I was hoping that we could go, we -- you listed a number of NCRIC employees; Mr. Pate, Mr. Fargis, Mr. Burgess, Mr. Song. And I'm trying to find out --

A Nelson, Dr. Nelson Trujillo.

Q Yes, you mentioned that, too. I would like to ask you with respect to each of those individuals, what did they do? You can start with Mr. Pate.

A Mr. Pate -- I will start like you like it from 2000 backwards. Mr. Pate has vetoed every single agreement that comes between Mr. Larry Wilson and Mr. Osborne. We were negotiating in the year 2000.

Q When you say agreement, did he veto a signed agreement?

A They will talk and they will agree, both, on something. And he will, at the wee hour or the last hour drops the ball on us. Mr. Pate attended meetings in July 11 of 2000 inducing the faculty to leave the hospital.

Q Wait, wait, I'm sorry. You've got to -- I'm sorry.

A Okay. I go backwards.
Q On July 11th what happened, a meeting with Mr. Pate? How did he induce the faculty like that?
A I think we can see -- there was, again, a slide show. The beauty about NCRIC, they put slides and slides are not erasable. And one of the slides mention that Columbia Hospital, if Columbia does not do the retro plan other hospitals are there to do so. And they mention, too --
Q And was Mr. Pate at that meeting?
A Yes. And they mention, too --
Q Did he mention this?
A Yes.
Q Okay.
A And it was in one of the slides, if, too, was that they have to structure something with GW. One of the slides, too, saying a lot of things that will induce the faculty to leave Columbia Hospital for Women.
Q But this is the faculty that didn't have a contract with you?

A There is no contract between physicians and the hospital. But let me -- the contract is -- Q No, I'm sorry, you said there was no contract?
A There was no contract. But these are the same physicians, if I may continue? Or -- Q Please.
A -- you want me to -- can I continue, sir?
Q Please continue.
A Okay. These are the same faculty that stayed during the receivership. Was all over the Washington Post, Columbia Hospital for Women fights for receivership. And it was, we opposed the receivership.
We went to court and we won because the receivership was illegal by the previous board. And the court ordered a reconstitution of a new board, which I'm a part of as of April of '97. This -- during that receivership we had no defections from the faculty.

Q So in other words, the faculty chose to stay?
A Yes. During one year of bankruptcy, or whatever the clause over bankruptcy is, the attending faculty in Columbia stayed, admitting to Columbia Hospital for Women. Electively and selectively.
Q Correct.
A And then all of a sudden, September 1st 2000, the NCRIC retro plan is not renewed for another year. NCRIC switches the entity policy off of the clinic. And NCRIC --
Q Was NCRIC within its rights to do that?
MR. SCHULMAN: Did you finish your answer, Dr. Rifka?
THE WITNESS: No.
MR. SCHULMAN: Why don't you finish.
THE WITNESS: NCRIC all of a sudden, in September 1 of 2000, physicians, some physicians stopped admitting patients to the hospital, Columbia Hospital. And had started admitting patients to Sibley and GW. These admissions were preceded by a plan by NCRIC. The plan was the following.

In July of 2000, two months before the retro plan ends and in an unprecedented move, NCRIC bills physicians for the entire amount.
Q I'm sorry?
A Yes.
Q The entire amount of what?
A Of their premium.
Q For what time period?
A For, as of September 2000, for another year. Because they expire, their insurance expires, September 2000. In previous years, even when we did not reach a written agreement with NCRIC or a signed written agreement with NCRIC, while we were originally talking, we have not signed for year, or year and a half, and the plan and this continue, the retro plan continue.
For example, in '96, I think, for the year, September '97, this was renewed in '98. Two years. So every time it will expire, we're going to have the same agreement, so they bill the physicians for the discounted, less 30 percent of their premium.

In 2002, months before the expiration -- remember in the year '96, we have no signed agreement with them. We signed the '96 agreement, I think, in '97 or '98. A year or two years later, and the contract was in effect. So in July 2002, two months before the, before the year ends or the insurance expired, they bill the physicians for the total amount, the non-discounted, to induce panic to the physicians, say, Two months from now, there's not going to be a plan with Columbia, that's your total amount, you're due.

Q How do you know that was done to induce panic among the physicians?

A I know, because it induced it.

Q But how do you know that?

A But it induced it.

Q Who told you that?

A Because it's unprecedented. They never done that for the entire years of the plan, from '93 to 2000. NCRIC never billed before the expiration date and never billed for the total undiscounted amount for each individual physician.

Q Was NCRIC permitted to do that under the terms of the retro plan?

A I think it was -- was it permitted to do that?

Q Yes.

A I do not know whether it was permitted or not but it was definitely unprecedented, it never happened before. This was the first year that they billed the physicians for the entire amount two months before the expiration date. While we were in good faith negotiation with them to extend it.

Q Is it your --

A It's not like we broke off talks, we are talking. And similarly this has happened earlier and they waited a year, year and a half. Or two years in certain cases. Because they know that we are in good faith talks with them to renew it.

Unless this time they did not lead a good faith effort in renewing the deal with us and they knew ahead of schedule that there is not going to be a deal. It's time to switch the light off and call it off.

Q And who at NCRIC was not negotiating in good faith with you?

A All of them.

Q Ray Pate?

A Ray -- nobody was negotiating in good faith. Because we, Columbia, did not have an alternative plan, other, because we thought we were going to reach a deal with them. We're negotiating in good faith with them.

Q And did they --

A They, meanwhile, had an alternative plan, which they have executed two to three months before we, before it all expired in September 1st.

So while we were thinking we're going to reach a deal with them, going forward. And we had no alternative plan till the 24th hour, NCRIC had an alternative plan. Before that it did the following. Structured a retro plan with GW, across the street from us. GW did not have a plan before that, NCRIC structured it.

Q Did that somehow violate the terms of the Columbia retro plan?

A Can I continue, please? Because I want to give you the whole story and -- it doesn't violate Columbia Hospital and written agreement with them. It sure does violate the good effort that we were trying to reach a deal with them.

Because what they are telling me, I've already structured the deal with the competition. You do as I tell you or these physicians will go somewhere else. Yes, this is a muscling tactic.

To go across the street from you, and you being the premier place for women. To siphon physicians away from Columbia Hospital to another institution. Yes, that is not correct in my mind.

Second, they have billed the physicians for the total amount to create chaos. Either you're onboard now or we're not going to renew you. Now means right now you're going to go to NCRIC and tell them, I'm going to stay with you no matter what.

Q Did NCRIC violate the terms of the retro plan by sending those bills when they did?

A I think it, NCRIC violated the trust that we put in them. And we put the trust in them that we are in good faith earnest negotiation with NCRIC, to reach an agreement. And they violated our trust, they were, violated our confidence. And they looked like a one million ton gorilla, Godzilla who is beating on us.

Q But I want to make clear that you're not saying they violated the terms of the retro plan?

A Well, I will tell you how they violated the, later on what we learned about the retro plan, about the miscalculations. I'm going to come up with this in a minute.

Q Right.

A I haven't finished yet.

Q I would appreciate if you let me ask the questions, too. And so we can try to do this together.

A I apologize, Mr. Badami. It's your show, I agree.

Q That's okay.

MR. BADAMI: Can we take a short break?

MR. SCHULMAN: Sure.

(Thereupon, a brief recess was taken.)

MR. BADAMI: Back on the record.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Dr. Rifka, I would like to try to follow up on just a couple of the issues you raised in your previous responses. You mentioned the million dollars that, I understand it's your position, that NCRIC demanded from Columbia? Is that --

A Yes, sir. We were not giving money unduly.

Q Am I correct, sir, didn't Columbia challenge that with the D.C. insurance commission? The treatment of that payment?

A I do not know if --

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I cannot recall whether it did challenge with the insurance commission.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Do you think Columbia might have challenged that with the D.C. insurance commission?

A I think Columbia challenged the termination of the entity policy.

Q We'll get to that. Now I'm just referring to the million dollars.

A I am -- I do not, I do not recall actually.

Q Okay.

A Sitting here today, I cannot really recall.

Q All right. You mentioned the entity policy. Columbia, indeed, did challenge that to the D.C. insurance commission, didn't it?

A Yes.

Q And do you recall what the D.C. insurance commission found about the cancellation of the entity policy?

A I think that the D.C. commission's response was, and I would have to recall from my own memory now, is that they don't indulge in fact finding and therefore they cannot rule whether or not this should or should not happen.

Q So it's not Columbia's belief that the D.C. insurance commission found that it was acceptable, how the entity policy ended?

MR. SCHULMAN: I just want to object on two grounds. First, that the D.C. commission's findings speak for themselves. And second, that it's asked and answered. But go ahead, Doctor, if there's anything you feel you can add.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Do you have anything else to add to that? The D.C. insurance commission, didn't they find that the cancellation was, indeed, accomplished? It was acceptable, it was fine?

A I, what I remember is that they did not want to deal with it because they are not really indulging in fact findings. And therefore they wouldn't act, because they need to do fact finding and it's not a fact finding commission or something.

Q But the D.C. insurance commission didn't find that NCRIC did anything wrong? Let me try it that way.

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.

THE WITNESS: I am not sure that this was addressed in the letter.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Okay. You mentioned in your response that NCRIC's Ray Pate violated some agreements. I'm trying to find out from you which agreements. I believe you were referring to it, in the summer of 2000?

A Oh, what I was referring to is that Mr. Wilson was negotiating in good faith.

Q For purposes of the record, that's Columbia's Larry Wilson?

A Yes, sir.

Q Okay.

A Sorry. Mr. Larry Wilson, the CEO of Columbia Hospital, was negotiating with Mr. Osborne from NCRIC insurance company. And what I've learned from Mr. Wilson, that Mr. Osborne was forthcoming and was trying to reach an agreement with Larry Wilson. And they reached an agreement.

Q Do you know if it was -- an agreement as to what?

A An agreement to extend the retro plan or to structure something going forward. And --

Q Was it a signed agreement?

A Mr. Badami, I will get you to the point. And then when Mr. Osborne floated it by his boss, Mr. Pate, Mr. Pate flatly rejected the agreement that has been reached by Mr. Osborne and Mr. Wilson.

I may add, though, I was having reports from

Mr. Wilson, in August of 2000, that we were near a breaking point of reaching an agreement. And that, in two occasions that we have reached an agreement, meaning Larry Wilson and Mr. Osborne. And Mr. Wilson was reaching this agreement with my authority as chairman of the board.

And then when it is floated by, when Mr. Osborne took it to his boss, Mr. Pate, Mr. Pate would shoot it down. And that scenario continued until the 24th hour.

Larry Wilson will agree with Mr. Osborne, Mr. Osborne will agree with Larry. Larry will, and Osborne will ask that, Osborne will take it to Ray Pate and Ray Pate, and maybe other superiors there at NCRIC, would shoot it down and bring it back to the table. Or will make the demands impossible.

Q I don't mean to quibble with you but when you say Mr. Wilson and Mr. Osborne reached an agreement?

A Yes.

Q Is it Columbia's position that Mr.

Osborne, at that time, agreed to a renewal of the retro plan and had the authority to do that?

A Mr. Osborne was the negotiator on behalf of NCRIC. That's what NCRIC sent us, a representative to negotiate with. We did not invent Mr. Osborne. Mr. Osborne was sent as a NCRIC negotiator. And he and Mr. Wilson have reached an agreement.

Q Was it ever signed?

A The agreement will not be signed unless NCRIC will approve it, the higher authority, the president of NCRIC.

Q Okay. So it wasn't approved by the higher authority of NCRIC?

A That's what I'm trying to say. It was approved by the negotiator from NCRIC, who is on, from NCRIC's behalf, who is an employee of NCRIC. But then when this taken to his boss, Mr.Pate, it will be shot down and turned down. And we will start from square one, negotiating again.

Q Is it Columbia's position that Mr. Osborne could bind NCRIC, was the final decision maker? You used the word agreement. And I'm just trying to find out exactly what you're referring to with an agreement. I mean, did they shake on it? I'm just hoping you can help me.

A Okay. Well, the agreement --

MR. SCHULMAN: I want to object to the question to the extent that it calls for a legal conclusion. Also, the extent that it's compound.

MR. BADAMI: It may be compound, but I'm using the words that he's using.

MR. SCHULMAN: You asked him whether or not it's Columbia's position that Osborne could bind NCRIC. And that is a legal conclusion.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Is it Columbia's position that Mr. Osborne had the final decision making authority for NCRIC?

A We thought so, because we were, our president was negotiating, who has the authority. We thought he was negotiating with somebody who had the authority.

Q Did Mr. Osborne ever tell Columbia that he had the final decision making authority for NCRIC?

A We have reached an understanding with NCRIC.

Q With Mr. Osborne or with something that had been approved by Mr. Pate for NCRIC?

A With Mr. Pate. I think Larry Wilson have had, has been led to Mr. Osborne by the higher authority in NCRIC. And I am surmising it is Ray Pate the president of NCRIC.

Somebody led our president to Osborne. I didn't lead our president to Osborne. I presented our president, with the authority, to sign an agreement with NCRIC that is advantageous to both sides.

My president has the full authority that if he approves, to go forward. He was negotiating with Mr. Osborne who was delegated from NCRIC, who we thought had the authority to make a deal.

Q Who told you that? Did anybody tell you that?

A My president was negotiating with the authority in NCRIC, he was not negotiating with the busboy in NCRIC. And I would never commit the time, the precious time of our president to negotiate with second- or third- or fourth- or fifth-year level.

My understanding is when a president of an organization sits and negotiates, he negotiates with people with authority. I've never seen any president negotiating with a busboy. Hence, I would assume, and it has been made clear to us, that you and Mr. Osborne, Larry Wilson and Mr. Osborne, will sit down, hammer an agreement which both sides will agree to.

They hammered an agreement and the agreement was shot down by Ray Pate. And it was rejected. And this was late in August. So we did not have time, Columbia Hospital for Women, we did not have an alternative plan. We were negotiating in good faith. We did not have a deal structured with anybody. We were negotiating in good faith. And we were led to believe that there will be an agreement.

Q Who led you to believe that?

A The negotiators from NCRIC and the NCRIC authorities, whoever the authorities are, is that we were led to believe that we are going forward with an agreement. That it will be solved. We have heard this before and we solved them. And this time it will be solved.

And leading us to believe that was leading us to sleep on an easy pillow. While they are sweet talking to us they are weaving something totally different to us from behind.

Q Okay. Let's just be perfectly clear here. Was there ever a signed agreement between NCRIC and Columbia with respect to renewing the retro plan, after September of 2000?

A There were letters --

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.

THE WITNESS: There were letters, communiques, numerous meeting that led to an agreement. That when it was presented to the leadership of NCRIC, apparently Mr. Pate, that was turned down.

49b37162-b0b6-4492-8460-df74f0b3bcde
16d-002282

Q So you have no signed final agreement?
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered multiple times.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Do you have a signed agreement?
A We do not have a signed agreement.
Q Let me try it this way. Does Columbia take the position that the retro plan was renewed following September of 2000?
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.
THE WITNESS: Columbia Hospital takes the position that the plan is still going on. Because the plan will, only goes off when the year or the claims pertinent to an experienced period is closed.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q I'm sorry. I was imprecise, Dr. Rifka. Does Columbia take the position that the plan for new claims was continued following September of 2000?

A No.
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered.
MR. BADAMI: No, counsel, I don't believe that question has been asked.
THE WITNESS: If – are you asking me, does Columbia believe that we have a renewed retro plan after August 31st or September 1st of 2000?
MR. BADAMI: Yes, sir, I am.
THE WITNESS: Definitely not, as witnessed by the physicians that left.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Okay. Thank you. Did Mr. Pate, you said he violated agreements. Are there any other agreements which Columbia alleges Mr. Pate violated?
A Mr. Pate has structured, I would have to say and you have to give me time for that, to tell you about the year 2000. Because that is what I haven't talked about.
First, NCRIC had a meeting for the attending faculty on July 11 of 2000.

Q And who was at that meeting?
A Attending faculties and Mr. Pate. And other leaderships from NCRIC, too.
Q Do you know anybody else other than Mr. Pate? You know I'm going to ask their names.
A I think it's the usual crowd. You can -- but I recall that, from reading the letters.
Q I'm sorry, the usual crowd?
A That NCRIC presents, maybe. I don't know.
Q Are you talking about Mr. Pate, Mr. Fargis, Mr. Burgess?
A You said that.
Q No, I'm trying to ask you, sir. I'm really trying to ask you.
MR. SCHULMAN: Answer to the best of your knowledge.
THE WITNESS: I, to the best of my knowledge, I only would think that Mr. Pate was there. Because I was not at that meeting.

MR. BADAMI: Okay.
THE WITNESS: I read about that meeting. And I saw the slides that were projected at that meeting. And the slides is very injurious to Columbia Hospital. One --
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q I asked you what agreement Mr. Pate was violating. Do these slides violate some agreement with Columbia?
A The trust and the relationship and the so-called partnership that they have floated with us all these years.
Q Is the partnership in the retro plan? Is that what you're referring to as the partnership?
A The partnership is more than the retro plan, Mr. Badami. NCRIC used to be doctor owned companies. So --
Q I'm trying to find out. You said he violated --
A Now it's a Wall Street company. I think that the relationship has ended when they transitioned from health street to Wall Street.

Q I appreciate that and that's a nonresponsive answer. I'm trying to find out --
A Yes, sir.
Q -- from you, which agreements Mr. Pate violated? You started to talk about a meeting with some more slides. And I'm trying to find out what agreement that violated, that Mr. Pate did with respect to those slides?
A Because Mr. Pate was assuring us and our leadership that we're going to have an agreement. And Mr. Pate was -- Q What did he say?
A And then he was structuring a meeting in June, in July 11, 2000, telling our physicians they can go somewhere else if there is no plan. And actually even worse, that NCRIC has consulted lawyers in case Columbia goes in bankruptcy. Now, who said we're going to go to bankruptcy.
He has gathered our physicians and used this as a podium to inform them that NCRIC has already consulted lawyers in case Columbia goes into Chapter 11.

Q I'm sorry?
A But Columbia was doing great at that time. He violate --
Q What agreement? All right. I thought you testified earlier that physicians had the, the attending faculty at Columbia had the ability to go somewhere else if the doctor choses to do so?
A And they haven't.
Q I'm sorry, Dr. Rifka.
A No. And they haven't.
Q Dr. Rifka.
A It's very important.
Q I'm sorry.
A And they haven't till September 1, 2000.
Q Dr. Rifka, I'm sorry.
A They had the ability --
Q You said they could. I'm asking you, what agreement Mr. Pate violated by saying physicians can go somewhere else?

A He violated the agreement.
MR. SCHULMAN: I just want to renew the same objection to this line of questioning.
THE WITNESS: He violated our trust. He was negotiating with us to have a plan with him, yet he was putting all the setup for our physicians to leave us. He has violated all kinds of agreements.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q I'm sorry. What agreements has he violated?
A The agreement that we are going to have a deal together.
Q Did you have, was that written down, that you were going to have an agreement? That you were going to have another deal?
A No. But he, this is what he said.
Q Did you shake hands?
A He didn't want me to shake hands. He said it.
Q Dr. Rifka, you're testifying that Mr. Pate violated agreements. I'm only aware of the retro plan. I'm trying to find out if there's another agreement that he violated. You have talked about trust. With all due respect, you and I may trust each other but -- is there a written trust agreement between Columbia and NCRIC?

A But there is an agreement between us and them to go forward. And if they gather my physicians, our physicians, and tell them that they've consulted lawyers in case we go to Chapter 11.
Q What agreement does that violate?
A Just as interference, bad PR. Somebody is gathering your physicians and telling them you're going to go to Chapter 11 while you're riding high. What agreement did you violate?
Q What agreement did he violate?
A He violated all kinds of agreement, the trade agreement. The handshake --
Q I'm sorry, the trade agreement?
A Trades agreement, agreement. He is a responsible company who is waging war against a healthy institution.

Q Dr. Rifka, you've testified Columbia had lost money every year since 1994?
A And I testified that Columbia, from 1999 to 2000, was doing fantastic. Was turning the corner. You don't want to listen to that because that doesn't suit you.
Q Oh, Dr. Rifka --
A Let me reiterate that.
Q Dr. Rifka, with all due respect, you testified every year Columbia lost money. I believe you testified, after you emerged from bankruptcy there might have been a month or two where you showed a little bit of profit.
A And we have consistently lost less. And we were on our way to recovery and we were doing much better, up till we were hit by this big rock called the NCRIC problem.
And I have testified, too, and enumerated from 1999 when we emerged from bankruptcy, what steps did we took in a concrete way. And I have enumerated them. What did we do to turn the corner and to become more cost effective. And how to raise money and how to get long-term loan. And how to increase our admission and how to expand our services.

Q And I'm trying to find out --
A And how to --
Q -- what Mr. Pate violated.
A Mr. Pate floated --
MR. SCHULMAN: I want to --
THE WITNESS: -- all kinds of rumors --
MR. SCHULMAN: I want to object.
THE WITNESS: -- about the hospital.
MR. SCHULMAN: Dr. Rifka.
THE WITNESS: Yes.
MR. SCHULMAN: I want to object. I think it's clear from the line of questioning that the objection as to calling for legal conclusions is quite well taken here. Because the lay witness is obviously having difficulty answering the question with respect to agreements. If we could take a quick break I think maybe we could clear this up.

THE WITNESS: Can I add one sentence, though?
MR. SCHULMAN: Let's take a break first.
THE WITNESS: Sure.
MR. SCHULMAN: And then I think we could short circuit a lot of the issues here if we just --
MR. BADAMI: Before we take a break, let me just put on the record that I'm using his words these are not my words. I just want to make that clear.
THE WITNESS: Violated, I will tell you how they violate the agreements.
MR. SCHULMAN: Dr. Rifka, we're going to take a break now. We're off the record.
THE WITNESS: When I come back.
(Thereupon, a brief recess was taken.)
MR. SCHULMAN: I think Dr. Rifka would like to clarify the matter at hand.
MR. BADAMI: Okay. Great. Please, Dr. Rifka, go ahead.

THE WITNESS: Of course I am not a lawyer so I will address the breach of good faith and trust that we have in them. But on the agreement, on the retro plan agreement, Columbia maintains the position that they have breached the contract of the retro plan by doing miscalculation on the deposit premium, the minimum premium.
MR. BADAMI: I appreciate that, but you know that wasn't the question that we were talking about before the break.
MR. SCHULMAN: Why don't you address whether there's another agreement besides the retro plan at issue here?
MR. BADAMI: Right.
MR. SCHULMAN: Or what's at issue?
MR. BADAMI: I understand.
MR. SCHULMAN: You alluded to it now in terms of good faith and trust. But why don't you address that straight out in terms of whether or not that's --
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q The question is, agreements that

Mr. Pate has violated? And I was trying to ask you, what specific agreements? Do you have anything signed? And then we took a break and now we're back.

A Okay. That the agreements, the signed agreement that we have with them on the retro plan, Columbia maintains the position that there has been violations and breach of contract on that one. The million dollars that they took in '97 was not called for in that plan.

Q Again, I appreciate that. I'm trying to find in addition to the retro plan. You mentioned other agreements that Mr. Pate violated.

A Yes.

Q And I'm trying to find out what they are. Other than the retro plan.

A The agreement of trust, the good faith and the trust. There is a breach of trust and good faith between us.

Q Okay. But it's a breach of trust?

A And the oral agreement that happens in 1996, too.

Q Okay. All right. Tell me about the oral agreement in 1996.

A That there was an oral agreement with NCRIC that money would not change hands till the closure.

MR. BADAMI: Go off the record.

(Thereupon, a brief recess was taken.)

MR. BADAMI: Let's go back on.

THE WITNESS: So there was an oral agreement that money will not change hands unless a specific year has closed. And based on that, we think there has been a violation of that agreement when they came and descended and they asked for the million dollars. That was a violation of the agreement.

Billing us for money is a violation of the oral agreement, because as far as we know, only two years have closed and they don't, we don't owe them. I think they owe us.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Okay. So we have the retro plan and we have this oral agreement?

A The oral agreement.

Q Are there any other agreements?

A The trust that we had in them and the good faith that we had in them.

Q Is the trust written down anywhere?

A The trust was not written down.

Q Was the good faith written down anywhere?

A It was not, it was expected.

Q Okay, that's fine. You mentioned that, I thought, in your answer previously, that, and I don't want to put words into your mouth, that by NCRIC negotiating with another hospital to come up with another plan, violated something with respect to Columbia? Is that accurate?

MR. SCHULMAN: Object to the extent that it mischaracterizes his prior testimony.

MR. BADAMI: I'm not intending to, as you know. I'm purely trying to follow up.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q You mentioned a plan at GW that NCRIC was trying to negotiate?

A NCRIC started a plan with GW at the time that our plan was switched off with them.

Q Was there any agreement between NCRIC and Columbia that NCRIC couldn't try to negotiate a plan with another hospital?

A No.

Q Okay. After the retro plan was not renewed in September of 2000, did Columbia find another insurance carrier or another plan to take over?

A Columbia found a group rate rather than a retro plan.

Q Okay.

A Through a brokerage firm that arranged for it.

Q Can I ask you, Dr. Rifka, if it is Columbia's intention -- excuse me -- Columbia's contention that NCRIC prevented the hospital from performing any obligation under the terms of the retro plan, that the hospital was supposed to do?

A Can you ask me this question again?
Q Sure.
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, vague and ambiguous. Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: Can you specify?
MR. BADAMI: Sure.
MR. SCHULMAN: Maybe explain what you mean by prevent.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Pursuant to the terms of the order that permits this deposition, I am trying to determine if it is Columbia's contention that somehow NCRIC prevented Columbia from doing anything that the hospital was supposed to do under the retro plan? Is it NCRIC's fault something didn't get done by Columbia that should have been done by Columbia?
A Can you elaborate or be specific? I'm sorry, I don't mean to be --
Q Sure. No, I --
A I just went to comprehend it, Mr. Badami.
Q Under the terms of the retro plan?

A Yes.
Q NCRIC was supposed to do certain things and Columbia was supposed to do certain things? Is that accurate?
A Yes.
Q I am trying to ask you, is it Columbia's view that with respect to the items that Columbia was supposed to do under the terms of the plan, somehow NCRIC prevented Columbia from doing anything that it was supposed to do under the terms of the retro plan?
A That Columbia was supposed to do under the retro plan?
Q Yes, sir.
A Sitting here today, I cannot recall of anything that Columbia was supposed to do that it did not do.
Q Do you know if there was a previous time when you thought of this, that you can remember there was something? I mean, I don't mean to quibble with you. But when you say sitting here today, I'm trying to find out if there was another time when you thought that there might have been something along those lines?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.
THE WITNESS: I think that's all what I can say at the present time on that issue.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Okay. So far as you know, sitting here today, it is not Columbia's position that NCRIC prevented the hospital from doing any of the tasks that were assigned to it under the terms of the retro plan?
MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, asked and answered. And mischaracterizes his prior testimony.
MR. BADAMI: Well, the record will speak for itself. I'm just trying to confirm his response.
MR. SCHULMAN: He's answered the question to the best of his ability.
THE WITNESS: Sitting here today, this is what I recall.
BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Okay. Dr. Rifka, does Columbia contend that NCRIC somehow excused Columbia from performing any obligation that the hospital had under the terms of the retro plan?
A What do you mean by that?
Q Sure.
A I'm sorry.
Q That's fine. Again, under the terms of the retro plan, NCRIC was supposed to do a number of things and Columbia was supposed to do a number of things. With respect to Columbia's tasks, is it Columbia's position that somehow NCRIC excused Columbia and said, no, Columbia you don't really have to do that even though the document says you do?
A Other than the oral agreement which said that no money will change hands, I do not recall any.
Q Okay. And that's the oral agreement you testified about previously?
A Yes.
Q Which, and I don't want to mischaracterize it. But the one we talked about two or three minutes ago?

A I think the 1996 oral agreement, Mr. Badami.

Q Correct. Any other oral agreements with respect to the retro plan? Anything else that was excused, in Columbia's position?

A Sitting here today, that's all what I can recall.

Q Okay. Does Columbia contend that NCRIC waived any of Columbia's duties under the retro plan?

A I do not think anything has been waived by NCRIC of Columbia's duty, from what I can recall sitting here today.

Q Okay. I would like to just show you another exhibit. Dr. Rifka, I'm asking the court reporter to mark this as, I believe it's Rifka C. You'll note that it says, Rifka 3, which means that it was used at a previous deposition in which you sat through.

(Rifka Exhibit C was marked for identification.)

MR. SCHULMAN: Thank you.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Dr. Rifka?

A Yes, sir.

Q I've just handed you what has been marked as Rifka Exhibit C. And I would ask you, sir, if you recognize this document?

A I don't recall.

Q Do you recognize this document as the original retro plan between Columbia and NCRIC?

A I have never read the plan personally, the plan has been explained.

Q Will you accept my representation that it is the original retro plan between Columbia and NCRIC?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection.

MR. BADAMI: Objection on what grounds? This is a 30(b)(6) witness to talk about the retro plan. If he's never seen it and if you're objecting to me asking about it, we have to go back to the judge. Eli, come on.

MR. SCHULMAN: Scott, first, he doesn't have to accept your representations. And second, if it's fairly called for, for him to testify about a specific language or something like that from the retro plan, I would appreciate you directing me to what calls for that.

MR. BADAMI: Specifically Number 4 in the items that were permitted by the court for this deposition to continue. It talks about performances under the retro plan, prevented, excused or waived by NCRIC. I want a -- he's -- I've -- he's given me his opinion with respect to those three terms.

MR. SCHULMAN: Yes, he's answered them.

MR. BADAMI: And I want to follow up. He said to the best of his ability sitting here today.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay.

MR. BADAMI: And I think I'm entitled to follow up.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. You know, he'll answer to the best of his ability. I think he's already answered all of the questions, you know, all of the questions that you have asked him on this topic, fairly. Go ahead.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Dr. Rifka, I would like to refer you to Paragraph 8 on Page 2. The Bates Number, this is a document that was produced to us from Columbia, CHW MC 000037. Do you see Paragraph 8?

A Yes, I do, sir.

Q Do you see the paragraph that says, "Medical Center hereby represents and warrants that it has made, and will continue to make, adequate provision for the contingent liabilities it has assumed hereunder."

A Yes.

Q Did I read that correctly?

A You did.

Q At the time this agreement was entered into, do you know the adequate provision for continued liabilities that Columbia hereby represented and warranted that it had made?

MR. SCHULMAN: I want to object to the question.

THE WITNESS: Assuming this is the retro plan, I would think that Columbia would have made it through variable means.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Can you tell me what those variable means are?
A I think by either purchasing insurance coverage or by the self-insurance trust. Or by having the assets of the organization to protect its liabilities.
Q You mentioned the self-insurance trust. Throughout the term of the retro plan, did Columbia have a self-insurance trust the whole time?
A Yes.
Q To your knowledge, in addition to the trust fund, was there another account or, you know, another insurance policy or something?
A There was another insurance policy that Columbia purchases from Lloyds of London, I think, for the umbrella organization, for the umbrella of the organization. And the assets of the organization, the land and the building, will be, as well, part of what Paragraph 8 is alluding to.

Q Do you know the status, and status, I mean the amount that was in the Columbia self-insurance trust fund throughout the time that the retro plan was in effect?
A It is variable because it depends how much you have to pay from the self-insurance trust. So it's not a static thing.
Q I recognize that and I guess I, maybe I was imprecise. I'm tired. I apologize for that. For example, on January 1 of 1994, do you know how much money was in the self-insurance trust fund?
A I think it was anywhere from 10 to 15 million.
Q Can you be any more specific or is that --
A I actually should make it between 5 to 15 million. I do not know the exact number.

Q How about January of '95?
A Probably is the same thing.
Q January of '96?
A Probably is the same thing, between 5 to 15, I would think.
Q January of '97?
A Minus a million dollars that NCRIC took. And then we went into Chapter 11 where we are prevented from putting any money into the self-insurance trust.
Q So to your --
A Because by bankruptcy court you cannot, the bankruptcy estate will prevent you from doing that.
Q Do I understand your testimony, then, to be that prior to when Columbia filed for bankruptcy you had somewhere between 4 and 14 million in the self-insurance trust fund?
A Prior -- we -- okay, how long prior? Prior could be from 1997 to -- Q I was trying to --
A -- to 1886.

Q I was trying to use the January.
A Yes.
Q And you went, I believe it was in February or March of 1998, when you went into bankruptcy?
A Yes, sir.
Q So I guess January 1 of 1988? 1998, I apologize.
A January 1 of 1998. I think there was something like 4 to $3 million, between 3 --
Q I'm sorry?
A Between 3 to $5 million.
Q Between three to five?
A This is my thinking.
Q So --
A And this is a thinking, it is not an accurate number. I'm scratching my memory. And I am sure it will be found in the numerous records that, that you have and we have and we filed.
Q So is it your testimony, you believe that Columbia has provided the documents which prove, or which demonstrate the amount of money that was in the self-insurance trust fund?

A I think that NCRIC will probably have that documentation.
Q Do you know if that was produced to us in this lawsuit?
A I know that NCRIC has it, so you have to ask NCRIC. They will produce it to you.
Q How do you know NCRIC has it?
A Because they came and told me in 1997 that --
Q They told you they knew how much was in the self-insurance trust fund?
A They told me that, our financial position and that there is, the self-insurance trust is running low. And therefore they would need to take a million dollars from our money to put it on our, it will be on our books, we will accrue interest. It will be with them, just kind of an insurance there.
Q Your testimony a few minutes ago was that in January of '97, that the self-insurance trust fund, I believe, had somewhere between 5 and $15 million in it?

A Between, I said between 3 to $5 million.
Q Oh, okay. Three to five million?
A In January. Three to five million. And I think when they came to talk to us, or to the administration of Columbia, they came about a year later, November, December of '97.
Q Okay.
A So 10 months thereafter they came and they told us that the self-insurance trust is running low.
Q Was that accurate?
A I don't know if it was. I think it was accurate. It was -- we had not put any, added any money to it. The last time they added, we added money to it was, I would think, in '96. And then of course during receivership you cannot add money to it. And so in -- Q In '99 when you --
A Hold on.

Q I'm sorry.
A In December or November of '97 they came and told us that the self-insurance trust is low, our financial position is not good. And as they would have, they presented us a 1.7 million dollar, if I remember, bill, to pay now or else they are not going to renew the retro plan going forward. And that was in November of 1997.
Q When the NCRIC representatives --
A Yes.
Q -- told you the self-insurance trust funds was low?
A Yes.
Q Did you agree with them, was the NCRIC representative correct?
A Correct, it was low.
Q How much was in it then?
A I do not recall. But I think it was about maybe 3 million, 2 to $3 million. It was low.
Q When you, when Columbia emerged from bankruptcy, what was the state of the self-insurance trust fund?

A Minus a million dollars that we paid to NCRIC. Because during bankruptcy you cannot put money in the self-insurance trust.
Q I appreciate that, Dr. Rifka. But when you emerged from bankruptcy, what was the status of the self-insurance trust fund?
A I think was, it was what we entered minus a million dollars, which is the cost of, that we had to pay to NCRIC to keep the money for us on our books, with interest rate. That is the million dollars.
Q If you don't know the number, just please say you don't know the number.
A It was low, and it has to be less than three million.
Q How about January of 2000, what was the status of the self-insurance trust fund?
A January of 2000, we did not add any money because we were still under court protection till June, I think, of 2000, when we got the piece of paper. I would have to say either June of 2000 or June of '99, from the bankruptcy court saying we are out of their jurisdiction.

So up till then we did not think we had the free hand. And we were paying for all the claims from the cash flow and were deferring some of the payment by staggering them.

Q So --

A It was low.

Q Low, is it close to zero?

A I think it reach at certain times, in few $100,000.

Q And do you know when those certain times were?

A I think somewhere in the year 2000.

Q Do you know -- in the year 2000, did Columbia ever put any additional monies into the self-insurance trust fund?

A No, because up till June of 2000, if I recall, we exited, we had a court documents. Because they had to circulate, wait for 60 days and 90 days, a hundred days. Then June 2000, we got something stamped that you are out of the jurisdiction of bankruptcy court. So prior to that, even if we had it, we wouldn't put in it.

Q Following whatever term, and you believe it ended in June of 2000, did Columbia replenish the self-insurance trust fund?

A No, no. We decided that, to pay for any expenses from the cash flow.

Q From the time of June of 2000, up until the hospital closed, did Columbia put any money in the self-insurance trust fund?

A No.

Q Can I ask you to turn to Paragraph 17 on Exhibit C, please, which is on Page 5? Again, the same document that was produced by Columbia, CHW MC 000040. And ask you to take a look at Paragraph 17?

And I'll read it for the record. "Medical Center", that's Columbia, "hereby warrants and represents that it has made, and agrees to provide NCRIC with its auditor's or actuary's annual statement reflecting, adequate provision for the contingent liabilities it has assumed hereunder."

Did I read that paragraph correctly, Dr. Rifka?

A You did.

Q Do you know if Columbia provided NCRIC with its auditor's or actuary's annual statements reflecting adequate provision for the contingent liabilities that Columbia had assumed pursuant to the terms of the retro plan?

A Sitting here today, I think that NCRIC knew exactly about the self-insurance trust and about our financial position. Whether through audited financial statements, when we had it, or whether from financial statements that were sent, or shown to NCRIC representatives.

Q I appreciate that.

A At certain time, we could not have audited financial statements. Because when you are in bankruptcy, you can't have them. You growing concern stops. So as you know, there are certain times when it wasn't there. But when it was there, it was furnished. And other financial statements, they were, they knew about.

Q That is really the focus of my question.

A Yes.

Q Is it your testimony that Columbia provided the annual statements of its auditors and actuaries whenever they were available, to NCRIC, pursuant to the terms of the retro plan?

MR. SCHULMAN: Objection, mischaracterizes the document.

THE WITNESS: As I stand here today, I recall that NCRIC knows about the self-insurance trust and about actuary statements, and knows about the financial condition of the hospital.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q How do you know that? How did the board know about that?

A They told me.

Q Who told you?

A In 1997, Mr. Badami, there was a famous meeting.

Q I just want to make sure that -- if you're referring to that same meeting, I'm just trying to make sure I understand all the facts.

A Yes. So from 1997, at least, onwards, to my own ears, they have said that they know about our financial position. And --
Q Do you know if that included whether or not NCRIC had been provided your auditor's or actuary's annual statements?
A To my knowledge, sitting here today, NCRIC knows everything about the hospital's financial position. The hospital has told NCRIC about its financial position. Financial position of the hospital was public, was in the courts. They attended the court's proceeding. They know everything. There is nothing that they don't know.
They were in court. And, the bankruptcy court at certain times. And they heard everything that pertains to the hospital. So there is no way like a sophisticated company as they are, with the attendance of the bankruptcy court proceedings, that they did. And with the meetings that we had with them, that NCRIC did not have any knowledge. They sure did. And they did.

Q Is it your position that Columbia complied with Paragraph 17 of the retro plan?
A It is my position that Columbia have provided NCRIC with all the financial numbers that NCRIC asked. We have shared with NCRIC --
Q I'm sorry, Dr. Rifka. I didn't ask that question.
A Well, I'm answering --
MR. SCHULMAN: Did you finish your answer?
THE WITNESS: I haven't finished.
MR. SCHULMAN: Please finish.
THE WITNESS: Okay. And that we have provided NCRIC with all of the information about our trust, self-insurance trust. And we have provided NCRIC about the financial position of the hospital. Moreover, NCRIC has attended the bankruptcy court proceedings.
And I think that they were fully informed and fully engaged in the attendance of the bankruptcy court. So they are fully aware and fully informed.

BY MR. BADAMI:
Q Did you know if those documents were produced in this litigation?
A I do not know what you as lawyers got hold of documents. NCRIC knows them and has them. And I'm sure they will share them with you.
Q All right. Let me ask you, Dr. Rifka. Are there any facts related to the retro plan that the hospital claims NCRIC concealed from Columbia?
A Yes.
Q What are those?
A One, is that NCRIC is supposed to -- I will start with the major things. There was a miscalculation on the deposit premium, the minimum premium and the development factors. That we made NCRIC aware of in the early 2000s, when our insurance consultants caught the problem.
Q And NCRIC concealed those from you?

A Concealed that from us. We contend that they have used the wrong development factors, they have used the wrong deposit premium, they have used the wrong loss premium.
Q And how were those concealed from you?
A They changed the percentages unilaterally without informing us. And we discovered this and -- I'm telling you this only as an example. You can -- I will refer you to the at-length explanation that we included in our statements of material fact.
Q Again, I appreciate that, Dr. Rifka.
A The briefs, interrogatories.
Q But that doesn't respond to my question.
MR. SCHULMAN: Can you let Dr. Rifka finish his answer, please?
MR. BADAMI: He's not responding to my question.
MR. SCHULMAN: He's still entitled to finish his answer, Scott.
MR. BADAMI: I believe I have been very lenient on that.

BY MR. BADAMI:
Q I'm trying to find out what NCRIC concealed, Dr. Rifka. You said you gave materials to your insurance broker and they told you, they gave you some conclusions. How did NCRIC conceal it if your insurance broker told you about it and we, it's a matter in this litigation? It would certainly be brought to your attention.
A We discovered it, we discovered it. They did not come forward with it, we uncovered it. And when we uncover something that is a mistake -- they were over-calculating everything to their advantage. And they were presenting us with the bill. And mind you, Columbia, under the plan, had no rights to an audit and did not know the actual numbers even to perform an audit.
Q That was the plan Columbia agreed to, though, right?
A Yes.
Q Okay.

A But then we agreed to certain deposit premium and they used a different one. We agreed to a certain loss premium and they use a different one. And we agreed to certain development factors and they used a different one.
By these three factors, their calculation is constantly to the advantage of NCRIC and the detriment of Columbia. Therefore, how we uncovered it, we made our own homework, we got our own consultants. And we dug and we dug and we dug, and we uncovered the miscalculation, big miscalculation.
The other thing they were supposed to do, they concede, is quarterly statements that they never did, sometimes. So sometimes they will do quarterly reconciliation, sometimes not. Under the plan, they are mandated.
Under the plan, they are mandated to hire an audit, to audit. Because they have their raw material to audit, we do not have the raw material to audit. We trusted them. They didn't do an audit.

Q Okay.
A And under the plan, they are not entitled to million dollars which they took from us. Under the plan, we don't owe them any money. Under the plan, we do not owe them the money, the bill they presented to us, because there are only two years that have closed, as far as we can tell, I think. Nineteen -- the last year that has closed was '96. So to present us a bill for years that have not closed violate the plan and is a scare tactic just to put us under.
Q Okay. Let's get back to the concealment?
A Yes.
Q You mentioned the development factor, the deposit premium? The, I believe you said, the loss premium?
A Yes.
Q I understand those three. You said quarterly reconciliations?
A Uh-huh, or quarterly estimates of how much the year we're looking through. And they have not presented this to us on a regular basis.

Q When did NCRIC not present them to you on a regular basis?
A I think I would refer you to the statement of material facts, it's all documented there. We have researched this in an ample way. And if you would look at it, or you have it I will be happy to show you. But there are quarters that we have not received any work from them. And there are certain quarters that they have done miscalculations at certain times, too.
Q But sitting here now, you can't specifically identify when you may or may not have received the quarterly reconciliation materials?
A I can specifically tell you that they have not done it in a persistent way. And for more exact dates as to when they didn't do that, I will refer you to our statement of material facts. It's mentioned there.
MR. BADAMI: And again, this is the discussion that Eli and I had earlier about the responsibilities of the party under a 30(b)(6) deposition. And, you know, we respectfully disagree. And we may have to deal with that later. But --

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. BADAMI: Okay. Fair enough.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q You said the audit. I would like to turn to that. What is your position that NCRIC concealed about an audit?

A They have not performed their duty. They have --

Q What was their duty?

A Just to perform an audit. They should audit the plan every year. Because Columbia cannot audit the plan because they don't give us the raw numbers to audit it.

Q Were you entitled to the raw numbers, under the terms of the retro plan?

A No.

Q Okay. So --

A That's why they have --

Q Why would they have given you the raw number if you weren't entitled to them --

A Mr. Badami?

Q -- under the terms of the retro plan?

A Dr. Badami?

Q Dr. Rifka.

A That is not what I am saying. I'm saying Columbia could not perform an audit, because under the plan we did not, we were not allowed the numbers, okay. So we did not perform an audit. Hence, the agreement is NCRIC will perform the audit since NCRIC has the raw data.

Q And is --

A NCRIC did not perform an audit.

Q When did NCRIC not perform an audit?

A I have not seen a real audit from NCRIC on every year, for the plan.

Q So starting from 1993 until the end of the plan -- well, I guess even -- do you believe you still should be receiving audits today?

A Absolutely, the plan is in effect. Up till all the years close.

Q Sure. I would --

A Right now there is a plan, believe it or not.

Q For the years that have --

A I have the --

Q For years that have not closed?

A Yes, that is absolutely correct. And therefore I would like to see an audit. Somebody should have seen an audit from NCRIC rather than an ultimatum to pay. Want an audit, an audit has never been given to us.

Quarterly evaluation of the plan has not been timely, they missed quarters and quarters and quarters. It was sporadic. The numbers were inaccurate and the factors they relied on them, were not what we agreed on.

And we were totally surprised. You know why, because we trusted them. And they did not meet the trust level. Behind every, under every stone there was a big snake.

Q You have mentioned these five facts which you have alleged that NCRIC has concealed from Columbia. Are there any others?

A These are only an example. For more I would refer you to the statement of material facts I, and we have. There is a more comprehensive detail in it, in the interrogatories and the briefs and the papers and the exhibits of the case. I'm just highlighting what I remember today.

Q I'm asking for your memory, as the representative of Columbia sitting here at this deposition today.

A My memory as a representative of Columbia lies in the thousands of pages of documents that has presented to you. And to the briefs that includes the totality of the case. And the depositions and the interrogatories and the million fact findings jobs that you have tried to do. This includes the total case.

I'm here to highlight and to lead you. And if you want to discuss an issue with me, show me, I am ready to empty my knowledge to you. But I'm giving you the most important things that I can recall today. Others still exist in the copious paperwork that you have between your hands.

Q Actually, Dr. Rifka, you're not here just to highlight, you're here to respond to the questions in detail, as the representative of Columbia. Again, Eli and I will disagree about the specific role of the witness.

But needless to say, you know, it's not our opinion that you're here just to highlight and rely on things that allegedly have been produced or not produced. You're here to testify as the witness, as the representative of the hospital.

A I guess I haven't highlighted --

MR. SCHULMAN: I'll object to the commentary back and forth. Mr. Badami has stated his position for the record and Columbia has stated its position for the record. And it's not necessary to --

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. SCHULMAN: -- go into it in any greater detail, I think.

BY MR. BADAMI:

Q Dr. Rifka?

A I just want to say about highlighting, I don't think what I have talked today is highlight. If you don't think that there is the beef in what I said, and this is what the real crux of the matter. When an insurance company concocts numbers and factors and fake premiums and fake numbers, I think I have told you what I know about it sitting here today. More to come, I'm sure, if you look in your documents.

MR. SCHULMAN: That's good.

MR. BADAMI: Dr. Rifka, subject to the discussions between Eli and myself, that's all the questions I have for you right now. For purposes of the record, you know, I'm not going to formally close the deposition because we have disagreements. But that's all the questions that I have for you right now.

THE WITNESS: Thank you, Mr. Badami. On the record, thank you for, for the deposition today.

MR. SCHULMAN: Can we take a break and we'll come back in a few minutes?

MR. BADAMI: Sure.

MR. SCHULMAN: Thank you.

(Thereupon, a brief recess was taken.)

MR. SCHULMAN: We're back on the record. I'll try and make this very brief. Really.

MR. BADAMI: Heard that before.

EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENDANT

BY MR. SCHULMAN:

Q Dr. Rifka, before we took a break you were discussing with Mr. Badami the self-insurance trust, which he said was running low. Do you recall having that discussion with him?

A Yes, sir.

Q You don't believe that the self-insurance trust was underfunded, do you?

A No. Actually we met all the payments to, from the, for any malpractice case. So we had, we had the money.

Q And you said that you managed to make the payments primarily through cash flow?

A To make the payment stagger through cash flow, yes.

Q So there was never a situation in which Columbia was unable to cover its contingent liabilities that it assumed under the retro plan? Is that right?

A There was no situation like this.

MR. SCHULMAN: Okay. Thank you very much.

MR. BADAMI: Thank you, Dr. Rifka. That's all.

(Whereupon, at 6:21 p.m., the taking of the deposition was concluded.)

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

Dear Scott and Jenifer:

Columbia is prepared to proceed with the remaining Rule 30(b)(6) deposition as soon as possible and designates Dr. Safa Rifka to testify with respect to NCRIC's Supplemental Notice of Deposition. Dr. Rifka is available on May 22, 2003 at 3 p.m. Please let me know where you would like to hold the deposition.

Columbia objects, however, to NCRIC's newly propounded "supplemental" document requests. NCRIC has no authority, well over a year after the close of discovery and without leave of Court, to issue additional document requests. Indeed, NCRIC's conduct contravenes the Court's admonition that its Order authorizing further limited discovery "is not an opportunity for NCRIC to inquire more broadly than the subject matter" that was at issue in NCRIC's motion. Order of 4/7/03 at 1-2 n.1. In any event, as you must appreciate by now, Columbia has already produced an extensive array of documents responsive to your untimely requests.

Separately, you will recall that the Court's Order does call for production of the following documents only: "financial accounts or statements as to [Columbia's] financial situation at the time Columbia authorized the $1 million check to be given to [NCRIC]." Id. at 2-3. As it so happens, many months ago Columbia did in fact produce to NCRIC such financial accounts or statements. Rather than re-produce those documents, I direct your attention to the documents at bates range CHWMC 008036 to CHWMC 008124.

Sincerely,

Eli C. Schulman

COLUMBIA'S OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION FOR LEAVE TO AMEND THE COMPLAINT

NCRIC's motion for leave to amend is another last-minute attempt to derail proceedings and avoid a trial on the merits of its tortious conduct. NCRIC has not and cannot explain why it has waited nearly three years before seeking to add a claim that it acknowledges was apparent to it from the moment this suit was filed. Allowing such an amendment at this late stage would, moreover, plainly prejudice both this Court and Columbia, both of which have invested substantial resources in discovery, summary judgment, and pre-trial proceedings – proceedings that would now have to be re-done to accommodate NCRIC's late-blossoming request. This Court should deny NCRIC's motion.

Discussion

When faced with a motion for leave to amend that is filed after the responsive pleading stage, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals has held that the court's decision should be guided by five factors "'(1) the number of requests to amend made by the movant; (2) the length of time the case has been pending; (3) bad faith or dilatory tactics on the part of the movant; (4) the merit of the preferred pleading; and (5) prejudice to the nonmoving party.'" Sherman v. Adoption Ctr. of Washington, 741 A.2d 1031, 1038 (D.C. 1999) (quoting Johnson v. Fairfax Village Condo. IV, 641 A.2d 495, 501 (D.C. 1994)). While it is sometimes said that amendment should be liberally granted, "that liberalism does not mean amendments must be granted automatically; a refusal to allow an amendment is to be upheld if predicated on some valid ground." Id. at 1037-38 (internal quotation marks omitted). A decision to deny leave to amend will be reviewed only for abuse of discretion. Id.

A. NCRIC's motion is plainly dilatory. This lawsuit has been pending for nearly three years – since October 2000. Discovery closed eighteen months ago, in January 2002, and dispositive motions were fully briefed by March 2002. See Exh. 1 (attaching scheduling order). The case is set for imminent trial. Yet NCRIC offers no explanation whatsoever for its failure to wait so long before bringing this motion to amend. Nor could it do so: the contract containing the provision on which NCRIC seeks to recover is only six pages long, and was drafted by NCRIC. NCRIC can, thus, hardly suggest that its amendment is based on "newly discovered" evidence.

NCRIC's lengthy delay, coupled with its inability to offer any good faith reason for the delay is, under D.C. precedent, sufficient standing alone to deny the motion. In Gordon v. Raven Sys. & Research, Inc., 462 A.2d 10 (D.C. 1983), for example, the court upheld denial of leave to amend where appellant had waited a mere "18 months after its initial filing and over one month after the court ordered cessation of discovery" because, as here, the request for leave to amend "was first made at a pretrial conference." Id. at 13. Although there was "no showing of bad faith, appellant offered no explanation regarding the reasons for the aggravated delay" and this, the court held, was enough to establish "'the predicate for a proper determination that prejudice to the opposing party would result if an amendment were allowed.'" Id. (quoting Eagle Wine and Liquor Co. v. Silverberg Elec. Co., 402 A.2d 31, 35 (D.C. 1979)).

Similarly, in Eagle Wine and Liquor, the court upheld denial of leave to amend where plaintiff waited "two years after the initiation of the action" before submitting the proffered amendment; though there was no "outright showing of bad faith, the lateness of the motion" plus the lack of "any satisfactory reason for the delay (E.g., new information which could not have been uncovered [any] earlier)" made amendment inappropriate. 402 A.2d at 35. See also Sherman, 741 A.2d at 1038 (denying leave to amend because of movant's "unacceptable dilatory approach" in waiting three years to bring the amended complaint, two months after the close of discovery, without explanation for the delay). No different result should obtain here.

B. Columbia and the Court would also suffer substantial prejudice if NCRIC is permitted to add a new claim for attorney fees. While NCRIC characterizes its request as a "simple" change that merely clarifies its claimed damages and alters nothing of substance, nothing could be further from the truth. It is a matter of black letter law that a party claiming entitlement to attorney fees arising from the instant litigation must plead them as "special damages" under Rule 9(g). See, e.g., National Liberty Corp. v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 120 F.3d 913, 917 (8th Cir. 1997); United Indus., Inc. v. Simon-Hartley, Ltd., 91 F.3d 762, 764 (5th Cir. 1996) (noting broad approval among the circuits that "attorney's fees [are] special damages that must be specifically pleaded under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(g)"); Atlantic Purchasers, Inc. v. Aircraft Sales, Inc., 705 F.2d 712, 716 n.4 (4th Cir. 1983) (claims for attorney fees are special damages that must be pleaded specifically). NCRIC's failure to comply with Rule 9(g) in a timely fashion means that Columbia has had no opportunity to question NCRIC executives and attorneys regarding the attorney fee provision's construction or enforceability, what fees NCRIC has incurred, or the reasonableness of those fees.

Had NCRIC brought its amendment in a timely manner, Columbia surely would have, for example, sought discovery from NCRIC's attorneys regarding the scope of the work they have performed and obtained expert testimony regarding the reasonableness of NCRIC's claimed fees. NCRIC, too, would have been expected to come forward with testimony establishing the reasonableness of the fees it incurred, and Columbia would have wished to cross-examine any such witness. Given that the Retro Plan, written by monopolist NCRIC, bestows a one-sided benefit to NCRIC with regard to attorney fees (no such mirror-image provision is provided to Columbia), Columbia would also surely have wanted to develop an affirmative defense of unconscionability through, among other things, cross-examination of NCRIC's executives who have already been deposed. See Urban Investments, Inc. v. Branham, 464 A.2d 93, 99 (D.C. 1983) (contractual term is unconscionable if there was "'an absence of meaningful choice on the part of one of the parties together with contract terms which are unreasonably favorable to the other party.'") (quoting Williams v. Walker-Thomas Furniture Co., 350 F.2d 445, 449 (D.C. Cir. 1965)).

Essentially, NCRIC wants Columbia and the Court, after investing substantial resources, time, and money in this litigation, to halt the progress of this case and re-do discovery, summary judgment, and the already-completed pre-trial exchanges. Court after court has denied motions to amend on lesser showings of prejudice than this. In Gordon, the D.C. Court of Appeals affirmed a denial of leave to amend because the proposed amendment there, just as here, "would create new theories of liability and thereby require additional discovery and probably the necessity of additional witnesses, including experts who otherwise would not have been called." Gordon, 462 A.2d at 13. In doing so, the court pointed out that the amendment would have also imposed prejudicial burdens on the court because "the amendment would require the court begin anew the pretrial . . . process. Id.

The court of appeals in Sherman, too, affirmed a denial of motion because "the trial would have to be delayed and discovery reopened," and, "as we have reiterated on several occasions, prejudice caused by delays and postponements of this type affect not only the individual litigants but the court system as a whole and others who invoke its aid in dispute resolution." Sherman, 741 A.2d at 1039. See also Gaetan v. Weber, 729 A.2d 895, 898-99 (D.C. 1999) (court of appeals affirming denial of leave to amend when the request was brought a month prior to trial because amendment would have "caused significant judicial delay" and "would have . . . severely prejudiced the appellees who had spent significant time and expense during two years of litigation to defend against appellant's assertions"); Perry v. Sera, 623 A.2d 1210, 1219 (D.C. 1993).

In National Liberty Corporation, the Eighth Circuit considered a trial court's decision to deny leave to add a special damages claim for attorney fees remarkably analogous to NCRIC's current request. The court first rejected the notion that the proffered amendment was "merely clarifying the damages" alleged by plaintiff, noting that attorney fees are special damages that must be pled under the federal analog to SCR

9(g). The court then proceeded to reject the amendment as prejudicially late: it was offered three months after the deadline for any amendments to the pleadings and the non-moving party "would be prejudiced by the untimely amendment because it had already completed depositions of witnesses who were likely to have knowledge of such a claim, and adding the claim after the amendment deadline would have required retaking those depositions." National Liberty Corp., 120 F.3d at 917. Again, no different result should obtain here.[1]

C. Though the foregoing factors are sufficient to dispose of NCRIC's motion under settled law, its request fares no better under the other remaining factors. NCRIC has already amended its complaint once, in January 2001, three months after filing its original complaint. NCRIC does not (and cannot) demonstrate why it did not include the amendment it now seeks at that time. See Sherman, 741 A.2d at 1038-39 (denying leave where there had been only one amendment to the pleadings because it was brought so late). Nor is the claim NCRIC wishes to add obviously meritorious. To prevail, NCRIC would also have to show that its fees were reasonably incurred, but NCRIC has brought forward no such testimony, nor can it do so at this late juncture, after the parties have [1] Nor do the two lone cases cited by NCRIC aid its cause. The first, Johnson, simply affirmed the trial court's discretionary decision to permit an amendment where the trial court found no evidence of dilatory behavior and the amendment would not have prejudiced defendant because he did not deny the substance of the new allegation (namely that he had, in fact, failed to pay his assessments to a condominium association). See Johnson, 641 A.2d at 501-02. The same cannot remotely be said here: NCRIC has been dilatory and Columbia does deny liability for attorney fees. In the second case, District of Columbia v. Tinker, 691 A.2d 57 (D.C. 1997), the District sought leave to add a limitations defense which, the court found, was "readily apparent from the face of [the] complaint," and thus could not prejudice plaintiff; again, the same cannot be said here, where NCRIC's new claim could have been, but did not, appear anywhere in its initial or amended complaints. Id. at 61. The court in Tinker also expressly noted that the non-moving party there had made "no claim on appeal that he would have been prejudiced by having to incur further litigation expenses," id. n.3, something indisputably at issue here.

exchanged final trial witness lists and NCRIC has not sought leave to add any new witnesses. Finally, there is ample precedent, see supra, for the conclusion that this one-sided provision, drafted by an admitted monopolist insurer, with no mirror-image provision for Columbia, is unconscionable as a matter of law. See Sherman, 741 A.2d at 1038 (denying leave where amendment "apparent[ly]" lacked merit).[2]

[2] Though NCRIC claims it will be forced to bring a separate claim for attorney fees, and therefore "efficiencies" will be gained by re-doing discovery now, this is erroneous for several reasons. First, if correct, NCRIC's argument would mean that amendments must always be permitted no matter how late, to avoid second lawsuits. That is not the law, as Gordon, Sherman, Gaeten and the other cases cited above demonstrate. Second, NCRIC's attorney fee request was compulsory and had to be brought with its main claims; accordingly, there will be no second suit on damages. See U.S. Indus., Inc. v. Blake Constr. Co., 765 F.2d 195, 205 (D.C. Cir. 1985) (subsequent lawsuit seeking attorney fees for indemnification claim barred by res judicata where indemnification agreement provided for attorney fees and the claim therefore could have been brought as part of the underlying action); Fox v. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co., 380 F.2d 360, 361 (10th Cir. 1967) (judgment in prior action by insured against its insurer barred subsequent action by the insured to recover cost of litigating initial action). Third, even if NCRIC could bring a second lawsuit, it will be necessary only in the event it prevails on its contract claim at trial; Columbia, on the eve of trial, should not be forced to re-do all of discovery on the speculative possibility that NCRIC will prevail. Finally, there would be few, if any, efficiencies achieved by adding the attorney-fee question to this lawsuit; the only questions in any fee proceedings will be the reasonableness of the fees NCRIC incurred and the enforceability of the contractual provision on which it relies; these issues overlap not at all with the issues in the current suit which has already been pending for nearly three years.

16d-002314

Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, NCRIC's Motion for Leave to Amend the Complaint should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

C. NATURE OF THE CASE

In October 1993, Columbia, a non-profit hospital specializing in care for women, and NCRIC, a provider of malpractice liability insurance to physicians in the District of Columbia, entered into an agreement called the Retrospective Rating Plan (or, "Retro Plan"). The purpose of the plan was to establish a malpractice liability program for physicians at Columbia to help reduce the costs to physicians through a sharing of malpractice risk.

In October 2000 NCRIC filed a breach of contract claim against Columbia contending that Columbia refused to pay the Additional Premium due under the Retro Plan when it expired on September 1, 2000.

Columbia countersued in November 2000, contending that NCRIC breached the contract and owes Columbia money under the plan. Columbia also contends that NCRIC communicated that it would administer a medical malpractice plan for Columbia so that the hospital did not have to do so itself, and, after assuring Columbia that it would act in the hospital's best interests, deceived Columbia about the terms of the Plan and overcharged the hospital, failing to perform required calculations honestly and accurately. In addition, Columbia contends that NCRIC interfered with Columbia's existing and expected business relationships with the doctors who worked at Columbia by disparaging Columbia and inducing Columbia's doctors to move their practices to other hospitals. Columbia contends that NCRIC also made false and defamatory statements about Columbia that caused harm to Columbia's reputation in the community. Additionally, Columbia contends that NCRIC improperly demanded a $1 million deposit not called for by the parties' contract on threat of discontinuing malpractice coverage to the hospital and later refused to return Columbia's money. Columbia seeks damages in the multiple millions of dollars.

D. CLAIMS AND DEFENSES

1. NCRIC's Claim

NCRIC and Columbia are parties to a Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Retro Plan") which provided medical malpractice insurance to physicians from 1993 through September 1, 2000. Pursuant to the Retro Plan, NCRIC provided insurance at discounted premiums to doctors practicing at Columbia, and in return Columbia agreed to share a portion of the risk of future malpractice claims. The Retro Plan requires a "reconciliation" that looks back over the term of each year to compare the discounted premiums to the actual claims for a given year. Each reconciliation follows the calculation formula presented in the Retro Plan to determine: (1) if Columbia was required to pay "Additional Premium" to NCRIC, because losses under the plan exceeded the physician premiums by a predetermined calculated amount, or (2) if NCRIC was required to pay "Return Premium" to Columbia, should the losses have been less than the predetermined amount.

NCRIC's breach of contract claim is based upon Columbia's refusal to pay NCRIC the Additional Premium due under the Retro Plan calculations. In November 1996, the parties orally agreed to avoid interim payments of Additional and Return Premium by exchanging money only when a year was "closed-out" under the plan or the Retro Plan ended. After a series of renewals from 1993 to 2000, the parties chose not to further renew the plan. The Retro Plan expired on September 1, 2000. As obligated under the Retro Plan and the parties' oral agreement, NCRIC performed the reconciliation calculation and sent the reconciliation with a notice and request for payment of Additional Premium due from Columbia on September 1, 2000. Columbia has not paid NCRIC any of the Additional Premium owed to NCRIC under the terms of the Retro Plan since September 1, 2000. NCRIC's breach of contract claim seeks to recover this amount.

Finally, NCRIC contends that none of the alleged misconduct detailed in Columbia's counterclaims, assuming arguendo that Columbia proves such conduct, negates the Retro Plan and relieves Columbia of the obligation to pay NCRIC the amount owed for the premiums as calculated under the Retro Plan.

2. Columbia's Claims

1. Breach of Contract: NCRIC breached the Retro Plan by, inter alia, failing to pay Columbia Return Premium that Columbia was due. NCRIC further breached the parties' agreement by seeking payment from Columbia in violation of the parties' oral agreement.

2. Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing: NCRIC evaded the spirit of the contract, willfully rendered imperfect performance, and/or interfered with Columbia's performance by, inter alia, performing Reconciliations inaccurately.

3. Breach of Fiduciary Duty: NCRIC breached its fiduciary duty to Columbia by, inter alia, failing to perform Reconciliations honestly and accurately; demanding a $1 million deposit when it was not due and then refusing to return the $1 million; refusing to allow Columbia to audit NCRIC's calculations; and causing Columbia to overpay Additional Premium.

4. Tortious Interference with Business Relations: NCRIC wrongfully interfered with Columbia's business relations with the Attending Faculty doctors, causing about 30 Attending Faculty members to terminate their association with Columbia and move the bulk of their practices to Sibley and/or George Washington University hospitals.

5. Tortious Interference with Prospective Business Advantage: NCRIC wrongfully interfered with Columbia's reasonable expectation of continuing its business relations with the Attending Faculty doctors, causing about 30 Attending Faculty members to terminate their association with Columbia and move the bulk of their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals.

6. Actual and/or Constructive Fraud: NCRIC made false representations of material facts to Columbia, including, for example, those relating to NCRIC's improper Retro Plan calculations, and concealed from Columbia material facts that amounted to a misrepresentation by refusing to provide Columbia information as provided for by the Retro Plan and by refusing to provide Columbia access to data necessary independently to verify NCRIC's bookkeeping.

7. Negligent Misrepresentation: NCRIC negligently made false representations by, inter alia, miscalculating Reconciliations.

8. Defamation and Libel: NCRIC published material false statements about Columbia that disparaged Columbia, causing Columbia harm to its reputation and substantial economic loss.

9. Trade Libel/Commercial Disparagement/Injurious Falsehood: NCRIC published false and misleading statements that disparaged the quality of Columbia's services as a health care facility, causing Columbia harm to its reputation and substantial economic loss.

10. Conversion: NCRIC unlawfully exercised ownership, dominion, and control over Columbia's $1 million deposit, in denial or repudiation of Columbia's rights to the money.[1]

Columbia reserves the right to offer evidence of additional facts in support of any of its claims.

3. NCRIC's Defenses

Columbia's Breach of Contract and Breach of Implied Duty of Good Faith and Fair Dealing (Counts 1 and 2)

NCRIC denies all allegations of improper calculations of premiums and intends to present fact and expert testimony in support of its position that all calculations were valid and

[1] The negligence claim originally pleaded by Columbia as Count Six was dismissed by order of July 3, 2001.

16d-002342

that the amount of Additional Premium owed by Columbia is proper and correct. Columbia's evidence regarding the alleged miscalculations of the Retro Premium is inadmissible and non-credible as it consists of calculations performed by Columbia's counsel for the purposes of this litigation. NCRIC will also present credible and undisputed evidence that NCRIC maintained the loss reserves under the Retro Plan in accordance with the requirements of the plan and according to "industry standards." Columbia has not presented any credible evidence that NCRIC's alleged breach caused Columbia's financial problems or proximately caused Columbia's bankruptcy filing such that NCRIC is liable for these damages. NCRIC has performed all duties properly under the Retro Plan and has not "evaded the spirit of the contract," therefore NCRIC is not liable for breach of contract or breach of the implied duty of good faith and fair dealing.

Columbia's Breach of Fiduciary Duty Claim (Count 3)

NCRIC denies all allegations that it was under a duty to act on Columbia's behalf in a fiduciary capacity. The parties in this case were two sophisticated business entities which negotiated a commercial contract, the Retro Plan, which did not contemplate the creation of a fiduciary relationship. The Retro Plan and all subsequent amendments and renewals were negotiated instruments between the parties and their counsel and consultants. There is no evidence of unequal bargaining power. Finally, a fiduciary relationship did not evolve over time during the course and dealings of the parties.

Columbia's Tortious Interference Claims (Counts 4 and 5)

NCRIC further denies all allegations of tortious activity which allegedly interfered with current or prospective business relations between Columbia and its attending faculty. There is no evidence that any physician terminated his or her relationship with Columbia based on the alleged defamatory statements by NCRIC in 2000, because NCRIC representatives urged them to do so, or because the parties did not agree to renew the Retro Plan in September 2000. To the extent the tortious interference claims rely upon the alleged defamatory statements, NCRIC incorporates the defenses to the defamation claims below. Finally, NCRIC contends that Columbia's future business expectancy in patient referrals is too remote to support a tortious interference claim. NCRIC intends to present fact and expert testimony in support of its position that any economic loss suffered by Columbia during the time of alleged tortious acts in 2000 was caused by a number of other market factors and conditions at the hospital itself, as opposed to the alleged tortious interference Columbia attributes to NCRIC. Moreover, NCRIC contends that Columbia has failed to mitigate any such damages which it claims.

Columbia's Fraudulent and Negligent Misrepresentation Claims (Counts 7 and 8)

NCRIC denies all allegations that it made fraudulent and/or negligent misrepresentations of fact to Columbia regarding the Retro Plan. As discussed with regard to the breach of contract claims above, NCRIC's calculations were proper and did not constitute a fraudulent misrepresentation regarding the amount of Additional Premium due from Columbia. Columbia cannot prove that any reconciliations were false because there is no credible evidence from any witnesses regarding the alleged "proper" calculations under the Retro Plan. Moreover, as discussed above, any statements with regard to the loss reserves set for the Retro Plan were true as the loss reserves were set and maintained properly under the Retro Plan and industry standards. NCRIC did not have any intent to defraud Columbia at any time, nor did Columbia and NCRIC have a "confidential relationship" to support a negligent misrepresentation claim in the absence of fraudulent intent.

Columbia's Defamation and Injurious Falsehood Claims (Counts 9 and 10)

NCRIC denies all allegations of defamatory statements by NCRIC representatives in 2000. The Court has found in favor of NCRIC on summary judgment with regard to all defamation and injurious falsehood claims based upon alleged statements by NCRIC in 1998; therefore, these statements are not properly presented by Columbia at trial. There is no evidence that the "rumors" of September 2000 regarding the possible closure of Columbia were attributable to any NCRIC representative. Any defamatory statements allegedly made by Dr. Glassman in September 2000 do not support a claim against NCRIC because (1) Dr. Glassman was not speaking as a representative of NCRIC, (2) these alleged statements were not properly "published" to third parties, and (3) these alleged statements were true. Moreover, these alleged statements do not support an injurious falsehood claim because these statements do not concern a product or service of Columbia. Finally, as discussed with regard to the tortious interference claims above, NCRIC intends to present fact and expert testimony in support of its position that any economic loss suffered by Columbia during the time of alleged defamatory statements in September 2000 was caused by a number of other market factors and conditions at the hospital itself, as opposed to the alleged defamation and harm to reputation which Columbia attributes to NCRIC.

Columbia's Conversion Claim (Count 11)

NCRIC denies all allegations of conversion with regard to the $1 million partial payment of Additional Premium made by Columbia in 1998. The $1 million payment was a negotiated partial payment towards a balance of approximately $1.7 million in Additional Premium due in 1997. NCRIC consistently applied this amount towards the premium due in all subsequent reconciliations under the Retro Plan. There is no evidence that the parties agreed that this payment would be held by NCRIC as a "deposit" which would accrue interest. Nor is there any evidence that Columbia demanded the money be returned as it was allegedly held by NCRIC unlawfully. Finally, Columbia has not presented any credible evidence that NCRIC's alleged conversion caused the hospital's financial problems or proximately caused Columbia's bankruptcy filing such that NCRIC is liable for these damages.

16d-002345

4. Columbia's Defenses

1. Columbia did not breach the contract and does not owe NCRIC any Additional Premium because NCRIC miscalculated the Deposit Premium, Minimum Premium, and Development Factors under the Retro Plan. When the proper calculations are made, NCRIC in fact owes Columbia premium.

2. Columbia did not breach the contract and does not owe NCRIC any Additional Premium because NCRIC's demand for Additional Premium violates the parties' November 1996 oral agreement that the parties would not exchange Additional or Return Premium for any year of the Plan until all outstanding claims for that year had closed. The only closed years are those for which NCRIC owes Columbia premium.

3. Columbia did not breach the contract and does not owe NCRIC any Additional Premium because NCRIC, the Plan's bookkeeper, failed to notify Columbia of any amount of premium due, as required by the Plan. Such notice is a precondition to any obligation of Columbia to pay NCRIC Additional Premium.

4. Columbia fully performed all of its duties and obligations under the alleged agreement between it and NCRIC.

5. NCRIC's claim is barred as a result of NCRIC's failure to satisfy conditions precedent, including, but not limited to, failing to perform Reconciliations properly, and failing to calculate and inform Columbia of the correct amount of Additional or Return Premium due.

6. NCRIC's claim is barred by the doctrines of estoppel, waiver and/or unclean hands.

7. The alleged agreement between Columbia and NCRIC is unenforceable, in whole or in part, due to NCRIC's material breach of the express and/or implied terms thereof.

8. The alleged agreement between Columbia and NCRIC is unenforceable, in whole or in part, due to modification, novation, and/or accord and satisfaction.

9. The alleged agreement between Columbia and NCRIC is void, in whole or in part, because Columbia renewed and/or amended it while under duress caused by NCRIC.

10. The Amended Complaint fails to state a cause of action upon which relief may be granted.

11. Columbia denies all allegations in the Amended Complaint not specifically admitted, and demands strict proof thereof.

E. UNDISPUTED ISSUES/STIPULATIONS

1. On or about October 23, 1993, Columbia and NCRIC entered into the Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement ("Retro Plan"). NCRIC drafted the Retro Plan.

2. The original term of the Retro Plan was three years.

3. A retrospective rating plan, such as the Retro Plan, requires a "reconciliation" that looks back over each year to compare the premium to the claims to determine: (1) if additional premium is due to the insurance company; or (2) if a return of premium is due the hospital, should losses have been favorable based on a predetermined calculation.

4. All premiums under the Retro Plan are calculated by applying multipliers to the subject premium.

5. To determine if the appropriate premium amounts were collected to pay losses under the Retro Plan, the Retro Premium (as calculated based on a preset formula) is then compared to the Deposit Premium. If the Retro Premium is less than the Deposit Premium, the premium is due to Columbia. If the Retro Premium is more than the Deposit Premium, Columbia owes NCRIC the additional premium to pay against the losses. But any amount of Retro Premium is limited by the set Minimum Premium and Maximum Premium.

6. A "floor" and a "ceiling" are set to financially protect both Columbia and NCRIC from large swings in risk. If total losses were large (130% of total), then this would cap Columbia's risk. If losses were extremely favorable (60% of total), then NCRIC is protected. The "floor" is the Minimum Premium, and the "ceiling" is the Maximum Premium.

7. When the parties entered into the Retro Plan, the premium discount ("Attending Faculty discount") was 19% off the cost of $500,000 in malpractice coverage.

8. In November 1996, NCRIC representatives met with Columbia's Finance Committee. The NCRIC representatives presented the first Reconciliation under the Retro Plan and proposed new revisions to the discount and premium calculations.

9. During these meetings, the NCRIC representatives explained that claims from prior years were still pending and therefore calculations of premium for those years were subject to change.

10. NCRIC's Reconciliation for the 1993-94 Experience Period showed a balance $172,815 in Return Premium due to Columbia for this Experience Period.

11. In 1997, Columbia was fighting a lawsuit by one of its largest creditors, The Bank of Tokyo-Mitsubishi, regarding Columbia's line of credit.

12. In February 1998, Columbia filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the United States Bankruptcy Code.

13. Columbia emerged from bankruptcy in January 1999.

14. The Medical Entity Policy issued by NCRIC was a standard group insurance policy which covered the physicians practicing medicine at Columbia's Clinic for professional liability in return for the payment of a set premium each year.

15. In the fall of 1999, NCRIC and Columbia renewed both the Retro Plan and the Medical Entity Policy until September 1, 2000 and December 1, 2000, respectively.

16. During the spring of 2000, Columbia requested NCRIC propose a transitional plan to replace the Retro Plan with a new program which did not require a retroactively calculated premium.

17. NCRIC proposed a method of "closing out" the Retro Plan and converting the program to a guaranteed cost contract which would discontinue the retroactive calculations from previous years of the Retro Plan.

18. The parties negotiated the one-time cost that Columbia would have to pay to accomplish such a close out throughout the spring and summer of 2000.

19. The endorsement excluded from coverage any activities in the Clinic after November 15, 2000.

F. DISPUTED ISSUES

NCRIC's Issues

1. Whether Columbia breached the Retro Plan by not remitting Additional Premium due under the Retro Plan Reconciliations when the Retro Plan expired on September 1, 2000. NCRIC contends that Columbia breached the agreement; Columbia contends that it did not.

Columbia's Issues

2. Whether NCRIC breached the Retro Plan by, inter alia, failing to pay Columbia Return Premium that Columbia was due and seeking payment from Columbia in violation of the parties' oral agreement? Columbia contends that NCRIC breached the agreement; NCRIC contends that it did not.

3. Whether NCRIC evaded the spirit of the contract, willfully rendered imperfect performance, and/or interfered with Columbia's performance by, inter alia, performing Reconciliations inaccurately? Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

4. Whether NCRIC breached its fiduciary duty to Columbia by, inter alia, failing to perform Reconciliations honestly and accurately; demanding a $1 million deposit when it was not due and then refusing to return the $1 million; refusing to allow Columbia to audit NCRIC's calculations; and causing Columbia to overpay Additional Premium? Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

5. Whether NCRIC wrongfully interfered with Columbia's business relations with the Attending Faculty doctors, causing about 30 Attending Faculty members to terminate their association with Columbia and move the bulk of their practices to Sibley and/or George

Washington University hospitals? Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

6. Whether NCRIC wrongfully interfered with Columbia's reasonable expectation of continuing its business relations with the Attending Faculty doctors, causing about 30 Attending Faculty members to terminate their association with Columbia and move the bulk of their practices to Sibley and/or GW hospitals? Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

7. Whether NCRIC made false representations of material facts to Columbia, including those relating to NCRIC's improper Retro Plan calculations, and concealed from Columbia material facts that amounted to a misrepresentation by refusing to provide Columbia information as provided for by the Retro Plan and by refusing to provide Columbia access to data necessary independently to verify NCRIC's bookkeeping? Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

8. Whether NCRIC negligently made false representations by, inter alia, miscalculating Reconciliations? Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

9. Whether NCRIC published material false statements about Columbia that disparaged Columbia, causing Columbia harm to its reputation and substantial economic loss? Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

10. Whether NCRIC published false and misleading statements that disparaged the quality of Columbia's services as a health care facility, causing Columbia harm to its reputation and substantial economic loss? Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

11. Whether NCRIC unlawfully exercised ownership, dominion, and control over Columbia's $1 million deposit, in denial or repudiation of Columbia's rights to the money. Columbia contends that NCRIC did; NCRIC contends that it did not.

G. REQUESTED STIPULATIONS

Attached at Tab G are the parties' Proposed Stipulations and objections, as follows:

1. NCRIC's Proposed Stipulations

2. Columbia's Objections to NCRIC's Proposed Stipulations

3. Columbia's Proposed Stipulations

4. NCRIC's Objections to Columbia's Proposed Stipulations

H. RELIEF SOUGHT

1. NCRIC seeks the following relief:

NCRIC seeks to recover money owed by Columbia pursuant to the calculations agreed to by the parties in the Retro Plan. The amount of Return Premium owed is calculated in quarterly reconciliations of premium according to methodology contained in the Retro Plan. Columbia currently owes NCRIC the sum of $3,090,693, or such amount as is calculated periodically under the plan.

2. Columbia seeks the following relief:

- lost profits in the amount of approximately $21.5 million;
- lost proceeds from annual fundraiser (more than $1.5 million per year);
- loss of $35 million, low-interest HUD loan, reasonably expected to reduce the hospital's cost of capital from 10.5% to 4.5% per month (resulting in lost savings for Columbia of approximately $2 million per year);
- more than $1.5 million for expenses incurred in connection with bankruptcy;

- return of $1 million deposit;
- $765,347.49 in Return Premium;
- prejudgment interest;
- punitive damages;
- costs, including reasonable attorney fees;
- further relief as the Court may deem just and equitable.

I. CITATIONS

Attached at Tab I are lists of citations that the parties wish to call to the Court's attention.

1. NCRIC's Citations

2. Columbia's Citations

Each party is providing the Court with copies of those authorities not found in D.C. Code, A.2d, or U.S. App. D.C. Because of the volume of the authorities, each party is submitting for the Court's convenience two separate stand-alone volumes to accompany the citation lists – one volume with citations relevant to the substantive claims, and a second volume with citations relevant to the pending motions listed in Section J below.

J. PENDING MOTIONS

NCRIC

The following motions were filed by NCRIC on June 5, 2003:

1. NCRIC's Motion To Require Defendant to Provide Security for Costs

2. NCRIC's Motion for Leave to Amend the Complaint

3. NCRIC's Motion for Reference to a Special Master

4. NCRIC's Motion To Exclude the Opinions and Testimony of Defendant Columbia's Designated Damages Expert

5. NCRIC's Motion to Exclude Evidence of Certain Counterclaim Damages

6. NCRIC's Motion to Exclude the Testimony of Columbia's Newly Named Witnesses

7. NCRIC's Motion to Exclude Certain Documents and Calculations

8. NCRIC's Motion To Compel and for Sanctions Pursuant to Rules 33(b) and 37(a)

Columbia

The following motions were filed by Columbia on June 5, 2003:

1. Motion in Limine of Defendant To Exclude Testimony of NCRIC's Purported Expert Witnesses

2. Motions in Limine of Defendant

   a. Motion To Re-Order Presentation of Proof to Conform to Evidence

   b. Motion To Establish Admissibility of Documentary Exhibits Before Trial

K. WITNESSES

Attached at Tab K are the parties' respective Witness Lists.

1. NCRIC's Witness List

2. Columbia's Witness List

The matters about which experts will, if allowed by the Court, testify are as follows:

1. NCRIC's Experts

A) James McGuire, Esq.: Mr. McGuire's testimony will support NCRIC's claim that the loss reserves set by NCRIC under the Retro Plan were valid, adequate, proper and correctly calculated based upon appropriate insurance industry methods.

B) James D. Hurley: Mr. Hurley's testimony will support NCRIC's claim that the premiums owed by Columbia are calculated using the proper deposit factors which were derived as a result of mathematical and actuarial computation.

C) Steve Moore: Mr. Moore's testimony will support NCRIC's rebuttal of the damages alleged by Columbia to have been caused by NCRIC's commission of various alleged torts. Mr. Moore will support NCRIC's position that any losses experienced by Columbia (such as decreased profits) are the result of other factors outside of any alleged misconduct by NCRIC.

D) W. McKay Henderson and Mary Woodford: Mr. Henderson and Ms. Woodford's testimony will support NCRIC's rebuttal of Columbia's expert testimony regarding damages allegedly suffered as a result of NCRIC's alleged misconduct. Mr. Henderson and Ms. Woodford's testimony will support NCRIC's position that any losses experienced by Columbia (such as decreased profits) are the result of other factors outside of any alleged misconduct by NCRIC.

2. Columbia's Expert

Peter Ben Ezra: In his role as an expert, Mr. Peter Ben Ezra, Professor of Accountancy at the George Washington University's School of Business and Public Management, will testify with respect to the calculation of lost profits incurred by Columbia as a result of NCRIC's tortious conduct.

L. EXHIBITS

Attached at Tab L are the parties' Exhibit Lists and objections to exhibits, as follows:

1. NCRIC's Exhibit Summary Form
2. Columbia's Objections to NCRIC's Exhibits

16d-002355

3. Columbia's Exhibit Summary Form

4. NCRIC's Objections to Columbia's Exhibits

Each party is also submitting separately a copy of its objections, together with copies of the exhibits to which the objections are made.

Both parties reserve the right to offer all exhibits listed on the opposing party's exhibit list, as well as all deposition exhibits and rebuttal exhibits that have not been identified herein. To the extent one party has identified a document as an exhibit, at this time, that party is not stipulating to the authenticity or admissibility of that document. To the extent Columbia and NCRIC identify the same exhibit, both parties preserve the right to object to its admission.

M. DEPOSITIONS

Attached at Tab M are the parties' respective deposition designations, as follows:

1. NCRIC's Deposition Designations

2. Columbia's Deposition Designations

Both parties reserve the right to object at trial to any designation of deposition testimony included in this submission pursuant to Superior Court Rule 32(b) and/or to require additional parts of depositions that ought in fairness to be considered with the part designated pursuant to Superior Court Rule 32(a)(5).

N. PLEADINGS AND DISCOVERY RESPONSES

Attached at Tab N are the parties' respective designations of pleadings and discovery responses, as follows:

1. NCRIC's Designations of Pleadings and Discovery Responses

2. Columbia's Designations of Pleadings and Discovery Responses

O. DEMONSTRATIVE OR PHYSICAL EVIDENCE

The parties have agreed to exchange the demonstrative aids they intend to use in their opening statements and cases-in-chief one week prior to trial. Both sides reserve the right to prepare additional demonstratives aids based on the evidence actually adduced at trial, subject to 24 hours' advance notice to the opposing party.

P. VIDEOTAPES

The parties do not expect to use videotapes at trial.

Q. REQUESTED VOIR DIRE QUESTIONS

Attached at Tab Q are the requested questions that the parties have agreed upon and those that the parties have not agreed upon.

U. SETTLEMENT

1. NCRIC Statement Regarding Settlement:

The parties engaged in extensive settlement negotiations, including the exchange of draft agreements, throughout the Fall of 2001. Although NCRIC believes it is owed the amounts due as calculated under the Retro Plan, the parties agreed in principle on an amount of $1.5 million for NCRIC to hold as collateral while reconciliation calculations under the Retro Plan continue over the next few years. Unfortunately, previous settlement negotiations have stalled due to Columbia's repeated attempts to push NCRIC down farther in priority behind a group of Columbia's secured and unsecured creditors. Columbia has also consistently imposed additional conditions into the draft settlement agreement which are unnecessarily prejudicial to NCRIC. At subsequent settlement meetings and court-sponsored mediation attempts in 2002, Columbia appears to have had essentially an unexplained $5 million swing in how the hospital values this case. Despite Columbia's drastic shift in position, NCRIC has again within the last month extended a proposal for resolution of this case by the parties. Columbia has not responded to that proposal.

2. Columbia Statement Regarding Settlement:

The parties have engaged in court-ordered mediation and private settlement discussions, neither of which yielded any meaningful progress. Columbia respectfully submits that settlement of this matter is not likely.

V. ESTIMATED LENGTH OF TRIAL

NCRIC estimates that the trial will run approximately 5-10 days.

Columbia estimates that the trial will run approximately 5 days.

16d-002361

The foregoing Joint Pretrial Statement, as revised at the pretrial conference in the presence of the parties and counsel, shall stand as the pretrial order in this case.

NCRIC'S OPPOSITION TO COLUMBIA'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE THE TESTIMONY OF NCRIC'S EXPERT WITNESSES

Pursuant to District of Columbia Superior Court Rule 16(e)(5), Plaintiff NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") submits this Memorandum in Opposition to Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.'s ("Columbia") motion in limine to exclude testimony of NCRIC's expert witnesses ("Columbia's motion") in the above-captioned proceeding.

I. Introduction

This case was originally filed in October 2000. NCRIC timely filed its Rule 26(b)(4) statement with this Court on August 9, 2001 and then supplemented that statement on February 14, 2002. Those statements appropriately identified the expert witnesses NCRIC intended to call in this case and summarized the testimony each witness was expected to provide. Tellingly absent from Columbia's motion is the admission that from the time these witnesses were identified until the close of discovery, Columbia never served a deposition notice or otherwise sought further information from them. Indeed, also omitted from Columbia's motion is an admission that Columbia failed to provide the conclusions of the hospital's alleged damages expert until less than 24 hours prior to his deposition during the last week of discovery and that the hospital withdrew the other experts it had previously identified. The only reason NCRIC had to supplement its Rule 26(b)(4) statement after the close of discovery is because Columbia failed to produce its damages witness until the last week of discovery. As the Court is aware, because of these and other deficiencies, NCRIC filed a motion to exclude Columbia's purported damages expert on June 5, 2003.

It rings hollow that Columbia – because it failed to depose any of NCRIC's experts and withdrew other purported experts it named – should now be able to exclude NCRIC's witnesses because the hospital claims it does not know enough about the testimony and qualifications of NCRIC's experts.

II. The NCRIC Experts Should Not Be Excluded

NCRIC's distinguished panel – Mary A. Woodford, W. McKay Henderson, Steve Moore, and Martin Cohen ("NCRIC's experts") – must be allowed to testify as expert witnesses in this trial. These witnesses have vital evidence which prove the fallacy of Columbia's claims that somehow NCRIC was the cause of the hospital's long-standing and well-documented bankruptcy and financial problems. As the facts make clear, NCRIC has complied with Rule 26(b)(4) with respect to all NCRIC experts, including supplementation for Ms. Woodford's initial Rule 26(b)(4) statement.

Ms. Woodford's testimony should also be admitted over the objections raised in Columbia's motion. First, her proposed testimony involves complicated accounting principles and is certainly beyond the ken of the average juror. Columbia has put forward a convoluted (and unsupported) damages theory stretching 20 years into the future. Ms. Woodford and Mr. Henderson will directly counter Columbia's claims.

Additionally, there is no merit to Columbia's allegation that Ms. Woodford intends to offer legal opinions and improper conclusions in her testimony. Ms. Woodford's testimony is highly probative on the issues and presents no unfair danger or prejudice. Finally, she is fully qualified to testify as a damages expert. Indeed, Columbia would know these important facts had the hospital elected to depose her (or NCRIC's other experts).

A. The NCRIC Experts Should Not Be Excluded Because NCRIC Complied with Rule 26(b)(4).

On the eve of trial, Columbia seeks to exclude the NCRIC experts for newly alleged deficiencies in NCRIC's Rule 26(b)(4) statements filed almost two years ago. As noted above, NCRIC's Rule 26(b)(4) statements were timely submitted on August 9, 2001 and supplemented on February 14, 2002. Columbia did not raise any objection to NCRIC's statements at the time of filing, nor though the entire period of discovery. The exclusion of evidence is a "severe sanction," which is not warranted by the circumstances of this case. See Weiner v. Kneller, 557 A.2d 1306, 1310 n.5 (D.C. 1989) (noting that, "[e]xclusion of evidence is a severe sanction"). Although a trial judge has the power to sanction litigants for a breach of the duty to supplement responses, the court has wide discretion, "including the discretion not to apply discovery sanctions at all." Id. at 1309; see also Corley v. BP Oil Corp., 402 A.2d 1258, 1261 (D.C. 1979). The primary purpose of liberalized discovery rules is to "prevent unfair surprise and limit the issues to those articulated before trial," and the court should exercise its discretion with this goal in mind. Weiner, 557 A.2d at 1309; Corley, 402 A.2d at 1262. As it was Columbia which identified and then withdrew experts throughout discovery, and it was Columbia which was late in providing its expert materials to NCRIC, it is disingenuous for Columbia – a party who never sought a single expert deposition – to now claim prejudice.

Additionally, the cases cited in Columbia's motion are distinguishable from the present situation, and do not support their contention that NCRIC's expert testimony should be excluded for failure to comply with Rule 26(b)(4).

To illustrate, in Sowell v. Walker, 755 A.2d 438 (D.C. 2000) the proffered expert did not conduct his analysis until after the close of discovery. Id. at 445. As a result, the judge ordered the plaintiff -- the party seeking to enter the testimony -- to furnish the defendant with "the substance of the facts and opinions to which [the expert was] . . . expected to testify and a summary of the grounds for each opinion." The plaintiff failed to comply with this order, and the expert testified to facts central to calculating damages without any manner of previous disclosure. Id. at 445-46. Because the first disclosure of this information came on the witness stand, in obvious disregard for a pre-trial disclosure order, the trial judge applied discovery sanctions under Rule 26 and excluded the expert testimony. Id. In Sowell, the D.C. Court of Appeals noted that "[t]he judge was obviously of the opinion that the problem was brought on by the plaintiff's unjustified failure to disclose information that ought to have been disclosed," and affirmed the trial judge's decision to strike the expert's testimony. Id. at 447. Thus, the plaintiff's failure to comply with an explicit pre-trial order was a critical component of the exclusion in Sowell, rather than a failure to supplement an initial 26(b)(4) statement.

Similarly, Dada v. Children's National Medical Center, 763 A.2d 1113 (D.C. 2000) is also distinguishable from the instant situation. In Dada, a medical malpractice liability case, the plaintiff failed to proffer adequate expert testimony about the applicable standard of care, and the trial judge denied a motion to reopen discovery, which would have allowed the plaintiff an opportunity to develop sufficient expert testimony. Id. at 1114-15. On appeal, the case revolved around whether plaintiff's counsel could show excusable neglect in order to reopen discovery and gain admission of additional expert testimony. Id. at 1115-17. The D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the decision to deny the plaintiff's motion, after finding that plaintiff's counsel willfully failed to comply with the court's scheduling order, failed to file timely responses to discovery requests, filed her Rule 26(b)(4) statement late, ignored the substantive requirements of Rule 26(b)(4), and failed to appear at the hearing on her own motion for reconsideration. Id. at 1116. As in Sowell, the court's decision was motivated by a blatant disregard for discovery obligations, rather than a failure to supplement a Rule 26(b)(4) statement.

Columbia here is unable to stretch the facts of this case to support the drastic sanction of exclusion of witnesses. NCRIC filed timely Rule 26(b)(4) statements to which Columbia never objected, and NCRIC did not ignore any dictates from this Court regarding discovery of expert opinions. Columbia chose not to inquire further regarding NCRIC's disclosed experts, through written discovery or depositions, throughout the discovery period over a year in length. Columbia's eleventh-hour attempt to exclude the testimony of NCRIC's experts based on alleged prejudice must fail.

B. Ms. Woodford's Testimony Should Not Be Excluded.

In addition to its belated technical objections to NCRIC's Rule 26(b)(4) statements, Columbia seeks to exclude Ms. Woodford's testimony on the basis that she does not meet the standards for expert witnesses. Courts in this jurisdiction undertake a three-part inquiry to determine whether expert testimony is admissible:

1. The subject matter "must be so distinctively related to some science, profession, business or occupation as to be beyond the ken of the average [juror];
2. the witness must have sufficient skill, knowledge, or experience in that field or calling as to make it appear, that his opinion or inference will probably aid the trier in his search for truth," and;
3. expert testimony is inadmissible if "the state of the pertinent art or scientific knowledge does not permit a reasonable opinion to be asserted even by an expert."

Dyas v. United States, 376 A.2d 827, 832 (D.C. 1977) (citation omitted). Although Columbia contends otherwise, Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony easily passes these tests.

1. Ms. Woodford's Testimony Meets the Standard for Expert Witnesses

As her resume reveals, Ms. Woodford is a distinguished economist and her proposed testimony satisfies the standards for admissibility imposed by District of Columbia courts. Ms. Woodford's testimony regarding the unreliability of the methodologies employed by Columbia's Mr. Ben Ezra will help the jury understand complicated accounting principles that will be applied to calculate Columbia's alleged damages. Ms. Woodford's testimony about the proper application of these methodologies addresses a subject that is unquestionably "beyond the ken of the average [juror]." Dyas, 376 A.2d at 832. It cannot be credibly argued that the average juror understands the degree of diligence required to accurately apply complicated accounting methodology in order to arrive at a reasonably certain figure.

Mr. Ben Ezra's proposed testimony purports to calculate the damages Columbia claims that it suffered as a result of NCRIC's conduct. In appropriate cases and under certain controlled conditions, such a damage model can be advanced by experts.[1] See, e.g., Hughes v. Pender, 391 A.2d 259, 262 (D.C. 1978) (noting that "the task of projecting a person's lost earnings lends itself to clarification by expert testimony because it involves the use of statistical techniques and requires a broad knowledge of economics"); Schleier v. Kaiser Found. Health Plan of the Mid-Atlantic States, Inc., 876 F.2d 174, 179-80 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (stating that jury needed expert guidance in order to discount lost future wages to their present value). With this standard in mind, Columbia's contention that Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony is within the understanding of the average juror makes no sense. Her proposed testimony about Mr. Ben Ezra's questionable underlying data sources, faulty historical trend analysis, imagined work life expectancy inputs, and lack of any independent inquiry will provide the jury with critical information necessary to evaluating the accuracy of Columbia's damage calculations. See Declaration of Mary A. Woodford ¶ 7-26 (hereinafter "Woodford Decl.") attached as Exhibit 39 to NCRIC's motion for Summary Judgment (and as Exhibit A here). It is unreasonable to suggest that the jury should undertake this analysis without the type of guidance that Ms. Woodford's testimony will provide.

The decisions relied upon by Columbia all exclude expert testimony of a fundamentally different nature than that offered by Ms. Woodford and are of no assistance to Columbia here. There can be little doubt that courts properly exclude expert testimony about the reliability of eyewitnesses, Green v. United States, 718 A.2d 1042, 1053 (D.C. 1998), the nature of obscenity, Fennekohl v. United States, 354 A.2d 238, 240 (D.C. 1976), loading procedures for tractor-trailers, Darby v. System Transport, Inc., No.

[1] NCRIC's motion to exclude Mr. Ben Ezra's testimony does not quarrel with the admissibility of expert testimony based on a discounted cash flow analysis in a particular case and which is supported by appropriate factual evidence. NCRIC's motion, however, contends that his testimony is inherently unreliable because it is based on unreasonable on tenuous assumptions, and therefore fails to satisfy the basic threshold of admissibility for expert testimony.

99-CV-0075E(Sr), 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16541, at *17 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 3, 2001), or the effect of distractions on drivers, Roback v. V.I.P. Transport, Inc., No. 91 C 5902, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14054, at *10 (N.D. Ill. Oct. 4, 1994). These subjects are all within the common experience of most laymen, and certainly not "beyond the ken" of the average juror. One need not gain special skills, training, or experience to understand, for example, that certain expressions are obscene or that eyewitnesses may not be reliable. In contrast, considerable education and experience are necessary to master the proper application of accounting methodologies. It is difficult to imagine a basis for contending that accounting principles are easily understood as a byproduct of normal life experiences and common sense. Columbia has not advanced any credible reason for thinking otherwise.

Next, Columbia contends that Ms. Woodford's testimony should be excluded because she "points to no available data in the record which she believes is more reasonable or accurate" than the information relied upon by Mr. Ben Ezra. This argument, however, overlooks the simple fact that Columbia has the burden of proving damages caused by NCRIC's alleged wrongdoing. See Nader v. de Toledano, 408 A.2d 31, 48 (D.C. 1979) (noting that, "[t]he general rule is that a party asserting or pleading an issue has the burden of proof"). It is not incumbent upon NCRIC, nor Ms. Woodford, to suggest alternative methodologies or sources of data for calculating Columbia's damages, particularly since NCRIC does not admit that Columbia even suffered the alleged injuries that gave rise to the damages claimed here.[2] Because the purpose of Ms. Woodford's

[2] It is worth noting, however, that Ms. Woodford does give examples of more reasonable and accurate data, including Bureau of Labor Statistics information that is typically used to calculate work life expectancy. See Woodford Decl. ¶ 18-19.

16d-002371

proposed expert testimony is to rebut the substantive accuracy of Mr. Ben Ezra's damage calculations, Columbia's argument on this point is unfounded.

Recognizing the weakness of its argument, Columbia also argues that Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony is "nothing more than cross-examination going to the weight the jury should give to Mr. Ben Ezra's testimony." See Columbia's Motion at 6. While cross-examination is certainly important, this Court has the responsibility to keep out unreliable and unsupported evidence. In the event any of Mr. Ben Ezra's conclusions survive NCRIC's motion to exclude, Ms. Woodford's testimony is essential to assist the jury to understand the implications of his methodological errors, and also to demonstrate that his conclusions are unreasonable.

2. Ms. Woodford's Testimony Does Not Involve Legal Conclusions

Columbia argues that Ms. Woodford's testimony should be excluded because her statement that Mr. Ben Ezra "has not relied upon expected work life studies typically accepted by courts" constitutes impermissible testimony of legal conclusions.[3] Columbia's argument, however, fails to consider the context of the dialogue upon which it relies. Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony does not purport to explain the evidentiary requirements of courts with respect to work life expectancy data. Rather, she will testify that experts calculating damages typically rely on expected work life data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics. See Woodford Decl. ¶ 18-19. Because Mr. Ben Ezra's calculations are not based on any empirical data about work life expectancy, this [3] Although Ms. Woodford may not testify to legal conclusions, she is nevertheless correct that courts typically accept empirical data to support work life expectancy figures. See, e.g., District of Columbia v. Barriteau, 399 A.2d 563, 565 (D.C. 1979) (describing expert witness' use of "Department of Labor Statistics" [sic] data to determine plaintiff's work life expectancy in lost earning damage calculation).

testimony is crucial for the jury to evaluate the substantive accuracy of his damage estimates.[4] Columbia's argument on this point is semantic and out of context.

3. Ms. Woodford's Testimony is Probative

In the alternative, Columbia also argues that Ms. Woodford's testimony should be excluded because of its allegedly prejudicial effect. However, when balanced against the highly probative nature of her expert opinion, the danger of unfair prejudice from Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony is non-existent.

Relevant evidence may only be excluded on this ground if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. Johnson v. United States, 683 A.2d 1087, 1099 (D.C. 1996) (en banc). This is a liberal standard, which allows "the admission of as much relevant evidence as reasonably possible." Id. Otherwise relevant and probative evidence "should not be excluded because of 'crabbed notions of relevance or excessive mistrust of juries.'" Allen v. United States, 603 A.2d 1219, 1224 (D.C. 1992) (en banc) (citation omitted).

Ms. Woodford's testimony is relevant and probative of several material issues in dispute in this case. Most prominently, it sheds light on the substantive inaccuracy of Columbia's purported damage calculations, and will assist the jury to determine the extent of Columbia's alleged injuries. Her proposed testimony about the methodological safeguards required to compute damages to a reasonable certainty is important. Columbia's argument that Ms. Woodford's testimony is "highly prejudicial," because it would allow "attorney arguments and legal opinions" to be "delivered from the stand by a witness who has donned the mantle of an 'expert'" is without merit. See Columbia's Motion at 7-8.

First, as discussed above, Ms. Woodford's testimony is not related to any legal conclusion or opinion. Second, there is no significant danger of prejudice from the alleged overlap between her testimony and the legal arguments that will be presented to the jury by counsel for NCRIC. Ms. Woodford will testify about the proper application of accounting methodologies, and the accuracy of damage calculations produced by Columbia, through its proposed expert. Ms. Woodford's testimony is highly probative of disputed, material issues in this case, and its admission will not unfairly prejudice the jury against Columbia. Because its probative value is not substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, her proposed testimony should be admitted.

4. Ms. Woodford is an Eminently Qualified Expert Witness

Because of her extensive education and financial experience, Ms. Woodford is eminently qualified to testify about proper methods for calculating damages. Columbia, however, objects to Ms. Woodford's proposed testimony, alleging that she lacks sufficient skills or knowledge to testify as an expert on damages. In order to testify as an expert, a "'witness must have sufficient skill, knowledge or experience in that field or calling to make it appear that [her] opinion or inference will probably aid the trier in his search for truth.'" Dyas, 376 A.2d at 832 (citation omitted) . To qualify as an expert, a witness must be specially qualified to assist the trier of fact in answering the particular questions presented in the case. See Johnson v. District of Columbia, 728 A.2d 70, 74 (D.C. 1999) (stating that, when evaluating the competency of an expert, "a judge is obliged to consider the qualifications of the witness in relation to the questions presented"). An expert should only be excluded as unqualified, therefore, when the witness lacks the relevant knowledge, skills, or experience necessary to offer an opinion that will assist the jury.

Ms. Woodford holds an A.B. in Economics from Sweet Briar College, and an M.B.A. from the Colgate Darden Graduate School of Business Administration at the University of Virginia. She has worked in the financial industry since 1979, most recently as Director of Financial Advisory Services for PriceWaterhouseCoopers in Washington, D.C. and now as a Director at Cornerstone Research. Ms. Woodford is the author of numerous publications, including articles about calculating damages and prejudgment interest awards.

Ms. Woodford's special knowledge, which she has gained from her impressive education and experiences, will assist the jury's evaluation of the substantive accuracy of Columbia's damage estimates. She holds an advanced degree in business administration, and has worked in the financial industry for over twenty years. Other courts have found her qualifications acceptable, and have allowed her to testify as an expert on damage calculations on several occasions. For all of these reasons, there can be little doubt that Ms. Woodford is qualified to testify as an expert witness in this case.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above Columbia's motion to exclude expert testimony from Ms. Woodford and Messrs. Henderson, Moore and Cohen must be denied.

DECLARATION OF MARY A. WOODFORD

I, Mary Woodford, have been asked by counsel for NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") to assess the reasonableness of Mr. Peter Ben Ezra's damage calculations in relation to matter of NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("CHW").

1) I am a Director in PricewaterhouseCoopers' ("PwC") Financial Advisory Services practice. My curriculum vitae is included as Exhibit 1.

2) A list of the documents I and other PwC employees under my supervision have reviewed from the discovery on this case is provided in Exhibit 2 to this statement. In addition, we held discussions with certain other PwC industry experts about the reasonableness of Mr. Ben Ezra's damages calculations.

16d-002378

3) Mr. Peter Ben Ezra produced a report dated January 22, 2002 and was deposed on January 24, 2002. Mr. Ben Ezra's report contains two alternative damages analyses that purport to measure the economic loss suffered by CHW "as a result of the NCRIC group of Doctors leaving or cutting back on patients referred to [CHW]."

4) Both models follow a similar methodology. Generally, they project into the future a "lost cash flow" based on the difference between fiscal year 2000 net charges and fiscal year 2001 net charges for an assumed number of doctors that allegedly left CHW due to NCRIC's conduct.

5) The first model assumes that the "lost cash flow" will continue for 20 years while the second model assumes that the "lost cash flow" will continue for 3 to 30 years depending on doctor age. In both models, Mr. Ben Ezra makes assumptions in order to calculate the damages.

6) It is my opinion that Mr. Ben Ezra has not made a damage calculation to a reasonable degree of economic certainty due to his lack of independent inquiry and lack of reasonable and supportable bases for his assumptions which include, among others:

-Which doctors left or cut back on patients referred to CHW

-Long term projections based on one year of data

-That data provided to him by CHW were accurate

-The length of time "lost cash flows" would accrue

-The marginal cost of providing services of 30%

-Lack of independent inquiry

I address each in turn (please See Exhibit 3 concurrently with this section).

Which doctors left or cut back on patients referred to CHW

7) In his damages calculations, Mr. Ben Ezra makes an assumption that a certain set of doctors "left" or cut back on patients referred to CHW. His assumption is flawed in four ways.

8) First, Mr. Ben Ezra chooses this set of doctors based on a list of doctors created by CHW counsel and he relies on this list despite the fact that he is not sure of its accuracy. Generally, he relied on the list as presented with no procedures to verify its reasonableness or accuracy.

9) Second, Mr. Ben Ezra makes no independent inquiry as to why any doctors "left," making instead the implicit assumption that they left due to the situation with NCRIC. In his role as Chairman of the Board of CHW he no doubt could have asked any or all doctors why they left. He did not. It is interesting to note that if he learned that a doctor had not "left" CHW due to NCRIC, he could not reasonably include damages attributed to that doctor's departure in his damage analysis. His analysis fails to consider this mitigating factor.

10) Third, Mr. Ben Ezra does not consider the mitigating factor that doctors may have left CHW for reasons other than one related to NCRIC. For example, I understand most if not all of the departed doctors joined hospitals located in the District of Columbia (i.e., Sibley or George Washington hospitals). It is possible that either hospital may have been competing for CHW doctors. Mr. Ben Ezra admitted in his deposition that CHW had and is "having problems" financially. Doctors may have been concerned about the long-term viability of CHW. However, Mr. Ben Ezra's "but-for" scenario assumes that all the "NCRIC doctors" would stay at CHW for the long term (20 years or retirement). This is an unsupported and unreasonable assumption given all the other local possibilities available to the "NCRIC doctors" or other reasons for their respective departures from CHW.

11) Finally, Mr. Ben Ezra removes doctors on this list from his analysis when they are "not dilutive." For example, if a doctor on the list created net charges in FY 2001 greater than those in FY 2000, there should be a net benefit (under Mr. Ben Ezra's theory). However, as in this case, when inclusion of a doctor on the list in his damages analysis would offset a loss (e.g. making the damages lower), he does not include that doctor in his damage analysis. He therefore fails to consider this mitigating factor in his analysis.

Long-term projections based on one year of data

12) Mr. Ben Ezra bases his "lost cash flow" for doctors on the difference between the doctors' net charges in FY 2000 and FY 2001. His theory is that the reduction in charges from FY 2000 (before the problems attributed to NCRIC by the plaintiff) to FY 2001 (after) represents losses due to NCRIC. These losses are then assumed to last from 3 to 30 years.

13) This assumption is inherently speculative in that it only relies on one data point to make a long-term projection. Typically, a reasonable projection would be based upon or would include a trend analysis of relevant data. One data point does not equal a trend. If it is the case that either FY 2000 or FY 2001 are extraordinary years -- with either higher or lower net charges due to factors unrelated to NCRIC -- then the damages calculations are fundamentally flawed.

14) Despite this possibility, Mr. Ben Ezra apparently made no inquiry into whether FY 2000 or FY 2001 were representative years or extraordinary years. For example, he did not review CHW financial statements and he did not feel that comparable data from the two years prior to FY 2000-2001 were relevant because "they didn't look right." This apparent lack of inquiry is all the more troubling as his role of Chairman of the Board of CHW clearly would have given him access to the best/most relevant data, had he chosen to examine such.

That data provided to him by CHW were accurate

15) Mr. Ben Ezra relies on certain documents produced for him by CHW. Most specifically, he relies upon reports that purport to include line items for "Total Charges," "Total Adjustments," and "Total Payments." These documents form the basis for his estimate of net charges associated with the doctors that he assumes "left" CHW.

16) However, Mr. Ben Ezra could neither describe what constituted the line items on the documents nor did he verify (in his words 'audit') that the line items were correct. While Mr. Ben Ezra claims that his model represents "lost cash flows," he does not know the contents of the line items that comprise the bases for his assumptions, which may not actually be cash flows. He presumes, without independent investigation, that "total payments" represents cash collected.

The length of time "lost cash flows" would accrue

17) Mr. Ben Ezra's damage calculation makes a projection far into the future. His model is the difference in "cash flows" between an assumed "actual world" where all the doctors he has deemed "left" CHW are gone forever and a "but-for" world where all of the doctor he has deemed "left" CHW never would have left.

18) This projection methodology is flawed for a variety of reasons including: (1) Ben Ezra has not relied upon expected work life studies typically accepted by courts, (2) in the "but-for" world he does not give any consideration to the idea that these doctors may have "left" CHW for a reason other than one related to NCRIC, and (3) in the "actual" world he does not give any consideration that these doctors may in the future return to NCRIC or be replaced by other doctors.

19) First, expected work life information accepted by courts comes from the Bureau of Labor Statistics and is stratified by race, age, gender, and education. Further, work life studies by occupation have been performed and also used in this type of calculation. Mr. Ben Ezra has done no such study and does not rely upon any existing study to come to his determinations that all so-called "NCRIC Doctors" would have either worked at CHW for 20 year or until age 65.

20) Second, Mr. Ben Ezra does not consider that doctors may leave CHW in the future for a reason other than one related to NCRIC. For example, either Sibley or GW hospital may recruit CHW doctors. Patients may demand to have their birth at Sibley. Doctors may be interested in the brand new medical office being built at GW.

21) Further, any of these doctors could relocate out of the DC area, die, scale back their practices, go on maternity leave, retire early, etc. Mr. Ben Ezra does not consider these possibilities. Any of these decisions or changes could reduce the damages calculations significantly. Mr. Ben Ezra neither checks data "available to medical staff" that would allow him to quantify normal turnover for CHW doctors nor does he talk to the doctors about their motivations. In Mr. Ben Ezra's "but-for" scenario, the "NCRIC doctors" are assumed to stay at CHW for the long term (20 years or retirement). This is an unsubstantiated and unreliable assumption given these factors that typically can impact a professional's work life.

22) Finally, Ben Ezra takes no account of the fact that in the "actual" world these "NCRIC doctors" may in the future return to NCRIC or be replaced by other doctors at CHW. He fails to consider these mitigating factors in his analysis.

The marginal cost of providing services of 30%

23) Mr. Ben Ezra's damages calculations assume that the marginal cost of providing services is 30%. This assumption drives the damages calculations as Mr. Ben Ezra determines the amount of damages by deducting the "marginal cost" from the estimated doctor revenues.

16d-002383

24) The 30% assumed by Mr. Ben Ezra is wholly speculative. Not only did Mr. Ben Ezra take the marginal cost out of an accounting text book example (which has no relationship to CHW) but he also generally knows how to do a marginal cost analysis and chooses not to do one (ostensibly to "be conservative"). He does not review actual cost accounting information of CHW that would clearly be available to him in his role as Chairman of the Board of CHW. He neither reviews nor relies on income statement or other financial accounting documents produced in the case. In short, Mr. Ben Ezra has provided no basis for a 30% marginal cost amount.

The lack of independent inquiry

25) Finally, Mr. Ben Ezra generally has not made an independent inquiry into the bases for his damages analyses. In addition to the examples mentioned above, he has not reviewed any depositions transcripts, CHW financial statements, or data related to actual cash collections and patient mix of CHW and of CHW doctors. Again, he chooses to ignore actual CHW information that would clearly be available to him in his role as Chairman of the Board of CHW. His analysis is then little more than an exercise in adding up numbers.

26) To conclude, due to his use of unsupported assumptions, it is my opinion that Mr. Ben Ezra has not made damages calculations "to a reasonable degree of economic certainty." His opinions are based neither on an independent investigation of the facts nor a review of evidence provided to him by counsel. Given these facts, the conclusions reached by Mr. Ben Ezra are baseless and speculative.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct. Executed on February 6, 2002.

Which doctors left or cut back on patients referred to CHW

A. No. The presumption is they have all left because of the NCRIC dispute.
Q. And when you say that presumption, what facts do you -- what facts underlie that presumption?
A. Basically, that is a list of doctors that was furnished to me by counsel.
Q. So you're not making any independent determination as to why the doctors left?
A. That's correct.
Q. I don't mean this to come out wrong, is your answer to my question because counsel told you these are the people who left because of the NCRIC dispute?
A. Basically, that's the list that was furnished to me, yes.
Q. Have you done any analysis with respect to why any of these specific doctors, in your opinion, left Columbia?
A. Independent analysis, no.
Q. Have you reviewed any analysis or any study that might have indicated why these doctors left Columbia?
A. No, I have not.
MR. LEAHY: Are you asking for an expert opinion with regard to why these doctors left Columbia?
MR. BADAMI: I'm asking for his opinion why they left Columbia.
MR. LEAHY: I object to that.
Go ahead.
THE WITNESS: I don't have any independent knowledge of why they left Columbia. My presumption is if they were on the list and indeed it went down it is because of the NCRIC dispute.
BY MR. BADAMI:
Q. Did you interview any of these doctors to find out why they would have left Columbia?
A. No, I did not.

(Pg. 104-106, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. So is this list, then, in your opinion inaccurate?
A. It's a list of doctors' names and numbers. I don't know whether it's accurate or not. I didn't audit it. I relied on this list as represented by counsel. This represents the population or pool of doctors that may have left or cut back at Columbia.

(Pg. 95-97, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. You just testified to that you have excluded a number of doctors from your report?
A. Yes.
Q. Tell me why you did that.
A. When I did the analysis, for example, I think it was Dr. 44039, there was no data. There was nothing there.
Q. How about Dr. Becker, No. 19?
A. Dr. Becker, as I recall, he was either close to retirement or had retired. Basically, to use my phrase, was not dilutive in nature; in other words, was not significant or actually may have increased.
Q. So he might have been improperly put on this list?
A. That's correct.
Q. How about Dr. Berryman, No. 20?
A. The same.
Q. You say, "The same." Could you -- either he didn't have enough admissions or it could have increased?
A. Yes.
Q. Dr. Birnkrant, No. 222?
A. The same.
Q. Is it the same for all the doctors?
A. Yes. Basically, if they are not dilutive in nature I did not include them.
Q. When you say dilutive in nature, did you make a determination it was dilutive?
A. Yes.
Q. What was the criteria whether it was dilutive?
A. When I did the analysis, if the number of cases had gone up or even the money had gone up, then it would not be dilutive in nature.
Q. So if the number of cases or the dollars went down a little they were included on your list?
A. That's correct.

(Pg. 102-104, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Long term projections based on one year of data

Q. You did this analysis, I think, for -- how many years did you do this analysis for?
A. The analysis is based on the difference between two years. I did look at the prior year data that was furnished to me. I elected not to use it. I was not comfortable in using that data.
Q. Why?
A. I don't think it was complete.
Q. And how did you know it wasn't complete?
A. It didn't look right.
Q. I'm sorry, I don't mean, again, to argue with you but what does, "It didn't look right," mean?
A. The number of records and the totals I couldn't rely on. I mean, I'm not going to use data in my analysis that I don't feel is correct.
Q. What year was this data?
A. It was data acquired two years from here.
Q. I guess you were uncomfortable with that data?
A. Yes.
(Pg 161, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. But you have no data with respect to Columbia or any other hospital with respect to what their actual collections are?
A. Well, the actual collections are going to be in the financial statements and the statement of cash flow.
Q. Did you review those?
A. For this, no. I did not.
Q. Did you review it for any other hospital?
A. No, I did not.
(Pg. 73, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. Do you know the amount of losses suffered by Columbia? We can go year by year, if you like.
A. Those would be in the audited and unaudited financial reports.
Q. Did you review those for this case?
A. No, I did not.
(Pg. 62- 63, Ben Ezra Deposition)

The data provided to him by CHW were accurate

A. Okay, basically, what I did was I took total collection, less this adjustment number, which is provided to me by the hospital.
Q. But you don't know what made up that adjustment number?
A. I can presume what makes it up.
Q. Please tell me what you presume for purposes of your report.
A. That these are whatever adjustments that hospital management and staff decided to put into that data field.
(Pg. 69, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. You believe, or do you know?
A. I don't know for a fact. It's whatever the write-downs were.
Q. You're not sure what encompassed all of those write-downs?
A. No, I don't know, nor did I audit that.
Q. You took what Columbia gave you and ran with it?
A. That's exactly it.
(Pg. 60, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. But you have no data with respect to Columbia or any other hospital with respect to what their actual collections are?
A. Well, the actual collections are going to be in the financial statements and the statement of cash flow.
Q. Did you review those?
A. For this, no, I did not.
Q. Did you review it for any other hospital?
A. No, I did not.
(Pg. 73, Ben Ezra Deposition)

The length of time "lost cash flows" would accrue

Q. In doing your analysis, Mr. Ben Ezra, did you take into account that some of these doctors might switch back to Columbia Hospital in the future?
A. It's my hope that they will.
Q. Is that included anywhere in your report?
A. No, it is not.
Q. So if a doctor made the decision two years from now to go back to Columbia your numbers would be in error?
A. That's correct. Without saying error, if you would tell me which doctors are going to return, I could run the numbers accordingly and determine the net economic lost.
(Pg140-141, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. I appreciate that. Have you done any studies or analysis with respect to what the average retirement date of a physician in the District of Columbia is?
A. No, I have not.
Q. Do you know what that number would be?
A. No, I do not.
Q. Sixty-five is your presumption?
A. That is a presumption, yes.
(Pg. 154, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. What I'm asking you, is that contained in your analysis, if the group was recruited to go to Sibley or GW?
A. I make the assumption that they will continue. The doctors that I have met have been at Columbia for, in many cases, several decades, maybe 30 or 40 years. It seems to me from my perception a degree of entropy that a doctor at Columbia is going to stay at Columbia unless they are hit by an outside force hard enough to get off of that track.
Q. What are those outside forces?
A. In this case it may be -- it could be NCRIC.
Q. Do you have any facts to back that up?
A. No. I have a presumption.
Q. But no facts?
A. No facts.
(Pg 174-175, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. I've tried to come up with some things that I thought might have been the outside forces?
A. We're talking entropy, like in the laws of physics, that basically a doctor at Columbia, I will presume, will stay at Columbia, and at least it is my experience and observation that that is true.
Q. Do you have any empirical data to back that up?
A. It would be available at the medical staff. They would have a number of years that the physician has been at Columbia.
Q. You didn't review any of that for the purposes of your report, did you?
A. No.
(Pg177-178, Ben Ezra Deposition)

The marginal cost of providing services of 30%

Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, I'm showing you what has been marked as Ben Ezra Exhibit No. 12. I'm wondering if this is the page in the textbook you were referring to?
A. Yes, it is, sir.
Q. I notice that phrase has been circled?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me, did you do that circling?
A. Yes, I did.
Q. What did you use this textbook to determine?
A. I used the textbook, because I was looking for a number for marginal cost, the best I could find was this example problem in the textbook that I use for the management accounting course at the undergraduate level.
(Pg. 180, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. Do you know if that 30 percent figure is real?
A. I think it's a good estimate of the variable cost of the hospital. Notice that most of the costs, the other 70 percent, if they were at break even, would be fixed costs, so in terms of reasonableness, I think we're pretty close.
In the case of Columbia I think it's too high. That's, again, why I erred, but if I erred it was in favor of NCRIC.
Q. You didn't know what St. Vincent Hospital they are referring to and if this 30 percent referenced in this problem is true or not?
A. No. What's true is in the problem it says variable costs are 30 percent.
Q. And you don't know where the authors got that from?
A. No. I have used other textbooks, and I would say I've seen similar problems, and they may be even on the CPA exam, similar problems.
(P182, Ben Ezra Deposition)

That's the lost marginal revenue. I put a little note and calculated that. The marginal cost of services as a percentage of marginal revenue, I have 30 percent. I found it in a textbook.
I believe if I were to do further analysis; in other words, actually do a walk-through and tabulate -- let's say a patient comes in -- what your additional costs are, well, it's the cost of the bedding, if they have surgery it is the cost of the instruments that are used that are eventually thrown away, it's the cost of the sutures, it's the cost of a breakfast, a lunch, a dinner.
Actually, the marginal costs to me are probably less than 30 percent, but I took 30 percent.
Q. From a textbook problem?
A. From a textbook problem, and my experience at the hospital and what I would expect it to be. In other words, I expect a high amount of fixed costs because everything else is relatively fixed. They're staffed up for a level which is, basically, at the high end, so they have the available capacity, all they need is the patients. So what we're talking about for marginal costs is the marginal out-of-pocket costs, and they are, basically, the stuff that gets disposed of.
(Pg. 193-194, Ben Ezra Deposition)

The lack of independent inquiry

Q. Mr. Ben Ezra, I want to close a loop on a couple items that Mr. Leahy raised.
I want to make clear, you have acknowledged you're speculating with respect to the retirement age of the physicians?
A. That is an assumption that I used for the model.
Q. It is an assumption you used without any data to back it up?
A. Other than my general experience that most doctors retire around age 65.
Q. But you have no data that's been provided to me or that you reviewed to support that conclusion?
A. That's correct. This is a basic underlying assumption. The other assumption I used was 20 years straight out. I was quite surprised to find that the results were quite comparable.
(Pg. 243-244, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. Do you know the amount of losses suffered by Columbia? We can go year by year, if you like.
A. Those would be in the audited and unaudited financial reports.
Q. Did you review those for this case?
A. No, I did not.
(Pg. 62- 63, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. But you have no data with respect to Columbia or any other hospital with respect to what their actual collections are?
A. Well, the actual collections are going to be in the financial statements and the statement of cash flow.
Q. Did you review those?
A. For this, no, I did not.
Q. Did you review it for any other hospital?
A. No, I did not.
(Pg. 73, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. Have you reviewed any deposition transcripts in this case?
A. No, I have not.
Q. Have you done any interviews or had any conversations with anyone at Columbia with respect to your conclusions in this case?
A. No. I did present the hospital to the finance committee of Columbia Hospital for Women.
(Pg. 133-134, Ben Ezra Deposition)

Q. Where I left off was on page 8710, Point 2. For your analysis did you believe the patient mix to stay the same for each year going forward?
A. Yes, that is the presumption.
Q. Did you do any analysis to reach that conclusion?
A. No, I did not.
Q. Have you looked at any data to show how the patient mix might change over the years?
A. I did not look at any data, but I do have an opinion.

NCRIC, INC.,
Plaintiff/Counter-Defendant,
v.	Civil Action No. 00-0007308 Calendar 8 – Judge Blackburne-Rigsby
COLUMBIA HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN MEDICAL CENTER, INC.,	Next Event: Pretrial Conference, July 31, 2003
Defendant/Counter-Plaintiff.

COLUMBIA'S OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE THE OPINIONS AND TESTIMONY OF COLUMBIA'S DESIGNATED DAMAGES EXPERT

On summary judgment, NCRIC argued that the expert testimony of Peter Ben Ezra, Professor of Accountancy at the School of Business and Public Management at George Washington University, should be excluded as a matter of law. In its motion in limine, NCRIC rehashes those same arguments. But NCRIC supplies no reason for the Court to accept now the same arguments that the Court has already rejected. NCRIC does not challenge Ben Ezra's qualifications. NCRIC does not challenge his methodology (classic "before-and-after" and cash-flow analyses). Instead, NCRIC merely contends that Ben Ezra "misapplied" these long-accepted damages methodologies. But in doing so, NCRIC badly misdescribes the analysis Ben Ezra performed. And under settled law it is axiomatic that disagreements over the application of accepted damages methodologies go to the weight the jury should accord expert testimony, not its admissibility. Tellingly, NCRIC fails to cite a single case from this jurisdiction in which the testimony of an expert has been barred before trial because of such disagreements. The motion in limine should be denied.

Statement of the Facts

Ben Ezra performed two separate and independent damages analyses: a traditional "before and after" test, and a second, physician-specific cash flow analysis.

A. The Before and After Test

Ben Ezra began his "before and after" analysis by comparing revenues from the year immediately before NCRIC's tortious misconduct with the year immediately following that conduct. Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 6. Ben Ezra's investigations confirmed that the year before NCRIC's actions was "not an extraordinary year for the hospital with regard to volumes or utilization," but a good representation of Columbia's revenue stream in a normal year, unaffected by tortious conduct. Id. at ¶ 32.[1] Comparing Columbia's annual revenues immediately before and immediately after NCRIC's misconduct, he noted a difference in revenues of $3,932,163.09. Over twenty years, this difference would amount to lost revenues of over $70 million.

Ben Ezra, however, did not stop there. Instead, he proceeded to reduce the amount of damages that he estimated in three separate ways, each of which favored NCRIC. First, to take account of collection difficulties, Ben Ezra reduced Columbia's anticipated lost revenues by 5%, based on historical Columbia collection data and experience. Second, Ben Ezra deducted the marginal costs of providing service from the lost patient revenues. Because Columbia did not, in the ordinary course of its business, retain cost accounting records from which Ben Ezra could derive its marginal cost rate, Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 26, Ben Ezra employed a 30% marginal cost rate, based on his experience in the accounting profession for 25 years, his service at Columbia as a member of its Board of Directors, and a widely used managerial accounting textbook, id. ¶¶ 27-

[1] Ben Ezra also explained that the data he used (starting in October 1999) was the only and best data available: "As NCRIC is aware, the hospital attempted to produce complete . . . data for the two fiscal years prior to October 1999, but failed. I spent many hours with Columbia's head of information systems, while she performed various

29. In doing so, Ben Ezra deliberately chose to employ a marginal cost rate at "the high end" of any plausible range, to ensure that his damages calculation was conservative and any question was resolved in NCRIC's favor. Id. ¶ 28.[2] Third, Ben Ezra calculated the net present value of Columbia's annual lost revenue over the next 20 years using a discount rate of 10.5%. Ben Ezra inspected Columbia's records and found that "this is the highest interest rate charged to Columbia." Id. ¶ 8. Despite the fact that Columbia "also has other, lower-interest rate loans," Ben Ezra chose to use this discount rate in order to ensure that his analysis, again, would be "conservative, in NCRIC's favor." Id. Based on the foregoing calculations, Ben Ezra estimated total lost profits over the next 20 years of $22,013,195.55.

B. The Doctor-Specific Cash Flow Test

Though he did not need to proceed further, Ben Ezra conducted a second, separate damages analysis that confirmed the findings of his initial calculation.

This time, Ben Ezra focused on each individual physician who left the hospital in October 2000, the period immediately after NCRIC's misconduct. Ben Ezra Decl. ¶¶ 18-20. Ben Ezra calculated, on a physician-by-physician basis, the lost cash flow to the hospital associated with the departure of each individual physician. See CHWMC 008713. To discern the impact of these losses over time, Ben Ezra assumed that, but for NCRIC's tortious behavior, each doctor would have remained at the hospital until he or she reached age 65, at which time he or she would have retired. Ben Ezra selected age 65 based on his tenure at Columbia as a information queries on the hospital's computer systems. In the end, she simply was not able to pull a complete data set for those years that I could rely upon." Id. at ¶ 31.

[2] As Ben Ezra explained: "In my experience, Columbia's fixed costs are very high . . . . Its marginal costs (the difference between total costs and fixed costs) are much lower, the difference of 20 to 30 percent, which for the most part represents the cost of disposable materials and increased meals and laundry costs. I analogize Columbia's hospital beds and operating capacity to unsold seats on an airline: the marginal cost of an airline seat is only the meals and drinks not served and a few incremental units of fuel not used. Most of the costs are fixed, and the marginal costs are relatively few and vary with patient load." Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 27.

member of the Board of Directors, noting that this estimate was "conservative" given the large number of physicians who had practiced at Columbia well beyond age 65.[3] Ben Ezra then proceeded to apply additional conservative assumptions favoring NCRIC: Ben Ezra again used Columbia's historical collections data to reduce the estimated damages, again assumed marginal costs of 30%, and again assumed a cost of capital of 10.5%. Based on these reductions, Ben Ezra estimated total lost profits to Columbia, using this separate physician-specific cash flow methodology, of $21,522,451.23.

Discussion

BEN EZRA'S EXPERT DAMAGES ANALYSIS MORE THAN MEETS THE REQUIREMENTS FOR ADMISSIBILITY

A. NCRIC Completely Ignores the "Lightened" Burden Applicable to Damages Evidence

In asking the Court to rule that Ben Ezra's testimony is overly "speculative," NCRIC completely ignores controlling law concerning the estimation of damages. Once the "fact of damages" is proven, it is settled law that a plaintiff "need prove damages only with reasonable certainty." Affordable Elegance Travel, Inc. v. Worldspan, L.P., 774 A.2d 320, 329 (D.C. 2001) (quoting Edmund J. Flynn Co. v. LaVay, 431 A.2d 543, 550 (D.C. 1981)). Thus, the damages claimed by a plaintiff "need not be susceptible of computation with exactitude" in order to permit their award. District of Columbia v. Gandy, 450 A.2d 896, 901 (D.C. 1982), modified on other grounds, 458 A.2d 414 (D.C. 1983). An award of damages "will be upheld . . . even if it is not proven with mathematical exactitude." Affordable Elegance Travel, 774 A.2d at 329. This is so, the courts have held, because a party should not "be deprived of compensatory damages

[3] Ben Ezra also noted that, due to the "nature of [his] analysis" he is "able to opine with accuracy about the lost cash flows for each physician, for each year up until they retire. So, for example, if Columbia were to offer as part of its causation proof that the historic retirement age of its physicians is 64, my expert opinion encompasses that number merely because they cannot be computed with exactitude." Spar v. Obwoya, 369 A.2d 173, 180 (D.C. 1977). In fact, a jury award will be overturned only if it is entirely speculative. See Langevine v. District of Columbia, 106 F.3d 1018, 1024 (D.C. Cir. 1997) ("[A] jury's determination of damages may only be disturbed if it 'is so inordinately large as to obviously exceed the maximum limit of a reasonable range within which the jury may properly operate.'") (quoting Jeffries v. Potomac Dev. Corp., 822 F.2d 87, 96 (D.C. Cir. 1987)); John Morrell & Co. v. Local Union 304A, 913 F.2d 544, 558 (8th Cir. 1990) (holding that evidence supporting jury award of damages "is sufficient as long as it is 'not wholly speculative'"); Laaperi v. Sear, Roebuck & Co., 787 F.2d 726, 734 (1st Cir. 1986) ("The jury is free to select the highest figures for which there is adequate evidentiary support; thus, a verdict will be reduced or set aside only if it is shown to exceed any rational appraisal or estimate of the damages that could be based on the evidence before the jury.") (quoting Segal v. Gilbert Color Sys., 746 F.2d 78, 81 (1st Cir. 1984) (internal quotation marks omitted)); Wood v. Diamond M Drilling Co., 691 F.2d 1165, 1168 (5th Cir. 1982) ("We have repeatedly held that a jury's award is not to be disturbed unless it is so large as to 'shock the judicial conscience,' indicate 'bias, passion, prejudice, corruption or other improper motive' on the part of the jury, or is 'contrary to all reason.'").

Ben Ezra's testimony more than passes these tests. In his first damages calculation, Ben Ezra used Columbia's actual revenues before and after NCRIC's tortious conduct. In his second calculation, he used actual cash flows from individual doctors who left the hospital in the month after NCRIC's illegal acts. Ben Ezra then used Columbia's actual collections data and its actual borrowing rates, and employed manifestly reasonable estimates, based on the available evidence, regarding Columbia's marginal costs and doctor retirement ages.

as well. Accordingly, while my overall opinion is specific with regard to date, and based on a reasonable assumption, it is not limited with respect to that assumption." Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 24.

Remarkably, three of the four primary cases cited by NCRIC (see Mot. at 3-4) have nothing to do with damages, and NCRIC's primary case even affirmed the admission of the challenged (non-damages) expert testimony. See In re Melton, 597 A.2d 892, 902 (D.C. 1991) (en banc) (allowing expert psychiatric testimony based on information reported by relatives of the patient); Toy v. District of Columbia, 549 A.2d 1, 7-8 (D.C. 1988) (finding no sufficient basis in evidence for a national standard of care for police departments); Dyas v. United States, 376 A.2d 827, 832 (D.C. 1977) (refusing to allow the admission of expert testimony regarding the reliability of eyewitness testimony). The only case NCRIC cites that deals with damages, Washington Metro. Area Transit Auth. v. Davis, 606 A.2d 165 (D.C. 1992), is nothing like this case. There, after trial, the court determined that there was insufficient evidence of the expert's hypothesis that the decedent would have had a well-paying career as a professional. See id. at 177. This assumption was contradicted by record evidence that the decedent was, in fact, a C student in grade school. See id. No such deficiency in proof exists in Ben Ezra's damages model, which is firmly planted in the available evidence of Columbia's financial performance.

B. Ben Ezra's Analysis Easily Satisfies the Dyas Test

The test for the admissibility of expert testimony in the District of Columbia rests on a three-part analysis:

> (1) the subject matter must be so distinctively related to some science, profession, business or occupation as to be beyond the ken of the average [juror], (2) the witness must have sufficient skill, knowledge, or experience in that field or calling as to make it appear that his opinion or inference will probably aid the trier in his search for truth, and (3) expert testimony is inadmissible if the state of the pertinent art or scientific knowledge does not permit a reasonable opinion to be asserted even by an expert.

Nixon v. United States, 728 A.2d 582 (D.C. 1999) (quoting Dyas v. United States, 376

A.2d 827 (D.C. 1977)). Notably, NCRIC does not dispute that Ben Ezra's report meets each of these prongs.

First, NCRIC does not claim that the subject matter of Ben Ezra's testimony – the calculation of the present value of damages incurred by Columbia as a result of NCRIC's tortious conduct – is not distinctively related to accounting, Ben Ezra's area of expertise. Nor does NCRIC dispute that the methodologies employed by Ben Ezra in estimating damages are scientifically valid and accepted. See Mot. at 6 (choosing not to challenge the use of "discounted cash flow analysis," but only how Ben Ezra "appli[ed]" it here) (emphasis added).

Second, NCRIC makes no challenge to Ben Ezra's qualifications to offer his opinion. Nor could they do so. Ben Ezra is Professor of Accountancy at the George Washington University's School of Business and Public Management. He is also a certified public accountant with 25 years of accounting experience, including service as a Division Chief in charge of department-wide financial systems at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and as Director of Corporate Analysis at the Corporation for National Service (charged with, among other things, administering the Americorps program).

Third, NCRIC does not dispute that the state of the art in accounting allows an expert to come to a reasonable opinion in this case.

Plainly, under Dyas, Columbia should be permitted to present Ben Ezra's testimony.

C. NCRIC's Specific Objections Provide No Basis For Exclusion

Unable to point to any basis for excluding Ben Ezra under Dyas and without even mentioning applicable case law on the lightened burden for establishing damages, NCRIC now, just as it did at summary judgment, bases its argument for exclusion on the unsupported assertion that Ben Ezra failed to consider supposedly relevant data, coupled with the erroneous assertion that a party must prove damages with minute particularity. There is no authority in the law for such a result. Once an expert's methodology passes Dyas and his damages estimate is reasonable under the lightened standard applicable to damages evidence, there is no basis for exclusion. When the argument for exclusion is that an expert has "misapplied the generally valid principles" underlying the expert's model, courts will not exclude the opinion, recognizing that the "identification of such flaws in generally reliable scientific evidence is precisely the role of cross-examination." Quiet Tech. DC-8, Inc. v. Hurel-Dubois UK Ltd., 326 F.3d 1333, 1344-45 (11th Cir. 2003). "As a general rule, the factual basis of an expert opinion goes to the credibility of the testimony, not the admissibility, and it is up to the opposing party to examine the factual basis for the opinion in cross-examination." Hose v. Chicago Northwestern Transp. Co., 70 F.3d 968, 974 (8th Cir. 1995) (quoting Loudermill v. Dow Chem. Co., 863 F.2d 566, 570 (8th Cir. 1988)). It is only if "an expert's opinion is 'so fundamentally unsupported that it can offer no assistance to the jury'" that an opinion may be excluded rather than subjected to cross-examination. Id. (quoting Loudermill, 863 F.2d at 570). When, as here, the party opposing admission of expert testimony is "arguing with [the expert's] conclusions, not his methodology in arriving at certain opinions," the proper outcome is to allow that party to "attack [the expert's] inclusion or exclusion of certain possibilities upon cross-examination at trial." Smith v. Ford Motor Co., 882 F. Supp. 770, 775 (N.D. Ind. 1995). This is especially true when the party attacking the expert's conclusions "received a copy of [the] report" well before trial. International Adhesive Coating Co. v. Bolton Emerson Int'l, Inc., 851 F.2d 540, 545 (1st Cir. 1988). Because opposing counsel has an opportunity to review and critique assumptions made in the expert report, the "burden is on opposing counsel through cross-examination to explore and expose any weaknesses in the underpinnings of the expert's opinion," and if "the factual underpinning of an expert's opinion in weak, it is a matter affecting the weight and credibility of the testimony – a question to be resolved by the jury." Id. at 544.

1. NCRIC's first and primary argument drives the point home. NCRIC complains that Ben Ezra erred in selecting the fiscal year 2000 data, the year before NCRIC's tortious conduct, as a benchmark for measuring damages. Mot. at 6-7.

But NCRIC does not dispute that the fiscal year 2000 data is the "most current" data available prior to NCRIC's tortious activity – and thus the very best evidence of Columbia's revenue unaffected by NCRIC's wrongdoing. Id. at 7. NCRIC also ignores Ben Ezra's testimony that he checked and confirmed that fiscal year 2000 was "not an extraordinary year for the hospital with regard to volumes or utilization," but a good representation of Columbia's revenue stream in a normal year, unaffected by NCRIC's tortious conduct. Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 32. And contrary to NCRIC's insinuation that Ben Ezra chose not to use data from prior years because they did not fit his model, see Mot. at 7, Ben Ezra's comment about the unutilized data "not looking right" was a reference to the fact that Columbia's data from previous years was incomplete and unavailable. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶¶ 26 & 31; supra n. 1. Indeed, NCRIC does not identify any other available benchmark evidence that Ben Ezra could have, but did not, use.[4]

Tellingly, NCRIC does not cite a single case excluding expert damages testimony in remotely analogous circumstances. To the contrary, the cases it cites undermine its cause. As previously explained, In re Melton not only upheld admission of the expert testimony at issue, but it also has nothing to do with damages, while Davis involved factual discrepancies unlike anything that NCRIC alleges. Carter v. Shoppers Food Warehouse, 727 A.2d 958 (Md. App. 1999), likewise has nothing to do with damages. There, the investigator that wished to present expert testimony on causation for plaintiff did not so much as examine the type of floor mat that caused the accident at issue. See id. at 157. Unlike that expert, Ben Ezra is personally familiar with the finances of Columbia both before and after NCRIC's torts.[5] In fact, court after court has permitted exactly the sort of before-and-after damages testimony Ben Ezra offers here. See, e.g., Conwood Co., L.P. v. United States Tobacco Co., 290 F.3d 768, 793 (6th Cir. 2002) (declaring the before-and-after methodology to be "generally accepted"); Lehrman v. Gulf Oil Corp., 500 F.2d 659, 667 (5th Cir. 1974) (noting that the "before and after theory" is a "generally recognized method[] of proving lost profits"); In re Cardizem CD Antitrust Litig., 200 F.R.D. 297, 323 (E.D. Mich. 2001) ("[I]t is not disputed that the 'before and after' method is a commonly used economic methodology."). The jury is entitled to give NCRIC's criticism the weight it feels appropriate, but that critique is not a basis for barring Ben Ezra's testimony.

[4] Nor is an expert to do anything more than rely on the data that is available. A party cannot preclude a plaintiff from recovering by complaining that they did not use data that doesn't exist. See, e.g., Migerobe, Inc. v. Certina USA, Inc., 924 F.2d 1330, 1339 (5th Cir. 1991) (rejecting challenge to damages awarded to retailer based on corollary sales from a loss leader as being too speculative: "Certina is not entitled to complain about Migerobe's inability to provide a more precise estimate when such precision has been made all but impossible because of Certina's own breach").

2. Although NCRIC attacks Ben Ezra's use of a 30% marginal cost figure, NCRIC does not dispute that Columbia lacks accounting records from which Ben Ezra could derive its actual marginal cost rate. Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 26. In the absence of such records, an expert is plainly permitted to make a "reasonable estimate," especially in the damages context. See, e.g., A.W.G. Farms, Inc. v. Federal Crop Ins. Corp., 757 F.2d 720, 729 (8th Cir. 1985) ("Experts routinely testify on many aspects of damage claims notwithstanding the fact that valuation estimates oftentimes are based on physical evidence that is no longer available. The use of such expert testimony rests on the settled rule that once the fact of damage is determined to exist, reasonable estimates may suffice to prove the damage."); Body Rustproofing, Inc. v. Michigan Bell Tel. Co., 149 Mich. App. 385, 391 (1986) ("[W]hen the nature of a case permits only an estimation of damages or a part of the damages with certainty, it is proper to place before the jury all the facts and circumstances which have a tendency to show their probably amount."). Indeed, courts have even upheld the award of damages to startup companies with no proven track record, as opposed to established concerns like Columbia, based on expert testimony. See Central Telecomms., Inc. v. TCI Cablevision, Inc., 800 F.2d 711, 730 (8th Cir. 1986) (allowing damages "where the damage award was based on the best evidence available, and where the estimate of loss is reasonable"). See also pp. 4-6, supra (discussing lightened burden applicable to admissibility of damages evidence).

[5] The remainder of NCRIC's cases are likewise inapt. The decision in Keranan v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 743 A.2d 703 (D.C. 2000), noted that none of plaintiff's witnesses had testified as to the predicate acts by Amtrak necessary to demonstrate negligence, and thus lay a foundation for liability and damages. See id. at 717. Here, Columbia will have a great deal of lay testimony to demonstrate that it was injured by NCRIC. Anderson v. Whittaker Corp., 692 F. Supp. 764 (W.D. Mich. 1988), rejected as incredible the assumption that decedents' earnings would have increased by 9 to 10 percent annually for the remainder of their work lives. See id. at 769. Here, Ben Ezra's conservative methodology makes no such assumption. Indeed, Ben Ezra even refuses to take into account changes that have in fact occurred that would increase the amount of Columbia's damages, and makes a host of assumptions in NCRIC's favor. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 10.

Nor does NCRIC remotely dispute that a 30% marginal cost rate is, in fact, a "reasonable estimate" of Columbia's marginal costs. Ben Ezra employed his experience in the accounting profession for 25 years, his service on the Board of Directors at Columbia, and a widely used managerial accounting textbook – and Ben Ezra deliberately chose to employ a marginal cost rate at "the high end" of any plausible range, to ensure that his damages calculation was conservative and any question was resolved in NCRIC's favor. See p. 3, supra. NCRIC disputes none of this. In fact, a year after Ben Ezra's report containing his calculation of marginal costs was made available to them and two years after discovery commenced, NCRIC still offers no alternative estimate of Columbia's marginal cost rate and supplies no evidence suggesting that Ben Ezra's estimate was anything other than a conservative figure favoring NCRIC, just as Ben Ezra testified. See id. ¶¶ 26-28. The reasonableness of Ben Ezra's estimate is only further confirmed by Coventry Health Care of Kansas, Inc. v. Via Christi Health Sys., Inc., 176 F. Supp. 2d 1207 (D. Kan. 2001), which found as a fact that "[g]enerally, 70% of a hospital's costs are viewed as fixed costs." Id. at 1224. Again, Ben Ezra arrived at a reasonable estimate based on the best available evidence; NCRIC can ask for no more than that.[6]

3. NCRIC seeks to take Ben Ezra to task for not independently verifying that each of the doctors who left in October 2000 did so because of NCRIC's actions. See Mot. at 10. But NCRIC's objection holds no traction: whether the NCRIC doctors left as a result of NCRIC's torts is and will be a central and hotly contested issue of fact at trial, and this Court has already found that multiple issues of material fact exist in this regard. See Opinion Denying NCRIC's Motion for Summary Judgment at 19 (Apr. 10, 2003). If the jury credits Columbia's testimony that doctors left because of NCRIC, Ben Ezra's calculation will permit them a means for ascertaining damages with the requisite "reasonable certainty." See Diversey Corp. v. Chem-Source Corp., 125 N.M. 748, 756 (1998) ("[I]t is permissible for non-experts in cases like the instant one to lay the foundation for an expert's testimony."); Ryan v. Kansas Power & Light Co., 249 Kan. 1, 9 (1991) ("[A] non-expert qualified witness may corroborate and provide foundation testimony for the expert testimony on damages."); Coal Res., Inc. v. Gulf & W. Indus., Inc., 954 F.2d 1263, 1265-66 (6th Cir. 1992) (upholding admission of expert testimony on damages in retrial, even though it had been excluded in earlier trial, because new testimony at [6] Nor is there any similarity between any of the expert testimony excluded in the cases cited by NCRIC and the well-supported testimony Ben Ezra will give at trial. Skrabak v. Skrabak, 673 A.2d 732 (Md. App. 1996), involved the bizarre assumption on the part of the expert that the four nurses employed in a doctor's practice were responsible for creating the same amount of institutional goodwill as the doctor himself. See id. at 739. No such counterintuitive assumptions are present in the Ben Ezra report. In K.W. Plastics v. United States Can Co., 131 F. Supp. 2d 1289 (M.D. Ala. 2001), the expert did not so much as investigate the cost to purchase the equipment he claimed was needed. See id. at 1293. Here, it is undisputed that Ben Ezra investigated all of the data and assumptions on which he relied.

retrial had established a factual basis for testimony). And, once again, NCRIC cites not a single contrary authority excluding evidence on the basis it now proffers.[7]

4. NCRIC attacks Ben Ezra's second damages model for its assumption that doctors will retire at age 65, but this unremarkable assumption is based on Ben Ezra's own investigation and working knowledge of Columbia's physicians, see Ben Ezra Decl. ¶¶ 22-23, and is confirmed by other record evidence. See Rifka Decl. ¶ 11; Ben Ezra Dep. at 153-55. Again, in calculating damages, exactitude is not required and an expert is permitted to use reasonable inferences in estimating damages. See, e.g., A.W.G. Farms, supra; Body Rustproofing, supra. NCRIC provides no argument, and cites absolutely no authority, suggesting that Ben Ezra's use of an age 65 retirement assumption remotely warrants exclusion.[8]

5. NCRIC claims that the jury will be unduly influenced by Ben Ezra's expert accounting opinion because he is an outside director and chairman of the board of Columbia. NCRIC neglects to mention that Ben Ezra volunteers his services to Columbia and "receive[s] no monetary compensation" for the time he spends on behalf of Columbia. Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 9. And, in any event, such claims of bias are for the jury to resolve and are not the basis for exclusion. If interested individuals were not permitted to testify on damages, as NCRIC seems

[7] Shaw v. Strackhouse, 920 F.2d 1135 (3d Cir. 1992), dealt not with damages, but with whether experts correctly assessed the professional reasonableness of restrictions placed on the movement of a person who was institutionalized. Because the experts operated under the factually incorrect premise that plaintiff could not leave his chair, their opinions were disregarded. See id. at 1142. Pennsylvania Dental Ass'n v. Med. Serv. Ass'n, 745 F.2d 248 (3d Cir. 1984), likewise excluded the report of a non-damages expert who provided no factual support whatsoever for his proposed market definition, see id. at 262, while Concord Boat Corp. v. Brunswick Corp., 207 F.3d 1039 (8th Cir. 2000), involved an expert whose model failed to account for undisputed facts and events in the relevant market, see id. at 1057. NCRIC has pointed to no assumptions in Ben Ezra's report that are contradicted by undisputed facts. Indeed, Ben Ezra's second damages model is set up in such a way that once a jury determines which doctors left as a result of NCRIC's torts, Ben Ezra's calculations can be applied to ascertain the damages attributable to the departure of each individual doctor. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 19.

[8] Moreover, this baseline assumption is in no way critical to Ben Ezra's report. His first damages analysis does not depend on any assumption about physicians' retirement age. And his second analysis is put together in a transparent manner, such that the damages suffered by Columbia with respect to each individual physician can be adjusted to yield a new damages number based upon the year in which that physician retires or is expected to retire. See Ben Ezra Decl. ¶ 24.

to suggest (without a shred of supporting authority), reams of case law would have to be tossed out the window. See, e.g., Cates v. Morgan Portable Building Corp., 591 F.2d 17, 22 (7th Cir. 1979) (instructing that opinion testimony of plaintiff motel owner on damages was entitled to weight "because of his prior knowledge of and experience in the motel business"); Static Control Components, Inc. v. Darkprint Imaging, Inc., 240 F. Supp. 2d 465, 481 (M.D.N.C. 2002) (instructing that official of litigant should be permitted to testify on damages issues at retrial on damages); Harmon Cable Communications of Nebraska L.P. v. Scope Cable Television, Inc., 237 Neb. 871, 887-88 (1991) (holding opinion testimony on damages by chairman of the board of plaintiff's predecessor company should be considered: "The fact that Harmon was a person having an interest in the outcome of the cases goes only to the weight of his testimony, not to its admissibility"); McCrory v. State, 67 Ohio St. 99, 104 n.2 (1981) (allowing testimony of expert for defendant despite the fact that his employer manufactured drug at issue, because "this should not render him incompetent to testify, but rather, should be taken into account in giving weight to his testimony"); Conde v. Vesicol Chem. Corp., 804 F. Supp. 972, 984-86 (S.D. Ohio 1992) (refusing to bar expert testimony by witness who was also plaintiff), aff'd, 24 F.3d 809 (6th Cir. 1994).[9] Plainly, NCRIC is free to cross-examine Ben Ezra, elicit his relationship with Columbia, and seek to argue bias – but, again, it has supplied no basis for his exclusion.

In sum, NCRIC does nothing more than repeat its failed arguments from summary judgment. It does not, and cannot, dispute that Ben Ezra's qualifications and methodology satisfy Dyas. NCRIC likewise continues to ignore the reasonable certainty standard applicable to damages evidence. And it cannot point to any case where damages studies remotely analogous to the one performed by Ben Ezra were excluded.

[9] The cases NCRIC cites here do not purport to deal with bias by a witness. Instead, United States v. Carswell, 922 F2d 876 (D.C. Cir. 1991), held that it was not an abuse of discretion for a trial court to exclude purported expert testimony by a witness whose experience only "probably gave him at least somewhat greater knowledge" of the issues than the average juror. Id. at 879. By contrast, NCRIC does not challenge the qualifications of Ben Ezra under Dyas. City of New York v. Pullman Inc., 662 F.2d 910 (2d Cir. 1981), did not even deal with expert testimony: instead, it affirmed the exclusion, as hearsay, of a report that contained "the tentative results of an incomplete investigation." Id. at 915.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, NCRIC's motion to exclude the opinions and testimony of Columbia's designated damages expert should be denied.

COLUMBIA'S OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE CERTAIN DOCUMENTS AND CALCULATIONS

NCRIC's motion to exclude certain of Columbia's exhibits seeks to deprive the jury of the opportunity to see a number of charts that would be helpful in understanding the disputed calculations central to the parties' contract dispute. Much of the parties' respective breach of contract claims revolves around the calculations contained in a single spreadsheet, compiled by NCRIC, that purports to summarize the status of claims in the contract. That spreadsheet contains NCRIC's disputed calculations alone, and the jury will certainly see that spreadsheet. Without also seeing Columbia's proffered exhibits, it will be difficult for the jury to perform the contract's calculations using the numbers that Columbia will argue should apply.

Hoping to prevent the jury from seeing Columbia's calculations, NCRIC argues that the exhibits are hearsay. But the exhibits fall under the well-established hearsay exception for admissible summaries, and NCRIC cites no authority to the contrary. Because at trial Columbia will have a chance to support the summaries with admissible evidence and to spell out for the jury the assumptions underlying the charts, these exhibits are admissible. Any questions that NCRIC wishes to raise regarding the exhibits can be raised on cross-examination, obviating any possible prejudice from admission of the exhibits. NCRIC's motion should be denied.

Background

When NCRIC brought this suit, it grounded its interpretation of the parties' agreement (the "Retro Plan" or "Plan") in a September 2000 reconciliation spreadsheet, which summarized the status of the claims at issue under the Plan. See Exh. 1, at 2.[1] Columbia disputes the accuracy of NCRIC's spreadsheet because, Columbia believes it can show, NCRIC misapplied three material terms of the contract: the Minimum Premium Factor, the Deposit Premium Factor, and the Development Factors. Just as NCRIC's September 2000 reconciliation spreadsheet summarizes the status of the claims at issue in the Plan as of September 2000 on the basis of NCRIC's inputs, Columbia's Exhibits 82-85 and 93 summarize the status of the claims at issue in the Plan as of September 2000 on the basis of Columbia's inputs. Specifically, the exhibits offer the following summaries:

- Exhibit 82 consists of a spreadsheet summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation calculations – but utilizing what Columbia believes to be the correct Minimum Premium Factor (60%) based on the express language of the Plan. See Retro Plan Addendum B ¶ 7, at 7 (defining Minimum Premium as "sixty percent (60%) of the Subject Premium"); see also Columbia Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute ("SMF") ¶¶ 32, 34 (citing Fargis Dep. at 454-55).

- Exhibit 83 consists of a spreadsheet summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation calculations – but utilizing what Columbia believes to be the correct Deposit Premium Factor (67%) based on the express language of the Plan. See Retro Plan Addendum B ¶ 7, at 6 (defining Deposit Premium as "the Subject Premium multiplied by sixty-seven (67%)"); see also SMF ¶¶ 24, 29 (citing Fargis Dep. at 452) & SMF Exh. 19 (Letter from Stephen S. Fargis to Anne D. Gaffey (Mar. 29, 2000)) (acknowledging that "the current contract reflects a deposit premium of 67%").

[1] Making plain the centrality of the spreadsheet, days after filing suit NCRIC served upon Columbia a Request for Admissions asking Columbia to admit the accuracy of each amount shown on the spreadsheet.

- Exhibit 84 consists of a spreadsheet summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation calculations – but utilizing what Columbia believes to be the correct Development Factors based on the clear application of Exhibit E of the Plan. See Retro Plan Exh. E ("Example of Plan Operation"); see also SMF ¶¶ 46-47 (citing Fargis Dep. at 706-07).

- Exhibit 85 consists of a spreadsheet summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation calculations – but utilizing what Columbia believes to be the correct Minimum Premium Factor (60%), Deposit Premium Factor (67%), and Development Factors. In other words, Exhibit 85 is itself a summary of Exhibits 82-84.

- Exhibit 93 walks through the calculations contained in Exhibit 85 in step-by-step fashion, summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation on the basis of NCRIC's admissions.

Each of the exhibits at issue thus serves as a useful summary of the calculations at issue in this litigation.

Discussion

The rules of evidence permit a party to introduce summary exhibits so long as those exhibits are supported by admissible evidence. See R.S. Willard Co. v. Columbia Van Lines Moving & Storage Co., 253 A.2d 454, 456-57 (D.C. 1969) ("This court has recognized that a witness may be allowed to give an abstract or summary from voluminous records if the source material is available to the other party."); Fed. R. Evid. 1006 ("The contents of voluminous writings, recordings, or photographs which cannot conveniently be examined in court may be presented in the form of a chart, summary, or calculation.").

Exhibits 82-85 and 93 are all supported by admissible documentary evidence and witness testimony. See supra (citing relevant provisions of Plan and NCRIC concessions in documents and deposition testimony). Nor could NCRIC seriously argue otherwise: many of the figures on the summary exhibits are those provided to Columbia by NCRIC, representing the compilation of numerous claim reports for different periods that NCRIC furnished to Columbia multiple times each year. See Exh. 1, at 3-10. Not only are the documents supporting each of these payments admissible under Rule 801(d)(2)(A) as non-hearsay admissions by a party opponent and already in the possession of NCRIC, but documents supporting the compilation of each of these payments were prepared by NCRIC and provided to Columbia, as well. See id. (correspondence from NCRIC Vice President David Osborn to Columbia President and CEO Larry Wilson, attaching reconciliation spreadsheet together with back-up documentation contained in claims reports from 1993-94 to 1998-99). The figures provided by NCRIC in these compilations are represented in the summary exhibits and form the basis for the calculations presented in these exhibits.

Because Columbia will present evidence supporting the summaries, the summaries are admissible evidence; the mere fact that the summary exhibits illustrate what the September 2000 reconciliation spreadsheet would look like under Columbia's interpretation of the contract, rather than NCRIC's interpretation, is, contrary to NCRIC's intimations, simply no reason to exclude the exhibits. See Martin v. Funtime, Inc., 963 F.2d 110, 116 (6th Cir. 1992) (summary exhibits properly admitted when records forming the basis for the exhibits were summarized by witnesses and opposing party was in possession of originals enabling party to evaluate exhibits' accuracy); McDaniel v. United States, 343 F.2d 785, 789 (5th Cir. 1965) ("It is perfectly proper that litigants be permitted the use of illustrative charts to summarize varying computations and to thus make the primary proof upon which such charts must be based more enlightening to the jury."); Roberts v. United States, 508 A.2d 110, 112 (D.C. 1986) ("Abstracts or summaries made from 'voluminous records' are admissible if the original source material is available for verification of the summary's accuracy."); United States v. Lemire, 720 F.2d 1327, 1347 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (even aside from Rule 1006, a summary of evidence can be put before the jury so long as it summarizes the testimony of witnesses or documents offered previously); R.S. Willard, 253 A.2d at 456-57 (permitting summary evidence of "numerous pages" of timesheets); United States v. Foley, 598 F.2d 1323, 1338 (4th Cir. 1979) (summary data admissible because underlying data used in summary charts came from party opposing summary).

Indeed, this case fits comfortably among those that have permitted summaries of data where relevant assumptions, such as a disputed multiplier, are presented to the jury. See, e.g., United States v. Jennings, 724 F.2d 436, 442 (5th Cir. 1984) (permitting use of summary exhibits to illustrate calculation of formula for reimbursement using disputed multiplier; even though "certain of the conclusions in the summary charts [were] undoubtedly the product of assumptions," exhibits admissible "so long as supporting evidence has been presented previously to the jury") (internal quotation marks omitted); see also, e.g., United States v. Richardson, 233 F.3d 1285, 1293-94 (11th Cir. 2000) ("[T]his court will permit the use of summary charts incorporating certain assumptions 'so long as supporting evidence has been presented previously to the jury . . . and where the court has "made it clear that the ultimate decision should be made by the jury as to what weight should be given to the evidence."'") (quoting United States v. Francis, 131 F.3d 1452, 1458 (11th Cir. 1997)), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 913 (2001).

Any concerns that NCRIC may have about Columbia's summaries, moreover, can, just as with NCRIC's own summary, be handled through cross-examination. See McDaniel, 343 F.2d at 789 ("The rule is that a summary of books and records is admissible, provided cross-examination is allowed and the original records are available."). NCRIC is of course entitled both to cross-examine Columbia's witnesses about the calculations in the charts and to present evidence supporting its contrary interpretation of the Plan. But NCRIC is not permitted to exclude relevant summary evidence from the jury's consideration simply because it disagrees with its content and wishes to have its own summary displayed without contest.[2]

[2] Though Columbia's exhibits are fully admissible evidence, they may also be used at

Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, NCRIC's Motion to Exclude Certain Documents and Calculations should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

Re: Physicians' Professional Liability Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement
Reconciliation Statement for Years 1994-1995 through 1998-1999

Dear Larry:

In accordance with the above-mentioned Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement between NCRIC, Inc. and Columbia, attached is the reconciliation calculation for the years 1994-1995, 1995-1996, 1996-1997, 1997-1998, and 1998-1999. This calculation utilizes loss information valued as of August 31, 2000.

The balance of $1,286,525 is due and payable on or before October 01, 2000.

Should you have any questions regarding this calculation, please contact me at (202) 969-3145.

Sincerely,

Dave Osborn
Vice President

NCRIC'S OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO CHANGE THE ORDER OF THE PROOF AT TRIAL

Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 12-I(e), Plaintiff NCRIC Inc. ("NCRIC") submits this Memorandum in Opposition to the motion of Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") to reverse the order of proof at trial.[1]

I. Introduction

While relying on cases from other jurisdictions for the wholly unremarkable proposition that decisions concerning the presentation of evidence rests within the sound discretion of the trial court, Columbia offers no compelling (or even substantive) basis for its argument that it should be permitted to upset the usual order of a trial and present its evidence first. In fact, the crux of Columbia's argument seems to be that it should go first simply because its claims outnumber NCRIC's claims and that the jury will be confused if NCRIC goes first. Columbia's argument is unpersuasive and should be rejected.

[1] Columbia's motion also requested a pre-trial hearing resolving the issue of admissibility of documents. On June 5, 2003, NCRIC filed (and requested oral argument on) a motion to exclude a number of Columbia's proposed documentary exhibits because they were prepared and solely authenticated by counsel for Columbia. As detailed in NCRIC's motion, many of those documents are the only "evidence" Columbia has in support of many of its claims in this lawsuit. Given the fundamental issues raised by these purported exhibits, NCRIC seeks the Court's resolution of these matters as well.

II. Argument

A. The Number of Columbia's Claims Does Not Justify Changing the Order of Presentation of Evidence

Columbia's position is that because it bears the burden of proof on its counterclaims, Columbia should proceed with its presentation of evidence first, noting that "[n]ormally the party with the burden of proof has the right to open and close the argument to the jury." Columbia's argument, however, lacks merit and should be rejected.[2]

Columbia's motion ignores the fact that NCRIC has the burden of proof on its claim of breach of contract against the hospital. While this Court certainly has discretion as to the order of presentation of evidence, in almost all cases discussing the point, the order of the trial is switched because the defendant has the burden of proof on the only issue remaining in the case, or when a plaintiff would be automatically awarded judgment if the defendant failed to prove an affirmative defense. See, e.g., Dishman v. American Gen. Assurance Co., 193 F. Supp. 2d 1119, 1127-28 (N.D. Iowa 2002) (holding that order of trial would be switched because plaintiff would automatically prevail if defendant failed to prove affirmative defense, which was only issue remaining for trial); Johnson v. Mortham, 915 F. Supp. 1574, 1582 (N.D. Fla. 1996) (holding that defendant would be permitted to present evidence first because the only remaining trial issue was whether defendants' race-conscious reasons for drawing congressional district

[2] In fact, the legal authority cited by Columbia is either inapposite or does not support Columbia's position. See, e.g., Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v. John Labatt Ltd., 89 F.3d 1339, 1344 (8th Cir. 1996) (holding that trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to change the order of presentation of proof at trial); Martin v. Chesebrough-Pond's, Inc., 614 F.2d 498, 501 (5th Cir. 1980) (holding that the trial court has discretion over whether two counter-defendants would be able to rebut each other's closing arguments); Control Data Corp. v. Babcock & Wilcox Co., No. C6-93-472, 1993 Minn. App. Lexis 989, at *18 (Minn. Ct. App. Oct. 12, 1993) (holding that Minnesota statute required changing order of presentation of evidence at trial).

16d-002436

passed strict scrutiny); Sweet Jan Joint Venture v. FDIC, 809 F. Supp. 1253, 1258 (N.D. Tex. 1992) (holding that defendant FDIC would present evidence first because unless it could prove it had right to recover on notes plaintiffs would automatically prevail).

Such facts are obviously not present here. NCRIC's multi-million dollar breach of contract claim — incorrectly characterized by Columbia as a "relatively minor issue" — remains at the focal point of this case. There is no reason to alter the order of presentation of the evidence. In fact, one of the cases cited by Columbia support's NCRIC's position on this point.

In Anheuser-Busch, Inc. v. John Labatt Ltd., 89 F.3d 1339 (8th Cir. 1996), the defendant moved to set the order of proof to conform to the evidence because it bore the burden of proof on one of the plaintiff's claims. The trail court denied the motion. After the defendant was found liable on all counts, it appealed the court's denial of its motion to set the order of proof. The Eighth Circuit held that as both parties bore the burden of proof on distinct counts of their causes of action, the defendant's routine burden did not justify altering the order of presentation of the evidence because the district court "understandably chose to allow the actual plaintiff, the party that filed the lawsuit, to proceed first." Id. at 1344. The instant case presents a similar situation: both parties bear the burden of proof on distinct causes of action. The number of causes of action put forth by both parties is not dispositive or controlling. Unlike cases where the defendant bears the only remaining burden, the circumstances here do not warrant a change of the order of presentation at trial. Cf. Johnson, 915 F. Supp. at 1582. Instead, NCRIC as the plaintiff and the party that initially filed the lawsuit should present its evidence first.

B. Denying Columbia's Motion Will Not Confuse the Jury

Columbia next argues that the sheer number of its counterclaims dictates that Columbia alone can present the totality of the case to the jury and NCRIC perforce will only present evidence of "a sliver" of the case. Columbia mischaracterizes NCRIC's case-in-chief illustrating how Columbia has breached the Retrospective Ratings Plan (the "Retro Plan") entered into between the parties. Although NCRIC has one claim, that claim is fundamental to this case and must be placed in the context of the entire history of the relationship between the parties for the jury's comprehension to the same extent as Columbia's ten remaining counterclaims. NCRIC will not be presenting a tiny slice of the facts surrounding the parties' claims. Notably, in its motion, Columbia itself agrees that both parties' claims involve similar evidence. See Columbia's Motion at 3. Rejecting Columbia's motion will not hamper the jury's ability to evaluate the parties' claims, as Columbia will still be presented the opportunities available to all defendants to introduce any facts it believes are omitted from NCRIC's presentation of evidence through cross-examination and its own presentation of witnesses.

III. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, Columbia's effort to place itself in the role of the plaintiff and altering the order of the evidence at trial should be rejected. Columbia has provided this Court with no factual or legal authority in support of such a fundamental trial change. NCRIC does, however, request that the Court set an oral hearing concerning the documents proffered by Columbia as exhibits in this case.

COLUMBIA'S OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION FOR REFERENCE TO A SPECIAL MASTER

After nearly three years of litigation, and on the eve of trial, NCRIC seeks to have a critical issue affecting liability – the "specific methodology and calculations which are proper under the Retro Plan," see Mot. at 8 – taken from the jury and decided by a special master. NCRIC's proposal for a special master is unsupported by Rule 53 or the pertinent case law. Indeed, courts that have addressed requests similar to NCRIC's have so rejected almost identical requests. (Point A, infra.) Such a referral would also violate Columbia's right to a jury trial by effectively asking a special master to decide liability on the parties' competing breach of contract claims. (Point B, infra). Finally, NCRIC's request would waste time and judicial resources because Columbia has numerous tort counterclaims that will, in any event, require presentation to a jury. (Point C, infra.) The motion should be denied.

Discussion

A. There Is No Reason for Reference to a Special Master

A special master may be appointed only in "unusual" or "exceptional" circumstances involving "complicated" issues. See SCR 53(b); La Buy v. Howes Leather Co., 352 U.S. 249, 258 (1957) (referral to special master "should seldom be made, and if at all only when unusual circumstances exist") (internal quotation marks omitted); Dairy Queen, Inc. v. Wood, 369 U.S. 469, 478 n.18 (1962) (same); Hiern v. Sarpy, 161 F.R.D. 332, 334-35 (E.D. La. 1995) ("'The minimum required is a demonstration that over and beyond a mere numerical quantitative analysis, the case is intrinsically complex.'") (quoting In re Watkins, 271 F.2d 771, 774 (5th Cir. 1959)).

NCRIC concedes that reference to a special master under Rule 53 is the "'exception and not the rule.'" Mot. at 6 (quoting SCR 53(b)). Nevertheless, NCRIC argues that this case is too "complicated" to be understood by a jury. It is not. As a court addressing an almost identical request held, determinations like those under the Retro Plan are not "complicated" within the meaning of Rule 53, "but instead, merely require[] a close reading of the Agreement and a precise calculation." Home Indem. Co. v. Farm House Foods Corp., 770 F. Supp. 1339, 1347 (E.D. Wis. 1991) (refusing to appoint special master in retrospective insurance premium case). Far more complex issues are routinely decided by juries in the District of Columbia and elsewhere. See, e.g., Clark v. Weisberg, No. 98 C 6214, 1999 WL 543191, at *4 (N.D. Ill. July 23, 1999) (finding case not complex enough to warrant appointment of special master despite allegations that millions of dollars were at issue and case involved over 436 transactions – and potentially 1,000 additional transactions – over a five year period, all of which would have to be verified with supporting documentation and analyzed under several operative partnership documents).

NCRIC has failed to demonstrate any reason to depart here from this settled conclusion. NCRIC describes the decisive issues in the case to be the determination of "the proper values of [the Retro Plan] factors and how these factors were or were not changed during the subsequent amendments to the 1993 Retro Plan." Mot. at 5. But "what numerical values should be used for the various factors included in the formula" is not a "complex[]" matter but "a question of material fact which should be decided by the jury." Home Indem., 770 F. Supp. at 1347-48 (rejecting suggestion that "calculation of the retrospective premium . . . is a complex matter and ill suited for determination by a jury"). NCRIC concedes that "there does not appear to be any published opinion in D.C. where a Special Master was appointed for a[n] insurance premiums calculation case." Mot. at 7. And its arguments illustrate why no special master is needed: several of NCRIC's arguments are simply efforts to read the parties' contract, using parole evidence, that conflict with its plain written terms. Columbia contends, for example, that the Deposit Premium Factor is 67% because the Plan expressly so states; NCRIC, meanwhile, argues that the Deposit Premium Factor is 62% notwithstanding the Plan's plain language. Compare, e.g., Columbia Summ. J. Reply at 6-8 (Columbia contending that Deposit Premium Factor is 67% because Plan states 67%) with NCRIC Summ. J. Opp'n at 16-17 & n.5 (NCRIC contending that Deposit Premium Factor is 62% notwithstanding that Plan states 67%) and Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute ¶ 29 (citing NCRIC testimony conceding that Deposit Premium Factor stated in Plan is 67%). A jury's decision whether to read a contract as written or to accept parol evidence is not a "complicated" matter at all. See supra. Plainly, reference to a special master is not warranted here.

B. Reference to a Special Master Would Interfere with Columbia's Right to a Jury Trial by Effectively Deciding Liability on the Parties' Breach of Contract Claims

Even if this case were sufficiently unusual and complex to otherwise warrant referral to a special master, doing so here would violate Columbia's right to trial by jury on all issues pertaining to liability. See, e.g., SCR 38, 39; New York v. Microsoft Corp., 224 F. Supp. 2d 76, 179 (D.D.C. 2002) ("references to special masters are improper where the master is called upon to determine the rights of the parties, rather than to enforce such rights") (citing United States v. Microsoft Corp., 147 F.3d 935, 954 (D.C. Cir. 1998)); id. at 180 ("[t]o empower the special master to engage in a determination of rights and obligations contravenes the parameters of appropriate use of a special master").

As then-Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg explained in granting a petition for mandamus, it is not permissible to "impose on the parties, over the objection of at least one of them, a magistrate or master as 'a surrogate judge' to try the controversy and determine liability." In re Bituminous Coal Operators' Ass'n, 949 F.2d 1165, 1169 (D.C. Cir. 1991). See also La Buy, 352 U.S. at 259 (reference to master appropriate "after the court has determined the over-all liability of defendants, provided the circumstances indicate that the use of the court's time is not warranted in receiving the proof and making the tabulation"); Wheeler v. Shoemaker, 78 F.R.D. 218, 223 (D.R.I. 1978) ("[T]ypically, in a jury trial, the master will review only complicated accounts for damages and not liability issues, no matter how complex.") (citing cases).

But that is precisely what NCRIC seeks here. According to NCRIC, "[t]he crux of the dispute in this case is that the parties differ as to their interpretation of the Retro Plan and the appropriate use of the various factors." Mot. at 7. Therefore, NCRIC suggests, a special master should be able to "make factual findings as to the specific methodology and calculations which are proper under the Retro Plan" and then "issue a finding of fact as to the final amount of Additional or Return Premium due at this time under the proper methodology." Id. at 8. Such a procedure would not, as NCRIC claims, merely "simplify the presentation of evidence and conduct of trial," id. (emphasis added); it would altogether eviscerate the trial on the parties' competing breach of contract claims: rather than preserving a meaningful role for the jury in determining liability on the breach of contract claims, the special master would make findings as to the very "crux of the dispute in this case."

For example, Columbia maintains that the Deposit Premium Factor is 67%, while NCRIC contends that it is 62%. See, e.g., April 2, 2003 Order at 6. If the special master makes a factual finding that 67% is the correct figure, then that would effectively constitute a finding that NCRIC breached the contract by applying a factor of 62%. And, once the special master makes findings not only as to the "proper" methodology but also as to "the final amount of Additional or Return Premium due," he will have ended the breach of contract inquiry altogether. NCRIC is not entitled to so undermine the jury's role as trier of fact. See Cadwell Indus., Inc. v. New York Hosp.-Cornell Med. Ctr., No. 88 Civ. 7307 (LMM), 1993 WL 60604, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 26, 1993) ("The Court is unable to justify the unacceptable risk, which the requested reference would necessarily realize, of having significant and dispositive issues taken away from the jury."). See also, e.g., In re Bituminous Coal Operators' Ass'n, 949 F.2d at 1169 (explaining that it is unacceptable to "impose on the parties, over the objection of at least one of them," a special master); Stauble v. Warrob, Inc., 977 F.2d 690, 695 (1st Cir. 1992) ("[T]he Constitution prohibits us from allowing the nonconsensual reference of a fundamental issue of liability to an adjudicator who does not possess the attributes that Article III demands."); Watkins, 271 F.2d at 775 (granting writ of mandamus and vacating order of reference to master because referral without consent "nullifies the right to an effective trial before a constitutional court").

The cases cited by NCRIC are grossly inapt: each case involved either use of a special master for an accounting of damages after liability had already been determined or was not at issue,[1] or a situation in which the parties consented to resolution of an issue by a special master.[2]

[1] In re Estate of Elkins, 692 A.2d 910, 911 (D.C. 1995) (court appointment of auditor-master to

Only two of the cases identified by NCRIC involved a reference to a special master in the context of a jury trial. In one case, the parties consented to the referral, and the court specifically noted that the referral was not for issues of liability but for damages only. See Beckmam, 579 A.2d at 657. In the other case, the Court of Appeals expressed concern that in addressing matters of liability the master had gone beyond his appointed task of performing an accounting – but the court ultimately did not decide the issue because the appellant had not adequately preserved the objection (thereby, in effect, consenting to the reference). See House of Wines, Inc. v. Sumter, 510 A.2d 492, 498 (D.C. 1986). NCRIC has cited no case in which a non-consenting party, which has invoked its right to a jury trial on both its defenses and its counterclaims, was subjected to a special master for determinations regarding liability.

C. Reference to a Special Master Would Not Aid the Efficient Resolution of This Case, But Would Waste the Parties Time and Judicial Resources

Contrary to NCRIC's suggestion that appointment of a special master would "simplify the presentation of evidence" and "conserve judicial resources," Mot. at 8, 9, the opposite is true: appointment of a special master would result in needless redundancy in the presentation of proof and waste both judicial and the litigants' resources.

Columbia's tort counterclaims, which are not part of NCRIC's special master referral request, are intimately intertwined with the contract issues that are subjects of NCRIC's request. In order to reach a verdict on Columbia's counterclaims, the jury will have to consider much, if perform accounting of estate); Quarles v. Quarles, 353 A.2d 285, 286 (D.C. 1976) (per curiam) (auditor-master appointed to evaluate parties' ability to pay child support).

[2] Kentucky Carbon Corp. v. Tennessee Valley Auth., No. 88-5708, 1989 WL 46982, at *2 (6th Cir. May 8, 1989) (per curiam) (noting special master was magistrate judge, who can act as special master only with parties' consent); Beckmam v. Farmer, 579 A.2d 618, 633 (D.C. 1990) ("[T]he parties agreed that the next phase of the case – the accounting – would require appointment of a special master.").

not all, of the same issues, evidence, and testimony as that which would be presented to the special master; this would result in substantial and needless duplication of effort and resources. For instance, Columbia has pleaded a claim for breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, alleging that NCRIC willfully rendered imperfect performance by, inter alia, performing reconciliations inaccurately. See Am. Answer and Counterclaims ¶¶ 111-117. Columbia also alleges that NCRIC unlawfully converted $1 million of Columbia's money as a condition for renewing the Plan. See id. Likewise, Columbia alleges that NCRIC breached its fiduciary duty to Columbia by, inter alia, failing to perform reconciliations honestly and accurately. See id. ¶¶ 118-122. All of these issues would, under NCRIC's proposal, be tried both to the special master, for breach of contract purposes, and to the jury, for tort purposes.

Court after court has refused referrals to special masters in circumstances, like here, where doing so would likely result in a duplication of effort and expense. See, e.g., Adventures in Good Eating, Inc. v. Best Places to Eat, Inc., 131 F.2d 809, 815 (7th Cir. 1942) ("It is a matter of common knowledge that references greatly increase the cost of litigation and delay and postpone the end of litigation."); United States v. Hooker Chems. & Plastics Corp., 123 F.R.D. 62, 63 (W.D.N.Y. 1988) (reference to special master "is likely to result in additional delay and expense"); Clark, 1999 WL 543191, at *4 (rejecting argument that "special master could increase the efficiency of the proceedings" in light of the "recognized . . . increased cost and delay associated with the use of special masters"); Cadwell Indus., 1993 WL 60604, at *3 (noting that "reference to a master would compromise Cadwell's right to a jury trial and would likely result in additional expense and delay").[3]

[3] In addition, one of Columbia's counterclaims is for fraud – including for false representations as to the amount of Additional or Return Premium due, see Am. Answer and Counterclaims ¶ 142, the very things that NCRIC would have the special master consider – and "actions for NCRIC has cited no case in which there was a reference to a special master notwithstanding that counterclaims implicating the same issues as those referenced to the special master would need to be presented to the jury after being presented to the special master. For this reason, too, this case does not present appropriate circumstances for appointment of a special master.

Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, NCRIC's Motion for Reference to a Special Master should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

COLUMBIA'S OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE CERTAIN DOCUMENTS AND CALCULATIONS

NCRIC's motion to exclude certain of Columbia's exhibits seeks to deprive the jury of the opportunity to see a number of charts that would be helpful in understanding the disputed calculations central to the parties' contract dispute. Much of the parties' respective breach of contract claims revolves around the calculations contained in a single spreadsheet, compiled by NCRIC, that purports to summarize the status of claims in the contract. That spreadsheet contains NCRIC's disputed calculations alone, and the jury will certainly see that spreadsheet. Without also seeing Columbia's proffered exhibits, it will be difficult for the jury to perform the contract's calculations using the numbers that Columbia will argue should apply.

Hoping to prevent the jury from seeing Columbia's calculations, NCRIC argues that the exhibits are hearsay. But the exhibits fall under the well-established hearsay exception for admissible summaries, and NCRIC cites no authority to the contrary. Because at trial Columbia will have a chance to support the summaries with admissible evidence and to spell out for the jury the assumptions underlying the charts, these exhibits are admissible. Any questions that NCRIC wishes to raise regarding the exhibits can be raised on cross-examination, obviating any possible prejudice from admission of the exhibits. NCRIC's motion should be denied.

Background

When NCRIC brought this suit, it grounded its interpretation of the parties' agreement (the "Retro Plan" or "Plan") in a September 2000 reconciliation spreadsheet, which summarized the status of the claims at issue under the Plan. See Exh. 1, at 2.[1] Columbia disputes the accuracy of NCRIC's spreadsheet because, Columbia believes it can show, NCRIC misapplied three material terms of the contract: the Minimum Premium Factor, the Deposit Premium Factor, and the Development Factors. Just as NCRIC's September 2000 reconciliation spreadsheet summarizes the status of the claims at issue in the Plan as of September 2000 on the basis of NCRIC's inputs, Columbia's Exhibits 82-85 and 93 summarize the status of the claims at issue in the Plan as of September 2000 on the basis of Columbia's inputs. Specifically, the exhibits offer the following summaries:

- Exhibit 82 consists of a spreadsheet summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation calculations – but utilizing what Columbia believes to be the correct Minimum Premium Factor (60%) based on the express language of the Plan. See Retro Plan Addendum B ¶ 7, at 7 (defining Minimum Premium as "sixty percent (60%) of the Subject Premium"); see also Columbia Statement of Material Facts Not in Dispute ("SMF") ¶¶ 32, 34 (citing Fargis Dep. at 454-55).

- Exhibit 83 consists of a spreadsheet summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation calculations – but utilizing what Columbia believes to be the correct Deposit Premium Factor (67%) based on the express language of the Plan. See Retro Plan Addendum B ¶ 7, at 6 (defining Deposit Premium as "the Subject Premium multiplied by sixty-seven (67%)"); see also SMF ¶¶ 24, 29 (citing Fargis Dep. at 452) & SMF Exh. 19 (Letter from Stephen S. Fargis to Anne D. Gaffey (Mar. 29, 2000)) (acknowledging that "the current contract reflects a deposit premium of 67%").

[1] Making plain the centrality of the spreadsheet, days after filing suit NCRIC served upon Columbia a Request for Admissions asking Columbia to admit the accuracy of each amount shown on the spreadsheet.

- Exhibit 84 consists of a spreadsheet summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation calculations – but utilizing what Columbia believes to be the correct Development Factors based on the clear application of Exhibit E of the Plan. See Retro Plan Exh. E ("Example of Plan Operation"); see also SMF ¶¶ 46-47 (citing Fargis Dep. at 706-07).

- Exhibit 85 consists of a spreadsheet summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation calculations – but utilizing what Columbia believes to be the correct Minimum Premium Factor (60%), Deposit Premium Factor (67%), and Development Factors. In other words, Exhibit 85 is itself a summary of Exhibits 82-84.

- Exhibit 93 walks through the calculations contained in Exhibit 85 in step-by-step fashion, summarizing the September 2000 reconciliation on the basis of NCRIC's admissions.

Each of the exhibits at issue thus serves as a useful summary of the calculations at issue in this litigation.

Discussion

The rules of evidence permit a party to introduce summary exhibits so long as those exhibits are supported by admissible evidence. See R.S. Willard Co. v. Columbia Van Lines Moving & Storage Co., 253 A.2d 454, 456-57 (D.C. 1969) ("This court has recognized that a witness may be allowed to give an abstract or summary from voluminous records if the source material is available to the other party."); Fed. R. Evid. 1006 ("The contents of voluminous writings, recordings, or photographs which cannot conveniently be examined in court may be presented in the form of a chart, summary, or calculation.").

Exhibits 82-85 and 93 are all supported by admissible documentary evidence and witness testimony. See supra (citing relevant provisions of Plan and NCRIC concessions in documents and deposition testimony). Nor could NCRIC seriously argue otherwise: many of the figures on the summary exhibits are those provided to Columbia by NCRIC, representing the compilation of numerous claim reports for different periods that NCRIC furnished to Columbia multiple times each year. See Exh. 1, at 3-10. Not only are the documents supporting each of these payments admissible under Rule 801(d)(2)(A) as non-hearsay admissions by a party opponent and already in the possession of NCRIC, but documents supporting the compilation of each of these payments were prepared by NCRIC and provided to Columbia, as well. See id. (correspondence from NCRIC Vice President David Osborn to Columbia President and CEO Larry Wilson, attaching reconciliation spreadsheet together with back-up documentation contained in claims reports from 1993-94 to 1998-99). The figures provided by NCRIC in these compilations are represented in the summary exhibits and form the basis for the calculations presented in these exhibits.

Because Columbia will present evidence supporting the summaries, the summaries are admissible evidence; the mere fact that the summary exhibits illustrate what the September 2000 reconciliation spreadsheet would look like under Columbia's interpretation of the contract, rather than NCRIC's interpretation, is, contrary to NCRIC's intimations, simply no reason to exclude the exhibits. See Martin v. Funtime, Inc., 963 F.2d 110, 116 (6th Cir. 1992) (summary exhibits properly admitted when records forming the basis for the exhibits were summarized by witnesses and opposing party was in possession of originals enabling party to evaluate exhibits' accuracy); McDaniel v. United States, 343 F.2d 785, 789 (5th Cir. 1965) ("It is perfectly proper that litigants be permitted the use of illustrative charts to summarize varying computations and to thus make the primary proof upon which such charts must be based more enlightening to the jury."); Roberts v. United States, 508 A.2d 110, 112 (D.C. 1986) ("Abstracts or summaries made from 'voluminous records' are admissible if the original source material is available for verification of the summary's accuracy."); United States v. Lemire, 720 F.2d 1327, 1347 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (even aside from Rule 1006, a summary of evidence can be put before the jury so long as it summarizes the testimony of witnesses or documents offered previously); R.S. Willard, 253 A.2d at 456-57 (permitting summary evidence of "numerous pages" of timesheets); United States v. Foley, 598 F.2d 1323, 1338 (4th Cir. 1979) (summary data admissible because underlying data used in summary charts came from party opposing summary).

Indeed, this case fits comfortably among those that have permitted summaries of data where relevant assumptions, such as a disputed multiplier, are presented to the jury. See, e.g., United States v. Jennings, 724 F.2d 436, 442 (5th Cir. 1984) (permitting use of summary exhibits to illustrate calculation of formula for reimbursement using disputed multiplier; even though "certain of the conclusions in the summary charts [were] undoubtedly the product of assumptions," exhibits admissible "so long as supporting evidence has been presented previously to the jury") (internal quotation marks omitted); see also, e.g., United States v. Richardson, 233 F.3d 1285, 1293-94 (11th Cir. 2000) ("[T]his court will permit the use of summary charts incorporating certain assumptions 'so long as supporting evidence has been presented previously to the jury . . . and where the court has "made it clear that the ultimate decision should be made by the jury as to what weight should be given to the evidence."'") (quoting United States v. Francis, 131 F.3d 1452, 1458 (11th Cir. 1997)), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 913 (2001).

Any concerns that NCRIC may have about Columbia's summaries, moreover, can, just as with NCRIC's own summary, be handled through cross-examination. See McDaniel, 343 F.2d at 789 ("The rule is that a summary of books and records is admissible, provided cross-examination is allowed and the original records are available."). NCRIC is of course entitled both to cross-examine Columbia's witnesses about the calculations in the charts and to present evidence supporting its contrary interpretation of the Plan. But NCRIC is not permitted to exclude relevant summary evidence from the jury's consideration simply because it disagrees with its content and wishes to have its own summary displayed without contest.[2]

[2] Though Columbia's exhibits are fully admissible evidence, they may also be used at

For the reasons stated above, NCRIC's Motion to Exclude Certain Documents and Calculations should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

Re: Physicians' Professional Liability Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement
Reconciliation Statement for Years 1994-1995 through 1998-1999

Dear Larry:

In accordance with the above-mentioned Retrospective Rating Plan Agreement between NCRIC, Inc. and Columbia, attached is the reconciliation calculation for the years 1994-1995, 1995-1996, 1996-1997, 1997-1998, and 1998-1999. This calculation utilizes loss information valued as of August 31, 2000.

The balance of $1,286,525 is due and payable on or before October 01, 2000.

Should you have any questions regarding this calculation, please contact me at (202) 969-3145.

Sincerely,

COLUMBIA'S OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE EVIDENCE OF CERTAIN COUNTERCLAIM DAMAGES

NCRIC has moved to exclude the testimony of both Columbia's damages expert, Peter Ben Ezra, and any other Columbia witnesses who are prepared to give factual evidence regarding the damages incurred by Columbia as a result of NCRIC's tortious misconduct. In essence, NCRIC wants a trial without evidence regarding the damages it caused. However, District of Columbia law squarely permits a witness to present lay as well as expert testimony concerning damages. And a plethora of precedent from the District of Columbia and elsewhere confirms the common-sense notion that people intimately involved in running a business are competent to offer testimony as to the effects of various events upon that business. Plainly, Columbia should be permitted to adduce evidence of the damage it suffered. NCRIC's motion should be denied.

Factual Background

The damages Columbia will seek at trial are substantial and well-known to NCRIC.

First, Columbia will seek $20 million in lost profits resulting from business lost as a result of NCRIC's tortious conduct. In support of this claim, Columbia will present the expert testimony of Professor Peter Ben Ezra. See Expert Report of Peter Ben Ezra (Jan. 22, 2002).

Second, Columbia will show that NCRIC's conduct resulted in the cancellation of its annual fundraising galas; fact witnesses will explain that this resulted in a loss of approximately $1.5 million per year, based on actual, historical experience. E.g., Rifka Dep. at 77, 79; Wilson Dep. at 166.

Third, fact witnesses will explain that, as a result of NCRIC's conduct, Columbia lost a $35 million HUD loan from the government that had an exceptionally low interest rate (4.5%) compared with Columbia's commercial borrowing rate (then, 10.5%). Columbia's board members will explain from their personal knowledge and participation in the process that the lost HUD loan would have meant reduced interest payments to Columbia of approximately $2.1 million per year. See, e.g., Wilson Dep. at 260-261.

Fourth, Columbia will seek to recover administrative expenses associated with its declaration of bankruptcy that resulted from NCRIC's misconduct, expenses that were specifically disclosed to NCRC two years ago, on July 23, 2001. Indeed, NCRIC has been on notice since the outset of this case in January 2001 that Columbia would claim such damages. See Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.'s Amended Answer and Counterclaims ("Counterclaims") ¶ 63 ("In February 1998, Medical Center filed for bankruptcy, and remained in bankruptcy until early 1999. During this time, Medical Center incurred additional expenses as a result of its bankruptcy"); id. ¶¶ 62, 109, 116, 138, 146, 153 (alleging that NCRIC's misdeeds proximately and directly caused Columbia's insolvency); see also CHWMC 00002511 (attached as Exhibit A) (document produced to NCRIC in July of 2001 summarizing Columbia's costs incurred in bankruptcy).

Finally, Columbia has indicated that it will seek appropriate pre-judgment interest and punitive damages. See Counterclaims, "Relief Requested"; Defendant's Objections and Responses to Plaintiff's Supplemental Interrogatories (May 14, 2003).

Discussion

In this motion, NCRIC seeks to limit the scope of Ben Ezra's testimony, as well as preclude any testimony regarding the losses Columbia suffered from the cancellation of its annual gala, the forgone HUD loan, and its bankruptcy expenses. NCRIC's extraordinary request lacks legal authority and misstates the factual record.

A. Ben Ezra May Testify As An Expert Within the Scope of His Report and As a Lay Witness Otherwise

NCRIC's request with respect to Ben Ezra is not at all clear. NCRIC says it wants a ruling that Ben Ezra may not "testify beyond the scope of his report." Mot. at 3. Plainly, his expert testimony will be based on the report he issued. But, simply by virtue of issuing an expert report, Ben Ezra may not be precluded from giving lay testimony on other issues as NCRIC seems to suggest. District of Columbia law on this score is unequivocal. See, e.g., Eason v. United States, 704 A.2d 284 (D.C. 1997) (en banc) (holding that a witness can testify as both an expert witness and a lay witness); Glorious Food, Inc. v. Georgetown Prospect Place Assocs., 648 A.2d 946, 949 (D.C. 1994) (holding that trial court abused its discretion in refusing to allow witness who had previously been designated as an expert to give fact testimony). Indeed, as a member of Columbia's Board of Directors through the relevant period, Ben Ezra has significant personal knowledge of the facts and will, accordingly, be a significant lay witness on many issues in dispute. Notable, NCRIC cites not a single authority for excluding such lay testimony.[1]

[1] This case is nothing at all like District of Columbia v. Kora & Williams Corp., 743 A.2d 682 (D.C. 1999), in which the experts being deposed repudiated many of the expert opinions that had been provided in their expert reports. See id. at 689. Nor does Mizrahi v. Schwarzmann, 741 A.2d 399, 405 (D.C. 1999), in which the plaintiff was unable to

B. The "Other Damages" Identified by NCRIC Do Not Require Expert Testimony – and NCRIC Cites No Case For Its Contrary Suggestion

NCRIC argues that three "other" categories of Columbia's damages require expert proof: those pertaining to reputational harm, lost gala proceeds, and the lost HUD financing. Mot. at 5-7. As to the first category, Columbia is offering expert proof: Ben Ezra will testify regarding Columbia's lost profits that flowed from NCRIC's tortious conduct, including its defamatory statements. As to the other two categories, NCRIC is simply wrong that expert testimony is required as a matter of law.

It is long-settled that, once the "fact of damage" is established, a party faces a "lightened burden" in proving the amount of damages and need "prove damages only with reasonable certainty." Affordable Elegance Travel, Inc. v. Worldspan, L.P., 774 A.2d 320, 329 (D.C. 2001) (quoting Edmund J. Flynn Co. v. LaVay, 431 A.2d 543, 550 (D.C. 1981)). Thus, the damages claimed by a plaintiff "need not be susceptible of computation with exactitude" in order to permit their award. District of Columbia v. Gandy, 450 A.2d 896, 901 (D.C. 1982), modified on other grounds, 458 A.2d 414 (D.C. 1983). An award of damages "will be upheld . . . even if it is not proven with mathematical exactitude." Affordable Elegance Travel, 774 A.2d at 329. A party should not "be deprived of compensatory damages merely because they cannot be computed with exactitude." Spar v. Obwoya, 369 A.2d 173, 180 (D.C. 1977).

Lay witnesses are clearly capable of providing the factual basis for a reasonable estimate of damages. With respect to the gala, lay witnesses will offer evidence regarding gala receipts actually obtained by Columbia immediately before and after NCRIC's tortious conduct. Such depose the defendant's experts because of the discovery schedule, bear any resemblance to this case. Mr. Ben Ezra was timely presented for deposition, and NCRIC does not suggest otherwise. Finally, Johnson v. United States, 683 A.2d 1087, 1099 (D.C. 1996), which did no more than adopt the familiar balancing principle of Federal Rule of Evidence 403 into District of Columbia law, has no relevance here, as NCRIC never indicates what would be prejudicial about allowing businesspeople to testify about the damages that their business suffered.

before-and-after testimony from fact witnesses is routinely permitted to establish damages. Indeed, the Court of Appeals specifically stated in Columbus Properties, Inc. v. O'Connell, 644 A.2d 444 (D.C. 1994), explained that a lay witness was perfectly competent to testify that "her ability to use her [own] office had decreased between thirty-three and fifty percent" after defendants' substandard maintenance. Id. at 446. "[I]t was not necessary for O'Connell to introduce [expert] testimony in order to establish her claim" because her own testimony "provided 'some reasonable basis on which to estimate damages.'" Id. at 447 (quoting Bedell v. Inver Housing, Inc., 506 A.2d 202, 205 (D.C. 1986)). See also Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Goudie, 290 A.2d 826, 833 (D.C. 1972) (allowing owner of coffeehouse to prove damages caused by inadequate air conditioning through her "extensive testimony" that "included calculations as to the average amount spent by customers" as well as "personal observations" of "the number of customers who left the coffeehouse because of the heat"); Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co. v. District of Columbia, 441 A.2d 969, 974 & n.7 (D.C. 1982) (upholding damages award for items as diverse as "delay damages" and "vandalism damages" based on "detailed testimony" from the litigant's "president and job supervisor"); cf. Consumers United Ins. Co. v. Smith, 644 A.2d 1328, 1346 (D.C. 1994) (holding that testimony of the property manager and vice president of a litigant, based on, among other things, "previous experiences" of the vice president "clearly was sufficient" to sustain damages awarded by a jury of $2.5 million).

Likewise, Columbia personnel who were involved in the process of attempting to secure the HUD loan will testify as to the effect that a change in interest rate would have had on Columbia's debt service. This is no more complicated than a homeowner testifying to the savings he or she would achieve in refinancing his or her home. Indeed, courts have permitted lay witnesses to testify to damages issues far more complex than these. See, e.g., Columbus

Properties, 644 A.2d 444 (business person testifying as to damages suffered as a result of loss of ability to use office space due to many different defects in the conditions of upkeep); Sears, Roebuck, 290 A.2d at 833 (coffeehouse owner testifying as to damages based on estimates of number of customers who were driven away by heat, "number of 'hot' days during the periods in question" and calculations of dollar amounts spent by customers); Hartford Accident, 441 A.2d 974 (president and job supervisor testifying as to "delay damages" and "vandalism damages"). See also Conwood Co., L.P. v. United States Tobacco Co., 290 F.3d 768, 780 (6th Cir. 2002) (affirming $350 million jury award, trebled to $1.5 billion, based in part on testimony by chairman of plaintiff corporation regarding profits lost as a result of defendants' antitrust misconduct); Mississippi Chemical Corp. v. Dresser-Rand Co., 287 F.3d 359, 373 (5th Cir. 2002) (collecting cases in which courts "have allowed lost profit testimony by a layperson witness [when] the witness has direct knowledge of the business accounts underlying the profit calculation"); Shane v. Shane, 891 F.2d 976, 982 (1st Cir. 1989) (allowing owner of stock to testify to the company's worth because he was "intimately aware of the business operations" of the company); Lightning Lube, Inc. v. Witco Corp., 4 F.3d 1153, 1174 (3d Cir. 1993) (allowing lay testimony on "how well Lightning Lube could have been expected to do" when the witness possessed "experience in the quick-lube business"); Omni Outdoor Advertising, Inc. v. Columbia Outdoor Advertising Inc., 891 F.2d 1127, 1144-45 (4th Cir. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 499 U.S. 365 (1991) (upholding damages based on testimony of plaintiff's owner, who had an "extensive background in the billboard industry," with respect to the discrepancy in projected income before and after the alleged anticompetitive acts, as well as the change in value of plaintiff's billboards before and after the alleged anticompetitive acts); State Office Sys., Inc. v. Olivetti Corp., 762 F.2d 843, 845-46 (10th Cir. 1985) (permitting testimony on lost future profits in light of witness's "position as president and treasurer of the company," "lengthy experience in marketing and selling Olivetti computers in Kansas," and personal knowledge of the company's operations).

C. NCRIC Has Long Been On Notice Regarding The Damages Suffered From Columbia Being Pushed Into Bankruptcy

NCRIC claims to be surprised that it will be held answerable for costs Columbia incurred after being pushed into bankruptcy by NCRIC's actions. Mot. at 9. But this has been part of Columbia's case for years. The factual allegations in support of this claim for damages can be found in Columbia's amended counterclaims -- dated January 5, 2001 – at paragraphs 62, 63, 109, 116, 138, 146, and 153. Moreover, although NCRIC contends that it did not receive any documents supporting this claim from Columbia, in fact, Columbia's plan of reorganization was produced to NCRIC on July 23, 2001. That document contained, at page 8 (CHWMC 0002511), the bankruptcy expenses that Columbia will utilize here to demonstrate its damages: Columbia noted that it would incur "approximately $1,500,000.00" in payments approved by the Bankruptcy Court. NCRIC's claim that Columbia has failed to produce "a single document relating to these expenses," Mot. at 9, is thus simply incorrect. NCRIC has been on notice since the outset of the case that Columbia holds it responsible for the costs Columbia incurred by being pushed into bankruptcy, and the documents showing those precise costs were produced to NCRIC long ago. There is no basis for precluding the jury from hearing this testimony.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, NCRIC's motion to exclude evidence of certain counterclaim damages should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

COLUMBIA'S OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION TO REQUIRE "SECURITY FOR 'COSTS AND FEES'"

Itself faced with the possibility of a significant adverse judgment, NCRIC argues that Columbia should be required to post a bond to cover $35,000 worth of NCRIC's (unspecified) "costs and fees" before being entitled to proceed to trial. But NCRIC cites no legal authority for such extraordinary relief, and its purpose is plain: like its demand for a $1 million deposit on threat of discontinuing Columbia's insurance coverage, NCRIC, a $160 million malpractice insurance monopolist, again seeks to turn Columbia's strapped financial condition into its own advantage – this time as a way to preclude Columbia from obtaining a trial that will expose NCRIC's tortious misconduct.

Rule 54, upon which NCRIC purportedly relies, allows the imposition of costs only when a party has "prevail[ed]." Nowhere does NCRIC explain how that Rule applies here, before judgment. See Johnson v. Edgewoord Mgmt. Corp., 512 A.2d 287, 289-90 (D.C. 1986) ("The procedure for taxing costs followed in [the] District of Columbia . . . entails the filing of a bill of costs with the court clerk after the entry of judgment."). NCRIC points to absolutely nothing in Rule 54 – or in any other statute, rule, or case – that requires or authorizes a bond to cover an opposing party's costs prior to a determination of liability. In apparent recognition of the absence of any such authority, NCRIC alludes to the "inherent equitable power" of the Court, but once again fails to cite any legal authority to justify its position. See In re National Student Mktg. Litig., 445 F. Supp. 157, 168 (S.D.N.Y.1978) (denying "the initial motion to require plaintiffs to provide security for costs" as without any authority).

NCRIC's motion is another patent attempt to bully Columbia and obstruct its right to trial. The motion should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

NCRIC'S MOTION TO JOIN PARTIES AS DEFENDANTS/COUNTER-PLAINTIFFS

Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rules 21 and 25(c), Plaintiff/Counter-Defendant NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") moves the Court to exercise its discretion under the rules to add the liquidating trustees for Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"), Michael M. Barch and Robin C. Newton, M.D., as named Defendants/ Counter-Plaintiffs in the above captioned matter. Now that Columbia is in the process of dissolving its corporation and winding up the corporate affairs, these liquidating trustees are the proper real parties in interest and should be joined in this suit for the reasons contained in the supporting Statement of Points and Authorities. Pursuant to D. C. Superior Court Rule 12-I(e), a Proposed Order is also attached.

STATEMENT OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF NCRIC'S MOTION TO JOIN PARTIES AS DEFENDANTS/COUNTER-PLAINTIFFS

Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rules 21 and 25(c), Plaintiff/Counter-Defendant NCRIC, Inc. ("NCRIC") moves the Court to exercise its discretion to add the liquidating trustees for Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia"), Michael M. Barch and Robin C. Newton, M.D., as named Defendants/Counter-Plaintiffs in the above captioned matter. Now that Columbia is in the process of dissolving its corporation and winding up the corporate affairs, these liquidating trustees are the proper real parties in interest under D.C. Superior Court Rule 17(a) and should be joined as Defendants/ Counter-Plaintiffs. The addition of these parties will not impose any delay or prejudice to Defendants/ Counter-Plaintiffs and will instead facilitate prompt resolution of this dispute by including the proper parties in the resolution of claims at trial.

BACKGROUND

The relationship between NCRIC and Columbia has been extensively briefed in the numerous submissions to this Court. The following facts are relevant to the instant motion.

In October 2000 NCRIC filed a simple breach of contract claim against Columbia contending that Columbia refused to pay the Additional Premium due under the Retrospective Rating Plan ("the Retro Plan"), a contract between the parties, when the Retro Plan expired on September 1, 2000. Columbia responded to the claim with an eleven count Counterclaim against NCRIC, seeking compensatory and punitive damages and alleging, inter alia, breach of contract, breach of fiduciary duty, defamation, and numerous other business torts.

In May 2002, following the close of discovery and the briefing on the motions for summary judgment (but before the resolution of those motions by the Court), Columbia publicly announced that the hospital had suspended operations and abruptly closed its facility. In September 2002, Columbia announced that it was in the process of selling, or indeed had sold, its real estate assets and that it would shortly dissolve and distribute any remaining assets it may have to "charity." Upon information and belief, the Columbia Board of Directors resigned effective September 30, 2002. During this time, NCRIC repeatedly contacted Columbia's counsel to obtain information about the dissolution of the corporation and how the corporate dissolution and winding up process would affect this litigation. Columbia refused to provide any meaningful information.

In the course of winding up its affairs, Columbia sent letters to other creditors of the hospital in which Columbia requested that pending litigation by such creditors be ceased and that no additional litigation be initiated because the corporation did not have funds available to pay any judgments obtained. See Columbia's October 15, 2002 Letter at 1, attached as Exhibit A. This letter is signed by Michael M. Barch and Robin C. Newton, M.D. who identify themselves as Liquidating Trustees of Columbia. Id. To date, NCRIC has not received a copy of this letter from Columbia.

ARGUMENT

Columbia has ceased operations and liquidating trustees have been appointed to wind up the corporate affairs and dissolve the corporation. These trustees are the actual real party in interest as NCRIC believes that the liquidating trustees of Columbia are responsible for the prosecution of this suit and ultimately responsible for any satisfaction of any judgment entered against Columbia on NCRIC's claim. The benefits of joining the real party in interest before trial on the merits far outweighs the possibility of any prejudice to Columbia as the addition of the liquidating trustees does not require any additional discovery or any delay in the scheduling of this trial. The Court should exercise its discretion to add these parties as proper Defendants/Counter-Plaintiffs in this matter.

D.C. Superior Court Rule 17(a) states, in relevant part:

> (a) Real Party in Interest. Every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. . . . . No action shall be dismissed on the ground that it is not prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest until a reasonably time has been allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the action by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest.

D.C. Sup. Ct. R. Civ. P. 17(a) (emphasis added).

Based on the information NCRIC has been able to obtain from third parties, as Columbia has refused to be forthcoming with the details of its closure and dissolution, the Board of Directors of Columbia has resigned and all decision-making power, obligations and responsibility rests with the liquidating trustees. Although it is possible for a dissolved corporation to continue to prosecute claims in the corporate name, c.f. D.C. Code § 29-301.63, it is preferable for the real party in interest, where available, to be involved in the suit.[1/]

1/ D.C. Code § 29-301.63 provides for survival of remedies for and against a dissolved corporation. Under this statute a corporation may continue to prosecute and/or defend a suit in its corporate name after

Therefore, these trustees should be joined as Defendants/Counter-Plaintiffs to prosecute Columbia's counterclaims and assert its defenses at trial. The rules contemplate such an action and provide a mechanism for the Court to add such parties without disruption to the underlying case or scheduling of the trial. D.C. Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 21 provides, in relevant part:

> Parties may be dropped or added by order of the court on motion of any party or of its own initiative at any stage of the action and on such terms as are just.

D.C. Sup. Ct. R. Civ. P. 21 (emphasis added). In addition, Rule 25 regarding the substitution of parties provides, in relevant part:

> (c) Transfer of Interest. In case of any transfer of interest, the action may be continued by or against the original party, unless the court upon motion directs the person to whom the interest is transferred to be substituted in the action or joined with the original party.

D.C. Sup. Ct. R. Civ. P. 25(c) (emphasis added).

Under Rules 21 and 25, the Court is authorized to join the liquidating trustees as additional defendants. C.f. Eskridge v. Jackson, 401 A.2d 986 (D.C. 1979) (orders under Rule 21 to add a party lie within the court's discretion). These parties could not have been named when the litigation was filed because Columbia's closure and dissolution occurred in Fall 2002. Moreover, the timing of this motion is proper as Rule 21 explicitly authorizes the joinder of such parties "at any stage of the action." See Mullaney v. Anderson, 342 U.S. 415, 417 (1952) (considering motion to add real party in interest under Rule 21 raised for the first time on appeal).

dissolution. However, this statute appears to contemplate a situation where the directors and officers are still acting on behalf of the corporation. In contrast, Columbia here chose to assign all management rights to the liquidating trustees and the Board has resigned.

No prejudice will be suffered by Columbia by the granting of this motion and the liquidating trustees joinder as Defendants/Counter-Plaintiffs. No additional claims or defenses will be asserted by NCRIC, and no additional discovery will be required. There is no reason why the addition of these parties would delay the scheduling of the pretrial conference and trial on the merits. See Link Aviation, Inc. v. Downs, 325 F.2d 613, 615, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 40, 42 (D.C. Cir. 1963) (joining of real part in interest is proper where cause of action is not changed and substance of claims are not affected) (citing Kansas Elec. Power Co v. Janis, 194 F.2d 942, 944 (10th Cir. 1952)). As the U.S. Supreme Court stated in Mullaney when granting a Rule 21 motion to add real parties in interest as named parties:

> The addition of these two parties plaintiff can in no wise [sic] embarrass the defendant. Nor would their earlier joinder have in any way affected the course of the litigation.

342 U.S. at 417.

Indeed, addition of these liquidating trustees at this time will facilitate prompt resolution of the matter and possibly obviate the need for post-trial motions because the proper parties in interest responsible for any judgment obtained will be involved in the trial on the merits of this case. The liquidating trustees are the proper parties to this litigation, and the benefit of adding these parties before the trial on the merits outweighs the minor, if any, prejudice which Columbia might suffer from this change.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, the Court should grant NCRIC's motion and join Michael M. Barch and Robin C. Newton, M.D as Liquidating Trustees for Columbia Hospital of Women Medical Center, Inc., as Defendants/Counter-Plaintiffs in this matter.

RE: Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc., (the "Hospital")

Dear Sir/Madam:

The records of the Hospital indicate that you may be a creditor of or claimant against the Hospital, and this letter is being forwarded to you pursuant to §29-301.47 of the District of Columbia Code in order to advise you of the status of the Hospital's financial affairs.

The Hospital's assets included its real estate located at 2425 L Street, NW., Washington, DC 20037 (the "Real Estate"), accounts receivable (the "Receivables") and equipment (the "Equipment"). As you may know, these assets have been encumbered by indebtedness, which exceeds the Collective value of these assets. The Real Estate and much of the Equipment has been sold to unrelated and unaffiliated third parties, and the proceeds of such sales were substantially less than the indebted secured thereby. The Receivables have been placed in the hands of a third party for collection, and after payment if amounts outstanding to the Hospital's accounts receivable lender (including, interest, late charges, etc.), and costs of collection, it is unlikely that any significant amount will be available for unsecured creditors. In light of these circumstances, the Hospital will be unable to pay you any additional amounts or satisfy any claims you may now or hereafter have against the Hospital. Unfortunately, there are no remaining assets available to satisfy these debts and claims.

Although the Hospital has pursued an orderly liquidation of its assets, the debts of and claims against the Hospital far exceed its assets. Regretfully, there is no further action the Hospital can take to alter this situation.

The undersigned have been appointed as Liquidating Trustees, to continue the wind-down of the affairs of the Hospital. We expect the continuing wind-down will take between 90 to 120 days, during which time we will be addressing any remaining medical-related or business issues that may arise. You may contact us at (202)293-6512, but please understand that the Hospital has virtually no remaining assets, and no additional payments are expected to be made to you or your organization. In light of the unavailability of any assets for recovery, we would hope that pending litigation would be ceased and no additional litigation initiated, but of course, that is in your discretion. We would like to make it clear, however, that the Hospital's operations have ceased, and no funds are available to pay debts owed or judgments obtained.

Again, we regret having to advise you of this situation, and more importantly, we regret the loss of Columbia Hospital for Women, which has served our community well for more than 100 years.

Very truly yours,

Michael M. Barch, Liquidating Trustee

COLUMBIA'S OPPOSITION TO NCRIC'S MOTION TO JOIN PARTIES AS DEFENDANTS/COUNTER-PLAINTIFFS

NCRIC's motion to join Columbia's liquidating trustees as parties to this action, ostensibly because of Columbia's supposed dissolution, is meritless. The D.C. Code expressly provides that a dissolved corporation remains suable in this jurisdiction under its own name, not those of its liquidating trustees. Regardless, a trip to the office of D.C.'s Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs would have revealed that Columbia has not dissolved. The motion is therefore without any legal or factual basis.

NCRIC's attempt to add individuals as parties is but another obvious effort to derail Columbia's enforcement of its rights at trial by harassing individuals associated with Columbia into capitulation. In the face of an imminent trial, NCRIC ignores the Court's prior denial of NCRIC's attempt to gain discovery into the liquidation of Columbia's assets, dusts off an eleven-month-old letter on the subject, and asks the Court to permit joinder of individuals hired some two years after the events giving rise to this suit with no alleged personal involvement in the challenged contract – and does so without any legal or factual basis. The motion should be denied.

Discussion

A. THE MOTION IGNORES EXPRESS D.C. STATUTORY LAW

The purported basis for NCRIC's motion to join Columbia's liquidating trustees as parties to this litigation is Columbia's "dissolution." See, e.g., Mot. at 1. But express D.C. statutory law makes clear that there is no need to join trustees to this litigation: even if Columbia had dissolved as a corporate entity, under D.C. law the corporation remains fully able to prosecute this lawsuit.

As the Supreme Court has explained, "a time-honored feature of the corporate device is that a corporate entity may be utterly dead for most purposes, yet have enough life remaining to litigate its actions. All that is necessary is a statute so providing." Defense Supplies Corp. v. Lawrence Warehouse Co., 336 U.S. 631, 634-35 (1949) (holding that dissolution of Defense Supplies Corporation by Congress did not abate the action because the relevant statute expressly provided that "no action shall abate").[1] The D.C. Code includes precisely such a statute. D.C. statutory law expressly provides that dissolution of a corporation does not abate a proceeding pending by or against that corporation, and actions involving the corporation may proceed using the corporate name:

> No action pending in favor of or against any corporation shall be discontinued or abate by the dissolution of the corporation, whether such dissolution occur by the [1] See also Sedgwick v. Beasley, 173 F.2d 918, 920 (D.C. Cir. 1949) (holding that whether a corporation may maintain a lawsuit after dissolution turns on the law of the state in which the corporation was organized); Beasley v. Fox, 173 F.2d 920, 921 (D.C. Cir. 1949) (referring to this rule as "the settled law as stated in Sedgwick v. Beasley"); York Blouse Corp. v. Kaplowitz Bros., 97 A.2d 465, 468 (D.C. 1953) (same); 6A Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure, § 1563 (1990 & supp. 2003) (same); see also Ripalda v. American Operations Corp., 977 F.2d 1464 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (applying Delaware statute in concluding that proper to continue litigation involving dissolved Delaware corporation); Lyman v. Knickerbocker Theatre Co., 5 F.2d 538 (D.C. Cir. 1925) (holding action correctly brought in corporation's name, even assuming it had lawfully dissolved).

> expiration of its charter or otherwise, but all such actions may be prosecuted to final judgment in its corporate name; and on all judgments so obtained, whether before or after its dissolution, execution may be had and satisfaction enforced in such corporate name.

D.C. Code § 29-221.16.

In this case, the entity that is Defendant and Counter-Plaintiff – Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. – is a registered D.C. corporation. See Columbia's Amended Answer and Counterclaims ¶ 11. Accordingly, application of section 29-221.16 could not be clearer: dissolution of the hospital, if it occurred, would have no impact on the continuation of this lawsuit. See D.C. Code § 29-221.16 (directing that "[n]o action pending in favor of or against any corporation shall be discontinued or abate by the dissolution of the corporation," and that "all such actions may be prosecuted to final judgment in its corporate name").[2] NCRIC's claimed "need" to name the trustees as parties is therefore completely without legal merit: Columbia remains the proper party in this case.[3]

B. THE MOTION IGNORES FACTS IN THE PUBLIC RECORD

Much as NCRIC is wrong on the law, so it is mistaken on the facts: Columbia has not dissolved, but instead remains a corporation in good standing. NCRIC assumes otherwise on the

---

[2] Cf. Clover Dairy Co., Inc., to Use of Bettar Ice Cream Co., Inc. v. Misler, 85 A.2d 914, 915-16 (D.C. 1952) ("it was not necessary for the trustees to be substituted . . ., and [] the [] company could continue as the plaintiff . . ., notwithstanding that its interest had been transferred to its directors as trustees by operation of law.") (applying analogous Maryland statute); cf. also Ripalda v. American Operations Corp., 977 F.2d 1464, 1486 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (applying similar Delaware statute).

[3] While ignoring § 29-221.16, NCRIC concedes that another provision, D.C. Code § 29-301.63, expressly provides that "[a]ny suit or proceeding by or against [a dissolved] corporation may be prosecuted or defended by the corporation in its corporate name." NCRIC tries to avoid the obvious import of this provision, suggesting that it "appears to contemplate a situation where the directors and officers are still acting on behalf of the corporation." Mot. at 3-4 n.1. This reading is dreamed up out of thin air. Section 29-221.16, which does not even mention officers or directors, plainly is not susceptible of such a limited reading.

basis of "information NCRIC has been able to obtain from third parties." Mot. at 3. But NCRIC does not offer any evidence that Columbia has dissolved beyond this reference to unsupported hearsay from unidentified "third parties." Had NCRIC taken the time to consult the public records maintained by the District's Department of Consumer and Regulatory Affairs, NCRIC would have found that Columbia remains a corporation in good standing. See Exh. 1 (attaching certificate). Because Columbia's supposed dissolution is the sole factual predicate for NCRIC's motion and that predicate is demonstrably incorrect, there remains no basis for the motion.[4]

C. THE MOTION SEEKS TO FURTHER ULTERIOR PURPOSES

In the face of an imminent trial, NCRIC suddenly seeks to join two individuals on the basis of a letter that issued 11 months ago and NCRIC itself identified as a trial exhibit when the parties met back in May 2003. (NCRIC's pretrial submissions include the letter as proposed Exhibit 162.) NCRIC has thus sat on the letter for months, belying any suggestion that its motion merits consideration at this late date. Given this conduct – and the complete absence of any legal or factual foundation for its motion – the only plausible explanation for NCRIC's current motion comes clear: it is nothing more than an effort to use intimidation against individuals associated with Columbia to forestall an inevitable trial, hoping that the threat of adding individuals as parties will lead Columbia to drop the litigation altogether or settle on NCRIC's terms. NCRIC's latest attempt to bully Columbia and those associated with it should be rejected.

[4] Additionally, NCRIC's unsupported factual assertion that Mr. Barch and Dr. Newton "are responsible for the prosecution of this suit," Mot. at 3, is also incorrect. Indeed, they were hired by Columbia some two years after the events giving rise to this suit and have had no personal involvement in managing this litigation. Accordingly, their inclusion in this suit at any point – but especially after the close of discovery – would plainly be prejudicial to them.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, NCRIC's Motion To Join Parties as Defendants/Counter-Plaintiffs should be denied. A proposed order is attached.

ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR LEAVE TO AMEND THE COMPLAINT

This motion comes before the Court on plaintiff NCRIC, Inc.'s Motion For Leave to Amend the Complaint. Pursuant to D.C. Superior Court Rule 15(a), the plaintiff seeks to amend the complaint so that it may include recovery of reasonable attorney's fees as provided for in the contracted Retro Plan. As discussed more fully below, the plaintiff's Motion For Leave to Amend the Complaint is denied.

This lawsuit was initiated in October 2000, and has been pending for three years. Discovery closed in January 2002, and dispositive motions were fully briefed by March 2002. The plaintiff has had three years to request leave to amend the complaint, and did so in January of 2001. The plaintiff should have contemplated its need for attorney's fees pursuant to the Retro Plan much earlier in this litigation, and at least prior to the close of discovery or when they sought leave to amend the complaint in January 2001. As stated in the plaintiff's Motion, the "provision for attorneys' fees in the Retro Plan should come as no surprise..." Pls. Motion at 4. As such, plaintiff admits that the issue was evident from the inception of this litigation, but has not asserted a valid reason for the delay in requesting leave to amend their complaint.

Leave to amend a complaint is within the discretion of the Court, and it is granted freely "when justice so requires." See Johnson v. Fairfax Village Condominium Owners Assoc., 641 A.2d 495, 501 (D.C. 1994); Sup. Ct. R. 15(a). However, a policy favoring the resolution of cases on their merits creates a presumption that a court should grant leave to amend liberally, and so long as no good reason appears to the contrary. Bennet v. Fun & Fitness of Silver Hill, Inc., 434 A.2d 895, 898 (D.C. 1999); Johnson, 641 A.2d at 501; Bennet, 434 A.2d 478-479. The D.C. Court of Appeals has recently held "that liberalism does not mean amendments must be granted automatically; a refusal to allow an amendment is to be upheld if predicated on some valid ground." Sherman v. Adoption Ctr. Of Washington, 741 A.2d 1031, 1038 (D.C. 1999). A decision to deny leave to amend will be reviewed only for abuse of discretion. Id.

In considering a Motion to Amend the Complaint, the Court evaluates five factors: (1) the number of requests to amend; (2) the length of time that the trial has been pending; (3) the presence of bad faith or dilatory reasons for the request; (4) the merit of the proffered amended pleading; and (5) any prejudice to the non-moving party. Gaeten v. Weber, 729 A.2d 895, 898 (D.C. 1999); Johnson, 641 A.2d at 501; Bennet, 434 A.2d 478-479. Of these factors, the Court finds the "length of time that the trial has been pending," and "prejudice to the non-moving party" reason to deny the plaintiff's motion.

The Court of Appeals has held that the trial court's denial of a motion to amend on the basis of undue delay is only warranted "if that delay…caused substantial prejudice." See District of Columbia v. Tinker, 691 A.2d 57, 61 (D.C. 1997). In the instant case, discovery will inevitably need to be reopened and the trial delayed should the Court grant the plaintiff's motion. As the Court of Appeals opined in Sherman, the denial of a motion to amend is correct where "the trial would have to be delayed and discovery reopened." Sherman, 741 A.2d at 1039. The court further held that "prejudice caused by delays and postponements of this type affect not only the individual litigants but the court system as a whole and others who invoke its aid in dispute resolution." Id.

The Court finds that the plaintiff's delay will cause prejudice to the defendant, because amendment of the complaint at this time will necessarily require further discovery regarding the issue of attorney's fees. See generally Sherman, 741 A.2d 1031 (Holding that it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial judge to deny a motion to amend where the appellant's motion came one year and eight months after she filed her initial complaint and two full months after discovery.) Furthermore, in addition to costs associated with additional discovery, the reopening of discovery will delay the case, which is currently set for a pre-trial conference on October 15, 2003 and for trial on January 24, 2004.

Accordingly, on this 8th day of October, 2003, it is ordered that the plaintiff's Motion For Leave to Amend the Complaint is hereby DENIED.

COLUMBIA'S MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF OBJECTIONS TO NCRIC'S PROPOSED TRIAL EXHIBITS

NCRIC's attempt to have an array of its own documents – correspondence, calculation spreadsheets, drafts of agreements, internal memoranda, meeting minutes, and others – admitted as business records vastly overreaches as a matter of law. As courts have explained, business records are excepted from the hearsay rule because they are the types of documents that must be kept accurately in order for businesses to function properly. Consequently, it is settled under D.C. law that business records encompass those documents that are "the routine product of an efficient clerical system" and thus possess clear-cut indicia of reliability. NCRIC's documents at issue are nothing like such documents but instead reflect NCRIC's opinions and judgments – including NCRIC's self-serving pre-litigation posturing in its dealings with Columbia.

Moreover, NCRIC repeatedly admitted in deposition testimony that the documents here at issue were not kept by NCRIC "in [the] regular course of business," SCR 43-I, but rather were created on an ad-hoc basis. And in other instances, NCRIC's witnesses conceded that they simply did not know whether particular documents were drafts or final copies. These admissions conclusively remove any possibility that such documents could be deemed admissible business records. Accordingly, the Court should find NCRIC's hearsay documents inadmissible under the business records exception.

Discussion

I. THE BUSINESS RECORDS EXCEPTION TO THE HEARSAY RULE IS NARROWLY DEFINED

In the seminal D.C. case construing the business records exception to the hearsay rule, the court in New York Life Ins. Co. v. Taylor, 147 F.2d 297 (D.C. Cir. 1944) explained that to qualify as a business record, a document must be "the routine product of an efficient clerical system" – that is, something with an "internal check on the reliability of the records," not something whose accuracy . . . is affected by bias, judgment, and memory." Id. at 300. In concluding that hospital records were not admissible business records, the court elaborated:

> [The hospital] records are not offered to prove routine facts such as the date of admission to the hospital, the names of attending physicians, etc. They are offered to prove the truth of accounts of events and of complicated medical and psychiatric diagnosis. The accuracy of such accounts is affected by bias, judgment, and memory; they are not the routine product of an efficient clerical system. There is here lacking any internal check on the reliability of the records in this respect such as that provided for payrolls, accounts receivable, accounts payable, bills of lading and the like.

Id. (emphasis added) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Applying New York Life Insurance and its progeny, the court in Adkins v. Morton, 494 A.2d 652 (D.C. 1985) likewise found that regularly recorded facts as to patient's condition were admissible business records – but records that contained an opinion were not. Id. at 661-62. Applying these principles, D.C. courts have deemed admissible per the business records exception a list of ATM transactions compiled from a bank's computerized transaction records, see Roberts v. United States, 508 A.2d 110, 112 (D.C. 1986), and hotel registration cards indicating when the defendant checked in and checked out, see Taylor v. United States, 323 F.2d 283 (D.C. Cir. 1963). Such documents are similar to records of payroll, accounts receivable, accounts payable, bills of lading, and the like, which New York Life Insurance recognized as business records, and which stand in stark contrast to the opinion-filled and self-serving documents whose admission NCRIC seeks.

Indeed, courts have explained that the rationale supporting the business-records exception to the hearsay rule is that certain documents can be regarded as having a high degree of reliability because businesses have strong incentives to keep accurate records, and because such documents are often checked for objective correctness. See, e.g., United States v. Baker, 693 F.2d 183, 188 (D.C. Cir. 1982) ("The justification for this [business records] exception is that business records have a high degree of accuracy because the nation's business demands it, because the records are customarily checked for correctness, and because recordkeepers are trained in habits of precision.") (citing McCormick, Evidence § 306, at 720 (2d ed. 1972)); Timberlake Constr. Co. v. U.S. Fidelity & Guar. Co., 71 F.3d 335, 341 (10th Cir. 1995) ("The rationale behind the business records exception is that such documents have a high degree of reliability because businesses have incentives to keep accurate records."); id. ("The business records exception is based on a presumption of accuracy, accorded because the information is part of a regularly conducted activity, kept by those trained in the habits of precision, and customarily checked for correctness, and because of the accuracy demanded in the conduct of the nation's business") (internal quotation marks omitted). In contrast, documents that reflect a business's opinions or posturing in its dealings with other companies lack the indicia of reliability that would justify treatment as business records. See Timberlake, 71 F.3d at 342.

16d-002545

II. NCRIC VASTLY OVERREADS THE BUSINESS RECORDS EXCEPTION TO THE HEARSAY RULE

A. Correspondence

NCRIC seeks to admit numerous letters that were not kept in the ordinary course of business but rather were created on an ad-hoc basis to address particular situations that arose from time to time. Such correspondence reflects self-serving characterizations that set forth NCRIC's positions concerning its dealings with Columbia and lacks any indicia of reliability. See Allstate Ins. Co. v. Curtis, 781 A.2d 725, 726-27 (D.C. 2001) (reversible error where trial court ruled that insurance company's letters were business records); Timberlake, 71 F.3d at 342 (holding inadmissible "self-serving" letters "written during the period of controversy" which had "the earmarks of being motivated and generated to further [the plaintiff's] interest"); see also United States v. Smith, 521 F.2d 957, 964 n.16 (D.C. Cir. 1975) (Skelly Wright, J.) ("The mere fact that recordation . . . is routine . . . imports no guaranty of the truth of the statements themselves.").

For instance, NCRIC Exhibit 173 is an unsigned, unaddressed, and undated letter, which NCRIC Senior Vice President Stephen Fargis admitted he did not believe was ever sent. See Fargis Tr. at 835 (Q. Was it ever sent? A. I don't think so.").[1] Similarly, NCRIC Exhibit 128 includes a letter and attachment obviously not kept as regular business records, for there is no addressee; NCRIC Exhibit 129, like NCRIC Exhibit 60, includes a series of unsigned letters that also may not have been sent. NCRIC Exhibit 108 further demonstrates the ad-hoc nature of these letters: that exhibit consists of a fax cover page, plus a letter sent in response to an isolated question by a physician; such ad-hoc correspondence is not a record regularly kept by a business but rather a document created to address a specific situation. See United States v. Kim, 595 F.2d 755, 762 (D.C. Cir. 1979) (holding telex inadmissible because not made for regular business purpose; "[t]he critical factor in determining whether the document satisfie[s] the 'business purpose' requirement lies in the reason that the message was prepared and sent"). The remaining letters designated by NCRIC are likewise objectionable, for they reflect nothing more than NCRIC's characterizations, not objective records. See NCRIC Exhs. 2,[2] 9, 12, 17, 33, 43, 46, 47, 50, 56, 59, 60, 62, 63, 66, 68, 69, 70, 82, 89,[3] 93, 97, 103, 104, 106, 107, 108, 109,[4] 113, 116, 117, 119, 122, 123, 125, 126,[5] 128, 129, 130, 132, 137, 152, 155, 161, 163, 164, & 173.

[1] Excerpts of the deposition transcripts cited in this memorandum are attached as Exhibit A.

16d-002546

B. Calculations

At any given time, NCRIC was able to, and did, run calculations purporting to tally the status of the Retro Plan. But NCRIC admitted that many of these calculations were ad-hoc creations rather than regularly produced business records. For instance, Fargis admitted that the spreadsheet that is Exhibit 152 did not represent calculations kept in the ordinary course but rather may have been adjusted to reflect "settlement discussions" between the parties. See Fargis Tr. at 656-57 ("Mr. Wilson and I were in discussions about settlement. And there were during those discussions iterations and assumptions made to try to reach settlement on worksheets . . . . I'm not sure if this spreadsheet contains some of those assumptions."). Thus, the calculations [2] Columbia has also objected to NCRIC Exhibit 2 – and to other NCRIC exhibits, including Exhibits 6, 18, 48, 56, 68, 112, 149, and 176 – to the extent that they are incomplete. See Butler v. United States, 614 A.2d 875, 882 (D.C. 1992).

---

[3] In NCRIC Exhibit 89, Columbia objects to the fax cover sheet plus attachments, though not to the letter from Columbia.

[4] In NCRIC Exhibit 109, Columbia does not object to the first page, which is from Columbia, but does object to the second page, which is from NCRIC.

[5] In NCRIC Exhibit 126, Columbia objects to the letter only.

16d-002547

concededly cannot be said to reflect regularly kept records and, as the product of settlement talks, are patently inadmissible in any event. See Beckman v. Farmer, 579 A.2d 618, 647 (D.C. 1990) (evidence of conduct or statements made in compromise negotiations inadmissible; such evidence "[of] minimal probative value"). Moreover, Fargis testified that Exhibits 40, 41, 77, and 78, were not created in the ordinary course of NCRIC's business but rather were produced on an ad-hoc basis – in that instance, at his request:

> Q. So, he wouldn't have just generated them on a particular regular basis; it was an ad hoc, as needed, basis?
>
> A. Yes.

Fargis Tr. at 516. As to Exhibit 85, Fargis was unable even to say whether it was a working draft or a final copy. See Fargis Tr. at 646 ("I don't know if it's the final or working draft."). Fargis likewise admitted that Exhibit 170 was an ad-hoc creation that NCRIC presented to the Finance Committee, not a reconciliation sent to Columbia. See Fargis Tr. at 255 ("This is a reconciliation but this seems to me more like what we presented to the finance committee"). Similarly, the upper-left corner of the second and third pages of Exhibit 171 designated the numbers on those pages as "preliminary," making it clear that the numbers were not reliable calculations created as part of a regular schedule. See Fargis Tr. at 515-24. And NCRIC's counsel represented that he wrote the headings on Exhibit 176. See Wilson Tr. at 408. In short, NCRIC's calculations, including versions that were admittedly "preliminary" drafts or otherwise performed with concededly inaccurate numbers, are not reliable business records.[6] See NCRIC Exhs. 5, 19, 38, 39, 40, 41, 66, 77, 78, 85, 91, 127, 152, 155, 161, 163, 164, 170, 171, 176.

[6] Indeed, the admission that NCRIC's calculation spreadsheets cannot be taken at face value – including concessions that NCRIC's spreadsheets were sometimes altered for such purposes as settlement discussions, or on other occasions were merely drafts created using "preliminary" rather than final, correct numbers – casts doubt upon the reliability of NCRIC's spreadsheets

1. NCRIC Demand Letters and Accompanying Calculations

NCRIC's purported Retro Plan calculations contained in Exhibits 155, 161, 163, and 164 – letters sent by NCRIC to Columbia demanding payment for an amount purportedly detailed in accompanying calculation charts – are particularly objectionable. First, these proposed exhibits are self-serving calculations served on Columbia purely for litigation purposes. It is well-established that one who prepares a document in anticipation of litigation, such as a demand letter, is engaged in an act of posturing and not acting in the regular course of business. See, e.g., Timberlake, 71 F.3d at 342; see also Palmer v. Hoffman, 318 U.S. 109, 113-14 (1943) (denying application of business records exception to documents prepared with eye toward litigation when offered by party responsible for creating document); id. (affirming decision to exclude document directed at subject matter of case because, as court of appeals explained, Palmer v. Hoffman, 129 F.2d 976, 991 (2d Cir. 1942), document was "dripping with motivations to misrepresent"). Documents sent to an opposing party after the initiation of litigation simply cannot be deemed reliable business records, particularly when they concern the very subject of dispute between the parties. See Timberlake, 71 F.3d at 342. In short, NCRIC's demand letters and numbers "are calculated for use essentially in the court, not in the business." Palmer, 318 U.S. at 114.

Moreover, these documents are little more than an effort by NCRIC to amend its complaint by letter. NCRIC's amended complaint identifies the sum sought by NCRIC in this litigation. NCRIC cannot attempt essentially to amend that complaint via purported "supplemental document productions" sent to Columbia. The Court rejected as untimely NCRIC's explicit attempt to amend its complaint to seek increased damages from Columbia, and NCRIC cannot avoid the impact of that ruling by seeking to amend its complaint sub silentio.

more generally.

See Exh. B (Letter from Schulman to Perl of 10/29/03, objecting to NCRIC's most recent attempt to do so).

Moreover, NCRIC's desire to rely on figures produced to Columbia after the close of discovery (such as those in Exhibit 164, dated June 19, 2003) plainly would prejudice Columbia. The need for discovery concerning the accuracy of NCRIC's numbers is particularly acute in light of NCRIC's repeated admissions in discovery that similar reconciliation charts were filled with errors.

In any event, even by the contract's own terms, quarterly updates like those in Exhibits 155, 161, 163, and 164 are not authoritative and therefore lack the reliability required of business records. Under the terms of the Retro Plan, the date for performing the calculations known as a "Reconciliation" is September 1 of each year. See, e.g., Columbia Exh. 72 (Retro Plan) at 2 ¶ 5. Within 60 days of that date, NCRIC is obligated to notify Columbia in writing of any amount owed; "[a]ny amounts due either to or from" Columbia are then "due and payable within thirty (30) days" after Columbia receives notice from NCRIC. See id. Though the Retro Plan also provides for NCRIC's performance of quarterly updates, those calculations are not controlling for the exchange of premium but are updates for informational purposes only. See Columbia Exh. 76 (Addendum B) at 1 ¶ 10 (describing interim calculations as update regarding "status of the . . . Plan"). Because of the constant changes taking place with claims covered by the Plan, and therefore with the Plan calculations themselves, it would be impossible to tell how much premium was due in September of a given year on the basis of a quarterly update calculated months earlier or later. Indeed, even these four documents themselves demonstrate noticeable fluctuation in calculation of amounts that NCRIC claims are due. The operation of the Plan itself thus makes clear that NCRIC's quarterly updates lack the reliability necessary to qualify as business records. Exhibits 155, 161, 163, and 164 are inadmissible for these additional reasons, as well.

C. Drafts/Business Proposals

Documents such as NCRIC Exhibits 9 and 12 constitute business proposals by NCRIC. They are solicitations of future business, not part of a final agreement. Exhibit 47 is an unsigned promissory note, and Exhibit 113 is an unsigned "fund management agreement." Exhibit 65 is special presentation to Columbia identified as a "preliminary proposal," and Exhibit 110 is also a presentation, apparently for a particular event or meeting. Exhibits 25, 26, 35, 50, 65, and 70 also are drafts or proposals. The unreliability of these proposals or presentations by NCRIC is underscored by the Retro Plan itself, which has a merger clause expressing that the contract represents the parties' entire agreement. See, e.g., Columbia Exh. 72 (Retro Plan) at 5 ¶ 18 ("This agreement constitutes the entire agreement between the parties and no modifications, amendments or additions thereto shall be binding unless in writing and executed by all the parties hereto."). Consequently, only the final, consummated contract is material; proposals and presentations are unreliable and irrelevant, and introducing them in evidence would waste the jury's time. See, e.g., Boca Investerings Partnership v. United States, 128 F. Supp. 2d 16, 18-22 (D.D.C. 2000) (finding document detailing proposed transaction not admissible as business record).

D. NCRIC Minutes

Exhibits 16, 18, 42,[7] 45, 48, and 53 are minutes from NCRIC meetings.[8] These, too, are filled with opinion and judgment, not the facts that comprise business records. In addition, their

[7] NCRIC Exhibit 42, professing to record particular individuals' comments made at the meeting at issue (e.g., "Mr. Pate stated . . ."), contains hearsay within hearsay that is doubly inadmissible. See, e.g., Boca Investerings Partnership, 128 F. Supp. 2d at 21 (hearsay in business record not very purpose is self-serving: to record deliberations and decisions in a manner designed to protect the company's officers and directors from potential liability. It is no surprise, then, that minutes have been held not to be business records. See, e.g., United States v. Beasley, 513 F.2d 309 (5th Cir. 1975). Indeed, the self-serving characterizations made in minutes are much like the statements regarding corporate performance contained in a corporation's Form 10-K filing, and such statements have been held to be inadmissible hearsay. See, e.g., White Indus. v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 611 F. Supp. 1049, 1068-69 (W.D. Mo. 1985).

E. Internal Memoranda

Exhibits 27, 51, 88,[9] 91,[10] 92, 94, and 98[11] are all self-serving internal NCRIC memoranda, as opposed to objectively reliable business records. Such memoranda are recorded for the protection of employees, not to ensure the workings of the business. See United States v. Lemire, 720 F.2d 1327, 1350-51 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (holding internal memos inadmissible because not prepared for regular business purpose).

---

admissible under business records exception but only if satisfies some other exception to hearsay rule).

[8] NCRIC Exhibit 20, minutes from a Columbia finance committee meeting, contains the hearsay statements of NCRIC representatives.

[9] NCRIC Exhibit 88 contains hearsay within hearsay, as it purports to detail what certain people allegedly said at a meeting.

[10] NCRIC Exhibit 91 contains hearsay within hearsay: the memorandum includes hearsay accounts of what allegedly was said at a meeting, and hearsay spreadsheets are attached, as well.

[11] NCRIC Exhibit 98 contains hearsay within hearsay: a self-serving memorandum to the file, it reflects hearsay statements regarding the comments allegedly made by a NCRIC representative to a Columbia representative.

16d-002552

F. Insurance Commissioner

NCRIC's correspondence to and from the insurance commissioner cannot be deemed business records. The correspondence is self-consciously the product of a dispute between the parties and essentially the precursor to litigation. Because these documents are self-consciously written with an eye toward litigation, they are inherently suspect and lack the reliability necessary to qualify as business records. See Palmer, 318 U.S. at 113-14; Timberlake, 71 F.3d at 342.

Nor are such documents admissible as official records. An official record is something that "may be evidenced by an official publication thereof or by a copy attested by the officer having the legal custody of the record." SCR 44(a)(1). For example, an automobile registration is an official public record. District Motor Co. v. Rodill, 88 A.2d 489 (D.C. 1952); Curry v. Stevenson, 26 F.2d 534 (D.C. Cir. 1928). Correspondence seeking or describing an administrative decision is nothing of the sort. As run-of-the-mill letters to and from the insurance commissioner, these exhibits are not official records evidenced by an official publication or by a copy attested by an officer keeping its legal custody. Exhibits 112, 132, 133, 138, and 141 are therefore inadmissible.

G. Documents Created By Third Parties

Exhibits 15, 31, 49, 51, and 81, though found in NCRIC's files, were all created by third parties, such as NCRIC's consultants, and thus are not NCRIC's business records. Though documents prepared by a firm may or may not qualify as business records, documents received – as opposed to prepared – by a business are not that firm's business record. See United States v. Santos, 201 F.3d 953, 963 (7th Cir. 2000) (so holding).

16d-002553

H. Newspaper Articles

NCRIC Exhibits 52, 57, 74, and 136 are newspaper articles. Similarly, Exhibit 167 consists of an excerpt from a textbook. These proposed exhibits are plainly hearsay, and there is no tenable argument that they could be business records. See, e.g., Hutira v. Islamic Republic of Iran, 211 F. Supp. 2d 115, 123 (D.D.C. 2002) ("no doubt" that newspaper article is hearsay).

I. Objections Withdrawn

Finally, Columbia withdraws its objections to NCRIC Exhibits 80, 114, and 172.

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should rule that the exhibits listed in the attached proposed order are inadmissible hearsay not subject to any exception raised by NCRIC.

called for oral examination by counsel for Defendant, pursuant to notice, at the offices of Kellogg, Huber, Hansen, Todd & Evans, 1615 M Street, N.W., Suite 400, Washington, D.C. 20036, before Renee A Feder, CSR, a Notary Public in and for the District of Columbia, beginning at 8:45 a.m., when were present on behalf of the respective parties:

you can see, have any column under deposit, reflects 5.5 million to be paid to NCRIC over a three year period. Does it?

A. I don't see 5.5 million in here.

Q. And this is dated October 1, 1996. Correct?

A. Right.

(Document referred to marked Deposition Exhibit No. 14 for identification.)

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. I will now show you what is marked as Exhibit 14, which is another spreadsheet. Do you recognize that spreadsheet?

A. Yes.

Q. What is that?

A. This is a reconciliation but this seems to me more like what we presented to the finance committee.

Q. Do you see, is that your handwriting on the top right hand corner?

A. Yes.

Q. It says "through." Can you see what Spreadsheet.)

(Marked, Exhibit # 48-D, Spreadsheet.)

(Marked, Exhibit # 49, Spreadsheets.)

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. Mr. Fargis, I'm asking you to take a look very quickly at what we've marked as Deposition Exhibit 48-A, B, C and D. Do you know what these spreadsheets are?

A. Yes.

Q. What are they?

A. They're spreadsheets to reflect the premium paid out by the physicians.

Q. Who produces these spreadsheets at NCRIC?

A. Ed Livingston produced this.

Q. Are these also Excel spreadsheets?

A. They're produced out of our Plus system and Ed, I think, then downloads them into Excel.

Q. So this data is actually stored in the Plus system.

A. That's correct.

Q. I know he's gone, but do you know where these would be kept if they exist at NCRIC today?

A. These documents?

Q. Strike that. Do you know how regularly spreadsheets like this were created during the term of the Retro plan?

A. At my request of Ed to produce them.

Q. So he wouldn't have just generated them on a particular regular basis; it was an ad hoc, as needed, basis.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know once he created a spreadsheet where he kept them in Excel?

A. No, I don't.

Q. We've only received these. I'm going to ask that NCRIC produce whatever other ones it has like this on a computer. We received hard copies of these. And I'll put that in writing. Let me ask one more question.

You don't know of any reason that these would have been destroyed, the computer programs by him?

A. I don't know of any reason why Ed would have destroyed those.

Q. He didn't, you know, clean off his entire hard drive and delete the files on it when he left, did he?

A. I don't know.

Q. Now, I'm going to show you what's marked as Deposition Exhibit 49. I'm going to take the clip off because it's many different spreadsheets. We've just marked it as one exhibit for ease of reference. And I just want to go through very briefly with you and just start with the first one. Do you recognize that spreadsheet?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Do you know when you produced it? Did you produce it?

A. What's the question?

Q. The second question, sorry. Did you produce the spreadsheet?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know when you produced it?

A. At or around October 15th of 1998.

Q. So when you have a date up in the left-hand corner, you mean that was the date of the creation of the spreadsheet. Correct?

A. I would believe so.

Q. Whereas, the "as of" date would be with regard to the plan years, that's referring to the plan years. Correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Can you just turn to the second page of the exhibit. See how it says Preliminary, August 27th, 1998?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that about on the day that you created that spreadsheet?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you generally when doing these, doing reconciliations, create preliminary drafts before creating the final draft?

A. It would depend. I may have.

Q. Did you regularly?

A. Not regularly, no.

Q. For what reasons might you have done a preliminary draft?

A. I don't know. I mean it could have been to do a first run draft, just have people check the math. It may have been as a request of where the program stood. I mean I don't know all the reasons why a preliminary would have been done.

Q. Do you know with regard to this preliminary why it was done, August 27th, 1998?

A. No, I don't.

Q. Now, when you said you showed it to people to check the math, was it your regular practice to show the spreadsheet to people at NCRIC to check the math?

MR. NIEDERMAYER: Objection. His testimony was not that he showed it to people. He was speculating as to what the possibility is. He did not testify he did that. Your question assumes what his speculation was as a fact. So I'm objecting to the form.

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. Mr. Fargis, I understood you to be testifying that at least on one occasion you have shown a spreadsheet to someone at NCRIC to check the math. Is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know on what occasion that was and what the date was?

A. No.

Q. Do you remember who the person was you showed the spreadsheet to to check the math?

A. No.

Q. Have you done that more than once during the term of the plan?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you done that on a regular basis?
A. No.
Q. Have NCRIC's reconciliations of the plan ever been audited by an outside person?
A. No.
Q. Do you ever, do you know if you've ever shown your reconciliations to Jim Hurley?
A. Yes.
Q. You have.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you remember which ones you've shown to him?
A. No.
Q. Was it reconciliations performed in the past year?
A. No.
Q. Do you remember the year in which you showed reconciliations to Mr. Hurley?
A. No. I can't recall.
Q. Did he check the math, is that his function?

A. No, it's not his function.

Q. For what reason did you give him the spreadsheets?

A. To review the impact of the program against our total company reserves.

Q. Can you turn to Page 3 of this exhibit. You see that there's the words "Worksheet No. 2 for Years '93-97" up at the top left-hand corner under preliminary August 27, 1998. Do you know what that means?

A. I'm sorry. Can I just ask for my own clarification? All of these are under one exhibit.

Q. These are all one exhibit.

A. Okay.

Q. They were all produced to Columbia in a big batch. I'm not saying they are one document. They look like they're individual spreadsheets, is my representation.

A. But I'm looking at it as one single exhibit.

Q. To save the court reporter time of marking each.

A. I didn't know if I missed an exhibit number.

Q. Now, I'm asking you to look at I guess it's Exhibit 49, Page 3, although it doesn't say that anywhere, just the next page.

A. Right, okay.

Q. Do you know what that worksheet No. 3 for years '93 to '97 means?

A. The way the development factor is highlighted, it would be looking at August 27th and after September 1, '98 what the change in the development factors would do versus maybe this prior one had the -- yes. The prior one had -- see, and this is one of the reasons we requested and Columbia agreed that we would change the development factors on a quarterly basis so you don't have this all of a sudden one-time bump. And this is exactly a good example of what happens with it. All of a sudden with these changes in development factors there's an increase or decrease, there's a swing. There can be a big swing in there based on the losses.

Q. That change in development factors was essentially a smoothing device.

A. That's correct.

Q. Let's just go to the next spreadsheet then. Do you recognize this spreadsheet?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you produce it?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you see how that spreadsheet says, again, the COL_93-96.XLS on the bottom?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that the same computer spreadsheet as the one we previously saw with that indicator on the bottom, the Exhibit 46?

A. It could have been amended. I will state that this particular spreadsheet, Exhibit 46, is not one that we felt was -- it was almost too much information, I guess.

area. And part of his responsibilities were related to Columbia Hospital for Women.

Q. But he didn't have anything to do with performing the calculations on the Retro Plan, did he?

A. I can't recall if Mr. Marsh did any calculations on the plan.

Q. If you could turn to Exhibit 66 now, you see it's a spreadsheet with a date of October 11, 1999.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recognize this to be the fall 1999 reconciliation?

A. I don't know if it's the final or working draft.

Q. Does NCRIC know, is your information, as NCRIC's representative?

A. Looking at this one sheet of paper, I can't state that. I would have to review my files to try to determine the sequence of orders in my files.

Q. If I represented to you that this

MR. PAGE: What do you remember this being?

THE WITNESS: This is a reconciliation on the plan, I believe, as it stood through the end of August 31st, 2001.

MR. LEAHY: Okay. Do you want to talk with your counsel?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

MR. LEAHY: Go ahead.

(Recessed from 12:39 to 12:41 p.m.)

THE WITNESS: Exhibit 68 was developed during settlement discussions with Mr. Wilson. I would need to take a look and see within this spreadsheet if we were making certain assumptions to try to reach settlement. So I'm not certain that this spreadsheet in and of itself contains certain assumptions outside of the way that we had settled and ended the Retro Plan.

The reason I state that is that Mr. Wilson was provided a reconciliation at this period that was also accompanied with a letter requesting payment of an amount. That's not what is presented here. This is something that was presented during settlement.

BY MR. LEAHY:

Q. Let me just make a representation to you. My understanding was he did not receive that, and I will check with my client to make sure I'm not wrong; the "that" being what you have described, which is a letter requesting payment. So this was the only thing that we had as the September 1st, 2001 reconciliation.

Do you have any reason to believe that this is not, being that it was sent on September 5, that this does not actually accurately reflect the August 31, 2001 reconciliation?

A. Again, Mr. Wilson and I were in discussions about settlement. And there were during those discussions iterations and assumptions made to try to reach settlement on worksheets. And since this cover letter refers to the settlement and a counteroffer from Mr. Wilson, I'm not sure if this spreadsheet contains some of those assumptions.

Q. What I want to represent to you is, I didn't mean to present you with the spreadsheet. There were others where I know you made assumptions. So I thought this was your reconciliation. I will not ask you about this any further then until I get word from my client whether or not he got an actual reconciliation from you. But that was my understanding. So I just want to put your mind to ease there that we weren't trying to catch you on something. We're not going to talk about 68 any more. Let's come back to some of these other ones. Okay.

If you can just refer back to 66. 65, I'm sorry.

A. 65?

Q. Page 2. The top column there is more as a result -- I mean it was a financial decision based on --

A. It was a business decision, yes.

Q. Let's go now to that next one I marked. Was it 91? Do you have it? Do you recognize this letter that is drafted for your signature but not signed?

A. Vaguely.

Q. Was it ever sent?

A. I don't think so. It looks like a draft.

Q. Do you know who drafted it?

A. I believe I drafted it.

Q. Was the point of this letter to, if Columbia ended up not renewing, to suggest alternatives to Columbia's physicians?

A. Yes.

Q. Did NCRIC end up telling any physicians in '98 verbally about Sibley's program, do you recall?

A. Did we tell any physicians -- I'm sorry, can you read that back?

Re: NCRIC, Inc. v. Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc.

Dear Peg:

I have received NCRIC's "document production" bates-numbered NCRIC 005278 to NCRIC 005288, which purports to include revised reconciliation calculations. NCRIC should not expect Columbia to agree to the admission of this document in evidence at trial. Indeed, this document is even more objectionable than the purported calculations to which Columbia has already objected.

NCRIC's amended complaint sets forth the amount that NCRIC seeks in this litigation. NCRIC cannot seek, in effect, to amend its complaint by a "supplemental document production" on the eve of trial. Indeed, the Court rejected as untimely an open attempt by NCRIC to amend its complaint four months ago; this covert attempt to amend is even more untimely and inappropriate. NCRIC's late production, moreover, leaves Columbia with no opportunity to conduct discovery regarding the accuracy of the new chart and the calculations that support it. I note in this regard that, during discovery, NCRIC repeatedly admitted that comparable reconciliation charts were replete with inaccuracies.

Sincerely,

Eli C. Schulman

NCRIC'S REVISED EXHIBIT LIST

Pursuant to this Court's Pretrial Order dated October 15, 2003, Plaintiff NCRIC Inc. ("NCRIC") submits the attached Exhibit Summary Form listing the exhibits which NCRIC intends to use at trial. One additional exhibit has been added to the list previously submitted on July 24, 2003. Exhibit 178 is the most recent of the periodic reconciliations under the Retrospective Rating Plan (the "Retro Plan"), which was prepared and sent to Defendant Columbia Hospital for Women Medical Center, Inc. ("Columbia") in the normal course of business after the pretrial conference.

As explained in NCRIC's complaint, NCRIC's demand for damages in this case fluctuates as it is based upon "calendar quarterly recalculations of premium pursuant to the contract between the parties." Compl. ¶ 8. Throughout this litigation, NCRIC has continued to provide such updates to Columbia Hospital in the normal course of business pursuant to the contract. Exhibit 178 is merely the latest of these periodic calculations which could not have been included earlier as an exhibit by NCRIC as it did not yet exist. As such, the addition of Exhibit 178 at this time is not prejudicial to Columbia and is not precluded by D.C. Superior Court Rule of Civil Procedure 16. The original and a copy of Exhibit 178 are submitted to the Court with the Chambers copy of this filing.
